Midland unemployment hits six-year low

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Midland's unemployment level reached a six-year low, falling below the 3 percent level, according to the Texas Workforce Commission.

The commission reported Friday that the Midland metropolitan statistical area (MSA) had an unemployment rate of 2.7 percent, down from 3 percent in February and 3.2 percent last March.

That was the lowest rate, dating back to 2000, since Midland had a non-seasonally adjusted rate of 2.4 percent in April 2008.

Midland continues to report the state's lowest unemployment, followed by Odessa at 3.3 percent and Amarillo at 3.8 percent.

Lisa Givens, spokeswoman for the commission, said Midland's mining, logging and construction sector was leading job creation, adding 100 jobs from February to March and 2,400 jobs from March 2013 to March 2014 for a growth rate of 10.3 percent.

Second was the Trade, Transportation and Utilities sector, which Givens pointed out serves oil and gas production. While that sector lost 200 jobs from February to March, it has added 1,000 jobs over the past 12 months for a growth rate of 6.9 percent.

Midland added 200 jobs from February to March and over the past 12 months has added 3,900 jobs for an annual job growth rate of 4.7 percent.

"That is well above the national, and even the state, range, which is about 2.6 percent," Givens said.

From February to March, Trade, Transportation and Utilities was the only one of the 11 industrial sectors to lose jobs. Mining, Logging and Construction, Leisure and Hospitality and Other Services added jobs while the remaining sectors were flat.

For the year, the Professional and Business Services, Information and Education and Health Services sectors each lost jobs while the other sectors added jobs with high growth rates, Givens said.

From February to March, Midland's labor force added 300 people while 500 were added to the ranks of the employed. Givens noted that over the past 12 months Midland's labor force has grown by almost 4,000.

"The labor force actually grew," she

Aurora UFO crash remains a Texas alien mystery

By John Boyd
Houston Chronicle

The Texas town of Aurora was Roswell before Roswell, a middle-of-nowhere town that suddenly became surrounded by legend when an alleged alien visitor crash-landed from outer space.

On this date in 1897, the alien UFO allegedly smashed into a windmill belonging to Judge J.S. Proctor. Its pilot, who an officer from a local Army outpost described as a "Martian" and "not of this world," died and was buried in the cemetery nearby.

The reported crash was one of several American alien mysteries of the mid-1890s, but the most notable one (if not only) recorded in Texas.

Today, the only reminder of the visit is a small historical marker near the Aurora Cemetery.

Buried deep in its stories of town founders and war heroes is a single line about the visitor supposedly buried in an unmarked grave there.

"The oldest known graves here, dating from as early as the 1850s, are those of the Randall and Rowlett families. Finis Dudley Beauchamp (1825-1893), a Confederate veteran from Mississippi, donated the 3-acre site to the newly formed Aurora Lodge No. 479 A.F. & A.M. in 1877. For many years, this community burial ground was known as Masonic Cemetery. Beauchamp, his wife Caroline (1829-1915), and others in their family. An epidemic which struck the village in 1891 added hundreds of graves to the plot. Called 'Spotted Fever' by the settlers, the disease is now thought to be a form of meningitis. Located in Aurora Cemetery is the gravestone of the infant

Report: FBI probe includes legal work by Wendy Davis

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wendy Davis' legal work for a taxpayer-funded tollway agency is part of a larger FBI-led investigation into the tollway group, according to a published report Friday.

The Dallas Morning News used a freedom of information request to learn of the ongoing investigation, and then confirmed it with Elizabeth Winn, an assistant Travis County attorney. The FBI hasn't responded to the newspaper's request for comment.

The investigation stems from a conflict of interest complaint filed in 2012 by former state Rep. Mark Shelton, a Republican who ran against Davis for her Fort Worth state Senate seat. In the complaint, Shelton says Davis was voting on toll legislation while her firm represented the North Texas Tollway Authority.

Investigators for the Public Integrity Unit, which is housed in the Travis County district attorney's office, reviewed Shelton's complaint last year but closed the case without taking any action.

When the newspaper filed a request for documents used in that investigation, however, prosecutors cited an ongoing federal investigation among the reasons the documents couldn't be released. The newspaper said it wasn't clear if Davis' legal work for the tollway authority is the focus or only part of the materials collected into the tollway agency's operations.

Davis has long said her legal work didn't interfere with her state Senate duties. Davis spokesman Zac Petkanas told the newspaper that the FBI hadn't questioned Davis as part of its investigation.

Petkanas said Davis was informed last August by her legal counsel that others were interested in the information gathered in the Travis County investigation, but he added she wasn't aware the investigation was being done by the FBI until contacted by the newspaper.

"We have no reason to believe that Wendy Davis is the subject or target of any investigation," Petkanas said in an emailed statement Friday.

Last week, the newspaper published a story that reviewed Davis' Senate voting record and found she had supported legislation governing a toll road project for which the North Texas Tollway Authority hired her law firm, Newby Davis, which she started with Gov. Rick Perry's former chief of staff, Brian Newby.

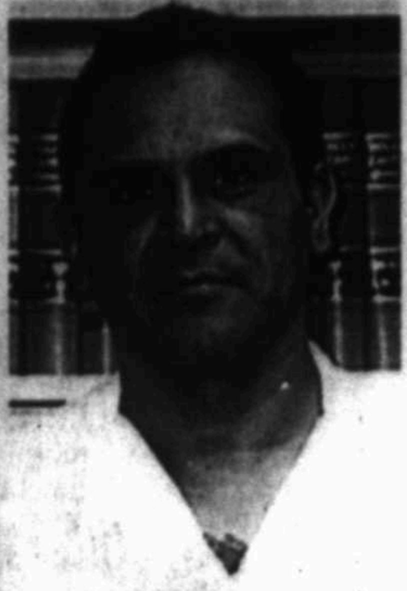

The newspaper also found that Davis backed changes surrounding the collection of unpaid tolls that preceded a program in which law firms — including Davis' — were chosen to carry out the collections.

The North Texas Tollway Authority first divulged in 2011 that the FBI was investigating potential conflicts of interest among current and former board members. Davis doesn't serve on the authority's board. No one has been charged.

Davis is facing Republican Attorney General Greg Abbott in the race to succeed Perry. Abbott's campaign said Friday that the newspaper's story is "both shocking and unsurprising at the same time."

"Sen. Davis must fully disclose the facts about any wrongdoing and the extent of her involvement in that wrongdoing," Abbott spokesman Matt Hirsch said in a statement.

Abbott: Armed school employees OK under Texas law

Attorney General Greg Abbott says Texas school districts that authorize employees to carry handguns aren't violating state law.

The Texas Legislature last year approved a measure allowing rural districts that can't afford police security to arm designated employees to better protect students.

In an opinion Friday, Abbott found that doing so doesn't violate firearm bans at school sporting events or during school board meetings.

A Republican now running for governor, Abbott said state law allows schools to grant exceptions to gun bans.

His decision followed El Paso Rep. Joe Pickett's request for clarification.

Pickett, a Democrat, noted that previous law banned weapons from school premises and school-sponsored events.

Pickett also said the state's concealed handgun law didn't allow license-holders to bring guns to high school sporting events and board meetings.

More charges added in South By Southwest crash

A driver already charged with capital murder now is facing additional charges weeks after he plowed into a late-night crowd during the South By Southwest festival in Austin.

Travis County jail records showed Friday that 21-year-old Rashad Owens of Killeen is accused of four new counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. He's facing 20 previous counts of the same charge.

Authorities have said Owens accelerated through the crowd March 13, killing two people and leaving more than 20 injured. Two others later died of their injuries. Police say Owens was fleeing a patrolman and driving down a closed street when the crash happened.

He was charged with capital murder days after the incident.

Guardsman to receive Purple Heart at Texas event

U.S. Army Chief of Staff Raymond Odierno will present the Purple Heart at Fort Sam Houston to a staff sergeant injured while on patrol in Afghanistan.

Robert T. Drebenstedt is scheduled to receive the decoration Wednesday at the fort's Warrior and Family Support Center.

Drebenstedt is a member of the Michigan Army National Guard injured by an improvised explosive device Aug. 1, 2012. Officials at Fort Sam Houston did not release details on the extent of the combat engineer's injuries.

HOUSTON

Teen charged in videotaped burglary

A teenager has been charged with burglary after security video from inside a Houston-area house showed a man with a flashlight peering at a sleeping toddler in a crib.

The Harris County Sheriff's Office said nobody was hurt in the April 5 burglary and the 18-year-old suspect faces an initial court appearance Monday.

Christopher Gomez has been charged with three counts of burglary of a habitation. Authorities earlier this week publicized the home invasion video in an effort that generated tips and led to Thursday night's arrest. Online jail records had no listing of an attorney for Gomez, whose bond was set at $300,000.

The video shows a man in a cap using a flashlight to check out various rooms as the family slept.

Computer equipment and cash were stolen.

HOUSTON

Condominium complex guard fatally shot

An armed security guard at a Houston condominium complex has been fatally shot, and police are seeking a man who fled after being denied entry.

Police said the shooting happened early Friday near a small security structure at an entrance to the gated complex.

Police said 51-year-old Rene Almeida was transported to a Houston hospital, where he was declared dead.

A gun belonging to Almeida, who was in his first week of guard work at the complex, has not been found.

Witnesses reported seeing a man trying to visit someone at the complex, but was not allowed to enter. Police say the man left. The guard was shot minutes later.

Jacques Servier, accused of hiding drug risks, dies

PARIS — Jacques Servier, who created one of the biggest pharmaceutical companies in France but whose life's work was overshadowed by allegations that he concealed the dangers of drugs that he helped develop, died Wednesday at his home in a suburb of Paris. He was 92.

His death was confirmed by Lucy Vincent, a spokeswoman for his company, Laboratoires Servier.

Servier, who had studied medicine and pharmacology, founded his company in 1954 with a handful of employees, building it into a global drugmaker with 17,000 workers and sales in 2013 of about $5.8 billion. Last year Forbes estimated his personal worth at $7.6 billion.

Laboratoires Servier was hailed by generations of French leaders as an export champion and an exemplar of French technological and scientific prowess. All the while, Servier, who remained president of the company until his death, guarded his independence, refusing to take his company public and devoting profits to research and development at a rate well above the industry norm.

Former President Nicolas Sarkozy awarded Servier the Legion of Honor's Grand Cross in 2009, describing him as "an entrepreneur the likes of which few are to be found in France." Sarkozy had been Servier's lawyer before taking office.

But Servier soon became the object of revile after the company's diabetes drug, Mediator, was withdrawn from the market amid estimates that it had caused between 500 and 2,000 deaths.

During the 33 years it was on the market, Mediator was prescribed to an estimated 5 million French patients. While the drug was marketed as a treatment for diabetes, the company promoted it to doctors as a weight-loss aid. Studies linked the drug to cardiac valve damage and pulmonary hypertension, and Servier and his company were accused of having concealed evidence of its dangers.

Mediator was closely related to the two drugs at the heart of the Fen-Phen diet drug scandal of the 1990s, fenfluramine and phentermine, both of which were also developed by Laboratoires Servier.

NEW YORK

Lois Wallace, agent of prominent authors, dies at 73

NEW YORK — Erich Segal, a Yale classics professor who moonlighted as a screenwriter, could not sell his latest screenplay, a tale of two star-crossed lovers. So his literary agent, Lois Wallace, suggested in 1968 that he turn it into a novel.

That novel, "Love Story," spent more than a year on The New York Times' best-seller list and has sold tens of millions of copies. The 1970 film, using Segal's screenplay and starring Ryan O'Neal and Ali MacGraw, grossed nearly $200 million and received seven Academy Award nominations.

Without Wallace's influence, Segal's screenplay might have moldered on a slush pile.

Wallace, who later ran one of the most respected literary agencies in New York, died April 4 in Manhattan. She was 73. The cause was complications of lung cancer, said Jeff Hoffman, an associate at Wallace Literary Agency.

If her agency did not match the size of the big firms, it nevertheless gained prestige through its clients, among them William F. Buckley Jr., Joan Didion and Don DeLillo.

She was born Lois Kahn in Manhattan on May 25, 1940. She graduated from the Brearley School and Vassar College before she was hired as the celebrated editor Harvey Ginsberg's secretary at G.P. Putnam Sons in 1961.

Nellie Burris (1891-1893) with its often-quoted epitaph: 'As I was so soon done, I don't know why I was begun.' This site is also well-known because of the legend that a spaceship crashed nearby in 1897 and the pilot, killed in the crash, was buried here. Struck by epidemic and crop failure and bypassed by the railroad, the original town of Aurora almost disappeared, but the cemetery remains in use with over 800 graves. Veterans of the Civil War, World Wars I and II, and the Korean and Vietnam conflicts are interred here."

The single line seems about as interested as Aurora is in becoming famous from the supposed crash.

On the 110th anniversary of the crash, former Houston Chronicle writer Eyder Peraltal, now works for NPR, visited Aurora, 30 miles north of Fort Worth, and found the townsfolk mostly apathetic about the alien visitor and the scores of new human visitors who have come to visit the infamous crash site.

The visitors had been fun at first, but when they began trampling the cemetery and stealing headstones and other artifacts from the city museum, the town's notoriety became a nuisance.

In the 1970s, a group from the International UFO Bureau showed up to exhume the body — media in tow — but were turned away by angry residents.

"There was quite a mess," one resident, Karen Tedrow, told Peralta. "The residents had guns and everything, because they didn't want them to do it. And I understand, because my parents are buried there, and I don't want them digging around. Earthly body or not, they ought to let it rest in peace."

said. "That can affect the unemployment rate, but not in this case."

While Midland's unemployment rate was falling to a six-year low, so too was the state unemployment rate, which fell to 5.5 percent from 5.7 percent in February. Givens reported that the last time the state's seasonally adjusted rate was 5.5 percent was October 2008. It was 6.4 percent in March 2013.

"What's also impressive is our labor force is continuing to swell," Givens said. "We're seeing a labor force at nearly 13 million, civilian labor force."

Texas had a 2013 estimated population of nearly 26.5 million, according to U.S. Census Bureau figures.

"The Texas economy continues to move in the right direction with Texas employers adding 310,000 jobs over the year," said Andres Alcantar, commission chairman. "All 11 of the major industries experienced annual job growth, with five industries exceeding growth rates of 3 percent."

Professional and business services added 5,600 jobs in March, more than any other major industry, officials said.

"In Texas, we acknowledge that it is our employers, both small and large, that are the economic engine of this great state," said Commissioner Hope Andrade. "Private employers added 278,400 total jobs over the last year for an annual growth rate of 3 percent."

While Midland had the state's lowest unemployment, the highest was in McAllen-Edinburg-Mission at 9.4 percent.

Immigrants suspected of being in the country illegally are transported to a bus Thursday after U.S. Border Patrol agents detained about 80 immigrants who'd been living in a hut for several days in a brushy area near North 10 St. and Sprague St. in McAllen. Agents spent about three hours rounding up the immigrants suspected of being in the country illegally after they responded to the area. Most of the immigrants are believed to be from Central America.

US arrests more than 200 immigrants

Associated Press

McALLEN — At least 80 immigrants suspected of entering the United States illegally were arrested in a makeshift encampment in suburban South Texas.

They were found in an undeveloped patch of scrub near an abandoned tennis club in McAllen.

They were camped under tents and huts camouflaged with mesquite branches and cacti. Some told authorities they had been there sleeping on pieces of cardboard with little food or water for at least a week.

It was unclear whether any of those arrested Thursday afternoon were guides suspected of guarding the immigrants, Border Patrol spokesman Danny Tirado told The McAllen Monitor.

A short time later, Border Patrol arrested 132 immigrants found in two buildings on a property in Alton, about 8 miles west of McAllen, according to KRGV-TV.

The Border Patrol made more than 154,000 arrests on the section of the U.S.-Mexico border in southernmost Texas last year, more than anywhere else on the Southwest border. The majority of the immigrants come from Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala.

Guides typically lead the immigrants across the Rio Grande in smaller groups and then mass them in so-called stash houses on the Texas side of the border until their transportation can be arranged for the next leg of their journey.

"We ate one burrito per day," said Alfredo Espinoza Rivera, who was arrested at the camp. He said he had left El Salvador about six weeks earlier, paying $7,000 to a smuggler. The 37-year-old said he was trying to reach his father, a U.S. citizen, in Los Angeles.

"I'm scared to go back to my country," he said. "There's a lot of crime and it's hard to live there."

Today in history

In 1775, the American Revolutionary War began with the battles of Lexington and Concord.

In 1993, the 51-day siege at the Branch Davidian compound near Waco ended as fire destroyed the structure after federal agents began smashing their way in; dozens of people, including sect leader David Koresh, were killed.

In 1995, a truck bomb destroyed the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, killing 168 people (Bomber Timothy McVeigh was later convicted of federal murder charges and executed.)

Today's birthdays: Actress Ashley Judd is 46. Actress Kate Hudson is 35. Tennis player Maria Sharapova is 27.

University of North Texas overstated fiscal health

Associated Press

DENTON — Financial documents released by the University of North Texas show accounting irregularities that have overstated the university's financial position by as much as $23 million.

Audits conducted by the university and a private firm show misleading budget entries made since 2012 to account for unresolved collections. But they were registered as accounts receivable, which are often recorded as assets.

The documents were obtained by the Denton Record-Chronicle through an open records request.

The impetus for the audits was a complaint to the State Auditor's Office in 2012 that suggested the budget entries had been made to "hide thousands of unreconciled transactions" since 2004, according to the documents released by UNT to the newspaper.

The audit by the private firm, Deloitte & Touche, also found UNT inflated the amount of cash it had by $5.9 million. The university's budget in 2012 was $520 million.

The developments are another financial setback for UNT. In an unrelated matter, the university may have to repay millions for inappropriately using state money to pay some employee benefits.

Chancellor Lee Jackson said Thursday that UNT has had inaccurate revenue estimates since 2011, if not earlier.

"I saw UNT miss its budget estimates for several years," Jackson said. "They were attributed to enrollment miscalculations. It may also be that they relate to the failure to receive some state benefits appropriations that were predicted or projected."

Jackson said the university was using inadequate financial management procedures. While reform measures have been underway the past few years, the upgraded software and required training won't be complete until next year, he said.

This is the first time Jackson has fully outlined financial issues and a plan of action since the university first acknowledged the problems in February.

Three top finance officials all resigned Feb. 13. Andrew Harris, vice president for finance and administration, and Jean Bush, senior vice president for finance, resigned from the Denton campus.

Carlos Hernandez, who was serving as vice president of finance at UNT Dallas but was previously controller and associate vice president for UNT Denton, also resigned that day.

Remains of missing woman found in submerged truck

Skeletal remains found inside a truck recovered from a North Texas lake may be those of a woman who went missing 35 years ago after an argument with her husband, authorities said Friday.

A passer-by discovered the partially exposed 1970s-model Chevy truck in Lake Granbury after the lake's water level dropped, thanks to the state's ongoing drought, and revealed a portion of the vehicle. The truck was found far away from any road or parking lot near the lake, and investigators "don't believe it was an accident," Hood County Sheriff Roger Deeds said.

While inspecting the truck's cab, investigators found human skeletal remains, pieces of clothing and a purse containing objects with Helen Holladay's name on them. Holladay was 45 years old when she disappeared in September 1979. Her husband, Herman, was a suspect in her disappearance but was never charged. He has since died.

Authorities have notified Holladay's two surviving daughters, but the results of DNA tests will likely take about two months. Relatives who answered calls made to the daughters' phone numbers by The Associated Press said they women weren't yet ready to talk.

Deputies had responded to a call about a domestic disturbance at the Holladays' house the night she went missing in September 1979. Witnesses reported seeing Helen Holladay leaving the house, though there was not enough evidence to charge her husband, Deeds said.

The truck was discovered Thursday by a Granbury city worker.

Deeds noted that investigators searched the lake numerous times following Holladay's disappearance, but the murky waters and the fact that the truck was covered in silt made it nearly impossible for divers to see. But Texas' record-breaking drought has brought the lake to its lowest levels in years.

Initial inspection of the skeletal remains revealed no signs of trauma, but detectives can't yet say whether foul play was involved in her death, Deeds said.

"It's still too early in the investigation to rule in one direction or the other," he said, adding that a forensic investigator with the University of North Texas at Denton is expected to inspect the remains.

GALVESTON

Church damaged by Ike to reopen

A historic Roman Catholic church in Galveston closed since Hurricane Ike damaged it in 2008 reopens this weekend.

A restored St. Mary Cathedral-Basilica will officially re-open on Easter Sunday with a Mass celebrated by Cardinal Daniel DiNardo, head of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Galveston-Houston.

The archdiocese says the church, built in 1847, was one of the few Galveston landmarks to survive the catastrophic 1900 hurricane that decimated the city and killed at least 6,000 people.

In a prepared statement, DiNardo says it was the first church built in Texas to be a cathedral. The church was named to the National Register of Historic Places in 1968.

The $4 million renovation included replacing the roof, rebuilding the pews, reinforcing the two front spires and a new mural.

Some countries get Obama but want his wife, too

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When President Barack Obama travels abroad, sometimes it's not enough for just the leader of the free world to show up. People in other countries want the first lady, too.

But Michelle Obama won't join her husband when he heads to Asia next week, and her absence is likely to sting, especially in image-conscious Japan. It's the first of four countries on Obama's travel schedule and one of two that are welcoming him with official state visits.

"If Madame Obama could have come, it would have been better. But the most important thing is that President Obama accepted this is a state visit," said Matake Kamiya, a professor of international relations at the National Defense University in Yokosuka, near Tokyo. "From an expert point of view, it's sort of worrisome why Madame Obama isn't coming."

The fact that Mrs. Obama recently spent a week in China with her mother, Marian Robinson, and daughters Malia and Sasha also is sure to be noted in Japan, a close U.S. ally and China rival. But the first lady's communications director, Maria Cristina Gonzalez Noguera, said it was not expected that Mrs. Obama would join the president on a return trip to Asia so soon, having returned less than a month ago.

"When it comes to international travel, the first lady has always chosen her trips based on what's best for her family," Noguera said in an emailed statement.

The last U.S. first lady who did not join her husband on a state visit to Japan was Gerald Ford's wife, Betty. Ford became the first sitting American president to visit Japan when he arrived in November 1974, a few months after he took over the office from Richard M. Nixon.

Anita McBride, who was chief of staff to Laura Bush, said having the president's wife on his overseas trips is always welcomed — by both the White House and the host country — because she can carry out a different type of diplomacy.

"They can focus on different things and, between the two of them, really spread a lot of goodwill," said McBride, who heads a first ladies' project at American University.

When Mrs. Obama does travel with the president, she often gets as much — and occasionally more — local media coverage.

Last year in Northern Ireland, where Obama and other major world leaders gathered for an international summit, she was "the Obama" who got top billing in the local newspaper.

The front page of the Belfast Telegraph featured a head-to-toe photograph of Mrs. Obama with the headline, "How Michelle (and a bit of trouble with her fringe) stole the show." The headline referred to the first lady's debut of her longer bangs that swept in front of her eyes during a speech to students.

Obama and the summit host, British Prime Minister David Cameron, made the front page, too, but in separate and smaller photos.

First lady Michelle Obama speaks April 11 in the East Room of the White House in Washington. When President Barack Obama travels abroad getting just the leader of the free world doesn't seem to be enough. Countries want the first lady, too. But Michelle Obama won't join her husband when he heads to Asia next week and her absence is likely to sting, especially in Japan.

Permian Basin rig count up four this week to 540

HOSUTON — The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the Permian Basin increased four this week to 540, according to a report released Thursday by Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

Among other Texas basins, the Eagle Ford ended the week at 217 rigs, down three; the Granite Wash added one rig for a total of 62; and the Barnett lost one rig, finishing the week with 23 rigs.

Texas was unchanged this week at 884 rigs. At this time last year there were 469 rigs in the Permian Basin and 837 rigs in Texas.

The number of rigs searching for oil and natural gas in the U.S. was unchanged this week at 1,831. There were 1,510 rigs listed as searching for oil, down seven; 316 as searching for natural gas, up five; and five as miscellaneous, up one. There were 1,758 rigs in the U.S. a year ago this week.

By trajectory, there were 391 vertical drilling rigs, unchanged; 1,214 horizontal drilling rigs, unchanged; and 216 directional drilling rigs, unchanged.

The top five basins by rig count this week were the Permian; the Eagle Ford; the Williston with 185, unchanged; the Marcellus with 81, up two; and the Mississippian with 74, up three.

The top five states by rig count were Texas; Oklahoma with 187, down five; North Dakota with 178, unchanged; Louisiana with 110, up two; and New Mexico with 89, down two.

In the U.S. there were 1,765 rigs listed as on land, up six; 14 as in inland waters, down five; and 52 as offshore, down one.

There were 51 rigs in the Gulf of Mexico, down one.

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in Canada decreased 13 this week to 199. There were 85 rigs listed as searching for oil, down eight; 114 as searching for natural gas, down five; and zero as miscellaneous, unchanged. There were 126 rigs in Canada a year ago this week.

The total number of rigs in the North America region — which includes the U.S. and Canada but excludes the Gulf of Mexico — decreased 13 this week to 2,030. At this time last year there were 1,884 rigs in North America.

For more information about the weekly rig count, visit the Baker Hughes website as bakerhughes.com.

Federal lawsuit over western Md. wind farm ends

CUMBERLAND — A legal dispute over a western Maryland wind farm has ended.

A U.S. District Court judge in Baltimore dismissed the case Tuesday at the request of both sides.

The citizen group Save Western Maryland filed the lawsuit in 2010 against developers of the 28-turbine Criterion wind farm in Garrett County. The project owned by Chicago-based Exelon Corp has been operating since 2010.

The lawsuit alleged that the operator needed permission from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to kill federally endangered Indiana bats injured in collisions with the turbine blades.

In December, the federal agency approved operational changes Exelon had proposed to minimize harm to the bats.

The Cumberland Times-News reported Friday that Exelon has begun site preparation for the 16-turbine Fourmile Ridge wind farm near Frostburg.

WASHINGTON

State rejects Hanford proposal

SPOKANE — The state of Washington on Friday rejected the U.S. Department of Energy's proposal to amend a federal court agreement governing cleanup of the Hanford Nuclear Reservation, the nation's most polluted nuclear weapons production site.

The state sent a letter to federal lawyers, saying the March 31 proposal that would have eliminated many deadlines for Hanford cleanup "is not acceptable to Washington."

Hanford for decades made plutonium for nuclear weapons, and now is engaged in cleaning up the nation's largest volume of radioactive wastes. The site is near Richland.

The cleanup is governed by a federal court consent decree reached in 2010 that sets strict milestones for the cleanup process. But the Energy Department has said it is in danger of missing many of those milestones because of the scientific complexity of the work.

Officials for the Department of Energy did not immediately return a message seeking comment.

The state has threatened to take the department back to court in an effort to get the decadeslong cleanup back on track. The cleanup costs taxpayers about $2 billion per year.

The state has issued its own proposal to amend the consent decree, but the state plan includes numerous deadlines and requires the completion of all waste treatment by the original deadline of 2047.

A major problem with the cleanup is that construction of a unique facility called the Waste Treatment Plant, which is designed to turn the most dangerous wastes into glasslike logs for eventual burial, has been indefinitely delayed by technical and safety concerns.

"Energy proposes to indefinitely extend most of the consent decree's WTP deadlines by trading current hard deadlines and specific tasks for future unspecified milestones to be set on an open-ended, rolling basis," the state complained in the letter.

The consent decree set deadlines for emptying some of Hanford's underground waste tanks and starting to treat up to 56 million gallons of nuclear waste at the Waste Treatment Plant. But the Energy Department has said most of the remaining deadlines are at risk of being missed, including having the plant fully operational by 2022.

Obama administration delays review of Keystone XL

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration is extending indefinitely the amount of time federal agencies have to review the Keystone XL pipeline, the State Department said Friday, likely punting the decision over the controversial oil pipeline past the midterm elections.

The State Department didn't say how much longer agencies will have to weigh in but cited a recent decision by a Nebraska judge overturning a state law that allowed the pipeline's path through the state, prompting uncertainty and an ongoing legal battle. Nebraska's Supreme Court isn't expected to rule for another several months, and there could be more legal maneuvering after that. The delay potentially frees President Barack Obama to avoid making a final call on the pipeline until after the November election.

"The agency consultation process is not starting over. The process is ongoing, and the department and relevant agencies are actively continuing their work in assessing the permit application," the State Department said in a statement.

Republicans were quick to blast the latest delay in a review process that has dragged on for more than five years. Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., accused Obama of kowtowing to "radical activists" from the environmental community, while House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, called the decision "shameful" and said there were no credible reasons for further delay.

"This job-creating project has cleared every environmental hurdle and overwhelmingly passed the test of public opinion, yet it's been blocked for more than 2,000 days," Boehner said in a statement.

In an ironic show of bipartisanship, prominent Democrats from energy-dependent states joined Republicans in blasting the Obama administration for delaying the decision once again. Democratic Sen. Mary Landrieu, who faces a difficult re-election this year in conservative-leaning Louisiana, said Obama was signaling that a small minority of opponents can tie up the process forever in the courts, sacrificing 42,000 jobs and billions in economic activity in the process.

"This decision is irresponsible, unnecessary and unacceptable," Landrieu said.

But environmental groups fighting the pipeline hailed the delay, arguing that it shows the State Department is taking the arguments against the pipeline seriously.

"This is definitely great news," said Tiernan Sittenfeld, senior vice president for the League of Conservation Voters. "We are very confident as they continue to examine the issues with the lack of legal route in Nebraska and the terrible climate impacts, at the end of the day the pipeline will be rejected."

State Department officials said other U.S. agencies will be notified of the new deadline to weigh in once the legal situation in Nebraska becomes clearer. At the core of the delay is a concern that the legal wrangling in Nebraska could lead to a change in the pipeline's route that would affect agencies' assessments, said the officials, who weren't authorized to comment by name and demanded anonymity.

Officials declined Friday to say when a final decision would take place but said the process should proceed "as expeditiously as possible." They added that the State Department is moving forward with other aspects of its review that must take place before determining whether approving the pipeline is in the U.S. national interest.

The White House has insisted that Secretary of State John Kerry is in charge of the process, since the pipeline crosses the U.S.-Canada border and falls under the State Department's jurisdiction. But President Barack Obama is widely expected to make the final call and, in a nod to environmentalists' concerns, has said the pipeline will be deemed not in the U.S. interest if it contributes significantly to increasing carbon dioxide emissions.

The White House declined to comment on the State Department's announcement, which came on Friday afternoon, when many Americans were observing Good Friday and preparing for the Easter holiday. Sen. John Thune, R-S.D., accused the administration of seizing that opportunity to downplay news of the latest delay.

Obama and environmental groups dispute the notion that the pipeline would create many permanent jobs or have a substantial economic impact, but Obama has refused to say whether he will nix it.

Strong makes Texas debut with spring scrimmage

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN— For the first time since 1997, the Texas Longhorns will suit up for a game without Mack Brown on the sideline.

That today is just the annual spring scrimmage hardly matters. This is Charlie Strong's burnt orange coaching debut, the first time he will put a Texas team on the field that has trained under his leadership, practiced his playbook and begun taking on the identity of the coach hired to dig the program out of four years of mediocrity.

"We are going to allow our players to just go out and play and have a good time," Strong said. "I always look at that game like you did all that hard work, you had 14 good practices, and now is a chance to see the fans in the stadium—I know we are going to have a good turnout."

Fans will be watching for any sign their team is ready or not to return to the top of the Big 12. Strong had some time to enjoy the excitement over his hiring, but Saturday will be the first time Longhorns fan will start demanding results, even if it is just an intrasquad scrimmage.

Strong at least set it up for some real evaluation: the first team defense will play against the first team offense.

But Strong already has a problem at quarterback. David Ash, the starter at the beginning of 2013 until a concussion in the second game, now has a fractured bone in his left foot and will not play Saturday.

That leaves sophomore Tyrone Swoopes as the only scholarship quarterback available to run the first-team offense in the spring game. Walk-on Trey Holtz and converted tight end Miles Onyegbule, who prior to this spring hadn't played QB since 2010, will also get snaps.

Jerrod Heard, the only quarterback Texas signed in its 2014 recruiting class, won't be on campus until June. The Longhorns also are courting USC transfer Matt Wittek, but he hasn't yet made a decision on his next school.

"I told Tyrone, 'The key thing for you is it is all about confidence, it is all about you doing everything we ask you to do and play within yourself,'" Strong said. "Know this is your team (Saturday) and it is up to you to go lead it."

Here's five things to watch at the Texas spring scrimmage:

District 2-5A showing how tough it is with each game

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

■ Baseball Insider

There's a coach's saying that is constantly thrown around, and it's "Anybody can beat anybody on any given day."

It may sound corny or simple, but after the last two rounds in District 2-5A it was proven true.

Lee and Odessa Permian — two teams that are out of playoff contention with a combined four district wins heading into last weekend — pulled off a pair of upsets that certainly helped to give the above cliché credence.

A day after Lee lost to rival Midland High, 4-1, at Christensen Stadium, the Rebels had a short night's sleep, hopped on a bus and made the trek to San Angelo Central to face second-place Central last Saturday. The Rebels won that game, 3-2, thanks to Hunter Coleman drawing a bases-loaded walk.

Three days later, Odessa Permian, which has a total of four wins overall this season, didn't record a hit but still upset second-place Lubbock Coronado, 2-1, at McCanlies Field. The Panthers also stopped one of the hottest teams in the district.

Both the Panthers and Rebels are in the role of spoiler these days, and both teams certainly made things a little more interesting in the District 2-5A race. Lubbock Coronado is now tied for fourth with Amarillo Tascosa, and San Angelo Central has to win one more game to clinch a playoff spot.

"There's really no teams in our district that you can throw your hats and gloves out there and win, everybody knows that. Midland High knows that with how many close calls they've had," Lee coach Brian Roper said. "I think that says a lot for our district."

Midland High coach Barry Russell said the district is certainly strong, but he added that it shows how tough going through a 16-game district schedule can be for any team.

"You are dealing with teenagers, and there's a lot of stuff going on in their lives, testing or girlfriends or whatever," Russell said. "I think it's a testament to how difficult it is, because if you don't come with your best game every day, it's easy to get beat."

There are three rounds remaining in 2-5A play this season, and even today's slate of games pose enough interesting

Lady Chaps lose two tough ones to Hawks

Hawks 4-5
Lady Chaparrals 3-4

From staff reports

BIG SPRING — The Midland College softball team suffered a couple of heartbreaking losses to Howard College on Friday afternoon at Foundation Field.

And each time, the Hawks found a way to win in their final at-bat in the eighth inning. Howard got the key hit in the eighth inning of the first game to beat MC, 4-3. Then in the second game, Howard answered MC's run in the top of the eighth with two of their own to win it, 5-4.

Houkamu

"In both games, we were just one hit from winning the game or just a stop away from it," MC coach Tommy Ramos said. "We gave ourselves a shot to win it. I was not disappointed. The girls gave me a lot of effort. We're going in the right direction. We just need to continue to get healthier and continue to work on our chemistry. When we do those things, we'll be fine."

In the first game, MC (25-20, 12-10 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference) forced extra innings with a run in the seventh that tied the game at 3.

But a base-running mistake prevented the Lady Chaparrals from adding another run in the eighth.

"You've got to give them credit. They executed scoring that runner," said Ramos of the Hawks.

Tyneesha Houkamu was 2-for-3 with a home run and two RBI for the Lady Chaps.

NBA playoffs looks more wide open

By Tim Reynolds
Associated Press

MIAMI — Before the season started, a poll suggested that the Miami Heat were the overwhelming favorite to win the NBA title, collecting a whopping 76 percent of ballots cast.

The voters weren't some know-nothings, either.

No, this was a polling of NBA general managers.

Things seem quite a bit different now. The Heat don't seem like locks for a third straight title anymore. San Antonio and Indiana are top seeds. Brooklyn, Chicago, the Los Angeles Clippers, Oklahoma City, Golden State, Houston, Portland and the Heat all figure to have a legitimate chance at being the club to hoist the Larry O'Brien Trophy in a couple of months.

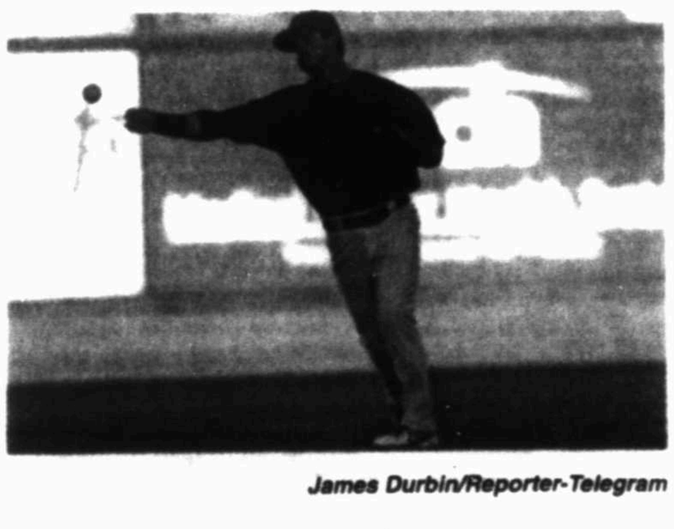

Usually, the NBA playoffs aren't so wide open. Things might change over the next couple of months.

"There are 16 teams that have a chance to win it," said Oklahoma City coach Scott Brooks, whose team is seeded No. 2 in the West. "If you're in the playoffs, you have a chance. There are some good teams. Any team can beat each other. The West is deep. There are two teams that are really good that didn't make it and had great years. It's definitely open. There's a lot of good basketball teams that are fighting for the championship."

For as good as San Antonio and Indiana were all year — well, for most of the year in Indiana's case, before the Pacers faltered down the stretch — it's never a certainty that the No. 1 seeds reach the NBA Finals. It's happened that way only 11 times in the last 35 years.

Then again, the last time that there wasn't either a No. 1 or a No. 2 in the title series was 1978. So while upsets can happen, it's not all that common to see bracket craziness — akin to a No. 7 and No. 8 seeds Connecticut and Kentucky

TODAY'S GAMES
DISTRICT 2-5A
MIDLAND HIGH AT AMARILLO TASCOSA

When/where: 1 p.m. today, Rebel Field, Amarillo

Records: Midland High 19-7, 13-1 in District 2-5A; Amarillo Tascosa 16-8, 7-6

Last district game: Midland High 12, Abilene Cooper 1; Amarillo Tascosa 11, Odessa High 3

Last meeting: Midland High 7, Amarillo Tascosa 0 on March 22

Notes: The Bulldogs will make the long road trip to Amarillo today looking to clinch the title outright against a team that needs a win to stay in the playoff hunt. Midland High coach Barry Russell said that's what makes Tascosa dangerous today is that the Rebels are fighting for their playoff lives. ... Russell said that Jackson Lancaster will take the hill for today's game as he's had more than a week of rest after his last start against rival Lee. Lancaster gave up one run on five hits with four strikeouts in that game. He's 8-0 in 2-5A games this season. ... Who Tascosa will start for today's game could be interesting because the team's top two pitchers, Raymond Salazar and Tucker Davidson, each saw time in Tuesday's victory against Odessa High. ... Midland High won the last meeting between these two teams by scoring seven runs in the first inning off Tech signee Davidson, but then struggling against Salazar the rest of the game.

Next: Midland High at Abilene High, 4:30 p.m. April 25; Amarillo Tascosa at Odessa Permian, 4 p.m. April 25

LEE AT LUBBOCK CORONADO

When/where: 1 p.m. today, O'Banion Field, Lubbock

Records: Lee 9-15, 3-10 in District 2-5A; Lubbock Coronado 13-10, 7-6

Last district game: Lee 3, San Angelo Central 2 on April 12; Odessa Permian 2, Lubbock Coronado 1

Last meeting: Lubbock Coronado 12, Lee 1, 5 innings on March 22

Notes: Lee has another chance to play spoiler today as another upset could make things tough for Coronado in its chase for the playoffs. The Mustangs had the rare distinction of losing a game while its pitchers threw a no-hitter. Jake Pape and Taren Moore combined on the no-hitter, but the Mustangs had two errors that cost them in the loss. ... Lee had Tuesday off and a little more time to celebrate its upset against San Angelo Central last Saturday. The last time Lee played Coronado they were beaten, 12-1, and then the Rebels lost to the Mustangs, 17-0, at O'Banion Field last year. So Lee coach Brian Roper said there is plenty of motivation for his squad. "It's like our playoff game," Roper said. "These next three games we have a chance to play spoiler to make a real impact, keeping people out of the playoffs."

matchups to give those coaches in playoff contention some sleepless nights.

Lee has a chance to play spoiler one more day with a road trip to Lubbock Coronado on Saturday, while Permian will face Abilene High at home, and try to delay the Eagles' playoff-clinching party another few days.

No matter what happens today, the teams that do make the playoffs will certainly feel like they will be ready for the playoffs.

"We have some competitive teams and we have some good players around out district that really can impact a game," Roper said.

MHS, TOP SEED, NOW FOCUSES ON PLAYOFFS

Midland High has clinched its fourth straight district championship, and the top seed out of District 2-5A but hasn't technically clinched the outright district title. Because of the language in the District 2-5A by-laws, if two teams tie for the top spot, they are considered co-champions no matter the results between the two squads during the season.

Midland High needs to win one of its next two games to claim the outright district title, but thanks to its sweep of San Angelo Central this season the Bulldogs will be the district's top seed.

"We are still playing for something," Russell said. "We've got a piece of a district championship, but they want to get it outright. It's not a share, they want all of it."

LANCASTER, SANCHEZ COMING ALIVE AT PLATE

The Bulldogs had a dominating victory against Abilene Cooper on Tuesday, and in that victory Gilbert Sanchez was 2-for-5 with a pair of two-run doubles.

Sanchez hits No. 3 in the Bulldogs' batting order, and Russell said the senior has had his ups and downs this season. But if Sanchez can get hot now, it could only help the Bulldogs in the playoffs.

Sanchez, who will play at Midland College next year, is hitting .265 this season with three doubles and nine RBI.

"He's starting to come around," Russell said. "He's been hitting the ball hard but he hasn't been getting any hits. He's just been smoking it, and that's the biggest thing with Gilbert is just keeping his head up."

Jackson Lancaster is known for his prowess on the mound as the senior is 8-0 in 2-5A play this season with a 1.22 earned run average. But he's also found his stroke at the plate of late.

Lancaster is hitting a salty .405 in district play and is tied for second on the team with 10 RBI in 14 district games.

Russell said that both coaches and his teammates like to rib Lancaster and call him a "PO" or pitcher only, and he said that's the motivation Lancaster uses to show he's not just a pitcher.

"He works at that just as hard as he does at pitching," Russell said. "When we tell him, you're a 'PO' you can just see it in his face, it just changes. It really aggravates him when you tell him that."

MIDLAND CHRISTIAN WAITS ON PLAYOFF OPPONENT

Midland Christian's regular season ended on Thursday night and now the Mustangs will play the waiting game.

MCS coach Mike Munguia said that they may not know their playoff opponent until early next week, but the Mustangs (29-9) will host a first-round game or series at Christensen Stadium.

Munguia said he would prefer to play a three-game series, but he said Midland Christian's recent blowouts give him a little pause heading into the playoffs.

"I still feel like we are a good team, without any disrespect, but we haven't been challenged in a couple of weeks and that's scary going into the playoffs," Munguia said.

MCS will take on Lubbock Christian in a non-district game at 6 p.m. Monday in Lubbock, and Munguia said that will be a solid test for his team.

SNYDER 3

The Greenwood baseball team won its first District 4-3A game of the season with a 4-3 victory over Snyder Friday afternoon at Greenwood High School.

Javier Vizcaino was 2-for-4 with an inside-the-park home run and two RBI, and Zach Redwine was 2-for-3 with two RBI for the Rangers (15-13, 1-8).

Victor Urias got the win on the mound.

Greenwood closes out its season at 7 p.m. Tuesday with a trip to Monahans.

SOFTBALL
SNYDER 8
GREENWOOD 7, 8 INNINGS

The Greenwood softball team suffered a heartbreaking loss on its home field of a game that featured the top two teams in District 4-3A on Friday afternoon.

Tied at 7 in the eighth inning, Snyder got a leadoff double and that runner later scored on a passed ball for what turned out to be the game-winning run.

Snyder, the district champion, jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the top of the first before Greenwood responded with two runs in the bottom ofthe first.

Snyder then had a 7-5 lead before the Rangerettes (14-13, 7-3 in district) responded with two runs in the fifth to eventually send the game into extra innings.

Kassie Maddox took the loss as she went the entire game.

Shawnda Price was 2-for-4 at the plate for the Rangerettes.

The Rangerettes will go into the Class 3A playoffs as the No. 2 seed out of the district and their opponent in the bi-district round is yet to be determined.

My name is Princeton. The first year of my life has been pretty rough. I was hit by a car and had to have my back right leg amputated, but I am adjusting. There are several battle scars on my body, but I am still a very sweet boy who would love to have a great new home where I can be loved on and kept safe inside.

An errant throw by San Antonio reliever Luis De La Cruz allowed Colin Walsh to score from second base in the 11th to give the Midland RockHounds a 4-3 victory on Friday night at Security Bank Ballpark.

The RockHounds were down to two outs in the 11th when Walsh reached on a single and then advanced to second on a wild pitch. Chad Oberacker then had a swinging bunt. De La Cruz fielded the ball, but his throw went wide to first base, allowing Walsh to come all the way around to score.

San Antonio struck first against Midland starting pitcher Raul Alcantara when Travis Jankowski hit a leadoff single and later scored on a Jace Peterson groundout.

The RockHounds answered in the third when Miles Head scored on a Conner Crumbliss groundout. Josh Whitaker then added an RBI single to score Beau Taylor for a 2-1 lead.

San Antonio tied it at 2 on an Austin Hedges RBI double, before Midland took a 3-2 lead with a Whitaker RBI single in the fifth.

The Missions tied it in the sixth when Peterson scored on a groundout by Hedges.

The RockHounds had a chance to win it in the ninth when they had one out and bases loaded. But Head lined out to second base and Taylor flew out to right to end the threat.

There were two ejections in the game as RockHound manager Aaron Nieckula by third base umpire Brent Terry in the second game. Then in the eighth, Missions catcher Hedges was tossed by home plate umpire Ramon Hernandez.

The two teams will play their third game of a four-game series at 7 p.m. today at Security Bank Ballpark.

ROSTER MOVE: The RockHounds have added RHP Shawn Haviland to the roster from Single-A Stockton and have placed RHP Tanner Peters on the disabled list.

SAN ANGELO — The Midland High softball team had no trouble against San Angelo Central with a 14-2 run-rule victory in five innings on Friday afternoon.

The Lady Bulldogs (20-7, 12-4 in District 2-5A), who won the last 11 out of 13 district games, jumped out to a 5-0 lead in the first inning. MHS then added a five-run fourth and four-run fifth to run-rule the Lady Bobcats.

MHS belted out 12 hits. Courtney Warren was 2-for-4 with a triple. Shelby Neatherlin was 2-for-3 with a home run. Aubrie Elliott was 2-for-4 with a double and Sydney Betcher was 2-for-3 with a double.

Stefani Baeza got the win in the circle for MHS.

Midland High will go into the Class 5A playoffs and will play El Paso Bel Air in the bi-district round with the time, day and place still to be determined.

Chaps split DH with Clarendon

From staff reports

Chaparrals	4-12
Bulldogs	5-4

CLARENDON — The Midland College baseball team split their opening doubleheader against Clarendon College on Friday afternoon.

The Chaparrals lost a heartbreaker in the first game when the Bulldogs scored two runs in the eighth inning for a come-from-behind 5-4 victory. The Chaps recovered in the second game and rolled past Clarendon, 12-4.

Clarendon actually came from behind twice in the first game against the Chaps (23-21, 9-17 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference) as the Bulldogs scored a pair runs in the seventh inning to tie the game at 3 and force extra innings.

Thomas McIlraith (4-6) took the loss in relief.

Offensively for MC, the Chaps had 12 hits, led by Justin Clarkson who was 3-for-4 with a double and an RBI. Bryndan Arredando was 2-for-4 with two runs scored, Brent Stewart was 2-for-4 with a double and an RBI, Tony Reyes was 2-for-4 and two RBI, and Cade Davis had a pinch-hit double and scored a run.

The Chaps left little doubt in the second game as they came back from an early 3-0 deficit with two runs in the third and five more in the fourth inning. MC added a run in the sixth and four more in the seventh as part of their 12-hit attack.

Blaine Prescott was 3-for-5 with a double, home run, RBI and three runs scored; Clarkson was 2-for-3 with a triple, RBI, run scored and two walks; Caleb Koedyker was 2-for-4 with three RBI; Davis was 2-for-3 with two RBI; and Josh Narvaiz had a pair of sacrifice flies.

Clay O'Dell got the win in relief as he went 5 1/3 innings and allowed one unearned run on five hits with three strikeouts.

The teams will play another doubleheader, beginning at 1 p.m. today at the Clarendon College baseball field.

RANGERS 12
WHITE SOX 0

ARLINGTON — Martin Perez pitched a three-hitter for his first career shutout, Leonys Martin drove in four runs and Texas routed Chicago.

Martin homered and was one of four Rangers batters with three hits apiece. Robinson Chirinos also went deep.

Perez (3-0) retired his last 12 batters and struck out eight in his second complete game, including rookie Jose Abreu three times. Perez has thrown 17 straight scoreless innings after he went eight in a 1-0 win over Houston.

Martin had a two-run triple and Chirinos hit a two-run homer on the next pitch in seven-run third inning off Felipe Paulino (0-2). Martin homered for a 10-0 lead in the fourth.

Chirinos and Jim Adduci set career highs with three hits apiece. Alex Rios also had three hits and scored each time he reached base.

Prince Fielder, who came in hitting .164, reached base all five times he batted, including a run-scoring double. He also singled, walked twice and was hit by a pitch.

Chicago's Alexei Ramirez extended a franchise record by getting a hit in his 17th straight game to start the season. His soft single to right in the fifth extended his streak to 21 games going back to last season.

TIGERS 11
ANGELS 6

DETROIT — Albert Pujols hit his 497th home run and Howie Kendrick added two of his own to lead the Los Angeles Angels to an 11-6 win over the Detroit Tigers on Friday night.

The Angels chased Detroit starter Drew Smyly (1-1) after three innings and then added seven runs off reliever Luke Putkonen. Los Angeles finished with 13 hits, 10 for extra bases.

RAYS 11
YANKEES 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — James Loney drove in four runs and Tampa Bay overcame a four-run deficit to beat New York, stopping a four-game skid.

Pinch-hitter Desmond Jennings had an RBI single before Loney's two-run single off Adam Warren (0-1) in the seventh inning gave the Rays a 6-5 lead.

ORIOLES 8
RED SOX 4

BOSTON — Jonathan Schoop went 4 for 5 with two doubles and two RBIs as Baltimore roughed up Boston starter John Lackey.

Every Orioles starter had at least one hit except for Chris Davis. Baltimore got 10 of those hits off Lackey (2-2), who allowed six earned runs over 5 1-3 innings. It was the second straight start in which Lackey gave up six runs and failed to make it out of the sixth inning.

ROYALS 5
TWINS 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jason Vargas pitched seven sharp innings, Mike Moustakas cracked a two-run homer and Kansas City romped to a victory over Minnesota.

Alcides Escobar had three hits and Omar Infante also drove in two runs for the Royals, who have won four straight after getting swept in Minnesota last weekend.

INDIANS 2

CLEVELAND — Melky Cabrera had four hits and scored the go-ahead run in the seventh inning on Edwin Encarnacion's single, and Toronto held on to beat Cleveland.

The Blue Jays trailed 2-1 in the seventh before Munenori Kawasaki hit an RBI single off reliever Marc Rzepczynski (0-1). Encarnacion delivered against Cody Allen.

National League

BRAVES 6
METS 0

NEW YORK — Aaron Harang threw no-hit ball for seven innings but was pulled after 121 pitches, and reliever Luis Avilan gave up David Wright's two-out single in the eighth as the Atlanta Braves beat the New York Mets 6-0 Friday night.

As Harang's pitch count increased on a chilly evening, it seemed doubtful manager Fredi Gonzalez would let him go the distance. Harang worked around six walks, including two in the sixth inning and another pair in the seventh.

BREWERS 5

PITTSBURGH — Kyle Lohse pitched effectively into the seventh inning and Carlos Gomez homered to lead Milwaukee past Pittsburgh.

Lohse (3-1) improved to 11-2 in his career against the Pirates, allowing one earned run in a win against them for the second time in six days.

REDS 4
CUBS 1

CHICAGO — Alfredo Simon lowered his ERA to 0.86, and Cincinnati won for the 16th time in its last 17 games at Wrigley Field.

Making his third start, Simon (2-1) allowed an unearned run in six-plus innings and sent the Cubs to their fifth straight loss. Jonathan Broxton pitched a hitless ninth for his second save, completing a six-hitter as the Reds stretched their winning streak to a season-best three.

NATIONALS 3
CARDINALS 1

WASHINGTON — Cardinals catcher Yadier Molina's throwing error combined with Michael Wacha's wild pitch to allow two unearned runs in the seventh inning, breaking a tie and helping Gio Gonzalez and Washington get the win.

Gonzalez (3-1) allowed one run and four hits in seven innings, retiring the last 11 batters he faced. He finished with seven strikeouts and one walk as Washington ended an eight-game losing streak against St. Louis that dated to Game 5 of the teams' 2012 NL division series.

Interleague

MARLINS 8
MARINERS 4

MIAMI — Giancarlo Stanton hit a grand slam with none out in the ninth inning, and Miami took advantage of an overturned call on a replay review to beat Seattle.

Reed Johnson was called out on a force play following a bunt, but the umpires reviewed the ruling and determined third baseman Kyle Seager had juggled the ball. The Mariners then deployed five infielders, and Stanton cleared them all with a towering homer to the left of the home-run sculpture.

LADY CHAPS

From 1B

ard, while Shelby Weissenbach took the loss as she went the entire game for MC.

In the second game, Howard (38-10, 19-3) came back from a 3-1 deficit with two runs in the sixth inning.

In the eighth, using the international tiebreaker rules where the person who made the last out in the previous inning starts the next inning at second base, a Kyla Larson single scored Kelcey Gomez from second base to give MC a 4-3 advantage.

But once again, Howard answered. A single down the left field line was bobbled, which allowed the runner at second base to score and allowed another base runner into scoring position when she reached second. The Hawks then got an RBI single by Lani Munoz to score the winning run.

For Midland College, Taylor Daniels was 2-for-5 at the plate, while Naomi Posada was 2-for-4.

Weissenbach again took the loss in relief of Dominique Lozano Alcocer, while Elder picked up the win in relief of Nicole Wilson.

The teams will change venues in the four-game series as they will play a doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. today at the Midland College softball field. The Lady Chaps will honor their sophomores playing their last home games of the season prior to the first game.

Leonard waits for Spurs spotlight

By Jon Krawczynski
Associated Press

The tone in Kawhi Leonard's voice never changes.

It never changed as a junior in high school when his father was killed at the car wash he owned in Compton, Calif. He just kept right on playing.

"He just internalized it to me," said Tony Masi, the athletic director at Martin Luther King High School in Riverside, where Leonard was a prep star. "We didn't hang out every day. I'd see him for a couple minutes a day. Just watch him and observe him. He didn't show much. He was just shy and reserved."

It never changed earlier this month when the third-year swingman for the San Antonio Spurs was saddled with the responsibility of defending Kevin Durant, the most talented scorer in the league. He just kept right on playing.

"He is just growing by leaps and bounds so I wanted him to be out there every minute with Kevin tonight just so he can learn what it's like to guard a great player and that is what he is going to be doing his whole career in this league," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said after the game when Durant needed 26 shots to score his 28 points. "It was a great night for him."

And it never changed after a game in Minnesota last week when he was asked about Popovich's proclamation that Leonard would one day take over for Tim Duncan as the face of the most consistently successful franchise in the league. He just keeps on playing.

"I've been working hard to be one of the focal points in the NBA, one of the top guys. For him to say that and see that I could be the face, it just brings joy to me," Leonard said with an undertaker's enthusiasm. "I'm just happy that someone else sees it other than myself."

Right there in that moment, without an ounce of arrogance or pretense, it becomes crystal clear that Leonard doesn't see himself as the next Spurs role player to flourish around Duncan, Tony Parker and Manu Ginobili. He doesn't see himself as the next Bruce Bowen or the next Stephen Jackson or even the next Sean Elliott.

Leonard fully expects to one day join George Gervin, David Robinson and the celebrated trio of Duncan, Parker and Ginobili on the list of Spurs headliners.

"Once the Big Three is gone, you'll probably see a lot more of me taking over," Leonard said. "But right now it's just hard with the top three guys still here."

Leonard averaged career highs in points (12.8), rebounds (6.2) and 3-point shooting (.379) this season, but the numbers that really stand out are in the most important category: When Leonard is on the floor this season, the Spurs were 54-14.

"He has a great capacity to absorb things and he works hard," Popovich said. "He comes early to practice. He stays after. Our development guys work with him constantly and he wears them out. So he really wants to be good and he's got some talents to work with, so that's a good combination."

His ascendance is one of the biggest reasons the ageless Spurs just keep on rolling. After a devastating loss to Miami in seven games in the NBA Finals last season, the big question was whether the heartbroken Spurs would recover and mount another run. Duncan is coming up on 38, Ginobili will be 37 in July and Parker will turn 32 in May.

But the 22-year-old Leonard, acquired from Indiana in a draft-night trade for valued veteran George Hill in 2011, has infused this team with young legs, given them a defensive dynamo on the perimeter and another maniacal competitor who gets bored with the cupcakes at the bottom of the standings while salivating over a night matched up against Durant, LeBron James and the rest of the best.

"I feel like those are the best games rather than playing one of the under 50-(win) teams and not really learning a lot because they make a lot of mistakes," Leonard said.

Nowitzki has Mavs back in playoffs

Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki has the spring back in his pogo stick of a jump shot.

The one-legged fadeaway that Kevin Durant admittedly stole is also back in the playoffs after carrying Nowitzki the last few thousand points to the top 10 on the NBA's scoring list.

The 7-foot German — relatively new dad and old hand at this postseason thing after missing last year for the first time since 2000 — is just happy to be back in what he calls the "big dance," a little phrase he stole himself.

"How big our shot is, we'll see," said Nowitzki, whose eighth-seeded Mavericks open the playoffs Sunday at San Antonio, the defending Western Conference champion that finished with the league's best record. "But we have a shot. It's better than being ninth, so we're going to go for it."

The 35-year-old Nowitzki started his 16th season not really knowing where his future Hall of Fame career was headed. He was coming off the first knee surgery of his career, a setback that had a lot to do with Dallas' 12-year playoff streak ending.

He also had new priorities after his daughter was born last summer, keeping him in Dallas and away from family in his native country longer than usual during the offseason.

Nowitzki figured he could be the same player, and everybody around him said he was.

Sure enough, his scoring average went up for the first time in five years, and the rest of his numbers looked a lot like they did in 2010-11, when the Mavericks won the franchise's only championship. Nowitzki credited an intense summer of working out to stay in shape.

"The thing that you don't know fully is the load he carries for this franchise," Dallas coach Rick Carlisle said. "It's a mammoth load not only in scoring but the leadership aspect of it, how he changes games for other players. And the seriousness with which he takes responsibility for winning and losing."

The Mavericks haven't won a playoff game since beating Miami in Game 6 of the NBA Finals three years ago, and they might have the same dubious distinction in a little more than a week because they've lost nine straight to the Spurs.

The "underdog" tag puts Nowitzki in the strange position of having something and nothing to prove all at the same time.

He has a title, and yet another productive season pushed him past seven players on the career scoring list, starting with Jerry West and finishing at No. 10 after supplanting Oscar Robertson.

President of basketball operations Donnie Nelson openly wondered whether Nowitzki really had to do anything else for Dallas, but then remembered who he was talking about.

"He's so incredibly competitive," Nelson said. "He's like the great ones, man. He's got that spirit that the Staubachs and the Nolan Ryans and the Mike Modanos and the Troy Aikmans and those kinds of guys have."

In other words, Nelson places him among the biggest names in Dallas' football-leaning sports history. And since Nowitzki's contract is up after his 13th trip to the playoffs is over, owner Mark Cuban has to decide how much life is left in those legs.

One thing seems certain. Nowitzki won't play anywhere else.

"There's a lot of guys who've been able to score," Cuban said. "But it's that mental toughness, competitive aspect, the type of person he is and the example that he sets, not just for basketball fans in North Texas and around the world but for every future Maverick that walks into the clubhouse."

Nowitzki has a new scoring sidekick in Monta Ellis. His 14th straight season of leading the Mavericks in scoring could be his last. Carlisle will always be trying to limit his minutes, and there's no telling when the production will drop dramatically.

PLAYOFFS

From 1B

playing for the NCAA title earlier this month — happening in the same NBA playoff season.

"It is going to be tremendous from a fans' standpoint, watching," Golden State coach Mark Jackson said. "It going to be a lot of fun."

Brooklyn's Jason Kidd has plenty of postseason experience as a player. He believes the NBA championship is up for grabs, but also probably knows history doesn't favor his sixth-seeded club.

Since 1979, only five teams seeded No. 4 or lower in their conference have reached the finals. But Kidd sees reason for hope.

"It's always wide open," said Kidd, the first-year coach of the Nets — a veteran-laden team put together to win a title this season. "You guys sometimes limit it to just two teams but guys that are playing on a daily basis in the Western Conference and the Eastern Conference feel like they've got a chance."

This year, that doesn't just seem like coach speak.

Take the East. On paper, the biggest mismatch is No. 1 Indiana against No. 8 Atlanta, especially because the Hawks are the only sub-.500 team in the playoffs. And just a couple weeks ago, the Hawks went to Indianapolis and absolutely embarrassed the Pacers, running out to a 32-point halftime lead in one of the more stunning games of the entire NBA season.

"There's some good teams out there," Pacers coach Frank Vogel said. "Every team in the playoffs have given us some problems. We've been able to win against them as well. But it's certainly shaped out to be a good conference."

No. 5 Washington won the season series over No. 4 Chicago. Out West, the third-seeded Clippers and sixth-seeded Golden State split four meetings. Memphis ousted Oklahoma City a year ago and those clubs meet in the first round. And San Antonio's quest to avenge last year's loss in the NBA Finals starts against Dallas — the last team to beat Miami in a seven-game series, winning the title in 2011.

So there are some good stories, and there's intrigue with every first-round series.

That doesn't mean everyone in the league thinks it'll be a year laden with surprises. Philadelphia coach Brett Brown put it simply — to him, the game changes in the playoffs, period.

"The regular season and the playoffs are like two different sports," Brown said. "If you put me in a bubble and you drag me out in May, I can say this is different than the game I'm seeing in November. It's just entirely different."

That's why Brown, a former Spurs assistant, thinks there's a very small number of teams capable of winning it all.

"To be the last man standing is so ridiculously hard," Brown said. "People have no idea what it's like to play in June."

Strong

From 1B

Swoopes didn't impress on the few occasions he took the field. His ability to run could open up the field, but Strong will want to see how well he reads the secondary and throws. Texas must have some comfort level at the position beyond Ash, who has yet to show he can return to the field without more injury problems.

OFFENSIVE LINE: The line protecting Swoopes replaces four starters. Senior center Dominic Espinosa has 39 career starts and leads a unit with big bodies but little experience. And the line has a new position coach in Joe Wickline, who could force some position changes. This is a unit that may not come together until fall.

LINEBACKER: A weak spot for the defense last season and the Longhorns have some top players who have been sidelined by injury. Senior Jordan Hicks was one of the top recruits in the country when Texas signed him out of Ohio in 2010 but hip and Achilles tendon injuries have sidelined him for most of the last two seasons and he will not play Saturday. Steve Edmond, who sustained a lacerated liver late last season, has performed well in the spring, according to Strong.

RUNNING BACK: The Longhorns were loaded at tailback until injuries (Jonathan Gray) and personal issues (Joe Bergeron) left Malcolm Brown carrying the load. Brown is a strong runner who could establish himself as a clear No. 1 at many programs. Gray missed the spring while still recovering from an Achilles tendon injury late last season. Texas said Bergeron is taking time off to address "personal" issues, but Strong suggested this week it was ordered by the coach "He'll return in the fall If he does what I ask him, then he has an opportunity to be back in the summer," Strong said.

KICKING GAME: The Longhorns have to replace Anthony Fera, who handled field goals and punting last season was a finalist for the national award given to college football's top kicker. Sophomore Nick Jordan was 9 of 15 on field goal as a freshman in 2012 when Fera struggled with injuries.

Detroit's Pavel Datsyuk (13) is congratulated by teammate Johan Franzen after scoring against Boston goalie Tuukka Rask, left, during the third period of Detroit's 1-0 win in Game 1 of a first-round NHL playoff series in Boston on Friday.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

ROUNDUP

RED WINGS 1
BRUINS 0

BOSTON — Pavel Datsyuk scored at 16:59 of the third period, moments after Jimmy Howard's best save of the game, and the Detroit Red Wings beat the top-seeded Boston Bruins 1-0 in the opener of their Eastern Conference playoff series Friday night.

The Bruins won the Presidents' Trophy for the best record in the regular season but were locked in a tight game in which neither team had many solid scoring opportunities.

The winning goal came when Datsyuk carried the puck from the right side to the left in Boston's zone and put a 30-footer from near the left circle past goalie Tuukka Rask's left glove.

LIGHTNING 1

TAMPA, Fla. — Rene Bourque had two goals and David Desharnais and Brendan Gallagher also scored Friday night, helping the Montreal Canadiens beat the Tampa Bay Lightning 4-1 in Game 2 of their Eastern Conference quarterfinal series.

Carey Price stopped 26 shots for Montreal, redeeming himself following a less than stellar performance during a 5-4 overtime win in Game 1.

A second road victory in three nights sends the Canadiens home with a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series. Game 3 is Sunday.

Bourque and Desharnais scored in the second period after defensive breakdowns left Tampa Bay goaltender Anders Lindback in tough situations. Gallagher made it 3-0 with an unassisted goal in the third period.

Silver wants age limit change, no rush on others

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even as the NBA prepares for a draft that could be headlined by freshmen, Commissioner Adam Silver remains committed to keeping them in college.

So much so that NCAA President Mark Emmert was invited to discuss his involvement with owners.

Silver

Silver is moving cautiously on potential changes to areas such as the lottery format and playoff structure, but makes it clear that raising the draft age limit to abolish the so-called "one and done" is one of his priorities.

Freshmen Andrew Wiggins of Kansas and Jabari Parker of Duke are expected to be top-five picks in June, but Silver believes teams are taking those players young because of the system in place, not because it's their preference.

"The fact that our teams would draft these players if they were coming out of high school as they used to, or one year out of college, I think doesn't mean change isn't necessary," Silver said Friday.

The age limit requiring American players to be 19 and a year out of high school was implemented in 2005, creating a system where players would simply go to college for a year and then declare for the draft. Silver and predecessor David Stern have long spoken about the desire to increase the limit to 20. But no change, which would have to be discussed with the union, was made during the last round of collective bargaining in 2011.

The sides haven't been able to have much serious discussion since then. The union has been without an executive director since ousting Billy Hunter 14 months ago, but Silver's desire for change remains.

"We're ready to go," Silver said. "We've been thinking about this issue for a long time."

Silver said a change was unlikely for next season, and a transition period would be necessary whenever one was made. In the meantime, he wants the NCAA part of the discussion, so Emmert addressed owners during the two-day meetings.

"One thing that we also agree on is that historically what you've heard is that the age issue is one that needs to be negotiated almost in isolation between the NBA and its union. What Dr. Emmert and I agree on is that the NCAA needs to have a seat at the table, as well, for those discussions," Silver said, "that if we are going to be successful in raising the age from 19 to 20, part and parcel of those negotiations go to the treatment of those players on college campuses, that closing the gap between what their scholarships cover and their other incidental expenses, having a longer discussion about eligibility periods so they can make the best decisions for them and their families if they do decide to come out early."

Overseeing his first board meeting since replacing Stern in February, Silver seems open to considering anything to improve the league. Owners heard a discussion on ways to change the lottery system, which could be a way to erase the desire to "tank" — seeking a poor record to have the best chances at the No. 1 pick. Silver said there was also discussion about redesigning the playoff structure to qualify the top 16 teams, rather than the top eight in each conference. Phoenix, which finished ninth in the West with 48 wins, would've tied for third in the East.

But Silver said those items should be discussed first at length by the competition committee.

"For me, the league is doing so well right now, I just want to be very deliberate and cautious about any major changes like that," Silver said. "It doesn't mean that we shouldn't make changes."

Silver also said owners weren't ready to vote on the potential sale of the Milwaukee Bucks yet, though that could happen soon once owners could review all the financial documents. Owner Herb Kohl reached agreement to sell the franchise to New York investment firm executives Marc Lasry and Wesley Edens for about $550 million.

NCAA could force hardship transfers to sit 1 year

Luke Meredith
Associated Press

Student-athletes who seek transfers due to "difficult life circumstances" might have to sit out a season but gain an extra year of eligibility starting in 2015-16.

The NCAA Division I Leadership Council has recommended the elimination of immediate eligibility for players approved for hardship waivers. The NCAA says the proposed change would give athletes a year to focus on academics and the circumstance that led them to seek such a transfer in the first place before they can play.

The proposal is also intended to reduce concerns about waiver process abuse and claims of inconsistent decision making. The NCAA approved 127 of 236 such waivers from July 2012-June 2013.

The NCAA's Board of Directors will rule on the proposal on April 24.

Marquez setting pace on march to MotoGP title

Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Marc Marquez safely navigated the first turn of the Grand Prix of the Americas and quickly settled into 21 comfortable laps and his second consecutive victory of 2014.

The rest of the grid in MotoGP will have to hope the Spaniard doesn't make such easy work of the world championship.

The reigning world champion has shown no lingering effects from a fractured right leg in preseason training, and judging by the first two races of the year, the 21-year-old may just be too fast and too good to beat over the long haul of the schedule.

"It's so important to start the season like that, two victories and two pole positions," Marquez said. "We have to stay focused and we just started."

Marquez' eighth career victory gave him 50 points heading into next week's Grand Prix of Argentina and a 14-point lead over Repsol Honda teammate Dani Pedrosa. While that lead wouldn't seem insurmountable — yet — the question is a matter of who is going to catch Marquez, or least keep it close enough to keep things interesting.

Pedrosa finished third in the world championship in 2013. Movistar Yamaha's former world champion Jorge Lorenzo, who chased Marquez all the way to the end in 2013 and was just four points behind in second, has had a terrible start to 2014 with just six points after two races.

Lorenzo crashed out of the lead in Qatar and jumped the start in Austin, forcing him to take a pit lane drive-through penalty that pushed him into last place before he rallied to finish in 10th place.

"I wasn't thinking and was distracted and I made a big mistake in the start," Lorenzo said. "I just tried to push at the maximum afterward to get the best result but the race was almost over for me ... I want to say sorry to the team as I destroyed my race."

Anyone but Marquez winning the Austin race would have been a surprise. The Circuit of the Americas track seemed tailor-made for the powerful Hondas to accelerate out of the hairpin turns into the long straightaways that Marquez and Pedrosa gobbled up at a blistering pace.

"Maybe this track was a little easier than the other ones. We know the other races will be different," Marquez said.

His challengers will be happy to get Marquez out of the U.S. for a while. Marquez is undefeated in six races on American soil in Moto2. He won all three MotoGP races in the U.S. last season, but the series dropped its race in California in 2014. That leaves Indianapolis in August as the only other race in the U.S. this season.

"I don't know why it's a great country for me. I like it, so I will ask for a couple more races here next year," Marquez said.

MotoGP will be in Argentina for the first time since 1999, racing on a track built in 2008. The new track could bring some other riders into the mix.

Former world champion Valentino Rossi finished second in Qatar and stands third in the championship points chase with 28. Italian Andrea Dovizioso of Italy finished third in Texas, to earn his first podium finish since 2012.

Former Midland Reporter-Telegram sports editor Ted Battles keeps score during the RockHounds game April 8 at Security Bank Ballpark.

James Durbin Reporter-Telegram

TED BATTLES AT 90

Former MRT sports editor still curiously brilliant, charming, mischievous

By Ed Todd
MRT Correspondent

Theodore "Ted" Battles, sports journalist extraordinaire, is a curious sort. Steeped in curiosity and creativity, he is a travel-prone wanderer whose friends characterize him as a "Renaissance man," a "walking encyclopedia" and a "peaceful soul walking his own trail," adored by family and friends.

Lisa Olsson Battles, his beloved and highly principled wife of 45 years until her death in 1992, was his anchor, one who followed the Golden Rule, a nurturing "central focus" of his life.

Ted Battles' dry wit is occasioned by an innocent mischievous flair and a brilliant grasp of trivia well beyond sports, to which he dedicated about 35 years to The Midland Reporter-Telegram as sports editor-columnist.

An amiable bloke coming up on 90 years on Monday, Battles is astoundingly well-versed in sports trivia and in a plethora of general knowledge, including American history that goes round the world.

So-called trivia in most any realm makes the "big picture" credible and meaningful.

His "Battle Scene" sports column and sports coverage brightened and expanded the MRT from the early 1950s well into the 1980s.

Even today, 25 years following his newspaper retirement in 1989, Battles is a faithful Midland minor-league baseball fan and scorekeeper like days of yore.

"Without a doubt, he is probably the most knowledgeable sports person in the Permian Basin," affirmed Midland RockHounds General Manager Monty Hoppel. "He hardly misses a game."

After Battles at age 29 in 1953 became the MRT's sports editor, the Midland newspaper "developed a really stellar reputation for having a great sports section," reflected James "Jay" Allison III, the 51-year-old son of MRT's father-son publishers, James Allison Sr. and James "Jimmy" Allison Jr., who died, respectively, in 1975 and 1978, ages 73 and 46.

"Most people out here took The Dallas Morning News (for sports) because there was no decent (Midland) sports coverage until Ted came along," Jay Allison said. The Allison family purchased the Midland newspaper in 1940. In 1979, The Hearst Corp. purchased the MRT.

Even today, the MRT still has a "great sports section," said Jay Allison, who recently returned to Midland.

Battles was an "extremely talented" and "great sports writer," said MRT columnist Terry Williamson, who in 1989 succeeded Battles as sports editor. "He got along with people, and when you put those two (traits) together, it is a good combination."

Battles won multiple statewide writing awards, probably from the Texas Sportswriters Association.

Battles was "wonderful to work for," Williamson, 68, said. "He loves baseball. He loves to tell jokes without your realizing he is telling a joke. Ted always had great family values. He loved those kids (sons Byron and Brandon)" with whom he skied and, early on, coached them in Little League baseball and took them to major sports stadiums, such as Tiger Stadium in Detroit and Wrigley Field in Chicago.

His wife's death at age 67 in 1992 was "one of the saddest times in his life," Williamson recalled. "That was tough for all of us to go through, all of the writers. She was wonderful."

Williamson's wife, June, said Lisa Battles was "always sweet and kind." At football games they attended, Lisa Battles would study for her role as a Presbyterian deaconess.

"Ted Battles was the sports writer that all other sports writers in Midland will be measured against," said MRT Editor Stewart Doreen, who served as sport editor in the post-Battles-Williamson era. "You didn't even attempt to fill the shoes when following him and Terry Williamson. They were giants in this community, and our readers benefitted because of them."

During Battles' sports editorship, recalled Battles' sons Byron and Brandon, the MRT broadened sports coverage well beyond football, baseball, basketball and track to take in polo, including Tommy Lee Jones; hockey; car racing, featuring Jim Hall and his Chaparral innovations; women's sports; tennis; bowling; and boxing, taking in heavyweights Tony "Two Ton" Galento and Tex Cobb.

In his style, Battles focused on a more "gentler, non-aggressive approach to sports reporting than is evident today," reflected Byron Battles, 62, of Maryland. "His travel and vacation columns, often featuring family members and friends, were "always skewered in a humorous (spirit)."

Byron Battles recalled his father's series of columns in the 1960s that "led directly to increased sports participation by more young boys and girls, more teams and a bigger junior-high pool of athletes feeding the high schools," which resulted in sustained sports successes.

La Doyce Lambert, who worked 12 of his 78 years as MRT reporter, city editor and managing editor, said "Ted was always a great writer" who was "very calm" and "never got excited about anything." He made deadlines without fail.

Of Battles' "absolutely" astonishing memory, Lambert said, "If you had a question, you could always go to Ted to get the answer."

Some years ago, Battles' three then-youthful grandchildren (Andrew, Brett, Reed by Brandon and Beth Battles) quickly found this out in playing a sports-trivia game with their grandfather.

After Battles answered a sports question, the grandsons exclaimed: "No, Grandpa! You're wrong!"

"Oh, no," Ted Battles calmly assured them. "I'm right." He got his copy of a sports encyclopedia to prove that the sports-trivia game was wrong.

Marvin Wynn, a senior youngster in his early 80s and a retired chamber-of-commerce executive, deemed Battles a modern-day Renaissance man "who remembers more things about more subjects than anybody I have ever met" as an expert in various fields.

Battles carried his interests and expertise into creative photography and processed his own film. He took up art via watercolors, pen-and-ink and oil. He avidly portrayed his lovely wife and robust sons through art.

Even today, he is continuing to refine and expand his manuscripts on history of West Texas baseball. When published, Battles has suggested, the books will be rich in anecdotes. Early into his writing career, he took on a barnstorming tale yet to be told.

Passionate about sports and an active skier on the American slopes and in the European Alps, Battles "made a lifetime career out of sports," Wynn noted.

Battles is "probably the only sports journalist you've ever met who has a degree in English," the same liberal-arts degree that Battles and his wife earned at the University of Vermont where they met in the mid-1940s after Battles had served in the Navy during World War II.

Wynn and his wife, Susan, regularly join Battles for breakfast on Saturdays.

Noting that Battles is "curious about the Internet and is fascinated by how much information it holds about obscure facts, Susan Wynn said Battles would frequently ask her to look up some obscure information.

"Of course, he already knows the answer," she said, "but is testing our brains to get our minds working."

Jane Becker, a Midland art teacher, became familiar with Battles in her high school days when he "wrote wonderful things about all of our athletic boyfriends and their talent." In recent years, she developed a friendship with this "kind-hearted" gentle soul who "can really tell some great stories."

Spencer Blocker, last of the original members of the 1970-founded Corned Beef and Cabbage Club that also featured newspaperman Bill Collyns and friends George Glass and Roy Prescott, termed Battles a "walking encyclopedia" of knowledge.

"He's not putting you on," said the 80ish Blocker. "He knows for sure."

Charlie Linebarger, who has known Battles "forever," said "Ted is one of those guys who knows everything about sports and knows a little bit about everything."

Characterizing Battles as a "peaceful soul walking his own trail," retired MRT Publisher Charles Spence, 75, cited Battles' dry humor and his penchant for trivia apparently grounded in his abounding curiosity.

Perhaps partaking of Battles' own knack for spritely tomfoolery, Spence joshed that Battles "wants you to believe that he has this phenomenal memory" for obscure facts, including minor and major league baseball predating Babe Ruth. "But he just makes this stuff up as he goes along."

An easy-going jokester, "a real character (who is) full of mischief," Battles will feign innocence in asking a question, such trying to locate the University of New Jersey.

Once, a reporter, confident of his fact-finding skills, surmised that the reference books had left New Jersey out.

Not so. It is Rutgers University, New Jersey's state university.

A good-hearted fellow from New Jersey but who calls scenic Vermont his haven, Ted Battles married exceedingly well, so well that it astounded him. A lucky fellow is he, charmed and good-willed, blessed by his 1947 bride, Lisa Olsson, a blue-eyed blonde Brooklyn, New Yorker of Swedish beauty, and their two sons, Bryon, 62, and Brandon, 58.

Including their father, that made for "three boys" whom Lisa looked after with great joy, something the French term "Joie de vivre," joy of living, enthusiasm, which bodes well for a life well-lived and which reflects Ted Battles.

Theirs surely was an idyllic marriage, a "good match," the compatible marriage of opposites, as the sons would and do attest.

"Mom was focused on details, well-organized, making sure the family side worked well," recalled Brandon Battles, an aircraft consultant based in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. "Dad was more creative, (taking life) "as it comes, rolling with things," prone to be absent-mined, calm and unflappable, bestowed with a "steel-trap" memory for trivia.

Lisa Battles, "organized, unpretentious" and "very giving" in her volunteer activities, including the theater, the arts and church service, was "principled about right and wrong," noted Byron Battles, telecommunications consultant.

Furthermore, she was a "good sport" in "indulging" her three boys (sons Byron and Brandon and husband Ted) in their sports activities, Byron recalled.

But before this characterization goes further into Ted Battles, there is more grandeur in his life: Lisa, his wife.

"She (Lisa) was always his anchor, his grounding," said Byron Battles' wife, Janelle. "She would always be there, always there to support him. He is so healthy" coming up on age 90. "That is amazing."

In his retirement and after his wife's death in 1992, Ted Battles and Bill Rutter Jr. would travel to Europe together for sight-seeing and skiing trips. Rutter, however, did not ski. Battles was the avid skier.

"Ted is such a jovial guy," Rutter, 87, said. "The only trouble with Ted, he would wander off, start taking pictures, and we couldn't find him (right away) "He gets so absorbed in photography."

And it misfortune befalls Battles, such as getting hoodwinked by pickpockets posing as police officials, "He can make the funniest story you every heard."

Battles' annual Christmastime tales, delightful anecdotes mailed to his friends and family, are hilarious, witty and self-effacing.

Always in good humor, never idle, encouraging others with his tales and entertaining them with his vast quizzes and sports trivia, Battles dearly misses his wife and continuously longs for her.

Images of Lisa Battles and the sons abound in the house, virtually unchanged over the years since her death in November 1992.

"I met Lisa, and she distracted me," Battles recalled when they were undergraduate students at the University of Vermont "Well," he said, "It's strange. I just like Lisa."

Initially, he didn't ask her out on a date. Someone else did, a fellow fraternity brother named Douglas Parizeau, a French-Canadian. They were in a Friday assembly when Battles asked Parizeau, who was sitting next to Lisa Olsson, if he would ask "that girl if she would go out with me."

"Surprisingly, she said yes," Battles said, although she had declined eight previous marriage proposals, according to Byron Battles.

"I don't know what Ted had that he others didn't," Byron Battles said, "but I'm glad he had it."

Standing tall at 6 feet, Ted Battles was handsome. He had joined the Navy to "see the world" but never got out to sea, studied journalism in California before he enrolled at Vermont, where he played baseball as a catcher, though he had wanted to pitch.

Lisa Battles was "very organized, very principled, believed strongly in the Golden Rule," Bryon Battles said.

"As sweet and beautiful and nurturing as she was, she could be a tigress to protect those that she loved," Janelle Battles said of Lisa Battles. She was attuned to culture, art, the theater, to humanity and the creatures of the world.

Meanwhile, Ted Battles walks his own path," she said. "He knows what he likes and knows what he wants to do. When we traveled, we finally learned that Ted just may take off, and we don't know where he is. We used to worry. He loves to travel. If something catches his eye," he is off to explore.

"That's true," Janelle Battles said of his bountiful curiosity. "Lisa was his grounding force, always his anchor, always there to support him (always his love)."

Local forecast

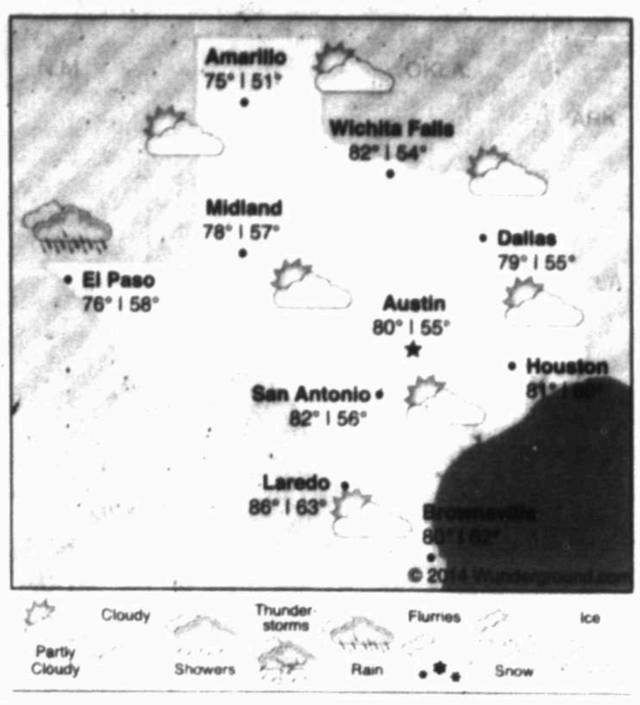

Expect showers today with a 30 percent chance during the day and 50 percent chance at night. The possibility of rain continues Sunday with a 20 percent chance of storms all day.

Highs that stayed in the upper 70s and lower 80s this weekend and early next week will climb into the 90s by mid week. A high of 93 is expected Wednesday. Otherwise mostly sunny conditions during the seven-day forecast, according to the National Weather Service.

The high on Friday reached 77, while the low dropped to 51. The record high for April 18 is 96 set in 2011 and 1948. The record low is 34 set in 2008 and 1998.

National forecast

A slow-moving storm system will result in a rainy day from Georgia to the Carolinas and southern Virginia today. The combination of the rain and clouds will hold temperatures well below normal, and there will be a brisk wind. The same storm will also bring showers or thunderstorms to the Florida Peninsula. The rest of the South will be dry and mild as sunshine returns.

Teenage girl's boyish figure is often deceiving to others

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl with a problem. Because of my buzzed short hair, slim hips and flat chest, I frequently get mistaken for a boy. It really bothers me because, despite my haircut and body shape, I have a feminine face, and I wear women's clothes and makeup. I'm not too much of a tomboy.

Sometimes when someone addresses me with a male pronoun or in some other way mistakes me for a male, I'm too nervous to correct them. Is there a clever or witty way to correct the mistake? — NOT A BOY IN BROOKLYN, N.Y.

DEAR NOT A BOY: The person who made the mistake is the one who should be embarrassed, not you. If it happens again, all you need to do is smile and say, "I'm all girl."

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a woman, and I am considering proposing to her. We have discussed engagement rings and she wants to design her own, which I think is great. However, I am unsure exactly what to do regarding the actual proposal. What ring should I give her, knowing that whatever I give her will not be her ultimate engagement ring? — SOON TO POP THE QUESTION

DEAR SOON TO POP: Marriage proposals happen in many situations and in many ways. There are no rules, and dropping to one knee and offering a ring is optional. The engagement does not begin when a woman starts wearing a ring; it begins when she accepts the proposal. All you need to do is say, "Will you marry me?" When she says yes, you can then decide when you both would like to select a stone for her engagement ring.

DEAR ABBY: A longtime friend asked me to be executor of her estate a few years ago, and I agreed. As time has passed, the details of the estate have changed several times. After the recent death of her husband, she again changed the beneficiaries and is now leaving almost half a million dollars to two animal shelters.

It's her money to do with as she chooses, and I don't judge her. I do, however, have a problem executing an estate that gives that much money to animal care when it could help so many people. I don't fault her for wanting to do it; I just don't want to be part of it. I'm afraid asking her to find another executor would damage or end our friendship. Please tell me what to do. — DILEMMA IN TEXAS

DEAR DILEMMA: Let's face it. You ARE judging the woman and you DO fault her for wanting to leave a fortune to four-footed needy creatures instead of bipeds. Because you are uncomfortable with her plan, you must tell her she needs to find another executor who is as committed to animal causes as she is. You'll be doing her a favor.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, April 19, 2014.

This year you have an opportunity to break a pattern and become more dynamic; travel and a foreigner could be involved. Some of you might go back to school in order to learn more in your chosen field or to develop a new interest. If you are single, you will open up to a new group of friends. It is likely that you will meet someone special through them. This will happen during the summer or the second part of your birthday year. If you are attached, plan on taking that special trip you often discuss. The summer would be the perfect time for the two of you to experience this adventure. CAPRICORN just seems to annoy you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Explore a new spot or visit an area you don't know well. Try to leave your hassles behind, at least for the moment. Contact a friend who lives at a distance. You'll enjoy catching up on news, plus you might want to plan a visit. Tonight: Out late.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ A loved one will want to spend more time with you. Make it your pleasure. A discussion about a child or younger friend will give you some insight. Do not push someone away from you, even if you find him or her to be intrusive. Tonight: Go where you can be entertained.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You'll see life from a whole different perspective. You might realize that you seem to be excluding someone interesting from your life. Make it a point to take a break from being so assertive once in a while. Observe more. Tonight: Time to get to know someone better.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ Complete a project that has been hanging over your head for far too long. Ask for some help if you need it. Your determination and endurance need to be called upon. Once you are done with this task, you will have a big reason to celebrate. Tonight: The party begins.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ What you consider to be a fun happening might intimidate a dear friend. Though you are relaxed, this person might not be. A loved one will be full of ideas. Initiate a conversation and explore the limits of his or her imagination. Tonight: Let a loved one make the first move.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Tension will stem from having too many obligations to fulfill. Ask for help. Make time to purchase a new item or two, perhaps for tonight. A loved one knows just how to appeal to you and lighten up the moment. Tonight: Let this person do his or her thing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ You might want to stop at the gym while you do your normal Saturday errands. You could run into a special friend and have a strong reaction at first. Invite this person to join you for lunch and a chat. You will enjoy catching up on news. Tonight: All smiles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Visualize what you want, and make it so. Many of you might decide to organize an informal gathering at your place either tonight or tomorrow. Make calls in the late afternoon. Reach out to those at a distance as well. Tonight: Hang out. Catch up on some special news.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ Remain sensitive to a friend or loved one. You might be having a great time on your own. This person might be unusually difficult and somewhat uptight right now. Treat him or her as you would like to be treated. Tonight: Great dinner, great company.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Allow your needs to call the shots right now. Take some time off today to nap. Perhaps you might want to schedule a massage, too. If you don't take good care of yourself, you will be worthless to others. Tonight: All of a sudden you are up to snuff.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Be willing to take a risk and share what you feel. You could find someone's reaction to be revealing. Get together with friends at a game or go off to the movies. An invitation will come forward that you'll want to say "yes" to. Tonight: Not alone and not to be found.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You might have to take care of a situation. Whether it involves work or a relative will make little difference. Others admire your diligence. Make plans for late this afternoon, when you will be more than ready to let loose. Let your weekend begin now. Tonight: All smiles.

GENERAL INFO

To ensure the integrity of our newspaper, for the benefit of our readers and advertisers, the Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to revise, reclassify, edit or refuse any advertising. We also reserve the right to convert all advertising into digital and/or print formats within our other products and services.

Please check your ad the first day it appears, and, if you find a mistake, please call our office at 682-6222 so we can correct the error immediately. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. If an error does occur, you can choose to rerun your ad once for free, or we'll gladly refund the cost of the portion of the ad affected by the error. If an ad is inadvertently omitted, we will assume liability up to the cost of the ad itself – consequently, we will publish your ad in our next available edition or refund the price you have paid.

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classifications require payment in advance. Credit applications are required for business accounts.

We welcome suggestions or comments.

HAPPY ADS

Surprise your child, parent, or special friend with a Happy Ad!

We'll help you design something unique and publish it in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classifieds whatever the occasion!

Publish a special memorial to mark the passing of a loved one with an "In Memory Of" ad. Include a poem, prayer, and/or the names of all who care. Also, express your appreciation to everyone who brought food, sent flowers, or was there for you when you needed them most with a "Card of Thanks." We'll help you design a respectful, thoughtful ad.

Ads containing art or photos need to be in our office 2 working days before the ad is to be published and we ask that you pay in advance.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
I am an avid classified shopper and a person with a busy lifestyle. I don't have time for indecisive people. This is why I'm so frustrated with the whole idea of online classifieds. When I read print ads in the newspaper, people list their phone number and even a name. With just one phone call, I can find out all about the item for sale and schedule a time to look at it, all within a few minutes. Online ads are a different story. People usually list their email only. We can go back and forth with questions and answers for days. I often get so frustrated that I just give up. I have the same problem when I sell things online. Potential buyers send me email after email with questions rather than just giving me a call. Doesn't anyone like to use the telephone anymore? I'm as computer literate as the next person, but I just don't get it. Am I the only one who feels this way?

Cash: Between email, texting and twittering, among others, it's possible to communicate with the world without ever leaving your house. However, sometimes people forget the most basic form of communication...talking!

Carry: Email and texting have become a main source for daily communication for most people, far surpassing the use of telephones. While it has many advantages, such as reading or responding on your own schedule, there's one feature often overlooked. It allows people to avoid confrontation.

Cash: While some people like you thrive on person-to-person negotiating, there are just as many who are challenged by it. They would be much happier if their item for sale simply sold itself.

Carry: Email affords people the opportunity to distance themselves while still communicating with potential buyers or sellers. They can email replies, reject offers and do so at their own time without worrying about who is on the other end.

Cash: It can be frustrating when all you want to do is get an answer or buy something you're interested in right away. As a buyer, your best course of action is to include your telephone number in all replies and request the seller call you.

Carry: However, when you're selling try to work with all forms of communication to find buyers. The more people you can communicate with about your item for sale, the better chance you have of selling it at a great price!

Fast Facts

Just Say It

If you have something to say, just pick up the phone. That was the motto of years past. However today's technology is changing how we communicate, even on cell phones. Nowadays Short Message Service, also known as SMS messaging or "texting" is more popular than ever. U.S. cell phone subscribers racked up over 2.5 trillion text messages in 2012. That considerably more than the 363 billion sent in 2007. With texting as a new trend, almost all new cell phones are equipped with keyboards or touch screen displays.

You've Got Mail

If you have an email account of any kind, then you are familiar with the term SPAM. Bulk email or SPAM accounts for nearly 72% of the 183 billion emails sent each day. But have you ever wondered where all that email comes from? Surprisingly, 50% of all bulk email originates in the U.S. Other SPAMing nations include China and Hong Kong accounting for about 20%, South Korea, France and Spain sending up to 7.5%, Canada with about 3.5% and Japan sending approximately 1.6%.

Until Next Week

My friend works for a fairly large corporation and I'm always amazed at the stories she tells me about work. When we were having lunch last week she told me how one of the directors planned a corporate seminar. At first it was going to be held in the large conference room, but on the day of the seminar, he switched it to the cafeteria and only told a few departments.

"It took over an hour to assemble everyone," she said. "Only then he realized the instructor didn't show up that day."

"That's ridiculous," I commented. "What was the seminar?"

"Ironically," she laughed. "It was titled, 'Improving Communication Skills at Work!' "
