Prepaying for college: More losers than winners?

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

It sounds good as an idea, but Texans are puzzled as to how the proposed prepaid tuition bill will affect the state in the long run.

The question being pondered is whether Texas colleges and universities will end up accepting students more because of their ability to foot the bill rather than their ability to earn a college degree.

The bill, recently signed by Gov. George W. Bush, would allow Texas parents to prepay the tuition and fees for their children's college education at close to today's prices from the point a child is born.

Under the new bill, buyers would be required to be Texas residents or the children of Texas residents.

Some officials and experts are already saying it will come down to a matter of who can pay getting in and those who can't pay having a problem and that students academically capable, but in financial need, would also lose out under the bill.

According to State Comptroller John Sharp, whose office would oversee the program, there would be four versions of the plan: one for junior colleges; one for senior colleges; one for students who would attend a junior college and transfer to a senior college; and a higher priced plan would be available for private college. Sharp and other legislators believe interest accrued on the contracts should provide more than enough money to operate the program.

Under the new bill, the "prepaid tuition" program goes into effect Sept. 1, and the state will begin selling two-year and four-year contracts to parents of students under the age of 18 after Jan. 1, 1996.

Despite this new legislation, many people still may not be able to finance a college education by prepaying, but optimism is high among officials who have answers to some of the most asked question about the bill.

Howard College President Dr. Cheri Sparks said, "We knew the legislation (House Bill 1214) had been submitted this session because our Community College Association had been tracking it, but it still took a lot of people by surprise."

Sparks added the more students at Howard College the merrier, but the college would

K-Mart liquidating properties including old Big Spring store

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

In conjunction with National Real Estate Clearinghouse, LaSalle Partners will conduct a mass-marketed, sealed bid auction of more than 200 closed K-Mart stores, including the 68,337 square foot Big Spring store that closed in July 1987.

NRC is a firm that specializes in the accelerated sale of real estate.

LaSalle Partners recently announced the signing of an agreement with K-Mart Corporation to accelerate the liquidation of the retail giant's leasehold interest in 205 closed stores in 35 states.

K-Mart Corporation Senior Vice President of Corporate Facilities Mike Skiles said, "This initiative broadens our continuing program to quickly liquidate closed store liabilities. We expect a portion of the sites to be subleased by national retail chains, but this event also provides excellent opportunities for entrepreneurial investors, local retailers and other types of users."

The closed stores are located throughout the U.S. with 73 in the Midwest, 49 in the Southwest, 47 in the Southeast, 27 in the West, and nine in the Northeast. Texas, California, Florida, Illinois, and Michigan each have 10 or more stores on the auction's sealed bid list.

The leases for the closed stores range in size from 40,000 to 130,000-square-foot and the terms to be assumed vary from two to 23 years.

Bid seminars will be in Orlando. Please see K-MART, page 2

Mitchell commissioners approve primary care provider for employees

By MARY McATEER
Staff Writer

STANTON - Mitchell County Commissioners named Methodist Hospital of Lubbock as a primary care provider for employees referred to Lubbock for treatment in their meeting Monday, June 12.

Although employees may still use the health care provider of choice, the designation makes a 40 percent discount available for those who wish to take advantage of it.

Commissioners also designated facilities where juveniles may be detained for questioning by authorities. Facility designation is a regular duty of the court, explained County Judge Ray Mayo.

Board of Economic Development Chairman Nancy Sullivan reported on the status of plans for the state jail road, a 500-foot road connecting the county jail to the state prison. Architect's plans are not finished, so no action was taken on approving specs and preparing to advertise for bids.

County Treasurer Ann Hallmark presented a request to increase hours for a part-time position in the Treasurer's Office from the 13 hours originally budgeted to 20. She was asked to re-advertise and re-post the position before increasing the number of hours.

In other action, commissioners approved bills presented for payment and approved the regular monthly reports.

Fuqua leading city staff through restructuring phase

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

When Big Spring Mayor Tim Blackshear announced Streets, Sanitation, and Parks Director Gary Fuqua as the new City Manager on May 5, he said Fuqua would hit the ground running.

Since his selection, Fuqua said he has attended meeting after meeting trying to get a handle on the affairs of the city, including the Comprehensive Master Plan and the upcoming budget for fiscal year 1995-96.

Blackshear said Fuqua brings with him experience from within the city's own system and the council felt like he would move into the position very easy and would have 100 percent of the council's support as he took over the position.

According to Blackshear the city was in a unique situation by being able to promote someone from within the city's own system to fill the position of city manager.

Because of his many years with the city of Big Spring, starting in the city's garage and working his way up to positions such as supervisor of the city's Service Center, Solid Waste Systems manager, and supervisor of Municipal Services, Fuqua has been in an ideal position to help the city's administration reorganize several positions following the retirement of former Assistant City Manager Tom Decell.

Blackshear added one of the first priorities of the city would continue to be the Comprehensive Master Plan for Big Spring. He added Fuqua has been very active in helping promote the plan.

Part of that plan, where operation of the city is concerned, includes the reorganization of some city offices, a priority Blackshear said he wanted to see implemented when a new city manager was in place.

Fuqua is trying a temporary restructuring at City Hall by utilizing City Engineer Ralph Truskowski and Personnel Director Emma Bogard in other areas as well as continuing to serve the city in their regular positions.

Currently, Fuqua is trying a temporary restructuring at City Hall by utilizing City Engineer Ralph Truskowski and Personnel Director Emma Bogard in other areas as well as continuing to serve the city in their regular positions.

Fuqua said, "Ralph Truskowski is also assuming the day-to-day supervision of the Utilities Department (formerly run by Decell) which also includes distribution and collection lines, water treatment, code enforcement, and permits."

Emma Bogard, who has been with the city for 22 years, is now interim assistant city manager and will also take on the duties as Director of Streets, Parks, and Sanitation as well as oversee Airport operations."

Fuqua added the reorganization has helped him quite a bit

Capital Research Center to corporate America: Stop aiding your enemies

That's the way the Capital

Research Center sees the philanthropic impulses of some of America's corporate giants.

For eight years, the conservative activists at CRC have tried — to dismal failure, by their own reckoning — to get the biggest companies in the land to change their giving habits and to stop supporting groups "committed to expanding the welfare state."

Now, almost by accident, CRC's activities have come to public attention. House Majority Leader Dick Armey recently conceded that he committed "technically an infringement of a House rule" when he used his congressional letterhead to write 242 CEOs about their companies' donation patterns.

Through charitable giving, "big business is firmly behind the welfare state," Armey, R-Texas, said in the letter, which was mailed by the CRC. The letter accompanied CRC's eighth annual edition of a booklet rating the charitable habits of companies on Forbes magazine's list of the 250 largest corporations.

An ethics complaint against Armey was dropped after he promised the House ethics committee there would be no further improper uses of his office stationery.

She also said she has positive feeling about the bill.

"It's a great opportunity for families to plan for a child's college education," Sparks said. "A child could grow up knowing their education was in place, so that expectation is ingrained in them."

"Sometimes families and students think college is out of reach, so if we can get these kinds of programs working, we can get rid of those feelings."

According to the Higher Education Coordinating Board, the program is intended to be self-supporting with administrative costs paid from purchase fees and earnings on investments. Officials say the bill would not have fiscal implications on the State, however, the State would be liable for all existing contracts if the program were terminated or if insufficient funds were available to honor prepaid contracts.

If a student chooses not to attend college all tuition and fees, not including interest and investment earnings, would be refunded. The same applies if a contract purchaser stops paying or wants to terminate the contract.

Also, contracts would expire 10 years after a student's projected graduation from high school, but this time would not include active duty in any branch of the armed forces.

As for the immediate future, Fuqua said he plans to have more retreats with the City Council, like one on June 3, with the budget as the top priority. Question of who's No. 1 now up to the courts

LUBBOCK (AP) — Courtroom maneuvers have overtaken the rivalry for grades between two top students at Snyder High School.

The co-valedictorians faced off Monday in a lawsuit filed to determine who gets her college tuition waived for one year.

Holly Jones, 18, and Veana Clay, 17, both took the stand during a hearing called to help settle the dispute.

Miss Jones went through four years of high school and finished 0.0123 of a point behind Miss Clay, who graduated after just three years by taking correspondence courses through Texas Tech University.

Snyder Independent School District officials this spring named them co-valedictorians — and put No. 1 rankings on both transcripts — while designating only Miss Clay for a tuition voucher from the Texas Education Agency.

"We felt like they were so close, such outstanding students, we wanted to honor both," high school Principal Larry Scott testified.

Robert Nebb, attorney for Miss Jones, accused the school of interpreting its rules on a whim.

U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings said he will rule Friday whether to grant the preliminary injunction Miss Jones is seeking. That injunction would prevent officials from submitting Miss Clay's name for the TEA scholarship awarded to each school district's top graduate. The scholarship pays for one-year tuition at a state school.

Here's the issue: Whether the school's "Tiger Tips" student handbook allows top recognition for a three-year graduate.

Miss Jones alleges that school administrators committed breach of contract by violating the handbook, which states: "At the end of four years of high school, students shall be ranked according to the total average of points earned."

But officials denied that "Tiger Tips" represented a contract. And they interpret the handbook to mean the equivalent of four years of coursework.

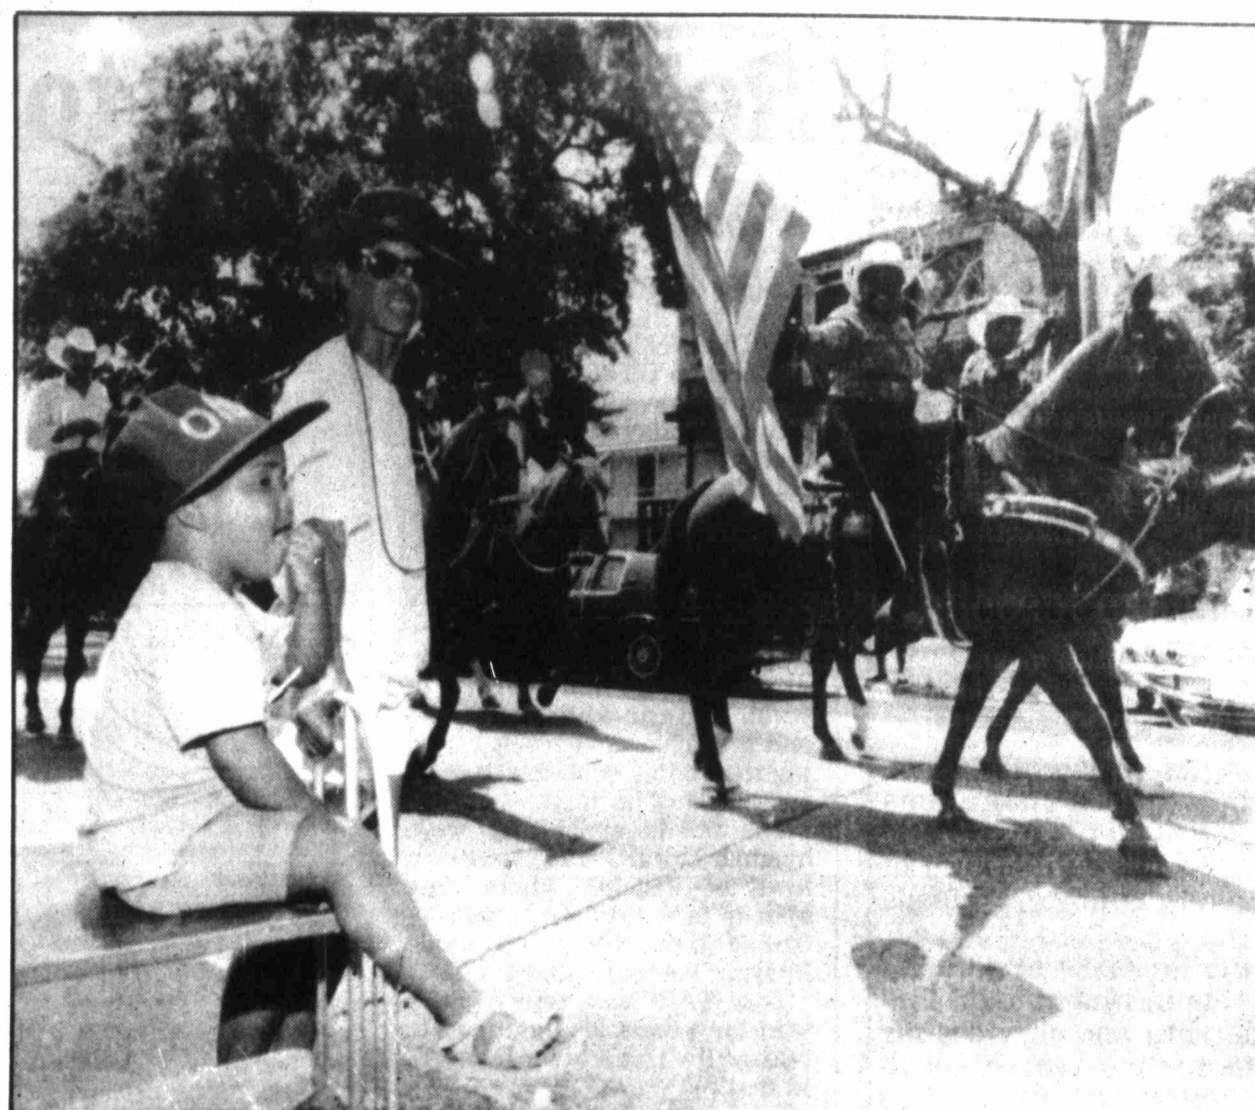

Superintendent Gayle Lomax testified Monday that administrators decided Miss Clay's higher grade-point average makes her the sole choice for the TEA's tuition voucher.

McAlLEN (AP) — A couple already facing charges of selling a 14-month-old child has also been charged for offering to accept a newborn baby girl as payment for one year's rent.

Fidel Flores Garza, 47, and Yolanda Trevino Saenz, 50, were arraigned Monday on one count of sale of a child, a third-degree felony.

Bond for Garza and Ms. Saenz, both of Pharr, was set at $75,000. The woman who told police

Rangers probed concerning racial slur

HOUSTON (AP) — A black Texas Ranger and a female member who left the agency in disgust have told internal investigators of a racial slur at a Rangers retreat last year.

However, nearly two dozen former and current Rangers at the controversial southeast Texas meeting said under oath they do not recall such an incident.

William Walk, a veteran Ranger stationed at Nacogdoches, swore he did not use the word "nigger." Senior Ranger Capt. Maurice Cook backed Walk's assertion.

"I have never used the word 'nigger' as a racial slur to a black man and never will," Walk insisted.

Cook said there were no racial remarks made in his presence.

"Specifically, Bill Walk was not heard to say any racial word respectfully referred to as the 'N' word," Cook said.

But Ranger Sgt. Marcus Hilton, one of six blacks in the 103-member force, said Cook and others heard the remark and Cook "reacted as if he were stunned."

Hilton said Capt. W.D. Vickers, who commands the Ranger headquarters company in Houston, "corrected Walk."

Vickers said he could not recall such an episode, and Department of Public Safety investigators appeared to reach an ambiguous conclusion in a report obtained recently by The Associated Press.

A telephone message left for Hilton at Ranger headquarters in Houston was not immediately returned on Monday. The only Marcus Hilton listed in the Houston area telephone directory has an unpublished number.

The purported incident surfaced in a complaint lodged last year by DPS Sgt. Cheryl Steadman, one of the first two women ever to serve in the elite crime-fighting agency.

She resigned her commission just months after the March 1994 meeting near Spurger and cited the country retreat and cookout in sweeping allegations of sexual harassment and discrimination.

Ms. Steadman said many of the Rangers were drinking, gambling using vulgar language at the overnight session. It was her complaint that led DPS Director James Wilson to order an investigation.

FORT WORTH (AP) — Drug possession and indecent exposure charges have been filed against country singer Ty Herndon, who authorities say exposed himself to an undercover policeman in a park.

Fort Worth vice officers took Herndon, 33, into custody June 13. The arrest came just 90 minutes before he was scheduled to give a private concert at a state convention of police chiefs.

After Herndon was taken to Tarrant County Jail, officers searched his wallet and found a plastic bag that contained 2.49 grams of powdered methamphetamine, a police spokesman has said.

Charges were filed Monday. The misdemeanor indecent exposure charge is punishable by a maximum 180 days in jail and a $2,000 fine. Herndon also is charged with felony possession of a controlled substance.

Couple charged with accepting child as rent payment

McAlLEN (AP) — A couple already facing charges of selling a 14-month-old child has also been charged for offering to accept a newborn baby girl as payment for one year's rent.

Fidel Flores Garza, 47, and Yolanda Trevino Saenz, 50, were arraigned Monday on one count of sale of a child, a third-degree felony.

Bond for Garza and Ms. Saenz, both of Pharr, was set at $75,000. The woman who told police she signed a document for the couple that supposedly gave them custody of the child also was charged. Martha Patricia Romero, 27, was facing $50,000 bond.

Garza and Ms. Saenz were arrested last week, along with Juanita Lopez, 23, of Lopezville; Maria Isabel Casas, 25, of Palmview; and Blanca Olvera, 23, of McAllen, on charges of attempted sale of a baby.

In that case, police allege that Casas attempted to buy Ms. Olvera's 14-month-old baby girl with Garza, Ms. Saenz and Ms. Lopez acting as brokers.

While investigating that case, police said they found the new one, which allegedly was struck in February.

"This was a different mother. On this one there was an actual exchange," McAllen Police Department spokesman Mitch Reinitz said. "The initial agreement was made before the child was ever born."

The 3 1/2-month-old baby has been turned over to Child Protective Services.

State executes 11th prisoner this year

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A condemned killer who blamed an argument over meat-filled casserole for leading him to burglary and murder in 1977, was executed early today.

John Fearance Jr., 40, was pronounced dead at 12:22 a.m., eight minutes after the lethal drugs were released into his veins.

He sighed heavily, gasped "Hail Mary," then was silent, after offering a short last statement.

"I made a mistake 18 years ago," said Fearance. "I feel like I'm not responsible for what I did because I had a bad psychotic break."

The two-time convicted thief, who also was convicted of rape in 1972, killed Larry Faircloth on Dec. 23, 1977. An autopsy showed Faircloth was stabbed 19 times and bled to death.

Fearance said he "lost control" following an argument with his wife. He had returned home from work at a car repair shop and found that she had baked him a casserole with meat. Fearance said he likes his meat separate.

"I just lost control of my mind. I just snapped," Fearance said in a June 7 interview. "I just lost control."

According to police, Fearance left his north Dallas home and broke into at least two houses in the neighborhood, including that of Faircloth.

Fearance was arrested about three hours after the victim's wife identified him as the killer.

"I didn't mean to and I'm ready to go to meet my maker," Fearance told a handful of witnesses.

Reorganization good for city employees, residents

A little reorganization can be a good thing, especially when it allows a person to concentrate on new, time-consuming duties.

City Manager Gary Fuqua has put City Engineer Ralph Truskowski in charge of the Utilities Department. Personnel Director Emma Bogard, who has been with the city for 22 years, is now in charge of streets, sanitation, parks, air-park operations and is interim assistant city manager.

This reorganization is temporary, but it makes sense. It's good to see that Fuqua can already identify potential changes in city government structure that could lead to improved operations.

It's also good to note that Fuqua can delegate and not have to take on the day-to-day worries of these particular tasks. This will allow him to spend more time on budgeting and planning for Big Spring's long-term future - the kind of duties we want a city manager to focus on.

Truskowski and Bogard's new duties indicate Fuqua's commitment to providing quality leadership and services for Big Spring. It's more than a career move for two city employees; we all stand to benefit from this reorganization.

Sexism in eye of the beholder

I have a question about sexism and male insensitivity, one of the great social issues of our time.

Perhaps those of the female persuasion can answer my question and help save me from embarrassing lapses of insensitivity.

Here is my question:

Let us say a female has a figure that, by conventional standards, is pleasing to the eye. Let us also say that she wears garments such as tight shorts that serve to call attention to her physical attributes.

Is it sexist for a male person to silently admire those parts of the female person's body that the female person apparently chooses to put on public display?

I raise this question because I might have inadvertently written something that was insensitive, which I'm prone to inadvertently do whenever I inadvertently open my mouth.

Last week I wrote about women golfers and said that they have better manners, play faster, and are not nearly as obnoxious as male golfers.

This was after the sports section of my newspaper printed a foolish article advising women golfers not to have temper tantrums on the course, when everybody knows male golfers are much more inclined toward hysterics.

Without boasting, I thought the views I expressed in that column were sensitive and enlightened and could not offend anyone but loudmouthed male duffers.

But I have heard from several females who found something in that column offensive.

One of them, Michelle DeFalco of Burbank, Ill., summed up their complaints this way:

"In my opinion you severely damaged your credibility when you included two very degrading and sexist remarks."

"1. 'They believe that as lesser creatures they must stand aside.'

"2. 'Women can be more civilized golf companions, especially those who look good in tight shorts.'"

"How can you explain this?" Well, as to point one, I thought it was clear that I wasn't saying that females are lesser creatures. But in the context of that column, I meant that many insensitive and insecure male golfers try to make them feel like lesser creatures.

So I believe that Ms. DeFalco misunderstood my well-intentioned observation and I forgive her.

As to point two, I have to plead confusion.

I would be dishonest if I said that - everything else being equal - I did not enjoy the company of a woman who looked good in tight shorts a bit more than one whose girth might block out a setting sun.

It isn't that I would not enjoy the company of the latter. But, all else being equal, a perky or willowy figure would do more to enhance my enjoyment of the game.

I don't see why that should offend anyone. It has always been my impression that if a female person with a fine figure wore tight shorts in a public setting, it was because she took pride in how her bottom and her legs looked in tight shorts, and she did not object to restrained but admiring glances so long as they were not accompanied by leers, whistling, panting, slobbering sounds, pinching or other crude displays.

And if this female person did not appreciate restrained but admiring glances, she could pin a sign to the back of her tight shorts that said something like: "Stop Staring, Creep."

Or she could simply wear a more demure garment, such as a skirt or baggy slacks, which are always in fashion.

Let me put my reasoning another way:

For the sake of argument, we'll imagine that through some strange twist of evolution or culture, the most attractive physical attribute a male person could have was a naturally bald head.

We'll imagine that the sight of a naturally bald male head, gleaming in the sun, was sure to attract admiring glances from female persons. And even inspire yearning, longing, and thoughts that might be considered wicked.

What could a male person do if he knew that the sight of his bald head was having this erotic effect on red-blooded females?

If he welcomed such attention, he would proudly display his scalp - maybe shave off any gray fuzz and smear on some goose grease to add lust.

But if he was a modest, proper sort, as many of us are, he'd wear a hat, a cap or a beanie.

And, under those circumstances, if a female columnist wrote that she enjoyed the company of bald golfers, I doubt that any males - fully-thatched or scantily-haired - would object.

Especially if she looked good in real tight shorts.

I guess I can't help myself.

Rebels return to Chechnya

Volunteer hostages to be released

BUDYONNOVSK, Russia (AP) — Chechen rebels who stormed a town in southern Russia returned today to their battered republic with up to 150 human shields, hoping to escape the police who shadowed them by fading into the Caucasus Mountains.

After a circuitous journey through remote backcountry and a three-hour roadside stop this morning, the convoy of seven red-and-white buses — and a refrigerated truck carrying the bodies of slain rebels — passed into Chechnya.

The rebels apparently were headed toward the southern town of Vedeno, where they plan to fade into the rebel-controlled mountains and elude Russian security forces.

The ITAR-Tass news agency said the rebels also planned to release their volunteer hostages in that region.

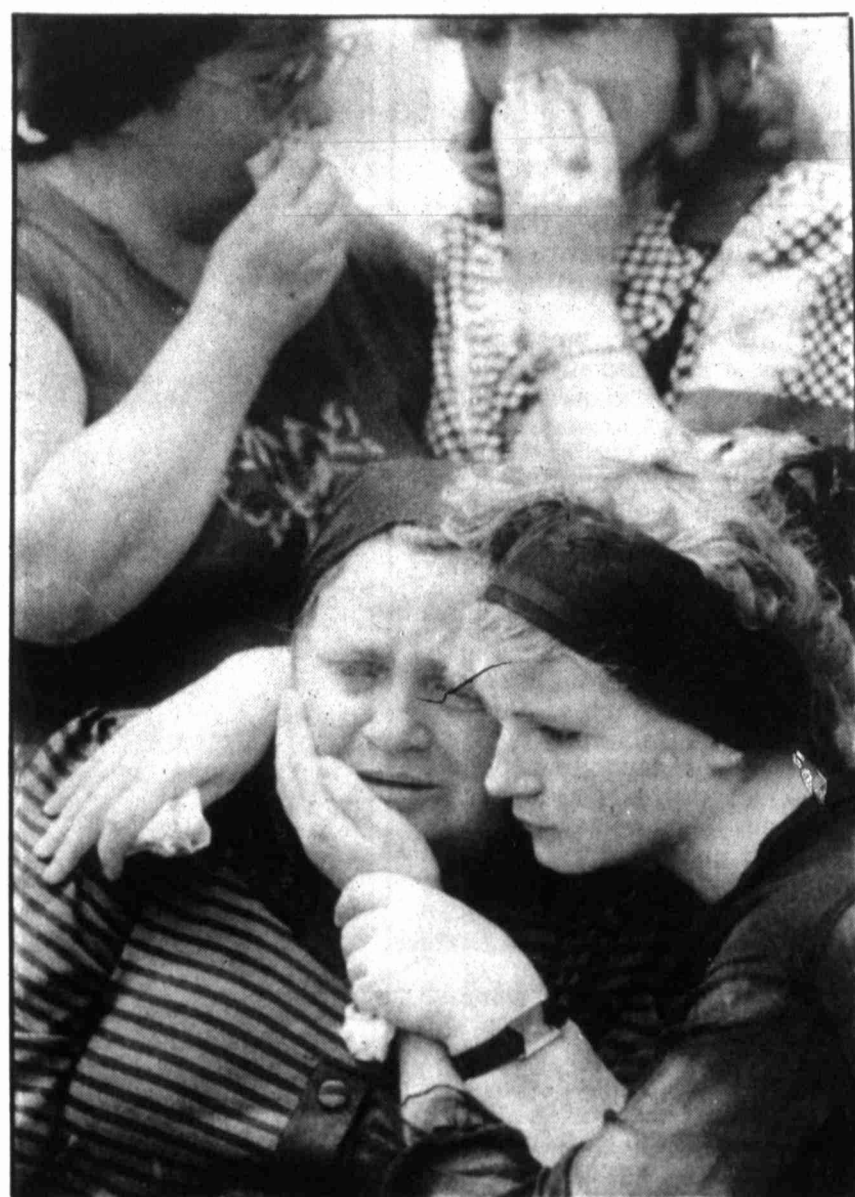

But Interior Ministry officials, who spoke on condition their names not be used, said their forces had the column under watch and the rebels would not escape.

In past hostage incidents, Russian authorities have capitulated to terrorists' demands only to attack them later, often with disastrous results.

The gunmen had held up to 2,000 people hostage for six days in a hospital in the southern city of Budyonovsk, demanding an end to Russia's war against their separatist republic. Two raids Saturday by Russian troops on the hospital failed.

The Chechens released most of the hostages Monday after Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin agreed in nationally televised negotiations to declare a cease-fire in Chechnya, resume peace talks and give the gunmen safe passage home. The Russian military declared a cease-fire Sunday night, but there were reports of fighting Monday in Chechnya.

The buses pulled out of Budyonovsk with at least 73 Chechen rebels and 114 civilians who agreed to accompany them, regional officials said. News reports put the number of volunteers at about 150. Police suggested the volunteers — who included local officials, journalists, parliament members and others — had boarded at their own risk.

They also were accompanied by a refrigerated truck carrying the bodies of rebels slain during the siege.

After the gunmen left the hospital, hundreds of hostages emerged to waiting crowds of relatives and friends. Amid tearful reunions, loud arguments broke out among some former hostages who were sympathetic to the Chechens, and other angry residents who recalled the Chechens' bloody storming of the city last Wednesday in which about 100 people were killed.

"The Chechens treated us well," said 33-year-old pediatrician Natalya Serebryakova, who emerged from the hospital in a torn and dirty white smock.

"If the Chechens promised something, they did it. When (the Russians) started to fire shells ... into a maternity ward, the Chechens jumped on the bed and covered infants with their own bodies."

Witnesses said dozens of people, including hostages, were killed or wounded in two government attacks on the hospital Saturday, which failed to free the hostages.

Woman arrested after plunge over Niagara Falls

ST. CATHARINES, Ontario (AP) — A woman who plunged over Niagara Falls with a friend in a high-tech barrel has been released from a Canadian jail on $1,800 bail. Her friend spent the night behind bars.

Lori Martin, 29, of Columbus, Ga., appeared Monday in a provincial court, a day after she and Steve Trotter, 33, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., were rescued from the bottom of Horseshoe Falls.

Trotter's bail hearing was scheduled for today.

The two were charged with trespassing and criminal mischief after they plunged 180 feet over the falls in a 10-foot, $25,000 airtight barrel made of fiber glass, wrapped with bulletproof Kevlar and covered in thick Styrofoam.

They were arrested by Canadian police after being treated for bumps and bruises at a hospital.

Martin and Trotter were the second pair to survive a trip together over the falls; Joseph DeBernardi of Niagara Falls and Jeffrey Petkovich of Ottawa made the plunge on Sept. 27, 1989.

Russian envoy gets Serbian peace talks started again

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Russian envoy Vitaly Churkin held talks on a new peace initiative with Serbian and Bosnian Serb leaders before leaving the rebel Serb stronghold of Pale today.

Churkin's initiative comes as Bosnia's Muslim-led government and its Croat allies are increasing battlefield pressure on the rebel Serbs.

A three-day blitz last week heralded the start of what is likely to be a summer-long government offensive to try to crack the siege of Sarajevo by capturing strategic heights and thus severing Serb supply routes.

Bosnian Croats have lent artillery support. Top Bosnian army commanders Rasim Delic and Mehmed Alagic met their Bosnian Croat counterparts in Sarajevo on Monday, and agreed to intensify joint action against the Serbs, the Sarajevo newspaper Oslobođenje said.

Churkin, the Russian ambassador to NATO, is the most senior foreign envoy to have traveled to Pale since January, when U.S. envoy Charles Thomas tried to persuade rebel leader Radovan Karadzic to accept an international peace plan the Serbs have rejected.

Churkin's meetings in Belgrade, the capital of Serbia, and in Pale followed a surprise announcement from Russian President Boris Yeltsin that he had agreed with France that there should be no more NATO airstrikes against Bosnian Serbs.

The rebels had demanded that as a condition for freeing more than 370 peacekeepers seized after NATO planes bombed ammunition dumps outside Pale last month. The last 26 were released Sunday.

Churkin met with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic in Belgrade on Monday, then traveled to Pale for overnight talks with rebel leader Radovan Karadzic. He left today after refusing to talk with reporters.

Sporadic shelling and machine-gun fire was reported overnight along the Visoko front line northeast of Sarajevo. The Bosnian Health Ministry reported that in a 24-hour period ending at 9 a.m. today, three women were killed and 20 people were wounded.

The government and the rebels both claimed Monday to have captured or scattered enemy troops. But both sides limited access to strategic locations, making independent confirmation difficult.

Three convoys of trucks carrying 452 tons of food were expected to reach Sarajevo today. The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said it had received clearance from both sides for the convoys.

Increased production bid to end trade stalemate

TOKYO (AP) — In an apparent bid to break an auto-trade stalemate and stave off U.S. sanctions, Japan's car makers are preparing to announce plans to increase production in North America, a published report said today.

But trade tensions flared on another front: aviation. Japan responded sharply today to U.S. plans to impose sanctions on two Japanese airlines.

The proposed new sanctions — retaliation for Tokyo's refusal to allow Federal Express to expand its operations there — appeared to be further evidence of the Clinton administration's new get-tough policy with Japan, which some fear could lead to a trade war.

The Japan Industrial Journal said the five largest automakers plan to announce they will boost production in North America by about 400,000 vehicles to 3 million by 1998.

The report also said the car makers would announce plans to increase the portion of locally procured parts for major models.

Fortier reopens plea bargain negotiations

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Michael Fortier's attorney has reopened negotiations about a possible plea bargain in the federal building bombing, a federal law enforcement source said.

Negotiations broke down three weeks ago because Fortier, who says he traveled to Oklahoma City with Timothy McVeigh to case the federal building, was not offering prosecutors enough information, officials have said.

"The ball was in his court, now it's time for him to hit it back," the source said Monday on condition of anonymity. "His lawyer set this up. It has to do with deals, and he's going to be talking to the U.S. Attorney."

Spokesmen in Oklahoma City for the U.S. Attorney and the FBI would not comment on the status of any deals or Fortier's whereabouts. CNN reported that Fortier left his Kingman, Ariz., home Sunday and drove to a local National Guard Armory with an FBI escort.

Fortier's attorney, Michael McGuire, did not return calls.

Fortier told FBI agents last month that when he went to Oklahoma City with McVeigh, his friend confided that he planned to blow it up.

McVeigh and Terry Nichols, who both served in the Army with Fortier, are the only suspects charged in the April 19 bombing, which killed 168 people and injured 500. McVeigh and Nichols face the death penalty if convicted.

Fortier's possible plea bargain did not seem to bother McVeigh attorney Stephen Jones. "So they were in Oklahoma City in December, so what?" he said.

He maintained that McVeigh would have traveled through Oklahoma City on the way from Kingman to Kansas, Michigan or New York, where he has friends or family.

Jones said the government is scrambling to repair a case damaged by the revelation that the elusive John Doe No. 2 depicted in FBI sketches had nothing to do with the plot.

The sketches of a square-jawed, muscular man actually depicted Todd Bunting, an innocent Army private.

"That's a problem of gigantic proportions for them," Jones said, contending that casts doubt on the Ryder truck-rental agent whose descriptions were the source of the sketches of McVeigh and John Doe 2.

Investigators continue to search for the man they believe accompanied McVeigh when he rented the Ryder truck. It carried the 4,800-pound fertilizer-and-fuel-oil bomb that tore the face off the federal building. But a federal law enforcement source has said that agents are "out of good leads" to find the suspect.

Also Monday, a judge approved an agreement between prosecutors and defense attorneys on the conditions of McVeigh's confinement at the federal prison in El Reno. A surveillance camera in McVeigh's cell will be turned off for four hours each day, and he will have access to exercise facilities.

The defense also will be allowed to hire a photographer to shoot pictures and a short video of McVeigh. Jones, who has questioned eyewitness identification of his client, said he wanted current photographs.

Home office tax liberalization fine with Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican legislation liberalizing the tax rules for deducting home offices is fine with only minor changes, the Clinton administration says.

Glen A. Kohl, tax legislative counsel in the Treasury Department, told the Senate Finance taxation subcommittee Monday that the administration supported the bills, which nullify a 1993 Supreme Court decision that made it harder for self-employed people to claim the deduction.

However, he said the administration wanted the bill reworked "so as to minimize the potential for abuse and associated audit difficulties."

"It's important that we make every effort to avoid turning back the clock and creating a level of ambiguity that would result in more disputes between taxpayers and the IRS," Kohl testified.

The bill also must be carefully written to avoid allowing the deduction of commuting expenses that currently aren't deductible, he said.

Until the decision, IRS Commissioner vs. Soliman, small-business owners and professionals could deduct their home office expenses as long as the space was used exclusively and regularly for business.

After the decision, the office also had to be the principal location of the business. For instance, self-employed plumbers, electricians, interior decorators, home remodelers and many others found they couldn't deduct the cost of their in-home administrative offices because they did most of their work in other people's homes, not in their office.

The Soliman case involved an anesthesiologist who practiced in several hospitals and used a home office for bookkeeping, letter-writing and calling surgeons, patients and insurance companies. The Supreme Court upheld the Internal Revenue Service's denial of the deduction, saying "the essence of the professional service" was performed at the hospitals.

Missing gas cap turns car into coffin when hit

BEAUMONT, Calif. (AP) — A missing gas cap turned a car into a fiery coffin for six children and two adults after it was rammed by a drunken driver, authorities said.

"It went from being a bad accident with broken bones ... to a tragedy," California Highway Patrol spokesman Bob Nickel said Monday.

Only three of the 11 people packed into the 1968 Plymouth Valiant survived the crash late Sunday on a freeway about 80 miles east of Los Angeles. After the Valiant crashed into the center divider and overturned, squirting gas coated the car and it exploded, Nickel said.

An eyewitness, Stan Maloof, said the survivors crawled out of the car.

"It was like something out of a movie that you don't want to see," said Lee Page, who was driving with Maloof. "We heard the shrieks coming from the car as they were burning alive. It was heart-wrenching."

Page and his two passengers followed the driver of the pickup as he fled the scene and called police on a cellular phone.

A 9-year-old girl was in critical condition today with third-degree burns over 48 percent of her body. Her name was not released. Mercedes Diaz, 40, was in good condition with minor injuries. Jose Rodriguez, 39, suffered minor injuries, but was listed in serious condition because he was distraught with grief, hospital officials said.

Supreme Court rules against gays in Irish parade

BOSTON (AP) — The veteran's group that organizes the city's St. Patrick's Day Parade says it was a victory for free speech and family values when the U.S. Supreme Court allowed them to bar gays and lesbians.

But the homosexual organization that challenged parade organizers says its members are being excluded from their "rightful place among the Irish family."

The Supreme Court ruled unanimously Monday that since the parade is a private event and symbolic form of free speech, the veterans group has the right to decide what groups and messages are included.

The ruling reversed lower court findings that the parade was a public event with no particular message.

BIG SPRING RODEO

Quail: Back by popular
demandBy STEVE REAGAN
Sports writer

Officials say rodeo's popularity has been exploding the past few years.

Quail Dobbs knows all about explosions. Renowned rodeo clown Dobbs and his exploding car have been fixtures at the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo for more than 20 years. Ask Dobbs why the car act is so popular, and he'll likely shake his head and wonder the same thing. He worries folks might grow tired of the routine.

In fact, he was going to give his car - nicknamed Endeavor, after the space shuttle - a rest during this year's rodeo.

"I talked about not doing (the car routine) this year, because we've got so much else going on at the rodeo this year," said Dobbs who points to new features such as Jerry Wayne Olson's buffalo and trick-horse riding act, and the Kennedy Sausage Co. eight-horse hitch.

Another addition to this year's rodeo Dobbs is enthusiastic about is the boot scramble.

"Those boot scrambles are getting pretty big at other rodeos," Dobbs said. "It lets the kids be a part of the rodeo. If nothing else, kids just like to get into the arena, and this gives them a chance."

Quail Dobbs, shown above at rodeo festivities several years ago, always is a main attraction for the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo.

Nor will Dobbs be the only recognizable face wearing clown makeup. National Finals Rodeo veterans Jimmy Anderson and Rick Chatman, both of whom performed at Big Spring last year, will be featured this week.

With all that going on, Dobbs decided that Endeavor could use some time off.

Or so he thought. When word got around that the car would be MIA at this year's rodeo, public reaction caused Dobbs to change his mind.

"I opened up a can of worms," Dobbs said. "I guess the car is a part of Quail Dobbs, and if Quail Dobbs is going to be there, then the car is going to be there, too."

Rangers enjoy
singles party

DETROIT (AP) — The Texas Rangers showed manager Johnny Oates that playing with the power shut off doesn't mean being shut down.

The Rangers hit 10 singles Monday night, their third straight game without an extra-base hit. But they combined timely hitting and relief pitching to produce a 6-4 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Detroit rookie Pat Ahern (0-2) suffered his second straight loss when the Rangers put together four straight two-out singles against him and reliever Joe Boever in the sixth inning to take a 5-4 lead.

Texas third baseman Mike Pagliarulo knocked in a run, scored one and preserved Texas' lead with an outstanding defensive play in the sixth.

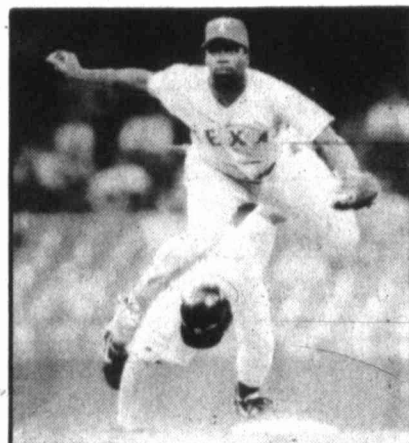

Despite giving up home runs to Chad Curtis, Cecil Fielder and Bobby Higginson, Texas starter Kevin Gross won for the first time since May 17.

"I threw the ball well; I really did," Gross (2-6) said. "The home runs I gave up were solid shots, but I made a lot of good pitches."

"He looked much more aggressive and got ahead of some hitters," Oates said. "He gave up three home runs, but that's going to happen when you pitch aggressively, especially against a team with as much power as Detroit."

Gross went 5 1/3 innings, allowing four runs on five hits. Three relievers followed, with Jeff Russell working a perfect ninth for his ninth save.

Ahern exited the game after giving up two-out singles to Pagliarulo and Benji Gil in the sixth, with the latter cutting Detroit's lead to 4-3. Texas went ahead when Boever gave up run-scoring singles to Otis Nixon and Mark McLemore.

Texas second baseman Mark McLemore, top, watches his throw to first over Detroit's Chad Curtis. The Rangers turned the double play and won 6-4.

Pagliarulo preserved the lead after the Tigers loaded the bases against Gross and relievers Terry Burrows and Roger McDowell in the sixth.

Pagliarulo knocked down a hard smash to third by Danny Bautista and threw him out on a close play to end the inning.

Astros 6, Expos 3

MONTREAL (AP) — Rookies usually need time to make an impact in the majors. Somebody forgot to tell Brian Hunter.

Hunter, playing in his seventh game with the Houston Astros, went 3-for-5 with a two-run triple and scored the tying run Monday night in Houston's 6-3 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Astros have gone 5-2 with Hunter batting .294 in the lead-off spot.

Darryl Kile (3-5) was wild but effective, allowing Montreal three runs on seven hits in six innings. Kile struck out six, walked two and hit three batters with off-speed curveballs.

CHEATING OLD MAN WINTER

Australian bull rider, slated to compete in Big Spring, leaves 'Down Under' winters to kangaroos and koalas

By STEVE REAGAN
Sports writer

If Dennis Johnson plays his cards right, he may never see winter again.

Johnson, 25, learned bull riding by attending rodeos in his native Queensland. Rodeos in Australia are more social events than anything, he said. "Out in the stations (ranches), rodeos are like the outing for the year for those folks," he said. "It gives them a good excuse to go out there and drink beer and talk to friends they haven't seen in six months ... But some of them can last seven hours. I like rodeos over here. They're good and quick."

After eight years of rodeos in Australia, Johnson decided to take his chances here. He obtained his Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association card and began riding bulls in the United States about two months ago.

"I like the U.S. — especially Texas," Johnson said. "The bulls are pretty much the same (in both countries), but there's probably more good bulls over here."

Hopscotching between hemispheres keeps him busier, but he also avoids the cold.

"Back home, it's winter, and there's a lot less rodeo going on," Johnson said. "This way, I might miss out on winter for the next few years."

Besides bull riding, Johnson also wants to become active in bullfighting — the rodeo version. Going from riding bulls to dodging them may not sound too safe, but Johnson has fun.

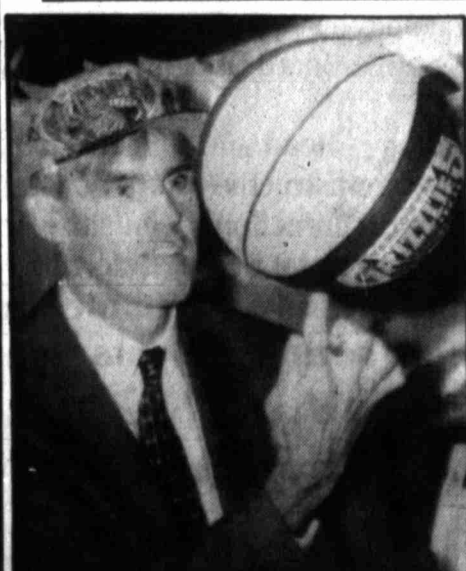

"It's a good rush," he said. "It's a bunch of fun, actually. It's a good way to make some money."

Celtics find coach

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — M.L. Carr needed 33 days and talks with a half-dozen potential candidates to find a coach for the Boston Celtics. After all that, he chose someone who has never coached before.

Himself.

Carr hinted Monday he may just be a caretaker for a rebuilding team that has fallen a long way from the years when it was piling up the most titles in NBA history, 16.

"If there is someone that we deem better-suited at any point during my tenure, we won't hesitate to move," said Carr, who will remain as director of basketball operations, a job he has held only one season.

Penguins' star will be back

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mario Lemieux's return to the sport he dominated as a four-time

NHL scoring champion with the Pittsburgh Penguins will be announced in a news conference Tuesday that may detail how many games he plans to play next season.

Lemieux, 29, sat out the 1994-95 season following five years of persistent back problems, a bout with Hodgkin's disease and anemia. He laced up his skates only once all season, for a charity game in March.

Expansion team names first coach

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Brian Winters, an assistant with the Atlanta Hawks and once one of the NBA's top shooters, was hired as the first coach of the expansion Vancouver Grizzlies.

Winters, 43, signed a three-year contract. He was an assistant for nine years in Cleveland and Atlanta under Lenny Wilkens, winningest coach in NBA history.

Winters was a two-time All-Star during his NBA career from 1974-83. Winters, who averaged 16.2 points, played one season with the Lakers and eight with the Bucks, who retired his number.

Waltrip given hefty fine

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Michael Waltrip, who threw a pair of punches at Lake Speed after the Miller Genuine Draft 400, was hit with a $10,000 fine. NASCAR fined Waltrip for actions "detrimental to auto racing and for participating in a fight in the pits."

Waltrip was upset at Speed's driving tactics in Sunday's race at Michigan International Speedway.

Bobby Labonte won the race, followed by Jeff Gordon.

HOROSCOPE

FOR WEDNESDAY,
JUNE 21, 1995

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Others are overly sensitive. You might not like what you are hearing, but you must deal with a situation square on. You can no longer avoid the ramifications of this matter. Focus on family and changes for the better. Tonight: If you can avoid working late, you've done a lot. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Tension is very high when dealing with someone. Approach a situation in a new way. Tackle problems, and be open to positive interactions. A miscommunication may be inevitable. News is startling, stunning and worth listening to. Tonight: Curl up with a great book. **

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Money matters are a big issue. One-to-one relating focuses on a financial change, an inevitable decision and new potential. An offer will help you face a problem and make positive choices for yourself. Tonight: Go out on the town. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Responsibilities are overwhelming, and you don't like what you hear. However, your choices may be limited. Listen to your inner voice, refuse to get conned into doing something differently and hear what others are saying to you. Tonight: Party, but not at home. ***

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your creativity is high. Your new level of understanding enables you to resolve a problem. Using your potential will allow you to move in new directions to create what is important. Tonight: Discuss your vulnerability with someone you trust. ****

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get in close, and focus on long-term goals. A change in your financial picture will open you up a lot and help you eliminate problems. Optimism surrounds you, and you feel better as a result. Tonight: Read in between the lines with a partner. ***

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be more sure about what you want. You also want to solve work-related problems. A boss is not expressing deep feelings. Be careful when dealing with partners concerning family matters and long-term goals. There could be surprises. Tonight: Work late if you must. ***

Husband's shave is too close for wife's comfort

DEAR ABBY: I had to write when I saw the letter from "St. Paul Wife," who wrote to complain about her husband's unkempt beard, which she hated.

When I dated "Harold," he had only a mustache, and I was crazy about beards. In fact, I did not find Harold really attractive until he grew his beard 13 years ago.

A couple of weeks ago, he decided to shave it off (just for a while, he told me). Now I have a major problem: I find him very unattractive without his beard. I know this may seem shallow, but as time has passed he has lost much of his curly hair, and he also now possesses a very prominent double chin. The loss of his beard exaggerates both.

The other issue with the beard is that it has always been a bone of contention between his parents and me. Harold does not care whether he has a beard or not. Whom should he be more concerned about pleasing other than himself — his parents or me?

When he has made suggestions to me on my appearance, I have always followed his advice, and sometimes just to please him. Now I need a tactful way of telling him that he really doesn't look very good without his beard. — LONG ISLAND WIFE

DEAR WIFE: If he doesn't already know, make him aware of how important his beard is to you. Prepare his favorite dinner, and when the two of you are ready to retire, have this letter on his pillow. It is certain

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Understand where others are coming from and what choices they are making. You'll be a lot better off if you take time to get centered and know what's important to you. Sincerity helps settle a misunderstanding. Tonight: Let your spirit soar. ***

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't take any unnecessary risks, especially with finances. You might have pushed too far already. Knowing when to halt is very important in making key decisions. You might not have the answer yet, but forthcoming solutions will be very significant. Tonight: Out and about. ***

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Recognize your limits and desires. Because you are clear about your choices right now you will figure out how to solve a problem. Listen carefully to what someone is saying, and remain optimistic. Defer to a close partner. Tonight: Have fun. ***

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your talkative side emerges. Allowing you to handle matters in a very positive way. Think about what you want. You are in sync with your long-term goals. In the next few weeks, focus on work, facing problems and listening. Tonight: Go to your favorite hangout. ***

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be creative in dealing with money matters. You are much more centered than you have been in a long time. A friend may disappoint you, but know that you have the wherewithal to deal with this. Allow romance to flourish to its full capacity. Tonight: Anywhere but home. ***

IF JUNE 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This is the year when you need to redefine your priorities, especially professional ones; it will be crucial in the long run. Money matters are dominant. Learn to admit when you have made a mistake or have pushed an issue too far. If you are single, relationships prove to be problematic at times, yet you will be able to work through major issues. If attached, this year you will want to discuss your long-term goals and priorities. SCORPIO encourages you to achieve.
