Lige Griffith Gets 3-Year Suspended Sentence At Archer

MANSLAUGHTER AGREEMENT IN 4-HOURS TIME

Slayer of Herbert Griffin Escapes Pen During Good Behavior

ENDS DRAMA AGAIN

Another Chapter Is Written In Griffin-Reilly Tragic Feud

ARCHER CITY, Nov. 27. Lige Griffith, Dundee farmer, was found guilty of manslaughter and given a three-year suspended sentence here late Friday when a verdict was reached by the jury that has been hearing evidence in the case charging Griffith with the murder of Herbert Griffin, wealthy Archer county rancher.

The jury was out about four hours. It retired to deliberate at 1 o'clock when arguments were concluded and reported back to Judge H. R. Wilson in the 30th district court at 5 o'clock.

The verdict means that Griffith stands convicted of manslaughter but that if he behaves himself for three years he will pay no other penalty. He will be given full liberty and freedom for the next three years provided he is not charged and convicted on any other felony. At the end of the three-year period the slate will be wiped clean so far as the state is concerned.

Another Chapter.

Griffith's conviction writes the finish of another chapter in the lurid drama that started back in the spring of 1924 when Hugh Reilly, a Dundee ranch owner, was shot and mortally wounded by Griffin. The shooting came as the culmination of a long period of ill-feeling between the two. Both owned large tracts of valuable land in the vicinity of Dundee and numerous disputes are said to have

THE WEATHER

LYRICS OF LIFE.
By Douglas Malloch.
The Difference in Men.

This is the difference that I
Have found in men: Though many turn,
Forsake the journey when they learn
The road is rough, the hill is high,
There always are a few who try.

This is the difference in men:
A few who try will sometimes fail,
Yes, beaten by the wintry gale
A few will fail. But even then
A few who fail will try again.

This is the difference I find:
There always are a few who press
Onward and upward to success,
When other fellows fall behind
Because the weather grows unkind.

This is the difference: To do,
To dare, to win, brave hearts require.
Oh, I have watched a thousand tire
For one that saw the journey through—
And yet there always are a few.

Miami Rears Skyline That Resembles New York's

The city of Miami, Florida, is carrying through one of the most pretentious building programs the country has ever witnessed. Building permits to extent of $10,183,419.00 were issued by the city for the month of October. This amount was exceeded by only five cities in the U. S. The view above resembles that of the Battery, N. Y. In foreground is newly made land on Biscayne Bay, which will become a park. The skyscrapers in the background are some of the new ones under construction.

AIR ROUTE MAY BE ALLOTTED TO WICHITA FALLS

City Is Mid-Point on Proposed Route From Kansas City to San Antonio

Possibility of the establishment of Wichita Falls as a hub on a proposed airline between Kansas City, Missouri, and San Antonio, is prospective for the near future if plans of middle western airmen in this city yesterday materialize.

It is the plan of the Airway Transportation company of Kansas City, it is learned, to establish within 45 days at the most a "bus-line" airplane service between Kansas City and San Antonio. There are two possible points of entrance to Texas, their officials point out. Of these, Denison and Wichita Falls, Wichita Falls, because of its location, the topography of the area surrounding it, and its position in a business way is obviously more desirable, it is pointed out, and will in all probability be chosen as the point of entrance into Texas for the proposed route.

Not Definite Yet.

This choice, though, according to Mr. Edward G. Burns, of Kansas City, in speaking of the company's plans last night, hinges to a large extent on the reception its program for passenger and freight air transportation is given in this district. Largely as a matter of publicity in getting Wichita Falls people acquainted with the airplanes of the company, the type of equipment used and in familiarizing them with airplanes a number of machines will be stationed at Call Field today, Sunday and Monday. People wishing to ride in the machines will be taken up at a cost of $1.00 per passenger.

5-Passenger Planes.

Semi-cabin, enclosed Lincoln machines will be used here this weekend, each machine carrying five passengers. An eight-passenger fully enclosed machine of similar design will be used in the long passenger runs.

Besides Mr. Burns, who is in charge of landing places for the company, there were in Wichita Falls yesterday, E. L. Sloniger, chief pilot for the company, Pat Love, mechanical engineer. They will likely remain in Wichita Falls the best part of the coming week.

LOFTIN ADVISES "MA" NOT CALL SPECIAL MEET

Henrietta Man, Floor Manager for Fergusons, Against Session

AUSTIN, Nov. 27.—While both friends and non-supporters of the Ferguson administration are predicting Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson may yield to the pressure of a legislative ultimatum and call a special session of the house and senate for investigations and urgent legislation, Rep. Ruben Loftin of Henryetta, floor manager for the Ferguson forces in the amnesty fight here last March, has predicted that she will not issue the call.

Issues Statement.

Rep. Loftin made this statement after a conference with Gov. Ferguson and former Governor James A. Ferguson.

Amendment of the highway law, appropriations to meet the crisis in the foot and mouth disease situation in South Texas, after a deficiency appropriation had been rejected by bankers, and funds to continue tick eradication work, are matters which the legislators asked the governor to include in a call for a special session, if issued.

"I told the Fergusons there was no occasion for a special session," Rep. Loftin said after the conference. "I explained that all the legislature could possibly do had already been done in the resignations of the two highway commissioners, and to call the session is a useless expense.

Leave It to Grand Jury.

"If any person, in or out of the state service, has been guilty of any criminal act, the Travis county grand jury will bring a bill of indictment, as that body is now making an exhaustive investigation of highway affairs under the probing of the attorney general, who is the leader in the whole matter.

"The attorney general, being most active in the grand jury probe, assures the public that he will bring in all the information he has and then go to the bottom of things. For that reason there is no use of bringing the legislature together. The legislature could not inflict a punishment on any person."

Rep. Loftin was speaking only for himself, but his attitude is understood to be that of the Ferguson supporters in the house. The question is being debated now, whether only 53 members, joining in a call, can make it persuasive on more than 80 other members, so that a quorum can be maintained, should Speaker Satterwhite call the session.

A Final Appeal For Charity

ANOTHER appeal for unsolicited, free-will contributions to the community chest fund has been made by campaign officials in hopes that the chest, when it is full, will be packed with a wide and representative offering from every walk of life in the city.

The $55,000 wanted for the chest is assured, but there are numbers of Wichitans—persons living at points inaccessible in the general canvassing—who have not yet added their bits to the total. It is these and any others who may have been missed that the campaign officials are now imploring.

Just mail a check to the community chest fund, care of the chamber of commerce; or call the office and someone will come to take it.

Biologist Authority Also Tells Teachers Evolution a Proven Fact

'SAFE FOR STUPIDITY'

Nothing he Declares Deteriorates Race Like Good Environment

BULLETIN

DALLAS, Nov. 27.—(AP)—An unofficial announcement of the result of electio nof officers by the Texas State teachers convention tonight indicated that J. M. Bledsoe of the Teachers college at Commerce was elected president by a large majority, receiving more than 800 of the 1,300 votes cast. Miss Mamie Bastian of Houston was second in the balloting with more than 250 votes, and Bonner Frizzell of Palestine, third, with more than 225 votes.

C. A. Gardner of Fort Worth was reported to have been elected first vice president over R. D. Green of Abilene.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 27.—(AP)—The Tennessee Academy of Science unanimously adopted a resolution asking the legislature at its next session to repeal the evolution law, because "it marks a backward step in our educational program."

DALLAS, Nov. 27.—(AP)—American intelligence is declining; civilization makes the world safe for stupidity; nothing deteriorates the race like a good environment; vice and disease purify the race by weeding out the vicious and weak.

These were the conclusions drawn here tonight by Albert Edward Wiggam, biologist and associate editor of the American Magazine, in an address before a session of the convention of the Texas State Teachers' association.

Handicap for Brains.

"An educated man today cannot marry and begin to rear a family before he is thirty or thirty-two years old," Mr. Wiggam said. "But an unskilled laborer can marry and begin to rear a family of unskilled laborers when he is twenty-one or twenty-two. When we give stupidity a ten year handicap over intelligence, we have built our whole civilization upside down.

"College graduates come only from the more intelligent ten per cent of the population. This ten per cent is not all found in the upper economic classes. But the most of it is found either there or in the professional

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Governor Trumbull this afternoon issued a second reprieve for Gerald Chapman to expire March 3, 1926.

Jim Answers

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 27.—James E. Ferguson, former governor, tonight related his political experiences in Texas from the beginning in 1924 to the present day and declared that both Lee Satterwhite, speaker of the house of representatives, and Attorney General Dan Moody want to be governor of Texas. He said he told Speaker Satterwhite in a recent conference that Governor Miriam A. Ferguson would announce whether she would be a candidate for re-election "when she comes to the bridge."

Ferguson said the present trouble in his wife's administration is caused by "disgruntled contractors county commissioners, who had lost their clabber on highway contracts, men with political bees in their bonnets."

The former governor, who was impeached in 1917, and who gained amnesty in 1925, after staging one of the most spectacular comebacks in the political history of Texas, declared that "we have skinned the ku klux klan and that so few are left that they are afraid to come out into the open and fight."

Ferguson said that he knew that tales of graft were being told about him but that he had dared his enemies to produce the evidence before a grand jury.

The former governor declined to say what the governor is going to do about the special session ultimatum of December 10.

Amon G. Carter Explains Why He Gave Three Cheers For Dan Moody In Hearing of Jim and Ma at A-M

If Texas Lost he Also Promised Varsity They Would Get Two Highway Contracts, Publisher Tells Press

HOUSTON, Nov. 27.—(AP)—Amon G. Carter, prominent Fort Worth Publisher, today related in Houston his own version of the episode at the A. & M. Texas football game Thursday, during which he gave three rousing cheers for Dan Moody and was escorted from the grounds.

Governor Ferguson, James E. Ferguson, T. O. Walton, president of A. & M. College, and others of the executive party, occupied a box at the big Thanksgiving Day "Derby". It was in the presence and within the hearing of this box and its occupants that Mr. Carter gave vent to his hurrahs for the young attorney general who is now so largely in the public eye.

HIS CHEERS SEEMED TO NETTLE FERGUSONS.

No offense was intended, Mr. Carter said. He hurrahed equally as lustily for the conquering Aggies, he explained. However, it was not the Aggie yell by Mr. Carter that appeared to nettle the executive party; it was the vocal panegyric for Mr. Moody.

No sooner had Mr. Carter been escorted out of the grounds than he was ceremoniously escorted back in again.

"I was unaware that I was anywhere near the box occupied by the executive party," said Mr. Carter to the Houston Post-Dispatch. "I had been pacing up and down the grand stand runway, following the position of the players on the gridiron and rooting for the A. & M. Players.

"My enthusiasm kept mounting as the Aggies scored their first and then their second touchdown. I was crying 'Hurrah for A. & M.' 'Hurrah for Dan Moody!'"

NOTHING SAID ABOUT HIGHWAY CONTRACTS.

Mr. Carter asserted that nothing was said about highway contracts in the course of his cheering and added:

"Not then and never within the hearing of the executive party. You see, no discourtesy was intended and no offense meant to the governor or any of her party. I did say later that if Texas lost we would give them two highway contracts.

"I was just merely enthusiastic over the turn of the football game and I was likewise hurrahing for Dan Moody. I feel that he has done a great service for Texas in his exposure of the highway situation and in my enthusiasm I was cheering for him too. I was directing my cries at the crowd, not at the governor's box."

"BY ACCIDENT" HE PASSED JIM'S BOX.

"By accident it happened that I passed the governor's box when I was hurrahing for A. & M. and for Dan Moody. Mr. Walton tapped me on the shoulder and said he would have to ask me to refrain from my cheering; that I was embarrassing the executive party.

"I told Mr. Walton, whom I know, that I had intended no embarrassment but that I felt, and I feel now, that I had a right to cheer for A. & M. and for Mr. Moody if it was my desire. 'Mr. Walton replied that if I did it again he would be compelled to have me escorted from the grounds.

"Of course, when he said that I retorted that I would continue to cheer for A. & M. and Mr. Moody and he called a colonel of the governor's staff, I believe, and I was escorted out."

As Mr. Carter was being taken to the exit this dialogue followed between him and his military escort:

"Is it against the law to cheer for A. & M.?" Mr. Carter asked.

"No, Mr. Carter."

"Is it against the law to cheer for Dan Moody?"

"No, Mr. Carter."

"Then what's all the shooting about, anyway?"

Mr. Carter was vouchsafed no reply and was escorted back to the grounds with the comment, 'Aw, forget it.'"

In so far as Mr. Carter's remark about the highway contracts he said that he was merely making a jest.

"And the highway matter is a common jest now, you know; a by-word in Texas."

8 INDICTMENTS SAY ARDMORE SHERIFF LAX

Erving C. London of Carter County, Okla., Faces Prosecution

ARDMORE, Okla., Nov. 27.—(AP)—The Carter county grand jury late today returned eight indictements against Sheriff Ewing C. London, who will have a hearing before Judge Freeman in district court tomorrow morning. The first of these indictments charges that London willfully, knowingly and consciously failed to enforce prohibition laws and cites drug and other firms in whose stores liquor is said to be available. Failyude to arrest bootlegging suspects, allowing prisoners in the county jail their freedom, failure to make verified reports of work done by himself and deputies, collection of fees in civil cases not properly reported to the county commissioners, failure to make returns of funds collected in civil cases, charging of excessive mileage and failure to turn in funds collected from delinquent tax warrants are the other charges made in the indictments.

Sheriff London declares his innocence of any infringement of the law.

CHEST FUND GOING OVER.

Assurance that "it will go over the top" came Friday from the chamber of commerce offices where a final audit is being made of captains' reports on the community chest campaign held here this week.

Campaign officials stood pat on the assertion that when all absentees have been seen and a final canvass made of a number of business places not yet visited, the $55,000 fund sought for this year's chest would be more than subscribed.

Highway Board Meeting On Monday Necessitates Naming Successors

BULLETIN

AUSTIN, Nov. 27.—(AP)—Attorney General Dan Moody returned to Austin tonight from Washington where he argued the old Greer county, Red river boundary case before the supreme court. He said he did not have a thing to say on the developments during his absence on agitation for a special session of the legislature.

AUSTIN, Nov. 27.—(AP)—Belief that Governor Miriam A. Ferguson will not accede to petition of approximately 50 members of the house and call a special session of the legislature was expressed today by State Senator Eugene Miller of Weatherford. He said he felt she should call the special session, "and ask for the most searching investigation that her administration might be freed from suspicion." Senator Miller declared he and a number of other senators had so advised her.

AUSTIN, Nov. 27.—(AP) Speaking for Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, former Governor James Ferguson tonight declared that the woman chief executive had not indicated what action she will take on the ultimatum of about 50 legislators for a special session of the legislature. The ultimatum expires December 10.

Former Governor James E. Ferguson also said that the governor also had not appointed successors to Frank V. Lanham and Joe Burkett on the state highway commission. Indications were that W. D. Cowan of San Saba, former commissioner of the markets and warehouse division, T. G. Ridgel of Fort Worth would be the appointees.

Eugene Smith, secretary to the highway commission, said there would be a commission meeting at the highway department Monday. At least one commissioner will have to be appointed by Monday in order that the payroll road estimate vouchers may be approved.

Answer is Filed.

Saturday the Travis county grand jury will report.

The Hoffman Construction company suit brought by Moody for cancellation of contracts, prevention of payment of $351,000 and $100,000 will go to trial in the 53rd district court Monday. The company's answer, to be filed Saturday, was made public today. It offers to either make a second application of asphalt on 600 miles of highways or to settle with the state in proportion and upon the

Luncheon Hears Reports Of Committees and Address by Leaders

ELECTRA, Nov. 27.—At the wind up luncheon of the Electra chamber of commerce and agriculture, the campaign teams reported $9,525.00 in memberships pledged for support of the chamber's work during 1926. This represents 76 2-10 per cent of the $12,500 budget. The team captains reported membership prospects who were out of the city or for some other reason had not signed pledges, from which they believed more than $1,000.00 additional could be obtained. The campaign workers feel confident that when all of the membership prospects have been interviewed, the subscriptions to the chamber's 1926 budget will total at least $11,000.00.

At the Wednesday luncheon, E. R. Brown, chairman of the campaign committee, complimented the campaign teams upon their enthusiastic and persistent work. He stated that, in his opinion, this has been the most effective budget campaign ever conducted by this chamber. Not merely in funds raised but in stimulating cooperation on the part of Electra business men, pointing out that such team work as had been displayed in this campaign should enable the business men of Electra to accomplish any project they may attempt for Electra's advancement.

The three ranking teams in the campaign were, first, E. W. Barr, captain, L. K. Williams, J. Dave Brown, 122 per cent; second, W. A. Hughes, captain, E. M. Friend, W. T. Oliver, 103 per cent; third, G. E. McDavid, captain, C. W. Scheurer, silver loving cup which has been B. W. Tipton, 98 per cent. The large awarded in the annual membership campaigns of the chamber since 1920 was awarded to E. W. Barr's committee for 1926 in consideration of the record made in this campaign. A A second cup will also be awarded to the team winning second rank. The standing of teams was computed on the basis of the total of budget subscriptions secured by each team as compared with the quota of prospects assigned.

Within a short time his sight became better and he was relieved of all pains in his head.

THANKSGIVING FIGHT AT PRAGUE SCENE OF NEAR FATALITIES AS CELEBRATION ENDS IN SHOOTING

Two Believed Dying And Officers Seek Two More In Oklahoma

PRAGUE, Okla., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Two men are believed dying in a hospital at Okemah, a third is in jail at Chandler and officers are seeking two others while Joe Ludbecker, night marshal here, is suffering from minor bruises and cuts as a result of a Thanksgiving celebration here that ended in a general row.

Horace Archer, 18, and Charles Archer, 19, brothers, are in the Okemah hospital. Attendants held little hope for their recovery. Both are suffering from bullet wounds.

M. T. Ridpath, sheriff of Lincoln county, said Ludbecker shot them after they had attacked him together with three other men last night at Prague. The party had been drinking and creating a disturbance in a restaurant, the sheriff said. Ludbecker asked them to go home. They refused and when Ludbecker attempted to enforce his request all attacked him, beating and kicking him, the sheriff explained.

Ludbecker then drew his pistol and began firing. Both the Archer boys were wounded and the remainder of the party took to their heels.

The sheriff said he does not expect any charges to be filed against Ludbecker.

COOLIDGE ON THE PRESS

William Bradford launched the first newspaper in the city of New York. This was in the month of November 200 years ago. There was a great celebration of the 200th aniversary of the Gazette. And the newspaper men of the hour in the metropolis of the world were in evidence. President Coolidge sent a letter in which he praised the press of America and eulogized the work of William Bradford as the founder of the first New York newspaper and for his services as a moulder of public thought.

William Bradford was a champion of the freedom of the press. He fought for the freedom of the press. He was condemned by the British crown and the agents of an alien king. His work was hampered. He was heavily handicapped. He was in fetters so to speak, but he fought on and won a niche in the American hall of fame.

An excerpt from the letter of praise to the press by Calvin Coolidge, American citizen and Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States, should be given a place in this column. Read it:

"Whatever may have been the limitation imposed upon him by the government under which William Bradford lived, his contribution to the cause of liberty, is not the less real in the life and career of his decendants and those who worked with him in the establishment of the Gazette. It is almost prophetic that the very order of the crown, which aimed to stifle liberty of thought and expresion, should have contained the words, 'great inconvenience may arise by the liberty of printing,' for the press of America has ever been an inconvenience to bigotry and oppresion and the vital aid of free thought and asperation. I ask that you will extend to those gathered with you my most cordial greetings.

'Calvin Coolidge."

It is true that the press of America, or in a large part of it, for two centuries has ever been an inconvenience to bigotry and oppression and the vital aid of free thought and asperation. The good that men do lives after them, regardless of what Shakespeare said in the long ago.

William Bradford did not live in vain. All the great newspaper apostles of freedom of the press and expression, ever champions of civil and religious liberty and the rights of man, did not live in vain. Their good works live after them.

Calvin Coolidge, son of New England, that New England where Roger Williams demanded civil and religious liberty for all mankind, uttered some great truths in his William Bradford letter. Truth never dies.

Error at times rides triumphant, but only rides for a crushing fall.

MAKE 1926 A BANNER PRODUCING YEAR

Central Texas farmers, stimulated by the Austin chamber of commerce and the Austin American, are determined to make a banner producing year. Cash prizes aggregating $1,000 have been hung up for the winners in seven counties, and the farmer who makes the best showing in the section designated is to be presented a prize of $300 and a great public demonstration will be given in his honor. Tom Connally is a Texas congressman. He is a native son. He is proud of Texas and prouder still of the Texas that is to come.

Not long ago, he made a wonderful speech at Fort Arthur where he was the invited guest of the chamber of commerce and shipping. Texas is a billion dollar agricultural state. This sounds big, but there are details to go with it. Tom Connally furnished the facts. He told his hearers that one hundred million acres in Texas are suitable for cultivation, and yet only one-third of that acreage is now classed as improved.

Furthermore the last census recorded 436,000 farms in Texas of the value of $4,447,420,000. He remined the live wires of the Gulf Port that the federal department of agriculture awarded to Texas the first place among all the states in the value of agricultural products for last year. He submitted the figures. In 1924 the farm and live stock products of Texas were valued at a billion and a quarter dollars. Texas farms yielded 4,470,000 bales of cotton or 36 per cent of the total cotton crop of the United States, and about one-fifth of the entire crop of the world.

Its value excluding seed was $334,000,000, or $106 for every man, woman and child in the state. Texas produced 78,000,000 bushels of corn in that year: 26,000,000 bushels of wheat, 49,000,000 bushels of oats and 45,000,000 bushels of other grains. For years newspapers and public spirited individuals have been doing their best to sell Texas to Texas. An excerpt from the Port Arthur address of this Texas congressman should find its way into the scrap book of every Texan who is forward moving, who believes in modern cultural methods known as scientific farming, and who take pride in all movements launched to inspire the tillers of the soil to show to the world what the soil of Texas is capable of producing year in and year out.

"Texas has an area of 262,398 square miles. It is a fourth larger than the French republic. Its territory is broader than that of the Empire of the Hohnzollerns. It is twice the size of the United Kingdom of George V. It contains as much land as 12 states of the union; Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Deleware, Ohio and Illinois. Its population in 1924 was over 5,000,000 as compared with 3,480,000 in 1900, or an increase in 24 years of 65 per cent; a population of 76 per cent of native white, with about 8 per cent foreign and only 15 per cent negro. A short time ago she passed Missouri and is now crowding Ohio for fourth place. Today the governor of Texas rules over more people than Washington governed when he first became president."

In the area designated as the pride contest territories by the Austin chamber of commerce and the Austin American, will be found some of the finest farming sections under the skies of Texas. Indeed Williamson county in other years, has been recognized as one of the top notchers in cotton growing to be found in any of the cotton producing states. In the other counties named are farming communities where the soil is capable of great productivity, and where the diversified crop growers or tillers of the soil have assisted largely in making Texas the more than a billion dollar agricultural state so eloquently set forth in this Port Arthur speech by Tom Connally.

This prize giving contest should arouse the efforts as well as the enthusiasm of thousands of the farmers in central Texas. They should make 1926 the banner crop producing year in the history of the commonwealth. Nature was lavish in October in supplying the moisture. Now man should do the rest.

Uncommon Sense

THE STRUGGLE FOR IMPORTANCE

Because one man wanted to be important—the most important man in the world, many nations were plunged into a dreadful war in 1914.

The desire of other men to be important had plunged these nations, and other nations, into other wars.

It was probably because he wanted to be important that Cain killed Abel.

Since then the struggle for mportance has been going on steadily down the ages.

When we see weak and futile people seeking importance by "showing off" we smile or sneer.

But is not that same desire, in perhaps a different form, deep seated in us all?

We call it ambition, or laudable ambition, or noble ambition.

But it is the same thing, a yearning to shine before our fellows, to be something that the common run is not.

The instinct to be important is a useful instinct, as all instincts are.

It was implanted in man by a Creator who was all wise.

He knew that if man was content to be just an animal, like other animals, he would remain an animal.

But there was work to do in the world, and the creatures upon whom brains and speech were disposed were chosen to do it.

So that desire to be important was given them, so that those with the best brains would seek to rise above their fellows, And the only way they could rise was to do something that the others could not do.

So life is as it is.

On the piazzas of the great hotels we hear elderly women telling how many cars and country places they have, and how many expensive operations they have undergone, so that they will be important in the eyes of thir listeners.

Near by are prosperous old gentlemen boasting about their golf scores or their winnings on the stock exchange, or their control of great industries. They too must impress others.

Sometimes they are liars and attain only a fictitious and brief importance until they have been found out.

But even those who are telling the truth are a little over elated with their success, a little too eager to impress their listeners.

And why shouldn't they be?

* * * *

Success is well worth getting, and those who have taken the trouble to get it are entitled to boast a little now and then.

If in boasting they imbue others with the will to do something worth boasting about they have done real good in the world.

It is only those who want to be important without taking the trouble to do important things who are nuisances.

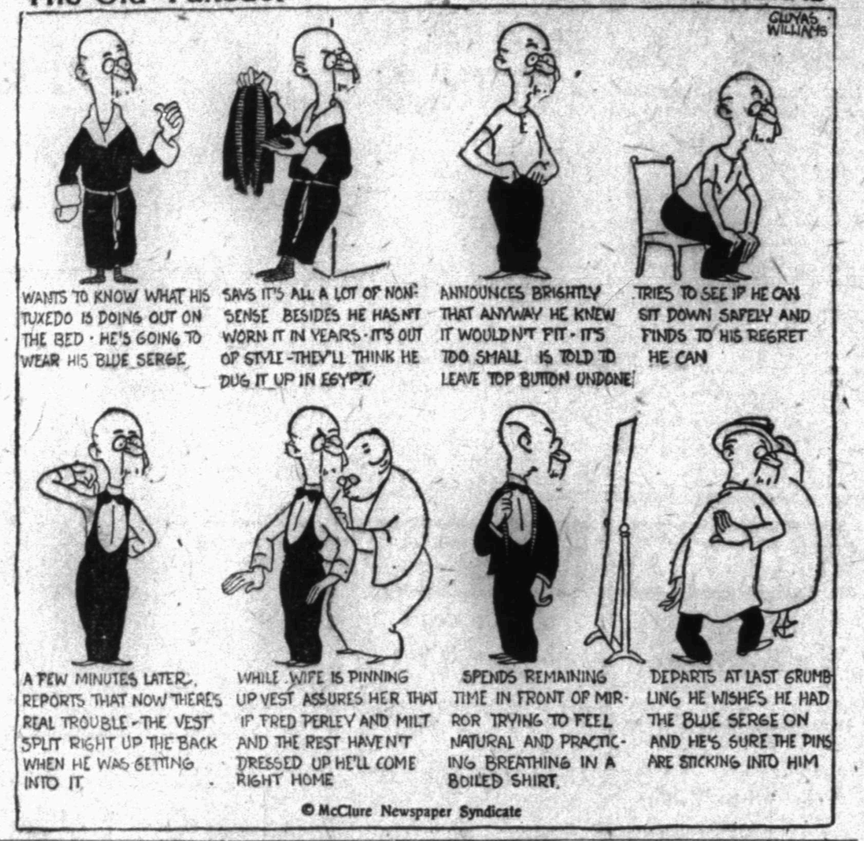

And people soon find them out. For every man is so intent on his own importance that he is impressed by no other man unless that man has done something really big.

If he emulates such a man he will be more useful than he was before he met him.

And being useful is our real mission on this earth.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

SHUFFLING ALONG

Growly the Bear was settling himself for a bath in the sun, and Peter the Boy was at the point of sitting down beside him, when a merry breeze came wafting along and brought a message to the Bear. Up went his long nose into the air.

"Sniff! Sniff! Sniff!"

"Nmmm! What is that I smell?" grunted he. "Something sweet as sugar! Berries? No! Mountain ash roots? No! New acorns? No! Corn?"

"Sniff, sniff!" Growly took two or three more deep whiffs and then gave a pleased grunt.

"Ummm! Corn! Ripe, fresh, green corn, all ready for the picking! Yum! Yum! What a feast I shall have. Oh, me, oh, my; how hungry I am!"

Down upon all fours dropped the Bear and started to amble away.

"Hey, Growly! Wait a minute for a fellow, can't you? Where are you going from here?" Peter hurried after.

"To the cornfield, of course, Two-Legs, to the cornfield, where I shall feast to my heart's delight!" grunted Bear over his shoulder, and swung off at a faster pace. "Come along if you like: Perhaps you can help me pick the stalks. But hurry. That hole in my stomach is growing bigger every moment."

"In summer eat of food to heap!
In fall lie down in peace to sleep!"

Could Growly be singing? Peter decided he was trying to and by staying close to the Bear's side and keeping quiet the Boy at last made out the words of the strange singsong grunt. After he heard the same thing over and over and over, Peter's curosity got the better of him.

"Say, Growly, don't you eat in the autumn?"

The Bear stopped long enough to growl.

"Not a bite after the first of November!" Then went on with his sing-song.

"But where do you live and how do you live without eating?" Peter persisted. And Growly grew impatient.

"I live in a cave because I want a safe place in which to sleep all winter, a warm berth where snow and sleet cannot find me! There, I've answered your questions. Ugh! What is that? Who comes there? Did you hear a strange noise, Two-Legs?"

"I think I heard the lowing of a Cow!" answered Peter, who until hadn't been noticing where they were going and now saw the pasture bars before them.

"Silly things. Cows!" grunted Growly. "I don't like them. And they had better have a care and not start anything that I might have to finish. I don't want to, but I couldn't help it!"

"Help what?" asked Peter, puzzled.

"Couldn't help biting them!" Growly shivered a little and stood still so long Peter thought himself forgotten. Peter nudged the Bear and that brought him to his senses.

"Ugh, don't do that, youngster, it tickles!"

"Why should you bite the Cows, poor things. They can't harm you. And you certainly can't care for fresh meat for food if you live on fruit and vegetables!" remarked Peter.

"Neither do I, only just once in a while when I am very, very hungry!" Was Growly embarassed? He certainly sounded so. Peter couldn't be sure, for the Bear continued:

"Anyhow, I mean well and I'd never bother a herd that never bothered me. Why, I'd rather do almost anything than cross the path of a Cow. Lucky for me if at the sight of one I can keep cool and not lose my head!"

And although Peter Rabbit did not understand what Growly meant, he hadn't the breath to ask him. The Bear was shambling along so fast the Boy found it hard work to keep up with him.

RHINELANDER IS BROKE

Young Scion to Be Penniless As Result Of Trial.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 27. (AP)—While opposing counsel for Leonard Kip Rhinelander and his negro wife, Alice Jones Rhinelander, today mapped out their strategy for the continuation of the Rhinelander annulment suit Monday a report was circulated that the conclusion of the trial would find young Rhinelander nearly penniless, his fortune of $300,000 exhausted by legal expenses.

The New York World will say tomorrow that it has been learned from an authorative source that young Rhinelander alone is bearing the expense o fthe trial. His father, Philip K. Rhinelander, has not supplied a cent in the suit and has neither seen Leonard or communicated with him since news of his marriage became public about a year ago.

SYNOPSIS

Saltonstall Cabot Adams finds himself in the early morning on Long Island. An officer of the New York State Police is approaching him on a motorcycle. Adams had left a Connecticut town just after midnight to search for Connemara Moore, who had suddenly disappeared a few hours before. Connemara was to have announced her engagement to him—or to Bing Carrington—but didn't. Adams had barely reached Long Island when he was "held up."

Salt caught his breath. Then he grinned abruptly and in spite of himself. In the movies and in books, the thought flashed through his brain, the man who came along to save the day was always a member of the Royal Northwest Mounted. Well, here was the day being saved, and by the nearest thing to the Mounties that the forty-eight states have yet produced.

The trooper saw Salt as he came abreast of him and brought his machine to a slithering stop with an ominous grating of two outspread boots against the pavement. The newcomer stared a moment, in the manner of one who had momentarily forgotten his breeding, wriggling his motorcycle backward the while in that disconcerting fashion of a cop who desires converse and information.

Presently the trooper spoke. "What's the big idea?" he asked. His tone gave Salt a sinking and definite impression that what the gentleman wanted to know was precisely what he had outlined, to wit: the nature of the big idea.

"I—I've been to a masquerade."

Now Saltonstall Cabot Adams, for one is a Saltonstall and a Cabot and an Adams however one's appearance may point to the contrary, had been ready to make something of a speech; not an address, exactly, but at least a dignified and rounded summary of his identity, as it affected him, the situation as it affected the others who had been in his party—in short, the night's story. But looking into the trooper's cold blue eye he found himself stammering inconsequentially:

"I—I've been to a masquerade."

"Oh, is that so?" queried the other with a slight lifting of his eyebrows. "Where was this here, now, masquerade—on the mud flats?"

"Er—er—I tell you!"

"And do they have 'em in the morning now?" The trooper's voice changed. "Step out here, you," it commanded briskly, "and let's look you over."

Salt stepped.

"What do you think you're dressed as?" the trooper barked.

"Why—why, as an Elizabethan gentleman."

"Lizzie who? Say, son, you look more like the devil. My God, to think I'd ever see a grown man in bright red tights!" The trooper began to smile. "I guess you don't look like you'll harm anybody—much. Roll home, buddy, and sleep it off. Rotten stuff you get nowadays, ain't it? Where do you live, anyway?"

Salt gulped. "Stamford, Connecticut," he said.

"Stamford—what? Way across the Sound?" The trooper started to laugh, but abruptly his eyes narrowed. "What's that you've got in your hand?" he demanded.

The young man held out the coil of auburn hair. His own face reddened as he did so.

"Say, what are you, anyway?" the trooper wanted to know.

"Where did you get that? What's the big idea? There was a guy loose around here last year that stole women's hair. Say, now!" He leaped from his machine and with three swift double taps satisfied himself that Salt had no weapon concealed upon his person.

And then Saltonstall Cabot Adams began to plead. "She gave it to me," he kept repeating. "I tell you she gave it to me. And we lost her and followed her in a boat, and there was a fight and I had to push her off in the mud——"

"You mean you pushed the young lady off in the mud?"

"No, the boat, I tell you. I pushed the boat off."

"And then somebody bigger'n you pushed you off. Is that it?"

"Yes," Salt lied desperately, "that's it. We were all drunk, I guess. I just woke up a little while ago, back there in the woods." The young man's face was reddening even more deeply. In spite of his concern a voice of conscience shouted within him that he was speaking an untruth, and a louder voice of pride made him squirm internally because he, whose initials were S. C. A., was actually pleading with a menial. Still, anything was better than going to jail.

The policeman was studying him intently.

Tentatively Salt asked, "Which way is the Greenwich ferry? I'll walk there. I can get across somehow."

"H'm!" mused the trooper. "No, I guess you're not worth takin' up. You're what I thought you were—just a harmless boob. The ferry's that way." He jerked his thumb over his shoulder. "And I'll bet you have a string of kids seven miles long behind you before you get there. Move your dogs, buddy, before I change my mind."

Salt moved. When he reached Bayville, hungry and tired and thirsty, but unconscious of it all because of the utter humiliation and wretchedness attendant upon the laughter and taunts and gibes that had followed his every step, he made for the farthest corner of the ferry pier. The sky was blue and the sun was bright and warm, the water danced with the care-free sparkle of a mellow summer's day. But Saltonstall Cabot Adams saw nothing of this. Aside from a hiding place and complete extinction, there was one thing and one only that he desired. He wanted a cigarette. He had none, and he could not bring himself to try to beg. Yes, he wanted a smoke. He would have given fifty dollars on the spot for that.

He had no idea where anybody was, and at the present moment he did not much care. He did not even know that his nine-mile pilgrimage had taken him past the very entrance gates of the house where Connemara and the rest of them had fallen together. But even that would have interested him little. In spite of his need for help, Salt had been in no mood to drop in at anybody's house. What he wanted now was to get home—and to his own proper clothes.

He did not even know that at that very moment he was missing a perfectly good ride in a perfectly good automobile.

Lacy and Connemara had returned rather soberly from their unsuccessful hunt for the buried fifty thousand, to find that Aunt Celimena, having regained that miraculous composure which is breathed into any right-minded woman by the accessibility of a dressing table and the presence of a mirror, had once more suddenly become her old self. The company recognized this by a certain lift of her eyebrows. It was a lift that Connemara knew well.

Said Aunt Celimena with decision: "We shall now go home."

"Suits me," said Sweetie, "as long as I stick with the party. Where's home?"

Aunt Celimena looked languidly past and through her interrupter.

"Mr. Lacy," she pursued, "will you tell me where I can secure a motor? I desire to take my niece back to Moorelands. If Constance Mary insists upon the presence of this"—she transfixed Sweetie with a glare—"of this young woman, I suppose I shall have to take her as well. And I want Bing to come, because I shall not sleep a wink tonight unless there is a man in the house."

"How about me?" David asked with a grin. "Don't I qualify?"

HOW IT STARTED

Raising Glasses.

"Well, here goes"—and every glass was swung upward and held for a fraction of a second before it "went."

How started a custom, a mannerism now so general that no one drinking in company would think of omitting it even in these days of giger ale and sarsaparilla?

American sportmanship demands that boxers shake hands before the bout. "Autre temps autres moeurs." The time and temperament that sanctioned duels decreed that before the mortal combat the antagonists drink a glass of wine. To avoid the suspicion of attempting to poison each other's liquor, both raised their glasses aloft and poured a little from each into the other.

In these unromantic days poison (in this significance) has passed out of fashion, but the custom of raising glasses with its significance and implication of sincerity has remained.

New housing schemes in London are keeping all construction workers rushed.

AUDITORIUM ON FAIR GROUNDS IS CLINE IDEA

He Submits Plan for Consideration of C-C Directors

Out of all the rumors, suggestions and ideas that have been floating about for the last two years regarding a municipal auditorium has finally came a plan, somewhat nebulous as yet but a plan, nevertheless, which may evolve into a definite campaign in behalf of this needed municipal improvement.

The idea, and it is nothing more than an idea at present, has been under consideration here for some time past, but not until Friday had it advanced sufficiently to be laid before the public. It has now been announced, however, and criticisms and suggestions concerning it are invited.

Two Propositions

In its present state the idea contemplates two major propositions, one designed to build a substantial auditorium and the other to insure perpetuation of the Texas-Oklahoma fair.

Briefly, the idea as it will be suggested to the directors of the chamber of commerce was outlined to the chamber of commerce business council Friday noon by W. D. Cline, chairman of the auditorium committee of that organization, who made it plain that his committee, acting with Fred Weeks representing the fair association, is really making no recommendations but is simply submitting its proposition as one it believes practical.

To begin with, assuming, the directors endorse the idea in its final form after numbers of details have been worked out, the city would be asked to call a municipal bond election of not to exceed $500,000. Then, assuming the issue carried and the bonds sold, the city would be asked to buy the grounds, buildings and other improvements at Call Field and receive them with title clear for a price of approximately $200,000, which the committee believes would be an equitable one.

Then it is proposed that the present stockholders of the fair association declare a 50 per cent cash dividend on all outstanding stock after all debts of the association are paid and unencumbered title is obtained to grounds, improvements, etc. The remaining 50 per cent, which Mr. Cline estimates would amount to between $60,000 and $70,000, he proposes be left in the fair treasury to serve as a reserve fund for use against any indebtedness incurred by operation of the fair.

A Donation

This reserve fund would in reality be a sort of donation or contribution from the stockholders, Mr. Cline pointed out. He said he believed from what he knew of the stockholders and from conversations with them regarding the matter, that they would be glad to do this.

The $60,000 fund then, or whatever it might amount to, would be a cash balance in the bank which could be used to protect the city, really the actual owners of the fair, from any loss attendant to its operation. Any profits the fair might make, he said, could of course be divided as dividends or reinvested in the property in the way of new improvements and additions.

Tus the city would have the fair grounds for $200,000, to quote an approximate figure as an example, and would have a $300,000 surplus with which it could build its auditorium.

Before getting down to the meat of the plan, Mr. Cline devoted considerable time in discussion of the Texas-Oklahoma fair, what it meant to the city and the valuable service it rendered to all north Texas and southern Oklahoma every year. He said that the fair had now progressed "beyond the experimental stage" and declared Wichita Falls realized it must now go ahead to support, develop and expand its big exposition. He pointed out that the physical properties of the institution today were, at a minimum, worth $200,000.

The speaker made it plain that in taking over the fair properties the city would not be going into the exposition business. His plan proposed that for a period of 30 days every fall the fair association would have full right and control of the grounds, which would give it time to prepare for, stage and clean up after every annual showing.

Fair Grounds Ideal

As for the auditorium, Mr. Cline and his associates in the work believe that the fair grounds would be the ideal location for it, he said. He declared that if for no other reason, it ought to be put there so that 15 or 20 acres could be set aside for parking of automobiles in which the big throngs would come. He remarked in the course of his talk and later on after some question had been raised as to the advisability of the auditorium so far from the business district that a crowd of 5,000, adding its machines to the normal after-dinner crowd down town each night, "couldn't get within a mile of the auditorium." This parking factor was one he stressed particularly.

In further support of his contention that the fair grounds would be the ideal auditorium site, Mr. Cline observe dthat practically all the larger cities of the country are building or have built their municipal auditoriums out in the suburbs where there is sufficient room to park large numbers of automobiles. He cited the Dallas fair auditorium, the Kansas City municipal auditorium and others as examples.

Population distribution, Mr. Cline said, supported the fair grounds location. He asserted that right now, he believed, more people live closer to the fair grounds tha nthey did to the city hall; and he remarked that with the city's trend of growth distinctly to the south and west, the next five years would see the center of population far nearer Call Field than the business district.

The plan as submitted by Mr. Cline drew varying comment from members of the business council. J. T. Harrell, president of the chamber of commerce, said that the idea of combining the auditorium with a plan that would insure perpetuation of the fair association "sounds like an excellent one." He also said the directors of the chamber of commerce "would listen with interest to this proposal."

Hamilton Undecided

W. B. Hamilton, called on for an expression, said he disliked to either approve or disapprove of the idea without further study and thought.

"I certainly don't want to throw cold water on it," Mr. Hamilton said, "but I don't know now what my attitude will be." He then went on to point out that acquisition of additional land area by a city always incurred for it additional liabilities in the way of demands for water, sewer and other utilities services. He also touched on the tax question as it might relate to this particular matter and wound up with an assertion that the idea was one that should be given careful consideration and which was loaded with possibilities.

County Judge B. D. Sartin did not take readily to the suggestion of putting the auditorium on the fair grounds. He said he thought it ought to be located nearer the center of the city.

Hubert Harrison, after doing some rapid calculating, explained some of the mathematical factors that would have to be considered and announced that the $500,000 bond issue, if it were voted, would add about 10 cents a year to the tax rate.

The business council took no action on the plan, leaving it up to the committee to be worked out in more detail and to be presented to the chamber of commerce directors.

World-Wide Tale of Adventure Is Wound Through Life Story of Man Now at Work Here as a Salesman

Capt. Frederick Delaney, Once Facing Firing Squad In Ireland, Stabbed in Kimberly Diamond Mines, Lives to Tell It

It's here and there one runs across a real adventurer, a globe trotter with wonderful tales to tell; and it's now and then one comes to Wichita Falls and breaks the monotony of the ordinary routine with stories of thrilling experiences.

In this city is Captain Frederick Emmet Delaney, M. C., D. S. O., R. O. G., and several others, a soldier of fortune, who has experienced eight jaunts around the globe, has twice been preserved from death by almost miraculous happenings, and has lived through it all to "settle down" into the life of a business man.

Captain Delaney is connected with the La Creole Laboratories of Memphis, as sales manager for toilet supplies with headquarters in Dallas. He expects to visit in Wichita Falls often.

Born in Ireland.

To begin with his story, he was born in Ireland 42 years ago. His mother died at his birth and when a baby he was taken by his father, a British army major, to the Sudan. When he was three his father was killed and the little orphan was made mascot of the regiment. At the order of the late Lord Kitchener, then a colonel commanding the regiment, the lad was put in uniform.

When hostilities there had ceased he was returned to Ireland and was adopted by an old sea rover, Captain Michael Mulvaney, who owned his own vessel and picked up whatever cargo he could wherever he happened to be. It was while young Delaney was with him that he traveled much and, at the age of ten years, had gone practically around the world. He was taught many things on the voyage and by his tutor, Mrs. Mulvaney.

Once again in Ireland, he ran away from his foster parents, and enlisted in the British marines. He was too young, of course, at 11 years, but a "water rat" sponsored his enlistment, posing as his guardian. He was hailed as the world's "youngest soldier." He became ill with fever, and after Queen Victoria's attention was attracted to the child she visited him often at the hospital.

In 1902 he was honored by being made a personal guard of the kaiser and kaiserin and was personally presented to the German rulers.

Then he felt the call of the sea again and sailed away on the "Veramie" which was destroyed in the disastrous typhoon in the China sea. When the captain was killed he took command. Because of this he was given command of the steamship "Sardinia," later burned in Grand Harbor. On his return to England, he took charge of a British troop ship transferring troops to India. In 1907 at the time of the Messina earthquake, he distinguished himself for his services and was decorated with the Order of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. His next move was to India to become military adviser to the Rajah Gwalior. He returned to Europe and entered the Union Castle line service, sailing between Southampton and Capetown. He became a secret service agent in the Kimberley diamond mines where he was stabbed and badly wounded by a Chinese diamond smuggler. He finally returned to England safely.

In World War.

In 1914 he enlisted as a private in the First Canadian division which was annihilated at Ypres. He was invalided to Canada with the D. S. O. and the Russian Order of St. George. He was honorably discharged but he was ready for more fighting and enlisted in the First American division. He was wounded in the Chateau Thierry fight and was discharged in Paris in 1918. He went to Ireland where he assumed command of the Western Irish Republican party against the Black and Tans. A price of $25,000 was on his head for his capture, dead or alive. He was ambushed and both legs shot. He was imprisoned in London in a cell next to Terrence McSweeney, was tried and sentenced to death. While he was facing the firing squad and with only seven minutes left before the execution, a reprieve came. He was deported to the United States.

Like the fairy story, "and they were married and lived happily ever afterward," ends the adventurous days of the captain.

When Mr. Delaney arrived in the United States, May 11, 1922, he was met by Miss Cora Lee Ash, the Red Cross nurse who had cared for him when he was injured overseas. She was a member of the McGill unit of the Canadian Nursing corps and their friendship culminated with their marriage in 1922.

Since his marriage Captain Delaney has entered the business world where he is as successfully making his mark as he did in the adventures in other continents.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 27.—(AP)—The cotton market today was narrow with moderate trading and limited fluctuations, the trend of values being downward owing to liquidation by longs who had bought recently in expectation of an advance which did not materialize. Steadiness of an advance of one to three points, and although there were moderate rallies from time to time the lows of the day were reached in the late afternoon when prices ruled 20 to 35 points below the highs of the morning. A rally of seven to nine points right at the end cut down some of this lose and the close showed net losses for the day of 11 to 15 points. Liverpool was a shade better than due and the market opened steady although first trades on late months showed losses of five to seven points. After easing off a few points additional right after the call the market rallied to 19.98 for January, 19.464 for March and 19.28 for May, or one to three points above Wednesday's closing levels. These figures proved to be the highs of the day.

Prices soon eased off, however, on long liquidation, stimulated by fears of liberal ginnings, less favorable spot advices and finally disappointing mill takings for the week, Secretary Hester making the total 503,000 bales against 522,000 for the same week last year. The lows of the day were reached in the last half hour, with January at 19.73, March at 19.43 and May at 19.08, or 20 to 25 points below the highs of the morning and 18 to 22 points under the previous close. There was a rally of seven to nine points right at the end. Exports for the day totaled 8,164 bales and for the week 178,684 bales.

NEW YOR KCOTTON.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP)—The cotton market was very quiet today with fluctuations correspondingly narrow. Evidently traders found nothing in the over holiday news of sufficient importance to inspire fresh operations and the volume of business was small enough to surgest that speculative accounts had been evened up before Thanksgiving day adjournment. After selling off from 20.35 to 20.06 January rallied, closing at 20.40, the general market closing steady at net declines of five to 13 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of six points on near months to an advance of five points on later deliveries. Near months were influenced by over-holiday selling orders which seemed to come partly from the south, while the later positions responded to relatively steady Liverpool cables. Early offerings were soon absorbed, the market working five to eight points net higher before mid-day on a little trade buying and covering. The later may have been promoted by apprehensions that unsettled weather in the south would interfere with picking or the movement, but the advance to 20.95 for December and 20.83 for March was checked by realizing.

Demand slackened while offerings increased early in the afternoon when sentiment as to the export outlook appeared to be unfavorably affected by the comparatively small clearances. Prices broke to 20.70 for December and 19.97 for March net declines of about 12 to 21 points on the general list. This was followed by partial recoveries, but local brokers considered the market too narrow to attack much importance to the day's fluctuations.

Exports for the day were 14,164 bales, making 451,304 so far this season. Port receipts 44,040. U. S. port stocks 1,494,619 bales.

WOOL.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—(AP)—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say:

The demand for wool has been moderate during the past week and the market has rather favored the buyer than the seller, although prices are not quotably changed. Evidently the heavy pressure of wool from the southern hemisphere is commencing to be felt. The manufacturing outlook, however, seems healthy and stocks of wool in consuming centers nowhere seem to be at all oppressive.

No Theaters in Java.

In Java there are no theaters to speak of, and entertainment that calls for an auditorium usually is given in large concert halls, the performances opening at 9:30 or 10 o'clock because it is too warm prior to that hour to ask an audience to assemble. The concert halls are connected to clubs usually.

NUEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP)—Constructive forces were again at work in today's stock market, which made further recovery from recent weakness on a substantially reduced volume of trading. Unlike some of the rallies which preceded today's advance did not bring out any appreciable amount of fresh liquidation, closing quotations generally ruling around the day's highest and showing a long list of net gains ranging from one to seven points.

Uncertainty over the New York federal reserve re-discount rates continued, but it apparently has lost its dominating influence as a market factor. Tightening of the call money rate from 4½ to 5 per cent also passed unnoticed, most of the day's highs being recorded after the rate had been raised.

Motor shares continued to make impressive recovery from Tuesday's low levels Chrysler closed six points higher at 189¾, as against Tuesday's minimum of 167¾, and General Motors showed a net gain of 7½ at 118¼ after having sold down to 106 earlier in the week. Hudson showed a net gain of 5⅝ at 101.

Steels responded to reports of expanding mill operations and forward orders. Sloss Sheffield was the spectacular feature of that group, soaring 16 points to a record high at 140 and then easing to 136¾. U. S. Steel common, selling ex-dividend, showed a net gain of 1⅜ at 130⅜ and Ludlum closed 2½ points higher at 53 on the announcement that September net earnings were 500 per cent above those of the same month last year.

Tobaccos were strong in expectation of record-breaking holiday business, new peak prices for the year being attained by Consolidated Cigar, Liggett and Myers common and the "B" stock and Tobacco Products "A". Mercantile point to within a fraction of the year's high on reports of an early restoration of the $4 annual dividend, and Weber and Heilbroner touched a new top at 95¼.

The oils gave a good demonstration of group strength on reports of further improvement in the trade situation.

Rails continued to receive strong buying support with speculative interest centered in the southern carriers. Atlantic Coast Line jumped eight points to a new peak at 226 and Kansas City Southern touched a new top at 42½.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Speculative interest in the foreign exchanges was divided between a sharp rally in French francs and the establishment of a new 1925 high record by Japanese yen at 43¼ cents. Buying of French francs which advanced 13 points to 3.89 cents presumably was inspired by reports that Aristide Briand had again undertaken the formation of a French ministry. Demand sterling ruled slightly firmer at $4.85¼. Other European rates showed only nominal changes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(AP—Wheat made lively fresh gains in price here today influenced by the fact that Liverpool quotations had jumped to a premium of about five cents a bushel over Chicago as against a discount of 14 cents hardly more than a fortnight ago. The Chicago wheat market closed nervous at 2c to 3½c net advance, new style, December $1.65 to $1.65; and May $1.61½ to $1.61¾; with corn at ¼@⅜c decline to ⅛c gain, oats ⅛@⅛c off to ⅛c up, and provisions unchanged to 30c down.

Corn averaged lower on account of large receipts here and clear, cold weather likely to facilitate the crop movement. Oats were easy in line with corn.

Provisions followed the action of the corn market rather than of hog values.

Fort Worth cattle and calf receipts Friday were the greatest of any livestock center in the United States, Chicago excepted. Approximately 6,000 head were on sale here, against 10,000 for Chicago. Kansas City reported but 4,000 head and St. Louis received only 2,500. Arrivals in Fort Worth last Friday amounted to 3,090 head of cattle and calves. A year ago the run totalled 9,472 head.

Calves were disposed of on an active and higher market, some sales showing a 50c advance, while others were steady to 25c up. Steers, cows and yearlings changed ownership at rates that were considered in line with last Wednesday's close. Bull rates were 25c up, and most sales were called 25 to 35c better than at the week's opening. Mostly steady values prevailed for stockers and feeders.

Less than four loads of slaughter steers were available and these were not at all attractive according to packer buyers. In this division the trade was a quiet nominal affair.

Cows of good quality were scarce but everybody was showing canners and cutters. A range of $4 to $4.75 caught the top end of the day's trade, four carloads, two full cars going at the latter value. Cutters moved scaleward freely within a spread of $2.75 to $3.35, and as usual, good canners were in demand at $2.25 to $2.65.

Nothing very attractive was on offer in the heifer and yearling section. Quality made a low average and arrivals were small, mixed shipments consisting the main quota of the receipts. Most deals were within a spread of $4.50 to $6.00.

Bulls sold to much better advantage than at the recent low time, the demand being broad for all useful kinds. One load made $3.75 and small lots moved scaleward around $2.50@3.50.

Calf buyers tried to hold prices down but receipts were not large, and the demand was rather urgent. Under such conditions salesmen attempted to establish a generally higher market, and they succeeded for the most part. The trend of prices varied from steady to 50c higher. Most of the gain being bestowed upon consignments of medium weights. Some desirable heavies did not develop anything better than a fully steady deal. Medium weight calves reported $7.40 and several cars of heavy went at $6.50 to $7.50.

More than 300 carloads of stockers and feeders were in the yards, receipts of cattle suitable for shipment to the country being unusually liberal. The market was slow to start, but looked around steady. It was until late in the day that the hog market showed any signs of life. Receipts were estimated at 1,000 head, but about half of that number went into a packer's pens, one shipment coming on direct billing. The market consisted of two cars fresh arrivals a few small lots in the truck house, and three loads that had been carried forward from late Wednesday. First messages from other centers quoted a general advance in prices, but buyers here were apparently unwilling to follow the higher markets in view of the fact that Fort Worth rates are now, and have been for quite a long spell, on a relatively high comparative level. Late developments were satisfactory to salesmen, however, the trade being quoted 5 to 10c higher. One car of a choice sort went to a shipper at $12 and another load made $11.90. The close was rather active, everybody making up for last time.

Steady prices were received for sheep and lambs, but the market did not show any real activity. Receipts were close to 1,500 head, stockers making up a liberal quota of the arrivals. A few wethers were available and these received a steady offer early, but several decks of stocker lambs and yearlings were in first hands all morning and some old ewes also were being shown to an unusual extent. Short wethers went at $8.10 and yearlings cleared around $11.50. Some lambs for feeder purposes made $13.50.

Market Gossip

R. E. Flowerree and Co., brokers, Staley Bldg., today received the following market comment from Fenner and Beane of New York, New Orleans and Chicago:

COTTON.

Cotton was moderately reactionary today, largely on account of liquidation brought on by favorable weather in northwest and belief that long period of good weather in that section will not only increase the yield but improve the grade.

Some selling developed after announcement of Mr. Hester's weekly figures on mill takings. These continue large but they furnished the occasion to those bearishly inclined to sell because they were a few thousand less than last week's record breaking figures and slightly under last year's.

Sentiment generally favors further reaction but market acts like it was short and further selling may create and over sold and technically strong condition.

GRAINS.

After a higher start in sympathy with strong foreign markets over the holiday our wheat market became a rather nervous affair and fluctuated back and forth on a comparatively small volume of trade.

The Argentine situation appears to have the trade confused. Many are skeptical as to the amount of damage done, but at the same time recognize the fact that the reports have been fully substantiated by advancing prices in the Liverpool and Buenos Aires markets. Ordinarily, a crop scare lasts but a few days and if not confirmed prices invariably recede immediately in this case, the advances have not only been maintained but have continued fur ther.

Foreign news now occupies all the attention, domestic conditions have temporarily been lost sight of. None the less, we must not forget that cash wheat is still commanding good premiums over the future in domestic markets and the stocks in Chicago wholly inadequate for fullfillment of December contracts, and shorts in that position cannot be comfortable unless good quantities arrive in Chicago in northwest for delivery purposes.

The corn market got another false start at opening, after which it settled back into a dull, draggy affair. There is lack of speculative buying. The cash market again weaker than futures. Prices too low, especially with hogs showing an advancing tendency, makes buying adv more attractive than short sales.

STOCKS.

On the strength of no change being announced in the New York federal reserve rate Wednesday, there was a substantial accumulation of buying orders over the holiday.

This fact, together with scant offerings caused advances in the stock market. Chrysler and Hudson, with U. S. Steel which sold ex-dividend today, showed substantial advance during the early trading. Rails made good gains. Oils were fractionally higher with a strong tone maintained in the tobacco stocks.

The Record News want ads will rent that house for you.

More Truth Than Poetry

THE END OF CRIME

There were crooks in the brave days of old
Who clambered up porches at night,
Took watches and jewels and gold—
And vanished completely from sight.
But little they feared that the practice of crime
Was certain at last to undo them,
For the unscientific police of the time
Had no modern means to pursue them.

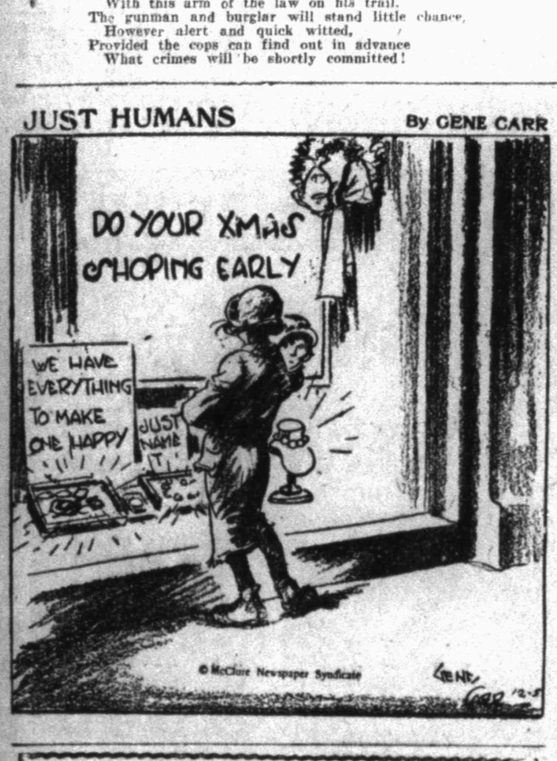

But science has made a great stride
In suppressing the bandit and thug
Who plunder and loot far and wide—
And stand in small fear of the jug.
No calm sense of safety the wrongdoer feels
Though in gans with his pals he is banded,
When he knows that swift iron clad automobiles
Are waiting to catch him red-handed.

All the chief needs to do is to guess
Where a hold-up is going to take place,
And inside of a jiffy or less,
Away will the thief catcher race;
And 'ere the garroter or robber attacks,
With a black-jack or sand-bag, his victim,
He'll be dropped by a rapid-fire gun in his tracks
And the power of law will have licked him.

The crime wave is sure to abate;
The criminal, shaken and pale,
Has no choice but to turn and go straight
With this arm of the law on his trail.
The gunman and burglar will stand little chance,
However alert and quick witted,
Provided the cops can find out in advance
What crimes will be shortly committed!

HI-JACKING PLOT AT ELECTRA IS ENDED IN JAIL

Negro Woman Identified By W. T. Walton, Gang's Victim

ELETRA, Nov. 27.—About 9 o'clock Tuesday night, as W. T. Walton, was returning to his home on North Electra street, he was called to by three negroes as he was passing the Acme club, in the 400 block on North Main street, and the negroes, two negro men and a negro woman, robbed him and took five twenty dollar bills away from him. Several negroes have been arrested during Wednesday, and the negro woman has been identified and the negro men partially identified.

Three negroes have been turnd over to the Wichita jail.

same terms as the American Road company. It states that while the defendants are not apprised of any motive any member of the highway commission may have had in making of the contracts, other than the discharge of his official duty, the same construction placed on the contracts by the highway commission was placed by the Hoffman Construction company.

In his petition Moody charged Joe Burkett, resigned member of the commission with "connivance in effect" with the Hoffman Construction company.

Satterwhite Goes Home.

Before leaving early today for his home in Panhandle, Texas, Speaker of the House Lee Satterwhite, who has been petitioned by more than sixty legislators to call a special session December 15, in event the governor fails to comply with the ultimatum, said: "If the evidence is sufficient to bring impeachments, the fact that the governor of Texas is a woman, would not cause the state legislature to hesitate in performing its duty." He declared that Governor Miriam A. Ferguson's official actions are really her husband's actions, and "he could not expect the state legislature to have more respect for the governor than he himself has shown." H asserted that the legislature was going to have the investigation, but that he hoped the governor would call the special session.

Governor Miriam A. Ferguson and her husband spent nearly all the afternoon with several New York newspaper men but would not grant local correspondents an audience and in telephone conversations said "We have nothing to say about present conditions." They complained that the New York men had "special letters of introduction and had come all the way down here to see us; that they just wanted to acquaint themselves with conditions in Texas for ten years back."

Senator Eugene Miller of Weatherford in saying he did not believe Governor Ferguson would call a special session, gave his version of the administration's viewpoint of the special session situation "The Fergusons feel there is no just reason for calling the session, that there is no wrongdoing that needs legislative investigation." he said. "They feel that if the governor should call the session she would only lend weight and dignity to the efforts of certain members of the legislature she and her husband regard mongers?"

come up between them relative to boundary lines.

In September, 1924, Griffin was tried in Graham, Young county, to which place his case was transferred from Archer City on a change of venue. He was found guilty and a 25-year sentence imposed.

On appeal, however, the case was reversed and remanded and in September of this year, just about 12 months from the time of his first conviction, Griffin was again tried in Graham and this time a jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty."

Griffin's freedom was short-lived, however, for on October 17 as he sat in an automobile in front of the First State bank at Dundee, he was struck down by a bullet fired at short range from a high-powered rifle in the hands of Griffith. Griffin died in the general hospital here, less than 12 hours later.

A Star Witness.

In both of Griffin's trials for the murder of Reilly, Griffith was a star witness fo rthe state. The latter, according to his testimony, heard the shot which killed Reilly and attracted by the sound as he was at work in a field near the diversion dam where Reilly was shot, gained a vantage point where he saw a man run to an auto parked nearby and return to the spot where Reilly's body was found stoop, and place something on the ground beside it.

The state contended that the figure Griffith saw was Griffin, who, the state said, "planted" a gun beside the fallen man.

After the shooting of Griffin, Griffith maintained that he was mortally afraid of Griffin. He testified at his own trial that he had received "warnings" and that threats Griffin is alleged to have made against him had reached his ears.

classes. It is a law of biology that one fourth of every generation produces one half of the next. This one half produces 78 per cent of the next and 98 per cent of the next. Thus one fourth of the present population will be the great grandparents of all America in three generations from today. Is not then the prime question for future America—where is that one fourth? Who are they?

Environment Dangerous.

"Nothing deteriorates a race like a good environment. It keeps alive the weaklings and the fools. The adult pre-historic skulls in the museums were probably those of smart men. In the good old days of natural selection in the jungle probably no fool ever lived long enough to leave an adult skull. Nature kept the race strong and virile.

"Vice purifies the race. So does disease. They weed out the vicious and the weak. The old prophets saw this. They said: 'The fool shall perish by his own folly.' We make enormous provisions to keep them alive and give them a better chance to reproduce than we do our writers, editors, teachers and men of wisdom and leadership.

"Evolution is as thoroughly proved as the fact that the earth goes round the sun. It should be taught to all the children of America. It will give them a larger and better religion than men have ever had.

Against Reproduction.

"We must take care of our weaklings, but they should not be allowed to reproduce. Tuberculosis is going soon to increase if we do not take measures to prevent the tubercular from marrying. The way out is through eugenics, which simply means through a new science social organization, putting a premium on intelligence and character instead of on stupidity and incompetence as we do today."

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga.—(Adv.)

DALLAS PULPIT SENDS CALL TO ELECTRA MAN

Rev. Byron Hester Asked To Take Charge Of Christian Church

ELETRA, Nov. 27.—The North Dallas Christian church has sent a unanimous call for Rev. Byron Hester of the First Christian church of this city.

The congregation of the North Dallas church have recently purchased a new site in the beautiful residence section of that city in Perry Heights which adjoins Highland Park, and are launching a campaign to build a new church, thus the call to Rev. Hester.

Rev. Hestor was recently called for the sixth year to the Christian church of Electra. He is actively connected with the Rotary club, a member of the Knights Templars, and Shriners, and is chaplin of the American Legion of his city.

It is not known whether he will accept the call to Dallas or not.

Want Trippers For C-C Visit

A vigorous campaign is still being waged to obtain enough Wichita Falls business men to fill two Pullman cars for a special trip to the regional conference of the southern division of the United States chamber of commerce. The conferences will be held in Oklahoma City Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 1 and 2. One car will leave here Monday night and return Wednesday morning while a second will leave Tuesday night and return Thursday morning.

About 20 men have already signified their intention of making the trip.

ANDERSON SUES COUNTY

Former Delinquent Tax Collector Asks $31,000 Damages.

A suit for $31,000 and, in the alternative, another action for $10,000, was filed Friday against Wichita county by W. R. Anderson, an attorney formerly employed by the county to collect delinquent taxes.

The suits, which were filed in the 78th district court, came hard on the heels of a claim presented by Mr. Anderson to the commissioners court last Monday and which was immediately turned down.

END BUNION PAIN FOREVER

No Need to Suffer Another Day Those Agonizing Torturing Pains

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to reduce inflamed, swollen toe joints and get them down to normal and that is to apply Moone's Emerald Oil night and morning and people who suffer from such enlargements would be wise to reduce them before they reach a more or less chronic stage.

Ask all druggists for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces lasts a long time and furthermore if this wonderful discovery does not give you complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded.

Special note: People who want to reduce swollen or varicose veins should get a bottle of Emerald Oil at once. Applied night and morning as directed they will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.—Adv.

Pride Of Olney Meets Mason Here

JACK BREWSTER

This man, Jack Brewster, is the pride of Olney, they say. Jack's been wrestling regularly over the country, but of late has been sticking around the little oil metropolis, meeting all comers.

Brewster's a middleweight, but he's taken some of the heavier wrestling gents to a cleaning. His fine athletic performances have developed a heavy following among Olney fans. It's more than likely quite a crowd will drive over from Olney next Tuesday when Brewster wrestles Charley Mason of Butte at the Majestic theatre in a finish match.

The Brewster-Mason affair will be run as a preliminary to the Santel-Noska match.

School Athletics Quiet Down But Cagers Off Soon

All athletics throughout Wichita Falls high schools and Junior college will be in a lull over the first part of the coming week with only the Coyotes starting out on the basket ball grind Monday.

Monday at the Junior college gym the Coyotes will be issued suits and begin limbering up exercises.

Both the Junior college Indians and the Junior high Pups will not start basket ball for some time, it is understood. It may be a week or better before they take to the court.

The only thing yet in line for games within the near future will be through the high school.

Bud McCallum announced that he probably will line up several games with the fast Clara high quintet. The Clara players are figured heavily on to come through this year in the big county meet which will be held about March.

Coyote Quintet May Play Hawks

The Wichita Falls Coyote and the Iowa Park Hawks have practically made their final arrangements for cage games to be played both here and at Iowa Park Friday and Saturday December 11 and 12.

These two games probably will start off the Coyotes on their basket ball season.

The Hawks will have a very busy season during the Christmas holidays. Coach R .E. Brewster is planning a short road trip for the club and return with them about the middle of the first school week after vacation time.

The Hawks are also planning a pair of games with the Stamford team for January 1 and 8 but these games have not yet been matched.

hat on Saturday, and you didn't pay Mother any board, you remember. We can't keep this home going—"

"Oh, what do I care about the home?" Flossie shook her head in blind anger. "I'm getting sick of putting all my money in this house, anyway! I'm going to go and live with Alice James! And you and mother can keep Poverty Hall here, to your hearts content!"

Still Mary Rose refused to be ruffled. "You'll find you can't go any place else and live for $7 a week, the way you can here, young lady," she said quietly. "You really live here for less than that, because you don't give mother your board half the time!"

Flossie glared at her. "All right go ahead and insult me all you want to!" she answered. "Either you give me a check for $20 for a wave this morning, or—or, I'll ask Hilary Dexter for it! So there!"

"Flossie Middleton! You wouldn't do a thing like that! You wouldn't ask a man for money?" There was honest horror in Mary Rose's voice.

"Any day I wouldn't!" Flossie tossed her head. "Don't kid yourself that I wouldn't! Why shouldn't I ask a man friend for money just as fast as I'd ask a girl friend for it? I'd pay him back. And is it any worse to take the price of a permanent wave from a man than it is to let him buy you theater tickets, or take you to lunch?"

She stood fluffing her hair around her ears, as she watched Mary Rose in the glass. She saw with great satisfaction that she was taking a check book from the closet shelf where she kept it.

"All right, Floss, I'll give you the money this time. But you've got to remember that it's the last I'll ever give you. That money in the bank is for sickness, or something like that. Suppose we should lose our jobs—" Mary Rose said, staring downstairs.

"Yes, and suppose the end of the world should come." Flossie called after her insolently.

In a few minutes she followed her downstairs to the breakfast table.

"You wouldn't have to worry about losing your job all the time if you had your boss 'vamped' the way I have mine," she remarked cheerfully, as she poured most of the pitcher of cream into her coffee. "If I were as crazy about a man as you are about John Manners, I'd take him away from that Doris Hinig so fast it would make his head swim!"

more-oth haveonespde

Mrs. Middleton looked at her youngest daughter reprovingly.

"Flossie, I don't like to hear you talk like that about the men you work with," she said. "A girl as young as you, should be modest always."

Flossie didn't answer. Her eyes were on the check, as Mary Rose passed it across the table to her. She took it, without a word, and stuffed it into the pocket of her white shirtwaist.

An hour later Flossie was going through the tortures of a permanent wave.

"Does it pull, Miss?" the hairdresser, a kindly woman of uncertain age and indubitable comeliness, asked her.

"I should worry if it pulls," Flossie answered. "I'd go through hades to look nice!"

She closed her eyes and sat like an idol for three hours while the woman wound her soft corn-colored hair on steel skewers, wrapped them in oily flannels, and then put the "bakers" on.

"Does it burn, Miss?" she asked again, when the electric "bakkers" were at their very hottest.

"A little," Flossie admitted. "But what do I care? I'd go through anything to have curls hair! How long will it stay curly?"

"For six months."

"Well, then, I'll have another wave at the end of six months," the girl answered, gritting her teeth. "I'm going to start saving for it now."

She watched with anxious eyes while the woman unwrapped her hair. It stood all over her head in little tight corkscrews until it was combed out. Then it was in a mass of bright little ringlets all over her head.

Flossie was enchanted. "Oh, isn't it beautiful!" she cried, with eyes like stars and the smile of a child. "I'm just wild about it!"

"It'll be even prettier in two or three weeks, when it's not so fuzzy," the hairdresser told her. "And it really is a pretty wave. I never saw a prettier one—or a prettier girl."

Flossie smiled at the flattery. She loved to be told she was beautiful. Of course, she knew it, herself. But it was nice to hear it from other people. It gave her a feeling of power in herself;

She walked along Scott street with its noon-day crowds on their way to and from lunch. And suddenly among all the strange faces she saw one that she knew—John Manners!

A queer little smile slid across Flossie's face. "I'll just show Mary Rose a thing or two," she thought, and the next minute she had caught up with Manners as he walked along in his swift, smooth gait. She gave his sleeve a tug.

"Hello, you!" she said to him, as if he were one of her greatest friends. As a matter of fact, she had seldom said anything to him before in her life except, "How d'you do, Mr. Manners?"

He turned and spoke to her cordially, although there was a puzzled look in his eyes.

Flossie saw that look, and laughted, aloud. "You don't know me with my hair all curly like this, do you, Mr. Manners?" she asked. "I've just been having my hair permanently waved, and I'm hunting up a place to eat."

She waited.

"Well," she asked pertly, after a long moment. "Well, aren't you going to ask me to have lunch with you?"

He started. "I suppose I'm awfully 'slow,'" he answered gravely, "but it didn't occur to me that a radiant butterfly person like yourself would eat at an ordinary lunch counter. That's where I'm going."

She gave him a sly Gioconda smile from the corner of her sea blue eyes. "Oh, piffle!" she said distinctly, and fell into step beside him.

The food was not particularly good, and John Manners was not very talkative. But Flossie was in high spirits.

"Won't Mary Rose drop dead when I tell her I've been having lunch with her Greek god?" she thought, with an inward giggle.

She chattered to Manners while he ate. She told him all about her lack of money for her permanent wave and how she begged for it from Mary Rose.

"You see, our father's dead," she told him. "And Mother isn't a very good business woman, so Mary Rose takes care of the money and pays all the bills. And it's like pulling teeth to get here to give me a cent."

There came to John Manners a picture of Mary Rose in her shabby, clean clothes, and her old hats, carefully keeping the little brown house going. And something stirred in his heart a pain. How little he really knew, he thought, of this Mary Rose Middleton, with her soft, lovely ways, her smile, and the brave little life she lived outside the office!

The smile he gave Flossie was full of tenderness for Mary Rose. But Flossie thought, of course, that it was for her.

"I'm making the hit of the year with him," she said to herself, as they went out into the sunlight of Scott street.

"I'll run up to your office with you," she said when they reached the building at half-past one. "I must show Mary Rose my new wave."

And so when Mary Rose came in from lunch at one thirty-five, the surprise of her life was waiting for her.

She opened the door of Mr. Manners' private office. And there perched on a corner of his desk with her head almost touching his as she leaned toward him, sat Flossie Middleton!

"You're one of those big, strong, silent men, aren't you?" she was saying. "I just bore you to death with my silly chatter, don't I?"

SPORTING NEWS — THE RECORD NEWS — FIRST ACCURATE COMPLETE

TOP O' MORN STUFF
By Blondy Cross.

Can Jim Ferguson, heady backstop for the administrative team now at bat, pinch-hit his way to a victory?

There are two out, but apparently the bases are loaded.

Jim wields a heavy stick of wood.

He may not be much of a pitcher, but he carries water around the home clubhouse.

Jim made a hit in 1914, and stretched it for a lot of ground. The echoes from that wallop still reverberates over the capitol grandstand.

His work at the home plate got erratic in 1917, and he was bunched for a spell.

Then he went out and warmed up again. Did a lot of running. Got back in shape. The slump apparently was over. When he came up in 1924 he smashed out a Texas sonbonnet for round-trip voyage.

Now Jim's at bat again, and the final score depends on his work with the mace in this inning.

Lanky Lee Satterwhite, elongated legislative gavel twirler from the Panhandle, has shot over a fast out-drop, which displayed that he didn't have much respect for the old groove.

But the most troublesome feature of the lineup is the ultimatum—heaving pitcher has 53 men out in the field to back him up.

* * *

The legislative team expects the battle to go into an extra inning.

In the present situation, where it looks like nothing but a smashing ninth-inning rally will bring victory for either aggregation, one of the most trite sayings is also one of the most profundly significant.

The Texas legislative, a la gubernatorial, loop is passing through some of the same sort of hectic days as in the preliminaries of 1917—trite and meaningless, perhaps, in that the result and final outcome of the game was what counted, rather than the turmoil, the scrapping, the pushing and pulling that preceded the break.

But as affecting the conduct of high office, the varied and unlimited possibilities of its final outcome, the tremendous and vital effects upon the state, the turn it will give future affairs and the stamp upon public policy—in this, the present situation is the most poignant since James E. Ferguson was unconditionally, no waivers asked, suspended from the league.

But in a surprising few innings, the situation has taken on something of the air of that 1917 embroglio.

Now moguls of the legislative team frankly talk of another expulsion, which in political language means impeachment. Some of the magnates even say they will seek to give the manager, the governor herself, the gate. They don't believe they will be successful, but that's the dope oozing from headquarters just the same.

They talk of airing members of the highway commisison team, though these political athletes have been bunched.

They talk principally of investigating the highway team's affairs. Think the boys have been throwing games with the same abandon the Black Sox of 1919 kicked away the world's series to the Cincy Reds. They're after facts on which recent developments have hinged into the record so there will be no future claim that it was all political propaganda anyway. That is, of course, assuming the legislative moguls find facts backing their claims some of the games weren't on the up-and-up.

In the 1917 foray the drive was against Jim Ferguson: the lesser lights weren't considered. Then, the speaker and player-manager of the house nine, tried to win the game in the ninth round with an attempt to steal home by trying to call an investigating-impeachment session, but Jim caught him on the slide when he heaved low to the plate by convening the legislature.

This season in this game, the speaker has announced he will convene the house unless the governor does and has given the governor 17 days advance for calling it. Four innings have past without any disclosure of her intention. She left the ultimatum-bearer of the legislative caucus, First Baseman A. P. C. Petsch of Fredericksburg, cooling his dogs in the outer office durout, while she sent word to him to leave his message with the club secretary.

Many lines of possibilities are open. On one extreme, that the governor might get tired of the whole pol'tical game, quit the mound and pass the burden of her office on. Other, that she might call the legislature and invite it to throw out its best batting order and do its utmost. She may find a method, with the aid of her astute battery mate, to catch the base-runners on the paths and block the meeting, or to win over enough members of the opposing team to prevent a quorum lineup being assembled on the field. Jack Walton used the militia to keep the house moguls from meeting, but the Texas governor is a more experienced political athlete than that.

All the possibilities were overshadowed by the dramatic uncertainty what recommendations the Travis county umpires should make at the end of their long investigation of the highway team's affairs. That report, it is admitted, is likely either to clear the atmosphere; or to shape the special session probe.

Yeah, Farmer Jim's at bat. They're two down, and the sacks are loaded. Will he be called out on strikes? Or will he pole another for the circuit?

NOSKA MEETS AD SANTEL IN MAT FEATURE

Young Bohemian 'Expect' To Give Champion Hard Run

Paul Noska of Chicago, 200-pound Bohemian youngster who has been coming right along since his advent to the mat game three years ago, has been matched with Ad Santel, undisputed world's light heavyweight champion, in the feature event of the Wichita Falls wrestling association card Tuesday night at the Majestic theatre, announces Matchmaker Ross.

The Noska-Santel match will be prelimed by a finish tussle between Jack Brewster, Olney middleweight, and Charley Mason of Butte, middle champ of the northwest.

Brewster Tough One.

Brewster has defeated such wrestlers as Kala Pasha and Joe Kopecky, both well known to Wichita Falls fandom. Mason toppled Jim Brown here last Tuesday.

Noska is rated as one of the comers of the wrestling sport. Only a youngster he has of recent months given a number of the leading heavies real fits. Probably Noska's outstanding performance was in a match with Strangler Lewis two months back. The Strangler beat him. They're mighty few he doesn't, if any. But Lewis was pushed to the limit to win. It took him an hour and 45 minutes to get a fall on the Bohemian. Noska was punished so much in the mean time that he couldn't stay as long before being pinned a second time. Lewis won the deciding fall in 35 minutes.

Ad Trains Amateurs.

Among others Noska has met are the famous Rudy Dusek and Plestina. Both these big fellows beat him.

Santel is expected to enter the ring a bit under 180 pounds. Noska will go over 200. That the light heavy will find the going exceeding rough, seems assured.

Santel and Mason, by the way, are slated to workout Saturday, Sunday and Monday at 3 o'clock in the Majestic theatre with Frexse's Junior college wrestlers, said Ross. Ad intends to instruct the amateurs during his stay in Wichita Falls.

Iowa Park Cage Squad Prepares For Coming Race

With the football season over the attention of the Hawk fans at Iowa Park have turned to basketball. The basketeers have been at work for a week and have won a pair of victories. A win over Petrolia and Byers making their two wins. The fans expect the Hawks to put out a much faster team this year than they had last year, but the place of James White and Harvey Dunn, center and forward, will be hard to fill.

Brewster has some great material back from last year in Bailey Dean, Calvin Lakey, Brice Fields, Wallace Beasley, and Paul Enloe.

Clyde Filmore, Ishmal Cordor, and Harold Cheeves are men of last years Junior team that will make a bid for the first team this year. Burney and Wigley are two lads that have been showing up well of late. Enloe and Beasley did some excellent work last year on the team. Beasley shoots the goals fro many angle. Enloe is a sure shot if the guards will let him near the basket. Lakey and Dean jump high and are good goal shooters. Filmore is a fine guard. Cordor is a fast man and good at both forward and guard. Cheeves, who was one of the best junior team guards in the county last year will be out for a guard position this year.

Charley Paddock to Speak in Electra

ELECTRA, Nov. 27.—B. M. Dinsmore, superintendant of the Electra public schools, announces that Charley Paddock, one of the world's outstanding sprinters, will speak at the high school auditorium here in the near future. Paddock holds the worlds record in the 100-yard dash and was the hero of the Olympic meet in 1924. His talk is expected to be of great interest to high school athletes as well as others who are expected to be present when he delivers his lecture.

Mr. Paddock is touring the country delivering these lectures and Dinsmore announces that quite a bit of expense is attached to bringing this man here.

SPANISH CHAMP COMING

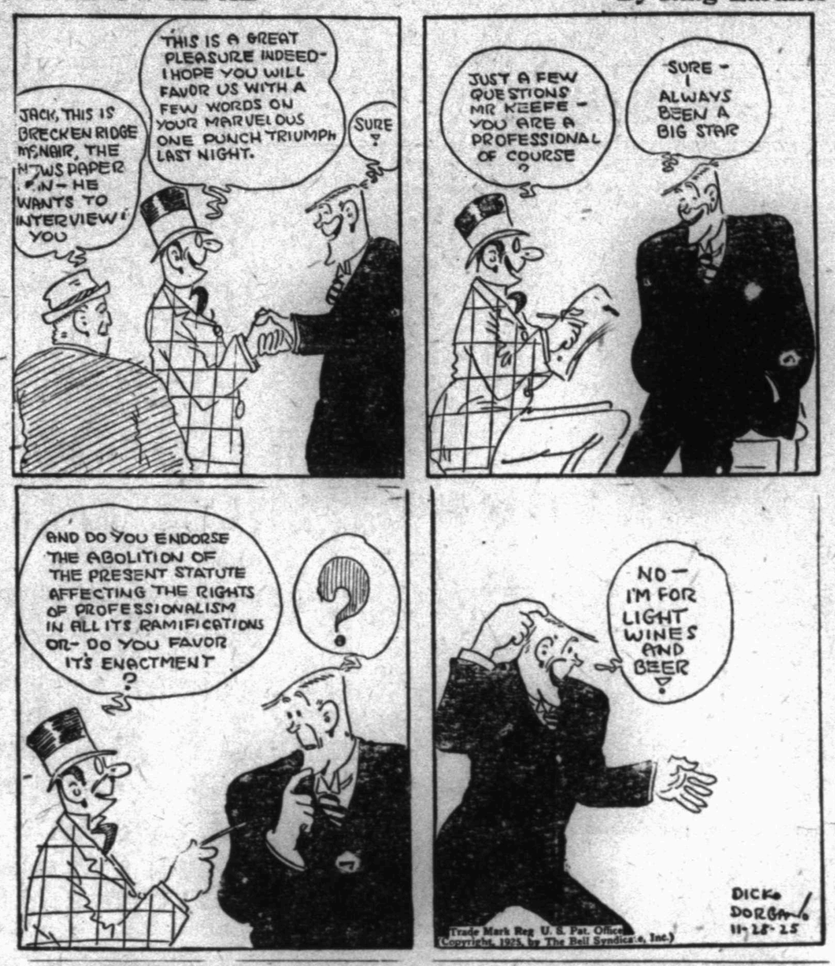

Paolino Plans Invasion of American Pugilistic Sector.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—(AP)—Paolino, heavyweight champion of Spain here for a bout next Tuesday with the German pugilist, Breitenstraeter disclosed plans today for an invasion of the United States which he hopes will lead to a championship match with Jack Dempsey.

Paolino declared he had received a letter from Tex Rickard, New York promoter asking for his terms to fight in the United States under a contract which would lead to a bout with Dempsey in the event the Spaniard measured up to championship calibre.

PERPETUAL MOTION

You think the mad hooray is over now—
Now that the final grid returns are in—
You think the world will get its rest now,
Knowing just what teams tie and lose and win.

Not now rolls in the season of the dope—
All-this-all-that-the day of wrath and tear—
And then eight months of painting roseate hope—
Then lo! another pigskin month is here!

Poor Policy

WHEN the Southwestern Conference holds its annual meeting early in December, the prospect is that Texas Tech will apply for a berth in the organization. Tech should be a welcome member. It is a state school. Eventually it is going to be a great one. But here's a little hint of opposition.

The reports that credit Tech with intention of asking membership also say that the school will ask for at least one year permission to play its first year men and transfers. Granting that request would be poor policy—not poor [illegible]nt for that has already been set.

The factor that makes the Southwestern conference today one of the best in the country, is its rigid insistence on the transfer and freshman residence rules, the former even amplified or emphasized this year with the start of the tramp athlete rule which bars a transfer altogether.

It would mark progressive spirit for Tech to gamble on its athletic future by asking conference admission. But it should be willing to take the rules as they are and not with almost the same breath ask the charity of a dinner and the luxury of dessert.

"IS THE WOMAN herself more important than the frock?" inquires a New York tailor, via Colonel George Baileys. We hope so—these days the frock amounts to so little.

ASSUMING, as will probably be the case, Centenary is admitted to the Southwestern conference this year, Baylor at least for next year has already plugged in a neat bit of percentage towards the football title. The Bears have a three-year contract with the Gentlemen.

It Will Be Hornsby

YOU CAN announce your cheers now for the National league's selection as its most valuable player. The ballots will predominate in December for Rogers Hornsby, without question.

Last year when the league's committee centered on Dazzy Vance, the admirers of the Rajah rose on so many hind legs that they looked like grasshoppers. Vance being out of the way, Hornsby will get enough votes this year to canter in.

Pittsburgh having won the championship, including the world's alleged title, you might expect to see Wright or Cuyler or one of the other youngsters horn in. But it will be remembered that the Pirates won as a team—that they are young yet and maybe will qualify singly in the future.

The Texan will be the nominee.

ROCHESTER QUINT WINS

In a brisk game of basket ball the Rochester team defeated the Rule by a score of 19 to 11. This is the first game of the season for the Rule team to lose.

Johnny Marriott Wins Electra Golf Tournament Play

Johnny Marriott Jr. carried off the trophy which has been held for the past months by J. A. Wise, in the first golf tournament to be held on the new golf links at the Electra country club. He won first place with a 47. C. U. Beasley came out second, while J. A. Wise was third.

About 30 players started out in the tourney.

A number of out-of-town visitors were at the country club and according to E. A. McKelvey, secretary of the club, the officials were well pleased to have Judge Weldon and Bill Strachem of Wichita Falls to visit the links and are extending an invitation to visitors for all other links and are extending an invitation to visitors for all other links and country clubs to view the grounds.

The course is in good condition.

ARCHER CITY WINS

ARCHER CITY, Nov. 27.—Wilson's Archer City Wildcats defeated their ancient rivals, the Olney Hillbillies, at Olney Thursday in a hard-fought grid battle, 10 to 3.

Harry Black scored the winning touchdown. Percy Morrison, fullback, booted a field goal.

There is hardly an American industry which is not now being visited by scores of observers from the leading European countries.

TIGERS CLOSE '25 GRID RACE SUCCESSFULLY

Many Stars Depart Ranks But 1926 Outlook Good

ELECTRA, Nov. 27.—The Tigers closed their grid season here Thanksgiving day with their 9-0 defeat over the Burk Bulldogs. The Tigers presented an offensive machine Thursday superior to that shown by the locals this year. Bob More and Vin Trammil were the outstanding performers of the afternoon but the most impressive showings were made by John Louie Wright and Johnie Lebus in the backfield as the former have played the final games of their career for the Tigers. Moth of the latter are to be back in 1926 and are expected to be the mainstays of the Tiger offense.

Wright has proved himself a great line plunger and Lebus has made the Tigers a wonderful field general.

Watch Carnahan.

Another lad who is expected to shine next year is Will's Carnahan who has played a bit in the backfield of late and has showed up in grand style. Carnahan failed to see action Turkey day because of injuries.

Louis Kent played the last few minutes of the Burk game and toted the oval only once at which time he gained ten yards. This lad is expected to make one of the best backfield men in the history of the school as this is only his first year on the squad.

Six of the men who performed for the Tigers Thursday have made their last appearances on the local squad. They are Captain Pue Sanderlin, Toots Gilger, Ralph Turner, Bob More, Vincent Trammil and Brewer Smith. Bie Del Cooledge, although he never played in the Thanksgiving fray, is on the list that will be absent next fall also.

Issue Sweaters Soon.

Sweaters have been ordered for the Tigers and they will be issued in the near future. The one-year men who will likely receive sweaters this year are: John Louie Wright, Mike Brown, Louis Kent, Roy Cooledge, Willis Carnahan and Johnie Lebus. Those who probably will get two-year sweaters are: Buzzy Smith, Oren Sargent, Budly Aven, Vincent Trammil, and Ralph Turner. Three year men are: Pug Sanderlin and Bob Moore. The only man in the Tiger ranks who will display four stripes on this year's sweater is Toots Gilger. This lad played a stellar game at guard this year and is due much praise for his work. Two of these men, Bob More and Vincent Trammil, have played every minute of every game this year.

FOOTBALL GIANT ON LAST LEGS TODAY

MULL GOES AFTER GOAT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP)—The football season comes to its final climax tomorrow throughout the country with the classic battle between the Army and Navy at the Polo grounds as the chief center of interest.

While the service rivals are having it out in their annual fray with the Cadets as favorites to triumph over the Midshipmen a scattered few elevens in other parts of the country will take the gridiron for their last time in a season which will go down as one of the most spectacular on record.

These contests will mark the end of the regular college season, but interest in the gridiron sport will not pass altogether so long as Red Grange is blazing a new trail in professional ranks while other "pro" outfits are planning to prolong the season conflicts between college rivals on the Pacific coast around New Year's also will help keep the mole-kin wearer in the limelight.

CARCLINA TO 'LAY CENTRE.

NE WORLEANS, Nov. 27.—(AP) With football on its last legs for he season, two games in the south stand out tomorrow, the University of South Carolina meeting Centre in Columbia and the University of Arkansas playing Tulsa in Tulsa, Okla.

The Carlina Game Cocks will be last conference team to pack their togs in moth balls, all other conference elevens having finished their course. The Centre Colonels have been in and out during the season and South Carolina was expected to stop the Kentuckians in the final contest.

The Razor Backs of Arkansas invaded Tulsa with high hopes of success and were given an edge over Tulsa before the game. Arkansas was off to a slow start but has demonstrated greatly improved form as the season advanced.

COUPER MAY BOX SPARKS

It is quite possible Archie Couper, aged Oklahoma City middleweight, will be brought to Wichita Falls to meet Speedy Sparks in the legion main event Thursday night, according to Matchmaker Don Wofford.

No card has been arranged yet, said Wofford, but he declared he expects to line up a snappy glove program.

Young Pendlan, welterweight running mate of Sparks who returned recently from a tour of the Pacific coast with Speedy, probably will appear on the card if a suitable opponent can be obtained, it is understood.

Jimmy Owens, Oklahoma youth who fought Duke Trammel, the Cowtown walloper on even terms here Wednesday, probably will be rematched with Trammel a week from Thursday, said Wofford.

Neck Broken, Man Lives.

Bernar Christianson, an inmate of the Lutheran home for the aged at Eugene, Ore., fell off a barn and suffered a broken neck. Physicians who expected him to die hourly were mystified when he continued to live the day following the accident. They do not believe he can recover however, though how long he might live in his present condition, is a question.

READ THIS FIRST:

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two pretty sisters, the daughters of a widowed mother. Both of them work for the Dexter Oil Company.

Flossie helps keep the files under MISS MACFARLANE. Mary Rose is secretary to the sales manager, JOHN MANNERS, and is in love with him, but he is engaged to DORIS HINIG.

Mary Rose discovers that Flossie is carrying on a flirtation with the president of the company, HILARY DEXTER, a married man with grown children. And when she begs Flossie to give him up, the girls threaten to leave home, and go to live with her chum, ALICE JONES. She neglects her work at the office, depending on Dexter's interest in her to hold her job for her. And on the side she is carying on a love affair with SAM JESSUP, who is secretary to Mr. Dexter. Sam loves her but is afraid to marry her. For he is poor, and he knows that Flossie loves money. She openly says so.

Mary Rose's own affairs reach a crisis when Dr. TOM FITZROY asks her to marry him. But she refuses him because of her feeling toward Manners. One night Manners brings her home from work, and asks her to spend the evening with him, but tells him it wouldn't be fair to Doris Hinig.

Later that night one of the neighbors, AUNT HENNY BLAIR, tells Mary Rose that her son, LENNIE, who's on the police force arrested Flossie that afternoon for speeding in Dexter's car. Mary Rose keeps the fact from her mother, who thinks Flossie has been working late at the office. And when Flossie comes home she goes to see Linnie, and accuses him of arresting her because she has always refused his attentions. Lennie admits that he's jealous of "the married man who lets her out of his machine, halfway down the street."

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER XIII

Luckily the story of Flossie's arrest did not come out in the paper the next day.

But something, much more terible, from her point of view, happened to her. She forgot to put her hair up in curlers, for the first time in years! Like all pretty girls she thought she could make herself much prettier by trying all the beauty aids known to womankind, and it usually took her half an hour to get ready for bed at night.

"Look at that hair!" she groaned to Mary Rose the next morning, as she stood before the mirror. "Look at it! I ask you to regard me with horror!"

Mary Rose laughed. "What's the matter with it?" she asked. "I don't see anything wrong with it except that it's not so curly as usual."

"Curly!" Flossie repeated the word with bitter contempt. "Curly! Why, it's as straight as a string—"

She shook herself with fury. "Oh, I'm not going to be bothered like this with it, any more! I'm going to have a permanent wave this very day!"

"You're One of Those Big, Silent Men, Aren't You?"

Her sister watched her silently as she dressed and ran down to the telephone. She listened at the head of the stairs while she called Miss MacFarlane and told her she wouldn't be at the office until noon.

"Flossie, you're not really going to have a wave?" she asked when the girl returned. "You know they cost $20, your whole week's salary. And—"

"I don't care what they cost. I'm going to have one!" Flossie snapped at her. "I'm sick of having nothing! I'm going to have what I want from now on or know the reason why! I'm sick of going around like the witch of Endor with my hair hanging in strings every time it rains—"

She stopped and flung open her dresser drawers, took out an armful of them and threw them on the floor.

"Look at those"! she shouted. "Cheap and common and darned in a hundred places! D'you think I enjoy wearing clothes like those? Working my hands off week in and week out. And never having anything to show for it!"

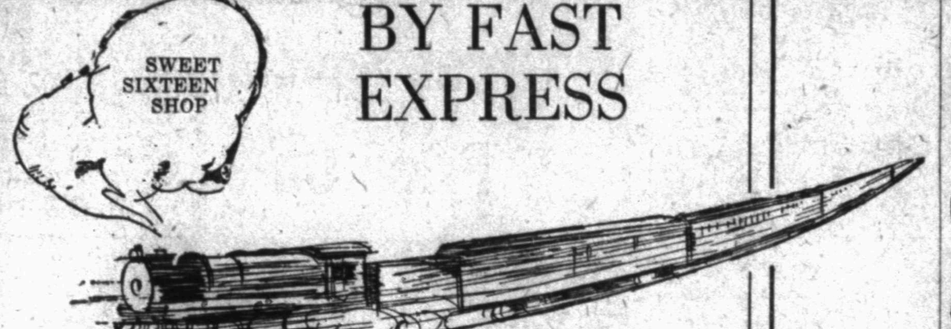

She stamped her foot in helpless anger.

"You have lots of new clothes right along, Flossie." Mary Rose's voice was soothing. "You just had a new
