Fair Came to Close With Largest Crowd of the Week

POLICE FORCED TO TURN AWAY MIDWAY JAMS

Association Reports Week a Success From Every Standpoint

NEW ACTS FOR RACES

Firework Display Exceeded Any So Far Exhibited at Fairgrounds

The Texas-Oklahoma fair came to a close last night with the largest crowd of the week still moving through the grounds reluctant to leave the place that for a week has been the mecca of entertainment and exhibition. Yesterday's crowd far surpassed the best day of the week, beating the opening days record by several thousands, according to officials of the fair.

Although no acurate check of the number could be made it was evident that the Sunday crowd was the largest, as the shifting mass of visitors made the grounds a packed spot with no extra space from early morning till late at night when the special police cleared the grounds. At 11:30 the revelry at the midway was not much nearer an end than 9:30, from all appearances, and it was necessary for officers to ask the visitors to leave, in order that the shows might be dismantled for moving on a night train.

The second annual Texas-Oklahoma fair was a success far greater than the fondest dreams of the men who started the movement two years ago that made Wichita Falls the center of the second largest fair in Texas. In spite of the adverse weather that for the greater part of the week kept many visitors from the gates, the officials are not disappointed in the numbers who attended, since last year's record was broken by several thousand, even at the lowest estimations.

Financially little could be expected that was not done. While unofficial opinions are that more money was spent by the fair association than was recovered, the fair can not be said to be a non-paying venture, since the greater part of this year's expenditure was for permanent equipment which can be listed as assets. The new steel grand stand and dirt track cost a large sum, and this amount can not be put down as a loss, since the equipment will serve indefinitely.

But for the year the fair was a success in every possible manner, with the exhibits well above all expectations and the midway shows and entertainment features the best that could possibly be brought to Texas.

Yesterday's crowds found several ed attractions at the fair, the greatest probably being the automobile races, the first to be held here. Running in eight events on the new dirt track the cars, ten entered, gave the 7,000 spectators who crowded into the stands one of the prettiest speed programs run in Texas, the cars being among the fastest in the country, and the drivers among the best known.

Prior to the races and between the events the crowd was entertained with an unusual program of Hippodrome acts and music. Al Sweet's Singing Band, on the last day here, played several new pieces in addition to the regular program and the work of the Loretta twins and Novikoff on the flying bars and trapeze was of a class seldom seen outside the larger fairs and shows.

The Sax-o-tet introduced a new series of songs and, an almost complete new program on their last day here, playing double time both in the afternoon and at night, to one of the most pleased audiences possible. When the popular cornet and saxophone artists finished their act in the evening they were forced to return twice for encores, the first time an act has been called for encores this year at the fair. The players played two new

TO DETERMINE PAY OF WIVES

U. S. Seeks Her Real Money Value

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—A survey will be undertaken soon in Texas and other states of the union to determine what the daily wage of a wife should be, as part of the progress of the new bureau of home economics in the United States department of agriculture, it was announced today by Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the bureau.

Dr. Stanley, who was former dean of home economics in the University of Missouri assumed her duties the first of the month and has formulated a program which has been given approval by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. While it is not possible to put all of the plan into effect until the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1, 1924, studies in nutrition, food preparation, and other household problems, started by the former office of home economics will be continued, the entire staff of that office having been transferred to the new bureau.

In the new program certain phases of home management have been given little attention in the past, and the new bureau announces intention to start such investigations as will result in reliable information where none exists at present. In addition to the

PRIEST IS DEAD SHOT BY WOMAN

Slayer Fires Five Shots While Kneeling in Confession

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7—The Rev. Bassil Stetsuk, Greek Catholic priest, was shot and killed by Mrs. Emily Strutynsky of Remey, Pa., as she knelt before him, ostensibly to make a confession, at the 9 o'clock mass at the St. Michael's Greek Catholic church here today.

Mrs. Strutynsky, who is 44 years old and the mother of two children, declared to the police that the Rev. Stetsuk had accused her husband, himself a Greek Catholic priest at Remey, Pa., of appropriating church funds while he was minister to a Chicago congregation.

She declared the alleged charges were false and said she came to Chicago from Remey nine days ago for the express purpose of seeing the priest to avenge what she believed the wrong to her husband. She went to the church last Sunday, she said, but the opportunity to kill the priest did not present itself, and she decided to wait until today.

About 300 worshippers sat in the pews of the church as Mrs. Strutynsky heavily veiled, walked down the middle aisle, before the 9 o'clock mass, to the altar. She walked to the confessional box at the right of the altar. There, out of sight of the congregation, she knelt as though to offer confession, but instead drew a pistol from the folds of her dress and fired five shots at the priest, standing before her.

Two of the bullets struck him and passed through his head. He exclaimed, "Oh, God, help me." The Rev. Stetsuk staggered to the main aisle and to the steps of the church where he collapsed. He died in an ambulance on the way to the hospital. Members of the congregation were thrown into panic by two women who seized Mrs. Strutynsky as she emerged from behind the altar, the pistol still in her hand. Squads of police who were summoned were forced to fight their way to the altar where members of the congregation were threatening the life of the slayer. At the police station where she was taken, the woman without hesitation, told her story.

CALM PRECEDES CALLED SESSION

Impeachment Proceedings Expected One Week Earlier Now

By The Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 7.—Oklahoma's political civil war was lulled today by a calm enveloping both gubernatorial and legislative headquarters on the eve of an extraordinary session of the state assembly called for next Wednesday by Governor J. C. Walton.

Governor Walton apparently has entrenched himself in his residence, from which all executive affairs of the state have been conducted for more than a month. The governor said he did not care to see press representatives and that his regular Sunday conference with them had been cancelled.

Legislative headquarters were likewise quiet. W. D. McBee, who issued a call for a special session of the house several days before the executive's call, returned to the capitol today. Other house leaders were not at the headquarters in a downtown hotel.

"I'll be there," was McBee's only comment on the governor's call for a special legislative session, effective a week before the special house call issued by McBee as a result of Tuesday's election at which a constitutional amendment was adopted permitting the legislature to convene itself. His statement was accepted as representative of the attitude likely to be taken by the greater part of the members of the lower legislative branch.

Convening by executive proclamation of the governor just two weeks after being dispersed by military forces at the command of the chief executive, the extra session of the ninth legislature is expected to initiate impeachment proceedings against the executive without delay. Conduct of other state officers also will be investigated, it is announced.

Governor Walton's call demanded investigation of the ku klux klan in Oklahoma on the basis of testimony given before various military courts since August 10, last, which would be turned to the solons.

Impeachment proceedings, begun by the house and laid before the senate as a jury, may be legally instituted at any time, it is generally believed.

SHIPPING BOARD HIT AGAIN!

Tongue Staggering Menu Ires Solon

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Representative Fred A. Britten of Illinois, wants to know why a hungry passenger on the Leviathan with an appetite for an ordinary dish of calf's liver has to order "foie de veau et fine herbes et larde," and he has put it squarely up to Chairman Farley of the shipping board.

"Why," asked the Illinois congressman, in a letter to the chairman today, "Why, make chicken hash impossible by calling it 'Hachis de volaille aux haricots verts.'"

Mr Britten recently returned from a trip abroard, told Mr. Farley the food on the Leviathan menu was excellent but that only a portion of the waiters and two per cent of the passengers knew what it was all about. The head waiter, he said, apologized, for his failure to properly interpret an order for "gigot de pauillac boulangere," and persons wanting eggs had a hard time choosing between "oufs brouille aux rognons," at 70 cents and "ouief cocotte a la creme," at 40 cents.

The fish course, Mr. Britten said, offered a fine aggregation of unpronounceable dishes at reasonable prices, but he doubted if even so well an epicure "as you, my Dear Farley" could intelligently choose between "maquereau grille buerre D' anchois" at 80 cents and "merlans en lorguette," at 70 cents.

In the third class cabins, however, Mr. Britten said, where generally no English is spoken, the bills of fare are printed in English.

NEW REPUBLIC NOW PREDICTED

In Dramatic Interview German Tells of Coming Rhenish Secession

BY B. BERSON.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

DUSSELDORF, Oct. 7.—A Rhenish republic, independent of the balance of Germany and containing most of the nation's coal and factories "is certain by Christmas," according to a prediction made to International News Service today by Herr Matthes, leader of the secessionists.

The interview was obtained under most dramatic circumstances. It took place in a small restaurant. Matthes opened the conversation by whispering:

"Listen to me before you ask any questions. Sit tight. Talk low. Watch everybody coming in. Tip me off if any one makes a move towards me. If the fire works starts, just duck under the table and shoot your questions up to me."

The reporter nervously lifted the edge of the table cloth to see if there was room underneath.

Matthes' right hand clutched a huge revolver in his lap. Every time a stranger came in there was a significant click from the region of the German's right hand. This was the setting while the instigator of last Sunday's bloody riots told his aims and plans.

"A Rhenish republic is certain by Christmas," said Matthes. "We have got everything ready. There will be a provisional government of ten persons, two of whom will have executive powers. The frontiers will extend from the Dutch border on the north down to the Bavarian palatinate on the south, including the palatinate. On the eastern side we will take in Dortmund, Elberfeld and Barmen. On the southernst our lines will extend as far as the lower Main river. The total population will be 15,000,000, slightly less than one-fourth of the total population of the state.

"We will export our goods via Holland and Belgium, not through Hamburg and Bremen. The administration will be entirely in the hands of Rhinelanders. Neither the Prussians nor the French will have anything to say.

"We are good Germans. Woe to the French or German industrialists if they think they can dominate us. We are for unconditional payment of reparations, our share being determined by the amount we can pay—according to our capacity for production. If we do not establish this Rhenish independent state shortly there will be a combined Russian-German war of revenge against France. If we take the Ruhr and Rhineland from Prussia, we deprive Prussia of her reservoir and arsenal and thus make a war of revenge impossible."

Matthes is smooth shaven, alert and wiry. He has the typical face of a mass leader. He is what sporting writers would call a "tough egg." Incidentally, he was at one time a prize fighter.

MOTORCYCLE RACES TO BE HELD SOON

On the heels of the first automobile races here comes the announcement that motorcycle races will be held on the Texas-Oklahoma fair track during the fall and next spring. Arrangements are being made for the speed programs, and an organization is being formed to stage regular races.

Motorcycle Officer Griffin, one of the fastest riders of motorcycles in the country, will probably have a hand in the pie when the races come off, and announces that he will enter. He is an old racer and will go to Oklahoma City this week to bring one his racing machines here for a trial of the track.

Other riders have signified their intentions of entering, and teams of riders will be formed to race. It is expected that the race program will be started within a month.

WOMAN ADMITS ASSISTING IN PRISON MUTINY

Pistols and Ammunition Had Been Smuggled to Gunmen

STATEMENT WITHHELD

Silent Graves Hold Story of Trio's Last Hours

By The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 7.—Mrs. Jillian Walters, widow of Monte Walters, reputed leader of a trio of convict murders, who killed three guards in the western Kentucky state penitentiary at Eddyville and themselves were slain during an eighty-one hour siege of a mess hall in which they were barricaded, confessed tonight that she aided in smuggling pistols and ammunition to the gun men, police officials here said.

"What's the use—I helped," she is quoted as saying, by officers who questioned her.

Mrs. Walters' complete statement was withheld by the police, who said it would be forwarded to T. B. McGregor, state attorney general, at Frankfort.

Two graves in the cemetery of the western Kentuck state penitentiary, over which the earth was freshly heaped and the bullet scarred mess hall in the center of the prison area were mute reminders today of the desperate last stand of a trio of convict murders who killed three guards, were beseiged for 81 hours in the mess hall and found dead from bullet wounds when a storming party entered the barricaded building late yesterday afternoon.

Members of the storming party entered the mess hall after it had been filled with ammonia fumes, prepared to met three desperate gunmen, and found Monte Walters, Lawrence Griffith and Harry Ferland still with the rigor of death.

Walters and Ferland were buried here. Griffith's body was held for relatives.

All of the gunmen had been dead for at least 36 hours, and in the cases of Griffith and Ferland, whose wounds indicated death from sucide, opinion was expressed that the end might have come 48 hours before the seige was raised. Walters, believed to have been the last to die, was shot through the head and had been struck by a rifle grenade.

Prison authorities today directed their efforts to restoring the machinery of prison routine. A pressing problem was the repairing of the equipment in the prison kitchen, located on the ground floor of the bullet torn mess hall. The prison dining room was on the second floor of the building held by the desperadoes and during the siege, it was necessary to feed the approximately 530 prisoners in their cells with emergency rations and food cooked in the small kitchens of the prison hospitals and the warden's quarters.

Authorities are expected, as soon as the more pressing matter of restoring prison machinery to its peace time basis have been completed to initiate a searching investigation to determine the manner in which Walters and his companions obtained the pistols with which they fatally wounded Guards Hodge Cunnigham, V. B. Mattingly and W. P. Gilbert and shot William Gillihan seriously.

Fate Made Her Famous Beauty, Now Makes Her Life Tragedy

Rubye de Remer. This photo was taken at the time Paul Helleu, famous French artist, proclaimed her the most beautiful woman in America.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 7.—Ten years ago acclaimed America's most beautiful woman by Paul Helleu the famous French artist, and other noted judges of feminine beauty. A familiar favorite in the moving picture world, Fortune had only smiles for her.

Yet today Hollywood knows her not. Her beauty is gone. Her oldtime friends have vanished.

She is the tragic fate of Rubye de Reymer. The only thing left of the halycon days is the love of Ben Throop, son of a Pittsburg millionaire.

And detectives from Los Angeles office of the Burns agency are in Denver to try to induce the youth to break with the former star.

Throop has maintained for several years, says his friends, an establishment in New York where he and Rubye have openly lived together. His wife living in London following a property settlement, refuses to agree to a divorce, it is said.

Throop became friendly with the star several years ago according to Hollywood reports. An expensive establishment was opened for her by Throop, they say, while another was fitted up for her mother, and after playing small parts in two or three productions she faded out of the Hollywood picture, to appear with Throop in New York.

"Rubye is not very well known in Hollywood now," said a prominent producer. "She has not been here often nor for very long periods. Her stamping ground is New York."

Upon the death of Rubye's father in Denver the couple appeared in that city.

Now Throop has been taken seriously ill and the Pittsburg father, alarmed for his son's health, has determined his son shall break with the star.

Body of Murdered Nurse Discovered

Found Outside Abandoned House With Head Crushed by Huge Stone — Motive Is Mystery.

By The Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 7.—The body of Miss Elsie Barthel, 28, a nurse, brutally murdered, according to the police, was found today outside an abandoned house near the homeopathic hospital. Her skull had been crushed by a blow from a blunt instrument. Miss Barthel was last seen early Saturday evening when she left her home to take a short walk.

The body was found beside one of the pillars at the covered carriage entrance at one side of the house. Beside the body was a stone about fifteen inches square and weighing about fifty pounds upon which blood was found. The young woman had been struck twice. The first time, police reported, the stone was hurled at her and the second time it was dropped upon her head after she had fallen. A fresh scar on one of the pillars led police to believe that it was thrown with such force the first time that it struck the pillar after hitting Miss Barthel.

The body was identified by Mr. R. S. Marshall, who told the police that Miss Barthel had been employed by him for four years in the capacity of a nurse. He could advance no motive for the killing, nor could the family of the young woman.

LAST SUSPECTS IN SAFE CASES NOW ARRESTED

Chambers and Tillman Nabbed Soon After They Enter City

DENY ALL ROBBERIES

Epidemic of Safe Blowings Now Believed Cleared Up

Final solution of 17 local burglaries perpetrated here last August and September and of three similar offenses at Corsicana, was made here Saturday when police officers arrested and placed in jail Charlie Chambers and Lewis Tillman under indictment for the Corsicana offenses and charged here as accomplices in the Wichita Falls cases in a confession made by Henry Berry two weeks ago.

Chambers was arrested here at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Detectives Luke Hart and John Boone. Night Chief Will Allen and members of his force arrested Tillman about 4 o'clock Sunday morning. The two men have been sought by Detective Chief Dave May who has lead in the investigation and solved the burglary mysteries here and at Corsicana, ever since Berry, the one member of the gang who has confessed, was brought from Corsicana recently.

Every sheriff in west Texas county seat town and many places in Oklahoma was given a description of Chambers and Tillman by Detective Chief May. Their arrest here Saturday makes five now held for the burglaries. The men who had been arrested previous to the two locked up yesterday, are Henry Berry, C. S. Taylor and Albert Funston.

Berry and Taylor were first arrested at Fort Worth on charges of burglarizing the Coca Cola bottling plant at Corsicana. Police Chief Hodgins was notified. Fort Worth officers that Berry and Taylor had been turned over to Corsicana officials. Detective Chief May was sent to Corsicana to see if the two were in anyway connected with the local burglaries.

May on arrival at Corsicana found that Berry and Taylor not only denied any connection with the local burglaries but said they had nothing to do with the Corsicana thefts. May had taken along a member of the local L. and M. auto market firm and a pistol stolen from that establishment. Using the pistol as evidence May finally got a confession from Berry that he had participated in the L. and M. auto market burglary. This lead up to a complete confession and Berry admitted participation in the Corsicana burglaries.

Berry was brought back to Wichita Falls by May and turned over to District Attorney Bernard Martin. The district attorney got in writing from Berry a complete confession of the local and Corsicana burglaries. Following the Berry confession, police arrested Albert Funston, local man, and District Attorney Martin entered five charges of burglary against Funston. In the examining trial Funston was bound over to the grand jury by Justice Gibbs in bonds of $750 in each of the five cases. Funston later made these bonds.

The Berry confession not only involved Funston and Taylor but Chambers and Tillman. With Funston out on bond, Taylor in jail at Corsicana and Berry with a full confession, the police department set out to find Tillman and Chambers.

Berry told May at Corsicana that Chambers and Tillman were to rob a large meat market at Ponca City, Okla., on a certain night. May wired the Ponca City officers and had a trap laid for the two men's arrest but they did not show up. From there the two were traced to Tulsa and all over the state. Word a few days ago was received indirectly that the two men were making their way back to Wichita Falls. Since that time police officers have watched closely for their return.

Chambers and Tillman will be taken to Corsicana this morning and there face indictments for the burglaries in that city. In the meantime District Attorney Martin is expected to present his evidence against the two men in connection with the Wichita Falls burglaries to the g.and jury now in session. The men will then be brought back with Taylor and Berry and face trial here, officers said Sunday.

With the five men all indicted either here or at Corsicana and the Swift and company safe recovered which was burglarized last August, officers believe the local situation is settled.

It brings to an end the questions of citizens asked last August as to why stores were being entered almost nightly and no arrests made. Within a month after the burglary epidemic three men, one of them with a confession implicating five, were arrested by the police department. With all the men in jail now and facing trial, officers believe there is no question but the matter is settled.

7,000 See Auto Races Close Fair Sports

SEVEN SENSATIONAL RACES HOLD INTEREST OF CROWD AT LAST BIG SPEED EVENT

One of the largest crowds ever packed into a grand stand in Wichita Falls, crowded the new Texas-Oklahoma fair park yesterday afternoon to witness the first automobile races held here under the auspices of the Texas-Oklahoma Fair association. It is estimated that a crowd of more than 7,000 saw the initiation of the new dirt track to high speed racing, the grand stand being filled to capacity with a scattering of race fans gathered along the outer and inner rails of the track.

The racing was unusually good, with the time fast for a half mile dirt track. Ten cars were entered in the eight events, and inaugurated motor racing here with the usual roar of motors and cloud of dust from the track surface.

Five of the cars entered composed a professional racing team, with drivers from Chicago, while the other five were special machines from Texas and Oklahoma, and the rivalry between the two groups produced a spirit that forced the drivers to the limit, although the driving was hard and fast, and the cars several times scraped the fence at the turns, no accidents occured.

With the exception of three cars all drivers finished every race, and the finishes proved to be spectacular and exciting with no racer able to take the events easily. Flashy bits of driving seemed to be the word of the day and on the stretches the cars showed bursts of speed that sent them twisting and sliding on the turns, the banks only saving them from going over the walls. Especially when the cars raced side by side were the turns spectacular, the machines touching wheels several times, to miraculously emerge without serious mishap. To the fact that the greater part of the drivers were experienced in dirt track racing was probably due the lack of accidents as on several occasions only the cool and skillful handling of the machines saved the drivers from a spill.

Al Watters' Duesenberg number eight and Paul Clancy's Golden Submarine, formerly driven by Barney Oldfield, proved to be the fastest cars on the track and had little trouble in taking their races. Another car that showed unusual flashes of speed was the Chevrolet Special driven by Jack McPherson, of Tulsa, Oklahoma. The Chevrolet made the half mile in 33 seconds in the official time trials, being beaten only by the Golden Submarine with time of 32 2-5 seconds for one lap.

Following the time trials for places on the track, the first race, a seven lap heat, was run, with five cars in the event. All starts were running starts, the cars taking a lap slowly and crossing the tape for the flag at high speed abreast.

Paul Clancy took the first race in his Golden Egg, smashing across the line under the checkered flag several lengths ahead of the Chevrolet Special driven by Jack McPherson, of Tulsa. The winner's time was four minutes two and one-fifth seconds, the second car making the seven laps in four minutes, six and two-fifts. But Putman rolled in third, a quarter lap behind, with cars nine and fourteen out of the money.

Al Watters showed the speed of his white Duesenberg number eight in the second race when he made four laps in two minutes, 22 2-5 seconds for a win, after leading a fast field the entire distance. Number seven, a Miller Special with Ben Gotoff at the wheel was second, beating Paul Clancy's Golden Submarine by a roaring finish that put it a foot in the lead of the Oldfield car. Monteath's Templar, number six, failed to get in the money when it developed a bad miss, which was caused by a broken spark plug.

The third and fourth events were qualifying races for the fifth event, a six lap speed classic which proved to be easily the race of the day. In the first qualifying race, with six cars entered, Al Watters won, making six laps in 3:29 2-5, with Bud Putman's Special second. Both cars went to the final heat.

Cars number two and six qualified in the second preliminary event, Paul Clancy being first with his Golden Submarine, and Monteaths Templar second. The race was fast from the start and the Templar was beaten at the finish when the Golden Egg showed a bit of speed that was characteristic of the Clancy finish.

With the four fastest cars entered the next event was one of the hardest run races possible on a dirt track, with Clancy Watters and Gotoff running their cars hood to hood the entire six laps, the Golden Submarine taking the lead in the last lap to win, with time of 3:20 2-5. Number six developed engine trouble.

The three cars ran a fast heat, taking the turns in exciting whirls of dust as they scraped wheels, and battling on the straightaways for the lead, each unable to find a bit of reserve power that would put it in the lead. Clancy made a fast sliding turn at the last loop, coming onto the straightaway without slackening his pace, and was able to gain a half length lead at the finish. Putman in his Special was second and Ben Gotoff third.

Bud Putman won the special Texas-Oklahoma event from a field of four, with time of 3:37 flat, with McPherson's Chevrolet second. Numbers 14 and one, developing engine trouble dropped out of the six lap race at the third lap.

The last race, entered by four cars, was slow, the time being 4:42 for seven laps. A misunderstanding, in which two drivers thought they received the flag to stop, gave the event to Monteath in his Templar. He was driving third when the others dropped out, and finished first when they failed to realize their mistake. Paul Clancy in the Golden Submarine was second.

The races were run on the track that was constructed by the fair association this summer, and the drivers declared that it is one of the fastest half mile tracks in the country. Under a thin covering of dust the track affords a hard surface that provides excellent ground for racing, according to the drivers.

Major League Baseball Season Ends With Split Double Header

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—The Major league baseball season ended here today with Chicago and St. Louis dividing a double header. The Cubs won the first game, 10 to 3, pounding the local pitchers hard, including home runs by Miller and Elliott. The Cardinals captured the second contest, 6 to 3, when Stuart held the visitors to half a dozen safeties. Scores:

Wolverines, Despite Losses, Hope Another Championship

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 7.—Faced with the loss of several veterans in backfield as well as line positions, Coach Fielding H. Yost is working with grim determination to develop material to fill those places and to bring another western conference football championship to Ann Arbor this year. That he has a fighting chance to do so will be conceded, but that is all. Both of the ends from last year's great team are missing. The late "Bernie" Kirk who had no superior in his position in the conference and few in the nation, was a player for whom Yost will probably not be able to produce as good a man this year. Last year's other end, Captain Paul Goebel, the fighting leader of the Wolverines, has been lost by graduation and the coaches must find a man to take his place.

Slaughter, who played a strong game at guard last year, was declared ineligible because of scholastic trouble a few days after practice commenced this fall. Keefer, a regular halfback on the 1922 squad, has also been ruled out because of ineligibility. Next to Kipke, Keefer was considered the best all-around man in the backfield. The other heavy loss in the backfield is Cappon, whose line plunging ability was often responsible for yards when they were sorely needed by the Wolverines.

Of course, the All-American Harry G. Kipke, captaining the 1923 Michigan team, will be the shining light in the backfield again this year, and it is likely that many plays will be built around him. He is showing all of his customary speed and brilliancy.

At the other half-back position, Steger who played in many of the games last year, seems to be the most promising. Steger is fleetfooted and a good passer, and coaches consider him an especially good secondary defense man. As substitutes Yost will have Herrnstein and Grube who have shown up well.

Uteritz at Quarter.

Uteritz, who piloted the Wolverines last year, and his ability to forward pass will undoubtedly be capitalized again this year. A merry race is on for Cappon's fullback position. As a line plunger, Miller is showing up the best so far.

Curran, Neisch and Marion, the first two letter men, and the latter a member of the freshman squad last year, are candidates for the end positions, with little difference between them. Even though these men develop a great deal during the season Yost can hardly hope to equal the pair of ends of last year. At tackle, Vandervoort and Muirhead are playing in their positions of last year, and with the experience back of them should be stronger during the coming season.

The veterans Steele, White and Swan are fighting it out for the guard positions, and Yost should have no trouble in fighting men to bolster up that section of the line. Jack Blott, the scrapping center of last year, has a cinch on his berth on the team.

Kipke Will Punt.

Captain Kipke will undoubtedly do the punting again this year which assures the Wolverines of a good kicker. Steger also lifts some fine spirals, and Yost may work him occasionally. Rockwell, second string quarterback, and Parker and Palmer, also backfield men, are doing a lot of practicing booting the pigskin.

Michigan's first conference game will be played Oct. 20 when Ohio State will invade Ann Arbor seeking revenge for the stinging defeat which the Wolverines administered to the Buckeyes last year. The Ohio State game will undoubtedly be the biggest home game on the Michigan schedule. The quota allotted tickets to Michigan alumni for this game was sold out, the middle of September, and this despite the fact that between 45,000 and 50,000 spetators can view the game on Ferry field.

Iowa Game Important.

The Michigan Aggies will play in Ann Arbor Oct. 27. On Nov. 3, the Michigan team will journey out to Iowa City to play the University of Iowa, with whom no game has been played for years. Iowa has taken Illinois' place on the Michigan schedule. The Iowa game is the cause of much interest, because of the exceedingly strong teams the Iowans have had in recent years. Secretary of the Navy Denby, a 300 piece band and 1,500 U. S. marines will accompany their team to Ann Arbor from Quantico, Va., on Nov. 10 when the marines play the Wolverines.

The Badgers, who are boasting of a strong team this year, will be played by the Yostmen on the Wisconsin field on Nov. 17, and a terrific battle is expeteed. The final conference game on the Wolverine schedule will be played in Ann Arbor Nov. 24 when Minnesota will be played on Ferry field.

Yanks and Giants Getting Ready For World Series

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The New York Yankees and Giants closed their seasons rather ingloriously today, both meeting defeat at the hands of second division clubs, but, perhaps their thoughts were more centered upon the coming world series struggle than on the wining of a mere ball game.

With two days remaining before these rival renew their title battle for the third successive year next Wednesday at the Yankee Stadium, both clubs plan several workouts to iron out kinks that have been apparent in their play for the past week or so, and gear their machines for a struggle that promises to be the most interesting and hard-fought they have waged so far.

The hospital list which had assumed somewhat serious proportions, dwindled today to a few casualties, chief among which was Wally Pipp, lanky first sacker of the Yankees, who is not expected to be in condition to start the first game. Pipp's twisted ankle has mended satisfactorily, but slowly. He was still hobbling around today and while optimistic of his ability to be in condition by Wednesday, Manager Huggins was arranging to take the field without Pipp on opening day.

Babe Ruth will fill Pipp's place, Huggins said, unless the regular first sacker recovers in time, Elmer Smith occupying the Babe's usual post in right field. This combination will add a slugger to the line-up which compares favorably with Pipp, it was pointed out, while Ruth has shown he can make himself at home on first base.

Neither Manager Huggins nor McGraw has made definite pitching selections but indications were that Sam Jones, of no-hit fame, would start the first game for the Yankees, with Jack Scott, veteran Giant righthander as his probable opponent. If it is a dark day, however, Huggins may call on Joe Bush and his speed ball, or possibly send in Herbert Pennock, his southpaw ace. McGraw has been grooming Scott, a hero of the 1922 series, and banks on him to come through.

Notables in the baseball firmament as well as fans, began arriving tonight from many parts of the country, while everywhere the world's series atmosphere was noticeable.

Battle Between 2 Home Run Hitters Is Now At An End

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Ills., Oct. 7.—Babe Ruth of the New York Americans and Cy Williams of the Philadelphia Nationals wound up their race for home run honors in the major leagues in a tie today when Ruth cracked out his 41st circuit clout. Williams made his 41st homer on Thursday. Ruth drove in three four-base hits during the final week of the season to tie Williams. Half a dozen times during the season, the two have been tied, and seldom has there been a difference of more than three home runs between them after the season got well under way.

Kansas City Wins In Pennant Finals

By The Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 7.—Kansas City won the American Association pennant for the season of 1923 today by taking both games of a double header from Toledo, the scores being 3 to 1 and 12 to 8. Not in years has there been such a close race in the association to capture the pennant. Kansas City had only to win one game even though St. Paul took both games from Louisville today.

The Saints divided their double bill in Louisville, winning the first game 4 to 2, but dropping the second, 7 to 3.

YANKS FINISH 16 GAMES AHEAD

Greatest Lead Ever Held at Season's Finish In Major League

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The New York Yankees, losing the final game of the series to Philadelphia, 9 to 7, finished the season with a greater lead than any other team in the American league has ever boasted.

The Yankees are 16 full games ahead of the Detroit Tigers, who defeated St. Louis today 7 to 6, and took second place over Cleveland by a half game. The Indians beat the White Sox, 9 to 6. Washington by defeating Boston, 5 to 2, while St. Louis lost, took fourth place by half a game.

In the National league race, the New York Giants finished the season only four and a half games ahead of Cincinnati. Both teams lost in today's games, the Giants to Brooklyn, 6 to 1, and the Reds to Pittsburgh, 7 to 5. The Pirates were well entrenched in third place, four games behind the Reds and four ahead of the Cubs, who split a doubleheader with St. Louis, wining the first, 10 to 3, and losing the second, 6 to 3.

The Yankees are a game and a half ahead of the previous record lead in the American league of 14 1-2 which was made by the Athletics, in 1910, and the Red Sox in 1903. The biggest lead ever held in either league was that obtained by the Pirates in 1902, when they finished 27 1-2 games up on the Dodgers. The standing of the teams in both leagues with games won and lost follow:

OHIOANS SEEK G. O. P. CONTROL

Factions Want Control of Delegation and Leadership

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Not so much the selection of a Coolidge delegation from Ohio next year as the attempt on the part of certain factions to gain control of the delegation, and thereby leadership of the party in the state, is occupying the minds of Buckeye republicans at this time, according to recent visitors here to pay their respects to President Coolidge.

Although republicans confidently expect, and hopefully rely on the prospect of opposition to Governor Donahey in the democratic primaries, they are now predirecting his renomination, but count on a primary contest to weaken him in the general election. They anticipate also that there will be general agreement among the democrats as to their choice for the democratic nomination for the presidency, with but little contest for places on the delegation. But in their own ranks they apprehend a battle royal, that being the term employed to describe a free-for-all contest, unless something appears for relief which is not present at this time.

Except for Senator Willis and Fess none of the Ohio spokesmen have committed themselves directly to the Coolidge candidacy, but their attitude is perhaps best expressed in the language of Charles W. Montgomery, republican state chairman, that "Ohio republicans are committed to the hope of Coolidge." The reason for rariness is, however, not interest in or against the Coolidge candidacy, but the disordered state in which republicans of Ohio find themselves since the death of President Harding. Control of the state is apparently of more importance to leading republicans than success of the federal administration, and support for Coolidge would be merely incidental if affairs in Buckeye republicanism should take that slant.

The maneuvering at this time as gleaned here has been confined to activities on the part of would-be republican leaders, some of those now acknowledged as such, and candidates for place on the state ticket, to gain the support of the anti-saloon league, but so far as learned there have been no direct commitments in this connection. Interwoven with the desire to get the backing of the anti-saloon league to certain factional plans, however, is the jealousy now existing between the dominant republican faction and anti-saloon league leaders in the state, and what appears to be a very evident desire of the league officials to central all nominations next year.

The first big fight in republican ranks will be at the spring primaries in the selection of the "Big Six." Ohio under the new republican rule, being entitled to six delegates at large in the national convention. Thus far all attempts to reach agreement on candidates for these places have failed. That Senators Willis and Fess, and perhaps Attorney General Daugherty, if he desires, shall head the list is generally conceded, but there the treaty stops. The league of republican women demand recognition but there is no agreement even among them. Names of Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, Mrs. John G. Gatelle, Rose Moriarity, and Mrs. John Todd are mentioned in this connection. But the major fight is among the male hopefuls, and there are so many of them it may cause defeat of all women candidates. Among the possible candidates for delegate-at-large, aside from those conceded rights, appear the names of Harry L. Davis, Theodore Burton, Walter F. Brown, and Rud K. Hynicka, the latter now serving as republican national committeeman. In addition to the "Big Six" spring battle, William E. Halley of Columbus, a Daugherty lieutenant, is intending to try to unseat Mr. Hynicka as national committeeman, it is learned.

With presidential primaries determined, Ohio will witness in republican ranks a mad scramble for nomination for state offices, and election of central committeeman, the heat of which will make the preceding contest appear cool and orderly, but with the same elements appearing. Nearly every republican congressman is having himself "favorably mentioned" for the gubernatorial nomination, including as active, Messrs. Cable, Fitzgerald, Brand, Cooper, and Murphy. Information comes here that Harry L. Davis has already quite a lead, and State Senator Burke much support. Secretary of State Brown is expected to be among the leading contenders, and if he enters this may cause Fitzgerald to withdraw, because Brown will have the legion following. It is reported here that Carmi Thompson will not again seek nomination. The great concern, however, expressed here is whether James A. White, of the anti-saloon league or Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, with White a support, will enter. That would upset many plans now being nurtured.

TERRIBLE TAXES ARE UNIVERSAL

Ship owners have to be very canny men these days, if they will avoid unexpected and unpleasant events. A British owner recently learned all of this to his cost.

Having placed his vessel in the hands of other people, under a time charter, he took his leisure, probably contemplating with some ruefulness the compensation he was getting, but thinking that at any rate he was safe against further losses. The charterers, however, took his ship to the antipodes, where she called at various ports. In consequence, the owner was startled to learn that upon the hire he was to receive there had been levied a New South Wales income tax of 10 per cent, an Australian income tax of 5 per cent, plus 25 per cent, and a New Zealand income tax, to boot.

Hereafter, this owner will probably stipulate that his boat is to be operated by charters only between countries without income taxes, or countries which have entered into some international arrangement preventing income tax from being piled upon income tax The United States was among the first countries to place in its law provisions which prevent double taxation upon the same income, when the other country involved returns the courtesy to the United States. According to all reports, England, is likely to come forward and enact legislation of the same kind.—The Nation's Business.

work hitherto undertaken, household management, equipped, eugenics, are in the home, economics, clothing and textiles, will be investigated. Particular stress wil lbe given economic studies in the field of textiles and clothing, and home equipment. In the view of Dr. Stanley standard of living studies appear to be greatly needed and to establish standards for home consumption, the family income under real conditions with its distribution, and how it is being spent within different specific lnies must be ascertained. This will be undertaken to prevent overproduction and bring about better distribution of products for home use.

The study to determine the wage equivalent of woman's work in the home is not for the purpose of giving the wife a servant's status, or literally fixing a wage, Dr. Stanley explains. "While such of a woman's contribution to the home is intangible, and can not be given a monetary value," she says, "it is desirable to know on a wage basis the contribution that she makes to the family income in performing various kinds of home duties. These figures will indicate the real income of the family, will serve to make woman's household work better appreciated, and will enable the woman to use her time to best advantage where there is a choice of tasks. Whether it is more profitable for her to make or buy rompers, to hire a laundress or buy a washing machine, to bake her bread or purchase it, will be revealed by studies of this kind. If the work of the home is to be established on a business basis, figures for the different lines of household activity are necessary."

The bureau, after brief survey has reached the conclusion that the factors entering into clothing costs are not sufficiently established. Its purpose, in addition to guiding women in their clothing expenditures, is to give them a better knowledge of clothing costs, which, it is believed, will help stabilize and standardize the clothing industry. At present time very little information is available to help the housewife in choosing materials and clothing which will give the greatest amount of service. Laboratory experiments, supplemented by properly directed field tests, will be undertaken to establish not only the relative value of materials under given conditions of wear, but also the relation of clothing to the regulation of body heat.

No immediate attempt will be made to study the cost of housing, although it is recognized this cost has increased to a relatively greater extent than any other element in the household budget. The bureau of home economics will ignore this question for the present, because, as Dr. Stanley explains, estimates must be readjusted, and more definite information as to the relation of this cost to running expenses must be obtained in terms of materials and labor.

A special study will be made of particular phases of household equipment to furnish the housewife with reliable guidance in her purchases, and to give her standards of guidance in selecting furnishings as well as food in spite of conflicting statements by merchants.

In this connection comparative economy of various types of supplies will be established.

EXAMINATION FOR FOREST RANGERS

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination for forest ranger, on Oct. 23, 1923. Vacancies in the forest service, Department of Agriculture, in the states in which this examination is held, and in positions requiring similar qualifications will be filled from this examination.

The entrance salary for this position is ordinarily $1,220 a year. Appointees whose services are satisfactory may be allowed, after the first month, the increase granted by congress of $20 a month.

All citizens of the United States between the ages of 21 and 35 who meet the requirements, both men and women, may enter this examination; appointing officers, however, have the legal right to specify the sex desired in requesting certification of eligibles. For this position in the forest service men are desired. The age limits do not apply to persons entitled to preference because of military or naval service.

Examinations are held yearly for filling vacancies in the forest rangers force and they are given in the headquarters of all forest supervisors. Information can be secured from him or the civil service commission.

Grotesque Tax Figures.

German taxes have had a bad time of it, limping sadly in the rear of depreciating marks. In August, an attempt was made to reverse the situation. The tax on motor vehicles, for example, was raised by 1,000,000 per cent. Such a grotesque figure, of course, is due to the rapidity of the career of the mark toward utter disappearance.

Against this particular tax farmers are the loudest protestants. In replying to their complaints, an official declared that in some districts where there was one car before the war there are now 65.—The Nation's Business.

LEGS OF LAME UNEQUAL—KAY

Arrest Crapshooters—Lotteries Go

Note—The following is a stenographic report of a preliminary address made by Judge John Kay before his Sunday school class yesterday morning.

Judge Kay explained after his address that his remarks were in no manner made to reflect on the Texas-Oklahoma fair association, but that he merely referred to that as an example in point.

"Once in a while, I like to depart from the lesson and drop for you a little practical thought about your own city, your own people and your own lives.

"It is written that the legs of the lame are unequal. Now, when that was written, the Bible was not talking about a crippled man. I want to show you what it was talking about, in this one brief matter that I am going to bring to your attention before we come to the lesson.

"I cannot understand how that our system of justice and our laws would close the movies here on Sunday and let the fair stay open. Because, when the moving picture man says to me that other businesses are open on Sunday, I have no answer, because, he is saying to me that the legs of my lame people are unequal. I cannot understand that bunch of officers or that system of justice that would arrest a poor old "nigger" down here for shooting craps and leave these lotteries running out at the fair. Now, here is the way I look at things. We ought to be all one way or all the other. I have never been considered a stickler for a very strict Sabbath myself. I believe in a great many recreations on Sunday, but, be it said to you, that I do not make any money on Sunday. That kind of money is not going to do you any good. Hear me say it, that it will not do you any good.

"Let's get our legs equal in the community, and not make fish of one and fowl of the other. Let's catch them all, or let them all go. It is not much fun to me to say this here, but I thought it needed saying, and I am a citizen here, and there is so much difference in our legs, that I wanted to call attention to it. That's what the Bible meant when it said: 'Truly, the legs of the lame are unequal.' It meant your lame excuses, and your lame philosophy, and your lame way of looking at things, and it meant a crippled conscience."

Man Driving Truck Instanlty Killed Nearby Frederick

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Oct. 7.—William L. McClellan, 34, Bradley's Corner, Texas was instantly killed Friday evening in turning into a soft roadway to avoid hitting a car ahead of his truck which was loaded with lumber.

Identification of the truck driver was not made until late Saturday when M. L. McClellan of Altus, declared he was the father of the man killed in the tragedy. Mrs. McClellan, wife of the victim, is in a Burkburnett, Texas hospital, recovering from a serious surgical operation. The body was taken to Altus Sunday for burial.

The accident resulted when McClellan attempted to pass a car driven by Walter Ryman. Not hearing the truck behind him Ryman pulled over to the right of the road to avoid some rough going and McClellan swerved to the left, his truck turning turtle. Lumber, with which the truck was loaded, crushed the skull, death being instantaneous.

SNYDER CONQUERS FREDERICK ELEVEN

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Oct. 7.—Crippled by the loss of their quarterback and captain, Rufus Hyde, the Frederick high school football team was defeated Friday afternoon by the Snyder team by the score of 16 to 12. Hyde was in a car which overturned on the road between Frederick and Snyder as he was on his way to the game. His arm was broken above the wrist and it is thought he will not be in the game this season. The Frederick eleven regards this as a serious loss as he was said to be sure of men for a place on the southwestern conference picked team.

RACE RIOT STARTS AT WHITE-NEGRO GAME

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Squads of police reserves were called out today to prevent a riot between ten thousand white and negro fans at a baseball game between the Pyotts and the American Giants, the latter a negro team. A fight between the team members and in which the spectators joined was started when the catcher for the negro team stepped out of the way of a pitched ball which hit the umpire, knocking him unconscious after the negro players had become dissatisfied with the umpire's decisions. Three of the players were arrested pending the outcome of the umpire's injuries.

TILLMAN FARMERS WIN

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Oct. 7.—Two Tillman county farmers, W. N. Randolph and C. L. Valentine, took first and second prizes respectively at the Texas-Oklahoma fair at Wichita Falls, Texas, for the best individual farm exhibits. The second Texas-Oklahoma fair has attracted many visitors from this county and all seem well pleased, declaring the fair superior to the first. Rains, which washed connecting bridges away, diminished the attendance from this county.

WEALTHY ALTO MAN HAS DISAPPEARED

ALTO, Texas, Oct. 7.—E. J. Harkin, wealthy saw-mill owner of Alto has mysteriously disappeared it was learned here today when relatives of the missing man solicited the aid of state rangers for the purpose of tracing the prominent financier who was last heard of in Palestine, Texas.

He departed Monday, September 16 on a business trip to Jacksonville, Texas, wiring his secretary he would return the following morning. He was traced to Palestine and has since been unheard of.

Business associates report his dealings in splendid shape while all of his personal effects were untouched. It is feared he has met with foul play although relatives would advance no motive for their assertions.

Oil Production In Last 10 Years Had Big Jump

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 7.—How the production of oil in the United States has increased in ten years was shown in statistics issued today by the petroleum division of the department of commerce. Against a monthly production of 20,704,000 barrels in 1913 production in August 1923 was 65,715,000 barrels.

Against monthly consumption of 21,808,000 barrels in 1913, average consumption now is 58,020,000 barrels. Total shipments from Mexico have increased from 2,159,000 barrels monthly in 1913 to an average of 11,043,000 barrels in 1923.

The average monthly price of oil in Oklahoma, which is given as a typical state, for the last 11 years has been: 1913, 93 cents; 1914, 80 cents; 1915, 85 cents; 1916, $1.26; 1917, $1.77; 1918, $2.20; 1920, $3.40; 1921, $1.70; 1922, $1.79. In June of this year the price was $1.83 per barrel.

The fireworks exhibition closed the evening's showing in front of the grandstand in a blaze of colored lights, even the finishing feature being more elaborate than usual. The fireworks showing was longer and more complete than at any other perfogmance, and rocket after rocket was fired into the sky, the whole making a most attractive display.

The passge of the last person from the gates marked the close of the second annual Texas-Oklahoma fair, and the beginning of what fair officials hope will be the greatest annual fair ever held in Texas.

"Yesterday's crowd was by the far the largest we have had this week," said R. E. Shepherd, assistant secretary of the fair association. "The fair this year was a complete succes, both financially and otherwise. The fair association took in more money this year than was spent, with the exception of that spent in permanent improvements, and which is not added to the year's expenditure for this fair."

Visitors and exhibitors who attended this fair from other places and who had attended other fairs declared themselves more than pleased with the Texas-Oklahoma fair, many stating that it is destined to become the foremost fair in Texas. All were enthusiastic.

Many of the exhibitors have signified their intention of returning here next year, and some have even established headquarters here because of the annual fair. More than 30 race horses, the property of three owners, will establish winter training quarters at the T-O fair grounds and will remain here until the racing season next year. They are to finish the last race swithin a fortnight, and will return to Wichita Falls then, to train on the local track, which will be given over for this use by the fair association.

Plans are already under way for improvements and work at the fair grounds for the next year's fair, and it is probable that work will be carried on during the winter in preparation for the event next fall. While officials refused to give out definite information on the matter they announced last night that many radical changes will be made before the opening of the next fair. It is understood that a new ground arrangement may be made.

Illinois Defeats Nebraska's Eleven In Saturday Game

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Season-openers out of the way, Western conference football teams this week will prepare for the first games between conference contenders, four of the Big Ten elevens battling each other next Saturday. Five other conference teams will be in action against non-conference elevens.

First proofs of the actual strength of the conference teams in action were obtained yesterday when all the teams of the big ten on their home grids opposed non-conference elevens.

Illinois, whose strength had been problematical, sprang one of the biggest surprises of the day when they defeated Nebraska 24 to 7, the first win ever scored by Illinois over the Corn Huskers.

In one of the other important "dope" battles of the day, Chicago defeated the Colorado Aggies 10 to 0 in a game contested by the visitors every inch of the way.

Wisconsin showed little strength in winning from Coe, 7 to 3, although Taft, star Badger fullback and tower of strength in offensive was out of the game.

Minnesota also had difficulty in downing Ames, 20 to 17.

Michigan, which divided honors with Iowa in the conference last season, exhibited a strong back field and an almost impregnable line in downing Case 26 to 0. Michigan proved that it will be one of the first teams of the Big Ten by exhibiting a brilliant attack and open field play in addition to its defense.

Iowa showed almost phenominal improvement over its ragged form a week ago, defeating Knox 44 to 3. Indiana was the only team defeated in the Big Ten, losing to Depauw, 3 to 0.

Ohio State, always a dangerous team in the conference, had little trouble in disposing of Ohio Wesleyan at Columbia, 24 to 0.

BRYAN AND PRECEDENTS

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman writing her rich and delightful memoirs in The Century Magazine tells the following story of Bryan's disregard of precedence in the October Century.

"Sometimes the precedents at Washington dinners are oppressive. One must have a memory for the Chinese language to remember the order of precedence that all ambassadors always come first, and this ambassador ahead of that. More than one unhappy hostess has had a guest leave her dinner before she seated him wrong insulting by a chair or two a "great and glorious people." We can't all be Bryans and invent our precedents. Once when he was secretary of state he decided to give a dinner party to Sir Robert Borden and to Sir William Tyrrell, and he wanted to ask the French and the German ambassadors. So he did. A suave secretary came to explain to him that an ambassador couldn't be asked "to meet" any one. But he was not the great Commoner for nothing. He wanted to give a dinner party to his friends, Borden and Tyrrell, and he wanted their excellencies to come to it. I think he must have mopped his brow many times in good Chautauqua fashion before he hit on his solution. The evening of the dinner came. Mrs. Bryan went out with M. Jusserand. Count Bernstoff sat on her other side, taking in Lady Spring Rice. Then the secretary brought in first, Mme. Jusserand, seating her one seat from him on his right. Then he brought in Countess Bernstoff, to sit one seat away on his left. Then, triumphant, he went back to his drawing room. He drew Sir Robert Borden to him with his right arm and Sir William Tyrrell to him with his left arm, and escorted them in himself. One sat on each side of him. The ambassadors couldn't complain; the places of honor on each side of the hostess they were certainly sitting in, but no one could doubt that Bryan was attending a dinner "to meet" Sir Robert Borden and Sir William Tyrrell.

Mrs. Harriman's reminiscences in The Century are crowded with such intimate and entertaining pictures of well known men and women who have played important roles in our social and political life.

LINOLEUM NOW IN THE HAREMS

Oilcloth is displacing Turkish carpets. We are told that 50 per cent of the better class of houses in Constantinople are now covered with linoleum. We do not know the softness of Turkish weaves, but we are sure they go beyond linoleum in that quality. Perhaps the change marks a new stiffness in the Turkish posture which has no need to cushion its humility. Certainly no Turkish knee bent at Lausanne.

Time was in this country when tired business men foregathered in malt and vinous oases to seek refreshment. So doing, they bent the elbow, but not the knee. Floors, or what was on them, did not greatly concern those wayfarers. There were higher things to captivate the fancy.

And now the Turk seems to have found use for his elbows, and pushes and jostles his way among the western powers, considerably infected with their utilitarianism. Small wonder that he should put aside the ancient artistry of the carpet weaver for the intense practicalities of the occident. Next, we shall hear that he is buying cigarettes from some of our bright young men.—The Nation's Business.

Race Stock Will Be Trained Here

T-O Officials Give Stables Free

Plans are being made by several of the horsemen who entered horses in the runing races at the Texas-Oklahoma fair last week to make their winter quarters and training grounds here this winter. It has been ascertained that at least three men will bring their string of racers here following the races in Texas, and possibly more will be here during the winter months when there are no races scheduled.

Among the horsemen who will winter and train here is Z. E. McGregor, owner of several fast horses, among them Whippet, a favorite in the races here and Poodle Mee. W. S. Sap will also winter his string here. He is the owner of seven racers, including Tough and Tight.

A. J. Moser, whose Cricket won the first race of the fair, will bring a string of colts and young racing horses here to break and train, and his string will bring the total number of runners training here into the thirties. It is thought that several other horsemen will also bring their horses here to take advantage of the good conditions and facilities for training.

The track and stable quarters will be given free by the Texas-Oklahoma fair association for the use of the horses, and every convenience is planned for them.

KING KILLER OF BAD MEN

"Pecos Bill is not a new-comer in the southwest. His mighty deeds have been sung for generations by the men of the range. In my boyhood days in West Texas I first heard of Bill, and in later years I have often listened to chapters of his history told around the buckwagon by mendacious cowboys."

Edward O'Reilly has collected a few of the tales about Pecos Bill and they are appearing in the October Century under the title "The Saga of Pecos Bill." Though all these stories are familiar to the cow-men this is the first time they have ever been published to the wider audience they deserve.

"There is no way of tellin' just how many men Bill did kill. Deep down he had a tender heart, however, and never killed women or children or tourists out of season. He never scalped his victims; he was too civilized for that. He used to skin them gently and tan their hides.

"The stories of Bill's love-affairs are especially numerous. One of them may be told. It is the sad tale of the fate of his bride, a winsome little maiden called Slue-Foot Sue.

"Sue made a sad mistake when she insisted on ridin' Widow-Maker on her weddin' day. The old horse threw her so high she had to duk her head to let the moon go by. Unfortunately, she was wearin' her weddin' gown and in those days the women wore those big steel-spring bustles.

"When Sue lit, she naturally bounced, and every time she came down she bounced again. It was an awful sad sight to see Bill implorin' her to quit her bouncin' and not be so nervous; but Sue kept right on, up and down, weepin' and throwin' kisses to her distracted lover, and carryin' on as a bride naturally would do under those circumstances.

"She bounced for three days and four nights, and Bill finally had to shoot her to keep her from starvin' to death. It was mighty tragic. Bill never got over it. Of course he married lots of women after that. In fact, it was one of his weaknesses but none of them filled the place in his heart once held by Slue-Foot Sue, his bouncin' bride."

RECKLESS WOMAN BREAKS BOOZE

Whether she threw it away to destroy the evidence or was swearing off booze forever, made no difference to sheriff officers who last night arrested a young woman and her female companion after the former had broken a bottle of the banished liquid on the Indiana street pavement.

The two women with male companions had staged a regular Independence day celebration on Tenth street a few minutes before. A large number of persons witnessed their performance. The men had left two minutes too early to become guests at the county hostelry.

CORN CROSSED THE DOLLAR LINE

According to the dispatches corn crossed the dollar line in Chicago Wednesday and thus became the king of American grains. According to the same dispatches prices were up 8 1-2 and 11 1-2 cents since September 17. Incidentally this was the first time that corn had crossed the dollar line since October 1, 1920.

James Patten is an old time leader of the corn trade, in the pit but not behind the plow and the northern newspapers credit this man who has made millions in the pit with having helped the American farmers to obtain better prices. After corn had crossed the dollar line King Paten is said to have sold out part of his large holdings.

He declared that the market was getting too wild, then he regarded prices as high enough and would not advise buying. According to the Chicago market writers actual scarcity has advanced corn prices in all markets for the reason that the country has consumed its corn supplies in 10 months and old corn is so scarce in some sections of the corn belt that farmers are using the new crop and paying around 65 cents for the new grain.

This, according to the market reporters, is above the cost of production of the crop of 1923 and asserted to be a money getter for the corn grower of the country. They also assert that old corn, selling around on dollar and over, pays the grower a handsome profit and those who raise corn, cattle and hogs are declared to have no complaint.

Corn is king in the northland; cotton is king in the southland. These staples are money getters this year.

WHEAT IN SECOND PLACE

American corn is selling at a dollar a bushel. Winnepeg wheat is considered the best in the world and farmers in Western Canada are marketing at the rate of 4,000,000 bushels daily. It is said that American farmers in some sections of the northwest have marketed the bulk of their wheat and are holding the rest for higher prices.

American wheat traders declared that disposition of the Canadian surplus, which is very large, and is regarded as a menace to the price of wheat in the world market, is yet to be made.

England needs cheap wheat. Over there the government is feeding 1,500,000 idle wage workers. Over here there is work for all, even for the thousands of drifters who accept jobs from labor agents and then jump at the first favorable opportunity that presents itself.

ALABAMA JUSTICE

Women has the ballot but man still possesses one inalienable right in Alabama. In the smoker city of Birmingham a white man stood in front of a cafe, his shirt tail hanging down below the coat. He started to tuck in the shirt as several women drove up in an auto. A policeman pounced upon the offender and arrested him for disorderly conduct. He was taken before a judge who discharged him with these words of advice to the officer, "a fellow has a right to put his shirt tail in his trousers." He has but he should arrange his toilet before making a public exhibition of himself, but law is law and in Alabama "a fellow has a right to put his shirt-tail in his trousers without police interference. Score one for the women.

Census for 1922 shows that there was one divorce for every 7.6 mariages in the United States. There was a time when marriage was looked upon as a sacrament; now it appears to be a tryout. According to the census takers Texas divorce courts were almost as busy as those in Nevada and registered a new high record. John Barleycorn is not responsible for the showing made. He carried all the load in the good old days.

WHERE IT GROWS

In the good old days American cotton was produced in a certain territory well defined on the map. Now West Texas is a great producer of cotton, Arizona produces a fine quality of long staple, California has its Imperial Valley where irrigated land produces two bales to the acre and a bale of cotton ginned at Cairo last week was said to be the first ever ginned in the state of Illinois.

There was a time when the American crop almost touched the 16,000,000 bale mark. Along came the Mexican boll wevil, born in India and migrating to the land of the Aztecs, and ever since a plague to the American cotton grower. According to the economists he has cost the south in his time, $5,000,000.

Economists never reckon the good that the wevil has done for the grower. A 15,000,000 bale crop this year would have wrecked the pocket book and the sunny disposition of the southland. Nine or 10 cent cotton is not a smile producer.

LONG THIRST PERIOD AHEAD

Congressman John Phillip Hill of Maryland is a vehement wet. He has been having fun making wine in his own seller and telling the national prohibition chieftain all about it. Now the chieftain is having his fun. He has advised a federal grand jury to return an indictment against the congressman as a violator of the Volstead act.

If a jury in a federal court would return a verdict against John Phillip and a hard hearted federal judge would give him a jail sentence perhaps he would be less violent in his attacks on the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act and more amenable to reason.

Maryland never did take kindly to the eighteenth amendment or to the Volstead act and with one or two exceptions its senators and its representatives are repealers. That is they say they are but there is only one way to repeal the amendment and that is to take it out of the constitution.

Pros worked 80 years to place the amendment in the constitution. Now women has the ballot, How many years will it take the wets to remove the dry act from the constitution? There is a long thirst period ahead of the sons and daughters of the republic

Doesn't Seem Possible

A Romance of the Redwoods

CHAPTER XIV.

Boston Finds It Curious.

"That is the most interesting thing I ever heard!" breathed Burton. "And it sounds so reasonable! But you know we started to talk about you, not about quails and ants. I believe you are a crafty side-stepper!"

"We're headed towrd me. If things were all working along the way they should, man would have this same access to universal wisdom that the lower creature have. As respects all the things he would normally run against in his everyday normal life he would see, or feel—perceive is a better word—the causes and effects and results; because the stream of life would flow through him by certain channels turning certain wheels."

"That's what you do!" she cried excitedly. "I see!"

"In a very small and practical way; a little more than the average. People have just about lost that power. They have little remnants of it. You've heard of 'premonitions' that have worked out; or a 'feeling' that some one was in the room; or experienced some one of the numerous 'coincidences,' such as reciving a letter right on top of some especial thought of the person who wrote it. You may have had dreams that came true."

"Yes," she cried, "what about it?"

"You probably thought of all as 'uncanny.' It wasn't uncanny at all. Simply old, choked channels letting through a trickle."

She pondered this a moment, her brows puckered prettily.

"Is it our fault—this choking?" she asked? "How did it happen?"

"I don't know, of course; but I surmise," he repeated. "It is the intervention of mind, of intellect. Man's intellect is a fine tool and complicated. But it was supposed to be only a tool for the purpose of examining and making practical what came to it by direct channel. Mankind got so tickled with it that he began to run all his affairs by it alone. That blocked the channel. The mind took control, instead of working under control. Instead of playing with a nice fresh supply or first hand—well, call it inspiration; that's what it is—we make over and refashion old stuff. If it weren't for the fact that some people's channels are not completely blocked, so that a kind of a trickle does get through; and if it wasn't for an occasional crazy genius who busts out, we'd tie ourselves up in our minds and dry up and blow away."

"Then," she summed up slowly, "you could tell about the rain and the tree falling, because this current flowed through you?"

"That's roughly it."

"How do you do it?"

"It's hard to say. I set my mind aside and then take what comes to me. I turn my attention to the type of thing that is useful for me to know."

"Do you think everybody ought to have this power?"

"Yes: it belongs normally in the race."

"Could I do it—with practice?"

"I'm certain of it."

"Oh!" she cried. "I want to try! How do you start?"

He smiled.

"This is no conjuring trick to be learned; it's a good healthy faculty to be developed You've got to relax something inside of you that you hold tight together for everyday life—something in your consciousness. Then things just float in and you leave them alone for future reference."

"I'm going to begin now," she announced.

She laid aside her hat, and the cool air current was stirring the hair at her temples. Little by little her form fell into the simple, restful curves of relaxation one by one even the smaller muscles relinquished their guard. Her face took on the dreamy and far-away peacefulness of a sleeping child's.

Thus 15 minutes passed. Then she stirred slightly. "Well?" asked Davenport at last.

"It was certainly very curious," she confessed. "I can't make it out."

He hesitated, and the sunburn on his cheeks seemed to deepen a little.

"Are we going to waste time?" he asked gently.

She did not reply. After waiting a moment he reached out and took her hand.

CHAPTER XV.

The Mystery.

"You did see," Davenport went on. "You saw what I saw yesterday when we were in the old orchard what I have felt from the very first instant I saw you standing in the firelight—beautiful as the night!"

She turned on his troubled eyes

"I don't know why I talk and act this way. It seems almost shameless. I do not understand it. But somehow I cannot hide and dodge and retreat and flirt as—It is impossible. I do not know what it is that has come to me, Larry, and you must wait until I find out. I have been made love to before and—from the first I have been attracted to you. Just now when I tried to set my mind aside, as you call it, just one idea, one impression, came to me, and that was of nearness to you—I don't mean physical nearness—I don't know what I mean or what I'm talking about—"

"I do," he assured her.

"I am, shaken, and I don't know; I can't tell what it means."

"It is the answer to my love for you!" he breathed.

She turned her clear eyes on him again.

"I do not know," she repeated, "and I must know I might allow you to keep my hand and to—and to go on, and there is something leaping within me that tells me I would be swept away by your love. But I must not; and you must not. If it were not so serious to me that might happen. I am talking in what my mother would have called a most unmaidenly manner," she ended with a wistful little smile.

He gently restored her hand to her lap.

"I understand," said he. "But it will come. I am on air! It can no more help coming than the poppy can help unfolding in the sun."

"I nope not," she breathed, but so low that he did not catch the syllables.

At this moment, just when some obvious change of subject seemed most desirable. Grimstead appeared wading down the middle of the stream.

"Keep quiet!" Burton adjured Larry. "Let's surprise him!"

The fisherman was having a fine time, splashing down the long, straight vista, casting his fly right, left and straight ahead as he advanced. Larry watched him critically for a few moments.

"He knows the job," he told Burton. "Did you see him make that flip cast to the pool behind the cedar root?"

The pool yielded a rise that immediately developed into an indignant rainbow, which, by an unexpected dash trailed the dropper fly across a part of the snag, where it became firmly embedded. After that Mr. Rainbow proceeded to pull himself loose and depart.

Grimstead had to wade out to the snag, roll up his sleeve, and plunge his arm in nearly to the shoulder before once more his leader swung clear. The pool, and it was a promising one, was of course completely ruined.

"This is not a propitious moment to spring any surprises," advised Burton. "Keep quiet!"

Gardiner now appeared, making his way down stream.

"I got into one of those starfish canons that young fool Davenport told us about, and it took me some time to find it out and to get back," he said to Grimstead in explaining his delay in joining him.

Burton now considered the time right for her surprise, and she began to make moss balls to toss over on to them. The next words, however, arrested her.

"Now I've caught up, chief," Gardiner was saying, "for heaven's sake tell me why you gave this fellow the right to limit sales for five years. You heard him talk. You'll be making batteries for rowboats only, if you don't watch out."

"Suits me!" returned Grimstead calmly.

"I don't believe I get your idea."

"Well, you asked me if I heard him talk. Yes, I heard him talk, and I've heard that kind of talk all my life. It always comes from a half-baked, impractical chump who is so full of impossible ideals that he never gets anywhere, and who couldn't see the main point if you wrapped it in his breakfast napkin. You got to handle that kind, and handle 'em right, or you'll never get an inch."

"That's true enough," commented Gardiner.

It is probable that Davenport would have broken in at this point in some spectacular fashion had not Burton held his arm and placed her fingers over his lips.

"All he sees is that these batteries of his will replace the world's power and that a lot of high falutin things will happen for the benefit of the human race and all that visionary rot that's never worked out yet and never will."

"What do we care what he thinks as long as we can sell the batteries?" queried Gardiner. "It's going to take quite some few batteries of any size you name to replace the world's power, and that is the eventual market, if the thing works."

"We're assuming that it works," growled the older man, "otherwise there's nothing doing."

"Then why limit the sale to what this nut thinks proper?"

"You're clearly as bad as he is, Ross," observed Grimstead, a note of good humor creeping into his voice. I'll give you a demonstration that will impress it on you."

"Shoot!" observed Gardiner.

"You asked me last night how many shares in this thing you get. Well, you don't get any."

CHAPTER XVI.

Treachery.

A blank silence of some seconds ensued.

"I don't believe I understand," then said Gardiner in rather a strangled voice.

"Me and this young man will hold all the stock," emphasized Grimstead.

"Then where do I come in?" demanded Gardiner with a note of rising indignation.

Grimstead chuckled.

"You wouldn't come in one cent's worth if we should do as you seemed to think we would—begin to manufacture and market these things promiscuously!"

Gardiner apparently regained his equanimity.

"Well, chief, I don't get you yet; but I've been on the job long enough to know you have some notion of taking care of me."

"I told you that; and that I am going to use you."

"I think we ought to let them know we are here, whispered Davenport uneasily.

But the girl's eyes were blazing.

"I don't like this," she whispered back. "It's your business they're discussing—and mine!"

So Goes It

By W. H.

The truth is that the bird that invented these bell bottom trousers, did so because he got tired trying to pull his britches on over his shoes.

The average man is making headway when he finds out that he is more or less of a dub, and that he hasn't got a corner on all the valuable knowledge in the world.

Sensations may come and go, but the Stokes scandal goes on forever.

There are a lot of high school students these days who are not on speaking terms with the dictionary. Their idea of a waste of time is to be compelled to consult Webster.

It has now developed that the nation was without a president for 47 minutes after Harding died. And the country didn't blow up either, despite the idea of a few pessimists, that that sort of thing would mean disaster.

Our government, with all that has been said against it, is a pretty well oiled, ball-bearing piece of machinery. And it is well to remember that when fault is found with an administration that very little of it comes from the "in's" and mostly all of it from the "out's." And it doesn't matter who is in or who is out. Adverse criticism of the government is not confused to any one party.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

Turn About.

One Mother Says:

I never refuse a favor which my child offers. Even though I do not care for the present, or if I want her to have it, I always accept, for I do not want her ever to feel that I am always the one who gives and she the one who takes. She enjoys everything she has much more when she can share it with mother. I began this policy when she was a very tiny youngster, offering me bites of her graham cracker.

WHAT TODAY MEANS

LIBRA.

Until 3 p. m. of this day the vibrations incline to hasty speech and action, and discord with those of the opposite sex, yet, if impulsiveness can be controlled the vibrations sharpen the intuition and perception, giving zest for progressive matters, with capacity for dexterous execution.

A child born today will be delicate and peevish in disposition, and always in trounse of its own making.

If today is the anniversary of your birth, you should be literary artistic and poetic in the extreme, and your fullest development will never be reached until you find some means of expressing the beauty that you feel.

Your talents for appreciation and expression are given to few and you should do your utmost to utilize them if only for the enjoyment for the finer things in life.

While your mind is predominantly spiritual, you have at the same time just enough of the practical in you to make a very fair bargainer, and if not a great success in business at least not a dupe.

You are religious in an aesthetic sense of the word. You like the pomp and ceremony and beauty of orthodox service, but you do not concern yourself with the morality of religion, or at least when it interferes with your own enjoyment.

You are probably delicate in constitution and always overtaxing your strength in an enthusiastic quest. Whether you get what you are after or not does not interest you as much as the pursuit itself.

Your interests are varied and many and for that reason very largely superficial, as is attested by your liking for stylish and rather garish clothes.

Emotionally you are both affectionate and amorous, but more usually the latter, and spiritually constant while materially inconstant.

NEAR EAST WORKER TELLS OF ORPHANS

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Charles V. Vickrey, general secretary of the Near East relief, just returned from a four months' economic survey overseas, told the executive committee of that organization at its first fall meeting here, that 95,000 children are included in the present refugee population of Greece, 50,000 of whom are orphans or half orphans. This number, he said, is in addition to the 14,000 in Near East relief orphanges.

Approximately 23,000 orphans have been moved by the Near East relief out of Turkey since the Smyrna disaster, and the relief organization has saved the lives of more than 100,000 refugees in the same period, Mr. Vickrey reported. He said that the present orphanage program is seriously threatened by the heavy expenses involved in the refugee emergencies of the past year to meet which more than $2,000,000 in excess of ordinary expenditures have been made.

The committee completed plans for the education and training of 50,000 children in its orphanages in all areas of operation, and authorized the appointment of committees to confer on this subject with religious, educational and welfare bodies throughout the United States.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

A LOST JOKE

(Farmers are insisting that since they have adopted city clothes they may no longer be pictured on the stage as "hicks.")

No more the brush on Reuben's chin,
No more his rustic clothes
And clumsy boots shall figure in
The latest Broadway shows.
The farmers take the magazines
And follow fashion now:
They're wearing spats and London hats
When following the plow.

When Reuben stacks the fodder shocks
And reaps the rippling rye
He wears a pair of silken socks
And a respondent tie.
Each evening sees white hard-boiled shirts
Upon the rustics' breasts;
They feed the shoats in dinner coats
And figured satin vests.

The stage has pictured him too long
With hayseed in his ears;
He's been the butt of jeering song
For more than twenty years.
But he's cast off his hickory shirts;
His hair is smooth and slick,
And he most earnestly asserts
That he is not a hick.

Alas for jaded city folk!
Henceforth they'll seek in vain
The well beloved ancient joke,
About the rural swain.
Soon all the jibes that made them roar
Will pass beyond recall
And they can't feel superior
To anything at all!

MONEY At Work

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

After a sharp decline in the market, brokers will say, "The technical position is good. What do they mean?

As the market advances many traders are tempted to take profits. The higher it goes, the stronger is the temptation to sell. The market becomes honeycombed with stop-loss orders, to insure profits.

It is easy to see that any decline will start a wave of profit-taking, with a subsequent drop in prices. In other words, the technical position is poor, as the market can be knocked down easily.

If we have a drastic decline, all of the stop-loss orders are cleaned up, the weakly margined accounts are wiped out, and stocks are in strong hands.

If there is to be any further decline at all, it will probably be orderly, but there is more chance of buyers coming into the market than sellers. The technical position is good, prices will go up easier than they will go down.

SIMMONS COLLEGE WILL ENTERTAIN

ABILENE, Texas, Oct. 7.—Simmons college is preparing to entertain the delegates of the Baptist Student Union of Texas, some six or seven hundred strong, in the fourth annual convention of that organization which meets with this school the last Friday, Saturday and Sunday of October. Arrangements have been made with Mr. O. Webb of the Texas and Pacific for a special train out of Fort Worth to Abilene for the occasion; delegates from the various Texas schools will join the special at Fort Worth.

Miss Elizabeth Fry of Abilene, heads the Simmons organization of the B. S. U. which is making extensive plans for the entertainment of the convention. Abilene chamber of commerce and other civic clubs of the city are backing the college students, and Abilene homes will be opened freely to the visiting college people.

Prominent speakers of the denomination will take part on the programs of the convention. Features being planned for the entertainment part of the meting are: a rodeo and barbecue, picnics and automobile rides. Moving pictures will probably be made of some of the gatherings.

Texas schools represented with B. S. U. organizations are: Texas University, A. and M. college, C. I. A., Baylor University, Rice Institute, Howard-Payne, Baylor college, East Texas Normal, North Texas Normal, Northwest Texas Normal, Wayland, Burleson, Rusk and Decatur colleges, College of Marshall, San Marcos Academy, Southwestern Bantist Theological Seminary, Baylor Medical college, State Medical college, and the Nurses Training Schools of the Dallas, Houston and Fort Worth Baptist hospitals.

PREPARATIONS FOR STATE CLEAN-UP

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 7.—Cities and towns of Texas are making elaborate preparations for observing this week as state-wide "cleanup" and fire prevention week, acording to reports received by State Fire Marshal G. W. Tilley. Mayors in a number of cities have issued proclamations calling upon the citizens to co-operate in the campaign.

Several state women's organizations have volunteered to assist in carrying on the campaign.

Fire prevention methods will be carried to the people through theatres, motion picture houses, club meetings, schools, radio broadcastings, and other methods, the state fire marshal said. Special speakers are being secured to appear at the gatherings and deliver speeches on fire prevention.

Inspections are being planned by city officials as part of the clean up campaign. This phase of the work, according to Fire Marshal Tilley, is one of the most important steps in fire prevention.

"This campaign is merely an effort to reduce the annual losses from fires in Texas," Mr. Tilley said today. "Fires cost the citizens of Texas last year nearly $15,000,000 and from this fact is can be seen that there is room for improvement against fire hazards. The school children of the state should be instructed in methods of prevention and fire drills. It is through the schools that we can accomplish the greatest work in the destruction of the fire evil to a great extent."

RULING GIVEN ON THE OIL TAX

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 7.—Except where gasoline is retailed directly by the refiner, payment of the one-cent per gallon sales tax is required to be paid by the broker handling the gasoline between the refiner and retailer, according to an opinion issued Saturday by the attorney general department. The ruling was requested by the Republic Oil company.

It held: When an oil company buys gasoline from a wholesaler and sells to the retail dealer or consumer, the oil company pays the tax. Where gasoline is bought from a broker in Texas and sold to the retailer, the oil company pays the tax, but where it is sold directly to the consumer, the tax is collected from the broker. When gasoline is bought by a wholesale company from a broker or middleman in another state, the oil company itself pays the tax on gasoline sold directly to the retailer. Where the gasoline is sold directly by the oil company to the consumer, the tax reverts back upon the broker.

These four conditions cover all the various forms in which gasoline is sold for consumption in Texas, it was pointed out. The law is complicated by provisions which permit the manufacture of gasoline in Texas for export shipment free of the one-cent tax.

STILL IN MESS SAY NEWSPAPERS

By International News Service.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Nearly all sections of the press today joined in assailing Foreign Secretary Lord Curzon's speech before the British imperial conference because of its lack of decisive reparations policy. Newspapers of all shades of opinion demanded action along definite lines, deploring the policy of "watchful waiting."

Some of the comment follows:

Daily Express.—"Lord Curzon leaves us exactly where we were—in a dickens of a mess."

Daily Chronicle.—(Personal organ of David Llyd George).—"Either our government has no ideas or it has not the nerve to express them."

Daily Herald.—"We are now in a stale way."

HAPPINESS

Make Sure The Light Is Right

lately? And taken Edward, junior, along for examination, and perhaps little sister, too?

Isn't it a shame the way young eyes are being affected? (To say nothing of those of older folk!) What can be the matter? It's hard, isn't it, to think that youth should be robbed of half the hough-and-tumble fun to which it is entitled because of the restrictions laid on it by spectacles and eye-glasses? And that ineffective vision should be allowed to forbid to later life so much beauty and achievement?

What can be the cause? You have, you think, provided in your home plenty of light, especially since the advent of the economical high-powered electrical lamp.

What is the answer? Is the artificial illumination of today linked up with the ever-increasing presence of eye-strain, with its undeniable effects upon physical, mental, and psychological balance?

Men of high repute in illuminating circles say it is. And manufacturers of lamps, illuminating engineers, designers of fixtures and shades and other lighting equipment are not only concentrating large energies upon the correction of faulty illumination; they are addressing audiences and writing books, and talking early and late to teach the nation that inefficient lighting and improperly directed and diffused lighting can and must be eliminated.

Two fundamental faults in illumination as it exists in most American homes today are gloom and glare. And the greater of these is glare.

When those who plan homes understand the value of scientific illumination to human welfare they will hasten to make lighting equipment harmonize with the powerful lamp which is the source of general home lighting, spending less lavishly for unessential luxuries and giving something approaching its true dignity to that artificial illumination under which average citizens spend 90% of their waking home hours.

Gloom and Glare

Gloom is descernible in insufficient actual light, because of either too few or too small lamps or too much heavy shading. Glare is light out of place; as dirt is matter out of place. It is a condition either of intense brightness of light-sources or of illuminated surfaces, whereby ocular discomforts or interference with vision occurs.

Glare of the first variety is present because a high-power lamp is placed within the line of vision, horizontal rays being particularly hard to endure.

In glare from illuminated surfaces the danger is less obvious, therefore more dangerous. It may come from highly polished paper, tops of desk or tables, walls, and so on, when light in unbroken rays travels directly to these surfaces and then reflect back to the eyes. Nature protects eyes from daylight-sources (sun and sky) by forehead, brows, lashe, and lids; the distress felt when horizontal rays, reflected from water or snow, strike under these shades, illustrating glare very well. It is claimed by today's oculists that 80% of all headaches are caused by glare. Most people know that a light too dim necessitates close-range vision, overtaxing eye-muscles and creating strain. But few people know that under glare the pupils of the eyes contract to shut out the stinging brilliancy, thus throwing upon other eye-muscles an excess share of visual labor.

In many homes where there might easily be the very best lighting, there is lighting so faulty as to be deplorable. Undoubtedly education in illumination needs will result in speedy replacement of these offending fixtures and lamps by others which meet the needs of health, comfort and fitness.

Among dealers in electrical equipment in one's community will be found also some who have studied illumination seriously and who can carry advice into installations. Local light companies are provided with literature that helps toward illumination, mental and physical. And when new equipment can be purchased at will, the dictates of art and decorative fitness may be freely indulged; for lovely fixtures which also conform to illumination requirements may be found by those who study their topic and apply to this purchase the same judgment and common sense as used in other buying operations.

Use Proper Shades

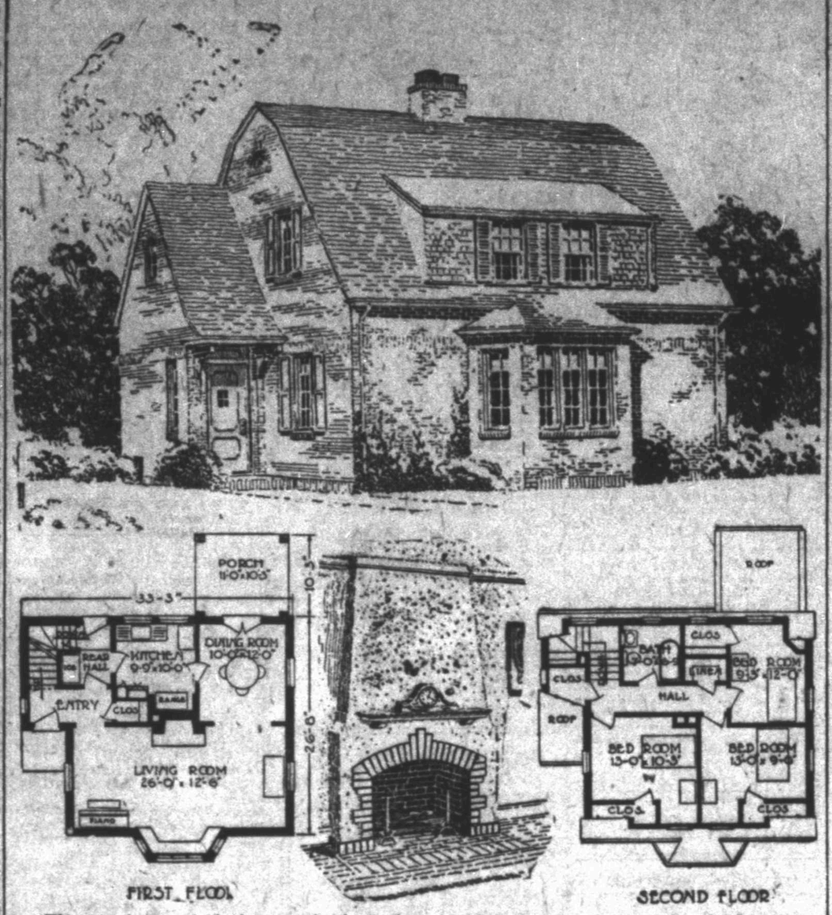

But in some instances, especially in rented homes, there will not be the inclination and perhaps not the ability to spend money as freely as would be necessary for this revolution. Still, even in rented homes lighting should be correct. The effort here must be to correct bad conditions, whenever this is possible, by altering the flow of light by means of the addition of such and reflectors as will remove the light-source from the field of vision without materially reducing its efficiency as an illuminant, adding such new units as may be necessary as the backbone of the lighting scheme.

For shading purposes translucent glass is a most satisfactory medium. It is true that other materials than glass have been immensely popular in recent year. Parchment, parchment-paper, and silk are notable examples of this. But, except in a few specially constructed pieces, silk an parchment are likely to cut down the efficiency of the lamp so materially that in excluding glare one has created gloom. There are exceptions, however, in some very new-type fixtures which combine silk with glass.

For lamps added to the lighting equipment of a home merely to express colormoods, or to furnish up some unsatisfactory spot, there may be indulged shades of any material desired, in colors or designs as barbaric or as artistic as one's taste decrees, provided they do not cause glare. But these should be recognized as ornaments, not as illumination; their presence should never be understood to fill the light needs of the room they occupy.

Finally, lighting equipment, if one is to realize full illuminating value from it, must be washable, and must be washed. Water is cheaper than wattage, even though it has been computed that the daily cost of average home illumination as about that of the cost of cream for one person's breakfast coffee.

A DUTCH COLONIAL SUGGESTION

The quaintness of the gambrel roof has made it universally popular. Here we have long lower rafters and short upper ones, giving a large, well-ventilated attic which will tend to keep the upper rooms cool in summer.

The plan has many points to recommend it. Entering at the side, under ample shelter, one finds a good-sized stair hall, off which is the coat closet. The unusually large living room occupies the entire front portion of the house. The attractive bay and the fireplace opposite are features not usually found in houses of this size. The dining room opens from the living room, beyond which is the porch at the rear for those who like the view of their garden. The kitchen, though directly connected with the dining room, is well isolated, has good light over the sink, and is equipped with cabinets instead of pantry. Note the convenience of the rear entrance.

Three good-sized, well-ventilated bedrooms with closets, a bath room, a linen press, and a storage closet constitute the second floor plan.

Ceiling heights: first floor 9 feet, second floor 8 feet; content 25,000 cubic feet.

A woman never has a chance to show her ability as a home maker until she has one of her own.

People who live year in and year out subjected to the tyranny of a grasping landlord are missing much of life's sweetness.

Gouging landlords are easily side-stepped, however; it is now possible for a man with even a small income, to have a little patch of mother earth with his own home on it.

Principal Living Room Pieces

You will favor the idea of having each new season bring something new to your home, and yet there are some furnishings that are always in season, and that in no season can you afford to be without.

We refer in particular to the principal pieces of living room furniture.

You have known people who were always doing something to their living rooms, without getting anywhere. Ten to one, their principal pieces were not right, from the standpoint of beauty and usefulness.

There must be some group in every living room that just naturally draws us into it and begs us to linger. Current house plans have led us to choose the overstuffed suite and its companion pieces as the most satisfactory principal group for the average living room in the modern home.

Usually, the fireplace serves as the architectural magnet of the room. So the overstuffed davenport gravitates thither, and several chairs with the long davenport table follow. A lamp is needed on the table and a mirror or colorful picture hung over the fireplace to tie the whole group together.

How many things can be done with this group! The children curl up on the divan during the day to tell stories. Then dad comes home and rests in the wing chair while he glances over the evening paper. Here, after dinner, the whole family gathers, to visit and read, play cards or sew. If this is company night, entertaining is a pleasure, for the circle is large enough to include everybody. Provided the night grows so stormy that the guest stays overnight, it is a simple matter to put him to bed on the davenport, which with its mattress and springs rests him as comfortably as any downy couch.

You can enjoy these pieces equally well, the year round, by using the original upholstery covering during snowy months, and slipping on covers of cool cretonne for spring and summer. Why live another day without some such circle of furnishings?

Baked Tomatoes

6 or more firm ripe tomatoes.
1 chopped green pepper.
1 tablespoon chopped chicken
1 tablespoon chopped ham.
1 cup thick soup stock.
1 cup fresh bread crumbs.
Salt and pepper to taste.

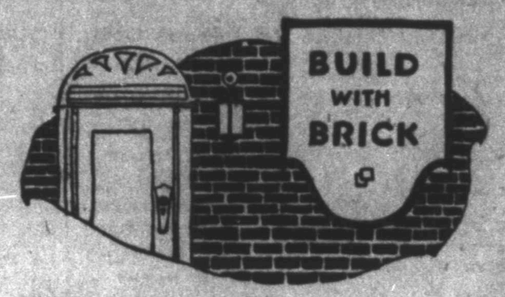

Wash and cut out centers of tomatoes, saving the hearts to mix in with the filling. Fry the pepper in butter until soft, add the chicken, ham and the soup stock. Into this stir the chopped tomato hearts, bread crumbs and enough salt and pepper to season spicily.

With this mixture fill the tomato shells, dot over the top buttered crumbs and bake in a quick oven until nicely browned.

Flowers

If flowers are selected that will not bloom for the entire season, care should be taken to set in the same box others which will carry on the work of flowering after the first are gone, so that the box may never lack for color. The life of every plant, of every course, may be prolonged by the careful plucking of the faded flowers.

There is nothing more fascinating than the creating of the home-that-is-to-be—the gradual working out and refinement of your and your architect's plans—until finally you can say "this is ours! this reflects us!"

HOWARD PAYNE ENROLLMENT BIG

By The Associated Press

BROWNWOOD, Tex., Oct. 7.—Enrollment at Howard Payne college this year has passed that of any previous fall session, according to estimates obtained from the registrar. The enrollment now has passed the 650 mark, and is expected to reach 1,000 before the close of the winter term, it is said.

DETROIT GETS CHILD MEETING

Health Association to Convene There October 15 and 17

Official announcement has been made by the United States government of its interests in the deliberations of the forthcoming first annual meeting of the American Child Health association, which is to be held in Detroit from October 15 to 17, inclusive.

The United States commissioner of education has called a conference of health authorities and educators interested in school health supervision, to be held in Detroit with the cooperation of the association on the evening of Tuesday, October 16. Many of the more than six hundred delegates to the association's meeting are expected to attend this conference, whose chairman will be Miss Harriet Wedgewood, acting chief of the division of physical education and school hygiene in the United States bureau of education.

Dr. William DeKline, health officer of Saginaw, Mich., will open the meeting and among the speakers will be Dr. Arnold Gesell, professor of child hygiene at Yale university who will speak on "Pre-School Health Work and the Public School System," and Dr. Frances S. Bradley, director of child hygiene of the Arkansas department of health, whose subject will be "Some Phases of the Rural Problem." In School Health Work." Dr. Bradley formerly was affiliated with the U. S. children's bureau.

The American Child Health association, with Herbert Hoover as its president, was organized last winter by the merging of the American Child Hygiene association and the Child Health organization of America, two organizations which for years has been active in this field. Its purpose is to provide to individuals and organizations interested in child health timely and useful information on the subject. All phases of the work are included in its program, from prenatal through the pre-school and school ages.

All sections of the United States and some foreign countries will be represented at the Detroit conference and authorities of international prominence will address the delegates.

TWO DEMOS HOPES MEET FIRST TIME

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7. — Two prominent United States senators and possible rivals for the democratic presidential nomination of 1924 met here for the first time a day or two ago. They were Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama, an avowed candidate for the honor of being the party's standard-bearer and Senator Royal S. Copeland, looked upon by many as the most likely winner of the honor. Copeland was elected a year ago and has just taken up his duties. Senator Underwood has been absent for several months, first in Europe and then at his home in Alabama.

Rainbow Hues for evening, Distinguished Black Negligee

The fashion pageant of today shows gowns and wraps in infinite variety; variety not only in style but in color. Black continues a prime favorite and rainbow hues abound.

Black blue and brown lead for daytime wear, but in the evening milady emerges like a butterfly from a chrysalis—in a riot of color. Metal cloths, beads and other shining and glistening things make an alluring radiance.

The illustration on the left is an example of this type of evening gown. The material is chiffon over silver cloth. The chiffon is beaded in delicate colors. The long, Grecian looking blouse has beaded straps crossing the low cut neck and the waist is held loosely in with a girdle of rhinestones.

In the center is the wrap worn with the gown. It suggests a Chinese mandarin coat. A rose color silk velvet is used and it is brocaded in an elaborate pattern in blue and gold.

With these two gorgeous garments is shown a distinguished negligee of black brocade. The long, loose, slit sleeves are of chiffon as is the ruffly collar. Both are picoted in gold, relieving the black.

These costumes are good illustrations of the fact recently demonstrated by the moving picture producer, that the feminine figure has, through a number of corsetless years, reverted to the classic contour of 2,000 years ago. Designers of gowns for costume photoplays tried to put the modern girls into the stays of the seventeenth century. It simply couldn't be done. Since the days of the wasp-waisted ladies of 1750 the figures of women have undergone radical changes and now more closely resemble the ancient Greek ideal.

Murchison to Sing Part of the Prince In "Glorious Girl"

Ivan Murchison is to sing the part of the "Prince" in the "Glorious Girl," which the Business Women's club is presenting Thursday and Friday nights, and those who have seen the little Persian garden cut-in put together declare that it is one of the most beautiful scenes in the play.

Mr. Murchison sings "The Persian Rose," his support in the sketch including Josephine Fisk as a Persian princess, her father Gordon Harris, and a soothsayer, in the person of Sidney Waghorne. Young Mr. Waghorne, by the way sent the audience at last year's production of "The Cameo Girl," into gales of laughter with his extraordinary clever interpretation of one of the three "Wise Men," who were searching for the girl of the cameo. Mr. McKenney, director of the last year's play and director of "The Glorious Girl" this year, reminded the talent committee on his return this year that he had asked for Mr. Waghorne in the cast again.

The Persian garden scene is said to be magnificently staged, with cloth of silver and amethyst velvet curtains and truly gorgeous scenery. The Harrington-Adams company, which has already produced, under the direction of Mr. McKenney, two popular musical comedies presented by the Business Women's club has certainly played square with the public in the matter of stage settings in those towns where they produce plays, having sent some of the best scenery here ever put on the stage at the Palace theatre by any company, including large road shows.

Police Search For Boy Missing Since Saturday

Police officers are conducting an extensive search for 15-year-old Howard Robinson who came with relatives to the fair Saturday afternoon and was lost and has not returned to his home at the diversion dam yet.

Robinson's father was at the police station Sunday afternoon and said he left the boy for about an hour. The boy did not show up at the appointed meeting place at the fair grounds. His father said the boy was in bad health due to an attack of influenza three years ago. Relatives of the boy and officers are conducting search all over the county.

Firemen Stop Early Morning Fire

A blaze in the store room of the Salvation Army building on Seventh street brought out the fire department Sunday morning extinguishing the fire at once and no damage being done to the building.

A lot of clothing which the Salvation Army had collected was burned, this being the total loss.

ELECTRA BOY LOOKED FOR HERE

Police officers were notified Sunday of the disappearance at Electra of Royce Giles, 18 years old, who left his home at that place Saturday in a Ford car and has not returned.

Officials of surrounding cities have been notified to look out for Giles.

ABRAHAM KAY THEME SUNDAY

Compares Biblical Character With Modern Cowman

Now, this man Abraham. I used to think, as a boy, that Abraham was a desert sheik. That he lived in a tent and was a pretty good cow man. I did not know, then, as I know now, that he was a great, great king, and that his reputation was known and his name a household word from the shores of the Nile to where the Ganges comes out of the white mountains in Asia. He was a very, very great man in his day, and in all time. He differs from other men in the history of religion, in that he started out with a conception of a true God not made with hands. He starts out with a religion that shines with its own light.

Over in Egypt, at that time, they were worshiping Isis and Osiris, and the sacred bull and the crocodile and the beetle. In his own country, they worshipped the moon, and the sun, and the starry hosts of heaven. Far back in the mountains of Persia, they worshipped fire and kept their sacred fires burning from time immemoria. But, here comes Abraham with a God not made with hands, not intangible, but living above us and beyond us, and a God of righteousness, and justice. That was Abraham's great contribution to the world. That is, whilst not the first of that kind of religion, was the first fine conception of it that was carried out into the world; a religion and a God that made light.

Now, with all his wealth, with all his greatness, he did not care for these things. Abraham did not worry about anything, Men. I want you to read his story. It does not take long to read the whole history in Genesis. You can do it in a half hour. You ought to know every word in it. For instance, when he goes out to the battle of the kings: Why, he captured as many kings as there are in the world now, and brought them back home with him, and one of the kings was a pretty big man, himself, and he said a fine thing, this other king. He said: "You give me the people, Abraham, and you can take the goods." And, you know, there is something in that. If I could have the hearts of these men here, and the love of these men in Wichita Falls and the respect of the men and of all of them, you can have the goods. That was what this other heathen king said. He was a big man in his day. Now, what does Abraham say? Some of our people would say: "Well I want a commission on that." Maybe I would say: "What will my fee be, this has been an important matter." They had captured a whole country,—five or six countries; they had brought back the spoils, and they were immense beyond calculation. Now, when this heathen king said that to Abraham, what does Abraham say? Ah! That great man, it is written right there in the Bible, says: "You cannot give me even one shoestring."

The United States, thank God, was that way at the peace conference. And if at least some of the other nations had gone into that peace conference as our nation went in, and asking for nothing, Europe would be humming with industry today and the world would be brighter and better.

Abraham says: "No, I will not taken even a shoestring, out of all this stuff that you piled up here as the result of indemnity and war.

Ah, men, Abraham knew, as you must know, that there is some money that you must not touch, and that there is some wealth that is not a blessing. Could you say that? Could I? Yes, we could, but would you say that? Would I? I do not know.)

Now, this man Abraham, in another place, his cowboys get in a row with the cowboys of Lot over the water holes. A thing that has often happened right here, in Texas. And, they come to him about it. Now, Abraham was not afraid to move. He could get along any place. Don't you wish you had that much courage, O, some of you? So, Lot came to see him about it. "What are we going to do?" He have got so many cattle here and our cowboys are so tough they can't get long. What are we going to do?" says Lot. And, that great man who had refused a shoestring as an indemnity for war, what does he say? He says: "Now, Lot, the whole country is here before you, and, if you want to go to the right, I will go to the left, and, if you want to go to the left, I will go to the right. Help yourself." What are you going to do with a man like that? Too big to quarrel with. Too generous to argue with you. Yet, I know a man once that brought a lawsuit for a skillet. And, some of you fellows would fall out with your neighbor over $1.80. We do that, sometimes. That's when we are little. But, here is Abraham, willing to move all his herds, and all his flocks and go over this way, or over that way, either one. I tell you, when you strike a big man like that, it makes you ashamed, and makes me ashamed.

I learned long ago, as you ought to learn, not to quarrel and argue over small matters. Of course, this was not a small matter. This was a big matter. I send a man a bill for $5. He comes in and says: "Why, I paid that." It is probable that he is right. I say: "Alright, go on, we will chalk it off." That is the way to handle those things. Don't be grieved about that $5, but go work for some more. The man might be right, at that.

Why was Abraham willing to go to the east or to the west, to the left or to the right? Why was he? Because he had faith in God and faith in himself. Let me say something to you about a man's faith in God. It is a hard thing that I am going to say to you. You will find everywhere that the man that hasn't got faith in God, hasn't got any in you. And, the man without faith in God is the man that hasn't got any in himself. And he is wanting in courage. Perhaps, not the courage of a prize-fighter. It kind of upset me when I heard that of all the people who set out to go to war, the prize-fighting fraternity sent fewer men than any class of people on earth. But, I am talking about moral courage. That is much greater than the prize-fighter's physical courage—much greater. He had faith in God, and faith in himself, and he didn't worry about the future.

Do you know what put these white hairs in my temples, and in yours? It has never been the fix that I am in now, the troubles of today, or the perplexities of today, but, what has made my hair white (and, some of you me might have white hair), is something that is going to happen next week, or next year, and may never happen. Now, Abraham left the future to take care of itself, and left it to God. Ah, if I could just do that. How much I have suffered about the future. And, what could I do about the future? Is it not written that we do not know what a day shall bring forth?

When the Savior was talking about that question, He said: "Consider the lilies, they toil not neither do they spin." They don't take any care at all, yet, Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like these. We worry too much about the future. Abraham did not. A man like that can go out and make the future. Can you go out and make it? Have you got faith enough? Courage, strength enough? Can you go out and make a future? He knew he could.

Now, there is something different about Abraham and us. What was it? Read that little story of him in Genesis. It doesn't run through but a few chapters. But, you will never find Abraham going anywhere where he didn't erect an altar. Everywhere he erected an altar to God. Do you do that? Do you commune with Him? Do you know Him? He knew Him. It is written everywhere in the Bible, when talking about Abraham, it always calls him the friend of God. Are you that? Is He your friend? Have you ever built an altar? Here's humanity away back yonder, thousands of years ago, struggling out from among the heathens, coming out into a new land, and we see the smoke of their altars, and the smoke of their sacrifice to God as a beginning of that religion which has its fruition in you and in your time. Do you believe in it as they did?

What do I mean when I say, do you believe in your religion? Let us concede for the moment that everybody here is religious, and you say that you believe in it. How do you believe in it? Is it the very sheet anchor of your soul, and the very yardstick by which you measure the duties of life, or is it a mere naked belief? Does your belief bear fruit? That is the question that I am asking you. Has Abraham's belief and faith borne fruit?

I do not think that I could go to heaven, that is, if I should be fortunate enough to go there, and take any pride in saying that I was religious down here on earth, because I feel that they are sure to ask me, "What form did your religion take?" "What fruit did you gather and what fruit did humanity gather from the tree of religion that you planted and cultivated?" They are pretty apt to ask you, and to ask me, "Did your religion help other men?" "Was your religion a power for good in the community where you lived? Or, was it just a simple, selfish belief that you held for yourself and not for others?"

It might be that you and I can never be great like Abraham was, but we can have his faith, we can have his courage, and we can go out into the world and face the future as quietly and as calmly as he did, and let the future take care of itself and live our religion day by day, one hour, one minute, at a time. I think that is one of the most beautiful contemplations in life, that I do not have to live it all today. If I have work to do, I will be given time to do it. If I have tasks to perform, those tasks are not all written for the same day and same week, but they run for a long period, and there is time to do that which we wish to do, and opportunity to do it. Let's go out and face that opportunity and live right: Not next week, nor next year, but now, and today.

LEGION POLICIES TO BE DECIDED

Convention Will Handle Air Disarmament And Immigration

By The Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS—The American Legion, at its national convention in San Francisco, October 15-19, will take a stand on numerous questions of international and national policy as well as problems relating purely to the affairs of veterans, according to reports received at legion national headquarters here.

One of the principal issues to come before the San Francisco gathering is the question of the convocation of an international air disarmament conference. A poll, taken of all the United States senators, congressmen, governors, newspaper editors, college presidents and other prominent citizens, expressed overwhelming indorsement of the legion's proposal to hold an international gathering in Washington to reduce military air forces. The suggestion also was approved by the Interallied Veterans' Federation convention in Brussels, which represented the views of fighters from eight allied powers.

Recommendations made by a number of state conventions are that the national body should continue its campaign for the conference until President Coolidge agrees to invite the European nations to confer.

Legion men hope to induce the president to extend an invitation for the gathering, and they plan definitely to consolidate legion opinion and action at the national convention.

A proposal to suspend all immigration to this country for a period of five years appears certain to receive the consideration of legion men.

Americanization for foreigners already in America is proposed in a number of resolutions to be presented at the national gathering. It has been suggested also that the legion support a bill providing for the deportation of all foreigners who have not become citizens within five years after they come to this country.

The Iowa department will propose a resolution protesting the recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States. Other departments have adopted similar resolutions.

National and state laws to prevent desecration of the national flag and to insure that it be flown from every school house will be the subject of other resolutions. Liberation of the so-called political prisoners also will be considered.

Adjusted compensation will also come before the national gathering. Almost all state conventions held to date have expressed approval of the bonus measure. The welfare of disabled veterans will be considered in detail, and the convention is expected to consider the retirement of disabled emergency officers on the same status as those of the regular army.

Another issue to be discussed will be the care of orphans of deceased veterans of the war.

Various state organizations will bring b ore the national body a resolution favoring American participation in an international court of justice. The convention last year endorsed the report of the Interallied Veterans' Federation, including a statement favoring the proposed court, but the legion has taken no definite action on the specific proposal.

Creation of a standing committee in the house of representatives to consider all veterans' legislation is the subject of another resolution to be presented.

Prisoner Saws To Freedom From Co. Jail

Sawing his way from his cell on the second floor of the county jail, Tom caped sometime during the night Yancy, charged with burglary, es- Saturday, sheriff officers discovered early Sunday morning.

No indication as to how Yancy got his tools with which to saw the cell bars has been found by the officers yet. Yancy has lived here many years and is known by all local peace officers. Sheriff Pat Murphy said Sunday, an extensive search for the escaped prisoner is being made and that Yancy will be re-captured soon.

Only one other escape has been made from the county jail this year, this being Henry Toussaint, convicted of murder, who escaped soon after Sheriff Murphy came into office Toussaint was captured a few days later.

Three Girls Thought Lost, Father Irate

A worried father appeared at the police station about 2 Sunday morning and reported that his two daughters, about 13 and 15 years of age, and a neighbor girl, whom he had given money at the fair grounds to return home on the street car, had not made their appearance.

Police made a search for the girls. Early Sunday morning the three girls returned to their homes and said they had been riding with three young men.

The father with aid of the police is searching for the young men. The father said Sunday he was going to prosecute them.

RASH MOTOREST WANTED BY POLICE

The motorist who Sunday morning tore down the barriers that had been placed in front of the new paved block at Seventeenth and Burnett street and drove across the newly paved thoroughfare before the concrete is settled, will have to pay dearly for his rashness, police officers said last night.

The police have the man's number and said they expected no difficulty in running him down.
