Eight people die in plane crash

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — A commuter plane carrying 17 people crashed in a mountainous area near here, killing eight and forcing survivors, including one carrying a toddler, to wade through waist-deep snow to summon help.

The nine survivors of Tuesday night's crash were transported to Mercy Medical Center with injuries that ranged from lacerations, frostbite and hypothermia to head and internal injuries, hospital spokeswoman Jane Brown said today.

Two people, including a 23-month-old girl, were treated and released, five were in good condition, one was is serious condition and one was critically injured, she said.

Rescuers were led to the twin-engine, turboprop's wreckage by the footprints of one a survivor who walked about 1½ miles through snow measuring up to 4 feet before reaching a road, authorities said.

"It took us over an hour to even get personnel to them," La Plata Sheriff Bill Gardner said.

Snow tractors and a bulldozer were used to cut a trail through the scrub oak and brush along the rolling hills and hummocks.

Four people trapped inside the wreckage were alive when rescuers arrived, but two died as they were being brought out, said Keith Rousch, a member of the sheriff's volunteer search and rescue team. The other seven survivors walked from the plane.

He said rescuers talked to all four of those trapped. "I don't recall any discussion of the crash," Rousch said. "They were more cold and hurt ...But they managed to hang on under very difficult conditions."

Greg Feith, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator, said it appeared the plane traveled a substantial distance from the point of impact to where it came to a rest.

Feith, who was at the crash site before dawn, said it was hard to discern much about the crash because of darkness and snowfall, adding that he planned to return to the site later today.

However, he said, the tail was relatively intact and the last six seats of the plane were in place. From the midwing forward, the plane "is rolled up in a ball and pushed aft to the trailing edge of the wing," he said.

One wing was wrapped on top of the plane, Feith said.

The plane was carrying 15 passengers and two crew members to Durango from Denver when it went down at 7:30 p.m., 10 miles east of Durango in light snowfall, said Bruce Hicks, a spokesman for Continental Airlines in Houston.

The plane's last communication indicated that it was cleared for final approach at the Durango airport, about five miles away, Feith said.

The craft is owned by Colorado Springs-based Trans Colorado, which leases planes and crew to Rocky Mountain Airways, a Continental subsidiary that flies under the name of Continental Express.

The airplane that flies the route is a Swearingen Metro, Continental Express officials said, which holds up to 19 passengers.

Prices rise 4.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, climbing at their fastest pace in six years, rose 4.4 percent in 1987, the government said today. At fault were rebounding energy costs and the plunge in the value of the dollar.

Worse yet, last year's inflation was four times the 1.1 percent rate posted for 1986. Still, the gain in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was considered moderate by most economists and fell far below the double-digit inflation rates that ushered in the 1980s.

One piece of good news: Retail prices ended the year on a modest note, up just 0.1 percent in December, the smallest monthly gain since July 1986. The index, based on a hypothetical selection of goods and services, had risen 0.3 percent in November and 0.4 percent in October.

While the rate for 1986, the lowest in more than two decades, had been paced by the collapse in world oil prices, much of the 1987 increase reflected the partial rebound in energy costs.

Energy prices rose 8.2 percent in 1987, regaining a portion of their 19.7 percent 1986 loss.

In December, energy costs fell 1.1 percent, including a 2.2 percent decline for gasoline, a 1.5 percent fall for heating oil and a 0.2 percent drop for natural gas and electricity.

For the year, gasoline prices were up 18.6 percent; heating oil costs gained 12.9 percent; natural gas and electricity charges were up 0.3 percent.

Food and beverage costs were up 3.5 percent for all of 1987, compared to 3.7 percent for 1986.

In December, those prices rose 0.5 percent, led by a record

■ Local cost of living figures — 7B

72.4 percent in lettuce costs. Over the last two month, lettuce prices have doubled because of disease and bad weather in California and Arizona.

Minus the volatile food and energy categories, prices for consumer goods rose 3.5 percent in 1987, compared to 1.4 percent in the preceding year. This category was up 0.1 percent in December.

The rise in goods minus food items and energy reflects the dramatic fall in the dollar's value during 1987. Over the year, the dollar lost 25 percent of its value against the Japanese yen and 20 percent against the German mark.

Overall, consumer prices last year showed the highest rate of inflation since 1981, when it was 8.9 percent. With the exception of last year's surprisingly low pace, inflation has ranged from 3.8 percent to 4.0 percent since 1981.

The companion Producer Price Index, released last week, showed that wholesale prices rose a more modest 2.2 percent in 1987.

The producer index is lower because it reflects only prices received by U.S. manufacturers and farmers for their products and does not include two of the fastest-rising categories in the CPI — services and imported goods.

Abortion supported, poll shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The public is firmly committed to keeping abortion legal but many state legislatures are trying to restrict access to the procedure, according to survey results released today.

A poll commissioned by the National Abortion Rights Action League found that 56 percent of the electorate support "keeping it legal for women to be able to have abortions when they decide to have one."

The poll was conducted last month by Democratic consultant Harrison Hickman. It also found that 77 percent of voters agree that "abortion is a private issue between a woman, her family and her doctor. The government should not be involved."

NARAL released the Hickman poll and its own survey of state legislative activities regarding abortion to mark the 15th anniversary of Roe vs. Wade, the Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion. The anniversary is Friday.

The public opinion poll results mirror surveys taken since 1972.

But "reproductive liberty is in jeopardy in numerous states because state legislatures are not responsive to public opinion on this issue," NARAL said.

"Many hostile and intransigent state legislatures have continued to deny that their female citizens ought to be permitted to control their fertility."

The group said state handling of abortion ranges from Oregon and Washington, which "allow maximum exercise of reproductive rights," to Minnesota, Missouri and Pennsylvania, "which constantly test the limits of allowable regulation."

Twenty-five states and the District of Columbia have laws more restrictive than those allowed by the Supreme Court, most of them at least partially enjoined and some declared unconstitutional by state attorney generals, the group said.

Thirty-five states require parental involvement in a minor's access to abortion and only 14 states pay for unrestricted abortions for Medicaid patients — six of them under court order.

In addition, the group said, four states — Idaho, Illinois, Louisiana and South Dakota — have laws saying abortion will become illegal if Roe vs. Wade is overturned; the laws would take effect automatically. Another eight states have enacted statements of intent to protect fetal life to the maximum extent allowed by law.

The group said those 12 states would likely act quickly if the Supreme Court gave states more control over abortion. At the other extreme, NARAL said, Alaska, Hawaii, Oregon, Vermont and Washington have pro-choice majorities in their legislatures and would likely protect reproductive options.

NARAL said the addition of conservative Judge Anthony Kennedy to the Supreme Court, expected later this year, probably means states will have more regulatory power over abortion.

Coalition created to open up state, business communication

From Staff Reports

A newly created coalition of state agencies — the Texas Business Council — will conduct a meeting with Permian Basin employers May 26 in Midland.

Information on topics ranging from workmen's compensation to insurance rates will be discussed at the 2½-hour session, said Mary Scott Nabers, commissioner representing employers with the Texas Employment Commission.

The council made up of the Texas Employment Commission, Department of Commerce, Industrial Accident Board, the State Department of Insurance, Department of Agriculture and State Treasurer's office is an attempt to open up communication between the state and businesses, Ms. Nabers said.

"If they understand the laws and procedures of the taxing agencies, then it's much less costly," she said.

The location of the meeting has not been set, but employers wishing to attend are asked to call TEC's Midland office on 501 N. Loraine St at 682-9421.

Unemployment tax increase expected

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Nabers

State officials visiting Midland Tuesday said they expect that an increase as high as 270 percent in unemployment taxes will come as an unpleasant surprise to many area employers.

"The concept behind the law is good. Unfortunately it places the burden on employers," said Mary Scott Nabers, commissioner representing employers with the Texas Employment Commission.

The tax will double for most Texas employers, with the hike ranging from $112.80 per employee each year to $706 per employee each year, said Ms. Nabers who is on a two-day tour of West Texas to explain the increase.

Before the State Legislature approved the tax increase last year, unemployment taxes ran from $30.80 cents per employee to $590.80 per employee each year, she said.

About 60 percent of the state's employers paid the minimum rate of $30.80 per employee and will see their taxes increase about $82 per employee, Ms. Nabers said.

According to Vonda Nichols, staff attorney at the Texas Employment Commission's Austin office, employers in 1987 paid an average of $121 per employee. This average is expected to rise to $230 this year.

Texas Instrument's personnel director, Keith Thomas, said, "I don't think there will be any company that will be happy about it."

However, because the corporation has had few layoffs and therefore filed fewer claims with the employment commission, the tax shouldn't hurt too badly, he said.

"If we had a large amount of terminations, it would affect us," Thomas said.

The tax hike will cut deeply into the budgets of many oil and gas corporations that had to lay off employees.

According to a personnel employee with TMBR Drilling, the company's unemployment claims are high and their tax rate will jump from 4.13 percent of their gross per quarter to 8.44 percent of the company's gross each quarter.

While the taxes have jumped dramatically, the maximum benefits for laid off workers will remain at $210 a week for 26 weeks, Ms. Nabers said.

The increase was unavoidable because of the state's high unemployment, which ranked sixth in the nation last year, Ms. Nabers said.

Massive layoffs in the state caused the commission's trust fund to dry up, and it remains $580 million in the red.

Fitzwater accuses senator of advocating Contra surrender

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's chief spokesman today accused a Democratic critic of administration Central America policy of advocating a surrender by the Contra rebels resisting the Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, bristling under questioning by reporters about statements Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., made about the administration's new push for additional aid for the Contras, said the senator "was all over television...saying we just don't want peace and we don't want the peace plan, and that's outrageous and it's not true, and I'm not going to stand for it."

Earlier, Dodd, appearing on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said the administration "ought to at least see whether or not that peace process can succeed" before it presses for more Contra aid.

But Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams said today that the administration was resuming airdrops of weapons to the Contras because the rebels are pushing the Sandinistas "'to begin what might be a peace process."

"If we walk away from that now, then the peace process is going to collapse overnight," Abrams said. "... Our view is that pressure on the Sandinistas has brought them to the table. Continued pressure gives us the possibility of forcing them to make a settlement."

Asked today whether the administration was trying to sabotage the peace plan in Central America, Fitzwater replied, "That's absolutely untrue. What we want is a continuation of the Central American peace process."

"The Democrats, Chris Dodd and others, they want a surrender," he said. "They think surrender is the best way to achieve peace. We disagree."

Fitzwater said Dodd "accuses the administration of not supporting the peace plan and not wanting peace. That's an outrageous statement. We simply disagree with the message. We believe a strong resistance force is the best pressure for peace. Chris Dodd does not. He thinks that if they lay down their arms, that Daniel Ortega will do all the right things, and we doubt it."

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland International Airport is expecting fair skies tonight with a low in the upper teens. Winds should blow at five to 10 mph from the north to northwest.

Thursday's skies are expected to stay fair with a high predicted in the the lower 40s. Winds will shift slightly from the west to southwest at five to 15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 50 was 24 degrees cooler than the record high of 74 set for that date in 1986. Today's low of 19 was eight degrees warmer than the record low of 11 set for this date in 1985.

STATE

Cold, dry air was expected to continue to flow across Texas through Thursday.

Some clouds were forecast in extreme West Texas, the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas and in the Panhandle, but most of the state was to have clear skies.

Some light snow flurries were forecast over extreme West Texas today.

It was cloudy over the Trans-Pecos area at dawn today and some low level clouds were reported over extreme West Texas and in the Wichita Falls area. Skies were clear over the rest of the state.

NATION

A storm that lashed the South with deadly tornadoes and deposited more than a foot of snow on the Plains moved northeastward into the Great Lakes region today.

The band of heavy snow barreled into southern Michigan after high accumulations were reported in Wisconsin and southeast Minnesota. A snow advisory was also in effect for northwestern Illinois.

Snow accumulations early today included 9 inches in Minneapolis and Green Bay, Wis., 20 inches in Mullen, Neb., 16 in Goodland, Kan., and 11 in North Platte, Neb.

The storm also scoured the Southeast with severe thunderstorms and heavy rain and left freezing rain in parts of the Northeast.

Three tornadoes struck western Tennessee on Tuesday, killing at least five people, injuring dozens and causing widespread damage. Twisters were also reported in Alabama and Mississippi.

Today's forecast called for rain across the Pacific Northwest, with snow over the higher elevations through western Montana; snow from southern Minnesota across Iowa, Wisconsin, upper Michigan, western lower Michigan, no..hern Illinois and northern Maine; and rain over the remainder of the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley through the southern two-thirds of New England and the northern Atlantic coast, eastern Maryland, eastern Virginia, the Carolinas, eastern Tennessee and northern Georgia.

Storm system whips up tornadoes

Associated Press

A huge storm system pushed into the Great Lakes today after unleashing a swarm of tornadoes that killed five people in the South and stranding hundreds of motorists in the Plains in snowdrifts up to 14 feet high.

"I don't see anything that can be salvaged — I mean, nothing at all," said Richard Cannon, whose two brothers-in-law were killed when a twister ripped away his house in Fayette County, Tenn.

"There might be a few shirts and pants down the hill that we can get up, but that's about it."

The storm system, which caused an estimated $72 million in damage to Southern California and Mexico, packed heavy snow that shut down schools, offices, airports and hundreds of miles of highways in the Plains on Tuesday.

At least 27 deaths have been blamed on bad weather this week, including 10 people killed in five plane crashes blamed on fog in Arkansas, California, Illinois, Missouri and Texas.

"The only thing that's moving out here is snowplows and snowmobiles," said Carrie Rice of Lake Andes, S.D., where more than a foot of new snow fell.

The snow should extend today from southern Minnesota across Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan and northern Illinois, changing to rain over the remainder of the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley through southern New England, the National Weather Service said.

"It's part of the same weather system," said Lyle Alexander of the weather service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo. "A lot of moisture is being brought up from the Gulf of Mexico into the entire system."

Storm runoff flooded a Lake Michigan shoreline drive in Milwaukee, Wis., because frozen soil wouldn't absorb the rain, forcing police to halt traffic.

Three tornadoes roared through western Tennessee on Tuesday, killing at least five people, injuring dozens and causing widespread damage. Hardest hit was Fayette County, east of Memphis, where three died.

That tornado followed a 22-mile path as wide as three-quarters of a miles, said Chip Ragon of the county Emergency Management Agency. Up to 40 homes were heavily damaged or destroyed, he said.

Another twister cut a 10-mile swath through northern Alabama, injuring 26 people, including a child who was pinned under a house trailer. Gov. Guy Hunt ordered National Guardsmen to aid emergency workers and protect against looting in a subdivision where about 20 homes were destroyed.

Tornadoes also caused damage and injured at least one person in northern Mississippi, and high winds badly damaged about 30 homes and injured seven in Arkansas.

Thirty people were evacuated as flooding hit the section of West Memphis, Ark., that was inundated on Christmas.

In the Plains, 56 mph gusts piled snow in road-blocking drifts from Colorado across Nebraska and Kansas and a corner of Wyoming to South Dakota, where police closed 120 miles of I-90 west of Sioux Falls and about 80 miles of Interstate 29 north of the city.

Ten-foot drifts shut down schools, businesses and major highways across northeastern Colorado, South Dakota, Wyoming and Nebraska. In southeastern Wyoming, state employees were told to stay home Tuesday because of near-blizzard conditions.

"We are advised by the city and county that they didn't think they would be able to keep up with the blowing and drifting snow with their plow crews," said Dennis Curran, aide to Wyoming Gov. Mike Sullivan.

In Iowa, Republican presidential candidate Jack Kemp got caught in the storm at Sioux City and canceled today's appearances in Council Bluffs.

Runways were closed Tuesday evening at Minneapolis-St. Paul airport after nearly 7 inches of snow fell, while a strong crosswind cut departures at Denver's Stapleton International Airport from the normal 72 per hour to 30.

Motels and truck stops opened their doors to hundreds of stranded travelers in Nebraska, Wyoming, South Dakota and Colorado, where two busloads of children from Kansas City, Kan., took refuge while returning from a ski trip.

"We have a back dining room where some people are sleeping on the floor, or sleeping in the booths," said Mary Jane Hoffman, restaurant manager of the Rip Griffin Truck Stop in Limon, Colo.

Corpus Christi man among those killed in Colorado crash

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A retired Corpus Christi businessman was among the eight people killed in the crash of a commuter airplane near Durango, Colo., family members of the man said today.

The Tuesday crash of a twin-engine, turboprop in a mountainous area took the life of Don Emery Cox, 66, said his son, Albert Cox.

The senior Cox was the first president of the Coastal Bend Council of Governments and was on his way to Durango to help that city form a council of governments, according to his son.

The elder Cox also was chairman of the Lower Nueces River Water Supply District from 1970-86 and was retired from PPG Industries Inc.

Albert Cox said the family was notified early this morning that Don Cox was hospitalized in critical condition, and that he later died.

Nine people survived the crash, and seven of them walked more than a half-mile through the snow to the nearest road.

The plane was carrying 15 passengers and two crew members to Durango from Denver when it went down at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, 10 miles east of Durango in light snowfall, said Bruce Hicks, a spokesman for Continental Airlines in Houston.

The craft is owned by Colorado Springs-based Trans Colorado, which leases planes and crew to Rocky Mountain Airways, a Continental subsidiary that flies under the name of Continental Express.

Plane crash survivors listed

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — Mercy Medical Center officials today identified the survivors of the crash of a commuter plane Tuesday as:

Phil Brevik, 36, Durango, treated and released.
Karen Eaglin, 23, Phoenix, Ariz., good condition.
Pete Eaglin, 26, Phoenix, Karen Eaglin's husband, good condition.
Nancy Hill, 34, Cortez, serious condition.
Peter Schauer, 39, Booneville, Mo., good condition.
Lisa Trujillo, Cortez, 34, good condition.
Nicole Trujillo, 23 months, her daughter, treated and released.
Lee Vollmer, 25, Longmont, critical condition.
Susie Welch, 34, Durango, good condition.

INFLATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, climbing at their fastest pace in six years, rose 4.4 percent in 1987, the government said today. At fault were rebounding energy costs and the plunge in the value of the dollar.

Worse yet, last year's inflation was four times the 1.1 percent rate posted for 1986. Still, the gain in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was considered moderate by most economists and fell far below the double-digit inflation rates that ushered in the 1980s.

While the rate for 1986, the lowest in more than two decades, had been paced by the collapse in world oil prices, much of the 1987 increase reflected the partial rebound in energy costs.

Energy prices rose 8.2 percent in 1987, regaining a portion of their 19.7 percent 1986 loss.

In December, energy costs fell 1.1 percent, including a 2.2 percent decline for gasoline, a 1.5 percent fall for heating oil and a 0.2 percent drop for natural gas and electricity.

For the year, gasoline prices were up 18.6 percent, heating oil costs gained 12.9 percent, natural gas and electricity charges were up 0.3 percent.

Food and beverage costs were up 3.5 percent for all of 1987, compared to 3.7 percent for 1986.

In December, those prices rose 0.5 percent, led by a record 72.4 percent in lettuce costs. Over the last two month, lettuce prices have doubled because of disease and bad weather in California and Arizona.

Minus the volatile food and energy categories, prices for consumer goods rose 3.5 percent in 1987, compared to 1.4 percent in the preceding year. This category was up 0.1 percent in December.

The rise in goods minus food items and energy reflects the dramatic fall in the dollar's value during 1987. Over the year, the dollar lost 25 percent of its value against the Japanese yen and 20 percent against the German mark.

Overall, consumer prices last year showed the highest rate of inflation since 1981, when it was 8.9 percent. With the exception of last year's surprisingly low pace, inflation has ranged from 3.8 percent to 4.0 percent since 1981.

The companion Producer Price Index, released last week, showed that wholesale prices rose a more modest 2.2 percent in 1987.

The producer index is lower because it reflects only prices received by U.S. manufacturers and farmers for their products and does not include two of the fastest-rising categories in the CPI — services and imported goods.

The consumer index does include both services, like medical costs, and imported goods, reflected in categories such as apparel and new automobiles.

Service prices as a whole rose 4.4 percent in 1987, up from 4.3 percent in the previous year.

For 1987, service price gains included a 5.8 percent rise in medical care and a 4.0 percent rise in entertainment costs. Medical care costs were up 0.4 percent in December and entertainment costs 0.3 percent.

— Housing, up 3.6 percent for the year, up 0.2 percent in December.

— New automobiles, up 1.9 percent for the year, down 0.2 percent in December.

— Restaurant meals, up 3.6 percent for the year, up 0.4 percent in December; grocery store prices, up 3.5 percent for the year, up 0.6 percent in December.

— Fruit and vegetable prices, up 12.8 percent for the year, up 5.6 percent for December. Meat, poultry and fish prices, up 1.0 percent for the year, down 1.5 percent for December.

— Apparel costs, up 4.8 percent for the year, down 1.2 percent last month.

CRASH

Calls for help were made from the house, said its owner, Thelma Tate.

"He said it (the plane) was too low. He's sure the plane was functioning well," Tate said.

"(The pilot) tipped the wing and caught a tree with that tipped wing and it twirled the plane around and it just nosed into the hill," she said.

"Of course, there's a lot of snow and that cushioned it so it didn't catch on fire or anything."

Schauer was one of those taken to Mercy with minor injuries.

Dick Hunt, chief executive officer of Trans Colorado, said he didn't want to comment on the crash and had no further details.

CONTRAS

Asked about statements Dodd made saying he would reassess and possibly support more Contra aid if Ortega did not keep his word, Fitzwater said of the senator, "I hope he starts reassessing."

Reagan on Tuesday allowed the airdrops to resume, noting that a cease-fire between the rebels and the Sandinista government has failed to materialize. He blamed a lack of good faith on Managua's part.

His spokesman also said the president will ask for a new package of military aid for the rebels next week. A Republican congressional source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the request would be in the range of $40 million to $100 million.

A showdown vote on that request is set in the House for Feb. 3, when the lines between opposing sides on U.S. policy in Central America will be drawn more starkly than they have been in the past 18 months.

If the House approves the aid, the issue would go to the Senate the next day. If not, both sides agree, it would effectively be the end of the line for the Contras.

Abrams, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said the Contras "are pushing the Sandinistas to begin what might be a peace process...So now, do we this morning, with a compromise potentially in sight, just walk away from it and abandon it? No we don't. We stay with it until a political settlement is in fact acquired."

Reagan told a group of his political appointees Tuesday that his final year in office will be "the year that the United States will strongly affirm that democracy, not communism, is the future of Central America."

But congressional opponents of the aid said any renewal of military assistance would plunge the troubled region deeper into war and dash the peace hopes that had been kindled when the five regional presidents signed a peace accord last Aug. 7.

The rebels have been operating on a short-term infusion of aid approved before Congress left for its holiday recess, including money to pay for CIA airdrops of previously stockpiled weapons and ammunition. That money is expected to last at least through next month.

The airdrops had been suspended for the past week because of the weekend meeting in Costa Rica of the five Central American presidents to evaluate the progress of the peace effort.

Reagan on Tuesday sent a letter to Congress certifying that no cease-fire had been achieved and saying that the Sandinistas were to blame. The letter allowed the flights to resume.

"The time for Sandinista compliance with the accord has come and gone and the Nicaraguan people and the Central American democracies have waited in vain for the Sandinistas to carry out their promises," Reagan wrote.

"It has become increasingly clear that, without the pressure created by a strong Nicaraguan democratic resistance, the Sandinistas will not change their conduct to comply with the promises they have repeatedly made and broken since 1979."

TAX

For a nine-month period from late 1986 to 1987, the commission paid out $6 million every day in unemployment benefits, Ms. Nabers said.

In addition, the state's numerous bankruptcies has shrunk the pool of employers paying into the state fund, she said.

"Workers must be paid benefits," Ms. Nabers said, "but there are not enough employers" statewide maintain the fund acceptable levels at the prior tax rate, Ms. Nabers said.

ABORTION

Given enough constitutional leeway, at least half the legislatures would significantly restrict or deny access to legal abortion, the group said.

"States will vary substantially in the end, as they did prior to 1973," NARAL said, "with women again suffering the health hazards and cost of septic abortions and late-term abortions due to interstate travel."

The Hickman poll found that 60 percent of voters reject the suggestion that "abortion is such an important moral issue that the government has to play a role" and 63 percent oppose passage of a constitutional amendmegt that would make abortion illegal.

About three-quarters agree that "since nobody knows for sure when life begins, people should follow their own moral convictions and religious teachings on the abortion issue."

The poll also found that abortion rights were supported by majorities in subgroups of people "which many commonly associate with anti-choice sentiment" — among them self-identified conservatives, Republicans, Roman Catholics and Southerners.

The Hickman poll was based on telephone interviews Dec. 13-17 with 1,202 registered voters across the country. Results had a margin of error of 2.8 percentage points.

Calendar momento of Reagan's tenure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every day this year will be something of a holiday for Laurence McGilvery, whose "Ronald Reagan Countdown Calendar" celebrates the approaching end of President Reagan's tenure by recalling some statements and events the president would probably just as soon forget.

Like, perhaps, this declaration by Reagan when he took office seven years ago today: "For decades we have piled deficit upon deficit, mortgaging our future and our children's future for the temporary convenience of the present."

With Reagan beginning his final year in office today, McGilvery's calendar is stirring up considerable interest among Democrats and souvenir collectors.

"I honestly don't remember when I got the idea," McGilvery, a 55-year-old cottage publisher and antiquarian book dealer from La Jolla, Calif., said in an interview Tuesday. "It was just something that flashed in my head. I used it a lot in dinner conversation, and people kept telling me, 'You ought to do something about it.'"

Last May he finally began doing something about it. Months of research in a college library eventually yielded the calendar, which lists something Reagan or someone in his administration did on that day during the previous seven years.

The cover of McGilvery's calendar trumpets: "Ronald Reagan Countdown Calendar. January 1988 through January 1989. Celebrating the Final 366 Days of the 8-year Reign of Image over Substance, Fantasy over Fact, Greed over Grace, and the Simultaneous Dismantling of the American Traditions of Honesty, Fairness, Justice and Peace."

Some other Reagan quotes recalled in the calendar:

March 5, 1983 — "There is today in the United States as much forest as ...when Washington was at Valley Forge."

May 22, 1984 — Asked about secret funds for Nicaraguan rebels, he declares: "Nothing of that kind could take place without the knowledge of Congress."

Sept. 23, 1984 — Explaining the bombing of the U.S. embassy annex in Beirut, he says: "Anyone that's ever had their kitchen done knows that it never gets done as soon as you wish it would."

McGilvery said his family helped with the research, which was done at the University of California at San Diego library. He said he used a computer to set the type, and that the calendar has been available since Thanksgiving.

McGilvery said that more than 13,500 copies from the first 25,000-copy printing have been sold, even though he offered the calendar too late in 1987 to have it stocked by many of the major book chains.

Pat Cromwell, western regional director of the Democratic Party in South Dakota, is among the satisfied customers — so satisfied, in fact, that she's putting on an organizing party tonight, using copies of the calendar as bait.

"A friend of mine in Washington had received one for Christmas," she said in a telephone interview from Rapid City. "She called me and said I would love it. I'm always looking for some tool that I can use to organize Democrats."

Services held throughout Great Britain to pray for Waite

Waite

LONDON (AP) — Saying hostages in Lebanon never should be allowed to think they are forgotten, Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie led the nation in prayers today for his envoy Terry Waite, who vanished in Beirut a year ago.

"Let's allow his situation to stand for that of many others: for those who seek to bring peace and reconciliation to our world...for those who are held captive for no reason," the Church of England's spiritual leader said in a prayer service broadcast nationally on radio.

"Blessed are those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of Heaven," he added, quoting from Jesus' Sermon on the Mount.

Waite, the archbishop's personal envoy, disappeared Jan. 20, 1987, after leaving his West Beirut hotel for a rendezvous with the Shiite Moslem captors of two Americans. In the previous 17 months, he had helped to win freedom for three other American hostages.

No group has claimed responsibility for kidnapping him and no messages from him have been reported. Many church officials, including Runcie, have said they believe Waite is alive.

Prayer services also were held today in 45 other parishes throughout Britain, including the cathedral in Bristol, where Waite worked before going to Lambeth Palace, Runcie's official residence, in 1980 to become the archbishop's secretary for Anglican Communion affairs.

"For a hostage, every day is a very long day, and a year of captivity is a very long time," Runcie said in the service held in Lambeth Palace's medieval crypt. "We must never allow them to think they are abandoned or forgotten."

"We trust that he and the others will somehow sense that our prayers are with them and that their hope, and ours, is rooted in the God who is the source of all our hopefulness."

A candle has burned in the crypt for the 48-year-old emissary since he dropped out of sight.

In an earlier British Broadcasting Corp. World Service program broadcast in Lebanon, Runcie appealed to those who might be holding Waite captive.

"I hope that one day, and that it will be soon, you may realize Terry's burning desire for justice in the Middle East and peace," he said.

He said Waite's wife and four children and his relatives and friends looked ahead to "that tremendous celebration that will greet your return."

At All Saint's Church in Blackheath, Waite's parish church in southeast London, the vicar said Waite had left instructions forbidding any rescue attempt or ransom payment if he was kidnapped.

"It's a judgment I wouldn't like to make, but I think the family would be horrified by military action on Terry's behalf," said the Rev. Henry Burgin.

A few yards away, Waite's local chapter of the Church Army — an Anglican lay workers evangelistic organization in which Waite holds the rank of captain — remembered him with a prayer vigil and communion service.

Twenty other foreigners, including eight Americans, also are missing in Lebanon and presumed held captive, most of them by Shiite Moslem extremists allied with Iran.

Waite disappeared on his fifth mission to Lebanon while trying to make contact with Islamic Jihad, a pro-Iranian Shiite faction that in 1985 kidnapped Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, and Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut.

Waite had already helped to free the Rev. Benjamin Weir, the Rev. Lawrence Jenco and David Jacobsen, and was reported to be principally seeking freedom for their two countrymen.

His role as a mediator had been undermined by revelations in November 1986 that the United States had sold arms to Iran in an effort to free the U.S. captives.

Waite said he was never aware of the sales during his previous negotiations with the kidnappers, and he went on his last mission to Beirut insisting that his work was independent of any government.

Police jeep hit by stones runs over Palestinian protester, then overturns

JERUSALEM (AP) — A police jeep hit by stones ran over and seriously injured a Palestinian protester today, then struck a utility pole and overturned, injuring the two policemen inside, police and Israel radio said.

Police said Palestinian children had put up a barricade of burning tires in the Jerusalem Arab suburb of Issawiya and threw stones, hitting the jeep and making its driver lose control. There was no immediate word on the condition of the injured protester or policemen.

In northern Israel today, Israeli troops killed three Palestinian guerrillas who infiltrated from Lebanon by cutting a security fence, the military command said.

The Fatah guerrilla faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility and said several Israelis were wounded in the exchange of gunfire. The military said one Israeli soldier was wounded.

In the occupied Gaza Strip, meanwhile, soldiers forced open stores closed in a commercial strike, and Arab doctors and nurses in two hospitals staged a sit-in, demanding entry to refugee camps to treat injured Palestinians. In Arab east Jerusalem, a commercial strike held strong today.

Israel radio reported today the United States is considering sending a special envoy to promote Arab-Israeli peace talks.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Don C. Cofman in Tel Aviv confirmed that Michael Armacost, the undersecretary for political affairs, would visit in about two weeks. But Cofman said the visit was not related to the last six weeks of anti-Israeli protests, in which at least 36 Arabs have been killed by Israeli gunfire.

Soldiers today fired tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse Arab demonstrators in the West Bank town of Ramallah, 16 miles north of Jerusalem, according to the Palestine Press Service. A soldier was slightly injured when a stone struck him, the Arab-run news agency said.

It also reported protests in eight Arab villages near Ramallah. The army had no comment.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Tuesday that Israeli soldiers were under orders to use beatings instead of gunfire to try to curb the protests. He also announced that Israel would ban foreign countries and organizations as well as private Israeli groups from shipping food to Palestinian refugee camps.

Israel television's Arabic-language service reported Tuesday night that the police ministry had decided to invoke emergency regulations in east Jerusalem, permitting curfews on Arab neighborhoods, in an effort to break the commericial strike.

The report was denied by the Israeli army, the office of Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek and police ministry spokesman Nachum Mendel.

Meese held stock, met with Bell execs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III held $10,000 in telephone stock when he discussed restrictions on the industry with executives of four regional Bell companies.

Meese's activities in telecommunications matters in 1985 and 1986 when he held stock in the telephone industry are being investigated for possible criminal wrongdoing by an independent counsel as part of a conflict-of-interest probe.

Donald Guinn, chairman of Pacific Telesis, and two other company executives obtained a meeting with Meese on July 9, 1985 because "we wanted our concerns known to the Justice Department," Telesis spokeswoman Mary Hallisy said Tuesday.

The meeting was one of at least four Meese held with officials of the seven regional Bell companies in 1985 and early 1986, as the Justice Department was preparing to review the consent decree that stripped American Telephone & Telegraph Co. of its operating companies.

Spokesmen of three other Bell companies — Bell Atlantic, BellSouth and Ameritech — have said their chairmen met with Meese to discuss problems their companies saw with the decree.

A year after his meetings with the Bell executives, Meese reversed Justice Department policy and approved a recommendation that the regional companies be permitted to engage in making phone equipment and providing long-distance and computer services.

However, a federal judge rejected most of the Justice Department's new position.

Federal conflict-of-interest law prohibits officials from participating personally and substantially in matters in which they have a financial interest. The maximum penalty for violating the provision is two years in prison.

Pacific Telesis followed its meeting with Meese with an October 1985 letter from former national security adviser William Clark, a director of the company, asking the attorney general to give his "personal attention" to the decree restrictions. In a second letter in March 1986, Clark reminded Meese of the company's concerns, Hallisy said.

Meese's brother, Clifford, is director of executive compensation for Pacific Telesis and has worked for the company for 33 years.

Lawyers say lobbying no big deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defense in former presidential aide Lyn C. Nofziger's conflict-of-interest trial is trying to show that his White House lobbying involved only minor issues not covered by the federal ethics law.

The defense strategy emerged Tuesday when attorney E. Lawrence Barcella told the jury in his opening argument that prosecutors can't prove — as the law requires — that Nofziger lobbied former colleagues about matters "of direct and substantial interest" to the White House.

"The vast majority of contacts people have with government — that ex-officials have — are perfectly legitimate," he said. "The law does not drop a curtain between a former official and his agency."

Nofziger, 63, is charged with four felony counts of lobbying at the White House within a year of leaving the president's staff in early 1982.

His business partner, Mark A. Bragg, is charged with aiding and abetting one of the alleged contacts.

The charges each carry two-year sentences and a fine up to $10,000. In her opening statement, associate independent counsel Lovida H. Coleman Jr. contended that Nofziger illegally pushed the White House to make good on political promises that would benefit his clients.

One of those clients, the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, AFL-CIO, enlisted Nofziger to help persuade the Reagan administration to fulfill a 1980 campaign pledge to create jobs on naval support vessels.

MEBA, as the union is known, had encountered resistance in the Navy and Coast Guard to its proposal to let its members operate supply ships.

Nofziger urged deputy presidential counselor James Jenkins to help MEBA because the union had backed Reagan in a tough legislative fight over a tax bill in 1982, Ms. Coleman said.

Former White House Political Director Lyn Nofziger and his wife Bonnie arrive at U.S. District Court Tuesday in Washington to attend his conflict-of-interest trial. Nofziger has been accused of improperly lobbying former Reagan administration colleagues for private clients.

"Taking care of your friends is the first principle of politics of Mr. Nofziger," Ms. Coleman said of the former White House political director.

Nofziger came back to the White House in August 1982 to help win Republican votes for an unpopular tax hike and used the occasion to push the union's proposal, Ms. Coleman said.

As testimony got under way in the trial, the prosecution produced a copy of Nofziger's note thanking the maritime union's president for supporting the tax bill.

On a copy forwarded to Jenkins, Nofziger wrote: "He's been trying to get action on civilian manning of some naval ships, without result, even though the president has asked that it be done. He's been supportive of all the president's endeavors, including the last one. Why not help our friends?"

In a handwritten reply on the same sheet, Jenkins wrote that then Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger had offered an assurance "that this is being done!"

Barcella dismissed the notation, saying: "I don't think you can take a PS on a thank-you note and raise that to the level of a felony."

David Keene, a political consultant and lobbyist who represents the union, supported the defense contention that the issue was not important to the White House.

"Problems affecting the U.S. merchant marine are not nearly as high on their agenda as it is on ours," Keene said.

Keene called Jenkins' response to Nofziger's note "the standard administration position."

"Everyone told us they supported it and no one did anything about it," he said.

Nofziger is also charged with improperly lobbying for Fairchild Industries' bid to continue production of the A-10 aircraft.

Ms. Coleman said Fairchild officials supported the 1982 tax hike and enlisted congressmen whose districts included plants where the planes were made. "The deal was cut by David Stockman, director of OMB (Office of Management and Budget," Ms. Coleman said. "What Fairchild asked for and what Fairchild got was a memo dated Aug. 20, 1982" from Reagan to Weinberger.

Supreme Court clears way for independent counsel investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The special prosecutor's office investigating the Iran-Contra affair says the Supreme Court has cleared away a potential major stumbling block to its probe, which may be nearing the indictment stage.

"We are pleased that any question as to the authority of this office to carry on its investigation of the Iran-Contra matter has now been laid to rest by the courts," said Jim Wieghart, spokesman for independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh

The justices on Tuesday killed an appeal by Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North aimed at derailing Walsh's investigation.

In a one-line order, the court let stand a ruling that Attorney General Edwin Meese III properly delegated authority to Walsh to conduct the inquiry.

Walsh is thus free to seek indictments against North and other key participants in a scheme to divert the proceeds of secret U.S. arms sales to Iran to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Indictments are possible in the coming weeks against North, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord and Secord's business partner, Albert Hakim.

Walsh was given dual authority to carry out the investigation.

He was appointed by a special three-judge court under the Ethics in Government Act enacted in the wake of the Watergate scandal to permit independent investigation of high-ranking government officials.

But the constitutionality of that law is under attack by North and others, creating the need for backup authority for Walsh.

Meese separately authorized the independent counsel to carry out the investigation by conferring the attorney general's law enforcement powers on Walsh.

North, fired as a National Security Council aide after his Iran-Contra role was revealed, attacked both sources of Walsh's authority.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia rejected the twin challenge on Aug. 20. The appeals court upheld Meese's authority to delegate power to Walsh and ruled that it was premature to decide North's challenge to the Ethics in Government Act.

The appeals court decision upheld a ruling by U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. that North is in contempt for failing to comply with a subpoena issued by the grand jury in the case.

North's lawyers said Meese delegated his power to "a team of attorneys recruited from the private sector to conduct a wide-ranging criminal investigation into matters involving this nation's most sensitive affairs without any accountability to or control by the chief executive or the attorney general."

In other action Tuesday, the Supreme Court:

— Left intac the perjury conviction of Walter L. Nixon, a federal trial judge from Mississippi. Federal prosecutors now may seek a start to his five-year prison sentence.

Railroads may have overcharged Army to ship equipment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two railroad companies overcharged the Army millions of dollars for shipping tanks and equipment — a practice that went unnoticed for years because of sloppy auditing procedures, according to a published report today.

The Washington Post reported that the Army has found at least $5 million in railroad fee overcharges dating back to 1982 for moving military equipment to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

"We're still finding overcharges... That's not the railroad's money, it's the taxpayers'," said Barry Morris, spokesman for U.S. Forces Command at Fort McPherson, Ga.

Officials told the newspaper that the overcharges involving shipments to the training center have ranged from a few thousand dollars per trip to $405,458 in one case.

Officials representing the two railroad companies involved — the Union Pacific Railroad and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway — blamed accounting mistakes by both the railroads and the Army.

Fort Irwin auditors reported that railroad companies were charging the Army round-trip rates for one-way service in some cases, and routinely charged the military for dozens more rail cars than were ordered for the exercises.

Army documents also blame some of the overcharges on sloppy record-keeping by Army officials responsible for drafting and monitoring bills for the railroad shipments, which can involve 400 to 500 rail cars on some of the larger training exercises.

Army transportation officials frequently signed the bills for the higher amounts without comparing them to requested orders, Morris said.

The Army last year spent $46 million to transport equipment to and from Fort Irwin, officials said.

The unidentified Fort Irwin auditor who first discovered the problem told the newspaper he was harassed out of his job after he reported the overcharges, a charge Army officials denied, the Post said. However, the newspaper said an investigation is under way by the Merit Systems Protection Board.

Gambling on peace a risky endeavor

It would be naive to assume that bringing about a peaceful resolution to the fighting in Central America could occur quickly, but the United States has every right to expect more than appears to be happening toward that end.

In a meeting over the weekend, the presidents of Nicaragua, El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala and Costa Rica did not extend the deadline that passed Friday for complying with a regional peace plan they signed in August. That plan called for cease fires, greater democratic freedoms and an end to all outside aid for the area's insurgencies. Some of the steps have been met, but not all. One of the most promising was Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's statement that the first direct talk between his government and the opposition Contras will take place Jan. 28th. If Ortega is sincere, that could actually start the ball rolling toward a peaceful resolution, but what has looked like the promise of peace on the horizon in the past has failed to materialize.

Obviously schooled in the ways of working around a political institution like the U.S. Congress, Ortega has been lobbying for an end to U.S. aid to the Contras and has even promised to lift a 6-year-old state of emergency. But as of Tuesday, he had not come through with that action. Ortega could be hedging in hopes Congress will not continue to back the Contras.

Granted, as long as the Congress continues to fund the Contras there will at least be the possibility that fighting can break out at any time. But that does not mean there would be a reason for fighting, if Democratic freedoms were restored and the opposition was given a voice in the government.

But why should Ortega wait for that elusive "magical moment" when opposition disappears to restore the freedoms to the Nicaraguan people? Ortega allowed an opposition newspaper to start publishing again and has made other cosmetic gestures, but why not, rather, restore the freedoms of his people and give peace the opportunity to flourish?

Of course, it won't be easy in any regard to walk the fine line to peace in Nicaragua or all of Central America. Chances are it will be a long, drawn-out process, pocked with more than a few rough spots. But it offers the only realistic hope to bring peace to that region and, in the process, restore the confidence of the American people that communism will not be allowed to sweep throughout Central America.

The Central American peace plan proposes a major gamble for Ortega's government and for Americans, too. Can we risk a process that might bring peace to a trouble spot in our part of the world or should we hold back and play it safe, perhaps losing an opportunity for peace in the process? The cutting edge has to be Ortega's next few moves. If he restores freedoms, stops arresting those who peacefully object to his government and truly moves to bring about peace in Central America, then the United States should respond with peaceful moves of its own.

Americans will be watching closely and if Ortega is not sincere in what he does, we're back to square one.

Another View:

Honecker's proposal

East German leader Erich Honecker has proposed a new arms agreement to cut even more nuclear weapons from the arsenals of NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

Honecker said the Warsaw Pact nations would refrain from replacing or updating its shorter-range battlefield nuclear systems (those with ranges less than 300 miles) if NATO did the same. Later, these systems could be cut completely. It is not a bad idea — but not now. American, West German and other allied officials were wise to reject the proposal.

The Honecker plan must be seen in the light of other military realities. Those realities are the numerical imbalances between NATO and Warsaw Pact conventional forces. Raw "bean counting" figures on armed forces can often be misleading because they overlook such key factors as training, quality of arms and the critical roles of logistics, battle tactics, geography and political reliability. (If "paper strength" was all that mattered, then Israel would have been destroyed in four different wars.)

Given that, the fact remains that in Europe the Warsaw Pact has more conventional arms than NATO. Depending on which figures are used, the Warsaw Pact has a 2-to-1 advantage in tanks, a 3-to-1 lead in artillery pieces and a 1.5-to-1 lead in the number of divisions. Like it or not, NATO's tactical nuclear arms help to counter this imbalance.

Until there are major negotiated cuts and pull-backs of Soviet and East European military units, talks on reducing battlefield nuclear weapons should be put on hold. The main goal in these East-West arms talks is to make the world safe from all war, not just nuclear war.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 20, the 20th day of 1988. There are 346 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 20, 1961, Iran released the 52 Americans it had held hostage for 444 days, minutes after the presidency passed from Jimmy Carter to Ronald Reagan.

On this date:

In 1801, John Marshall was appointed chief justice of the United States.

In 1936, Britain's King George V died. He was succeeded by Edward VIII.

In 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt became the first chief executive to be inaugurated on Jan. 20 instead of March 4, because of the 20th Amendment to the Constitution.

In 1942, Nazi officials held the notorious Wannsee conference in Berlin, at which they decided on their "final solution" calling for the extermination of Europe's Jews.

In 1945, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was sworn into office for an unprecedented fourth term.

In 1977, Jimmy Carter was sworn in as the 39th president of the United States, then surprised onlookers as he, his wife Rosalynn and daughter Amy walked from Capitol Hill to the White House, instead of using his limousine.

In 1986, the United States observed the first federal holiday in honor of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Ten years ago: Egyptian President Anwar Sadat rejected U.S. efforts to revive the Jerusalem peace talks that broke off two days earlier, accusing Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin of an "arrogant way" of negotiating.

Five years ago: A commission studying reform of the Social Security system issued its final report, which recommended gradually raising the retirement age from 65 to 66 and generating new revenues or reduced expenses partly through higher payroll taxes.

U.S. captain disabled Iranian missiles

WASHINGTON — Iran has 270 deadly Phoenix air-to-air missiles, but no one has felt the sting of them. That is because a gutsy American Navy captain slipped into Iranian air bases in 1979 and disabled the missiles while the Ayatollah Khomeini was seizing power.

Jack Anderson

The Iranians have had custody of the missiles since 1979 when the shah was still in power. A Phoenix can shoot down a speeding jet 100 miles away. But not one of the $670,000 missiles has been used by the Iranians against Iraq, even though Iraqi air strikes against Iran have been devastating. And not one Phoenix has been used against U.S. aircraft flying escort patrol in the Persian Gulf.

The Navy captain who disabled the missiles wants to remain anonymous, primarily to protect the Iranians who helped him. But the story of his mission now can be told.

The American retreat from Iran was frenzied. By the end of 1978, our defense contractors in Iran knew the shah's position was shaky. While Jimmy Carter toasted the shah's stability, the Grumman Corp. was evacuating its people from Iran — 478 people in one week alone.

Khomeini's triumphant arrival shortly afterward gave U.S. military officials the shivers. They realized this fanatic Shiite leader would have access to sophisticated American military equipment sold to the shah.

The shah had purchased 80 F-14s, of which 79 were delivered. Two crashed before he was overthrown, leaving 77. According to secret documents we have seen, the shah also had ordered 420 Phoenix missiles worth $282 million to be mounted on the F-14s. The shah placed his order in 1976, and 270 missiles had been delivered by the time his regime collapsed.

Mounted on an F-14, the Phoenix can track up to 50 targets within 150 miles of the plane. It can even assess the threats against the plane and launch missiles by priority. The F-14s can hold up to six Phoenix missiles and launch them all simultaneously if necessary. The plane also carries a 20mm cannon and the shorter-range, less-sophisticated Sidewinder and Sparrow missiles.

The U.S. military in Iran swung into action in 1979 with several covert operations aimed at destroying the F-14s and their missiles. Only one operation was carried out, and it succeeded because of the initiative of the Navy captain.

The captain's plan was simple — sneak into the air bases where the missiles were stored and remove a critical widget from the fire control system of each F-14 Phoenix missile system. He did it, with the help of anti-Khomeini Iranians, after all other Americans except embassy officials had been evacuated.

The job took longer than he had planned, and the Navy worried for weeks that the captain had been caught and executed. But he managed to slip out of the country over land through Baluchistan into Pakistan, according to our sources.

This should explain the mystery to European and other military analysts who have wondered why the Iranians have never used their Phoenix arsenal.

The ayatollah still has the F-14s, but fewer than a dozen have been operable at any one time during the war with Iraq. Many of the Iranians who knew how to fly and fix them fled when Khomeini took power. Spare parts are hard to come by. Even when the F-14s are in the air, they have been used mainly as radar platforms instead of missile launchers.

FBI ON BALDRIGE — When former Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige died in a rodeo accident last July, the United States lost a "loyal American whose character, reputation and associates were above reproach," according to his FBI file which we recently obtained.

Federal investigators did a routine background check on Baldrige when he was nominated to the Cabinet. They found that he legally changed his name from Howard Malcolm Baldrige Jr., and that he had one or two minor traffic violations.

The FBI reported that Baldrige had an astute business sense and was fair and charitable. He guided Scoville Manufacturing in Scoville, Conn., out of financial straits, helped revive a black neighborhood organization and saved the jobs of hundreds of employees when he negotiated the sale of part of the company.

KEEPING A TOE HOLD — The Soviets aren't winning many friends with the tactics they use to increase their influence in the Middle East. A top-secret State Department report says that the Soviets are having trouble "facing up to their shrinking influence in the Arab world." Part of the problem may be the way the Soviets treat Arabs. While playing the part of friend and protector, the Soviets have a "Siberian mentality" with the Arabs, one Arab leader told the State Department. They play too rough and rude and make the Arabs feel like second-class citizens.

TOM WICKER

Hazlewood ruling taught 'damaging lesson'

NEW YORK — The Supreme Court, as Justice William J. Brennan Jr. wrote in dissent, taught "young men and women" the wrong civics lesson when it upheld the right of a principal to impose prior restraint on a student newspaper. So it did, and that damaging lesson may well be absorbed far beyond the corridors of high school.

Tom Wicker

Most specifically, the court's 5-3 decision in the Hazelwood school case may now be invoked in efforts to limit freedom of expression in student publications, theatrical presentations and the like at state universities. Despite the differences in high schools and colleges, it's hard to see why the rationale of the decision — that public education officials may censor an activity "reasonably related to legitimate pedagogical concerns" — could not be cited by university administrators.

What, moreover, are "legitimate pedagogical concerns"? Justice Byron R. White's opinion for the majority went so far as to say that schools could legitimately censor expression that might "associate the school with any position other than neutrality on matters of public controversy." What kind of support is that for the supposedly American values of robust debate and the "marketplace" of ideas?

Besides, the Hazelwood principal did far more than dissociate his school from articles to which he objected in its student newspaper. He quashed the printing of two pages of the paper, effectively silencing speech — not just in the two articles to which he objected, but in four others on the pages. The court found this action "not unreasonable," owing to the nature of his objections to the two articles, to the fact that the student publication, in the court's view, was not a "public forum" and that its contents were a "legitimate pedagogical" matter over which the principal had jurisdiction.

In so finding, the court nevertheless upheld a "prior restraint" — the prevention of publication of something someone finds offensive. In the Pentagon Papers case and others, prior restraints have been held unconstitutional except in the most exceptional cases. Now the court not only holds that prior restraint may be imposed almost routinely on student publications; but it adds substance to the view that in some cases, for some forms of expression, prior restraint is constitutional after all.

A high school newspaper partially financed by the school board, and which is published as part of the curriculum, may not be technically, as Justice White insisted, a "public forum." But it may be the only forum the students have; if school officials can censor it, student rights of expression previously established by the Supreme Court have been limited. If student speech is not fully protected by the First Amendment, are there other classes of citizens who might be so limited?

The decision well may drive some students to "underground" publications — and to the logical conclusion that what schools teach about free speech is not what schools practice. Isn't that a legitimate pedagogical concern?

The Hazelwood principal's reasons for objecting to the articles in question seem reasonable — he thought one might violate some students' privacy and that the other was unfair to a person mentioned in it. But whatever his good intentions, he had open to him other remedies than prior restraint.

It's not even clear why he couldn't have insisted upon changes he thought necessary. Page proofs were shown to him on May 10; publication was not scheduled until May 13.

But if there really was no time for editing, the principal could have specified his objections and warned against future violations. In addition, to prevent future problems, he could have ordered a change in procedure to make sure he had adequate time to read page proofs and work out agreed-upon changes with the student editors. Perhaps a stronger, or a better understood, set of rules for publication could have been worked out to prevent future conflicts.

All of these possible courses of action, it will be objected, would have resulted in publication of the articles to which the principal objected. But some expressions will always be found offensive or unjustifiable or incorrect by some in the audience; and it is inherent in a free press that privacy will sometimes be violated, not always necessarily, and that some stories may be unfair.

If such excesses could be prevented by authority, the press, in the nature of the case, would not be free. The Hazelwood lesson is that some authorities can prevent some publications. As Justice Brennan observed, that's the wrong lesson.

ART BUCHWALD

GOP race for president showing hostility!

The thing that disturbs me the most about the Republican race for President is how hostile the candidates are toward each other.

In order to convince voters that they are worthy of occupying the White House the candidates are distancing themselves from the President and using Ronald Reagan's mistakes to show why new blood is needed in Washington.

Art Buchwald

This is the way it seems to go every time I see the six GOP contenders on television.

"What do you think of the deficit, and if you became President what would you do about it?"

"I'm appalled by the waste and pork and cannot understand how anyone in his right mind could get us into such a mess."

"Do you blame Ronald Reagan for the huge debt?"

"No, I don't. But I do blame the people around him who never told him anything about it. That's why I want to be elected — so no one will pull the wool over a mediocre President's eyes again."

"Do you believe a Vice President should warn his President when the chief is practicing voodoo economics?"

"No, because there is nothing wrong with voodoo economics if done in moderation."

"I think the Vice President should come clean with what he advised the President to do on the deficit and and when he advised him to do it."

"All I can say is I gave the President the best advice he ever had, but I would never tell the public what it was."

"Did you tell the President to exchange the Stealth bomber and 100 MX missiles for hostages in Iran?"

"As Vice President I have no intention of revealing what I said to the President. Sure, he's made a lot of mistakes — but who hasn't? I'm not going to criticize him just because he is a lame duck. And while I'm on the subject I would like to see the senator's tax returns for the last 10 years so we know what kind of blind trust his wife has been in."

"I'm not releasing my tax returns until you release your notes on what you and the President said to Lyn Nofziger."

"Gentlemen, can I just say something? While you are arguing about Iran and blind trusts, the dollar is falling. I know who is responsible for the fall. His initials are R.R."

"Let's get on to the INF treaty with the Soviets. It's a bad treaty, and speaking as a Republican and a friend who has always admired the President, I say Ronald Reagan should be impeached for signing it."

"As Vice President I say there is nothing wrong with the treaty. Sure, it's flawed, but so is Sen. Dole's thinking on soybean reform. I've asked the senator to produce his financial records, and all he wants to do is impeach the President."

"Spoken like a true wimp. You wouldn't know a good INF treaty if you saw one. That's the trouble with being Vice President. You have had no experience on how to run a government."

"Get off my back, because I'm liable to shoot a Silkworm missile over your bow."

"Why did you say that?"

"I always get applause when I use it in my speeches. I think we should talk about schools."

"I'm for good schools."

"So am I."

"I think when kids go to good schools they learn to read and write."

"The Republican Party must start anew. Do we want the old, tired ways of Bush and Reagan? The answer is no. We must reach out to the grass roots and have them tell our leaders, 'Washington does not understand America.' We have to get rid of those who work inside the Beltway and replace them with those of us who live at Trump Towers in Council Bluffs, Iowa."

U.S., Vietnam reach agreement to resettle Amerasians in America

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The United States and Vietnam have agreed in principle to resettle in America over the next two years all children fathered by Americans during the Vietnam War, two U.S. congressmen said today.

An estimated 8,000 to 12,000 of the so-called Amerasians and up to 22,000 close relatives would fly to the United States via the Philippines under the agreement, Reps. Robert J. Mrazek, D-N.Y., and Thomas J. Ridge, R-Pa., told a news conference.

The congressmen said Vietnam's foreign minister and deputy premier, Nguyen Co Thach, gave his consent to the U.S. proposal when they conferred with him in Ho Chi Minh City this week.

The two said the agreement "will result in a massive airlift of all Amerasian children from Vietnam."

Specific details are to be worked out in talks beginning Feb. 4 in Vietnam.

About 4,000 Amerasians have been resettled already under the program. The new arrangements would create a separate program for Amerasians and expedite their processing and departure, the congressmen said.

Mrazek said the new arrangements mean the children, who now average 17.5 years of age, would have the chance "to come to the United States and realize their potential and lead constructive lives."

He said that while for everyone else the war ended in April 1975, it "continues to this day for those Amerasians who still face ostracism ...simply because of their faces."

The congressmen co-sponsored a bill, which President Reagan signed into law last Dec. 22, that requires that all Amerasians be resettled in the United States within two years. The law creates a new immigration category, Amerasians, eases requirements for their entry, and appropriates $5 million for their resettlement in fiscal 1988.

Mrazek said Thach "pledged his full and complete commitment to the law itself and to the two-year deadline." Thach wanted all the children resettled within a year if possible, he said.

Mrazek said the Vietnamese government had begun a nationwide survey to identify all Amerasians and relatives who wish to resettle in the United States. He said Thach has ordered the construction of a center near Ho Chi Minh City where they would have six months of language study and cultural orientation.

He said the new arrangement would increase from 200 to 1,000-1,200 the number of Amerasians now leaving Vietnam each month.

Mrazek and Ridge told Thach the first priority should go to Amerasians who sleep on the streets of Ho Chi Minh City, formerly the South Vietnam capital of Saigon.

The congressmen said the resettlement process had to be speeded because the children were getting older, and "if we waited five to 10 years ...it will be too late for them to have constructive lives."

They said Vietnam may face difficulties in speeding the resettlement process because of shortages of staff and funds.

The congressmen suggested that U.S. officials travel outside Ho Chi Minh City to interview Amerasians, and Thach said this could be discussed.

The two nations have no diplomatic relations and frequently have bickered over Amerasians and other issues. Vietnam recently resumed the Orderly Departure Program, which it had suspended in January 1986, complaining then that the children were not leaving fast enough.

Jane Fonda, Peck filming 'Old Gringo'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — "Old Gringo," the movie version of Carlos Fuentes' novel, started production this week, starring Jane Fonda and Gregory Peck and directed by Argentine Luis Puenzo.

The production company said filming was expected to last until April. The release date was scheduled next winter.

A brief statement quoted Fonda as saying, "When I met Carlos Fuentes in 1979, I told him that my dream was to make a movie about my country and his, and the relation between them...My dream finally became reality, by being in Mexico making this movie."

She plays Harriet Winslow, a teacher who comes to Mexico at the time of the Mexican Revolution in the early part of the 20th century. She becomes involved in a meeting between the elderly Ambrose Bierce and Mexican Gen. Francisco "Pancho" Villa.

Jimmy Smits, who appears in the hit television series "L.A. Law," plays Villa.

Man held in Palme killing

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Police on Tuesday picked up a man for questioning in the 1986 assassination of Prime Minister Olof Palme, according to news reports.

They said the same man was detained for a week for questioning in March 1986 and then released.

The Expressen newspaper said the man was a 34-year-old Stockholm resident. It said that police has restricted him to Stockholm and took away his passport. Police renewed their surveillance of the suspect last September, according to the national news agency TT.

Under Swedish law, a suspect cannot be identified by name if there are no legal proceedings.

The Aftonbladet newspaper said the suspect's former girlfriend was ready to testify that she had seen a weapon in his closet. The newspaper said the man had no alibi for two hours after 11 p.m. on Feb. 28, 1986.

Palme was shot in the back as he strolled along a Stockholm street shortly before midnight on Feb. 28.

Sabotage causes crash

BEIJING (AP) — Sabotage caused a head-on crash in northeastern China between a passenger train and a freight train that killed 18 people and injured 73, China television reported Tuesday.

It said an investigation determined that "premeditated, man-made sabotage" caused Sunday's crash in Heilongjiang province.

Earlier reports put the death toll at 17.

The television report did not elaborate on the purported sabotage. The official Xinhua News Agency said earlier the passenger train's brakes failed.

Official accounts said the passenger train was pulling into the Beiyinhe station when it crashed with a freight train entering the station from the opposite direction.

Gramm: Texas has good chance for SSC

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas has a good chance to beat out six other states in the race for the lucrative "super collider," says Sen. Phil Gramm.

The finalists — Texas, Illinois, North Carolina, Tennessee, Arizona, Michigan and Colorado were previously chosen by a scientific panel as being the best overall sites for the atom smasher.

"So we have now come down to seven," Gramm, R-Texas, said Tuesday. "We're expecting official site visits probably in the early spring. I will be setting up a meeting with the entire Texas delegation to propose a visit with DOE Secretary (John) Herrington to reconfirm our commitment to the project."

"Each of the seven are being considered at an equal footing from a technological standpoint," Gramm said. "But we are down to consideration based on economics rather than technical factors.

"I feel we have some clear advantages," he said. "No. 1, a cost advantage, No. 2, the people of Texas and the Legislature...have agreed to put up a billion dollars in seed money. No other state has matched that."

And then there is the political factor, the Texas senator said.

"The DOE wants this project built and one of the strong points of putting it in Texas is we are unified behind it," he said, implying the political clout of Texans in Washington will serve the state well.

Herrington is telling one and all that politics will play no role in selecting the site for the planned $4.4 billion super collider atom smasher.

But it seems many politicians can't help bringing up the dreaded "p-word," anyway.

Herrington announced Tuesday that he was accepting, without change, the December recommendation of a committee of the National Academy of Sciences and the National Academy of Engineering.

New York, which also was recommended as a candidate state, was not on the list announced Tuesday.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo earlier this month asked the DOE to drop consideration of the site as a location for the $4.4 billion atom smasher because of opposition from local residents.

The recriminations began immediately in New York. Francis Sheehan, a spokesman for the Democratic governor, blamed Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., for the disintegration of the state's initial bid.

Moynihan came out against the Rochester site after area members of the House announced their opposition. He was followed by his New York colleague in the Senate, Alfonse D'Amato, a Republican, but the Cuomo spokesman described Moynihan as most responsible.

"The Senate is right now Democratic-controlled. Mr. Moynihan is an important member of the Senate," Sheehan said.

Politics was seen in the selection process even by some officials from states still in the running.

Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich., whose district includes his state's proposed site between Lansing and Ann Arbor, observed: "We have two states (on the list) with more electoral votes than Michigan (Illinois and Texas). And presidential politics may well play into this.

"Obviously, one of the sites is in the speaker's district down in Texas. And that's going to be a major political obstacle, it seems to me."

In fact, Carr erred. The Texas site is not in the Fort Worth district of Speaker Jim Wright, a Democrat; it is in the nearby district of Joe Barton, a Republican.

Barton, R-Ennis, however, agreed Texas has a good chance.

"I think that Texas has the best geology, the best geography and the best public support team," Barton said in a telephone call from College Station. "We're also the low-cost site. If given a level playing field we should do very well."

The Energy Department announced it will hold public hearings at each site next month focusing on the environmental effects the project would have on the areas. The agency also plans to revisit each site in March or April to validate information contained in the proposals submitted by each state.

The DOE is scheduled to announce its final choice in July and confirm it in January 1989. The project would require congressional approval.

Area panel working on economic proposals

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Despite some unpaid bills, the Garden City Superconducting Super Collider Commission is still alive and pursuing two proposals that would promote economic development in the Permian Basin, officials said Tuesday.

While he declined to say how much the commission owes, treasurer Joe Kloesel said pledged dues that have remained unpaid by San Angelo and Odessa members should — when paid — "take care of all the outstanding bills."

Project chairman Thane Akins estimated Tuesday that up to $400,000 was spent in pursuit of the U.S. Department of Energy's physics lab where scientists will study atomic and sub-atomic particles.

The Garden City Commission, made up of fewer than 30 members, was unsuccessful in its pursuit to lure the SSC project to the Permian Basin after being knocked off a list of final sites last December by a panel of members from the National Academy of Sciences and the National Academy of Engineering.

A site south of Dallas, near Waxahachie, remains among seven finalists announced by the DOE Tuesday that could land the project expected to create 3,000 jobs and an annual budget of $279 million.

While the quest to locate the huge physics lab in the Permian Basin has ended, the group, — consisting of members from Midland, Odessa, Big Spring and San Angelo — may request a "debriefing" from DOE on reasons why the Garden City site was knocked out, Akins said.

"It didn't give anything specific on any sites," Akins said.

The commission will meet within a month to discuss two proposals that would involve economic development for all four member cities, Akins said.

However, he declined to discuss specifics on the proposals.

"We have two (proposals) we are presently looking at in a preliminary way, but we can't talk about it now. It's too early," Akins said.

The commission, which charges yearly dues of $1,000 for individuals and corporations and $100 for chamber of commerce members, also probably will undergo a name change, Akins said.

"The commission will provide a way of coordinating all four chambers or industrial boards," Akins said.

Sheriff's deputies will take to the air to fight crime

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A plan to thwart burglaries using the once-grounded Sheriff's Department helicopter was announced Tuesday by Sheriff Gary Painter, following his review of 1987 crime statistics.

"We will be concentrating on burglars considerably more this year, and we will make a very strong effort in that area," Painter said, pointing out that the east and west parts of the county were hardest hit by burglars last year.

"What we anticipate is that an increased concentration on burglaries will cause a decrease in other crimes," he added.

Midland County Commissioners have allotted $10,000 for 1988 operation — including insurance — of the chopper, which is piloted by sheriff's investigator Jerry Lee. The whirlybird saw limited action in 1987, since no funds were set aside for it, the sheriff said.

In January 1986, use of the helicopter "drastically cut" the number of burglaries in the county, but two months later it was grounded by a lack of funding. It was grounded again when funds to insure it could not be found, Painter said.

"It gives us more eyes, better coverage in the county and makes us faster," Painter said. "In the air, you can watch several roads at once. It will be used on a sporadic basis — we will be looking for people who do not belong in business and residential areas."

In 1987, 381 burglaries occurred in the county, up from 375 in 1986, a small increase that should have been a decrease, according to the sheriff.

Use of the helicopter is one way Painter says he is trying to make up for a critical shortage of officers — especially in the narcotics and criminal investigations units.

"I'm going to be forced to ask for more officers for criminal investigation, narcotics, and warrants," he said. "We just don't have the people. If we take away officers from patrol, I feel like it would cause an increase in crimes outside the city limits."

"It gives us more eyes, better coverage in the county and makes us faster. In the air, you can watch several roads at once. It will be used on a sporadic basis — we will be looking for people who do not belong in business and residential areas."

— Sheriff Gary Painter

According to Painter, the 1987 statistics are "very close" to the 1986 figures. In most major categories, slight increases or decreases were noted.

The county's only homicide of 1987 — the September shooting death of 41-year-old Verna Peace at a convenience store — remains unsolved, and is the grimmest statistic on the 1987 report, the sheriff said.

"We're still talking to people, and still working on the information that we have," Painter said. "But as far as actual progress, I can't say that. It's going to be a long drawn out thing."

Unprecedented overcrowding at the Texas Department of Corrections caused headaches for local lawmen in 1987, and Painter counted himself among those.

"If you take into account the problem at TDC, we were worse off last year," he said. "I can't prove that has added to the statistics, but had TDC been able to hold people longer, our count would have gone down.

"As long as we have the problem with TDC, we will see an upward trend in crime," he said.

Jury watches video in trial of Midland man

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The murder trial of a 34-year-old Midland man accused of the poisoning deaths of three people continues in 358th District Court today with the jury of six men and six women expected to hear another eight or nine hours of audio and videotaped evidence.

The first day of the trial came to an end last night with jurors watching a almost four-hour surveillance recording of a July 31, 1987, meeting of David A. Dowler with Kerri Middleton, the Midland woman who discovered the body of 30-year-old Leza Kay Chandler the afternoon of June 28, 1987.

District Judge Bill McCoy recessed the trial about 6:30 p.m. Tuesday and instructed the jury to return to court for resumption of the trial at 8:30 a.m. today.

Testimony and evidence presented during the first day of Dowler's trial in the chloroform poisoning death of Ms. Chandler placed him in possession of the chemical that killed her, present in her home prior to her death and showed he was apparently aware of methods of killing which are difficult to trace.

However, the jury Tuesday heard a voluntary statement Dowler gave Aug. 21, 1987, to Odessa police detective Mickey Brown concerning the death of Ms. Chandler.

In his statement, Dowler admitted bringing a quantity of chloroform in a small film container to Ms. Chandler's home at 1752 E. 53rd St. the night of June 27, 1987. But, he stated, Ms. Chandler had asked him if he would hypnotize her in an effort she hoped would help her resolve personal problems.

The purpose of the chloroform, he indicated, was to relax her and make her more susceptible to being hypnotized. However, before the session could begin, Ms. Chandler apparently changed her mind, saying that she just wanted to sleep, and Dowler left a short time later, the accused man testified.

Kyle Chandler testified he had called Ms. Chandler, from whom he was separated and in the process of being divorced, the night of June 27 to inquire if she planned to go to church school and church the following day. She indicated she did, he said.

Chandler told jurors that during the phone conversation, he asked if Dowler was there, and his former wife said he was. From 9 p.m., about the time he made the call, until 11 p.m. he was with two friends, Byron Taylor and Al Hamilton, and they watched a videotaped roast honoring well-known football coach Hayden Fry, Chandler testified.

Woman's suit against battered women's center settled

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Sharme Kelley's federal lawsuit against the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children has been settled out of court for an undisclosed amount of money.

Ms. Kelley, the center's former children's program coordinator, had alleged that her firing was discriminatory.

The case was to have been tried before a jury in U.S. District Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton's court on Jan. 25.

"It never went to court," noted the center's executive director, Becky Criswell, "and the insurance company did pay her (Ms. Kelley) a monetary settlement. I do not feel that I am at liberty to disclose the amount."

Ms. Criswell said that Ms. Kelley had signed a release of "further liability" against the center.

In her original complaint against the center, Ms. Kelley last August said that she had been deprived of her "equal employment opportunities" and that she was "deprived of her federal rights" under the United States Constitution's Fourteenth Amendment.

Last March, Ms. Kelley was asked to resign her job by Clemencia L. Prieto, who then was the center's executive director, due to Ms. Kelley's alleged "unsatisfactory performance" and following an evaluation of the center's alcohol- and drug-abuse program by the Texas Commission on Alcoholism, now the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

Chris McCormack, who last year was chairman of the center's grievance committee, noted in a June 1 letter to Ms. Kelley that the committee had "determined that you (Ms. Kelley) were treated unfairly" but that "under the circumstances, and facts surrounding your discharge," that the committee did "not believe it is appropriate to reinstate you as an employee" of the center.

McCormack, a Midland lawyer, told Ms. Kelley that the committee would "not contest your unemployment claim" and would "take steps to ensure you do not receive negative references" from the center to any prospective employer.

Damages which Ms. Kelley had sought in her original lawsuit included back pay and benefits, $650,000 for alleged defamation of character, and $50,000 for her mental anguish.

Conway Twitty, Randy Travis concert slated

From Staff Reports

Randy Travis

ODESSA — Ticket sales are brisk for recording artists Conway Twitty and Randy Travis' 8 p.m. performance Friday at Ector County Coliseum.

"Twitty has been here before, and he puts on a super good show," says a representative for Ector County Coliseum. "He's had I don't know how many No. 1 hits, probably as many as most in the business."

"Always & Forever," Travis' latest Warner Bros. album, was certified platinum shortly after its release and has spawned two No. 1 singles, "Forever & Ever, Amen" and "I Won't Need You Anymore." His current single, "Too Gone Too Long," is moving up the charts.

Travis is the leading nominee for the 15th annual American Music Awards, vying for four awards. He recently swept the Country Music Association awards, winning Male Vocalist of the Year, Album of the Year and Single of the Year. He also received top honors at the Music City News and the Academy of Music Awards, winning in four categories in each.

He has also been honored with Grammy and American Music Award nominations and was inducted as the 62nd member of the Grand Ole Opry.

His debut album, "Storms of Life," was certified platinum in less than one year and spawned three No. 1 singles, "On the Other Hand," "1982" and "Diggin' Up Bones."

Tickets, priced at $16.50, may be purchased at Endless Horizons before Friday. Remaining tickets, if any, will be sold the day of the show at Ector County Coliseum.

DEATHS

Billie Joyce Hoadley

Billie Joyce (Dutton) Hoadley, 40, of Midland, died Monday evening at a local hospital.

Services will be at 3 p.m. Thursday in the Fannin Terrace Baptist Church with the Rev. Ben Walker, pastor, officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She was born on Sept. 5, 1947, in Camden, Ark., where she was reared, and graduated from Fairview High School.

At the age of 18 she enlisted in the Air Force; following her discharge, she returned to Camden and was employed with the telephone company as an operator for a brief time.

In 1979 she moved to Midland and became the manager of the Steak and Egg Restaurant. In 1982 she began work with Midland Memorial Hospital as the supervisor of cashiers.

She married Richard D. Hoadley Jr. on Aug. 21, 1984, in Midland. She was a member of the Fannin Terrace Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband; two sons, Tommy Dutton of Ashdown, Ark., Jimmy Fimple of Fort Smith; two daughters, Sarah Ellen Hoadley and Rikki Deaneen Hoadley, both of Midland; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Dutton Sr. of Ashdown, Ark.; her grandmother, Mrs. R.E. Bray of Chidester, Ark.; one brother, William Dutton Jr. of Atlanta, Texas; one sister, Debra Tackett of Texarkana; two nieces; and six nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center, 2200 W. Illinois, Midland, 79701 or to the American Cancer Society.

Frank A. Perry Jr.

Frank A. Perry Jr., 73, of Iraan, died Tuesday at his residence.

Graveside services will be at 2:30 p.m. Thursday in Restland Cemetery in Iraan under the direction of Sizemore-Dennis Funeral Home.

Perry was born Oct. 26, 1914, in San Angelo. He married Freda Dorris on Nov. 1, 1936.

He was a member of the Texas Goat and Sheep Raisers Association and the Methodist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Freda Perry, of Iraan; one sister, Ann Nita Silliman of Fort Stockton; and five nephews.

Jennifer Calhoun

Services for Jennifer Ruth Calhoun of Midland were to be at 2 p.m. today in the Dellwood Baptist Church with the Rev. Mike Vestal, pastor, officiating. Burial was to follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were to include Roy Walser, Layne Drake, Pat Bryan and Freddie Calhoun Jr.

Noema Read

Services for Noema Read of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Jeta Lee Witt

Services are pending with Nally, Pickle, and Welch Funeral Home in Big Spring.

Woman says huge bill definitely 'wrong number'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Many people have huge telephone bills, but Carol Todd believes it is outrageous she was billed $15,000 in six months for pay-per-call telephone services she claims she never used.

"This is too far-fetched," Ms. Todd said Tuesday.

She said the problem began in July when her phone bill totaled more than $5,000, with most of the charges for the new pay-per-call services.

"My son said he made some of those calls, but he said, 'I didn't do anything like that,' " Ms. Todd said.

Although convinced that her 16-year-old son was not responsible for the bulk of the charges, Ms. Todd continued to receive phone bills totaling thousands of dollars, even after she and her son moved in with her daughter and son-in-law in September.

She said the phone now is kept in her daughter's locked bedroom, but the big bills have continued, including $1,795 for December.

Complaints to Southwestern Bell have resulted in most of the charges being dropped, but she believes she still owes more than $4,000. She said she will try to pay $200 a month to correct the problem.

Marco Gilliam, a Southwestern Bell spokesman, said people have complained about the "976" service since it was first offered in November 1986.

Republican announces for county commissioner slot

From Staff Reports

Wollschlager

Larry R. Wollschlager has announced his candidacy for Precinct 3 Midland County Commissioner.

Wollschlager is a Republican and has lived in Midland and Precinct for over 11 years. A former student of the University of Texas at El Paso, he obtained an undergraduate degree in biology and a masters degree in geological science. While attending graduate school, he worked as a substitute teacher and mineral explorer.

He came to Midland upon his employment with the Getty Oil Co. He has been an active member of the Tax Awareness Group, serving as co-chairman of the Education Committee.

He also belongs to the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, West Texas Geological Society, Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists and American Academy of Sciences.

He also has been active on the St. Ann's School board, parish council and with the wrestling club.

Wollschlager is an independent petroleum geologist and operates Wolf Energy. He and his wife, Cecilia, have three children.

Wright distances himself from aide's angry letters

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright is distancing himself from a series of angry letters a newly hired press aide sent to news organizations that included charges of possible plagiarism and a reference to the Mormon religion of a team of columnists.

Wright said he was sorry the letters were sent and that he did not see or pass judgment on the content before they were sent out.

"I regret very much any intemperate or unjustified remarks the letters may have contained," the Texas Democrat said in a statement Monday.

The letters, complaining of the treatment Wright had received in the news media, were written by George Mair, who was hired in December to help improve the speaker's image.

Mair is a former Washington columnist for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate and former editor and publisher of the Alexandria Gazette in suburban Virginia.

One letter sent last week to syndicated columnists Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta was critical of a recent column and ended with the comment that: "The Church of the Latter Day Saints must be particularly pleased."

Anderson and Van Atta are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, or the Mormon Church, and have written extensively about Wright's involvement with the shaky Texas savings and loan industry.

"We both kind of looked at each other and asked, was it anti-Mormon the same way an anti-Semitic comment is anti-Semitic," Van Atta said Tuesday.

The letter attacked a Jan. 4 column, saying Anderson and Van Atta "had been suckered," that it was "a poor cut and paste job" and that they had stolen the information from disreputable sources in desperation.

"There is a view that the Mormon Church is conservative, and I wonder whether he was trying to say were were part of a Mormon plot to get Jim Wright, which is insane," Van Atta said. He also suggested it could have been a sarcastic remark.

"The initial thought of both of us was that this must be a fraud. We thought somebody must be pulling a joke on us," he said. "Of course, our statements are extremely accurate on Jim Wright."

Earlier reports of Mair's strongly worded letters to the Los Angeles Times, Wall Street Journal, Newsweek and U.S. News and World Report prompted Wright to issue his statement Monday about the letters.

"The letters written by George reflected the anger and frustration which, as an experienced newspaperman, he felt over some of the inaccurate and unfair news coverage I have received as speaker," Wright said.

"While I am as concerned as George over lack of balance in some of this coverage, angry letters obviously do little to correct it."

Mair defended the letters in an interview with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, saying: "It's my feeling that we've got to correct any inaccuracies about the boss because they get set in stone...and wind up in somebody's clip file."

TRIAL

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Tom Hirsch, Chandler said he arranged for himself and his wife to see a psychiatrist in an effort to save their marriage. His former wife only went to about two sessions, he said. Hirsch questioned whether Chandler had been diagnosed as being manic-depressive and whether the drug lithium had been prescribed for him.

Chandler stated he had been diagnosed as being depressed and that anti-depressants had been prescribed. He denied suggestions by Hirsch that he had been physically abusive to his former wife in spite of a claim of cruelty included in a divorce petition filed in March 1986. He said they separated and he moved out of their home about a month earlier.

In the videotape viewed by jurors Tuesday, which showed only the entrance to Ms. Middleton's apartment while she conversed with Dowler inside, the jury heard Dowler describe to Ms. Middleton various methods of killing people with chemicals, principally homemade cyanide, that would be difficult, if not impossible, for investigators to detect.

Jurors heard Dowler allege that Chandler, because of his mental state, had a list of people he planned to kill, which included his wife, himself (Dowler), Ms. Middleton and several other friends.

Dowler also discussed a scenario in which Ms. Middleton would assist him in setting a trap to kill Chandler.

In addition to being accused of the death of Ms. Chandler, Dowler has been indicted for the cyanide poisoning deaths of Lisa Blythe Krieg, 26, and Juan Antonio "Tony" Casillas, 29. Ms. Krieg died Aug. 16, 1986, and Casillas was found dead Feb. 12, 1986. The cause of their deaths was not attributed to cyanide poisoning until after the death of Ms. Chandler.

Hirsch has tried to block mention of the deaths of Ms. Krieg and Casillas — and the fact Dowler has been indicted for them — during the current trial, contending it would be prejudicial. The judge denied his motion, saying he would monitor mention of the other two deaths as the trial progressed.

District Attorney Eric Augesen, who is prosecuting the case against Dowler with assistant District Attorney Dennis Cadra, believes it will be impossible to keep mention of the other two indictments out of the current trial.

Augesen has indicated he expects to call more than 50 witnesses for the trial and present another eight or nine hours of surveillance recordings before the trial ends, probably sometime next week.

Crane woman killed in one-car accident

From Staff Reports

CRANE — A Crane woman was killed and two other people injured just after midnight today in an automobile crash that occurred after a high-speed chase by lawmen, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Elizabeth Demona Thomas, 24, was pronounced dead at the scene at 12:50 a.m., just east of the Crane city limits on Adams Road in Crane County, according to DPS. Melissa Meeks, 23, of Crane, suffered a broken shoulder and was listed in stable condition at Crane Memorial Hospital. Jerry Tilley, 30, also of Crane, suffered nerve damage to one arm and was transferred to Odessa Medical Center, DPS said.

Lawmen responded to a report of a beer theft from a convenience store and spotted an 1980 AMC Jeep driven by Ms. Thomas traveling north on Adams Road "at an unsafe speed," DPS reports said.

When officers began chasing the Jeep, Ms. Thomas tried to turn a corner but ran off the left side of the road, causing the vehicle to flip over and throw out all three occupants, according to reports.

No one in the Jeep wore seat belts, reports said.

Baptist fight shifts to convention rooms

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The battle between conservative and moderate Southern Baptists for control of their denomination has shifted to hotels, with each side claiming the other is trying to grab all the available rooms for its national convention.

State appeals court Judge Paul Pressler of Houston, a leader in the denomination's conservative faction, Tuesday accused the pro-moderate Baptist Journal of holding a block of rooms exclusively for people who support the moderate agenda.

But Neal Rodgers, editor of the Dallas-based journal, said a travel agent helped reserve a block of 1,400 rooms, but less than 1,000 have been taken so far.

Checker says part-time job is in the bag

By BETTY JOHNSON

DENTON (AP) — "I managed to come right at the rush hour," a friendly young woman said to Kathy Cumbie as Ms. Cumbie began to check her grocieries.

"Yes, it's been wild today," Ms. Cumbie responded. The woman asked to borrow a pen so she could start on her check. An amiable dialogue about the woman's errands of the day — finished and unfinished — continued throughout the three or four minutes it took to get her groceries scanned.

"I hope you get everything done," Ms. Cumbie said before the woman hurried off.

A friendly customer helps make the job of a checker enjoyable, she says, and on that particular late afternoon shift at Kroger's, she had a balance.

An older man wearing a black fur cap was all business as he patiently watched Ms. Cumbie do her work.

Next came two older women, a young man in a preppy-looking sweater and two women with preschool children. Most made polite conversation with Ms. Cumbie.

A larger-than-usual group composed of a woman, her mother and two elementary-aged children came along. Noticing all the candy bars they put on the conveyor, Ms. Cumbie remarked that someone had sweet tooth. Then her friendly remarks seemed to get her in trouble. "Do you want any of these now?" she asked pleasantly enough.

"Yeah," said the boy. At the same time the grandmother responded with a firm, "No."

"Wrong question," Ms. Cumbie remarked as the grandmother scowled.

It's all part of the day in the life of a grocery store checker, where the customers can be the best or the worst part of the job, says Ms. Cumbie, a Texas Woman's University student who works part-time at the Kroger store on University Drive in Denton.

She recalled a woman earlier that same day who got angry with her because the woman tried to buy cigarettes with a food voucher issued from a local church. The vouchers may not be used for cigarettes or alcohol.

When Ms. Cumbie asked the woman about the cigarettes, the woman became upset.

Another time a man insisted that he knew the right price for a carton of milk, a price that was different from that relayed to Ms. Cumbie by a stocker. Finally Ms. Cumbie went with the man to the milk shelf and showed him that her price was correct.

"Having to get a price check can be really bad. A lot of times it'll take a while. You'll hear them grumbling all down the line, especially in the express line," Ms. Cumbie says.

She said it can be hard to be friendly if things aren't going well for her outside the job. Bad weather also can affect everyone's moods. "Nobody really likes to come to the grocery store and spend money," she said.

As she sat at one of the deli-area tables along with other employees on break and a couple of men presumably waiting for their wives to shop, Ms. Cumbie waved at one of her professors from TWU. She said she often jokes with her teachers, telling them she'll give them a special price if they'll give her a good grade.

Ms. Cumbie is studying physical therapy, but plans to change her major to animal husbandry and transfer to Sul Ross State University. She plans to apply for veterinary school at Texas A&M and would like to work with large animals.

"I personally would have a hard time doing this full-time," she says, of checking. "When it's slow, it's awful. There's nothing worse than trying to look busy. I'd rather be busy; it makes the work go faster."

But still she enjoys the customers.

"You can learn people's whole lives. They tell me all sorts of things," she says.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1988 Regional Spelling Bee March 26 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 25. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

mozzarella — (noun) Because America is a melting pot of nationalities, we can enjoy a broad range of different foods from around the world. If you've ever eaten Italian food, you're likely to have tasted "mozzarella." "Mozzarella" is a mild, unsalted, white, semisoft Italian cheese with a somewhat acid flavor. It is commonly used on pizza, lasagna, spaghetti, antipasto salads and many other dishes. The word is derived from the Italian word "mozza" meaning a kind of cheese. In what countries did some of your favorite foods originate?

Port Arthur finds place in its heart for renegade rock 'n'roller Joplin

Joplin

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Janis Joplin, who fled this Gulf Coast city in her youth to become a wailing symbol of 1960s rock 'n' roll, finally became a hometown hero on what would have been her 45th birthday.

"Happy Birthday, Janis!" said Port Arthur Mayor Malcolm Clark to thunderous applause from a crowd gathered Tuesday night. "This is truly the start of something big."

About 4,000 people packed into the Port Arthur Civic Center for the dedication of a Janis Joplin Memorial.

Ms. Joplin died on Oct. 4, 1970, at age 27 in Hollywood, Calif., of what a coroner ruled was a drug overdose.

She once joked that she had no friends in her hometown, and the memorial was the first time the city has recognized its most prominent citizen.

Port Arthur, with a population of about 58,000, is primarily an oil and refining center on the Gulf of Mexico. Like other areas of Texas, its economy has been adversely affected by the recent drop in oil prices.

The life and times of the rock 'n' roll and blues singer will become part of the Southeast Texas Musical Heritage Exhibit, which also will include tributes to other East Texas musicians such as Johnny and Edgar Winter.

"This could turn into, for Port Arthur, what Elvis Presley did for Memphis," said Edith Huber, director of the Port Arthur Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The memorial was the idea of Port Arthur businessman John Palmer, who was one of Ms. Joplin's classmates at Thomas Jefferson High School, where Ms. Joplin graduated in 1960.

Palmer paid for the sculpture of Ms. Joplin that is the centerpiece of the memorial.

"Janis was unique, determined to do whatever was needed to succeed in her chosen profession," said the late singer's sister, Laura Joplin Pelley, 39. "Even when she was number one, she had to knock herself out to stay on top."

Ms. Pelley now lives in Houston, and the singer's brother, Mike, 35, lives in Tucson, Ariz.

"There is still a part of me that wishes I could be home baking a cake, talking to her on her birthday," said Ms. Pelley. "Thank you so much. We love you, Port Arthur."

Among the items of Ms. Joplin's life that will be on display in the exhibition are her Bible, two signed high-school yearbooks, one of her gold records, jewelry and a 5-foot-tall Christmas decoration she painted at age 16.

Copies of newspaper and magazine articles about her will also be on display, as well as record jackets from many of her albums and a 1957 program for a concert by a choir and girls' glee club she attended.

Texas 'top gun' in Southwest in defense contracts

DALLAS (AP) — Texas leads the Southwest in defense contracts, with its 1987 share accounting for 70 percent of the five-state region's $22.6 billion total value in defense work.

Texas companies were awarded $15.9 billion in defense contracts last year, a $2.4 billion increase over 1986, Defense Department figures released Monday indicate.

Texas is the second largest recipient of federal defense dollars in the nation behind California.

The state's obligated value of defense awards rose 17.8 percent last year from the 1986 level of $13.5 billion, the Defense Contract Administration Services Region office in Dallas said. The office manages defense contracts in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona, Arkansas and Louisiana.

The office said the number of contracts awarded to Texas firms increased from 21,638 in 1986 to 22,905 in 1987.

Those figures don't include major contracts that are administered directly by military services, which means the state actually received more defense contracts, the Dallas defense office said.

VAN HORN (AP) — Sometimes it just doesn't pay to try to save money.

Just ask any of the 17 candidates for local offices who attempted to save a $600 filing fee by submitting petitions to get their names on the March 8 Democratic primary ballot in Culberson County in West Texas.

Only one of 18 would-be candidates qualified for the ballot by submitting petitions. The others submitted faulty petitions, officials said Tuesday.

That means only one name will appear on Van Horn's local ballot because there are no Republican primary candidates in the city about 120 miles east of El Paso.

The candidates, including six incumbents, apparently got bad information about submitting petitions from Culberson County Democratic Party Chairwoman Martha Conoly.

Bishop answers $300,000 question with resounding yes

DALLAS (AP) — Donations from schoolchildren, churches and politicians helped Bishop College beat a deadline to raise $300,000 in a week, allowing the financially troubled school to pay its faculty and open for the spring semester.

"Bishop is back on track," Bishop President Levi Watkins said to a round of applause and a chorus of "amens" at a Tuesday news conference attended by students, faculty members and supporters.

An anonymous donor who imposed Tuesday's deadline will give Bishop a matching grant of $300,000 and a guarantee of up to 5,000 scholarships, officials said.

"As one of our attorneys said, this day will be remembered as the day Bishop turned the corner," Watkins said. "We know we're over the top and have got the money."

Watkins clutched a stack of checks sent by individuals, churches and private associations from around the country.

"Today, money has come in by bus, by hand, by courier and by express," he said.

St. John Missionary Baptist Church of Dallas presented Watkins with checks totaling $104,640. The National Baptist Convention of America donated $50,000 and pledged to give the college at least $100,000 each year for the next three years.

"Bishop has been living too long to die so quick," said the Rev. Edward Jones, convention president.

Throughout the afternoon, a steady stream of donors passed into an office in the school chapel with their donations, some for thousands of dollars, others for less than $15.

Erika Howard, 5, a student at Brandon Street Christian Academy, brought $11.95 donated by her classmates.

"I told them Bishop College was going to close, and I didn't want it to," she said.

College officials didn't have an exact figure of how much had been raised, but Watkins said the school's accountants told him that Bishop had received more than $300,000 in cash and checks during the past week.

The college didn't pay full salaries in December and hadn't met January's payroll.

Bishop filed for protection under Chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy laws last April, and its accreditation later was revoked by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. As a result, the college also lost all federal funds.

U.S. Department of Education officials said they might restore Bishop's federal funds if the college raised the money, received the matching grant and scholarships and established an endowment using the assets of an East Texas private school.

The third condition involves St. Paul Industrial Training School in Henderson County, under pressure from the state attorney general to shut down because of questions of whether it meets its charter provisions.

Bishop College, with a predominantly black enrollment, was founded in Marshall, in 1881 and moved to Dallas in 1961.

Head of judiciary panel named

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby have announced that Rep. James Hury will head the Joint Select Committee on the Judiciary.

Hury, D-Galveston, is serving his third term in the House. He is chairman of the House Judicial Affairs Committee and a member of the House Judiciary Committee.

The select committee was established by the 1987 Legislature. It will examine methods of selecting state judges and study possible changes affecting the state's judiciary and judicial branch operations.

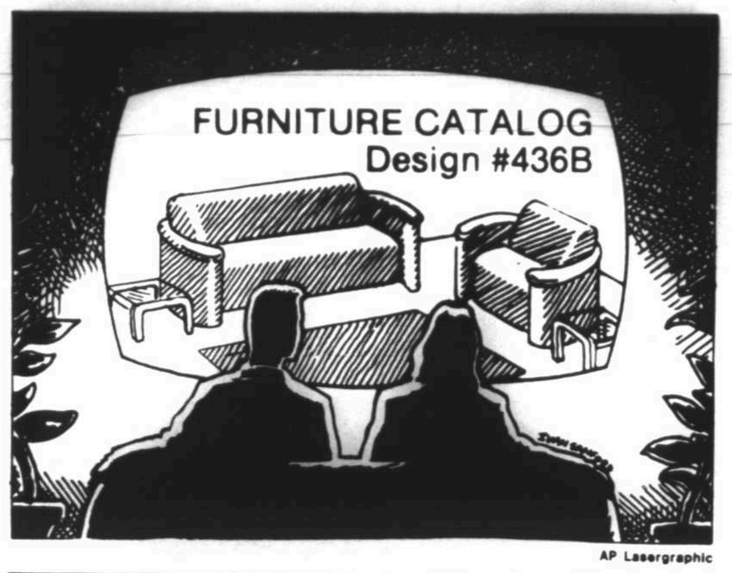
Future will see new age of electronics, railroads

EDITOR'S NOTE: In a special 10-part series for the Associated Press, John Diebold, an internationally acknowledged authority in technology and management, predicts the future in letters to his 2-year-old daughter who will be 25 in the year 2010.

By JOHN DIEBOLD



AP Lasergraphic

Looking to the future — Part Three —

Dear Emma:

In the year 2010 — it will be a fine time for educated young people like you to be in the business world. You will be able to choose from among many attractive job offers. For the world's more advanced societies, there will be a steady growth in skilled jobs.

The distinguishing feature of the future business world that does not exist today will be an "information infrastructure." Like the network of roads and bridges and public works that are the physical foundation of our world, tomorrow's business infrastructure will be dominated by computers, cables and satellites: a highway system for information.

Firms will send mail, transfer funds, and exchange documents of all kinds, both pictures and words, through the same electronic channels that carry telephone conversations. It will truly be a "wired society" — but the wires will be different. New materials — ceramics that may be spun into fine hairs — will carry electricity with no waste from resistance.

And there will emerge faster computers as well as widespread use of cheap electric power. The age of electricity will be reborn — with significant consequences for business and everyday life.

Even the railroad — that great symbol of the Industrial Age in the 19th century — will be revitalized in the 21st century. Trains in the U.S. will become a much-used alternative to planes for business travel. After a century of neglect, the American railroads will re-emerge with sleek, 300-mile-per-hour trains that float in the grip of magnetic tracks. These trains will meet no friction or resistance, making for a smooth and quiet ride.

With these new-era trains will come new uses of energy sources. Companies will make use of fuel sources in hard-to-reach places in the Arctic and Antarctic. Solar energy will be difficult, but it will supplement wind, clean coal, and other energy sources. Old battleships will be converted into floating batteries, storing and carrying electricity where it is needed. Energy will be stored indefinitely, with no loss of power. (In my day, Emma, most energy had to be generated as needed!)

The rate of change — social, economic, technological — will accelerate. Managers will have to know how to make large, sound investments in research, and recover their investments quickly. Businesses will have to be very flexible to achieve this balance, and many more will fail than in the 1980s. Professional talent will be much in demand, and job-hopping will be common.

These shiftings in the business world will go far beyond the corporation — they will mean a very different way of life for you, Emma.

One highly visible indication of this change will be public electronic kiosks, which will be as commonplace as public telephones today. At these kiosks, video screens will display information — for example, travel directions for confused tourists, or "For Rent" listings for apartment seekers — or they might carry electronic messsages for business travelers, all at the sound of a spoken command or at the touch of a hand.

In an increasingly paperless society, books will be available electronically. You might read them on your home computer, Emma, or print out chapters on paper to carry with you, or even have your computer read them aloud to you. Electronic books will replace paperbacks as the cheapest way to read. Meanwhile, publishers and communications companies will meld together into a single industry; AT&T will be in the same business as the New York Times.

Consumers will buy goods with "smart cards" — like credit cards, with embedded computer chips — that transfer funds from their bank accounts to store cashiers anywhere in the world. You won't have to worry about exchanging money when you travel, Emma — you will be able to buy an antique wristwatch in Hong Kong, and transfer payment automatically from your U.S. account to the foreign store.

Future robot systems will be electronically linked with video catalogs appearing on TV screens in homes. In this way, all manufactured goods will be "made to order," according to the exact specifications of the consumer.

Can you imagine how absurd it was in the 1980s, for retailers to send lavishly printed color catalogs to millions of homes?

Your version of home shopping will, no doubt, make so much more sense to you. I can imagine you seated before your TV or computer, seeing various models of furniture on your screen, and ordering a table to the precise measurements of your room, and it will automatically come off the assembly line — custom-made, packed, and shipped by robots.

Youth who don't attend college being forgotten

WASHINGTON (AP) — Young Americans who aren't headed for college show an encouraging desire to finish high school and get jobs, but they need more help finding careers in an economy that is "flowing against them," according to a private report released today.

Failure to give these youth more assistance in getting established "threatens to undermine the transition of increasing numbers of young people into stable marriages and financially secure family life," said the study by the William T. Grant Foundation's Commission on Work, Family and Citizenship.

On an encouraging note, the report found that today's 16-to-24-year-olds are staying in high school longer, dropping out less often, frequently finding at least part-time jobs and using drugs less.

"Today's youth are not a generation on the skids," it said. "Most are making it, even though the economic tide is flowing against them."

However, the report cautioned that because the changing U.S. economy demands increasingly specialized skills, the approximately 20 million young adults who aren't likely to attend college "are in danger of being left at the starting gate."

"Where high school graduates could once seek steady, good paying jobs in manufacturing, agriculture and transportation, they find these positions are disappearing by the millions," said the report, titled, "The Forgotten Half: Non-College Youth In America."

It said that without better programs to help these youth succeed, "this nation may face a future divided not along lines of race or geography but of educational attainment."

It recommended that non-college youth be given more help moving into careers, and encouraged schools to "forge links with business and government to give youth a careful look at the work world."

Schools also should encourage high school dropouts to return to class, businesses should offer young people a chance to do responsible and challenging work, and government should offer more "added chance" programs for those who need training and help finding jobs, the study said.

Idaho snow sculptors to participate in Olympics

MILWAUKEE (AP) — An Idaho Falls, Idaho, team has won the right to represent the United States during the Winter Olympics in Calgary, Canada: in the snow sculpture competition.

Team captain Michelle Havens, Marilyn Hansen and Allen Haroldsen carved a horse and a dragon out of a huge block of ice to beat out 40 teams from as far away as Alaska and Connecticut.

Temperatures in the 30s and gusty winds destroyed at least seven sculptures created during the four-day competition at the Milwaukee County Zoo before last Saturday's judging. However, the judges said none of the destroyed works would have won, said zoo spokeswoman Laura Pedriani.

The Idaho team will participate in the Calgary competition Feb. 9-12 being held along with the Olympics.

The USS San Jacinto sails past its namesake battlefield Tuesday, with the San Jacinto Monument, background, marking the site. The cruiser will be commissioned Saturday.

USS San Jacinto honored with National Guard salute

HOUSTON (AP) — With more than 300 members of its crew standing at attention amid 21-gun salutes, the Navy's newest and most sophisticated guided missile cruiser traveled up the ship channel to the Port of Houston.

The USS San Jacinto, an Aegis class cruiser, is named after the battle that gained the Republic of Texas its independence.

Tuesday's arrival ceremonies came after a one-day delay while the ship waited out a heavy fog in Galveston Bay on Monday.

While the other nine ships of the Aegis class are also named after historic battles, the $1 billion San Jacinto is unique in that the commissioning is to take place within sight of its namesake.

The San Jacinto is named after the 1836 battle in which the outnumbered Texas Army, commanded by Sam Houston, defeated the Mexican Army under Gen. Santa Anna. The battlefield site, about 15 miles east of downtown Houston, is now a Texas state park and home to the Battleship Texas.

Flying a Texas flag on its beam mast, the new 567-foot vessel exchanged a 21-gun salute with a four-cannon battery manned by Texas National Guardsmen onshore.

Several hundred people waited at the park and dozens of others lined the ship channel at viewing spots to see the ship cruise by.

"I was real pleased," said Ed Geeson of Houston, who waited for two hours at the park with his wife just to see the ship. "I wanted to see what it was all about. They sure had enough men lined up from one end to the other."

As the ship passed and exchanged salutes, the more than 300-man crew stood "manning the rail" — at attention — along the port side.

The 21-gun salute, normally reserved for foreign heads of state, was designated in honor of the Battleship Texas, the flagship of the Texas Navy. The ship, the last of the dreadnaught class of battleships, saw action in World Wars I and II and now is undergoing restoration.

"Every so often we get to come down to something like this, very interesting," said Sgt. Ken Denmark of Austin.

Computer file error leads to wrong man's arrest

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A man who was jailed twice because he had the same name as a fugitive says he would make a citizen's arrest if he ever found the wanted man.

"I'd probably want to wrestle him to the ground and hold him for the cops," David Wayne Sutton chuckled Tuesday. "But I don't really think I would want to meet him."

Sutton was released from the Bexar County Jail Tuesday after prosecutors said he was not the man wanted on several felony charges.

To ensure he is not arrested another time, Sutton plans to carry a portfolio containing newspaper clippings about his mistaken arrest and court documents, including photographs of himself and the fugitive.

His attorney, Jack Paul Leon, said he will file a lawsuit against the sheriff's department, who mixed Sutton's background information into a computer file of the wanted man.

"We're trying to publicize that this is not the man that is wanted," Leon said. "If somebody stops him in Small Town, Texas, or Large Town, Texas, he'll have some documents there with reports of the incident...to prevent it from happening again," Leon said.

The other Sutton has been charged with burglary of a building, retribution, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, possession of a controlled substance and injury to a child, officials said.

Sheriff Harlon Copeland said the innocent Sutton's record has been cleared.

"One of my people in the ID section made an error, causing this man to be rearrested and put in jail," Copeland said. "I don't blame that man. I would want my attorney to threaten a lawsuit too."

Sutton was first arrested in August at the San Antonio International Airport after returning from his honeymoon.

His attorneys thought they had the misunderstanding resolved until Sutton was arrested in Kendall County Sunday because of bad computer information.

He was transferred to Bexar County Jail late Monday while his lawyers tried to clear the confusion, finally being released Tuesday afternoon through a court order.

"We're trying to publicize that this is not the man that is wanted. If somebody stops him in Small Town, Texas, or Large Town, Texas, he'll have some documents there with reports of the incident...to prevent it from happening again."
— Attorney Jack Paul Leon

Sutton, who had to sleep on a concrete floor in an overcrowded cell, recalled how coped with the arrests.

"The first time I was arrested I was cooperative because I didn't know what was going on," Sutton said.

"I knew that if you came out and gave them too much trouble and said, 'Hey I'm not so and so and you'd better let me out of here,' that it would just cause more trouble," he said.

"This time when I was arrested I kept the anger inside, kept to myself, kept quiet and kind of coasted through it," he said.

District Attorney Fred Rodriguez blamed sheriff's department officials for the computer error, but also said the similarities between the Suttons were extraordinarily confusing.

"They had almost the same everything. Both were named David Wayne Sutton. One was born in 1956, the other in 1957. Both have blue eyes and brown hair. One weighs 160, the other 155; one is 5-11, the other is 5-10 and the pictures are not that different either," Rodriguez said.

He said after Sutton's first release, the sheriff's department erred when it placed Sutton's information with that of the fugitive.

Suspect in agent's murder said he was Dallas cop

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A Texan suspected of killing a real estate agent who was showing him houses had told other agents he was an undercover narcotics officer from Dallas.

Four Realtors took Ricky Dale Adkins, 22, of Lubbock, Texas, to several houses before he allegedly looked at houses Sunday with Billie Dean Hamilton, the woman he is suspected of knifing to death.

Broker Tommy Sanders said Adkins told him he was in town to interview with the Birmingham Police Department, and that his wife was a doctor who planned to join a Birmingham medical center.

Sanders said the man made several "off-the-wall" comments.

He said Adkins told him he didn't like for anyone else to drive him. He said Adkins told him "if a person driving him had a wreck, he would kill that person. If he died, he would come back to haunt that person."

Sanders said nevertheless, he, his brother and sister-in-law did the driving while showing Adkins houses Friday and Saturday.

Earlier Friday, Realtor Becky Farmer drove the man after refusing to ride in his black Ford Bronco.

"I really think if she had gotten into that Bronco, the same thing would have happened to her," Sanders said.

Adkins was arrested Monday at a motel in Richmond County, Ga., several hours after Mrs. Hamilton's body was found in a wooded area east of Birmingham by a man who had pulled off Interstate 20 near Leeds.

With his arrest, officers went from Hoover, just south of Birmingham, to Georgia to question him. Police Lt. Nick Derzis said murder and kidnapping charges likely would be filed.

Derzis said Tuesday police sent by computer to police departments across the country a summary of the abduction and killing, on the chance a similar crime occurred elsewhere.

"In a situation like this crime, where the circumstances are more unusual in terms of the calculated measures taken by the killer, you certainly have to question if the killer has done this before," Derzis said.

Ray Hamilton reported his wife missing about 10 p.m. Sunday.

Housing starts lowest since 1982

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing starts plunged 16.2 percent in December, the steepest monthly decline in more than three years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the weakness in December helped drag down housing construction for the entire year to 1.62 million units, the poorest showing for the housing industry since the recession year of 1982.

The December decline was the largest monthly drop since a 26 percent plunge in March 1984.

The fact that the year ended on such a weak note was likely to raise concerns among economists who have been closely watching for signs of whether the record collapse in stock prices in October was a severe enough jolt to consumer confidence to trigger a recession in 1988.

Housing construction had risen 6.6 percent in November, the month immediately following the October stock crash, but analysts at the time had said unusually warm weather during the period had artificially inflated the figures.

The November starts figure had also been influenced by a decline in mortgage interest rates as the Federal Reserve flooded the economy with money in the weeks immediatley following the crash.

But in December, mortgage rates began rising again and now stand at around 10.5 percent for fixed-rate, 30-year mortgages.

For the year, the 1.62 million housing units constructed compared to construction of 1.81 million units in 1987, which had been an exceptionally strong year for the industry. Last year had the slowest building pace since 1.06 million units were built in 1982.

Analysts blamed much of the weakness on widespread overbuilding in the apartment sector and the adverse effects of the new tax law on real estate investments.

In December, single-family starts fell by 7.8 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.02 million units.

Multi-unit construction plummeted 33.6 percent to an annual rate of 351,000 units, continuing the downward trend in evidence all year.

Housing construction fell 26.4 percent in the West to an annual rate of 318,000 units, the biggest decline of any geographic region.

Housing construction in the South, which accounted for 40 percent of all new homes built last year, dropped 15 percent in December

Workers comp proving costly to Texas

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The spiraling cost of Workers' Compensation insurance is hurting not only individual businesses, but the Texas economy and its ability to attract and maintain business as well, say expert on the state's system.

Max Emmert, a member of the Employers' Advisory Council to the Texas Industrial Accident Board documents one instance of an employer closing a Texas plant rather than one of its other 21 facilities because of inordinately high workers' compensation claims.

"The cost of Workers' Compensation at Sulphur Springs (Texas) for a five-year period from 1981 through Dec. 31, 1986 were 460 percent greater than the cost at an average plant," wrote A.F. Ahnemann, vice president of human resources for the Lee Co., a clothing manufacturer.

Emmert read the letter to employers attending an all-day seminar co-sponsored by the Texas Employment Commission's Job Service Employer Committee and the Permian Basin chapter of the International Association of Drilling Contractors.
a seminar co-sponsored by local affiliates of the Texas Employment Commission and International Association of Drilling Contractors on Tuesday.

"Granting that averages can be deceiving, we looked at the next worst plant in the Lee system over the same period and found Sulphur Springs' costs were 204 percent higher," Ahnemann continued in the letter to the EAC. All plants are nearly identical in terms of product, equipment, working conditions, union status, pay and benefits, he added, so "We had to assume there was something different in the way in which Workers' Compensation laws were functioning in Texas."

Between August 1984 and November 1987 Workers' Compensation insurance carriers have been granted premium rate increases of 11.8, 30.7, 17.7 and 25.0 percent. Said Nick Huestis, a former Employers' representative on the Industrial Accident Board: "It's already too late to do anything about 1988, I'm sure we will see another premium increase this year."

Emmert, who is president of Yale E. Key Well Service in Midland, pointed out that Texas' premiums are among the 10 highest in the nation. He predicted they may be as high as second — behind California — but said that 1987 figures are not yet available.

At the same time, worker benefits in the state are among the 10 lowest paid in the nation, he said.

Another letter to the EAC, this one from Johnson Controls Inc., a Wisconsin-based electronics manufacturer, is more blunt. "We recently analyzed six states as potential sites for a new facility with one of the major considerations being Workers' Compensation systems," wrote Mick McGavin of Johnson's corporate risk management team.

"We judged Texas to be far and away the worst. Unless other factors compensate for the unfavorable Workers' Compensation environment, our new plant will not be built in Texas," McGavin continued.

"I assure you that Workers' Compensation costs will also be a consideration whenever over-capacity in any of out businesses causes us to consider closing a facility." Johnson evaluations determined that 10 percent of its total national Workers' Compensation losses were attributable to its 250-worker Dallas operation. The Dallas facility is one of 192 branch construction offices and manufacturing plant and employs less than 1 percent of the company's 27,000 workers.

Huestis, who recently completed a four-year tenure on the IAB, is now working for the Texas Association of Business to bring about Workers' Compensation reform.

Texas hiring under fire

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Texas' status as an "employment at will" state is steadily eroding under concerns about discriminatory hiring practices and wrongful terminations, according to a Houston labor relations attorney.

Debra Tellez, of the Andrews & Kurth law firm, told local employers that the desire of employers to avoid personnel litigation is growing constantly.

"Employers are not prohibited from asking an applicant or employee about race, age, sex, marital status or any other attribute. What is prohibited by federal law is using any of those criteria as the basis for employment or termination," said Tellez, who addressed about 125 attendees of an employment issues seminar Tuesday.

"The problem with asking is that a reviewing agency will establish a presumption of use because the information is on the application," Tellez explained.

"Unless a BFOQ (bona fide occupational qualification) can be established for a particular criteria — such as religious preference at a parochial school — arbitrary standards cannot be legally used to bar employment," Tellez said.

Any background information sought by the employer for use in employment decisions should be provable as a valid work related requirement, such as credit ratings and criminal record for financial institutions or drug testing in safety-sensitive positions.

Public employers and others who require data about race, sex, handicap and so forth in order to complete Affirmative Action Plans are advised to compile and store such information separate from individuals' personnel files, she said.

Midland cost of living up

From Staff Reports

Reversing a downward trend, Midland's cost of living climbed 0.7 percent during December, according ClayDesta National Bank's monthly survey.

The cost of goods and services in Midland rose a slight 0.3 percent in 1987, with a 0.8 percent rise computed in the last six months of the year. Odessa had a 0.3 percent increase in December, and a 2.9 percent increase for the year, the survey data shows.

Eating out was 1.3 percent less expensive in December, thanks to lower prices for desserts and dishes prepared with fish and chicken. Restaurant prices declined 4.9 percent in the last year.

For the fifth consecutive month, transportation costs were down, with a 1.2 percent fall coming in December. The decrease was due to a second month of lower gasoline prices, which offset a second month of higher automobile insurance premiums. Transportation costs fell 5.8 percent in 1987.

Reversing a seven-month climb, medical costs dropped 0.2 percent as lower costs for hospital care and dental care offset a fifth month of higher non-prescription medicine prices. Midlanders paid 9.2 percent more in medical costs during 1987.

Buying food for home cost 2.1 percent more in December as higher prices for meat, alcohol and shelf items offset lower produce costs. Food costs in Midland rose 2.7 percent during the last year.

A third month of mixed but generally higher rents helped produce a 1.4 percent increase in housing costs during December. However, Tall City housing expenses fell 2.3 percent in the past year.

Clothing costs were up 0.9 percent in December, as higher prices for men's wear and children's clothing offset lower price tags for women's apparel. ClayDesta measured a 2.4 percent rise in clothing costs during 1987.

First RepublicBank reports $347 million quarterly loss

DALLAS (AP) — First RepublicBank Corp. reported a net loss of $347.8 million, or $10.87 per fully diluted share, for the fourth quarter ending Dec. 31, 1987.

The fourth quarter loss was due primarily to continued declines in appraised market values of foreclosed properties and real estate pledged as loan collateral, company officials said Tuesday.

"Continued economic weakness, especially in the Texas and Southwest real estate markets, is adversely impacting First RepublicBank's earnings performance," said Gerald W. Fronterhouse, chairman and chief executive officer. "The benefits of the merger of RepublicBank and InterFirst have lessened the impact of these weak market conditions."

There were no comparable figures for 1986 because of the merger.

For all of last year, First RepublicBank's net loss of $656.8 million, or $22.31 per fully diluted share, included a special $325 million addition in the second quarter to the loan losses allowance, primarily for loans to 18 developing nations, company officials said.

Nonperforming assets increased $793 million from the third quarter to $3.9 billion at the end of December 1987, with about 85 percent of the increase coming from real estate-related assets, officials said. First RepublicBank's non-performing assets ratio was 15.9 percent on Dec. 31, compared to 12.4 percent on Sept. 30.

"While the timing of the improvement in the Texas real estate market is uncertain, we believe our intensive efforts to dispose of troubled real estate assets will begin to show results this year," Fronterhouse said.

The company reported that personnel reductions of more than 2,200 positions or 13 percent of the work force during 1987 helped reduced total overhead costs in the fourth quarter to $246 million, $21 million or 8 percent less than the $267 million in the fourth quarter last year.

First RepublicBank is Texas' largest bank-holding company with total assets of $33.2 billion on Dec. 31, 1987.

Local realtor joins Travelers network

By MELLA McEWEN

McEwen

Midland realtor LANGSTON REALTORS, 1908 W. Wall, has joined the Travelers realty Network, a national relocation broker referral system.

Travelers Realty assists transferring employees by purchasing their homes for resale. Headquartered in Orlando, Fla., it is comprised of nearly 350 firms and 22,000 associates in 1,200 offices serving approximately 4,500 communities in the U.S.

Joanne Langston, president of Langston Realtors, stated that the new network will make more potential buyers available to the Midland market and offers real estate assistance to people leaving this area.

In another marketing move, Langston has also established a bimonthly Market Update newsletter for distribution to Midland businesses and individuals.

MARKETS

Oil prices close unchanged

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures prices finished little changed Tuesday after a late selloff all but wiped out the gains from an early rally.

Market analysts said traders remained bedeviled by questions over whether influential members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were discounting their crude or were cheating on their self-imposed production limits.

The February contract for West Texas Intermediate, the main U.S. crude, traded as high as $17.54 per barrel before falling in late trading to close at $17.35, up 2 cents from Monday's close.

Prices rose for refined products traded on the exchange. Wholesale unleaded gasoline for February delivery rose 0.05 cent a gallon to 45.84 cents after trading as high as 46.45 cents. Wholesale home heating oil for February delivery, which traded as high as 51.45 cents a gallon, finished up 0.48 cent at 51.19 cents.

Crude futures had surged higher on Monday, but traders had said the market remained vulnerable to a selloff due to uncertainty over world oil supplies and production, which had caused a big price drop last week.

Dollar declines in light trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell in light European trading early today as markets absorbed news of a widening trade gap between the United States and Japan.

Gold bullion rose to around $477.75 an ounce.

The dollar was being quoted at lower levels against all other major currencies in Europe, but traders said it appeared to be leveling off at midmorning.

The dollar had come under selling pressure Tuesday on a Japanese report that Japan's trade surplus with the United States climbed to $4.9 billion in December from $4.2 billion in November.

The news raised concern that the sharp improvement in the U.S. trade deficit in November, reported last Friday, may have been a temporary phenomenon.

—1.6654 West German marks, down from 1.6815

—1.3537 Swiss francs, down from 1.3695

—5.6185 French francs, down from 5.6685

—1.8725 Dutch guilders, down from 1.8895

—1,228.50 Italian lire, down from 1,234.50

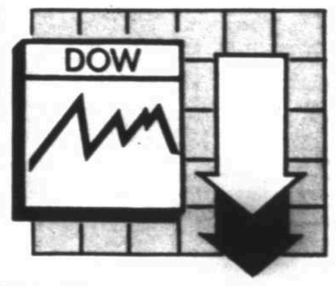
—1.2850 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2870

The dollar also fell against the British pound, which was quoted at $1.7900, up from $1.7750.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 128.78 Japanese yen, down fractionally from Tuesday's close of 128.90 yen. In later London trading Wednesday, it slipped to 128.63 yen.

London's major bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $477.75 a troy ounce, up from $477 late Tuesday.

Selling spree sends stocks lower



NEW YORK (AP) — A late afternoon selling spree squelched a brief rally in stock prices Tuesday, capping a nervous, low-volume session that some Wall Street strategists called typical of the post-crash market.

"People are still very worried, especially the professional investor community," said Philip C. Puccio, senior vice president and manager of institutional trading at Dillon Read & Co.. "The volatility is just horrendous and lack of volume is depressing. So we're kind of in a holding pattern."

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials declined sharply at the opening, rose slightly by midafternoon and slid again in the last hour of trading, ending the session down 27.52 points to 1,936.34.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

MBank, voting trust members settle suit

From Staff Reports

The principals in a state court action filed by MBank against members of a voting trust of the former Western Bank of Midland reach an out-of-court settlement on Monday, according to one of the defendants attorney.

The suit, scheduled to be heard in 68th State District Court in Dallas on Tuesday, alleged that four members of the voting trust — Charles Knorr Sr., Charles Knorr Jr., Joel Starnes and Raymond Jenkins — were liable for a portion of the trust's debts, said Al Kroemer of Dallas, who represented Jenkins.

Both MBank's claims and counterclaims filed by the defendants will be dismissed as a result of the settlement, the terms of which were not released.

Changes in Texaco bylaws approved

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc.'s board of directors and the committee representing the oil company's shareholders have agreed on changes in Texaco's bylaws on the eve of a U.S. Bankruptcy Court hearing on the firm's reorganization plan.

Texaco announced the agreement late Tuesday. It amounted to an effort to solidify shareholder support for Texaco's reorganization plan against the one proposed by financier Carl C. Icahn, who controls the biggest block of Texaco stock.

Henley offers rival directors for Santa Fe

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Henley Group Inc. said it plans to put forward a rival slate of directors for the board at beleaguered Santa Fe Southern Pacific Corp.

Henley owns just under 15 percent of the railroad and energy company's common stock. On Tuesday it said it wanted to seek support for its plan from Olympia & York Developments Ltd., which has a 9.3 percent stake.

Suit could cost State Farm $300 million

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some 1,100 women denied jobs as agents with State Farm Insurance Co. in California could receive individual awards of up to $420,000 in what attorneys said might be the biggest settlement ever of a federal sex discrimination suit.

The award in the nine-year-old class action suit could cost State Farm $300 million, according to attorney Guy Saperstein, who represented the three plaintiffs, Muriel Kranowski, Wilda Tipton and Daisy Jackson.

COMP

A Select Committee of the Texas House assembled to study the issue concluded that the state's current compensation scheme is "fatally flawed and can only be corrected by a total rewrite."

Huestis told the employers that a "wage-loss" system with negotiated benefit levels could both control costs and increase benefits to injured workers.

"The current 'pot of gold' mentality that pervades the claim system drives the adversarial process between workers and employers and does little to address the needs of the injured party and his/her family," Huestis said.

"Doing away with lump sum payments, limiting lawyers' role in compensation to preservation of rights to a claim — not in settling cases — would move the state's system from an administrative law function toward becoming a medical disability system, better suited to monitoring medical progress, getting employees back on the job and relieving their hardship," he added.

Huestis said that after lump sum Workers' Comp settlements were outlawed in Pennsylvania, the number of claims dropped by 50 percent. "If maximum benefits are known up front, it eliminates the incentive to file exaggerated or fraudulent claims."

HIRE

The recruitment and application process can of itself be judged discriminatory. For instance, having all applicants routinely complete the I-9 Immigration & Naturalization Service form gives the employer unnecessary, and potentially inappropriate, information about an applicant's national origin.

Pre-employment drug screening, AIDS testing and similar highly personal information raise the issue of confidentiality. Employers can be held monetarily liable for breaching the right of privacy, slander or retaliation if confidential information is released to individuals without a legitimate need to know.

So you couldn't get tickets to the game!

The thrill of a game-winning football pass, the crack of a well-hit baseball and a gravity-defying basketball slam dunk are all part of the excitement of attending sports events.

Unfortunately, for many of the really big games there are more fans who want tickets than there are seats in the stadium. The "next best thing to being there" is to invite family and friends to gather around the television to cheer your favorite team to victory.

No one will miss stadium hot dogs and peanuts when you serve delicious, easy-to-fix foods. Whether it's a pre-game brunch or a half time supper, the slow cooker makes preparation a snap.

Add the convenience of chicken- and beef-flavor instant bouillon or bouillon cubes and you have mouth-watering soups, stews and sandwich fillings that are sure to bring cheers from your guests.

Recipes prepared in the slow cooker give the hosts the time to enjoy watching the game. Foods can also be served in the removable liner so clean-up is minimal.

Bouillon enhances the flavor of both long-simmered dishes and quick skillet recipes. Bouillon's savory goodness means that fewer spices and no additional salt are needed in most recipes.

The next time the big game is sold out, or for a sumptuous, yet simple tailgate spread, serve hearty slow cooker main dishes.

Barbecue Beef Sandwiches

Makes 10 to 12 servings

- 1 (3-pound) rolled beef rump roast
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1 (15-ounce) can tomato sauce
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons bottled lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon beef-flavor instant bouillon or 3 beef-flavor bouillon cubes
- 1-1/2 teaspoons chili powder
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- Hard rolls or buns

Coat meat with flour; set aside. In slow cooker, combine remaining ingredients except rolls, mix well. Place roast in Crock-Pot® coating with sauce. Cover; cook on LOW setting 10 to 12 hours (HIGH setting 6 hours). Slice or break meat into small pieces; mix with sauce. Serve on rolls. Refrigerate leftovers.

Tangy Chicken In A Pita

Makes 8 servings

- 2 pounds skinned, boneless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 (8-ounce) can juice-pack pineapple chunks, drained, reserving juice
- 1 small onion, cut into thin wedges
- 3 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 3 teaspoons chicken-flavor instant bouillon or 3 chicken-flavor bouillon cubes
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/4 cup cornstarch
- 1 green pepper, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 red pepper, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 4 (6-inch) pita bread rounds, cut in half

In slow cooker, combine chicken, reserved pineapple juice, onion, vinegar, brown sugar, soy sauce, bouillon, garlic powder and ginger. Cover; cook on LOW setting 8 to 10 hours (HIGH setting 4 hours). In small bowl, combine water and cornstarch; stir into chicken mixture with green and red pepper. Cover; cook on HIGH setting 30 minutes. Serve warm in pita bread halves. Refrigerate leftovers.

Hearty Chicken and Rice Soup

Makes about 2 quarts

- 1 pound skinned, boneless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 5 cups water
- 8 ounces fresh mushrooms, sliced (2 cups)
- 3/4 cup sliced celery
- 1/2 cup sliced carrots
- 1/2 cup raw converted rice
- 1/4 cup chopped green onions
- 5 teaspoons chicken-flavor instant bouillon or 5 chicken-flavor bouillon cubes
- 1/2 teaspoon ground sage
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

In slow cooker, combine ingredients. Cover; cook on LOW setting 7 to 9 hours (HIGH setting 4 hours). Refrigerate leftovers.

Chili and Meatballs With Cornmeal Dumplings

Not Pictured

Makes 4 servings

- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 3/4 cup finely chopped onion
- 1/4 cup dry bread crumbs
- 1 egg
- 5 teaspoons beef-flavor instant bouillon
- 3 teaspoons chili powder
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 2 (14-1/2-ounce) cans stewed tomatoes
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 (15-1/2-ounce) can kidney beans, undrained
- Cornmeal Dumplings*

In medium bowl, combine meat, 1/4 cup onion, bread crumbs, egg, 3 teaspoons bouillon and 1 teaspoon chili powder; mix well. Shape into 1-1/2-inch meatballs; roll in flour. Brown meatballs; drain and set aside. In slow cooker, combine remaining ingredients except beans and Cornmeal Dumplings; stir in meatballs. Cover; cook on LOW setting 8 to 10 hours (HIGH setting 6 hours). Stir in kidney beans. Prepare dumplings; drop by spoonfuls onto chili. Cover and cook on HIGH setting 45 to 60 minutes or until dumplings are cooked through. (If LOW setting, turn to HIGH 15 minutes before adding dumplings.) Refrigerate leftovers.

Cornmeal Dumplings:* In medium bowl, combine 1-1/2 cups biscuit baking mix, 1/2 cup yellow cornmeal and 2/3 cup milk.

DEAR ABBY

Sister's practices cause sibling pain

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just found out that my younger sister (in her 20s) is practicing sadomasochism. I know very little about the subject, and I am worried. Are people who are into S and M considered normal? My sister has a whip and assorted paraphernalia. Is there any real danger in this kind of thing? I don't want her to hurt herself. And how widespread is it? — WORRIED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR WORRIED: I asked my consultant, Dr. Judd Marmor, past president of the Academy of Psychoanalysis and past president of the American Psychiatric Association. Dr. Marmor said:

"S and M fantasies are very extensive in our culture, judging from the widespread popularity of S and M pornographic literature and films. A fairly large number of men and women practice S and M in private and within groups or clubs, yet carry on apparently normal lives otherwise.

"S and M cannot be considered normal behavior, however, because the need to inflict or suffer pain in the course of sexual relations is an obvious neurotic corruption of something that ought to be a tender and loving exchange. In addition, there is always the danger of actual physical injury occurring — sometimes with serious consequences.

"Unfortunately, many of these individuals neither want nor seek psychotherapy, but if they could be persuaded to try to understand the reason for their deviant need, they could be helped to modify or overcome it — which would be to their long-term advantage."

DEAR ABBY: In answer to "Still in Love at 78" — the woman who loves to have her husband along to help her grocery-shop: It's all fine and dandy to have a 24-hour relationship, but what are you going to do when one of the couple dies?

A casual friend lost her husband after 46 years of marriage. She was lost — and still is, six years later.

She has no club to go to, no special interests, no hobbies, no close women friends — in fact, she's a very boring person to be around. All she does is moan about her loss and watch TV.

I've tried to help her by suggesting she do volunteer work or take some courses, but she says it wouldn't help. She just sits. — R.M.C., CALIFORNIA

DEAR R.M.C.: I have often urged men to learn how to cook, keep house, sew, do the laundry, marketing and all the chores their wives routinely do. And I have urged women to learn how to drive and maintain an automobile, become conversant with banking, insurance, mortgage payments, investments and all those things their husbands handle — for the obvious reason that although they start out together, they rarely finish together.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the woman who complained about a dentist chatting with an assistant or someone else while working on a patient: Dentists and other medical professionals will often intentionally converse with their staff while they're working on a patient. In areas of high stress, a patient can have a panic attack if left in the silence of an intimidating office and staff, only to hear the whine of high-speed instruments and feel the drowning sensation of the water spray, as the dentist drills away.

The technique of verbal distraction is practiced with patients of all ages. Granted, the dentist should not carry on loud, extended conversations with persons in another room, but a quiet conversation with a person nearby — or a chairside assistant — is usually considered minor mental relief, if not entertainment, for a patient lying on his back for 30 minutes or more staring at an acoustical tile ceiling.

As for the crown costing $600 — an old saying comes to mind: Dentistry isn't expensive — neglect is! — C.T., D.D.S., CITRUS HEIGHTS, CALIF.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Winter is 'nuttiest' time of year

By STEPHEN FRANK
Hearst News Service

This is the nuttiest time of year. Literally.

More almonds, pistachios, pecans, walnuts, macadamias, filberts, Brazil nuts and peanuts are sold during the winter than at any other season.

The recent spurt of sales capped a watershed year for the pistachio nut. For the first time ever, most of the pistachio nuts sold in the U.S. were domestically grown. Previously, most pistachios were imported from Iran.

Trade legislation that slapped an import fee on Iranian pistachios in 1986 and required country-of-origin labeling helped U.S. growers to overtake the Iranians, said Karen Dahlinger, public relations director for the California Pistachio Commission.

Pistachios are grown in California's Central Valley, where the nation's first commercial crop was harvested in 1976. Since then, the Unjted States has become the second largest pistachio producer in the world, behind Iran, Dahlinger said. She added that "consumption has gone up considerably."

As more pistachios are eaten, the nut-buying public's tastes have shifted from dyed-red pistachios to the nuts in their natural tan shell. When the pistachio was first introduced to the U.S. in the 1920s, red coloring was used cosmetically, to conceal processing stains.

"It's just artificial food coloring, but since that was the introduction of the pistachio to the United States, many consumers thought, 'If it's not red, it's not a pistachio,' " Dahlinger said. "When we started marketing back in the early '70s, we had to dye up to half the crop red, it sold so much better than the natural tan shell. But consumers are now coming around; only 5 to 10 percent are dyed."

Pecan growers also had a banner year in 1987. An estimated 275 million pounds of the nuts were sold last year, pulling the pecan even with arch-rival walnuts, according to Cindy Loggins, communications director for the Texas Pecan Growers Association in Bryan, Texas.

Unlike pistachios, most of which are sold directly to consumers for snacking, the bulk of the nation's pecan harvest is sold to confectioners, ice-cream makers, bakers and other food processors for inclusion in their products.

Sales of almonds, another nut widely used in food processing, are also booming, according to Susan Valdes, communications manager for Blue Diamond Inc., the giant nut-processing company based in Sacramento, Calif. California growers furnish 100 percent of the nation's almond needs and about 70 percent of the world supply.

"Almond consumption has been going up," Valdes said. Much of the increased almond-eating comes at breakfast, as the nuts are added to more and more breakfast cereals.

"Almonds are going by the millions of pounds into cereals," Valdes said. "There are 15 to 20 new cereals on the market with almonds in them."

It is true that nuts are a good source of protein, calcium and B vitamins and contain no cholesterol. But they also are high in total fat content and calories. Ten large walnuts, for instance, have more than 300 calories; 10 large peanuts have 105 calories. Consequently, nutrition experts recommend that nuts be consumed sparingly.

As snacks, nuts are more nutritious than potato chips or pretzels, according to "Jane Brody's Nutrition Book." Nuts are also excellent complements to other vegetable proteins, such as beans and legumes.

WHAT'S COOKING

Cook creates elegant cakes

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature non-profit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the second article in a series of interviews with members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Imagine a pizza with a golden-brown crust, rings of bell pepper, tiny slices of mushrooms, pepperoni, cheese and tomato sauce. Now try to picture it all being made out of sugar and frosting atop a cake.

The impressive pizza facsimile is just one of dozens of cakes Dell Main of Midland has created for special occasions. Ms. Main has been creating cakes, which range from the whimsical to the sublime, ever since she participated in a cake decorating class at Midland College in 1979.

Although she has worked for a bridal consultant and has produced several cakes a week at a time, Ms. Main said cake decorating is just a hobby because she works full-time for Texaco. "Word of mouth" has caused her hobby to increase, so that Ms. Main sometimes finds herself taking cakes out of her freezer during her lunch break, to prepare them for frosting after work. Ms. Main considers each cake a "work of art" designed to individual specifications.

Despite the patience and time needed to decorate the cakes, worked into a schedule with a full-time job and three active sons, Ms. Main said the most difficult aspect of her hobby is "watching someone cut into one of my cakes."

Midlanders for nearly 10 years, Ms. Main and her husband, Donald, are both active members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They both graduated from Brigham Young University and Ms. Main has put her degree in elementary education to work by serving as primary president for the children's organization of the Church.

She recently helped to organize a children's program on candy making for the Church. "We have about 120 children, from 18 months of age to 12 years, in the organization," Ms. Main said.

Never getting a slice of cake is something Ms. Main's children have gotten "used to."

"My children just accept that Mom's making another cake for someone else," she said. Ms. Main said, that after a week of making cakes to sell, she would rather not make any for the family. In fact, she said, that at one of her son's last birthday parties, they decided to forego the traditional ice cream and cake altogether and had banana splits.

Ms. Main belongs to the women's organization of her Church, and enjoys all kinds of handicrafts — ceramics, stenciling — and crocheting. She said much of her handiwork has been self-taught, and she likes to spend time exercising her creativity. To have time for her many projects, Ms. Main says she tends to keep meals simple and efficient — even though most of her cakes are intricate and elaborate.

Ms. Main has made dozens of cakes, some with three tiers and several satellite cakes. She has photographed each one of her creations and keeps the photographs catalogued in a album. Some of her cakes have won awards in cake decorating contests, including a first place ribbon in an Odessa competition. But Ms. Main said cake decorating contests are few, and she continues to produce cakes because she enjoys designing and creating them.

The following are some of Ms. Main's cake recipes and recipes for some of her family's favorite dishes.

1 cup sugar
5 eggs

Cream together the cream cheese and vanilla. Add sugar and eggs and beat well to form a batter. Line a small muffin tin with paper (fluted paper is best), pour about one tablespoon of batter into each cup. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes, until tops just begin to brown.

ZUCCHINI BREAD
2 cups grated zucchini (peeled)
3 eggs
1 teaspoon soda
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons vanilla
¼ teaspoon baking powder
1 cup oil
1 teaspoon salt

Mix above ingredients well in blender. Pour into large bowl and mix in 3 cups flour and ½ cup nuts. Pour in greased and floured pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

POUND CAKE
4 cups flour
3 cups sugar
6 eggs
¾ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon almond flavoring (optional)
1 pound butter or margarine

Cream butter and sugar. Add eggs one at a time, stirring after each addition. Add milk and flour alternately. Add flavorings. Bake at 325 degrees for 1½ hours, adding an additional 10-15 minutes of cooking time if needed.

HUMMINGBIRD CAKE
2 cups sugar
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup vegetable oil
3 eggs
1 8-ounce can crushed pineapple, including juice
2 cups chopped bananas
1 cup chopped nuts
1 teaspoon vanilla

Put all ingredients in a bowl and mix by hand. Pour into 3 8-inch greased and floured pans. Bake at 325 degrees for 30-35 minutes. Tip cakes onto wire cake racks and cool. When cooled, frost with Cream Cheese Frosting (recipe follows).

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING
8 ounces cream cheese, softened
1 box powdered sugar (1 pound)
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 teaspoons milk
Chopped nuts (optional)
Coconut (optional)

Cream together then ice cake.

ITALIAN CREAM CAKE
1 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
5 egg yolks
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
1 cup buttermilk
1 tablespoon vanilla
5 egg whites beaten until stiff
2 cups coconut
1 cups nuts
1 teaspoon salt

Cream sugar and shortening together by hand. Add salt and vanilla. Add egg yolks, one at a time, and stir after each addition. Mix soda into buttermilk and add to sugar mixture alternately with flour. Add nuts and coconut. Fold in egg whites very slowly.

Pour into 2 8-inch greased and floured cake pans and bake at 325 degrees for 30-35 minutes, or until golden brown. Tip cakes onto wire cake racks and cool. When cooled, frost with cream cheese frosting.

Poor hygiene often results in food poisoning

Copley News Service

Little Jack Horner sat in his corner, eating his Christmas pie.
He stuck in his thumb, pulled out a plum and said, "What a good boy am I!"

But did he wash his hands first? There's no mention of a tummy ache in the old nursery rhyme. But medical experts such as Dr. Anthony Manoguerra tell us that poor hygiene results in food poisoning more often than most people think.

According to Manoguerra, director of a poison control center for the past 10 years, three or four people call the center's emergency hotline every day with questions about food poisoning. Countless others don't bother to contact the center, figuring their distress is only a case of flu.

When should you suspect your illness is, indeed, "something you ate?"

Manoguerra says to question symptoms of vomiting, aches and pains and diarrhea if a number of people get sick at precisely the same time. When you see a headline like "High School Band Collapses After Eating Stadium Hot Dogs," you have a clue that there may have been more than a chill in the air.

For years the scapegoat has been family-reunion potato salad, oozing mayonnaise and left out in the sun. Not so, says Manoguerra.

"Commerical mayonnaise is processed so thoroughly that there is little chance of surviving bacteria. The real villains are probably the chicken and potatoes also in the salad. And even those would be perfectly safe if prepared, served and stored properly."

The thing to keep in mind is that bacteria responsible for most foodborne illnesses are ubiquitous. That's why food processing is the No. 1 concern of the Food Safety and Inspection Service, which monitors packing houses and factories.

CNS Graphic

Chief among the culprits is salmonella, causing almost half the food poisoning reported annually in the United States. Much to the alarm of the inspection agency, salmonella thrives in dairy and poultry facilities and thus some foods already are contaminated when they arrive on your kitchen counter.

That doesn't mean that you should stop drinking milk or eating chicken, but it does mean that precautions are in order for everyone handling food in your house.

Start by refrigerating everything perishable as soon as you get home — no feet-up cups of tea before unpacking. And when you start to cook, use a little common sense.

"It's amazing how many people taste food they suspect of being tainted to see if it's wholesome," says Manoguerra. His advice: "Throw it out if you have any doubts. By the time you decide if your bargain brie is still good, you may already be sick."

Always keep hands and utensils scrupulously clean. Don't overlook the cutting board, a frequent source of contamination.

For example: Manoguerra advises washing with hot soapy water any boards and knives used for chopping chicken before dicing vegetables, even though they may be destined for the same recipe. Some experts suggest rinsing with a mild bleach and water solution every few days to increase protection.

Even when the food is safely in the oven, you're not off the hook. Although thorough cooking kills bacteria, the danger returns if prepared foods are allowed to stand for a long time after serving.

According to health experts, even an hour may be too long, so prompt refrigeration is the best course.

You don't have to do the dishes, but do put away leftovers before sitting down to a cup of coffee or an after-dinner drink. Some people resist the idea of placing hot food in the refrigerator, believing that room-temperature items are easier on the cooling system.

Maybe so, but bacteria can't reproduce in the chilly atmosphere. Of course, the danger is magnified if the food was inadequately cooked in the first place. (Cook beef to at least 140 degrees Fahrenheit; veal, lamb and pork to 170 degrees F.)

What should you do if you suspect food poisoning? Call your physician or the local poison control center, of course. Most cities have a 24-hour telephone number where an expert is constantly available to dispense advice.

Usual therapy for illness caused by food contamination is to drink plenty of fluids and rest in bed, much like treatment for any mild intestinal problem. Occasionally, very young children or older people with pre-existing medical problems may require more extensive attention.

Manoguerra recommends posting your poison control center number near the telephone. That way you can get immediate help if you suspect that chicken soup may be the cause rather than the cure of your aches and pains.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture maintains a toll-free Meat and Poultry Hotline: 800-535-4555. Washington, D.C., residents call 447-3333.

Cabbage, cousins make up veggie salad

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Here's a tasty vegetable salad made up of cabbage and its cousins — broccoli, brussels sprouts, cauliflower, rutabaga, kale and turnips.

TANGY VEGETABLE SALAD
1 cup cauliflower flowerets
1 cup broccoli flowerets
1 cup coarsely chopped turnip
2 tablespoons sliced green onion
¼ cup low-fat plain yogurt
2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
½ teaspoon sugar

In a large bowl mix vegetables. Combine yogurt, mustard and sugar; toss with vegetables. Cover and chill at least 1 hour. Makes 4 servings.

Family-style meal baked in same dish saves time, cleanup

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

In this family-style main dish, sliced vegetables and meat loaf bake in the same dish at the same time.

BEEF AND POTATO BAKE
2 medium potatoes, peeled, halved, and thinly sliced (2 cups)
1 cup thinly sliced carrots
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons chopped green chili peppers
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 (10¾-ounce) can condensed cream of mushroom soup
¼ cup quick-cooking rolled oats
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 pound lean ground beef
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Snipped parsley

Combine potatoes, carrots, onion, chili peppers, ¾ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Add about ⅓ of soup; mix well. Spoon into 10x6x2-inch baking dish. Combine another one-third of the soup with oats and remaining salt and pepper. Add meat; mix well. Form into loaf and place on top of vegetables. Bake, covered, in 350 degree oven for 1¼ hours. Meanwhile, combine remaining soup and mustard. Spread over meat; return to oven and bake, uncovered, 15 minutes more. Sprinkle with parsley. Makes 4 servings.

Hearty fare heats up weather-weary stomachs

Hearst News Service

As temperatures plunge, minds turn to sturdy food. Meat. Potatoes. Warming, hearty fare that heats up the weather-weary stomachs.

BRAISED VEAL WITH PARMESAN POLENTA

1 pound boneless veal round steak, cut ½-inch thick
4 teaspoons olive oil
½ teaspoon salt
1 small onion, cut into thin wedges
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 can (14½ or 16 ounces) whole peeled tomatoes
1 small eggplant (about ½ pound), peeled and cut into 1-inch cubes
1 cup sliced mushrooms
Dash red pepper flakes
Parmesan Polenta (recipe follows)
Thinly sliced green onion, tops only

Cut the veal round steak into 4 serving-size pieces. Pound to ¼- inch thickness. Heat 2 teaspoons olive oil in a large nonstick skilled until hot. Add the veal and brown quickly on both sides, about 2 minutes per side. Remove the veal from skillet, sprinkle with salt and reserve.

Add the remaining 2 teaspoons oil to the skillet if necessary. Cook the onion and garlic over medium heat until tender. Add the tomatoes and liquid (breaking up the tomatoes with a spoon), eggplant and mushroom. Cover tightly and cook 5 minutes. Stir in the red pepper flakes.

Return the veal to the skillet, pressing into the tomato mixture. Cover tightly and simmer over low heat until the veal is tender, about 30 minutes. Serve with Parmesan Polenta (recipe follows). Sprinkle with green onion just before serving.

PARMESAN POLENTA:
2 cups water
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅔ cup yellow cornmeal
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
2 tablespons minced green onion, tops only
¼ grated Parmesan cheese

In a medium saucepan, bring the water, salt and pepper to a boil. Gradually whisk in the cornmeal. Reduce heat to medium and cook, stirring frequently, until the mixture pulls from the sides of the pan, about 3 to 4 minutes. Remove from heat. Whisk in butter, onion and 3 tablespoons of cheese. Transfer polenta to a lightly oiled 9-inch pie pan. Smooth the top; sprinkle with remaining cheese. Broil about 4 inches from the heat source until lightly browned, about 4 minutes.

Here are a couple of warmers from "The Best of Gourmet, Vol. 2."

PORK WITH MUSTARD SEED SAUCE

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 pound piece of boneless pork loin, cut from the loin end
⅓ cup dry white wine
4 teaspoons mustard seeds, crushed
2 teaspoons cornstarch dissolved in 1 tablespoon water
1 to 1½ teaspons Dijon-style mustard, or to taste

In a flameproof heavy casserole, heat the oil over moderately high heat until it is hot but not smoking. In it, brown the pork, patted dry and seasoned with salt and pepper. Transfer the pork to a plate, pour of all but 1 tablespon of the fat in the casserole, and add the white wine and mustard seeds. Reture the pork to the casserole, bring the liquid to a boil, and braise the pork, covered, in a preheated 325 degree oven for 55 mintues, or until a meat thermometer registers 155 degrees for juicy, barely pink meat.

Transfer the pork to a cutting board and let it stand for 10 minutes. Skim the fat from the pan juices, stir in the cornstarch mixture and bring the sauce to a boil over moderately high heat, strring, and season it with salt and pepper to taste. Remove the casserole from the heat, whisk in the mustard, and transfer the sauce to a bowl. Slice the pork, arrange it on a platter, and serve. Serves 4.

TURKEY HASH WITH POTATOES AND PEAS

1 small onion, chopped fine
1½ tablespoons unsalted butter
1 boiling potato (about ¼ pound), cut into ¼-inch dice and reserved in a bowl of cold water
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
1 cup chicken broth
2 tablespoons heavy cream
½ cup frozen peas, thawed
1¼ cups diced cooked turkey breast

In a skillet, cook the onion in the butter over moderate heat, stirring occasionally until it is just golden. While the onion is cooking, in a saucepan of boiling salted water, boil the potato 5 to 8 minutes, or until it is tender, and drain it. Stir the flour into the onion mixture and cook the roux, stirring for 3 minutes.

Add broth, bring mixture to a boil. Stir and simmer for 3 minutes. Add cream, cook mixture over moderate heat, stirring, for 1 minute. Add peas, potato and turkey and cook mixture, stirring, for 5 minutes, or until sauce is absorbed.

Coffee not top brew

NEW YORK (AP) — Surveys suggest coffee is not the top brew favored by young adults, according to Health Magazine.

Among 18 to 24-year-olds, 45 percent never order coffee in restaurants, it says.

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The dramatic nutrition revolution that was going to change the way Americans eat is not happening, judging by a recent nationwide telephone survey conducted by The New York Times.

In fact, among the most startling findings is that people age 18 to 29 — the generation that grew up amid a flood of nutrition research — have poorer eating habits.

According to the survey, these young adults are three times as likely to snack as people age 45 to 64, and four times as likely to snack as people over 64. They are more likely to choose sweets or salty snacks than older people and less likely to choose fruit, yogurt, cheese or bread.

The survey, one of the most comprehensive studies ever conducted, found that most Americans, regardless of age, have not responded in a significant fashion to calls for decreasing fat in the diet, reducing sodium, taking in fewer calories or otherwise eating more healthfully.

"Give the Gift of Love"

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of ten women in the United States will develop breast cancer sometime in her lifetime. It is currently estimated that over 37,000 women die each year as the result of breast cancer.

Ninety percent of breast cancers are diagnosed by women or their physicians finding a lump in the breast. Women who are diagnosed with a lump large enough to feel have a 50 percent five year survival rate. A woman who is diagnosed as having breast cancer by mammography, before a lump can be felt, has a 97% five year survival rate and a 90% 10 year survival rate.

A mammogram can detect a cancer this small, ● even before it can be felt.

Appointments may be made by calling 561-9999

The Mobile Breast Cancer Detection Unit from Odessa Women's & Children's Appointments may be made by calling 561-9999

Hospital will be in Midland on the Old Gibsons parking lot on Cuthbert Street.

The American Cancer Society has established guidelines for mammography in asymptomatic women. (Women who have no symptons of disease). Those guidelines have been adopted by the American Academy of Family Physicians, American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and The American College of Radiology. Those guidelines are:

I. 35-40 years of age-One baseline mammogram.

II. 40-50 years of age-A mammogram every 1-2 years depending on breast type and risk factor.

III. 50 years of age and over An annual physical examination and annual mammogram.

IV. Asymptomatic women under years of age with significant high risk factors should be examined at appropiate intervals. These risk factors include previous breast cancer and family history of cancer.

V. A symptomatic woman should have a mammogram at any age when she experiences a mass, nipple discharge, skin changes or unexplained breast pain.

A screening mammogram is an x-ray of the breast using extremely low dosages of radiation (usually comparable to dental x-rays) and is designed to find very early cancers.

A female technologist who is highly trained in mammography will perform the examination.

Approved by the American Cancer Society.

Cindi's Seafood Tips

What's this I hear about fatty fish reducing the risk of heart disease? Bill Bynum, Midland.

Fish has long been touted as a brain food, but it also has a legitimate claim as a heart food. Fish contains polyunsaturated fats made of omega-3 fatty acids, which may prevent heart attacks. As you'd expect, Bill, fattier fish such as salmon, tuna, mackerel, sardines, and herring contain the highest amounts of omega-3. Thanks for the question!

Cindi's Blackened Fillets

Have 2 pounds of fish fillets, ½ to ¾ inches thick, ready to go. In a flat pan, mix 1 tablespoon paprika, 1 teaspoon each of salt, onion powder, and garlic powder, ¾ teaspoon each of black & white pepper, ½ teaspoon each of cayenne pepper, dried thyme leaves and dried oregano leaves. Heat a large cast-iron skillet over high heat. Turn on hood vent. Do not use a lightweight or nonstick skillet. Melt about 3 tablespoons margarine in skillet. In another container, melt about 1 cup of margarine or butter. Dip each fish portion in the margarine, then in the dry mixture, patting by hand. Cook fish on each side for 2 to 3 minutes, being careful when turning. The fish will look charred. There will be some smoke, but not excessive. Make 5 to 6 servings.

If you have any questions about fish or seafood, or a recipe you'd like to share, please write to Cindi's Seafood Tips, 2800 N. Big Spring, Midland, TX 79701.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will produce higher-quality results if you proceed at a deliberate pace. Curb a tendency to dash from one project to another. Romance will be a shining beacon of hope. A financial venture should soon be on solid ground again. Your friends have valuable ideas to share. Respond immediately to an unexpected message from someone abroad. You have the wit and wisdom to meet almost any challenge.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Robby Benson, singer Mac Davis, fashion designer Christian Dior, singer Placido Domingo, golfer Jack Nicklaus, actors Paul Scofield and Telly Savalas, comic Benny Hill, hero Ethan Allen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Financial matters are in the spotlight as you latch onto inside information. Use an advantage to the hilt. A long-distance message contains pleasant news. Entertain an out-of-town guest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Early morning cooperation sets the tone for the day. Shut out the activity around you to accomplish more at work. Play your cards right and you will be a big winner in romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do some checking up before making a commitment. An attraction that has moved at a snail's pace suddenly picks up steam. Make certain subordinates know what you expect from them. Set guidelines.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Work could pile up unless you get better organized. Let others pitch in and help. A new plan of attack will help boost profits. Base work decisions on what is best for the majority.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The spotlight is on a special relationship with someone who can help your career or business. Distant affairs prove easier to handle. Do not confide your hopes or ambitions to too many people.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Meetings could prove disappointing. Concentrate on projects you can complete yourself. You are about to reap new rewards for your past efforts. Plan to relax at home tonight. Romance beckons.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emotional ups and downs can affect your work output. A career change is possible. A creative or artistic venture could result in improved finances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An excellent day to negotiate with those who work at a distance. A romantic encounter will leave you breathless. Concentrate on strengthening a meaningful relationship. Forget past grievances.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Welcome a chance to do business with those at a distance. Career concerns are apt to edge out domestic matters now. A candid chat with romantic partner will yield an intelligent compromise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep in touch with an influential person who has offered to act in your behalf. Cultivate new acquaintances. Your ability to handle difficult people receives recognition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Cooperation is the key to getting things done. Give free rein to your imagination. Solutions can be found for old problems. Tensions fade. Work at restoring domestic harmony. Show consideration.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The emphasis today is on short business trips. Your leadership abilities come into play in an unusual situation. Someone influential is impressed. Accept a spur-of-the-moment invitation.

Board-a-Match team championships are unlike any other form of team competition. You can either win, tie or lose a board in a head-to-head encounter with another team, so overtricks assume enormous importance—even more than in pair competition. That can produce rather surprising results, at times.

On this deal from the final of the Reisinger Board-a-Match team event at the Fall North American Championship, both teams reached an excellent three no trump contract. Sitting in the West seat was Zia Mahmood, a player always ready to stir things up. The normal lead from top of nothing is your highest card, but when Zia elected to lead a spade on this hand, he chose the two. That had dramatic repercussions in the play.

As can be seen from the diagram, most opening leads yield nine tricks. Faced with a low spade lead, declarer played the eight from dummy, covered by the nine and won by the jack. When the ace of diamonds dropped the king, declarer had at least nine tricks for the taking—three spades, five diamonds and the ace of hearts. But was that going to be enough to either tie or win the board? If the spade lead was normal, the declarer at the other table might come to 10 tricks by repeating the spade finesse.

After finessing the ten of diamonds, cashing the queen and conceding a diamond, declarer was faced with a spade continuation by West. He chose to finesse he ten, and when East produced the queen declarer found himself with no entry to dummy. In the end, he could gather no more than seven tricks for down two.

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

"I don't think he sings," she said Monday. "But he's such a nice person."

NEW YORK (AP) — Pop diva Madonna was "right on the money" when she auditioned for the part of an office temp working for two Hollywood producers in a new play by David Mamet, her new director says.

"The audition process worked right," Gregory Mosher, head of Lincoln Center Theater and director of "Speed-The-Plow," said Tuesday.

Madonna's reading for Mamet and Mosher "came out of the blue," said Lincoln Center Theater Company spokesman Merle Debuskey. "She asked to try out for the role."

Madonna

"She was great, right on the money," said Mosher, director of more than a dozen plays by Mamet, whose Broadway play "Glengarry Glenn Ross" won a Pulitzer Prize.

The play, which begins preview performances March 29 at Lincoln Center's Mitzi Newhouse Theater, also will star Joe Mantegna and Ron Silver as the Hollywood producers. No formal opening date has been announced.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Rhythm and blues entertainer Smokey Robinson and pop singer Gloria Estefan of the Miami Sound Machine will be grand marshals of this year's Krewe of Endymion parade, one of the city's largest Carnival processions.

Immediately after Feb. 13's parade, Estefan and Robinson will join rock 'n' roll star Roy Orbison in the Endymion Extravaganza at the Superdome, said Ed Muniz, captain of the Endymion organization.

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan handed the Presidential Citizens Medal to an old friend, philanthropist Brooke Astor, for her work on behalf of such New York City institutions as Carnegie Hall.

In the White House award ceremony Tuesday, President Reagan said he and Mrs. Reagan wanted to express their personal admiration for Mrs. Astor.

"You see, Brooke is a friend of ours," he said. "Nancy has known Brooke since Nancy was about 14."

The citation accompanying the medal praised Mrs. Astor for her support of Carnegie Hall, the Bronx Zoo and the New York Public Library, which it said she has made "her special project."

"There is no way a document can convey her wit and her warmth, no way it can express her energy and her extraordinary vitality," the president said

The Citizens Medal "is awarded to recognize citizens of the United States who have performed exemplary deeds of service for their country or their fellow citizens," the White House said.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Singer Linda Ronstadt, rehearsing for a U.S. concert tour based on her new album of Mexican songs, says she learned to love the traditional music as a child.

"My father taught me a lot of the songs," Ms. Ronstadt said at a news conference Monday night. The album is titled "Canciones de mi Padre," Spanish for "Songs of My Father.

"In Arizona, we think we're Mexicans," said Ms. Ronstadt, a native of Tucson.

Ms. Ronstadt is spending two weeks here rehearsing for the tour, which opens in San Antonio, Texas, on Feb. 5, and will last two months.

Ms. Ronstadt, 41, has sung rock, country, and jazz tunes, but her latest tour will consist only of Mexican songs.

She said the concerts will be intended to appeal to people in the United States who don't understand Spanish. The performances will feature Mexican folkloric dancers and Mexican art.

LONDON (AP) — The Whitbread Book of the Year prize, one of Britain's top literary honors, was awarded to 22-year-old Christopher Nolan, a paralyzed Irish writer who critics have compared to James Joyce and Dylan Thomas.

"Tonight is the happiest night of my life," Nolan said in an acceptance speech read by his mother, Bernadette. "By choosing my book as the book of the year, you have fashioned me as an equal to any other writer, be they creating words by hand or by head."

Judges considered the work non-fiction, and earlier selected him as the winner in the biography category in the Whitbread brewing company's annual awards.

NEW YORK (AP) — Pam Postema will be among National League baseball players given a tryout at spring training to determine if she should become the first woman umpire in the big leagues.

"It's our intention ... to give her as long and serious a look as possible on her merits," NL President Bart Giamatti told The Miami Herald on Tuesday. "I want to give her a chance."

Postema, 34, has been in the minors for 11 seasons. She has been at the Class AAA level for five years and spent last season in the American Association.

"It's always good to know they're interested," Postema told the Herald from Phoenix, where she works off-season as a driver for United Parcel Service. "But I can't give you any indication of what they're thinking.

"You're always an inch away from being moved up to the big leagues and an inch from being released. But you never know."

People who deal with the problems of addiction say that one of the few shreds of hope for an addict is that a spouse or a boss will get tough.

It's no pleasure to threaten people. But if you don't care enough to get involved, who will?

To find out how to set up a treatment program in your company, please call 1-800-843-4971. That's the National Institute on Drug Abuse hot line for managers and CEOs. It's manned by trained Employee Assistance Program planners and designers, from Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. Eastern Time. They won't tell you what to do, but they can outline the options. Then you can really help an addict.

Lee's 'Hail Mary' rally sets up overtime win against Mojo

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

ODESSA — After Tuesday night's comeback, the three-point shot will always hold a place in Midland Lee Coach Paul Stueckler's heart.

Thanks to some "Hail Mary" three-point bombs and some clutch down-the-bench help, the Rebels were able to erase a 10-point deficit in the final three minutes to pull out a 65-62 overtime win against Odessa Permian.

Little-used Ed Brown capped a furious Rebel rally by nailing the last of four fourth-quarter three-pointers to force an overtime period, then Lee outscored the Panthers 5-2 in the extra three minutes. Lee moved to 2-2, 12-10, while the Panthers fell to 2-3, 6-12.

"We've probably made as many three-pointers as any team in West Texas — and we shot more of them before district started," Stueckler said proudly of the three-point shot instituted this season in Texas high school basketball.

And with Damon Clay and Nicky Sanchez hitting 40 percent of their trifecta attempts why not? But wait a minute, Clay has missed the last three games because of a knee injury and against Permian, Sanchez was saddled with four fouls late in the game.

So faced with a 10-point deficit, 56-46, with just over 3:00 to play starters Jared Edwards and Darren Dorth out with five fouls, what did Stueckler do but point down the bench and call on some new long-range gunners.

Torval Crisp, in and out of the starting line-up all season, canned back-to-back three-point bombs sandwiched around a Panther bucket and the Rebels were within six, 58-52.

Crisp had hit only four treys all season before Tuesday, but he was a three-point veteran compared to those who were about to try their luck.

Lee applied ferocious full-court pressure, forced a turnover and Brent Elliot popped in another long one, his second of the year, to make it 59-55.

By this time, Permian Coach Charles Pattillo had seen enough, calling a timeout to cool things down. But all the Rebels did was cash in on a rebound for a mere two points for Calvin Gary to make it a one-point game, 58-57, with just less than two minutes to go.

Lamesa rolls over Andrews

By PETE HERNDON
MRT Correspondent

ANDREWS — Blowouts, technicals, and bench-clearings seem to be becoming a tradition when District 2-4A arch-rivals Andrews and Lamesa meet here for basketball bragging rights.

Last year, it was a game-ending brawl which cleared the benches as Andrews routed the Tors to earn the district title outright with a sweep of second-place Lamesa.

Tuesday night, however, cousins Cedric and Dwight Mason combined for 43 points to avenge last season's embarrassment and lead the Tors to an easy 87-69 shellacking of the Ponies.

This time the bench-clearing came as a result of Lamesa running up a 51-30 halftime lead, allowing both coaches to substitute freely after intermission.

WITH THE win, the 18-5 Tors own a perfect 8-0 league mark while 16-7 Andrews falls to at 5-3.

Andrews coach Frank Bice attributed the lackluster performance to the Mason brothers' hot shooting and his own teams second straight sub-par performance from the field.

"A lot of the time, this game of basketball, you like to think of it as X's and O's and strategy," Bice said following the game. "But if you outshoot the other ballclub, all the other things become secondary. We got outshot tonight.

"It also affects the other aspects of the game," he added of the Mustangs 12-33 first half shooting statistics. "When you're shooting well, the other things fall into place. When you're not, the other things go bad.

"Put in just the fact that we were cold and they were hot, then add in all those other factors, and it obviously sums it up."

NOT ONLY had the Tors reversed the outcome of last year's district-deciding game, they also did it by using a page from Andrews' own book.

In last season's finale between the teams, Lamesa coach Wayne Roberts had given Andrews the opportunity to blow the game open early with a critical first quarter technical, allowing the Mustangs an early cushion.

Using what could have been some "deja vu" reversal magic, Cedric Mason began to sum things up in the first quarter by hitting a driving layup and converting 6-6 from the free throw line, including both ends of a critical technical assessed the Mustangs when Todd Lucas didn't raise his hand after committing a foul.

Leading 14-10 with 1:22 remaining in the quarter, Lamesa used Mason's free throws and another by post Lavert Hawkins (who drew the initial foul), to open a 17-10 lead.

Guard Bert Butler then gave Lamesa a double-digit lead on the ensuing play with a three-pointer and the rout was on, with the Tors eventually garnering a 24-13 lead going into the second.

WITH THE Tors leading 28-17 early in the stanza, Dwight Mason left no doubt as to the outcome with a three-minute explosion of mammoth proportions.

The Lamesa guard scored 11 points during the middle of the period, with four baskets off the break to go along with a three-pointer. Hawkins was the only other Tor to score in the rush, adding a 15-foot jumper as Lamesa commanded a 41-19 lead with 3:05 remaining before intermission.

With the monumental halftime bulge, the Tors were able to cruise through the second half of the game, never allowing Andrews any closer than 17 points.

BICE SEEMED almost in awe of the Tors firepower.

"Over the years, Lamesa has traditionally had some outstanding talent," Bice said. "But this team probably has more overall quality, more balance quality, than they've ever had. Their ballclub has a chance to go a long way in the playoffs."

While the Tors may go a long way in the playoffs, Andrews now has a long way to go to get to the playoffs. Trailing not only Lamesa, but Snyder and Big Spring as well, the Mustangs have to face the Tors and the Steers on the road in the second half of district play.

"Out of our 16 wins, we've had 16 tough ballgames," Bice said, "and it's not going to get any easier. We have to go back, regroup, and try to win a ballgame Friday night (in Sweetwater)."

Lady Rebs keep Permian in dark

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Odessa Permian's Lady Panthers finally found a way to compete with Midland Lee at the Lee gym Tuesday night, but by the time the secret was out, the Lady Rebels were already well on the way to a 65-46 District 4-5A basketball victory.

The secret is to get Lee post Monica Ramirez to foul out. Unfortunately for Permian, you need to do that before the 6:12 mark of the fourth period.

Ramirez scord a game high 16 points, dominated the offensive and defensive boards and led Lee to a zenith 47-22 25-point third quarter lead. By the time she was gone, it was too late for Permian even though Kelly Burrows started heating up with a couple of three-pointers down the stretch.

"MONICA just played a great game and she knows that we have to have her rebounding well for us to be in a game," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson, who saw her team stay in the thick of the district race with a 4-2 loop mark.

She added, "We looked more like what we want to look like. I thought we played three quarters with a lot of heart, but we sputtered a little in the fourth period with Monica out of the lineup."

In San Angelo, the Lady Bobcats ended first half 4-5A play with a 56-47 win over Abilene Cooper. Both teams entered that contest with identical 5-0 district records. Now Cooper is only one game ahead of Lee in the running for a state playoff berth and Lee has Cooper at home in the second half.

"I really don't care how the game in San Angelo comes out," said Stephenson. "I just know that we're going to be one game behind one of those teams. We still have a chance at the playoffs. If we win the rest of our games, we're in."

COLLETTE DOOLEY, who had five points against Permian, also feels that Lee has a playoff shot.

"We have a good chance," said Dooley. "We played pretty good as a team tonight, but I still feel like we can play much better. We are really working hard and it's just a matter of working hard in practice for us to get there."

That second half push begins Friday for the Lady Rebels when they face a rugged road trip to league leading 6-0 San Angelo. An upset by Lee could bring the loop into a real three-way battle for the title.

But against Permian, Lee was taking first things first. The Rebels leaped to a 12-0 lead against Mojo in its coast-to-coast victory.

While Ramirez was the only Rebel in double figures, Kristi Grady had an outstanding game with nine points and some hard-nosed action under the boards. Gina Navarette had seven points and Leah Burnett eight. Sherry Rust came off the bench for six points in one of her better outings of the season.

Lee's Kristi Grady reaches for rebound under Permian basket.

Ramirez has now scored in double figures in five consecutive games to raise her season average to 10 points per game, making her the only Rebel to be averaging in double figures.

Burrows led Permian with 12 points while Tracy Bowser had 11, but the Panthers hit only 18 of 70 shots from the field. Burrows and Bowser found double figures, but each were only four-of-18 from the field.

Permian is now 1-5 and draw the open date. In the only other 4-5A game Tuesday, 3-3 Abilene High defeated 1-5 Odessa High by a 50-41 margin. That leaves Midland High, OHS and Permian all sharing the league basement.

The Lee-Permian varsity game started 30 minutes late due to a lengthy junior varsity game that saw Lee pull out a 49-47 victory over Permian, erasing a seven-point Panther lead in the late stages of the game behind Ronnie Sandoval's 17 point performance.

Georgia's Dooley gets M.D. clearance

ATLANTA (AP) — University of Georgia football coach Vince Dooley can return to the recruiting trail as soon as he is released from the hospital after a second procedure to clear a blockage near his heart, his physician said.

"He can resume full activity immediately," said Dr. John Douglas, who performed the angioplasty Tuesday at Emory University Hospital.

Douglas said Dooley, who also is Georgia's athletic director, was expected to be released this afternoon.

Peete comeback begins

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — At age 44, Calvin Peete begins a comeback attempt this week in the $1-million Bob Hope Classic.

"I'm looking forward to it. I'm excited about it. I'm ready to get back to playing golf," said Peete, who was among 128 players ready to tee off today for the first of five rounds in the 90-hole event.

Battles

The graveside services were in Abilene Tuesday, but when they said farewell to Thurman L. Jones he took a lot of Midland with him.

Anyone who has been in Midland more than a decade had his own special memories of Thurman. Thurman, that, of course, was his alias. He was "really" Tugboat.

If it wasn't for the Tugboat, I'd never have remembered seeing a fullback named Jones, even if he had been a Little All-America at some small college in Texas, playing for the old Brooklyn Dodgers of the NFL in Ebbets Field.

Several years later, Tugboat was coaching at Midland High, struggling to finish a season that had started out with such promise but disintegrated to ashes after Bill Mims, an all-district performer the year before, suffered a paralyzing injury in a preseason scrimmage.

A LOT had happened in the intervening years. A ripped up knee ended the pro football career of the Little All-America back from obscure Abilene Christian College.

It started Tug on a coaching career and it didn't take him long to attract attention. His little Electra (300-400 population) team, all 17 players, knocked off big, bad Wichita Falls, 12-0.

Guess where Tug wound up coaching the next season? Wichita Falls.

By 1946, Jones was coaching at Midwestern, then still a junior college, and guided them to nine wins and a bowl game.

The next year Midwestern became a four-year college and with an all-sophomore team, Jones not only won nine games but beat Arkansas State in the Kickapoo Bowl.

IN 1949, he came to Midland, charged with restoring a program that had gone steadily downhill since the 1930s and to end the Odessa jinx which was to endure for 14 years.

Despite the disappoint of 1953, Tug's Midland High teams of 1954 and 1955 were as good as any in Midland history. Maybe the second best in the state.

Unfortunately, Abilene was beginning a three-year run as state champion and a five-year reign as district champion.

"Those Midland teams were the best blocking teams I've ever coached," he later recalled. "We just lacked the speed. In both years, Abilene voted us the toughest opponent they'd face even though they won the state championship."

Jones' day was to come. It was his Highland Park, Jackie Collins team that finally halted Abilene's 49-game winning streak and the Eagles bid for a fourth straight state title. The Scots went on to capture the 1957 title.

"At Midland we never had any trouble moving the ball on them. But where we'd get five yards a crack, they had the speed to make 15 through the same opening. At Highland Park, we had the extra step we didn't have at Midland."

Tugboat in 1960 accompanied Jim Owens to the University of Washington where the Huskies were to begin a two-year Rose Bowl run.

In the mid-1960s, Tug came back to Midland as athletic director with the task of reviving Tall City athletics, still struggling to overcome the crippling effects of a high school split.

BEFORE HE retired in 1976, he had achieved his goals. Not only were Midland and Midland Lee competitive in football, but the entire program was healthy. The Bulldogs and Rebels were state powers in basketball with five district champions; district and state champions in baseball and district swimming, tennis, golf and track champions.

"Overall, I don't think anyone in the state can match our schools," he said upon departure.

It was Tugboat who hired Ken Sewell as Midland's first full-time basketball coach back in the mid-1950s. Sewell took over a program that had lost 32 straight district games and got it headed in the right direction.

"He gave me my first chance and was like a father to me," Ken recalled Monday.

BUT THE memories of Tugboat aren't so much of successes and failures. He was just electrifying to be around, win or lose. His Booster Club pep talks could have been inspired by Rockne.

Willie Bigham, a 265-pound Little All-America for Tug at Midwestern, once related Jones at times even employed Rockne type dramatics to arouse a team.

"We were playing OCU (Oklahoma City University) at Oklahoma City back in 1947. Those Chiefs were loaded with pros and we didn't stand much of a chance with them on the same field. We knew it and, what's more, so did Tug."

Bigham went on "But he kept harping all week long that they were better than us so we shouldn't get too excited about the game."

"Came game time and we were in the locker room ready to go out for the kickoff and Tug pulled a newspaper out of his pocket and proceeded to read a story that he said an Oklahoma City sports writer had written."

"The story," remembers Bigham, "made us look like fools. It told how easy OCU was going to wallop us and how poorly the teams were matched, making it seem as if we shouldn't have shown up for the game.

"When Tug turned us loose, we were mad enough to lick Notre Dame. Jack Barry ran the kickoff back 100 yards. Joe Dean Tidwell scored another touchdown and later we got a field goal and safety and beat OCU, 19-7."

After the game as the team whooped it up in the dressing room, "a couple of us went over and pulled the newspaper out of the wastebasket where Tug had thrown it.

"You know what? It was a Wichita Falls paper and it didn't have one word that he had read to us, but it worked."

In the end it was that old football knee injury that led to his leg circulation problems in later life, the amputation, complications and, perhaps, his passing over the weekend.

When he departed as MISD AD, Tug admitted, "I don't know as I'd want to start over, but I wouldn't trade any of it."

RALLY

"We've had problems the whole year turning the ball over against full-court pressure," Pattillo said. "We just don't seem to have the ball-handling when we need it."

True to form, it was another Panther turnover that set up Brown's key basket. Lee forced Permian into a half-court violation and Brown heaved up his go-ahead bomb at 1:16. They were Brown's first varsity points of the season.

Though Permian managed to tie it up at 60 on a Shawn Almand drive in the final seconds, Lee had stolen the momentum and the game.

"Ed Brown really came in and sparked us," Stueckler said. "He came in and kicked us into a different gear."

Brown, a junior, has seen most of his playing time on the junior varsity this season where he averages about 12 points a game. But he was right where Stueckler needed him against Permian.

"I've been playing a lot on JV to get some playing time and improve my skills," Brown said. "It all paid off for me tonight. I'm pretty happy with the way th' ngs turned out."

Lee sandwiched two fine quarters of basketball around a pair of sluggish ones. The Rebels scored 21 in the first quarter and took a 12-point lead, only to watch as Permian cut that to two at the half, then overtake them in the third period.

"Early in the fourth quarter I looked around and we had scored just eight points in the second half, we were down by 10 and we were in foul trouble," Stueckler said. "We had nothing going for us."

Nothing but the depth on the Rebel bench, and that turned out to be the difference.

Pam headed for majors in '88

By BEN WALKER

NEW YORK (AP) — Pam Postema, the only female umpire in professional baseball, will work National League games during spring training and could be in the majors this season, officials say.

"They want to give her a chance," Barney Deary, head of umpire development for the minor leagues, said Tuesday. "She's paid her dues. I think she deserves a shot."

No woman has ever umpired in the majors. Postema, who not long ago worked for two seasons in the Texas League, has advanced farther than any female umpire ever.

Postema, 34, has been in the minors for 11 seasons. She has been at the Class AAA level for five years and spent last season in the American Association.

"It's our intention ... to give her as long and serious a look as possible on her merits," NL President Bart Giamatti told the Miami Herald. "I want to give her a chance."

Postema's opportunity comes at a time when Commissioner Peter Ueberroth has pushed for more minority hiring, particularly for blacks and Hispanics. The NL is downplaying Postema's gender, although promoting her would fulfill baseball's goal.

Postema worked a handful of spring training games for the American League in 1984 and 1985. She was the plate umpire at last year's Hall of Fame game in Cooperstown, N.Y., and got high marks from her supervisors.

It is highly unlikely Postema will begin the season at the major league level. The NL already has four minor league umpires under contract, but Postema could get one of two openings for the relief pool, which fills in because of vacations and illness.

"There's a chance if she does well she could get one of those positions," NL spokeswoman Katy Feeney said.

Postema will probably work the entire month of March in Florida, Feeney said. Ed Vargo, the director of umpire development for the league, will spend most of spring training in Florida and can watch her.

"It's always good to know they're interested," Postema told the Herald from Phoenix, where she works off-season as a driver for United Parcel Service. "But I can't give you any indication of what they're thinking.

"You're always an inch away from being moved up to the big leagues and an inch from being released. But you never know."

The NL has two vacancies on its umpiring staff because of the death of veteran Dick Stello in an automobile accident in November and the retirement of Billy Williams.

Postema went to the Instructional League in the winter at Vargo's request. She spent the time not working games, but on learning the fine points of acting like a big-league umpire.

"We don't look at her as a woman," Vargo said. "We look at her as an ump."

Postema has been rated as a fine umpire behind the plate. Her weakness, in the past, has been on the bases.

"She had a habit of chasing the ball," Deary said. "That was the only thing we went after her about, and she's worked hard on it. She's shown improvement on the bases."

NBA Today

SCOREBOARD

Golden State at New Jersey. The first matchup of the season between the league's worst teams. The first time they squared off last season, Golden State won 150-147 in four overtimes, led by Joe Barry Carroll with 43 points and 24 rebounds and Sleepy Floyd with 29 points and 13 assists. Both players have since been traded. The Nets were led by Pearl Washington with 29 points, Buck Williams with 18 points and 27 rebounds and Orlando Woolridge, who had a triple-double on 24 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists. All three players are still with New Jersey.

TUESDAY'S STARS

Dominique Wilkins, Hawks, scored 41 points — 24 in the first period to set an Omni record — and made three steals as Atlanta beat Chicago 106-94.

Michael Jordan, Bulls, scored 38 points — including 10 in 10 tries from the free throw line — and also made three steals for Chicago.

Alvin Robertson, Spurs, scored 19 points, handed off 10 assists, grabbed nine rebounds, made five steals and blocked two shots to lead San Antonio to a 110-104 victory over Milwaukee.

"A" FOR EFFORT

Akeem Olajuwon, Rockets, scored 23 points, grabbed 11 rebounds, blocked eight shots — seven in the third period — and made two steals in Houston's 107-104 loss to Sacramento.

SUPERSTAR SHOWDOWNS

Atlanta's victory over Chicago in the Omni evened the season series between the Central Division rivals at two games apiece. Each team has won once on the other's home court. In the series, reigning NBA scoring champion Michael Jordan has scored 139 points or 34.75 per game. Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins, who won the title two seasons ago, has scored one point less. Tuesday's game marked the first time in the four this season that the team with the game-high scorer was victorious.

FINAL KICKS

The San Antonio Spurs trailed Milwaukee 86-75 after three quarters but outscored the Bucks 35-18 in the final period to win 110-104. Sacramento trailed Houston 80-76 after three periods but won after outscoring the Rockets 31-24 in the final 12 minutes.

STAT

In Tuesday night's game between Dallas and Portland, neither team won a quarter by more than five points. In the first three quarters alone, the lead changed hands 19 times and the score was tied on 16 other occasions.

CHARITY CASE

The Chicago Bulls were 16 for 16 from the free throw line Tuesday but had only four players go to the line. Besides Michael Jordan's 10-for-10 effort, Charles Oakley, Brad Sellers and Horace Grant were each 2-for-2. Bulls guard John Paxson, in fact, has played more than 1,000 minutes and attempted only 28 free throws.

STREAKS

The Dallas Mavericks' 120-116 victory in Portland Tuesday night was their fourth straight on the road.

THANKS FOR SHOWING UP

Seven-foot forward Brad Sellers of Chicago managed just one rebound in 33 minutes Tuesday against Atlanta. That was one more than 6-11 forward Caldwell Jones grabbed in 31 minutes against Dallas, and the same number that 5-7 Hawks guard Spud Webb grabbed in six minutes.

COLLEGE BASEBALL— Oklahoma State was picked the nation's No. 1 team in Baseball America's preseason ratings. Defending national champion Stanford is No. 2, followed by Michigan, Arkansas, Texas, Texas A&M, Miami, New Orleans, Arizona State and Mississippi State.

COBB FIGHT DELAYED— A rib injury suffered by Leon Spinks has caused a three-week delay in the former heavyweight champion's bout with Randall "Tex" Cobb. Originally set for Feb. 6, the fight now will take place Feb. 27 in Nashville's Memorial Auditorium...

CRUM HIRED— Former North Carolina football coach Dick Crum, who resigned under pressure in November, signed a 3-year contract as head coach at Kent State at an estimated $60,000 per year. Crum accepted an $800,000 buyout of the remaining four years of his 10-year contract at UNC. Terms of the buyout allow Crum to keep the money even though he has accepted another coaching job.

VIOLA SIGNS— Left-handed pitcher Frank Viola will remain a Minnesota Twin through 1989 after signing a $2.9 million contract. Viola was 17-10, 2.90 ERA and has averaged more than 17 wins a season for the last four years...

ILLINI SEARCH BEGINS— Illinios began searching for a new football coach after charges of recruiting violations led to the resignation of eight-year veteran Mike White. White stepped down Monday after he was confronted with charges by the NCAA and IU of possible infractions....

EAGLE TICKETS UP — Philadelphia Eagles fans will pay up to 25 percent more for tickets next season under a plan the NFL club is expected to announce. Two sources close to the situation said the increase of up to $5 per ticket would be the largest in the history of the club....

Spurs, Fitch ready for instant replay

Associated Press

Instant replay for the NBA?

San Antonio forward Walter Berry and Houston Coach Bill Fitch think it's an idea whose time has come.

With 1:52 remaining and the Spurs trailing the Milwaukee Bucks 101-98, Berry was whistled for his sixth foul, banishing him to the bench.

"I think they need the instant replay rule on that last call against me," Berry complained.

With Akeem Olajuwon out of the game, Sacramento scored 10 straight points to begin the fourth period and went on to down the Rockets 107-104.

"That run came when we had Akeem on the bench," Fitch said. "He had five fouls and we didn't want him in there at the start of the quarter."

Fitch was critical of Olajuwon's fifth foul that came in late in the third quarter that forced him to bench the 7-foot center.

Kings 107, Rockets 104

Two free throws by Reggie Theus with eight seconds left assured Sacramento of its victory over Houston. It came after the Kings' LaSalle Thompson hit a 16-foot jumper with 17 seconds remaining and Houston's Joe Barry Carroll sank one of two free throws, giving Sacramento a 105-104 lead.

Reserve Mike McGee paced Sacramento with 28 points. Olajuwon had 23 points and 11 rebounds to lead Houston as the Rockets dropped their third straight road game.

Spurs 110, Bucks 104

Frank Brickowski scored seven of his 26 points in the final two minutes to lead San Antonio to a come-from-behind victory over Milwaukee. The Bucks had led by as many as 12 points in the fourth quarter.

After Sidney Moncrief's free throw gave the Bucks a 102-98 lead, Brickowski and Mike Mitchell hit three-point plays, putting the Spurs in the lead for good.

Milwaukee Coach Del Harris joined Berry in questioning the officials.

"This is one of the best games we've played all year, and we deserved to win," Harris said. "I hope the officials looked at the last four minutes of the game tape to justify it. The last three or four minutes were ridiculous."

Mavericks 120, Trail Blazers 116

Sam Perkins scored 10 of Dallas' last 20 points in the final 5½ minutes as the Mavericks defeated Portland. Mark Aguirre's three-point play pulled Dallas even at 100 with 5:59 remaining in the game. Then Perkins hit a layup 30 seconds later to give the Mavericks the lead for good.

Hawks 106, Bulls 94

SMU holds off rallying Cougars

HOUSTON (AP) — Southern Methodist's Kato Armstrong scored 10 of his 20 points in the final five minutes, helping the Mustangs to hold off Houston for a 69-65 Southwest Conference basketball victory Tuesday night.

The Mustangs, 14-4 for the season and 3-2 in SWC games, won for only the third time in Hofheinz Pavilion in 14 games.

Armstrong's 3-point play with 2:45 left in the game gave the Mustangs the lead for good at 59-58 and the Mustangs outscored the Cougars 10-7 in the closing minutes.

Armstrong got scoring help from Terry Thomas with 13 points and Rolando Ferreira led Houston with 12 points, including 10 in the second half.

The Cougars, 7-6, 2-2, played the game without starting guard Horace Chaney and reserve Michael New, who sat out the game because of questions regarding their eligibility for the spring semester which started Tuesday.

Chaney had scored in double figures in each of the last five games since moving into the starting lineup.

Houston fell behind 17-7 early in the first half but fought back to force five ties, including a 36-36 halftime deadlock.

Wilander advances to Aussie semis

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Two-time champion Mats Wilander scored a clinical straight-sets victory over fellow Swede Anders Jarryd Wednesday to reach the semifinals of the Australian Open Tennis Championships.

Wilander, the No. 3 seed, defeated the sixth-seeded Jarryd 7-6, 6-2, 6-3 in a 2-hour, 41-minute battle of wills, capturing the first-set tiebreaker 7-2.

He earned a meeting with either defending champion Stefan Edberg of Sweden or Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union, the last remaining non-seeded player in the tournament.

The other men's semifinal will be between top-seeded Ivan Lendl and Wimbledon champion Pat Cash. Neither has lost a set in the tournament.

The men's semifinals are scheduled to be held Friday.

The women's semifinals, scheduled for Thursday, will pit Martina Navratilova against Chris Evert for the 76th time in their long careers, and top-seeded Steffi Graf against fellow West German Claudia Kohde-Kilsch.

Navratilova holds a 40-35 record in head to head clashes with Evert.

Evert reached the semis Tuesday with another easy victory, this time a 6-3, 6-1 romp over 19-year-old West German Claudia Porwik, while Navratilova had a somewhat tougher time, overcoming a brief second-set setback to defeat sixth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 7-6.

Graf enhanced her already fearsome reputation as the player to beat when she crushed defending champion Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 6-2 on Tuesday.

Kohde-Kilsch overcame a painful recurring injury to her right foot to move into the semifinals for the third successive year when she defeated Anne Minter of Australia 6-2, 6-4. Minter had upset American Pam Shriver in the fourth round.

Wilander, 23, a model of consistency in the difficult swirling winds, won the Australian Open title 1983 and 1984. He is seeking the fifth Grand Slam title of his career, also having won the French Open twice.

Jarryd provided stiff competition throughout the first set, which dragged on for one hour, 20 minutes. Wilander staved off three set points in the 10th game.

Wilander was more adventurous than usual, particularly in the second set when he advanced to the net with surprising regularity.

Wilander did not serve a single double fault against jarryd and the errors he did make often came at the net.

Jarryd, a quarterfinalist in the event for the second straight year, just did not have the consistency of his countryman.

"I felt like it was very important to Anders to win the first set," Wilander said. "I felt like he was tired from his big match the other day.

"He played at the start like he has when he's beaten me. He tried to make me miss.

"I was lucky to win the first set and lucky to win in three straight."

Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs will do things differently this time.

Gibbs remembers 29-point wipe out

By DAVID GINSBURG

HERNDON, Va. (AP) — After watching the Redskins lose by 29 points in their last Super Bowl appearance, Washington Coach Joe Gibbs is planning to do things a bit differently this time around.

It is with unfond memories that Gibbs looks back on the 38-9 thrashing the Los Angeles Raiders inflicted upon the Redskins in the 1984 Super Bowl. It was, at the time, the biggest rout in the history of the event and tarnished what had been a spectacular 14-2 regular-season.

Gibbs said he will wait a bit before getting his players primed for the Denver Broncos and restrict them from becoming engulfed by the media hoopla that precedes the title contest.

"Last time, we started a little early in getting ready," Gibbs said. "We took our rest early (before this year's NFC semifinal game against the Chicago Bears), then picked up the pace, and that's what we're going to do this time.

"When we get there, it's important for the players to enjoy it and have a good time, but they have to be careful at night with the activities they get caught up in," Gibbs said. "I'd prefer they spend a normal evening, with friends or relatives. Last time there was no curfew, but this time it will be around 12 o'clock."

Will all this help save the Redskins against the Broncos?

"Who knows?" Gibbs said. "We'd have probably lost (the last Super Bowl) 52-0 if we had a curfew. But it makes it sound better, as a coach, to change things around this time around."

The squad Gibbs is taking to San Diego boasts a mixture of youth and experience.

"Really, the advantage we have here is that we have 16 guys who have been to the Super Bowl and knew what it took to get there," Gibbs said. "And yet we had a majority of young guys who had never been there, were hungry, and decided they were going to do whatever it takes. And they fed off the older players' experience."

Players such as rookie running back Timmy Smith, who rushed for a combined 138 yards in the Redskins' two playoff games, and first-year players Ravin Caldwell, Brian Davis, Clarence Vaughn and Kurt Gouveia played major roles in Washington's 17-10 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in the NFC title game.

"We've got a lot of youthful guys who have really contributed to this team, and we have a good blend of veterans," center Jeff Bostic said. "When you've got that combination, you're going to go places."

Linebackers Caldwell and Gouveia spent last year on injured reserve, but against the Vikings Caldwell had a sack and stopped Anthony Cartr from breaking away on a punt return. Gouveia registered a sack of Vikings quarterback Wade Wilson and Vaughn had four tackles and a sack.

"Our defensive coaches did a great job on the game plan," Gibbs said. "We incorporated a lot of young guys who weren't playing that much and they showed up and did a great job.

Said Bostic: "You can go on and on about the young guys who have played a major role here, particularly over the past four weeks."

Much can also be said about the veterans, including 37-year-old Dave Butz, the oldest active player in the NFL.

"I don't think of him as being as old as he is," Gibbs said. "It seems like he can go on forever. He still has a young heart, and still gets excited when he makes a big play."

On Jan. 31, Butz will play in the 15th playoff game of his 14-year career.

Gibbs sent the players home until Thursday, when they will begin practice for the Broncos at Redskin Park. The team will fly to San Diego on Monday.

The night cage world stood still

NEW YORK (AP) — When UCLA and Houston met 20 years ago tonight at the Astrodome, the college basketball world stood still. When it moved again, it was never again to be the same.

The game brought together the top-ranked UCLA Bruins and their star center, Lew Alcindor, and the No. 2 Houston Cougars, led by Elvin Hayes.

The game was to be attended by a record crowd in a building that had never entertained the sport before and it would be watched by a television audience larger than one for any sporting event up to that time.

HAYES made two free throws with 28 seconds to play to give Houston a 71-69 victory that snapped UCLA's 47-game winning streak, the second-longest in college basketball history at the time.

It seems lost in time that UCLA later beat Houston 101-69 in the NCAA Tournament semifinals and that after the loss in the Astrodome UCLA started a 41-game winning streak.

The game everyone saw, the game everyone cared about, the game still talked about, was the Jan. 20 meeting in the Astrodome.

"It was a spectacular more than anything else," UCLA Coach John Wooden said. "Neither team played well, according to their capabilities, but that was understandable."

WOODEN'S counterpart, Guy Lewis, disagrees.

"That was the biggest game I was ever in," Lewis said. "I thought it was well-played and it was a great spectator event."

Wooden and Lewis were two successful coaches in the midst of long careers. They would win 667 and 592 games, respectively. But even they were in awe that night.

"The distraction started on Jan. 1," Lewis said. "We had already sold 35,000 tickets in September. We had met the year before in the (NCAA) semifinals and neither one of us lost a game building up to the game in the Astrodome.

"All through the fall and the month of December, my job was to keep them from looking ahead to that game because everybody else was. I know college coaches that had games rescheduled so they could see that game."

A crowd of 52,693, still the largest to see a regular-season game and trailing only the Final Four crowds in the Louisiana SuperDome on the all-time attendance list, was on hand, and Wooden said the teams were aware of that.

"That game had the largest live audience ever to see a game and I'm told it had the largest viewing audience of any sporting event until that time. The impact that game had on television has become part of basketball," Wooden said. "That made it a bit of a spectacular. And add to it two unbeaten teams, each with a superstar, and that added a lot of sense of drama to it."

LEWIS SAID that, since the game was the first of significance to be nationally televised, it proved basketball was a "viable product."

"When we came out to warm up, the place was already full and the standing ovation the team got was almost deafening," he said.

"The lighting was real strange and nobody was within 100 yards of the court. It was strange circumstances with this huge crowd so far away," he said.

"They weren't ready for that type of game at the Astrodome," Wooden said. "The court was set up in the middle of the infield with the fans well back. And they needed special lighting for TV, so there were spotlights down on each basket which I thought would greatly impair on the shooting of both teams."

ABDUL-JABBAR had problems shooting even without the added impediment of the spotlights.

"I spent the whole previous week in an eye clinic, in a dark room," he said, referring to the eye injury that kept him out of the two games prior to the showdown. "I suffered most in conditioning."

"We knew our superstar wasn't in condition to play because he had not practiced for eight, nine days and had been in the hospital," Wooden said. "He had the vertigo and double vision, but we didn't want to talk about it at that time.

"You know, he played 88 games for me and in only two of those did he make less than 50 percent of his shots from the field. Once he went 6-for-13 and in this game he was 4-for-18, by far the worst he ever shot."

UCLA, which was led by Lucious Allen's 25 points, made 26 of 77 shots from the field and Houston, which led 46-43 at halftime and never by more than five in the second half, made 30 of 66.

AS POORLY as Abdul-Jabbar shot, Hayes was on target. He finished with 39 points, 29 in the first half, and he made 17 of 25 shots and grabbed 15 rebounds.

"The game wasn't really well-played, other than by Elvin," Abdul-Jabbar said.

"There had been a lot of talk about no backup because there was such a distance from the goals to where the people were," Lewis said. "But Elvin shot holes in that theory. He shot the lights out."

Don Chaney, currently an assistant coach for the Atlanta Hawks, was the point guard for Houston that night.

"What Elvin Hayes did that night really sticks out," Chaney, who scored 11 points, said. "He had a great career, but that night he couldn't miss — follows, jumpers, turnarounds, everything he threw out there went in. He was really ready to play that game."

EVEN TODAY, the game that pitted Abdul-Jabbar, professional basketball's all-time leading scorer, and Hayes, sixth in collegiate scoring and fourth on the NBA's career list, is still special.

"When I meet someone from New York, Cleveland, anywhere, that game is the first thing they bring up," Lewis said. "The announced attendance was 53,000 but there must have been a little over 30 million people there that night. I never talked to anyone who wasn't there."

Abdul-Jabbar, who finished with 15 points and 12 rebounds, is impressed by the continuing interest in that game.

"That was the type of game that everyone knows where they were when it was played and where they watched it," he said.

No. 8 UNLV eases past stubborn Aggies

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Keith James realizes he has a void to fill for Nevada-Las Vegas as long as Jarvis Basnight is sidelined.

"I felt that someone would have to step forward and accept the leadership, and I felt that I would be the guy," James said after scoring a season-high 21 points in the eighth-ranked Rebels' 87-83 victory over Utah State on Tuesday night.

Cint Rossum hit four free throws in the final 17 seconds as UNLV moved into first place in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. The Rebels are now 15-1 overall and 5-1 in the conference.

"This was a great win for us to come here and win without Basnight," UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian said.

"And on top of that, I've been sicker than a dog. I didn't do anything on the bench tonight. I couldn't even move," Tarkanian said.

The game was the only one involving a ranked team. Tonight, it will be No. 4 Kentucky vs. Florida, No. 5 Purdue vs. Michigan State, No. 10 Iowa State vs. Nebraska, No. 11 Oklahoma at Colorado, No. 15 Georgetown vs. St. John's and No. 20 North Carolina State. vs. Wake Forest at Greensboro, N.C..

"Coach Rod Tueller has his team playing very unselfishly. And they did a great job on Paddio," Tarkanian said. Gerald Paddio, who was averaging 20.3 points per game, was held to 11.

"Same old story," said USU guard Kevin Nixon. "Ags and Rebels close, but the Rebels pull it out. I'm sick of it."

PEETE

One of golf's more accomplished performers the six previous seasons, Peete finished in the top 10 only once last year and had a career-low finish of 140th on the money list.

"Last year was a bummer, a washout. I just want to put it out of my mind, not think about it," said Peete, who led the PGA Tour with 11 victories between 1982 and 1986.

"I just couldn't play last year. My shoulder wouldn't let me. From about the middle of the year on, I didn't play much at all. I probably could have, but I might have damaged the shoulder again.

"Finally, I just decided to write off the year, rest the shoulder and try to come back this year.

"I'm glad I did. I might be kind of rusty starting out, but I have a good attitude. I'm eager to play again. I'm ready.

"It'll be interesting to see how it develops."

The 128 pros will play one round on each of four desert courses, each day with a different set of amateur partners, before the field is cut for the pros-only finish at Indian Wells Country Club on Sunday.

Chief among the contenders for the $180,000 first prize are defending tournament champion Corey Pavin, U.S. Open title-holder Scott Simpson, 1987 Player of the Year Paul Azinger, 1987 money-winning leader Curtis Strange, and Steve Pate, winner of last week's Tournament of Champions.

Among the players opening their seasons this week are Fuzzy Zoeller, Craig Stadler, Hale Irwin, Hal Sutton, Andy Bean, Ray Floyd and Bruce Lietzke.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by NBC.

Mike Tyson lack s expected rancor toward Holmes

By PHIL BERGER
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Larry Holmes may get a break from Mike Tyson. To Tyson, it turns out, Holmes is just another opponent, and the undisputed heavyweight champion bears his challenger no ill will.

"I don't even know this guy," Tyson said of Holmes.

Tyson, who defends his heavyweight title against Holmes Friday in Atlantic City, did not feel quite so kindly about Tyrell Biggs, the opponent in his previous fight.

Before that Oct. 16 bout, Tyson told a reporter that he wanted to hurt Biggs, to punish him — words that had an extreme and uncharacteristic personal edge.

When the reporter asked what the basis for the grudge was, Tyson said he would keep that to himself until after the fight.

Well, Tyson was not exaggerating. He gave Biggs a thorough whipping before knocking him out in seven rounds, and he did it with a particular malice. Tyson elbowed the other man, butted him, and on occasion hit him after the bell. "I could have knocked him out in the third round," Tyson said after the bout. "But I did it very slowly. I wanted him to remember it for a long time."

Tyson recently explained his feelings toward Biggs.

"Can I tell you something?" said Tyson. "I really never hated anybody. I think I hate Tyrell Biggs."

The problem with Biggs dates back, he said, to their days as amateurs and what Tyson perceived as a superior attitude on Biggs's part.

"That was his style," said Tyson. "To make fun of you."

Tyson said that, as an alternate on the United States Olympic team in 1984, he was in an airport with Biggs headed for Los Angeles when a woman wished him good luck.

"Biggs made some comment indicating I didn't have to be wished good luck," said Tyson. "He said, 'She must mean good luck on the flight.' That one thing stuck to my mind a long time.' "

As a superheavyweight, Biggs won a gold medal in Los Angeles. Tyson, beaten out for a spot on the United States team by Henry Tillman in the heavyweight class, did not compete.

"It's just his makeup," said Biggs. "What he feeds on. To destroy people. It's not stemming from anything."

If there is to be a Tyson-Michael Spinks bout, it would probably take place on June 24, but don't hold your breath.

That is the date that Tyson's comanagers, Bill Cayton and Jim Jacobs, have cleared for the bout.

Cayton, for one, has his doubts that a deal can be struck with Spinks's promoter, Butch Lewis. For the fight to happen, said Cayton, such a deal would have to materialize within the 10 days after this Friday's Tyson-Holmes bout and on terms on which he and Jacobs have insisted from the start. Namely, that Lewis have no decision-making input in the promotion and that he accept a negotiated flat fee.

"How they divide that money," said Cayton, "he and the fighter can decide for themselves."

Cayton said that if the Spinks and Tyson camps were unable to resolve their differences in that time, then after Tyson's fight in Tokyo on March 21, reportedly against Tony Tubbs, Tyson would meet Frank Bruno on June 11 or June 18 in England.

"We want the Tyson-Spinks fight to take place," said Cayton. "But if it doesn't, Mike Tyson will be extremely well off, starting with the $26.5 million deal with HBO and that's just TV. For each of his fights, we negotiate live rights deals and then worldwide television rights. Mike will make many millions of dollars above his HBO fees."

Still, if the blocked negotiations over Tyson-Spinks are straightened, don't be surprised if Donald Trump, the developer, has a role. Trump has already done advance work, meeting with Lewis last month at Trump Castle to discuss the impasse.

Trump has the right of first refusal on Tyson-Spinks through previous contracts with Lewis and with Tyson's promoter, Don King, and lately is sounding like a man who intends to be involved with the fight.

"If I want the fight," he said, "nobody else will get it."

However Tyson's June date turns out — Spinks or Bruno — Cayton said the heavyweight champion would fight again in September against Francesco Damiani in a 100,000-seat soccer stadium in Milan. "Add 20,000 more seats for boxing," said Cayton. "And with a sellout it would be the largest boxing crowd ever. And a $10 million gate."

All these plans hinge on Tyson's remaining undefeated, starting with Holmes.

The word is that Tubbs's status as Tyson's Tokyo opponent comes with stipulations. Tubbs, who has reportedly signed a contract to fight Tyson, will be required to be in fit condition — and fit may even end up being defined by a specific weight.

The stipulation is at the insistence of the Japanese backing the bout, who do not want to be embarrassed by an overweight Tubbs. Tubbs won the World Boxing Association title in April 1985 at 229 pounds but soared to 244 in his first title defense, a loss to Tim Witherspoon in January 1986.

Tubbs has already been advised by King that he risks losing his title shot if he is not deemed in shape.

Washington's Capital Centre is Hades for Devils

By KEN RAPPOPORT

The Capital Centre has been strictly a no-win situation for the New Jersey Devils.

"I don't want to think about it (when the streak will end), but we have to win here sometime," Devils Coach Doug Carpenter said after Tuesday night's 6-4 NHL loss to the Capitals continued New Jersey's winless ways at the Capital Centre.

The Capital Centre is the only arena where the Devils have failed to win a game in the franchise's five years in New Jersey. The Devils are 0-18-1 there.

"We're not going to win if we're going to give up soft goals like we did tonight," Carpenter said. "Three goals didn't hit the back of the net. When you're playing the Washington Capitals in a dog fight, we can't make defensive errors like that."

Penguins 6, Islanders 4

Oilers 4, Nordiques 4

Kelly Buchberger's first goal of the season with 3:47 left in the third period gave Edmonton the tie.

Michel Goulet and Alan Haworth had a goal and one assist each for Quebec. Jari Kurri had a goal and two assists for the Oilers.

Whalers 6, North Stars 3

Paul MacDermid scored two goals as Hartford beat Minnesota. A snowstorm in the Twin Cities cut attendance by about 50 percent. The North Stars sold 9,581 tickets to the game but there were 4,837 no-shows.

Jets 3, Blues 0

Flames 7, Canucks 5

Kings 6, Rangers 3
