NEWS IN BRIEF

Smith foresees unfair elections

RENO, Nev. (AP) — As the people of Rhodesia approach a vote for black majority leadership, former Prime Minister Ian Smith on Friday castigated the West for forcing democracy on his nation.

There is "not a chance" that elections this month, the first involving guerrilla leaders, will be fair and free, Smith said. He blamed that on the British supervisors for "their incompetence, their lack of determination to stand up to Marxist terrorists."

But he predicted that blacks will reject rebel leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, despite his allegations they have attempted to terrorize the population into voting for them.

Blacks will elect 80 of the 100 seats in Parliament. Whites voted Thursday, giving all 20 seats to Smith's Rhodesian Front Party.

Smith received a standing ovation from the audience of about 400 people at a Mzuri Safari Foundation convention at the MGM Grand Hotel-Casino. Some in the all-white audience wept after hearing him complain of betrayals by the United States and Britain.

The appearance before the hunter-oriented wildlife conservation group was Smith's first in the U.S. in about 18 months.

Separation possible

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Doctors determined Friday that week-old Siamese twins joined below the rib cage can be separated.

"We feel very comfortable these children could be successfully separated as two children," said Dr. Fredrick Reuter, pediatric surgeon at Memorial Mission Hospital, where the girls were transferred shortly after their birth last Saturday.

"Separation could take place now, but waiting for the children to grow and essentially double their weight would probably improve the result and probably make separation easier on the children," he said.

Doctors said that probably will take four to six months.

Fonda Michelle and Shannon Elaine Beaver weighed a total of 12 pounds at birth. They are the daughters of Kim and Arlin Beaver, of Forest City.

The girls were listed in satisfactory condition Friday.

Jurors hear tapes

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Jurors in the marijuana smuggling trial of Tennessee millionaire John Ruppel listened Friday to tape-recorded conversations between key government witness Willis Judge Butler and the defendant.

Ruppel, of Gatlinburg, Tenn., is charged with conspiracy to smuggle 7½ tons of marijuana into the United States, racketeering, being an organizer in a continuing criminal enterprise, and possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

Two persons were acquitted and nine were convicted last September of charges connected with the alleged plot to smuggle the illegal weed into the United States between 1976 and 1978. Jurors in that trial failed to reach a verdict on the charges against Ruppel.

Defense attorney Robert Ritchie objected strongly to the tape recordings being admitted into evidence, but U.S. District Judge Robert Parker allowed the jury to hear the tapes.

The jury listened to the tapes with earphones and a government transcript was provided to the jury during the reading of the tape.

Parker refused to allow the newsmen to hear the tapes or see a transcript, explaining he was trying to shield the jury from the influence of the news media.

Officials hint at hostage release

By The Associated Press

Iran's foreign minister, in Paris for the first time since he helped engineer the Iranian revolution from French soil, said Friday the American hostages in Tehran would not be released until an investigating commission on the shah had completed its work. He has said that would take 10 days to two weeks.

In New York, a United Nations spokesman said he hoped to be able to announce composition of the commission "shortly" — maybe today, maybe tomorrow.

No announcement was forthcoming Friday, but well-placed U.N. sources said the five commission members would be from Algeria, Syria, Bangladesh, Venezuela and France. They named then as Edmond Louis Pettit, head of the Paris bar association, Syrian foreign affairs specialist Adib Daoudy, Andres Aguilar, a Venezuelan career diplomat, Algeria's ambassador to the United Nations, Mohamed Bedjaoui, and Abu Sayeed Chowdhury, former president of Bangladesh.

One diplomatic source at the United Nations said all five were expected to be in New York on Monday for a briefing by U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and would leave for Tehran before the end of the week.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh's statement contradicted comments by former Irish Foreign Minister Sean MacBride that the approximately 50 hostages would be released when the panel to study charges against the deposed shah is convened. Transfer of the hostages temporarily to a third party, perhaps a neutral country, is one possible step in the release process.

In Ottawa, Iran's diplomat in Canada, Mohammad Adeli said settlement of the crisis is expected within 36 to 48 hours. Adeli, Iran's acting ambassador, said the settlement will include measures creating a commission to investigate the alleged crimes of the deposed Shah of Iran, steps to return the Shah's wealth to Iran, and release of the hostages. He would not say whether the hostages could leave Iran before the commission finishes.

In Tehran, Iranian President Abolhassan Bani Sadr conferred with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini over the latest developments, and the president said he had found the ailing leader in very good spirits, according to the official news agency Pars.

"I have not seen him so jubilant since his illness, and his health condition is better than before," the president was quoted as saying. But he declined to discuss details of their 20 minute talk at Khomeini's hospital bedside. The 79-year-old Khomeini, Iran's leader for life, has been confined to the hospital recovering from a heart attack.

The Tehran correspondent for London's Daily Telegraph reported Bani Sadr is expected to meet sometime Saturday with the militants who seized the U.S. Embassy and hostages Nov. 4.

Tehran radio quoted Bani Sadr as telling an audience at Freedom Stadium, "We must have a policy of independence of the great powers and the superpowers. Our country must keep away from the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R., and from that of European and non-European powers."

Shah passes time on tennis court

By INDALECIO RODRIGUEZ

CONTADORA ISLAND, Panama (AP) — While the governments of Iran and Panama discuss his fate, the deposed shah of Iran spends most of his time playing tennis and recovering from his serious illness, always watched by bodyguards.

A light sweater over his shoulders, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi appears unconcerned about the diplomatic fight involving him. Close aides say he looks fit and has gained some weight.

"His physical condition has improved a lot since he has been on the island," says Tony May, the Colombian born tennis professional who works at the Contadora Island Hotel and who is helping the shah with his game.

Usually, the shah practices doubles in the afternoon with his wife, Farah, May and a Uruguayan public relations girl who works in the hotel.

In the mornings, he usually browses. Evenings sometime find him and Farah at the hotel disco, the only one on the island.

They often go on walks on the beach accompanied by the shah's Great Dane, Benno, and Farah's pearl gray French poodle. Wherever they go, bodyguards follow, plus a car-load or two of heavily armed Panamanian security people.

Their 16-year-old daughter, Farahnaz, is the only one of their four children living with them on this tropical retreat in the Pacific Ocean. The other three are said to be in school in the United States, but shah aides refuse to confirm this for security reasons.

The security men prohibit photographs of the deposed Iranian ruler and keep a close watch on him at tennis or on the beach. "An armed guard with an automatic rifle watched our every movement from a bluff above the beach," said one tourist who asked anonymity.

The shah left an Air Force base in Texas last December after six weeks of treatment for cancer and a gall bladder operation in New York. Before that, the former royal couple had lived in Mexico, the Bahamas, Morocco and Egypt after the Iranian revolution deposed him.

Iranian authorities formally requested on Jan. 23 that Panama extradite the shah, and the Iranian government has until March 22 to present legal documents to back the request.

However, Panamanian officials have said it is unlikely Iran will be able to meet the complicated requirements necessary to extradite the deposed monarch. The two countries have no extradition treaty and no diplomatic relations. The two governments communicate directly by telephone and telex.

There are reports the Iranian government has named a Panamanian to represent it in the legal fight for extradition.

The shah and Farah live in a large chalet-type house belonging to Gabriel Lewis Galindo, a former ambassador to the United States, a millionaire who pioneered development of the island as a tourist resort. The house, on a bluff across the island from the hotel, is guarded night and day on land and water.

Reliable sources said the shah visited Panama City recently at least for a quick checkup at an undisclosed medical facility. An Iranian doctor supervises the shah's diet, prepared by a chef who was specially brought in from Panama City.

The shah and Farah at times eat in the hotel restaurant with some guests. "When that happens, we reserve one of the restaurant's wings for them," said one of the head waiters who usually attends them.

Ironically, because of his illness, the shah cannot enjoy the product the island is famous for — seafood. Doctors have forbidden him to do so.

Wholesale prices show surprising increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices surged a shocking 1.6 percent in January, the most in five years, leading the Federal Reserve Board to take new actions Friday to drive up interest rates to head off another burst of inflation.

Acting less than an hour after the Labor Department's price report, the board voted unanimously to increase its discount rate by a full percentage point to 13 percent, up from 12 percent.

The increase in the discount rate, which is the interest the Federal Reserve charges on loans to commercial banks, is certain to push up interest rates throughout the economy. Officials of the already reeling housing industry predicted it would be especially hard hit.

The January increase in wholesale prices was the largest monthly rise since November 1971, when prices increased 2 percent. It signaled a big increase in consumer prices as whole sale price rises often show up within weeks at the retail level.

The increase was especially distressing to administration economists because it came despite an 0.8 percent decline in food prices, which under normal circumstances would have been enough to hold down the overall price index.

But prices of goods other than food increased 2.4 percent, the most for any month since April of 1973, when they rose 2.9 percent. Gasoline prices rose 5.7 percent and heating oil prices were up 2 percent.

Lyle E. Gramley, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisors, said the report was evidence of "a widespread acceleration of inflation" in areas of the economy other than food and fuel.

"That certainly is very, very discouraging news," he said.

The 1.6 percent increase in wholesale prices was measured by the Labor Department's Producer Price Index. It was nearly double the 0.9 percent increase in December and compared with average monthly increases last year of about 1 percent.

Wholesale prices in January were 13 percent higher than a year earlier. The annual rate of increase in January was 20.7 percent.

Separately, the Federal Reserve Board reported that output of the nation's industry increased 0.3 percent in January, the most in four months. While it was not large, it showed that the performance of the economy continued to defy recession forecasts.

The gain would have been larger if it hadn't been for an 11 percent decline in auto assemblies to an annual rate of 6 million units, down from 6.8 million in December.

In explaining the decision to increase its discount rate, the Federal Reserve Board made clear in a statement that it felt it had no choice. The statement said the board is "particularly concerned that recent economic developments, including the large increase in the price of imported oil, are adding to inflationary pressures and may lead to further destabilizing pricing decisions."

Israel defends settlement rights, rejects intervention

JERUSALEM (AP) — With its settlement policy under fire in Washington and Cairo, Israel defended on Friday the right of Jews to live in the occupied West Bank and rejected outside intervention in Israeli affairs.

Elihu Ben-Elissar, ambassador designate to Egypt and Director General of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's office, warned that if Washington used the settlement issue as a pretext for changing its Middle East policy, "this would be destructive to the peace-making process."

"I deny the right of any foreign power to intervene in our policy of settlement. It is a basic inherent right and a most important means to ensure our security," said Ben-Elissar, who becomes the first Israeli ambassador to an Arab country on Feb. 25.

A Cabinet decision last Sunday affirming the right of Jews to live in the Arab city of Hebron prompted public condemnation from Washington and a stiff note from Secretary of State Cyrus P. Vance. The State Department called the decision "a step backward in the peace process."

The decision was seen as setting the stage for a major policy shift of sanctioning Jewish settlement in urban centers on the occupied West Bank of Jordan. On Sunday, the Cabinet is to discuss when and where Jews can live in Hebron.

Former Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, who quit the Begin government over its West Bank policy, said in interviews published Friday the Hebron decision was "a most serious mistake. It certainly raises a big question mark over our intentions."

The settlement issue cast a shadow over the Israeli-Egyptian U.S. negotiations on Palestinian self-rule now reaching a critical stage with the approaching target date for an agreement by May. Ben-Elissar said the full negotiating teams on autonomy will hold their first meeting outside the Middle East when they convene in Zurich, Switzerland on Feb. 27.

Donald F. McHenry, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, has said a "radical settlement policy" might prompt a reconsideration of U.N. Resolution 242 on which Mideast peace talks are based.

Ben-Elissar said any attempt to change the 1967 document would be short-sighted. Israel expects the United States to honor its commitment to oppose modifications in Resolution 242, he said, but Washington is not doing enough to block a European plan for a new resolution on the Palestinian question.

"I really can't understand why the U.S. Administration thinks it has the right to tell Jews where they have a right to live," Ben-Elissar told a news conference. "I can go to Cairo and settle there, and not Hebron?"

Israel dedicated a new West Bank settlement this week and laid the cornerstone for another outpost. Parliament also approved more than $1 million for buying Arab property to expand other settlements.

Ben-Elissar said Israel listens to U.S. objections on the settlement policy, but he complained that Washington exaggerated the importance of the issue.

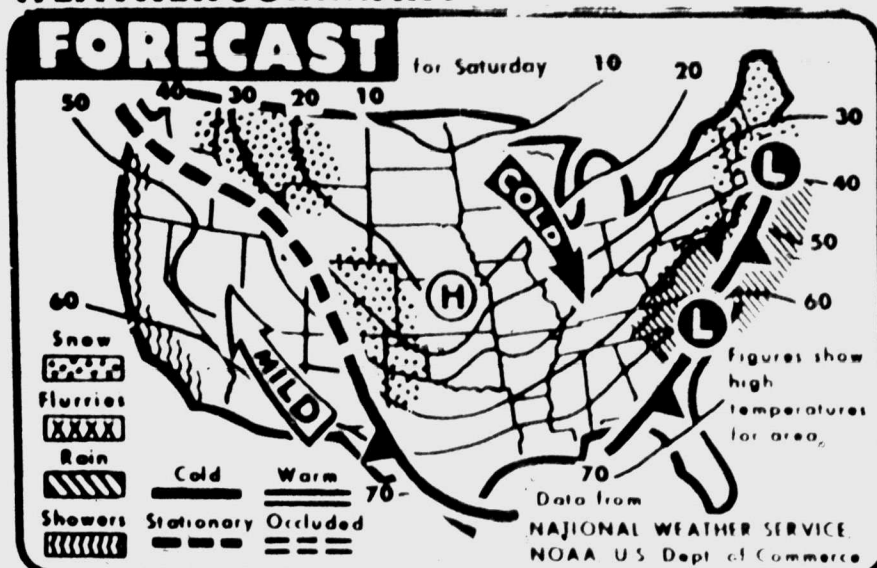

The diplomat said he saw his main task in Cairo as breaking through "the suspicious still in the Egyptian mind" about Israel and peace. "The Egyptians are used to seeing Israel and Zionism in a distorted way."

An Egyptian-Israeli aviation agreement was announced for the introduction of bi-weekly flights by airlines of each of the two countries. EL AL's maiden flight to Cairo was scheduled for March 3, and a new Egyptian company will fly to Tel Aviv starting March 5.

Teams began discussing an agreement for maritime commerce and land travel.

Rebel sees self fighting holy war

EDITOR'S NOTE: AP Correspondent Barry Shlachter spent three days in rebel-held Afghanistan interviewing insurgents. He filed this report after crossing into Pakistan.

By BARRY SHLACHTER

BAROGAL, Afghanistan (AP) — Asif Sayeed is one of those persons creating problems for the Soviet-backed government in Afghanistan. He is a rebel, but he calls himself a "mujahid" or Moslem "holy war fighter."

"Our goal is to keep our Islam and our land," Sayeed said between sips of tea boiled with sugar and goat's milk in his mud and rock house in Barogal, a tiny village with strategic importance disproportionate to its size.

The village is located in Kunar Province, in eastern Afghanistan, where the rebellion began nearly 22 months ago against the first of three successive communist-backed regimes. The village overlooks Chigha Sarai, the capital of Kunar, and Kera Sarai, a town where many of its male residents were massacred by government troops in April 1979.

To Sayeed it is a "jihad" or "holy war." But included in this is a sharp reaction against tampering with age-old customs and the independence of tribal life and against the introduction of Soviet forces since late December.

There are few people more nationalistic than Pathan tribesmen like Sayeed. They say they have defeated every foreign invader and recall the three wars fought against the British, particularly the latest, in 1919, which won Afghanistan its independence in foreign relations.

While sharing common goals — to expel the Soviets and topple the "infidel" Marxist regime of President Babrak Karmal, installed in a coup Dec. 27 — the insurgents are deeply divided along tribal and political lines. And there is no Afghan version of Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh or Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to bring them together.

Since December an estimated 90,000 Soviet troops have poured into Afghanistan to help the Kabul government fight the Moslem rebels.

We could have taken Chigha Sarai (formerly Asadabad) if we were united," said Sayeed, who belongs to Jamiatul Islami, a fundamentalist Moslem party with headquarters in Pakistan. He joined it because his subtribe, the Mahmud, decided to attack a traditional "jirga," or council meeting.

Like other rebels interviewed, he said he had heard nothing of the merger, highly publicized in Pakistan, of a number of the leading parties, including his own, which coincided with the Islamic foreign ministers' conference in Islamabad last month.

Butter divisions between the groups remained in rebel-held areas and led to bloodshed at least once near Barogal last year.

Three members of the Shinkari subtribe were killed and 10 wounded in a dispute over captured arms, which upset plans to attack the provincial capital, he said.

violating the spirit of the SALT pact. State Department spokesman David Nall confirmed that "the Soviets have conducted a submarine-launched ballistic missile test with some telemetry" encoding.

He added that officials "are monitoring the situation closely to assess whether there has been any violation of the terms of the SALT II Treaty. But at present, we have no basis for concluding that there has been any such violation."

An administration official who insisted that he not be identified by name said that during this "rather difficult geopolitical situation" created by the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan, the administration does not want to send the Soviet Union "any false signals."

The official said the administration wanted to "make it quite clear that" the United States is not charging the Soviets with any SALT violations.

The official added that the administration still does not have all the information it would need "to make any charges about the Russians not playing fair."

According to administration sources who asked not to be identified, the new missile tested in late January obviously is intended to be launched from submarines.

Apparently with the aid of spy satellites and other devices, U.S. officials were able to determine that the missile, which landed in a remote area of northern Russia, has the capacity to carry larger nuclear warheads than present submarine-launched Soviet missiles and is powered by solid fuel instead of the more corrosive and less reliable liquid fuel previously used in such weapons.

But it appears that the encrypting, or encoding, of the radio telemetry prevented U.S. experts from gauging the all important accuracy of the new weapon.

These experts have said in the past that such telemetry "gives us information on how well a test flight goes," including the performance of gyro equipment which determines accuracy.

But sources said the missile apparently failed in mid-flight, making it difficult to assess the accuracy of the weapon.

The SALT agreement places no curbs on development of new submarine-launched missiles, although it does limit both sides to one new land-based intercontinental ballistic missile.

Sources said the new missile apparently is designed for an advanced missile-firing submarine called the Typhoon.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown referred briefly to the Typhoon in his recent annual report to Congress, saying that "a new, large, nuclear-powered, missile-firing submarine continues under construction" and that it may be a larger version of the Soviet Delta submarine.

Sayeed, who appears to be in his late thirties but says he's not sure because villagers don't record births, said he has received no material support from his party, let alone from Pakistan, the United States or China.

Moscow and Kabul have claimed that Pakistani, American and Chinese arms were flowing into rebel camps. The three countries have denied the charge.

Arms seen by this reporter were either Soviet-made weapons or Pakistani copies of 19th century British Enfield rifles. Some Afghans were bringing guns to Pakistani bazaars to sell because the relative glut of captured Soviet AK-47 rifles had lowered the market price here.

But ammunition was hard to come by and few rebels had decent footwear. Some walked through snow, in worn sandals tied together with homemade rope.

"I have a Kalashnikov (AK-47) taken in battle last year but to get enough ammunition, I had to sell four oxen and two cows," Sayeed said.

The villagers in this rugged, mountainous terrain were poor before the fighting began. The continuing insurgency has meant going without kerosene for lamps and other "luxuries," making a hard life even more difficult. All seemed prepared for even greater sacrifices, however.

"That is where my nephew was killed," said Sher Alam, a neighbor of Sayeed, pointing to a clump of trees on a mountain overlooking Chigha Sarai. "Over there, I killed five soldiers. We sent word to the government to send an unarmed party to pick up the bodies but no one came."

One area of the mountain top was littered with skulls, backbones and scraps of Afghan army uniforms. Villagers flew overhead but the remains had been picked clean.

"We lived here for five months," Alam said, pointing to a series of stone walled breastworks covered with mud and twigs. "Anyone who tried to sneak to his house was fined 100 afghanis," about $10.

Below the mountain and across the Kunar River is Chigha Sarai, recently strengthened with Afghan reinforcements and hundreds of Soviet troops, villagers said. Eighteen tanks lined a riverbank and another 34 armored vehicles were inside the provincial capital.

While the snow is on the ground, the "mujahiddin" (Moslem fighters) will not attack," said Sayeed. "I think the government troops will attack us first."

Although the rough terrain protected Barogal from an armored assault, the guerrillas said they had no weapons to defend themselves against the Soviet Mi 24 helicopter gunships, which have been used successfully against other rebel strongholds.

Nevertheless, they are determined to continue their resistance. "Afghanistan will be the first country to throw out communism," said one rebel. "We are not counting the years. As long as there are Russians, we will fight."

More than 500 girls 'marked for murder?'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 500 young girls may have been marked for murder in a sadistic rape-torture-murder plot that has claimed five known victims, Sheriff Peter Pitchess said Friday.

Pitchess said candid snapshots of 500 teen age girls were found in searches of the property of two men who are already in custody on other charges.

"We have reason to believe that those girls were all potential victims," the sheriff said at a Hall of Justice news conference.

Pitchess initially told reporters that "between 30 and 40" of the photographed girls had been reported as missing persons and may have been murdered.

However, a sheriff's investigator involved in the probe said later that Pitchess misspoke.

The investigator said the cases of 30 to 40 missing girls were being checked to see if they were

Dude ranch investigated after deaths of horses

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Local officials launched an investigation Friday into a dude ranch where two horses have died in the past four days.

Animal Warden Janice Kisela said 15 horses remain on the property, but she said several of them were underweight and suffering from hunger or some other ailment.

Ms. Kisela and Chris Pledger of the Irving Health Department sent a veterinarian Friday to examine the horses on the 40-acre Justin Dude Ranch, which caters to churches, schools and other groups.

The manager of the ranch, Bill Bloomquist, agreed that some of the horses were in poor health. But he said the owner did not buy high-protein grain, opting instead to stock the ranch with some hay.

Ms. Kisela said the hay was not of "very good quality."

One horse died Tuesday, and Bloomquist shot another one to death Thursday after it collapsed and was unable to get up. He had tried to revive the horse with a water-sugar solution and grain borrowed from a nearby farm, but without success.

Bloomquist said about half the remaining horses are suffering from a weight loss and three appear to be in serious condition. He said he has spent about $150 of his own money for medicine, grain and other supplies for the horses.

But he said the existing grain supply ran out about three weeks ago and the weather turned colder.

The owner of the property, Charles Cross, was in Toronto on a business trip. He told the Dallas

Times Herald by phone that he visited the ranch two weeks ago and left 50 bales of hay. He said the grain was unnecessary because the horses could also graze in a pasture. "I have a deep love for those horses," he said. "I wouldn't want to see anything happen to them."

Radioactive waste plant on Texas island to close

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Todd Shipyards Corp. plans to shut down its Pelican Island radioactive waste storage and processing facility as soon as possible.

Company officials said the facility will be closed for good after current contracts expire.

Chris Roehrer, Todd's secretary and counsel, said Friday that means Todd will get out "as soon as we can get out."

Roehrer said the longest contracts have about a year to run.

"If we can get out from underneath these contracts earlier, we will," he said.

The facility that is across the ship channel from downtown Galveston has been under attack by state and local officials several months but Todd officials had declined comment since a Tuesday incident in which 11 workers were said to have been exposed to low-level radiation when a small container of radioactive material was dropped and broken.

"We just can't take the crazy publicity anymore," Stout said.

He indicated he could understand people getting upset.

"But if they're going to get hysterical, let them get hysterical about somebody else, not us," he said.

Stout said the nuclear waste site is only a minor sideline to the company's main business of building and repairing ships.

Tanker turned toward cutter, ensign tells inquiry board

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The oil tanker SS Capricorn turned quickly toward the Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn seconds before the two ships collided in Tampa Bay last month, the cutter's deck officer testified Friday.

Ensign John R. Ryan, 29, told a board of inquiry that as he watched the approaching tanker, he could "see it turn really fast toward us, his bow was really swinging to port."

Ryan, of Galveston, Texas, said it was at that point that a collision was inevitable and he yelled "Collision... sound the collision alarm."

The accident Jan. 28 sent 23 of the buoy tender's 50-man crew to their deaths at the bottom of Tampa Bay. Searchers still haven't found 14 bodies.

Ryan, who was in control of the ship as it moved through the Tampa Bay shipping channel, said one of the last things he remembered before the collision was the bow wake of the 605-foot tanker as it bore down on the cutter.

"It's really strange that I remember this, but I remember thinking, 'My God, what a bow wake.' I saw the wake was really piling up on the bow of the tanker," Ryan told the board of Coast Guard officers and a member of the National Transportation Safety Board.

Ryan testified the Blackthorn was on the right hand side of channel just before the collision because he saw a turn buoy just ahead of the cutter and near its right side.

"I made the comment, 'Well, I'm gonna make this turn close to the (turn buoy) and give that guy (Capricorn) plenty of room,'" said the ensign, adding he was thinking out loud when he made the comment.

When the collision was imminent, Ryan said he braced himself and as he did, he remembered seeing the turn buoy just in front and to the right of the cutter. He said the impact slammed him into the side of wheelhouse and "sparks were just showering up."

MIA mom battles Pentagon designation of son, now missing seven years, as dead

By SHARON COHEN

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Jean Macdonald always could count on her son George to make her laugh and remember her on special occasions. He was one of the pleasant certainties in her life.
But for the last seven years, uncertainty about George has been tearing the 69-year-old woman apart.
"I just pray everything is OK for George," she said. "I don't think we can dictate in life what can be, but I wish I knew...."
"I am getting on in years, and I know of no greater hurt. When you have a death, it's final. You have proof of it. Life must go on."
It was shortly before Christmas 1972 when Air Force officials came to the Macdonald home to say that their 24-year-old son's plane had been shot down over Laos.
Two of the 16 men in the plane had definitely survived but there was no trace of George and the others, Mrs. Macdonald said. Searchers found open parachutes in the area, but no identification tags or bodies.
On Tuesday, Mrs. Macdonald opened her front door to another Air Force official, a courier bringing an unsigned typewritten note that read:
"The status review board has made the recommendation to terminate your son's missing status since they can no longer reasonably presume him to be alive. The Secretary of the Air Force will make the final determination as to Capt. George D. Macdonald's status."
The Air Force conducts hearings to determine if the status of men who are missing in action should be changed to presumed killed in action. When a panel of three Air Force colonels makes that recommendation it is passed on to the Secretary of the Air Force to be finalized.
Mrs. Macdonald is upset. For seven years, she has pressured the government to find out what happened to her son, and she says too many discrepancies still exist in government reports for a final ruling to be made on George's case.
Air Force officials say a change in status does not change the government's intention to obtain a full accounting of Macdonald — or some 20 other Air Force men still listed as missing since the Vietnam war.
Mrs. Macdonald disagreed. "It's an effort to sweep the issue under the rug," she said.
"It's a terrible tragedy to put our men in conflict and then abandon them," she said. "When you don't have any evidence to the contrary, you've got to keep up hope."

For seven years, Mrs. Macdonald wrote hundreds of letters, attended conventions of relatives of MIAs and even flew to Washington to try to see then-Secretary of State William Rogers. She was able to see only an aide, who provided no help, she said.
In recent months, her efforts have gone into resisting the move to have George declared dead. Her declining health prevented her from attending Monday's hearing at Randolph Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas.
"What really hurts terribly now is that I sent them 30 or more questions to answer," she said Wednesday. "I asked that their answers be backed up by documentary evidence, but there was no back-and-forth here. They presented their findings and that was that."
She also said she will seek a congressional investigation of status review procedures.
Mrs. Macdonald has no proof her son is alive, but she said he is constantly in her thoughts. She remembers the day — now more than 31 years ago — when she gave birth to George and his twin brother, Christopher, the last of nine children.
As a boy, George was tough to put to bed, his mother recalled. "He'd like to know what was going on even as a child," she said.
George learned to play bridge at the age of 5, loved to arm wrestle, hated to do chores and was good with numbers, she recalled.
George also was good at making his mother laugh. "He had a very good sense of humor," she said. "And he was an all-around boy. He stood up for what was right."
George grew up in Evanston, went to Ohio State University where he joined the track team and ROTC before heading to Thailand in the summer of 1972.
She said that as he packed just before leaving, he expressed reluctance about keeping all his belongings. "He said, 'I just don't think I'm ever going to see you or my family again.' It was a very eerie thing," she said.
On that summer day seven years ago, Mrs. Macdonald had her last conversation with her son. "In a way," she said, "seven years is a long time. But in many ways, it's just like yesterday we were laughing together and doing things together."

Firefighter who refuses to join strike saves life of 86-year-old Chicago man

CHICAGO (AP) — Fire Lt. Jerry Peck says that when he saw the withered pair of legs amid smoke and flames, he knew he had made the right choice.
Peck was one of the firefighters who refused to strike Thursday and an elderly man is alive because of that decision — rescued as Peck answered a fire call despite the glares of other firefighters.
The lieutenant was manning Engine Co. 116 when the alarm was turned in — a fire at a decrepit building on West 51st St. He and two others rushed to the scene and into the building.
He raced up the back stairs to the second floor, crawled through dense smoke without a mask until he saw two legs.
Peck grabbed the legs and pulled 86-year-old

Matthew Towers to safety. At first he appeared to be dead so Peck applied cardiopulmonary resuscitation and an oxygen mask.
Finally, the elderly man began to breathe as Peck continued to work on him in the ambulance en route to the hospital. Towers was reported in fair condition, suffering from smoke inhalation and burns.
"That guy would have died without me," said Peck, 37, a 14-year veteran of the Fire Department. "I know I made the right decision not to strike, especially after tonight."
Peck will receive a fire department commendation for his actions, according to department spokesman Lt. Thomas O'Connell.

Great Lakes nautical painter never served on crew of ship

By MIKE STANTON
ST. CLAIR SHORES, Mich. (AP) — If James Clary had lived in another century, he says he probably would have been captain of a Great Lakes freighter or a sailor on a wooden-masted frigate.
But the canvas he works with today is covered with paint, not filled with wind.
Clary, a nationally known nautical painter and self-taught Great Lakes shipping historian, has never served on the crew of an ore freighter and was born too late to ship out on "Old Ironsides."
But he has made his reputation as a painter depicting vivid ship scenes and preserving the style and grace he says he admires in old vessels.
Clary grew up in Detroit, nurturing his love for ships by playing along the banks of the Detroit River and watching the freighters steam past.
Today he lives in St. Clair Shores, east of Detroit, where he runs a gallery devoted to memorabilia and paintings of the sea. Recently, Clary returned to Detroit for an exhibition of his work.
As a child, Clary recalls, he asked his grandfather what was the biggest Great Lakes ship.
"He couldn't tell me, and then I did some research and found there was virtually nothing in print about Great Lakes shipping history," Clary says.
So Clary began researching the history of the region's shipping, and also taught himself to paint. The two interests joined hand-in-hand to form his career.
"I'd like to think I'm perpetuating the Great Lakes' maritime history," says Clary, who plans to write a book that will be illustrated with some of his 130 paintings.
"I decided years ago that I would try to paint the history of the Great Lakes. People said I was crazy, that I'd never sell them," he says.
Clary, 40, says his father was especially unenthusiastic about his son's aspirations to be a painter when the elder Clary was trying to feed a family of eight during the Depression.
But Clary has proven himself both artistically and financially. His earnings as a painter have supported him since 1973, and in 1977 he sold a painting depicting the Battle of Lake Erie for $20,000.

Federal grand jury hears Clayton assistant testify

By ROB WOOD

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal grand jury, during a day clouded with secrecy and legal maneuvers, listened to three hours of testimony Friday from Russell Kelley, executive assistant to Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton, a key figure in the FBI undercover Operation Brilab.

Attorneys for Kelley said he answered all questions and did not at any time take the Fifth Amendment "because there was no need to."

The lawyers said they could not reveal any of Kelley's testimony, but "we are through for the day and I think we are through with our testimony, period."

Union official L.G. Moore, another lead character in the Brilab investigation of alleged insurance kickback schemes, spent the day in the grand jury room, but it was not known for sure if he had testified.

Attorney Michael Ramsey of Houston filed two motions during the day to delay Moore's testimony.

When asked if he had been successful in the legal actions, Ramsey pointed to the grand jury room and said, "I got out of there, didn't I?"

One motion asked for a one-day delay in Moore's appearance so Ramsey would have time to file a request with a justice of the U.S. Supreme Court to quash the grand jury subpoena.

This was turned down by U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue Jr.

Then Ramsey filed another legal instrument, but it was sealed, and the attorney said, "we are now operating under the cloak of grand jury secrecy. I can't tell you what this is about, I can't say anything."

Ramsey said he understood that new subpoenas will be issued when the grand jury returns from a recess, perhaps the third week in March.

U.S. Attorney A.J. "Tony" Canales refused to comment on the day's activities, saying he too was bound by grand jury rules of secrecy.

Another sealed motion was filed by lawyer Thomas McDade in behalf of his client, Houston City Councilman James Westmoreland, who had testified earlier in the week.

McDade declined to give any indication of the substance of his legal action.

Secrecy was so tight that workmen spent part of Thursday night walling off a section of the hallway leading to the grand jury room and placing a door some 20 or 30 feet from the original entrance.

Attached to the door was a federal court order signed by U.S. District Judge John Singleton forbidding the press from passing that point.

Canales had said earlier he did not like to keep a grand jury in session more than one week a month. Although he made no official announcement Friday, the U.S. attorney is expected to excuse the jury until next month.

Then it will be time for the testimony from Moore and Clayton.

The House speaker has acknowledged that he accepted $5,000 from Moore during a meeting in Austin Nov. 8. Also attending the meeting was Joseph Hauser, an FBI informant posing as a representative of Prudential Insurance Co.

Clayton has said he thought the money was a campaign contribution and that he had put it in a safe place until he could return it to Moore.

Clayton originally was subpoenaed to appear Tuesday, then Wednesday and then Friday.

Each day, however, he was granted a stay by Canales. The speaker now will not go before the grand jury until March.

American Agriculture doesn't want to hear Bergland speak

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Agriculture Movement rejected an invitation Friday to have Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland address the group at its annual rally next week.

Marvin Meek, the national chairman, wrote to the Agriculture Department that a working session would be acceptable in place of the speech by Bergland planned next Friday.

"We have had numerous opportunities to listen to Mr. Bergland in the past three years of this administration," wrote Meek, of Plainview, Texas.

"Now is the time for working sessions and solutions. We can no longer accept oratory in place of responsible action."

Agriculture Department officials were not available immediately for comment.

Meanwhile, the farmers received the go-ahead Friday for their plan to install stills on the Capitol Mall and demonstrate the making of alcohol during the rally.

Meek said at least one still should be working by Monday to promote the merits of gasohol to spectators outdoors during the Washington's Birthday holiday.

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms issued the 30-day permit for the stills.

Farmers planned to have as many as four working stills scattered along the mall that runs between the Capitol and the Lincoln Memorial. A fifth still was planned for Lafayette Park, although it would not be operational because of its proximity to the White House.

Meek said the gathering would not resemble last year's rally when farmers used tractors to snarl Capitol traffic in protest of the Carter administration's farm policy.

Louisiana official admits meeting

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lt. Gov. James Fitzmorris acknowledged Friday that he met with representatives of Prudential Insurance Co. — the name of the company used by undercover agents in the government's bribery investigation "Brilab."

However, Fitzmorris said he did not promise them anything, and his lawyer, Jack Martzell, said prosecutors had told him the lieutenant governor is not a target of a grand jury investigation.

Fitzmorris made his comments in an interview outside the U.S. courthouse where the Brilab grand jury was holding its second day of testimony into allegations that public officials took bribes from undercover agents.

Fitzmorris had testified Thursday, but returned to the grand jury Friday with about seven boxes of campaign finance records from his unsuccessful race for governor last fall. He said he could not get them copied before the Thursday appearance. He said he did not testify Friday.

Testifying for almost three hours Friday was state Sen. Edgar "Sonny" Mouton, another of the three unsuccessful candidates for governor subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury.

Also subpoenaed was Louis Lambert, the chairman of the state Public Service Commission, who was rescheduled for next Thursday. Lambert's lawyer acknowledged Thursday that an undercover agent bought $10,000 in campaign tickets from him but stressed nothing was illegal.

"I have never promised anything in my life, any concrete promise... in my 30 years in public life," Fitzmorris said.

Asked about reports that the undercover agents gave him $10,000 in their meeting, Fitzmorris refused to answer.

"I don't think it would be appropriate for me to go through that at this time because it is the subject of an investigation," he said.

"It was a very flimsy conversation that may have last 10 or 15 minutes," he said, brushing off other questions.

Mouton's campaign treasurer, Harmon Roy of Lafayette, was the first witness before the grand jury Friday. He brought stacks of records about campaign contributions and expenditures.

Also appearing were members of the board of the state employees group insurance program. The group insurance contract allegedly became the object of the bribes offered by undercover agents in the scam operation.

Mouton, who told reporters he would hold a news conference after he testified, apparently slipped out a back door without comment.

Elma Cutrer, a member of the board, said she was questioned about 15 minutes about whether Gov. Edwin Edwards, Commissioner of Administration Charles Roemer or deputy commissioner of administration Joe Terrell had ever made a recommendation to the board about the group insurance contracts.

"I told them, 'No, they hadn't,'" Mrs. Cutrer said.

Roemer, who directed Mouton's campaign, has confirmed that he met with representatives of Prudential about the state's $60 million insurance programs, but he did not say whether he took any money.

Reporters were chased away from the grand jury rooms Friday by a bailiff who said a judge was ordering the enforcement of court rules that allow no outsiders on the floor. From the new post on the main floor, the reporters can no longer see who enters or leaves the corridor where the Brilab grand jury is meeting.

The panel is one of two meetings on the Brilab case — an undercover operation which took its code name from "Bribery Labor Investigation." In the operation, FBI agents posed as insurance salesmen and offered bribes to public officials — reportedly sometimes recording the transactions on videotape.

Published reports have said both Fitzmorris and Lambert took money from undercover agents. Lambert's lawyer acknowledged Thursday that Joseph Hauser, identified as a government informant, had paid $10,000 for tickets to a campaign function for Lambert.

Hauser is a twice-convicted Beverly Hills, Calif., insurance promoter who turned FBI informant and is one of the key figures in the Brilab investigation.

Lambert and Fitzmorris have denied any wrongdoing.

Gov. Edwin Edwards, whose testimony took up most of the first day, told reporters he also met with Hauser, but did not take any money.

In Houston, Texas, where another Brilab grand jury is meeting, union official L.G. Moore appeared at the courthouse Friday.

Moore, who has been described as a vital link in the investigation, won a court order delaying his testimony earlier in the week, but a federal appeals court threw the order out.

Moore's lawyer, Michael Ramsey, said he is considering further appeals. He contends the government has leaked damaging information and thus denied Moore of his rights to due process of law.

A scheduled appearance by Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton was delayed until March.

FBI agent convinced that D.B. Cooper dead, gone

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The FBI agent who has spent nine years looking for D.B. Cooper is more convinced than ever that the airline hijacker is dead and never will be found.

Agent Ralph Himmelsbach said that opinion, which he has held almost throughout his investigation of the case, is borne out by "the first solid piece of concrete evidence since the case began."

Himmelsbach, 54, is set to retire March 1 after 29 years with the FBI.

He was gratified that the evidence, fragments of bills received by Cooper in his 1971 hijack, had been recovered.

"I'll admit to a certain sense of satisfaction," he said. "The case isn't solved, but this is certainly a major milestone."

Himmelsbach often has flown his single-engine plane over the southwestern Washington area where Cooper parachuted from the Northwest Airlines plane on Thanksgiving eve with $200,000.

"I was over the target area near Lake Merwin ... again," he said in an interview. "I saw they had logged a lot of prime search area, and thought something would turn up now."

The same day Himmelsbach flew over the lake, last Sunday, children on a family picnic at a Columbia River beach about five miles north of Portland in Washington state found soggy pieces of some of the bills that were given to Cooper. The FBI identified them from serial numbers.

Himmelsbach said the condition of the cash indicated it had floated down a tributary stream into the Columbia before being washed ashore.

"So we know at least that he never spent this money, and we know that none of the money he was given has ever turned up in circulation," he said. "So, if he got away with it, why hasn't he spent any of this money?"

Himmelsbach noted, however, that some people's "perverted attitudes" had prompted them to make a folk hero out of Cooper, whose signature on the passenger list was interpreted as "Dan" Cooper.

He said those people will not be convinced of Cooper's death until someone finds "a batch of bones strapped into a parachute with the attache case nearby. Then we can say we have got our man."

Himmelsbach said Cooper's skeleton probably never will be found if it is in the forested, mountainous area in which he is supposed to have landed. "Unlike the money, Cooper is biodegradable," he said.

Himmelsbach said he is satisfied with his investigation of the case and noted of Cooper, "If he is alive, then he is the only man who knows more about the case than I do."

Cooper got on the Boeing 727 in Portland and displayed what appeared to be a bomb in demanding the money, which he received when the plane landed in Seattle before taking off again for Reno, Nev. It is the nation's only unsolved hijacking.

Language still catalyst in Belgian crises

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Since World War II, Belgians have lived under 24 governments. Only two served their full four-year terms, one didn't last a week and many others were out within a year.

In January, the nation went through another of its long list of government crises. It lasted a week and came close to toppling the 16-month-old government of Social Christian Premier Wilfried Martens, 44.

The crisis — as so many others before it — had its roots in the linguistic squabbles between the six million Flemish and four million French-speaking Belgians, the latter known as Walloons. In 1977, Belgium embarked on a program to grant far-reaching powers of autonomy to Flemish-speaking Flanders in the north and French-speaking Wallonia in the south.

THE FALL OF THE MARTENS government was averted when it was agreed to extend by two years to Dec. 31, 1984, the deadline to turn over powers of self-government to Flanders and Wallonia.

Ironically, the question of regional autonomy is likely to gather momentum this year as Belgium celebrates its 150th year as an independent nation. But in spite of the celebrations, what this Maryland-sized nation really marks is 150 years of an uneasy Flemish-French relationship that is becoming increasingly unacceptable by either side.

In addition to the question of autonomy for Flanders and Wallonia, there is the future status of Brussels in a confederated Belgium. Largely a French-speaking city of about a million people, the Belgian capital lies entirely in Flanders — just above the east-west "language frontier" that slices Belgium roughly in half.

Flemish parties are wary of giving Brussels the same legislative powers as Flanders or Wallonia for fear this will create two French-speaking regions in a country where the majority speaks Flemish — a language virtually identical to Dutch. But French-speaking parties feel the future status of Brussels must reflect that most of the city's 600,000 people speak French.

RECENTLY, A MEMBER of a French-speaking Brussels party shouted in the Senate, "Vive le Bruxelles libre!" (Long live free Brussels!) after the legislators were asked to acknowledge a group of visitors in the gallery from the French-speaking Canadian province of Quebec.

The shout parodied one made by the late President Charles de Gaulle of France who in the late 1960s shouted, "Vive le Quebec libre!" to independence-minded Quebecers in Montreal.

Linguistic disputes have long dominated Belgian politics and have spawned extremist views in both camps.

"Belgium is no longer livable. There is no Belgian solution for this country's national identity problem," Etienne Duvieusart, a Walloon and former member of Parliament, said recently. He is a fervent supporter of a total division of Belgium into two independent states with Brussels becoming the capital of a United States of Europe.

Similar sentiments are felt by extremists as well in Flanders, where there have been demonstrations by the Flemish Militant Order, a nationalist group. However, its members have been sharply criticized in the Flemish press.

BELGIUM'S REGIONAL AUTONOMY issue has prevented any serious debate in Parliament in the past year on the government's austerity legislation or the country's 7.9 percent jobless rate, a post-war high.

But then, the Flemish-French schism has cut deep wounds, especially on Flanders' side of the language barrier.

Until well into the 20th century, Wallonia's economy — fired by booming steel and coal industries — completely overshadowed agricultural Flanders. Consequently, French was predominant in Belgian courts and politics, education and business.

But since 1945, the rapid industrialization of Flanders has overtaken Wallonia where coal and steel output declined dramatically. A fast-growing birthrate has given the Flemish a Parliament majority and sparked the devolution debate that has been increasingly welcomed by Belgium's francophones who are now a minority.

When Belgium became independent from the Dutch in 1830, "L'union fait la force" (Strength through unity) became its motto. But in the 1980s the statement has become illusory.

Waco couple to perform gospel concert on Sunday

A concert of gospel music is scheduled Sunday morning as a highlight of the 10:50 a.m. worship service at Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas St.

The featured artists will be vocalists Jan and Bob Salley of Waco.

The Salleys will be representing World Hunger Relief Inc., a Christian, non-profit organization founded in 1976 to promote awareness of world hunger, and to raise money to alleviate this situation.

The vocalists have been singing a team for more than 15 years and have traveled extensively in the Southwest and elsewhere presenting special concerts in churches and on college and university campuses. They have made two LP albums.

Through the Salleys' concerts, World Hunger Relief Inc., has sent many thousands of dollars overseas to be used in the fight against world hunger.

The public is invited to attend the worship service and support the cause of hunger relief.

Tenor soloist to be featured with choir in Sunday service

Louis Kluck will be featured as tenor soloist with the Midland First Presbyterian Church's Chancel Choir during the 11 a.m. worship service Sunday. Tom R. Roberts will conduct.

Kluck will perform the Sanctus from "The St. Cecilia Mass" by Charles Gounod.

Kluck is district sales manager for Joy Petroleum Equipment, Baash-Ross-Larkin. He studied opera with Eugene Conley at North Texas State University in Denton.

Kluck sang with the Dallas Civic Opera chorus, served as soloist for 2½ years at the Third Church of Christ, Scientist, and Temple Shalom, both in Dallas. Since moving to Midland, he has appeared in many Midland Community Theatre and Permian Playhouse productions and has been featured soloist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony and the symphony chorale.

Payne's topic is to be "Sharing the Light of Faith — The National Catechetical Directory." He will relate the key points in the new National Catechetical Directory to the modern life of the church. His talk will begin at 9:45 a.m. in the school gymnasium.

At 11 a.m. a series of workshops will emphasize the parent as educator, the tools and techniques of teaching and direction for the Year of the Family, 1980.

Workshops will be in three series — the first from 11 a.m. to noon, the second from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. and the third from 2:45 to 3:45 p.m. Luncheon is scheduled between 12 and 1:30.

Churches support child care laws

By SUSAN STOLER

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Evangelist Lester Roloff would have found no supporters in his fight against state child care licensing laws at the Texas Conference of Churches assembly Friday, if he had come.

Delegates to the annual meeting unanimously approved on voice vote a resolution supporting current laws requiring the state to inspect and license public, private and religious 24-hour care facilities.

"I was not surprised because the churches we represent have said in the past they support the law," the Rt. Rev. Willis Henton, conference president, said of the vote taken without debate.

Henton is the Episcopal bishop of Northwest Texas.

Roloff's name is not mentioned in the resolution which asks Gov. Bill Clements not to add the issue to a special legislative session later this year.

Roloff has characterized the 1975 child care licensing act as interfering with religious freedom and imposing government rules on the church.

The Baptist preacher closed two homes last year rather than take a license. He reopened one, prompting Texas Attorney General Mark White to sue him and force either its closing or licensing.

"The intent of the law is to protect the health, safety and well being of children in the state who reside in these facilities," said the Rev. Ed Triem of Houston, a delegate from the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

"Freedom of religion shall be inviolate under the act with no government agency being involved in religious instruction or curriculum of schools," he added.

The Texas Conference of Churches has members from 13 protestant denominations, the Greek Orthodox and Roman Catholic churches. It lacks representatives from Southern Baptists, the Church of Christ and other groups with large Texas memberships.

The conference's new president for 1980-1982, the Rev. H. Richard Siciliano of Houston, said he wants to talk with Baptists about joining the organization.

Siciliano is executive presbyter of the Gulf Coast Presbytery of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

"Almost all of us have working relationships with Baptists and yet for some reason the Baptists have only observer status," he said. "I would like to find out why they aren't in the conference. Maybe it's because of the rest of us."

Protest planned against film about gay murders

By DAVID EINHORN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "Cruising," a brutally frank film about a killer preying on New York homosexuals, opened Friday as gays, fearing copy-cat violence, plan demonstrations at theaters showing the film.

The issue of censorship has been raised as homosexual groups angrily debate whether the film poses a menace to them or a chance to publicize their little-understood lifestyle.

The film, which initially was to be shown at about 600 theaters in the United States and Canada, is directed by William Friedkin, who directed "The Exorcist" and won a 1972 Academy Award for "The French Connection." It stars Al Pacino as an undercover police officer investigating a series of murders in which the victims are all homosexual.

In San Francisco, where homosexuals account for about 15 percent of the 665,000 population, a group called "Stop the Movie Cruising Coalition" plans to protest at the St. Francis, one of two theaters set to show the film here.

United Artists, the movie's distributor, said theater owners can deduct costs of extra security from the receipts, before the profits are sent on to UA.

"It's a very obviously anti-gay movie," said Michael Dawson, head of the coalition. "It presents gay men as willing victims of violent crime. We're victims, all right, but we're not willing."

Dawson said the movie has "no redeeming social or intellectual value."

A screening in New York on Monday, whose audience included Dick Cavett, Norman Mailer and cartoonist Gary Trudeau, was picketed by about 30 gay men and lesbians, resuming protests that began last summer when Friedkin filmed in the city's Greenwich Village section.

Afterwards, Friedkin was criticized by Arthur Bell, a gay activist and film critic for the Village Voice newspaper. Bell called Friedkin "the worm of worms" and said the film could do "nothing but harm a lot of people."

"It can cause psychological and possibly physical violence, and I condemn you for making it," Bell told Friedkin.

"The film never intends to show what gay life is about," Friedkin said at a news conference after the screening. "It is based on actual events...on attitudes and perceptions of people within the gay community and within the police department that I talked to in forming the script. The movie is merely a reflection of what I saw."

"I think gay people are more in danger of the kind of totalitarianism that would want to ban the film, than anything else," he added.

Friedkin also said that an opening statement would be added to the film. It states: "This film is not intended as an indictment of the homosexual world. It is set in one small segment of that world which is not meant to be representative of the whole."

Robert McQueen, publisher of The Advocate, a gay newspaper, opposes the movie but finds it ironic that gays are fighting "Cruising."

"For a long time gay people have been fighting for...visibility, especially in the media," he said. "So it's ironic that we should be so adamant in our concern over this film."

But another gay publisher, Chuck Morris of the Sentinel, said, "It's simply not true that the great percentage of gay people in this city want to prevent this film from being shown. People trying to shut it down are a very small, very vocal group."

"Cruising" was to have been shown at Ghirardelli Cinema, but General Cinema Corp., owner of that theater, dropped the picture at 33 theaters after deciding it deserved an X rating, instead of an R.

United Artists says it is considering legal action against General Cinema for breach of contract.

Pacific Theaters held an all-day policy meeting last week then decided to play the film at three Southern California theaters.

"We didn't like the picture, and I didn't really want to play it," said Art Silber, Pacific's head buyer. "But we're not censors, and we don't want to be in the position of telling the public what to see or what not to see."

"It is an ugly film," says McQueen. "It portrays a very seamy and small side of gay life. The kind of subliminal message in it is that these people who are being murdered...probably deserve it. Our fear is that it will eventually lead to increased violence against gay people."

Friedkin spoke on that issue at the New York screening, saying: "My responsibility to the community is to tell the story the way I see it. You may feel that it's going to cause violence. I don't."

Traveler parlays country inns into prosperous travel guides

By JULES LOH

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Norman Simpson's office, on Pine Street, is a half block from a two-centuries-old country inn, the Red Lion, on Main, in this quiet Yankee village in the hills.

The small sign on Norman Simpson's door says: "The Berkshire Traveller Stop Here."

You are lucky to catch him there, though, because he rarely stopeth anywhere for long. He is always on the go, traveling from his beloved Berkshire hills in search of romantic hideaways, similar to the Red Lion, along the backroads of two continents.

It has to be among the more enviable pursuits of anyone with a wanderlust. The irony is that he came to his vagabonding ways because he disliked travel.

"What I disliked," he said, seated on a red plush couch in the parlor of the Red Lion, warmed by a crackling fire, "was stopping at yet another motel as cold and impersonal as the last one."

"I had the choice of staring at the color TV in my room or staring at the bartender. Neither appealed to me."

Any frequent traveler knows that lonely despair, which explains why so many are grateful for the upshot of Norman Simpson's discomfort: a paperback book, "Country Inns and Back Roads."

If there is any doubt that a good many travelers prefer the homeliness of a room with a rocking chair and a wooden dresser, even if, as at home, the drawers stick, to the efficiency of one-handed showers, hookless coat hangers, tape-recorded wake-up calls and lamps bolted to the table, take a look at the figures.

In the decade that Simpson has been publishing his guidebook, sales have settled to a steady 50,000 copies a year.

"I was as surprised as anyone that it would become so popular," he said. "I never expected it to become a business. The first issue was sort of a lark. I gave it away."

That was in 1969 when Simpson and his late wife Nancy, an artist, ran an advertising agency. His travel was around New England, selling ads.

"Because of my dislike for motels I stayed at as many country inns as I could find," Simpson said.

"I decided to make up a little pamphlet, 12 pages, describing the 12 I had visited. I wrote it in the style of Pepys' Diary. It was a promotional gimmick, really, for our agency."

The current issue is no pamphlet. It has 362 pages and describes 172 inns in 27 states, six provinces of Canada and the Virgin Islands, and Norman Simpson has visited every one of the inns.

Not satisfied with that, he has put out a guidebook of inns in Europe, and has visited all of them, too.

Between trips, he publishes a twice-monthly newsletter for country innkeepers, keeping in touch, and arranges an annual convention for them.

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE

Don't Count on Luck

By Alfred Sheinwold

There are bridge players whose fancies always work, whose sides break well. Since we're not part of this fortunate group we must use our heads.

South took the king of diamonds, led a heart to the ace and gave up a heart. Declarer won the diamond return, cashed the ace of spades and led a trump to dummy's nine. Then he ruffed a heart. Unfortunately, South couldn't set up and cash a heart. Down one.

EARLY DONATION

South should give up the first heart instead of taking dummy's ace. He wins the diamond return, cashes the ace of trumps, leads a heart to the ace and ruffs a heart. South then leads a trump to dummy's nine and ruffs another heart.

The last heart is now good. South leads a trump to the queen and cashes the last heart—his 12th trick.

Losing the first heart lets South reach dummy with the ace of hearts in time to do something useful—ruff a heart. This makes a difference of 1530 points.

Spy transferred to stronger prison

LOMPOC, Calif. (AP) — Three weeks after the prison escape of convicted spy Christopher Boyce, his co-conspirator, Andrew Daulton Lee, is being transferred to a more secure facility in Indiana, federal prison officials say.

Tim Keohane, warden at the maximum-security federal prison at Lompoc 150 miles north of Los Angeles, said Thursday that Lee, 28, was "in transit" to a maximum-security facility at Terre Haute, Ind. He decline to elaborate.

The U.S. Marshal's office, meantime, reported no progress in its search for Boyce, 26, whose escape from Lompoc was the first from the facility this year. Last year, Lompoc was upgraded from a minimum- to a maximum-security facility, but lighting renovations and other safeguards have not been completed.

Lee and Boyce, a former clerk at TRW Inc. in Redondo Beach, were convicted in 1977 on charges of selling top-secret satellite documents to the Soviet Union.

Lee's mother, Anne, a widow who lives in Palos Verdes Estates, said she was told by Keohane that her son may come back to Lompoc in six months when the renovation work is completed and the prison is more secure.

East Germany's Karin Enke wins women's 500 meter sprint.

Tai, Randy sidelined; Eric Heiden wins 500 meter

By WICK TEMPLE

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner, America's gold medal hopes in Olympic pairs figure skating, were forced out of the competition at the Winter Games Friday night by a disastrous injury that cast a pall over the medal successes of speed skaters Eric Heiden and Leah Mueller.

Heiden captured the first American gold of the Games, winning the men's 500-meter event and Mueller took a silver in the women's 500.

But then disaster struck the American team in the pairs competition. As they warmed up before the short program, Gardner, who had suffered an upper leg injury in practice a day earlier, tumbled to the ice. He scrambled to his feet and skated ever so gingerly. Then he tried the same move, a double flip, again and again he fell.

The two Americans then skated to the end of the hockey boards to consult with their coach, John Nicks, who decided on the withdrawal.

Earlier, Heiden and Mueller got the day off on a happier note for the United States with their speedskating medals.

The East German team, which in the past few years has emerged as the greatest challenger to Soviet domination of the Winter Games, collected its first gold medal when Karin Enke edged Mueller in the 500 meters.

And Raisa Smetanina, a Soviet master of sport, won the women's 5-kilometer cross-country ski event to give her team its 51st Olympic medal and put the Soviets two ahead of Norway in the all-time Winter Olympics standings. Swiss bobsled driver Erich Schaefer set a course record of 2:04.63 for two runs and led the two-man bobsled event going into Saturday's final day of competition. He hit the wall only twice on the 16-curve run, which is about as well as a bobsled can be driven.

With the crowd at the speed skating oval chanting "Eric, Eric, Eric," Heiden, 21, of Madison, Wis., set an Olympic record of 38.03 seconds in the sprint race and set himself up for what American team officials hope will be a sweep of five gold medals in the men's events.

His younger sister, Beth, who is racing in all four women's events, finished seventh for the second day in a row — this time in the 500. She raced Thursday in the 1,500-meter event.

Eric Heiden skated in the first pair with the silver medal winner, Evgeni Kulikov of the Soviet Union, who set the world record in the 500 at 37 seconds flat. Kulikov had a time of 38.37 Friday.

Both had trouble with false starts. Kulikov was ahead after 100 meters but Heiden caught up on the backstretch and then found the Russian inching ahead as they neared the last curve. Then Kulikov slipped slightly and with a few swift strides, Heiden had it won.

"Those last three strokes coming out of the turn really did it," Heiden said. "It had a slingshot effect. It was nice to race with him. Throughout the race, you know where you stand with him. I expected him to be one of the toughest."

Kulikov commented "I think I would have won if I had been working with my head instead of my feet."

Mueller, 28-year-old veteran of the American women's team, was timed in 42.42 in the women's 500, just four-tenths of a second behind Enke of East Germany. The Olympic record was 42.76, set by Sheila Young of the U.S. in Innsbruck four years ago. Natalia Petrusheva of the Soviet Union took the bronze in 42.42.

Alison Owen-Spencer of Indian, Alaska, the 26-year-old top-ranked American entry in the women's 5-kilometer cross-country race, placed 22nd among the 38 skiers from 13 countries in Friday's race. Her time was 16:05.04, less than a minute behind Smetanina's winning time of 15:06.92. Hilka Riihivuori of Finland won the silver medal and Kveta Jeriova of Czechoslovakia won the bronze.

The lack of organization that has dogged these games from the start got worse Thursday night when 2,000 people crowded onto frozen Mirror Lake for the medal award ceremonies. The flagpoles that were supposed to be there, weren't. A fence that was supposed to keep too many people from standing on the ice at once hadn't been set up for economy reasons.

International Olympic Committee officials were furious. For one thing, the flag raising and other pageantry of the Games is extremely important to them. For another, they could see 2,000 people sinking into Mirror Lake as fireworks went off overhead and Lord Killanin tried to hang a medal around the neck of some athlete.

What made things worse was that two Soviet medal winners never made it to the ceremony, either because they couldn't get transportation or overslept, depending on which version of the story you believed.

That foulup came after four days of frustration for the thousands of people jamming this Adirondack Mountain Valley. They were forced to depend on a complicated bus transportation system to ferry them from venue to venue. The bus system flopped and many spectators never got to the events for which they had bought tickets.

Even athletes had trouble getting to practice sites and competition. U.S. cross-country skiers tried to beg a ride in a private press van Friday morning to get them to Mt. Van Hoevenberg.

Killanin ordered the heads of the local organizing committee to a meeting Friday morning and told them to get things straightened out — or else. The Rev. J. Bernard Fell, president of the local committee, had suggested at a meeting Thursday night that spectators be banned from the Games as a way of avoiding possible injury.

After the Greyhound Bus Co. sent 35 extra buses into Lake Placid Friday morning, Fell said he no longer thought it necessary to ban spectators and added that it appeared that the bus system was getting ironed out.

One East German reporter commented: "The only true amateurs here are the organizers."

Bulldogs beat Cooper as Permian loses

ABILENE — Coach Jack Stephenson's Midland Bulldogs stormed past Abilene Cooper, 64-45, here Friday night while San Angelo was upsetting Odessa Permian, 69-64.

The Midland victory, coupled with the Permian loss, moves the Bulldogs one-half game ahead of Mojo in the wild second half race for the District 5-4A basketball championship.

Permian and Cooper meet in Odessa today at 8 p.m. in a makeup game and should both the Bulldogs and Panthers wind up in a tie for the second half title, there will be a one-game playoff Friday to determine the 5-4A champion and a shot at the Class AAAA state playoffs against the District 6-4A winner.

Stephenson was pleased with the play of his team. "It was by far the best we have played in several games and with the Permian loss, we are back in the title picture," shouted an elated Stephenson after hearing the Panther score in San Angelo.

Darrin Matlock, probably the most underrated player on the Midland team, tallied 15 points while Horace Brown added 12 points and teammate Herbert Johnson also score 12 points as the Bulldogs were chalking up their 29th victory of the year against only six losses. MHS is now 5-1 going into its game with cross-town rival Midland Lee Tuesday in the Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus, while Permian is 4-1 with its makeup game left with Cooper tonight and then a final one against Odessa High on Tuesday.

Midland jumped off to a 16-7 lead over the Cougars and never looked back. It was 34-18 at halftime and Stephenson inserted substitutes in playing 12 players.

Reggie Cruise and David Williams led Cooper with 12 points each while teammate Kyle Stuard added 11 more. Cooper is 13-13 on the year and 2-3 going into the makeu game with Permian tonight.

Coach Eddie Shirley's Midland Bullpup JVs took a 65-48 victory over the Cooper JV with Don Sharnowski and Mike Velasco scoring 16 points each. Raymond Parker chipped in with 15 and Jim Gunnels 10 more.

Abilene edges Rebels

By BOB DILLON
Sports Writer

You can't say Midland Lee doesn't make things exciting.

Coach Paul Stueckler's Rebels dropped a narrow 60-58 decision to the Abilene Eagles Friday night in the Chaparral Center in a District 5-4A basketball battle.

Lee had lost to Odessa Permian on Tuesday, 69-68, in overtime and Friday's game was another nail-bitter right to the end.

Jeff Hof hit two free throws with seven seconds left to give the Eagles the victory. Hof, who wound up with 13 points, scored Abilene's final nine points as the Warbirds were bringing their district record to 2-3 with a makeup game left with Odessa High tonight while Lee is now 3-3 with its final game of the season Tuesday night with Midland High, which is one-half a game ahead of Odessa Permian since the Panthers lost to San Angelo, 69-64, Friday night in San Angelo.

Abilene held leads up to seven points in the final period until Lee made its move and the Rebels, trailing 49-44, scored eight straight points to take a 52-49 lead with 4:11 left.

Lee's Tim Fisher scored in a layup to make it 49-46 in favor of the Eagles with 6:38 left and Danny Rabb, who tallied 18 points, scored two quick baskets to give Lee the lead for the first time, 50-49, with 4:38 left.

Tim Walker, who continues to shoot extremely well from the outside, connected on a 12-footer for the 52-49 lead.

Abilene then cut the Rebel lead to 52-51 with 3:28 left and then Hof scored the next nine points for the Key City team, although the Rebels cut the Abilene lead to one point on three different occasions in the final three minutes.

Rabb hit a short field goal with 48 seconds left to pull Lee to within one point — 59-58, but Hof's two charity tosses were the difference.

The Rebels got one last chance at the buzzer when guard David Keys fired a 30-foot shot that dipped into the basket and back out with one second left in the game.

Abilene took a first period lead of 11-10 and was in front at halftime, 28-26 and ahead 47-42 going into the final period.

Besides Rabb's 18 points, Walker scored 22 points to lead the Rebel attack with the loss giving them a 16-15 season record going into Tuesday's finale.

David Russell popped in 14 points for the Eagles while Hof's 13 and Tye Sasin's 15 markers, rounding out the double figure scoring for Abilene.

The Eagles still have two games left, one with Cooper on Tuesday and the OHS game on Thursday.

Coach Randall Smith's Lee junior varsity set the tone for the evening with an exciting 67-64 overtime victory over the Eagle JV.

It was the ball handling of guard Randy Pepper along with two free throws by Pepper that iced the game and gave the Reb JVs their 20th victory of the year against seven losses. Lee is now 6-0 in the second half of District 5-4A JV play with the win.

Marty Walker poured in 21 points for the Rebels while Chris Forrest added 10 more. Pepper scored nine, but his two free throws were big points.

Frank Judie tallied 24 points for Abilene.

Gaylord Perry

Willie Montanez

It's official, Texas gets Perry for Montanez

The San Diego Padres announced officially two trades today, sending veteran pitcher Gaylord Perry and two minor leaguers to Texas for first baseman Willie Montanez, and dealing pitcher Bob Ojeda to Cleveland for outfielder Jerry Mumphrey. Infielder Tucker Ashford and Joe Carroll also were included in the package to Texas for Montanez, a three-time .300 hitter.

Australian Lindsay Stephen fired his second 70 for a two-stroke lead over fellow Aussie Ian Stanley Friday in the $80,000 Victorian Open Golf Tournament. Ben Crenshaw was a stroke out of second with a 143.

Two former University of Arkansas football players Donny Bobo and Michael Forrest, accused of raping a 20-year-old woman in the athletic dormitory on Dec. 12, 1978, were acquitted Friday.

Home run king Henry Aaron, who last month ignited a controversy with baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn by failing to appear for an award, met with Kuhn earlier this week and apparently settled their differences. Aaron described the meeting as "very cordial and very fruitful. I think we were both satisfied. We had a nice time. I enjoyed it."

Larry Hoopough of Charlotte, N.C. charged from the 26th spot in the lineup and won the Florida 100 International Sedan series race for American and foreign subcompacts Friday at Daytona International Speedway.

Veteran St. Louis pro Nelson Burton Jr. clung to the lead topping Joe Hutchinson by 76 pins Friday afternoon after five rounds of bowling at Peoria, Ill.

Marvin Hagler, the world's top middleweight contender, will square off against Loucif Hamani today in a nationally televised 10-round bout. Hamani, of Algeria, is making his first fight appearance in this country. Known for a strong left jab, he has won 20 fights, with 13 knockouts, since losing his first professional bout, a four-rounder in Algeria.

The recruiting ward over Kerwin Bell of Huntington Beach, Calif., reportedly has become so intensive that one wild rumor has Bell's father being offered a place as a University of Texas regent at $1,500 a month. A Los Angeles Times writer called to inquire about the rumor, Lou Mayes, Austin American-Statesman wrote, that UT regents are appointed by the governor, "who in this case isn't likely to do UT any favors since Gov. Clements is an SMU man and isn't going to appoint a native Californian in any event."

Peace proposal may end auto racing feud

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An 11-page peace proposal to end the bitter feud between the U.S. Auto Club and Championship Auto Racing Teams has been drawn up by John Cooper, president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, the Indianapolis Star reports in Saturday's editions.

Reached by the Star in Daytona Beach, Fla., Cooper acknowledged the proposal and said, "I think the chances are excellent" the two sides will approve it. "But until it's 100 percent final, you never know."

"If it doesn't sell, we should at least find out who it is that doesn't want to get Indy-car racing back together," he said.

The feud involves CART's defection from USAC, the long-standing sanctioning body for champion car racing in the United States, in a dispute over control of the sport. CART set up its own racing schedule last year under the sanction of the Sports Car Club of America and, except for the Indy 500, boycotted all USAC events.

As recently as the past couple weeks, all attempts to solve the dispute and restore harmony to the divided sport had failed.

The Star reported that Cooper presented his latest proposal to Wally Dallenbach and Roger McCluskey, competition directors of CART and USAC, respectively. He gave the two groups until Wednesday to act on the proposal.

Basically, it covers three steps:

—Formation of a 12-14 race series, known as the Championship Racing League, sanctioned by USAC.

—Formation of a seven-man board of governors as sole body within USAC to set policy for championship racing.

—Establishment of a $1 million point fund this year, added by the Indy Speedway, with a projected $2 million awards program within three years.

U.S. loses top figure skaters

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Olympic gold medal hopefuls Randy Gardner and Tai Babilonia of the United States withdrew before beginning competition Friday night in the figure-skating pairs event at the XIII Winter Olympics.

Gardner, who fell twice in practice while attempting a double flip jump, had an upper leg injury.

Babilonia left a runway leading to the ice with tears streaming down her face.

It was apparent, in Gardner's falls in practice, that the California couple was having serious difficulties. The withdrawal apparently ended their longtime dreams of an Olympic gold medal before their participation in the competition had even begun.

Three pair performers had completed their performances when Babilonia and Gardner, the fourth skaters, then came onto the ice.

Gardner skated around gingerly, while the previous skaters' scores were being posted and once again tried the double flip. He fell again.

Gardner rarely, rarely ever falls. Gardner and his longtime partner went to the end of the hockey boards and consulted with their coach, John Nicks.

"There was no option," Nicks said.

"Randy wanted to go on but I withdrew them. He had problems with the lifts and that would have been dangerous to Tai.

"I can't believe it. It's just impossible."

The road to the top was not cheap. Neither Tai nor Randy's family was wealthy. Jack Gardner is a cost-accountant for Hughes Aircraft, and his wife, Jan, is a schoolteacher.

Tai's father, Constancio, is a detective sergeant in the Los Angeles police department. He could have retired last year, but decided to stay on the force for five years, while also moonlighting as a security guard at Paramount studios, to defray his daughter's enormous skating costs.

It is estimated that expenses for world class skaters can run from $15,000-$20,000 a year. There is the cost of lessons; Nicks charges $35 an hour. There are rink costs — $70 for private practice sessions, and Tai and Randy, a part-time drama student at the University of Southern California, often practiced five hours a day.

There were ballet lessons, which both skaters took from Terry Rudolph, a former ballet star.

It was this balletic element that Babilonia and Gardner hoped would allow them to rise above Rodnina and Zaitsev, who had dominated pairs skating for nearly a decade.

Tai draws her exotic looks from her father, a native of the Philippines, and her mother, a black from Louisiana.

Tai's name was suggested by her godfather, Matsumi Nakashima, who says it means "tranquil" in Japanese.

Her middle name, Reina, is Spanish for "queen."

Through all the tedious practice sessions, hours of sacrifice, and missing out on being normal teen-agers, Tai and Randy had a special chemistry on and off the ice.

"It's hard to explain," said Tai. "It's like brother and sister, yet it isn't. It's like husband and wife, yet it isn't. We are just very close. I know: it's like we're best friends."

"I know they must be heartbroken," said Mrs. Jan Gardner. Randy's mother from her hotel room. "They worked so hard and it seems like a tragedy."

"He had this injury the day before yesterday. He practiced fine. Just an hour ago he was in the room doing exercises: push-ups, touch his toes, kicks and everything like that. He went and had a shot at 7:45 p.m. The shot was strictly under the supervision of the Olympic Medical Committee."

Oregon coach unhappy with president's fine

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Oregon head football coach Rich Brooks says he is disappointed by university president William Boyd's decision to fine him and five other coaches as punishment for the bogus academic credits scandal at the school.

But Brooks told the Eugene Register-Guard he and the members of his staff are willing to pay the money and continue coaching at the university.

Boyd announced Thursday he was fining Brooks, four assistant football coaches and head swimming coach Rich Schleicher a total of $9,000.

However, the university president said he continues to support Brooks and does not feel the Ducks' head coach was involved in making arrangements to obtain phony academic credits for football players.

Boyd said Brooks was fined more than the other coaches because he was the man in charge of the program. The university president said Boyd was fined "for what he knew and what he should have known."

They can't touch Norm...lawyer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An attorney for former University of New Mexico basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger predicted Friday his client would be acquitted of charges filed in connection with preparation of junior college transcripts for Lobos' athletes.

"We're ready to defend the case; ready to have him acquitted," said Leon Taylor.

Taylor said he expects the case to be tried in Albuquerque within 45 days.

Ellenberger, 48, was indicted Thursday on five counts of mail fraud, one count of interstate travel in aid of racketeering enterprises and one count of wire fraud.

U.S. Attorney R.E. Thompson said the indictment charged Ellenberger and John Whisenant, a former assistant basketball coach at New Mexico, with taking part in a scheme to defraud the school's dean of admissions, the Western Athletic Conference and the NCAA.

Whisenant, 35, who came to New Mexico in 1972 after three years as head basketball coach at Arizona Western Junior College, was indicted on four counts of mail fraud. Whisenant left New Mexico at the end of the 1978-79 season.

In one instance, the indictment said, "the coaches prepared a counterfeit transcript to make it appear that Andre Logan (a former Lobos' player) had higher grades and more credits than he actually received" from Mercer County Community College in Trenton, N.J.

The indictments stemmed from a grand jury investigation that began Dec. 13.

Ellenberger was fired Dec. 17, about three weeks after an affidavit was filed in U.S. District Court in which former basketball assistant Manny Goldstein told Ellenberger he had arranged to have hours added to the transcript of a junior college player.

The seven-count indictment centered on activity involving two junior college players, Logan and Craig Gilbert.

THE INDICTMENT said Goldstein and an Albuquerque man, William Blackstad, prepared a counterfeit transcript for Logan from Mercer showing him with more hours than he had accumulated.

Blackstad and Goldstein were not named as defendants in the indictment, but Thompson said he expected them to plead guilty to felony charges to be filed by the U.S. Attorney's office "in the near future."

Ellenberger and Whisenant then obtained a fake seal and used it to emboss the transcript, the indictment charged.

Boycott would be hard blow

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — A boycott of the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow would deal the Soviets "a psychological blow to their self-esteem as a world power," says Victor Feinstein, a former Soviet athlete who now coaches Clemson University's gymnastics team.

The Soviets are planning a propaganda blitz in connection with the games, says Feinstein, who emigrated with his parents from Latvia in 1973.

They will be extremely disappointed and probably resort to even more propaganda if there is not a large Western audience for their "Olympic showcase," says Feinstein, who trained as a gymnast in the Soviet sports system for eight years.

In reaction to a boycott, the Soviets are likely to accuse the Western nations of shying away from competing against communist athletes to avoid the embarrassment of defeat.

"A lot of people in Russia and in East Europe will buy that line, but a lot of people will laugh at it," Feinstein says. "The ones who read between the lines will know better than to believe the propaganda."

Feinstein says he believes politics should be kept out of the Olympics.

SMU's Carter steals SWC show

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Freshmen shotputter Mike Carter of Southern Methodist and sprinter Herkie Walls of Texas stole the show Friday night in the 7th Southwest Conference indoor track and field championships.

Carter, who is also a member of the Mustang football team, uncorked an effort of 67 feet 3/4 inch, which is the best in the world this year indoors. Carter's previous best this winter had been 66-10.

Walls upset Texas A&M's Curtis Dickey in the 60-yard dash with an explosive start that the strong-striding Texas Aggie senior could not overcome.

The 5-8, 140 pound Walls was clocked in 6:09 seconds, just an eyelash off Houston McTeer's world record time of 6:05.

Dickey, the 6-2, 215 pound footballer who is expected to be a No. 1 round draft choice in the National Football League, was timed in 6:11 seconds.

Carl Lewis of Houston earned the bronze medal in 6:18.

The 60-yard dash was the feature of the SWC championships before a crowd of some 8,000 in Tarrant County Convention Center.

Dickey wasn't the only upset victim in the early going.

The Baylor Bears, led by the strong one-mile anchor of Todd Harbour, upset defending champion Arkansas in the distance medley relay.

Lee, Permian teams to beat in swimming

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee boys and the Odessa Permian girls established themselves as the favorites for team titles after first day action in the District 5-4A Swimming and Diving meet at the Mabee Memorial Swim Center.

Friday's action consisted of preliminary heats with the top eight individuals moving to today's 2 p.m. finals. Today's top six in each event will earn a region meet berth, which will be held Feb. 29 and March 1 at Texas Tech University. The top two finishers there will move to Austin for the state meet.

Lee and Permian both took crowns last year in the 5-4A swim meet, and a replay is expected after today's run.

The Lee boys qualified 21 individuals and two relays for today's finals to make the Rebels a heavy favorite to win the crown for the second year in a row. Midland High qualified seven boys and two relays. San Angelo also showed relay strength.

Lee, however, had to survive a severe crisis in the 100 freestyle to keep a strong edge. Robin Franke, in one of his best events, misread his starting card and missed the start of the 100 free. He was 10 yards behind when he jumped into the pool, but qualified sixth. A few 5-4A coaches thought he should be disqualified, but a UIL ruling was obtained, which in effect said that a swimmer only has to compete in the race and doesn't have to start when the gun goes off.

That could have been a big blow to us," Lee swim coach David Whytlaw stated. "But I think everything is going for Saturday."

The Permian girls could get a push from Midland High and Midland Lee. MHS qualified 10 girls and two relays while Lee qualified 15 and two.

"I think we will make a strong showing in the girls race, but Permian could win it by as many as 20 points," MHS coach Jesse Marsh said. "I think we are a little better off at this stage than we thought we would be. One of Permian's sprinters is not doing as well as we thought she would and that could help. Our kids are really swimming good."

The district swimmers assaulted nine records during the qualifying run alone. There promises to be many more today.

Midland High's Carrie Mayes, as expected, broke two records in the qualifying runs. She had a 1:14.46 in the 100 breast stroke and a 2:22.34 in the 200 individual medley. The only other record among the girls came from Permian's Rene Yelding with a 1:06.53 in the 100 butterfly.

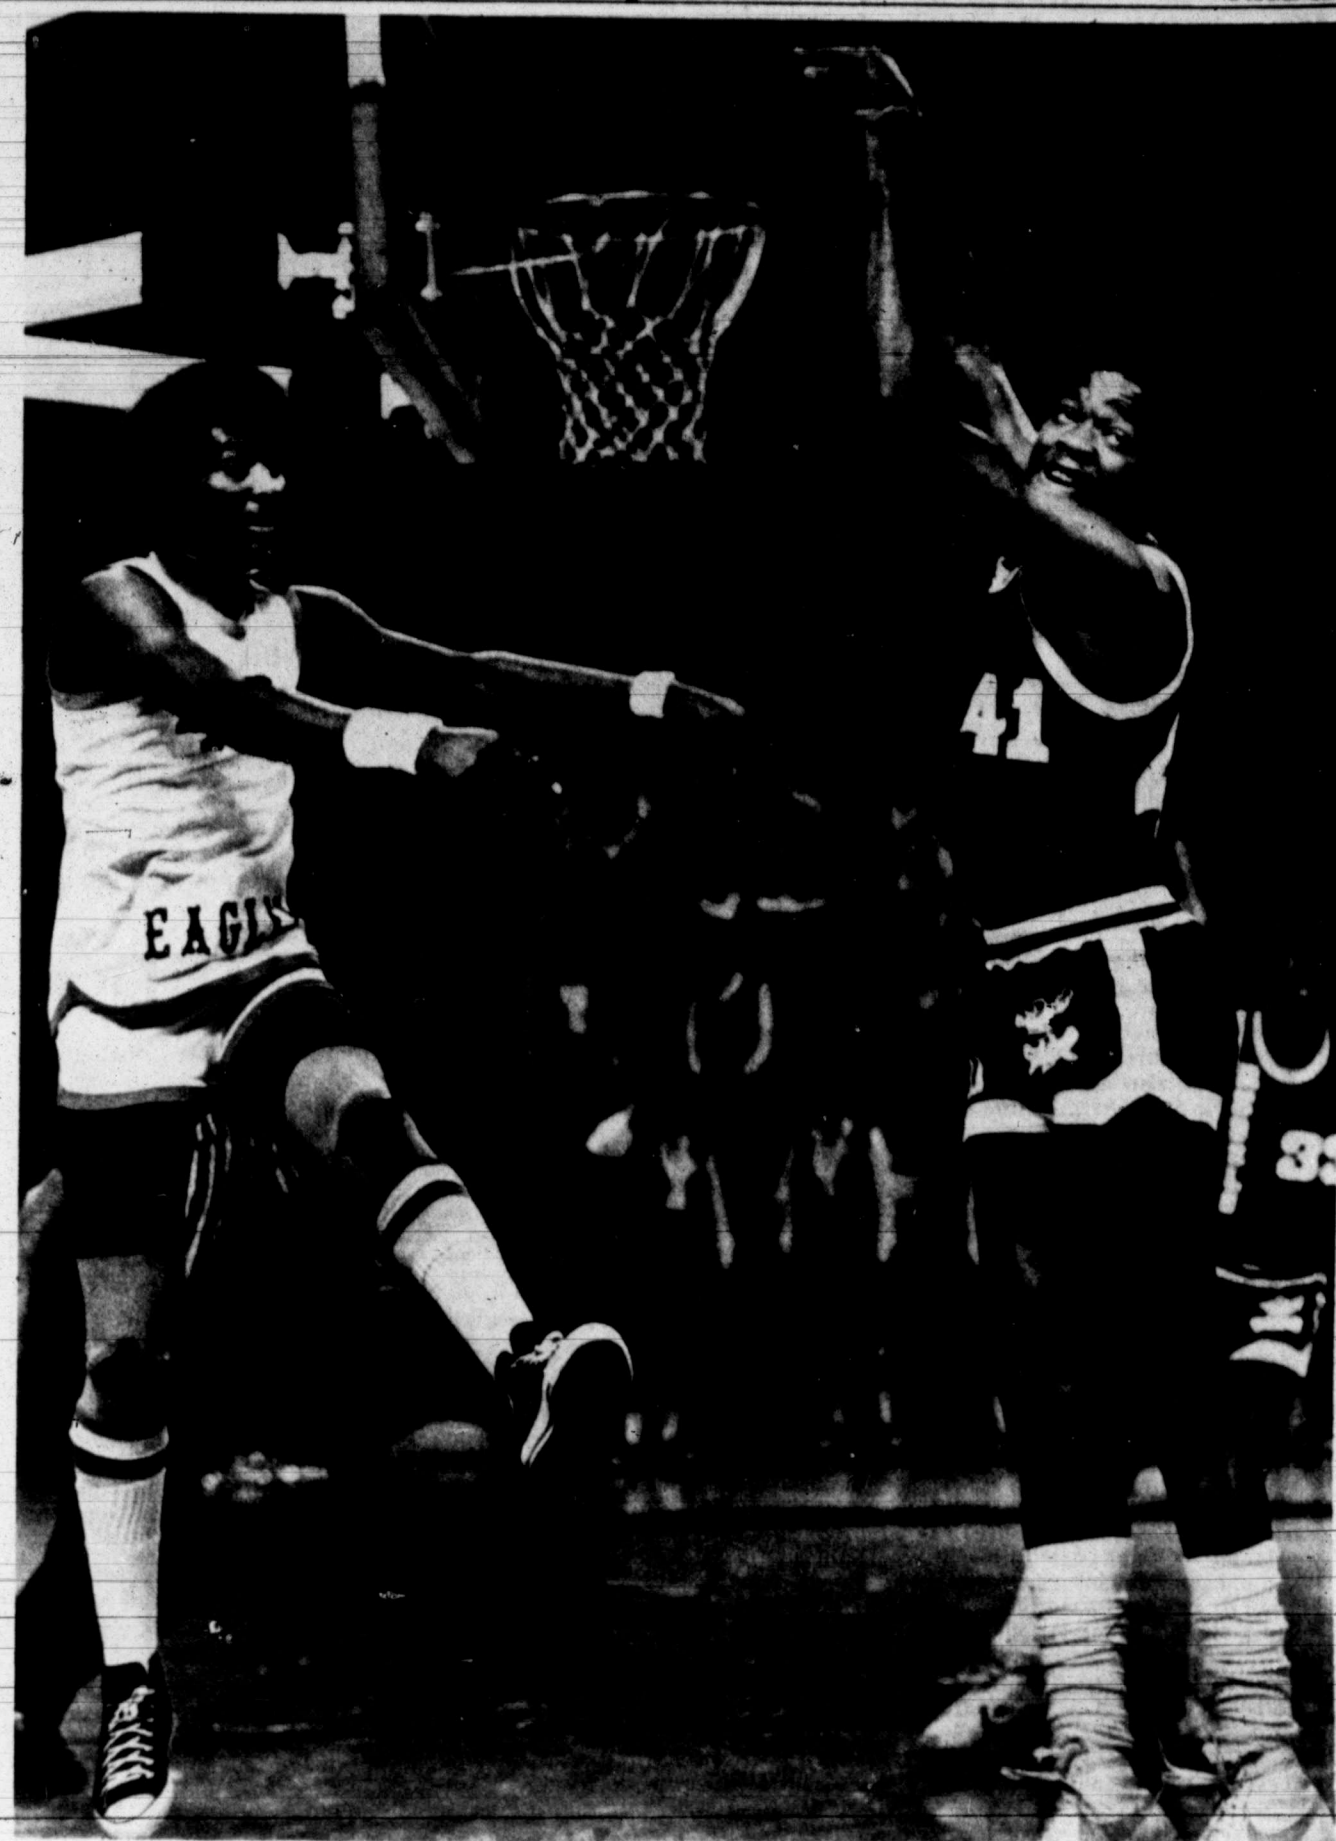

It was the boys, however, that had the grip on the record books. Six records fell in that division, three by Lee swimmers.

Mark Solari started the Rebel record charge with a 5:11.68 in the 500 freestyle and Cleve Carrens had a 56.86 in the 100 butterfly. John Kimberly of Lee had a 22.62 in the 50 freestyle for another record.

San Angelo set two loop marks as Stephen Templeton recorded a 49.73 in the 100 freestyle. The Bobcats' other mark came on the last event of the day when they won the 400 free relay with a 3:25.64, just nipping the Lee squad at the wire.

Lee's Carrens was also the top qualifier in the 200 individual medley with a 2:11.33, but that was short of a record. Midland High's Tony Gunn was also the top qualifier in the 100 breast stroke with a 1:06.66.

So the stage is set for today's finals. Team point totals will be kept in both divisions, but individual swimmers are looking for a regional swim berth. Only two will be eliminated from each race, but the season is over for non-qualifiers from this point on.

Lee's Danny Rabb (41), appears to be shooting the ball during District 5-4A game with Abilene Friday night in the Chaparral Center, but instead, Abilene's David Russell, left, has fired ball against

Redskins sign two

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins have signed two free agents — a wide receiver and defensive tackle, both of whom sat out the entire 1979 National Football League season. General Manager Bobby Beathard said Friday.

Elmo Boyd, a receiver from the University of Eastern Kentucky, caught nine passes in nine games for the San Francisco 49ers in 1978. He later was signed by the Green Bay Packers but released last August.

Jack Shrawder, a tackle from East Stroudsburg State College, was signed last season by the Baltimore Colts as a free agent, but released before the regular season.

It was a training day for Alpine skiers and "Anng 1 mild Cup downhill championships, was clocked in a startling 1 minute, 42.29 seconds in preparation for Sunday's downhill event. That was nearly three seconds faster than her nearest rival over the 2,698-meter course.

Cindy Nelson of Lutsen, Minn., the downhill bronze medalist in the 1976 Olympics, was second in 1:45.73. High winds blew her into a gate on her first run on the steep upper portion of the course, but her second run gave her confidence that she can be a medalist on Sunday.

The American hockey team was celebrating Friday after its 7-3 upset of Czechoslovakia Wednesday night and Coach Herb Brooks said he might hold center Mark Johnson out of Saturday's game against a weak Norwegian team. Johnson suffered a shoulder injury Wednesday night when the Americans gained solid medal hopes. The Czechs were considered the second best team in the Olympic tournament behind the unbeatable Soviets, who bombed the U.S. team 10-3 last week in Madison Square Garden.

Colbert leads rain-shortened Tucson

By KEN PETERS

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Jim Colbert said his golf game is better than ever and proved it with a 7-under-par 66 in the opening round of the $300,000 Tucson Open. But most of the other players proved only that they knew to come in out of the rain.

Storms plagued the tournament for the second day in a row Friday, with more than half the field unable to complete the first round — which had been completely washed out Thursday. The scores of the 62 golfers who completed Friday's round at the Tucson National course will stand, however, with 81 players scheduled to resume their first-round play today.

PGA officials said the second round will be played Sunday, with the final two rounds on Monday and Tuesday.

The last two rounds had been scheduled for national television, but the rain-delayed tournament now will not be televised at all.

Colbert, who had a couple of injury-related "down years" on the tour, bounced back to win $91,000 in 1979 and said he feels he's now playing the best golf of his career.

"I feel healthy and confident," he said after his round put him one stroke ahead of Dan Halldorson and Roger Maltbie among those who finished the first 18 holes. Len Clements, Buddy Allin, Jack Renner and Tom Purtzer were another stroke back at 68.

Lee Trevino, the tournament co-favorite with Andy Bean, shot an opening 72, while Bean was in the group that did not finish. Despite the rain that has fallen almost constantly since Wednesday, Colbert said the newly remodeled course, which plays 7,095 yards, was in fine shape during the morning round. "I think the course is in excellent shape," he said. "There was hardly any standing water out there at all and the greens were just fine."

Ironically, Colbert said he'd heard through the grapevine that the course was "terrible," but added he did not find that to be the case.

"I've been pleasantly surprised, and so have the other players," Colbert remarked.

Bradley's 8-footer good for LPGA lead

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Pat Bradley rolled in an 8-foot putt on the 18th hole Friday to take a one-stroke lead with a five-under-par 67 after the first round of a 54-hole Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Alice Ritzman and Sandra Palmer were a stroke back at 68. Rain interrupted play for nearly an hour in midday.

Tied for fourth at 69 were Carolyn Hill, Sandra Post, Mary Dwyer, Kathy Postlewait, Dot Germain and Barbara Monnex.

Defending champion Jane Blatock came in at par 72 at Pasadena Golf Club.

Bradley three-putted the first hole for a bogey 5, then hit six birdie putts.

After not winning a tournament in 1979, Bradley attributed her first-round success to a better mental attitude.

"I'm trying to keep my head a little higher now, no matter what the outcome," she explained. "It's about time I pulled something together."

She said she usually arrives at a tournament the Monday night stayed away until late Tuesday this week.

"Usually, by the time the tournament rolls around, I'm burned out," she said. "Today, I went out feeling good. I was out on the practice tee when the rain came, and the first thing I thought was here we go again. That's all I would think about. The news last night didn't say it would be that wet."

Weather has been a problem here the last three years, with the last round of the tournament being played on Monday in 1978 and 1979 because of rain.

Volpe lured back as Lee track coach

The Midland Lee track program is back in the hands of Sam Volpe after an eleven-hour move Thursday.

Volpe, the only track coach in the history of Lee, had decided to call it quits after 16 seasons last August. Supposedly, he was going out on top after his awesome 1979 team captured the District 5-4A title by the widest margin in the history of 5-4A track. The Rebels barely missed winning regional and state titles.

This week, Volpe had a change of mind, one week before the start of the season, and decided to take another swing. Earl Miller had been appointed as the Lee track coach, but he seemed more than willing to turn the reins back over to Volpe.

"Well, I had been helping out with the team anyway," Volpe stated. "I really missed coaching the team and I felt we had established a strong competitive program here. I wouldn't have even considered coming back if Earl (Miller) wasn't satisfied with the decision. Earl is a very good coach and he will still work with the team."

Eddie Wolski and Lemmon Boyd will also be track assistants this year under Volpe.

Volpe's return was approved by Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director, on Thursday. So, in short, Volpe's string at Lee is not finished and the school still has had only one head track coach.

However, with the loss of the likes of Dwight Washington, Jody Sessoms, Arthur Pertile, Jeff McCowan, Herb Pearce and Brian Briscoe, the Rebels face a major rebuilding job. It may not be as bad as it looks, however, and that may have helped Volpe change his mind. The Rebels have some fine looking athletes, but they are young and probably a year away.

Lee will have to look to seniors Phil Carleton and Mark Landers for help. Carleton won the 5-4A 440 title as a sophomore, but may be in the 220 this year. Carleton is also the mainstay of both relay teams. Landers, however, is coming off knee surgery and has a bad case of bronchitis. His efforts have been severely slowed this winter. Landers was third in the 5-4A 100 last year and is also a member of the sprint relay.

The relays show promise with Carleton, senior Steve Waldron, sophomore Darrin Williams and senior Michael O'Neal bidding for sprint relay honors. Carleton, Waldron, senior Keevin Harper, senior Gary Butler and Troy Barber on the mile relay.

Harper has been looking very good in the 880 and could be one of the big surprises this year. Butler also returns to the 880 while Robert Schooler, a transfer from Snyder who performed well in cross country this fall, will be in both the 880 and mile events.

Junior David Piccolo is looking stronger in the hurdles while O'Neal, Williams and Waldron will carry the load in the sprints.

Joining Schooler in the mile will be senior Robert Samuels and David Williams.

Last year, the Rebels were awesome in the field events, scoring over 60 points in some meets with five events. The Rebels will not be that strong that year, but several athletes show promise.

In the shot and discus events, the Rebels will rely on junior Keith Brown, sophomore Terry Thompson, junior Irl Connolly and junior Clyde Smith. Scott Stovall and Sheldon Smith, both juniors, will join senior Larry Ledbetter in the high jump. Ledbetter will also be in the pole vault. Senior Mike Ybarra will be the hope in the long jump.

No one expects the Rebels to live up to last year's team. The 1979 season was the best in the history of the school. The team set school scoring records in just about every meet.

But there is youth and talent available for 1980 and the future. However, playing the role of the 5-4A defending champion, could have its ups and downs in 1980.

The Rebels open their track schedule Friday when they travel to Fort Stockton's Comanche Relays for the two-day event.

Weatherman fouls up winter golf

BY REX WORRELL

It goes without saying there hasn't been much in the way of golfing news these past few weeks. The dear old weatherman decided to give us a taste of winter with temperatures in the 20s and low 30s as well as a little snow and ice.

When these conditions prevail, there isn't any golfing and therefore no news. This past week, we've had some pretty good weather and glad to see those smiling faces again coming out to play golf.

The Hogan Park Men's Golf Association had to cancel their tournament which was scheduled for the weekend due to the lack of entries.

The nine-hole division of the Hogan Park Women's Golf Association will be making their own pairings for the remainder of February. Beginning in March, the pairings will be made by the pairings chairman.

The 18-hole division of the ladies association will hold a Two-Man Scramble event Thursday with the following pairings:

Bernice Webb, Dorothy Melzer, Florence Malley.

The 1980 North Texas Golf Academy will be coming up in June. All area junior golfers might want to start thinking about the academy and plan to participate this year. North Texas State University will be host once again in cooperation with the Northern Texas Section of the PGA. A primary objective of the PGA is to promote the growth of the game of golf with the development of junior golfers one of the best methods to obtain the objective.

PGA pros make significant contributions to this development through the academy. Junior golfers will have the opportunity to learn from the best teaching pros in North Texas at the three one-week sessions. The sessions are June 1-6, 8-13, and 15-20. For more information about the Academy, contact your area golf pros for entry forms and information bulletins.

Brenner files against WBC

NEW YORK (AP) — Teddy Brenner, former president of boxing at Madison Square Garden and now an independent fight promoter, has sued the World Boxing Council, accusing it of restraint of interstate trade and of manipulating its rankings.

The $1 million damage suit, filed Thursday in Federal Court in New York, also names Jose Sulaiman, the WBC president, and accuses him of having "personally profited from the manipulation of these ratings." Brenner's suit also seeks the dissolution of the WBC.

Sulaiman, who could not be reached for comment, and the WBC have 20 days in which to respond to the suit.

In the civil suit, Brenner charges the WBC with conspiring to exclude "plaintiff and certain other promoters" from competing in the promotion and sale of television rights of title bouts held in the United States.

Yugoslavia bracing for anticipated death of 87-year-old Tito

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito, gravely ill with heart and kidney complications, rallied slightly Friday, his doctors said. But Yugoslavs braced for the death of their 87-year-old leader.

"A certain improvement in the overall health condition of the president, which came about in the morning hours on the 14th of this month, continues to hold," the eight-doctor panel announced from the hospital in Ljubljana. "Intensive medical measures are being taken toward maintaining and stabilizing the tendency."

Despite the encouraging news, Yugoslav officials held out little hope that Tito, who has led this country since the end of World War II, would recover.

"We haven't given any false hopes," said Information Minister Ismail Bajra. "I have never heard in the world of anyone living a thousand years and we Yugoslavs are no different."

In a posh diplomatic district of southern Belgrade, large crews of men and women were busy landscaping an area sometimes mentioned as a possible Tito burial site.

The site, in the city's Dedinje district, is located around the Museum of the 25th of May, which is filled with mementos of Tito's career.

Passersby could see two armored cars parked behind the iron gates at the downtown headquarters of the Defense Ministry, and hotels informed their guests that reservations could not be guaranteed beyond one night.

It was believed the new procedure was to guarantee enough hotel space for the large number of foreign dignitaries and guests expected for a state funeral.

Yugoslav newspapers no longer published get-well messages from home and abroad, although such messages filled the columns of major dailies before and after the amputation of Tito's left leg Jan. 20.

Yugoslav officials insisted that Tito's death, though a great national shock, would not significantly alter the country's foreign and domestic policies. These include its staunch independence from Moscow — Tito broke with the Stalinist Kremlin in 1948 — and the stable relationships between its various national groups, such as Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, who have often been at odds.

"For us the main problem is being strong, internally and economically," said one prominent Yugoslav who asked not to be identified. "They (the nationalities) all want to be independent. And the only way they can be independent is together."

In an apparently related development, the official Tanjug news agency reported that the presidency and Communist Party committee of the southern province of Kosovo announced that the local "political and security situation" was "very favorable."

"Unity and involvement has been strengthened for efficient struggle against any internal and external enemy and for defense of independence and the nonaligned position of our country," the statement said.

It called for "constant training of all people and youth" for the defense of the country.

Kosovo is a Yugoslav province where there has been friction between the government and the Albanian majority.

Belgrade's influential daily Politika gave prominent coverage to President Carter's remark at a White House news conference Wednesday night that he would "seriously consider" any Yugoslav request for aid in maintaining its nonaligned position. Carter sidestepped the issue of sending U.S. troops to defend this Balkan country against any Soviet-bloc military moves.

The newspaper carried the full text of the president's statement under the banner headline, "Carter Raises the Tone."

"We haven't taken an official stand," said Bajra, "but I liked it when he said Yugoslavia was a strong country that didn't need anyone else's help."

In the past, Yugoslav officials have publicly recoiled at hints of Western military backing, saying such hints complicate relations with the Soviet Union.

But some Yugoslavs privately acknowledged they were encouraged by signs that the United States would help them in a crisis with the Soviets.

Kolisevski expected to take reins, follow Tito's policies

By ROBERT H. REID

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Lazar Kolisevski, due to assume leadership of Yugoslavia's collective presidency if President Josip Broz Tito dies or steps down soon, is a longtime Communist stalwart with a reputation of being fiercely loyal to Tito.

Observers expect Kolisevski, 66, currently vice president of the nine-member State Presidency and a native of the southern republic of Macedonia, to follow scrupulously Tito's policies of independence from Moscow for the short period he might have the leadership role.

Although widely known in Yugoslavia, Kolisevski would in no way enjoy the personal power and prestige of Tito even though he would become president.

Under a rotating system, the vice presidency of the collective body changes once a year. Kolisevski's tenure as vice president expires in May.

If Tito dies or resigns soon, Kolisevski would become president and continue in that position until May. At that time, under the rotation schedule, Cvijetin Mijatovic, 65, from Bosnia republic in central Yugoslavia, would move up — to the vice presidency if Tito is still in office, to the presidency if Tito is not.

Kolisevski will remain a member of the presidency until his five-year term expires in 1982.

No matter who becomes president, he would become head of an intricate collective leadership which would make no decision without approval of all nine members.

Like Tito, Kolisevski joined the then-illegal Yugoslav Communist Party before World War II. A former metalworker, he became active in the movement while working in the country's then only arms factory in the Serbian town of Kragujevac.

After Yugoslavia surrendered to the Germans in 1941, the party's underground organization sent Kolisevski back to his native Macedonia. The party secretary in the southern province had joined forces with the Bulgarian Communists, and the Yugoslav party hoped Kolisevski would stop the trend.

In September 1941, the Soviet-based Communist International, which orchestrated the activities of European Communists, decided to return the Macedonian party to Yugoslav control.

Kolisevski became secretary of the

Lazar Kolisevski

Macedonian Communist Party's executive committee and chief of the provincial military staff, with responsibility for organizing partisan bands loyal to Tito.

But some party members in the town of Skopje remained secretly loyal to the Bulgarian Communists, and in an effort to undermine Yugoslav control they turned Kolisevski in to the Bulgarian police in November 1941.

Bulgaria, at the time allied with the Germans, had occupied Macedonia after the Nazi invasion.

A Bulgarian court sentence Kolisevski to death, but this was later commuted to life in prison. He managed to escape and in March 1943 returned to the Yugoslav underground.

After the war, Kolisevski played a leading role in party activities in Macedonia and the rest of Yugoslavia.

He served as president of Macedonia's state parliament and was elected to three terms on the Yugoslav Communist Party's executive committee.

In May 1979 he was elected to a one-year term as vice president of the State Presidency, which will become head of state once Tito dies or leaves the post.

Kolisevski is also a member of the collective leadership group which will govern the Communist Party.

Polish premier ousted Friday after criticism of his economic policies

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Premier Piotr Jaroszewicz was ousted Friday after his economic policies came under fire at the Polish Communist Party Congress.

The 70-year-old Jaroszewicz, 10 years head of government, was removed from the ruling Politburo in the closing session of the five-day congress, held against the backdrop of Poland's deepening economic crisis.

Communist Party leader Edward Gierek told more than 1,800 delegates that Jaroszewicz "asked to be relieved" of all his government and party posts.

Gierek, 67, then thanked his long-time associate for his "achievements in the service of the nation."

Jaroszewicz's ouster was not entirely unexpected. The premier did not speak at the congress, as scheduled, and several other speakers indirectly accused him of mismanaging the economy.

Gierek's close associate Edward Babiuch, the No. 2 man in the 14-member Politburo, is expected to be nominated as the new premier next Monday by the Polish parliament.

Fed's raise in discount rate will influence housing costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board's decision Friday to raise its bank discount rate is going to make it more expensive to buy a home and could push some companies into cutbacks that will cost jobs, economists say.

The discount rate, which was boosted from 12 percent to 13 percent, is the interest the Federal Reserve charges its member banks. When those banks must pay more to borrow, they eventually will charge their customers more for all kinds of loans.

According to economists, that means: — Homebuyers will face steeper mortgage payments. Rates for home loans already are over 13 percent.

— The price of a home will remain out of the reach of the average potential homebuyer.

— Loans for high-priced items like automobiles also should be more expensive.

— Businesses may have to cut back production and many workers may face layoffs.

— The Federal Reserve is telling us that we will get that recession whether we like it or not," said economist Otto Eckstein, head of Data Resources Inc., a Massachusetts economic forecasting firm.

Eckstein expects the Federal Reserve's action to have a sobering effect on businesses that might have planned to borrow money for continued expansion.

"It...should make business more conservative about production planning and hiring, which has continued at high levels despite warnings of an impending recession," he said.

William Cox, a Commerce Department economist, agreed, saying the move should have a "psychological effect" on businesses.

The Carter administration has been forecasting a recession for this year, but the figures so far have shown no sign that the economy is slowing down.

Increasing the discount rate is a primary way for the Federal Reserve to tighten credit in hopes of cooling down the economy in an effort to dampen inflation.

Despite predictions of a recession, retail sales increased substantially in January and the supply of money has recently grown faster than the Federal Reserve wishes. Moreover, wholesale prices rose

1.6 percent last month, the steepest monthly jump in more than five years. If that pace continued through 1980, wholesale prices would increase more than 20 percent by the end of the year.

Prices paid on the retail level by consumers traditionally rise faster than wholesale prices. Consumer prices climbed 13.3 percent last year.

Alan Greenspan, who was chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers under then-President Gerald Ford, applauded the discount rate increase as an effort by the Federal Reserve "to adjust to the inflationary pressures."

Both Greenspan and Eckstein said the effort to raise interest rates was necessary because President Carter's budget for fiscal 1981 does not go far enough toward meeting anti-inflationary goals. It proposes a $16-billion deficit that most experts believe will grow, particularly with anticipated increases in defense spending.

"The budget is too much of an election year document. It lacks enough restraint for these times," Greenspan said. "Consequently, the pressure to battle inflation is disproportionately placed on the shoulders of the Federal Reserve."

Experts say the Federal Reserve's efforts to tighten the supply of loan money also has a disproportionate effect on the housing industry.

"Home loan activity in many markets throughout the country has slowed to a trickle and the Fed's action today could well shut it off completely," said William B. O'Connell, executive vice president of the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

Marshall Kaplan, an economist at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, was less pessimistic, but said the discount rate increase "will have a psychological effect on housing. That and the failure of long-term interest rates to come down this year are going to mean a more serious slump in housing."

Construction of new homes now could fall to 1.3 million this year, 50,000 fewer than the bank board originally forecast for 1980 and 450,000 less than were built last year.

"And it will continue to make housing too expensive for the average household," he said.

Advisory board OKs MISD grant

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Criminal Justice Division Advisory Board Friday recommended approval of a $66,916 grant to the Midland Independent School District for secondary on-campus suspension centers.

The centers, to be established using classrooms at each of Midland's two high schools, would provide an alternative to suspension of students with attendance or discipline problems.

The centers would serve three junior high schools, two freshman schools and two senior high schools.

Gov. Bill Clements will make the final decision on the grant.

Mrs. Chase elected

Mrs. C. Louis Chase was recently elected to the board of directors of the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library.

Mrs. Chase and her husband have been residents of Midland for 40 years. She is the past president of the Midland Society of University Women.

She is also a patron member of the Symphony Guild and is a recipient of the Shield Award for outstanding service to civic organizations in Midland.

$2199*

Record bike.
Record price.

In the FIM World Record book for speed and endurance, the KZ650 comes out on top. For a record good deal, the KZ650 is tops, too.
For only $2199* you can ride home on a brand-new KZ650. With four double-overhead-cam cylinders of dependable brute power. Wrapped in a strong, nimble-handling chassis and suspension package. You also get features like quad carbs with accelerator pump. Automatic cam chain tensioner. Five-speed transmission with positive neutral finder. Powerful disc brake. And Kawasaki's exclusive Clean Air System that takes the emissions—not the power—out of high performance.

Come on in and see the bike that conquered Daytona and Bonneville. At only $2199, you can't afford to let this record-setting deal pass you by!

*Manufacturer's suggested retail, excludes freight, dealer prep, title and taxes. Offer valid only while supplies last.

1. I KNOW MY BUSINESS. I know the selling prices of comparable homes (your competition). I can advise you as to the best methods of enhancing features of your property to make it more attractive to a prospective buyer.

2. I KNOW WHERE TO LOOK FOR A BUYER. Through the advertising I will do on your property I will be able to generate prospects for your property, also through referral and my membership in a nationwide multiple listing system. These prospects will be qualified before inspecting your property.

3. I KNOW HOW TO NEGOTIATE. An experienced third party, familiar with all aspects of real estate is best qualified to negotiate a contract and to act as mediator between seller and buyer.

4. I KNOW HOW TO EXPEDITE. My knowledge of finances enables me to speed up arrangements for financing. This could save you both time and money.

5. I KNOW REAL ESTATE LAW AND PRACTICE. Protecting your interest throughout the negotiations and advising you of any practices that might result in legal entanglements is a part of my services to you.

6. I WORK FULL TIME. When you list your property we are on the job every day. When you list your property you won't have to worry about staying home for fear that you will miss a call. You can feel free to go about your normal pursuits, secure in the knowledge that I am taking care of the business of selling your property.

7. I DON'T GET PAID UNTIL YOU DO. When your property is sold for the price and on the terms and conditions agreed upon by you - when you have received your check for the proceeds from the sale, then, and only then, do I get paid.

Chinese divorce tough to get

By PHIL BROWN

PEKING (AP) — The husband and the wife sat about six feet apart, never looking at each other as the divorce case proceeded — the husband represented by a co-worker at a construction company and the wife by a woman who works with her in a bank.

There were no lawyers. Nobody used any legal language. It was the second round in the wife's attempt to dissolve their 3½-year-old marriage, a union torn by beatings and mistreatment but one which this court was to find still viable in a China where the vows of marriage are not taken lightly.

The hearing was opened to Western journalists. Besides the 10 news correspondents, representatives of China's Women's Federation were in the gallery of 100, all of whom had to have tickets.

The wife, Zhou Huixian, 30, and the husband, Han Fali, 35, a truck driver, sat in wooden chairs facing the judges' bench, about 20 feet away.

"I insist on divorce," the wife said at every chance during the proceedings. "I can't take it anymore."

The husband was opposed to the divorce.

The wife accused the husband of beating and mistreating her over a question of financial support for her mother, and of drinking and gambling. She sobbed as she spoke of two miscarriages, which she claimed were the result of beatings. The two have no children.

Her representative, a 25-year-old woman, accused the husband of male chauvinism and a feudal mentality.

There is a Chinese saying about "a broken mirror joined together" — a reunion of husband and wife — but in this case, it is wishful thinking, the wife's advocate said. She acknowledged that divorce in China still is considered ugly and shameful, but added that the wife had no alternative.

Judge Liu Guomao, the court secretary and two "lay assessors," a kind of cross between a juror and a judge, already were seated at the bench when the couple was called into court. The couple's representatives sat at desks at the side and in front of the judges' bench, facing the spectators. All had microphones and remained in their seats when they spoke.

The secretary already had announced court rules — no photographs, no recordings, no note-taking, no spitting.

Although the court already had investigated the case thoroughly — talking to neighbors and others — the judge and assessors brought out the whole case again by questioning the pair.

The story that emerged was that the two were long-time neighbors and even before their marriage in June 1976, Han had helped Zhou Huixian with 6 yuan ($4) a month for two years while she went to school. When they were married, he was making 40 yuan ($27) a month and she 32 yuan ($21).

The wife said they had agreed to give 10 yuan ($6.70) a month to her mother and 5 yuan ($3.35) a month to his, but he said that since he had spent 1,000 yuan ($670) to prepare for their wedding and was 160 yuan ($107) in debt, they should give less to her mother.

The quarreling started three days after the wedding, and the wife said she felt she had been deceived by her husband's attitude before marriage.

Asked about his wife's charges of beatings, Han denied them. Then he admitted to three incidents along these lines, but said they were so minor they couldn't really be called beatings. The marriage still could be patched up, as it had been several times previously, he said.

When the husband was in a hospital last spring with lung and liver diseases, she dutifully cared for him, but one day there was a quarrel in which the husband's younger brother struck her. She then filed for divorce.

The man's representative, Tan Pingzhao, 45, accused the wife of being inhuman to her husband by filing for divorce while he still was weak from his illness. She replied that she had known of his ill health even before they were married.

After 2½ hours, the Peking People's Intermediate Court still was not inclined to grant the wife a divorce, already denied by a lower court. It scolded the husband but urged the couple to try for a reconciliation.

The husband promised to control his temper and make the effort.

Woman assessor Li Zhiguo told the wife, "Your love has been through a three-year test and the marriage basis is sound." She cited the wife's concern when her husband was hospitalized and added: "I hope you will treasure your long good relations. He helped you in difficulty. Don't get upset over small matters."

Male assessor Li Hewang told the husband he must admit to the beatings. "It's wrong not to admit them," Li said. "They are immoral conduct, not condoned by the law."

Court workers were told to keep trying to bring the couple back together. The wife is living with her mother.

After the session, the wife told the foreign reporters she had faith in the court. Asked whether she saw the matter as one of women's liberation, she gave a slight nod, then fled from the room.

Lure of presidency attracts many

By JOE WING
For AP Newsfeatures

Time was when proper parents dreamed, it is said, that a newborn son might become president of the United States. Now almost anybody will tell you that he wouldn't have the awesome office as a gift.

The third man to hold it, Thomas Jefferson, asserted, "Never a prisoner, released from his chains, feels such a relief as I shall on shaking off the shackles of power." Nearly 70 years ago William Howard Taft called it the loneliest job in the world. Harry Truman likened it to riding a tiger.

Today the responsibilities and routine are more crushing than ever, and polls bear out general disenchantment with politics and politicians. Yet there is never any lack of ambitious men to bid for the assignment every fourth year — especially if the incumbent is barred by constitutional amendment from seeking another term or if the idea gets abroad that he is vulnerable at the polls.

What is the lure? Of course, the salary is good — $200,000 a year plus a taxable allowance of $50,000 and a non-taxable one of up to $100,000 for expenses, which the president must list. Expenses are indeed heavy, and the compensation is not impressive compared with that of many a corporation chief, professional man, entrepreneur, speculator or entertainer.

There are other attractive perks, however. The president lives in one of the grandest mansions in America, and certainly the most famous. He rides free in government planes, helicopters and limousines, has a small army of Secret Service men to guard him and his family, and can get away from it all at Camp David.

But even such trappings would hardly tempt a multimillionaire like Nelson Rockefeller or an intellectual like Woodrow Wilson. What motivates many an aspirant is the hope of making his mark in history, the insistence of friends that only he can assure party victory and, perhaps most alluring of all, the prospect of power held by no other man in the world. That — plus the feeling that he can handle it as well as or better than anyone else in sight, and the nerve to live within arm's reach of the atomic warfare button.

It was John F. Kennedy who asserted, "I know all the other candidates and I think I'm as able to handle the presidency as any of them, or abler — all except Lyndon Johnson, and he hasn't a chance." Jimmy Carter also made the leap after concluding that none of the aspirants seeking his backing was smarter than he, and Gerald Ford confided he liked being president.

Historians say a successful president must crave power and enjoy it. One term usually inspires him to try for another, although only 13 have made it. Polls show Americans like a powerful president who can push through his programs despite Congress or anything else. The noted scholar Henry Jones Ford called the office an "elective kingship."

David W. Rennie

Rennie to present lecture

A Christian Science lecture, "The Worth of Man," will be presented by David W. Rennie at 8 p.m. Tuesday under auspices of Midland's First Church of Christ, Scientist.

The lecture in the Midland Christian Science Church, 1001 W. Tennessee Ave. at North C Street, will be open to the public without charge. A nursery will be provided to care for infants and small children.

Rennie, of Denver, Colo., is a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship and travels extensively each year giving Christian Science lectures.

According to Rennie, a deep desire that is common to all mankind is the desire for "life to mean something, to be worth something."

He notes that, traditionally, fame, title and wealth have been yardsticks of man's worth. Despite this common view, he says, "each individual does have worth in and of himself." This worth, he points out, derives from "our sonship with God."

The life and works of Christ Jesus, Rennie says, "awaken our thought to an ever-expanding spiritual sense of life, of purity, of integrity, self-reliance, self-assurance, self-completeness." The lecturer illustrates these points with recent instances of persons who have gained a clearer view of their own worth, better health and a sense of completeness as children of "our Father."

Rennie has been involved in the fulltime public practice of Christian Science since leaving a position as an electronics engineer with a national company in 1953. He became an authorized teacher of Christian Science in 1961, and served his church as chairman of the Committee on Publication for Colorado from 1964 to 1974. He is an active member of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Denver, where he has served as executive board chairman and First Reader.

At the public lecture here Tuesday, he will be introduced by Pat Carney, First Reader for the local Christian Science Church.

Rev. Omar Pachecano

Rev. Pachecano will be featured

The Rev. Omar Pachecano of El Paso will be featured Saturday at a meeting of men of the Central Baptist Association of West Texas.

The meeting will be in Midland's Iglesia Bautista Emanuel, 1800 E. Cherry Lane.

Pachecano is associate director of missions for the El Paso Baptist Association and also serves as president of the Mexican Baptist Convention of Texas.

The Midland meeting, scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Saturday, will feature special music by La Familia Mireles of Freer. Pachecano will preach.

The visiting minister and the musical ensemble also will participate in Sunday services at Iglesia Bautista Emanuel. The public is invited to attend the Saturday meeting as well as the Sunday worship services.

Movement of U.S. Jewish population from northeast to Sun Belt increasing

NEW YORK (AP) — Jewish population of the United States is moving in increasing numbers from the northeast to the Sun Belt — the southern and western parts of the country.

The trend, continuing a pattern of recent years, is shown in demographic reports appearing in the 1980 edition of the American Jewish Year Book.

Published jointly by the American Jewish Committee and the Jewish Publication Society of America, the volume puts world Jewish population at 14,396,000, up 110,000 from the previous year.

U.S. Jewish population is put at 5,860,900, up 79,940. The South and West comprise 30.2 percent of the total—compared to 29.1 percent in 1978 and 27.8 in 1977.

Delegates to 11th assembly for representatives of TCC to hold meeting in McAllen

McALLEN — Delegates to the 11th annual assembly of representatives of the Texas Conference of Churches, meeting this weekend in McAllen, will vote on proposals against changing the present state child care licensing law, and in favor of changing the law which prohibits free education for children of undocumented immigrants.

The assembly opened here Friday and will continue through Sunday. Representatives to the assembly from 41 church jurisdictions, Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox and Protestant — which hold membership in the TCC, will vote on recommendations developed by the TCC program divisions.

Delegates also may present new business during the assembly, and these could include issues raised by a co-sponsored Conference on Food and Hunger which was held in late January at Texas A&M University.

Several recommendations reflect the historic interest of the TCC in Mexican American concerns. In addition to the proposal that the TCC and its constituent members work for legislation providing free public education to non-citizens, the assembly representatives will vote on a resolution supporting the establishment of an Hispanic-controlled public television station in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Also, following a conference on border issues last October, the TCC's Division of Church and Society is recommending that a task force be established to study and implement some of the recommendations from that meeting, and to continue to research border issues.

Jewish-Christian relations is the subject of several resolutions developed by the TCC's Commission on Jewish-Christian Relations. These business items will ask that both Christians and Jews involve participants from the other faith in their respective projects and studies; that public schools teach about significant religious holidays rather than celebrate Christian holidays; and that attitudes that lead to the exclusion of persons from social clubs because of religion, race or national origin be addressed by members of TCC-related denominations.

Malcolm Smith set to conduct special services

ODESSA — Malcolm Smith, well-known Bible teacher and author, will conduct special services next week at Odessa's Life Unlimited Christian Center.

He is the author of several books, including "How Christians Meditate," "Glories of Christ in the New Testament" and "Turn Your Back on the Problem."

The public is invited to attend the Sunday services as well as the special meetings Monday and Tuesday nights.

Rev. and Mrs. John M. Bryant

Rev. John Bryant, wife will conduct special services

The Rev. John M. Bryant and his wife will be conducting special services next week at Midland's Calvary Assembly of God, 908 S. Johnston St. According to the Rev. Gayle Reeves, pastor of the host church, the Bryants have traveled extensively in the U.S. during the last 17 years, proclaiming the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

MARK 7:13...

MAKING THE WORD OF GOD OF NONE EFFECT THROUGH YOUR TRADITION, WHICH YE HAVE DELIVERED: AND MANY SUCH LIKE THINGS DO YE.

Without a consistent study of the Word, you will find yourself bound by religion and tradition, thinking in error that God is leading you.

JOHN 6:63...

IT IS THE SPIRIT THAT QUICKENETH: THE FLESH PROFITETH NOTHING: THE WORDS THAT I SPEAK UNTO YOU, THEY ARE SPIRIT AND THEY ARE LIFE.

Being led by the Spirit is knowing and doing the Word. Is your Christian walk almost wordless, dead and dry-or are you feasting on God's Word making your life joyful and exciting?
