Insurance Firms Propose Discounts For Car Pools

AUSTIN (UPI) — Insurance companies today proposed discounts in auto insurance rates for motorists who car pool that could save drivers in cities such as Houston $22 a year.

Officials of the Houston Metropolitan Transit Authority's Car Share Program said insurance discounts would be a valuable incentive to push more motorists to join car pools and take advantage of the $1,200 per person saving possible in annual fuel and car maintenance costs.

If approved by the three-man State Insurance Board, the car-pool discounts may offset the $98.6 million, 8.9 percent increase in auto premiums recommended by the staff of the state agency.

Insurance companies are seeking a $240 million, 21.7 percent increase in rates for private passenger vehicles.

Industry officials also asked the board to consider additional increases in the rates for extra coverage such as car rental reimbursement, and said rates must be raised if the board approves higher benefits recommended by the Texas Car and Truck Rental and Leasing Association.

Car rental officials said the current limits of $10 per day and $300 maximum are too low to allow motorists to rent or lease a car to replace a stolen or wrecked auto.

A spokesman for independent insurance agents urged the board to approve the $15 and $450 limits recommended by car rental officials. The insurance agents also suggested rental reimbursement be made a standard coverage for cases of car theft.

Most attention at the hearing on rate setting procedure centered on the impact the gasoline crunch and resulting reduction in driving and increase in car-pooling will have on accidents and insurance losses.

Insurance company spokesmen said car pools may not cut losses, because the increased number of passengers injured in a single accident could offset any reduction in accident frequency. The companies said they favor discounts that would cut in half the difference in premiums collected on cars driven for pleasure only and vehicles driven to and from work daily.

The discount would amount to about $22 a year for Houston motorists and $10 annually in a city such as Austin. In small towns there is less difference between the premiums for the different classifications and in some rural areas the rates are identical.

"The encouragement of car-pooling would be an explicit declaration in support of our announced national purpose to conserve precious energy resources," said David Irons, spokesman for the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office.

The two new members of the three-man board have said they want to look at how rates are set and indicated they believe the energy crisis and its effect of cutting down driving may warrant the reduction of rate increases.

"No decision will be made until after our hearing," said Board Chairman Bill Daves, a former Dallas banker and one-time insurance company head.

"With at least two new board members, I think maybe we'll want to take more than the normal amount of time."

Daves and the other new board member, former Rep. Lydon Olson of Waco, spent a week at a special school on insurance in New York last week.

Solons Squabble Over Rationing

A-J News Services

WASHINGTON — Democratic leaders accused Republicans in the House today of trying to emasculate a standby gasoline-rationing bill with amendments they said were designed to embarrass President Carter.

House Republican Leader John Rhodes, in turn, said Congress wouldn't have to talk about gas rationing if Carter and the Democratic majority backed legislation to increase domestic energy production.

The bitter partisan wrangling erupted as the House was finishing work on the rationing bill after adopting a GOP-sponsored amendment to weaken the president's energy-saving thermostat-control program.

House leaders were uncertain when the important vote on the rationing bill would be taken, as a result of the squabble.

The rationing bill, which gives the president standby power to impose rationing in the event of a severe fuel shortage, goes to the Senate after House action.

Under the legislation, the president could impose rationing only if fuel supplies dropped by 20 percent during a 30-day period. Congress would then have 15 days during which either house could veto the plan.

The bill also would allow the president to impose a "sticker" plan requiring motorists to leave their cars home one day a week in states failing to meet specified energy-conservation targets. But Republicans were also leading a floor effort to remove this section from the bill.

Congressional leaders said they still hope to get the bill to the president's desk by late Thursday, when Congress leaves town for a month-long recess.

But House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas said the Republicans were trying to thwart this goal with "weakening amendment after amendment."

In a speech that brought fellow Democrats to their feet applauding, Wright accused Republicans of ganging up to support amendments "tearing down the foundations of our conservation effort."

"The public is going to see that there is a conspiracy to emasculate this bill for no better purpose than to embarass the president of the United States and to embarass the Democratic leadership of the House," he said.

And House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told a news briefing that the House's 159 Republicans were delivering near-unanimous votes for such amendments because "they'd rather embarrass the president than save the nation."

But Rhodes took to the floor to call the claims by the Democratic leaders "completely unsound." He also noted that Republicans were unable to get any amendments adopted without the help of Democrats, who hold a two-thirds majority.

"People on your (Democratic) side of the aisle have never learned that the real solution to our energy problems is supply," Rhodes said. "Here we are puttering around with a rationing plan that we shouldn't even be considering."

Carter Seeks GOP's Aid On Profits Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, back from a trip to the grassroots he said gave him "a much clearer sense of what this nation is, what its problems are," asked Republican congressional leaders today to support his proposed "windfall" oil profits tax.

Senate GOP Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said he told Carter at a breakfast meeting in the White House that "the chances of getting a windfall profits tax enacted are very good, indeed."

However, Baker said the president and the Republican leadership are not in agreement on the distribution of the revenue from the proposed tax on oil companies.

The Republicans advocate taxing only those profits that are not plowed back into efforts to develop new energy sources.

Baker said he thought a compromise was possible. "You don't have to have a 100 percent plowback," he told reporters.

The senator also praised Carter for making an effort to open regular communication with congressional Republicans.

House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona said Carter promised to invite top GOP members of Congress to meet with him about once a month. Republicans have been critical of the president in the past for not consulting them on important legislation.

The president's nine-hour trip Tuesday to the lush green hills of Kentucky also brought him campaign-like acclaim in the small, whiskey-making city of Bardstown, where he held his first U.S. "town meeting" in four months.

And before heading back to Washington, the president made a surprise trip to a tiny Indiana town struck by severe floods last week. He had declared the area a disaster area before departing Washington.

The stop at English, Ind. — which took him 65 miles out of the way on a helicopter trip from Bardstown back to Air Force One at Louisville — drew favorable reviews from some of the town's 600 residents. "You've restored our faith in government," said one woman. "It shows he's concerned," said Harvey Dearborn.

The questions put to him by citizens at Bardstown, with one exception, dealt with topics and concerns Carter often is asked about in Washington: prospects for gasoline rationing and a resumption of the military draft, the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, the plight of Vietnamese refugees and environmental concerns.

One topic that surely would have been broached in Washington, however, was not mentioned in Bardstown — the president's purge of his Cabinet.

Carter himself made energy the No. 1 topic for the trip by stopping first at a coal-fired power plant near Louisville, where he met for an hour with coal industry leaders and talked to 200 hard-hat workers about the need to place greater reliance on American-mined coal.

Stepping onto a flower-bordered, red-carpeted platform in the steamy gymnasium at Bardstown High School, the president again talked about coal and the energy problem, saying: "America is the Saudi Arabia of coal, blessed with enormous reserves. ... I would rather burn a ton of Kentucky coal than see our nation become dependent by buying another barrel of OPEC oil."

Urging public support for an excise tax on oil industry revenues — the so-called windfall profits tax — the president urged his audience to write to members of the Senate Finance Committee, now considering the legislation, to counter oil industry lobbyists he said are working "to cripple this vital legislation."

Deluges Pose Flood Threat

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Thunderstorms dumped heavy rains on Texas today, as the National Weather Service issued flash flood watches for the areas around Midland and San Angelo. The NWS also warned of locally heavy storms in the northeastern section of the state.

Crackling thunderstorms lit the South Plains skies early today, dumping more than an inch of rain on large portions of Lubbock and similar amounts over much of the area.

A National Weather Service spokesman at the Lubbock Airport said the storms began developing over the airport at about 1:30 a.m., with the thunder and lightning continuing until 4 a.m. and rain showers until almost 5 a.m.

The NWS reported .58 of an inch of rain at the airport during the night, but within the city greater amounts were recorded.

Precipitation totals from midnight to 9 a.m. today measured by the Lubbock Fire Department were: .92 of an inch at 3rd Street and University Avenue; 1 inch at E. 10th Street and Zenith Avenue and at 48th Street and Quirt Avenue; 1.1 inches at 17th Street and Utica Avenue; 1.27 inches at 50th Street and Wayne Avenue; 1.3 inches at 50th Street and Avenue V; and 1.4 inches at 35th Street and Indiana Avenue.

The thunderstorm activity, which was sparked by a trough of low pressure that continues to move eastward across West Texas, was widespread over western portions of the state and eastern New Mexico late Tuesday and early this morning.

In eastern New Mexico Tuesday, a tornado was reported north of Tatum. The twister reportedly touched ground, but there were no indications of injuries or damage.

Severe thunderstorm warnings were issued Tuesday evening for much of southern New Mexico and also for southwestern Texas, where El Paso received golfball-size hail and .27 of an inch of rain up to 6 a.m. today.

Rainfall also was widely reported in Northwest Texas, with almost all South Plains communiies measuring precipitation and Amarillo (.54 of an inch) and Dalhart (.12 of an inch) receiving moisture in the Panhandle.

South Plains communities receiving more than an inch of rain during the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. today included Seminole, 1.35 inches; Morton, 1.17 inches; Littlefield, 1.12 inches; Muleshoe, 1.10 inches; and Muleshoe Refuge, 1.08 inches.

At 7:45 a.m. today, much of the heavy thunderstorm activity was reported to the south and east of the South Plains, but Lubbock forecasts show a chance of additional rainfall through tonight.

The probability of rain in the Hub City was listed at 20 percent today and 30 percent tonight. And with the low pressure system expected to become stationary over southwestern Texas tonight, the

Food Prices Decline At City Stores

By DEBBIE STALTER

Grocery buyers in Lubbock this month will enjoy a welcome relief from soaring prices, but they may want to give up bread and butter for a while.

These two items, milk and sugar were the only foods in an Avalanche-Journal sampling at a local supermarket that showed an increase in price, with several other price tags reflecting a significant dropoff.

Overall totals for the 16 items priced in the A-J marketbasket survey show this month's cost to be $19.24, about a $2 reduction from last month. The bill for the same items at this time last year also would have been higher at $20.31.

Those who have been eating chicken and fish to avoid high beef prices will be happy to know that red meats could be their best dollar-stretchers in August. A meat market employee at a local supermarket said now is the best time for beef buys, with round steak selling for $1.69 a pound, compared to the July figure of $2.39 a pound.

A gallon of homogenized milk, however, reached its highest level of the past year at $2.43. The same brand had been selling for $2.33 a gallon for the past five months.

Margarine also took quite a price jump, from 73 cents to 81 cents a pound for the stick type. Interestingly enough, the same margarine was selling for 81

Officers Discover Women's Home Full Of Roaches

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — Police arrived on the quiet city street expecting only to respond to a call about a barking dog. Instead, they found an ankle-deep swarm of cockroaches that had spilled from a house to the street and trees, covering one policeman as he stepped from his cruiser.

Inside, the officers discovered a 64-year-old woman with her two dozen dogs, 15 cats, two mice and a parrot — all victimized by cockroach and flea bites.

"It's unbelievable, but true," said police Sgt. Rudy Basha, who said the cockroaches were "ankle deep" in some spots. "The cockroaches were all over the street. The walls of the house were so full that they had nowhere else to go."

Schenectady's health commissioner, Dr. William Bartlett called the infestation "incredible," and added it was the worst he's ever seen in 20 years on the job.

Although city police had initially said there were "hundreds of thousands" of cockroaches around the house, exterminator Harry Linindoll said later "the number is definitely in the millions."

One of the two women who lived in the house, 64-year-old Iva Fletcher, was taken to Ellis Hospital, where she was in satisfactory condition with cockroach and flea bites covering much of her body.

The ambulance that transported the woman, as well as the Schenectady Animal Shelter van and four police vehicles at the scene of the incident, had to be fumigated.

James Provost, manager of the animal shelter where the pets were taken, said the cats were so starved in the house they had fed on each other's flesh. The cockroaches, in turn, had apparently feasted on the flesh of everything in the house, including each other.

Provost added that several of the mice and the cats had to be destroyed because they were so badly bitten.

"It was a nightmare," Provost said. "I had to shake my head to find out if it really happened."

Carter's Civil Service Reform Passes Test

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Latest statistics on the progress of President Carter's revamping of the federal Civil Service contradict the popular belief that all bureaucrats are security-seeking drones.

Of 5,619 top-ranking officials given the chance, 96 percent have chosen to leave the cocoon of traditional Civil Service protections for a competitive pay system more comparable to private industry.

The figures are preliminary. The percentage may be closer to 99 percent by the time the last few undecided officials make their choices and administration personnel managers make their final count.

So far, only 70 top bureaucrats have formally rejected the opportunity to join the new system, the "Senior Executive Service." Many of them were nearing retirement anyway, administration officials said.

By joining SES these executives, most of whom now earn the top Civil Service salary of $47,500 a year, give up the iron hold on their jobs that they enjoyed under the old system, which made it extremely difficult to demote or remove the inefficient.

In the SES they will be able to compete for salary bonuses and special cash awards for superior performance. Up to half the executives could get bonuses ranging from about $1,500 upward. A small portion, no more than 6 percent, theoretically could reap $66,000 in a single year. Transfers, promotions and demotions would be much easier to accomplish.

Analysis

The surprisingly large sign-up means the new SES will be able to make a clean beginning, with virtually no holdovers from the old system to clutter the government's top leadership.

It also means Carter's Civil Service reform legislation, the most extensive revamping of the federal personnel system in nearly 100 years, has passed its first major test more handily than anyone had been willing to predict in advance. Some estimated only half or 10 percent of the top-level officials would join SES.

But perhaps most interestingly, it shows that — at the very top, at least — individual federal executives don't fit the common stereotype. Opinion polls consistently show large majorities feel government workers are overpaid, underworked and all but impossible to fire.

But the top officials have now shown they are willing to have their pay pegged to their performance on the job.

"They do want to work in the public interest," said Sally Greenberg, the personnel executive in charge of getting SES off the ground.

This was echoed by some executives who spoke of their reasons for joining SES.

"The only reason for not joining was if you thought you weren't good enough," said one official of an independent regulatory agency.

"You're talking about less than the top 1 percent of all federal employees, and most of them are pretty good people," said another executive.

A third executive, with responsibility for hundreds of millions of dollars in government purchases each year, said SES was "a good deal."

"By and large, bureaucrats aren't afraid of being transferred or to compete," he said.

"It will pay some people a lot more. It also will eliminate the occasional dysfunctional characters," he said.

But nothing changes overnight, and especially not the image of a timid, cautious Civil Service. While all three of these executives signed up for a riskier new pay system, none of them were willing to stick their necks out so far that they would permit their names to be used.

Energy Crisis Starts Wall Street Scramble

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — The scramble is on among investors and Wall Street analysts to find the companies most likely to benefit from a push for alternative energy sources.

It began well before President Carter's speech two weeks ago in which he proposed a massive campaign to promote development and production of oil substitutes and synthetic fuels, or "synfuels."

In fact, one of several problems confronting investors who want to try to cash in on this situation is that many stocks of companies that might stand to benefit have already climbed sharply in price.

Coal stocks are a case in point. In a recent study, Standard & Poor's Corp. noted that its index of four bituminous coal issues climbed 49 percent from the beginning of the year through mid-July, against a 7 percent rise for S&P's 500-stock composite index.

S&P listed several other factors for would-be investors in coal stocks. "It appears safe to say that coal will be accounting for an increasing part of America's growing energy needs over the next decade," the investment advisory firm said.

"The stocks of well-positioned coal-related companies, though strong performers recently and due for a consolidation, should be good long-term investments."

But the firm also noted several problems facing the industry, including environmental concerns and labor difficulties. Coal company earnings, depressed partly by strikes, have fallen sharply in the past two years, and though a sizeable recovery is in progress this year, S&P noted that the industry still is confronted with an overcapacity problem.

Analysts at Smith Barney, Harris Upham observed that synfuel had become "the buzzword of the day. The answer to all our problems, the President assures us. The beginning of the end of our environment, the scientists and conservationists warn us.

"But assuming the U.S. makes a sizeable commitment to a synthetic (i.e., alternative) fuel program, there are a number of companies that might be in a position to benefit. They are involved in coal and gas production, equipment manufacturing, construction and pollution control.

"We've limited our discussion to coal — whether for a synthesis process or for utilities cutting back on their use of oil (oil shale is a much smaller scale alternative). And our caveats are three:

—"Nothing is going to happen overnight. It's a long-term process involving debate, legislation, construction, testing, etc.

—"There is no one company that represents the perfect play (or at least we haven't found one yet). The great number of companies and the fact that synfuel involvement also encompasses parts of some companies make selection difficult.

—"Stock prices of synfuel-related issues are already discounting the obvious on a short-term basis. An investor has to be willing to look a long way out to turn a profit. And because of this, an investor should be willing to look at how well a company's fundamentals will hold up over the long haul as well as in the short run."

Regulations Also Cost Consumers

STANFORD (AP) — Businessmen are always complaining about how much government regulation costs them. But a new study done for Stanford's Hoover Institution says it also costs you, the consumer, $500 every year.

That's the "hidden tax" every consumer pays for federal rules and regulations imposed on corporations, economist Murray Weidenbaum estimates in the study.

Weidenbaum contends that the greatest proliferation of government regulatory agencies occurred not during the New Deal, as is generally thought, but instead during the 1970s.

During fiscal 1980, he estimates, the federal government will spend $6 billion funding the 56 different agencies that regulate business. In 1970, he says, the amount spent was $866 million, one-sixth of the projected 1980 cost.

Weidenbaum estimates that business must spend $20 for every $1 the federal government puts into regulation, meaning industry as a whole will pay at least $120 billion next year to comply with various rules.

And he uses the often-cited example of government-mandated requirements for automobiles as an example of how the average citizen pays the "hidden tax."

As of the 1978 model year, Weidenbaum says, the cumulative cost per car of federally-mandated features adopted in the previous decade was $666, or a staggering $7 billion for all cars sold that year.

This $666 regulatory premium came from major requirements, such as catalytic converters ($146) and emission controls ($133), and minor features, such as stronger doors ($20) and ignition lock systems ($12), Weidenbaum says. He also notes that low-income consumers are less able to pay their "hidden tax" than the well-heeled.

Not surprisingly, Weidenbaum finds the auto industry to be one where government regulations have a great impact. But he says aerospace, chemical and oil companies are also greatly affected by compliance costs, as are utilities and railroads.

Clements Urges Senate To Reject SALT Treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gov. Bill Clements, a former deputy secretary of defense, contends the SALT II pact could set the stage for an atomic confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union and urges the Senate to reject the treaty.

Testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee Tuesday, the Republican governor said he was appearing not in "a partisan role" but "as an interested American who feels deeply that this SALT treaty is not in the best interest of our nation."

Clements, who held the high defense post from 1973 to January 1977 under former presidents Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon, said he strongly favors nuclear arms limitations.

But he said the strategic arms limitation pact should be rejected by the Senate because the United States "is falling behind" the Soviet Union in military power and would be further weakened by the treaty.

The treaty, he said, would allow the Russians to proceed with military programs just as they had already planned but would not allow the United States to go ahead with needed weapons programs.

"We may well be setting the stage for an atomic confrontation between the United States and Russia," he said. Such a confrontation, he said, could occur in the early 1980's.

"We in the United States are in greater danger today than we were in December 1941 — after Pearl Harbor," Clements said.

Urging the treaty not be ratified, Clements said negotiations should be reopened to make six major changes. These included:

—Replacement of a provision allowing the Soviet Union, but not the United States, to have 308 "heavy" intercontinental ballistics missiles with a provision allowing both countries to have that number.

—Limiting the number of Soviet "Backfire" manned bombers by counting them as strategic nuclear delivery vehicles.

—The removal of range limitations on U.S. sea-and ground-launched cruise missiles which are not to be deployed prior to 1982.

—Clarifying the definition of prohibited "mobile ICBM launchers" to allow each side to have 308 launching sites for "multiple aim point" missiles.

—Prohibition of the encoding of telemetry, so that both sides are able to read communications between missiles and controllers.

—Inclusion of "on site" inspection for both parties so each can better verify the other's compliance with the treaty.

With those changes, Clements said he would "fully support" the SALT II pact if the Senate also gave its support to strengthening U.S. strategic weapons programs to help restore the balance of military power between the two countries.

Such a commitment, he said, would cost about $25 billion more a year for "the next several years" but "we assure ourselves that we will avoid the crisis of confrontation that otherwise is probable in the early 1980's."

Oil Slick Continues Toward Texas Coast

A Coast Guard spokesman said late Tuesday that the most northern evidence of the massive oil spill was a thin shean spotted 60 miles south of U.S. waters and about 35 miles offshore.

Griggs said the most northern patch of oil was 100 miles south of U.S. waters and some 20 miles offshore.

The oil is still spewing from a blown-out Mexican well from the Bay of Campeche. The well has been gushing up to a million barrels of oil a day since the June 3 blowout.

The latest projection by experts gathered to track the oil indicated traces of the spill may cross into U.S. waters by the weekend.

The oil posed a threat to a 41-year-old fishing tournament that in the past only has been canceled by war.

Mary Lou Campbell of South Padre Island said 700 fishermen are expected to compete in the 3-day event which begins Thursday. She said some of the fishermen will be competing as far as 100 miles offshore.

"We talked with the Coast Guard and they seemed to think it would not effect our tournament," Mrs. Campbell said.

The oil also poses a potential threat to the multi-million dollar Texas shrimping industry. Griggs said samples from the spill are now being tested for toxicity.

Guy Pete, a long-time Texas shrimper, said he feared that even a thin shean on the Gulf surface could cause damage to the shrimp.

"I'm not a biologist, but the sunlight is just as vital to the sea as it is to a farm," Pete said.

He called the oil spill "the biggest threat I can remember that we've ever had here."

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

Today's riders still face heat tornadoes and rattlers, but the beef jerkey has been replaced by grub flown in from New York's famed "21 Club." And the upstarts even have a publicity agent.

Twelve riders are racing 1,905 miles from St. Joseph, Mo., to Sacramento, Calif., this summer to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Sir Rowland Hill, an Englishman credited with inventing the first adhesive postage stamp.

The race is being sponsored by the British Post Office. Riders left Missouri on July 14 and hope to reach California on Aug. 22. They rested a day at Glenrock this week, dining on baby roasted turkey and wild rice stuffing to "let the riders know we appreciate them," said Albert Chioda, publicity agent for the British Post Office.

Railroad Commission Uncovers Cause Of Deaths In Carthage

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Railroad Commission engineers said Tuesday they found a 10-inch section missing from a leaking natural gas line that apparently caused two deaths in Carthage last month.

Jerry Worden, a commission safety engineer, said the plastic pipe was buried 2 inches to 3 inches below a dry creek bed.

The bodies of Janet Blair, 14, and Doris Holman, 15, were found June 28 lying face down in the creek bed.

Worden and others testified at a commission hearing on whether three people violated regulations requiring odorous substances be added to the odorless gas.

The plastic gas line was connected to a steel line installed by Dick Anderson. The plastic line was installed by J.C. Mangham and was hooked to a house owned by Mrs. Herman Milstead.

Commission tests on June 29 indicated the gas did not have enough odor to meet agency requirements.

Anderson, Mangham and Mrs. Milstead could be fined $1,000 a day in civil penalities for each day of possible violation of the odor regulations.

Pennzoil Corp. operates the natural gas well that supplied fuel into the steel and plastic lines. However, Pennzoil has claimed its responsibility ended when the gas surfaced. The company is not involved in the commission hearing.

Milton Fegenbush, engineering safety supervisor, said commission regulations vary as to when odorous substances must be added to natural gas.

"If it's coming from a well in a rural field, it would not have to be odorized unless it came within prescribed boundaries (of populated areas)," he said.

"It must be odorized when served to domestic or industrial users," Fegenbush added.

Hearing Examiner Michael George will make a recommendation on the case to the three-member commission. The process could take up to two months.

Jailing Of Elderly Woman Gets Mayor's Attention

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — One man sent a $700 check; another mailed $100 in cash. Some sent $1 bills with no return address. Several mailed checks for $15.04 — the exact value of the food destitute 91-year-old Mattie Schultz was jailed for stealing last week.

Contributions for Mrs. Schultz are pouring in from across the nation. A total of $2,300 was received Monday and Lorraine Wernert, president of the senior citizens group coordinating the fund, estimated Tuesday that the total would reach $7,000.

The national attention, however, has done more than generate contributions. It's also soiled San Antonio's image, said Mayor Lila Cockrell, who has launched an investigation into why Night Magistrate Mary Elizabeth Ladd ordered Mrs. Schultz held in jail overnight.

"Since this case has been brought out so much in the media, not only locally, but across the country, I felt a responsibility to inquire about it," said the mayor. "I think it is most unfortunate. The city of San Antonio is not an uncaring city.

Mrs. Cockrell said she would report to city council members in Thursday's executive session. Ms. Ladd, 28, often at odds with other city and county judicial officials, is appointed by the council.

Small Step For Savers

THE ONLY THING wrong with legislation proposing to increase the tax exemption on dividends and extend it to interest earned on savings accounts is that it doesn't go far enough.

With inflation far outstripping dividends and interest rates, thriftiness doesn't pay off any more.

Under current law, the saver or investor is a double loser. His dollar is worth less at the end of the year than it was when he saved it—and he pays taxes on its earnings, to boot.

Only the first $100 in dividends ($200 per couple) is exempt from income taxes under existing law; interest earned on a savings account is totally taxable.

UNDER A BILL introduced by the 41 Republican members of the Senate, a couple would be allowed up to a total of $800 a year in dividends and savings account interest without having to pay income taxes on it.

The second $400 would be exempted only if those earnings were re-invested. A single person would get a total exemption of up to $400 a year.

This is a modest step toward encouraging people to save for a rainy day by buying stocks or by socking their money into savings accounts.

Savings and investments create capital that can be used to build new plants, modernize equipment and create jobs that simultaneously attack unemployment, reduce inflation and provide a cushion against recession.

Present tax policy discourages investments and savings, encouraging spending that drives prices up.

A COUPLE WITH $10,000 to invest in a 7½ percent savings account today winds up with maybe $10,500 at the end of the year after paying taxes on the interest earned.

Meanwhile, at an inflation rate of 13 percent, that $10,500 is worth only $9,135. The twin ravages of government-imposed inflation and taxation have penalized the savers tremendously.

The GOP proposal would salvage for them the $250 they now pay in taxes on the interest earned. Small comfort, but a beginning.

The measure also would provide business a tax break by allowing faster depreciation of buildings and equipment. This, too, would encourage new investments that would increase productivity and permit business to sell goods and services at lower prices, which is another way of saying it would reduce inflation.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The Job At Tech

IF THE REGENTS of Texas Tech were to tap you as the next president of the university and the medical school, what would you do first?

It is a question that any serious candidate for the job must be prepared to answer.

That answer could give the regents more insight into the probable degree of success the next president will have than they could get from looking at his academic background, his administrative experience and his performance record all combined.

I say this on the assumption that any person seriously considered for the job of running so complex an institution as Texas Tech will have all of the surface credentials.

But will he have—or have the capacity quickly to acquire—a thorough understanding of where Texas Tech is at this point in its development and where it is, or should be, headed?

Will he have the ability to lead this particular university and medical school at this particular time?

I HAVE NO DOUBT that Texas Tech will survive, and perhaps even grow in stature, regardless of the man or woman in the Southeast Office.

It is rare that a president, no matter how inept or miscast, can do any lasting damage to a university. The worst that can happen is that it sits dead in the water or becomes so embroiled in controversy as to lose temporarily its sense of destiny.

But the right person at the right time can—with a nudge here and there, a setting of proper priorities, an insight into underlying problems—inspire an almost magical burst of rededication and progress.

There are times when this inspiration is best acquired by an infusion of new blood—by bringing in someone from the outside with fresh ideas, no built-in prejudices, no preconceived ideas, no ties to the past.

There are other times when this inspiration is best drawn by promotion from within of someone who knows where all of the skeletons are hidden, where the strengths and weaknesses are, where the mistakes have been, who the people are who can best lead and roar full speed ahead.

TEXAS TECH HAS gone outside for its last two presidents.

Both times, the regents passed over well-qualified men who were eager for promotion. For 13 years, the university has been run by capable presidents whose prior experience had been outside Texas.

When Grover Murray was brought in from LSU in 1966, Texas Tech was emerging from senior college to university stature.

He vastly expanded the administrative structure and either saw the university through or caused—depending on one's point of view—the trauma of expanded graduate and professional programs.

When Cecil Mackey came here from a Florida university three years ago, he inherited the frictions and turmoil that revolved around the emerging medical school in particular and around the external relations of the institution in general.

Whatever else Mackey accomplished, that turmoil endures as his tenure comes to an end.

Under both men, Texas Tech has prospered, sharing with other Texas state colleges and universities a golden era for higher education appropriations and legislative favoritism.

IN THIS UTOPIAN atmosphere, it has been relatively easy to gloss over the weaknesses that have persisted.

It has been even easier to regard the deterioration of relations with the university's various publics, especially with the immediate West Texas community, as of little or no consequence.

Despite thoughtless and intentional slights perpetrated by the Tech administration, there has remained a strong bond between the institution and Lubbock.

This has lasted through 13 years primarily because the oldtimers, on and off the campus, still had a rapport and a mutual respect that transcended administrative shortcomings.

But, with the oldtimers on and off the campus retiring or dieing, the question has to be asked if this strong bond could endure another administration of neglect?

IT IS QUITE TRUE that a university can be too parochial if it is but a reflection of the attitudes and aspirations of its immediate community.

A cosmopolitan faculty with an infusion of outside ideas and philosophies is necessary to a university's programmatic growth.

But it is equally true that a university which alienates itself from the public which gives it sustenance and fights its battles with it instead of against it, which contributes to its programs and which lives and breathes with it every day of its life is being shortsighted in the extreme.

The next president of Texas Tech has at his disposal a vast asset—the general public of Lubbock and the surrounding area—if he but knows how to deal with it and how to cultivate it.

Whatever else he may be or do, the first challenge and opportunity facing the new president will be to re-establish communication and partnership among those on and off the campus who can help him, the university and the Board of Regents all look good.

Human Wave Puts U.S. To Test

WASHINGTON—"Blood bath! Blood bath! Keep on fighting to hold Saigon. Send in more American troops to halt the Red invasion from Hanoi. Oh, too late! Too late! Send in fleets of aircraft and vessels to evacuate the anti-commie Viets from their certain fate. Blood bath! Blood bath!"

If you were in military or political circles of Washington in that time of disgrace, 1972, you heard these frantic cries.

And if you objected as I did to senseless desperation in a cause that was lost as far back as President Truman's adoption of the "limited warfare" doctrine, you were apt to be sizzled with the branding iron of anti-war McGovernism.

"BLOOD BATH! Blood bath!" The diehard warhawks were sure the victorious Red Viets would slaughter the Saigon populace and leave the bodies of all who had sided with the Americans for the buzzards to pick.

As we now know, it didn't happen that way. The Communist forces drove Saigon residents into the countryside to forage or starve. That was the opening of a new Communist offensive against America and allied free countries.

I learned this in an interview with the Taiwan Group in town to observe the 20th anniversary of Captive Nations Week. The English-language editor-in-chief of Asian Outlook Magazine, Ambassador Joseph Ku, became my informant.

"BLOOD BATH!" The American-led free world might have felt lucky if the fall of Saigon had resulted in that sanguinary end. But the Hanoi forces and their Red Chinese sponsors did themselves better, and did the Western world worse, than that.

"The Chinese," my interviewer told me, "have long used the military tactic of the human wave. Hordes of troops are launched against an objective or an opposing force with the idea of overwhelming it by sheer numbers."

This human wave tactic has been adapted to inundating the anti-Communist world with sick, unarmed, helpless refugees. They are the "boat-people" of Indochina—Vietnamese, Cambodians, Laotians and other undesirable Orientals.

Thus far, only two countries have refused the pathetic immigrants. Malaysia, denouncing the communist ruse, simply will not receive the invaders. The British Crown Colony of Hong Kong has built a barbed wire "Berlin Wall," to keep them off the island.

But, so far as I have learned, the rest of the free world is making shift to accommodate the pathetic unwelcome arrivals.

If compassion and a regard for the sacredness of life is a mark of civilization, we cannot wish that the expected purge had taken place with the fall of Saigon, where the U.S. had an undeniable responsibility.

Charity is certainly a necessary beginning as we try to rebuild the broken lives. But beyond that is a task in industrial, agricultural, commercial and military nation-building on several continents. It is a chapter of history which we must write from bitter experience.

Med Assisting May Be Jobless Blues Remedy

(Second of four columns)

AMONG THE MOST brilliant job opportunities available to you now and in the foreseeable future are in the area of medical assisting. Even today, it ranks No. 2 among the professions in the health service field, second only to nursing.

Even today, when the overall employment outlook for the early 1980s ranges from cloudy to grim, there is a great need for medical assistants and the need will continue to grow along with our concern over health care and our demand for new drugs, treatments, use of new equipment, etc.

It's an opportunity you should not overlook! And this goes whether you're entering or re-entering the job market, have just been laid off or are unsatisfied with your present position, whatever.

What kind of work will you do as a medical assistant?

Among them: making appointments; arranging hospital admissions; preparing a physician's tax return information; scheduling surgery; maintaining supplies; dealing with pharmaceutical and other representatives; completing certain insurance forms; maintaining medical records; paying professional bills.

Under the doctor's supervision, you, as a medical assistant, also may take temperatures, collect blood samples, take electrocardiograms, sterilize instruments, help in collection of specimens such as Pap smears, even assist at minor surgery.

WHAT ARE YOUR job requirements?

These will vary, according to your employment setting, says Webster's Medical Office Handbook, just published by G. & C. Merriam Co. ($10.95).

If you're a medical assistant in a small office, you might carry total responsibility for the physician's clinical and clerical support services. If you work in a large office, you'll often be assigned a specific area of responsibility.

In all cases, you'll be supervised by a physician and perform tasks that are required by the physician and in accordance with state laws.

THERE ALSO ARE junior and community colleges that offer special courses in this field.

If you choose pediatrics, among your duties will be scheduling appointments so that children of the same age group will be in the office as much as possible at the same time.

You must organize waiting patients so that children with contagious diseases will not contaminate others.

There is no disputing the vital role you, a medical assistant, can play in the day-to-day operation of a busy physician's office—nor the self-satisfaction you can get from the challenges, the responsibilities and the place you can carve out for yourself.

Nor is there any mistaking the opportunities for jobs in which you can stretch yourself to your own limits, the chances for on-the-job training, the fact that you can enter this world of medicine and be of service to others with no more than a high school education.

IN FACT, A recent survey by the AAMA discloses that most medical assistants (52.8 percent) acquire their training on the job rather than through formal degree or certificate programs.

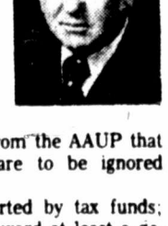
All the essentials they had when they were hired were a knowledge of office skills and some experience in typing.

And of vital meaning in this era when self-satisfaction in a job is rated way up the list of desired rewards is that medical assisting permits you to be of vital service—requires it—even though your service appears minor next to the physician's.

Tomorrow: Finding a job as a medical assistant.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Professors Don't Know It All



WASHINGTON—The University of Maryland recently was the beneficiary of a singular honor, capable of being turned to great advantage in coming years. The university was formally enrolled upon the List of Censured Administrations maintained by the American Association of University Professors.

It is not every university that can qualify for so high an honor, and great credit should go to Maryland's President John S. Toll for bravery beyond the call of action in provoking this award.

Mr. Toll had the fortitude last year to reject the proposed appointment of a left-wing professor as head of the university's Department of Government and Politics.

For this exercise in exemplary judgment, this censure was duly imposed.

YES, I MEAN to be sarcastic, but this affair demands it. I find the action of the AAUP at its Houston convention so irrational as to defy comprehension by men who live in the real world.

The association's position is that Maryland committed a grave violation of the principles governing academic freedom. The position is asinine.

The affair arose in the fall of 1977, when a search committee began looking for a candidate to fill the vacant post as head of the Department of Government and Politics.

Early in 1978 the committee came up with two finalists, a Midwestern professor not publicly identified, and Professor Bertell Ollman of New York University.

Provost Murray E. Polakoff chose Dr. Ollman and sent his recommendation to the university's then president, Dr. Wilson Homer Elkins.

Dr. Elkins stalled until his term of office ran out on June 30. His successor, Dr. Toll, after three weeks of review and consultation, concluded that Dr. Ollman was not the best qualified candidate he could hope to find.

The president firmly denied that Dr. Ollman's political beliefs had anything to do with his decision.

DR. OLLMAN IS a Marxist. His academic credentials (Wisconsin and Oxford) were impeccable; his experience (Chicago, Columbia, NYU) was impressive; his testimonial letters from colleagues and students were highly commendatory.

But the professor, on the record of his own published writing, is not only a Marxist theorist but an activist who believes in exploiting the teacher's role.

The professor makes no bones about it. In a long essay last year, "On Teaching Marxism and Building the Movement," he boasted of the number of socialist journals and newsletters that now circulate within the academic community.

He was proud to see four widely used radical introductions to courses in American government where six years earlier there were none. He urged a renewed dedication by socialist teachers "to make the most effective use of the classroom situation."

ARE WE TO understand from the AAUP that such unabashed assertions are to be ignored absolutely? Nonsense!

A public institution, supported by tax funds, surely has some obligation toward at least a decent neutrality on the teaching of economic theory. The notion that professors are creatures of distilled intellect, delivering themselves of antiseptic lectures cleansed of every germ of predilection, is hokum.

It is as absurd as the notion that judges discard their prejudices when they don judicial robes.

To predicate academic policies on so unrealistic a posture is to make "academic freedom" more of a shibboleth than it already is. Of course professors have pet theories.

OF COURSE THEY are biased this way or that. Of course they influence receptive students toward their own ethical, scholarly or political views. Professors are not dummies, though the AAUP's vote of 143 to 101 to censure Maryland might provoke some reservations on that score.

Sure, a free society must defend a right to teach, and in some forums a right to indoctrinate as well.

But no search committee or faculty committee or pointy-headed pressure group has any right to substitute its judgment for the judgment of a university president in matters such as this.

Presidents have rights as well as professors. In failing to recognize this common-sense rule of executive authority, the AAUP makes its hoity-toity List of Censured Administrations a veritable roll of honor.

"Maybe OPEC did it!"

HAPPY FAMILY REUNION — Rachel Thompson flashes a big smile as she and her husband, Russell, and their daughter, Caroline, face reporters early Tuesday when they returned to Daytona Beach, Fla. Possible Arson At Motel Investigated By Officials

CAMBRIDGE, Ohio (AP) — State fire officials say they are investigating the possibility of arson in the Holiday Inn fire which claimed the lives of nine persons, four of them children, and caused injury to 79 others when they smashed through windows to escape the inferno.

Investigators said the blaze began early Tuesday at a spot along a wall in the northeast section of the first floor.

"It was like a coal mine fire," Frank Jewell, assistant fire marshal, said. "It roared down the (first floor) corridor" and then back again, "and like a natural chimney it went right up the stairs."

A contributing factor in several of the deaths, officials said, was the vinyl or plastic wall covering in the corridors which emitted thick, lung-clogging smoke as it burned.

"The residue in the lungs was too much," said arson investigator Harry McLaughlin.

Those who escaped the blaze, which raged through the L-shaped two-story building with temperatures estimated at between 600 and 800 degrees, did so by smashing their way through thick, double pane floor-to-ceiling windows.

The dead included four members of the same Parkersburg, W.Va., family. They were identified as Esther Albright, 66; her granddaughter, Sharon Albright, 12; her grandson, Matthew Rotunda, 3; and Matthew's mother, Mary Rotunda, 25.

Pamela Ricketts, 23, of Columbus, Ohio; and Ford City, Pa., residents Samuel Saloum, 62, and his wife, whose name was not available, also were listed among the dead. The other two victims have been identified as a military officer stationed at Wright Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton and his son. Their names were being withheld by officials pending notification of relatives.

Two of the victims were found in their rooms. They had apparently opened their doors and died when the fire rushed into the rooms. All of the others were found in the corridors, fire officials said.

Most of the injured guests suffered cuts, bruises or broken bones by jumping from windows.

Bill Goforth, a Holiday Inn official from company headquarters in Memphis, Tenn., said there were no smoke alarms in the 107-room, two-story motel. "Smoke detectors are relatively new," he said. The motel was built in 1969 and newly-enacted requirements for smoke detectors in motels and hotels in Ohio are not retroactive, he said.

WWII Recruit Ends 36 Years Of Hiding

SHADY POINT, Okla. (UPI) — Fast cars, fast planes and fast women were the biggest surprises in store for Pvt. D.B. Benson upon his emergence from 36 years in hiding from the Air Force.

Benson, who lived off the land in the Kiamichi Mountains in southeastern Oklahoma for more than three decades, signed papers Tuesday discharging him from the Air Force.

He told reporters, after being less than honorably discharged from the armed forces, "I just learned how to live" in the mountains.

He said "fast cars, jet airplanes and fast girls" were his biggest surprises when he came out of the mountains last week to surrender to authorities.

Benson, who went AWOL From the old Army Air Corps in 1943, said he left because a sergeant told him he would not be any good at war. The sergeant told him to go home and wait for his discharge.

Benson took the advice and left his post at an Amarillo, Texas, base. The few friends he kept in touch with said it was more than a year before he realized he had done something wrong.

The 57-year-old ex-soldier, dressed in jeans and wearing a green baseball cap, stood outside his sister's home and talked with reporters for the first time late Tuesday.

He said he would take a house in some town and would not return to the mountain wilderness to live.

Benson never married and has never held a full-time job because of a constant fear that Social Security records would be traced to his military background.

Neither his sister nor any of his relatives except his parents had seen him in more than 30 years. Most, including his family, believed he was dead.

He said he wished he had come out of the woods earlier but he feared the Air Force would have him court-martialed, executed or would force him to complete his tour of duty.

Will and Marva Stacy, Benson's nephew and his wife, convinced the private to come out of hiding.

"He was hard to convince of the fact that he would not be shot," Stacy said.

Benson said he decided to give himself up because he believed most of his life had passed him by. "I just got studying about it (surrendering) and I decided I would," he said.

In a prepared statement, Stacy said Benson had been living in a variety of makeshift shelters.

Mother Happy Child Not Hurt, Wants Suspect Treated Kindly

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rachel Thompson, resuming the family vacation which became a two-day nightmare when her 5-year-old daughter was kidnapped, says the law should look kindly at the man charged in the abduction.

"I think it should certainly be taken into account that he did not mean to hurt the child," Mrs. Thompson said Tuesday. "To punish him for something he didnt mean to do wouldn't be right."

LEAVES HEARING — James Keith Tucker, 18, of High Point, N.C., is escorted by FBI agent Robert D. Geiger after a hearing Tuesday in Florence, S.C., before a U.S. magistrate. Tucker was charged with kidnapping and interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle. Tucker is accused of taking 5-year-old Caroline Thompson from Daytona Beach, Fla., to Myrtle Beach, S.C., where he was captured Monday night. (*AP Laserphoto)

Police have said car theft — not kidnapping — was the aim of the man who jumped into the Thompson's station wagon at a motel Saturday and drove off with the screaming child in the back.

James K. Tucker, 18, a paroled auto thief from High Point, N.C., is being held on $250,000 bond in Florence, S.C., some 60 miles west of Myrtle Beach, S.C., where little Caroline Thompson was recovered late Monday.

FBI officials say Tucker probably will be transferred to Florida this week to face kidnapping charges.

The man was "mean and yelled," Caroline said, but did not mistreat her or her two pets.

"We ate hamburgers and french fries at McDonalds and he let me go swimming by myself in the motel pool," said the blond, blue-eyed youngster, sitting cross-legged on her rumpled bed at the Holiday Inn where the ordeal began.

The family planned to remain in Daytona Beach several days. Their car, with all their belongings, was being driven here from South Carolina by a motel employee.

"We had a very bad time every minute she was gone," said Mrs. Thompson. But she and her husband Russell, both 34, spoke gratefully of the kidnapper.

"He took good care of her," Mrs. Thompson said. "We're so grateful to him. He didn't hurt her in any way. He tried to comfort her."

Caroline said at first she cried "just a little...and I told him to take me back. He said, 'No.' He said, 'Shut up.'"

Tucker evidently drove straight through to Myrtle Beach, stopping to sleep in the car Saturday night and arriving early Sunday.

He and the girl checked into a motel and stayed until Monday afternoon, when a guest recognized them from news descriptions.

Volunteer Pays Old Debt To Doctor

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wally Cunneen III, who almost died his first day on earth, has spent the last six weeks as a volunteer at Children's Hospital here, paying back a 23-year-old emotional debt to the doctor who saved his life.

"A lot of people might have just said, 'Thank you very much Doc, shook hands, smiled, had a lollipop and been gone for good,'" Cunneen said Tuesday, his 23rd birthday and the last day of his tour.

"But I had to go beyond that because I believe that he really cared."

Cunneen was born with a blocked esophagus that caused food and liquids to enter his lungs, instead of his stomach. Dr. Harry C. Bishop successfully corrected the birth defect that in those days killed two out of every three babies afflicted.

When Wally was 1, his parents moved to California, but kept in touch with the doctor who had saved their oldest son. The boy grew up to major in marketing, and he will take a job this fall with Xerox Corp.

"I got a chance to talk to this man I felt a lot of loyalty to, but never had the opportunity to meet," Cunneen recalled.

"Just before graduation, I started getting together will all my friends, and started talking about where we were headed, where we were going, what we wanted to do with ourselves. It got me to thinking about who has been really good to me — my family, my grandparents.

"Then it dawned on me the reason I'm able to graduate from college, enjoy my family, be with my grandparents, my friends in school, was because of what Dr. Bishop did for me 23 years ago. Within a couple of days, I got on the phone and called him and told him what I wanted to do."

Cunneen has spent the last six weeks playing cards and reading to the children. He also has run errands, stuffed envelopes and helped with filing.

Four To Be Arraigned For Park Takeover

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Four Texas men facing federal misdemeanor charges for the July 10 armed takeover of the cafeteria deep within the Carlsbad Caverns National Park will be arraigned Thursday before a federal magistrate.

The four suspects, all from Odessa, are now being held under $250,000 bond each.

U.S. Magistrate E. Ray Phelps set the bond for the four men Tuesday during a hearing in Roswell, N.M., on the federal charges of damage to federal property.

The suspects — Dennis James Mark, 39, Eugene Hiram Meroney, 31, William Charles Lovejoy, 28, and David W. Kuczynski, 28 — are accused of taking over the underground cafeteria at the internationally famous caverns.

During the 5 1/2-hour takeover the gunmen held a National Park Service employee hostage and trapped about 100 tourists in an adjacent room.

While the purpose of the takeover remained unclear, the four armed men presented a rambling list of social grievances and at one point demanded $1 million and an airliner to Brazil. They surrendered peacefully to federal officers after being promised they would be charged only with misdemeanor offenses.

At the initial hearing Tuesday, officials said the charge of destruction of federal property resulted from less than $100 in damages to an elevator in the caverns during the takeover.

During questioning Phelps, Mark, Meroney and Lovejoy confirmed they had previous arrest records. Kuczynski said the arrest in the cavern incident was his first.

U.S. Census Shows Migration To Sun Belt States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine of every 10 congressional districts across the nation may be altered following next year's census, the Census Bureau predicts.

The expected changes reflect the movement of Americans to warm, sunny states and away from industrial areas.

As a result, California, Texas and Florida may gain two congressmen each, and Utah, Oregon, Tennessee, Washington and Arizona each may get one more, according to a census report released Tuesday.

New York may lose four congressional seats, while Ohio and Illinois may lose two each, according to the bureau's predictions. One seat may be taken away from Pennsylvania, Michigan and South Dakota.

In 1981, following next year's census, the 435 seats in the House of Representatives will be redistributed among the states. State legislators will draw new district lines seeking to keep all the districts about equal to one another in size.

Bitter political battles are likely in some areas as the legislators try to draw districts that will benefit their parties. Major efforts are expected by both Republicans and Democrats.

Some courts have held that district populations within a state should not vary by more than 1 percent from the state average. But because congressional districts cannot cross state lines, some states will have districts larger than the national average and others will have smaller ones.

The Census Bureau report said the nation's population grew 7.3 percent to more than 218 million between 1970 and 1978, meaning that if all districts were equal, the average would be about 500,000 people per district.

This means some voters will find themselves in newly created districts, while others will be shifted from one district to another.

The 1978 estimates indicate that only 40 of the nation's 435 districts were within 1 percent of their state average, and more than 100 varied by 10 percent or more.

Census officials declined to estimate the exact number of districts that will be changed, but they noted that many states will have to redistrict because they will gain or lose congressmen.

Fastest growing of the nation's congressional districts between 1970 and 1978 was California's 43rd district in the San Diego area, climbing nearly 64 percent to 761,000 people, the report said. The average district in California contains 518,000 people.

Other districts topping the 700,000 mark are Texas' 7th in the Houston area, California's 40th in Orange County and Florida's 5th and 10th districts in central and south Florida.

At the other end of the scale, New York's 21st district in the South Bronx has declined to only 285,000 people, a drop of nearly 40 percent since 1970.

Carter Urges Congress To Allow FBI Access To Suspects' Records

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is urging Congress to give the FBI a new weapon in the fight against organized crime, corruption and white-collar crime.

The administration's proposed FBI charter would, for the first time, grant the bureau authority to demand access to a criminal suspect's telephone and bank records.

It also would require the bureau to notify the suspect that investigators were examining those records.

Noting the provision would "significantly expand" FBI authority, Carter said, "This is essential if the FBI is to be effective in combating white-collar crime, fraud, corruption and organized crime."

Justice Department and FBI officials acknowledged the provision may arouse controversy, but said it does nothing more than grant the bureau authority other federal agencies already possess.

The administration formally presented the proposed charter to CongressTuesday. A bipartisan group of senators, led by the Judiciary Committee chairman, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., introduced the contract to the Senate.

Kennedy and other key members of the Senate and House have worked during the last two years with administration officials drafting the proposal.

In many respects, the proposal would write into law the investigative guidelines first established by former Attorney General Edward H. Levi in 1975 and 1976. The guidelines, and later the charter, grew out of demands for a sure-fire system of preventing the FBI from abusing its power as it did in the past with harassment of civil rights and antiwar organizations and their leaders.

Carter said the proposal would grant the FBI new authority in only two areas:

—The bureau could investigate "patterns of terrorist acts" which involve violations of laws even though there may be no federal violations.

—The bureau could issue investigative demands for financial and communications records maintained by banks and other institutions for individuals being investigated. Several other federal investigative units already have such authority, which is similar to a grand jury subpoena.

The provision would require the FBI to follow the steps applied to other agencies, which must notify an individual when his bank or telephone records are being inspected. Authorities may delay notification if they can prove an immediate alert would jeopardize the investigation.

The reaction of several senators to the proposed charter indicates the proposal will face strong criticism and probably major surgery before winning congressional approval, if it does.

Even some of the bill's sponsors have voiced reservations about the measure. Kennedy said "many of us may have reservations and concerns" about parts of the bill.

Panel Eyes Censure Of Talmadge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee is close to a vote on whether to recommend censure or some other disciplinary action against Sen. Hermand Talmadge for financial misconduct.

The committee scheduled a meeting today to consider a recommendation of censure from Carl Eardley, the panel's special counsel who headed a 14-month-long investigation into the Georgia Democrat's finances.

The committee could postpone any decision on the case until after the Senate's 30-day August recess which begins Friday.

Talmadge has been accused of five specific violations of Senate rules, including turning campaign contributions to his personal use and knowingly claiming Senate expense funds to which he was not entitled.

Sources say four of the six members of the committee have indicated they will support some form of disciplinary action against Talmadge, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

At least one member of the committee has said he would be willing to discipline Talmadge for violations of Senate rules, but not allegations which could lead to prosecution by the Justice Department, said the sources, all of whom declined to be named.

Daniel Minchew, Talmadge's principal accuser and former close aide, has pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to a federal charge of making false claims for Senate expenses.

Young Man Sings About South

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

SELMA, Ala. (UPI) — Way down here in the land of cotton a young man with a guitar paused by a roadside and he sang and he talked of his South, his Dixie and his life.

John Edward Sanders Jr. strummed his guitar. "A cynic might say that ignorance makes romantics," he said. Strum, strum, strum.

"And I am a romantic," the 21-year-old Georgian said.

John Edward Sanders Jr. does not regard himself as a typical Southerner. He is also not a typical American. But he is an American and a Southerner and, "I think everyone may be some part of my songs and my living," he said.

"I've got them old Jack Daniels and cocaine blues.

"Jack Daniels and cocaine on my mind.

"The sun, the moon and the stars above done treated me so unkind..."

The words and music trickle away into laughter. The sun is high and even the birds are hiding in the pine trees. And the youth talks of himself.

"I was born June 5, 1958, in Columbus, Ga. Daddy and Mother were country folk. I was Johnnie before I made myself Johnny. The 'y' and not the 'ie' seems more earthy and southern and attends to the male gender.

John Edward Sanders Jr. stared down at his guitar. Guitarists almost never smile before playing, no more than surgeons, firing squad leaders or French chefs do on the brink of action. He said he will sing "Rollin' Along," a song of young girls, groupies, who tail singers.

"I've seen you out on the road,

"It seems to me like a thousand times,

"Runnin' from hiding and tryin' to stay dry,

"Forgetten the reasons, leaves only the rhymes,

"You're just rollin', rollin' along and you know it can't last too long.

"So love me tonight and in the morning, roll along, girl..."

The strumming ended and talk took over. "First thing I ever remember was President Kennedy being assassinated. Remember the pants I was wearing. I was five. I began composing music.

"I had asthma and my parents split up and I overdosed on my asthma pills and became a teen-age alcoholic. Grass, marijuana, was no problem to get. In school friends sold it.

"I was graduated from high school and everybody thought I'd go to college, study journalism or something. But no money. So I went to work in an office for $65 a week. In June, 1977, I went off to Florida with a band.

"We went to play music. But it was mostly drugs and alcohol. One guy drank what he called 'swamp water' — some 150 proof green liquor mixed with Gatorade. Lotsa groupies. Then someone lost some money, or thought they did, and I was blamed and I went home and they blamed me and came after me.

"My mother's new husband tossed them out of the house. I got drunk and decided they meant it when they threatened to kill me so I joined the Navy."

His general discharge came just after a year; he had been ousted from Navy intelligence and put in restricted quarters for smoking the no-no and used up his discharge cash with his guitar and friends of the day in Yuma, Ariz., and San Francisco.

Now he was on his way home to "Daddy" in Columbus. "Daddy is awfully good to be around. He's a welder and once wanted to be a guitar musician. He drank too much but has given it up. And he is home."

He opened his guitar case to show his Dixie soul. "See? Here in the case is my Stars and Bars." He unfolded a 3-by-5-foot Confederate battle flag. He also withdrew a Bible.

"A girl's a girl. A song's a song. But the Bible is the way out of woe," said John Edward Sanders Jr.

"I'm southern. I'm Baptist. I'm with sweet magnolia blossoms, shady lanes."

John Edward Sanders Jr. had little money in his pocket. He jeans were faded, as demanded by his peers. He said he is pleased with tomorrow.

"I think I deserve to be successful and will be. For I am a competent professional artist — I may have made no more than $10 or $20 a night playing but I'm a pro with valid things to say."

He talked of writing and singing songs "of love and of the problems of an artist and of the south."

Field Trip Called Time To Explore

By SHARI LEWIS

Next time you feel full of get up and go, get up and go. Go on a hike. Take a field trip. What's the difference you might ask?

Well, a hike is a brisk walk, and walking is mainly what a hike is all about.

A field trip is more of an exploration, an adventure. On a field trip, you walk a bit more slowly, so you can see whatever there is to see (which flowers are in bloom, where birds have nested; how many different color leaves you can find and what good stuff has been discarded by nature for you to take home).

You can stock up for a winter full of craft activities by preparing yourself properly for your field trip.

Yesterday's Brain Twister: What kind of shoes would you make out of banana skins?

Answer: Slippers.

Today's Brain Twister: Somewhere, hidden in this square, you'll find the shape with the jagged edge. Eyeball the square and see if you can pinpoint that spot. Then cut out the little jagged shape and see if you were right! (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

(Do you have something you like to do to give a helping hand to others — people or animals, friends or strangers, youngsters or senior citizens? Share your "helping hand" idea with me, and I'll send a copy of my book, "The Kids-Only Club Book," as a prize for the helping hand idea submitted that we print. Just write to Kids-Only Club, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1111, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.)

POTATO EXPORT HIKE EXPECTED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says potato output in Europe, Canada and Japan is expected to be down slightly this year, meaning some improvement in U.S. exports. Exports of fresh potatoes in the marketing year that will end on Sept. 30 are expected "to expand moderately" from shipments of 157,000 metric tons in 1977-78, according to a Foreign Agricultural Service report.

Wood-Carver Pays Special Attention To Detail

MASON (UPI) — Square-jawed and wrinkled, the two old cowpokes lean lazily against the broken-down fence; one dangles a roll-your-own cigarette from the corner of his mouth.

Their protruded eyes reflect the frustration and pain of hard times. And the belts on their already skinny frames are at least a foot too long.

"I guess we'll have to tighten our belts, again," reads the inscription below the caricatures Gene Zesch has carved from Missouri bass wood.

The wrinkles are exaggerated. The faded jeans show miniature patches and holes. The sweat-stained hats also show holes and the pocket on the soiled gray shirt displays almost legible printing on the sack of Bull Durham tobacco hanging from it.

The detail is incredible since the caricatures are only from 4 to 6 inches tall.

But that is precisely what stands out in the work of Zesch, a rancher who has blossomed into perhaps the country's most successful wood-carver.

Twenty-five years ago Zesch earned a degree in animal husbandry from Texas A&M University. He then served three years as an Army pilot and returned home to begin his career as a rancher.

"I had always planned to ranch," he said.

But Zesch saw some wood carvings he liked and decided to try his hand at the craft. It began as a hobby, but he became better as he progressed. And now, 22 years later, he earns enough money carving to live with his wife, Patsy, and their sons on a beautiful and spacious two-level secluded home on the banks of the St. James River.

His work sells for $600 to $3,000 and is displayed in galleries in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Wyoming, California and New York.

Zesch, 47, had to toil at his trade for more than 10 years before he began earning decent money, and before his work would be displayed in good museums.

"When I started, I'd sell a figure for $25. Now it costs $1,000," he said. "But I wasn't making much money back then. It was hard to make a living at it."

Recognition from art critics and museum curators also was a problem for Zesch during the beginning.

"It was hard breaking into art galleries with caricature," he said. "There's a prejudice against wood carving. Some people don't consider it a true art."

But that was long ago. Now the same galleries Zesch struggled to get into so desperately handle most of his sales.

"I'm in some of the best art galleries in the western United States. I sell more of my things in Santa Fe, Jackson, Wyo. and Scottsdale, Ariz."

The Zesch family settled in this cattle and sheep territory on the northwest fringes of the Hill Country during the 19th century. And since then, just about every Zesch has owned and worked land.

The plan was no different for Gene Zesch — until he discovered his affection for wood carving, and his talent.

The Zesch theme never varies. More than 90 percent of his work specifically outlines the tribulations of the aging, hard-lucked modern cowboy in southwestern rural America. Nearly all his characters are the same broken-down cowpokes; square-jawed, skinny and wrinkled like prunes, gray strands of hair escaping underneath the misshaped straw hats.

And all his characters are Zesch's neighbors, the tough proud folks who constantly struggle to keep their ranching businesses going.

"In any kind of art, you're trying to record one thing," he said. "That's what I'm doing. It's an interesting period. These old guys are still trying to hang on. They're trying to make it even when it doesn't look promising.

"That's why I do this kind of thing. It's what I know. I can't do anything I don't know about. These old guys own land worth a lot of money, but they have a heck of a time making a living off of it."

Zesch's figures are both sad and funny. The late President Lyndon B. Johnson, also a rancher, sometimes couldn't determine whether to cry or laugh at one of Zesch's works.

Examples of some of Zesch's better works, which have been used for posters and postcards:

—The old fellow sits on a broken down rocking chair on the front porch of his shack. The screen on the door is tattered. Beer bottles and garbage are strewn on the porch around his visitor, a pudgy old fellow with a too-large rumpled suit. A chicken and hog lounge.

"My success didn't come easy," the old cowboy says to the city-slicked visitor.

"If someone gave me a million dollars, I'd keep on ranching 'til it was all gone," the rancher says.

—The cowboy leans against the bar, quenching his thirst with a beer. He glances over at a young, handsome but awkward fellow. The young man wears new western clothes — including a big white hat with a black band — with a touch of drugstore class. His eyes are concealed by a pair of large and ludricrous sunglasses with ugly white frames.

Gene Zesch is a polite and friendly man. He likes people and he likes to socialize. But he also loves the Hill Country, especially this area where he grew up.

He escaped the rigors and misfortunes of full-time ranching by finding success as a wood carver. And the rewards he shares with Patsy, a beautiful and energetic blonde woman, and his sons are clearly evident.

The Zeschs live about 10 miles south of town beside a gravel but graded ranch road. A falling rock obscures perfectly the gorgeous house the Zeschs built seven years ago from the almost-never-present traffic of the road.

The terrace-patio is only a few yards from the river, which separates the 30 acres where the house Zeschs sits from the other 1,180 acres of the ranch.

Several giant trees and 100 yards separate the house from the old corn crib Zesch has transformed into a studio. He remodeled the log cabin structure to allow more sunlight.

Rules Change In Israeli War

By RICHARD C. GROSS

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — In the years-old war between Israel and Palestinian guerrillas, the rules suddenly have changed.

The shift naturally affects the Israelis who carry out the missions and the Palestinians who are their targets. But the Lebanese now suffer the consequences, too.

Since the guerrilla raid on the Israeli coastal town of Nahariya in April, the government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin, instead of hit-and-run reprisals against Palestinians, is strictly on the offensive.

Combat in Lebanon has become a near-daily event for all branches of the Israeli armed forces — the air force, navy, commandos, artillerymen and border patrols of the army.

The objective of each strike is the same — to eliminate the guerrillas, their bases and supplies. The combat arena has shifted from the hilly MountHermon range in the east to the more populous Lebanese coast south of Beirut.

Civilians, including children, have been killed and wounded more than once in what one Israeli officer describes with a sigh as "a very dirty game, the whole thing. It's not a pleasure."

The United States, intent on building a bridge to the Palestinians to further progress on an overall Middle East settlement based on the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, regularly condemns Israeli raids into Lebanon, particularly the air strikes.

Commentary

The Israeli public remains silent on the subject. Perhaps it remembers too well the dozens of Israeli men, women and children killed in guerrilla strikes since the wave of violence was launched with the Lod airport massacre in May 1972.

Begin's government defends its offensive in Lebanon as legitimate self-defense, in part to justify the use of American-built warplanes.

"We have to hit them before they hit us," said Maj. Gen. Aharon Yariv, a retired former chief of military intelligence and peace negotiator who heads the Institute of Strategic Studies at Tel Aviv University.

"Our options are rather limited if we don't want to go to war," he said in a telephone interview. "The decisions on targets are not taken lightly at all and they are very carefully selected. It is difficult to avoid hitting innocent people, but the Palestinians do situate their bases and camps among civilians."

To the Israelis, that problem cannot be solved until the Lebanese government forces the guerrillas to evacuate civilian areas. Israeli intelligence estimates the number of guerrillas based south of Beirut between 8,000 and 12,000.

"The terrorists must be moved out of civilian areas," an army officer said. "We certainly do not deliberately bomb beaches and roads with civilians on them. But if, under a school, there is a bomb dump, is that a school?"

The military insists that targets are legitimate and every strike is most carefully planned.

One air raid, according to military sources, was designed to foil a guerrilla plot to attack a school in the northern Israeli settlement of Metulla. A diversionary raid was planned at the same time so the Palestinians would not know the Israelis had learned about the plot.

Three different buildings were hit.

O'Neill Sees Carter Nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's much too early to write Jimmy Carter's political obituary, says House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

"If he gets into a campaign, one on one, then the record comes out and people say, 'Hey, he isn't as bad as we thought he was,'" the Massachusetts Democrat said in an interview with The Associated Press.

O'Neill predicted Carter would emerge as the 1980 Democratic presidential nominee and would be opposed in the general election by Republican Ronald Reagan.

In a lengthy discussion of the Democratic president's political troubles, O'Neill said Carter is suffering from the inexperience of the White House staff and from a public obsession with negativism.

And while he predicted Carter would rebound from his current low rating in public opinion polls, the speaker said, "In my opinion, he's got from now until the first of the year to do it."

O'Neill said Carter isn't receiving credit for such accomplishments as reducing unemployment and cutting government red tape.

"All of that stuff, he isn't getting credit for it," said the speaker. "People like negativism, that's the way it is, and somewhere along the line it's going to change."

O'Neill said he accepts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's statements of non-candidacy and refused to discuss any possibility the Massachusetts senator, who leads Carter in most polls, might enter the 1980 race.

As for Hamilton Jordan, whom O'Neill formerly referred to as "Hannibal Jerkin," the speaker said the Carter aide recently named White House chief of staff "is trying."

Referring to Jordan as "Ham," O'Neill said the Carter aide is tryingto improve relationships between the White House and members of Congress.

"He's calling people in, he's asking their advice," said O'Neill.

But, he said the White House staff still seems "to make a lot of political judgment mistakes. Timing is so much in politics. They seem to have a lack of it all the time."

O'Neill cited Carter's energy speech as an example of how quickly a president can rebound in the polls. The speaker then referred to Cabinet changes as an example of how poor judgment can hurt Carter.

"He went on television with the Camp David, down-from-the-mountain speech," said the speaker.

Diggs Resumes Normal Duties Following Censure By House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr. was returning to his normal duties as a congressman today after a climactic day in which he became only the 19th member in the history of the republic to be censured by his House colleagues.

The House voted 414-0 Tuesday to censure the Michigan democrat for financial misconduct. Four members voted present.

While embarrassing to Diggs, the action had little, if any, practical effect on his congressional standing. He still retains his right to vote, his committee assignments and the perquisites that go with being a congressman.

He has no positions of power, having relinquished both his chairmanships after his federal court conviction last year on 29 counts of mail fraud and of making false statements.

Follow-Up

Diggs, the first congressman to be censured in 58 years, showed no emotion during the debate or as House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill pronounced the censure.

Censure, the strongest punishment short of expulsion, requires the member to stand in front of the House while his actions are formally condemned.

The censure was based on an admission by Diggs that he violated House rules by using his congressional payroll to help pay his personal expenses.

Nor does the censure close the door to further disciplinary action by the House should Diggs lose his appeals.

Diggs, a former chairman of the House Black Caucus, faces a three-year prison sentence if his appeal is rejected.

The veteran congressman presented no defense on the House floor, and his comments afterwards were muted.

"I don't have anything to say," he told reporters. "It (the censure) speaks for itself."

Asked if he would resign, as one member suggested, Diggs replied: "I'm still here and I expect to serve out my term." Asked whether he intends to seek re-election next year, he said, "Oh, yes."

Diggs was easily re-elected in his Detroit district after his conviction by a federal court jury.

Both the debate on censure and the actual censure administered by O'Neill were lacking in drama. Diggs presented no defense to the accusations. Members of the House ethics committee, the body which recommended the punishment, used their time to explain the evidence and to state why they believed censure was a more appropriate punishment than expulsion.

Flaw Found On Bolt Before Fatal Crash

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — American Airlines mechanics have testified they found a nick on an engine support bolt in a DC-10 jetliner two months before it crashed on takeoff at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport on May 25.

Now, National Transportation Safety Board investigators want to find out whether that nick is related to a 10-inch crack that is believed to have caused the plane's left engine to fall off, resulting in the nation's worst air disaster.

During the second day of hearings on the crash, airline mechanics testified Tuesday that they discovered the nick — but no other damage — during the plane's last major inspection.

The mechanics told NTSB investigators they spotted the small nick on the top of a supporting bolt that held the left pylon to the wing of the jet during an inspection in Tulsa, Okla., on March 29. The pylon attaches the wing to the engine.

Mac H. Brown, an overhaul inspector at American's Tulsa workshop, said his mechanics reported the nick and repaired it.

Investigators asked whether the nick might indicate the support bolt struck the wing mounting during maintenance with enough force to cause the crack.

Dale Warren, a design engineer for McDonnell Douglas, which built the plane, said, however, that simulated lab tests failed to produce a similar crack after being struck six times by a powerful outside force.

Much of Tuesday's session focused on when the fatal 10-inch crack developed in the bolting assembly, but investigators are also trying to determine whether there was other structural damage that went undetected.

More American mechanics testified Tuesday that they and their colleagues often failed to follow airline instructions, which call for removing the pylon and engine as one unit.

Mechanic Brian Bricken explained why the mechanics didn't follow the step-by-step instructions given them. "The way we do it is safer and more practical," he said.

Derailment Closes Interstate

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — An 80-car Union Pacific Railroad freight train derailed 20 miles west of Cheyenne and damaged a highway bridge abutment, forcing the closure of Interstate 80 and two of the three main rail lines, a railroad spokesman said.

"The bridge is unsafe for traffic at this time," said Wyoming Highway Patrol Supervisor Karla Redlich in Cheyenne. "I have no idea when it will be repaired."

Miss Redlich said highway traffic was being rerouted south from Cheyenne to Fort Collins, Colo., on Interstate 25, then back to Laramie on state highway 285, adding about 65 miles to motorists' journeys.

The train derailed at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday under the I-80 overpass near Granite. All 80 cars of the train derailed, UP spokesman Barry Coombs said. Only one of the three locomotives and the caboose remained on the track.

No injuries were reported, Miss. Redlich said.

The Highway Patrol said the derailment took out the supporting structures of the reinforced concrete bridge. Officials said I-80 would remain closed until they could inspect the bridge and determine the extent of damage.

Coombs said two of UP's three main lines from Cheyenne to Laramie were blocked by the derailment. He said the 60 trains that normally travel the line daily could probably be accommodated on the third line.

Soaring Rates Plague Tenants

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Inflation begets itself, as commercial tenants are learning.

Because of swiftly rising construction and maintenance costs, the development of large buildings has lagged behind demand. And because demand exceeds supply, the rent that tenants must pay has soared.

When that happens, consumers of goods and services know, the company that pays those high rents feels compelled to pass on their higher costs in the form of higher prices. It's the way the economy crumbles.

In several cities, slim new skyscrapers that won't be completed until 1980 or 1981 are already leased out to tenants. Even old dowager buildings that once couldn't get a nod are finding suitors.

Rents have risen 45.5 percent over levels in effect two years ago, according to Howard Ecker & Co., a Chicago-based real estate consulting firm, but even that huge figure doesn't tell the whole story.

The company said it surveyed prices throughout the country and found that increases not only exceeded the consumer price index by very wide margins, but that the rates of increase were worsening.

Rental rates in older buildings jumped 51.6 percent during the two-year period to June, and 39.3 percent in newly constructed buildings. In just the past six months, however, the increases have averaged 21 percent and 11 percent, respectively.

Analysis

As a result, Ecker figures that base annual rentals across the country now average $11.76 a square foot, compared with $8.66 two years ago. In older buildings the figures were found to average $8.23 and $5.63.

If — simply to get a picture of what that means — you applied the upper level of those latest rates on your 1,000-square-foot apartment, your monthly bill might range from about $700 to nearly $1,000.

With occupancies estimated at more than 90 percent, there's little chance that rates will fall in the next year, or even that the rate of increase will slow. The problem is especially acute in larger cities.

The Ecker survey found that in only three of 17 cities — Atlanta, Kansas City and St. Louis — were the lowest rentals in new office space below $10 a foot. Two years ago the base was under $10 in 13 cities.

In other years the prospect of benefitting from high rentals might have spurred construction, and to some degree that has happened. Not sufficiently, however, to upset the supply-demand relationship.

Howard Becker, president of the consulting firm, blames the inadequate pace of new building on high interest rates, the construction industry's own brand of inflation, and the possibility of a recession.

As an alternative, he said, developers in some cities are modernizing existing structures, particularly in Boston, Chicago and San Francisco, all cities with a plentiful supply of older structures.

But, with rentals in existing structures rising more swiftly than in new buildings, modernization apparently offers little hope for an early stabilization of prices.

In fact, said Ecker, "a glimpse of what the future holds in store can be seen in a $40 per square foot rental rate now being paid for the choicest of midtown Manhattan's Park Avenue office space."

Machine Analyzes Tunes To Predict Success

NASHVILLE, Tenn (AP) — Down on Music Row, a man has a machine he says works something like a backward jukebox. Instead of putting money in to get music out, you put music in to see whether it will bring in the coin.

Charles Trois says his big black box predicts whether a song will be a hit and does it accurately 82 percent of the time.

It's supposed to examine a tune note by note, compare it with 22,000, golden oldies in its memory bank and rate it from one to 10. The higher the number, the more likely the hit, and the more attention record company artist and repertoire men should pay.

"It's a mail sorter in a sense," Trois said. "It's a publisher's dream. The people with ears — A&R men at record companies for example — can almost never listen to all the songs they get. And often they don't really hear a song the first time around and don't listen to it again. This thing hears the song the first time around and can tell you immediately whether it's hit material."

The box analyzes only the melodic line, Trois told a reporter, not lyric, rhythm or performance. A Linda Ronstadt hit sung by Jerry Brown would still come out a winner.

"It also doesn't do much with real hard rock or real hard soul music," he said. "But it's perfect for beautiful, melodic songs."

A member of the Soul Survivors band in the '60s, Trois got the idea from his experiences in the music business.

Panels Approve Two Nominees

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's nominations of G. William Miller to be treasury secretary and of Paul A. Volcker to succeed Miller as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board were approved unanimously today by Senate committees.

The Senate Banking Committee approved Volcker's nomination without dissent, and Miller's nomination to succeed W. Michael Blumenthal as treasury secretary was approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

Final Senate confirmation of both nominees was expected by Friday, when Congress recesses for a month.

Volcker's term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board would run for four years. The Banking Committee separately approved his membership on the seven-member board for 12½ years.

Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., said he thought more time should be allowed for the public to comment on the nomination, but he did not vote against it.

The position of Federal Reserve chairman is sometimes called the second most important in government, after the presidency itself, because of the chairman's influence over the nation's economy.

The board helps determine the level of interest rates, now at a record high, and regulates the nation's money supply. It also is the regulatory agency for many major banks.

Volcker has been chairman of the Federal Reserve's New York bank and was treasury undersecretary for monetary affairs in the Nixon administration.

He told the Banking Committee last week that inflation is the nation's No. 1 problem and that interest rates might have to be pushed even higher to help bring price increases under control.

In another economy-related appointment, the president Tuesday named Jay Janis, a former Florida builder and the No. 2 person at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, to be chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The bank board regulates the activities of the nation's 4,000 federally chartered and insured savings and loan associations.

After the appointment is confirmed by the Senate, Janis will be named chairman of the three-person board, the White House statement said.

"I am very pleased with the appointment," Janis said in a telephone interview. "I am looking forward to serving on the board. It will be a challenge."

Before moving to the bank board, however, Janis may have further duties at HUD, where he currently serves as undersecretary.

HUD Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris is moving as part of Carter's Cabinet shuffle to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to replace Joseph A. Califano Jr., who was fired. The appointment already has been confirmed by the Senate, and Mrs. Harris is scheduled to be sworn in to the HEW post Friday.

Janis may be asked to serve as acting HUD secretary until the new secretary-designate, former New Orleans Mayor Moon Landrieu, is confirmed by the Senate. That may not occur until after the August congressional recess.

In other action Tuesday, Carter said he was nominating R. Robert Russell to take over as director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

Russell, 36, has served as deputy director of the anti-inflation council for the past year. He will replace Barry Bosworth, who has resigned effective Aug. 3 to return to the Brookings Institution, a Washington think-tank.

Russell's appointment, like that of Janis, requires Senate approval.

Africans Rap Britain, U.S.

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the Commonwealth Conference today she will listen "with the greatest attention" to what is said about Zimbabwe Rhodesia and that her government is "wholly committed to genuine black majority rule" in the former British colony.

Zimbabwe Rhodesia is the big issue at the conference, which opened today and is being held on African soil for the first time. British officials predicted much debate and no new action, and Mrs. Thatcher gave no concrete details of what policy her government would follow.

"The aim is to bring Rhodesia to legal independence on a basis which the Commonwealth and the international community as a whole will find acceptable; and which offers the prospect of peace for people of Rhodesia and its neighbors," she said.

As Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda opened the conference, a score of guerrillas from Zimbabwe Rhodesia paraded outside. The demonstrators carried placards blaming Britain and the United States for the seven-year war in their homeland and attacking their passive attitude toward the white-minority government in South Africa.

Kaunda said black Africa's position is that Zimbabwe Rhodesia "is a British colony and that nothing has changed. Its leaders are rebels against the crown." He said the "rebellion" sparked an "escalating war of liberation," and declared, "Africa will win this war."

Kaunda said if Zimbabwe Rhodesia and Namibia, a former German colony administered by South Africa despite U.N. censure, "were located in a different part of Africa there would be no problem. And if South Africa didn't enjoy support from the West, there would be no problem."

Britain and the United States have huge investments in South Africa, a military and economic power in southern Africa bordering both Zimbabwe Rhodesia and Namibia.

Today was Mrs. Thatcher's first meeting with the prime ministers, chiefs of state or other government leaders from Britain's 38 former colonies since her Conservative government took office three months ago.

Commonwealth Secretary-General Shridath Ramphal told reporters Tuesday that just to avoid a split on the issue of Zimbabwe Rhodesia would be an achievement for the week-long meeting.

Mrs. Thatcher met with Kaunda Tuesday night amid intensified maneuvering to prevent an open row over her leaning toward recognition of Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's new government in Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Mrs. Thatcher, who has been denounced as a racist by the Zambian government's two newspapers, also met with Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser, a fellow Conservative and a key figure in the moves to prevent a blowup.

"Everyone recognizes that there is a new situation in Zimbabwe Rhodesia. This happens to be a fact that cannot be ignored," Fraser told reporters on arriving in Lusaka. But he added: "The position of the Australian government is that there has been a change, but it is not such as would warrant recognition."

Australian officials said Fraser, in preliminary discussions with Nigerian leaders, proposed that the conference not slam the door on Muzorewa's government but instead call for it to reduce the vast powers retained by the white minority in Zimbabwe Rhodesia and end the war with the guerrillas led by Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

Representatives of Nkomo and Mugabe, whose guerrillas fought the white regime for seven years and now are fighting to oust the elected black-majority government, were reported anxious to meet with Fraser to hear his views.

Houston Tallies Huge Fire Loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Mayor Jim McConn said today he will ask that a tabled ordinance requiring fireproofing of wood shingle roofing be enacted at once in the wake of a huge apartment complex fire that left 1,500 persons homeless Tuesday.

McConn described the blaze as "the worst residential fire Houston has ever experienced." No one was killed, but six civilians and seven firemen were taken to hospitals.

The seven-alarm blaze destroyed or damaged more than one-half of the 1,200 wood-shingled units of the Woodway Square apartment complex in an affluent near West Side area Tuesday, doing an estimated $20 to $30 million in damages.

"It looks like somebody dropped a bomb," Dale Everitt, fire department spokesman, said after checking the site today.

"I expect our units to have to stay here two days or longer to get all the smoldering under the rubble and keep sparks from flying again."

Of those taken to hospitals, two were injured seriously. A jewelry store manager suffered severe burns and a fireman received what Everitt described as severe lung damage.

"We're lucky nobody was killed," McConn said.

The cause of the fire had not been determined, but Everitt said Fire Chief V.E. Rogers, arson specialists and other officials were investigating. Two men were questioned briefly Tuesday night but released.

McConn and Rogers said the wood shingles were not the cause of the fire, but Rogers said they were a severe hazard in that "they're just like burning paper."

Rogers said sparks from the shingles started another fire at an apartment building five blocks from Woodway Square.

Ironically, the City Council on Tuesday had delayed action for two weeks on an ordinance that would place tougher building code restrictions on wood-shingle roofs for multi-unit residential projects. One councilman tagged the proposal for further study.

McConn said he would ask the council to suspend the two-week tabling action today and pass the ordinance.

"This fire didn't originate in the shingles, but they contributed greatly to the spreading," McConn said.

Under terms of the ordinance, wood shingles would be permitted for multi-units only if they are installed on solid wood decking covered with asbestos.

"The dog saw it and started barking," Nancy Wood, 44, said in recalling that the beagle, Blue, gave her the first warning of the fire.

Even as the sun was setting, six hours after Blue barked at the red flames, the gutted buildings radiated a glow. Firemen still shot water to the structures. And residents tried to sort out their lives.

The Red Cross and others quickly set up shelters for the homeless, and two bulletin boards in the apartment clubhouse were filled with offers of help, homes for the night, free meals, animal shelters, storage areas.

For some, though, the tragedy was too great.

"Go away, please," said a young man with soot-stained clothes.

His roommate, 25-year-old Rod Hainey, explained they had lost everything in the seven-alarm fire.

"There was nothing to save," said Hainey, his face reddened by the flames. "Everything was burned."

"We just moved from Canada," added Hainey. He said they just moved three months ago and work for themselves in the construction business.

Behind him, on the tennis courts, people arranged plush velour sofas and oak china cabinets, preparing for the night.

Police Chief Harry Caldwell said the area would be well guarded, and issued passes to residents to let them back in. All others would be kept out of the burned area, littered Tuesday night by on-lookers with expensive cameras.

For Caldwell and others, the fire was the second disaster in a week.

Tropical Storm Claudette chased 5,000 out of their homes last Wednesday and Thursday, dumping up to 30 inches of rain on the upper Texas coast.

More than 12,000 homes were damaged in the flood.

"Thank God nobody was killed," said Jim Privette, the designer for planned renovation of the Woodway Square Apartment clubhouse.

"We're getting lots of help from a lot of people," he said. "I'm impressed with the people offering help."

Privette saw the fire as he flew into Houston from Denver Tuesday afternoon.

Mary Jane Carpenter, who drove past the blaze on her way home, said, "It was a huge column of billowing black smoke — just a mass of flames.

"I've never seen anything like it in my life."

Privette doesn't know if the clubhouse will be remodeled now.

"It really doesn't make any difference at this point," he said.

Standing beside the swimming pool were two young women in bikinis -their only clothes.

General Tells Senators SALT II Terms Unfair

WASHINGTON (AP) — A retired Army general added his voice to the SALT II opposition today, after Henry Kissinger said attempts to rewrite the treaty would trigger "a tremendous blowup, a crisis atmosphere" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

It would be two or three years before arms negotiations could resume, he added.

The former secretary of state gave the treaty a conditional endorsement Tuesday, but expressed alarm that the military balance is "beginning to tilt ominously" against the United States.

He tied his support to an administration commitment for higher defense spending and a Senate declaration linking acceptance of future arms agreements to Soviet behavior throughout the world.

Kissinger recommended delaying ratification until the next Congress if it takes the administration that long to offer new military programs.

If the only choice were to vote for or against the treaty without any improvements in weapon programs, he said, he would recommend rejection of the pact.

He also suggested that several areas of the agreement be clarified with unilateral reservations and understandings. Such clarifications would be "achievable without renegotiation" of the actual terms of the treaty, he said.

Kissinger offered his views to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the first of two appearances on Capitol Hill this week. He testifies Thursday on the treaty before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

In testimony before the Armed Services panel today, retired Army Lt. Gen. Edward L. Rowny, the former Pentagon representative at the SALT II talks, testified that the treaty is unequal, unfair and unverifiable and should be renegotiated.

Rowny said other SALT negotiators agreed to a bad treaty out of an excess of zeal to reach agreement. He said the treaty does not contribute to stability and does not blunt the momentum of the Soviet buildup in strategic arms.

"This treaty in actual fact tilts the balance heavily against the United States," he testified. "This treaty will damage rather than enhance our security. This treaty will make it virtually impossible to get a good SALT III treaty."

Kissinger's proposals were described as "positive" by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who noted Kissinger opposes amendments "which would kill the treaty."

Food Prices Dip In City

cents a pound in August 1978.

A large loaf of bread showed only a slight increase of four cents, from 71 to 75 cents, and five pounds of sugar rose from $1.23 to $1.29, the rate it had been selling for in June this year.

Potatoes seemed to be an especially good buy this month. A 10-pound bag had dropped from $1.39 a pound in July to the current price of 79 cents a pound. And, at the time of the A-J survey, 10 pounds of spuds were going for 69 cents a pound during a special sale at a local store.

The cost of a dozen medium-size eggs decreased 10 cents from last month. They are now selling for 69 cents, compared to the August 1978 figure of 67 cents a dozen.

A one-pound package of bacon and a one-pound can of regular-grind coffee remained at the same price of last month, $1.29 and $2.79, respectively.

A No. 303 can of whole green beans dropped one cent, while the cost of a five-pound bag of flour fell four cents.

Although a one-pound package of all-beef wieners had been selling in July for $2.25, the highest price over the past year, hot dog lovers can now pay a more reasonable price of $2.05.

Consumers who still want to avoid buying expensive meats to grace their tables will be paying about the same for chicken, with a fryer selling for 55 cents a pound, compared to 62 cents a pound in July.

Also showing notable decreases in cost were iceberg lettuce, selling for 29 cents a pound compared to 49 cents in July, and a 49-pound box of laundry detergent, selling for $1.49 compared to the July price of $1.73.

possibility of precipitation in the southern portions of the South Plains will continue through Thursday, according to the NWS.

Shortly after dawn today, meanwhile, a line of very heavy thunderstorms was reported east of Sweetwater stretching south to San Angelo. Those storms were reported moving in an east-southeasterly direction at 20 mph.

To the north, light showers were reported continuing in the southeastern Panhandle from Clarendon southeast to near Paducah.

Lubbock temperatures were forecast to remain in the upper 80s this afternoon — matching the Tuesday high of 87 degrees — before warming to near 90 degrees Thursday.

Angry Service Station Owners Stage March On White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scores of tow trucks, their lights flashing and horns tooting, streamed by the White House today as hundreds of placard-toting service station owners marched alongside to protest new gasoline pricing rules.

Police spokesman Gary Hankins said 150 to 200 trucks were in the noontime procession and that no disorders were reported.

Later, as many as 2,000 independent dealers planned to mass on the Capitol steps to air their grievances over regulations that also are bound to rile financially pressed motorists.

The Energy Department on Tuesday issued rules giving service stations permission starting today to charge motorists for such services as cleaning windshields, filling tires with air and honoring credit cards.

The rules also set a maximum profit margin for the independent dealers at 15.4 cents per gallon.

"All we're asking for is a fair shake. Let us set our own profit margins," said Mike Wesson, a Mobil dealer from Manchester, N.H.

"I need 17 to 18 cents a gallon to make ends meet, not 15.4 cents," said Warren Barrows, a Sunoco dealer from Hyattsville, Md.

"Who will pay to have their windows washed?" asked Eugene Serfas, a New Hampshire Gulf dealer. "We must still supply restroom facilities free. That costs me $50 a month."

The Energy Department rules were aimed partly at appeasing the dealers, but they appeared only to make the station owners more incensed.

"All the department is telling us is that if we need more money, we can go out and antagonize our customers," said Risque Harper, spokesman for the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers.

Under the rulings, motorists may be charged separately for services other than gasoline, but dealers "can't make this a condition for buying" fuel, the department said.

Stations must give motorists the option of paying in cash rather than by credit card and the extra non-gasoline charges, such as for cleaning windshields, are not mandatory.

Station owners claimed the requirement was anti-competitive because it gave other dealers knowledge of their costs.

Now, dealers must post only their maximum lawful selling price, or they may certify they don't exceed the legal maximum, the department said.

In another action Tuesday, the Energy Department ruled that stations owned by wholesalers or refiners must maintain current profit margins as long as they don't exceed 15.4 cents per gallon, the ceiling allowed independent dealers.

Wholesalers, refiners and independents all lambasted the ruling.

"We're absolutely outraged," said Alan Darrow, a spokesman for the National Oil Jobbers Council, which represents wholesalers. "It means we can't claim the same profit margins as independents."

Ironically, independents said the ruling will make prices cheaper at refiner- and wholesaler-owned stations, thus undercutting them.

The independents also are protesting the 15.4-cent profit margins granted them last month. They want a different formula that would give them gross profits of between 16 cents and 18.6 cents per gallon.

At least one of the Energy Department's actions did appear to please the nation's governors.

The department announced it would hold a hearing August 20 in Chicago to consider whether it should revoke, suspend or revise a ruling made last month giving governors the power to increase independent dealers' profit margins as much as 10 cents a gallon to accommodate local economic factors.

Investors Turning To Insurance

NEW YORK (AP) — Iran was a disaster. Nicaragua remains a cliffhanger. China promises the best opportunity in ages but also the greatest risk.

That is the American businessman's sober view of recent political developments in a changing world where it is becoming increasingly difficult for the safety of foreign investment to be guaranteed.

"We don't use gunboats anymore, and the Marines aren't available either," said Alexander Lotocki, an underwriter with a large insurer, the American International Group, who commented that U.S. assets have been expropriated by 24 countries, most of them in the Third World, in recent years.

But increasing numbers of businessmen are turning to "financial gunboats" — or political risk insurance — to bail them out of serious trouble abroad and protect their American investment overseas, now estimated at $160 billion.

"The phones really began to ring when Nicaragua started to collapse," said underwriter Lotocki. With the new regime still sorting out policy, American businessmen with millions invested in Nicaragua are waiting anxiously for word. Very few had insurance.

"Iran is the excellent example of how American companies were caught short without adequate political risk insurance," said Jay A. Shapiro, president of the JLS Group, an insurance broker based in New York that specializes in political risk policies.

"Many sophisticated U.S. companies were deeply injured when the Shah's regime was toppled. It was a debacle. American business might lose billions there," Shapiro said.

The Iran collapse, along with the Nicaraguan conflict and the U.S. trade opening in China, "have raised the sensitivity of the American business to risk aspects," said Harvey Mallement, a JLS vice president.

As much as $30 million will be written in political risk premiums this year, he said, averaging around 1 percent of contracts valued at $3 billion in nearly 30 foreign countries.

The insurers are selling to businessmen generally outside the Fortune 500 giants who can absorb losses or are covered by the U.S. government foreign investment insurer, the Overseas Private Investment Corp. The problems for smaller businesses is that Overseas requires a long lead time and a three-year minimum.

"Coverage can be found in the private marketplace in a week," said broker Shapiro. The JLS Group, one of the most aggressive in the field, tells business that its assets abroad are as valuable as in the United States. "We point out that losses by expropriation are as devastating as loss by fire," Shapiro said.

He notes that "Ten years ago people did not think you could buy flood insurance in flood areas. But you can."

The point is being driven home to business by the growing risks in the Third World and developing countries. American business assets have been lost by confiscation in Zaire, Pakistan, India, Brazil and 20 other countries.

"But expropriation has become more subtle today," Shapiro said. "Countries are more concerned about their image. They might draw up a set of operating conditions that are almost unacceptable under which to do business. They may insist a majority share be sold to locals, and this usually means selling under duress," he said.

Or the foreign country may make payments in full in local currency and not allow it to be converted to another currency.

Even China, with its enormous potential, has an equally great risk for American businessmen, Shapiro said. "What if the Chinese run out of hard currency and put contracts on hold? If the suppliers don't get their money from the exporter, they'll take him to court. But you can't take the Chinese to court."

Shapiro and the others, of course, sell their insurance by convincing businessmen they cannot afford to be without it.

"We measure the possibilities of loss in economic terms, our judgments reflecting intelligence we gather from around the world," Shapiro said. "We try to take the mystery out of dealing overseas. Getting insurance for Libya is a problem, so is the Sudan."

But, at a price, political insurance can be obtained for almost any country. But rates, which begin around a half percent and are generally about 1 percent, go up to 3 percent in risky areas, and to a towering 9 percent in the worst places.

The exception for getting insurance now is Iran. No insurance broker wants anything to do with that volatile country.

U.S. Officials Use Arabs To Persuade PLO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is using Arab intermediaries to sound out the Palestine Liberation Organization to accept Israel's right to exist.

"So far, we don't have a clear answer," a U.S. official, closely aware of the quiet diplomacy, told The Associated Press.

But the official, who asked not to be identified, said the probing will continue during the next few weeks.

The idea is to devise a U.N. Security Council resolution affirming both Palestinian rights and recognition of Israel.

That, in turn, could clear the way for Palestinian participation in Egyptian-Israeli peace talks. Despite a similar U.S. diplomatic effort in 1977 at the beginning of the Carter administration, the PLO did not budge from its position.

It is sworn, under its covenant, to destruction of the Jewish state and has conducted a terrorist campaign against Israel taking a heavy toll of civilian lives.

Now, as then, Saudi Arabia is a principal U.S. sounding board. The United States has ruled out direct negotiations with the PLO until it accepts 1967 and 1973 U.N. Security Council resolutions recognizing Israel's right to live in peace.

The resolutions also call for a settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict and for Israel to relinquish territory — not all the territory — lost by Egypt, Syria and Jordan in their 1967 war against Israel.

The Security Council suspended its consideration of the Palestinian issue Monday to clear the way for behind-the-scenes diplomacy. The Council is not expected to resume its deliberations before Aug. 20.

In these private talks, the administration has given new assurances to Israel that there will be no U.S. policy shift about the Palestinian issue.

Diplomatic sources said Harold Saunders, assistant secretary of state for the Near East, told Israeli Ambassador Ephraim Evron Sunday that the United States would oppose any Security Council resolution which did not acknowledge Israel's right to exist.

Various drafts are known to be in circulation. U.S. officials told The Associated Press the final resolution would have to include two elements.

One would reaffirm the 1967 and 1973 Security Council resolutions. The second would involve an expression of Palestinian rights.

Ruled out is any endorsement of Palestinian statehood. "That is simply out of the question," said one U.S. official, who asked not to be identified.

Israel and most of its supporters are opposed to creation of a Palestinian state. However, Palestinian statehood has the support of all Arab countries, including Egypt.

President Carter already has broken precedent by declaring his support for a Palestinian "homeland" which would be carved out of territory now controlled by Israel.

At the same time, Carter has declared his opposition to a Palestinian state.

Israel's concern is that a Palestinian state, on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza, could serve as a close-in launchpad for destroying Israel.

Some analysts consider the distinction academic. They see a Palestinian "homeland," even the limited autonomy proposed by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, evolving ultimately into a Palestinian nation.

A final decision about a U.N. resolution probably would be taken by Carter himself, one U.S. official said.

Meanwhile, differences persisted between the United States and Israel about Sinai observer forces.

Carter and his advisers discussed the dispute Sunday with Kurt Waldheim, the U.N. Secretary-General, but failed to reach a solution.

Egyptian sources said, meanwhile, that President Anwar Sadat is opposed to three-way talks with the United States and Israel to try to find a settlement.

The problem is between the United States and Israel, they said. However, if Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan accepts an invitation for a meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, then Egypt would send a representative as well, an Egyptian official said.

Rescued Vietnamese Boy Says Thai Fishermen Rammed Boat

By United Press International

A 16-year-old Vietnamese boy rescued from the South China Sea by an American warship said today Thai fishermen deliberately rammed his boat with their trawler and calmly watched 100 of his fellow refugees drown.

With tears in his eyes, the boy told of watching "women and children screaming and dying" and said he had been asked by U.N. officials not to relate the tragedy for fear of embarrassing the Thai government.

"But I know those boats. I worked around fishing boats," Nguyen Van Phuoc said from his Bangkok hospital bed. "It was a Thai boat that hit us. They just rammed right into us."

The boy's story was just one of many tales of hardship and allegations of cruelty brought back by refugees arriving in Asian ports after being rescued by American and Italian ships on "refugee patrol" in the South China Sea.

A group of 907 sick and hungry refugees, who arrived in Singapore today on three Italian ships, said Malaysian military police beat them and abused them for a week before towing them out to sea.

"We had no food and water until we had given them (the police) gold," said Loi Vinh Fatt, describing the week he spent stranded on the Malaysian coast of Kuantan with 318 other refugees. "They beat us up with their rifle butts from time to time to frighten us."

Phuoc, who spent three days floating on a piece of debris before being rescued by a U.S. ship, said his crowded wooden boat was approached by a Thai fishing trawler and then rammed.

"They told me not to say it was a Thai boat that rammed us," he said in a hoarse whisper through puffed lips.

Then, breaking into tears, he described the scene as his boat was sinking. "The women and children were screaming and crying," Phuoc said. "Just about all of them drowned in the first few minutes after we sank."

He said the men aboard the Thai boat offered no aid and sped away shortly after the Vietnamese boat sank, while many of the Vietnamese still were alive, struggling in the water.

The refugees who arrived in Singapore said authorities gave them food and water when they first landed on a Malaysian beach.

Then they were towed out to sea and left to drift as Typhoon Hope began bearing down on the Asian coastline with 100 mph winds.

Refugees rescued in early July told similar tales of cruelty suffered at the hands of Malaysian authorities. But Malaysian Home Affairs Minister Ghazali Shafie said Monday no refugees had been towed back to sea since the Geneva conference about refugees July 21.

The three Italian ships picked up 781 refugees Tuesday and brought them to Singapore with 196 others rescued late last week.

The ships will refuel in Singapore while the refugees are given food and medical attention. They will then sail to Italy, where the refugees will be given homes.

In Manila, a U.S. Navy spokesman said today an antisumbarine aircraft spotted a battered fishing junk believed to be a refugee boat off the coast of southern Vietnam sending smoke signals for help.

He said the boat, located about 200 miles southeast of the Mekong Delta, probably had about 50 persons aboard.

The information was relayed to the U.S. Air Force rescue and recovery center at Clark Air Base in the Philippines, which issued a call to five merchant ships known to be in the immediate vicinity of the refugee boat.

Industry Possible Target Of Political Blackmail

By United Press International

Oil industry sources said Tuesday that Nigeria's decision to nationalize British Petroleum Co.'s holdings in retaliation for British oil exports to South Africa means U.S. oil companies could be subjected to similar "naked political blackmail."

Nigeria is the second largest exporter of oil to the United States after Saudi Arabia.

In Lagos, the Nigerian government said it was taking over BP's holdings in the African nation at midnight Tuesday because the British government — which owns 51 percent of BP — had allowed the oil company to export North Sea and non-embargoed oil to South Africa as a replacement for Nigerian crude.

The official Nigerian statement said other foreign oil companies can continue to operate in Nigeria as long as they respect the government's policies, particularly toward South Africa.

"BP supplies less than 10 percent of total U.S. imports from Nigeria," said a spokesman for BP North America in New York. "But the nationalization of BP's Nigerian holdings could lead to repercussions down the line for U.S. oil companies that buy Nigerian crude."

Mobil Corp. and Texaco Inc. are engaged in oil-producing ventures in Nigeria.

Atlantic Richfield Co., Gulf Oil Corp., and Phillips Petroleum Co. are among the more than 15 U.S. oil companies that buy Nigerian crude, which is well suited to the manufacture of gasoline in U.S. refineries.

"Such naked political blackmail could affect U.S. oil companies," Petroleum Intelligence Weekly warned in New York. "U.S. companies that buy Nigerian oil and have very definite plans to bring it to the United States could be subject to all kinds of interpretations on the part of the Nigerians.

"If the Nigerians start tracing their oil, the situation could become even more nerve-wracking."

Nigeria said it is nationalizing BP's 20 percent stock holdings in the Shell-BP Development Co. of Nigeria Ltd., which accounts for almost half of Nigeria's daily oil production of 2.16 million barrels.

In New York, the Royal Dutch Shell Group said it will retain its 20 percent interest in the former Shell-BP venture, which discovered oil in Nigeria in 1956. Nigeria will control 80 percent.

Nigeria also is taking over BP's 40 percent ownership in BP Nigeria Ltd., the local marketing company.

Nigeria said it would pay compensation for the BP shares at an early date and ordered all BP's expatriate employees, except those under contract to the Nigerian government, to leave the country by Aug. 31.

"The BP nationalization will not affect oil production in Nigeria," one oil company spokesman said. "Even though BP is out, the oil it used to produce will reach the marketplace as long as the price is right."

Nigeria, Algeria and Kuwait — all OPEC members — are planning to cut back oil production now that Saudi Arabia has eased the tight world oil market by boosting its output by 1 million barrels a day.

Panama To Remove Flag From Yachts

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panama, with Liberia one of the most popular legal homes for ships whose owners want to escape taxes and union regulations in their own countries, soon will remove its flag from foreign yachts.

The government submitted a bill to the National Legislative Council to suspend the registration of yachts sailing in international waters. A communique said many of them sully the Panamanian flag.

The communique added that the government will continue to offer incentives for the registration of other types of vessels engaged in international shipping.

Plane Crash Kills 17 Oil Workers

LERWICK, Shetland Islands (UPI) — The twin-propeller plane ferrying 44 oil workers and a crew of three to a vacation in Scotland roared down the runway, headed for takeoff, through the heavy rain. But it never became airborne.

Instead, it rolled off the runway and nose-dived over the rocky coastline into the North Sea.

Seventeen persons died in the crash late Tuesday, but 30 others either swam to safety or were pulled from the choppy water by helicopters and small fishing boats.

"(The pilot) went off the end going slightly sideways and ended about 20 yards offshore," said Capt. Johnathan Dalrymple-Smith, 39, a pilot who saw the crash.

"The port wing broke off, but the starboard wing was clear of the water and so was the tail. It was fairly choppy, but people were wading in and swimming out to help."

The plane sank in 70 feet of water and officials said 11 bodies were still trapped inside when the search for survivors was suspended at dusk.

All but eight of the survivors were released from Lerwick Hospital. Most of those who remained were suffering from the effects of swallowing oil or sea water, a hospital spokesman said.

"I was 5 feet from the back of the plane," said one unidentified survivor. "Water was pouring in from the front. I tried to get out of the rear, then I went back for my lifejacket. I had to jump over the seats and the water was up to our necks.

"I just seemed to grab hold of the person in front and get dragged to the door."

The plane, a British-made HS-748, had been chartered by Shell Oil Co. to shuttle some of its workers on a 200-mile flight south from Lerwick, on the west coast of the Shetland Islands, to Aberdeen, on the western coast of Scotland.

Lerwick has become a transportation hub for the North Sea oil industry, with offshore workers constantly shuttling into and out of the city's Sumburgh Airport.

The men aboard the downed plane had arrived at the airport only a short while earlier after a helicopter flight from an oilfield 150 miles off the coast.

Moslem Faction Plans Boycott Of Iran's Constitutional Vote

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran's second largest Moslem political group announced today it will boycott Friday's constitution assembly election because it feels proper conditions do not exist for voting.

The boycott was announced by the Moslem Peoples Republican Party, representing followers of Ayatollah Syed Kazem Shariatmadari, in a letter to Interior Minister Hashem Sabbaghian.

It came after a powerful government figure and frequent critic of strict Islamic rule urged postponement of the election and threatened to join other candidates in boycotting the voting.

Hassan Natih, chairman of the state-owned National Iranian Oil Co. and the most outspoken critic within the government of religious domination, warned he and three other secular candidates would boycott the elections if they found democratic procedures were not being allowed in the campaigning.

Nazih, said to command vast support among Iran's oil workers, is a candidate on Shariatmadari's Moslem People's Republican Party slate.

The party letter announcing the boycott was sent to the interior minister Tuesday and its text was published today in the press.

It objected to the six-day election campaign period, calling it too short, and charged the government had made no effort to create "an atmosphere of freedom and security for the election.

"This casts in doubt the possibility of correct results in the elections," said the party.

It said revolutionaries had been interfering in the election campaign and "distributing propaganda for the benefit of a certain party" — an apparent reference to the Islamic Republican Party" — and that candidates had been threatened by known elements."

Dawn-to-dusk polling for the assembly is scheduled to take place Friday across the country. More than 1,000 candidates are in the race, a majority of them belonging to the Moslem religious group that favors Khomeini's program for the promulgation of an Islamic republic in Iran.

As in the April 1 referendum on an Islamic republic, Iranians 16 years and older will be able to vote for a maximum of 10 candidates.

Moslem militants broke up a campaign rally of the Marxist Fedayan Khalq organization in Tabriz Tuesday and beat up Fedayan supporters while they were sticking posters on the walls in the northern town of Chalus, press reports said today.

Entrepreneur's Wife Drowns

MONTREAL (UPI) — The body of a young woman found floating in the Gulf of St. Lawrence with $3,600 stuffed in her Christian Dior swimsuit and a large-diamond ring on a finger has been identified as the wife of a French Canadian entrepreneur.

Dr. R.B.J. Dorion, a top forensic dentistry expert, Tuesday identified the dead woman as Diane Labonte Despars, 29, wife of Andre Despars, a 48-year-old entrepreneur and former hockey player of Hull, Quebec.

He said he had made "a positive identification I'd stake ;my reputation on" from records submitted by the woman's dentist.

Police said Mrs. Despars, her husband and two or three friends may have been drowned in a boating accident. Mrs. Despars was found last Tuesday about 750 yards from Bonaventure Island off Quebec's Gaspe Peninsula where the St. Lawrence river flows into the gulf.

She was wearing a diamond ring worth $4,000 and a one-piece swimsuit with $3,600 in large denomination Canadian currency — three $1,000 bills, five $100s and five $20s — folded inside.

Massachusetts Doctor Defends Psychosurgery

By JANE SEE WHITE

BOSTON (AP) — The smallest suggestion of a smile quivers at the corners of H. Thomas Ballantine's mouth as he hears what his opponents say about his work — operating on the brain to treat emotional disorders.

Peter Breggin, a Washington psychiatrist who has devoted the last seven years to a fevered battle against psychosurgery, says:

"The brain is so integrated that if you damage one area, you've damaged the whole. To claim you can remove depression or schizophrenia surgically is as absurd as saying you could cut out fear of flying."

"I've done that," Ballantine, a Harvard professor says matter-of-factly. "I had a woman 14 or 15 years ago — actually, fear of flying was just one of her phobis. She couldn't cross bridges, couldn't ride subways, couldn't go up in tall buildings. Now she flies out to Arizona all the time."

Ballantine, who practices at Massachusetts General Hospital, is one of about 60 surgeons who perform abossychosurgeries a year. The exact number isn't known; most are performed in private hospitals.

Psychosurgery is the modern version of lobotomy, surgery that destroys tissues in the frontal lobe of the brain. As many as 50,000 mental patients may have been lobotomized in this country in the two decades before the mid-1950s, when psychoactive drugs were introduced.

The National Institute of Mental Health says brain surgery for psychiatric reasons may be coming back, partly because of "the failure of pharmacotherapy to fulfill earlier expectations for it."

There are similarities between the old and the new: both are irreversible. And no one knows how they work. Some suspect psychosurgery alters behavior and feelings by altering brain chemistry. Others believe it simply takes a troublesome part of the brain out of commission.

Since 1962, Ballantine has performed a technique called cingulotomy on patients whose emotional ailments persisted through the full range of known treatments — psychotherapy, drugs, electroshock.

In a cingulotomy, holes are bored in the skull. Using new X-ray technology, the surgeon places two needles on a site in the cingulum, a bundle of nerve fibers several inches deep in the brain. The needles sear away that part of the cingulum when they are heated with an electrical current. Similar techniques are used on other parts of the brain.

So far Ballantine has operated on 305 patients whose diagnoses ranged from phobia to depression to the self-starvation disease, anorexia nervosa.

He says cingulotomy helps in about 80 percent of the cases, but "if we can get a climate that would allow it, I'd investigate other techniques that are alleged to be more effective, especially for obsessive-compulsive neurosis."

Joseph Califano, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said last fall HEW would draw up regulations that might allow Medicaid and Medicare financing of some psychosurgery, though not on prisoners, children, or involuntary and legally incompetent mental patients.

In April, a coalition including members of the Congressional Black Caucus and the American Civil Liberties Union protested Califano's decision, saying it had the effect of "legitimizing the procedure" and could "encourage its expanded usage."

Lee Coleman, a Berkeley, Calif., psychiatrist, said Califano's decision might "trigger a new wave of psychosurgery similar to the thousands of lobotomies performed in the 1940s and 1950s."

Califano's announcement followed a controversial report by a Congressional commission. Its study was prompted by charges that psychosurgery damages intelligence and blunts emotions; that it is experimental; that the techniques could be used for mind control.

For the most part, the commission disagreed.

Its chairman, Kenneth Ryan of Harvard Medical School, said: "We concluded that very sick people had been helped by psychosurgery and that it did not destroy their intelligence or rob them of feelings. The operation should not be banned."

But the commission's final report is a mixed bag of statistics and information that partisans on both sides cite to support their views.

The commission found no significant, lasting intellectual deficits that could be blamed on the surgery, and one of its studies concluded that Ballantine's patients scored "significant" gains on IQ tests after surgery.

Commission researchers said more than half the patients benefitted to some degree. Opponents say the definition of "benefit" was too loose; proponents say it was too tight.

HEW is prodding professional medical organizations to establish a "Joint Committee on Psychosurgery" to draw up guidelines for its use and form local panels to review all operating proposals.

City Plans Holly Tribute

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

On Feb. 3, 1959, singer Buddy Holly died at the age of 22 when his private airplane crashed following his concert in Clear Lake, Iowa. Now, 20 years after his death and one year after the release of a popular commemorative movie, Lubbock has decided to rave on about its native son — and has decided to do so in a big way.

Mayor Dirk West and promoters Larry Corbin and Jerry Coleman announced at a news conference Tuesday that Waylon Jennings and the original Crickets (Jerry Allison, Joe B. Mauldin and Sonny Curtis) will headline a "giant concert tribute" at 8 p.m. Sept. 7 at the Civic Center exhibition hall. All proceeds from the show will go toward a fund to be used to secure an 8-foot-6 bronze statue of Holly and to construct a "Walk of Fame" in the Civic Center area, honoring West Texas personalities who have become famous in the entertainment industry.

Initial funds will be used for landscaping and the blocking of roads, with the sculptor providing miniatures of the Holly Statue to be sold to accommodate his fee.

"This is a completely self-liquidating project," Corbin explained. "We've discovered that a heroic-size bronze could cost in the minimum range of $75,000. And we're now completing negotiations with a nationally recognized artist to sculpt this statue. But it will not be paid for with city funds; it will be paid for by selling miniatures to collectors."

Asked whether Jennings, who started his music career playing bass guitar for Holly, would receive a fee for his concert appearance, Corbin said, "No one is being paid to perform at this concert. In fact, Waylon may have to take a $4,000 loss. I know there have been times when it's been announced the 'profits' of a show will go to a certain cause. But all Waylon is being paid is for travel and lodging.

"This guy is coming for nothing. And he's got to take care of 40-someodd people in his entourage, and four semi-tractor trailer trucks of equipment. But he's doing all this for one reason. And it's the same reason that I am involved, and the same reason the chamber and the city of Lubbock is involved. And that is out of love and respect for Buddy Holly."

Jennings is also producing the show, with city officials indicating that "anyone who wants to play on the show will have to go through Waylon. But no one who plays will be paid a salary or fee."

There had been earlier attempts to book Paul McCartney, a Holly fan and owner of the rights to Holly's music, for the concert — plans which fell through when McCartney was confirmed to play during Buddy Holly Week in London, England. As Corbin explained it, "McCartney was interested in coming, but it was contingent on Waylon being able to join him in London for a concert. And Waylon couldn't fit it into his schedule, since he's been signed already to score the music for John Travolta's next movie ("Urban Cowboy," currently filming in Houston).

"But we hope to be able to bring McCartney here for next year's concert."

West insisted, "This is not a one-time event. This is an annual event, which should be carried on. . .We've had letters come in at my office from Australia and England and other places, asking what they could see about Buddy when they visited Lubbock. And sadly enough, too often we've had to tell them there's nothing here. But these shows will help finance that 'Walk Of Fame' and the statue of Buddy at the Civic Center, and I feel this area will earn enormous amounts of traffic."

Corbin concurred, "Lubbock's a little short on tourist attractions right now. And I don't know whether you'll like to hear this or not, but Buddy Holly is known a lot better than Lubbock, Texas. I envision this area as being one everyone will want to come and see. Because the 'Walk Of Fame' won't just honor Buddy, but everyone who made it big from this area. Already, I can think of names, like Mac Davis, Tanya Tucker, Waylon Jennings, Don Williams. . .

"But right now we want to make this a tribute to Buddy. In England, his fans act as though Buddy is still alive. In fact, I went over there to pick up a platinum album for the Holley family, and the name of the record that sold so well was 'Buddy Holly Lives.' I feel if Buddy can still generate this much interest in London that we should make sure he's remembered here, too. In fact, our logo for this event is going to read: 'Buddy Holly Lives On In Lubbock.'"

Buddy's widow, Maria Elena Holley-Diaz, made her "first trip to Lubbock in almost 20 years" to be present at the press conference. In an interview afterwards, she said, "Yes, I've been contacted by quite a few people who were upset about there being so little in Lubbock to help them remember Buddy. And some of them even said they planned to make it their business to make sure Lubbock did something about this. . . .This really didn't bother me to the point of being sensitive at first. But after hearing it from so many people, I began to think, 'Yes, it's true. Lubbock hasn't remembered Buddy.'

"Of course it is exaggerated, but so many of these fans feel that Lubbock is there because of Buddy."

Mrs. Diaz now lives with her husband and three children in Irving and said she managed to stay "out of the limelight" after Buddy's death — but only until the film "The Buddy Holly Story," starring Academy Award nominee Gary Busey, was released in 1978. "Then the calls started coming in more and more. I even went to Holland for the premiere of the movie there."

She has no qualms about her recent involvement, saying, "I'm extremely happy all this has come about. I'm glad the city of Lubbock is doing this for Buddy. I am very appreciative. I'm happy because of Buddy, and because at last people will realize how much he meant to Lubbock."

Though this was her first trip to Lubbock in a great many years, Mrs. Diaz said she has never fallen out of contact with the Holley family. "We have not often visited," she explained, "but we have communicated practically every day by telephone."

As for the recent film version of Holly's life, she said only, "I know the Holley family was upset because there was not more about the childhood. But I had just mixed emotions. It was a mixture of fact and fantasy because the filmmakers wanted to deal only with the music and make it bigger than life." She added that her part was basically accurate on

Former Track Star Catches Thief, Receives Certificate

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Former Dunbar High School track star Gary High won another award Tuesday, but it came in an event seldom seen in track meets — the city block-long dash, flying tackle and capture of a purse snatcher.

During his high school career, High was listed as one of the area's three fastest sprinters, posting a time of 9.8 seconds in the 100-yard dash and anchoring the 1973 Dunbar High sprint relay team to the District 3-AAA championship.

So when an 18-year-old Slaton man tried to outrun him after ripping a purse from a woman's shoulder in downtown Lubbock two weeks ago, the race was over before it began.

For his quick work and equally quick feet, High became the first recipient of a special certificate of appreciation from the Lubbock Police Department.

During a ceremony Tuesday at the police station, Lubbock Police Chief J.T. Alley praised the 24-year-old sprinter's "alertness and willingness to become involved." Making the presentation, Alley noted that High's actions "reflected the attitude that crime will not be tolerated and that citizens will become involved in the prevention of crime."

"We're very proud of Gary; it took some guts to do what he did," Alley noted.

High's courageous act occurred at 4:15 p.m. on July 17, as he was waiting in the 1200 block of 14th Street for his wife to finish work at a bank.

"I heard this woman scream from across the street," High said, describing the episode. "She screamed again and then I saw this guy running down the street with a purse. I just couldn't ignore her, so I took off after him and caught him about a block away."

"This 18-year-old Slaton guy grabbed the purse from the woman (Helen Quigley, 35, of Springlake) so hard that it broke the purse straps and knocked her to the ground," explained police information officer Bill Morgan. "Thanks to Gary, we were able to recover the purse. Gary really made the arrest by himself. He caught the guy and held him up against a fence until police officers arrived. He had the guy captured."

High admitted to being "just a little scared" during the chase. "The thought that he might turn around and pull a gun on me crossed my mind," he said. "I thought about it, but I just kept going."

The certificate presented to High is the first ever presented a citizen for action in stopping a crime. "This is really something special, and I hope we can present more to others in the future."

"This award is for recognition and support of the Lubbock Police Department and its efforts to prevent crime in Lubbock," Alley said. "We hope to use this as a tool to bring about better relations and cooperation with the citizens."

The man High captured now faces third degree felony charges.

United Way Prepares For Campaign

Football, fairs and chrysanthemums may be the perennial forecast of fall to many, but to others the Pacesetter division kickoff of the United Way campaign is a very real indicator that fall is in the wings.

Traditionally, the first division of the community campaign to begin active contact — the Pacesetter division, under the chairmenship of R.P. Fuller and Wayne Finnell, met at noon Tuesday at the Lubbock Club to obtain campaign materials and receive information about its part of the fall campaign.

One important piece of information, according to Fuller, is the goal for the division. When the United Way board set a goal of $1,803,752 for operation of its 34 agencies in 1980, the chairmen of the Pacesetter division knew a large percentage of that goal would be the responsibility of the Pacesetters. Fuller said that the Pacesetter quota is $435,000 or 24 per cent of the overall campaign goal.

Pacesetter members are responsible for calling on larger firms and individuals in the city, Fuller noted, and added that for five years, the division traditionally pledges to be complete by the date of the first public report meeting scheduled this year for Oct. 8. According to Fuller and Finnell, the division will continue that tradition this year.

Members of the Pacesetter division include Gene Alderson, Clem Boverie, Bob Brummal, Watson Carlock, C.B. Carter, J.C. Chambers, Vernon Clem, W.R. Collier, Cliff Cummings, Dr. R.C. Douglas, Don Douglass, Bob Edwards, Giles Forbess, Ransom Gallaway, Owen Gibreath, Bob McKinsey, B.C. McMinn, Pat McNamara, George Miller, Charles Nielson, Bob Norris, John Scoggin, James Spears, Fred Timberlake and Howard Yandell.

Legislator Reports State May Keep Facility Open

AUSTIN (AP) — Politics and poor record keeping brought troubles and publicity to Rep. Clay Smothers' black child care home at Malakoff, the Dallas legislator told a Capitol news conference.

However, Smothers said Tuesday, he feels sure the state Department of Human Resources will let him continue to operate as long as he attempts to make corrections.

The state department, which found more than 40 violations of state standards at the home June 21, said later Tuesday it has not received reports of a recheck made Friday and Monday.

"There's dozens and dozens of lily white child care homes out there that have not been attacked," Smothers said. "Mine is the only black child care home. Doesn't that tell you something?"

"There's no doubt about it," Smothers said. "There is a clear implication that my appearing with (Evangelist Lester) Roloff in Corpus Christi had something to do with it."

Smothers was shown with Roloff on television when the evangelist and a large group of preachers defied the Department of Human Resources attempt to close Roloff's homes in Corpus Christi on court orders.

Smothers said he also was a supporter of an unsuccessful bill in the recent legislative session that would have let Roloff's child care homes operate without a license. He said the bill would not have affected St. Paul Industrial Training School which is operated by Smothers and other members of his family as a state-licensed institution. The so-called Roloff bill applied only to church-operated homes.

"We are not dodging being licensed and I don't think the Department of Human Resources will ever try to close St. Paul's as long as we try to correct the violations."

Smothers blamed himself for "poor record keeping."

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: As the father of an intelligent, well-developed 17-year-old daughter, I would like your opinion on a matter that troubles me.

Lisa wears short shorts that are just about as short as shorts can get. To be even more specific, a good portion of her shapely rear end is exposed to public view. It wouldn't be quite so offensive at the beach, but when she walks around the shopping center in high heels with half her behind showing, I must object. My wife agrees with me.

I voiced my disapproval to Lisa, and she informed me that it's the accepted mode of dress these days for her generation, and furthermore, my prudishness amazed her.

What do you say, Abby? Sign me ...

Dear Out: Inform Lisa that it may be the accepted mode of dress these days for her generation, but her Southern exposure is offensive to yours. And to please show a little more consideration — and a little less cheek.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to a letter from John who complained because his name is synonymous with a toilet, a hooker's customer, and a "Dear John" letter saying, "It's all over, so get lost."

Well, my name is Mary. And my name, too, has been abused. For example, "Lazy Mary, won't you get up," "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," "Bloody Mary," and don't forget that suggestion that "we all make Mary."

Yes, I know there is a song stating that "Mary" is a grand old name, but that doesn't help.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 33, married to a wonderful man, and we have two fine children. So what's my problem?

I eloped at 16 and never had a wedding, which is the one big regret in my life.

My husband and I are going to Las Vegas for a vacation soon and I understand there are places where couples can get married in a church-like setting. I am told they have beautiful chapels, filled with flowers, and they even have someone to perform the ceremony. Furthermore, you can rent a lovely wedding gown and tux, and have regular wedding pictures taken.

I want to know if you think I'm crazy to want a really beautiful wedding, Abby. My dream is to have a picture of myself as a bride in a real wedding gown.

I am embarrassed and ashamed to ask my husband what he thinks of my secret wish, but if you reply I will show him your letter, unless you think the whole idea is completely nuts. Sign me ...

Dear Sentimental: I don't think the idea is nuts. It's lovely. Since you are already married, why not have your marriage vows renewed in that lovely Vegas chapel. Five will get you 10 that your husband will agree to it. I hope so.

SUMMER SOUP — During steamy summer weather, the coldest meals taste best. Chilled soup may be one answer. The Icy Orange-Carrot Soup and Tany Watercress Soup are excitingly different, healthy and easy to store for later use.

Chilled Vegetable Soups Enliven Hot Summer Days

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — Just as welcome as hot soup is in winter, so is cool soup in summer. Rather than using an all-meat or chicken broth base, use part chicken broth and part milk products to give a creamy color and consistency to the mixture.

In Icy Orange-Carrot Soup, the fruit juice points up the flavor of the vegetable. Mild onion, sauteed in butter for the base, contributes a certain dimension to the carrots while nutmeg adds a gourmet touch to the soup. Use the blender for easy pureeing after the carrots are cooked in broth and juice. Half and half needs only be stirred into the vegetable mixture after blending. Five hours will chill the soup thoroughly so it is indeed ice cold for serving on a sweltering afternoon.

Green onion, basil and yogurt are compatible with watercress in another of the chilled soups so ideal for summertime eating. Here a thickened sauce is prepared for the base, after the watercress and onion are cooked in butter. The blender will reduce both of these vegetables to the desired smaller shreds and give the soup a smooth consistency; then it's ready to have yogurt stirred in for a satisfying soup.

Take advantage of the chilling time needed for both of these soups either by making them the day before, or at least in the cool of the morning. It will be an easy lunch or supper if you serve them in chilled bowls with crackers, then nibble on fruit or berries for dessert.

ICY ORANGE—CARROT SOUP
3 tbsps. butter
½ cup chopped onion
4 cups thinly sliced carrots
1½ cups orange juice
1 cup chicken broth
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. nutmeg
⅛ tsp. pepper
2 cups light cream or half and half
Snipped fresh chives

Saute onion in butter until tender, about 5 minutes. Stir in carrots, orange juice, broth and seasonings. Bring to boiling, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat, cool slightly. Pour one-third of soup into blender container; cover. Blend until smooth. Pour into large bowl; repeat with remaining soup. Stir in cream. Chill, covered, at least five hours. Serve in chilled bowls garnished with chives.

TANGY WATERCRESS SOUP
1 large bunch watercress (about 2 cups)
6 tbsps. butter
1 cup sliced green onion
3 tbsps. flour
1 tsp. basil
¼ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
2 cups chicken broth
1½ cups milk
2 cups plain yogurt
Watercress for garnish, if desired

Wash watercress; drain well. Remove stems; measure leaves. Melt butter in large heavy saucepan. Add watercress and onion. Cook until onion is tender, about five minutes. Stir in flour and seasonings until smooth. Remove from heat and gradually stir in broth and milk. Bring to boiling, stirring constantly. Reduce heat, cover. Simmer 15 minutes. Remove from heat; cool slightly. Pour one-third of soup into blender container; cover. Blend until smooth. Pour into large bowl; repeat with remaining soup. Stir in yogurt. Chill, covered, at least five hours. Serve in chilled bowls garnished with watercress.

Expert Advisory Committee Recommends FDA Put Labels On Vitamins, Minerals

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS

NEW YORK (WNS) — "Essential" ... "Super Supplement" ... "Ideal Supplement" ... "Unsurpassed Quality" ... "All natural" ... "Might C" ... "Super Potency" ... "Vital Spark" ... "Stress Formula" ... "Organic ... "superior in every respect" ... "Tribute to nutritional science!"

These are just a few of the claims being made for various vitamin products. Do you feel qualified to evaluate these claims and also to compare values among different brands and formulations of much the same vitamins and minerals, but with varying potencies and different prices?

Or do you even know whether you really need to consume the extra vitamins and minerals touted by such claims?

For 17 years the Food and Drug Administration has tried to bring some order into the present chaos of vitamin promotion and selling.

For examples, in 1973 the FDA proposed that vitamin products with more than 150 percent of the Recommended Daily Allowance should be regulated as drugs rather than foods. The reasoning was that higher potencies might be useful for treating illnesses or nutritional deficiencies but that they have no usefulness for healthy persons and in a few cases even could be harmful if heavily consumed.

But congressmen were swamped by protests, including a million letters in one year, from customers of health-food stores and other users of large doses of vitamins, including many elderly people.

So in 1976 Congress passed a bill forbidding FDA from regulating the formulation of vitamin products. Subsequently, U.S. Court of Appeals decision hindered an FDA plan to put doses of more than 10,000 units of vitamin A and 400 units of vitamin D in the prescription drug category because of potential harm, especially to children. Children are more vulnerable to vitamin toxicity than adults. Some productions have 25,000 units of vitamin A.

Now an expert advisory committee has recommended that the FDA put limitations on the labels of vitamins and minerals to the effect that they are for the prevention or treatment of deficiencies only and should be used only when a doctor has determined an individual's need for them.

While not as strong as the original proposals, this one could have the effect of at least calming down some hard-sell promotions of vitamin products. Both the observations of the advisory committee and the public's reactions so far can be illuminating to you if you already take vitamin supplements or wonder if you should:

• So-called "stress" tablets or capsules currently are widely promoted with such sales arguments as "when stress gets you down" and "when everyday stress leaves you feeling depleted." These are mainly combinations of B vitamins and vitamin C, which are water-soluble.

The claims are dubious, since many conditions besides nutritional deficiency may leave you feeling "down" or "depleted" or "upset over little things," and an extraordinary difference in prices is noticeable. You can pay anywhere from $2.35 for 60 "stress" tablets or capsules.

In any case, the experts don't want the word "stress" allowed as part of a brand name or on labeling. They also recommend against allowing such terms as "super potency" or "geriatric" to be used.

• The committee also says that labels should not designate a product as "natural," because there is no evidence that "natural" forms of vitamins and minerals are better than "synthetic" ones.

• The committee recommended that vitamin E not be sold by itself as a nonprescription drug because it has no proven therapeutic value and vitamin E deficiency is virtually unknown. But vitamin E could be added to another product to treat multiple vitamin deficiencies.

• Some vitamins and minerals, though required by the body, can be dangerous at high levels, the committee warned. For example, large amounts of vitamin A taken over a long period can cause irreversible liver and bone damage, and excess amounts of vitamin C can interfere with a common test for sugar in the urine of diabetics as well as possibly cause other conditions in massive doses.

• Since consumers cannot easily identify vitamin and mineral deficiencies and since a physician's diagnosis is needed, the symptoms of such deficiences should not described on the labels of non-prescription drugs, the committee said. Conditions causing mineral deficiences should be monitored by a doctor, it advised.

How is the public reacting? By the first week of May the FDA had received about 500 comments, we learned. Most were from the general public and reported personal experiences. The vitamin industry has not yet set in its usually extensive, statistics-studded responses.

But some of the personal comments already sent in show concern that the proposals would interfere with access to various vitamins. They tend to say, for example, how vitamin E has helped them.

In the absence of any evidence, at least so far, of harm from vitamin E, it might be the better part of valor for the FDA to hold up on that proposal but control the claims for E and some other products such as so-called "stress" and "super" formulations, and try again for more control over vitamins A and D.

PHOENIX, ARIZ. — One hundred sixteen degrees...I live in the Sun Belt.

It's a section of the United States that is so named because the area escapes severe winters and has an abundance of sunshine.

We are having an abundance of sunshine now. To spell it out for you, I haven't been able to cross my legs at the knee since the last of May.

For some time I have felt that those of us who live in this part of the country are misunderstood and much maligned. We have the worst of all worlds.

When the East and Midwest are suffering through the brutal winters, no one is interested that we are having good weather. It's depressing and considered bad taste to talk about it. When we are suffering through agonizing heat waves and droughts, no one cares.

During the snowstorms last year in the East our papers were filled with stories of sacrifice, hardship, and devastation. During our summer, we get an occasional page-one picture of a blonde with three ounces of clothing on her back (none on her front) frying an egg on the sidewalk. No one looks at the egg.

Have you ever heard anyone ask Johnny Carson, "How HOT was it?" Absolutely not.

Elections are won and lost over the ability to clear roads after a snowstorm, but have you ever heard of a mayor being defeated because she couldn't handle "sweat?"

If any of you has an ounce of charity for your fellow person, you will indulge me while I share with you an Arizona summer.

It's where a woman puts on a pair of oven mitts so she can touch her steering wheel.

It's where you go to a Little League game and have it called "due to lightness."

A reader just sent me a clipping on things that are "in" and "chic." According to the story, "sweating profusely" is definitely "in."

APPEARANCE REACTION

GLASGOW, Scotland (WNS) — Gentlemen may still prefer blondes, but the average businessman in this tight little country feels safer with a brunette as his secretary. "That pattern holds for young women in other office positions, too," said employment specialist Mary Sinclair. "I have dyed my own hair in various colors, and the reactions from males have been amazingly true to the pattern I describe."

When you are unable to squeeze any more tricks out of your cards, you can always hope that the opponents will misguess the location of a key card. If they seem headed along that path, a little push might prove effective. But if you can't tell a plausible lie, you might at least make an effort to conceal the truth!

East gave the show away in an extraordinarily simple manner on this hand. South became declarer at a contract of four spades after routine bidding, and West naturally led the top of his doubleton in partner's suit.

East won the queen of hearts and continued with the ace and king. Declarer naturally ruffed this trick with the ten of trumps, which held the trick. The play was very illuminating. Since East was now marked with the king of trumps (West would have overruffed had he held the monarch), that finesse could not win. Declarer's only hope, therefore, was that the king was singleton, so declarer quite properly led a trump to the ace.

East might as well have shown declarer his hand when he led a third heart. It should have been evident that declarer would ruff with some trump high enough to prevent West from overruffing, thus exposing East's trump holding.

East's best play at trick three would have been a diamond. West would win with the king to complete the defensive book. Declarer would then have to guess the spade situation to make his contract. If he were able to divine why East did not continue with a third round of hearts, he might still guess to drop the king of spades. But if he does, he is entitled to the applause of the pundit.

What East must not do is force declarer to make the right play. Make him work for his money.

Cobh Still Sorrowful Place

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

COBH, Ireland (AP) — There wasn't a single liner in the harbor and none had been seen for months on the day I visited Ireland's busiest, saddest port, and the bells of St. Colman's Cathedral only tolled the quarter hours.

Not so very long ago, retired coal merchant John Lawton recalls, you could see tenders going back and forth to a half dozen luxury liners anchored off Roache's Point. Then the 47 bells in the cathedral carillon, Europe's finest, played "There's No Place Like Home" for the "weeping Irish Americans coming home and the weeping emigrants going out to America."

Mulligan's Stew

Sad comings and goings have been the lot of Cobh, which is pronounced "cove" and was renamed "Queenstown" when young Queen Victoria visited in 1849 at the height of the potato famine. The Lord Mayor of Cork honored the occasion by allocating 1,000 pounds for "illuminations" at a time when two shillings and sixpence would have fed a family of five for a week.

I walked down along the old docks where the "coffin ships," mostly sailing packets, loaded their human cargoes at $6 a head into the stifling holes for the 36-day passage to America. In the decade after the potato crop failed, (1847-57), 2.3 million immigrants — one-fourth of Ireland's population — passed through Cobh, another million died at home.

My grandmother, Margaret Davitt of County Mayo, sailed from Cobh on one of the first trans-Atlantic steamers. She never would call it Queenstown. The park down by the quayside, still bristling with the cannons that saluted Queen Victoria, is named for President John F. Kennedy, whose grandfather Patrick Kennedy left the failed farm in New Ross, County Wexford to try his luck in America.

Across the bay just beyond the big modern oil refinery, I could see Spike Island, where prisoners of the Crown such as John Mitchel, the Irish patriot, waited to be transported to Botany Bay and Bermuda.

John Lawton, in his 80's now, remembers how they scrounged the town for coffins on the May morning in 1915 when the Lusitania was torpedoed, and then didn't need that many after all because the Gulf Stream swept 900 bodies away.

James Ronan, sweeping the streets in front of the Lusitania monument with its inscription to "those who helped in the rescue, gave aid and comfort to the survivors and buried the dead" remembers that day vividly too. "I was only 5 years old and I was kicked in the face by a donkey."

Ronan recalls when you could look out and see the Mauretania, the Ile de France the Franconia" the Niew Amsterdam and the Bremen all riding at anchor before the reviewing stand of Cobh's boarding houses and seafront hotels. He remembers when "the Celtic went aground off Roache's Point and the America came in all white from a snow storm at sea. The weather is changing now. We never saw snow in those days."

In June, 1953, the carillon joyously clanged out "The Cuckoo" song and the whole town and every boat in the yacht club turned out to greet Laurel and Hardy arriving on the Gripsholm. Even that was a time for tears. They hadn't made a movie in a decade, and the mass affection stunned them.

"We both cried at the same time," Stan Laurel later told a friend," "Because of the love we felt coming from everyone."

Back from America at age 75 to retire in Ireland, Bill Murphy, late of Valley Stream, N.Y., sits on one of the Queen's cannons in Kennedy Park, reminisceing about leaving Cobh in 1926 on the old White Star liner, Republic. "April 9, we sailed," he chewed on the past and a sandwich simultaneously. "Two crossings after that, she went on the rocks off the Old Head of Kinsale.

Together, we walked down to the red brick railroad station by the docks, where the steamship passengers got off the tenders and boarded the trains for Cork and Dublin, and once the big liners came on the scene, the emigrants gathered in tearful family knots as the carillon boomed out plaintive song to the promise and pain of America:

"The say there's bread and work for all,
And the sun shines always there,
But I'll not forget Old Ireland,
Were it fifty times as fair."

Most of the terminal buildings had been taken over by Irish Offshore Diving Contracts, a firm supplying the old hunting crews in nearby Bantry Bay. The only ship at the dock was a scow carrying off chemical wastes from the Pfizer Company.

"The trans-Atlantic Baggage Shed," — you could still read the weather-worn sign on the building — was an abandoned warehouse with every window broken. The green, green grass of home, watered by a million emigrants' tears, grew tall on the railroad siding leading down to the dock.

Robbed by time of its sorrows, Cobh was still a sorrowful place.

Apartment Complex Specially Designed For Handicapped

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Jerry McMahen is handicapped, but he doesn't live like it.

He and others like him live independently because of a specially designed apartment complex — complete with low-level light switches and a shower stall big enough for a wheelchair.

Just nine years ago McMahen thought he would have to live in a nursing home the rest of his life.

McMahen suffered a diving accident at the age of 17 and was left with limited use of his arms and legs. Ten years later, his mother's health deteriorated and he went to live in a nursing home.

He and other young people, confined to the nursing home because of physical handicaps, "always talked about why we couldn't be in an apartment."

The reasons seemed obvious. A handicapped person needs help to reach the top shelf of a closet, turn doorknobs and maneuver a wheelchair through a narrow doorway.

So McMahen and his friends decided to build apartments that would not have those and other obstacles to independence.

They formed a corporation called Our Way, Inc., in 1974 and, with federal and state grants and loans, built a sprawling $3.3 million apartment complex on a 16-acre tract of wooded slopes in southwestern Little Rock.

McMahen is the salaried resident manager.

Sixty-eight of the planned 144 units opened in January. Although the rent is relatively high — $250 per month for a one-bedroom apartment and $307 for two bedrooms — 56 of the units are already occupied. McMahen's office is hectic with the traffic of potential tenants anxious to have a look.

The apartments are like other conventional modern apartments, with a few strategic exceptions.

The light switches and central heating controls are about three feet above floor level. Cabinets and hanging rods in closets are installed at low levels, and the refrigerator and stove are mounted low enough so that a tenant in a wheelchair can work in the kitchen at ease.

In the bathroom, there are plenty of grab bars to help avoid slips, a handheld shower head, and levers instead of knobs on the water faucets. The shaving mirror is mounted just above the lowered sink.

Doors between the rooms are 3 feet wide, and there's extra knee space beneath tables and counters.

Each apartment has a microphone and speaker system, so that a tenant can call for help to a central answering service, 24 hours a day.

Outside, there are ramps instead of steps, and no curbs along the sidewalks.

Nor is it a retirement home for the elderly. "We're shooting for tenants aged 18 to 50."

Interest in Our Way apartments has been boosted by advertising in national publications and brochures, McMahen said. "We have about 20 (residents) from as many different states."

Although there are perhaps 10 other apartment complexes throughout the nation built to accommodate tenants in wheelchairs, "Some are like nursing homes. This is really an apartment complex," he said.

McMahen believes there will be more like it in the future.

"The handicapped have gotten very verbal about ther needs," he said.

New York Herbarium Contains Information Dating From 1768

NEW YORK (AP) — The vast collection of 4 million dried plants at the New York Botanical Garden Herbarium not only identifies leaves, but pinpoints tribal arrow poisons, helps on narcotics hunts and aids in the search for anti-cancer and anti-tumor agents.

Police ask the herbarium to check pulverized plant parts under suspicion in murder or drug cases. Staff members work to improve the air pollution tolerance of trees, and to determine the relation of plants to such fossil fuels as coal and petroleum.

They also have joined the quest for uranium. And they study food and medicine plants.

Packed into 1,200 metal cabinets on all four floors of the herbarium — or dry garden — is information dating back to the 1768 exploration voyage of Capt. James Cook. And the staff of 20 makes expeditions to the far corners of the world to augment the collection.

Dr. Patricia K. Holmgren, head curator since 1968, says her herbarium is one of the nation's three largest. The other two are at the Smithsonian in Washington, D.C., and at Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass. There are about 100 herbariums in the United States.

"Because of its massive volume, the breadth of coverage of the plant kingdom, and the concentrated regional coverage in areas of research and interest," Mrs. Holgren says, "the herbarium here has been called upon to serve as a primary source of research materials to support the toxonomic (leaf preparation) investigations of the world botanical community."

Mrs. Holmgren, whose husband, Dr. Noel Holmgren, also has been a curator there since 1968, says that each year the herbarium serves more than 200 visiting botanists, some using the facilities for as long as a year. It serves others through loans, with more than a half million specimens having been lent in the last 20 years, 50,908 in the past year.

Founded in 1891, the Bronx herbarium immediately became the depository for large, highly significant collections, such as those acquired earlier by Princeton and Columbia Universities, and from the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

About 900,000 specimens are added to the collection annually, about 70 percent from staff and student explorations, others by exchange with other herbariums. There are rooms full of unmounted specimens awaiting cataloging.

"We try to cooperate also with laymen who need plants identified," says Dr. Holmgren.

All specimens brought to the herbarium for study or comparison first must be fumigated to reduce the possibility of introducing insect infestation in the specimen repositories.

The herbarium records list the work of staff, students and "close collaborators" from 1897 projects in Montana to 1978 explorations in Venezuela, Peru and Brazil. Others have ranged from New York State to French Guiana, Japan, Canada, Mexico, Russia, South America, Antarctica, Malaysia, India and China.

"We now give or sell to many botanical gardens," Dr. Holmgren said. "Staff members go out into the fields for periods as long as a year or more, collecting in duplicate. One is kept for our botanical garden, others are sent around the world in an exchange program on a one-for-one basis, and we get collections from them."

In the past three years, sheets were sent to 150 institutions in 46 states, and to 31 countries. The herbarium has never charged for the use of its collections, the curator says. Since 1966 it has been receiving financial aid from the National Science Foundation.

Although primarily a facility for basic research, the herbarium is increasingly consulted regarding diverse practical projects.

By U.S. Customs Service, to identify fibrous materials and drug samples to block substitution, and to serve as expert witnesses.

For inventories of tree species and as a repository for specimens of pollen, peats, preserved herbs and endangered species.

For continuing education courses and lecture information sources; for garden clubs to learn how to press and preserve plants; for scouts working toward merit badges.

Irwin said he often has been asked to explain the use of the herbarium collection but the question has never been so eloquently put as, "What do you want with all that dried hay?"

AFL-CIO Asks Court To Change Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO is asking the U.S. Supreme Court to reconsider its decision upholding President Carter's right to deny federal contracts to companies which violate his anti-inflation wage-price guidelines.

Such a petition for reconsideration is rarely filed and more rarely granted — perhaps no more than once every 10 years.

Barber Offers Music Along With Haircuts

LAND O' LAKES, Fla. (AP) — A simple haircut can be like going to a hoedown at Chuck Howard's tiny two-chair barbershop.

It's not that the one-man place in this small Gulf Coast community 25 miles north of Tampa is fancy. In fact, it looks much like any other small-town barbershop with hair piled in one corner, a wheezing coffee pot in the other, a plastic red and white barber's pole out front.

But when business is slow, Howard's friends drop by to pluck away at guitars and banjos and bellow out the bluegrass strains of "Rollin' in My Sweet Baby's Arms," "Rocky Top," "Foggy Mountain Breakdown," and "Turkey in the Straw."

There's cowboy Jesse Smith, a mustachoed man wearing a 10-gallon hat. He's a heavy equipment operator turned professional country musician and singer. Then John Pardue, a three-finger banjo picker who once gave it up for 41 years straight before deciding music was too good to give up forever, and Luther "Scope" Brown, an auto mechanic and the man who plays rhythm guitar and harmonizes.

Howard himself, when he isn't clipping hair, is blistering his finger on a five-string.

Pardue usually picks out the tune, Smith comes in with guitar and vocals, then swaps singing with Brown, who has that almost-off-key country voice. Howard hums and strums.

They started using the barbershop as a place to play their music about a year ago. Pardue was teaching Howard the rudiments of the five-string, and the shop, up the street from a truck stop and next to the volunteer firehouse, seemed a convenient location.

All four men live in the community. Besides, it was a good way to pass a few hours in the afternoon.

For Smith it is a way to practice. His group "Country Vibration," has area bookings almost every night. Pardue is retired. Brown plays during lunch. And Howard is at the shop anyway.

"We keep them happy while they're getting their hair cut," said Pardue. "There's no place around here that furnishes entertainment, coffee and a good trimming for $2.50."

TRAINING PROGRAM SHUT DOWN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federally funded program designed to teach English and job skills to Indochinese refugees has closed its doors because of a 50 percent cut in federal funding, administrators say. "We could reopen in September on a much smaller scale, maybe serving 90 students, said Marlene Butler-Spencer, director of the Indochinese Training Project.

DR. LAMB

Pills Versus Food

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would appreciate your comments on my use of 23 capsules and tablets of assorted vitamins and minerals. I'm attaching a list.

I'm in my 60s and have taken these pills for over three years. My health is perfect and I feel great. My nails, skin and hair are in better condition than they've been in years. The pills assist in keeping my weight normal as I consume them in place of eating meals. I eat one meal a day and substitute the pills for breakfast and lunch. They satisfy my appetite and cause no elimination and stomach problems.

Now one of my fiends is a great admirer of yours and he's always warning me about this practice. Once during a heated discussion he revealed the supremacy in which he holds you by saying, "If Dr. Lamb knew what you were doing, he would roll over in his grave." We both laughed, when we realized how far from reality we had strayed, but would you be kind enough to tell us what you really think?

DEAR READER — It's always dangerous to get in the middle of a heated discussion. I'm willing to go a long way to help my readers, but not to the extent of rolling over in my grave — at least not yet.

I've looked through the long list of items you're taking and they're not greatly different than some other people use who get caught up in a vitamin and mineral supplement craze. One of the dangers of such a program is substituting artificial nutrition for natural nutrition. To illustrate, you're taking one potassium tablet that your list says provides 83 milligrams of potassium. Did you know that one good orange will give you around 300 milligrams of potassium? Some people think oranges taste better than a potassium pill anyway.

I'm not even sure that you're getting a completely balanced diet inasmuch as I don't know what you eat for your evening meal, but not eating either breakfast or lunch must mean that you don't have a lot of variety to your diet. I would also wonder if you're getting enough complete good quality protein in your diet.

A 25,000 unit vitamin A pill is at the borderline of a daily toxic intake. You can get by with it for long periods of time but eventually in many individuals this can cause changes affecting the bones and the hair which you are apparently proud of. If you're eating anything like a normal diet at all, you'll also be getting vitamin A from other important food sources.

I don't think you can expect any major health benefits from such items as super ginseng, garlic oil capsules, juniper berries, natural bee pollen and yucca herbal food, but I don't expect that they're going to cause you any harm either.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-6, Balanced Diet, Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances. This will give you the basic information on what the National Academy of Sciences thinks your diet should provide. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents by check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York NY 10019. You may be able to check the information in this issue against labels and other information you have on the pills you're taking and the foods in your diet to determine whether or not you might have a deficiency.

Medical Student Promotes Use Of Herbs To Treat Diseases

By ANN LO LORDO

BALTIMORE (UPI) — When Dr. Liang-Yi Cha's 60-year-old aunt visited her native China in January and came down with a severe headache, aspirin was not what the doctor prescribed.

Instead, she was taken to Peking Friendship Hospital where her physician nephew placed a herbal paste at the base of her neck and gave her acupuncture treatments.

"It's traditional Chinese medicine," explained Cha Cha, who is studying at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, is trying to show his American colleagues that using special herbs to treat disease can prove more effective and less costly than pills and serums.

"It is not only very effective, it is very easy to get the drugs," Cha said.

The 47-year-old physician said doctors in China now are using Western medical know-how to explore the 2,000-year history of traditional Chinese medicine.

"It is a rich legacy," said Cha, referring to the more than 200 types of herbs used over the centuries to treat the Chinese people. "It is really a treasure house."

Cha, vice director of medicine at the 700-bed Peking hospital, said Chinese pharmaceutical companies till large gardens to raise the plants that produce more than 500 different kinds of herbal medicines.

He added that Chinese scientists and researchers are finding that the combination of Western and traditional Chinese medicine is effective — especially in treatment of chronic diseases such as peptic ulcers, colitis, chronic hepatitis, cirrhosis and even cancer of the liver.

He said the side effects of the centuries-old medicine are less severe and last for a shorter length of time than those caused by western drugs.

In the treatment of peptic ulcers, Peking Friendship doctors use Western suction tubes to clear a patient's stomach of gastric fluids while performing acupuncture on the knee, Cha said. Then the patient is fed herbal medicines through the stomach tube.

Dr. Theodore Bayless, the Johns Hopkins medical school professor working with Cha, said many American drugs are derived from plants the same way the Chinese use their traditional herbs. He said the Chinese herbs "must contain some kind of pharmacological agent — some drug," but that it is "conceivable they have some products we don't."

Expansion Of Universe Studied By Scientists

By BOB LIPSCOMB

WASHINGTN (UPI) — How large is the universe? Will it go on expanding? And what will happen if it doesn't?

Finding answers to those questions is one of the biggest tasks facing astronomers, according to Dr. Herbert Friedman, the chief scientist at the Hulburt Center for Space Research at the Naval Research Laboratory.

Friedman said "about 99 percent" of astronomers believe in the "big bang" theory of the origin of the universe — which holds that billions of years ago the entire universe was compacted into a ball.

For reasons unknown, that ball exploded — the "big bang" — and ever since, all components of the universe have been flying away from each other.

The question for astronomers today, Friedman said, is will the expansion ever stop. If it does, the universe is "closed," meaning it has a limit. If it doesn't, it means there is no limit.

Friedman said most scientists believe the universe's expansion is slowing down, because of the gravitational pull exerted by the mass of all the objects in the universe.

He said the expansion will eventually stop and the universe will begin to fall back on itself if the mass of the objects in it — stars, planets, interstellar gas and dust — is above a certain "critical level."

If the mass is more than the critical level, the universe will be closed. If it is below the level, the universe will keep expanding forever.

So far, the universe's known mass doesn't approach the critical level, but astronomers are not sure how much mass the universe had.

But the star-gazing satellite called the High Energy Astronomical Observatory, or HEAO, has helped astronomers make progress. The satellite uses an X-ray telescope to detect X-rays from deep space which are blocked from ground observatories by Earth's atmosphere.

Friedman says "the excitement in recent years is that X-ray astronomy indicates substantial amounts" of hot gases exist which astronomers didn't know about.

The newly discovered gases mean the universe's mass is greater than previously thought, Friedman said. Astronomers have not found nearly enough gas to reach the critical level, but he adds that by calculating from what they have found already "you can get to the critical mass."

However, the second HEAO, launched last fall, has shown that the gases may be concentrated in galaxies instead of being spread out evenly through space. If more study confirms that, Friedman said, it will indicate the universe is open.

That is because the universe is so vast — at least 20 billion light years in diameter — that it would contain much more gas if the gas were diffused through space rather than concentrated in a few places.

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q. Can I specify in my will that my executor serve without a bond?

A. Yes, under Texas law you can. This is one example of how a properly drawn will helps save unnecessary expenses in the handling of your estate. If your will is not properly drawn, you may lose this right. For example, if your named executor will not or cannot serve, you need to provide for a substitute executor and specify that he, too, shall serve without bond.

Q. I have a will I signed before I married. Do I need a new will or do I need to have my present will revised to show my new name?

A. No, but you will probably want to re-examine your will because of your changed status. A new marriage imposes new legal obligations. Factors which would affect a will would include children born after the new marriage and the rights of the husband to property acquired after the marriage. A codicil can be prepared by your attorney stating your new name and affirming your intention to retain the original will provisions.

Q. I'm a middle-aged man of modest income and savings, married, have three children and would like to draw up a will. Must I consult a lawyer, or is there another way that may be less expensive?

A: There are a number of factors involved in drafting a will. They include the choice of a guardian for children to coordination of life insurance and other benefits into an estate plan. They are so varied for each person that each will should be individually prepared. Your local or statewide Lawyer Referral Service can direct you to a lawyer familiar with estate planning who will provide a 30-minute consultation for a nominal fee.

Q: When I was filling out a credit application recently, I noticed that the form included a question on whether I was single, divorced or married. Isn't there a new law prohibiting discrimination based on marital status in the granting of credit?

A: The new Equal Credit Opportunity Act does not prohibit a lender from asking about marital status, but the form may have only three categories: married, unmarried and separated. The federal law does probibit discrimination in the granting of credit. This means that the creditor may not withhold favorable treatment of your application simply because of your answer to the marital status question.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms; personal answers not possible.

Pack Rat Habits Cut Down Aunt Trash's Food Bill

LAKE DALLAS (UPI) — They call her Aunt Trash, but Mitzi Eades takes it as a compliment. Her pack-rat habits have been profitable, helping her slash her monthly grocery bills by 80 percent.

"I'm feeding six people, a dog and a cat, on $150 month when my grocery bill used to be $400 a month and we eat better than we've ever eaten before," the 35-year-old housewife said.

The nickname, given affectionately by newphews amazed at her recent hobby of hoarding food packaging, also adorns the front of her soft-back, "how-to" book and columns in five area newspapers.

"It took me 17 years to learn how to save money, but once I Learned how, I wanted everyone to have the opportunity to choose how to spend their money," she said.

While most people are aware of the thriftiness of clipping newspaper coupons or buying on sale, few go the one step further.

"If you already use coupons and buy on sale, you can save at least 50 percent more," she claims. "If you're not using coupons and not buying on sale, with this other step you can save up to 80 percent of your grocery bill."

The step is taking advantage of refunding offers — when a company will send cash, coupons or gifts in exchange for proof their product was purchased.

"There are over 1,000 companies that make 4,000 offers a year, and they're extended on everything imaginable," she said. "On everything you can buy, there has been or will be refund offers on it.

"You don't have to buy things you don't want, but you will have to abandon any product loyalty you may have."

The cardinal rule of playing the refunding game is "never throw away a label," said Mrs. Eades, who has a 60-cubic-foot elaborate filing system set up in the family garage to store the food packaging.

"And once I've used part of a label for a refund, I don't throw the rest of it away because companies constantly are changing their proofs of purchase. I've used one label 13 times."

Briefly, her system calls for two-hours-a-week work once the filing system is set up and subscribing to several of the 70 bulletins listing refunding offers in different parts of the country and compiled by other refunding advocates.

"In my files now, I have forms for about 350 offers. I go through my forms, starting with the ones that are about to expire. Usually when a refund offer comes in, I've already got the proof of purchase."

Mrs. Eades said she has received as much as $7 cash in a single refund, gifts such as clocks and luggage, and hundreds of coupons for free products since she began playing the refunding game after reading an article about a woman in Wyoming who used refunds to feed her family for $12 a week.

"I figured, well Jimminy Cricket, if she can do it, I can do it too," she said. "I started it and it's so amazing.

"I just started learning more and more about it. When I started telling other people, they were so amazed. Finally, someone just said, 'Why don't you just write a book and tell people about it.'"

So she did, and has sold more than 500 copies since June 1.

"I don't have any intentions of getting rich," she said. "This is more of a hobby."

She used three boxes of cookies as an example of how to get maximum use from products.

"They said they would send a coupon for a half-gallon of milk if I sent in proof of the net weight from three boxes," she said. "The next offer said they would send a coupon for a half-gallon of milk if I sent some words from the boxes. The next offer said they'd send a dollar for another part of the box.

"The three boxes were $1.23 and I had two 25-cent-off coupons, a coupon that said I would get one free if I bought two, and they were on sale for 79 cents. So I got three boxes for 98 cents. And with those I got two half-gallons of milk, the three boxes of cookies and a dollar — which is about $6 worth of food — for 98 cents."

Why don't more people buy and refund as she does?

"Number 1," she said, "they don't know about it, or number 2, it's a busy world and a lot of people work and don't feel like they have a lot of time to spend or that the benefits would be worth it."

Bank Teller 'Runs Away' To Join Circus

HOUSTON (AP) — She has fulfilled every little kid's dream, this bank teller from Houston.

At age 25 she ran away to join the circus.

And it's the biggest circus in the world -the Ringling Brothes and Barnum & Bailey Circus -with two units touring the United States this summer.

The Red Unit, also with about 300 people and 200 animals, is performing in California.

But Miss Lusk didn't join the show on a whim. For three summers she worked part-time as an usher in the Summit, the circus' base for much of July.

"I'd met a number of people with both circuses," she said in an interview before a performance. "It wasn't a fantasy."

She auditioned last summer when the circus was in Houston and began the season in January.

"Very aware" of being young and single, she wanted to do something different.

"She has sort of a free spirit, and bank work was getting pretty boring after five years.

"She was attracted to the atmosphere, the friendly people from all the different states working the same place."

The family, he said, supported her decision.

"If somebody in the family wants to do something bad enough, we all say go for it, especially our mom. She's really helped us reach our goals."

The younger Lusk, who plans to travel in Australia after he learns carpentry, has received another benefit from his sister's job -meeting some of the showgirls and clowns.

Miss Lusk says she also wanted the job to travel.

"One of the biggest drives I have is to travel," the 5-foot-3, 108-pound dancer said. And the circus travels, for all but 10 off-season days a year, the circus is performing or on its way to a performance with its 30-car train.

Miss Lusk says she wants to stay in the show at least one more year, when the tour will take her to New York and Los Angeles — big cities — in her little room.

"I had seen the small quarters on the train" before joining, she said. Most prospective showgirls don't know they'll live in a roomette about 4 feet wide, 6 feet long and 9 feet high.

One woman who joined the circus at mid-season saw the quarters and left the next day, Miss Lusk said, but most adjust.

The low living cost ($10 per week for the room) makes her salary seem more like a raise than the cut it was, she says.

After five years as a teller at Houston National Bank, Miss Lusk was earning a bit more than her current $215 a week.

Not just a teller, she was training tellers in the downtown bank, being promoted and learning how to operate computers.

But she didn't want to "sit in the bank for the next 30 years."

Major Hurricane Long Overdue, Warns Houston Meteorologist

BAYTOWN (UPI) — Texas' upper coast has not had a hurricane in 18 years, the longest respite for the area during this century, but it is long overdue for a storm that could out-do the damage incurred during tropical storm Claudette, a meteorologist warns.

Emergency evacuation plans are the most important measures residents of the Houston-Galveston area can take, Cecil Palmer, in charge of the Houston area for the National Weather Service, said Tuesday night at a civil defense hurricane preparedness meeting.

"We have not had a hurricane," he said, referring to last week's flooding caused by Claudette. "If there had been the winds and tides along with the heavy rain, we'd be talking about loss of lives rather than $750 million in property damages."

Palmer said one death was attributed to the storm in the general Houston area.

"(A hurricane) is going to happen here," he warned. "You are in a susceptible area and if you don't leave early enough you are going to be trapped."

Gene Hafele of the NWS in Galveston said Claudette's effects were minimal compared to what the area could have faced.

"If anything, Claudette opened our eyes more to being better prepared for the real thing when it comes."

David Barnes, meteorologist in charge of the NWS in New Orleans, said a hurricane with the strength of Camille, which struck Mississippi in 1969, could be even worse in the Houston-Galveston area.

The storm surge during Camille was 25 feet, Barnes said, the highest ever recorded in the Western Hemisphere. He said if Camille had struck the upper Texas or Louisiana coast, the surge would have reached as high as 35 feet.

Storm surge is water that piles up as the hurricane approaches land, and the depth of coastal waters determines the surge prediction. Shallow water along upper Texas and Louisiana poses a greater danger because more water can pile up.

Official Says Texas Prisons Superior

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite inmate and Justice Department claims that Texas prison conditions are oppressive, a former California prison official says the state's prison system is far superior to those in most other states.

Lewis H. Fudge, senior institutional planner when he retired in 1977, said the Texas Department of Corrections does a far better job with about one-fourth of the $200 million budgeted for California's prisons.

Comparing Texas' system with others, he said, "is like comparing the General Motors Corp. with a local department of welfare."

"To visit the Texas Department of Corrections is a privilege. It restores one's belief that prisons can be operated in an effective manner which benefit the public, the staff and the inmates," Fudge said.

Fudge testified in U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's court, which is in the tenth month of a class-action lawsuit filed against TDC by several prison inmates.

The inmates claim the prisons are severely overcrowded and inmates are deprived of adequate medical care, brutalized by other prisoners and by guards, subjected to homosexual terrorism and often denied access to attorneys and the courts.

During the trial, one federal witness said the TDC "is probably the best example of slavery remaining in this country."

In a pretrial brief, the Justice Department said conditions at the Texas prisons are "so oppressive as to produce deprivation psychosis and to drive some of its residents to attempt suicide, some unfortunately successful."

But Fudge contended, "The trend of the Texas Department of Corrections is quite different from other units in other areas. It appears to be self-supporting and the prison personnel is the best I have ever seen.

"The Texas system is one without obvious tension or harassment. It is a businesslike operation, like a well-run factory on the outside."

He said "idleness is the biggest problem in prisons and this apparently has been eliminated in the Texas prison system."

Fudge toured the Texas prison system in 1973 and 1976 while doing planning work for the California department.

He also visited prisons in Illinois, Oklahoma and North Carolina.

Ed Idar of the Texas Attorney General's Department testified, "If it is a crime for the state of Texas to require those who steal or rob or rape to do some work, then Texas is guilty. We do require inmates to work. We also offer them many opportunities."

The trial began Oct. 2 with a list of 400 witnesses. State officials said the case is costing Texas about $20,000 a week. The U.S. Justice Department, prosecutors in the trial, reportedly are spending about the same amount.

A long line of prisoners have filed through the courtroom testifying on conditions in the Texas system. Dozens of experts have given their views of the prison programs.

Gasoline More Available; Prices Increase Slightly

HOUSTON (AP) — Drivers are hearing the best gasoline news since Memorial Day from this week's American Automobile Association report about 419 Texas service stations.

Gasoline availability is rising, as well as prices, but by only half a cent.

The price of diesel fuel, however, jumped more than 2 cents to an average 92.9 cents a gallon.

The association said the brighter availability outlook for the weekend results largely from an increase in the number of stations to be operating Sunday, especially in metropolitan areas.

Across the state, 33 percent of the reporting stations will be open Sunday, the highest level since a 36 percent report for the Memorial Day weekend.

But in small cities and towns, many located on Interstate highways, the number of Sunday operators fell from 33 percent to 25 percent.

A 4 percent increase was reported in stations out of at least one grade of gasoline, up to 11 percent, but the association said most operators indicated they would begin receiving their August allocations before the weekend.

Availability Sunday is expected to increase significantly in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, where 32 percent of the stations plan to be open, compared with 12 percent last week.

A 5 percent increase in Sunday availability was reported in Houston and San Antonio, up to 25 percent pumping gas.

The two cities also reported better weeknight availability. In Houston 8 percent of the operators reported they now stay open after 8 p.m., up from 6 percent. San Antonio reported 30 percent, up from 28 percent.

There was little change in weekday operations statewide, with 24 percent of the stations pumping gas after 8 p.m. weekdays and 39 percent after 6 p.m. Saturday.

Self-service averages were (last week's price in parentheses): regular, 85.9 cents a gallon (85.5); unleaded, 89.8 (89.3); and premium, 91.7 (91.4).

Full-service prices were: regular, 88.4 (87.9); unleaded, 92.2 (91.8); and premium, 93.9 (92.4).

City Plans Tribute To Buddy Holly

And, in a delicate moment, she revealed the movie was accurate when it depicted her as being pregnant at the time of Buddy's death. "Yes, that was true," she said. "That was why I didn't go on that last trip with Buddy. But after it all (the plane crash) happened, I lost the baby."

Mrs. Diaz and the Holley family will all be present at the Sept. 7 concert, a show which, by the way, happens to be purposely scheduled for Buddy Holly's birthday. (He would have been 43 had he lived.) And judging by ticket requests already received, quite a few more fans from across the country are planning to attend — which could present a problem with hotel accomodations.

"The only publicity this show has had thus far," Corbin explained, "was in a release put out by a guy in Connecticut named Bill Griggs, who's president of the Holly Memorial Society. It was picked up by Buddy Magazine in Dallas and just from that we've already had requests for tickets from 46 states." Mayor West injected, "Which is a small problem, because I understand all the hotel rooms have been booked already."

The difficulty is one of scheduling. The concert is to be held on Holly's birthday, which is the night before Texas Tech University's season-opening football game with national power University of Southern California. "Frankly," Corbin said, "there's no room for visitors to stay. The people in California have already booked up most of the hotels in town to see USC play Tech. And we want this to be a positive experience for Lubbock. We don't think it would be positive to have people come in from all over and not find a place to stay.

"So we're gearing this first concert as a Lubbock event. But we'll be gearing next year's concert more toward being able to accomodate all the visitors."

Even so, the Sept. 7 concert by Waylon Jennings and The Crickets is expected to attract national media attention, as will the dedication the following year of the Holly statue and the 'Walk Of Fame' honoring West Texas musicians.

As Corbin put it, "This is just a start. Already Lubbock is known as supplying a host of good singers and musicians. I feel the next big industry to come to Lubbock will be the music business. This is just an annual affair. This is going to keep on from year to year, getting bigger and bigger. And it's going to start out as a Buddy Holly Phenomenon."

• • •

Tickets for the Sept. 7 concert are slated to go on sale Monday at Al's Music Machine, B&B records and both Flipside Records locations. They will be priced at $9, $8 and $7.

Lubbockite Attains Rank Of Colonel In Reserves

Roy J. Holmes of Lubbock has been promoted to the rank of colonel in the medical service corps of the reserve forces. Holmes, district manager of the Southwestern Public Service Company of Lubbock, spent the last two weeks at Annual Reserve Training where he serves as chief of staff for headquarters, 807th Medical Brigade.

Holmes has been active in the reserve forces since 1951 when he began active duty as a lieutenant. He served in Korea and was separated in 1953, although he remained active in the medical service corps of the reserve forces. A graduate of Texas Tech, Holmes received a bachelor's degree in business administration in 1950. His military education includes graduation from Command and General Staff School and Inspector General School in assignments to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and the Pentagon in Washington, D.C.

The 807th is headquarters for 29 units located in the four-state area of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas. Fourteen are field units, 13 are fixed installations, and two are augmentation units. The 829th Station Hospital, located in Lubbock, is one of the 29 units in the 807th.

Parole Revoked; Teen Sentenced

A 19-year-old Lubbock youth Tuesday was ordered to begin serving a six-year penitentiary sentence after his parole on a 1978 burglary conviction was revoked.

Vernon Ray Love of 2501-B Weber Dr. was ordered to prison after Rick Howell of the criminal district attorney's office introduced evidence that Love attempted to pass a forged check last April.

Love was accused in the hearing of attempting to pass a forged $99 check on an elderly Lubbock man April 9 at the First National Bank.

He was placed on probation after pleading guilty last July to a Nov. 17, 1977, burglary of an East Auburn Street residence in which a television set was stolen.

COMPLAINS ABOUT PRESS COVERAGE OF HIS TRIAL — Defendant Theodore Bundy holds a copy of Tuesday's Miami Herald in court as he describes to Judge Edward Coward that a controversial photograph of him that appeared in Tuesday's paper made him out to be a "villain" and an "idiot." Bundy, surrounded by members of his defense team, was sentenced to die in the electric chair by the judge Tuesday, after the jury recommended the death penalty Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

Tight Security Follows Narcotics Trial Judge

AUSTIN (UPI) — The same tight security that has surrounded federal court Judge William Sessions since the slaying of Judge John Wood Jr. will follow him into the courtroom where Sessions will take Wood's place in the federal narcotics trial of Las Vegas gambler James "Jimmy" Chagra.

Both Sessions, of El Paso, and U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd, the prosecutor in Chagra's trial for "continuing criminal enterprise," have been under constant protection by federal marshalls since the May 29 killing of Wood in San Antonio.

Wood initially had been scheduled to preside at the trial of Chagra, accused of leading a major narcotics smuggling operation in the Southeast and Northeast.

U.S. Marshall Rudy Garza of San Antonio denied there would be any extra security at the federal courthouse because of the Chagra trial, which begins today in federal court, but said, "We always have security precautions. We're going to have them at this trial.

"Judge Sessions has his security detail and Jamie Boyd is going to have his. We will have deputies there," he said.

A jury panel of 125 to 150 people has been called for the Chagra case.

At a pretrial hearing in El Paso Monday, Sessions granted a motion allowing defense attorney Victor Arditti of El Paso to withdraw from the case, leaving Joe Chagra of El Paso, Jimmy Chagra's brother, and Las Vegas attorney Oscar B. Goodman to lead Chagra's defense.

Arditti would not comment Tuesday on his withdrawal because of a judicial gag order, but courtroom sources indicated there was no dissension within the defense team and that Arditti was dropping out because his role in the case had been completed.

Sessions last week rejected defense requests for a fourth delay and a second change of venue in Chagra's trial for allegedly engineering a "Colombian connection" cocaine smuggling conspiracy.

Chagra, 34, could be sentenced to 10 years to life in prison with no chance for parole if convicted on the continuing criminal enterprise charge, which is similar to state habitual criminal charges.

Chagra, an El Paso native, initially was indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland Feb. 26 on charges he conspired with three others to import cocaine and marijuana into the United States for distribution, and that Chagra aided and abetted in the possession of cocaine in an alleged conspiracy from June 1, 1977 to June 1, 1978.

The indictment capped a seven-month investigation.

Chagra was jailed in lieu of $1 million bond set by Wood, who later reduced the bond to $400,000 after Chagra spent 12 days in an El Paso jail. Chagra's wife, Liz, placed more than $1 million in diamonds as collateral for the bond.

A superceding indictment returned in May by the federal grand jury in El Paso named Chagra in the "continuing criminal enterprise" charge.

There had been speculation Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, an exacting prosecutor who escaped a Nov. 21, 1978, assassination attempt in San Antonio, might enter the case, but the U.S. Marshall said Tuesday Kerr will not attend the trial.

In a March bond reduction hearing for Chagra, Boyd called reputed New England Mafia figure Salvatore Michael Caruana and Massachusetts FBI Crime Strike Force officer Charles Walsh as witnesses.

Another Chagra brother, Lee Chagra, was shot and killed at his El Paso law office Dec. 23, 1978, and the Chagra family contends hundreds of files were plundered by government investigators for use in narcotics investigations.

After the death of Lee Chagra, law officers said Caruana arrived in El Paso and conducted voice stress analysis tests for the Chagra family in an investigation of the attorney's death.

Three men have been charged in El Paso in Lee Chagra's death, and federal grand juries in San Antonio and El Paso are continuing investigations into the assassination of Wood and ambush of Kerr.

Bundy Promises To Fight Death Sentence

MIAMI (AP) — Condemned by a judge as "a total waste of humanity," Theodore R. Bundy has been ordered to die in the electric chair for the beating and strangulation murders of two sleeping women. But the former law student says he has just begun to fight for his life.

"In a way, this is my opening statement," Bundy said in an emotion-choked monologue Tuesday shortly before he was ordered to die in Florida's electric chair.

"This is just the first ... early round of a long battle," Bundy vowed between sniffles. "I haven't given up by any means." It was the first time in his five-week trial he had shown any emotion.

He refused to plead for mercy. "Absurd," said Bundy, "to ask for mercy for something I did not do."

Judge Edward D. Cowart was unimpressed.

"It's a tragedy for this court to see such a total waste of humanity," said the judge. "You're a bright young man. You'd have made a good lawyer. I'd have loved to have you practice before me. But you went another way, partner."

Twice the judge ordered Bundy put to death "by a current of electricity ... passed through your body until you are dead," for the deaths of Margaret Bowman, 21, and Lisa Levy, 20.

Cowart said te beating of Miss Bowman "was vicious, vile, wicked and atrocious."

Both women were attacked with a crude oak club as they slept in the Chi Omega sorority house at Florida State University in Tallahassee the morning of Jan. 15, 1978. Bundy was also convicted of three counts of attempted murder in the beatings of three other women who lived in the sorority house and in a nearby apartment. Cowart sentenced Bundy to 198 years in prison for burglary.

Louise Bundy, 52, of Tacoma, Wash., looked at the courtroom floor as the sentences were imposed on the son she has called "my pride and joy." Then she left, tight-lipped, saying nothing.

Death sentences have taken on added impact in Florida since the state sent convicted murderer John Spenkelink to the electric chair on May 25.

But Bundy's determination to fight his sentence, combined with other pending trials and an automatic Florida review process, seem certain to push any potential execution date years into the future.

Bundy is due for trial Sept. 17 in Lake City, Fla., on a charge of strangling 12-year-old Kimberly Diane Leach on Feb. 9, 1978. The prosecutor there says he expects Bundy to be made available.

Bundy also is charged with murdering a Michigan nurse near Aspen, Colo..

Cullen Davis Prosecutor Gets Reprimand

FORT WORTH (UPI) — Tarrant County prosecutor Jack Strickland has been warned he may face a written restriction against talking to the press if he continues making remarks about dismissed potential jurors in the T. Cullen Davis murder-for-hire trial.

District Judge Gordon Gray reprimanded Strickland Tuesday for saying the 30 people dismissed Monday probably would have voted to convict the millionaire on charges he tried to arrange the murder of his divorce judge.

The prosecutor said he was not misquoted but that his statements were taken out of context.

"Mr. Strickland, you're going to have to quit talking with the press," Gray said. "Be careful what you say. If this happens one more time I'll enter a written order.

Ten of 25 potential jurors questioned Tuesday said they had opinions about Davis' guilt or innocence and were excused. The other 15 were added to the 50 selected Monday.

Attorneys spent the latter half of the day questioning only six jury prospects, rejecting three for cause and retaining three for further questioning by the defense.

Gray told reporters it might take more than a week to seat a 12-member jury, and told prospective jurors the trial could last as long as two months, an estimate prosecutors termed "optimistic."

Davis' first murder solicitation trial ended in January with a mistrial after a Houston jury was unable to render a verdict.

Local prosecutors have made it clear they believe community feeling is overwhelmingly in Davis' favor and an objective jury cannot be found. The defense, however, has consistently pushed to keep the trial in Tarrant County.

The prosecution case again rests heavily on the testimony of FBI informant David McCrory, a former employee and acquaintance of Davis. McCrory said Davis paid him to hire a gunman to kill Judge Joe Eidson, who at the time was the presiding judge in Davis' divorce from Priscilla Davis.

McCrory, 41, also said Davis, 45, wanted to arrange for the murders of a total of 15 other people, including Priscilla. The FBI and Fort Worth police videotaped and recorded meetings between Davis and McCrory during which the two allegedly discussed the arrangements. One meeting shortly before Davis' arrest in August 1978 involved McCrory giving Davis a faked photograph showing Eidson lying "dead" in the trunk of a car.

In November 1977, Davis was acquitted in the longest and most costly trial in Texas history of murder in the death of his stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12, who was killed during Aug. 2, 1976, shootings at Davis' Fort Worth mansion.

The shootings followed an Eidson decision in the lengthy Davis divorce trial, which finally ended this year, and prosecutors contended Davis opened fire because he was upset about the judge's decision.

Stan Farr, the former Mrs. Davis' lover, also was killed and Mrs. Davis and a family friend were injured.

City Repeats Policy About Eaton Case

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Iowa City officials have testified that 26-year-old Linda Eaton was suspended from her firefighting job because she had a "regularly scheduled family visit," not because she breast-fed her infant son at the fire station.

Assistant City Manager Dale Helling said at a hearing Tuesday he wrote Miss Eaton a letter about a week before she returned from maternity leave Jan. 22 and said her request to breast-feed Ian, now 9½ months old, at work had been denied.

It was implicit in her request, he testified, that regular visits would be required. City officials say no-regular-family-visits is an unwritten city policy.

Former firefighter Jesse King, a black, was expected to testify today about his charges that there is an atmosphere of racism and sexism at the Iowa City Fire Department.

Deaf Mute Confused By Murder Trial

DALLAS (UPI) — Words such as "lawyer," "trial" and "court" may have no meaning to Jerome Fisher, but the 27-year-old deaf mute is learning state prosecutors believe he strangled a prostitute just after midnight on July 14.

Although confused in the courtroom setting in which he has found himself, Fisher Tuesday excitedly motioned to Elizabeth Criswell of the Deaf Action Center: "I did not. No."

He was responding after 20 minutes of instruction on his rights to a charge he killed Dorothy Armstrong, 26, at the Uptown Motel July 14. His attorney said Tuesday's bond hearing was the first time Fisher understood the charges against him. The hearing is to continue today.

Fisher's case is similar to that of Donald Lang of Chicago, a deaf mute charged with murder in 1965. Legal procedures and a jurisdiction question constantly have delayed prosecution of Lang. CBS recently televised a movie on the case.

Miss Criswell and defense attorney Scott Anderson said the defendant did not understand "abstract ideas." They said words like "lawyer," "trial" and "court" had no meaning to him.

"I'm not sure he understands his rights the way I understand them," Anderson said.

"He's understanding very little right now," Miss Criswell said.

Judge James B. Zimmerman conducted a magistrate's hearing to make sure that the defendant understood his constitutional rights. The rights are usually read in less than 90 seconds, but it took Miss Criswell more than 20 minutes to explain that he had the right to have an attorney present if he talked to the prosecutor or the police.

She waved her arms and alternately pointed to herself, Anderson and prosecutor Paul Macaluso, as she said, "You, Jerome, can choose — yes or no — to talk, talk, talk" to representatives of the state.

The judge adjourned the hearing about noon so that Fisher could undergo a psychiatric evaluation.

Miss Criswell was forced to gesticulate with her arms, hands and fingers in attempting to explain to Fisher "paper (a legal document) accuses you, Jerome, of killing a woman."

Fisher, using a mixture of the standard sign language and his own pantomime, responded he did not commit the crime.

"I, Jerome, (was at home), went to bed and closed the door and went to sleep," Miss Criswell translated.

Both Anderson and Ann Phillips of the Deaf Action Center testified Fisher had limited sign language abilities.

The hearing was to have Fisher's bond reduced from $25,000 to $5,000. Anderson said Fisher needed to learn sign language to help in his own defense and it would be better if he could study at home rather than in jail.

Mother Sues After Baby Switch At Hospital

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A hospital and two doctors must pay $375,000 to a mother and her infant, who was stolen by a nurse moments after birth and replaced with the corpse of a baby that had been stored in a freezer.

Superior Court Judge Sidney W. Kaufman awarded the money Tuesday to Mary Childs, 41, and her daughter, Christy Ann, who was returned eight months after she was stolen by nurse Norma Armistead in 1974.

Mrs. Childs said she would use the money to give her two older children, Danielle, 15, and Darrell, 16, "good educations" and to buy another house to hide from Mrs. Armistead, even though the nurse is in prison.

"I've always had a fear of Norma Armistead knowing where we live," Mrs. Childs said, noting, "People get out of prison every day."

Mrs. Childs sued Kaiser Hospital and physicians Jack Kartel and Eugene Bagley with negligence for failing to recognize that something was amiss when they found the body of an infant boy — dead and foul-smelling — on the delivery table, instead of the live baby girl that actually was delivered.

"There was no question something was screwy," Judge Kaufman agreed.

Evidence presented during the 18-day non-jury trial disclosed that nine days before the birth of Christy Ann Childs, Mrs. Armistead stole the corpse of the stillborn boy from the hospital and stored it in her freezer at home.

Stafford Proceedings Begin

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The prosecution was to begin presenting its case today against Roger Dale Stafford at his preliminary hearing for charges of murdering six Oklahoma City steakhouse workers.

The hearing will determine if Stafford, a 27-year-old drifter born in Sheffield, Ala., must stand trial on six first-degree murder charges for the July 16, 1978, slayings at a Sirloin Stockade steakhouse in south Oklahoma City. The mass murder was the worst in Oklahoma history.

Oklahoma County District Attorney Andrew Coats said he will present three witnesses at the hearing: Stafford's estranged wife, Verna, 26; police detective Sgt. Les McCaleb; and Dr. Fred Jordan of the state medical examiner's office.

Contrasted to the prosecution's three witnesses, defense attorney J. Malone Brewer, 38, has already subpoenaed 52 witnesses — nearly all law enforcement officers — and said he will subpoena at least 40 more.

Harold Stafford was killed in a Tulsa motorcycle accident six days after the steakhouse bloodbath.

The star prosecution witness is expected to be Mrs. Stafford, married to Roger Stafford for seven years and mother of his three children. According to prosecutors, she will testify she was the getaway car driver for the steakhouse massacre.

Mrs. Stafford, who has not been charged with any crimes, has talked with authorities extensively since police brought her here from Chicago March 8.

Brewer has promised to attack Mrs. Stafford's testimony, arguing she is motivated by a desire to get $61,500 of reward money which has been promised for information leading to the conviction of the steakhouse killer.

Stock Mart Hits Some Resistance

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 7.68 Tuesday, slipped back 2.82 to 843.60 by noon today.

But gainers clung to a 6-5 lead over losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market's rise Tuesday was attributed partly to a rally by the dollar in foreign exchange, accompanied by a $5-an-ounce decline in the price of gold.

Analysts noted encouragement over the assertion by Paul Volcker, chairman-designate of the Federal Reserve Board, that he would stick with an inflation-fighting program even if it meant higher interest rates.

Today the dollar showed less strength, but the gold price tumbled again, falling by between $5 and $7.

Gold mining stocks, however, managed some fractional gains. ASA was up ¼ at 24⅞, and Homestake Mining added ⅛ to 32⅛.

American Telephone & Telegraph led the active list, off ¼ at 57.

Tymshare gained 1⅜ to 38⅞. The company posted second quarter earnings of 76 cents a share, up from 58 cents in the comparable period last year.

Pair Plead Guilty In Incest Trial

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — A brother and sister who married after growing up in separate families pleaded guilty to an incest charge today in Essex Superior Court.

David Goddu, 22, and Victoria Pittorino, 24, who married in May, were placed on probation under the conditon that they seek counseling. Their marriage is considered null by the state.

Essex County Superior Court Judge Francis Lappin sentenced Miss Pittorino to one year of probation. Goddu was given a suspended sentence of one year in the county house of correction and was placed on two years probation.

Sitting in the courtroom was a man identified by a cousin of Miss Pittorino's as her natural father.

Prior to the hearing, the man, who identified himself only as a Lawrence, Mass., painter, said he came to support the pair.

He said he has not kept in contact with the natural mother.

"I don't see the mother at all. I don't get along with her," he said.

The couple appeared at Lawrence District Court for a probable cause hearing last week. But the case was continued in district court until after the superior court arraignment, and district court proceedings are expected to be terminated.

Tuesday, Goddu was found not in violation of probation in an unrelated case in Holyoke District Court.

Goddu was put on probation following a breach of peace conviction, but he was ordered to appear to determine whether his probation should be revoked. Officials refused to say why they scheduled the revocation hearing.

California Man Charged With Bank Robbery

A 32-year-old man arrested in Lubbock Monday was being held in the Hale County Jail this morning, charged with the July 23 armed robbery of a California bank.

Manuel Casarez Martinez, who gives his address as the Santa Ana, Calif., area, was charged with the federal offense of armed bank robbery and was being held in lieu of a $50,000 surety bond set by U.S. Magistrate Bill Brister in Lubbock.

The FBI and Lubbock police arrested the man about 1:30 p.m. Monday at Parkway and Zenith Avenue. An FBI spokesman said Martinez did not resist arrest, adding that authorities had received prior information that the suspect possibly was in this area.

Martinez was arraigned in Lubbock Monday and transferred to the Hale County Jail, where the federal government keeps its prisoners.

The man is charged with the July 23 armed robbery of Farmers and Merchants Bank of Long Beach in Garden Grove, Calif. Martinez allegedly used a handgun in the holdup, which netted less than $1,000 cash.

The spokesman said Martinez waived his right to a removal hearing but that it had not been determined when the suspect would be taken back to California.

Board Reports Deposits Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federally insured savings and loan associations attracted $1.5 billion in new deposits in June, the smallest monthly total in three years, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks reported in New York that withdrawals exceeded deposits by $600 million in June. The previous record outflow was $370 million in June 1974, the association said in a statement.

Withdrawals exceeded deposits at mutual savings banks by $2.1 billion in the second quarter this year, "second only to the $2.3 billion loss sustained by savings banks in the third quarter of 1974," the association said.

The figures have implications for housing, which is heavily financed by mortgage loans from savings and loans and mutual savings banks.

New deposits at savings and loan associations in June were down 17 percent from the $1.7 billion reported in June 1978. The previous low for June was a savings flow of $1.35 billion in 1976.

The thrift institutions had attracted $1.6 billion in new deposits in May.

"Savings flows continue to be significantly smaller than before the mid-March alterations to the money market certificates," said a statement by Anita Miller, acting chairman of the bank board.

In March, the federal financial regulators curtailed the thrift institutions' use of a quarter of a percentage point "bonus" on the popular $10,000, six-month certificates.

New deposits at savings and loan associations totaled $3.1 billion in March. In April, withdrawals exceeded deposits by $1.5 billion.

THERE ARE WORSE THINGS TO RUN OUT OF THAN GAS.

Cars can run out of brakes. Or control. And if that happens, a terrific operating isn't much help.

What you need is a car designed to help you stay out of that kind of trouble. Volvo. A Volvo's dual circuit braking system retains about 80% effectiveness if one circuit should fail. The car's weight is distributed almost evenly. So neither the head nor the tail wag the rest of the car. Steering is responsive and fast. And the suspension, like the rest of the car, is finely engineered. So that handling is predictable. Which means you don't have to be a race car driver to know what your Volvo is going to do at all times.

Oh, yes. The Volvo also gets good gas mileage. But for Volvo owners, that isn't the first thing they think of. VOLVO

Volvo 244 Sedans with 4-speed stick plus overdrive. Use these numbers for comparison. Actual pmg may differ depending on speed, trip length and weather. Actual highway mpg will probably be lower than EPA highway estimate.

Homeowners Challenge Apartment Zoning Law

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The first test of the city's four-month-old effort to locate and prosecute those who illegally convert single-family residences to apartments may come at the Planning and Zoning Commission meeting Thursday.

At that meeting at 7 p.m. in City Council Chambers, four property owners cited for illegal apartments by the city's Intensified Code Enforcement inspectors will ask the commission to legalize the apartments through a change in zoning.

The request certain to generate the most controversy is that of William A. Bethone, who is representing himself and two other property owners, Robert W. Sykes and Scott Lee.

Bethone is asking for a change in zoning from single-family residential (R-1) to high density apartment (A-2) on properties at 2119 14th St., 2601 25th St. and 2602 29th St.

Because of the location of the properties, Bethone and the other owners face stiff opposition to their request from the two most organized and vocal neighborhood groups in Lubbock — the Overton South Neighborhood Association and the UNIT Neighborhood Association.

Already the city zoning staff has received 22 letters of opposition to the request, one of which was signed by 11 persons.

In a UNIT newsletter, residents of the UNIT neighborhood south of 19th Street were urged to voice their opposition by mail and in person at the commission meeting and to make contributions to a fund to fight the zone change application before the City Council and the courts.

"If the proposed changes are granted," the newsletter says, "the ultimate effect will be creation of another Overton North or Tech Ghetto with problems of crime, declining schools, declining property values, noice, dirt and a much less desirable place than we now have.

"We cannot afford to allow a new precedent to be established," the newsletter says.

If Bethone is unsuccessful in persuading the commission to change the zoning on the three properties, he is expected to ask for an amendment to the zoning ordinance which would exempt some apartments which existed prior to a certain date.

One problem in the city's effort to eliminate the illegal conversions to apartments is the informal endorsement such apartments got from the City Council during a post-World War II housing shortage.

Also on the commission agenda is a similar request from Thomas J. Griffith, representing J.D. Speck, for a zone change from R-1 to two family (R-2) on property at 3222 2nd St.

Speck reportedly took out a remodeling permit for a single-family residence, then converted it to a duplex and was cited for the conversion by ICE inspectors.

Commissioners also will be asked to designate the Lubbock Women's Club at 2020 Broadway as a design-historic building. If the request of Mrs. Sidney Kothman is approved by the City Council, the club will become the second such landmark in the city.

Other zone change requests to be considered at the meeting include that of:

— Larry Teaver, for Lakeridge Country Club, to amend the site plan for property located west of Vicksburg Avenue and south of 89th Street;

— Bill Cox, for Q.S. Corporation, to delete the restriction to offices on property at 5203, 5205 and 5207 13th St;

— Robert Messersmith and Jeff Whitaker for University Park Development, Ltd., for a change from restricted local retail (C-2A) to local retail (C-2) on property at 5015 University Ave;

— R.J. O'Hair for a specific use permit to allow the construction of townhouses south of Yucca Lane and west of Meadow Drive;

— Mary Evelyn Kelly for a change from R-2 to A-2 to permit a fraternity house at 2411 35th St.

Former Crewman Of Spy Ship Recalls Torture By Koreans

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ed Murphy says customers are often bewildered by the slogan for his camper center, but "Buy from a Spy" is more than a sales pitch to the former navigator of the USS Pueblo.

Eleven years ago, the businessman was Lt. Ed Murphy, second-in-command aboard the decrepit spy ship that surrendered without a shot when North Koreans torpedoed it in the fog-shrouded Sea of Japan.

One man died in the attack and several of the 82 crew members were injured. The North Koreans held them prisoner for 11 months before releasing them in December 1969.

The Pueblo incident is one that has faded from America's memory, say a handful of the Pueblo crew now living in San Diego. But the men from the Pueblo sometimes remember it all too clearly.

"I'm reminded of the torture just from the sheer physical pain that recurs from time to time," Murphy said. Ten officers were "tortured brutally during those first weeks," he said, "and the scars that remain aren't just physical."

Murphy's kneecaps were separated and repeated beatings at the hands of the North Koreans also took their toll on his back. "It's kind of sad," the 41-year-old father of two said, "because now I can't play baseball with my son and I have to be careful even riding a bicycle."

But he is not bitter, and toys with the idea of returning to North Korea. "I've become fascinated with the country because I can identify with a part of history," Murphy said, "and I'd really like the opportunity to go back — not as a spy, though."

Although no Pueblo reunions have been planned, about a half dozen crew members have relocated in the San Diego area — a sentimental journey, Murphy believes.

"When we came home, at the airport and on the bus to the hospital, there wasn't a street we passed without people waving to us. People literally opened their hearts to us and I think every crew member must reflect on that love."

Because several live in this military town, fate has thrown crew members together on more than one occasion. Murphy was reunited with Tony LaMancha when the former Pueblo sailor — now a bank manager — called him about a business loan Murphy had applied for.

"This job is a little less dangerous," LaMancha laughed. "I was one of the fabled 27 communication technicians on the Pueblo — the job is still classified as far as I know. But it was no big secret — we were an intelligence gathering ship."

"The Pueblo opened my eyes a little sooner to politics," he said. "We were made scapegoats, fall-guys, by the government. Because we surrendered.

"Nobody blamed (then-President Lyndon) Johnson for having us there in the first place; they blamed the Koreans for having the nerve to come out and get us," he said.

Once the Pueblo's assistant officer in charge of the intelligence group, Kell is now 42 and the assistant director of finances for the City of El Cajon.

"I guess I do think of the Pueblo still. It's something I can't forget," he said. "I don't wake up in the middle of the night in a cold sweat or anything.

"I don't mind talking about it, but I don't introduce myself as Jim Kell of the Pueblo, either."

Youths Injure Clerk By Throwing Sticks

A convenience store clerk was slightly injured about 1:30 a.m. today when two troublemakers entered his store and threw sticks at him, according to police.

Erasmo Garcia, 21, was working at the store at Parkway and Zenith when he was struck on the arm by one of the flying objects. He later was treated and released at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Garcia said he and several other persons were in the store when the pair entered and started knocking merchandise off shelves.

When police arrived, they were told where the suspects possibly lived and went to the location. However, reports indicate that while officers were gone, the troublemakers returned, raised more trouble and threw the sticks at the clerk.

The suspects were described as Mexican-American males, thought to be 15 and 16. Both were of medium height and weighed between 120 and 130 pounds.

In other activity, Benny J. McLemore of 4520 49th St. said his house was burglarized between Friday afternoon and 11:55 p.m. Tuesday. He told police $1,335 in property was stolen, including a television set, stereo speakers and music albums.

About $800 in loot, mostly stereo equipment, was grabbed by burglars who entered Gary Adams' 4905-A Fifth St. residence between 1:30 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. Tuesday.

A break-in at Ford Armstrong Jr.'s house at 2008 52nd St. between Saturday and 4:40 p.m. Tuesday netted intruders about $1,300 in household goods.

In other criminal activity, police were told Tuesday that almost $7,000 in jewelry and clothing was stolen from a Lubbock residence.

Taken from the house were a sapphire and diamond ring valued at $5,000 and several other pieces of jewelry and clothing.

Robert Odell Ray, 26, of 4702 Fourth St. said he had parked his truck in a parking lot near the Methodist Hospital emergency room. When he returned to his truck, he found the driver's door unlocked, and two bags containing about $94 in coins gone.

Prison Road Crews Saving Georgia Money

ATLANTA (AP) — The chain gang may have gone the way of the rockpile, but prison road crews are alive and well in Georgia and apparently gaining popularity nationwide as a way for states to save money.

Georgia prison officials say they have been swamped with requests for information from states considering reinstating road gangs as a way to cut government spending.

Georgia is one of the few states that still uses inmate crews to do maintenance work alongside highways, according to Allen Breed, the director of the National Institute of Corrections in Washington.

"There are just a few states that have road gangs as such, but the problem of defining a road gang makes it impossible to say exactly how many," Breed said.

Bill Lowe, Georgia's deputy corrections commissioner, said that "18 or 20 states have gotten information in the past year and a half" about Georgia's prison work programs.

He said Canadian officials also have toured some of the state's 56 state and county penal institutions.

"We've had other states to contact us," said Jack Caldwell, the deputy prison commission in charge of work programs. "I think their interest mainly is seeing how they can get a job done at less expense to the taxpayers, and mainly to give the inmates something to do."

Caldwell refused to say what states had contacted Georgia about its road gang system but said most were Northeastern or Midwestern.

FBI Must Halt Mail Scrutinization

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service must temporarily halt the scrutiny of mail sent to organizations and persons being investigatedby the FBI, a judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Lawrence A. Whipple issued an injunction Tuesday against any new or present national security "mail covers."

A mail cover is an investigative tool which allows postal inspectors to jot down information appearing on the face of letters and packages being sent to a suspect group or individual.

Whipple ruled last year that a Postal Service regulation allowing for national security mail covers was unconstitutional because the definition of national security was vague and overly broad.

Since the judge's ruling last November, 30 mail covers were continued and 15 new applications approved by U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell, Whipple noted.

"Any national security mail covers that have been issued since then have been done so without any regulation to guide the Postal Service," the judge said. "Obviously, that situation is as subject to potential abuse as was the original regulation."

Whipple issued the injunction against mail cover effective until the Postal Service adopts a new regulation re-defining the term national security.

Once the new regulation is adopted, Whipple said he would consider whether it fit constitutional guidelines.

The judge was ruling in the case involving Lori Paton, now 22, who filed suit against the FBI seven years ago when she wrote a letter to the Socialist Workers' Party.

Courtroom Sound System May Halt For Testimony

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — His U.S. District Court room is wired for sound, but Judge Charles G. Neese may decide against using the system to play tapes of secretly recorded conversations in Tennessee's clemency-for-cash trial.

The judge has excused jurors until 9 a.m. Thursday, while he determines whether he should allow tape and video recordings made by an informant. One of the men prosecutors say was involved in the recorded conversations is Ernest Withers, a state Alcoholic Beverage Commission agent who was subpoenaed as a government witness, but not indicted.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Hickman Ewing of Memphis said Tuesday the government will try to show that the agent, Withers of Memphis, "was part and parcel of this scheme."

With the jury absent, Elroy Grantham, a Memphis brickmason, testified Tuesday he paid Withers $5,000 in two installments to free his son, Marvin, from a 13-year prison term for armed robbery. Sammie Lynn Cook said she recorded three conversations with Withers in which she said Withers told her he would need $2,000 and two plane tickets to Nashville to release her boyfriend, Jerry Cook, from prison.

Extra Performance Of Play Announced

The melodrama "Dastardly Doin's At Dove Manor," sponsored by the city Parks & Recreation Department, will be held over for a final performance at 8 p.m. Saturday at Wagner Park, located at 26th Street and Flint Avenue.

The play already had been scheduled for presentation at the same time Thursday and Friday at the same location.

There is no admission charge.

Written by Dan Donahue and directed by Linda Donahue, the play stars Shannon Gale, Skipper Wood, Duane Whitaker, Lori Washington, Aubrey Washington, Mary Donahue and Bill Conley.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn and soybean futures rose and wheat futures fell Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Price movements were moderate in comparison to the sharp declines of the last two trading sessions. Corn and soybean bids rebounded on buying by commission houses and by traders holding open short positions, or obligations to deliver commodities not yet purchased.

There was little news to account for the gains, except general talk that recent selling may have been overdone.

Wheat futures fell 5 to 6 cents a bushel on selling by professional traders and commercial interests.

At the close, soybeans were 2½ to 6¼ cents higher, August $7.15½.

Chrysler May Receive Federal Financial Aid

DETROIT (AP) — Troubled Chrysler Corp. now appears to be betting its survival on federal government aid.

Chairman John Riccardo said Tuesday after a reporting an industry-record $207 million loss for the second quarter that the company wanted what amounts to a $1 billion loan.

"I refuse to believe that that won't happen and I think to consider any other alternatives doesn't make sense," Riccardo said.

In their report to shareholders earlier in the day, Riccardo and President Lee A. Iacocca said, for the first time in public, that there was a "possibility of reduced competition in the industry" — a phrase that could cover anything from a full or partial shutdown to a takeover by a competitor. They urged shareholders to write representatives about the "urgent need for corrective action."

Outside studies earlier had indicated Chrysler could not survive as a full-line producer without some kind of help.

Government help should take two forms, Riccardo told reporters: postponing the tough 1981 pollution standards to 1983 and an "accelerated tax credit."

Companies which lose money may deduct those losses from income in future years, for up to five years, before figuring taxable income. Chrysler has used all those credits from years past.

Chrysler can credit this year's losses against future profits, but needs the money now. So what Riccardo wants is the ability to take the credits now and next year in the form of checks from the U.S. Treasury, repaying in 1981 and 1982.

But he would not limit the credits to the actual losses for 1979 and 1980. Instead, he would make the credits equal to the extra costs for research, engineering and tooling caused by government regulation, or half the expected $1 billion expenditure in each of those years.

Riccardo repeated a familiar theme — that pollution and mileage regulation is almost crushing the company because it has fewer cars for which to spread the costs than its larger competitors.

Regulations costing GM $340 a car cost Chrysler $620, he said.

United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser made a similar point when he called for the government to take a $1 billion ownership position in the company as an "investment in people."

In Washington, a spokesman said the Treasury Department has assembled an interagency committee to examine the best form of aid for Chrysler. The spokesman said the department was concerned about the possible impact of Chrysler's problems "on the overall ecomomy and on the employees of Chrysler and its suppliers."

Nicklaus Looks To Son's Tip In PGA

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — A lesson from a 17-year-old kid, a little tip given in private by a teen-ager to his father, may change the complexion of the 61st PGA National Championship.

It could be the tip that turns the season around for Jack Nicklaus.

"I was going to go see Jack Grout (his life-time teacher), but I called him and said, 'Jack, who needs you'?" Nicklaus said.

A tip from son Jackie may have solved his problems, Nicklaus indicated.

And he has had his problems this year. For the first time in his unmatched career, Nicklaus has failed to win. He ranks a distant 50th on the season's money-winning list. He failed to make the Ryder Cup team. He isn't eligible for the World Series of Golf.

It has been, without question, the most frustrating season of his golfing life.

But things are turning around for the man who owns a record 15 major professional titles, who generally is regarded as the finest player the game has ever seen.

The hints are there. The game is coming together. The tip from Jackie could be the nudge that makes him a winner again.

And should he win in this event that starts Thursday on the famed Oakland Hills Country Club course, it would turn around the entire season for Nicklaus, who places such great store in the game's major events.

"It's hard to say you've had a successful season if you don't win one of the majors. It's hard to say you've had a bad season if you do win one of them," he has said.

He has played his best in the Big Four. He missed a playoff for the Masters title by a single shot. He had a very good — but too late — last round in the U.S. Open. He tied for second in the British Open.

"I'm making some putts now," he said. "That's the difference. I'm probably not playing all that much better than I was. But I'm making some putts and that can make a world of difference.

"I got the ball close several times last week (at Philadelphia). I still missed some putts, but I made some. And that helps."

And a little session, early this week, with son Jacie could have straightened that out.

"I was hitting balls and he said, 'Dad, where did you tell me to put the weight when you want to hook it'?" Nicklaus said.

"I said, 'Back in the stance.'

"He said, 'And if you want to fade it?'

"'Up in the stance.'

"He said, 'Then why have you got the ball so far back in your stance'?"

He paused, significantly. Then he added:

"I've tried to teach him to analyze swings, problems in others. It's nice to have a little feedback."

If that corrects, even partially, the tiny flaws that have frustrated Nicklaus this season, he will move from a place in a list of those likely to win to a role as solid favorite.

If it doesn't, a clear-cut favorite is difficult to determine. Tom Watson — a four-time winner this year, collector of a record $387,000 already this season — would be a logical choice. But Watson has had last-round difficulties in his last few starts. His game could be suspect.

Among the other likely contenders on the 7,014-yard, par-70 Oakland Hills course are U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin, Masters king Fuzzy Zoeller, Lee Trevino, Ray Floyd, Ben Crenshaw, Hubert Green, Lanny Wadkins, Tom Weiskopf, Jerry Pate and Gary Player, the little South African who won the PGA the last time it was played here.

Working At Excellence

FOR THE FIRST morning in many a working day, Bob Nash didn't stumble out of bed in the middle of the night, lurch downtown and then spend all of today pumping Lubbock to the world — like it or not.

The same coworker immediately turned to a visitor and remarked, "Bob's only been around here 27 years. It's short-timers like him that give the radio profession a bad name."

It was all in jest, since Nash, for the first time in 27 summers is leaving the local station for another position in town, with a television outlet. And thus ends, on a regular basis, the working relationship with KFYO of the second half of a sports team which had served Lubbock for more than a quarter of a century.

Jack Dale moved to another radio station earlier this summer, but in their day, Dale and Nash — Nash and Dale — fed football and basketball and kid baseball and a wide variety of sporting events to Lubbockites in both regular and competent doses.

IT WAS A picture of contrasts as they worked. From the time a trip began until time to unpack the electronic gear at the station upon return, Nash played the role of roving Lubbock ambassador. Dale, meanwhile, would shuffle along, saying little. . . until gametime.

Then, Dale would make a change more drastic than Superman stepping out of a phone booth. Covering his left ear with his hand (for a reason never revealed, possibly a radio trade secret), Dale would become another person, completely absorbed in his work of describing third-base action, slam dunk, Donny Anderson breakaway, or the last call for the mile run.

It was a master at work, and at his side, Nash would maintain silence, until his time to add a touch of commentary both supplementing and complementing Dale's description.

A FEW YEARS ago, Nash and Dale were labeled Chip 'n Dale by one of the Tech basketballers. Nash didn't notice being called Chipper, he was too busy in an airport telling some surprised traveler from Dubuque about how the Caprock got its name, the prairie dogs, Lubbock Lakesite or how much it had rained on the South Plains this winter.

"Look at him," Dale would comment, "you'd think he worked for the Chamber of Commerce." By this time, Nash would have cornered another unsuspecting stranger who didn't think he wanted to hear about the temperature of price of gas in Lubbock, Texas. Or even where Lubbock, Texas, was.

Dale started broadcasting Tech basketball more than 25 years ago. Nash joined the team two years later. Then, together and separately, they broadened the scope, riding high school buses to Pampa and Borger for basketball games, ranging downstate for American Legion baseball playoffs, as well as contributing to the Humble — then Exxon and now Mutual — Southwest Conference football network.

And, they will be working this fall as a team with Mutual, handling almost all Tech games.

SECRET OF THEIR success must be revealed. They're really very high-livers. Calm, mild-mannered citizens as they drive to church or office. But, once past the city limits, it's a different story. Each will disappear into his own world; Nash heads for the nearest library or museum, Dale for the motel room — to see Lisa (can't afford to miss As The World Turns).

But, food and cards and ice cream and talk of Llano Estacado didn't keep the team on the air for a quarter of a century; accuracy did. Coaches call it mental preparation; others call it doing your homework.

Catching either in an error of fact or slip of tongue comes about as often as finding four-leaf clovers. You just don't have many to tell about.

A few years ago, Dale called a Colorado basketballer Tobin Rote when it was really Gordie Tope. For years, the slip bugged him. Even an ice-ball in a soft-drink cup up the side of the head didn't stop him. The missile, thrown from the upper reaches of Lubbock Coliseum by an angry Tech basketball fan, hit as he described action on the court.

Dale, stunned by the blow to the back of the head, was silent for about 20

Gamble Heads For NY

ARLINGTON (AP) — Texas Ranger outfielder Oscar Gamble was headed for the New York Yankees today to satisfy Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's rejection of a swap announced Monday of four Ranger minor league players for outfielder Mickey Rivers.

"I'm disappointed it happened in the middle of the season. I had just bought a house here," said the 29-year-old Gamble, who had hit eight home runs and six doubles for Texas this season, mostly in the role of a designated hitter.

Ranger officials said Monday's trade would have stood if they had kept secret the names of the minor leaguers, who were to stay in the Texas farm system until the end of the season.

"We were directed to find an alternate way to complete the deal," said Eddie Robinson, executive vice president of the Rangers. "It was unacceptable to allow the minor league players involved in the deal to be named without moving them to the Yankee roster immediately. We could not do that because we didn't have waivers on them."

The Rangers and Yankees had announced that first basemen-outfielders Gary Gray and Mike Hart, shortstop Domingo Ramos "and a player to be named later" would join New York at the end of the season.

The commissioner's office gave approval Tuesday afternoon to a trade of Rivers for Gamble, the only Ranger who had cleared waivers who was acceptable to the Yankees.

In an 11th-hour bid to keep from giving up Gamble, the Rangers got the Yankees to agree on four other minor league players and cash to complete the Rivers trade. But Ranger officials were pessimistic Kuhn would accept the proposal.

Kuhn's office was to give its answer today.

After the trade was announced Monday, Rivers promptly caught a plane from Chicago, where the Yankees were playing, and arrived in Texas in time to make an appearance in the seventh inning of Monday night's game.

Rivers singled in his only at-bat during Monday's 6-4 loss to Detroit. He started Tuesday night and contributed a pair of singles to Texas' 16-hit attack that buried the Detroit Tigers, 11-3.

Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said he may protest the loss, on grounds Rivers was still a Yankee.

"They should never have put that player on the field. If you know it, how do you play him?" said Anderson, who said he would call Tiger general manager Jim Campbell about whether to seek a Ranger forfeit of Tuesday night's game.

FIRST TIME UP — Moments after donning a Texas Rangers uniform at Arlington Stadium Monday night, ex-New York Yankee Mickey Rivers prepares for his first time at bat — and promptly delivered a single. Now, the trade between the two clubs is under scrutiny, and the Detroit Tigers are protesting Tuesday night's game. (AP Laserphoto)

Zimmer Wants To Cry After Doubleheader Loss

By The Associated Press

Things have been perfect for Dave Garcia in the past week or so. For Don Zimmer, they've been perfectly awful.

And Tuesday night took the cake.

"I want to cry," said the manager of the Boston Red Sox.

It wasn't only that Zimmer's team lost a doubleheader to Cleveland 11-10 in 11 innings and 3-0. It was HOW the Sox were dropped.

They held a 10-5 lead going into the ninth inning of the first game, but poor relief pitching allowed the Indians to tie the game and send it into extra innings. Then Toby Harrah won it for Cleveland with a run-scoring double with two out in the 11th.

That gave baseball's hottest club its ninth straight victory, and they made it 10 in a row with their second-game triumph. The double losses left the Red Sox with a 4-6 record over the same span.

"You never know what will happen, even six runs down," said Cleveland manager Garcia, who saw his team losing by 10-4 at one point. "If you would have asked me when we were six runs down if we would win, I would have said the chances were slim. But when I saw it happening, I said, 'Don't stop'!"

About his unbeaten 10-0 record as manager of the Indians, Garcia noted, "I didn't expect this, obviously. But we've got some guys who can play. During one stretch earlier this season, we won 22 of 32 games. If you can do it for one month, why not six months?"

Rick Manning led off the Cleveland 11th in the opener with a single off the glove of second baseman Larry Wolfe. Manning took second on a bunt by Dell Alston and scored on Harrah's double.

Harrah also contributed a two-run double in Cleveland's five-run rally in the ninth.

Cleveland's ninth-inning runs scored on an RBI grounder by Alston, Harrah's two-run double, a run-scoring bouncer by Jim Norris and a wild pitch by Bill Campbell.

Orioles 9, Brewers 5

Ken Singleton's two-run homer capped a four-run third inning, and Eddie Murray hit a grand slam homer in the ninth, powering Baltimore over Milwaukee.

Sammy Stewart, 7-4, earned the victory in relief of Mike Flanagan for the Orioles, who have won 12 of their last 14 games. Stewart allowed only three hits in 5 1/3 innings.

"I said all year that their pitching staff keeps them in every game," said Milwaukee manager George Bamberger. "They get a starter knocked out, then a guy like Stewart comes in and throws zeroes."

Royals 6, Blue Jays 5

George Scott slammed a two-run, seventh-inning homer, his first since joining Kansas City June 13, to lead the Royals over Toronto.

Rangers 11, Tigers 3

Al Oliver collected three safeties as Texas rocked four Detroit pitchers for 16 hits and rolled to an easy victory over the Tigers.

Oliver had one of six Texas doubles, along with two singles, and drove in one of the Ranger runs. Four Texas players knocked in two runs each — Dave Roberts, John Ellis, Pat Putnam and Nelson Norman.

Yankees 7, White Sox 3

Jim Spencer hit a three-run homer to power New York over Chicago for Ron Guidry's ninth victory. Spencer's 13th homer of the year came in the fourth inning off Randy Scarbery, 1-6, following a single by Lou Piniella and a walk to Graig Nettles.

Angels 8, Mariners 1

Dave Frost pitched a five-hitter and Bobby Grich singled twice to drive in three runs and lead California past Seattle. Grich singled off reliever Byron McLaughlin with two out in the sixth to drive in the first two Angels' runs and also singled off Rich Hinton in the seventh to knock in a run and cap a five-run Angel rally.

A's 2, Twins 1

Pinch-runner Larry Murray scored from third on a wild pitch by Minnesota's Geoff Zahn in the ninth inning, giving Oakland its victory over the Twins.

With one out in the bottom of the ninth, Jeff Newman tripled off Zahn, 9-3, and Jim Essian was walked intentionally. Mike Edwards, the next batter, swung and missed at a curve ball before Zahn threw the next pitch into the dirt. The ball bounced away from catcher Butch Wynegar and Murray scored standing up.

Padres Follow Winfield

By The Associated Press

Dave Winfield buys tickets so kids who can't afford them can see baseball games for free. He runs parties before the All-Star game so thousands of youngsters can meet their favorite professional stars, have a cookie or two and collect autographs.

Dave Winfield also hits very, very well for the San Diego Padres. He leads the National League in hitting with a .345 average, is tied with Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt for the lead in runs-batted-in with 81, and his 25 home runs puts him third behind Schmidt and Chicago's Dave Kingman.

His fielding, throwing and baserunning aren't bad, either, if you like understatements. Despite all this, though, Winfield insists: "People just don't know who Dave Winfield is."

Atlanta's Phil Niekro knows. The Braves' right-hander gave up three of the five Winfield hits and two of the four Winfield RBIs that helped the Padres to a 10-3 rout of the Braves Tuesday night.

Astros 6, Giants 4

Craig Reynolds' two-run triple in the secong inning helped Houston beat San Francisco and give Joe Niekro his 15th victory.

"I was watching the scoreboard to see how he (brother Phil) pitched," said Niekro, who needed relief help from bullpen ace Joe Sambito to make his record 15-6 while Phil dropped to 14-13. "I want to see him pitch well. We both want to win 20 games this year and make Mom and Dad proud."

A fielding error by Reynolds led to three San Francisco runs in the seventh. The Giants added a ninth-inning run on Jack Clark's single.

Dodgers 7, Reds 6

Dusty Baker and Bill Russell drove in two runs each and Los Angeles survived a ninth-inning rally by Cincinnati to nip the Reds and give Don Sutton his first victory in six weeks.

Expos 5, Cardinals 0

Rudy May pitched a three-hitter in his first start of the season and recorded his first shutout since Sept. 26, 1978 as first-place Montreal blanked St. Louis to pull a full game ahead of Pittsburgh in the NL's East Division.

Phillies 4, Cubs 1

Nino Espinosa's six-hitter, Philadelphia's first complete game in the 19 games since July 8, helped the Phillies beat the Cubs.

Mets 2, Pirates 1

An RBI single by Lee Mazzilli and a run-scoring groundout by Willie Montanez backed the combined four-hit pitching of Tom Hausman, Wayne Twitchell and Ed Glynn as New York trimmed Pittsburgh.

EXPENSIVE CLUBS — Ernie Fairman holds the bag of clubs which formerly were used by some of the golfing world's greatest players. And the entire set cost him only $300. (AP Laserphoto)

Unmatched Clubs: For Use At Bank

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (AP) — For sale: one set of used, unmatched golf clubs and bag. Price: $10,000 or best offer.

Ernie Fairman hasn't placed such an ad yet, but he might. And he's not kidding about the price.

Fairman won the clubs in a raffle when former President Ford drew his name. The raffle ticket cost him $300. It took Royal Oak Golf Club professional Don Soper and Boys Club executive director Jack Salter nearly three years to gather the unique set of clubs.

Each of the 15 clubs comes from a different famous golf pro and each has an accompanying letter stating the pro had used the club in competition. The clubs are stowed in one of Arnold Palmer's golf bags.

The set consists of a driver from Jack Nicklaus, 3-wood from Cary Middlecoff, 4-wood from Gary Player, 5-wood from Tommy Bolt, 1-iron from Johnny Miller, 2-iron from Jimmy Demaret, 3-iron from Jack Burke, 4-iron from Byron Nelson, 5-iron from Ken Venturi, 6-iron from Lee Trevino, 7-iron from Julius Boros, 8-iron from Gene Littler, 9-iron from Tom Watson, pitching wedge from Ben Hogan, sand wedge from Sam Snead, putter from Billy Casper and the bag from Palmer.

"I'm not much of a player," Fairman said. "I play maybe 10 times a year. I just don't think I want the responsibility for the security of a rare set of clubs like this."

Fairman, who owns a heating and cooling company in this Detroit suburb, said it was the first thing he ever had won in his life.

"When I bought the ticket I never thought of winning. I just thought of it as a donation to the Boys Club of Royal Oak, something we do each year," he said.

Fairman isn't sure exactly what the clubs are worth, but said one collector already has indicated he might be willing to pay $10,000 for them.

"I've heard all kinds of stories. Somebody said a set this unique might be worth as much as $60,000, but that sounds a little high to me," Fairman said. "I don't have any offers in writing yet."

PGA Meet: Time For Change?

Sports Analysis

By WILL GRIMSLEY

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — On the calendar, it's the last of golf's Big Four major championships. Traditionally it is the toughest, the least prestigious, the least publicized.

What's the matter with the PGA National Championship, anyhow?

Once the blame was laid to poor courses. This situation has been rectified. In recent years, it has been played on the nation's finest, most challenging layouts, such as Oakland Hills, just outside Detroit, this week.

Once they said the trouble lay in the original format — match play, head-to-head, sudden death. Too often, the star players — the Hogans, Demarets and Sam Sneads — were eliminated in the 18-hole early rounds, stripping the event of its glamor for the windup. This was changed in 1958 when the tournament was given the regular 72-hole medal design.

This didn't help, either. The PGA remained the orphan child of the "biggies," outshone by the Masters, U.S. Open and, since Arnold Palmer first led the Yankee march across the Atlantic, the British Open.

Meanwhile, efforts have been made to upgrade rival events such as the TPC (Tournament Players Championship), Tournament of Champions, World Series of Golf and even Jack Nicklaus' Memorial at Muirfield, a takeoff on Bob Jones' Masters. All are reaching for "major" status — the TPC and World Series particularly with the nudging of Commissioner Deane Beman.

But the PGA plugs along, 63 years old, reflector of the game's legends, once the pride of the pros but no longer the pet of the guys on tour who now have their own event.

While the late Bob Jones in the '20s was undisputed monarch of the amateurs — and of all golf — the feisty, benickered Gene Sarazen and the flamboyant Walter Hagen set up a little kingdom of their own in the PGA, out of Bobby's reach.

Sarazen won three times, the first in 1922 and the last 11 years later. The majestic Hagen, who was known to appear on the first tee in a tuxedo after an all-night party, won five in the space of seven years in the 1920s, including four in a row. Then came the era of Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and Sam Snead, playing eyeball-to-eyeball thrillers until match play was abandoned to satisfy the insatiable appetite of TV.

After that, the hiatus. The PGA lost much of its flavor. It evolved largely into just another 72-hole tour event. Its saving grace was that it remained the fourth and last jewel in golf's quadruple crown should anybody take the first three — Masters, U.S. and British Opens — as Hogan did in 1953 only to snub the PGA.

In the latter part of his career, Hogan spurned the PGA. Arnold Palmer, on the other hand, remained faithful but never managed to win one, a bitter irony.

The PGA has not lacked for talent. It has been dressed up, well promoted and placed on the traditional championship courses. But it still doesn't get the public's pulses pumping as does the Masters or the Opens. Why?

Maybe the PGA needs a fresh makeup.

Why not return it to the old match play format? Golf tournaments, big and small, are too much alike. Four rounds, 72 holes, final round Sunday on TV. With the same cast and characters, they can become a drone, as TV ratings indicate.

Nicklaus is one of those who believe interest in golf could be stimulated by an occasional change of the product. What better way to start than with the PGA, already rich in match tradition?

After all, that's the game the average guy plays on weekends — head-on, quarter and two-buck Nassau. There is no reason to feel that the format would jeopardize TV revenues. The late Fred Corcoran pushed for years for a match play tournament with use of medal (cumulative) scoring that would carry to the 18th hole.

Redskins' Anthem: Via Hollywood

HERSKOWITZ

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
And STEVE PERKINS

Q. The silent screen movie star who died the other day, Corinne Griffith: Didn't she write Hail to the Redskins? I have heard that she did when she was married to the owner, George Marshall.

—Jane Worley, Arlington, Va.

A. Indeed she did, in collaboration with Barnie Breeskin. The star of such films as Saturday's Children, Garden of Eden and Snow White was married to Marshall for 22 years. They were divorced in 1958. The tune of that stirring fight song, by the way, was taken from Yes, Jesus Loves Me.

• • •

Q. What has happened to the youngest son of Gordie Howe who was so great in junior hockey? He was supposed to become the best of all the sons.

—D. K. Laurence, Minneapolis, Minn.

A. Murray Howe enrolled as a premed student at the University of Michigan, where he achieved a perfect 4.0 grade average as a freshman. Murray said that from childhood he knew he would play pro hockey. "But one day, it struck me that my father was 6-foot-0 and 210 pounds, and I was 5-feet-7 and 165. I realized I wasn't pro material. Murray no longer plays hockey.

• • •

Q. I know the idea to increase the NCAA basketball tournament to 48 teams came about because there's more money involved. But doesn't this increase the chance that a true champion will not be crowned? In that many games, there is bound to be an upset or two.

—Kelly Hammond, Des Moines, Iowa

A. The strong basketball conferences, such as the ACC and the Big 10, were for expansion to escape the two-team limit from each league. Besides, the greatest show in basketball, the Indiana State High School tournament, had 385 teams entered in the first round last season. It has been 25 years since a tiny school, Milan, won the big title, but they all like to keep trying. Little Argus made it to the final four this year.

• • •

Q. What position did Rube Bressler play for the Cincinnati Reds? Did he pitch for the Reds? What years did he play and what was his batting average?

—Frank Gall, Cincinnati, Ohio

A. Raymond Bloom Bressler, from Coder, Pa., was a pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics just before World War I, and he was a good one, an ERA of 3.40 over seven years. But he was such a good hitter, the Reds installed him in the outfield from 1919 to 1927. He ended his career with Brooklyn and died in Cincinnati in 1966. His lifetime batting average was .301. He threw left, batted right.

Steelers Doubt Swann's Claim Of Retirement

By The Associated Press

Lynn Swann says he's had enough of professional football and Paul Krause is taking another shot at it.

Those were the major developments in the National Football League Tuesday as teams readied for the first full weekend of preseason games. The action begins Thursday with St. Louis at Houston and Minnesota at Seattle.

Swann, the All-Pro wide receiver and star for three NFL champions in his five seasons with the Pittsburgh Steelers, claimed he was retiring at 27.

"You're trying to get me to say there's a possibility of my changing my mind," Swann told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette when asked of his planned retirement. "I told you how I felt. I've retired."

The Steelers weren't so sure.

"I fully expect Swann will play with the Steelers this year," said a team spokesman.

Swann is in San Francisco, where he, two brothers and a cousin are suing the city of San Francisco for $2 million, alleging false arrest, false imprisonment, assault, battery and "emotional disturbances due to racial slurs."

The action stems from an incident in January 1974 when, Swann claims, a police officer broke Swann's watch and beat him and his companions around the knees with a nightstick.

The trial opened in San Francisco Superior Court July 16.

But back in Pennsylvania, he's considered late for training camp here at St. Vincent College.

"He doesn't have permission not to be here. I can sympathize with his reason, but I don't agree with his reason for not being here," said coach Chuck Noll.

"It (the retirement) came about for a number of reasons," Swann observed. "A lot of things went into it that I really don't want to get into."

Steeler president Dan Rooney also predicted Swann's return. Nonetheless, his absence apparently irritates team officials. Conceiveably, the retirement could be a way of bypassing the fines that could be levied for being late for preseason camp.

Swann had his best season in 1978 with 61 receptions for 880 yards and 11 touchdowns.

Krause, meanwhile, was beaten out of his starting position last season with the Minnesota Vikings by Tom Hannon. The 16-year veteran safety needs just one interception to tie Emlen Tunnell's NFL career record of 79. He was asking for a guaranteed contract and the Vikes were unwilling to give him one. Since there's not much demand for 37-year-old safeties, it was unlikely Krause's demands would be met elsewhere.

But the Vikes and Krause reached agreement on a one-year pact Tuesday and the defensive back should get his shot at the record books.

Elsewhere in preseason camps, Oakland coach Tom Flores announced that quarterback Ken Stabler, who reported to training camp a week late after asking to be traded, would start Saturday against Los Angeles.

"Kenny has been looking good in practice and he's been here long enough for game action," said Flores.

Atlanta Falcons running back Mike Esposito underwent surgery for a separated shoulder and will be lost indefinitely. Green Bay center Rick Nuzum had surgery to repair a torn calf muscle and also is out indefinitely while Packers rookie running back Eddie Lee Ivery, a first-round draft pick, suffered a concussion.

Saints Linebacker Says Flex Defense Helps

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — One of the worst things that happened to the New Orleans Saints last season may really have been one of the best things that could have happened, said linebacker Joe Federspiel.

New Orleans beat Minnesota 31-24 in the opening game, then got shredded by Green Bay 8-17 in the second game of the season.

After the defeat by the Packers, coach Dick Nolan scrapped the standard defenses the Saints had been using and installed the complicated flex defense.

"We weren't playing the 'over' very well, so Coach Nolan obviously figured we couldn't do any worse with the flex," Federspiel said.

"It worked out fine. Elex Price and Derland Moore are the kind of flex tackles you need. We don't have the biggest linebackers in the league, but they're experienced.

"We learned it quick, because we were hungry."

The flex calls for discipline, with every player making sure his own territory is protected before he moves to assist in another area. Every defensive player must know his own assignments as well as those of the rest of the squad before the flex works properly.

Federspiel said starting with the flex in preseason training camp will make it work better through the year. He also said that having a set of experienced linebackers returning could mean a lot to promising rookies Reggie Mathis and Jim Kovach.

"We got a lot of speed with Mathis. Kovach looks like he has the moves and the intelligence to pick up the flex.

"You realize last year was the first year all the linebackers played every game, every play. The rookies won't be thrown into the fire before they are ready.

Cowboy Duo Dislikes Fines

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — Running back Tony Dorsett and linebacker Thomas Henderson are leading a group of Dallas Cowboys players asking the NFL Players Association for clarification of a contract clause regarding free time during training camp in an effort to ease their fines for curfew violations.

Dorsett faces a $1,200 fine for missing bed check twice within a week and Henderson was fined $300 for missing the 3 a.m. Sunday curfew after the Cowboys had played an exhibition game in Canton, Ohio. Henderson was one hour late and Dorsett said he did not return until 7:30 a.m.

The players contend there should have been no curfew because of a standard players' contract clause that requires a 24-hour period each week free from meetings, practices and curfews. NFLPA attorney Dick Berthelson said he agreed with the players' contention and informed Landry through a mailgram. Landry, however, insisted the fines would stand.

"It's the union's position that on the player's day off it means he doesn't have to do anything, including practice, meet or be subject to curfew," Berthelson said from his Washington office. "The exceptions, which are clearly outlined and understood by both sides, are injured players who are to receive treatment or rehabilitation and quarterbacks who are required to attend coaches meetings.

"Curfew can only apply when a player is in camp. Since the day off is to allow him to be away from camp, curfew can not apply."

Landry said Dorsett's fine was figured in accordance with a rule that allows fines to be doubled for a second offense.

"There is no way legally I'm supposed to be paying $1,200," Dorsett said. "Something will have to be done if I have to go as far as filing a grievance."

Spartacade TV Coverage Improves

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian television crews who will beam the 1980 Olympics around the world are getting a crash course in American broadcasting techniques.

They need it. The first programs of the Olympic rehearsal Spartacade Games transmitted to the United States and elsewhere were plagued with snafus, according to Robert J. Wussler, former president of CBS Television who is producing the sports coverage for independent American stations.

Now, after nearly two weeks of U.S.-Soviet problem-solving in the still-unfinished Olympic television center, things are running more smoothly, Wussler said.

"We had terrible problems at first getting the video tapes rerouted in the studio," he told The Associated Press in an interview at the control room. "The system the Soviets used made the whole process three times longer to edit and package the programs than what we are used to in the United States."

"This is a very good facilitiy, but its newness has caused some problems," Wussler said. "It took 48 to 72 hours the first weekend to get things straightened out. Since then we've made the necessary adjustments and we've put out four consecutive 90-minute shows without a hitch."

Wussler and his team of 39 Americans, including sports commentators Paul Hornung, Jerry Quarry and Win Elliot, are transmitting Spartacade programs five times a week through Aug. 18. The first 12 programs are during the Games, which end Sunday, and eight segments will be shown in the two weeks afterwards.

Viewers in the United States said the initial shows were a disappointment. The cameras being operated by Soviet technicians were often positioned at poor angles, and tapes of athletes sometimes came through blurred with flashes of light crossing the screen.

Will NBC face the same problems next year televising the Olympics to the United States?

"You've got to remember they're bringing in 600 people from the United States to do everything, and we only had a crew of 40 Americans and about 70 Russians," Wussler replied.

NBC officials who visited Moscow last week to scrutinize the situation told reporters they will build a special NBC studio across from the Olympic television center to handle American needs exclusively.

Wussler joined the Spartacade coverage through his partnership with West German businessman Lothar Bock, who set up NBC's $87 million deal with the Soviets for U.S. rights to the Games.

"Our production budget is very close to $2 million," Wussler said. "I wasn't involved in the sponsorship negotiations or sales of rights, and I don't know these financial details."

Wussler said the Spartacade programs are being broadcast in the 20 largest metropolitan areas in America, reaching about 70 percent of the potential U.S. audience.

"The ratings aren't in yet," he said. "We're hoping for a rating of 8 to 8, which would be 15 to 17 percent of the available audience in the 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. prime time."

As for complaints of substandard coverage, Wussler said, "We're not running the cameras but we're constantly advising the Soviets on our needs. They did a magnificent job of covering Sunday's marathon.

Dixie All-Stars Reach State Tourney Finals

AUSTIN (Special) — Scott Smith delivered a bases-loaded single and Phil Edwards followed with a run-scoring double Tuesday to help the Lubbock Dixie All-Stars claim a 10-6 victory over Harlandale National of San Antonio during the second round of the 13-year-old Little League state baseball tournament.

Tuesday's victory earned Dixie a berth in the state championship series. It Dixie will play the winner of the Harlandale National-Waco Woodway contest at 3:30 p.m. Thursday. A victory in that contest would give the All-Stars the state title. A loss would force another game since the Lubbock team has not lost a game during the double-elimination tournament.

Dixie took a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the second inning Tuesday, but Harlandale knotted the score in the top of the third inning with a pair of runs. Harlandale made it 3-2 in the top of the fourth, but Dixie rallied for a single run in the bottom half of the inning to tie the score at 3-3.

Smith drove in 3 runs with his single and then scored on Edwards' double. Edwards later scored on a passed ball to make it 9-3 after five innings.

Writer Says Discovery Could Be Important To TV Advertisers

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Innovation being a precarious pursuit, I'm not surprised that Professor James MacLachlan's momentous discovery in the field of TV drew some negative reaction.

MacLachlan, a professor of marketing at New York University, devised a means of compressing 30-second commercials into 24 seconds. The professor discovered that the shorter commercials are more effective, their messages remaining more firmly lodged in the brains of consumers than the longer pitches.

Yelps of protest everywhere. MacLachlan and his clever technique appeared on NBC's "Today" show, where suggestions were made that the professor was up to no good. TV Guide published an editorial that cautioned, "...think of all the mischief Madison Avenue can get into with this new toy..."

True, there are some dismal implications here, not the least dismal of which is the prospect of more commercials. But as a friend to science, I've decided to leave the negatives to the naysayers, and look at the positive that may come of the good professor's discovery.

First, there is the obvious — commercials will go away faster. By the time you're ready to toss your shoe at the set, the offender will have vanished from sight. Of course, this may be frustrating to those of us who find release in acting out our feelings, but I'll leave the fringe elements to the professionals.

Then there is the possibility that Madison Avenue will someday make a commercial that really says something important, something we'd want to remember. It's possible.

Yes, this is some discovery, professor, and I hope you're not disheartened by all the criticism. They scorned Edison, too.

Motion Picture Directors Lead Perilous Lives

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Motion picture directors lead lives second only in career peril to nitroglycerin jugglers. They epitomize men who lead lives of quiet desperation.

If the picture is a hit — his first biggy was "Goodbye Columbus", Peerce is given a reprieve and another film project. If it flops, he's unemployed and likely to stay that way until and unless he conjures up a project of his own.

Most directors exist in a greater vacuum than do the stars who can lay the blame of a bomb on a poor script, inferior direction, inept editing or subhuman co-stars. The director has only himself to fault.

In the days of the studio contract system directors enjoyed the same security as stars. They were assigned three or four films a year unburdened by responsibility for scripts.

Past track records mean nothing unless a director has a public cult following or a mystique reputation among producers. A prime example is Robert Altman who hasn't had an unqualified hit in years.

In rare cases directors "fail up." They are the men who have enormous hits in their pasts and no matter how many bad films they make, producers gamble on the possibility they'll play back to their early triumphs.

A few young turks such as Francis Ford Coppola (The Godfather), Steve Spielberg (Jaws) and George Lucas (Star Wars) work whenever they like. They've attained god-like status, thanks to the box office.

But the great body of directors live as precariously as Peerce, a bearded man with a Machiavellian look about him. He's in his 40s and lives with actress Marilyn Hassett. He has had his share of hits and bombs.

Hypertension is an occupational fact of life Peerce has learned to live with. Each of his films extracts a year of his time and probably reduces his life span by the same degree.

"It must have been wonderful to be under studio contract," he said recently. "Directors worked every day, making good, bad and mediocre pictures. Today you make two flops in a row and it's all over.

"That happened to me in 1974. I directed 'Ash Wednesday' with Elizabeth Taylor and 'A Separate Peace.' They weren't hits. I came back from England, divorced and flat broke. I couldn't get a job. Nobody would hire me.

"I became desperate. I asked my agent to get me a TV picture because I needed money to live on. The picture was 'The Stranger Who Looks Like Me' for Ed Feldman at Filmways."

The project was enormously successful and Peerce was back in the movie business — Temporarily.

"When 'The Other Side of the Mountain' grossed $50 million, I was instantly back on my feet. I paid off my debts and bought a house.

"Last year I directed 'The Bell Jar' which cost only $1.8 million. I got killed.

"So I found myself back at the beginning, trying to put together a project as I did with my very first feature, 'One Potato, Two Potato.' I can't wait for a producer or studio to call. I have to get out and hustle."

Peerce will begin directing "The Fabricator" on locations in Spokane, Wash., next month with Treat Williams and Lisa Eichhorn starring.

"It's not just a matter of directing," he said. "You dedicate a year of your life to pre-production, shooting schedule and post-production. You hope you're able to project a year in advance what audiences will want to see.

"The first thing I do is work on the script to make it something I'll be happy with. Then comes casting, which can be tough, especially trying to find an eight-year-old boy for a key role as I did for this film. After that, I hire the cameraman, editor, set and production designers, wardrobe and makeup people and all the rest.

"There were locations to be scouted in New England and the northwest. We finally settled for the north country.

"'The Fabricator' has the same good feeling about it, the same light touch that 'Goodbye, Columbus' had going for it. Even now, just before we start shooting, I'm thinking ahead to another picture.

"The whole thing is a roller coaster trip and at this moment I hope I'm on the upgrade."

Analyst Looks At New TV Schedule

By JOAN HANAUER

That's the word from Philip Burrell, who puts together a pre-season analysis of new television shows for his advertising agency, Dancer Fitzgerald Sample. The agency's clients will invest about a quarter of a million dollars in television advertising in 1979-80.

In analyzing the new schedule, Burrell and company figure ABC will remain atop the ratings, capturing a 32 percent share of the viewing public, while CBS will settle for 30 percent and NBC for 28 percent.

The ad agency figures negative prognosis for 45 percent of the new shows — three on ABC and four each on CBS and NBC. Only five shows — 20 percent of the new product — look good. Time was when the television industry figured that one-third of the new shows would make it.

They are the "Benson" spinoff from "Soap," Lou Gossett in a hospital drama called "The Lazarus Syndrome," "Hart in San Francisco" with Ron Moody as an offbeat detective, and law office shenanigans in "The Associates," all on ABC, as well as rehabilitated "Trapper John" on CBS.

Merit Taste Key To Success!

Then along came MERIT and a whole new taste idea called 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And the "low tar, low taste" theory was exploded. Exploded with proven taste in a new low tar cigarette.

No other new cigarette in the last 20 years has attracted so many smokers as quickly as MERIT!

It's clear: MERIT taste is changing attitudes towards low tar smoking.
