Six killed in Dallas nightclub shooting spree

DALLAS (AP)–Six people were killed at a plush nightclub early today hen a 39-year-old Moroccan arguing with his dancing partner pulled a semiautomatic pistol, killed her and began firing at random, police said.

A seventh person was wounded critically in the shooting spree, authorities said.

The suspect, Abdelkrim Belachheb, was arraigned on a charge of investigstion of murder before Dallas County Magistrate Tom A. Boardman about 6:30 a.m. Bond for Belachheb, an unemployed waiter and resident alien who lives in Dallas, was set at $500,000.

Belachheb shot his dance partner twice before he walked to the door turned and fired at other dance patrons as they sat around the U-shaped bar around 12:30 a.m. at Ianni's Restaurant and Lounge, a witness said.

The man left the lounge, reloaded the 9 mm pistol and then returned and fired more shots, police said.

Belachheb was arrested three hours later after he wrecked his car and was traced to an acquaintance's house, based on information he gave when he filled out a membership application at the Italian Club Wednesday night, said the lounge manager, Jerrell Todd. "I can't believe this. This is unbelievable," Todd said. "He was in here last night."

Five of the victims, including Frank Parker, 49, of Arlington, and Joseph John Manasi, 36, the part owner of a Dallas business called European Connection, were dead at the scene. A sixth, Marcell M. Ford, 34, of Grand Prairie, died a short time later at Parkland Memorial Hospital, authorities said.

The lounge manager has said Belachheb was arguing with a woman named Marcell just before the shooting started.

100th YEAR PASSED — Scurry County is now officially 100-years old, and its "birthday" was celebrated Thursday in front of the Scurry County Courthouse. In addition to the Centennial observance, a new historical marker (left) honoring the war veterans of Company "G" was unveiled. Drew Bullard (above), historical marker chairman for the Scurry County Historical Commission, dedicated the new marker. Also shown on the steps of the courthouse Thursday are (from left) minister Randy Gray, who offered the benediction, and Pct. 2 Commissioner Earl (Hassie) Sneed. (SDN Staff Photo)

100th birthday event includes Co. 'G' honors

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

A roll call for the men of Company "G" was read here Thursday afternoon — a tribute that honored both their valor in battle and the 100-year anniversary of the county which claims them.

The 100th "birthday party" was planned by members of the Scurry County Historical Commission as a twin observance. To unveil the latest official county historical marker and to celebrate June 28, 1984 — the anniversary of the creation of Scurry County as an independent entity.

From 200 to 250 individuals attended the ceremonies.

The marker honors "Company G," the Scurry County National Guard unit mobilized here Nov. 15, 1940 for service through five years of World War II.

The unit was attached to the 142nd Regiment of the 36th Division.

During the marker dedication, Drew Bullard, marker chairman for the commission, referred to a German general who was asked after the war which American units opposed his men the hardest in battle.

"He said the 3rd and the 36th Divisions," Bullard noted.

A special section was set aside Thursday in front of the courthouse for the surviving members of Company "G" and their families. Approximately 20 seats were filled.

During his dedication, Bullard read the roll call of Company "G" soldiers attending or the names of family members representing the missing. Those asked to stand Thursday were Don Adams, Harry Chapman, Hugh Fargason, Tollie Faver, Lynn Fenton, Clifford Hale, Lester Hanback, Chess Horsley, Roy O. Irvine, Lonnie Johnson, Maurine King, Amil Kohutex, Carl Matney, Billy McHaney, Robert McKinney, Clarence Meritt, Dawson Moreland, Kenneth Painter, Troy Pinkerton, K.O. Pitner, John Portis, Lowell Prince, R.C. Rainwater, Dock Rogers, Renal Rosson, Charles Stimson, Robert Swint, Wyatt Swint, Bill Teaff and LaRue Williamson.

Master of ceremonies Thursday was Charles Anderson. Prior to the marker dedication, Historical Commission President Mickey Nunley also presented a plaque to County Judge Preston

Kiting contest slated Saturday

Judging for kites created by Scurry County youngsters age 12 and under is scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday at the Scurry County Museum.

To be entered, all kites must be homemade. They can be made by a child or made by a child with adult assistance. They will be judged in both categories.

Kites will be flown weather permitting.

At the same time Saturday morning, the museum will open "Colorful Kite Tales," an exhibit made available through the Smithsonian Institute's Traveling Exhibit Service.

The exhibit includes illustrations and informative texts in 16 panels.

Eleven of these panels feature stories about the history of kites. Others explain how kites fly and the diverse styles of kites from the simple flat kites to the latest parafoils.

The event is the first of three Centennial-related activities scheduled this weekend by museum personnel.

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Walter Buckel, publisher of the Lamesa Press-Reporter, last week told us he had received four inches in two days in his home rain gauge.

Buck had this advice, "All things come to him who waits--but "him" better be working while he's waiting."

He also had this view about retirement: "It's when you wake up in the morning with nothing to do and go to bed at night with only half of it done."

George Dolan, in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram told about a nearby office worker who had reached a harmless age and continued to be playful by flirting outrageously with secretaries, waitresses and assorted other females.

The man called one of those toll-free 800 numbers recently to make a hotel reservation in Oklahoma.

The woman who took the call identified herself as Lucille.

"My," murmured the old flirt, "What a pretty name."

"If you think that's pretty," she said, "you should see me."

Tax plan ready for debate

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas taxpayers with a sweet tooth can rest easy.

New taxes on ice cream and doughnuts are not in the $4.8 billion tax package ready for debate in the House.

The House Ways and Means Committee approved the revenue measure Thursday afternoon as a solution to the costs of public school reform and highway improvements.

House officials indicated it probably will be debated Saturday, after being laid out on member's desks for at least 24 hours.

Senate public hearings on the measure began Thursday.

If passed by both houses it would be the first major tax bill passed since 1971. Over a three-year period, the package would generate the $4.8 billion necessary to fund Gov. Mark White's education and highway improvement program.

However, the tax bill will not become effective unless the Legislature also finally approves the $2.8 billion education bill that has been tentatively approved by a 10-member conference committee. A final committee vote was scheduled today.

Injuries occur with wrecks

Snyder based Department of Public Safety troopers investigated two one-vehicle traffic accidents Friday morning.

According to reports, Ralph Lane Johnston of 2201 41st St. sustained possible back injuries around 2:30 a.m. Friday in a mishap 3.7 miles south of Snyder on Texas Highway 208.

Johnston apparently lost control of his 1983 Chevrolet pickup which left the roadway and overturned.

He was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries and remained there at noon Friday.

The second mishap, also a rollover, was reported at 10 a.m. on U.S. Highway 84 just south of Snyder near the Ezell Key Feed mill.

A 17-year-old Stamford man, Tony Moreno Gomez, an employee of J.H. Strain & Sons Construction of Tye, was driving a company owned dump truck on the shoulder of the roadway when he lost control of the truck and it overturned.

He reportedly suffered facial cuts and brusies from the accident.

Tractor pull scheduled

The first night of a tractor pull contest sponsored by SCOOP (Scurry County Options and Opportunities For People) begins at 7:30 p.m. at the old rodeo grounds on Gary Brewer Road (west 30th Street).

It will be repeated at 7:30 p.m. Saturday also. Tickets are $4 for adults amd $2 for children under 12. Children six and under will be admitted free.

Proceeds will be used toward the SCOOP project to establish a home here for abused and neglected teenage girls.

Mount attack to force negotiations

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A guerrilla leader says the bloody assault on El Salvador's main hydroelectric dam — the biggest rebel operation in six months — was aimed at pressuring the government to accept the leftists' terms for peace talks.

At least 130 people were killed and 40 wounded during eight hours of fighting Thursday when hundreds of rebels overran an army garrison and briefly seized the Cerron Grande Dam, the government said. The dam provides one-third of El Salvador's electricity.

Salvador Samayoa, a leader of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, read a statement about the attack to San Salvador radio station YSU late Thursday.

"We have reaffirmed that the FMLN is winning the war. This (attack) is to make them (the government) aware there is no military solution. It is urgent they take our dialogue proposals seriously," Samayoa said.

Leaders of the FMLN, a coalition of five guerrilla groups, have demanded talks with the government without any prior conditions. They have rejected President Jose Napoleon Duarte's demand that they lay down their weapons before negotiations begin on ending the four-year civil war.

Duarte flew to the dam, 54 miles north of San Salvador, Thursday to inspect the damage. "This attack will not stop us. We will continue to work and fight. We are looking for the road to peace," he said.

Durate said about 60 government soldiers and 60 guerrillas were killed. But Samayoa claimed in the radio interview that only 10 to 15 rebels died. Military sources, who requested anonymity for security reasons, said a dozen civilians also were killed and 40 soldiers were wounded. They said the dead included a maid at the garrison and her two small children.

Col. Adolfo Blandon, the armed forces chief of staff, who accompanied Duarte on an inspection tour, said 400 rebels overran the garrison before dawn Thursday, killing 40 soldiers. They then seized a transformer-substation and took five engineers hostage, he said.

The rebels dynamited the substation, then stormed the main plant inside the dam half a mile away. Their effort to dynamite the control room failed, Blandon said.

Damage to the control room would have knocked out the plant for months, he said.

The guerrillas fled after a three-hour battle with 900 army reinforcements who retook the dam, Duarte said.

The guerrillas' clandestine Radio Farabundo Marti said 1,500 rebels took part in the attack, the bloodiest this year. The broadcast said three groups of 300 rebels ambushed reinforcements, while a fourth force of 600 rebels stormed the dam.

More than 100 government soldiers and 20 rebels were killed in the last major rebel attack Dec. 29 on the El Paraiso army garrison 45 miles north of San Salvador. On Jan. 1, guerrillas blew up the big Cuscatlan bridge linking eastern and western El Salvador.

Gen. Jaime Abdul Gutierrez, chairman of the State Power Commission, estimated damage to the dam at $3.5 million. If the guerrillas had opened Cerron Grande's floodgates, water accumulated during the rainy season would have flooded hundreds of acres of farmland, he said.

Boat captain stirs up dispute

MACHIAS SEAL ISLAND (AP) — A 69-year-old charter boat captain who ferries birdwatchers out to this tiny island off the Maine coast has revived a 168-year-old territorial dispute between Canada and the United States.

"That's our island, and they're stealing it," said Capt. Barna B. Norton, a native resident of Jonesport, Maine.

The 15-acre island itself is a comma-shaped heap of granite and grass whose greatest significance may be as a navigational hazard. It lies 10 miles from the nearest U.S. point in Cutler, Maine, and 11 miles from Grand Manan Island, the nearest Canadian land.

But both countries have claimed sovereignty since 1816. And Norton has earned a living for 38 years by taking tourists to see the rare birds that nest in spring and summer.

Norton has feuded with Canadian officials before, but he said Wednesday he's particularly incensed over a June 18 incident.

A Canadian helicopter brought two Royal Canadian Mounted Police and a Canadian Wildlife Service official to the island. When the helicopter took off, it killed two arctic terns.

"Then they told my son they were there to enforce the laws of Canada against any and all visitors, including Americans," Norton said. "They can't bully me. I'm not going to let them steal that island."

Norton called Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, who asked the U.S. State Department for help. "It was an absurd piece of gunboat diplomacy to send the mounted police in, all in the name of protecting wildlife," Cohen said Thursday. "We're going to see to it that the United States maintains its own territorial claims."

On Wednesday, the State Department filed a formal diplomatic protest with Canada, decrying the helicopter incident and calling for discussions to resolve the sovereignty dispute.

The United States and Canada both claim the island under the 1816 Treaty of Ghent.

Canada bolstered its claim in 1832 by building a lighthouse there. Since then, lighthouse keepers have intermittently occupied the island. In 1944, the Canadian Wildlife Service designated it a migratory bird sanctuary.

Today, the Canadian flag flies over a small compound of three houses, two utility buildings and the lighthouse. A wildlife warden and two lighthouse keepers and their families live on the island.

Hope for a sweating problem

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a sweating problem. I'm talking about sweating from doing nothing, like watching TV. I can't go out at night without sweating under my arms. I try to hide it by keeping my coat on but I sweat through my shirt and whatever I have over that.

I never wear a suit because I will sweat through the shirt and jacket. I don't dare try to pick up a girl at a bar, fearing if I get one she will feel the sweat under my arms.

I've tried all the antiperspirants and deodorants but they don't work. Please help me. It's really embarrassing and I have to wear clothes that don't show the sweat stains.

DEAR READER — While antiperspirants are helpful for most people with mild problems the truth is they don't work for individuals with the more severe problem you describe. Two stronger preparations, Drysol and Xerac AC are sometimes prescribed and are more effective. You will need to have your doctor help with your severe problem because it will require prescriptions or procedures.

You might get some benefits from medicines that block nerve ending actions. Probanthine, the medicine used to decrease stomach acid formation may help. The adrenaline blocking medicines such as Inderal help in other cases.

The terminal nerves to the sweat glands can be cut under the arm. The main nerve fibers to the area can also be cut and even the skin area under the arm has been surgically removed with its sweat glands.

I've discussed this problem in greater detail in the Health Letter 18-2, Sweating, Antiperspirants and Deodorants, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

A device that works like electrolysis has been used in some countries. If a small electrical current is delivered to the sweat glands they can be destroyed. This may prove to be helpful to people with your problem.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is it possible for ear wax to be loosened and come out when a person is just standing in deep lake water on a summer day? This happened to me. I'm 76 and have been slightly hard of hearing. I went bathing and was in the lake about an hour. After I got out of the lake about a half teaspoon of soft wax came out. I haven't gone to a doctor but if wax is produced it should come out.

DEAR READERS — While you were active on a hot summer day the wax may have softened or it might have happened anyway.

You should see a doctor and have your ears checked as you may have still more wax in your ears. That can affect your hearing.

People often write to ask what to do to dissolve the wax in their ears or to prevent its accumulation. I don't think people should try to do this on their own, not even with various advertised products. Your ears are precious and it's better to see an ear, nose and throat specialist first. If you happen to have a damaged ear drum, or other problems, putting drops in your ear may be the wrong thing to do. Let your doctor clean your ears and then if he thinks you should use something on a regular basis let him decide what is best for you. That can save you a lot of trouble.

Doctors get excited, even as you and I, with "what's new."

Open-heart surgery is a presently prevalent operation which may be overdone.

I don't know. Nobody knows yet.

Nor has medical science resolved the debate over how to treat breast cancer — mastectomy or lumpectomy.

Remove the breast — or remove just the tumor.

For physicians, a painful choice. For patients, an agonizing one.

The most thorough and balanced recent evaluation of the two procedures which I have seen has just been completed by the Wall Street Journal.

The Journal discovered that a woman with breast cancer can walk into the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in Manhattan seeking the best treatment medical science has to offer.

But the "best treatment" may depend on which door she enters.

Through the York Avenue entrance she will meet Dr. Samuel Hellman, who advocates leaving the breast intact, removing any small tumor, and treating the area with radiation.

But if the woman walks into the same Cancer Center through the entrance off 68th Street she will meet Dr. Jerome Urban, who considers the mastectomy "the present best cure."

This debate has continued — sometimes "raged" — for two decades, has led to sharp and emotionally charged confrontations among cancer specialists.

Some feminists insist that the male-dominated medical profession is callously and unnecessarily "mutilating women."

In the middle — are the women. 115,000 each year.

However...

For the past five years an experiment has been conducted involving hundreds of breast cancer patients at 28 medical centers. The women volunteered to participate in the experiment.

I will have for you the first report on that research within weeks.

It may or may not resolve the controversy.

Some are certain to argue that a five-year study, in which the most recent woman to volunteer did so must last January, is much too limited for a definitive verdict.

Presently — right now — before these new findings are available — here are the known numbers:

Sixty percent of women discover breast tumor while it is still small and confined.

With a mastectomy, a woman's chances of surviving five years are 85 percent to 90 percent.

Those statistics are based on decades of experience.

We do not yet have comparative numbers for women who opt for the lesser operation, the lumpectomy.

But we will have the first of those numbers before August.

Wife Is Uneasy Rider When Husband Drinks and Drives

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband absolutely refuses to go anywhere in the car without a cooler and a six-pack of beer.

He used to be a menace (drunk driving), but since we've had the kids he usually keeps his beer intake down to one beer per one hour of driving. Our kids are now 3 and 4, and I think it sets a terrible example for them when Daddy refuses to drive anywhere without his beer.

I have argued with my husband about this until I am blue in the face, but it does no good. My only alternative would be to forbid him to take the kids anywhere unless I go along to drive. He loves the kids and likes to take them places. He did have one DWI with our youngest in the car when she was 18 months old. He said he learned his lesson then, and now he watches his intake while driving.

I don't think he should drink at all while driving. Can you help me?

WORRIED IN TEXAS

DEAR WORRIED: Your husband is an alcoholic and should have absolutely nothing to drink while he is driving. You should positively forbid it. Please don't wait until he maims or kills himself, his family or some innocent stranger while he is under the influence.

I beg you to take a firm stand on this now, and if he continues to drink and drive, tell him that whether he admits it or not, he is an alcoholic, and if he does not go to a treatment clinic, he cannot continue to live as a family with you and the children he professes to love.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22 and in love with a great guy. He's 28. We met four years ago and moved in together last year. He's married, but it's not what you think. His wife left him 4 1/2 years ago. I had nothing to do with the trouble between them—I didn't even know him then. He came home from work one day and she was gone with all her things and some of his. There were no children.

We have no idea where this woman is—we've been looking for four years. She has his parents' phone number and address if she wants to contact him.

We have called lawyers and been to the courthouse and public library, but we can't trace her. So what are we supposed to do? Stay unmarried until she decides to surface? After all, she abandoned him, so why should he suffer?

Abby, she could take forever to show up. No one knows what we should do. Do you? We want to get married, but how can we when he is married to a woman who is hiding? We want to marry and start a family. Thank you.

DEAR ABBY: Like "Learned the Hard Way," I have been asked by friends to shop for them when I travel to foreign countries. After buying and bringing back the requested items, I have been told, "Sorry, that's not what I had in mind," so I was stuck with them.

I finally got smart and ignored such requests. On returning from a recent cruise, I was asked, "Did you bring what I asked for?" I replied, "No, I'm sorry. On the way over, I had all the orders laid out on the deck, and a gust of wind blew them all away but one. The only one that remained was weighted down with money."

Sometimes the best way to play a hand is to figure out how you can be set, and then do something to prevent it. Today's contract can fail if the declarer is careless, but failure can be prevented through an avoidance play. To go down one, declarer South must lose a spade trick, the heart queen and two diamond tricks when East leads through the declarer's K-x-x of diamonds. It is not really too difficult to prevent East from getting the lead.

For starters, South allows the queen of spades to win the first trick. West will lead a second spade, won by declarer's ace. Now declarer plays the ace of hearts and a low heart to the jack. That finesse wins the trick. Now the king of hearts captures the queen and declarer can run the club suit, discarding two diamonds and making an overtrick. What if West wins the doubleton queen of hearts after declarer has taken the heart finesse? No problem. Declarer can forget about the overtrick, but the four-heart contract is still safe. The long club suit can still take care of two losing diamonds and declarer will have 10 tricks.

There were two key plays in this hand. The first was allowing the spade queen to hold the first trick. The second was taking the heart finesse. Although this is not the best percentage play in the heart suit, it is 100 percent right when you consider that declarer is assured of making his contract even if the finesse loses to the heart queen in the West hand.

Plant care with new spray can

A new dispensing sprayer with good formulations for indoor and outdoor plants offers consumers benefits reportedly not available in freezing aerosols or cumbersome pump-trigger products.

Grow Consumer Products Inc., under the "Like Magic" brand, is marketing products that can be sprayed on at any angle, even upside down, reaching insects that feed and live on the underside of leaves difficult to attack with ordinary sprays.

The push-button can's contents are not diluted by freezing propellant gases that could damage delicate foliage and flowers.

Vegetables make good conversation pieces

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Spread out on a greenhouse counter at Tony Dorazio's Wayside Acres Garden Center were narrow-necked bottles containing fully-grown summer squash, cucumber, cantaloupe, eggplant and tomato.

How did they get through the narrow apertures of soda pop, vinegar and mayonnaise jars? "Children have the answer more often than grown-ups," says smiling Tony, who attends to many needs of gardeners in Scotia, N.Y., a suburb of Schenectady.

Try some of the conversation pieces. When growing vegetables are tiny, Tony inserts them through the bottle necks, vine included, and there they grow to maturity. Then vines are snipped. Tony fills the containers with a salt water and vinegar preserving solution and seals them. They are shaded to protect them from sun as they grow.

Tony opened a roadside produce stand in 1939 to sell his produce and berries. As his truck garden business grew, he built a small greenhouse on his 10-acre plot, since replaced by a 68-by-28-foot tidy, well-organized glasshouse.

When I visited, the greenhouse was filled with flower and vegetable seedlings — geraniums, impatiens, marigold, ageratum, zinnia, alyssum, petunia, herbs, tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, lettuce, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower and melons. Tony was planting Sweet 100 tomatoes — an excellent tiny salad variety — in flags, pressing in rows with a flat, narrow stick and covering seeds with vermiculite. His wife, Charlotte, works along with him. A son, Tony Jr., also is associated with the family hardware shop.

A native of Scotia, Tony studied at Cornell, did 4-H work for nine years, and reads voraciously about gardening. He passes on his knowledge to customers.

"A heavy percentage of home owners want specialized advice about planting, fertilizing, soilconditioning, insecticides, and plant diseases," Tony related. "At times I practically conduct courses by telephone for gardeners with problems. In critical cases I go out to their homes to diagnose and suggest remedial measures ... We have the area charted soilwise and how plantings should be handled.

Florence was designated the temporary capital of Italy in 1864.

World's journey serious business

PITMAN, N.J. (AP) — Marvin Creamer jokingly refers to his sailboat journey around the world without navigational instruments as "one small step back for mankind," reversing astronaut Neil Armstrong's first words on the moon.

But Creamer's 30,000-mile voyage was serious business, filled with tense moments approaching Tasmania, anxiety rounding Cape Horn with broken steering and the general strains of uncertainty.

Creamer and his crew kept track of their whereabouts by logging their daily progress in three dog-eared copy books that are now musty with the smell of kerosene used for heating during the voyage.

Creamer set sail Dec. 15, 1982, from National Park, N.J., down the Delaware River. After a brief stay in Cape May, he set out to the Atlantic Ocean.

Creamer wanted to prove worldwide travel was possible long before mariners had a compass and sextant at their disposal. He said his seat-of-the-pants navigation had been based on common sense and the stars.

With fewer navigational aids than 10th-century Vikings, he kept time by watching the sun. Cold water temperatures told him how far away from the equator he traveled, and he calculated his speed by watching the waves go by his 36-foot cutter rig, the Globe Star.

Creamer and his crew — a total of nine men who sailed at various times — spent 358 days at sea over the 17-month voyage.

The following are excerpts from the captain's log of the Globe Star. The entries through March 1983 were made by Jeffrey Herdelin, 24, of Haddonfield, who sailed to Tasmania with Creamer. All the other entries are Creamer's.

Dec. 21, 1982

Creamer, Herdelin and George Baldwin, 67, of Fords, N.J., set sail.

Jan. 25, 1983

Just over a month into the voyage the crew had been plagued by storms that reduced visibility needed to guide the ship.

"This is the first check on latitude we've been able to get since 17 January. In the meantime, we've been beset by storms. Cloudy skies prevented our setting a proper course most of the time. What effect currents are having we could not estimate." March 4, 1983

The first harrowing problem. A transmitter used to send messages about weather and ocean conditions appears to have broken down. There is no way to signal those aboard the Globe Star are safe. Landing at Cape Town, South Africa, still is at least a month away.

March 24, 1983

Without a transmitter, the crew sights a boat and used the opportunity to signal that all is well aboard the Globe Star.

March 31, 1983
Arrival in Cape Town.
May 28, 1983

Depart Cape Town with Her- delin and Richard Kuzyk of Lloydminster, Alberta, Canada. Following entries by Creamer.

June 26, 1983
Decides to bypass Perth, Aut- ralia, and head for Hobart, Tasmania.

June 29, 1983

Creamer, who has made several trans-Atlantic crossings, spent another wedding anniversary away from his wife, Blanche, 63.

"Happy 37th Anniversary to us, Brannie!"

July 4, 1983 Anxious about reaching trea-cherous jagged rocks along the Tasmanian coast, Creamer and crew worry about poor weather and darkness.

July 24, 1983

"We have been in gales all day yesterday and so far today. It is dark, it is raining, and the visibility is poor. And we are as gloomy as the weather. Ouch, about a gallon of water just came through the closed hatch as a wave washed over us ... Our gloom is a result of not finding Tasmania by now."

Aug. 13, 1983

Creamer and crew pleased to find course calculations were correct, but timing was wrong as they land in Hobart, Tasmania.

Sept. 22, 1983

Departure from Hobart with Nick Gill, of Margate, Tasmania, and Jesse Edwards of Rock Hall, Md. The first night in stormy seas leaves both crew members "ghostly" with sea sickness."

Sept. 23, 1983

"Dislocated shoulder trying to get jib down in 60-knot winds. Nick popped it back (after two tries) ... Nick managed to make it to watch. Jesse somewhat better."

Oct. 3, 1983

Emergency stop in Sydney, Australia, made necessary when Edwards became ill.

Oct. 8, 1983

Depart Sydney with Gill as sole crewmember.

Oct. 23, 1983

Arrive Whangaroa Harbor, New Zealand.

Oct. 30, 1983

Depart New Zealand with Robert Rout of Keri Keri, New Zealand, as third crewmember.

Superstitions survive among some people in Land of Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Proud relatives gather around the crib of a newborn infant, smiling and cooing. But none will compliment the parents. To do so is not only bad manners. It might risk the wrath of the "evil eye."

In Cairo taxis, drivers sometimes hang blue beads from rear-view mirrors as a good luck charm. Blue is the color of heaven, explains one driver. And in heaven, evil spirits have no power.

Such practices are among a score of superstitions and occult customs which are still very much alive in Egyptian folkways. Some are believed to date back to the time of the pharaohs, centuries before Arab conquerors brought Islam to this country.

Although sophisticated urban Egyptians may scoff at the occult practices of their forebears, many of the ancient superstitions thrive among the lower poor class. A few of the customs have worked their way into daily life.

Take, for example, the evil eye.

For centuries, Egyptians have ascribed all sorts of misfortunes to the "evil eye," a mischievous spirit that thrives on envy and seems bent on reversing good fortune.

An innocent compliment about a promotion or a child's beauty is all the evil eye needs to wreak its vengeance by bringing the recipient bad luck.

During the spring festival of Sham en-Nessim, which follows Easter under the Coptic Orthodox calendar, many people place bunches of green onions around the door of their homes to ward off the "smelling one," a spirit who roams the countryside casting spells on the unclean. The custom is believed to date from pharaonic times.

After buying a new home or renovating an old one, some people dip their hand in sacrificial animal blood and affix the print on the door to bring good luck and ward off evil spirits.

In rural areas and among urban poor, some people are believed to have certain evil, mystical powers. Such people, known as "sakhirs," are believed to have sold their souls to the devil and are shunned by their peers.

Over the centuries, an assortment of "lucky" phrases evolved which should be uttered during compliments to keep away the evil eye. Many of them have become such a part of the language and customs that people use them without even thinking about their occult origins.

For example, after complimenting someone on a new baby, or some other good fortune, many people will add such phrases as "what God wills," or "God bless the prophet (Mohammed)," or even "the evil eye is pierced."

Concern over the occult has crept into the language in other ways too. For example, many Egyptians will not admit to being "sick," preferring instead to use the Arabic word "taban," which means tired. Among superstitious people, an admission of sickness might tempt the spirits to make the illness worse.

In previous centuries, shopkeepers would customarily place placards over their doorways with the name of God or a phrase from the Koran, such as "there is no God but God and Mohammed is his prophet" to ward off spirits.

The custom is still widespread today, even among shopkeepers who no longer believe in the phrases' mystical powers.

Many of the occult customs are based upon a belief in the "ginnee," a group of spirits supposedly created before man. The ginnee, who can assume the forms of humans, animals or monsters, are considered superior to mortals but inferior to angels.

Loafers Glory history tangled

LOAFERS GLORY, Ark. (AP) — You can't get here from there.

Even if you could, you couldn't be sure you had, and if you did you wouldn't find just a whole lot to do.

Yes, there is a here. In red letters in square B-5 on the 1984 Arkansas Highway Commission map. Two heres, in fact. That's where here is now but not where it was, and no roads go there. Either place.

About the best you can do is make your way to where here used to be and get Charles Young to explain. That's Morning Star, a signless unincorporated widespot of 200 souls on Arkansas 14 in Searcy County where Young and his missus run a country grocery. It used to be Loafers Glory, the crown of a hardscrabble ridge suited for little but cattle hardy enough to graze the rockstudded hillside pastures.

"Had to be probably 25 to 30 year ago that they changed the name," Young's wife, Billie, says. "I think the greatest amount of people wished they had left it alone."

Her 53-year-old husband, the closest thing the community has to a mayor, takes a chair beside the cast-iron woodstove. "I guess it was because there were so many loafers here," he says. "Back then, nobody thought anything about it. There were so many loafers. They sat around and whittled, played dominoes and horseshoes. They didn't have anything else to do so that's what they did."

The loafers once gathered in a shed on Young's property, a place with a roof but, for a long time, no walls. The years took their toll of loafers and Young eventually tore the place down. A few yards up the road at Treadwell's Grocery still sits, though disused, the successor, a small building that bears the legend "Coon Hunters and Domino Players Headquarters."

Doyne Watts, 76, Young's grade school teacher, remembers Loafers Glory's heydays. "Back in that day and time, when I was a boy, you didn't have any place to go for entertainment except church and Sunday school. There wasn't much to do after the crop was gathered except gather round and chew tobacco and smoke and tell tales and things like that. And they took to calling it Loafers Glory."

Why does Loafers Glory stay on the map cheek-by-jowl with Morning Star? Because when the state acquired two tracts of land nearby for a wildlife management area, it appropriated the Loafers Glory name. The tracts total 1,400 acres, are accessible only by foot and are about as worthless as their borrowed monicker suggests.

"It is very rugged land up there. This is even worse than most of it," Don Ragland, the local wildlife officer, says. "As far as wildlife, there is very little on it. They do a little 'coon hunting on it in the winter time. But it is really good for nothing."

Baylor researchers find approximate location of eye disease gene

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors studying the female chromosome announced Thursday they have found the approximate location of a gene that causes one form of an inherited blinding disease.

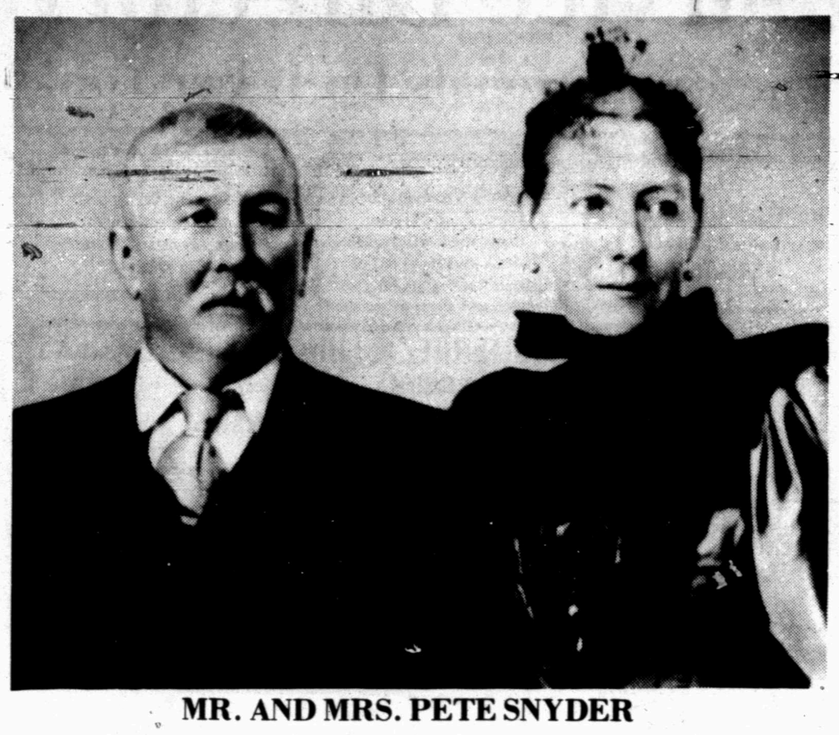

Baylor College of Medicine researchers Dr. Richard A. Lewis and Dr. Robert Nussbaum said their work has helped to narrow the search for the genetic cause of retinitis pigmentosa, a blinding disease that affects about 400,000 Americans.

Lewis and Nussbaum said the defective gene they are studying causes a type of RP called "metallic sheen" and that finding its location on the X chromosome will make it possible in "a few years" to develop a method of detecting carriers of the disease.

"Eventually, our finding may help identify and isolate the gene and may aid in developing a way to correct the genetic defect that causes RP," said Nussbaum.

Pete Snyder was not the first merchant

MR. AND MRS. PETE SNYDER

Most people believe that William Henry "Pete" Snyder was the first merchant to come to Deep Creek. Although he came into Scurry County in 1876, he was not the first merchant to set up a trading post along the banks of the creek which flows through Snyder, Texas.

Pete Snyder followed closely after Josiah Wright Mooar and his brother, John, who had come in October, 1876. Snyder had hauled frieght and buffalo hides for the Mooars and other hunters after they arrived in Scurry County.

J. Wright Mooar became famous on October 7, 1876, when he killed the white buffalo just northwest of where Snyder stands today. Pete Snyder became famous because a town was named for him. Because of the legends built around both Pete Snyder and J. Wright Mooar, others have been left in the dark corners of history. Many of these were just as influential in taming the west, but they were never given the credit for it.

Most people in Snyder know little, if anything, about the man who really started the town of Snyder, Texas. That man was Tucker Cornelius, who had been given the nickname of "Tuck" by those who knew him.

Tucker Cornelius set up a trading post on the banks of Deep Creek in 1877 just one year after the Mooar brothers and Pete Snyder came to Scurry County. This fact has been verified by J. Wright Mooar to J.W. Hunt, President of McMurry College in Abilene, Texas.

In 1933, President Hunt interviews Mooar and he firmly established that Pete Snyder was not the first merchant in Snyder, Texas. Through the years, the credit has been given to Snyder, but it should have gone to Tuck Cornelius.

It is true that Pete Snyder was working along Deep Creek before Cornelius, but he was hauling buffalo hides and freight for the hunters. He was probably selling goods from his wagon, as was the custom, but he had not set up a trading post on Deep Creek.

According to Dr. Hunt, Cornelius set his trading post up in 1877. Pete Snyder moved on further west near Fluvanna and set a trading post up there the same year. Ruins of Snyder's trading post were still visible in 1892 in the Whatley pasture on Sand Creek.

Tuck Cornelius set up business about fifty yards from the banks of Deep Creek in a half dugout. He sold flour, gun supplies, tobacco, whiskey, knives, and other items needed by the hunters and settlers. Buffalo hides were stretched at the entrance to the trading post and he slept in the back during bad weather.

Pete Snyder sold the same kinds of goods to the hunters out west of Deep Creek. He found, however, that his business did not prosper for the buffalo hunters were beginning to vanish. The great herds had been slaughtered or driven further north to the Panhandle. Cattlemen were already coming into Scurry County and were making camps along the banks of Deep Creek. Cornelius was getting all the trade, and Pete Snyder soon found little interest in his trading post west of Deep Creek.

Numerous settlers were beginning to make their homes in the new county of Scurry. The legislature had established the county on August 21, 1876, and many people were coming to homestead land. Among these were Jim and Tommy Nunn, John C. Webb family, Todd McMullan and others who had braved the elements and the Indians to settle along Deep Creek.

Tuck Cornelius came here with his brother, Guss, and they had plans to graze cattle on the open lands. Tuck, however, knew right away there was a need for a trading post. He had one in operation in less than six months after the Mooar brothers and Pete Snyder came into Scurry County.

Soon afterwards, Tuck's parents, J.C. and Nancy Cornelius, came for a visit. Tuck's father was a retired army surgeon and he soon found that his services were badly needed along the banks of Deep Creek. A town was slowly emerging and the citizens needed medical attention.

Meantime, Pete Snyder was still in business out at Sand Creek. He made, however, numerous trips near Tuck's place when he hauled freight and hides. He often stopped to visit with Tuck and to trade with him as he could. When Snyder heard that Tuck Cornelius wanted to sell his trading post, he saw the opportunity for a good business. He arranged to buy it, and Snyder moved to Tuck's location in the spring of 1878 and began selling goods there. He continued to haul freight and hides into Fort Worth and return with lumber and other goods for the settlers. While Snyder was gone sometime as long as six months, his clerk, George Hannan, age 24, would take care of the store for him.

After Cornelius sold his trading post, he moved on to Amarillo where he was grazing cattle. His parents built the first permanent home in Snyder and it can be seen today near the coliseum. Tuck's mother, Nancy, was visiting her sons near Amarillo on September 16, 1887, when she died. She was buried on the banks of the Canadian River.

Pete Snyder had been a wanderer for many years when he arrived at Deep Creek. He was born in Carbon County, Pennsylvania on November 29, 1836 and shortly afterwards moved to New York. He went to Manhattan, Kansas in 1857 and homesteaded 160 acres of land. In 1859, he became a miner of gold in Colorado and in 1862, Pete Snyder joined the Union Cavalry. He fought with the Union Cavalry against Quantrill's Raiders in Kansas in 1863 and 1864.

Moving around was nothing new to Pete Snyder. After operating the trading post from 1878 to 1881, he moved to Colorado, Texas because the railroad had come there and business opportunities were better. He abandoned his trading post site on Deep Creek and moved away.

In 1883, Snyder married Maria Louise "Nellie" Fairclough of New York. The Snyders became properous business people in Colorado, Texas.

When Snyder heard that the little settlement along the banks of Deep Creek was about to be named the county seat of Scurry County, he came back on July 25, 1883 and surveyed for a town. His old trading post site was a part of the 640 acres which he claimed for his new town.

On September 4, 1883, he filed for the land to begin a town called "Snyder." It had been called "Robber's Roost," "Hide Town," "Scab Town," and "Snyder's Place." Now, Pete Snyder would give it an official name of "Snyder."

Tommy Nunn, a man twenty years younger than Pete Snyder, filed for the same piece of land and the Supreme Court of Texas gave it to Nunn on June 7, 1886. People were already calling it "Snyder," because of the trading post which Pete Snyder operated there. The name just stuck and people continued to call it "Snyder's Place," or just "Snyder." It was not until July 2, 1907, that the town was officially named for Pete Snyder.

Tuck Cornelius and Pete Snyder will long be remembered as the two first merchants of Snyder, Texas. The town of Snyder will remind of us Pete Snyder, the second merchant of Snyder, Texas. When we look at the Dodson-Cornelius house on the grounds at the Scurry County Coliseum, we will be reminded that the son of the first owner of that house, played an important part in the establishment of the town of Snyder, Texas. Tuck Cornelius and Pete Snyder knew each other only briefly. Within three years, they had both moved away to other towns, but their influence on the city near Deep Creek will long be remembered.

A complete story of these two men can be found in "Deep Creek Merchant: The Story of William Henry 'Pete' Snyder" by Charles G. Anderson, published by Snyder Publishing Company as a part of the 1984 Centennial celebration. This story can also be found in "Footprints Across Scurry County" which is published by the Scurry County Historical Commission.

WTC theft said cleared

Snyder police detectives cleared a misdemeanor theft report filed Thursday morning with the arrest of a 21-year-old suspect at 11:20 a.m.

According to reports, Mary Olivarez of the Western Texas College apartments reported the theft of a small amount of money from her apartment early Thursday morning. The suspect was later arrested and charged with the theft.

City police also began investigateing a criminal mischief incident and another misdemeanor theft Thursday.

Mrs. Asencion Rios of 3010 Ave. E called police at 8:59 a.m. and reported that the windshield of her 1982 Chevrolet had been broken out sometime between 1 and 8 a.m.

Amando Perez of 1909 Coleman Ave. filed the theft report at 7:38 p.m.

He told investigators that a stereo tape player had been taken from his car while the vehicle was parked at his residence during the day.

In other action, city officers jailed one suspect for public intoxication and one for driving with a suspended license Thursday afternoon.

Wilson listing the first slate of county officials elected on June 28, 1884.

Descendants of these men were recognized also. Those who had been identified included Hattie Gatlin and Eva Nelson, both in attendance, and Ella Snyder Nelson, who could not attend Thursday.

State Rep. Steve Carriker of Roby, who was to speak Thursday, was unable to attend due to the special session now underway in Austin.

Carriker was among six elected officials sending letters of congratulations to Scurry County officials. Anderson read each of these.

Letters were received from President Ronald Reagan, U.S. Sen. John Tower, Texas Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker of the House Gib Lewis.

—Offering the invocation Thursday was Kleker J. Smith, retired Baptist minister. The benediction came from Randy Gray, minister of the 37th St. Church of Christ.

Javier Perez de Cuellar, a Peruvian diplomat, was chosen as the fifth secretary general of the United Nations in 1981.

from 1 until 4 p.m. will be conducted for new exhibits at the Scurry County Museum and the Diamond M Museum.

At the campus facility, old photographs of Snyder and Scurry County from the museum's collection will be featured in the program, "Remember When?"

The Diamond M will open an exhibit by Toni Arnett, a Lubbock-based artist.

The public is invited to all events at both museums at no charge.

Obituaries

Clarke

Graveside services for Gussie Mae Clarke, 85, of Snyder Oaks will be at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at Hillside Memorial Gardens with the Rev. Miller Robinson officiating. Bell-Seale Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

She died Thursday at Cogdell Memorial Hospital. She was born July 16, 1898 in De Leon, Tex. She was a former resident of Ranger and had lived in Snyder for the past 23 years.

She married Willis Hanson Clarke, Sr. June 22, 1922 in DeLeon. He died March 18, 1982.

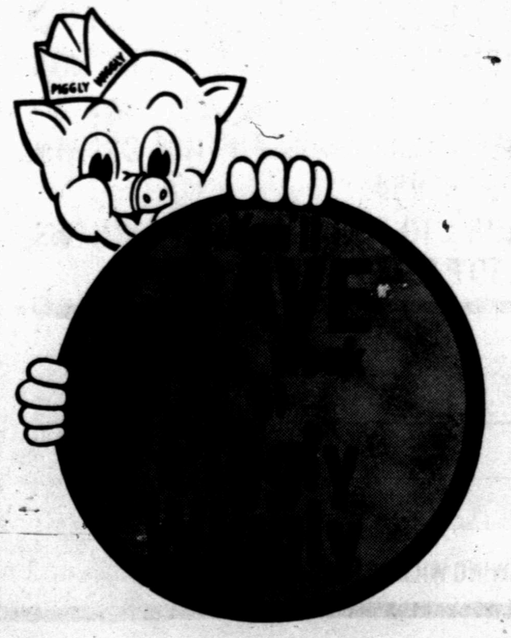

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Horrace Bostick of Snyder and Mrs. Allen Lewis of Irving; a son, Willis H. Clarke, Jr. of Tuscon, Ariz., 13 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Evans goes four-for-four as Boston sinks Mariners

by The Associated Press

Dwight Evans knew he had won the game. Everyone knew that. It just took him a little longer to realize exactly what he had done.

Evans drilled a three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning Thursday night, giving the Boston Red Sox a 9-6 victory over the Seattle Mariners in a contest that quickly changed from a pitcher's duel to a slugfest at Fenway Park.

The home run came after Evans had doubled in the first inning, tripled in the third and singled in the 10th. On his way back to the winning locker room, it occurred to him that he had hit for the cycle.

"I just didn't give it a thought," Evans said. "It suddenly dawned on me when I was in the runway.

"I had never done it before and I guess it's not very common," said Evans, who became the 15th Boston player to hit for the cycle in the 84-year history of the Red Sox and the first since Fred Lynn in 1980.

In other AL games, Toronto beat Oakland 9-6, Baltimore trimmed Chicago 2-0, California cracked Milwaukee 7-3, while Texas and Cleveland split a double-header, Texas winning the opener 10-6 and Cleveland taking the nightcap 7-2.

Evans' home run, his 13th of the season, came on the first pitch from Edwin Nunez, who took over for Paul Mirabella with two outs after a pair of errors helped put runners on second and third.

Orioles 2, White Sox 0

Baltimore's Mike Flanagan and Tom Seaver of the White Sox hooked up in a classic pitcher's duel in Chicago.

Each hurler allowed only one hit through seven innings and the game was scoreless after eight.

Flanagan, 8-5, allowed two hits and struck out eight in his eight innings, and relievers Sammy Stewart and Tippy Martinez, who got his 11th save, pitched a hitless ninth.

Seaver, 6-6, went the distance, giving up eight hits.

Rangers 10-2, Indians 6-7

Rookie Joe Carter, part of a multi-player deal that sent him from the Chicago Cubs to the Indians, got his first look at Cleveland Stadium and the hometown fans liked what they saw.

Carter hit Frank Tanana's first pitch of the nightcap over the left-field fence for his first major-league homer.

The Indians went on to score three more runs in the first inning, two coming on Andre Thornton's 16th homer. Cleveland's Carmen Castillo cracked a two-run homer in the eighth to ensure the Indians' split.

In the opener, Buddy Bell singled and scored as Texas scored five runs in the first inning. Cleveland rallied to go ahead 6-5 in the third, but the Rangers regained the lead for good by scoring four times in the fourth, an outburst that included Bell's tie-breaking, two-run single.

Shriver among those advancing to 4th round

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Fourth-seeded Pam Shriver, who narrowly escaped her second-round opponent, crushed fellow American Camille Benjamin 6-0, 6-2 today and moved into the fourth round of the women's singles at the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Also advancing under the leaden gray skies were sixth-seeded Kathy Jordan, No. 7 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria and No. 13 Barbara Potter.

But American Lisa Bonder, the No. 11 seed, became the latest casualty as she fell to Elizabeth Sayers of Australia 6-4, 6-2 on the grass courts of the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club.

The top two seeds in the women's singles, No. 1 Martina Navratilova and No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd, also saw action today.

Jordan defeated Britain's Julie Salmon 6-4, 6-3; Maleeva downed South Africa's Yvonne Vermaak 6-4, 6-4, and Potter toppled Marcela Skuherska of Czechoslovakia 6-1, 6-3.

Shriver disposed of Benjamin, a Bakersfield, Calif., high school student who reached the semifinals of the French Open earlier this month, in just 50 minutes. On the few occasions Benjamin journeyed near the net, Shriver passed her cleanly.

Benjamin rallied at the beginning of the second set, holding her own service twice for 2-2.

USFL playoffs begin Saturday

by The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Stars, owners of the best record in the United States Football League regular season, open the playoffs this weekend against the only team that beat them this year.

The Stars, 16-2 and the Atlantic Division champions, play host Saturday to the New Jersey Generals, 14-4, the wild-card entry from the Atlantic.

New Jersey handed the Stars both of their losses this season - 17-14 on March 12 in New Jersey and 16-10 last Sunday in Philadelphia.

Last week's game was a "legitimate preview of the playoffs," said Generals quarterback Brian Sipe.

"Philadelphia showed us everything they had and we showed them everything we had," Sipe said. "We have to play well, there is no question about that. But this is a team that has played well when it's had to all season long."

The other Eastern Division playoff game will be Sunday when Tampa Bay visits Birmingham. In Western Division playoff games, defending champion Michigan is at Los Angeles on Saturday and Arizona plays in Houston on Sunday.

The Western title game will be July 7, the Eastern title game is July 8 and the USFL championship game will be July 15 in Tampa.

Even though Philadelphia has Chuck Fusina, the top-rated quarterback in the USFL, and running back Kelvin Bryant, second in the league with 1,406 yards, and the Generals have Sipe, ranked fourth, and running back Herschel Walker, who gained 1,339 yards, the outcome may center on defense.

The Stars, who reached the USFL title game last season before losing to Michigan, are ranked second overall in defense while the Generals are fourth.

Michigan, 10-8 and a wild-card entry from the Central Division, will be in the Los Angeles Coliseum to take on the Express, 10-8, and their talented rookie quarterback Steve Young.

Arizona, 10-8, clinched the wild-card spot in the Pacific by winning its last four games. Houston, 13-5, won the Central and became the only expansion team to make the playoffs.

Tampa Bay and Birmingham met twice this season. Last Sunday, visiting Tampa Bay beat the Stallions 17-16. In March in Tampa, Birmingham beat the Bandits 27-9.

Birmingham and Tampa Bay each finished at 14-4 and the Stallions won the Southern Division while the Bandits got the wild-card spot.
