Election update

Early voting in Midland County continues for the Nov. 5 constitutional amendment election.

Ballots can be cast at the Elections Administration Office, 709 W. Washington Ave., Monday-Friday, through Nov. 1. The office will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., except for Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, when the hours will be expanded to 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The actual election is slated for Tuesday, Nov. 5.

Texans are voting on 13 constitutional amendments, including whether or not a state lottery should be authorized.

The League of Women Voters of Texas Education Fund has again provided a Voters Guide to better enable citizens to understand the proposed amendments. For a detailed look at the issues appearing on the ballot, please turn to Pages 11-12G in today's Midland Reporter-Telegram.

In addition, Midland County residents — not including those within the Midland city limits — who reside south of Interstate 20 will be voting on whether to join the Permian Basin Underground Water Conservation District. That district now includes Martin County and the Knott area of Howard County.

Approximately 2,000 Midland County residents will be eligible to vote on that proposal.

'91's weather: weird

Unusual patterns trick plants, humans alike

■ Is it global warming or age-old vagaries of nature?

By Anne Raver
N.Y. Times News Service

This is the fall that thinks it must be spring.

In September, the magnolias bloomed in the New York Botanical Garden. A few weeks later, the lilacs blossomed on Martha's Vineyard. In Washington, the rhododendrons are out.

But hey, if farmers can water-ski on cornfields, as they did in Iowa in May, why can't a dogwood bloom in October?

"We had rhododendrons and dogwoods and pears blooming at the National Arboretum," said Marc Cathey, a horticulturist for the Agriculture Department in Beltsville, Md.

"It's like the spring of '92 is peaking in the fall of '91. It's eerie. I don't remember a season like this in over 50 years."

Floods and droughts. Heat waves and cold spells. This year has seen everything. Is it global warming, or the age-old vagaries of weather?

"I think that some of the extremes we've seen this year are related to the greenhouse effect," said Dr. James Hansen, a climatologist at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Institute for Space Studies in New York.

"But weather is always highly variable. It's very difficult, if not impossible, to blame any particular event on a long-term trend like global warming."

Strange as it seems, this fall's "spring" is a perfectly natural response to a confluence of weather events, including the past mild winter and early spring, a blast of extreme summer heat followed by rain, and the hurricane in August.

David Duke, Edwards win runoff slots

■ Vote ends Gov. Buddy Roemer's bid for re-election.

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Former Gov. Edwin Edwards and ex-Klansman David Duke won runoff slots in Louisiana's gubernatorial primary Saturday, crushing Gov. Buddy Roemer's bid for a second term.

The stunning results threw Louisiana politics into turmoil. In rejecting the moderate conservative policies of Roemer, voters set up a Nov. 16 runoff between Edwards, a flamboyant Democrat, and Duke, a Klansman-turned-populist Republican.

With 83 percent of precincts reporting, Edwards led with 428,549 votes or 33 percent, Duke had 415,945 votes or 32 percent, and Roemer trailed with 351,943 votes or 27 percent. Earlier the lead had flip-flopped repeatedly among all three until Roemer gradually fell too far behind to catch the front-runners.

North: Reagan knew details of arms affair

By David Johnston
N.Y. Times News Service

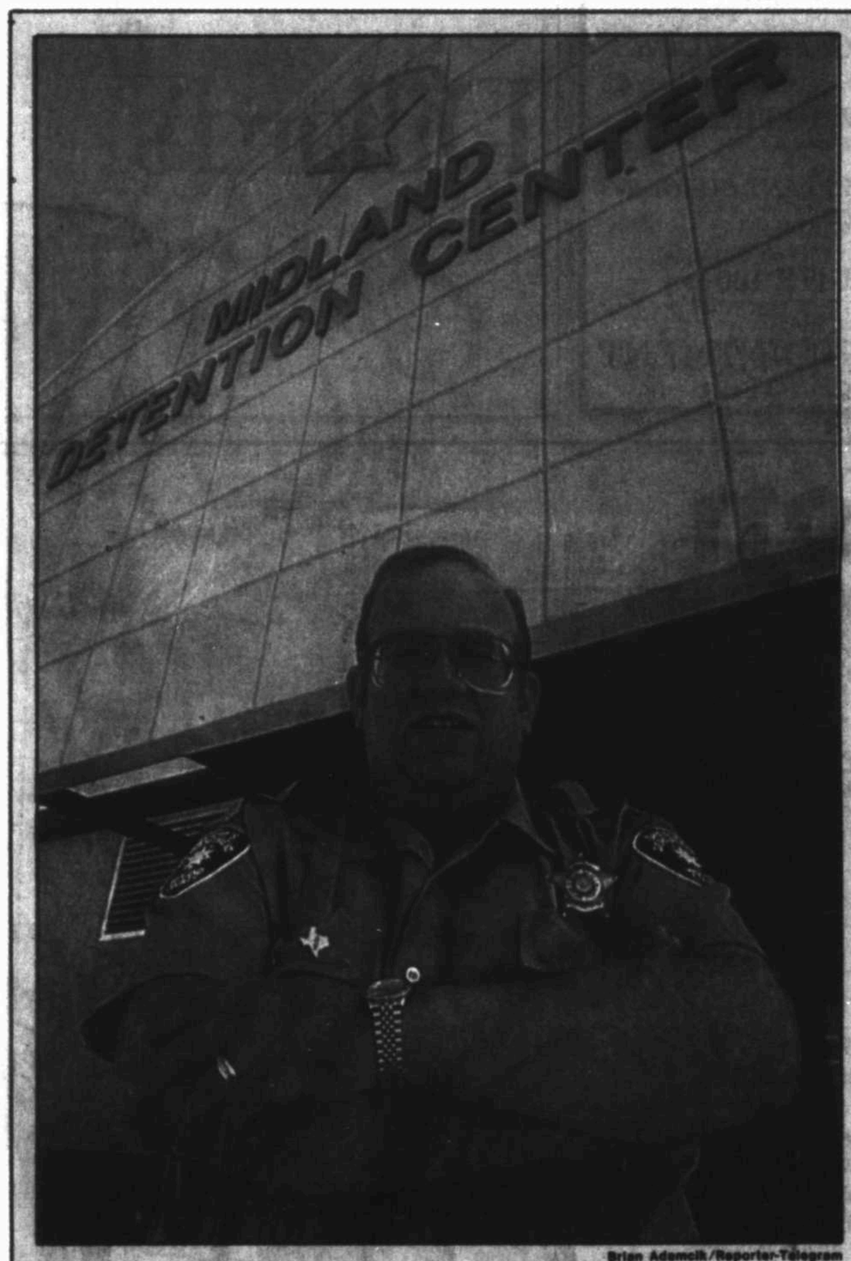

North

WASHINGTON — In his forthcoming book about his role in the Iran-Contra affair, Oliver L. North insists pointedly that "President Reagan knew everything" about the arms-for-hostages scandal, but excerpts of the book made public Saturday cite slim and ultimately inconclusive evidence.

North's memoir of the affair, written and produced as a virtual clandestine operation in which participants were sworn to secrecy, is called "Under Fire: An American Story," and is being published this week by HarperCollins, with excerpts appearing in the issue of Time

Sheriff-court political flap 'dust' clears

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The political dust devil that stirred up more than Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter when the Midland County Commissioners' Court realigned his office's manpower seems to be settling down.

Under the leadership of County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, the Commissioners' Court followed a 1987 law mandating that, in counties of more than 75,000 people, the governing body "shall classify all positions in its Sheriff's Department and shall specify the duties and prescribe the salary for each classification."

The judge and commissioners did that, but much to the chagrin of the sheriff, who, nevertheless, said he and his 152-member staff have "got a job to do, and we are going to perform that job. Even though the budget and manpower have been cut, we are going to work."

More than anything, Commissioner Guy McCrary said, the court's review of and adjustments to the sheriff's manpower chart and budget were based on overall management and fiscal needs and not designed to tell the sheriff how to run his day-to-day operations.

"We determined the positions that we were prepared to authorize funding for," McCrary said last week, "and the motivation there was one of budgetary priorities. And that is our role and that is our function: to guide priorities of activities within county government with the budgetary tools."

Proper handling of budgetary pro-

Baker won't put odds on parley

MADRID, Spain (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III on Saturday tempered expectations of next week's Middle East peace conference. An Israeli hard-liner denounced the talks as ruinous, and some Palestinians were suspicious.

"I really would prefer not to put odds on this or give you percentages," Baker said at a news conference with Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez. "As I told Spanish officials at lunch, we are dealing here with the Middle East."

Baker and his Soviet counterpart, Boris Pankin, announced in Jerusalem on Friday that Presidents Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev had issued invitations to the conference, to begin in Madrid on Oct. 30. Baker met with Gonzalez to discuss logistical issues on Saturday, then departed for Washington.

Some Palestinians and Israelis alike were angry about the conference, the first broad-based Mideast parley since failed talks in Geneva in 1973.

The prospects for the conference are uncertain. The Palestinians want Israeli-occupied land for their own state in exchange for peace, but Israel has adamantly refused this formula

City battles to improve its ambulance-bill collections

Clerk plugs payees into system

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

If you can't pay your ambulance bill, expect collections clerk Dianna Moore to empathize. But expect her to be firm.

Although Ms. Moore may spend much of her time on the phone, talking with people who say for various reasons they can't afford to pay the city its $125, she doesn't mind.

"I'm able to work with them," she said. "That's the good part. I tell them I'll work with them if they'll work with me."

That way, many Medicare patients and those on fixed incomes get a break: They can pay their part of the bill in installments.

"But I have to warn them, too," she said. "If time goes by and we don't hear from them, they don't pay something, we'll send it (the bill) to a collec-

With a new system in place and a number of improvement possibilities on the horizon, city officials say they are hopeful that ambulance bill collections can increase. But this fiscal year, as in the past, the budget includes revenues for only half of the anticipated ambulance runs.

Bob McNaughton, assistant finance director, said budgeting for any higher percentage would be unwise.

"It's unrealistic to believe we would collect more than 50 percent," he said. "There's been a lot done to try to correct this problem, but we don't know what, if anything, the cost benefit will be."

When a local citizen must have emergency medical treatment and be transported by ambulance, he is billed $125. Unpaid bills get three reminders, after which the account will be referred to a collection agency in 10 days.

Last year, almost 100 days could elapse between the original ambulance transport and the last warning for an unpaid bill. A total of 136 days usually elapsed before the bill was sent to a collection agency.

Changes made since then have reduced that cycle by 53 days.

"We really tightened the system and magazine due on newsstands Monday.

The excerpts, which Time made available to other news organizations Saturday, are the first publicity salvo in a week in which North and his publishers have orchestrated an elaborate step-by-step unveiling intended to achieve maximum exposure before "Under Fire" lands in book stores at the end of the week.

North also is scheduled to appear on ABC's "Nightline" on Monday and Tuesday.

On Tuesday, he will will begin granting his first interviews with newspapers.

The material in Time, which represents highlights extracted from a full manuscript made available to the magazine, is largely consistent with North's previous public accounts of his role in the affair. Those were given at length on three occasions — in his dramatic weeklong appearance at the Iran-Contra congressional hearings in 1987, in his trial in 1989 and again at the trial of John M. Poindexter, the retired Navy admiral and former national security adviser, in 1990.

North avoids discussion of President Bush, who is barely mentioned in the excerpt released Saturday.

As a lieutenant colonel in the Marines and aide with the National Security Council at the Reagan White House, North operated at the center of the affair and became its most celebrated figure. He acted as the Reagan administration's covert intermediary to the Contras after Congress cut off aid in 1984 and was instrumental in carrying out the secret weapons sales to Iran in 1985 and 1986.

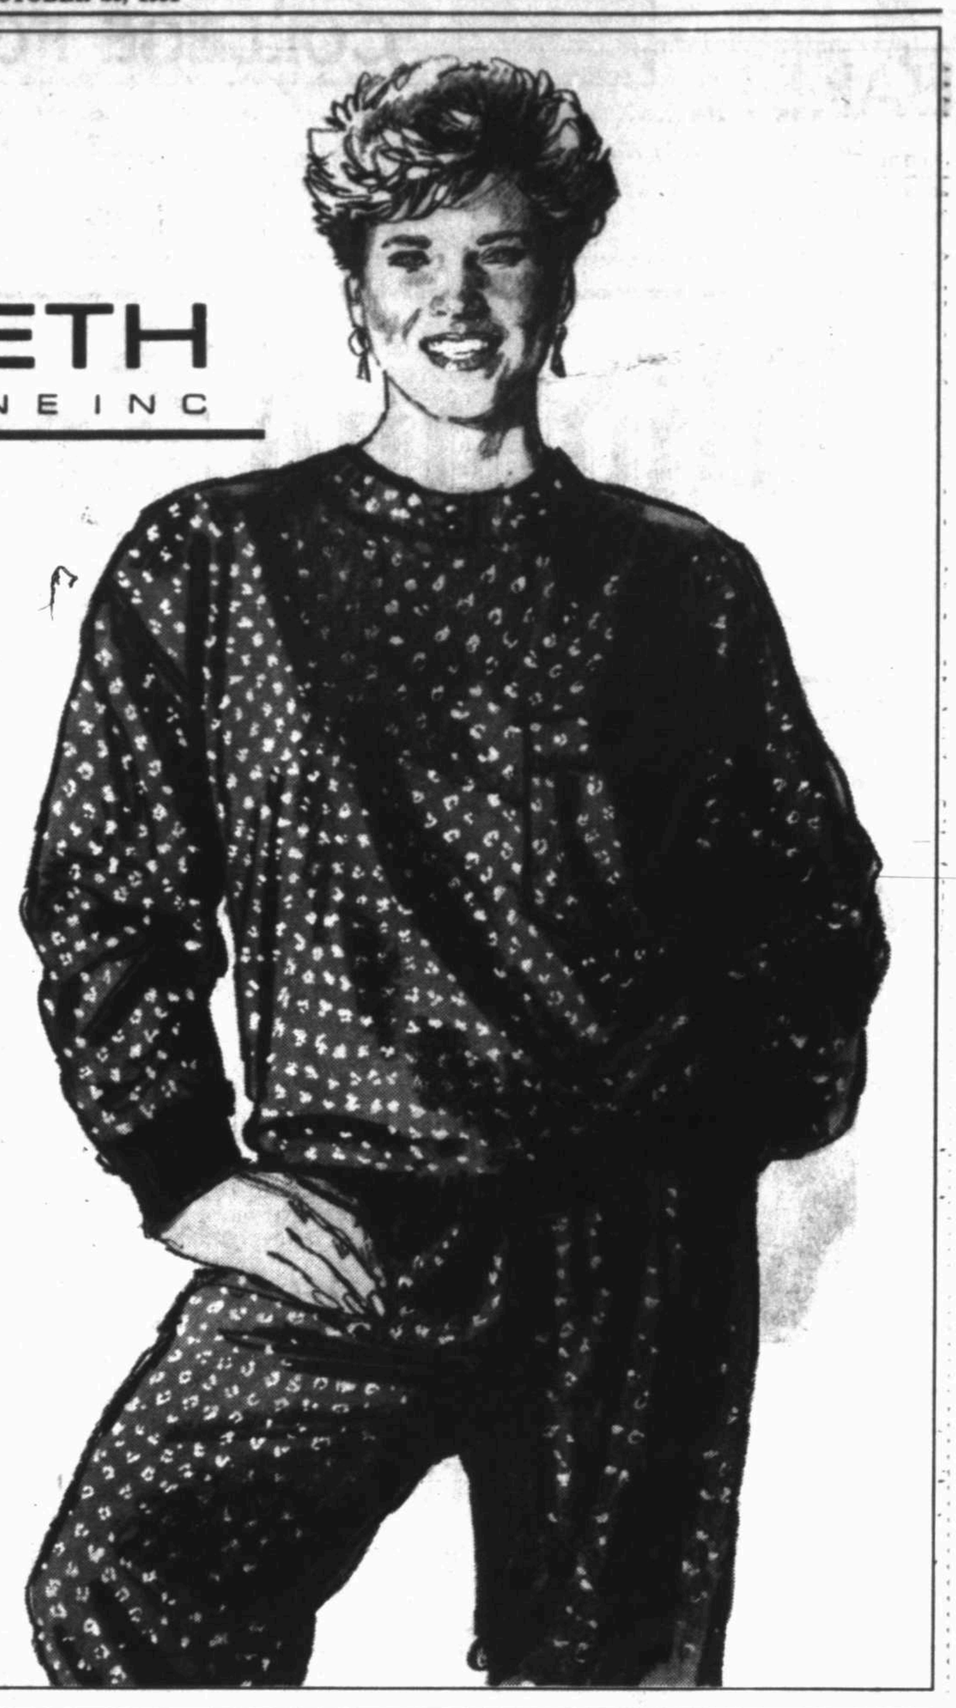

In his book, North writes that "Ronald Reagan knew of and approved a great deal of what went on with both the Iranian initiative and private efforts on behalf of the Contras and he received regular, detailed briefings on both." North writes: "I have no doubt that he was told about the use of residuals for the Contras, and that he approved it. Enthusiastically."

But Reagan has denied that he knew of the diversion.

In a videotaped deposition provided early last year in advance of Poindexter's trial, the former president said he was unable to recall virtually any specific details of the affair.

Reagan was traveling Saturday in England.

as a way to end the Mideast conflict.

In the occupied Gaza Strip on Saturday, the Israeli army detained dozens of activists who belong to the Muslim fundamentalist Hamas movement, which condemns negotiations with Israel as a sellout. An army official said it arrested the activists to prevent "terrorist activity" following the announcement of the talks.

But more moderate Palestinians from the occupied territories named 14 representatives to serve as part of a joint peace conference delegation with Jordan. Palestinian leader Faisal Husseini refused to disclose their names.

Ariel Sharon, Israel's hard-line housing minister, demanded that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir resign, charging he had led the country to the brink of disaster by agreeing to the talks.

Shamir faces pressure from hard-liners to turn down the invitation but told Baker he would recommend that his Cabinet accept. The Cabinet is expected to back Shamir when it meets today, despite opposition from ultra-hawkish ministers like Sharon.

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, meanwhile, was believed to be working to assuage Palestinian hard-liners. He arrived Saturday in Damascus, Syria, and was expected to meet with Palestinians who oppose the talks because they still want to eradicate Israel.

Arafat has not commented publicly on Friday's announcement of the conference but has accepted the talks on the condition the United States pressure Israel to make concessions.

"Invitations have gone out. Responses have not been received. We hope this conference will take place," Baker said.

U.S. officials said the parties to the conference have until 6 p.m. Wednesday, Washington time, to reply to the invitations.

Sources close to the organizers said the conference would take place at the 18th-century royal palace in the heart of Madrid.

Bush and Gorbachev are the only heads of state expected to attend the opening, U.S. officials said.

In addition to the presidents, the conference's inaugural session is to be addressed by Baker, Pankin and representatives of Israel, Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, Palestinians and the European Community.

WEIRD: This is the fall that thinks it is spring

(From 1A)

On Martha's Vineyard off the coast of Massachusetts, Frances Tenenbaum, an editor at Houghton Mifflin, went out a couple of weeks ago to rake up the oak leaves in her yard in Gayhead — and to pick the lilacs.

"It's really bizarre," Mrs. Tenenbaum said. "I never raked leaves and picked lilacs at the same time."

The island was pretty depressing after the hurricane that swept through on Aug. 19, she said. The desiccating winds turned the leaves brown and they fell off the trees before the summer ended. But a warm rainy spell followed, and voila!

"All these new green leaves started showing and everything has this delicate new April look," she said.

Flowering apple trees, crabapples and forsythia. Beach plum bushes with tender green leaves.

"It was beautiful, but it totally disrupted our internal clocks," said Gus Ben David, the director of the Felix Neck Wildlife Sanctuary of the Massachusetts Audubon Society on the Vineyard.

Imagine bittersweet vines with orange berries and new green leaves in mid-October. "It's kind of like 'The Twilight Zone,'" David said.

"Plants produce flower buds for next year's growth during the summer of the year before they open," said Peter Del Tredici, a biologist at the Arnold Arboretum in Boston.

Fruit trees may not do well next spring, he cautioned. It was a heavy fruiting season this summer, and trees were stressed by heat and drought, so they may need a year to recharge.

Last winter was extremely mild, setting the stage for unusual blooming this year in the Northeast.

"I had a clematis, Mrs. Cholmondeley, leaf out in February," said Nigel Rollings, who has a garden in Queens. "It's extraordinary, but it's getting to be normal. For three years now, things have been coming into leaf extremely early."

The mild winter led into a very warm March and April, which sent plants into an avalanche of bloom.

"We had tulips and daffodils flowering at the same time, which is not normal," said Michael Ruggiero, special gardens curator at the New York Botanical Garden in the Bronx. "And the lilacs, which usually bloom in early May, flowered in early April with the daffodils."

Old-fashioned roses bloomed in May instead of June. And then came the heat wave to blast the hybrid teas.

New Yorkers went dormant on July 21, when the mercury hit 102 and ozone lay over the city like a suffocating pillow. They suffered through 38 days of temperatures of 90 or better. That broke the 1944 record of 37 days, according to the Weather Communications Group at Pennsylvania State University.

Winters have exhibited extreme weather patterns, too.

Such extremes fit Hansen's theories of global warming. "We expect a greater frequency of unusual warmth and also greater extremes in wet and dry conditions," he said.

"With higher temperatures, you have more intense evaporation and therefore more rainfall, because everything that goes up has to come down some place."

In Louisiana, this has been the wettest year on record. New Orleans received about 100 inches of rain, twice the normal amount.

Yet over in Raleigh, N.C., it was a perfect summer.

"It was an abnormal year in that nothing went wrong," said J.C. Raulston, the director of the arboretum at North Carolina State University.

"In a sense, a year like this doesn't tell us anything," Raulston said, almost grumbling. "We learn much more from stressful years."

Still, gardeners grow uneasy when the clematis leafs out in February. And it never seems to snow anymore.

"Back in the '70s, you could count on 18 inches or so of snow once or twice a year," said Rollings, who is still cutting roses in Long Island City.

He recalled a particularly warm day last November, when he was out building a deck.

"I was outside with my shirt off. It was 86 degrees. Totally unheard of. In my mind, winters are not what they used to be. They're becoming a thing of the past."

DUST: Sheriff-court controversy begins to wane

cesses is difficult, McCrary said. The "complicated" and "really challenging" budgetary work would be exhausting "to anyone no matter what their wealth of experience."

While the sheriff is appreciative of the court's budgetary responsibilities, he was candid in his lack of appreciation for not being consulted when Judge Seltzer and Commissioners McCrary, Durward Wright, Louisa Valencia and Win Brown realigned his manpower chart.

The Commissioners' Court does not have the authority to tell the sheriff who to hire and who to put in what slots. However, the court does set the deputies' salaries, which range from $20,000 to more than $30,000, as well as the sheriff's $44,460-a-year salary and each commissioner's $28,000 salary. The judge makes $58,164.

The court trimmed the sheriff's proposed 1992 budget from about $5 million to $4.49 million. His 1991 budget was $4.85 million.

"And I'm confident that the sheriff can operate with the resource that he is provided through the budgetary process," McCrary said. "It's just inconceivable that the Commissioners' Court would be considered anti-law enforcement given the dollars we have continued to allocate to the Sheriff's Office over the years, given our involvement in constructing the (new) jail," McCrary said. "It's just implausible that anyone could accuse us of being anti-law enforcement."

In the Commissioners' Court's restructuring, the sheriff's manpower was reduced to 152 from 154.

Of the 152 — which include law-enforcement deputies, jailers, clerks, cooks, secretaries and nurses — 103 are assigned to the two jails, and 49 are in law enforcement.

Of the 49 men and women in law enforcement — which include patrol, investigation, oil-field theft, narcotics, warrants, Crime Prevention and technical assistance — 37 are commissioners officers. Those include Chief Deputy Jim Chancellor and Operations Captain Clayton McKinney.

Of the 103 in the two jails, 71 are either commissioned peace officers or commissioned licensed jailers. Others are cooks, secretaries, bonding and booking clerks, and medical and maintenance staffers.

Not included in the sheriff's manpower chart are grant-funded positions: the two DARE (Drug Awareness Resistance Education) officers, Steve Skaggs and Terry Cowin; the Crisis Intervention coordinator, Olivia Wilson; and the litter-animal control officer, Scott Welch.

What particularly concerned the sheriff in the realignment and budgetary adjustments was the shift of six slots from law enforcement to the two jails, which are overseen by Detentions Captain Richard Sexton.

The Criminal Investigation Division's manpower was cut from seven to three.

Patrol strength remains at 18 officers. However, three patrol officers — Dale Burns, Troy McKinney and Steve Miller — were reassigned to jail duty. Those patrol slots were filled by Jim McFadden, CID investigator; Rusty Hill, CID pilot-investigator; and Phillip Buys, Crime Prevention officer. Buys' absence in the Crime Prevention office leaves B. John McDaniel in that office. CID Investigator Fred Stubbs was assigned to the jail, and Paul Hallmark of the Technical Assistance Unit (TAU) was moved to the jail. Dale Walker, a deputy in TAU, resigned to join another law-enforcement agency.

"I was never asked to participate in any discussions involving the manpower, nor was I asked to participate in budget study" after he had submitted his proposed 1992 budget to the Commissioners' Court about mid-year, Painter said earlier.

While the manpower realignment may have adversely affected morale in the Sheriff's Office, the men and women under Painter's command are dedicated to their jobs and will carry them out, Painter said.

Tim Rogers, the former Special Services captain whom Painter demoted to lieutenant after the Commissioners' Court eliminated his position and moved Special Services functions under the command of McKinney, said his "demotion is the least of my worries.

"I'm just worried about the way the department has been eroded," Rogers said.

"Everybody is trying to hold their heads up, but I'm sure the morale has been damaged" by the realignment, Rogers said. "They (deputies and other staffers) are working harder than they have before."

Brushing aside fiscal reasons, Rogers surmised that the realignment was based on a "much deeper motive," which he declined to specify but which he indicated was probably political.

The sheriff, Rogers said, is a "gentleman. He has always been a gentleman. I'm sorry, but I'm not quite as tactful as he is."

Members of the Commissioners' Court "are the ones who made the decisions" in restructuring the sheriff's manpower chart, Painter said. "It's their responsibility and liability now. However, there is still a job that has to be done."

McCrary said the Commissioners' Court is cognizant of and responsive to the public-safety needs of the Midland County citizenry.

"That (concern for public safety) is precisely why we stipulated the number (18) of positions to be allocated to the patrol function, which is the front-line officers, and thereby provide that initial line of safety for citizens," McCrary said. "That's precisely why we did not do any cutting in that area."

The sheriff was distressed over the court's limiting his authorized vehicles to 40. Beyond those, the sheriff will have to maintain vehicles with funds not in the General Fund, which is controlled by the Commissioners' Court. Currently, the sheriff has about 64 vehicles. Of those, about 24 were bought with his Drug Forfeiture Funds or were seized in drug raids.

"It's a method we can ... use to hurt the drug dealers," Painter said of laws which allowed the seizure, through court action, of drug-related money and tools, including vehicles. "Penitentiary means nothing to them (felons); incarceration means nothing to them. But you can seize their assets."

Additionally, Painter said, "Any fine money goes to the General Fund." Last year, as a result of a sheriff's reverse sting operation, a $350,000 court fine went into the Midland County General Fund, which is spent at discretion of the Commissioners' Court.

In 1992, the General Fund is be funded by $21.7 million in revenue from various sources, including property taxes, sales taxes, fees and fines.

"To maintain the (law-enforcement) program like it has been," Painter said, "it is going to be necessary to have more than 40 vehicles."

A reduction in vehicles is "certainly going to curtail a lot of activity that we have going," he said.

Painter said there has not always been friction between his department and the court.

"When (County) Judge (Bill) Ahders was there, I knew that I could work with the commissioners," the sheriff said. "I could visit with them. If we had a disagreement, we could handle it. And everything, I thought, was running fairly smooth. I could call the commissioners and visit with them and had a pretty good rapport. In fact, I was friends with them. ... Right now, I think there are some serious problems.

Ahders, a former Midland Municipal Court judge and retired Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) special agent, was county judge from November 1978 until his retirement at the end of 1990.

He was succeeded in 1991 by Seltzer, a former prosecutor and private practitioner in law and a current United States Air Force reserve officer.

Seltzer brought his style of leadership to the Commissioner's Court.

"I have the utmost confidence in Judge Seltzer," Commissioner McCrary said despite the "rabid criticism" Seltzer has withstood in bringing a new order to the Commissioners' Court and in taking an aggressive role as presiding officer of the court and as the county's chief budgetary officer and administrator.

Seltzer is sincerely interested in the "citizens as a whole," McCrary said. Not contradictorily, McCrary said that "the sheriff is a genuine person with legitimate motives," but is one who may have been "ill-advised" on some law-enforcement related issues.

"I support his (Judge Seltzer's) leadership," McCrary said. "I am very supportive. But, at the same time, no one should assume that any member of the court is a 'yes man' to his positions."

tion agency."

Ms. Moore said the constant challenge makes her job interesting. The city of Midland has streamlined its collections system, hoping to improve upon the current average — 50 percent of bills go unpaid.

Moore

"I love my job," Ms. Moore said. "I've found my niche."

Her supervisor, Assistnant Finance Director Bob McNaughton, credits Ms. Moore, on the job only six weeks, with a continuing commitment to improve the system.

"This is not a static business," McNaughton said. "It's constantly changing and you have to want to keep improving on what you've done."

Ms. Moore said her past experience comes in handy. While living in Hobbs, N.M., she was certified as an emergency medical technician.

"I didn't have to do it, It was just something I wanted to do," Ms. Moore said. Now, she knows the terminology.

"When I get a report, I know what they're saying and I can put it in laymen's terms."

A former job in the office of an eye doctor helped her understand how Medicare and Medicaid systems function, a frequent source of clients' questions.

"There are days my phone rings non-stop," Ms. Moore said. "Then there are days it's slow." She said telephone contact is a boon to the system's effectiveness.

"I think it helps them to have someone there on the line, more than seeing a bill," Ms. Moore said.

That "someone on the line" said she'll stay at her post for a while. The Bowling Green, Ohio, native said the job has turned out to be a combination of a lot of her interests.

"I like the research. I enjoy the medical field," she said. "And I enjoy working with people."

PRIMARY: Results throw La. politics into turmoil

(From 1A)

GOP's nominee, was a distant fourth with 67,752 votes or 5 percent. Eight other candidates divided the remainder.

Before the pattern became clear Roemer had sounded wary, telling supporters at his headquarters in Shreveport. "... We knew it would be tight all the way." He added his thanks to "the people of this state for the last four years. We've made a lot of progress and as long as I live and how ever long I'm governor, it's been awesome."

Edwards said it appeared from his projections that he and Duke would be in the runoff.

"If it turns out that way, I just want to thank the wonderful people of Louisiana for giving me another chance," he said at his New Orleans headquarters.

Duke, at his headquarters in suburban New Orleans, predicted victory as he moved ahead in the early going.

"Any time the incumbent doesn't run first or run second in any race, they're in trouble," he said. "I think the momentum has gone to our campaign, the grass roots campaign."

In Louisiana, all candidates run in the same primary and the top two finishers meet in a runoff, unless the leader wins a majority.

Roemer had hoped to heavily carry the metropolitan areas of Shreveport, Baton Rouge, Lafayette and Lake Charles, but with more than half the precincts reporting, he was leading there by only a few thousand votes.

Edwards led as expected in New Orleans itself, which has a majority black population.

COLLECTIONS: City officials cite improvement got control over it," McNaughton said. He and his staff, working with Assistant Fire Chief Ray Sprague, cut down the time it took for EMS reports to reach their office.

He said data processing clerk Ann Long completely re-wrote the receivables system to make billing more prompt, shortening the cycle and printing out ambulance bills two times a week, twice as often as had been the practice.

"We're hoping by getting the bills out faster, people will be more likely to remember the good service they got. They might remember that they really needed help and these guys came to help them," McNaughton said.

With the hiring of EMS Clerk Dianna Moore on Sept. 1, the city made further strides, McNaughton said.

"Not a day goes by that she doesn't come up with something new," he said. "She's always trying to think of ways to make it easier and cheaper to collect these bills."

The city changed collection agencies, choosing Transworld Systems, a national firm with a local office in El Paso. With the idea that two is better than one, officials now are considering using a local firm as well.

Even At-large City Councilman John Castro, self-described watchdog of ambulance bill collections, said great improvements have been made in the system.

"But the things we're doing now, we should have been doing a long time ago," Castro said. He said he's not satisfied with a 50 percent collection rate.

"I want this process to show a dollar trend upward," Castro said. "These uncollected bills, someone's got to pay for them, and ultimately it's going to be the taxpayer."

Over the last five years, uncollected ambulance accounts have averaged $136,929 annually, with uncollected bills hovering between 45-50 percent. Fiscal year 1990 saw a high in collections of 55 percent.

But city officials have estimated 50 percent collections from fiscal year 1991 bills, which would result in a $187,000 revenue loss. For 1992, they have estimated little change.

There are likely many reasons people don't pay their ambulance bills, including the real financial inability to do so. The cost of an ambulance ride increased Jan. 1 by $50 to its current $125.

Problems with a complicated Medicare and Medicaid patient reimbursement system plagues the process, as well.

Medicare currently reimburses the city for only about two-thirds of its fee. So the patient gets the bill for the rest, and may be unable to pay.

Based on the emergency medical staff's qualifications and skills, finance staffers have applied to Medicare for a reimbursement increase, which may become a reality within a few months.

Whatever the cost, ambulances must continue to answer increasing numbers of calls. Runs so far this year total 408, up 34 from the same period of 1990.

Even unnecessary or excessive ambulance calls must be answered, and the cost, if not paid, must be absorbed by city coffers and ultimately, the taxpayers.

"We have a moral obligation to provide this service, and we've got to realize a certain segment of the population is going to be physically, simply unable to pay," McNaughton said. "We've got to be realistic."

Castro said he's hopeful the situation will improve.

"Finally we've put a plan together," he said. "In past years, I don't think we even tried. Now we've got this going and I want to see an increase. I expect to see a new trend."

Iraqis arming Kurdish groups, sources say

SILOPI, Turkey (NYT) — The Iraqi government is arming and supplying the Kurdish separatist movement in southeastern Turkey in apparent retaliation for Turkey's close cooperation with allied forces during the Persian Gulf war, according to Turkish officials, Western diplomats and Iraqi Kurdish leaders.

There has been an increase in the number of armed clashes in the southeast and a qualitative leap in both the tactics of rebel fighters and the caliber of the weapons they now use against Turkish soldiers, these officials said.

"A year ago they were little more than a rag-tag terrorist band," a Western diplomat said of the Kurds. "Now they have become a viable guerrilla army. Saddam Hussein sees the guerrilla movement as very useful, as a wonderful vehicle for paying Turkey back."

Baghdad's support for the rebels appears to represent the first serious instance of Iraqi meddling beyond its borders since American-led forces reversed the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait in the gulf war.

The development also seems to reflect the harshly calculated expediency of the Iraqi president, Saddam, who remains at odds with the minority Kurds within his own borders even as he is arming those in Turkey.

Saddam's suppression of a Kurdish revolt after the gulf war touched off a huge exodus of refugees into neighboring Turkey and Iran, prompting allied forces to set up a security zone in northern Iraq to insure the Kurds' safe return.

A skeletal allied military mission remains in northern Iraq to monitor the security zone and coordinate relief efforts.

The increase in fighting in Turkey resulting from the rebels' newly supplied arms has prompted the Turkish government to step up a counterinsurgency effort in the southeast that has long run afoul of human rights groups for alleged atrocities, including torture and political assassination.

With the approach of Turkish parliamentary elections on Sunday, political meetings of the Kurdish party that supports the rebels, including a rally on Friday in the border town of Silopi, have often turned violent, with the security forces firing on crowds.

The seven-year-old rebel organization in Turkey, which operates out of sanctuaries just inside Iraq, is clustered around a Marxist-oriented group called the Kurdish Workers Party.

Before the gulf war it was more of a nuisance than a security threat. But in the last year, Iraq has allowed the group to honeycomb the razor-backed Cudi Mountains with bases and camps, these officials contend.

The Iraqis have also outfitted rebel bands with heavy weapons, including 120 mortars and antiaircraft guns, according to Kurdish leaders who have visited the camps and Turkish officials.

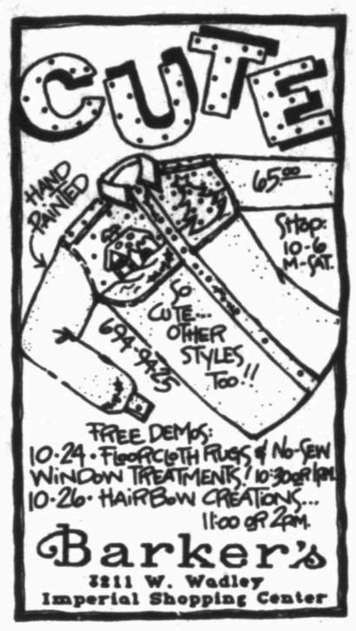

"It is amazing to see what they have now," said the leader of an Iraqi Kurdish group, which is at odds with the Kurdish group in Turkey. "There is nothing they do not lack."

Convoy encounters mortars in rescue bid

CITYLINE - 560-2400; NEWS - 1210

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A relief convoy came under mortar fire and one of its vehicles hit a land mine Saturday as it evacuated scores of seriously wounded people from a besieged Croatian city. Two nurses were reported badly hurt.

But despite orders to both federal and Croatian forces to observe a cease-fire — the 10th such bid to halt the fighting — each side accused the other of continued shelling around the medieval Adriatic port of Dubrovnik.

Heavy rocket and artillery attacks also were reported in the eastern Croatian towns of Osijek and Nova Gradiska on Saturday morning, Croatian radio said.

More than 1,000 people have died in the fighting that began after Croatia declared independence June 25. All previous cease-fires have failed to arrest the fighting by Croatians against ethnic Serbs and the federal army.

In New York, U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance, who helped negotiate the latest truce, briefed U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar on the situation. Afterward, he voiced pessimism.

"It's clear that time is running out, and running out rapidly," said Vance, who was secretary of state in the Carter administration.

Meanwhile, a promised federal withdrawal from the secessionist republic of Slovenia, which was supposed to have been completed by Friday, was put off by a week, mainly because Croatia did not want the 3,000 federal troops to leave via its territory, news reports said. A first batch of 1,200 federal soldiers was to leave Slovenia on Monday, the reports said.

Croatia seeks a similar withdrawal of Serbian-dominated federal forces. But Serbia says the troops are needed to protect the 600,000 ethnic Serbs in the republic.

Federal and Croatian military leaders held talks in Zagreb Saturday night, European Community spokesman Simon Smits said there. There were "indications" the army would withdraw from Croatia and that the two sides would meet again Sunday to discuss a timetable, he added.

In the Croatian city of Vukovar, near the Serbian border, mortar shells rained down around a 12-vehicle relief convoy escorted by EC monitors as it prepared to leave with more than 100 badly wounded people, said Joanne Sotirchu, a coordinator for the relief group Doctors Without Borders.

She said she had no reports of injuries from the shelling.

A few miles outside Vukovar, the convoy was met by an escort of federal army troops, who searched the vehicles and changed its route, citing safety concerns, Sotirchu said.

It was on that new route that one car in the convoy drove over a land mine that exploded, injuring the two nurses, the spokeswoman told reporters in a village just west of Vinkovci, where a field hospital has been set up and was awaiting the wounded.

Another spokeswoman for Doctors Without Borders, Anne-Marie Huby in Zagreb, identified the two nurses as Gislaine Jacquier of Switzerland and Fabienne Schmidt of Luxembourg. She said one suffered broken legs, the other a concussion as they were thrown from the truck. Jacquier did not know who suffered which injury.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said they were taken to a military hospital in Belgrade.

Later the convoy became stuck in the mud for hours near Petrovci, a village south of Vukovar. But the convoy began moving again Saturday night, heading south toward the main Zagreb-Belgrade highway, Smits said. Doctors and hospitals along the route were prepared to take some of the wounded.

U.S. to remove weapons from South Korea

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The United States plans to withdraw all nuclear bombs from South Korea, Bush administration officials said Saturday. That would mean no nuclear weapons would remain in that country.

The officials said the step would be taken in part to persuade North Korea to permit international inspection of its nuclear plants and in part because the American military believes the bombs are no longer necessary to defend South Korea.

The decision, which an official said was made in consultation with the South Korean government, was first reported Saturday by The Washington Post.

In accordance with the Sept. 27 announcement by President Bush that he intended to slash the American nuclear arsenal around the world, all land-based and sea-based tactical nuclear weapons now in South Korea were already scheduled to be removed.

Hostage-release process gets a boost

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Army and defense officials announced Saturday night that Israel has received conclusive information that infantryman Yosef Fink, captured in Lebanon in 1986, is dead.

The information, believed to include clearer pictures that allow rabbinical authorities to surely identify Fink's remains, is further indication that the United Nations-mediated process of seeking the release of all hostages, prisoners and remains in Lebanon and Israel is moving forward again, diplomats said.

Due to the new information concerning Fink, which was supposed to have been made available more than a month ago, Israel will make the next move by releasing more Lebanese prisoners, officials in Jerusalem said Saturday.

Israel's next step was described as "something very modest" rather than dramatic, which will come in the next several days as U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar attempts to establish a formal step-by-step process to free all hostages and prisoners.

Last month Israel had said it would not release any more prisoners or hostages until hostage- and prisoner-holders in Lebanon had provided conclusive evidence that Fink was dead and about the fate of Israeli navigator Ron Arad, whose plane was shot down on Oct. 16, 1986.

But due to Perez de Cuellar's intense efforts to push the hostage-release process forward again, Israel will respond to the information concerning Fink, and hope that will lead to information about Arad, diplomats said.

More than a month ago, Israel released 51 Lebanese from a prison in South Lebanon that is under the control of Israel's proxy, the South Lebanon Army (SLA). Israel also returned to Lebanon the remains of nine Lebanese guerrillas who had been buried in Israel itself.

That action came in exchange for definitive information that showed infantryman Rahamim Alsheikh, Fink's cohort, was dead, and for evidence of Fink's fate. Because the evidence concerning Fink was inconclusive to the rabbis, and because no further information about him was provided as promised, the Israel end of the hostage-release process stalled.

The remains of Alsheikh and Fink are believed to be in the hands of Hizbollah, or Party of God, the umbrella group holding Western hostages in Lebanon.

After it releases more prisoners, probably within the next week or so, Israel expects to receive the bodies of Alsheikh and Fink, while awaiting news about Arad, officials said.

Three other Israelis, members of a tank crew captured on June 11, 1982, during Israel's invasion of Lebanon, are thought to be dead. They are believed to have been captured by a pro-Syrian Palestinian splinter group.

Senate votes to allow trial

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru's Senate voted Saturday to strip former President Alan Garcia of immunity from prosecution, clearing the way for trial on charges he embezzled state funds.

It is the first time in the republic's 170-year history that a former president will be prosecuted. The vote also was seen as a heavy rebuke of Garcia's performance.

By a 38-17 vote, the Senate decided that congressional investigators have gathered enough evidence against Garcia that his case should be turned over to the courts. Garcia is accused of stealing up to $500,000 in public funds and diverting them for his personal use.

Cambodian treaty to be signed

N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — After tortuous negotiations, Cambodia's four warring factions have at last agreed to sign a peace accord here on Wednesday to end their 13-year conflict and prepare the devastated nation for free elections.

The agreement will require the United Nations to play perhaps its biggest peacekeeping role ever, with thousands of foreign soldiers and civilians due to assume responsibility for monitoring a cease-fire, disarming combatants, organizing elections and insuring that they are fair.

Indeed, more than in any other country where the United Nations has tried to settle a bitter internal conflict with foreign ramifications, the organization will effectively co-govern Cambodia, sharing power with a coalition of the four factions until a new government is elected.

The accord is seen as a another fruit of closer cooperation between Washington and Moscow and other changes in the international climate that have already resulted in solutions, or progress towards settlement, of disputes in Namibia, Angola, Afghanistan and El Salvador.

In this case, the United States, the Soviet Union and China all played a pivotal role by supervising negotiations and nudging their respective political clients in Cambodia to accept the risks of democracy over continuation of a war that none seemed likely to win.

But the deep distrust dividing the Phnom Penh government and its three guerrilla enemies was still evident even as delegates from 19 countries gathered here for a conference on Cambodia that is to begin on Monday and culminate with the expected signature of the peace accord on Wednesday.

Powerful quake rocks India border

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A powerful earthquake centered in the Himalayan foothills rocked the Nepalese-Indian border area Sunday and shook this capital city 250 miles away. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

The quake, measuring at least 6.1 on the Richter scale, was felt in New Delhi at 2:53 a.m., or 5:23 p.m. EDT Saturday.

The largest town near the quake's center was Almora, about 30 miles west of Nepal and 175 miles north of New Delhi in a rugged, mountainous region of scattered towns and villages.

The area was difficult to get to and communications are shaky, so reports on damage were not immediately available.

Associated Press reporter Earleen Fisher in New Delhi said she was awakened as the quake rattled the Indian capital.

"The bed just started moving across the floor. The ceiling lights were swinging like pendulums," she said. There were no immediate signs of damage in the capital.

The temblor knocked out electricity to at least one neighborhood in New Delhi, and servants in the upperclass area, many of whom sleep on cots in alleyways, leaped to their feet and began crying out to each other. Dogs barked and babies cried.

India's Seismology Department said the quake measured at 6.1 on the Richter scale, but the U.S. Geological Survey in Washington said its preliminary measurement put the quake at 7.1.

A reading of 6 constitutes a severe earthquake, and a quake of a magnitude of 7 or higher is considered major and capable of widespread, heavy damage in populated areas.

Book claims Israel has 300 or more warheads

NEW YORK (AP) — Israel possesses a nuclear weapons arsenal far larger than the United States has suspected and has gone on full nuclear alert three times in the past, according to a new book.

"The Samson Option," by investigative reporter Seymour Hersh, is to be published Sunday. The New York Times reported on the book Sunday.

Hersh writes that Israel now possesses 300 or more nuclear warheads mounted on artillery shells, in land mines in the occupied Golan Heights and on missiles. Israel also has hundreds of low-yield neutron warheads — weapons designed to kill people but leave property undamaged, he says.

U.S. intelligence estimates Israel has fewer than 100 weapons, the Times reported.

"America's policy toward the Israeli arsenal was not just one of benign neglect; it was a conscious policy of ignoring reality," Hersh wrote.

Hersh also says the Israelis have gone on full nuclear alert — meaning nuclear missiles were wheeled out of silos and put on launchers — three times: twice during the 1973 Arab-Israeli War and once this year when Israel was under attack by Iraq.

Israel has never acknowledged that it possesses nuclear weapons, although the United States and other countries have long maintained it does.

Other authors have written about Israel's nuclear program, but the Times said many of Hersh's specific allegations are new. The newspaper said it interviewed officials and experts in the United States who corroborated Hersh's allegations.

Company won't recall baby food

NEW YORK (NYT)— Worried consumers flooded hot lines with calls for advice on food poisoning and spoke of their fears in interviews Saturday as chemists tried to identify a caustic substance in a jar of baby food that had apparently been tampered with at an East Harlem bodega and was fed to an infant who became critically ill.

Officials of the New York City Health Department and the federal Food and Drug Administration said inspectors had examined many other grocery stores in the area, but had found nothing suspicious beyond the contaminated jars of baby food from Hector's Supermarket, on Third Avenue, near 101st Street.

Margaret Karanjai, a Health Department spokeswoman, said only two jars of Beech-Nut Chiquita Bananas Stage 1 bought by the baby's parents had been found to be contaminated. She said 13 other jars of Beech-Nut baby food had been taken off shelves at Hector's because inspectors found them suspicious, but tests to determine whether they are contaminated were not completed.

Only botulism has been ruled out as a result of laboratory tests, Ms. Karanjai said. She said that the authorities were convinced that tampering had occurred, and that it was not merely an instance of spoiled food, because tests showed an extraordinary level of alkalinity in the jars — triple the amount usually in baby food.

Noting that the suspected tampering apparently had been confined to the one store, Beech-Nut issued no product-recall order.

Health authorities and the company nevertheless cautioned consumers to make sure that the tops of jars pop when they are opened to ensure that the safety seals have not been broken, and to examine carefully all baby food before feeding it to children.

The victim of the suspected poisoning, 5-month-old Linda Lin, who was said to have been stricken Wednesday when her father, Bi Lin, fed her from a jar of strained bananas bought last Sunday, remained in extremely critical condition late Saturday at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Hundreds rally at clinic

CINCINNATI (AP) — Hundreds of abortion-rights and anti-abortion activists rallied outside an abortion clinic Saturday. Police arrested 34 people, including several who scuffled with rival demonstrators.

The crowd of about 400 appeared evenly split between pro-choice and anti-abortion activists, all standing shoulder-to-shoulder. Police arrested 73 protesters at the clinic Friday.

Twenty-six people, most of them pro-choice activists, were arrested outside the gates of the Margaret Sanger Center. They were charged with disorderly conduct after scuffling with opposing demonstrators or refusing to obey police orders, police said.

Eight anti-abortion protesters were arrested on trespassing charges for blocking doors to the clinic. They had climbed over a fence behind the building as police monitored the crowd in front.

Policies regarding harassment are vague, experts say

N.Y. Times News Service

Federal law requires companies to have policies prohibiting sexual harassment, but employers that vigorously try to enforce their own rules are few and far between, experts say.

The policies at many companies lack specifics as to what behavior is offensive, or what remedies are available. Some companies train and educate only their top managers, rather than their entire work force.

"It's the unique company that takes it seriously enough to spend time and money to train their work force to let them know about the policy, instead of just tacking it to a bulletin board," said K.C. Wagner, a consultant to businesses on sexual harassment in Oakland, Calif.

Companies with tough policies on sexual harassment say they are also improving morale and productivity. At the same time they are addressing complaints before they develop into litigation.

The confirmation hearings on Judge Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court have greatly intensified the debate on this difficult issue.

Even at the companies with the strongest programs, those with long-established policies on sexual harassment and elaborate procedures and strict penalties to deal with it, offensive behavior continues.

It is striking that although such cases often come down to one person's word against another, many of companies with strong programs find that virtually all complaints have merit.

For example, AT&T, which has won considerable respect for its policies, says 19 of every 20 complaints received are valid.

And at E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Edward S. Bardzik, senior consultant for diversity education, said, "Except for where there has been a broken office romance, we get very few if any complaints that don't have at least some merit. Most women who come forward are feeling something very uncomfortable in the environment at a minimum and often more than that."

Why aren't the programs at the more aggressive companies more successful in eliminating sexual harassment.

The social stigma attached to the subject inhibits discussion, investigation and elimination of the problem, consultants and corporate executives say. Until society in general understands and rejects sexual harassment, corporate programs will not eradicate it.

The difficult economic environment is preoccupying many companies these days. Dr. Baila Zeitz, one of the authors of "The Best Companies for Women," a 1988 book that evaluated companies' commitment to addressing and stamping out sexual harassment, said she strongly suspected that fewer companies today are concerned with detailed policies

"Corporations are more concerned about putting out fires now because of the changes in the economy that have occurred since my research," she said.

Bush chalks up successful political week

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush flashed a broad grin and gave a thumbs-up as he left the White House for his weekend at Camp David. And well he might. It had been quite a week, politically, for the president.

An hour before he boarded his helicopter Friday, the president had overseen the swearing-in of Clarence Thomas, his second appointment to the Supreme Court, after a bruising Senate confirmation battle that left Democrats reeling.

A long-sought Middle East peace conference — the topic that prompted Bush's thumbs-up — had been announced earlier in the day to begin Oct. 30 in Madrid.

Bush's choice for CIA director, Robert Gates, had just won the 11-4 support of the Senate Intelligence Committee, overcoming a fierce attack on Gates' honesty.

And the president had survived yet another veto showdown with Congress as the Senate earlier in the week failed to override his veto of a $6.4 billion unemployment-benefit extension bill. His record stands at 23 vetoes sustained. None overridden.

"I guess we're on a roll — in the sense that we've had some very tough battles in succession and been successful," said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

EPA to set new guidelines for tailpipe emissions

N.Y. Times News Service

In a move that would affect tens of millions of car owners and thousands of gas station operators, the Environmental Protection Agency may impose stricter standards on tailpipe emissions testing that could make car inspections at neighborhood gas stations impractical.

The strictest standards that could be imposed would require inspection by machines costing up to $300,000 each, far beyond the reach of most small operators. Motorists would have to go to high-volume regional inspection stations for a pollution test.

The agency, which plans to issue new inspection standards next month, says that nearly all the 35 states that require tailpipe pollution tests as part of their inspections are using a method that is obsolete because it tests cars when they are idling rather than operating under strain.

The most rigorous standards under consideration require testing on a treadmill, running the car through a routine of accelerating, cruising and decelerating. The agency requires auto manufacturers to follow such a system on sample cars when a new model is tested for sale in the United States.

"You can't test today's high-tech cars with an idle test," said William Rosenberg, the assistant administrator for air and radiation, in a telephone interview. "They have computers and sensors, and they self-adjust when you're driving. If you just look at idle you have no good idea how they do when they're running."

As it moves toward a decision, the agency is being pressured from three sides. Organizations representing small service stations are crying foul. In New York, for example, the state required stations last year to buy new equipment at a cost of $14,000 or more, in part so engines could be tested at two different speeds. But that equipment could not be used for the strict test the agency is considering.

Organizations representing larger auto service companies and independent contractors favor the change, because it would create new markets. More cars would probably have to be repaired, creating business for service stations. And the expensive treadmill testing machines would result in a centralized inspection system in the 23 states that now use neighborhood gas stations, creating new business opportunities.

A third interested group comprises industries that have nothing to do with cars or car service; they want auto inspection improved so there will be less pressure on them to reduce their own pollution.

Wind could raise new fire danger

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Cooler weather Saturday helped put a damper on dozens of wildfires in the Pacific Northwest, but firefighters were bracing for the arrival of strong wind that could fan the flames.

Five people have died and 104 homes have been destroyed in fires covering more than 250,000 acres in Washington, Idaho, Montana and Oregon. More than 6,000 firefighters were on the lines.

A cold front approaching the region could spawn wind gusting to 50 mph by Sunday night, "very similar to the front that caused the initial problem," said Steve Laam, spokesman at a firefighters' camp for a 16,640-acre fire near Spokane.

Most of the fires were started by power lines downed by powerful windstorms Wednesday.

Forecasters said snow was possible by Monday in Montana, where 15 major fires had burned more than 200,000 acres. Eight were contained Saturday, including a 182,000-acre grass and timber fire in north-central Montana.

In eastern Washington, 34 large fires and several smaller ones in four counties scorched nearly 44,000 acres, said Leslie Robinette of the Bureau of Land Management.

Ron DeHart of the U.S. Forest Service said a preliminary damage estimate of $15 million for Spokane County was conservative.

In northern Idaho, 12 fires burned about 5,000 acres, four houses and several vacation cabins.

In Oregon's Willamette National Forest, firefighters had a 8,600-acre fire about half contained Saturday, said Ralph Satterberg of the Northwest Interagency Coordination Center in Portland.

Swaggart empire may topple, observers say

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The resignations of two close associates of evangelist Jimmy Swaggart following a second scandal involving a prostitute could topple Swaggart's once-mighty ministry, some observers say.

Swaggart may have frightened away television stations and his college is in danger of losing its accreditation, they said.

Swaggart was in a car with a woman who said she was a prostitute when police in California stopped him for a traffic violation two weeks ago. The woman said Swaggart asked her for sex.

Swaggart's announcement that he wouldn't take a leave of absence from his pulpit was followed by the resignations Wednesday of longtime associate pastor Jim Rentz and Wayne Austin, vice president of the Jimmy Swaggart Bible College and Seminary.

They wouldn't comment on their resignations.

In 1988, Swaggart was expelled from the Assemblies of God, the nation's largest Pentecostal denomination, after a New Orleans-area prostitute said he paid her to pose nude for him.

Since the first scandal, Swaggart has gone from being the nation's top-rated television minister to No. 7, as of mid-summer.

Last month, he and several associates were ordered by a jury to pay rival evangelist Marvin Gorman $10 million in a defamation suit.

Rice University sociologist Bill Martin, who studies television evangelists, said Swaggart is almost certain to lose access to television stations.

"He may be reduced to having a little traveling industry that some of his old hard-core supporters will still come and listen to, but I don't think he's going to recover from this one," Martin said.

Martin said broadcasters take no risk by not associating with Swaggart, who already had trouble paying for television time.

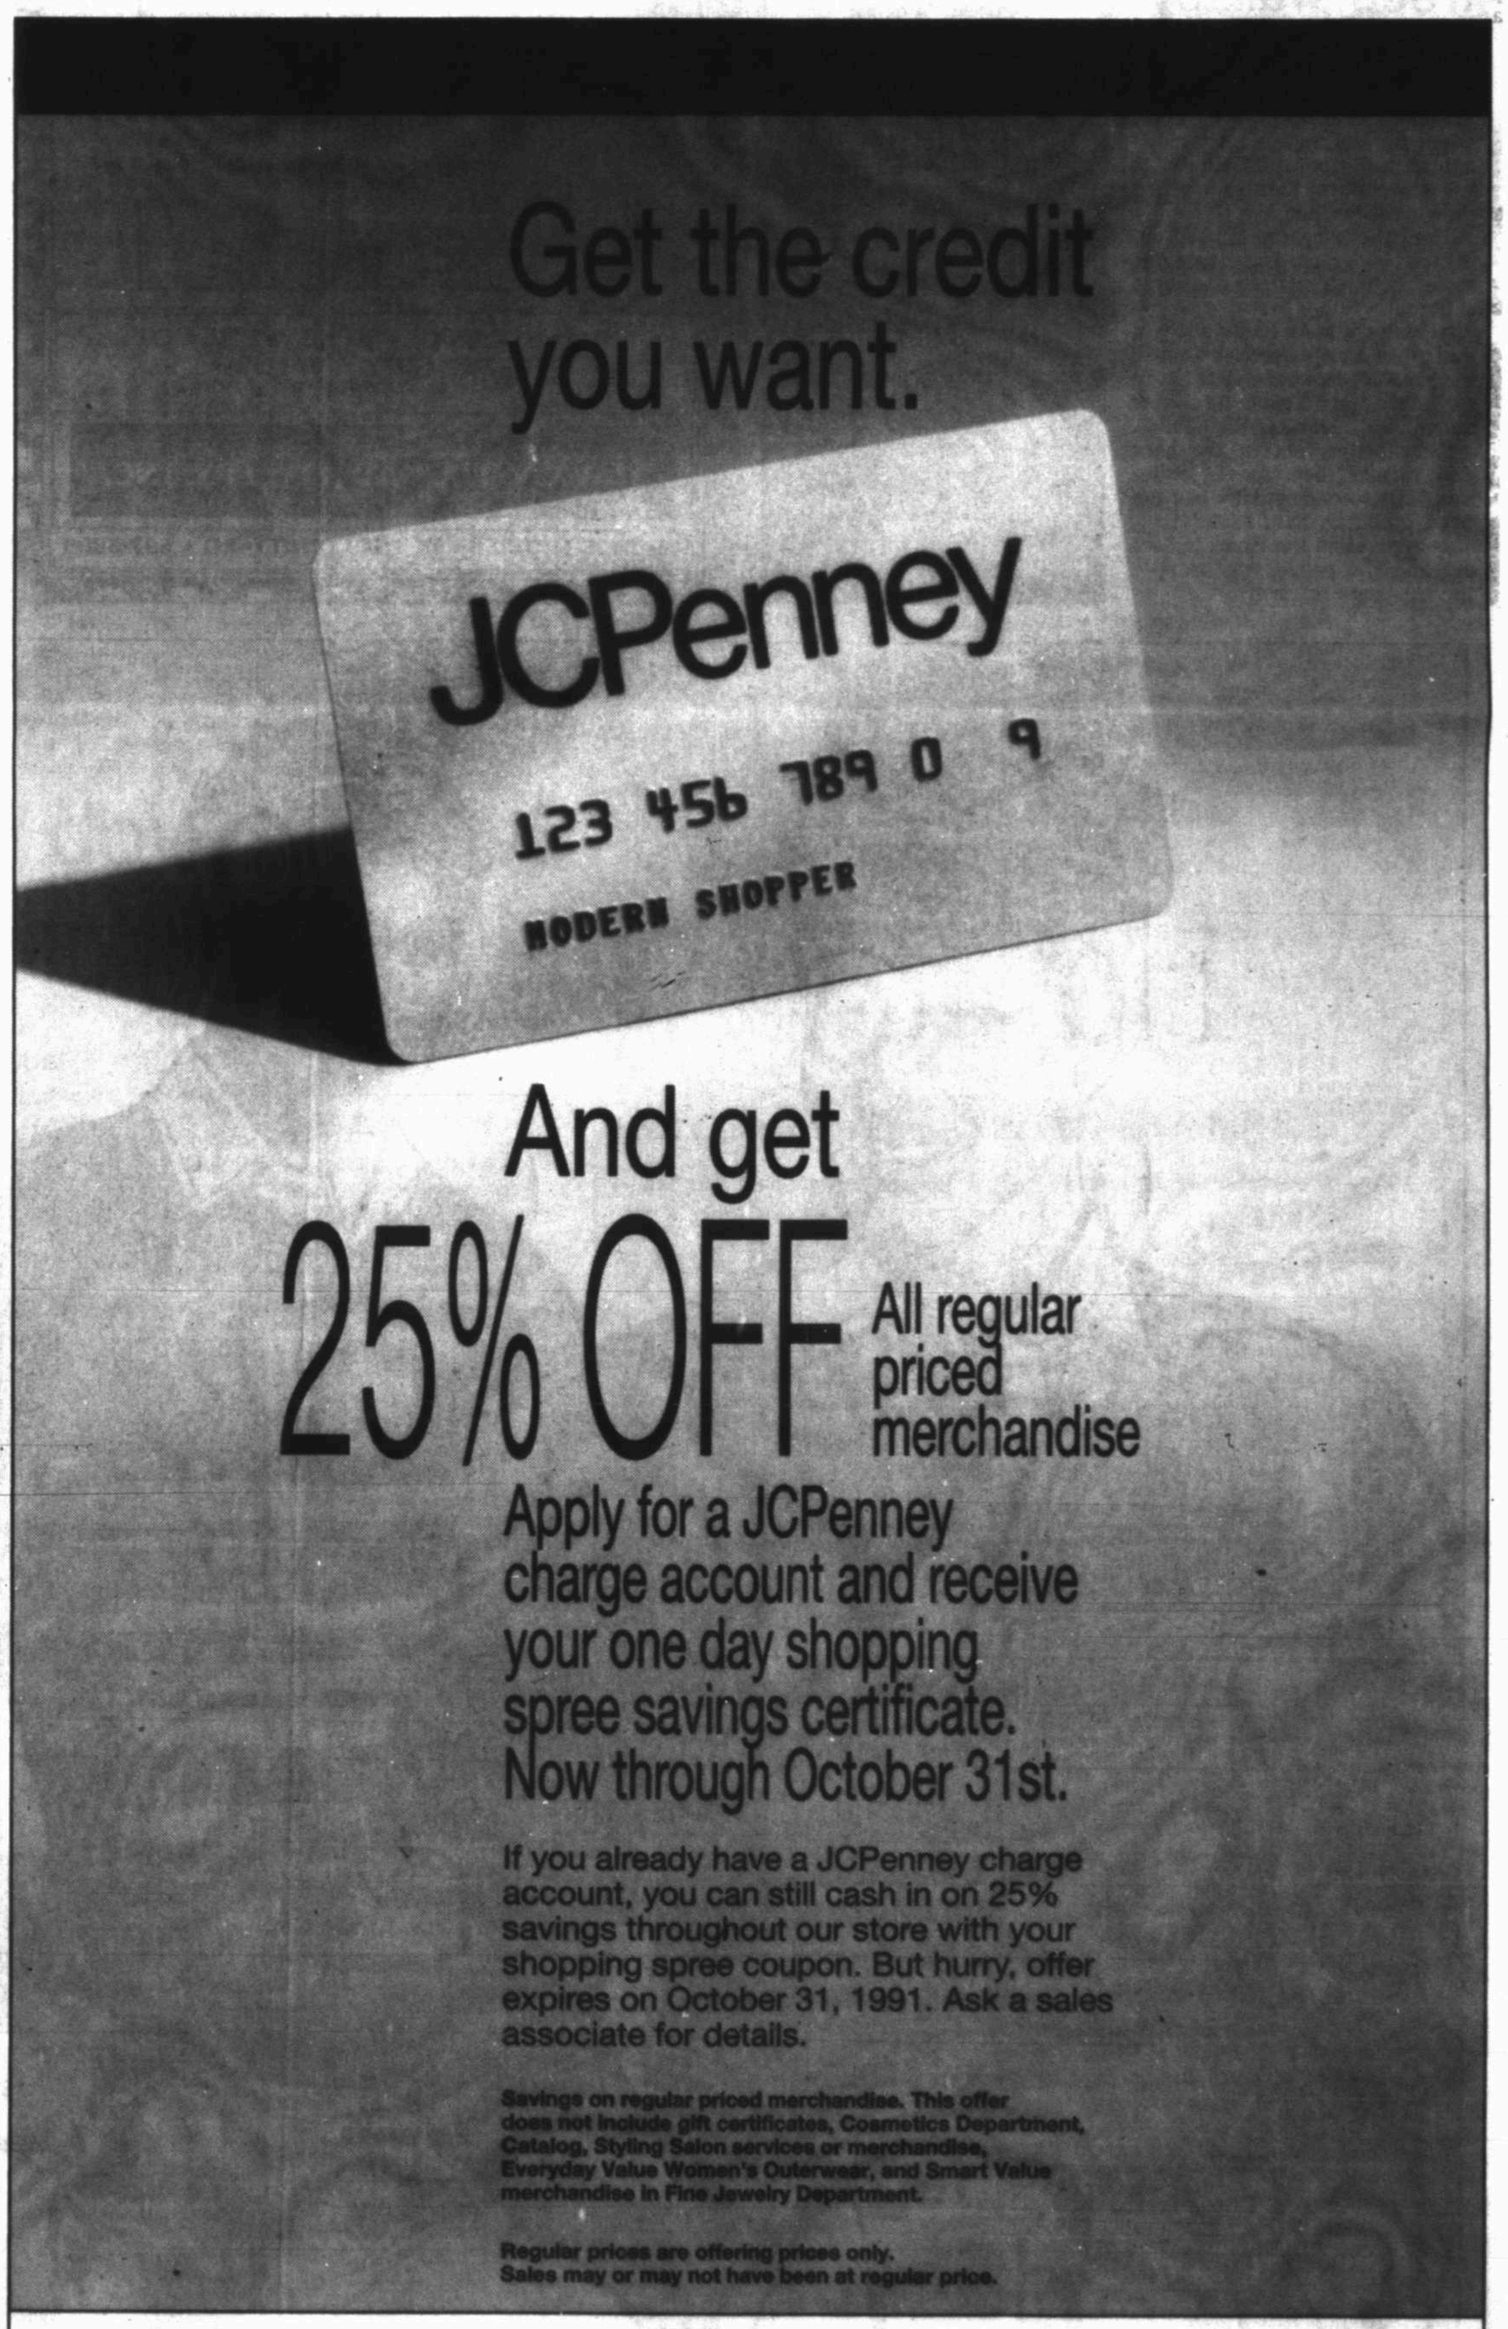

"If he can't stay on television and mount a major mail ministry, how is he going to raise money?" Martin said.

Instability at Swaggart's college could cost its students federal aid, said Bob Heath, the school's former academic dean.

Heath had steered Swaggart's school through accreditation with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. But his departure in July and the resignation of the school's president and its dean of students could cause it to lose its current status in December, he said.

"A key issue with any accrediting agency would be evidence of instability in every part of the university — faculty, administration, finances, curriculum," said Heath, now communications professor at Emmanuel College in Georgia.

Overseas visitors discover the heartland

DODGE CITY, Kan. (NYT) — Aided by a weak dollar and bargain-basement air fares, visitors from overseas are flocking to the United States in numbers that have set records five years in a row. But what has startled travel experts is that more and more overseas visitors are turning up in states like Kansas and Nebraska, Kentucky and Utah.

Having seen the theme parks and the major cities, these tourists — especially repeat visitors, who last year made up 76 percent of all overseas visitors — are traveling to Indian reservations, staying at dude ranches, hiking through remote national parks and finding their way to places far off the beaten track.

Places like Dodge City, a windswept old frontier outpost that achieved international fame as the setting of "Gunsmoke," the longest-running Western in television history, hold special appeal. With its reconstructions of 1870s buildings where gunslingers like Wyatt Earp and Bat Masterson (and the fictional Marshal Matt Dillon) roamed, Dodge City has attracted almost 20,000 foreign visitors this year.

The Old West flavor is one of the main reasons Kansas leads all other states in the rate of growth in overseas tourism — up 213 percent last year from 1985 — as against a national average of 60 percent in the same period.

"Can there be anybody around the world who doesn't know of Dodge City from television and the movies?" asked Bernie Ashfield of Adelaide, Australia, who traveled to Dodge City from New York on a cross-country tour bus.

Ian Hay of Timaru, New Zealand, a fellow passenger, added: "It's a very historic spot. Dodge City is just about as well-known down there as New York."

These days, almost no tourist attraction seems too remote for overseas visitors. Some of the recent interest in Iowa, for instance, stems from its legalization of gambling on Mississippi river boats, starting last spring.

But in Dyersville, Iowa, where a baseball field was created for the Kevin Costner movie "Field of Dreams," Jackie Ellingson of the Chamber of Commerce said, "Lots of Japanese tourists have flocked here to see the 'Field of Dreams.'"

Thousands of foreigners — inspired by reruns of the 1960s television adventure series "Route 66," about two friends who traveled the highway in a Corvette, have been turning up in cities and towns along what is left of the 2,448-mile highway that linked Chicago and Los Angeles.

Although states like California and New York are still far ahead in absolute numbers of overseas visitors, smaller states are using aggressive promotional campaigns to make big gains.

Police catch freed wallaby

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — "Mom, there's a kangaroo!"

Five-year-old Austin Jeffers was playing in his back yard Friday when he and a friend spotted it behind a compost pile. He ran to tell his mother. Kathleen Jeffers didn't believe him.

Then the kangaroo hopped out of the backyard and down the street, through an open door onto a porch.

Actually, it was a rock wallaby, a marsupial that resembles a small kangaroo. Two escaped last Saturday night from a game farm near Salem, said caretaker Glen Sallee.

"Somebody went in the barn and turned them loose," Sallee said. The second wallaby had not been found by Saturday.

Jeffers called the Humane Society and the police, who trapped the hopping creature.

Twins ice red-hot Braves

■ The Minnesota Twins grab a 1-0 lead in the World Series after Saturday night's 5-2 victory.

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Old-fashioned baseball, not the new-fangled stadium, won Game 1 of the World Series for the Minnesota Twins. There were no lost balls in the Metrodome roof, just balls lost in the stadium seats.

The power of Greg Gagne and Kent Hrbek and the pitching of Jack Morris carried the Twins to a 5-2 victory over an Atlanta team still searching for a way to score runs.

Gagne's three-run homer in the fifth inning broke open a 1-0 game, and a solo home run by Hrbek in the sixth backed seven strong innings by Morris, one of the game's best big-game pitchers who is now 6-1 in postseason play.

"I wanted to hit it into the hole, but I hit it out of the park," Gagne said of his homer. "He made me look sick the first time when I struck out."

The Braves' big gamble of starting Charlie Leibrandt, rather than 20-game winner Tom Glavine, did not work. Leibrandt used his World Series experience and his off-speed pitches to keep the Twins off balance for a while, but Gagne and Hrbek eventually caught up to him.

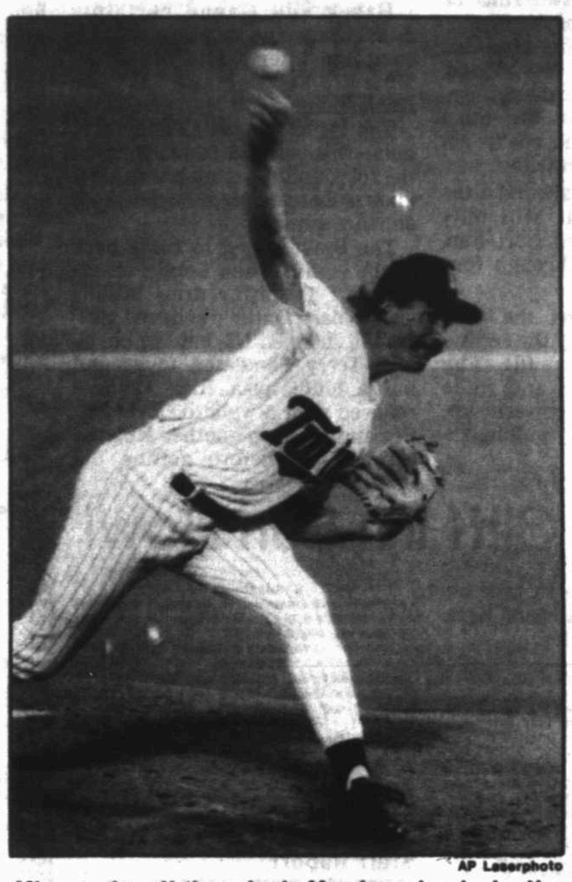

Now, it's up to Glavine to get Atlanta even when he starts Game 2 Sunday night against Kevin Tapani.

"It's probably harder to play here, but I didn't think it had a bearing on the game," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

The excitement level in Minnesota seemed a little down from the 1987 World Series, and so were the decibels — from 125 inside the Metrodome then to 118 this time.

The result, though, was the same as four years ago.

Minnesota pitcher Jack Morris unloads in the first inning of Game 1 of the World Series Saturday night at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis.

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The biggest cheer at the Metrodome on Saturday night was for the Minnesota Twins' quiet leader.

Greg Gagne's three-run homer in the fifth inning off Atlanta's Charlie Leibrandt in Game 1 of the World Series gave the Twins a 4-0 lead and turned the place into a blanket of white hankies.

Gagne

"I wanted to hit it into the hole, but I hit it out of the park," Gagne said of the home run.

Big hits in the postseason are nothing new for Gagne. In the seventh game of the 1987 World Series against St. Louis, he drove in the winning run.

Leibrandt and Twins starter Jack Morris were in a tight game until Kent Hrbek doubled, Scott Leius singled and Gagne followed with a home run just over the left-field fence.

Gagne, unsure it was going out, hustled down the first-base line and didn't break into his home run trot until rounding the bag. It didn't take him long to get home.

Later in the game, Gagne went deep into the hole at short and made a long throw to get Brian Hunter. It all added up to a 5-2 victory for the Twins

Gagne is one of the best defensive shortstops around, but doesn't appear on the highlight shows too often. Those spots are reserved for Kirby Puckett, Hrbek and Morris.

Braves handle dome

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The final score may not have shown it, but the Atlanta Braves were not affected by the Metrodome's white ceiling or the rabid behavior of Homer Hanky-waving Minnesota Twins fans in Game 1 of the World Series on Saturday night.

The Braves, uninitated in the idiosyncrasies of the 9-year-old Dome, handled all flyballs and popups flawlessly in their 5-2 loss.

It wasn't as easy as they made it look.

"You have to keep you eye on the ball. If you take your eye off the ball, it's really hard to pick it up again. It takes a lot of concentration," said Atlanta left fielder Brian Hunter, who caught Brian Harper's fifth-inning line drive and turned it into a double play by throwing Dan Gladden out at the plate.

This is only the second World Series to be played in a dome. The first was four years ago, when the Twins played host to St. Louis for four games. The Cardinals lost a couple of fly balls in the roof and had trouble communicating.

Permian downs Rebel spikers in 3 games

■ Odessa Permian nips Midland Lee's Lady Rebel volleyball team to retain second place in the District 4-5A standings.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee hasn't had a great impact on the District 4-5A volleyball race this fall, but given that, playing against the Lady Rebels is a bit like walking through a Halloween spook house.

Lee flirted with shaking up the 4-5A standings at the Lee gym Saturday afternoon before falling to second place Odessa Permian, 9-15, 15-4, 15-12.

So when all was said and done, there was no change in the overall standings as Mojo climbed to 6-2. Midland High is now 6-3 after a 15-9, 13-15, 15-6 win over Odessa High and Abilene Cooper remains at 5-3 after the open district date.

Abilene High is 9-0 and will win the title, so that leaves Permian, MHS and Cooper fighting for the one remaining playoff berth. That's why Permian couldn't afford a loss against Lee, but it almost happened.

"I knew Lee was improving when I read that they carried Midland High to three games," said Permian coach Linda McMillan.

Lee stunned Permian in the first set with a 15-9 win behind the spiking of Carrie Zamora, the serving of Courtney McHugh and some great saves by Tiffany Grafa. Lee lost big time in the second set with some lineup changes that didn't pan out, but the Lady Rebs vaulted to a 7-2 lead in the finale before falling to the booming spikes of L'Tanya Williams and LaShon Powell, which ripped open the heart of the Lee defense.

"Our last three matches have been just like this one," said Lee first-year head coach Anita Corder. "We aren't getting the wins, but this team has come together after a lot of adversity. We've had 98 different lineups this year, but you can see the improvement. I think we are at least making a statement."

Down 7-2 in the deciding set, you couldn't blame McMillan if she was squirming around in her seat.

A&M rolls over Bears

SWC Roundup

Associated Press

WACO — With a 27-point halftime lead over 16th-ranked Baylor on Saturday, Texas A&M had Tulsa on its mind.

The 19th-ranked Aggies' only loss this year was 35-34 to Tulsa after A&M had built an 18-point lead at halftime.

A&M didn't relax this time and rolled to a 34-12 Southwest Conference victory over the Bears behind senior quarterback Bucky Richardson.

"The first thing we said coming in a halftime was 'Don't let this be a Tulsa game,' and we didn't let down at all," A&M safety Patrick Bates said. "Boy, Bucky was great. He even inspires me to do a better job on defense."

Richardson said A&M wanted to make up for a 20-20 tie with Baylor last year.

"I didn't throw well last year and passing sets up everything else," Richardson said. "I feel good we beat 'em so convincingly. I just hope people

Airplanes, Cowboys and video tapes

Perhaps the most perplexing of the multitude of problems related to owning a VCR is that other people always assume you know how to operate the thing.

Take last Sunday, for example.

Price

My parents visited Midland to witness the Confederate Air Force's Airsho '91. Since Dad was stationed in San Antonio during World War II and worked on a crew that recovered crashed airplanes, he took great interest in attending the festivities.

The only problem was that our air show plans conflicted with one of the true guiding forces in my parents' lives, the Dallas Cowboys. Mom and Dad had no more than stepped in my front door after the 260-mile journey from Clarendon, Texas, when my mother handed me a blank video tape.

Mom, who believes the holy trinity consists of "Dandy" Don Meredith, Roger Staubach and Troy Aikman, even brought her own blank video tape for me to put the game on. "Just in case" I didn't have a blank or something I wanted tape over.

Five minutes before we were to leave for the airport, I scurried for the VCR instruction booklet, programmed the Dallas-Cincinnati game and walked out the door secure in the knowledge that I had done everything in accordance with the manufacturer's orders.

I'm happy to report, a tiring but good time was had by all at the air show. On the transfer from the shuttle bus to my folks' van, Dad turned off the radio before I even had the key in the ignition to make sure we didn't inadvertently hear the Cowboy-Bengal score, an occurrence that would have defeated the whole purpose of watching the tape we were so sure I recorded.

Upon our return to my house, the entire family plopped down in the living room, cold beverage in hand, waiting for the tape to rewind so we could watch the new-found prowess of OUR Dallas Cowboys.

"My isn't is wonderful to live in an age where technology allows us to miss the game but still watch it" we thought to ourselves en masse.

With the tape rewound and only the hint of a wry smile on my face, I hit the "Play" button.

Now the whole problem with watching one team all the time is that you become certain that that team will play on one network 95 percent of the time. I mean, all NFC games are carried on CBS, right? Not this day. I had programmed everything correctly right down to the Channel 7. The problem was, the Dallas-Cincinnati game was broadcast on Channel 9.

It has something to do with networks broadcasting inter-conference games from the other conference's stadium. NBC carries the American Conference, and since the game was at Irving, Dick Enberg and the boys got to call the game. Makes sense, right?

Anyway, with me blurting out an apology (or is that feeble excuse) a minute, we resigned ourselves to the fact that, no, we weren't going to see the game we had so looked forward to watching.

After deciding we didn't want to watch a tape delay broadcast of the Eagles-Saints game, our only consolation was that the debates on now-Justice Clarence Thomas' confirmation were also on television. So we watched that. And you know what? We may have seen a better game anyway.

Braves had opportunities

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The chances were there for Atlanta to get Jack Morris and the Minnesota Twins, but the key hits weren't.

And no one had more opportunities to wake up the sleeping Atlanta offense than Sid Bream.

The Braves fell to the Twins 5-2 in Game 1 of the World Series Saturday night as Bream left six runners on base, including taking a called third strike to end the sixth inning with men on second and third and the Braves thrreatening to cut into a 4-1 deficit.

Bream, however, seemed unconcerned about Atlanta's recent inability to score runs. The Braves scored just 19 runs in seven games against Pittsburgh in the NL playoffs — 10 of those runs coming in one game.

"Everybody seems to forget how we played all year," said Bream, the left-handed hitting first baseman, who went 0-for-4.

SERIES: Twins 5-0 at home in finals

(From 1B)

The Twins are now 5-0 in the World Series at their place.

"We're home. We're supposed to win," rookie Chuck Knoblauch said after going 3-for-3 with a walk and two stolen bases.

Morris, a playoff loser with Detroit at the Metrodome in 1987, found it a lot different.

Morris, born across the Mississippi River in the twin city of St. Paul, got the fans cheering by limiting the Braves to two runs on five hits in seven-plus innings.

"I was kind of paying attention to all those people," Morris said. "It was getting me excited."

But it was Gagne, the quiet Twin, and Hrbek who really got the homer hankies swirling.

Leibrandt pitched around trouble all evening, but still only Chuck Knoblauch had hurt him, with an RBI single, through four innings.

Then Hrbek opened the fifth with a line double, only the second batter to pull Leibrandt. The Braves sensed danger, and while Jim Clancy hurried to warm up, Scott Leius followed by pulling another solid single.

That brought up Gagne, the ninth-place hitter who had scored on Knoblauch's hit in the third. An 0-1 fastball was up and in, and Gagne brought the 55,108 fans to fervor pitch with a shot to deep left field for a 4-0 lead that finished Leibrandt.

After Ron Gant singled home a run in the top half of the sixth, Hrbek got it back with a much more impressive show, a towering drive off Clancy into the upper deck in right.

The Twins hit just 62 homers at home this year, 16 fewer than on the road, and the team has made it known that the stadium does not enhance power.

The Braves tried to come back in the eighth when Lonnie Smith and Jeff Treadway drew leadoff walks. Mark Guthrie relieved Morris and induced NL batting champion Terry Pendleton to ground into a double play. Rick Aguilera relieved after a walk to David Justice and gave up another RBI single to Gant before getting Sid Bream.

The Twins won for the eighth time in nine postseason games at the Metrodome. They opened the 1987 playoffs and World Series with victories, and started this year's playoffs by beating Toronto.

The Braves did not seem worried about either the noise, the strange ceiling or the spongy turf, and none of those things played a part in the Twins' victory. Rather, Minnesota, which batted .302 at home this season, simply outhit Atlanta.

The Twins were aggressive from the start and were led by Knoblauch. Minnesota stole three bases, but also had three runners thrown out on dumb plays.

The Braves, however, did little to help themselves until the sixth, when singles by Treadway, Justice and Gant produced their first run. Bream looked at a called third strike to end the inning with runners on second and third and the score 4-1.

Pendleton went 0-for-4, including an ill-timed double play in the eighth. He went just 5-for-30 in the NL playoffs.

LFHS Maroon beats Bonham

Staff Report

Trailing 6-0 at the half, Midland Lee Freshman Maroon scored 29 second half points to beat Odessa Bonaham Saturday in ninth grade football action.

Melvin Dunson rushed for 108 yards and two touchdowns while Dedrick Adams was a defensive standout for the Maroon, which allowed Bonham only 100 yards in total offense to climb to 5-1 for the year.

In other reported ninth grade action, Odessa Crockett beat Lee White by a 14-0 margin.

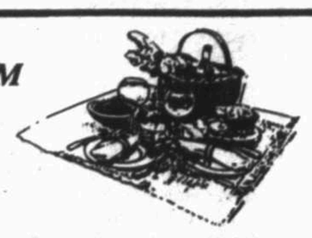

In the eighth grade Midland-Odessa Conference, Alamo ripped Crockett 28-0 while Goddard was nipped by Bonham in a 27-26 thriller.

In the eighth grade City Conference, Alamo blanked San Jacinto 12-0 and Goddard defeated Trinity 26-14.

In the seventh grade American Conference, Goddard White blanked San Jacinto White by a 28-0 count while Goddard Red won a 32-0 decision over Alamo Scarlet in a couple of shutouts.

Shutouts also ruled the day in the seventh grade National Conference where Goddard White blanked San Jacinto White 34-0 and Alamo Scarlet ran over Goddard Red 30-0.

MC netters dominate Cliff Inn Sun Bowl

Staff Report

EL PASO — The Midland College tennis team came away from the $4,000 Cliff Inn Sun Bowl Tennis Tournament with most of what it sought.

MC placed multiple finalists in the the women's singles, men's and women's doubles and mixed doubles events, and the Chaps won $2,000 in prize money for their efforts.

MC's junior college status allows the Chaps to accept just $1,304 of the winnings — just enough to cover expenses for the trip — but four of the five first-place and second-place trophies will reside in Midland.

Because the four finals involved the Chaps, they got off to an early departure from El Paso and will decide the events Monday, beginning at 2 p.m., at Midland College.

Myriam Berthe will meet Seiko Ichioka in the women's singles and the two will team up to take on Boba Tzvetkova and Adriana Isaza in the women's doubles.

Coody leads by two shots at Transamerica

Associated Press

NAPA, Calif. — First-round co-leader Charles Coody shot a 6-under-par 66 Saturday to take a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the Transamerica Senior Golf Championship.

Coody's 133 total for two trips around the 6,630-yard Silverado Country Club south course put him ahead of Jim Colbert, who had a second-round 65.

Dale Douglass, who started the day two over, had a tournament record 63 to move within four strokes of Coody entering Sunday's final round. The previous low of 64 was set last year by Miller Barber.

First round co-leader Lee Trevino, 70, Simon Hobday, 68, and Mike Hill, 67, were tied with Douglass at 137.

DeWitt Weaver, 69, Arnold Palmer, 69, and George Archer, 66, were another stroke back.

"Today was a very eventful day off the tee for me," said Coody, who managed the 66 despite the fact only six of his 14 drives landed in the fairway.

Coody, who made six birdies and no bogeys, opened with two birdies on the front nine to move to seven under for the tournament. He birdied No. 10, then made a 50-foot bunker shot on No. 11 to go nine under.

Douglass broke the course record when he made a 2-foot birdie putt that rolled all the way around the rim of the cup before dropping in on No. 18.

Colbert's 65 featured a 245-yard drive on No. 12 that he speculates might have gone 285 yards had it not hit a marshal standing on the course.

Don January, 61, earned $11,000 when he won the Super Senior competition with a 36-hole total of 140, defeating Joe Jimenez by two strokes. It was January's eighth Super Senior victory this year.

Eagle helps O'Meara to Disney victory

Associated Press

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Mark O'Meara turned in one of his best finishes Saturday, but it was a little bit of luck that helped him win his first PGA tournament of the year.

O'Meara regained a share of the lead of the Walt Disney World Golf Classic on the par-4 ninth hole when his 178-yard, 5-iron skipped into the cup for an eagle.

"Those are the things that have to happen in order to win a golf tournament," he said. "You have to be a little bit lucky.

"That kind of gave me the boost and the charge I needed to get close to the leaders. Obviously the shot on number 9 was the shot of the tournament."

O'Meara, who shot a tournament-low 64 on Saturday, prevailed by that one shot, edging David Peoples for the $180,000 winner's share of the $1 million purse.

O'Meara, who was able to spend the week at his home less than a half hour from the tournament site, had led after the first two rounds but was one stroke off the lead entering the final round.

Peoples, another local favorite who grew up in the Orlando area, carded a 65 in the final round, but ran out of birdies in the final four holes.

"I thought if I could put it 20 under it would be awfully hard to beat," said Peoples, who is enjoying his best season on the tour since turning pro in 1981.

"I was a little bit surprised to look up there and see a 21. I was a little bummed."

O'Meara's eagle regained a share of the lead for him, but he took it for good with an 8-foot birdie putt on the 400-yard 16th hole.

"I knew I didn't want to go to a playoff," said O'Meara, who made a 6-foot par putt at 18 to avoid a tie.

O'Meara picked up a new car and $180,000 for his 21-under-par 267 effort — pushing his season's earnings to almost $530,000. He has seven career wins and has earned almost $4 million since turning pro in 1980.

Peoples, who won the Southern Open three weeks ago, won $108,000.

Paul Azinger finished third.

Allen retains Ironman title

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii (AP) — Mark Allen won his third straight Ironman Triathlon World Championship on Saturday, tying six-time winner Dave Scott's record for consecutive victories.

Allen, 31, of Cardiff, Calif., finished the 140.6-mile endurance test in 8 hours, 18 minutes and 35 seconds, behind his own 1989 record of 8:09:15.

"The third victory was very satisfying," Allen said. "The conditions were good, but it was a hard race. In the last half of the marathon, I just kept putting one foot ahead of the other and tried to hold steady."

Raburns deliver at GTCC

Staff Report

Women's city golf champion Marna Raburn is due to give birth Thursday, but instead of waiting at home for the stork to show, Marna and husband Tim decided to go out and play a little golf.

And together they posted a little score.

The Raburns combined for a 161 total Saturday in the first round of the Green Tree Country Club Couples Championship to take a nine-stroke lead over Tim Mathes and Shirley Rosignol.

GROSS: 1. Tim & Marna Raburn, 161; 2. Tim Mathes & Shirley Rosignol, 170; 3. Bob & Dede Plank, 175; 4. Ron & Peggie Ainsworth, 176; 5. Joe & Hazel Herbert, 180; 6. Chuck & Pat Dougherty, 182.

NET: 1. (tie) Ron & Peggie Ainsworth and Chuck & Evelyn Davis, 141; 3. (tie) Chuck & Pat Dougherty and Brian & Julie Plumer, 143; 5. Ervin & Marilyn Philpy, 144; 6. Carlyon & Layne Adkee, 145.

Mustangs trounce TCA, 50-0

Staff Report

ABILENE — Midland Christian quarterback Andy Awtry passed for four touchdowns, including two to his brother Aaron, as the Mustangs rolled over Texas Christian Academy of Arlington 50-0 in a Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools game at a neutral site here Saturday afternoon.

MCS upped its record to 6-1 while TCA fell to 5-2.

Andy Awtry hit brother Aaron Awtry with scoring tosses of nine and 14 yards to put MCS up 13-0. Sammy Cox caught a five-yard TD pass from Awtry and Neil Truex hit Alan Weaver with a 25-yard flip to give the Mustangs a 28-0 halftime lead.

Awtry's fourth TD flip was a 20-yarder to Cox in the third quarter. Aaron Awtry started the fourth-quarter scoring with a 22-yard interception return, and the game ended with the 45-point rule when Lathan Houghton scored on a 30-yard punt return.

The Mustangs next game is slated for Friday at 1 p.m. MST when they visit Bethel Christian.

Holyfield, Tyson eye January 20 fight date

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson may fight for the heavyweight title a week before he begins a fight for his freedom.

Promoters eyed a possible Jan. 20 date on Saturday as they scrambled to reschedule Tyson's fight with heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield, which was put on hold a day earlier because of a rib injury to Tyson.

Tyson is scheduled to go on trial on rape charges Jan. 27 in Indianapolis, where he faces a possible 63 years in prison if convicted. A judge on Friday rejected a request by Tyson's attorneys to delay the trial date.

"Mike will fight before that court date comes up," Tyson's promoter Don King vowed at a news conference at Caesars Palace.

Promoter Dan Duva, who is putting on the fight, called the Jan. 20 date "a possibility," but said it would probably be Monday before details would be worked out on a new date.

"It will definitely be rescheduled," Duva said. "There are a lot of questions that have to be answered before we go forward. We're trying to get some answers."

Doctors said Tyson would need 6-8 weeks of limited activity to fully heal the torn cartilage in his lower left ribs suffered Oct. 8 during training for the Nov. 8 bout that was to be the richest in boxing history.

Tyson said he would need another four weeks of sparring after that to be ready for the bout.

"I just want to fight," Tyson said. "I'm confident I'll be able to box. It just won't be on Nov. 8."

Holyfield, meanwhile, said he also wanted to fight, and said he would like to keep the Nov. 8 date with a bout against another heavyweight contender.

"I'm in shape and I don't want to just say, 'forget this camp,' " Holyfield said in Houston, where he has been training. "Hopefully they'll find someone in the top 10 for me to fight in November. I'll fight anybody."

Duva refused to rule out another fight for Holyfield, but said Holyfield "will not fight Nov. 8." If he fought, the champion would be risking a potential $35 million payday against Tyson.

King said, though, that he and Duva were in agreement that there would be no other fights.

"People don't want to see Holyfield fight anyone else," King said. "They want to come to Caesars Palace and see Tyson fight Holyfield."

Tyson, who appeared with King and orthopedic surgeon Gerald Higgins at the news conference, said he had felt some discomfort in his lower left rib a few days before he apparently tore the cartilage away from a rib while doing situps during training at a Las Vegas gym.

He went to see Higgins the same day and hasn't trained since.

"I was doing some situps and I heard a crack. It went pop," Tyson said. "I felt some excruciating pain and I just went down."

Lottery proposal makes bad gamble

When Texans go to the polls to vote on 13 proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution, they'll be facing a particularly difficult decision on Proposition 11 which, if approved, will permit the creation of a state lottery.

Supporters — including Gov. Ann Richards — say that with the shortfall in revenue the state is facing, primarily due to enactment of the court-mandated school refinancing bill, the lottery will help the state avoid a huge tax increase. It won't make up all the difference, they concede, but it will help the state generate more income.

While their contention may be accurate in that respect, we agree with State Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, who battled the push toward a lottery in the Legislature. Said Leedom, "I just don't think that Texas is going to be benefitted by turning to gambling as a source of revenue."

Leedom is correct in his assertion. Statistics from states in which a lottery is already in use indicate that the initial surge of interest in a state numbers game that usually results in heavy participation immediately following its introduction typically fades in a couple of years and then state officials are faced with necessary frequent promotion and advertising to elicit continued participation.

In addition to Leedom, some other Texas politicians — including State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, and U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, also disparage the lottery as a means of raising state revenue.

Although the lottery may give millions of Texans the impression that the state can avoid a major tax increase by utilizing revenue from the numbers game, that may be a false assumption. Dr. Weston Ware of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission told The Dallas Morning News earlier this year that, "The lottery did not prevent the massive tax increase that everybody's talking about. What we got was the lottery and the tax increase. We got both, and in the mind of many ... the lottery was passed to avoid that."

But there is another reason why all Texans concerned with the growth of state government in the past few years, and particularly the specter of even greater growth in the future along with the stifling costs, should be concerned. Approval of a state lottery undoubtedly will give Texas political leaders a false sense of security that they can go on spending millions of dollars that they don't have, just like their counterparts at the national level, and call on already financially-strapped Texans to foot the bill. Do we really want that much more government in Texas? Do we need it?

We think not. Legislators can fashion other means to make the state budget balance. Perhaps they have not gotten truly serious about cutting out waste and bloated spending. Perhaps they need to look at suggestions such as one put forward by Sen. Leedom in Midland during July that would restructure the state's tax system to move the bulk of the burden off property taxes and to a wider base such as the sales tax. When such a change is coupled with deep cuts in or elimination of the property tax it could mean a much fairer and more equitable tax for Texas. That will undoubtedly raise the possibility of a state income tax once again, but that is a battle Texas still must fight. The point is there are other ways to attack the state budget problem than through a hefty tax increase.

But creating a state lottery isn't the way to finance government. We encourage all Texans who share our concerns about the direction of state government to vote against Proposition 11 on the Nov. 5th election ballot.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The other 12 proposed amendments will be addressed in an editorial in Tuesday's Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Jews had to pay to leave Romania

WASHINGTON — Tough-talking Israel fights any accusation that it would barter for its hostages. Yet Israel secretly engaged in the longest and most expensive ransom arrangement in recent history.

Anderson

Knowledgable intelligence sources in Washington, Jerusalem and Bucharest told us that beginning in the late 1950s and continuing through 1989, Israel paid more than $1 billion to Romania to buy freedom for more than 300,000 Romanian Jews who wanted out of the country.

A minimum of $2,000 was paid for each person, and the price might be as high as $25,000 for a doctor or scientist who wanted to emigrate to Israel.

To keep the lifeline of Jews coming out of Romania, Jewish leaders in Israel and Romania aggressively lobbied the United States to continue Romania's Most-Favored-Nation status, which was worth hundreds of millions of dollars annually to Romania.

It was no small decision by the United States. Romanian dictator Nicolae Ceausescu was a brutal, almost psychopathic tyrant — qualities that the United States chose to ignore for decades. His people starved and froze to death because of his greedy ineptitude.

The Israelis were not the only ones buying freedom for people they cared about. Germans added millions of dollars to Ceausescu's coffers to pay the way out for Romanians of German ancestry who were discriminated against.

The truth about the ransoms, and the effect they had on U.S. policy, is a sensitive matter today. If Washington was pressured into a pro-Romanian policy to save the lives of some, what about the millions of others who died while the United States said nothing?

If the pro-Romanian policy was based more on the fact that Ceausescu was seen as a maverick communist who thumbed his nose at the Soviet Union, then the ransoms are only a fascinating footnote in history. But our information suggests that pro-Romanian lobbying by Jewish advocates was influential in keeping Ceausescu on America's good side.

Jews in Romania after World War II had good reason to want to escape. Their pre-war population was 850,000. After the war there were only 450,000 left. The fascist Romanian Iron Guard was gleefully butchering Jews well before Adolf Hitler implemented his "final solution." Thousands of Romanian Jews were jammed into freight cars to suffocate to death, and many died in labor camps. The corpses of the elderly were hung on meat hooks in Bucharest with a sign above them, "Kosher meat."

After the war, some Jews managed to get out of Romania, but the communists clamped down on emigration. A British businessman, Henry Jacober, who had worked for the Romanian intelligence service, secretly proposed in the late 1950s that Israel's secret service be allowed to pay for each Jew who emigrated.

Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej, then the communist leader of Romania, agreed to let 500 Jewish families leave if Jacober built an automated chicken farm in Romania. Gheorghiu-Dej was so pleased with the farm that he allowed more Jews to leave in return for more farms. When Ceausescu took over in 1965, he reduced Jewish emigration and canceled the chicken deals.

But in 1967, Ceausescu, ever the opportunist, resumed secret connections with Israel and went straight for cash on the barrel head. The prices averaged $4,000 per person, according to a man who knew all the facts, Ion Pacepa. He was a Romanian intelligence chief who defected to the West in 1978.

Today, only 18,000 Jews remain in Romania, and they are subject to constant attacks in the nationalist press, making them scapegoats for all of the country's current economic problems. Last April, on the 45th anniversary of the execution of Marshal Ion Antonescu for war crimes, the Romanian Parliament rose for a minute of silence in tribute to that man who had ordered the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Romanian Jews.

Existence of political correctness nonexistent

WASHINGTON — On campuses there is a new tenet in the catechism of "political correctness," the enforced orthodoxy of leftism. The new tenet of political correctness is that political correctness does not exist.

Will

However, if you dare to question this nonexistence, if you doubt aloud that free expression is uninhibited, you may be harassed on campus, even driven from town, as was Professor Alan Gribben, more about whom anon.

The Chronicle of Higher Education recently reported the founding of "Teachers for a Democratic Culture," an organization of academics that "denies that left-wing students and academics are squelching dissent on college campuses." That is "misinformation" and "distortion" from "right-wing ideologies." Oh.

The Chronicle of one week earlier had reported from Tempe, Ariz.:

"In what has been called 'a classic instance of political correctness,' a speech by a Mexican-American woman who served in the Reagan administration has been canceled at Arizona State University because of student opposition."

Linda Chavez was invited to speak about her new book, "Out of the Barrio," on Hispanic-American politics and assimilation. She was disinvited because the director of the lecture series had not realized that (these are the director's words) Chavez's "stand on the issue of bilingualism" is "so controversial among minority students."

A spokesman for the university insisted that Chavez had not been disinvited because she had not really been invited, a contract not having been issued. But a contract had been issued. And the letter disinviting Chavez used the word "cancel": "The Minority Coalition has requested that we cancel this engagement and bring other speakers whose views are more in line with their politics."

ASU's president urged that she be invited back. She has been, in the politically correct manner — not to give a speech but to debate. When politically incorrect people are invited to speak, they often are supposed to speak in tandem with a corrective person.

The University of Northern Colorado withdrew its invitation to Chavez to give the commencement address. UNC declared that the invitation had been intended as to show "sensitivity to cultural diversity" but now seemed "grossly insensitive." UNC promised she would be invited back to be part of a forum. She has not been invited.

Invitations to her have been withdrawn from Rutgers' Camden, N.J., campus and the StonyBrook campus of the State University of New York. No one can say at how many colleges considerations of political correctness prevent any invitation from being issued.

The Chronicle page that reported ASU's treatment of Chavez also reports this: "Some professors are planning ways to counter charges that universities have become centers of left-wing indoctrination." Faculty and students at the University of Michigan are planning a conference the title of which refutes the point of the conference: "The 'PC' Frameup: What's behind the Attack." The title leaves no doubt that this conference disputing the reality of political correctness will be politically correct.

Lynne Cheney, Chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, recently cataloged some costs of political correctness. A Harvard historian has quit teaching a course on immigration rather than endure more accusations of racism. He found that to defend himself from such smears he would have to record all his classes and conversation with students. A Michigan professor stopped teaching a particular class rather than endure charges of "racial insensitivity" when he had students read the portions of Malcolm X's autobiography in which Malcolm describes himself as a pimp and a thief.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Government scandals open gates of language

Everybody was waiting for somebody else to open up the — gates. The news was out that members of the House of Representatives had used their cooperative bank as a kind of kitty, paying out cash for some 10,000 bad checks a year, with no penalty. Interest-free loans; hot cash in $10,000 bites; a General Accounting Office report with key lines left out; the speaker of the House declaring the matter closed. Obviously, it was a something-gate.

Safire

To start the bidding, I put "Housegate" in a headline over a political harangue. I'm often first out of the box with what other pundits mutter is a trivialization of Watergate. After Koreagate, which never got off the ground, there were Lancegate and Billygate. (Bert Lance's lively book, "The Truth of the Matter," is out this month and calls to mind those unhalcyon days.) My best was the encapsulation of a minor White House expense-account scandal as doublebillingsgate.

The uninspired Housegate was soon superseded by The Washington Times' Rubbergate, assuming everyone knew that a bounced check was said to be made of rubber. The Wall Street Journal, which ordinarily resists the —gate construction, chimed in with Kitegate, adding insult to injury by describing it as Congress' BCCI — "the Bank for Check-Kiting Congressional Incumbents."

In underworld slang, to kite at first meant "to smuggle messages out of prison" as if by flying a kite, a hawklike bird; its first citation in the present meaning was in Dialect Notes in 1927, the same year rubber check first appeared in The New Republic. Today, some wheeler-dealers differentiate between a rubber check (one returned by the bank unpaid because of insufficient funds in the check-writer's account) and a kited check (one post-dated to allow the check-writer to accumulate money to cover it), but most people use the terms interchangeably.

Perhaps the initial reluctance to label this scandal with the customary -gate construction was caused by possible confusion with the confirmation hearings of Robert M. Gates to head the CIA. Gatesgate was bruited about, but gained no traction because he was not the center of a scandal. However, those hearings turned up two terms of interest, the first to a general audience, the second to spy-novel fans.

Politicization, or "the coloring for political purposes" of intelligence, which presumably should be politics-neutral, was the crux of the Gates hearings. (If it's one day, it's a hearing; if you have to keep listening for days on end, it's hearings.) This mid-1930s word, which triumphed over its longer 1902 rival, politicization, was first applied to the attempt to pull the German Protestant Church into Nazi politics; later, the "total politicization of man" was said to be the essence of Marxist theory. In the British publication The Listener, the word continued through the '70s to have religious overtones, as the church became "concerned with social morality rather than with the ethereal qualities of immortality."

In the United States "politically motivated" is said with a sneer, in contrast to motivations of altruism; here, politicization is a no-no. The title of an article in the current American Speech magazine about the way black is being replaced by African-American is titled "The Politicization of Changing Terms of Self-Reference Among American Slave Descendants" (even so, it's an interesting piece). In 1981, Martin Tolchin of The New York Times wrote that Sen. Robert Byrd "believed in a bipartisan foreign policy and opposed politicization of the AWACS debate."

The word was popularized in the intelligence lexicon in 1987 by none other than Robert Gates, then deputy director of central intelligence, who told the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton that "We intend to tell it as it is, avoiding bias as much as we can or the politicization of our product."

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 20, 1944, during World War II, Gen. Douglas MacArthur stepped ashore at Leyte in the Philippines, 2½ years after he'd said, "I shall return." Said MacArthur: "I have returned."

On this date:

In 1740, Maria Theresa became ruler of Austria, Hungary and Bohemia upon the death of her father, Holy Roman Emperor Charles VI.

In 1903, a joint commission ruled in favor of the United States in a dispute concerning the boundary between the District of Alaska and Canada.

In 1947, Hollywood came under scrutiny as the House Un-American Activities Committee opened hearings in Washington into alleged Communist influence and infiltration in the movie industry.

In 1964, the 31st president of the United States, Herbert Hoover, died in New York at the age of 90.

In 1967, seven men, including a Ku Klux Klan leader and a sheriff's deputy, were convicted in Meridian, Miss., on charges of violating the civil rights of three murdered civil rights workers.

In 1968, former first lady Jacqueline Kennedy married Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis on the island of Scorpio.

In 1973, in the so-called "Saturday Night Massacre," special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox was dismissed and Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and Deputy Attorney General William B. Ruckelshaus resigned.

In 1976, more than 70 people died when the Norwegian tanker Frosta collided with the ferryboat George Prince on the Mississippi River about 20 miles north of New Orleans.

In 1977, three members of the rock group Lynyrd Skynyrd were killed in the crash of a chartered plane near McComb, Miss.

Using bows, arrows dangerous situation

On Oct. 10th the Midland Reporter-Telegram published an article on the use of firearms and bows and arrows within the city limits. Common sense tells "most" of us that the use of deadly weapons in a densely populated area is, at best, a hazarous situation. Some out there never give it a thought.

I have the distinct misfortune of living next door to one of those individuals who came within a heartbeat of impaling me on an arrow while I was in my backyard. My neighbor has no apparent concept of what safety means. This is demonstrated by the fact that, in spite of a solemn promise that it would cease, they — both husband and wife — continued their practice in the face of several confrontations with the police and one with the county attorney. There is no law against it and they will do as they d–n well please in their own backyard, all the while being completely oblivious to the fact that they cannot and do not contain it to their own backyard.

This is not an isolated incident. Unbeknownst to me they had fired arrows into my backyard before. I was unaware of this at the time, but the person who fired that arrow was not unaware of it. They knew where that arrow went and did absolutely nothing to prevent a recurrence. This is outrageous behavior. Hence it did happen again, this time barely missing me. Hopefully errant arrow number three won't hurt anybody. To think it will never happen again is pure folly.

Complaints have been filed. The police can do nothing. It is not against the law. The county attorney will not prosecute under the "reckless endangerment" statute without multiple complaints or unless someone is injured. Doesn't that make you feel better!

Most people don't realize that today's compound bow can make an arrow, at short range, just as deadly as a bullet. They hunt grizzly bears with these things.

I have nothing against archery enthusiasts. I feel that everyone should be able to enjoy their hobbies, but not at anyone else's expense. Special interests usually demand special facilities. Archery is no exception.

It's time to move ahead on gun issue

How many times will we have to hear that it has happened again? Will people finally wake-up when it has happened in every town and affected every family? I'm referring to the gunman who opened fire in a restaurant in Killeen today (Wednesday, Oct. 16) and killed 23 people. It could easily have been any one of us.

It seems to be happening everywhere. Yes, I know that our Constitution gives us the right to bear arms, but that was determined over 200 years ago. Isn't it about time we advanced on this issue of allowing people to purchase guns and keep them in their homes? There are probably millions of gun owners who are sane and use their guns for personal enjoyment of hunting, but how can this pleasurable pastime be justified to a family who has lost a loved one who was just having lunch in their hometown? How many more children will have to die in schoolyards?

Think about it the next time you are enjoying a meal in a restaurant.

Political cartoon pictorial dirty joke

The political cartoon on the editorial page in the Friday Midland Reporter-Telegram was disgusting. It was the pictorial equivalent of a dirty joke. All the elements were there: the stereotyped ethnic, the lecherous grin, the innuendo. It could have been captioned, "Hey, Sandra baby, how 'bout you and me, you know ...." (wink, elbow nudge).

Assuming you have a choice regarding what to print from the material which comes over the wire service, I suggest that your editorial staff decision to print the subject cartoon demonstrated an appalling lack of sensitivity and good taste.

President Bush and many of our leaders have called for a time of healing after the national disaster which was the recent confirmation process. Granted, questions, doubt, and suspicion will remain in the mind of the public for some time to come, but it serves no useful purpose for cartoonist Steve Benson and the Midland Reporter-Telegram staff to throw gasoline on the smoldering embers.

Articles on mental illness excellent

Thank you for the excellent articles on mental illness which ran in the Oct. 6 edition of the Reporter-Telegram. They were not only informative but well researched and sensitively written by Linda Anderson.

She portrayed on one hand the pain and frustration of those experiencing chronic mental illness and, on the other hand, the pain and frustration of those who love them. Hopefully the information will help the public at large to be more caring and accepting. Also, those involved first-hand, as well as the man-on-the-street, can take heart because new medications, symptom-management, psychosocial programs in the area, and supported job opportunities can erase the stigma that has plagued this population and help them realize a fuller life than dreamed possible only a few years ago.

The members of the Alliance of the Mentally Ill (AMI) thank you. I thank you.

READERS' VIEWS on: Hearings

Thomas fooled senators, public

Justice Thomas gulled the Senate Judiciary Committee, the Senate in general, and a majority of the public. In his initial address to the committee he adamantly and vehemently told them "I am not going to give you the rope with which to hang me."

This is a tacit admission that the rope was out there — the rope which Professor Hill had revealed. This is a tacit admission that he will lie, deny, or whatever it takes to refute the allegations. He took the position that the best defense is an attacking offense. And he did just that with spirit. He outright snookered them.

When Prof. Hill took a polygraph test and the results were announced — he attacked again. He challenged the judiciary committee, knowing full well they would not take up the gauntlet, "I will take a polygraph test if the members of the committee will also take the test." This is like throwing a rock in the lake and saying, "If it sinks, I'm innocent." Ergo, no polygraph tests. What senator, or his staff would have been exposed as to leaking the Hill charges? Sen. Orrin Hatch? "Me thinkest thou protesteth too much." What a despicable political tirade! Why Sen. Hatch? What more invidious way to besmirch the Democrats who would be presumed guilty of the leak. And his bellicose orations.

My impression of Justice Thomas after watching the travesty: He is a comsummate prevaricator and obfuscant. He is slick!

Smart? No. Why? He commited the most asinine, idiotic act a public figure could do in an effort to sway emotional attitudes to his side of the scales. He stated "I would rather receive the assassin's bullet than to go through this process again. If they want to assassinate me, let them assassinate me!" Then he compounded the mistake, "If they're going to kill me, let them kill me!"

How may hate-filled skinheads are there out there who heard these utterances? How many zealot Klu Klux Klanners? This is an open invitation to them. Intelligent? Yes. Smart? No.

Further he has the least minimal qualifications a nominee could have. Had not President Bush known of him personally and someone proposed him, President Bush would have rejected the proposal in scorn. Justice Thomas is not qualified by judicial experience.

Not a man came to Hill's rescue

This letter is not about Anita Hill, Clarence Thomas, liberals or conservatives, but it's about women of all color. I watched all of us verbally raped, stereotyped, and, yes, lynched this past weekend (Oct. 12-13), by men skilled in keeping women in their places, and not a man came to her rescue or our rescue.

These same tactics were used by men to keep my grandmothers (born the year the Civil War ended) from getting the vote. "They would fantasize about the candidates — too emotional — men would use their vote." I was watching a rerun, only worse.

Now, Mr. Editor, you can't have it both ways. Anita was too calm, too believable, to be believed.

Now, men admit that we do have a mind, but if they don't like what comes out, "we have lost it; only fantasy!"

Clarence had only to mention race and stereotype, magic! Both sides carried him on a velvet pillow. This is not prejudice against women, it's bigotry and there is a difference. Bigotry is not prejudging facts, it is more deceptive in that it gives the feelings of superiority to those whose ego demands someone to be better than.

A bigot does not want the facts, but rather he prefers the feelings which it gives him, superiority. When his attitude is noticed by others, he then blames those whom he is intolerant of.

I personally know women who have stayed calm-and-silent, until now. For up to 50 years, we had to sir to overcome that stereotype placed on us by men, but I promise you that one day soon all that submerged fury will be released with precision by women of all colors, and the good ol' boys won't know what hit them.

Limitations needed for politicians' terms

After the TV spectacle Congress subjected Clarence Thomas and Anita Hill to this past weekend, is there anyone out there that doesn't feel the time has come to clear out Congress?

These elected officials continually enact laws and exempt themselves from the very laws they impose on us. At the same time they have the power to increase their own salaries and vote themselves all kinds of "perks." Let's work to get term limitations on all elected politicians and get some control over that governing body.

I urge all to read George Will's column in the Sunday, Oct. 13, Midland Reporter-Telegram. He has reluctantly come to the conclusion that the only salvation for our country is term limitations of politicians, and I heartily agree.

Cartoons better than TV hearings

As I watched the live cartoons Saturday morning, Oct. 12, I was amazed at the extreme lows that comedy was subjected to.

After having this live comedy stuffed down my throat for two days before that I was appalled by the ego trips these sitdown comics — every one — went on their lonely, small-mind ways at my expense.

This entertainment was so far below the mentality of the regular cartoons that I shudder to think of who is in charge of me and my country.

I mean both political parties have sunk lower than whale "doodoo" and that is at the bottom of the ocean.

Boo to the television networks.

Did Thomas' tears prove innocence?

I am very sorry that Clarence Thomas was confirmed. Paraphrasing an Associated Press story, "Thomas Tears Sway Panel: Panel members believe Thomas' tears prove truthfulness, while Professor Hill's calm, poised demeanor prove her to be cold and calculating, ergo false."

Tell me, what do Jimmy Swaggert's tears prove?

The press derided Pat Schroeder's tears when she declared in a press conference that she would not seek higher office. The formula seems to be thus: Women's tears are estrogen-tainted and therefore not credible. However, a woman who fails to shed tears under stress is deemed a liar by her very lack of tears. I am reminded of the Puritans' test to determine witchcraft: throw the victim in a lake; if she drowns, she is innocent.

This bit of doggerel is for Sen. Specter:

"Who will cheer for Senator Specter?
Of womankind, he's no protector!
Here's a thought for him to ponder
Ere he goes to the great 'beyonder'—
Suppose at Heaven's gate you meet
Mother Theresa and not St. Pete?"

READERS' VIEWS on: CAF's Air Show

CAF appreciates city's cooperation

The members and staff of the Confederate Air Force wish to thank the citizens and businesses of Midland for all their cooperation and understanding during the past several months.

Moving the headquarters and beginning at a new locale with a new staff has been challenging. Add to this the construction and airshow and our load would have been impossible without the willing support of the local community. It's been tough and not all things have gone as we hoped, but the genuine generosity and hospitality of the community has made it possible.

Thanks again for the understanding and help — we appreciate you and your contribution.

CAF's air show impressive event

I just want to comment on the CAF Air Show this past Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 12-13.

I was very impressed with the way it was handled, considering it was the FIRST show, with an estimated 50,000 people. There are so many people you will never hear the name of that volunteered and worked so many hours so hard, long before the big day! I think for that size crowd and their fast show, it ran extremely smooth.

A standing ovation for all the CAF employees, CAF colonels and the colonel's ladies.

Thomas confirmation another victory for Bush

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — President Bush has done it again. Senate confirmation of Judge Clarence Thomas for associate justice of the United States Supreme Court was another outstanding victory for the president's policies.

Hearst

He stood firmly behind the controversial judge throughout the sensational sexual harassment charges made before the Senate Judicial Committee by his former assistant, Anita Hill.

He did so at the risk of losing many female votes in next year's presidential election. He did so because none of the charges were proved and Thomas denied them with furious indignation. He was also conscious of the New York Times/CBS poll taken three days after the testimony of the judge and Miss Hill. It showed that 53 percent of the people polled believed Thomas. Only 24 percent believed the lurid allegations made by the articulate, composed Miss Hill, now a professor with the University of Oklahoma's Law School.

I had the opportunity of being with Bush at the White House a few hours before the Senate voted 52-48 to confirm the appointment of Thomas to the Supreme Court. Because he knew at that time that enough Democrats would join 43 Republicans in voting for the judge's confirmation, the president was relaxed. He radiated relief and gratification over his victory as he greeted and then sat at the conference table in the historic Roosevelt Room of the White House with the editors of the Hearst newspapers and the publisher of one of our Texas newspapers, the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Also present was my very dear friend, Frank Bennack Jr., president of The Hearst Corporation, formerly publisher of our San Antonio newspaper, The Light, and a long-time close friend of Bush. Others present included Joe Kingsbury-Smith, our national editor, and Charles J. Lewis, chief of the Hearst Newspapers Washington bureau.

I sat on the president's right. Frank sat on his left. The editors and publishers of all our newspapers were in Washington for the meeting with the president and for their annual conference headed by Bob Danzig, vice president and general manager of our newspapers. Because the Roosevelt Room conference table will seat only 16 people, the publishers, including my dear son, William Randolph Hearst III, and Bob Danzig let the editors attend.

At the end of the 35-minute question and answer conference with the president, he invited all of us into the Oval Office where he had each one of us stand alone with him for a photo. Smiling cheerfully, showing no sign of fatigue, he personified graciousness.

As editor-in-chief of our newspapers, I asked the first question, which was, "what would be the significance for the future of humanity if he and President Gorbachev conclude nuclear arms agreements on the basis of what President Bush has in mind?"

The president replied that he thought it would go "a long way — not all the way — but a long way to ensuring young people in this country that they will grow up in a much less tense world. I really think it's that important. The response to our proposals has been wonderful from all around the world. And the response from the Soviets has been positive...They've pledged full cooperation...I think it's a big step forward."

Bennack, with the next question, noted the economy continues to be soft both for businesses and their customers. He asked whether the president believed some federal action will be required, or whether he was satisfied we are coming out of the recession.

"I think we're coming out of it," he replied, adding "but I'd like to think more is required from the federal government level. We've had some proposals for growth that are long overdue." He cited a reduction in the capital gains tax and reiterated his conviction it would stimulate new business "and, thus, create new jobs." I'm confident he is right.

With calm rationality, the president fielded questions on numerous subjects, including the Middle East peace process, Fidel Castro, whose future "is bleak," and Iraq with whom the United States will not resume normal relations as long as Saddam Hussein remains in power.

Listening to the president face to face strengthened my conviction that he will be re-elected for a second term next year.

Alabama takes sixth straight from No. 8 Vols

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Siran Stacy scored twice and Derrick Lassic once on short runs in the fourth quarter as freshman quarterback Jay Barker rallied No. 14 Alabama to a 24-19 victory over No. 8 Tennessee on Saturday.

Alabama (6-1 overall, 3-1 Southeastern Conference) won its sixth straight over the Vols before the largest crowd ever to see a football game in Alabama, 86,293, and increased its lead in the series to 40-27-7.

The Crimson Tide trailed 6-3 when quarterback Danny Wood-son went out with a pulled hamstring in the third quarter.

John Becksvoort had given Tennessee (4-2, 2-2) the lead on field goals of 33 and 43 yards in the second quarter. With a 21-yard field goal by Alabama's Hamp Greene, the game was shaping up as a mirror image of last year, when Alabama won 9-6 at Knoxville in a game of field goals.

BERKELEY, Calif. — Jay Barry rushed for 143 yards and one score and Beno Bryant scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 65-yard run in the fourth quarter as third-ranked Washington beat No. 7 California in a Pacific-10 showdown.

California (5-1) tied it at 17-all on Lindsey Chapman's 68-yard TD run with one second left in the third quarter. But Washington (6-0) came back 65 seconds later and took the lead on the scoring dash by Bryant, who cut right and outraced the Cal secondary into the end zone.

Bryant gained 99 yards on 12 carries for the Huskies, whose top-ranked defense bent but didn't break against Cal's high-powered offense. Washington, which was allowing only six points and 220 yards per game, outgained Cal 441-329 in total yardage.

No.6 Florida 41, N Illinois 10

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Sixth-ranked Florida wasn't very sharp. Then again, it didn't have to be.

The Gators scored on their first two possessions, then muddled through a lethargic 21-minute stretch before pulling away to a homecoming rout of Northern Illinois.

Shane Matthews threw for 336 yards and two touchdowns to pace the victory before a crowd of 83,708 at Florida Field. The Gators (6-1) will have a week off before beginning a stretch run for the Southeastern Conference championship against Auburn.

No. 9 Nebraska 38, Kansas St. 31

LINCOLN, Neb. — Derek Brown scored three touchdowns, but No. 9 Nebraska needed a goal line stand in the final minute to escape with a victory over Kansas State.

It was the most points ever scored by a Kansas State team against Nebraska, which entered its homecoming game favored by 35 points.

Both teams started the game 4-1 overall and 1-0 in the Big Eight, with their only losses coming to No. 3 Washington.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Tony Sacca threw for more than 200 yards for the fourth straight game and ran 20 yards for a touchdown and O.J. McDuffie scored on a 55-yard punt return as 10th-ranked Penn State snapped Rutgers' four-game winning streak.

Penn State (6-2) rallied from a 14-7 deficit to lead 21-14 at halftime with the help of McDuffie's punt return and 55-yard pass by Sacca to set up the go-ahead TD with 40 seconds left in the half.

Marshall 14

RALEIGH, N.C. — Charles Davenport ran under a 34-yard touchdown pass in the back of the end zone with 24 seconds left as No. 11 North Carolina erased a nine-point deficit in the final three minutes to beat Division I-AA Marshall.

The winning strike was made possible when Damon Hartman's onside kick was recovered by Sebastian Savage at the Marshall 48 with one minute left. Geoff Bender threw four incompletions but got a reprieve when Marshall was called for being offside on fourth down. Bender hit Ledel George at the 34 for the first down and then found Davenport in the end zone.

No. 12 Oklahoma 17

NORMAN, Okla. — Darian Hagan stung 12th-ranked Oklahoma with his passing, throwing for three first-quarter touchdowns in a span of three minutes in leading No. 22 Colorado.

The Buffaloes (4-2 overall, 2-0 Big Eight) twice drove 99 yards for touchdowns in winning 17th straight conference game. It was the most points ever scored in Norman by Colorado.

Oklahoma (4-2, 1-1) lost to the Buffaloes for the third straight year and had its Big Eight title chances crippled. Other than Nebraska, the last conference team to beat the Sooners three consecutive times was Kansas State in 1925-27.

No. 15 Iowa 24, No. 13 Illinois 21

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Matt Rodgers scored on a quarterback sneak with 2½ minutes left to give No. 15 Iowa a victory over No. 13 Illinois and knock the Illini out of first place in the Big Ten.

Rodgers bulled into the end zone from a yard out to cap a 14-play, 69-yard drive. The Hawkeyes had failed on five previous possessions in Illinois territory in the second half, but were able to stay in the game because an aroused defense blanked the Illini after giving up 250 yards and 21 points in the first half.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vanderbilt tailback Corey Harris picked up a teammate's fumble and raced 51 yards for the go-ahead touchdown and Georgia kicker Kanon Parkman missed two late field goals as the Commodores beat the 17th-ranked Bulldogs.

The Commodores (2-5 overall, 1-3 Southeastern Conference) added a 6-yard scoring run by Wilson on the first play of the fourth quarter to push the edge to 27-17 before the Bulldogs (5-2, 3-2) mounted a belated rally behind quarterback Greg Talley.

Lion, 49er records seem reversed as two face off

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

Take your average football fan who happens to have spent the last seven weeks on a jaunt to the North Pole. He gets home, picks up a newspaper and finds:

Detroit (5-1) at San Francisco (2-4).

No, but it's the NFL, 1991.

Joe Montana is gone for the season with elbow surgery. Barry Sanders and Rodney Peete are staging miracle comebacks weekly. But Sunday's game in San Francisco will go a long way toward deciding how much the times have changed.

■ Oilers at Dolphins/10B

"I've said all along that we're the best young team in football," says coach Wayne Fontes of the Lions, who scored 21 points in the final six minutes two weeks ago to erase a 20-3 deficit and beat Minnesota.

"But I emphasize the word 'young.'"

Montana's absence is one problem, although Steve Young leads the NFL in passing efficiency and the 49ers' offense is ranked third in the league.

NFL Week

"Elway has a Marty Schottenheimer doll he sticks pins into," says the Kansas City coach.

Cincinnati (0-6) at Buffalo (6-1) (Monday night)

Who would have thought that this would be a mismatch when the Monday night moguls chose it for their schedule?

It's gotten so bad in Cincinnati that coach Sam Wyche said he would understand if general manager Mike Brown chose to fire him.

"Heck, I don't know what the answer is, either," Wyche say.

The answer for Buffalo last week was Indianapolis, which went down quietly, 42-6 after the Bills had been blown out by Kansas City before a nationwide audience.

Seattle (3-4) at Pittsburgh (3-3)

More quarterbacks.

Dave Krieg will be back for the Seahawks for the first time since he broke a thumb on the opening week of the season.

Chuck Noll, meanwhile, may use the convenience of Bubby Brister's sore knee to start Neil O'Donnell, who engineered the comeback from a 20-0 deficit against the Giants last Monday. In fact, O'Donnell was too good — if he hadn't scored so quickly, New York wouldn't have had time left to come back for the winning field goal.

Los Angeles Rams (3-3) at Los Angeles Raiders (4-3)

Is this city vs. suburbs or a cross-town rivalry? Try the first, although the Rams were the home team in the Coliseum for three decades.

Now it's the Raiders, who may have righted themselves by coming back from 17-0 down in Seattle last week to win in overtime.

The Rams, meanwhile, have put themselves in the position John Robinson wanted — with two straight wins, albeit over Green Bay and San Diego, they can't be written out of the playoff race yet.

Minnesota (3-4) at New England (2-4)

Last week's victim was the Cards, 34-7. This week they get the Patriots, who may be wondering who their owner is. Technically, it's the NFL, which took them over this week to arbitrate the dispute between Victor Kiam and Fran Murray.

The Saints just muddled through against the Eagles, but that was half a team — one with a defense.

The Bucs have at least solved their quarterback controversy. But what can Chris Chandler do against a defense that has allowed just three touchdowns all season and whose 201 yards allowed against Philadelphia was the most they've given up in four weeks.

Jets (3-4) at Indianapolis (0-7)

When was the last time the Jets were favored on the road by nearly two touchdowns? That's how desperate the situation has become in Indianapolis, which has scored just 49 points all year.

The Jets have played well in their last four games, including the 23-20 loss to the Oilers last week. Jeff George could exploit their secondary, but with the Colts' banged-up line, he's unlikely to have time to do it.

Atlanta (3-3) at Phoenix (3-4)

After starting 2-0, the Cards are back where they're accustomed to be, the latest loss being that embarrassment in Minnesota.

But this could be a trap. Atlanta is coming in on a high after beating the 49ers and the Falcons, who have won two straight on the road, aren't accustomed to winning away from Fulton County Stadium.

Cleveland (2-4) at San Diego (1-6)

The Browns try hard, although they're starting to be outmatched, as they were last week in Dallas. Still, Bernie Kosar is the only quarterback in the NFL without an interception.

The Chargers are one of those teams that bad things happen to. One good thing: quarterback John Friesz threw for 306 yards against the Rams last week, showing some potential even in a loss.

Kansas City (5-2) at Denver (4-2)

Trivia question: who was the quarterback for the Broncos the last time the Chiefs won in Denver in 1982? Answer: Steve DeBerg, who just happens to enjoying his greatest success in Kansas City at age 37.

This game has all kinds of twists.

Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer isn't a fan of the Broncos either. He's 0-4 against them at Mile High Stadium; narrowly lost two AFC title games to Denver while at Cleveland and finally beat them last year in Kansas City.

Schottenheimer's particular devil has been John Elway, who tied the Browns with a 92-yard drive against them in the 1986 AFC championship and beat them last season in Denver with an improbable fourth-down play that set up David Treadwell's winning field goal.

What distinguishes the CMO from simple pass-throughs is how they return principal to the investor. While a pass-through will make a fractional return of principal each and every month, the CMO typically provides an "interest only" period during which no principal is repaid to the holder.

(From 1B)

Richardson's passing, running and receiving was too much for the Bears.

The Aggies improved to 4-1 overall and 2-0 in Southwest Conference play while Baylor dropped to 5-2 and 2-2.

Richardson ran for two touchdowns, passed for 182 yards and caught a pass that put the Aggies in position for another touchdown. He had 42 yards rushing on seven carries.

The A&M defense sacked Baylor quarterback J.J. Joe six times, intercepted him once, and caused him to lose a fumble.

Arkansas 14, Texas 13

LITTLE ROCK — Jason Allen and Kerwin Price converted Texas mistakes into first-half touchdowns and Jason Post missed a fourth quarter field goal as Arkansas held on for a victory over Texas in the final game of their conference rivalry.

Allen's 30-yard touchdown pass to Ron Dickerson and Price's 18-yard run gave Arkansas a 14-0 lead. Texas kept the Razorbacks in a hole throughout the second half and had a chance to tie with 10:18 left, but Jason Ziegler was wide right on an extra point attempt following Phil Brown's 55-yard touchdown run.

The Longhorns started with 6:55 left, and with the help of a personal foul, reached the Arkansas 27. Eventually, David McWilliams sent in Post to try a 39-yard field goal attempt with 3:45 left but he missed to the left.

Minutes after the game, many of the Arkansas players returned to the middle of the field and celebrated. Some had already doffed their shoulder pads. Arkansas (5-2) moved to 4-0 in the SWC. Next year, the Razorbacks will compete in the Southeastern Conference. Texas (2-3) dropped to 1-1 in the league.

HOUSTON — Freshman running back Derrick Cullors ran for two touchdowns as Texas Christian reeled off 26 unanswered points in the second half and rallied for a victory over Rice.

Quarterback Tim Schade completed 30 of 47 passes for the Horned Frogs for 347 yards, including two for touchdowns, and overcame a pair of interceptions that led to Rice scores.

The victory boosts Texas Christian to 5-1 overall and 2-1 in the Southwest Conference.

Houston 49, SMU 20

HOUSTON — Donald Douglas sparkled in Houston's three-quarterback rotation with touchdown passes of 18 and 46 yards to Marcus Grant and two 1-yard touchdown runs, leading the Cougars to a victory over Southern Methodist.

Houston's starting quarterback David Klingler missed the game because of an inner ear infection and Coach John Jenkins rotated Douglas, Jimmy Klingler and Chandler Evans on each play in the first half.

Douglas, a transfer from Florida where he started four games, remained in the game in the second half and engineered the runaway victory. He completed 19 of 28 passes for 319 yards and he rushed for 103 yards on 16 carries.

The Cougars (2-4, 1-2), who had not won since beating Louisiana Tech 73-3 in their season opener, jumped to a 28-8 halftime lead on Douglas' two touchdown passes and a two-yard return by Michael Newhouse with a blocked punt.

SMU dropped to a 1-5 overall record and 0-4 in the Southwest Conference.

Dan Freiburger escaped Houston's rush for a touchdown drive late in the second quarter, climaxed by Rongea Hill's three-yard run. Freiburger was sacked seven times in the first half and was replaced by sophomore Todd Rits in the second half.

Houston's homecoming crowd quickly chose Douglas their favorite in the quarterback rotation system. By the second quarter, they were cheering Douglas' appearance on the field.

Struggling Dolphins host Houston

Associated Press

MIAMI — It was one of the worst defeats in coach Don Shula's career. The Miami Dolphins defense collapsed, and the offense needed a fourth-quarter touchdown to avert a shutout.

That describes last weekend's 42-7 loss at Kansas City. It also describes Miami's most recent game against Houston, a 39-7 loss in 1989.

The struggling Dolphins (3-4) and the stampeding Oilers (5-1) meet again Sunday at Joe Robbie Stadium. Another drubbing could be in the offing.

"I hope not," Dolphins receiver Jim Jensen said. "But they are pretty explosive. I think we have to score an awful lot of points."

Miami's first and most recent encounter with Houston's run-and-shoot attack was a dismal failure. Warren Moon completed 19 of 23 passes for 254 yards and two touchdowns, and the Oilers added 197 yards on the ground.

"Complete domination," Shula recalled.

"I remember getting beat for two long passes and a touchdown," said Miami cornerback J.B. Brown, then a rookie reserve and now a starter. "It was a rough day for the whole team and especially rough for me."

Can it happen again?

"Most definitely," Brown said. "There's always a danger of that, because they have four potent receivers who are quick and can run after they catch the ball."

Brown said Miami now has a better idea of how to defend against Houston — pressure Moon and force him to throw into coverage. But the game plan still must be hastily deployed.

"This is the problem anybody has that gets ready to play Houston," Shula said. "They're different, and you don't have a lot of time to work on them."

The Oilers lead the NFL in passing and have won half their games by three touchdowns or more. Moon says Houston and Miami both are better than two years ago.

"We've become a little more consistent, and we're a better defensive team," Moon said. "Miami has become a better running team — although they've had problems this year — and they've improved their defense immensely. They're a lot better against the run, taking away last week."

While Moon tries valiantly to make Miami sound like the Washington Redskins, in truth, the team is reeling. Last weekend's loss at Kansas City was the Dolphins' worst since 1970, and a similar pasting Sunday could extinguish their already dimming playoff hopes.

Fonda promises to ax chop

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jane Fonda promised Saturday she would stop doing the "tomahawk chop" as American Indians protested at the World Series that mimicing their sacred customs was racist.

"I don't believe I've betrayed their cause," she said before Game 1 of the Series. "I support them very much. But I'm sorry it offends them and I'm not going to do it anymore."

About 250 Indians gathered outside the Metrodome before the game, emphatically but peacefully protesting the way some Atlanta fans wear headdresses, wave tomahawks and mimic a war whoop — all sacred Indian customs. But what may be the unkindest chop of all is the nationally televised participation of Fonda, a Indian ally.

Fonda, a fixture at Atlanta games at the side of fiance and Braves owner Ted Turner, is well-known for her liberal sensitivities, not the least being her arrest in Seattle in 1970 during an American Indian Movement attempt to occupy Fort Lawton.

"We're pretty upset with her and surprised," Clyde Bellecourt, an AIM leader said during the protest. "She carries that John Wayne frontier mentality, 'The only good Indian is a dead Indian.'"

Bellecourt said the group is trying to get teams like the Braves and the Cleveland Indians and the NFL's Washington Redskins to change their names or at least get their fans to stop acting in ways that demean Indians.

"It's not so much the names," he said. "It's the chanting and the chopping."

Many wore T-shirts saying "Stop the Chop" and carried signs characterizing Fonda, Turner and Braves' fans as racists.

A banner they hung on an outer wall of the Metrodome said: "Indians Are a People, Not a Mascot for America's Fun and Games."

A non-Indian protester questioned Fonda's loyalty to Indians rights' and other causes.

"She was with the Vietnam protesters and with other protests for Indian rights," Rose Wojnar of St. Paul said. "Was that just an act, too?"

Free Retirement Planning Seminar

Date: Tuesday, October 22, 1991
Time: 7:00 p.m.
Place: Midland Hilton

At this informative meeting, you'll discover the answers to several very important questions regarding your retirement benefits. For example:

- Should you elect to receive a lump sum payment of your benefits or take a monthly payment option?
- Is it better to pay taxes on the money using the 5 or 10 year averaging method, or establish an IRA Rollover?
- If you decide on an IRA Rollover, how do you select the plan best suited to your needs?

Admission is free but seats are limited. Reserve your place today.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Classics series starts this week for seniors

By H.A. Tuck

Session II of the the College Classics series starts this week ... but only if you are at least 55 years of age. These are classes which meet once or twice a week in the afternoons. There is a flat fee of $25 that covers as many of the classes in this session as you wish to take.

Only because all the instructors are volunteers can such a low fee be offered. The instructional staff is drawn from the college faculty as well as from knowledgeable community residents.

Since several of these classes start Monday afternoon, you need to register on Monday morning in the Continuing Education offices at the Administration Building. Call 685-4518 for more information.

The Midland Arts Association's 14th annual Fall Juried Show ends on Friday. It's a superb display of art in a wide range of styles and media from area artists, photographers, sculptors and ceramacists.

You may view the show today from 1-5 p.m., Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m.-10 p.m. and Friday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. The show is being displayed at McCormick Gallery, located in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Admission always is free.

Appearing next will be works by Kathy Martin of West Hills, California. Her etching collages are on handmade paper, using found objects, pastels, colored pencil, text, drawings, fibers, and etchings. The exhibition of her recent works will be in McCormick Gallery, Nov. 2-24.

We mentioned the upcoming deadline for the fourth annual Hilda Simmons Levitt Poetry Contest, but need to clarify the entry requirements. The contest is open to any student currently registered in any Midland College English classes or anyone who have been registered in an English class at MC within the past year. In other words, if you took an English class in the 1990 fall, 1991 spring or either 1991 summer session, you would be eligible.

And the deadline for the contest remains Oct. 31. Prizes for the top three winners are $500 cash for first place, $200 for second, and $100 for third, plus plaques. Contact any member of the English faculty or anyone at the Chap Comp Center for entry information.

Construction begins on addition for Trinity School

Staff Report

Construction has begun on the 8,800 square foot upper school facility to expand Trinity School.

The $645,000 project will provide seven classrooms, two science labs, a commons and offices. The building is designed to serve students in grades nine through twelve.

Rhotenberry Wellen designed the addition and it is being built by Campbell Construction Co. Both are Midland firms.

The building represents the second phase of a building expansion program at the school. The first phase included the five-classroom building for grades fourth and fifth. The building was completed in December 1990.

Trinity is a private school which has an enrollment of more than 450 students. Its upper school program was established in 1988.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

David L. Anderson, Ph.D., professor of history and chairman of the department of history and political science at the University of Indianapolis, recently was named the 1991 Indiana Professor of the Year.

The Council for the Advancement and Support of Education in Washington, D.C., announced the award.

Anderson

Anderson, a former Midlander, was the 1964 valedictorian of Lee High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Anderson of Midland.

The professor was selected for the award based on "his ability to combine classroom teaching with ongoing historical research and writing scholarly textbooks while maintaining a central concern for the students who read them."

Anderson joined the University of Indianapoplis faculty in 1981. He has taught and researched in various areas of U.S. diplomatic history.

He is the author of "Trapped by Success: The Eisenhower Administration and Vietnam," published by Columbia Press and "Imperialism and Idealism: American Diplomats in China, 1861-1898" published by Indiana University Press.

MISD grading system frets some parents

Plan has problems, parents say

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A few parents who have transferred their children into Midland public schools have taken exception to the district's system of assigning grade points.

"The 6.0 grade point scale and how grades are weighted discriminates against transfer students," according to Mary Tyson, the mother of a junior at Midland High School.

"This is a peculiar and awkward system, especially for kids transferring into the district from another state which has no comparable system," added Alice Brown, mother of a sophomore.

Ms. Brown said her son attended schools in Colorado prior to coming to Midland.

"'In a larger population, like Denver, the area is very homogeneous," Ms. Brown said. "The Denver schools didn't feel a need for class strata. My son received advanced credit for a few of the courses he took. But courses which were honors level by Denver's standards were advanced by MISD's standards."

"When you get three-tenths of a grade point more for a

With National Honor Society inductions looming, parents are turning their attention to grade point averages. And Midland public schools' 6.0 grade scale has some parents in a dither.

"A specific grade point average means a different numerical score for each student," said Sylvia Sims, the mother of a daughter at Lee High School. "This can be very confusing to figure out," she said.

The 6.0 grading scale was designed to weight grade points for four different levels (or tiers) of instruction — basic skills, general, advanced and honors courses.

"We modified the grade point average to reflect the tiers when we added the fourth tier," said Ted Miller, spokesperson for Midland Independent School District. "The program has been in place for several years," he noted.

So how did the four tiers come about?

"We had general and honors tiers prior to 1981," said Maridell Fryar, MISD executive director of instructional services.

In 1981, Chapter 75 curriculum guidelines — dictated by the state — required that basics classes be added.

The basics courses offered students who were not operating at grade level an opportunity to remediate, or rather, accelerate their learning.

"The ability of the students is not the driving factor in being placed in basic skills classes," according to information from the school district. "Rather, student achievement or mastery on the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test diagnoses the need for a student to be placed in the basic skills program."

Ms. Fryar said the basic skills classes are designed for students who have "gaps in knowledge."

"The basic skills courses — such as Fundamentals of Math or Pre-Algebra — do not qualify for college credit," Ms. Fryar said. "The general program, however, is college preparatory and will be accepted by all colleges."

The impetus to add a fourth tier occurred when the state mandated that it would only fund gifted and talented programs consisting of students in the top five percent of their class, according to Ms. Fryar.

Parents began coming to school board meetings complaining that the standards to qualify for the gifted program were too tough. Parents were concerned that students who weren't in the top five percent of their class, but weren't challenged by general courses, were having their needs ignored.

"We wanted to be responsive to students who were top achievers, but not in that five percent," Ms. Fryar said.

Hence, the advanced tier was developed and

Perez gets probation in death of ex-spouse

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A 42-year-old Midland woman, who claimed self-defense in the fatal shooting of her ex-husband, was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter and sentenced to four years probation by a 12-person jury Saturday.

The jury deliberated for about 12 hours.

The verdict followed four days of testimony which concluded Friday in the case against Celia Garcia Perez in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court.

Jurors opted for the lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter, a second degree felony, rather than murder. Ms. Perez was sentenced to two years imprisonment to be suspended to four years probation as requested by jurors, Judge Hyde said.

The case centered on whether Ms. Perez was a battered woman and acted in self-defense when her ex-husband, Jesus Aguilar Perez, 47, was fatally shot about 1:35 a.m. Aug. 23, 1990.

Testimony indicated that the couple had been married about 18 years and divorced in November of 1988.

Family, friends, a family violence counselor and Ms. Perez told jurors that since the early days of her marriage as well as after her divorce — up until the night of the shooting — she had been physically and mentally abused.

A tearful Ms. Perez related under oath incidents that led up to the shooting.

During the day before the killing, Ms. Perez said she was planning a trip to Dallas with a woman friend. Her three children, she said, were to go on a fishing trip with their father, Perez.

After a series of phone calls and visits by Perez to Ms. Perez's home at 925 N. Weatherford St., Ms. Perez testified that she confronted her angry ex-husband outside her house late that night.

Ms. Perez said Perez told her that she could not go to Dallas. She Noted surgeon stresses need for education

■ Dr. Denton Cooley tells local medical personnel new technolgy is being developed in cardiac surgery.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Renowned heart surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley told a group of local physicians and medical personnel Saturday to keep the learning process alive.

"We're still in the learning phase in cardiac surgery," he said. "I hope that never ends. We've got the ongoing opportunity to develop new technology for the benefit of our patients."

Cooley spoke at a seminar sponsored by the Heart and Vascular Institute of Midland and a group of medically-related sales firms.

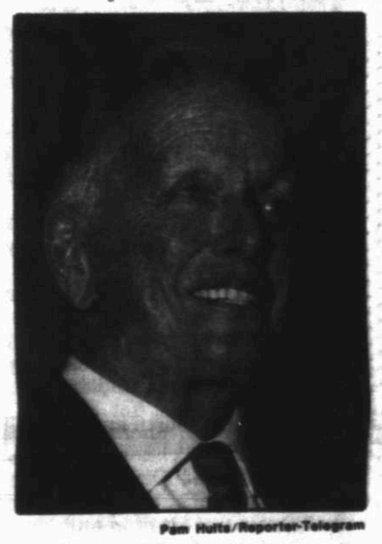

Cooley, founder of the Texas Heart Institute of Houston and a pioneer for development of surgical procedures, said his work is at the same time becoming more developed and more difficult.

"Statistics will tell you we've improved (open-heart surgery's) effectiveness," he said. At the same time, however, the "changing face" of patients has increased the risks, Cooley said.

Patient trends show more women and older persons — both groups for whom risks are slightly elevated — are requiring surgery, and many more people are undergoing their second heart surgery. Increasing numbers of those high-risk patients have shown a slight increase in the rate of death during the operation.

But, new techniques have given patients an 80 percent chance of post-operative survival, a great improvement over the 20 percent rate common when the surgeries first began, in the 1950s.

Techniques developed at the Institute include the use of air-driven pumps in patients with heart disease, and patches made of Dacron fabric for removal of aneurysms, or tumors in the heart.

Pam Hutts/Reporter-Telegram

Dr. Denton Cooley

"A lot of patients have come in for a transplant but have benefitted from the patch instead," Cooley said. "It has given us results far superior to anything we've ever done."

In addition, Institute researchers have developed an battery-operated heart pump used for the first time only six weeks ago with continuing success. The surgical team headed by Cooley has installed four complete artifical hearts.

Although Cooley said no artificial heart currently available has been entirely successful, the Institute is working with a French specialist to develop one that is anatomically compatible with the body — a feature previous models lacked.

"Perhaps after another 10 years, we'll have a total artifical heart," Cooley said. "We're continuing our experimentation."

A local physician said the availability of such technology has greatly increased in the local area over the last five years. Dr. P.V. Patel, a cardiologist with the Midland Heart and Vascular Insitute, said advances in the field are spreading throughout the country

GARY OTT

Thomas hearing shows true view of 'esteemed' senators

It has been suggested that the only good thing to come out of the Clarence Thomas confirmation hearings was that men — especially chauvinistic pigs with names like Bubba and Tommy Earl — were finally forced to acknowledge the existence of "sexual harassment" in the workplace.

Ott

Repeatedly, stern-looking people — both senators and TV commentators — took microphones in hand and delivered powerful speeches, invariably containing such phrases as, "Sexual harassment occurs every single day. Women have known it for years. Now men are becoming aware of just how painful their careless words and actions can be. If this ugly mess, hurtful though it has been for the individuals involved, serves as an incentive for this country to face the reality of the problem, then all has not been lost. Some good will result from an otherwise dismal ordeal."

Wise words, indeed. Here's hoping we all — Republican and Democrat, liberal and conservative — have become more sensitive to the unfortunate behavior that can be so demeaning to an entire group of people.

But was it the only good thing to emerge from the hearings?

I think not.

Consider this one, for example: The American people, in the comfort of their own homes, got a marvelous opportunity to witness firsthand the incredibly childish behavior of United States senators. Think about it. These grown men and women, who in the future will probably get their names mentioned in history books, were transformed into raving lunatics on national television. They angrily pointed fingers at one another, lashed out in the strongest of terms and, on occasion, even delivered holier-than-thou lectures across the aisle. Their righteous indignation was so obvious you could almost see the haloes forming above their heads as their foul words spewed forth.

Joe Six-Pack, meanwhile — working on his third ham-and-cheese sandwich — could only grin mischieviously, take another sip from his favorite beverage and announce to anyone willing to listen, "Now this is good TV."

And he had a point. Pro wrestling had nothing on these guys.

Ted Kennedy got the ball rolling when he chastized Arlen Specter for calling Anita Hill a perjurer. Specter countered by saying Kennedy was the last person on earth who should be telling women what to think of grab-happy men.

Orrin Hatch and Joe Biden, a couple of hot-tempered would-be orators, screamed at one another over a variety of subjects, none of which seemed terribly important at the time.

Alan Simpson and Howard Metzenbaum, the leading whiners on each team, took turns accusing everybody but themselves of exploiting the situation to suit their own political purposes and something called "the process" took a brutal beating from most everyone.

That blanket condemnation, however, so infuriated Biden, a true Senate loyalist, that he proceeded to thrash all of his fellow committee members, Democrats and Republicans, by labeling them his "pontificating colleagues."

Public opinion polls have indicated that most Americans were disgusted with the senators' behavior. Some said they were embarrassed by the outbursts. Others were just plain angry. A few, like Joe Six-Pack, did manage to laugh, though it was in a sarcastic sort of way. Nobody, it seems, was pleased.

Nobody, that is, except me. Frankly, I found their actions to be refreshing.

For the first time in years, the senators struck me as being real human beings. They showed true emotions. They got mad. They yelled. They even called each other names.

And, to be perfectly honest, I think they enjoyed it. Surely they get tired of going through that phony bosom-buddy bit all the time.

You've heard them on C-Span.

An elderly gray-haired senator rises to his feet, clears his throat and says, "I yield the remainder of my time to my distinguished colleague and dear friend from the great state of Wisconsin . . ."

Gag me with a spoon.

What he really wants to say is, "If I have any time left that spineless right-wing varmint from Louisiana can have it. As for me, I'm getting drunk."

DEATHS

Iva Parker

Services for Iva Bell Harrington Parker have been set for 1 p.m. Monday in the Ellis Chapel with Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Street Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Parker

Mrs. Parker died Wednesday at a hospital in Salt Lake City, Utah.

She was born in Ashdown, Ark., Dec. 7, 1919. She married Peter (W.A.) Harrington July 16, 1938. He preceded her in death in October of 1980. She lived in Midland for 40 years. During that time she worked at Barnes-Pelliter and Dunlaps before becoming involved with the Midland Softball Association, where she was employed as manager of the concession stand for many years.

In June of 1990 she married Melvin A. Parker of Odessa.

Survivors include her husband; two sons, Troy Harrington of Weatherford and Leland Harrington of Midland; two step-sons, Raymond Parker and Mel Parker, both of Odessa; two daughters, Elizabeth Casbeer and Shirley Tucker, both of Midland; one stepdaughter, Debra Lewallen of Andrews; one brother, P.P. Pasley of Ashdown, Ark.; two sisters, Fern Hill of Riverhead, N.Y., and Billie Patterson of Missouri; nine grandchildren; six great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Ilamae Epley

Rosary for Ilamae Epley, 82, of Coalinga, Calif., will be at 5 p.m. today at Gilbreath Funeral Home in Stanton. Mass will be at 10 a.m. Monday with burial to follow at St. Joseph Cemetery with Gilbreath Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

The family will receive friends at Gilbreath Funeral Home today from 2-4 p.m.

Mrs. Epley died Tuesday at her home following a lengthy illness.

She was born May 22, 1909, in Stanton and married Ernest Epley on Nov. 29, 1934, in Midland.

Survivors include her husband; three daughters, Sheila Glass of Austin, Nikki Richnow of Washington D.C., and Diane Beere of San Ramon, Calif.; two sisters, Villa Wilkinson of Stanton and Maxine Bridges of Fort Worth; 13 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Cancer Society, 2940 N. Fresno St., Fresno, Calif., 93703, or to the Psoriasis Foundation.

Robert Holman

Services for Robert Holman are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Friday at a San Antonio hospital.

Jack McCall

Services for Jack O. McCall of Midland are set for 1 p.m. Tuesday in the First Presbyterian Church Sanctuary with Dr. Ray Riddle and Dick Braun officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He died Friday in a Dallas hospital.

Marie Gaines

Funeral services for Marie Fay Gaines, 76, of Dalhart are pending. Services in Dalhart will be with Schooler-Gordon Funeral Home Directors. Midland arrangements will be with Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Gaines died Saturday at her daughter's home in Midland following a lengthy illness.

She was born May 30, 1915, in Dalhart, the daughter of Albert and Nellie Cathryne Maynard who were pioneers in Dalhart. Mrs. Gaines was raised in Dalhart and married Wayne Gaines there June 23, 1940. She was a member of First Christian Church in Dalhart.

Survivors include three daughters, Cathryne Dell "Kate" McCluskey and Nan Hodge, both of Midland, and Jerrie Lee Hale of Amarillo; nine grandchildren; 11 great-grandchildren; six nieces and one nephew.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1976, a grandson, Shawn Warren in 1988; and a sister, Lillian Maples.

Margaret Sparks

Services for Margaret E. Sparks, 80, of Midland are set for 10 a.m. Monday in Ellis Chapel North with the Rev. Hugh Daniel of St. Paul United Methodist Church officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Sparks died Friday at a local hospital.

She was born Oct. 17, 1911, in Gouldbusk. In her youth, she moved to Wichita Falls with her family and attended schools there. She moved to Lueders in 1935 and married Arthur M. Sparks on Feb. 1, 1936. They moved to Lubbock in 1938 and resided there until 1952 when they moved to Midland. Her husband has been employed with Kent Oil Company for many years.

Survivors include her husband; one brother, H. Frank Taylor, Jr., of Plano; one sister, Bettye Boydstun of Hurst; four nieces; four nephews and eight great-nieces and nephews.

Naomi Wheat

Graveside services for Naomi Wheat of Midland are set for 9:30 a.m. Monday in Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Street Baptist Church officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Wheat died Friday night at a local hospital.

She was born March 30, 1911, in Coryell County and was reared in Aspermont. She left there in her early teens when her family moved to Eastland County. She lived there until 1940 before moving to Andrews. She moved to Midland in 1975 to be near her family.

She was a member of First Baptist Church of Andrews.

Survivors include one son, Connie R. Patterson of Midland; three grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Oma Dawson

Services for Oma Faye Dawson, 84, of Midland are set for 10:30 a.m. Monday in the Ellis Chapel with Ralph Gates of Fairmont Church of Christ officiating. Graveside services will be held at 3 p.m. at Englewood Cemetery in Slaton. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

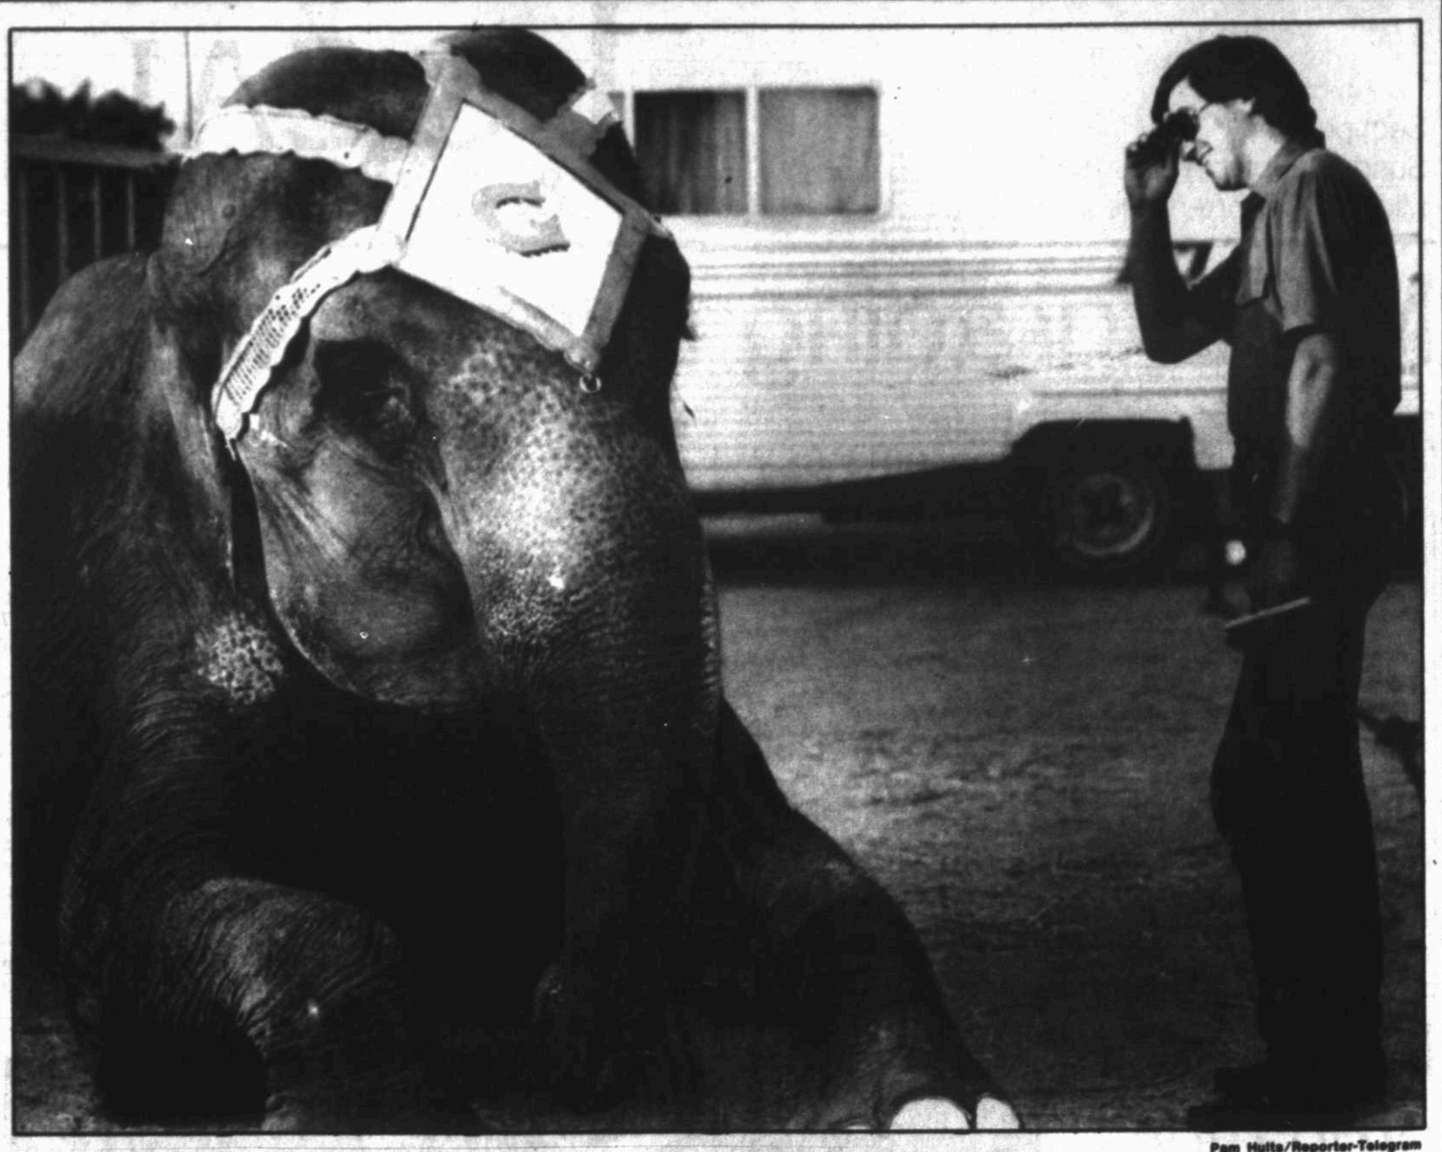

Mrs. Dawson died Thursday at a local retirement center.

She was born Sept. 16, 1907, in Ira, and was a graduate of O'Donnell High School. She later graduated from nursing school in Lubbock and was employed at Lubbock Memorial Hospital and did extensive private nursing work. She retired in 1968.

She lived most of her life in Lubbock, moving to Midland in 1986.

She married Thomas H. Dawson in 1933 in Clovis, N.M. He died in 1968.

Survivors include one son, Dan Dawson of Austin; one daughter, Linda Jobe of Midland; one sister, Lavinia Cole of Jefferson; six grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; two nieces and seven nephews.

testified that he hit her, knocking her down, and then began to kick her.

Ms. Perez said she managed to get up and run to a storage shed by her house. She testified that Perez caught her hiding in the shed, grabbed her by the hair, dragged her outside and made threats to kill her.

But testimony indicated Ms. Perez was able to secure a .38-caliber Smith & Wesson revolver from a canister in the shed.

Perez dragged the woman, holding the gun, across the yard, hitting her intermittently on the way, according to testimony.

Ms. Perez's next memory was holding her dead ex-husband and crying out his name, she said.

Police arrived a short time later and arrested Ms. Perez.

Neighbors testified about hearing the shots that night: one or two shots then a pause of 10 to 15 seconds, then one or two more.

Other testimony by law enforcement officers, a medical examiner and a forensic expert pieced together the best possibility of how the shooting occurred and described events on that night.

Perez was in his car, parked in front of his ex-wife's home, when he sustained a gunshot that grazed his scalp and two shots in the back, testimony stated.

The shot in the scalp occurred when Perez was facing the shooter. Perez was apparently twisted and slumped over on the passenger seat when the two bullets entered his back. Both bullets travelled upward into his body, one exiting his neck and re-entering his neck/jaw area, testimony stated.

Perez probably died laying in the car, but was found by police outside near the curb with his feet in the vehicle, testimony stated.

He bled to death.

In addition to the shots that hit Perez, one shot grazed Ms. Perez's knee when the gun discharged as she held it against her leg, according to testimony.

Police searched Perez's car and found a .25-caliber handgun in the glove compartment.

After Ms. Perez was arrested, she told two officers that she had been beaten.

A blood/alcohol test revealed that Ms. Perez was highly intoxicated; her ex-husband's blood showed no signs of drinking.

Other testimony included friends and co-workers who described Perez as a non-violent soft-spoken man. Conversely, other witnesses said Ms. Perez showed signs of constant abuse from Perez, before and after their marriage.

Houston gets grant to rebuild apartments

HOUSTON (AP) — A $4.1 million federal housing grant will help Houston renovate 64 one-room apartments in a vandalism-plagued complex that officials hope will help alleviate the city's homeless problem.

About 88 percent of Houston's chronically homeless population is comprised of single men, a study estimates.

The city's housing authority had been unsuccessful in attracting developers to the vacant complex in the impoverished Fifth Ward neighborhood, but has won federal approval for the renovation plan.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has given the authority $4.1 million to buy and renovate 54 apartments for low-income families — the first funding for new apartments in about 10 years.

"We ought to be very pleased that the housing authority has this opportunity, because there is nothing like it here," said Sally Shipman, executive director of the Coalition for the Homeless.

There are 6,000 low-income families on the authority's waiting list for housing in projects and another 8,000 families are on a waiting list for rent subsidies on privately owned apartments. The authority recently won approval for 139 new such subsidies, bringing the number of subsidies to about 8,800.

Donald C. Procter, who owns the property, said tenants abandoned the complex in the late 1980s for inexpensive properties in more affluent areas.

"Vandalism destroyed it totally. I'm starting from scratch," he said.

The complex will include an on-site office.

and to Midland.

"We've come a long way," Patel said. "Slowly there has been an increasing need for folks who could not travel out of town for treatments, and now we have those available here."

Members of the medical community are attempting to make Midland a hub for patients from all over the region, Patel said.

"We now have capability compatible with any city of our size and many large cities," he said.

With advances like those made by Cooley and his staff, the odds are becoming better for heart patients, Patel said.

"Incidence of heart attack is down, and at the same time, technology is increasing. Although I would never want to have a heart attack, I would rather have one now than five years ago, especially here," Patel said.

The 71-year-old Cooley said new advancements are made every day in cardio-vascular research.

"It seems we are always realizing something new," he said. "So much research is going on in our institution and around the world, it's an exciting time."

Students in Midland Independent School District may take classes in four levels of curriculum — basic, general, advanced or honors (also called gifted). The grade points are weighted in accordance with level of difficulty at each tier. Grade point averages for a student are computed by adding the total number of grade points earned and dividing them by the total number of courses attempted.

higher tier course it really makes a difference," she said.

Ms. Brown said her son — in transferring — lost a grade point and a half for one semester. "This changed his class ranking which hurts when students are in their junior and senior years and are competing for college scholarships," she said.

Ms. Tyson said her daughter lost grade points for an elementary algebra class she took at Midland Christian School in her freshman year which was considered a basics course or pre-algebra class by Midland Independent School District standards.

Her daughter also took a Bible course at Midland Christian School which is not considered an acceptable course for high school credit by state standards.

"We can only give credits when there is a comparable state-approved course (listed in state guidelines)," said Maridell Fryar, MISD executive director of instructional services.

Ms. Tyson noted that if her daughter were to take summer courses to increase her lost Bible credits, she could only get credit for general courses in the summer. No advanced or honors courses are offered at summer school since courses are offered in accordance with the 'number of students applying to take them. Students receive less grade points for a general, rather than an advanced or honors course.

However, advanced and honors credit is offered in the summer for students taking concurrent courses at Midland College.

Ms. Tyson said it is too late to regain lost grade points for her daughter. Nonetheless, she is advising other parents to get copies of their child's transcripts in order to find out their grade point average.

(Transcripts may be obtained from school counselors. They will reflect cumulative grade point average from the previous completed semester since GPAs are figured semester to semester and not at the end of each grading period).

"School administrators keep asking me why I am messing with this since I can't help my daughter," Ms. Tyson said. "Well, this is going to affect other students."

Persons who would like to join Ms. Tyson's support group for parents of students in MISD may call 694-4692.

implemented in 1989.

The advanced curriculum intended to serve the needs of students in the upper quartile of their class as measured by a nationally normed achievement test. However, any student may enroll in the class, provided they — and their parents — sign a letter of commitment acknowledging that it will be difficult to exit the class when the going gets tough.

An advanced course is classified as an "academically rigorous and challenging above-grade-level course."

Ms. Fryar said students in advanced courses are expected to "self-remediate any prerequisite skills they may lack."

Students in the gifted or honors program must meet criteria adopted by the district to enroll in the program. The criteria is derived from a multiple-measure matrix based on national research.

Ms. Fryar said the honors tier is "significantly above grade level and requires a remarkable amount of homework."

The four-tier program begins in the seventh grade.

"Grade points are not assigned, however, until students take courses which are for high school credit," Ms. Fryar said.

In recent years, the state also mandated that Texas schools use a numerical system of grading.

When the fourth tier was added, a committee of educators and parents met to review the system of grading, specifically to consider weighting grades.

While general courses had been using a 4.0 grading scale, honors courses had used a 5.0 grading. When a fourth tier was added, grade points rose in increments and ended at a 6.0 grading scale.

Ms. Fryar said the committee decided it made more sense to weight grades, than to use a numerical system which went up to 105, rather than 100 for an "A."

"There are about 1,100 school districts in Texas," Ms. Fryar said, "and probably about 1,100 different ways of doing this. There is no consistency among school districts and no intent to have consistency."

The advantage of the system is that students are not irrevocably placed into a class, according to Ms. Fryar. This means that a gifted student won't be required to take only courses in the honors tier. The gifted student may enroll in debate, choir, or a schedule with some advanced and some honors classes.

"This allows students to have reasonable homework loads without hurting themselves," the MISD administrator said. "By taking advanced courses, a gifted student can also keep his or her grade points up."

Likewise, an average student who excels in English and struggles in math may enroll in an advanced English course, while taking a general math course.

Parents who want to know their child's grade point average may call his or her school counselor.

But, before fretting over grade points, Ms. Fryar said that parents should take into consideration that some scholarship committees may pay scant attention to grade points.

"Scholarships are based on everything from financial need to SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) scores to expectations of achievement," Ms. Fryar said. "Colleges accept plenty of students with an A-B range in general courses."

Woman held in embezzlememt

HOUSTON (AP) — A former office worker for Metro's employee union remained jailed Saturday on charges she embezzled $284,000 from the union in a four-year period.

Catherine Worley, 26, of Houston, was arrested Friday and remained at the Harris County Jail in lieu of $568,000 bond.

Ms. Worley worked as a secretary and bookkeeper for Transport Workers Local 260 until last year. If convicted, she faces up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Local President David Carrington said the indictment clears his administration of wrongdoing amidst allegations that as much as $2 million could be missing.

Gem society schedules exhibit

Staff Report

The Midland Gem & Mineral Society's 29th annual gem and mineral show is slated for Nov. 2-3 at the Midland County Exhibit Building, located on East Highway 80.

Hours for the show will be 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 2, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 3. Admission will be $2 for adults, $1 for seniors (65 and older) and 25 cents for students (ages 6-12).

The show will include displays by local artisans of their work in lapidary (cutting and polishing of opaque stones such as agate) and faceting (cutting and polishing of transparent stones such as topaz and amethyst).

Displays of such stones made into jewelry will showcase the art of silversmithing. Various club members will be demonstrating those skills.

In addition, there will be a number of special exhibits: The all-rock "Food Table," a collection of silver Kachina dolls for viewing and sale, and a collection from the E&D Barrow Foundation Museum in Eola.

Also, there will be the Texas Faceter's Guild's Famous Diamond Replicas, including the Hope and Cullinan diamonds. The show's chairman, Clifford Chapman, president of the Guild, faceted three of them.

Fifteen dealers and demonstrators from Texas and other states will have costume jewelry, minerals, lapidary materials and supplies, and a variety of other items for sale.

Some of them will demonstrate their specialties such as the technique of making Venetian glass beads, the making of wire wrap jewelry (the mounting of a stone with gold wire in intricate designs). Red Wilson of Clovis, N.M., will demonstrate creating mineral and gemstone spheres.

The youngsters will be able to attend the Kid's Corner where they will win a specially created prize on every spin of the wheel.

The grand prize this year will be a Lone Star cut blue topaz to be mounted in a 14K gold pendant or tie tack. Drawing for the prize will take place at the conclusion of the show and it will not be necessary for the winner to be present. There will be hourly drawings for an adult and child's door prize on both days.

Proceeds from the show will support the Gem & Mineral Society's science education programs.

Recycling coalition plans trade show in Lubbock

Staff Report

The Lubbock Recycling Coalition and Keep Texas Beautiful will sponsor a recycling seminar and trade show on Nov. 1-2 at the Holiday Inn Civic Center in Lubbock.

The event will feature more than 20 workshops led by state and area experts on waste management. Keynote speakers are Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro of the Texas General Land Office and Tim Jones, an anthropologist.

Admission at the door will be $35. For a preregistration form call (806) 742-3621.

MC plans business courses

Staff Report

While many new business owners, or would-be owners, feel they are alone in uncharted waters, there is much help available. Some of that assistance is available from Midland College, where two seminars start soon.

A Small Business Seminar is scheduled for four Tuesday evenings, starting Oct. 29. They are being held from 7-8:30 p.m. in Room 115 of the Occupational-Technical Building. Cost is $15 for all four sessions, or $5 each. Payment may be made at the door, although advance registration is requested.

Developing A Business Plan is a six-week free seminar, starting Oct. 30 and meets each Wednesday from 7-8:30 p.m. in Room 106, Occupational-Technical Building. Because space is limited for this program, advance reservations are necessary.

Heading up the Small Business Seminar will be Mary E. Glenn, CPA. Subjects for the four sessions include: Oct. 29, Legal Issues, presented by Mike Morgan, attorney; Nov. 5, Financial Statements, Mary Glenn; Nov. 12, Income Taxes, Mary Glenn, and IRS Revenue Agents Diane Lancaster and Belle Harris; and Nov. 19, Workers' Compensation, Mary Glenn, Cynthia Alaniz, area ombudsman for the Texas Workers' Compensation Commission; and David Hurta, Alexander & Alexander of Texas, Inc.

Heading up the six sessions of the Business Plan Development workshop is Wm. Glen Yeary, CPA. Those enrolling in this class will receive individual instruction in using the computer program, Planning For Success. Those interested may enroll in any or all of the sessions.

"Both of these seminars are designed to provide specific information and assistance in concentrated form, especially for those being addressed," said Jerry Lee Jones, directer of the Midland College Business and Economic Development Center.

Persons wishing to register for either seminar should contact Jones at the BEDC by calling 685-4656.

Much of 'Pinkie' Roden's life a mystery

EDITOR'S NOTE: He was a gambler and a bootlegger and as crafty and cunning as a West Texas coyote. The late Tom "Pinkie" Roden was also a widely admired civic and political activist who wove his unique magic behind the scenes. As both a legal and illegal whiskey merchant, he cast a long shadow over the lives of many Texans. Maybe longer than even he knew. Part one of a five-part series examining Pinkie's life.

— Ted Roden
"If they're not, they're dead."
— Bill Roden

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

ODESSA — Friends called him Pinkie, "The Wizard of the West," and they called him often.

They called him when they needed money, jobs, donations, legal advice, political clout or maybe just a good bottle of whiskey or a large or small dice game.

They called him from the state capital in Austin or from a sleazy jail in West Texas.

"Anytime you needed something done, you could count on Pinkie to get it done," said an oilman named Charles Perry.

Still, few really knew him, for he was passionately private. Much of his life was a mystery, which was what he wanted. And yet, insiders suggest Tom "Pinkie" Roden wasn't bigger than life, but close, a civic godfather with a dark side and a shadowy past.

At his death in 1989, Pinkie's longtime friend John Ben Sheppard, a former state attorney general, declared:

"WE'LL NEVER know the extent of his contributions or philanthropy. He let others take the bows, and he did the work and paid the bills."

Politicians privately sought his counsel and his contributions, and it was former Texas Gov. Preston Smith who said: "I would class Tom Roden as one of the top 10 people I know. The state and the community have lost a great man."

Indeed they did. His adopted hometown of Odessa, honored him as its outstanding citizen. And lawyers awarded him a Liberty Bell as the non-lawyer who best upheld the tradition of American justice.

Not bad for a guy who did hard time at the state prison in his younger days.

The Odessa Chamber of Commerce named him to its Business Hall of Fame and a former state whiskey regulator praised him as "an outstanding citizen, a great character, a dear friend and the kingpin of the liquor business in Texas for many years."

Not at all bad for a shy, gentle, stuttering, freckle-faced, enigmatic hulk who grew up dirt poor, made a fortune bootlegging whiskey and founded the most far flung, Byzantine liquor store chain in all of Texas.

OR A guy who bought and renovated a dying hotel, christened it the Inn of the Golden West, decorated it with a glitzy penthouse nightclub and immortalized it with illegal casino-style gambling.

A guy who could socialize with the governor or the state's top accountant one night and shoot dice the next evening with a legendary gambler named Duck Mallard.

A guy who spent a lifetime outfoxing or befriending Texas cops, sheriffs, Rangers and liquor agents, as much for fun as profit.

"We never did catch him running the casino operation," concedes retired Ranger J.P. Lynch of Midland. "He kept assuring us he was shutting it down, but there may have been some games we didn't know about."

Perhaps the last of his special if not always noble breed, Pinkie is gone but his legacy will be with Texas for generations to come. Like no other, he shaped the crazy-quilt laws governing how, where, what and when Texans buy and drink their booze.

And, unbeknown to all but a few, he helped chisel out a rollicking chapter of state history along the way.

On a summer day in 1953, a liquor agent huddled in a West Texas corn field, his eyes fixed on the rear entrance of a modest frame building.

Suddenly, the garage door opened and out lunged a late model car, its engine growling and its tires squealing. The driver spun the steering wheel sharply to the left and sped off in a flurry of dust.

Within seconds, the liquor agent and a colleague raced away in pursuit. As the two cars disappeared from sight, two other vehicles quietly emerged from the target building and headed in the opposite direction.

A short time later, the investigators overtook their quarry on a lonely country road. They searched the vehicle and found nothing.

"A damn decoy," an agent grumbled.

Meanwhile, the two other cars broke formation, one turning northwest toward Lubbock and the second southeast toward Abilene. Both overflowed with half pints of bootleg whiskey.

UNCHALLENGED AND unhurried, they soon delivered and unloaded their cargo, bound as always for a thirsty clientele in "dry" Texas counties.

Pinkie Roden's boys had struck again.

"He was the best," the late Coke Stevenson Jr. told a reporter one day in Austin. "Pinkie had the smartest drivers and the fastest cars and his people were loyal to a fault.

"He drove us crazy. But I couldn't help but like him."

Stevenson, once a liquor board administrator, recalled a meeting in which an officer appealed for new, bigger and faster cars to challenge Pinkie's backroad bootlegging activities.

Told that such funding was not available, Stevenson said the agent then asked for money to buy Pinkie's used cars and equipment.

"They're better than anything we've got," he argued.

STEVENSON INSISTED that Pinkie could drive better in the dark than in daylight, and that he could travel from Odessa to Dallas without crossing a major highway.

"He knew the backroads of West Texas better than most people know the backyards of their home," he laughed.

Pinkie's brother Bill Roden, an oilman and pilot, says he flew Pinkie across sections of West Texas in his private plane so he could familiarize himself with remote and secluded country roads.

And his widow Jane insists with a smile that Pinkie, up until his death, drove with his eyes glued to the rearview mirror, searching still for phantom pursuers from the past.

"He loved the intrigue of being chased," she said.

Jane did not meet Pinkie until the late Sixties and they did not marry until 1970, when she was 31 and he was 58. But she came to know him better than anyone, and she said she loved him fiercely.

Jane found Pinkie a gentle and generous husband as well as an adoring father to her daughter from an earlier marriage.

But, when she examined his murky past, she also found him frightening.

Born at a hardscrabble settlement named Chalk Mountain in 1911, Pinkie Roden spent much of his childhood at nearby Glen Rose, a small, riverside resort and spa 60 miles south of Fort Worth.

He worked in his father's drug store before making a youthful career move that would forever shape his life. As a bell boy at the local hotel, he was exposed early on to sins of the flesh, and their first cousins, whiskey and gambling.

He sampled them all.

More importantly, it took him no time at all to learn that hotel guests would pay handsomely for booze in a dry town, a lesson he took to heart.

He dropped out of school at age 16, if not earlier, and soon drifted to Fort Worth, ostensibly to live with a grandmother and finish public school. In fact, he learned the bootlegging business from a young buddy, Clem Connally, and Clem's father Dee, who operated out of a service station front.

"Pinkie always said Clem was the only true friend he ever had," Jane Roden recalled.

"YEARS LATER, when Clem got tuberculosis, Pinkie would go and sit with him and read to him and tell him what was going on in the bootlegging business. Clem died in a sanatorium in San Angelo. Pinkie was crushed. He said he never had another friend like him."

In Fort Worth, Pinkie used an alias, Tom Boyd, during his brushes with the law. He adored his mother and feared his father and worried constantly that his photograph might find its way into the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Friends, associates and even family members are a bit hazy on just how, when and why Pinkie surfaced next in the West Texas town of Sweetwater, near Abilene.

But it was a pivotal period, for he not only perfected his bootlegging skills but apparently learned the fine art of making moonshine whiskey.

And he met Oma Coleman, a tough, crafty, salty bootlegger who would later be called the "evil gypsy woman."

Oma, who died in 1966, would one day claim: "I taught the little SOB everything he knows. After that, he dropped me."

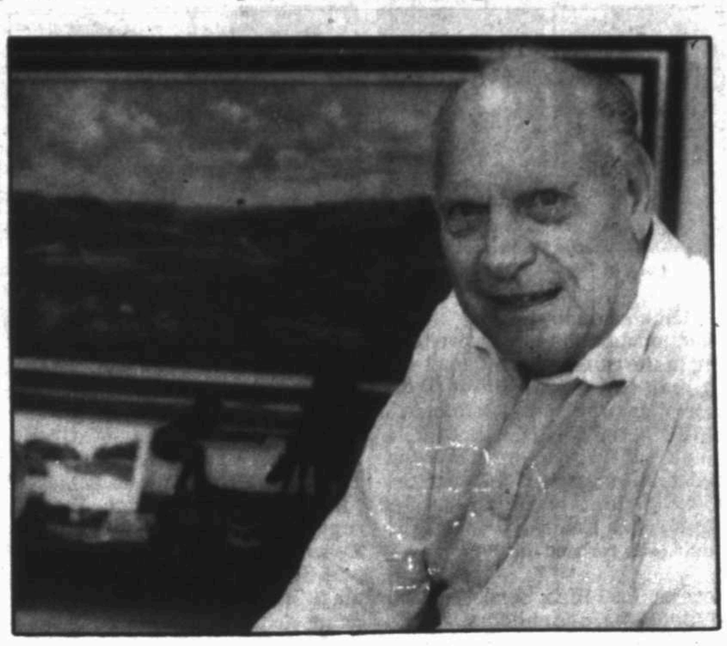

ALTHOUGH PINKIE was in and out of trouble during those days, before and after Prohibition, his booze-related shenanigans apparently landed him in prison only once.

"He gave his friends his assets when he went to prison," Gene Garrison said. "When he got out, he had a tremendous number of followers. He won a lot of loyalty out of that."

To cover his jailhouse tracks, Pinkie wrote his parents frequently, sending the letters from Huntsville to Sweetwater for relay to Glen Rose.

"He was only in three months," Jane Roden recalled, hinting at political hanky panky. "He wasn't supposed to have gone at all. It was supposed to have been fixed."

"Ma Ferguson was governor at the time, and she got him out. Ma was a business lady ... Oma Coleman was the one who came up with the money."

Bill Roden, brother of Tom "Pinkie" Roden, has an oil company in Midland. During Pinkie's bootlegging days, he once flew Pinkie across West Texas in his private plane so Pinkie could familiarize himself with remote country roads.

Rep. Smith calls town meeting

Staff Report

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, will hold a Town Hall meeting at 10 a.m. Saturday at Midland College. The meeting is expected to last about 45 minutes and will be held in Chaparral Room of the college's Student Center.

"Town meetings give the citizens of the 21st Congressional District (which includes Midland) the opportunity to talk face-to-face with their representative," Smith said. "The residents' comments at these gatherings are crucial in helping me be a successful representative.

"Citizens' interest and involvement is the basis of a representative government," he added.

College Classics starts Monday

Staff Report

Second fall session of Midland College's popular series of courses for mature residents, College Classics, starts Monday.

Ten courses are being offered during the second four-week session, but students must be at least 55 years of age to enroll. Fee is $25, which includes as many courses as a person wishes to attend.

"Our instructors come from the college faculty/staff as well as well-qualified individuals in the community," said Camille Duchesne, director of continuing education programs. "Since all of them are volunteers, it helps keep the enrollment cost so low."

Persons wishing to enroll for Session II courses should do so Monday morning in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building.

Following are classes being offered during Session II, along with their class meeting days, times, and instructors:

Age Doesn't Make Any Difference, taught by Andra Kay Chamberlin, on Fridays from 1-3 p.m.; Country-Western Dance Continues, taught by Bill Barnett, on Wednesday and Friday from 3-5 p.m.; Great Books-Session I, taught by Pamela Howell, on Tuesday from 1-2 p.m.; Home Electrical Repairs, taught by Bob Kinkade, on Thursday from 1-2 p.m.; Let Wonder Seem Familiar-Shakespeare, taught by Bob Anson, on Tuesday and Thursday from 2-4 p.m.; More About Autos, taught by Jim George, on Monday from 4-5 p.m.; Piano, taught by Ona Burns, on Monday from 3-4 p.m.; Speechcraft Continues, taught by Harold E. Jones, on Wednesday from 1-2 p.m.; Traveling on Your Own, taught by Dortha Agnew and Leila Seale, on Monday from 1-2 p.m.; and World History Begins II, taught by Will Morris, on Monday and Wednesday from 2-3 p.m.

There's a special bonus for those who enroll for the Shakespeare course as Andrew Patenall, a well-known Shakespeare scholar from Canada will be presenting the class on Thursday, Oct. 31. Patenall is coming to Midland to present a Shakespeare Colloquium at Midland Community Theatre Oct. 31-Nov. 2.

More information about College Classics is available by calling 685-4518.

Three minority Midland High School students — Soraya Bocardo, Bobby Olgin and Maurice Lewis — have earned recognition from the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

Soraya and Bobby were named to the National Hispanic Scholar Awards Program and Maurice was named to the National Achievement Scholarship Program for Negro Students.

Soraya and Bobby were two of 3,000 Hispanic students nationwide selected as semifinalists in this program. Five hundred finalists will receive Mellon Foundation scholarships and an equal number will receive lesser scholarships as honorable mention recipients.

Maurice is one of 3,000 black students nationwide selected as a semifinalist. Approximately half of the semifinalists will be named finalists.

Semifinalists in these programs vie for finalist status and a wide array of scholarship opportunities. Finalist status is based upon high school grade point average, scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, school and community recommendations and a personal statement.

The minority students joined five other National Merit Semifinalists in Midland Independent School District and 11 commended students.

Soraya Bocardo also received the Youth Merit Award from the Rotary Club of Midland. She is the daughter of Fernando and Patricia Bocardo.

She is treasurer of the Hispanic Youth Society and an officer of the Science Cabinet. She is a member of Our Lady of San Juan Church, the cabinet of Mu Sigma Kappa (a Midland science club), and the National Honor Society. She has received three academic letters, a speech letter, the Zeta Phi Beta Sorority Award and is taking all honor or advanced classes at school.

Soraya plans to study law at the University of the Americas in Puebla, Mexico and pursue a career in politics.

Kevin Richard Barrett received the Youth Merit Award from the Midland Rotary Club. He is the son of Richard and Elaine Barrett.

He is on the junior varsity soccer team and was named a National Merit Commended student. He serves on debate team of the Inter-School Scholastic Academic Panel, and is a member of JETS, Science Club and Computer Club.

His honors and awards include being named outstanding sophomore in advanced chemistry I, and trigonometry/analytical geometry; and outstanding junior in advanced English III, and honors physics. He also received a 1990-91 Academic Award and the first place U.S. Metric Award for a science project. He is a member of the National Honor Society and the St. Nicholas Episcopal Church Senior Youth Group. He has volunteered for the Christmas in April project and the community theatre in Bartlesville, Okla.

Kevin plans to study engineering at Oklahoma State University.

Trinity sixth grade student Daniel Scott, the son of Evelyn Scott, was named to the Fort Worth-based Texas Boys Choir. Daniel, a soprano, was recently featured as soloist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale.

He attended a training session with the choir in Colorado Springs, Colo., in the summer. He will compete for places in the tour choir.

The Texas Boys Choir prepares its 135 members for national touring. About 60 boys age eight to 14 are selected to tour.

The tour group enrolls in a tutorial school, which continues their acadmeic schooling and intensifies the musical training.

Membership in the choir means that, in addition to extensive touring in the coming year, Daniel will attend the Texas Boys Choir School for the spring semester.

The spring 1992 tour will include eight weeks in the Midwest and eastern states. Last year the group performed at the Texas Fesitval at the Kennedy Center. The choir was formed in 1947.

Several Lee High School speech students earned honors at the Eighth Grade Bobcat Invitational Speech Tournament at Central High School in San Angelo recently.

Chyree LeMasters placed first in two events — dramatic interpretation and humorous interpretation and Phillip Barron placed first in impromptu speaking.

LHS sponsor for the speech squad is Larry Knight. LHS drama sponsor is Horace Griffin.

Kymberly Ward and Kara Kidwell, eighth grade cheerleaders at Goddard Junior High School, were named All-American cheerleaders at Wayland Baptist University summer camp in Plainview.

Kristi Shelton, the daughter of R.L. and Virginia Shelton, was awarded the Ruth Ann Burton Endowed Scholarship at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene. The scholarship is for English majors who plan to enter the teaching field.

Stephen James Canon, son of Mike and Judy Canon, a graduate of Midland High School, President's Endowed Scholarship, majoring in biology; Marcos R. Farias, son of Enrique and Olivia Farias, and a graduate of Midland High School, President's Achievement Award Scholarship, majoring in mechanical engineering; Cesar Hernandez, son of Celina and Ronald Baxter, and a graduate of Midland High School, Presidents Achievement Award Scholarship, majoring in civil engineering; Kris Raney, son of Richard Raney, and a graduate of Lee High School, President's Endowed and Merit Plus Scholarship awards, majoring in physics; David G. McFadden, son of J.D. and Anne McFadden, and a graduate of Midland High School, Lechner Fellowship Scholarship Award, majoring in microbiology; Sharon Dianne Overton, daughter of George and Elnora Overton, and a graduate of Midland High School, Lechner Fellowship and National Merit Scholarships, majoring in general studies; Matt Renick, son of Pete and Lynda Renick, and a graduate of Midland High School, Lechner and National Merit Scholarships, majoring in computer science.

Kimberly M. Nichols, daughter of John and Becky Nichols, and Michael Rubin, son of Harold and Marjean Rubin, have recently been selected as Midland West Rotary Club students of the week.

Nichols is active in the National Honor Society, Student Council, Senior Girls, and SADDD. She has received the Clarence Hill Memorial Sportmanship Award — six times, the Optimist Club Youth Award, and three academic letters.

She plans to attend either Angelo State University or Hardin Simmons University and major in primary education.

Rubin is active on the Varsity Swim team, math and science team, student for envirnomental awareness and the National Honor Society. He is a three-year band letterman, two-year orchestra, four year academic, and a three-year varsity swimming letterman.

He plans to attend Rice University or University of Texas to major in chemical engineering.

All-region choir participants took part in the special All-Region Choir Saturday at Odessa. Forty MISD students — 27 from Lee High, 17 from Midland High and one from Midland Freshman — qualified in the preliminary auditions toward All-State Choir earlier this month in Odessa.

Casey Green of Midland Freshman High was also included.

In addtion to those 38 students, also named to the All-Region choir were: Cory Brand and Jimane Nelson of Midland High and Melani Brock, Becki Heinze, Ondrea Mize, Steve Sosebee and Shanna Tomlinson, all of Lee High.

Brothers earn Eagle Scout awards

Staff Report

Andy Lewis

Sam Lewis

Chris Bauer

Michael Bauer

Two sets of brothers were recognized recently at an Eagle Scout Court of Honor.

Andy and Sam Lewis, sons of Paul and Noemi Lewis of Midland, and Michael and Chris Bauer, twin sons of Bruce and the late Elizabeth Bauer of Greenwood, were presented their awards by their bishop, Brent Rigtrup. The boys are members of Troop/Team 331 which is sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Andy Lewis, 18, is a senior at Lee High School where he earned his academic letter in 1990 and is a member of National Honor Society. To achieve his Eagle, he earned 24 merit badges and the On My Honer and Faith in God awards.

For his Eagle project, he arranged for members of his troop to assist him in removing graffiti from Endless Cave near Carlsbad, N.M., and repairing damaged trails. He completed his project last year but waited to receive his award with his brother.

Sam Lewis, 15, a sophomore at Lee High School, received academic recognition his freshman year and first and second place rankings at the Foriegn Language Festival for Spanish.

He received the On My Honor and Arrow of Light awards for Scouting and earned 26 merit badges. With the help of his troop, he cleared a 3/4-mile of trail in the Guadalupe Mountains National Park as his Eagle project.

Michael Bauer, 16, is a junior at Greenwood High School where he is a member of the concert, marching and jazz bands; debate team and National Honor Society. To earn his Eagle, he completed 29 merit badges, received the Arrow of Light, On My Honor and Duty of God awards, and with his troop, trail brushed 1¼ miles of trial in Guadalupe Mountains National Park.

Chris Bauer, 16, also a junior at Greenwood High, participated in band and played football, runs cross-country and track, is on the debate team and is a member of National Honor Society. To achieve the rank of Eagle, he earned 48 merit badges, the Arrow of Light and On My Honor awards.

With the assistance of his troop and family, he cleaned up the cemetery in Stiles by digging watering trenches, trimming bushes, cutting weeds and clearing the fence lines.

Florer receives Eagle award

Staff Report

He is a member of Boy Scout Troop 84 at St. Ann's Catholic Church. He is a senior at Lee High School, where is a member of the LHS varsity swim team.

Florer

Also, he has attended the National Scout Jamboree, the Philmont Scout Rance and is a member of the Order of the Arrow.

His positions of leadership in Scouting include Assistant Patrol Leader, Patrol Leader, Instructor, Assistant Senior Patrol Leader, Senior Patrol Leader and Order of the Arrow — Ordeal Member.

Benefit group slates annual garage sale

Staff Report

Community and Senior Services (CSS) is having its annual garage sale Saturday, Nov. 9, at Dellwood Shopping Mall, 3303 W. Illinois, from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. There is no cost to enter.

Tickets are available for a preview of the sale to be held on Friday, Nov. 8, from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Proceeds from the two days benefit Meals-on-Wheels and other programs for the elderly, disabled and indigent.

For the past several months CCS volunteers have collected thousands of items that range in price from 30 cents up.

Ann Dunbar, garage sale chairman, said, "We have collected enough items that we can boast that we have one of the largest garage sales in Texas. We are thrilled with the generous donations of businesses, merchants and individuals."

Items collected include antiques, decorative items, kitchem items, toys, books, furniture, appliances, women's clothes, men's clothes, children's clothes, clothing accessories, shoes, linens, needlework, fabrics, sporting equipment, office equipment and tools.

Activities include a Preview Day on Friday, Nov. 8, from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The preview includes a luncheon, style show and an opportunity to shop the garage sale early. They style show features special fashions donated by Julian Gold, The Gazebo, Kid's Country, Dillard's, Back Stage, Pappagallo's, Benetton, J.E. Barron, Christy's, Lucille's, Upstairs Downstairs and Skibells.

Also, the show will feature "the finest previously worn fashions and accessories from the garage sale," Ms. Dunbar said.

Previewers will have an opportunity to bid on fashions in the style show in a silent auction and on a trip for two via American Airlines to New York. The trip includes two nights at the Waldorf Astoria and two front center tickets to "Phantom of the Opera." The winner of the trip will be announced Dec. 1. As part of the preview, there will be a senior citizen's craft and holiday bake sale that will benefit the Dellwood Senior Center.

Tickets for the preview, style show and luncheon at $10 per person and $7.50 for senior citizens, 65 years and older. To make reservations, send a check to Preview Day, Community and Senior Services, 3301 Sinclair, Midland, Texas, 79707

Tickets can also be purchased at the Fuhrman Center, 3301 Sinclair, the Dellwood Senior Center, the Southeast Senior Center or the Visiting Nurse Service, 1015 N. Dixie in Odessa.

Seating will be limited on Friday. It is recommended that interested make reservations early.

Anatomy course scheduled

Staff Report

A special course in Sectional Anatomy and Pathology (RAD 2242.FE) starts Wednesday at Midland College.

The eight-week class meets on Wednesdays from 6:30-9:50 p.m. through Dec. 20.

"The course is designed for medical imaging specialists who wish to learn in-depth human anatomy and pathology in all sectional planes," said William Heathman, instructor in radiologic technology. "Course content includes cross-sectional imaging in magnetic resonance imaging, computerized tomography, and sonography."

Students who successfully complete the course will receive two college credit hours, which are applicable toward the associate degree.

Certificate options and continuing education credits also are available.

Persons wishing to take the class should register Monday through Wednesday between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. in the Student Services area of the Student Center. Late registrations will be accepted until 4:30 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 24.

Registration fee is $65, plus approximately $30 in fees.

More information is available by calling 685-4691 or 685-4600.

Hundreds mourn massacre victims

KILLEEN, (AP) — Hundreds of mourners, some wearing white ribbons in memory of those slain in a gunman's rampage through a restaurant, gathered Saturday for the first funerals following the nation's worst mass shooting.

The death toll rose to 23 victims Saturday, when a woman injured in Wednesday's rampage died. Officials at Crawford Bowers Funeral Home in Killeen confirmed the death of Krienhild Davis.

"The tragedy of Wednesday is very personal; it is unbelievable, it is inexplicable, it was unpredictable," the Rev. Andy Davis, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Belton, told about 350 mourners at a service for 64-year-old Juanita Williams.

Mrs. Williams was gunned down at Luby's Cafeteria by George Hennard, who crashed his pickup truck through a restaurant window and shot 22 people dead and wounded 23 before killing himself, police said.

Kitty Young, a friend of Mrs. Williams, said the Army town was still recovering from the deaths of 11 soldiers from nearby Fort Hood during the Gulf War. "It seems we just go from one catastrophe to another," she said.

Meanwhile, a newspaper quoted police sources Saturday as saying Hennard had with him a ticket to "The Fisher King," a movie that includes a scene in which a gunman massacres people in a New York club before killing himself.

The Dallas Morning News said police were speculating that Hennard, 35, may have been influenced by the movie. But Killeen police denied the report Saturday, saying the ticket found on Hennard was for a movie other than "The Fisher King."

Hundreds of people filed into the First Baptist Church of Killeen to mourn the death of Patricia Carney, 57, one of three administrators from the local school district who died in the massacre.

At a service for Ruth Pujol, another Killeen educator killed in the rampage, the Rev. Steve Schmidt of First United Methodist Church told mourners, "You and I will probably never understand why it had to happen, and why these people had to lose their lives in such a tragic manner."

A funeral for Al Gratia, a retiree killed trying to stop Hennard, and his wife, Ursula, also was held Saturday.

The Chamber of Commerce handed out white ribbons and "Killeen" stickpins, car washes were held to raise money for the victims' families and a large highway billboard read, "In Memoriam. October 16, 1991."

In nearby Belton, Hennard's father, Dr. Georges Hennard, said funeral arrangements for his son were pending, but declined to discuss details.

"We do care about our dead son, and we have made arrangements," he said.

Hennard said he had no idea why his son was driven to kill. He said he hadn't seen him for more than a year.

In another development, the manager of a convenience store and grill that Hennard frequented said Hennard became enraged Tuesday when he saw law professor Anita Hill on television during the Senate vote on Clarence Thomas' confirmation to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ms. Hill claimed Thomas sexually harassed her when she worked for him in the early 1980s.

"It was like (Hennard) was throwing a tantrum," Bill Stringer, manager of The Nomad Turnabout outside Belton, told the Temple Daily Telegram.

Stringer said Hennard jumped up from his seat and began screaming, "You dumb bitch! You bastards opened the doors for all the women!"

Police haven't determined Hennard's motive, but investigators are focusing on evidence that he felt rage toward women. Witnesses said Hennard shouted obscene phrases about women as he shot restaurant patrons. Most of the victims were women.

The Associated Press wasn't immediately able to reach Stringer on Saturday. The store was closed.

Police question couple involved in slayings

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — A couple accused of robbing and drowning eight young women in this border city is being questioned in a similar killing in the interior of Mexico, police said Saturday.

Police from the city of Monterrey have contacted authorities here for help in finding the killer of a young girl who was raped and drowned last month, said Eloy Trevino Gracia, watch commander with the State Judicial Police in Matamoros.

"They said they last saw her in the company of a couple," Trevino said. "We're going to send photos (of the suspects) to see if it was them."

Rodolfo Infante, 28, and his girlfriend, Ana Maria Ruiz Villeda, 20, are being held at judicial police headquarters. They are charged with robbing and killing eight young women they lured to their home at El Ebanito communal farm with the promise of money and jobs.

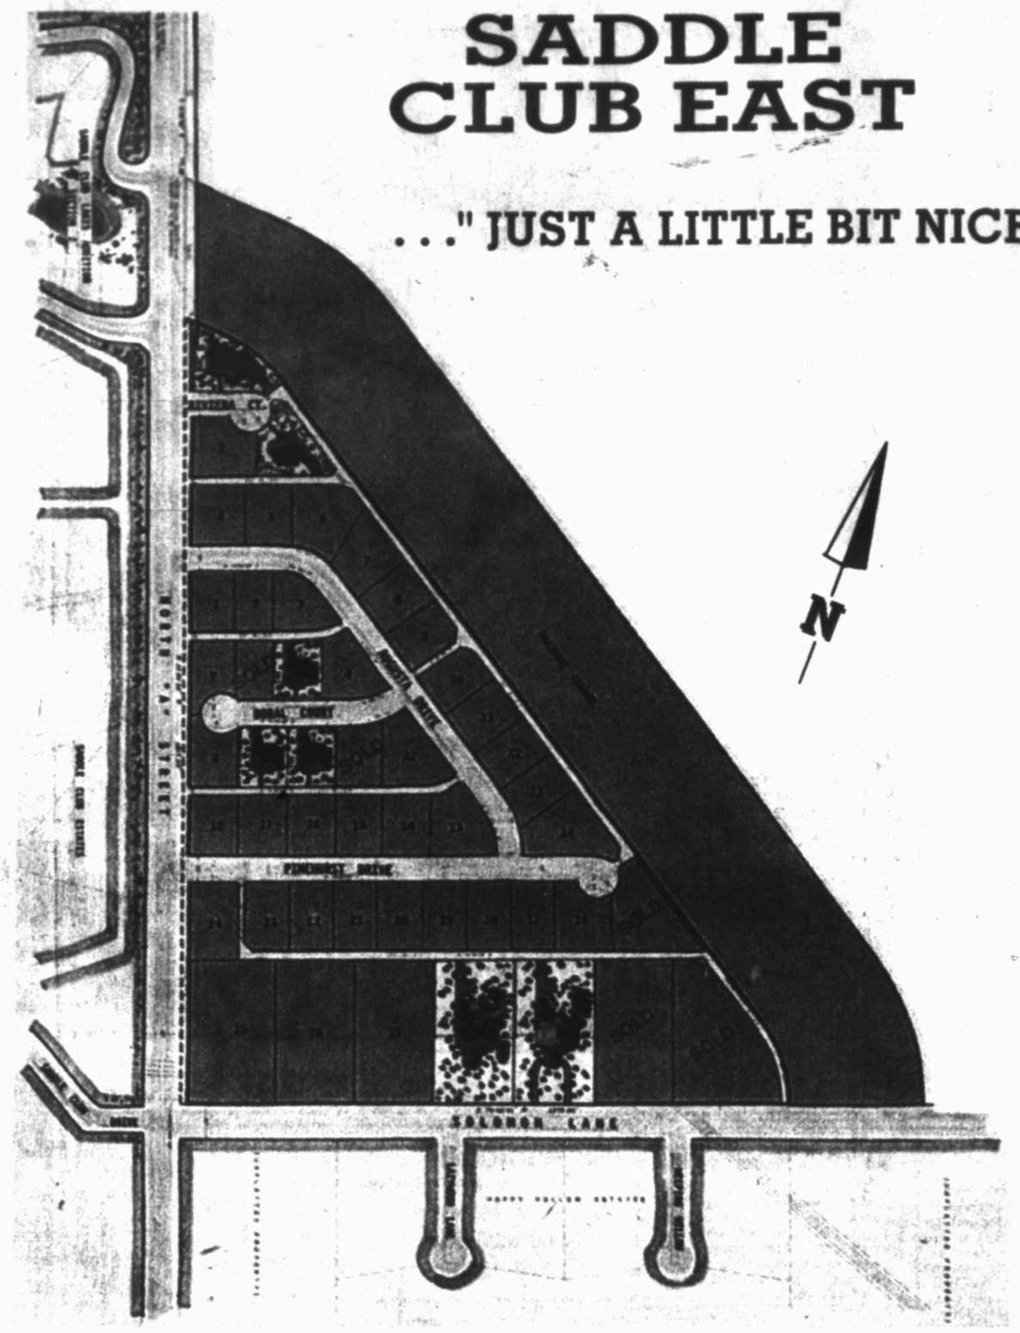

Infante also has been charged with raping the women, most of whom had come to Matamoros from the interior looking for work.

The pair has denied ever having traveled to Monterrey, Trevino said.

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adult: also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

New-Fashioned Victorian

By Sonja Merrick

Standing on the covered, wraparound porch of this stately home conjures visions of lace and parasols and four o'clock tea. The soothing sense of serenity exists indoors, too. But that's where it becomes apparent that this lovely old-fashioned home is also a wonder of modern beauty and convenience.

The pegged hardwood foyer floor gleams. Entry walls rise dramatically to the second-floor ceiling, eyes follow the plush-carpeted staircase to the railing that overlooks the entry. A clerestory window above the door allows sunlight to stream joyfully in.

A right turn leads to the the formal living area. Eyes feast on the thick carpeting, the picture frame paneling, the marble-floored fireplace with mantel. A door leads to the welcoming wraparound porch.

A left turn leads to the formal dining area. It boasts bowed windows, built-in shelves and cabinets, a wainscoated ceiling and chair railing. Another turn to the left reveals a huge, well-appointed kitchen.

Appliances include Jenn-Air grill, built-in eye-level microwave and conventional ovens, dishwasher and compactor. Walls are covered with a delightful yet subdued floral print paper with matching trim. A laundry room and large powder room lie nearby. A long counter separates the kitchen from the informal dining area.

The informal living area is comfortable and beckoning, this room boasts plush carpeting, fireplace with mantel, built-in wet bar, chair railing on walls.

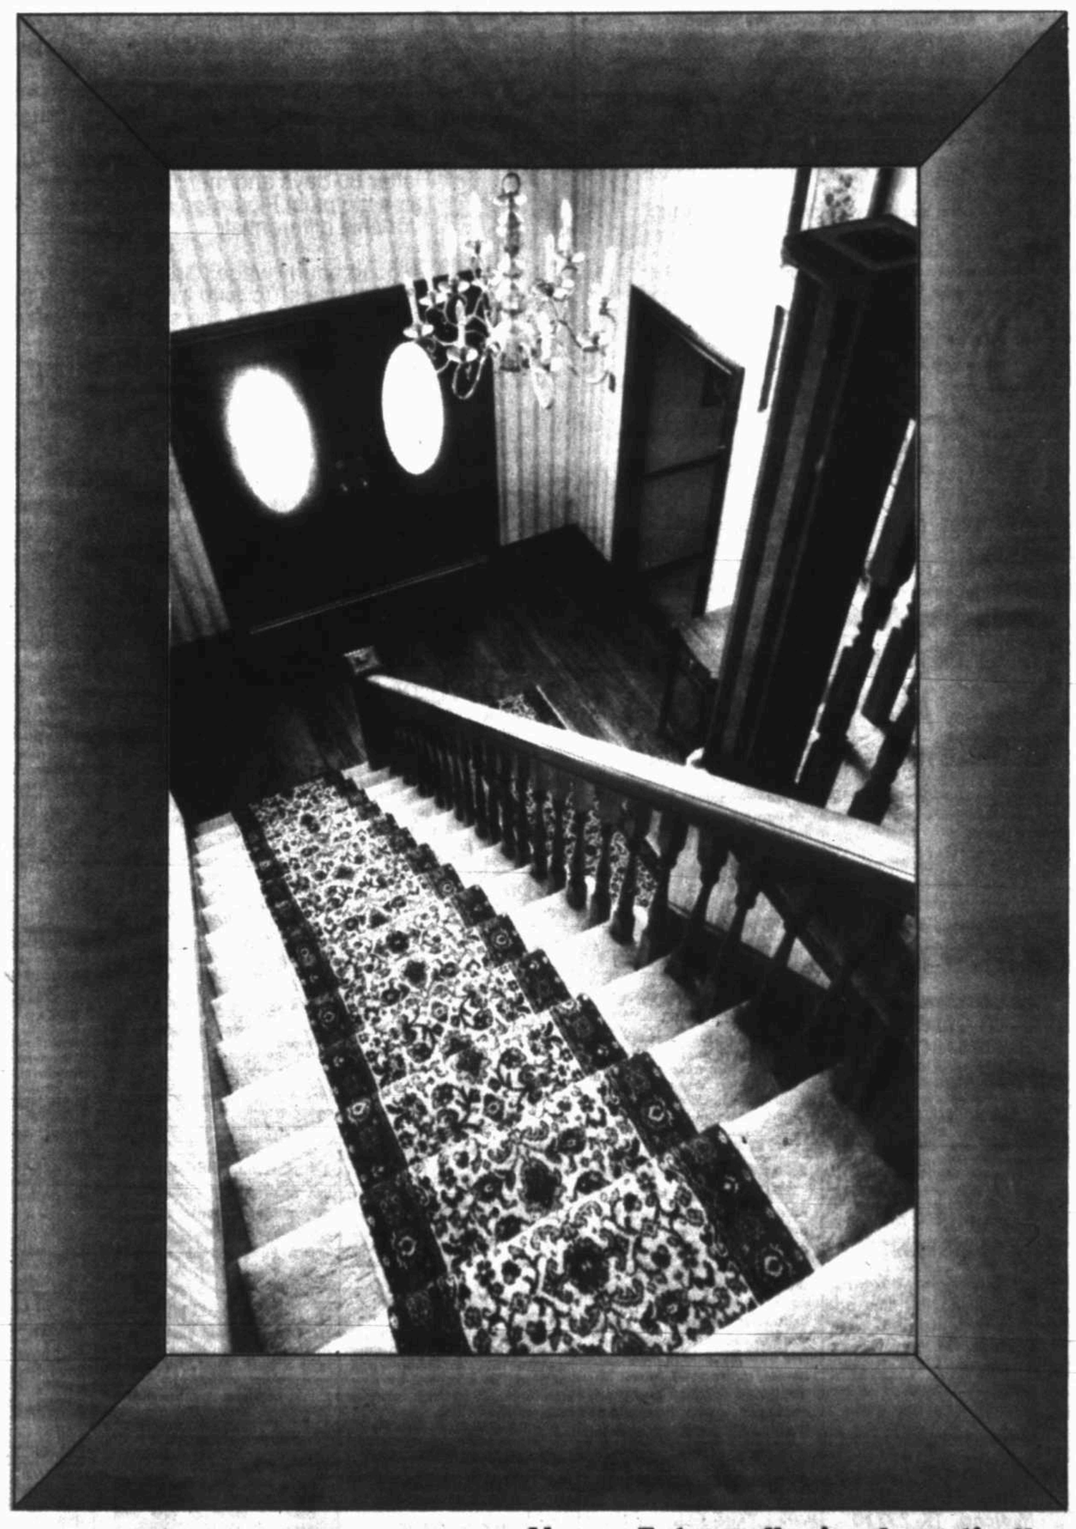

Upstairs, there are four bedrooms. Two are comfortable, sunlit, perfect for children or guests. Both have walk-in closets, built-in shelves, wainscoating. A smaller bedroom lies to the right of the stairs, ideal for small office, sitting room or nursery. A large bath with a long counter, double vanity wall-to-wall mirror and tons of storage place is located off the hallway.

Other amenities include an alarm system, water softener, sprinkler system, outside storage. Also, a covered patio, parking pad, dog run and circle drive.

The home is being offered by Langston Realtors for $178,000.

Langston Realtors Talk About . . .

Start open house tour at Langston Realtors

Every open house looker has had the same experiences: driving all the way across town to see one particular home only to find that (a) it is too early or too late and not open, (b) it is totally out of your price range, (c) its location is not where you thought it was and it takes forever to find, or (d) you do find the location but unknowingly drive right by two other homes you really wanted to see also!

That's why we at Langston Realtors encourage you to start your open house looking from our North office in the Colonnade, Loop 250 and Garfield, behind Chili's. We know Midland, neighborhoods, average prices in neighborhoods, and the easiest way to get from here to there! And, each Sunday we route your open house looking for you.

So stop by anytime after 1 p.m. Sunday and pick up one of our maps. It will logically lead you from one open house to the other, plus give you prices, addresses, locations and hours.

The map includes all of our own Langston Realtors open houses for that Sunday afternoon as well as those of seven other cooperating offices who thought we had a good idea, appreciate the traffic we send by, and have given us permission to include their homes on our map. Plus, we'll help you locate other particular open houses you might want to see, show you neighborhoods where your desired price range is located or furnish you specific information on individual properties. And, NEW, especially if it is a slower open house day, is a

In addition to the open house maps which usually contain 25 or so properties, we have regular city maps, copies of our informative 28-page Midland Profile publication, mortgage rates and information, a flood plain map, and, especially for newcomers, our own Langston-produced video all about Midland that you're welcome to borrow or view in one of our conference rooms, and a most informative, just-updated book on shopping, restaurants, schools, taxes, closing costs, sports, arts offerings and just about anything else you want to know.

We will also provide you with coffee, lemonade or hot chocolate (depending on the weather), favors for the kids, rest room facilities, use of a phone and whatever else you need. So do stop by Sunday!

ERA John Muldrow Realtors set to participate in auction of 1500 Texas properties

ERA John Muldrow, Relators of Midland has been chosen by Fisher Auction Co. of Pompano Beach, Fla. to be a cooperating broker for an auction of more than 1,500 Texas properties. The sales will be conducted later this month.

According to broker John Muldrow, a series of 10 auctions will be held around the state between Oct. 26 and Nov. 5. They will be on behalf of nine Texas financial institutions and include residential and commercial property, acreage and residential lots.

Muldrow said these will be absolute auctions, with all properties sold to the highest bidder, regardless of price. No minimum or reserve prices will be set for any of the auctioned properties.

"As part of the 'ERA, 1st IN SERVICE' commitment, we are always looking for new ways to serve real estate consumers," Muldrow said. " By teaming up with Fisher for these auctions, we can offer a very exciting opportunity to buyers in our community."

The auctions are tentatively scheduled for Oct. 29 and 30 in Dallas/Ft. Worth; Oct. 26 and 27 in Houston; Oct. 28 in Austin and Oct. 31 in Longview/Tyler. Also, Nov. 2 in Abilene; Nov.4 in Amarillo and Nov. 5 in Wichita Falls.

Each auction will be preceded by a buyers' seminar to educate and familiarize prospective owners with the auction process. A mock auction will be held and buyers will learn about deposits, closings and important auction information.

All closings will be handled by Stewart Title Company and its affiliates. Buyers will obtain their own financing.

For more information about the auctions, properties to be auctioned and terms and conditions, call ERA John Muldrow, Realtors at 915-699-7900.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

Once Is Enough!

Can you imagine selling your home, not just once, but twice or three times to completely different buyers? If you plan to buy a new residence, can you imagine buying two or three homes at once? That may sound ridiculous, but it happens.

To be enforceable, the sale of real estate must be accompanied by a written agreement signed by both buyers and sellers. This agreement, or contract, binds the parties to the terms of sale agreed upon.

Occasionally, buyers locate a home they want to buy then, after signing a purchase agreement, see another home they like better. Not realizing their legal obligations under the first agreement, they sign a second one. At that point, they have obligated themselves to purchase both homes.

It can happen to sellers too. After locating a buyer, and signing a contract to sell to them, a second buyer comes along offering a better price or more attractive terms. Although already obligated to the first buyer, sellers sign a second agreement placing themselves in the compromising position of having sold their home twice.

What is the solution? A valid contract can be consummated as agreed, dissolved by mutual agreement of all parties, or broken through default. Obviously, two contracts cannot be consummated on the same house, thus one of them must be either dissolved or a default can occur.

When selling your home, if you have already signed one contract, your agent will advise you to seek legal advice before signing a second one. The best time to avoid potential financial liability is before, not after you have signed a second agreement.

When purchasing a home, avoid making a second written offer before you have received a written release from the sellers of the first home. This release, signed by all parties, can relieve you of any obligations incurred under the first agreement. If in doubt, heed the agent's advice, and seek the counsel of your attorney.

If you'd like to purchase a home, but feel "out-of-touch" with what's happening in real estate, give us a call today or drop by our office.

RANDY'S TIPS ON SMOOTHER HOME SALES...

There are enough bumps in our way every day without adding unnecessary obstacles when it comes time to sell your home. Many home sales are lost unfortunately because of inspections and/or repairs. Sellers could save themselves a small fortune if they would have their home inspected prior to finding that right buyer. Not only does it lend credibility and stature to your image, it conveys that you're a person of integrity - someone who the buyer would like to do business with! Call us today, and your Realtor tomorrow!

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

Meetings Notices/3E
Activity Indicators/4E
Oil & Gas Activity/5-6E

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Rigs increase

Above the antique wooden derrick at the Petroleum Museum is framed by chains hanging from a cable tool rig at the site. The Permian Basin rig count showed some improvement for the week of 10-11-91, but was still far short of the count a year ago when 142 rigs were running. The number of working rigs went from 85 to 98 in the Basin and increased 11 to 897 nationally.

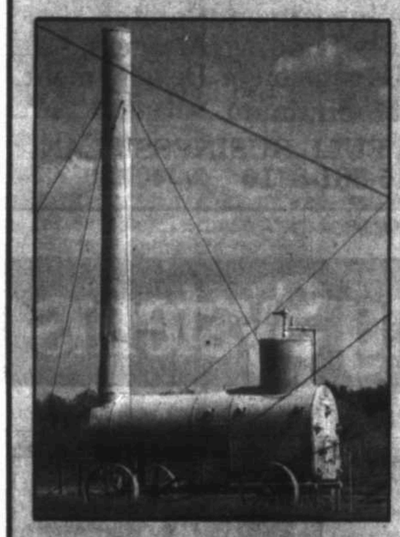

Please see STORY/4E

Job help

Permian Basin communities with a plan for creating jobs may want to contact the Center for Energy and Economic Development for assistance. CEED will provide study funds in the amount of $3000 for elbible organizations. Elgible applicants include public or private non-profit development organizations in Andrews, Borden, Crane, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Loving, Martin, Midland, Pecos, Reeves, Terrell, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties.

Grants known as the Regional Economic Development Technical Assistance Grants (RED TAG) will provide consultants to help qualified groups polish economic development plans.

For more information on the RED TAG call 561-6500.

Oil prices

A retired steam boiler, used to power cable tool rigs rests at the Petroleum Museum, but oil prices were restless this week. The price for WTI continued to climb this week reaching a high of $23.86. Analysts say continuing concerns about tight supplies this winter prompted the improvement in prices.

New head

A 57-year old, third generation oilman from San Antonio has been elected to serve a two year term as president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, which represents 10,000 independent oil and gas producers in the U.S.

To register geologists or not is big question

■ A long-time debate over registering and regulating the geological profession has been revived with a new model act written by the Council of Professional Geologists.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The growth in non-petroleum geological fields such as hydrogeology, environmental geology and construction geology has revived a debate over registering and regulating the profession.

"It's a controversial issue," noted Bernold M. Hanson, past president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and a Midland independent. "(Debate) has been going off and on for 20 years or more."

He added that the issue seems to be gaining momentum.

In Hanson's opinion, he said, support or opposition to registration is divided between petroleum geologists and those in other fields, with petroleum geologists tending to oppose registration, the others supporting it.

"Hydrogeologists feel they need to be registered (because they work with the public) and most petroleum geologists feel they don't need to be registered because there is an established definition of a geologist and that should satisfy any problems people have if they testify," he said.

He went on to explain that "the biggest problem with registration is reciprocity with other states. If you work in other states, that means you would have to be registered in 31 states. The fees would be prohibitive." He estimated that if registration fees in each state was $300, to register in all 31 oil-producing states would cost roughly $9,000.

Jim W. Adams, a geologist with Exxon and president of the West Texas Geological Society, says his group has not taken a stand on this issue.

"We're all ears at this point. It is a subject we're all interested in and we're keeping our minds open at this point."

He said it's a stand he personally takes as well.

For his part, Hanson is supportive of establishing registration, explaining, "The reason I would register is the fact that I do a lot of work in trials as an expert witness, and I also do some work in ground water. I've probably put myself in the position where, in addition to oil, I'm dealing with the public on other geologic issues. I think it's advantageous for a person in that position (dealing with the public) to be registered."

— Bernold M. Hanson, Midland geologist

Working on the effort to establish registration of geologists is Dr. Christopher C. Mathewson, director of the Center for Engineering Geosciences at Texas A&M University. He is also president-elect of the American Geological Institute and manager of the Geologist Registration Committee.

"I've been working on some professionally-acceptable registration of geologists for the past eight years," he said. "The benefits of being registered is it establishes your credentials."

OIL INDUSTRY IN REVIEW

Environment, natural gas head industry concerns

■ A new industry report offers few surprises but a consensus of views for the industry.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Environmental costs and long term opportunities for natural gas were listed as leading concerns of the oil industry according to a recent study by a leading accounting firm.

In a review of annual reports and 10-Ks of the larger U.S. oil and gas companies, Price, Waterhouse found that more than half of the companies reviewed considered environmental activities and the related financial exposure a key issue of the 90s.

At the same time, the Price Waterhouse Petroleum Industry Review found that natural gas producers are still finding natural gas faster than demand can use it up and most would welcome some form of market balance.

Producers are still optimism about the long term outlook for natural gas, but see little to be thankful for in the short term. While cold winters may produce modest short term increases, they will not be significant.

Long term hope is seen in the fuel switching, that is expected to take place in both the transportation and utility sectors, in response to the Clean Air Act. Demand in 1990 was 18.45 Tcf and is expected to increase to 18.50 Tcf in 1991. Similar increases are expected in following years as the industry regains markets lost in the early 1980s and adds new markets at the same time.

One factor limiting growth of the natural gas industry to domestic demand is the lack of export markets, which are almost nonexistent, with the exception of Northern Mexico, says Price Waterhouse.

The report also concludes that oil companies will continue to shift their focus and activity from mature domestic areas such as the Permian Basin to overseas exploration which offers larger, more economical prospects. South America, Africa, The Pacific Rim and Asia were named as major targets by oil companies, because of attractive concession arrangements, tax incentives and other government support.

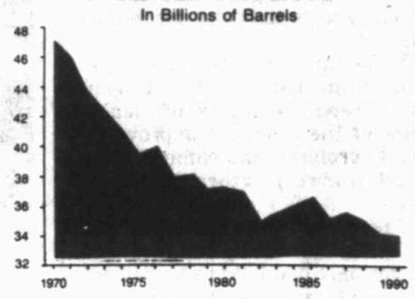

Nearly all major oil companies are expected to have substantially higher overseas budgets next year.

The now intense flurry of divestitures by major oil companies in the Permian Basin attests to this fact that the focus is shifting overseas. Much of the capital gained from divestiture here is expected to finance overseas projects. That flight is also partially responsible the low rig count.

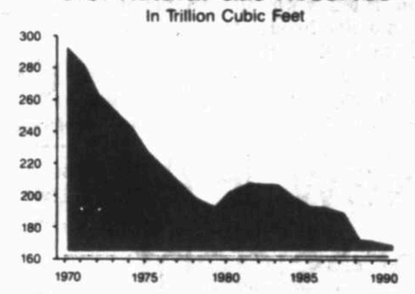

The flight of dollars overseas is also expected to impact the number of producing wells. There are now 588,000 producing wells in the U.S., down from 646,000 in 1985, and that decline is expected to continue.

Still up in the air, is how much impact the National Energy Strategy will have on the domestic industry.

U.S. Oil Reserves
In Billions of Barrels

U.S. Natural Gas Reserves
In Trillion Cubic Feet

U.S. natural gas and oil reserves have been on a steady decline for the past two decades and present oil industry plans will probably do little to correct the trend.

Tank gauge offers safety

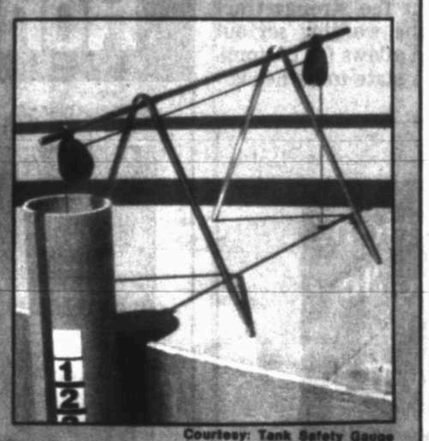

■ Allows pumpers to gauge tanks from a distance.

Staff Report

Gauging tanks has never been a pleasant or safe practice for pumpers, what with the worries about climbing hot, icy, slippery and wet tanks and concern for hydrogen sulfide gas. But the dreaded process may have just gotten easier thanks to a relatively simple device patented by a local company.

Arco reshapes exploration

Staff Report

Arco has formed a new ExplorationandLanddepartmentthatitsayswillinclude a ventures group that will seek to participate in viable drilling prospects with industry partners.

"In addition to generating prospects outside Arco's focus areas, the venture group will seek out exploration opportunities with other companies in an effort to share risk," said Jerry Dees, who was named Manager of Exploration and Land and Senior Vice President of Arco Oil and Gas Co.

Dees

He said the group would trade exploration projects with other companies, while utilizing its extensive exploration data base to reduce risk.

Arco announced this week that the new organized department which is part of the company-wide reorganization announced last month, will be organized with two districts (eastern and western) with offices in Houston and Midland.

Carl C. Smith has been named vice president of the western district in Midland and John E. Beitzel is vice president of the eastern district. Both will report directly to Dees.

John A. Sansbury, Jr. was named Land Manager and will head up the departments acquisition and sales group in Dallas. Jim Gant, Jr. will head a support group in Dallas, which will provide technical support to both districts.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Look who's talking about inexperience

In a news report in the Austin American-Statesman this week, Texas Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero said she did not support Clarence Thompson because she was "not impressed with his qualifitcations."

Pitts

"Pretty funny," says Barry Williamson, her republican challenger, "that Lena Guerrero, who has absolutely no experience in energy, and heads the Texas Railroad Commission, would question the experience of a man who has served with distinction as a Federal Appeals Court Judge, Assistant Secretary of Education and Director of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission."

It is the second heated charge Williamson has leveled at Lena Guerrero, whom he calls a liberal out of touch with the conservative mainstream of Texas. With the fireworks starting this early in the TRC race one can only wonder what it will be like, as the campaign moves down to the wire.

More political fire works will be on the agenda when the National Association of Royalty Owners meets in Grapevine, Texas October 31.

Two hot topics set for discussion at the two day meeting are gas prices and the environments. Jim Stafford, president of NARO, said it is likely that the Oklahoma-based trade association will proposed a floor price on natural gas to halt the practice of selling gas below its replacement cost.

Stafford also said the group would address the "hip shot" environmental laws which were of grave concern to royalty owners. "There are several laws pending that focus on abuses of six decades ago," said Stafford. "Ground water pollution and seepages are justifiably causing national panic, but the villains, if any, are long since dead and buried. Yet Congress is readying legislation that, if enacted, would shut in virtually all of the nation's older marginal wells."

The environmental pinch, however, is being felt even by the majors. Amoco Oil Co. announced this week that it will shut down it Casper refinery on December 1, impacting not only 210 jobs at the refinery, but a number of service stations in the area. The company blamed costly environmental regulations.

Refinery Manger Larry McVay, said $150 million would be needed to bring the facility up to environmental standards had tipped the scales for the small refinery. "The refinery is not equipped to comply with the numerous and costly environmental regulations, nor can our small size or marginal performance justify the investment," he said.

He said it was unlikely the refinery would be sold and that was likely to remain permanently closed. The closure will also impact 50 retail service stations. Amoco said that because of the closure it would discontinue branded retail marketing in those areas.

McVay said it was the number of environmental regulations that weighed heavily upon the decision to close the refinery.

gauge via a cable and pully system that will allow pumpers to accurately gauge tanks from their pickups. Costing $495, the system which is corrosion and rust proof was designed by a pumper with 35 years experience, and has particular application where OSHA laws might require the presence of a second pumper when gauging tanks.

"Not only does this keep the pumpers off icy or wet steps, it also allows them to determine the fluid level in tanks from a safe distance," says Donnie Reagan, vice president of marketing and sales for the gauge which is yellow with large numbers and has a bright orange indicator for better visibility.

While tanks will still have to be gauged manually for BS, Reagan says keeping pumpers off tanks most of the time will improve liability problems and eliminate the need for respirators in many cases.

The system which can be installed in minutes by two men, requires only one hole to be drilled in top of the tank. To eliminate sparks a small clay doughnut is place around the marked hole, and filled with oil. An air drill then drills through the oil and into the tank. Both the small metal A-frame pulley system and the gauge are attached to the tank using epoxy.

New IPAA president selected

Eugene L. Ames Jr., president and chief executive officer of Venus Oil Co., succeeded C. Paul Hilliard, president of Badger Oil Corp. of Lafayette, La.

Ames, 57, will serve a two-year term as head of the association which represents the 10,000 independent crude oil and natural gas producers in the United States.

A third-generation oilman, Ames graduated from the University of Texas in 1955 and is a longtime leader in IPAA and other oil industry organizations. He is vice president, South Texas, for the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association and is a member of the National Petroleum Council.

Gas supplies adequate for this winter

WASHINGTON — A survey of distributors, pipelines and producers reveals that the nation has more than enough natural gas to meet demand this winter, American Gas Association President Michael Baly III said.

"During the past five years, companies have developed balanced supply portfolios, have exercised 'best cost' planning and have increased delivery flexibility throughout their systems," Baly said.

These intitiatives, fueled by open-access and competition, have strengthened the natural gas industry's ability to meet winter peak month demand. The survey makes it clear that natural gas supply looks good for the winter of 1991-92, and indicates that supplies should be adequate even if January 1992 is the coldest month in 50 years, Baly said.

The A.G.A. survey, "Natural Fas for the Winter Heating Season 1991-1992," says that the maximum monthly comsumption of natural gas eve recorded in the U.S. was 2,426 billion cubic feet (Bcf) in January 1979. Since 1982, the maximum monthly comsumption has net exceeded 2,314 Bcf. Peak month supply capacity for the winter of 1991-92 is projected to be 2,531 Bcf, Baly said.

Local distibution companies (LCD's) have diversified their natural gas supply sources for cost and reliability reasons, Baly said. "Forecasts for the 1992 peak month indicated that the trend in the mix of LCD supplies from 1980 to 1991 has now stabilized at about 43 percent system gas, with increased amounts of long-term and short-term nonsystem gas, and propane-air and underground storage," he said.

REGISTER: Model law considered by states

(From 1E)

According to Dr. Mathewson, two years ago representatives of the Association of Engineering Geologists, AAPG, Society of Independent Professioal Earth Scientists as well as the American Institute of Professional Geologists and American Association of State Geologists met in Dallas and wrote a rough draft of legislation for registering geologists.

The model law that has been drafted has five points, he says.

- Registration of geolgoists and registration of specialties in geology.
- Exempting certain practices that don't directly affect the public, such as exploration geology, geological research or teaching. "But anyone can register."
- Reciprocity between states.
- Temporary registration between states.
- Discipline and enforcemnt powers for the registration board to be flexible and fit the crime.

He said the first step toward registration was to establish a written document that represented the opinions of the geological profession, and then let each state adapt the model law to its particular environmental, social and political conditions.

Registration is an important issue, he said, because "with the majority of the profession — their practice does not affect the public or threaten the public's safety, health or welfare. They're not like an engineer or a doctor.

But some specialties, like hydrogeology, construction geology and environmental geology, these people directly affect the public. An incorrect assessment could lead to a home being flooded, or a landslide, or a contaminated water well."

Bureaucracy required for registering geologists would depend on the state, Dr. Mathewson said. Texas, for example, because it has no registration, would require a separate board that would be self-supporting through registration fees, whereas Wisconsin would merely have to add a couple of new members to an already established common board.

'An incorrect assessment could lead to a flooded home or a landslide.'

Dr. Christopher Mathewson, Texas A&M University

And he said the model legislation attempts to address concerns such as having to pay fees in each state, by establishing commonality between states and also with the provision for temporary registration, which would allow a Texas-based geologist to work a well in California or Oklahoma or any other state.

How the legislation is accepted depends on both geologists — and Dr. Mathewson said response has been positive — and on the individual states.

Hanson recalled that a tentative bill fashioned by the AAPG, SIPES and AIPG failed to make it through the Texas Legislature.

But Dr. Mathewson said that is "why we want the strongest act possible, all the wording set out precisely. That allows for customization by each state to its needs."

Pickens still plays to win

■ T. Boone Pickens may have mellowed some, while suffering reverses, but he is as intense as ever say friends.

By JACK Z. SMITH
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Intimates of T. Boone Pickens say he is an intense, fiercely competitive man who has mellowed only slightly since his celebrated corporate takeover battles of the 1980s.

"Boone is not a good loser at anything," says his wife, Bea Pickens, with a laugh of resignation. "We used to play tennis, and we had to quit being partners. I think that pretty well tells the story."

A longtime friend, Wales Madden Jr. of Amarillo, Texas, says Pickens "has mellowed somewhat. ... He can accept criticism better."

Pickens is "intense and competitive," a "type A" personality who "has a great sense of humor which saves him," Madden said.

Madden recalls the time that he and Pickens, both self-confident and headstrong, got lost in Canadian sand hills while hunting prairie chickens. They disagreed on which direction to go, so they decided "each one could lead for 15 minutes."

"The end result was that we went in geometric circles for several hours," Madden said. "Neither of us would give up our right to lead. We were both pretty pigheaded. We've laughed about that a lot of times since then."

Ty Richmond, supervisor of security for Mesa, can attest to Pickens' competitive spirit. Richmond, a 6-foot-1, 205-pound former University of Kentucky football player who is 29 years old, regularly takes on Pickens, 63, in racquetball.

"He plays to win and he expects me to do the same," Richmond said. "I'd say on the average he probably wins three of five games. ... He's a very strategic player. He's the master of the little corner shots."

At 5-foot-9 and 167 pounds, Pickens — a onetime starting guard on a stellar Amarillo High School basketball team — has an exceptionally low resting heart rate of 45 and is in "superb physical condition," said Dr. Kenneth Cooper, president of the Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas. Pickens serves on the institute's board of directors.

Pickens is a health-conscious foe of tobacco. Guests flying on his company plane have been greeted with this warning: "If you must smoke, please step outside."

Pickens still is likely to put in a 60-hour workweek. He rises as early as 5 a.m. to read the Wall Street Journal. After a day at the office and perhaps a game of racquetball, he is likely to sip a Scotch and water with his wife after work. Staying up late means watching the 10 o'clock news before dozing off.

Politically, Pickens is a conservative who has long labeled himself a Republican. A member of the Highland Park Presbyterian Church, he includes books by staunchly conservative television ministers Pat Robertson and Jerry Falwell on his office bookshelf.

Boone's musical tastes lean to earlier years — he likes the big-band music of the 1940s and oldies such as "I Left My Heart in San Francisco," his wife said.

Horizontal Pumping Systems

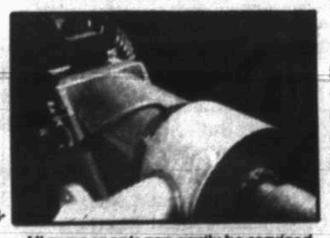

Reda's Horizontal Pumping System (HPS) is an excellent alternative to positive displacement pumps in high volume, high pressure applications such as waterfloods, produced water injection, hydraulic pumping systems and pipeline boosters.

The rugged construction of the Reda HPS is clearly superior to other horizontals. The pump is solidly mounted to a reinforced "I" beam skid for positive alignment. The unit is rigid enough to be installed without a concrete pad for lower site preparation and setup costs.

The Reda HPS is available in capacities to 30,000 BPD and discharge pressures to 4,000 psi. The units can be installed in parallel for higher volume applications. The HPS uses readily available industrial electric Nema A or B motors. Any component can easily be serviced or replaced on location. Designed for years of quiet, trouble free operation, the HPS requires no daily lubrication or maintenance. There are no V-belts or packing to service.

Heavy duty clamps provide superior pump alignment.

All components can easily be serviced or replaced on location.

Contact your Reda representative for complete details on how Reda's HPS can cost effectively out perform positive displacement pumps and other horizontals.

MEETINGS

Wrotenbery

Lori Wrotenbery, assistant director, Underground Injection Control with the Texas Railroad Commission, will be the speaker at Thursday's meeting of the Environmental Study Group of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers. The meeting will be at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Wrotenbery will speak on environmental legislative issues, including the controversial topic of hazardous waste disposal in the oil field. She will also discuss upcoming and current bills before both the state and federal legislatures.

Cost is $12 per person and reservations should be made by Monday by calling 686-7329.

Exxon research geologist to speak to WTGS

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Lincoln Foreman, research geologist with Exxon Production Research in Houston. He will present a paper on "Determination of Timing and Conditions of Fracture Porosity Occlusion Using Stable Isotopies and Fluid Inclusions."

Cost of the luncheon is $7 per person and reservations should be made by Monday afternoon by calling 683-1573.

Purchasing Managers to hold monthly meeting

The National Association of Purchasing Managers, Permian Basin, will meet Tuesday at the Odessa Hilton beginning at 6 p.m.

Guest speaker Russell Autrey of the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce will speakon "The Permian Basin: Where We Are Going From Here."

Reservations should be made by calling 381-0120.

SPE offers conference on "Energy Careers"

The Society of Petroleum Engineers will host a special forum for students and others to learn about careers in the energy industry.

The forum will be at the Petroleum Museum from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday. Admission is free.

Accountants to host Midland College president

The Petroleum Accounting Society of the Permian Basin will meet Tuesday at the Plaza Club in ClayDesta Center, beginning with committe meetings at 3:30 p.m. and 4:30 p.m.

A technical session presented by the tax committee will be a panel discussion on oil and gas tax issues and gets underway at 5:30 p.m.

After a social hour at 6 p.m. and dinner at 6:45, guest speaker Dr. David Daniel of Midland College will speak on "Midland College - Where it is Today and Where it Will Be in The Future."

SPE operations study group sets meeting

Harold Brannon of BJ Services will be the guest speaker at Thursday's meeting of the Operations Study Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers. The meeting will be at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Brannon will speak on "New Delayed Borate-Crosslinked Fluid Provides Improved Fracture Conductivity in High Temperature Applications."

Cost of the luncheon is $8 per person.

MC schedules small business seminar series

Midland College is again offering its Small Business Seminar series.

The first will be October 29 in Room 115 of the Occupational-Tech building at Midland College from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Midland attorney Mike Morgan will speak on legal issues. Cost is $5 per session, $15 for all four.

Information and reservations can be made by calling Dr. Jerry Lee Jones at 685-4657.

High costs forcing producers out of West

By Sandy Shore

DENVER (AP) — The oil and gas industry is easing out of the West and consolidating operations nationwide because of high environment-related costs and taxes, independent producers said Monday.

Major companies and independents alike are moving into more lucrative overseas markets to offset losses from U.S. operations, said executives affiliated with the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

"Environmental restrictions are major problems," IPAA President Denise Bode said at a news conference at the close of the IPAA convention here. Many producers are just plugging wells because of the "deep-pocket expenses they're facing."

More than 1,100 independent producers attended the IPAA's 62nd annual convention here, which focused on ways to develop a secure future for the energy industry.

Bode said the association planned to lobby Congress for relief from the alternative minimum tax and work to promote a federal income tax checkoff program for the energy industry.

In recent months, several large energy firms have closed divisions or operations in the Rocky Mountains. Although oil prices are rebounding, natural gas prices remain low, forcing many companies nationwide to retool their operations.

Drilling activity remains sluggish, with 786 rigs operating as of last week compared with more than 4,000 in the 1980s.

Apache Corp. is relocating to Houston next year, taking more than 400 jobs out of Colorado. Amoco Corp. is closing its 210-employee refinery in Casper, Wyo., in December in lieu of spending $150 million to bring the plant into compliance with environmental regulations. Amoco also plans to move its Denver explorations office to Houston, cutting 155 jobs in Colorado.

Texaco Inc. is the only major energy company with a big exploration division in Denver, which benefited from the oil boom in the 1980s. Only a handful of large independent companies will remain after Apache leaves.

The move out of the Rockies presents a "short-term crisis, but a long-term benefit," said Conley P. Smith, an IPAA executive committee member from Denver.

The jobs will be lost initially, but the prices of leases will drop, attracting new drillers, he said.

Major companies and independents increasingly are spending their exploration dollars overseas, mainly because of taxes, Smith said.

The IPAA plans to focus solely on seeking relief from the alternative minimum tax, which is crippling small, independent producers, Bode said.

The tax is designed to ensure that high earners pay some taxes regardless of how many deductions they have. However, certain expenses such as intangible drilling costs and portions of depletion allowances in the oil and gas industry cannot be figured as income tax liability.

The independent producers say the clause has forced some small producers who report a loss for the year to pay taxes.

"I think we have to be prepared when the tax law goes through to make our case (before Congress)," she said.

"We're not asking for anything new. We just want the standard deductions that are now allowed to small independent producers."

Mesa sends unitholders materials, sets meeting

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership has started mailing to unitholders proxy materials that propose conversion to a corporation.

Mesa said Tuesday a special meeting of unitholders would take place Nov. 26 to vote on the proposal.

Mesa, a natural gas producer led by general partner T. Boone Pickens, became a partnership in 1985 to take advantage of tax laws.

The move back to a corporation, Pickens has said, will make Mesa more inviting to institutional investors who are needed to replace individuals who left when dividends were suspended due to the slump in natural gas prices.

In a statement, Pickens urged unitholders to support the conversion. He said it would "position Mesa to receive the recognition that its high quality asset base deserves."

Mesa proposes issuing new common stock to replace its existing common and preference ownership units.

Owners would typically get one share of new common stock for each common unit and 1.25 common shares for each preferred unit. Preferred shareholders receive slightly more as compensation because Mesa owes them cash distributions that haven't been made since the first quarter of last year.

Mesa also plans a one-for-five reverse stock split, reducing the number of outstanding shares by 80 percent.

Separately, Mesa announced it anticipated revenues and operating expenses for the just-ended third quarter to be about one-third lower than last year due to the sale of assets and low prices for natural gas. In the third quarter of 1990, Mesa had revenue of $66 million and operating expenses of $64 million.

Valero quarterly profits of f 57 percent

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Valero Natural Gas Partners, L.P., said Wednesday that third quarter profit fell 57 percent compared to last year because of lower prices.

Valero earned $9.2 million, 47 cents per partnership unit, on operating income of $25.4 million during the three months that ended Sept. 30. Last year, the partnership earned $21.6 million, $1.12 per unit, on operating income of $32.9 million.

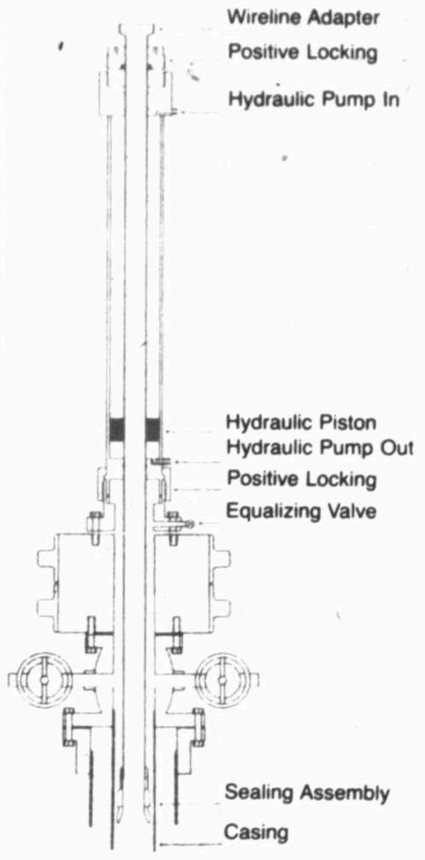

Valero received an average of $1.74 per thousand cubic feet for natural gas during the quarter. In the same period last year, Valero received $1.87 per mcf.

SMITH ENERGY SERVICES

Wellhead Isolation Tool

Safe • Simple • Cost Effective

Smith Energy Services now offers the industry's safest Wellhead Isolation Tools for both low and high pressure wellheads. They can be run safely on any well using any pumping service company.

OPERATOR USE

The Smith Energy Services' Wellhead Isolation Tools permit customers to stimulate through less expensive, low pressure wellheads to reduce cost, protect the wellhead tree from acid and abrasive fluids, and facilitates tree testing without wire line equipment — all with complete safety!

OPERATOR ADVANTAGES

- Safety increased with no exposed high-pressure seals
- Cost effective — saves valves, wellheads and BOPs
- Large openings for high pumping rates
- Wellhead Isolation Tool may be installed or removed at its maximum working pressure
- Permits wire line access through all casing tools
- Extended visible stroke allows positive location of seal assembly
- Positive mechanical and hydraulic locking devices

For more information contact your Smith Energy Services representative.

BP division sold to PG&E unit

DALLAS (AP) — BP Exploration Inc. said Monday it would sell U.S. exploration and production operations to an arm of Pacific Gas and Electric Co., the nation's largest investor-owned utility.

Dallas-based PG&E Resources will acquire Tex-Con Oil & Gas Co. of Houston for about $400 million, BP Exploration said. Tex-Con was responsible for BP Exploration's onshore oil and gas activities in the Lower 48 states.

Last month, BP Exploration sold the transmission and marketing arm of Tex-Con to Transok Inc. for $250 million.

BP Exploration put Tex-Con up for sale after identifying assets it no longer considered core to its business.

The Tex-Con exploration and production business operates 750 wells, mostly in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. It produced 3.6 million barrels of oil and 44.7 billion cubic feet of natural gas in 1990. Proven reserves of oil were 30.4 million barrels of oil and 317.9 cubic feet of gas.

Arco announces deal

NEW IBERIA, La. (AP) — ARCO announced Wednesday a major construction project at the Port of Iberia that officials said will pump $120 million into the economy and put up to 2,000 people to work.

Twenty pre-fabricated modules, some as tall as a six-story building, will be constructed to handle various phases of gas production at the Prudhoe Bay oil field in Alaska, ARCO officials said.

The project will employ at least 1,000 people and could eventually result in 2,000 jobs, ARCO said. The construction project is expected to generate at least $80 million for the New Iberia-area economy, officials said.

"The projects could generate sales of materials, tools, consumable goods and equipment in the local area of about $30 million, while subcontract activities could add another $10 million to the local economy," said Lodwrick M. Cook, ARCO's chairman and chief executive officer.

About 150 staff members from ARCO and the fabrication contractor, which is yet to be selected, also will be moved in, Cook said.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Meridian records Mississippian find

Staff Report

A Mississippian Limestone discovery has been completed in Winkler County, west of the Bouldin field and southeast of the Dollarhide East field, 22 miles northeast of Kermit.

MERIDIAN OIL INC., Midland, tested the No. 201 KCM — amended from No. 1 Mary Ann Cameros — to flow 56 barrels of 41.1 gravity crude, 51 Mcfd, and 14 barrels of water on a 17/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 20 psi. The well flowed from perforations 10,238 to 10,504 ft., which had been acidized with 6,300 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL acid. Gas-oil ratio is 910:1.

Originally permitted as a 10,600 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,859 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 10,812 ft.

The well topped the Rustler at 1,685 ft., Yates at 3,230 and Mississippian Limestone at 10,235 ft. on ground elevation of 3,145 ft. Pay was topped at 10,240 ft.

Winkler find

Concho County yields Canyon Sand strike

RILEY RESOURCES CO. has completed a Canyon Sand discovery in Concho County, 1-3/4 miles northwest of the Brady Mountain (Canyon Sand) field.

On potentiale test, the No. 1 J.L. Daniel Estate pumped six barrels of 40 gravity crude and 100 barrels of water from perforations 3,274 to 3,279 ft. The interval was acidized with 500gallons of acid.

Total depth was 3,610 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

On ground elevation of 1,556 ft., formation tops include the Cook at 1,795 ft., King Sand at 1,970, Ranger at 2,670, Home Creek at 2,760, Palo Pinto at 2,890, and Canyon Sand at 3,270 ft.

Location is 549 ft. from north and 1,927 ft. from west lines of Section 15, Block 72, Indianola Railroad Survey 15, Abst. 1556, 4.5 miles north of Eden.

Wes-Tex completes new field discovery

WES-TEX DRILLING has completed the discovery well of the Dockum Creek field in Dawson County, six miles west of production in the Croton Creek (Tannehill 4660) field.

The No. 1 Watson was tested to pump 26 barrels of 37.4 gravity crude and no water from perforations 4,902 to 4,910 ft. Production was natural.

The well was drilled to 5,060 ft., wher 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 5,020 ft.

The well topped the Tannehill Sand formation at 4,901 ft.

Schleicher field gets 276 Mcfd reopener

The Fort McKavitt (Strawn) field of Schleicher County has been reopened by FREEDOM ENERGY INC.

Freedom reentered the No. 1 Sheen Brothers, former Palo Pinto producer, and recompleted it for a calculated absolute open flow of 276 Mcfd. from perforations 4, 335 to 4,352 ft. Condensate gravity was 46.3 degrees API and gas-liquid ratio was 138,000:1.

Drilled to 4,853 ft., the we was plugged back to 4,410 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,540 ft.

Well again produces from Pecos Valley

A former Pecos Valley (Devonian) producer in Pecos County has been recompleted in that formation again.

RAYDEN reentered the No. 1 Redmond "B" and tested it for a calculated absolute open flow of 916 Mcfd. Condensate gravity was 36.3 degrees API and gas-liquid ratio was 136,364:1.

Originally drilled to 5,850 ft., the well was plugged back to 5,585 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,753 ft. Rayden drilled out the cast iron bridge plug at 5,390 ft. and acidized the original perforations at 5,485 to 5,565 ft. with 2,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

The well topped the Wolfcamp at 4,760 ft. and Devonian at 5,480 ft. on elevation of 2,449 ft.

Borden reentery nets two-barrel producer

An abandoned well in Borden County has been reentered and completed as a Lowr Clearfork producer in the Gray Gulch field.

BETTIS, BOYLE & STOVAL reentered the No. 1 Gray "A" and tested it to pump two barrels of 39 gravity crude and 120 barrels of water from perforations 4,600 to 4,612 ft. The interval was acidized with 20,000 gallons of acid.

The well was drilled to 6,810 ft. and plugged back to 5,340 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,804 ft.

The well topped the Upper Clearfork at 3,850 ft. and Lower Clearfork at 4,595 ft. on ground elevation of 2,347 ft.

The well was drilled as the No. 2 SWEPI/TXPO Gray by Shell Western Exploration & Production and abandoned Jan. 30, 1986.

Life in a new DIRECTION

Choreographer, Judy Coleman, right, directs Melissa May. "Cats" will be presented by Lee High School's choral program 7:45 p.m., Oct. 28 and 29 at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

By Georgia Todd Temple

Paula Turney Edwards spent close to a decade building a successful choral program at San Antonio's Madison High. When her telephone rang that morning in early July of 1990, the thought of leaving her position had not crossed her mind.

"We had just redone our house," Mrs. Edwards said. "I had already started planning for the new year. We were all just as happy as we could be."

The call, placed by Jack Fryer, principal of Robert E. Lee High School in Midland, "Threw everything in a turmoil." The school suddenly had a vacancy, one for which Mrs. Edwards was qualified.

"How many times do you get called to come take a job at your alma mater," asked Mrs. Edwards, who was a 1973 graduate of Lee. And yet, her original answer, when Fryer asked her if she was interested in the position, was "No.

"And he used his very charming influence and said, 'Well, don't you want to come back home?' My parents live here, and I think he probably threatened to call my mother if I didn't come out for an interview," said Mrs. Edwards, who is the daughter of Pauline and Billy Turney. She laughed.

"So we picked up and came to interview, my husband and I," she said. At the time,

Navy band swings into country

By Georgia Todd Temple

Master Chief William Emerson considers himself a person who's "always been pretty lucky."

A founding member of the Country Gentlemen, an internationally known bluegrass group, Emerson made it into the U.S. Navy Band just short of his 35th birthday.

"I was introduced to a violin player with the Navy Band who told me that they were interested in organizing a country music ensemble — at that particular time the Navy program wanted to be more diversified.

"I saw it as a great and unique opportunity, especially as a banjo player. The idea of playing with the U.S. Navy Band was a great thrill."

Emerson became a member of the U.S. Navy Band and its musical director in June of 1973. Now, musicians who enter the service must go through basic training. Then, times and rules were different.

"I had not been in the military, and I did not go through basic training. If I had had to do that, I wouldn't be here. Thirty-five is the cutoff age. I just made it under the wire."

Emerson explains that he was hired under the direct Procurement Program which the Navy used in acquiring other professionals like dentists, physicians and bulldozer operators. "Somebody they can't train. The Navy can't take a musician and train him to be a musician so we have to get them as professionals already. Some of the programs are still Direct Procurement."

Please see NAVY/2F

The U.S. Navy's country-bluegrass band based in Washington, D.C., comes to Midland for a 7 p.m. performance Oct. 31 at Midland High School Auditorium. Free tickets may be picked up in Midland at Daily News, Pages and Prints, Mainstream Music, Gene Bartus Fine Men's Wear, Foods Fantastic, Baldwin Piano and Organ Center; in Odessa at English Tweeds; in Stanton at Stanton drug; and in Andrews at the Chamber of Commerce.

EDWARDS: Rewards outweigh headaches, ulcers of job

(From 1F)

Phillip, her husband taught math at MacArthur High School, San Antonio. He was a 1972 graduate of Lee High School.

Several important aspects of the move played a major role in the couple's decision to move back home.

"We have twin daughters, who are 6, and to move them back closer to grandparents was attractive. At Madison, I was Fine Arts Department chairman and the choral director. Here I also do the freshman school, the high school and I co-direct with Kay Miller (Midland High School), the Midland Independent School District's 5th and 6th grade honor choir.

"I added some responsibilities when I moved here that I did not have before. I had been at Madison 9 years. I was able to basically establish that program and left it as an established program. This was an adventure."

Obstacles such as a house to sell seemed to vanish as "so many things fell in place for it. We had to sell our house within a month, and the silly thing did sell. That was sort of uncanny. We appeared in Midland two weeks before school started. It was just a whirlwind situation."

Students were the next obstacle Mrs. Edwards had to overcome in the fall of 1990 when she joined the Lee High School faculty.

"I HAD A LOT of hurdles to cross with the kids. Students tend to look at you like, 'Who are you and what do you have to offer for me?' That's normal. It's just like getting a new coach. They want to see if you have a track record that is going to come through before they jump on the band-wagon. They don't want to jump on a sinking ship."

She had an impressive track record. Since joining the faculty at Madison High in 1981, Mrs. Edwards had conducted choirs which received consistent Sweepstakes annually at UIL competitions. Her department produced musicals and a full Broadway show every other year.

This month, the choral program at Lee is producing a Broadway revue which will be onstage 7:45 p.m., Oct. 28 and 29 at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

"Last year, we started this Broadway revue, meaning a review of different medleys from Broadway shows. This year, we're following the same format."

The selections this year came from such musicals as "Pippin." "My Fair Lady," "Godspell," "Cats" and "Porgy and Bess."

"WE INVOLVE OUR entire program, which is the Freshman Choir, Lee Singers, Lee Chorale, and Origin, to produce it."

Being in the choral program means at least two nights a week in rehearsals, Mrs. Edwards said, adding that they often spend weekends, sometimes lunches working on music.

"They put in lots and lots of hours, not just for the musical revue, but for concerts that we do for contests that we participate in.

"The choirs here are award-winning choirs. The past two years the Chorale, which is the varsity choir, has made Sweepstakes," said Mrs. Edwards, explaining that the two areas in which choirs are judged are sight-reading and concert performance. Each area has its own panel of judges.

"After you do your concert performance, then you have to go and perform a piece that you've never seen before. And I'm not allowed to sing the piece for them. I'm not allowed to sing parts. We perform it. I have six minutes just to talk to the kids about it. We get to sing it through one time with piano, and then, the second time, we have to sing it a cappella.

"A lot of people think that reading music is a mystical experience and that if you have that talent, you can do it. That's not true. It's a methodical technique that you learn how to do. We spend time every day learning how to read music."

"I had a lot of hurdles to cross with the kids. Students tend to look at you like, 'Who are you and what do you have to offer for me?' That's normal. It's just like getting a new coach."

— Paula Edwards

SWEEPSTAKES MEANS A group has been awarded a first division in both, the highest honor UIL can award.

"It's a way of evaluating performance groups. How do you give a grade to a choir? What UIL has done for musical organization in Texas is it has tried to standardize performance, set a criteria of expectations that they expect the director to teach their performers. Basically, it's my report card."

The choral program at Lee has a winning tradition, Mrs. Edwards said.

"Through the ups and downs of the last 30 years, the choral program has remained strong at Lee, and its had a winning tradition. Even the kids that come to the program late in the game, are aware of the fact that the traditions are there, and they fall into the requirement of commitment and excellence."

Mrs. Edwards remembers her days as a student at Lee High well, describing her high school career as "often a complicated juggling routine." While at Lee, she was a member of the varsity tennis team, lettering each year; a member of the National Honor Society; a member of the Student Council, serving as Chaplain her senior year; and in the choir program, where she was a member of the Lee A cappella Choir.

"THE CHOIR CAME to enjoy notoriety not only in the State of Texas but the Southwest. The demanding, inspiring, and at times intimidating choir director, Hank Sellers, instilled in his choirs a fierce desire for excellence. His unwavering insistence on individual practice and discipline has greatly influenced my beliefs about teaching. Most importantly, the emotional, intellectual and musical experiences that he provided became an important factor for my growth as a person, a musician and a teacher."

"I knew that I didn't not want to be a teacher or a secretary. I was sure about those things.

"My big thing was piano. I really didn't think I wanted to be a concert pianist either.

"So, I knew what I didn't want to do," said Mrs. Edwards, who attended Hardin-Simmons in Abilene on a music scholarship. "I did know that I liked music. I wasn't sure what I could do with it, but I knew I liked it."

Her life changed when she was a junior.

"As a music major, I began to take conducting classes, which is part of your degree, and it was like a light bulb clicked. I knew that being on the podium was what I wanted to do.

"AS A CONDUCTOR, you teach. It doesn't matter if you are a professional conductor with an orchestra, or school, you have to teach as a conductor. It was just a decision of what level do I teach on," Mrs. Edwards said, adding that she chose the high school level because of her "own good experiences.

"I've never regretted this decision. Even when I think things are at their worst and most chaotic and disappointing, or whatever, I still like what I do.

"I hear a lot from parents that want to steer their children away from teaching. They don't feel like it's prestigious enough, that it makes enough money.

"Sometimes I think parents forget you have to like what you do. This is a service field, and you get lots of rewards for what you do. You also get a lot of headaches and ulcers, but it is worthwhile."

NAVY: Band is professional group dedicated to excellence

(From 1F)

After spending his life as a professional musician, Emerson found most appealing the prospect of playing music and at the same time acquiring some security.

"It was really the thing for me to do with long-term security — all the military benefits that go along with the job and also a way to serve my country."

He has no doubts he made a good decision.

"Since I have been in the Navy, I have played for more people than I ever would have otherwise."

This U.S. Navy Band is a favorite of President Bush.

"We do perform for him (Bush) quite often. As a matter of fact, we went to China with him a couple of years back for a Texas-style barbecue he gave for the Chinese leaders in Bejing. He's a country music fan.

"He has certainly treated us well," said Emerson who has worked for U.S. presidents since President Johnson. "Bush is the most personable, most relaxed president that I have ever worked with."

Emerson, who also called President Reagan easy to work with, recalled arriving at the White House for the dedication of President Bush's horseshoe pits, an event whose guest list included several celebrities, including the Washington Redskins."

"When we got there, he was out there walking on the lawn with Millie. The way he greeted us was, 'Thanks a lot for coming guys. It's great to see you. Where would ya'll like to setup?'

"There was no aide out there, no colonel, just President Bush, Millie and the band. He let us set up where we wanted to. That's just the way he is, an awful nice guy, extremely easy to work with."

One of the drawbacks of securing professional players for the Navy is convincing them the decision to join is a positive one, Emerson said.

"Out in the civilian world you can hire anybody you want to as long as you have enough money. Of course, in the Navy, it's not so easy to get the people you really need to do the job. In other words, we have to convince people that this is a really good job. And it is with all the benefits and security and educational benefits that go along with it.

"Nevertheless, people are not really aware of that. They think the Navy will have them down scrubbing the deck. The Navy Band is a professional musical organization dedicated to musical excellence."

What, no cleanup duty? Emerson laughed, then said, "Somebody's got to clean the place up, but it's actually nothing like the sea-going Navy. The focus is on the musical part of it."

The members of the band come from "all over," Emerson said. "Some of them don't necessarily have 100 percent country music backgrounds. The fiddle player, who was originally from Brooklyn, N.Y., was in the play 'Jesus Christ Superstar' on Broadway. He was doing that before he came into the Navy.

"As luck would have it, when the original fiddle player, after 20 years, decided to retire we were able to locate this gentleman and get him into the Navy. He's been a major contributor," Emerson said, referring to Chief Mike Stein, who wrote a song about Desert Storm called "'We Are With You" which became "the No. 1 Desert Storm song nationwide."

This song will be part of the program being presented here at Midland High School Oct. 31. The free 7 p.m. concert is sponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

"They can expect a complete entertainment package that encompasses everything from bluegrass to mainstream country to country rock," Emerson said of the program planned for the Midland audience. The program played by the seven-member group will include some bluegrass selections.

"All are great musicians, and it is a pleasure for me to work with them," Emerson said adding that included in the seven member band is vocalist, Chief Wayne Taylor, who performs a wide range of styles and spends substantial amount of time singing the national anthem at major events.

The Navy is the only major service which has a country and bluegrass group as one of the speciality units, Emerson said.

"The success of this unit has been totally overwhelming. We've played the Grand Old Opry. We've played Opryland. We played Nashville Now on TNN, and we've played at the Wheeling, W.Va., Jamboree USA Barn Dance.

"We really have a large, loyal following, not only in this area, but really nationwide. Our reputation is far and wide, and we're able to come to places like Midland, Texas, and people know who we are and people come to see us because of who we are and not just because we're another free military band.

"That means the most to me. This whole thing started as an experiment. And it's been such an outstanding, overwhelming success. It's really something for all of us in the Navy to be proud of."

Emerson traces his love of country music back to the early 1950s when he was first exposed to the music.

"Just sort of as a hobby, I went out and bought a guitar like so many kids do today with no thought of ever becoming a professional. I just thought of having fun and playing a few tunes on the guitar.

"As time went by, I became a little more accomplished. Then, I heard the banjo. If I could just learn to get through one tune on the thing, I would be satisfied, and before you knew it, in about four or five years, I was actually able to go out and play for money. I decided right then — that's what I wanted to do for a living, and I've been at it ever since."

Emerson compares being a professional musician to playing professional ball.

"It's not easy. It's a whole lot of hard practicing, a whole lot of hard knocks. If you're going to be a baseball pitcher, you've got to throw a whole lot of baseballs before you walk out there to the mound in a major league park. It's not as easy as it sounds.

"There's a lot of disappointments along the way, too. You've got to preserve and keep trying and never be satisfied at the level you are. I've been doing this stuff for 33 years. The way I feel about it, I have a long way to go, too. I never give up trying and working at getting better."

Dynasty reunion reunites stars; continues plot

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — On screen they are known for their vicious cat fights.

But off screen Linda Evans and Joan Collins gossiped like two schoolgirls when they ran into each other while in town to film "Dynasty: The Reunion."

When Evans returned to Los Angeles to step back into Krystle Carrington's shoes for the two-part miniseries, she headed straight for Neiman Marcus. "I ran into Joan in the lingerie section. We ended up sitting on the floor in the dressing room for an hour and talking about the show — who was coming back to do it and so on," she said.

Evans may have been thrilled to see her former co-star, but Krystle and Alexis are still arch rivals in the ABC miniseries that picks up where "Dynasty" left off when it ended.

In addition to Evans and Collins, seven other regular "Dynasty" cast members — John Forsythe (Blake Carrington), John James (Jeff Colby), Heather Locklear (Sammy Jo Carrington), Emma Samms (Fallon Carrington Colby), Kathleen Beller (Kirby Anders), Al Corley (Steven Carrington) and Maxwell Caulfield (Miles Colby) — are reunited when the hit nighttime soap opera of the 1980s moves into the 1990s at 9 p.m. tonight.

AMERICA'S LAND OF ENCHANTMENT

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Museum hosts show

An exhibition of recent works by 34 contemporary realist artist is showing at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through Nov. 17.

"Illuminations and Radiance: Epiphanies in Contemporary Painting" is a group theme show inspired by an interpretation of epiphanies by Irish writer James Joyce. The exhibition at the museum is sponsored in part by Lisa and Cy Wagner of Midland.

Included in the show are still lifes, portraits and landscapes — desert vistas, beach scenes, sunsets and farm fields. The works are done in oil, watercolor, pastel, gouaches, mixed media and pencil.

Hours at the museum are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged.

■ Society hosts show

The Midland Gem and Mineral Society will host its 29th annual show at the Midland County Exhibit Building on East Highway 80 Nov. 2 and 3.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Nov. 2; and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Nov. 3. The show will feature 11 dealers. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for seniors and 25 cents for students 6 to 12 years old.

■ Festival closes today

Big Spring — the 15th annual Big Spring Arts and Crafts Festival closes today in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

More than 300 exhibitors from throughout the Southwest have their wares on display and for sale. Hours are noon to 5 p.m. No admission is charged.

■ Association to meet

LAMESA — "Driving Miss Daisy," performed by the Lamesa Community Theatre, excerpts of "Safety Kids" by Midland's Pickwick Players and a new computer program developed by the Amarillo Little Theatre will highlight the meeting of the Texas Non-profit Theatre Association Oct. 27 from noon to 5 p.m. in Lamesa.

All area residents are invited to attend.

The meeting will begin with lunch at the Dal Paso Museum, 125 N. Main St., Lamesa. Cost is $3 per person. Allen Shankles, executive director of the Amarillo Little Theatre, will show the new computer program his theater has developed that prints tickets, seating charts and mailing lists and provides a data base of subscribers and single ticket purchasers.

The Pickwick Players of Midland Community Theatre, directed by Rene Brister Chambers, will perform an excerpt from "Safety Kids," the popular musical which teaches young students reasons to say "No" to drugs.

"Driving Miss Daisy," an award-winning play, will be performed by Lamesa Community Players at the Lamesa Theatre at 2 p.m. Cost is $5 per person.

Call Linda Bond, area Texas Non-profit Theatre chair, 682-2544, for reservations or information.

ODESSA — A photography exhibit by Steve Goff, chairman of the photography department at Odessa College, will be officially opened at a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Third Floor Gallery, main building at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The public is invited to attend. The show will include 75 of Goff's photos, black and white and platinum palladium prints and will run from Tuesday through Nov. 14.

The gallery is open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and on weekends by special arrangement.

■ Annual exhibit opens

Gallery 1114's "Invited Artists" exhibit opens Saturday with a 7 to 10 p.m. reception at 1114 N. Big Spring St.

This annual exhibit features artists from the area and region. The 1991 show is of photographs by M. Andrews, Michael Banschbach, Steve Goff and Kent Moss. The artists will discuss their work in a gallery talk at 2 p.m. Oct. 27.

The show will remain at the gallery through Dec. 5.

Andrews has presented seminars at the Dallas Photographic Center and lectured at Midland and Odessa colleges. His work is included in "New American Talent," a traveling exhibit scheduled to come to Gallery 1114 in October of 1992. Andrews, who works with color and manipulated images, says these images explore "soul," meaning a reflective perspective and a transcendance of ego.

Banschbach's work is in the "Book of Days Touring Exhibit" and "The Image Square" at the Allen Street Gallery, Dallas. He is a co-founder of "In Focus: A Photographic Society." His palladium prints address planar relationships on a formal level.

Goff is an assistant professor of art at Odessa College. His recent exhibitions include "Death valley Series" at Upstairs Gallery, Chicago, and Photospiva '89 in Joplin, Mo. Goff's work in this show was done with the Diana.

Moss is an instructor of photography and design at Midland College. He is included this year in the Scottish Arts Council Show, Scotland, and in "Mystery and Intrigue" at the Peregrine Gallery in Dallas. He calls his mixed media wall pieces "personal exploration — a visual diary — which the viewer may relate to with their own interpretations."

Gallery 1114 is an artist-supported center for modern and contemporary art. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

■ Hymn festival planned

A Gospel Hymn Festival is planned for 5 p.m. today at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansaa Ave.

Debenport

This first-time endeavor for the two choirs will include arrangements of hymns such as "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," "Down by the Riverside" and "Shall We Gather at the River."

The festival is being presented by the adult choirs of Trinity Presbyterian Church and St. Luke's UMC. The combined 80-voice choir will be directed by Jane Debenport, director of music at Trinity Presbyterian Church, and Bert Bostic, minister of program and music for St. Luke's UMC. Accompanist for the choir will be Steve Spain and Debby Vester, organists for Trinity and St. Luke's respectively.

Bostic

The concert will be presented again at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 27 at Trinity, West Louisiana Avenue at Andrews Highway.

■ Ryder to perform

DALLAS — Mitch Ryder and the Detroit Wheels will roll into Dallas Friday for the West End MarketPlace Fifth Anniversary Bash.

Ryder headlines the opening festivities. The free concert is set for 9 to 11 p.m. in the urban center's outdoor plaza, 603 Munger Ave. at Market Place.

Mitch Ryder and the Detroit Wheels gained notoriety for the 1965 hit single "Jenny Take a Ride," a medley fusing Chuck Willis' "C.C. Rider" to Little Richard's "Jenny, Jenny," which immediately launched the band's career and remained on the Top 20 music charts for months.

Other hits that followed included "Little Latin Lupe Lu," "Devil With a Blue Dress On," "Good Golly Miss Molly" and "Too Many Fish in the Sea."

Friday's Bash will get underway at 5:30 p.m. Leading up to Mitch Ryder and the Detroit Wheels concert will be performances by Latin Express, a salsa combo which salutes Latin America and CityFest '91; New Arts Six, an African-American spiritualist vocal group; the Dallas Tap Dazzlers and Moving Colors, a band with a '60s and '70s repertoire. A fifth anniversary commemoration ceremony will take place at 7:10 p.m.

All MarketPlace fifth anniversary events are open to the public free of charge. The event continues through Oct. 27. For more information call 1-214-954-4350.

■ Group opens season

The West Texas Winds opens its second season at 3 p.m. Nov. 10 with a performance in the sanctuary of First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Members of the group are principal winds players with the Midland-Odessa Symphony including Kerry Walker, flute; Elizabeth Tomorsky, oboe; Rob Tucher, French horn; Xia Jin, bassoon.

The concert will feature works of Mozart, Bach, Ravel, Nielsen and Sousa. The group also can be heard in Odessa at noon Nov. 7 in the Noel Heritage Plaza.

■ Guild to have show

OZONA — The Crockett County Arts and Crafts Guild is holding its fall show Nov. 9 at the Crockett County 4-H barn.

Those interested in reserving booth space may call T.K. O'Bryant, 1-392-3557.

■ Festival presented

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech University's School of Music is hosting a music festival of 13 concerts to honor the bicentennial of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's death.

The opera, choral, symphonic chamber and solo performances are being presented through Nov. 17. The festival features pianists Richard Goode and Monique Dupil. For more information call Brad Cope, 1-806-742-2270.

■ Crane Carnival set

CRANE — The Crane County Carnival is set for Nov. 10 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Crane County Exhibition Building.

The fair is sponsored by the First United Methodist Church of Crane. Cost of a booth is $25. All are indoors. For information or an entry form call 1-558-3150 or write P.O. Box 158, Crane, Texas 79731.

■ Bob Dylan to perform

LUBBOCK — Bob Dylan performs at Lubbock's Municipal Auditorium at 8 p.m. Oct. 28.

■ Quartet dates change

The Thouvenel String Quartet, a quartet in residence with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Inc., has rescheduled the opening concert of its season to Nov. 16 in Midland and Nov. 17 in Odessa.

The Thouvenel String Quartet will perform five chamber music concert pairs in Midland and Odessa. Now in its 15th season, the Thouvenel has planned concerts featuring a tribute to Mozart, an all Beethoven evening, a performance of works by Brahms, a 15th anniversary celebration concert and a season finale.

The Thouvenel has a group called "The Friends" which support and assist the quartet. Those interested in joining the group and participating in Thouvenel activities may call the symphony office, 563-0921.

■ Photos on display

The Options Gallery, located in the Learning Resources Center at OC, is open Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

■ KOVC plays concerts

The Midland-Odessa Symphony performances of the 1991-92 season are being played on KOCV Radio, 91.3 FM, Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m. and Sundays from 9 to 11 a.m.

The playbacks and the concerts they represent are "Chorale in Concert," Nov. 19 and 24; "Mozart Centerpiece," Nov. 26 and Dec. 1; "Messiah," Dec. 17 and 22; "French Connection," Feb. 4 and 9; "Noble Cello," March 31 and April 5; and "Elijah," May 12 and 17.

■ Reception date set

ODESSA — A wine and cheese reception opens photographer Steve Goff's exhibition at the University of Texas of the Permian basin.

The reception is set for 7 p.m. Tuesday in the third Floor gallery.

Goff's photography will be on display through Nov. 14. For more information call 1-367-2133. Goff is an assistant professor of art at Odessa College. His work also is included in Midland's Gallery 1114's "Invited Artists" exhibit.

■ Annual festival held

The 237-acre Renaissance theme park, largest in the U.S., where Medieval times are recreated with the sights, sounds and colors of old Europe, is located 50 miles north of Houston on F.M. 1774, between Plantersville and Magnolia. The park features six major entertainment stages, five featured demonstration areas, 20 participatory games for the public, 225 artisans and shots and 42 food and beverage shops.

Theme for this year's event is "The Year of the Joust." A percentage of all advanced ticket sales benefit the United Cerebral Palsy. Tickets, priced at $9.95 advance for adults and $4.95 advance for children 5 to 12 and $12.95 adults at the gate and $6.95 children 5 to 12 at the gate, are available through Rainbow Ticketmaster locations or they may be charged by phone by calling 1-713-530-3600 or 1-800-441-2778. Call 1-800-458-3435 for more information.

■ Musical revue opens

FORT WORTH — Casa Manana Children's Playhouse opens its 30th season with "Footprints on the Moon," a new musical revue that aims toward the stars and imagination of young and old alike Friday through Nov. 2.

"Footprints on the Moon," written by Arthur Perlman with music by Jeffrey Lunden, is sponsored by Class Acts, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram's newspaper for kids. Tickets are $5.75 for all ages and are available by calling casa's box office, 1-817-332-6221.

■ Harmon hosts talk

ODESSA — The White-Pool House Friends will host a presentation on Victorian Christmas Traditions by Elaine Harmon at 1 p.m. Nov. 2.

Ms. Harmon is a museum technician with the Fort Davis Historical Site. She will talk about the traditions during the Victorian period, show ornaments of the period from her collection and explain how to re-create ornaments of the period. All are invited to the presentation which will be at the White Pool House, 112 E. Murphy.

For more information call Grace King, 1-334-8800, or Fritzi Heron, 1-366-3652.

■ Martin to perform

Country singer Michael Martin Murphey will perform "A Night in the American West" with the Midland-Odessa Symphony at 8 p.m. Saturday at Midland College's Chaparral Center.

Murphey, who is perhaps best known for his song "Wildfire," has spent the past three years recording his latest album, "Cowboy Songs." During his Midland performance, he will sing a few of the authentic melancholy cowboy tunes from that album, combined with a mixture of more modern and upbeat country and western swing.

Murphey attended UCLA and played in a group called The Lewis and Clark Expedition. He is known for his third album, "Blue Sky, Night Thunder." Three of the album's songs went Top 10 earning Murphey "Best New Artist" awards from both the Country Music Association and the Academy of Country Music.

Murphey said he got his inspiration for "Cowboy Songs" from growing up on ranches in Texas and Arkansas where "There was a lot of music sung while they were working.

Tickets are available at Luskey's in Midland and Odessa.

Reserved section seating will be sold for $20 and general admission tickets will be $12. Sponsor packages will be available in which a business or organization may purchase eight tickets and receive eight invitations for a reception at the Plaza Club, ClayDesta Bank Building, at a cost of $500.

For more information call the symphony, 563-0921.

■ Chili cook off set

McCamey — The fifth annual McCamey Chili Cook Off and Arts and Crafts Fair is set for Saturday.

Entry fee is $15 for chili or brisket or $25 for both. For more information call the McCamey Chamber of Commerce, 1-652-8202, or 1-652-3187.

■ Tames work shown

Many of the memories, the images, Americans have of official Washington D.C. were photographs Tames took for 40 years for The New York Times.

"His photographs demonstrate the workings of the most influential government in the world at the height of its power," said a release from the museum.

"You've got to bring out the egos of the powerful to make it believable, let them be what they are," Tames said. "They're human first, before all else."

The exhibit will remain through Nov. 16.

In addition, an exhibit entitled "Through the Perilous Night" opens Thursday in the main gallery. This exhibit is being held in cooperation with Airsho '91 and the opening of the American Airpower Heritage Group museum at Terminal. It will remain through the end of December.

Both exhibits may be viewed during the museum's standard working hours of 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. No admission is charged. For more information call 1-332-7123.

■ Opera performed

Midland Opera Theater has received a contribution from The Shell Oil Company Foundation to assist in the production of Verdi's "La Traviata" at 8 p.m. Oct. 30 at Midland High School Auditorium.

"La Traviata" will be performed by the Western Opera Theater, the professional touring company of the San Francisco Opera Center. This company currently is celebrating its 25th anniversary. Soprano Jill Blalock of Lubbock and Denton native bass-baritone Timothy Tucker are singing the leading roles in the Midland performance.

During the celebration to date, performances have been given in 38 states including Alaska and Hawaii.

■ Jazz show presented

Doc Cheatham comes to Midland for an 8 p.m. performance at the Midland Petroleum Club Nov. 19.

The event is sponsored by the West Texas Jazz Society. For more information on either event, call 682-2988.

■ Booths available

The Midland Community Relations Team of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company will be hosting the third annual Arts and Crafts Show Nov. 16 and 17 at the Midland County Exhibit Building, East Highway 80.

Cost is $20 per booth. This amount will be used to fund projects that the Community Relations Team is involved with such as Caring Cubs Express for the Midland Police Department and the Childrens' Miracle Network.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Nov. 16 and noon to 6 p.m. Nov. 17.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Old restrictions are lifted, almost guaranteeing progress. Changing your lifestyle now will bring new emotional security. Originality plays a big role in a business triumph that occurs around Christmas. Love will make itself heard loud and clear early in 1992. In spring, travel abroad only if confident of your personal safety. Finding new outlets for your organizational skills will advance your career.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers, slugger Mickey Mantle, actor Jerry Orbach, dancer Barrie Chase.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Negative thoughts should be banished before they have a chance to take root. Try to master your doubts. A sermon or speech gives you fresh hope for the future. Keep moving forward.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be expecting a visitor today. Curb a tendency to fret over things you cannot control. There are plenty of practical steps you can take to make your dreams come true.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Agreements that please both parties are likely to endure. Any other arrangement could backfire later on. Put your credit cards in cold storage until you have paid off your bills.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Cutting comments can bring even sharper retorts. Members of the family circle tend to be on edge, perhaps because of money restrictions. Reading the Sunday want ads could lead to a better job.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The emphasis now is on being less critical of your loved ones. Give a young person the benefit of the doubt. Marital ties are strengthened by a generous gesture. Offer loving encouragement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Thinking about other people's needs helps you put your own worries in perspective. Do your best to free your home of tensions. Entertaining close friends can be inexpensive as well as fun.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good plans may have to be scrutinized further to uncover errors or omissions. Make sure you have done your research. Zoom into action on the sports scene. Develop your skills as a coach.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Climbing the social ladder is easier when you know a lot of people. Become more active in community affairs. Tact and patience help you bridge a generation gap.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may have to put your own interests ahead of your friends' today. An emotional attachment can be exhausting at times. Recharge your batteries by spending time alone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Curb a tendency to magnify your woes or concerns. You have good friends who will stand by you. Show your gratitude in tangible ways. Repay a special favor as soon as possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The pieces of a puzzle are beginning to fit; you should have them all in their proper place by nightfall. Eliminate the word "impossible" from your vocabulary. Your dreams can come true.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If money is short, dispense with those luxuries and expensive pursuits you can live without. A special sale should be investigated. Tennis or dance will help you shed those extra pounds.

It is surprising where you can find a source of tricks. To paraphrase a popular song, South, declarer at four spades, went looking for tricks in all the wrong places and suffered a one-trick defeat in a cold contract.

With both the opponents active in the auction, South gave up all thoughts of slam despite having by far the best playing hand at the table. A famous player once said that never in his life had he put down a dummy with a near solid seven-card spade suit. South undoubtedly subscribed to that view, so made a practical four-spade overcall rather than incur possible complications by starting with a takeout double or a cue-bid.

Declarer wasted no time in squandering dummy's hidden assets. After ruffing the opening lead, South drew two rounds of trumps ending in dummy, then tried the club finesse. When that lost, declarer could not avoid conceding two tricks in each minor suit for down one.

Declarer started out with nine sure tricks, and the 10th was in dummy just itching to be set up. It was overlooked because it was in the enemy suit!

The contract cannot be defeated if trumps are 2-1. After ruffing the first trick high, declarer should lead the king of spades and overtake with the ace. When both opponents follow, the contract is guaranteed.

The jack of hearts is led from the table and, instead of ruffing, declarer discards a diamond. Suppose West shifts to that suit. Declarer wins, overtakes the five of trumps with the eight to lead the ten of hearts, discarding the remaining diamond loser from the closed hand. Declarer can still get to the board by leading the deuce of trumps to the trey to discard a club on the now-established nine of hearts, and can try for the overtrick by hooking the club. The finesse loses, but 10 tricks are in the bank.

Musical planned

NEW YORK (AP) — "Bebe's Kids," an animated musical-comedy based on a group of unruly young characters created by the late comedian Robin Harris, is in production with Reginald and Warrington Hudlin ("House Party") as executive producers.

The movie revolves around Harris' first date with a beautiful woman, which is foiled as three wild inner-city kids turn their trip to an amusement park into a nightmare.

A project of the Arts Assembly of Midland

Museum puts 'nose art' on display

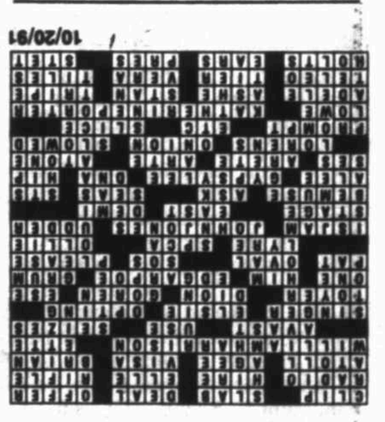

ODESSA — On display at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin is an exhibition of World War II nose art from the collection of the American Airpower Heritage Museum.

"The Classy Chassis: World War II Nose Art" will be shown in the Rodman Gallery of the Institute through Nov. 3. The exhibit, which is in honor of the Confederate Art Force and the AAHM, includes other war memorabilia, such as ration books, victory letters, knitting patterns of warm clothes for the battlefield and selected items of clothing and popular music from the war period.

The pieces of nose art in the original collection were salvaged from planes after the war and eventually were donated to the CAF and housed in Harlingen. The phenomenon of nose art has its roots in ancient history when chariots and even ships were given personal names and often had a work fo art painted on them to personalize them.

Hours at the Institute are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information call 1-368-7222.

Month highlights Shakespeare's plays

Staff Report

Those with an interest in Shakespeare's plays will find October spiced with a double measure of the Elizabethan playwright.

Starting Tuesday, Bob Anson, founder of Midland's Shakespeare As We Like It group, again will be teaching in Midland College's College Classics Program.

Anson

His course, "Let Wonder Seem Familiar," is a survey of the Shakespearean phonemon, especially the language, technique, poetic genius and the resulting dramatic effects.

The eight-week class will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday in the Allison Fine Arts Building through Nov. 14. For enrollment information call the Continuing Education Department, 685-4518.

Anson recently presented Midland Community Theatre with the New Variorum Edition of "Anthony & Cleopatra." Anson made the presentation in honor of the repeat appearance of Andrew Patenall, Shakespearean scholar and professor at the University of Toronto.

Patenall comes to Midland Oct. 31 for his third visit. His series is sponsored by Midland's As We Like It group, founded in 1973, in association with MCT. The general format will be a combination of discussion, workshops and demonstrations, a sort of laid-back colloguium on Shakespearean drama titled "Bard's Head Revisited."

The emphasis will be on character and interpretation. Patenall will select various scenes from among the following plays: "Anthony & Cleopatra," "Timon of Athens," "The Winter's Tale," "Macbeth" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The five sessions at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., will be held in the Mabee Theatre II, which has a seating capacity of 200. All of the sessions will be free to the public due to the generosity of more than a dozen Midland supporters.

The sessions are set for Oct. 31-Nov. 1 and Nov. 2. Interested persons may choose to attend any or all sessions.

Patenall was born in London, raised in rural England and emigrated to Canada as a university student. He received his bachelor and master of art degrees from McGill University, Montreal, earning his doctorate at the Shakespeare Institute of Birmingham University, England. He is an associate professor in both the Department of English and the Division of Humanities, University of Toronto.

Author of several books, including "Playing Shakespeare," his special project since 1978 has been the summer seminars at Stratford, Ontario. Those provide a week-long immersion into Shakespeare and other aspects of theater, all in conjunction with the renowned Stratford Festival.

While he is here, Patenall will teach Anson's class Oct. 31. The class will be conducted as an informal question and answer session on any aspect of Shakespeare or theater.

Texas Seaport Museum and The ELISSA

Texas Seaport museum opens

Staff Report

GALVESTON — The new Texas Seaport Museum on Galveston Island holds its official opening Saturday.

At 11 a.m., dignitaries will break a bottle of champagne across the museum's deck dedicating the $2.5 million facility.

A project of Galveston Historical Foundation, the Texas Seaport Museum interprets the maritime heritage of the Gulf Coast. The Lone Star state's seafaring past is dramatically illustrated through a wide-screen, multi-media presentation in the museum's theater.

Museum visitors also may explore the decks of the 1877 iron barque ELISSA.

Texas Seaport Museum, Pier 21 near The Strand, will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. saturday. Afterward it will be open daily, except Thanksgiving and Christmas Day, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. ticket price is $4 for adults and $3.50 for students between the ages of 7 and 18 and senior citizens over 65. Children age 6 and under are admitted free.

Concert planned

Midland Community Concerts will present its second concert at 8 p.m., Oct.28 at Midland High School's auditorium. The concert will feature Anthony and Joseph Paratore, duo-pianists.

Oddest thing about Goldie is she's just a normal star

By Eve Epstein
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — The oddest thing about Goldie Hawn is that there is nothing very odd about her.

Hawn

But even as she goes through an arduous promotional day, fielding volleys from a long line of reporters, she doesn't radiate Hollywood.

When asked about gay-bashing dialogue by co-star Mel Gibson in "Bird on a Wire," she replies guilelessly: "Oh really? I don't read any of this stuff, I don't know."

Similarly, when asked about protests over her trip to South Africa to make "Private Benjamin," she said: "That was awful. ... that's the most insane thing that ever happened to me. ... I knew there were incredible horrific racial injustices, but I didn't understand the politics. I didn't know politics would enter into it until much later."

With Hawn, an interview is more a conversation than an inquisition — so much so that when she ends with "bye, sweetie pie," the phrase goes down easily.

That is probably because at the age of 45, with an Academy Award, a successful acting career, a movie company and a full family life with actor Kurt Russell, Hawn really means it when she says she has few major wants left in life and doesn't feel the need anymore "to get awards or large accolades from people."

She would like to direct someday, maybe write, she says.

She grew up in Takoma Park, Md., and has worked hard all her life, starting with dance training at the age of three. By age 17, she was running her own ballet school. She still carries herself with the erect poise of a dancer, even dressed in jeans and cowboy boots.

Hawn's first big break came in the 1960s, playing a goofy regular in the television show "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In." Since then, she's had a growing film career, appearing in such movies as "Shampoo," "Private Benjamin" and "Swing Shift," which co-starred Russell.

Her latest movie is the thriller "Deceived," in which she plays a happily married, successful career woman whose life unravels as she begins to piece together the truth about her husband's dark past. Hawn recently was in the Boston area filming a new romantic comedy with Steve Martin.

But she said she didn't always feel comfortable with her early successes — which included an Oscar in 1969 for best supporting actress in "Cactus Flower."

'Kurt and I understand the ins and out of this business and all the seductions that go along with it. So, basically, there's nothing new under the sun in relation to the pitfalls and the kind of things that supposedly break up marriages. They're hollow, hollow things.'

— Goldie Hawn

"I didn't feel deserving, because I had just gotten into the business — I had just gotten into the business of acting," she said.

And there have been failures in Hawn's life, including two marriages that ended in divorce. Although she sometimes refers to Russell as her husband, the two actors, who have a 5-year-old son, have no plans to marry after eight years together. Hawn has two other children and Russell one.

"I have certainly made my own personal promises and we've taken our own personal vows. But married in the traditional term? No," she said.

Their relationship has worked in part because both are movie stars, she said.

"Kurt and I understand the ins and out of this business and all the seductions that go along with it," she said. "So, basically, there's nothing new under the sun in relation to the pitfalls and the kind of things that supposedly break up marriages. They're hollow, hollow things."

Hawn frequently breaks out in her characteristic laugh — something between a guffaw and a giggle — when she talks about Russell.

"He's bigger than life, in the movies and at home," she said.

Sometimes, those bigger-than-life roles get in the way of real life. Hawn and Russell have not allowed their son, Wyatt, to see "Backdraft" because Russell's character dies in the movie.

Hawn, who has played opposite Gibson and Chevy Chase, and who stars with John Heard in "Deceived," insists Russell is her favorite leading man.

"I know that just sounds just so, like, predictable. But you can ask a bunch of other girls — they'll say the same thing. He is more fun than a barrel of monkeys," she said.

'Saturday Night Live' spoofs history

NEW YORK (AP) — It's still being talked about, that Senate Judiciary Committee hearing aired by NBC. Some also recall February's classic press briefing by the U.S. miltary during the Gulf War, also on NBC.

It should be noted, however, that each started a show called "Saturday Night Live." They were not the real thing, according to Western analysts. But sometimes, it's hard to tell, considering the real thing.

In case you missed either, SNL's Gulf War briefing, written by Jim Downey, had a Marine lieutenant colonel facing a room full of civilian correspondents. Some seemed to be graduates of the University of Dufus. (There weren't any reporters like that covering the war, of course.)

The colonel began by saying he wouldn't discuss certain information that "might be useful to the enemy." Whereupon one bright-eyed scribe raised his hand:

"What date are we going to start the ground attack?"

Next question. "Knowing what you know, where would you say our forces are most vulnerable to attack, and how could the Iraqis exploit those weaknesses?"

But the questions got better: "Are we planning an amphibious invasion and exactly where would that be?"

SNL's Gulf War briefing, written by Jim Downey, had a Marine lieutenant colonel facing a room full of civilian correspondents. Some seemed to be graduates of the University of Dufus.

It was a very democratic briefing. Why, even the man from the Baghdad Times — he believed that burnoose is good news — got to ask, "Where are your troops and can I go count them?"

Last Saturday, the show's committee hearing concerned another major topic in the news: the Senate hearings on Anita Hill's allegations of sexual harassment by her former boss, Clarence Thomas.

Kevin Nealen, as committee chairman Sen. Joseph Biden, asked Thomas (Tim Meadows), if he had ever asked Hill out for a date.

Phil Hartman's Sen. Ted Kennedy was moved to ask in his flat Massachusetts accent: "Were you, ah, drunk at the time?"

There ensued discussions by his colleagues of how soft-core porn really appeals to women.

Said Hartman's Kennedy: "Another good thing is to get them out on your boat for some reason because, ah, because then it's really hard for them to get away."

Later, Al Franken's Sen. Paul Simon asked Thomas about a Justice Department secretary named Sandy: "Do you think she'd go out with me?"

The segment ended with brief testimony by Chris Rock, playing some actor named Long Dong Silver.

Lorne Michaels, the show's executive producer, said Saturday's committee session was written by staffer Jack Handey before the real hearings began Friday and that "it was continually updated up until airtime."

He said the SNL troupe also did a dress rehearsal of a "Not Completely Fair Theater" sketch in which Thomas made overtures to Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

But that was dropped, not by a decree from censors but by Michaels: "We felt that it didn't play well enough because the thing had heated up almost to a white heat by Saturday night. We felt the first piece was more than enough. It looked like we were hitting him way too hard."

The Gulf War briefing, which according to one report heartened Pentagon officials under fire for their sharp restrictions on reporters covering the war, drew only 24 calls of complaints by viewers to NBC's New York headquarters, the network says.

In contrast, Saturday's Senate committee sketch prompted 132 calls of gripe. Seven other callers approved.

Any complaints from Kennedy? "No," said Michaels. He noted that "Saturday Night Live" has done several other pieces pegged to the senator's reported fondness for younger women and grog.

"He seems to have a sense of humor," Michaels said.

Sting's songs made to swing

NEW YORK (AP) Can a Sting song swing?

It does in the hands of bandleader Bob Belden, who has adapted some of Sting's most popular tunes for big bands.

Belden says he was listening to the rock musician's "They Dance Alone" and thought it was a "natural" for a jazz ensemble.

Some 40 musicians join Belden, a saxaphonist, on "Straight to My Heart: The Music of Sting." It contains 10 songs, includes adaptations of "Every Breath You Take" and the Police hit "Roxanne."

Some, such as Dianne Reeves' vocal rhythm and blues interpretation of "Wrapped Around Your Finger," beg a comparison to the Sting original.

But the orchestral style of "Dream of the Blue Turtles," with background horns and the burning guitar of John Hart, takes the adaptation into its own.

Belden recently played at The Blue Note with an ensemble half the size of that on the album, but they played with an enthusiasm the recording sometimes lacked.

"Straight to My Heart" is available on the Blue Note label.

BUNKO

Although you may have heard of the game "Bunko," it seems that unless involved in a group that plays the game, most people have little or no idea what the game is about. Some think it is a card game, others a board game, still others think it is a game played with dice. Well, if you picked the latter, you're on a roll.

Although the rules of the game vary from group to group, the general idea of the game is the same. For a group of Polo Park residents who meet once a month, the game is played as follows:

Bunko is a game played with three dice in which the object is to roll "sixes" in order to win the most games as an individual.

The game is played with three tables of four players each, for a total of 12 players. At each table, the player opposite you is your partner for that game, and an individual's score is the total number of "sixes" thrown by the partnership.

Tables are designated as numbers one, two and three. All three tables begin play when a player at table one gives the signal by ringing a bell. The game ends when a partnership at table one reaches 21 points and rings the bell signaling the end of play.

While playing Bunko, Peggy Fiske (right) throws her hands up in despair as her roll of the dice turns up three "ones," meaning she and her partner loose all their points. Meanwhile, her adversary Susan Duffey (left) laughs with excitement as she and her partner are now closer to winning the game.

ONCE THE starting bell is rung, each player takes their turn rolling three dice. For each "six" rolled by a player or their partner, the partnership receives one point. If a six is rolled on any of the three dice, that player continues their turn by rolling again. When a roll produces no "sixes," the turn passes to the individual to the left. If a roll yields "ones" on all three dice in a single throw, the partners lose their accumulated points and the turn passes to the person on the left.

When an individual rolls the same number on all three dice in a single throw — except for ones or sixes — that person is allowed to continue their turn and roll the dice again, commonly referred to as "overs."

A Bunko — after which the game is named — occurs when "sixes" appear on all three dice on a single throw. The individual who threw the Bunko gets a Bunko punch in their score card.

"Some of the rules we use are different than what other groups follow," said Susan Etchison. "Like when someone throws a Bunko in our group, they get a punch on their (score) card. But the partnership that covers the dice with their hands gets six points."

Peggy Crowell listens to conversation while paying close attention to the numbers rolled on her dice.

ON A ROLL

To end the game, the winning partnership at table one will have 21 points. However, because table one designates the end of the game, winning partnerships at tables two and three may have fewer than, or more than 21 points when the game ends. If individuals at tables two or three are rolling dice when the bell rings to end the game, they may continue their turn on the chance they may roll a Bunko. However, the points do not count toward the game point total. The pair of partners who reach 21 first at table one as well as the partners who had the most points at tables two and three when the bell rang each get a punch on their cards. In the event of a tie, play continues until the tie is broken.

When a game has ended, the winners from table one remain at their places with their partners. The losers from table one move to table three and are no longer partners. The winners from table two move to the vacant seats at table one. The winners from table three move to table two. The losers at tables two and three change partners for the next game. The last game is announced by the hostess at a designated time.

AT THE END of the evening, the individual with the most punches (made with a standard paper hole puncher) wins.

"If you're on time you get a free punch," said Tara Gooding.

"It was a rule we started to get people there on time," added Laura Smoorenburg.

Although Ms. Gooding is relatively new to the Polo Park Bunko group, she has played with several other groups in other cities.

"Like in Tulsa, one person marked down how many sixes each person rolls. Here, we keep track of our own sixes," she said.

There are other differences between her present group and other groups she has played in. For example, Ms. Gooding's group from Tulsa, Okla., group didn't roll for "sixes" during each game. Instead, during the first game played, players rolled for ones, the next game for twos, etc. Scoring also was different, such as if an individual rolled three of a kind, but not a Bunko, it was worth five points, and when a Bunko was rolled it was worth 21 points.

Members of the Bunko group rotate serving as hostesses for the monthly event, and that person is responsible for refreshments and prizes. The person winning the most games and the person rolling the most Bunkos win prizes, as well as someone winning a boobie prize and a door prize.

"We've got to have food," said Peggy Fiske.

BUT THERE is much more to playing Bunko than winning the game.

"The point isn't really to play a game, it's to meet and have a good time," said Ms. Gooding. "Some of the guys complain that it's a mindless game, but it's fun and it gives you a chance to talk to people."

"It's a good way to meet your neighbors," Ms. Fiske said.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Weekends in Midland are sometimes busy

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

After last weekend, no one dare suggest that there is nothing to do in Midland. Of course, the highlight was the Confederate Air Force's Air-Sho 91 and all the attendant festivities, including a USO-style dinner dance, with music by the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra and vocalist Kay Starr, and a luncheon-style show featuring fashions from the World War II era.

McKnight-Harrison

Among other happenings were Midland High School's Homecoming, the Lee High-Permian game, the opening of "A Texas Romance" at Theatre Midland and the continuing run of "Nunsense"at the Yucca Theatre, the Friends of the Library Book Sale, and various shows around town for collectors of everything from guns to baseball cards and comic books.

There also were a number of private parties in progress. Among them was a Columbus Day gathering at the home of Jack Hickman. Guests were invited to "An Evening of Merriment and Folderol." Held in Jack's backyard, the fun event also was hosted by Ann Semple, Greg Dove, Floyd James and Bill Rutter III.

The evening's diverse entertainment began with music by the Dellwood Senior Citizens Center's Kitchenette Symphony, accompanied by pianist Maneeta Heckathorne. Guests also were entertained with a poetry reading by Larry Griffin, a bagpipe serenade by Clif Watson and mariachi music by "Tres Amigos."

In addition, the artsy evening included a sculpture contest, with prizes awarded to the Top Six entries (decided by a panel of judges all the way from Monahans), and a potter's wheel and kiln, so that guests could have the experience of throwing a pot and seeing it fired.

Delicious Mexican-style hors d'oeuvres and libation were served throughout the evening.

CONGRATULATIONS TO Starr Boldrick and Boyd Bauer, who became Mr. and Mrs. Saturday evening in the First Presbyterian Church. After a wedding trip to San Francisco, they will make their home in Houston, where both attend South Texas College of Law.

The wedding reception was hosted by Starr's parents, Suzy and Jim Boldrick, at Midland Country Club.

Other wedding week festivities included the rehearsal dinner hosted at the Plaza Club by the groom's parents, Judy and Bill Bauer of Port Lavaca, a bridesmaids luncheon given by the bride's cousin and flower girl, Tracy Higdon of Garden Grove, Calif., at the Racquet Club, and a wedding day luncheon for the out-of-town guests at the home of Terry and Jack Wilkinson.

The bridal couple also were entertained with a number of lovely parties prior to the week of the wedding.

Texas Tech University — Phi Delta Theta: Tommy Craddick, son of Nadine and Tom Craddick; Phi Gamma Delta: Brian Pendleton, son of Pam and Charles Pendleton; Pi Kappa Alpha: Chad Haney, son of Brenda and Don Haney; Sigma Phi Epsilon: Eric Hewett, son of Donna and Don Hewett, and Mike Morse, son of Eleanor and Mike Morse.

University of Texas-Austin: Kappa Sigma: Jason Oglesby, son of former Midlanders Sally and Jimmy Oglesby of Brady, and Russell VanHusen, son of Laura and Bob VanHusen; Phi Gamma Delta: Phillip Allison, son of Diane and Freddy Allison; Sigma Chi: Clifford Angelo, son of Penny and Ernest Angelo.

University of Houston — Pi Kappa Alpha: David Lampert, son of Janice and Harry Lampert; Sigma Phi Epsilon: Keith Jose, son of Linda and Ron Jose.

Columbia University — Phi Gamma Delta: Robert Taylor, son of Linda and Jeff Landua of Midland and Neena and Rob Taylor of Houston.

BUNKO: Point of game is getting together

(From 1G)

"The point isn't really to play a game, it's to meet and have a good time," said Ms. Gooding. "Some of the guys complain that it's a mindless game, but it's fun and it gives you a chance to talk to people."

"It's a good way to meet your neighbors," Ms. Fiske said.

"And to find out what's going on in the neighborhood," added Laura Smoorenburg. "Having kids and all, it really helps to know what others are doing with their kids and how they are handling different problems."

"Especially in the winter months when you're not outside very much, it helps you to keep up with what is going on in your neighborhood," Ms. Fiske said.

"It's just kind of a fun girls' night out, a chance to be with friends, get out of the house and away from the kids for a little while," Ms. Etchison said.

By listening to this group at play, it is obvious that this affair is much more than a game. The conversations range from a Mocha Cream Cake recipe or a recent party to a child's problem at school or a husband's work schedule.

"I wondered what I was going to do if I got to Midland and there wasn't a group that played Bunko," Ms. Gooding said. "Then I just decided if there wasn't one, I would have to start one."

But she didn't have to.

There actually are three Bunko groups in the Polo Park area. This particular group has been meeting for two years this month. Only four of the original members — Susan Duffey, Betty Wooley, Jackie Bowers and Ms. Fiske — are still living in the Polo Park area and are members of the group. The Bunko team was organized through the Polo Park Women's Association, as were the other two groups in the area. The members also said that there are several other Bunko groups in Midland, including groups in Saddle Club and Trinity West, at several churches and a group of Chevron wives that play.

"But anyone could start a Bunko group," Ms. Fiske said.

Whenever a member of the group cannot attend that month's game, it is her responsibility to find a substitute. Most of the substitutes come from a list of players, which include the members of the other two area Bunko groups.

"Everybody who subs (substitutes) with our group always tells us we have such a great time," Ms. Fiske said.

Twice a year, the Bunko women let their spouses in on the fun and invite them to roll the dice, once at Christmas and once in June. For these two occasion, the game is played with 24 players at six tables in rotation instead of the ordinary 12 players and three tables.

"They sometimes say they don't want to go, or that they think it is silly, but they always seem to have a good time once they get there," Ms. Etchison said, adding that her husband, Ted, also has agreed to substitute with her at other group's games.

Positive people believe they're on a roll

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

Many individuals feel this way when many positive things are happening in their lives, when they are accomplishing the things they set out to do.

I wonder if the phrase originated with gamblers who consistently came up with seven or 11 on a roll of dice?

What makes a roller? Often people who see themselves as successful, happy and drawn to good fortune feel they on a roll. Their attitude and behavior frequently reflect an optimistic, positive attitude, and they perceive less-than-positive outcomes as challenges to overcome rather than as reasons to fail.

Their cognitive style and mindset characterize and separate them from those who view life as full of pot holes, as a half empty glass, a cherry pit. Instead, rollers think optimistically and enthusiastically. They see themselves as able to influence the outcome of things in a positive way. They live such statements as, "I can't change the direction of the wind, but I can change the set of my sail."

Several years ago I spent an evening with a group I call rollers. Most of them were in their 70s and 80s, and they exuded a sense of optimism, positive thinking and happiness. As I realized that I sat in the midst of movers and shakers, I began to listen closely to their communication patterns. I wanted to find the elements that made them delightful mentors.

One characteristic I observed was they all seemed to have a notable sense of humor. They kidded themselves and each other, joking at times about health, economic conditions and a view of the world around them — all in ways that emphasized their blessings rather than their hardships.

I also observed their creativity, their willingness to be risk-takers. One man talked about financial setbacks that he had experienced, describing them as bumps in the road rather than as barriers that stopped him. He used an unusual expression to describe the end of a period of financial hardship: "In the kingdom of blind men, coming out with one eye wasn't so bad."

The depth and focus of their conversation often contained references to friends, many of whom were deceased. They spoke of their families and their reliance on spiritual factors as support during their lives.

Grumbling, complaining and excuse-making were mostly absent during the several hours I spent with them. The patriarch of this group, Watt Matthews, currently in his 90s, is active in the operation of a large West Texas ranch. He has appeared often during the last few years in popular periodicals, and several books have been written about him. His enthusiasm and zest of life are infectious: Those around him seem to adopt his philosophy of life.

If this group had a consensus to offer, it was this: You can do anything you want to do — as long as you don't try to do it all at once.

Take things a step at a time, they say, but don't dwell on past outcomes or less-than-positive experiences. Instead, focus on what can be done in the present. Look to the future. Perceive obstacles as challenges rather than threats — as opportunities rather than difficulties.

By Tori Richards
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — For the past 13 years, Crescencio Navarra has been mixing his special margaritas for tourists, celebrities and California natives in a garden setting long considered a local landmark.

His blender will grind ice for the last time Jan. 3 when Lawry's California Center in Glassell Park closes its three restaurants, gift shop and tour operations on the 17-acre site that has been visited by millions of diners in 30 years.

"I will never find a place to work like this one. We work as a team here and the management treats you very nice," said Navarra, who moved to Temecula in suburban Riverside County last year, but continues to commute. "It reminds me of Guadalajara, where I was born. My specialty is margaritas — we make the best in town."

Shortly before noon Sunday, a strolling mariachi band was playing and business was brisk at the open bar and under beige umbrellas shading customers seated at wooden tables.

During the years, Lawry's workers say the nicely dressed crowd often has included celebrities — singer Paula Abdul, Los Angeles Dodger manager Tom Lasorda and catcher Mike Scioscia. They say politicians have held banquets there: Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, former California Gov. George Deukmejian and Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl F. Gates.

And actors such as Linda Evans, Chuck Norris and O.J. Simpson have used the tranquil gardens as a backdrop for films.

Oak trees and a brilliant display of pink, purple, and yellow flowers dot the landscape which is centered around a stone fountain.

It was near this fountain that four Los Angeles-area women have been meeting several times a year for the past 16 years to have lunch. The women, who met while working at the Los Angeles County/USC Medical Center, gathered Sunday and mourned the loss of their favorite tradition.

The opening of the two other restaurants and a wine and gift shop were a gradual expansion that occurred during the late 1970s when Lawry's attempted to make the facility more of a tourist attraction, said Ray Belknap, who has worked in the gift shops for the past 12 years.

"It's a very nice place, peaceful, relaxing, convenient and free — it's one of the few things that you can do in Los Angeles that doesn't cost anything to get in," he said. "We have a core of longtime customers who have been coming here and they are saddened."

Dentists help fight skin cancer

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The most common type of skin cancer — basal cell carcinoma — often is first diagnosed in the dentist's chair, according to the Chicago-based Academy of General Dentistry.

"This type of cancer is always found on the head and neck," explains Dr. Frederick Magaziner, academy spokesman.

"Dentists are trained to examine the patient's entire head and neck area, not just inside the mouth. I usually find the most basal cell carcinoma cases in men who spend a lot of time outdoors."

ANNIVERSARY

Hermans celebrate 50 years together

The Rev. and Mrs. David Herman of Midland celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a family dinner at the Petroleum Club. Hosts were the couple's children.

Herman and the former Alice Helen Zancig were married Sept. 10, 1941, at Grace Lutheran Church in Thiensville, Wisc. They have three children — Ann Beaty, Alice Wright and Audrey Wolf, all of Midland — as well as four grandchildren.

The Hermans lived in Columbus, Ohio; Houston; and San Diego before moving to Midland. Herman is a Lutheran minister who has served parishes in these cities for more than 50 years.

Marrying in mansion means planning

N.Y. Times News Service

Caterers, wedding planners and managers of historic houses offer this advice to couples who want to be married in a mansion:

Choose the house you want at least 18 months in advance of the wedding, especially if it will be on a weekend. Keep in mind that most houses can accommodate no more than 250 guests.

Make a list of all your needs. Ask if you will be allowed to put up a tent on the lawn and whether you will have to choose a caterer from a list approved by the house managers.

Determine whether the location is easily accessible for most of your guests. Provide them with a list of nearby hotels.

Try to rent chairs and tables from the caterer, as this usually costs less than hiring a party equipment company.

Ask about insurance charges and whether the management requires that "chaperones" be hired to keep an eye on the house during the wedding.

Ask if there is an extra charge for setting up an area for the ceremony.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published.

For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event.

Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published only for winners, not runner-ups. These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office.

All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required.

A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted.

By Mike Fisher

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Donald Smith is positioned at the fringe of two unique career options.

Should he make art, or make tackles? Should he harness the creative side of his brain with disciplined training, or should he allow his disciplined body creativity through football?

Should he draw on his physical skills to earn a living, or should he just draw?

That Smith has spent most of the year on the Dallas Cowboys' practice squad is fitting, because whether he chooses to pursue a promising career as a professional athlete or a promising career as a graphic illustrator, what's the one thing a 23-year-old with such dual aspirations must do?

"Practice," Smith said.

"I probably get a little more time to work on my art because I'm on the practice squad, because we might not have all the demands on us that the regular guys do," said Smith, a defensive back who, after five weeks with the "scrubs," was elevated to the Cowboys roster for last week's victory against the Packers. "But it's something I try to squeeze in when I can right now. Football is my number one focus."

But art is a close second, and justifiably. Smith has sold some works to friends, once won an art contest while at Liberty University and has sketchbooks full of creations that display irreverence, humor, torment or joy, all transferred from mind to paper in Smith's favorite medium, colored pencil.

Many of the drawings in his current sketchbook, the one he keeps in his hotel room near the Cowboys' Valley Ranch facility, are unfinished. When Smith begins a project, it reflects his mood at that time. He doesn't return to that project until he recaptures that mood.

Smith was a 10th-round Minnesota Vikings draft pick last year but was a late cut. He came to Dallas as a free agent this off-season — after being unwanted even by the lowly World League of American Football — with hopes of winning a regular job. In training camp, the 6-foot-1, 190-pounder made a bid for a roster spot with his special-team work and physical play. But he was again a late-summer cut.

"We're friendly with some of the coaches at Liberty, and they were the ones telling us had some instincts and a knack for special teams," secondary coach Dave Campo said. "He was raw, but we wanted to try and keep him around."

Just before the start of the regular season, Dallas re-signed Smith to join the developmental squad, where he is one of five players who makes $3,200 a week. Staying prepared for an invitation to join the "real" team (any club can sign a player from any other team's practice squad as long as that player is put on the active roster) is the daily goal. But the daily duty is less lofty: provide human tackling dummies for more pre-eminent Cowboys.

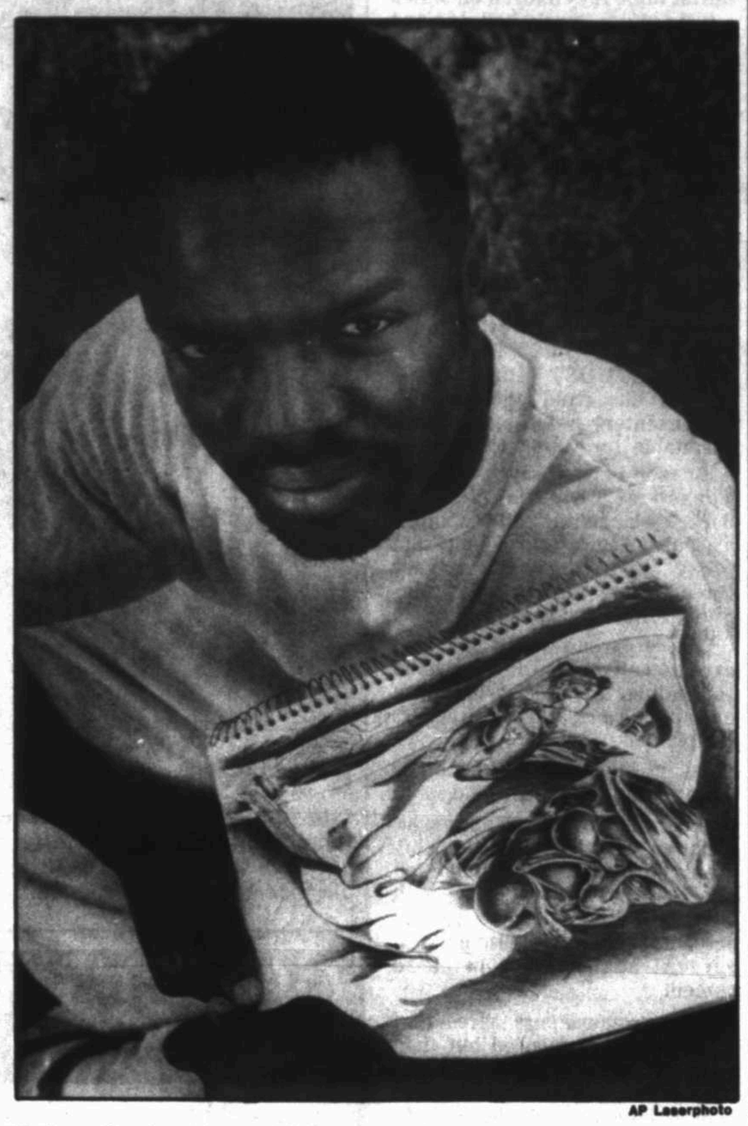

"It feels like being a redshirt freshman in college," Smith said. "You do anything they ask you to do. Play on the scout team, play on offense and on defense, give the guys a hard time trying to make them better."

For the organization, the ultimate plus provided by the practice squad comes if a player has developed and matured enough to make the 47-man roster. But until an odds-beater emerges, a practice squad player is at a station so lowly he doesn't travel to road games with the team, doesn't even get to pose for the team photo.

"Maybe you don't get the perks," Sullivan said, "but it helps that as a lineman, you get to work every day across from established guys like Tony Casillas or Danny Noonan. If it wasn't for the practice squad, I'd be home with Mom and Dad, taking out the trash."

Most young players, who have dreamed of donning an NFL jersey since boyhood, don't have immediate alternate plans, as Smith does. He will give football every opportunity to be the focus of his working life. But he wants to get his foot in the artistic door, earn some recognition and some money, and then start his own graphics business.

And until then, "I'm having fun doing what I'm doing," Smith said. "It's a living."

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Nematodes can be 'rooted' out

By Deborah A. Benge

Last week we took a look at a Number One enemy of the flower and vegetable garden — the nematode. Nematodes are those microscopic roundworms that live in the soil, some of which do a great deal of damage to plants, for instance the root knot nematode. The root knot nematode is no stranger to Permian Basin soils, so let's not put out the welcome mat.

Benge

There are several ways to battle the root knot nematode, but none very satisfactory. One widely used method, soil fumigants, is a good method of control, but caustic and dangerous. Soil fumigants are biocides (they kill all living organisms in the soil) and should only be used in the very worst of situations.

Other methods of control include:

- The use of resistant varieties;
- Soil solarization (another good non-chemical control, used in June, July and August);
- Leaving soil fallow (no plants growing) for a period of time until nematodes begin to die out;
- Other trap crops like the French-type marigold.

None of these methods are 100 percent effective, but all help in the battle of the root knot nematode.

SINCE NEMATODES are so difficult to control and not likely to be eradicated from soils, you must think about a combination of practies to be used each year to discourage the spread and proliferation of harmful nematodes in the soil.

The safest, most effective, non-chemical method of controlling nematodes currently known is the trap crop, "Elbon" cereal rye grass. This cool-season cover crop planted in the fall will germinate and grow, providing you with a green cover that produces a thick, fibrous root system that root knot nematodes love. Nematodes invade the roots of this trap crop and when this same trap crop is tilled into the soil in the spring time, the nematodes are trapped, cannot escape and die. This process will greatly reduce the overall population of nematodes in your soil.

As we already discussed when the trap crop is tilled into your soil it also becomes a green manure crop (crop grown for soil improvement). In additon to that and the many other benefits we listed above, "Elbon" cereal rye can be used as a windbreak.

Windbreak protection, especially in the spring, is very important because we have hard, cold winds in the spring and early summer. These harsh winds make it difficult for young seedlings and transplants to get off to a good start in the spring time. By having windbreak protection you can prevent sand pitting, plant stem shearing, leaf shearing and weak stunted growth that results from young seedlings that grow in the adverse conditions of strong winds.

TO USE "Elbon" cereal rye as a windbreak you can leave one foot wide strips of the cereal rye for every four feet of garden space throughout your garden. When you prepare your garden space for planting "Elbon" you can make the total size larger by one foot, leaving the one foot perimeter in cereal rye for wind protection.

If you don't have enough garden space to sacrifice a one foot strip every four feet, try leaving a four to six inch strip every few feet. This will still provide you much wind protection without sacrificing all of your garden space. You won't need the windbreak protection forever, but it is very beneficial during that vulnerable seedling stage, which can make or break your garden.

If using cereal rye as a windbreak plant, you will want to stop seed head production to avoid a possible weed problem from the cereal rye later on. The way you do this is to spray the cereal rye windbreak strip with glyphosate herbicide when the plant reaches mature height but before the seed head appears. Killing the cereal rye with glyphosate will stop seed formation and competition with vegetables for water and nutrients, but you will still get protection from wind.

Spraying with glyphosate must take place before vegetable seedlings emerge or transplants are set out. This will reduce the chances of accidental drift of glyphosate onto young plants, but don't worry about any soil contamination by the glyphosate, because it has no soil activity.

SO FOR AN environmentally sound method of controlling nematodes, improving soils and providing windbreak protection to your spring vegetable garden, plant "Elbon" cereal rye this fall. Go by your local nurseryman and ask for "Elbon" cereal rye to plant at a one to one-and-a-half pounds per 100 square feet of garden space rate.

AT WIT'S END

Looking wonderful may not be great

By Erma Bombeck

I have reached the age of "You look wonderful!"

In my 20s, it was, "Hi, what's happening?"

Bombeck

In my 40s, it was, "What are you up to these days?"

In between those two greetings were a lot of "What have you done to yourself?" an occasional "How's it going?" and a smiling "I don't have to ask how you are." (These were rare.)

There is something vague about "You look wonderful." I've never trusted it. I can't figure out if it's the look on the faces of the people when they say it or whether I'm just becoming paranoid. It's probably a little bit of both. The greeting never seems to change. I can either roll out of bed or be rolled into a recovery room and I get the same line, "You look wonderful."

When I ask, "Compared to what?" I just get a little nervous laugh and a playful punch in the arm. No one is ready to explain what they mean by it.

Why do I mistrust the compliment? Because I use it myself. Automatically when I meet someone older than 50, my lips say, "You look wonderful!" while my mind is saying, "My God! What happened?"

A few years ago at a gathering, I saw a woman who was 97 years old. She looked like an inflatable doll that had sprung a leak as she sat in a big chair. Without exception, everyone who hugged her bony shoulder said, "You look wonderful!"

A revealing thing happened at a funeral last year. The same people who hugged me and said, "You look wonderful!" then turned to the coffin and remarked, "She looks wonderful!" How do you think that made me feel? (Of course, most of them were the kind of people who also left and said, "Have a good day," so what did I expect?)

Now you're going to say, "OK, if you don't like 'wonderful,' what are some alternatives?" "You look interesting" would get my attention. And so would "You look like you're trying." "You look better than I had hoped" would be flattering. And what about "The years have been extremely charitable"?

I like "You have defied the laws of gravity — and won!" And if all else fails, how about "You look ... like you could use a drink."

"You look wonderful" has become a cliche — a one-size-fits-all snack for the mind to fill in between hello and goodbye. Yesterday I met a friend I hadn't seen for a while and she said, "You look wonderful! Honest!"

Maybe I should have been happy with "You look wonderful" when I had it.

Restaurants lure 'little' diners

By Karola Saekel
N.Y. Times News Service

Borrowing from an old joke, you could ask: What do yuppie parents make for dinner? Answer: Reservations.

Today children increasingly show up in restaurants. And not just fast-food places, but white-cloth establishments.

In a recent survey on consumer spending, the Bureau of Labor Statistics found that 43 percent of all money spent on food away from home came from households with children. And according to the National Restaurant Association, a Good Housekeeping/Roper survey found that 72 percent of mothers report they frequently take their children out to eat, an 18 percent increase over a similar study conducted 14 years ago.

The reasons, parents and restaurateurs interviewed agree, are many.

For one thing, in recent years the joys of parenthood have been discovered by baby boomers, many of whom are quite a few rungs up the career ladder and have more disposable income than the once-typical young couple starting a family. They may stay home more than they used to, but many of this new breed of parents don't want to change their pre-baby habit of eating out. And they like to bring the kids.

"We often take the children out on Sunday night when we're not in the mood to cook," says Napa, Calif., wine consultant Paul Wagner. He also usually eats out with Elizabeth and Estelle, 3 and 7, on one of the week nights when his caterer wife, Margaret Clark, works.

Now Wagner favors informal places "where they can learn the behavior they will need when we eventually take them to fancier restaurants."

Wagner adds that he and his wife have strategies for keeping their daughters entertained while waiting for their order: "We do a 20-question type of routine or we draw games on napkins."

Kate and Steve Hammersly of San Francisco, who run a software company, like to take 4-year-old Riley and 18-month-old Fraser to neighborhood restaurants where the noise level is high.

"Often it will put them right to sleep and we just make a little nest for them on the floor," says their mom.

EXCEPT FOR COUNTRY-club dining, she adds, they stick to ethnic restaurants, where "they never fuss even if the kids fuss. They try to make the children happy."

She mentions a Chinese restaurant where cranky youngsters are placated with oranges or an extra helping of potstickers.

Restaurateurs have been quick to respond to the trend of taking children out to eat. Fast-food chains like McDonald's are increasing the number of playgrounds, clown appearances and the like.

In San Francisco, Mel's Drive-In on Geary Boulevard serves most children's meals in bright cardboard boxes shaped like cars. There are also crayons for coloring the kids' menu, and balloons when they leave. Mel's managers say almost 75 percent of their customers are families with children.

According to the National Restaurant Association, the vast majority of restaurants where per-person checks average between $15 and $25 now offer children's menus. Two years ago, 60 percent of restaurants in that category did so; in the latest survey the number had increased to 77 percent.

Even high-ticket eating establishments have seen an increase of 16 percent to a total of 47 percent in the same time period.

Hotels are at the forefront. Virtually every major one has special room service items for children, and most go out of their way to provide for youngsters in their dining rooms as well.

At San Francisco's Four Seasons Clift Hotel the sumptuous Sunday brunch setup includes a knee-high buffet table for children on which a train, dump truck, balloons and fuzzy animals share space with what executive chef Kelly Mills cheerfully describes as junk food: chips, hot dogs, Jell-O ready-to-eat puddings, Hostess cupcakes and Twinkies. There are also chicken drumettes and macaroni and cheese.

Adults pay $32.50 for brunch. Children under 12 eat for $9, and that includes a toy-store quality coloring book and crayons or a cuddly toy for the very young.

WHILE MOST RESTAURATEURS like child guests, there are dissenters. Some places seem unsuitable for young children.

Eleanor Bertino says when she worked at Chez Panisse, the Berkeley launching pad of California cuisine, "we told people that young children would get very bored during the leisurely, four-course dinners downstairs."

Yuppie parents who think they have invented mom- and dad-hood and indulge their offspring are a nuisance, several restaurateurs complained.

The most serious infraction is letting youngsters run wild.

According to the restaurant association, exactly one-third of children's meals away from home fall into the sandwich category, with burgers leading the way with 24 percent. French fries also get a 33 percent share; pizza rates 18 percent.

Local restaurateurs agree that these foods are favored but they also see more upscale tastes among young diners' choices, as long as food isn't too fancy (hold the sauce could be a guide sentence).

Letting children choose — within reason — what they are going to have is high on the wish list of restaurateurs.

Says one San Francisco waiter: "The worst thing parents can do is tell the kid, 'Oh, you shouldn't have this because it has too much fat' or, 'we try not to eat much red meat,' or sugar or whatever. I mean, how often do they eat out anyway, so why make a fuss?"

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We are a retired couple. During a recent heat wave, we mostly stayed in the house. My husband kept saying, "Do you hear a baby crying?" (Our neighbor across the street heard it, too.) I walked around our back yard, and a couple of houses down, I saw a baby sitting in a stroller, screaming! The sun was beating down on that poor little thing while the mother watered the yard. She never even looked at the baby.

Van Buren

I felt so sorry for that child, I walked over there and said, "Excuse me, but it's too hot for that baby to be out in this heat with no bonnet for 20 minutes."

She said, "B—, I work at a children's hospital and I know what I'm doing — besides, he's been out only five minutes!"

I said, "Don't call me a b—. He's been screaming for 20 minutes, and what you're doing is child abuse!" Then she called me a name you couldn't print, and aimed the water hose right at my face! As I walked away, she aimed the hose at my behind!

I am not a person who calls the police or children's services, but what should I have done? Covered my ears, eyes and mouth like those three monkeys? — UPSET IN OHIO

DEAR UPSET: Your neighbor has an ugly temper and a mouth to match.

You were right to speak up when you learned why the child was screaming. Although your neighbor's "abuse" was more due to ignorance than deliberate cruelty, the woman could certainly benefit from some instruction in parenting. Being an employee of a children's hospital doesn't automatically make one a good parent.

DEAR ABBY: Can retarded people get married? I always knew I was a slow learner because I was put in special classes for slow learners and have been labled "slightly retarded."

I can drive a car and I own my own car. I have a job making deliveries for a liquor store. I am seeing a girl who was in my special class at school. She is also slightly retarded and she is very nice. We have been told that if we get married, I will have to have a vasectomy and she will have to have an operation so she will not have any children, because if we had any children, they might be seriously retarded.

I like this girl a lot and I know she likes me. We go to the same church. Do you think a marriage between us would work? Her parents like me very much, and my mother and stepfather think she is OK, too. Answer soon, please, as I would like to give her an engagement ring for Christmas. We will both be 21 on our next birthdays. Thank you for your time. — A GUY NAMED WILLIAM

DEAR WILLIAM: From what you have told me, I would say you'd make a peach of a pair. I wish you every happiness, and may all God's blessings be yours.

DEAR ABBY: You once published a piece in your column about a little girl who had died. She was ascending to heaven with her lighted candle, but her mother's tears kept putting the candle out.

Would you please print it again? We recently lost a child, and I keep thinking about that column but am unable to locate it anywhere.

Abby, thank you for all the helpful columns you have written over the years. — LINDA DOUGHERTY, CHINO HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR LINDA: My heart goes out to you; please accept my condolences.

You must be a longtime reader. The last time I printed that item was December 1984. Here it is:

Losing a child is the most tragic experience a parent must bear. But one must believe that it is more than a coincidence that God and Good are similar words. Here is a little story one of my readers sent me:

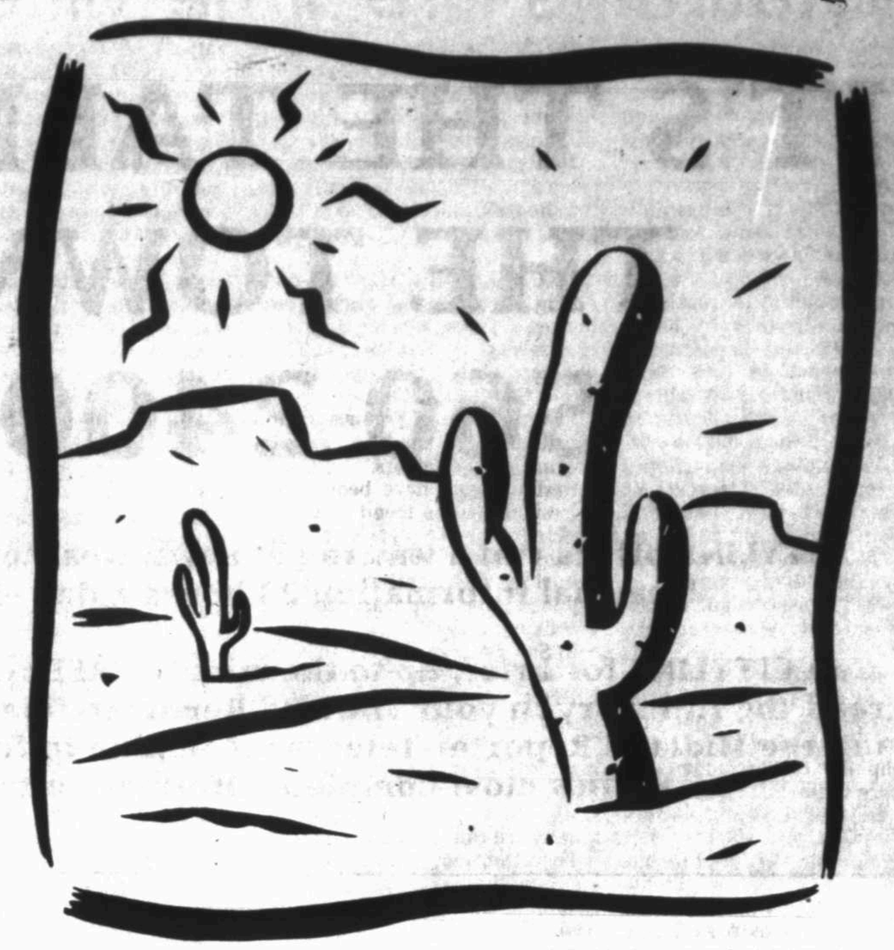

There once was a procession of children marching in heaven. Each held a lighted candle, and as they marched, they sang. Their faces shone with happiness. But one little girl stood alone.

"Why don't you join us, little girl?" one happy child asked.

Why are farmers and ranchers across the nation hurrying to join our health insurance program?

It works

The AIA UNIVERSAL PLAN FOR HEALTH is the first health plan in the United States that builds CASH VALUE* (*Subject to a surrender charge). This plan is made available through The Texas Wheat Producers Association. An AIA agent representing the TWPA will be in Midland County calling on farmers and ranchers from November 1 through November 30. To take advantage of special rates during the TWPA enrollment period, speak to an agent and ask to view our brief video presentation.

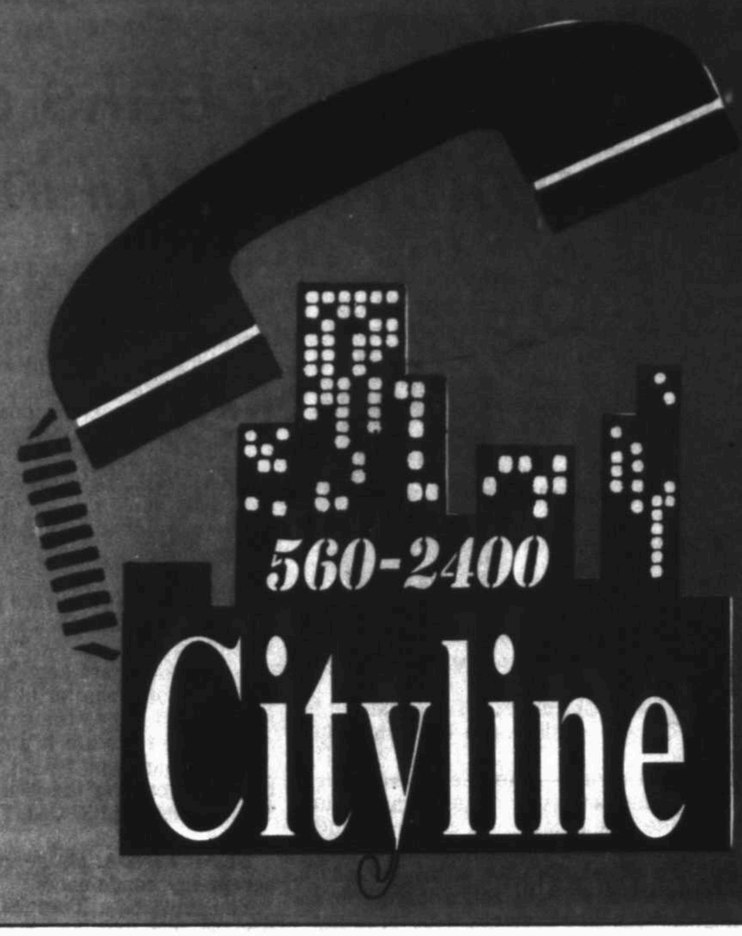

For more information, call:

AIA INSURANCE
Issued by: The Universe Life Insurance Co.
For information about other farm and ranch plans, contact: Don Greytak, Old Library Gallery, 420 4th Ave., Havre, MT 59501

Pocket phones break 'Sound of Silence'

By Molly O'Neill
N.Y. Times News Service

The hushed conversations and gentle clicks of cutlery against china at Campton Place, an elegant San Francisco restaurant, were shattered recently by a high-pitched squeal that seemed to emanate from one diner.

No, it was another sort of tie that binds: Brad Kendal's new portable telephone, a $1,200 "Pocket Commander."

"I forgot to turn it off," he said to his companion. "Yeah!" he answered into the phone.

The Sound broke The Silence. It's happening in theaters, on golf courses, at tennis matches and other bastions of silence, and it's bound to happen more.

Last month the Motorola Co. introduced "Microtac Lite," a miniature portable telephone that weighs less than 8 ounces, and other manufacturers have followed with pocket-size telephones that could become as ubiquitous as Walkmans.

"Personal portable telephones are the fastest growing segment of the cellular industry," said Norman Black, a spokesman for the Cellular Telecommunications Industry Association in Washington, D.C.

He said there were 5.3 million cellular telephones in the United States today, and that he expects that 33 million cellular phones will join the chorus within the next 10 years, which means bleating garments, briefcases and handbags can only proliferate.

So far, no clear-cut etiquette has quelled the interlopers, especially where they are least expected.

"I heard one in church last week," said Letitia Baldrige, author of "Letitia Baldrige's Complete Guide to the New Manners for the '90s," (Rawson, 1990).

She was speaking on a desktop telephone from her home in Washington. "Can you imagine if it had been a wedding? A call-in objection?"

ETIQUETTE ALWAYS trails revolutions. Since this product of the technological revolution only made its debut in 1983, a code of cellular telephone courtesy is still evolving.

Some greet the electronic bleating with a cosmic shrug. "My father rode this train and read the papers in peace; so did my grandfather," said Thaddeus Whitmore, an investment banker who takes the 7:12 a.m. train daily from New Canaan, Conn., to his office on Wall Street . "The code has been shattered, absolutely shattered. There is nothing I can do."

Speaking in a telephone interview (from a speaker phone in his office), his voice boomed above the ambient chaos of phones ringing, garbled voices and clicking computer keyboards.

"I no longer have the privilege of silence," Whitmore said. "Excuse me — 'turkey, whole wheat,' " he called to someone in his office. "The lunch order," he explained into the telephone. " 'Whole wheat. Iced tea,' " he said.

Whitmore is resigned to the half-life of conversations that drift through his train. "I've heard the future," he said. "I hear the future every morning."

Others greet the intrusion more militantly. "I've been threatened," Arthur Crayton, a political consultant who lives in Cambridge, Mass., said in a telephone interview as he walked across Harvard Yard.

Crayton uses a portable phone when he is commuting between Boston and Washington. "You would not believe how hostile people get over a little hand phone," he said, sounding baffled.

The arrival of electronic bleats and brays have drawn both resigned and militant responses in other traditionally phone-free areas.

IN THEATERS, the demographics of the clientele seem to shape management's policies. Lincoln Center in New York hasn't taken an active role in restricting cellular activity in any of its concert halls or theaters.

"People come here to listen to the symphony or the ballet, not to talk on the telephone," said Joe McKaughan, vice president of public affairs at the vast mid-Manhattan complex. "Patrons are self-policing in this area."

On the other hand, the Wometco Theaters, a string of 17 movie theaters in southern Florida, banned personal phones last summer. 'We had a number of complaints and skirmishes and finally a fist fight in one of our most upscale theaters," said John Ray, president of Wometco. Signs suggesting that moviegoers turn their telephones off were not heeded.

"The more important people think they are, the louder they insist on their quote unquote rights," said Ray. Customers no longer have a right to carry personal telephones into Wometco's movie houses.

Restaurateurs are divided along similar lines. The Teahouse Restaurant in Vancouver, British Columbia, posted a no-phoning notice on the Teahouse's menu last year.

But at Le Cirque in New York, "Our customers prefer to check their personal telephones with their coats," said the owner, Sirio Maccioni. Speaking on the wall phone near the restaurant's front door, he added: "If they get a call, the coat-check person alerts the guest who can then leave the table to take the call."

"An elegant solution," said Mrs. Baldrige, still speaking from her desk phone. "People like physicians and construction foremen who need to be in touch can be, and they can attend to their business without inflicting its particulars on the people at the next table who might be trying to have a romantic meal."

THE PROBLEM OF intrusion has been addressed within the portable telephone industry. Under the guise of "Ms. Mobile Manners," Cantel Industries, one of two companies that offer cellular service in Canada, advised port-a-phoners to use a low voice in social settings.

When Fujitsu America introduced its "Pocket Commander" portable phone, it also issued 10 commandments for the phone's polite deployment.

They ranged from "Don't interrupt formal business meetings," and "No calls after the movie starts," to "In restaurants let ambiance be your guide," and "Remember to excuse yourself from the person you are talking to if you accept an incoming call."

These common courtesies help neutralize the intrusiveness of cellular telephone conversations. But they don't address the exhibitionist element of some porto-phoning.

In "Miss Manners' Guide for the Turn-of-The-Millennium," (Pharos Books, 1989) Judith Martin also advises porto-phone users not to annoy other people with noise or to ignore "those with you in favor of the disembodied voice."

Like most manners mavens, she suggests that even the most discreet should be prepared to be the center of attention.

"Oh, they love that," Mrs. Baldridge said of cellular- phone swaggerers she has seen. "Some people have their secretaries call them at restaurants or the theater in a pathetic attempt to show how important they are. There are men driving the roads of this country with a phone pressed to their ear and nobody on the other end. People talking to their answering machines in the theater. All in an effort to say, 'I'm important and you are not.' "

Exhibitionists among the cellular-phone set could be giving all users a bad name. White knights with wireless phones are not unknown.

LAST MONTH, when the 8 a.m. train from Princeton Junction to Manhattan was delayed for several hours, E. Jay Williams Jr., president of Sheridan Broadcasting in Manhattan, was besieged by fellow passengers who offered to pay him for the use of his 1989 Oki700.

He related his "first brush with cellular good will" from his office phone, explaining, "I got your message on my wireless and I came in here for some privacy."

School for pregnant teens believes in power of the pen

"Love is not leaving the one you love. Love is not running when a problem occurs. Love is not leaving when he finds out you are pregnant."

The girl was a student at the Polly McCabe Center for pregnant teens when she wrote down her thoughts and surrounded them with drawings of heart-shaped balloons.

Marie Vitelli, English teacher at the public school in a pocket of urban poverty and crime, said few of her students are stellar writers. But the haunting imagery of their day-to-day experiences often gives their work extraordinary power.

In seven years at the school, Vitelli said she has come to believe in the therapeutic power of the pen. For four years, she has collected the writing of the center's students in annual yearbooks.

"Sadness is when your man says, 'I ain't the father,' " writes one student. "Sadness is when you're getting evicted because you can't pay the rent. ... Sadness is when your kids have to go to bed hungry."

Many of Vitelli's students have had several children by the time they are 18. Most are poor. Few have parents they can rely on to stay home with their babies.

"I think maybe it helps them just to vent their feelings, just to talk about it to themselves and think about it themselves," says Vitelli, a 34-year veteran of the New Haven public school system and teacher at the center for seven years.

The center, in the Hill section of New Haven, was founded in 1966 to give pregnant girls from sixth through 12th grades the opportunity to finish their high-school educations. It is the nation's oldest school for pregnant teen-agers.

The center does more than teach algebra and history. Parenting, nutrition and infant safety classes are an integral part of the curriculum. Counselors are always available to talk.

Vitelli said one of the greatest challenges in her job is to remain an English teacher, working to strengthen her students' writing and reading skills when it is clear the girls have more pressing problems.

A 17-year-old girl wrote last week about her life for the past two years. She said her mother died, she was raped by her brother-in-law, beaten by a boyfriend and her first son died of sudden infant death syndrome. Her second child is due in six months.

Attendance fluctuates wildly. On any given day, a class of 20 may be reduced to two or three students while the rest go to doctor's appointments, are confined to bed or are in the hospital delivering their babies.

"You have to be understanding, because really the subject we're studying is not as important at this time in their lives as the pregnancy and the baby," Vitelli said. "That's the way I would feel myself. I would put my baby first."

Houston's International Festival to honor Spain, the New World

Staff Report

The Houston International Festival, one of the largest celebrations of the arts and international culture in the United States, will salute the arts of Spain and the New World from April 23 through May 3, 1992. With more than a million people attending the festival annually, the '92 Festival will commemorate its 21st anniversary.

The 1992 Festival marks the Spain-USA Quincentennial and the Festival has been designated as one of the largest official cultural projects by the Spain '92 Foundation. This Foundation was established by the Spanish Government to strengthen cultural traditions uniting Americans and Spaniards in the U.S.

The Festival is contemporary, multi-cultural celebration of the performing and visual arts that annually salutes a different country in recognition of Houston's strong international commuinty. Over the past five years, the Festival has showcased Australia, France, the United Kingdom and Japan.

Contemporary performers and artists from across the nation and the world join together with artists from Houston and the region for this annual celebration.

MUSIC RANGING FROM country to jazz and blues, from classical to folk and rock, mixes with dance, theater and visual arts exhibits to create an exciting blend of performances over the ten days.

More than 2,000 artists are featured on eight themed outdoor stages throughout the downtown Houston area, with continuous performances on the weekends and noontime concerts on the weekdays. Other outdoor highlights include the nationally renowned annual Juried Arts Exposition; colorful open-air markets; the tastes of exotic international foods mixed with Texas favorites; street theater performances; special children's activities; a fun run; visual exhibits and more.

The visual arts program grows each year and 1992 will feature the works of artists from Houston, the region, Spain and the New World. One of the annual highlights of this program is the famous Roadside Attractions: the Artists' Parade which rolls through town showing off an impressive collection of augmented automobiles and mobile sculpture.

In addition to the many outdoor events, the Festival will also feature special indoor presentations of theater, dance, music and art exhibits.

ADDITIONAL FESTIVAL programs include an education program and workshop which provide an opportunity for students to learn about the arts, culture, language, geography, government and customs of the honored countries; a Literary Arts program that for 1992 will feature the works of "New World Poets" and other authors; the prestigious Mayor's Gala, a black-tie celebration for more than 900 guests honoring the Consular Corps; a one-day business seminar entitled, "Doing Business with Spain," and a tour and travel program encouraging tourists to visit Houston to take part in this international celebration.

The Houston Festival Foundation Inc. is a 501 (c) 3 non-profit organization which produces the Festival each year. The Festival exists through the support of major corporate sponsors, representing top national and international companies. Additional Festival support is provided from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Cultural Arts Council of Houston, the Texas Commission for the Arts, foundations and individuals.

For more Festival information, call (713)SPAIN'92. For visitor information, call the Greater Houston Convention and Visitors Bureau at 1-800-231-7799 or 95-800-231-7799 from Canada and Mexico.

Events in San Antonio offer thrills, chills for Halloween

Staff Report

Ghosts, ghouls and goblins abound in the spirit of Halloween in San Antonio. Spend an extended weekend in the Alamo City and take in the Halloween festivities. There is something for everyone this October in San Antonio.

■ Every weekend in October is special at Sea World of Texas. Their annual "Mum Fest" offers a splendid array of colorful chrysanthemums of all shapes and sizes. The most striking of the displays is the 20-foot tall "tree" of mums, consisting of approximately 560 chrysanthemums of varying colors. For more information, call Sea World of Texas at (512) 523-3611 or 1-800-422-7989.

■ Dr. Blood's Theatre of Horrors at the Plaza Theatre of Wax, located at 301 Alamo Plaza, brings Frankenstein, Dracula and the Wolfman to startling life. Other ghosts and goblins provide year-round chills to those who dare to enter the Theatre of Horros. For fun, fear and fright, contact the Plaza Theatre of Wax at (512) 224-9299.

■ The San Antonio Symphony is presenting "It Came From The Orchestra Pit," 7 p.m. Oct. 31 at the Laurie Auditorium, located on the Trinty University campus.

This Halloween concert will feature a costume contest and surprise special guests. The Orkidstra Mime Troupe will be on hand to entertain. Tickets are $6. For more information, contact the San Antonio Symphony at (512) 554-1000.

■ Celebrate "El Dia de Los Muertos Ofrenda" (Day of the Dead) at the Institute of Texan Cultures from Oct. 27-Dec. 1. The exhibit is located in the Mexican area of the exhibit floor. In Mexico, the religious observance of the Day of the Dead is an opportunity to honor those who have passed away and to help survivors deal with death and grief. There also will be a video of San Antonio celebrations. This exhibit is free and open to the public. For more information, contact the Institute of Texan Cultures at (512) 226-7651.

■ Experience the most authentic haunted house in San Antonio at "Nightmare on Grayson." Located across from the Pearl Brewery at 201 E. Grayson, this haunted house is over 6,000 square feet of sheer terror. Wind your way through pitch black passages and come face to face Freddie, Leatherface, Red Eye and Jot the Killer Dot. "Nightmare of Grayson" is open daily Oct 24-31. Hours of operation are 7:30 p.m. till the last victim exits, and admission is $5.

Dr. Blood's Theatre of Horrors, Oct. 25-31, is one of three themed sections located in the Plaza Theatre of Wax in downtown San Antonio. Costumed visitors will receive a special discount during Halloween week.

KTFM and Pizza Hut are sponsoring this event and discount coupons are obtainable at San Antonio Pizza Huts. For more information, call (512) 299-1555.

■ Get a behind-the-scenes look at some of the most famous beasts, make-up artists and special effects ever to appear on the silver screen when you visit "Special Effects: Science of Movie and TV Magic" at the Witte Museum. The 6,000 square foot exhibit is filled with scale models, makeup and animation examples including "Bruce the Killer Shark" from "Jaws," the maternal Octopus from Aliens, Norman Bates' mummified mother and a moveable King Kong. A specialty gift shop will be open for the run of the exhibit, which is through Jan. 5. Hours of operation are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon-5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for children ages 4-11 and free for children 3 and under. For more information, contact the San Antonio Museum Association at (512) 829-SAMA.

■ San Antonio's newest fall entertainment, Haunted Hayrides, runs through Nov. 2. The laughs, thrills and chills begin at dark as you are taken across acres of horror, encountering ghosts, goblins and creatures of the night. Free spider cider and deadly donuts will be available at the Witches Cauldron. Haunted Hayrides is located at the northeast corner of Hwy. 281 and 1604. The cost is $9 for adults, $7 for childrn 12 and under, and free for children under 5 when accompanied by an adult. For reservations and more information, contact (512) 545-0095.

■ The San Antonio Zoo is also getting into the Halloween spirit with their annual "Zoo Boo Halloween Party" 6-9:30 p.m. Oct 31. The "Zoo Boo Halloween Party" will feature face painting, games, a storyteller and a moonwalk. They will also have a haunted boat ride and spook house. Admission is $3 for the general public and $2 for Zoo members. For more information, contact the San Antonio Zoo at (512) 734-7184.

Laredo plans to celebrate Washington's birthday in style

Staff Report

While in Laredo, do as the Laredoans do. Don your sombrero, visit El Mercado and celebrate, southwestern style, the most unlikely event in South Texas — the George Washington Birthday Celebration.

The mammoth annual party, Feb. 14-23, 1992, is billed as the nation's largest birthday bashes for our country's first president.

This year will mark the 95th anniversary of the event which combines the rich culture and history of the two Laredos — Laredo, Texas, and its sister city, Nuevo Laredo, Tamps., Mexico, just south of the border.

The spectacular celebration has grown from two to 10 days of rousing patriotism and fun.

Festivities include a two-day Jalapeno Festival and the celebration's biggest attraction, the 100-unit Anheuser-Busch George Washington Parade which includes brilliantly decorated floats, marching bands and entertainers from both sides of the border.

For the first time, the parade will boast a corporate sponsor — Anheuser-Busch Companies Inc.

For 10 days, the Texas/Mexico border is resplendent with star-spangled jubilation. This perfect formula for spreading international goodwill originated in 1898 when the "red man" and "white man" (an organization made up of prominent Laredo men of both American and Mexican ancestry disguised as Indians) held a mock battle for possession of the city.

The battle drew to a close when Great Chief Sachem (A.C. Hamilton) and his braves mounted the battlements and received the key to the city from the mayor as a sign of unconditional surrender.

THE ORGANIZATION, appointed to research a specific date on which to annually celebrate this momentus occasion, discovered that, coincidentally, George Washington had been named Sachem by the Sons of Liberty, who disguised themselves as Indians while making plans to free the Colonies from Britain. The symbolism was eveident, the day was chosen and the George Washington Birthday Celebration was born.

The event annually draws crowds ranging from 200,000 to 300,000. In addition to the parade and Jalapeno Festival — which includes a tug-of-war, a Miss Jalapeno pageant, a jalapeno eating contest, a land raft race and a children's "Jell-O-Peno" eating contest — activities include elaborately costumed Princess Pocahontas and Colonial pageants, a Youth Parade and the "crowning" of Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher, this year's Mr. South Texas.

On the final Saturday of the celebration, an International Bridge Ceremony unites leaders from the U.S. and Mexico in the center of the bridge that joins the sister cities.

A symbolic "abrazo" (which means hug) ritual begins when two children from Laredo embrace two youths from Nuevo Laredo. Federal, state, county and city officials from each city then follow suit while military bands prform moving versions of both national anthems.

The bridge ceremony and the parades are free, but many of the events charge admission.

By Jennifer Merin

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — While Washington, D.C., swelters in temperatures in the 80s, 90s and higher, Iceland's capital enjoys a summer in the 55 to 60 degree range.

Iceland, an island in the Atlantic about 600 miles west of Norway and bordering the Arctic Circle has its share of ice and snow. But it also is warm and wonderful — thanks to the Gulf Stream.

Its misleading name is no accident.

Iceland's original settlers — Viking chieftains and farmers who fled Norway's western coast in about 900 A.D. to escape taxation by Norwegian kings — discovered a fertile, pleasant land they wanted for themselves and Celts they captured along the way.

The name Iceland, they thought, would deter followers.

The ploy was so successful that Iceland, with 255,000 people — many of them fishermen and farmers — is Europe's most sparsely populated country. With a population less than half that of Cleveland occupying an area the size of Ohio, there's plenty of room for everyone.

About 130,000 people live in greater Reykjavik — a modern city with lush parks, fine recreational and cultural facilities and an exceptionally high standard of living. The remaining population is in smaller cities and towns along Iceland's coasts.

Iceland's wild and wondrous terrain is the product of some 200 volcanoes, several frequently displaying dramatic lava flows and causing rifts that alter the maps.

The most awesome is Hekla, thought by ancient Greeks to be the home of the damned. About two hours by car from Reykjavik with the highest peak 4,747 feet above sea level, it is a favorite among mountain climbers.

The area is covered with rugged lava boulders. Older ones are blanketed with velvety, bright green moss that cushions the feet. Newer ones of naked, craggy rock are as desolate as the moon.

The island's volcanic base is source for spectacular geysers and solfataras — boiling mud pools exuding sulphurous vapors. Some 800 natural hot springs provide year-round bathing and geo-thermal energy that generates electricity, that runs factories and heats homes and hothouses.

Because so little fossil fuel is burned, the air is crystal clear. It's so clear that it gives colors extra brilliance and makes it difficult to judge distances, even in Reykjavik.

Snaefellsjokull (SNAY-fel-sho-kel) a magnificent glacier featured in "Journey to the Center of the Earth," is 75 miles cross the bay from the capital. Although it's as far as Key West, Fla., is to Cuba, you can look across the bay and detect every glacial ridge with the naked eye.

Touring Iceland's natural wonders is easy. On the north coast, just 45 minutes from Reykjavik by plane ($165 round trip) or five hours by car, is Akureyri, Iceland's second-largest city. From there, for $55 each, you can take an eight-hour guided bus tour featuring fjords, solfataras, underground bathing springs, waterfalls, volcanic craters, a power plant, the remarkable labyrinth of castle-like lava formations at Dimmuborgir (black castle) and beautiful Lake Myvatn.

Farms throughout Iceland offer accommodations with meals or cooking facilities. Most offer swimming, fishing, golf and-or horseback riding on sturdy, sure-footed, even-tempered Icelandic horses. Costs range from $39 per night per person for bed and breakfast to $559 per week for a six-person cottage where you provide bedding and food.

Iceland's history and culture are fascinating, as evidenced in the sagas, historical tales dating from the 10th century or earlier. Original manuscripts are displayed Reykjavik's museums.

Early customs are preserved, too. For example, a newborn is given the father's first name as a family name. So, Erik's boy would have the last name Eriksson or his girl would be Eriksdottir. It's usual to call everyone, even President Vigdis Finnbogadottir (a woman, of course), by first name. All listings are alphabetized by first name in the telephone directory.

In nature and culture, Iceland is full of surprises. Don't let its misnomer deter you from vacationing there.

Season is prime for cruises

By Jennifer Merin

NEW YORK (AP) — There has never been a better time for value-conscious vacationers to take to the seas.

The cruise industry in the past 20 years has expanded enormously, providing a wide range of options for vacationers. At the same time, increased ship building has created an over-supply of passenger berths, and thus discount fares industry-wide.

The key to prime enjoyment lies in matching passengers to ships that best suit them. Some options:

■ If you're interested in night life filled with shows, parties and disco and a full schedule of daytime activities ranging from sports to computer classes, consider Norwegian Cruise Lines (NCL) or Carnival for itineraries to the Caribbean ranging up to a week long.

■ For very exclusive, upscale environments, the Royal Viking Line's Royal Viking Sun is the Cadillac of cruise ships, with exquisite restaurants, elegant lounges and beautifully appointed cabins. Cunard's Sagafjord and Vistafjord and Crystal's Harmony offer similarly refined ambience.

■ Adventure or expedition cruises have developed as a subsection of the industry over the last 10 years, with trips to exotic places such as Antarctica, the Northwest Passage and the South Seas. Expedition ships such as the Salen-Lindblad Crusing's MS Frontier Spirit tend to be smaller than others, and most are outfitted with diving equipment or Zodiacs for passenger enjoyment. Programs are never too rigorous. Retirees or youngsters fit in easily. These voyages are geared for people interested in ecology, wildlife and visiting remote areas.

■ For family fun, Premier's Big Red Boat combines several days' sailing with several days at Disney World. The cruise staff provides ideal supervision and lots of activities for kids, freeing parents to relax and enjoy their cruise, too. NCL's Norway also features a full program of activities for children.

■ Cruises for newlyweds are in a class of their own. American-Hawaii and Celebrity Cruises offer special honeymoon packages with champagne, cake, souvenir photo albums and cabins featuring double beds and jacuzzis. Club Med 1 features a $300 discount for honeymoon cruises seven days or longer.

■ Theme cruises are another popular option. NCL's frequent theme cruises are designed to tantalize murder mystery mavens, jazz fans, health and fitness buffs or fans of classical music or ballet.

Holland America Line's pre-holiday shopping cruises to duty-free Caribbean ports feature lectures by name designers and manufacturers' reps. This season, Holland America and several other cruise lines sail to San Salvador for Columbus' 500th anniversary, while American Hawaii offers itineraries to mark the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

When choosing a cruise, ship size is an important factor. Megaships, with up to 2,200 passengers, often provide lots of activity and big-name entertainment. Smaller ships, with as few as 100 on board, may have more personalized service and a cozier atmosphere.

To choose a cruise and get the best price, consult a travel agent who specializes in cruising and is willing to take time to talk with you about the options. Get ships' brochures from the travel agent or directly from cruise lines. Most have toll-free phone numbers available through directory assistance at 1-800-555-1212.

For a good overview of what's available, contact the New Jersey-based Cruises of Distinction, a cruise-only mail order travel agency, at 1-800-634-3445. Ask for its free 56-page catalog.

Explanation

This proposed amendment would change the procedure for creating state debt, allowing it to be created by means of propositions submitted to voters rather than by constitutional amendment.

Legislation that will become effective if voters approve this amendment requires that rates for customers be reduced by an amount equal to the tax exemptions

Cabin village allows tourists to go back in time

By Jerry Fink

DEWEY, Okla. (AP) — What began as a novelty has turned into a consuming passion for Washington County ranchers Kenneth and Marilyn Tate.

Eight years ago they thought it would be nice to have a log cabin on Hogshooter Creek, a place where they could get away from the telephone and enjoy the peaceful prairie atmosphere of Morgan Ranch. The creek runs across their land, which is about five miles east of Dewey in northeast Oklahoma.

Today, the cabin on the creek has evolved into a village of hand-hewn log buildings reminiscent of communities that dotted the prairie before the turn of the century — and there's no telling where the village limits are going to end as the Tate's continue to build.

Dubbed "Prairie Song Village, Indian Territory," the collection of buildings includes the original honeymoon cabin constructed by the Tates, who were married 11 years ago. The cabin was first erected in Missouri.

"We bought it, tore it down log by log and put it back up over here," said Mrs. Tate.

YOUNG STUDENTS FROM around eastern Oklahoma routinely visit the one-room Scutter School, some just to tour, some to spend the day experiencing what school was like on the frontier.

"The outhouse is a real cultural shock to them," said Mrs. Tate.

Since 1983, the Tates have spent more than $1 million of their own money to build the village of their dreams that they now share with tour groups from around the world.

"My car is 12 years old," said Mrs. Tate. "Every dime goes into building things here."

The Tates hope some day to make the venture "non-profit" so they can qualify for grants and other financial assistance, but for now they must charge admission to help pay the expenses.

"We're incorporated now, working toward non-profit status," said Mrs. Tate. She said they will continue to add buildings to the village as long as they are in good health.

"The jail was just finished," she said. "The cage (inside the jailhouse) came from South Coffeyville, Indian Territory."

Still to come to Prairie Song is a bank, dental office, doctor's office, livery stable, two-story boarding house and some cabins where people will be able to spend the night.

THE CENTERPIECE OF the bank will be a 10-ton vault donated by the West Star Bank in Bartlesville. The old vault was originally bought by Frank Phillips, a founder of Phillips Petroleum Co., when he started the bank.

Though the Tate's normally build a building and then furnish it, in the case of the bank they have the main furnishings first. The same is true of the dentist and doctor's office, although the furnishings have not yet been fully restored.

She and her 57-year-old husband single-handedly run the unusual tourist attraction located at the end of a narrow, winding dirt road that gives visitors the distinct impression they have slipped back in time.

"We've not been able to afford to hire people to help us," Mrs. Tates said, adding that with a party of 300 or 400 people, "we have to have someone in every building."

Prairie Song is not part of a grand scheme, something that has been planned ahead of time," said Mrs. Tate, a lifelong rancher whose ancestors started the family ranch in 1890.

"KENNETH AND I were going to build a cabin to get away from the phone," she said. "We always wanted a log cabin, but we didn't mean to start Prairie Song."

After they put up the cabin, Tate built a log barn to store his tractor.

"My mother had always lived on the prairie and she had always wanted a chapel," said Mrs. Tate. "We had some logs left over, and so we built a chapel."

Then one day a group of French tourists showed up to see what a real working ranch looked like.

"We just had the cabin, barn and church (at Prairie Song) at the time," noted Mrs. Tate.

'Both of us have been students of history all our lives. We realized history was giving us the opportunity to share something.'

— Marilyn Tate

The three buildings impressed the French and encouraged the Tate's to expand.

"Someone asked, where's the school?" said Mrs. Tate. "Anymore, that's all someone has to say (to Kenneth) and he's gone (building something new)."

She said they "got serious" about Prairie Song four years ago.

"Both of us have been students of history all our lives," said Mrs. Tate. "We realized history was giving us the opportunity to share something."

The buildings are constructed without blueprints. "We take great care in preserving the buildings," said Mrs. Tate. "Every inch of the wood is oiled with linseed oil."

THE HAND-HEWN logs for the buildings come from Missouri. They are stored at least two years so they will season, she said. When the logs are ready to be put into a building, log hewers from Missouri stay at the Tate's ranch and hand notch the logs.

"Kenneth has learned from them how to do this. Just not anybody can go out and do it. The only way is to learn from the old-timers," she said. "If one mistake is made in a notch, the whole building could be off."

The only modern innovation in the log cabins is the "chinking," the material that goes between the logs. In the old days the "chink" material was mud, but now it's a special masonry mix. To add to the prairie atmosphere, the Tates have started a herd of Texas Longhorn cattle.

And when large tours come through, entertainment is provided by a group out of Coffeyville, Kan.

"We do a full fledged saloon show, with a madam and seven or eight floosies," said Mrs. Tate.

And there is a western gunfight. And skits and jokes. The players are volunteers from Coffeyville, who use money paid for their services by tour groups to restore historic sites in their town.

Mrs. Tate thinks Oklahoma is missing out on a gold mine by not stressing its cowboy and Indian heritage more for tourism.

"IN ALL THE surrounding states, tourism is a billion-dollar industry," she noted. "Oklahoma, I hope, will take its place in the tourism business. What a tremendous impact it could have on the state. The foreign market that would come to Oklahoma is incredible. Tourists from all over the world will pay anything to come here.

"You know, there are cowboy clubs all over Europe and Japan."

Unfortunately, she said, there are many restrictions that scare people away who might otherwise get involved in projects such as the Tates have undertaken.

"Insurance is the main thing," she said. "If the insurance wasn't prohibitive, we would offer horseback riding here."

On Oct. 12-13, an Old Settler's Reunion at Prairie Song took place.

"It's our first one, but I know it's going to grow," said Mrs. Tate.

The reunion featured a variety of music and arts and crafts. And it gave folks unfamiliar with the prairie the chance to see what life was like there a hundred years ago.

"This place is for people with stress," said Mrs. Tate. "It's for people to experience the quiet. There's no phones, no television. It's noisy with silence.

"You can feel your feathers settling out here, and it's nothing Kenneth or I did. Prairie Song stands alone."

Museum offers fall 'get-away'

Staff Report

Petroleum Museum Travelers fall get-away will be a weekend in Alamogordo and Cloudcroft, N.M., on Nov. 9-10. Departure time will be 8 a.m. Nov. 9 in a Petroleum Museum coach. Lunch will be served in the Sacramento Mountains of New Mexico.

In Alamogordo, participants will take a raft trip through "Grand Canyon" in the Tombaugh Space Omnimax Theater, and tour the planetarium and the International Space Hall of Fame.

Visit to White Sands National Monument also will be included on the trip. Then participants will spend the night in The Lodge in Cloudcroft and have dinner at Rebecca's restaurant.

That evening and the next morning will be free time for participants to choose the sights and activities they wish to do.

Prices for the weekend trip (based on double occupancy) are $124 for museum members and $135 for non-members. Transportation, hotel, lunch, dinner, brunch and admissions are included. Deposit of 50 percent must be made to the museum by Saturday for reservations to be assured. For more information call 683-4403.

WAR Against Youth at Risk

The United Way has made a big difference in the way Midlanders take care of Midlanders. Our United Way is a campaign for the hearts, minds and lives of our community. By giving to the United Way we can fight the war against the forces that hurt our children, forces like alcohol, drugs, gangs and peer pressure.

The United Way's 17 agencies fight these battles every day by teaching children how to say no, by giving them self-esteem, and by providing a safe place while their parents are at work.

Agencies involved in this battle include Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire , Boys and Girls Club of Midland, Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, YMCA Day Care and Youth Sports programs, and Salvation Army Day Care.

Victories come in all sizes, shapes and colors. With your help, talent and resources, we're going to win this war the Midland way -- The United Way.
