Summertime leads to soaring temperatures, bills

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The cost of enduring summer's sweltering heat — which at mid-summer on June 27 officially peaked at 116 degrees but unofficially hit 120 degrees in downtown Midland — is more than dripping sweat and mild perspiration.

It's money to buy the electricity to power air conditioning systems. And it's money to pump in the water to refresh the body and to irrigate lawns and gardens.

"The electric (bill) went up, and the water bill went up, too, the last couple of months," observed Midlander Buford McDonald. "I don't understand why (about the water bill). I guess they thought you had to have water to cool off."

His water bill increased $10 to $15.

But his electric bill, which usually is "around $160" a month, almost doubled to $296.

"If they put it on you, you have to pay it whether you like it or not," McDonald said. "I didn't have time to squabble. Everybody has it high, too."

Another Midlander, who said she is very conservative in the use of energy and who never sets her cooling-mode thermostat below 80 degrees, said her July electric bill increased to $210 from $140 a year ago. Her average daily electric cost is $6.81.

"Your biggest user is going to be your air conditioner," said LuAnn Morgan, Midland spokeswoman for the Fort Worth-based Texas Utilities (TU) Electric, which furnishes electric power to Midland and much of Texas.

Other high-users of electricity and strains on electric bills are heating systems, clothes dryers, ovens and stoves.

The cost of supplying power to a 1,500-square-foot house during the summer could range from $80 to $110 a month "if you are efficient with your usage, if you don't have kids in and out, and are not home all day," Ms. Morgan said.

And electric bills could be reduced by 25 percent

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards and GOP challenger George W. Bush have each raised about $8 million, big money but still behind the $50 million spent in 1990 when Clayton Williams used his own millions to try and become governor. Over the last 12 months, Richards has raised $8.3 million to Bush's $7.7 million. Computer analyses of reports released last week show that in the period from Feb. 28 to June 30, Bush has raised $3.5 million, and Richards has collected $3.1 million./1B

Troops arrive in Rwanda to secure airport

■ Defense secretary to inspect U.S. aid mission, which could expand.

Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — The first U.S. troops landed in the Rwandan capital Saturday to secure the airport for an expanded international aid effort. The next step is encouraging millions of scared, displaced people to return home.

President Clinton ordered 200 American soldiers to Kigali to support the relief effort in Rwanda, where millions have fled their homes to escape ethnic carnage that killed up to 500,000 people.

Defense Secretary William Perry was to inspect the U.S. aid mission today.

Lt. Gen. Daniel Schroeder, commander of the joint American task force, said it was unclear how many American soldiers would eventually be sent to Rwanda, whether they would be deployed outside Kigali, or how long they would stay.

Maj. Gen. Romeo Dallaire, Canadian commander of the U.N. peacekeeping force here, said total U.S. troop strength in Rwanda could reach about 2,000 — if the Americans agree to take on all jobs the United Nations would like them to.

U.N. officials hope a new commitment of American, Canadian and British troops will help them carry out their mission and prompt other nations to send the troops they have pledged.

Where's my mail? As world speeds up, U.S. Postal Service slows down

By Connie Cass
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It is an everyday act of optimism: A letter drops into the darkness of the blue curbside box, the lid clanks shut behind it, and in the mind of the sender, wherever that letter is going, it's as good as there.

But is it really?

Roughly one out of five letters doesn't arrive on time. A few never arrive. This year a record amount of mail was delayed, and a chorus of complaints rose up from the disillusioned.

Experts: O.J.'s rush to trial is clever, but risky maneuver

By Linda Deutsch

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson, who was known for rushing on the football field, seems intent on setting a record for the fastest start of a murder trial in recent court history. Legal experts see the tactic as risky, but clever.

■ Related story/9A

They said that defense lawyer Robert Shapiro's push to go to trial within 60 days after arraignment could indicate a number of motives, among them:

— Force the prosecution to present an incomplete case that's inadequate to convict Simpson and then rest without presenting any defense.

— Avoid the issue of DNA evidence by going to trial before scientific tests are completed or before defense experts can do their own tests and argue the material is inadmissible.

— Yield to an impatient defendant's wish to prove his innocence and get out of jail as soon as possible.

Allies vow more pressure on Serbs

GENEVA (AP) — The United States and its allies vowed Saturday to move quickly to step up pressure on the Bosnian Serbs to accept a peace agreement, but they showed no enthusiasm for allowing shipments of arms to the Bosnian Muslims.

After a four-hour meeting, the foreign ministers said they still hoped that the Serbs would reverse their flat rejection of the peace plan accepted by the Bosnian Muslims and Croats.

"This is a difficult, intractable problem," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher. "There is no magic solution."

Christopher said he was influenced by Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev's view that the Serbs "may still be open to persuasion."

So far, the Serbs have resisted all efforts to pressure them. They rejected the peace plan that would give them 49 percent of Bosnian territory, and 51 percent to a Muslim-Croat federation. After two years of fighting, the Serbs now control 70 percent of the former Yugoslav republic.

Last week, the Serbs cut off civilian access to Sarajevo; fired on a U.N. convoy, killing a British soldier; and shelled the Muslim enclave of Gorazde, all without drawing a military response from the United Nations or NATO.

In addition to Christopher and Kozyrev, the participants in Saturday's meeting were British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd, French Foreign Minister Alain Juppe, German Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel, Greek Foreign Minister Karolos Papoulias and Commissioner Hans van den Broek of the European Union.

They issued a communique saying they would go the U.N. Security Council this week to seek a resolution tightening enforcement of existing sanctions against Serbia. Coupled with that was a pledge to seek a resolution for a phased lifting of the sanctions if the Serbs accept the peace plan.

■ Related story/7A

The ministers also agreed to move ahead with plans to tighten enforcement of zones from which heavy weapons are excluded.

"We are not prepared to see this process strung out indefinitely," Christopher said.

Hurd conceded that the sanctions imposed against Serbia two years ago are "no longer in full enforcement." He said they had fallen victim to "a certain weariness."

The United Nations issues licenses permitting the shipment of food and medicine to Serbia. In many cases, those licenses have been used to ship other goods in violation of the embargo.

At the same time the ministers were proclaiming their unity, differences among the participating countries were clear, particularly on the question of the arms embargo.

The communique held to the same language used earlier in the summer when the ministers said that if the Serbs remained intransigent, pressure for multilateral lifting of the arms embargo "could become unavoidable."

Asked how long it might be before the embargo were lifted, Hurd said Britain remained opposed to allowing arms to flow to the Muslims, a position on which he said France concurred.

Mexicans arrest driver whose truck collided with candidate's car

MEXICO CITY (NYT) — The authorities have arrested the driver of the truck that smashed into the campaign vehicle of the main opposition candidate for governor in the southern state of Chiapas on Monday, severely injuring the candidate and killing three campaign workers.

Based on the driver's testimony and other information, the authorities said they had determined that the collision was an accident. The candidate's family still asserts that it was a deliberate attempt on his life.

The truck driver, Noe Tress Ramos, 20, told the police that the candidate's Chevrolet Suburban had swerved into his lane, contradicting witnesses' reports that the truck had crossed into oncoming traffic.

The truck driver said that after he found out who was involved in the accident, he fled because he was afraid crowds of sympathizers might turn on him. He came to Mexico City, where he was taken into custody on Friday along with his father, Luciano Tress Virgen, who had been identified earlier in the week as the driver of the truck.

The candidate, Amado Avendano, 55, of the left-of-center Party of the Democratic Revolution, is recuperating in a Mexico City medical center. Doctors said he could make a complete recovery. His family said his name would remain on the ballot for the election on Aug. 21, the same day as Mexico's presidential election.

Mexico's deputy attorney general, Mario Ruiz Massieu, said in a news conference on Friday night that the official investigation had concluded that the collision in Chiapas had been an accident. The truck driver and his father, who was also in the truck at the time of the accident, have been taken to Chiapas, where they will be prosecuted, the federal authorities said.

Avendano's family and supporters have said from the beginning that the incident was an attempt on his life by political forces opposed to his candidacy. The truck was traveling without cargo or license plates in a state that has been under military alert, with numerous army checkpoints on roads, since an uprising by peasant and Indian rebels began on Jan. 1.

French weaken anti-foreign word law

PARIS (AP) — Go ahead, have a cheeseburger, France's Constitutional Council said Saturday.

The agency that monitors the constitutionality of laws wasn't ruling on nutrition, but on linguistics. Its decision substantially weakens a new law meant to stop the invasion of foreign words into the French language.

The law barred the use of English words in broadcasting, advertising and science. But the council ruled that encroaches on "the fundamental liberty of thought and expression" guaranteed by the constitution.

"The French language, like any living language, evolves," the council said in its ruling.

The law would, for instance, have forced advertisers to offer a "hamburger au fromage" instead of a cheeseburger.

Under the weakened version of the law, a sports announcer now can choose between talking about "un corner" for corner shot and a "jet de coin," a council spokesman said at a news conference. A "sponsor" doesn't have to be called a "parrain," and a "bande video promotionelle" won't have to replace a video "clip."

The council made exceptions to the law's requirement that French translations be provided in foreign-language broadcasting, advertising, public notices, job applications and consumer information.

The council said the media can still use "Franglais" words for which the government's Dictionary of Official Terms has found French equivalents. But it upheld the section affecting government officials or employees, citing Article 2 of the constitution stipulating that "the language of the republic is French."

Martin Malvy, president of the Socialist caucus in Parliament that challenged the law, called the ruling "good news for democracy and for the French-speaking world," which he said "needs more writing than gendarmes."

The office of conservative Prime Minister Edouard Balladur insisted in a statement that "the essential parts of the law have not been affected" by the ruling.

But Balladur, traveling in Africa, voiced concern that "there are many foreign terms in the French language. The essential problem of a nation is to defend its personality and its culture."

"When the language is in danger, the country is in danger," author and academician Jean Dutourd said on radio station Europe-1.

Fines of $3,700 have been proposed for some violations of the law. Other punishments have yet to be spelled out.

Fines already exist for announcements such as theater posters and airline boarding passes not printed in French, but the regulations have rarely been enforced.

(From 1A)

"I don't have any faith at all in the mail," said Therese Morris, a bookkeeper in Herndon, Va.

Sometimes a letter from Morris to her parents in Florida arrives in three days; sometimes it takes two weeks. A $10,000 stock certificate she sent by registered mail was lost.

The U.S. Postal Service is losing customers such as Bonnie Matthews, a Baltimore illustrator who sends by fax machine the rough sketches she used to mail.

"I love writing letters and correspondence, I think it's more personal than the fax," she said. "But I can't rely on the mail."

As fax machines, computer e-mail and electronic money transfers become commonplace, even letters delivered on time seem hopelessly slow — "snail mail," they call it on the Internet.

The Postal Service is in a double bind: It's struggling to deliver today's torrent of mail, more than a half-billion pieces a day. And it's facing high-tech competitors that in the future may siphon off the mail that's cheapest to deliver.

The past year has been calamitous:

— Businesses and charities that mail millions of third-class solicitations began noticing poor delivery last fall. The Disabled American Veterans estimates it lost $1 million in donations when fund-raising letters were delayed.

"In November, the bottom dropped out," said Max Hart, the group's chief fund-raiser. "I've been here 25 years and I don't ever remember a delivery problem that severe."

— There was mail mayhem in Chicago. A ton of missing letters and packages was found stashed inside a letter carrier's closet. Caches of undelivered mail were found hidden in a postal truck, piled in the back of post offices and burning under a viaduct.

— After the Postal Service moved sorting of Bronx, N.Y., mail out of the Bronx, angry residents complained about vital mail received weeks late: medical test results, tax records, exam scores, invitations.

"It's upsetting when Social Security checks are late," said Frank Hordich, who has lived at the same Bronx address since 1945 and "never had mail trouble of this magnitude before."

— Congress took notice of Washington D.C.'s dismal delivery record. In May postal inspectors found "large volumes" of mail addressed to the government, with dates as old as February, in the city's main post office.

Postmaster General Marvin Runyon said some of the problems were caused by workers and managers who ignored standard procedures and neglected customers. That's being changed, he said.

"We have to get people to understand that we work for customers," said Runyon, a former auto executive hired in 1992 to revamp the Postal Service.

The Postal Service's own survey shows that nationwide delivery speed fell to a record low at the start of 1994. Only 79 percent of first-class letters sent within overnight delivery areas — usually a city and its suburbs — arrived on time.

With the spring thaw, local delivery improved to 82 percent on-time, still down two points from the year before, according to the quarterly survey conducted by Price Waterhouse since 1990.

Letters sent long distances, due to arrive within three days, were late almost a quarter of the time.

The Associated Press did an informal test of its own and got better results. On July 5, the AP mailed 100 letters between distant cities; 78 arrived on time. Another 100 letters were mailed within 10 local areas; 88 arrived on time.

Still, some delivery was quite sluggish: What should have been an overnight trip within Miami took one letter six days.

But an Associated Press poll found most Americans give the Postal Service high marks overall, even when mail is a little late.

Forty-two percent of those surveyed predicted that a letter mailed within their local area would fail to arrive overnight. Yet 63 percent said the Postal Service was doing a "good" or "excellent" job.

The telephone poll of 1,005 adults was conducted May 20-24 by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants. It has a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

Fourteen percent of the respondents said in the past month they had chosen some other delivery method, such as e-mail or Federal Express, because of dissatisfaction with first-class mail.

It's unlikely that Americans will abandon mail in the foreseeable future, however.

A grandchild's crayon picture, the pleasing heft of a seed catalogue, engraved wedding invitations — these will be hard to replace by computer. Many advertisers will still want to put something tangible into a potential buyer's hands.

And some people won't be able to afford alternatives to the mail. They will still need a Postal Service that reaches every outpost of the country at a single rate that is within their grasp.

The question is how to keep stamps affordable if the Postal Service loses the types of mail most vulnerable to electronic competition — business-to-business mail, bill payments, some advertising. Those are also the easiest types of mail to handle.

Business-to-business first-class mail has decreased by 10 percent since 1988. So far, the decline has been more than offset by growth in mail sent between businesses and homes, mostly bills and junk mail.

Only 5 percent of the mail is personal correspondence.

The Postal Service, which hasn't received tax money since it was restructured in 1971, must earn enough to support its network of trucks and post offices and more than 700,000 workers.

Service fiascos or rising prices could chase away big business mailers who are already weighing alternatives to the Postal Service.

"If service suffers, they're dead," said Gene Del Polito, executive director of the Advertising Mail Marketing Association. "If rates go too high, they're dead."

On the price side, Runyon has won praise for staving off an expected rate increase for a year, and for his plans to modernize the rate structure. He has asked the Postal Rate Commission to approve increases of about 10 percent for early next year. A first-class stamp would cost 32 cents.

It's the service side where Runyon has come under attack. The trade groups and lawmakers and unions who watch the mail blame blunders by Runyon for the drop in delivery.

WEATHER WATCH

Today's high to be in mid-90s

Staff Report

A cooling-down weekend is blessing Midlanders who, for much of June and July, sweltered in temperatures equally and often exceeding 100 degrees.

The temperature today under partly cloudy skies is to be between 90 and 95. Winds are to be southeasterly at 10 to 20 mph.

Nighttime temperatures are to be between 65 and 70.

On Monday, the day's high is to be between 90 and 95.

After an overnight low of 63, the high for Saturday was 82, compared to the record high for that date of 106, set in 1937. The record low is 60 degrees, set in 1971.

STATE

Cloudy skies and occasional light rain helped some Texans keep their cool on Saturday, officials said.

Most parts of the state got rain at one time or another Saturday. Rainfall amounts were generally less than a tenth of an inch, although .48 inch was reported in Midland and Lubbock.

The scattered rain cooled off some locales, suppressing a few afternoon temperatures to 20 degrees below normal, the National Weather Service said.

Paris reached 69 by late Saturday afternoon, while San Angelo reached 76, with Dallas 79, Lubbock 82 and Amarillo 83.

But where rain did not fall, temperatures climbed.

Partly cloudy skies predominated over the Panhandle and much of west and south Texas. McAllen reached 98 Saturday afternoon, while El Paso reached 93, Austin 92, Houston and San Antonio 91 and Wichita Falls 88.

Forecasters are calling for the pattern to continue through today. Scattered showers and thunderstorms will dot the state today with afternoon temperatures mostly reaching the 90s, except for mid-80s in the mountains and 102 in the Big Bend.

Lows will settle in the 60s and 70s, except for 50s in the mountains.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms swept through the East on Saturday, downing trees and power lines in some areas, while cool air set record lows in parts of the Rockies and South.

A stalled front stretching from Florida to Maine brought high winds and rainfall to the East, while an upper level disturbance in Texas caused showers and thunderstorms across the southern Plains.

Winds downed trees and power lines in Hope Mills, N.C., and Dolgeville, N.Y., the National Weather Service said. Severe thunderstorm watches were posted for parts of New York, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

Rainfall totals for the six-hour period up to 2 p.m. EDT included: .74 of an inch in Tallahassee, Fla., and .59 of an inch in Wilmington, N.C.

Cool air settled in the South and the Rockies for the third straight day, breaking record lows in 15 cities.

Pueblo, Colo., dropped to 50, breaking by 2 degrees the 105-year-old record for the date. Jackson, Ky., cooled to 53, down from 56 in 1981; Pensacola, Fla., dropped to 67, down from 70 in 1968; and Houston fell to 68, 1 degree below the 1972 record.

The cool air also chilled areas in Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Morning lows ranged from the 70s in parts of the South to the 40s across the Rockies. Temperatures were mainly in the 50s and 60s across the rest of the nation.

The coolest spot in the Lower 48 states was 41 in Alamosa, Colo., while Yuma, Ariz., hit the high mark at 88.

COST: Bills soar along with summer heat through efficient lighting — lighting systems that produce well-lighted rooms but at fewer kilowatts and, therefore, less heat.

"Well, if they would invest their money in good lighting (rather than cheap light bulbs), they would save a lot on their bills," Ms. Morgan said.

Bill Decker, facility director for Midland County, is saving the county 17 percent to 30 percent on total energy bills through efficient lighting, she said.

And in "most cases, the lighting quality was maintained or improved, depending on the lighting needs of the work areas," Decker said.

However, "a lot of people don't want to spend that money up-front (to effect lighting efficiency)," Ms. Morgan said.

But one Midlander who built energy efficiency into his two-story, 6,000-square foot house used 3,749 kilowatt-hours in a month's time this summer and got a $300 bill, which reflects economy, Ms. Morgan said.

The basic monthly cost to have electric power delivered to your home is $6: the meter-hookup charge. After that, the charge for power usage is about eight cents a kilowatt-hour.

For example, the cost to burn a 100-watt light bulb for 10 hours would be eight cents, which also would be the cost to power a 1,000-watt hair-dryer for one hour, Ms. Morgan said. A kilowatt is 1,000 watts.

The cost of operating a three-ton air-conditioner that uses five kilowatts in an hour would be approximately 40 cents an hour.

"You forget how many things you have that operate on electricity," Ms. Morgan said. In a month's time, the power costs could and often do mount.

"We do have a deferral system (on payment of bills)," Ms. Morgan said of TU Electric. "If you can't pay the full amount, you can call in and arrange to pay your bill out."

Cap Rock Electric Cooperative in Stanton and Midland has a similar plan.

"We'd like to make it as easy as possible for customers to get through this high-bill period," according to Ulen North, Cap Rock's vice president and chief operating officer.

"Out here (in West Texas in the 100-plus-degree summer heat of 1994), we had a lot of heat-related problems," Ms. Morgan said.

"And the heat-related problems were blowing fuses, which is the same as tripping a breaker in your house. They were blowing fuses on our lines and on our transformers."

About one-third of each household's water bill reflects electric-power costs: the cost to pump water from wells and lakes to Midland and to distribute water within the city. Since buying electric power is a major cost to the city and its customers, the city is studying the practicality and the economics of using natural-gas engines to run some of the city's bigger pumps, according to Ken Jones, director of utilities for the city of Midland.

Midland's single-day peak water usage this summer was 41.4 million gallons during the 100-plus temperatures, Jones said. Year-round, the daily average use of city water is about 20 million gallons.

This year, the city's 30,294 water customers will be paying about $16 million in water bills, or an average of $44 a month in water bills.

"A lot of them are bare minimum," Jones said.

The basic water rate is $10.75 a month and includes 2,000 gallons of water. Beyond that, water costs the customer $2.15 for 1,000 gallons.

The home customer's monthly utility bill includes the $10.75 minimum water-use bill, the $13 sewer bill, and the $10.25 garbage bill. The total is $34.

The $44 average water bill includes business, corporate and public-water use, such as that of the city of Midland, whose annual water bill is about $347,000. The city of Midland is its own largest user of city water.

"There's no free water," Jones said. "The Parks Department is actually our biggest customer."

Midland's public school system is the city's second-highest user of water.

The city has 2,000 commercial users of city water.

And much of that water goes on lawns and in garden for irrigation.

How green your grass is "depends a lot on when the rains come," Jones said. "We really need a rain about the middle of April to the first of May. It makes the lawns green up, and people can keep them green.

"If we don't get that inch of rain right in there, it's very hard to get lawns to green up by irrigating," Jones said. "It takes a lot of water. If you fertilize your yard, and it rains on it, that rainwater dissolves all of the fertilizer, and takes it down to the roots.

However, if the lawns are fertilized and then irrigated with Midland water, which contains many minerals, the water "has a hard time dissolving all of that fertilizer.

"Water can dissolve only so many minerals," Jones said. "Rainwater picks up nitrogen out of the air. And nitrogen is a natural fertilizer."

And timely rainfalls can play crucial roles in limiting both water use and water bills. And a drop in summertime temperatures could result in a corresponding decrease in electric bills. But rain and the warmth of sunshine are in nature's realm and at nature's whims.

RUSH: Early trial could be risky, experts say

(From 1A)

"The bottom line is they're trying to swamp the prosecution with so much work they won't be adequately prepared for trial," Loyola Law School professor Laurie Levenson, a former federal prosecutor, said of the defense rush for judgment.

"Everybody, including Judge (Lance) Ito is going to have to work around the clock to get the case to trial within the time limit."

Prosecutors are sharply limited in seeking delays, attorneys and legal scholars said, because the speedy trial right is seen as belonging to the defendant. However, such an issue as incomplete scientific evidence might lead a prosecutor to ask for more time.

After a hearing Friday in which Shapiro stunned prosecutors by urging a trial right after Labor Day, the judge set Sept. 19, to meet the statutory 60-day speedy trial requirements.

But the speed tactic is risky, said defense attorney Harland Braun, who has handled several high-profile cases.

"Generally it takes a long time to think through your strategy and figure everything out," Braun said. "The facts of cases are like crystals. Every time you look at it you see different facets. . . . Usually the defense thinks the longer it goes on the better."

Braun added that witnesses' memories fade and prosecution evidence becomes stale over time.

To rush a case to trial, Braun said, may indicate the defense believes the prosecution can't prove guilt.

AID: U.S. troops arrive for mission in Rwanda

have concentrated on providing them with food, medical care and clean water to prevent the spread of the water-borne cholera bacteria.

The goal now is to convince the refugees to return home. Most are majority Hutus who fled in fear of reprisals by the victorious Tutsi-led rebels for the mass killings of Tutsis. The rebels have installed Rwanda's new government.

Aid officials in Goma said Saturday they thought the cholera epidemic was coming under control. But in Kimumba, the most crowded of the camps around Goma, hundreds of refugees rioted as a Red Cross convoy distributed bags of cooking oil, beans and corn flour.

Refugees said at least one person was killed and others were wounded as men wielding clubs fought off mobs that surrounded the bags of food.

Dallaire said all 200 of the first Americans ordered in should arrive by today.

Schroeder, the U.S. commander, said the size and scope of the U.S. mission in Rwanda was "still ambiguous." He said it would be determined by security conditions and humanitarian needs.

U.N. military sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the plan was to use additional American troops to help move relief supplies to distribution hubs within Rwanda.

U.S. Special Forces psychological warefare teams were to bring in radio equipment to help the new government encourage more than a million refugees in neighboring Zaire to return home. The Tutsi-led government has assured Hutu refugees there would be no reprisals for the massacres of Tutsis.

Trucks used to carry food into the country would bring back refugees on the return trip. Dallaire said a convoy of six small trucks sent as a test brought back 400 refugees and were mobbed by others wishing to return.

THIRD: City receives funding for lights son Drive.

The final phase will encompass downtown and will consist of the installation of: 26 traffic signal controller cabinets, the electronic brains of synchronization; 23 cabinet concrete bases and related conduit; 26 loop detectors, which allow on-demand movement of vehicles at lights; new cable at 27 locations; and replacement of eight-inch traffic-light heads (the red, yellow and green lights) with 12-inch heads.

"We are replacing an outdated system is what we're doing," said Gary Saunders, the city's traffic engineering coordinator.

Downtown traffic-light equipment currently consists of electro-mechanical traffic-signal controllers. Those will be replaced with solid state fully actuated controllers.

"What it allows is a lot more flexibility at an intersection," Saunders said. "You (drivers) should be able to notice the difference."

The new computerized system will permit monitoring and fine-tuning the synchronization from City Hall.

Because of the short blocks and grid system downtown — as opposed to the single stretch of Andrews Highway with intersections — synchronization is more difficult to obtain.

Before work can begin, the city must determine plans and specifications, seek bids on the project, and finally obtain approval by the state. Work may begin as early as October.

The project will cost about $191,400. Seventy-five percent will be from federal funds made available under the Oil Overcharge Restitutionary Act and distributed by the Texas Department of Transportation; the remainder will be financed by the city.

The federal grant must be used for traffic-signal improvements that save fuel. The city is required to conduct tests before and after improvements to determine savings.

"So far, what we've come up with shows a high fuel savings" from the two previous traffic-light synchronization projects, Saunders said.

Angry Russians try to storm investment house

MOSCOW (AP) — A troubled investment firm was unable to reassure 4,000 angry shareholders who gathered outside its doors Saturday that their savings were safe, and police had to stop the crowd from storming the building.

Panicked investors overwhelm MMM offices all week demanding to get their shares redeemed after values plunge 99 percent.

If MMM collapses, as many are predicting, it will likely damage the public's confidence in market reforms. Up to 10 million Russians have invested in the company, lured by its intensive advertising campaign promising instant riches.

MMM's critics say it is a classic pyramid scheme that uses money from new investors to pay profits to earlier investors, and is destined to collapse when the pool of fresh investors dries up.

Shares in the MMM investment company were the hottest ticket in Russia until the stock began plummeting this past week, losing 99 percent of its value in a matter of days. Panicked investors have overwhelmed MMM offices all week demanding to get their shares redeemed.

MMM offices were closed for the weekend, but an official at the Moscow headquarters showed up to tell the crowd that MMM stock would rise again within a few months. He also said the company would soon redeem some shares belonging to people who could prove a desperate need for cash.

But he was soon booed away, and police guards stopped the crowd from trying to break into the building, the Interfax news agency said.

Many Russians, who expected the government to protect them during the Communist era, are now blaming the government for MMM's problems.

President Boris Yeltsin's government has warned that it will not bail out people who lose money with MMM or other unregulated firms. It maintains this would amount to covering up a company's fraud and would undermine market reforms.

Caribbean, Latin American nations delay U.N. approval of Haiti plan

■ Key resolution would in effect allow United States to invade, occupy Haiti.

N.Y. Times News Service

UNITED NATIONS — Latin American and Caribbean nations are delaying U.N. approval of the Clinton administration's proposal for the possible invasion of Haiti if sanctions fail to remove the military government from power.

The key resolution would in effect allow the United States to invade and occupy Haiti, the first such invasion in the Western Hemisphere that would have Security Council support.

The resolution would approve the creation of an invasion force composed mainly of U.S. troops, ships and planes under American command that would be responsible only to Washington.

The force would be allowed to take control of the country, disarm the Haitian armed forces, unseat the ruling military junta, and finally try to restore the country's constitutional government with U.N. help. But general objections and questions about the details have led to a series of changes in the proposal.

The mounting objections over the course of the week seemed to reflect ineptness by the United States, said a Latin American delegate, who insisted on anonymity.

"In the United Nations it is very hard to vote against the United States," he said, adding that he expected the U.S. resolution would eventually be approved in some form.

A first draft of the resolution was passed around the United Nations last Monday by the United States, which has worked for months to gain support from Latin American nations and commitments to take part in a post-invasion peacekeeping force. But the wording immediately raised questions from these nations and others:

Why is force necessary when the economic sanctions appear to be working?

What are the assurances that a democratic government will be installed?

How could the United Nations know that whatever new government was installed would be a true constitutional government and not another like that now running the country?

Who would pay for this adventure — the cash-strapped United Nations?

And does the proposal not draw the United Nations into American domestic politics, which require that the influx of Haitian refugees be stemmed?

Beyond those questions, the old issue of Yanqui imperialism started to bubble up again.

They are deeply involved in the North-South division of the world into the economic haves and have-nots and the political divisions of aligned and non-aligned nations. A multiplier effect is at work, and these countries have kindred spirits in Africa and Asia nations, where even a hint of colonialism is abhorrent.

In the middle of the week U.S. officials denied that anything was amiss, although they conceded that there might be a few ruffled feathers. They said they would deal with the objections by amending the resolution.

But in seeking to please everyone the United States may have made things worse. The resolution was rewritten over and over. Some drafts were co-sponsored by other countries.

After the sixth rewrite, a chagrined U.S. diplomat started calling it "the rolling resolution."

Some delegates felt that they were being manipulated and pressured by the Americans, and the undercurrent of unhappiness came into the open. On Thursday a regional bloc within the United Nations, the Group of Latin American and Caribbean Countries, met to consider what action, if any, should be taken.

Participants in the meeting said that many representatives — including those from Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, Uruguay, Nicaragua, Belize, Cuba and the Dominican Republic — continued to oppose the idea of an invasion.

The objections go back to William Walker's illegal expeditions into Central America in the 1850s. A dozen other American invasions in the region, including the occupation of Haiti by U.S. Marines from 1915 to 1934, were capped most recently by incursions into Grenada and Panama.

Last flight leaves Port-au-Prince

The Air France plane, filled to capacity with 141 passengers, took off two hours late after an unspecified delay earlier in Santo Domingo, the Dominican capital. At least 50 stand-by passengers were left behind in the sweltering Port-au-Prince terminal, the airline said.

The total cutoff of all commercial air links, implemented under U.S. pressure, sparked days of panic and greed here as people struggled to leave on the overbooked flights.

Haitians and foreigners, including several journalists, spoke of paying bribes to associates of Haitian Air France employees to obtain the last precious seats, even though hundreds of Haitian asylum-seekers were supposed to have priority.

Mona Vanbraak, a Dutch international aid worker aboard the last flight, said she and her four young children were bumped by Air France Wednesday — in spite of confirmed tickets — after other passengers bribed their way on.

"It was terrible. People were paying more than $100 to get to the head of the line," said Vanbraak, who was returning to Holland to bring her newly adopted Haitian one-year-old, Yolon, to meet her grandparents.

Only 65 of the 170 Haitian asylum-seekers scheduled to leave Wednesday made it out, and not a single one made it on the Saturday flight.

"God will have to take care of us now," said a disappointed Haitian shantytown pastor whose entire family has been approved for U.S. asylum but was stranded by the flight cutoff. Police beatings have driven his wife and four children into hiding. But he has managed to elude authorities irate over his radio broadcasts on human rights abuses.

The pastor said Haitian workers at the U.S.-contracted International Organization for Migration in Port-au-Prince demanded bribes as high as $700 to get a family on one of the final Air France flights.

The U.S. consulate quietly closed for several months in 1993 after its Haitian employees demanded bribes for U.S. visas. U.S. officials had no immediate comment on reports of corruption in the asylum process.

U.S. officials are still trying to arrange charter flights for more than 500 Haitians cleared for asylum, a U.S. Embassy spokesman, Stan Schrager, said. Another 800 approved Haitians will be ready to go once they get final documents, such as marriage certificates and blood tests, he added.

The U.S.-initiated commercial airline cutoff is part of an international effort to tighten the noose around Haiti's military leaders, who took power in a bloody September 1991 army coup against President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

"Nobody likes this. I've been trying to get out of here for three weeks. I'm so worried," said Erla Desrameaux, 48, an employee of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York who was turned away.

Now, Desrameaux has not a clue how she will get back to her job or her 11-year-old son, who she left in care of relatives in Brooklyn in June when her seriously ill daughter slipped into a coma.

The border into the neighboring Dominican Republic, which shares the island with Haiti, is sealed off too, although smuggled gas and food shipments are still tricking in.

Today, the United Nations Security Council is expected to exert further pressure and adopt a resolution allowing a possible U.S.-led invasion. Aristide gave crucial approval for the measure Friday night, urging the United Nations to take "swift and determined action" to restore democracy.

In spite of international pressure, Haitian legislators began discussing a proposal this week to elect a new president during legislative elections scheduled for November, though Aristide's five-year term does not expire until February 1996.

"If there's an invasion of Haiti, I'm sure the CIA will warn the generals," said Chamber of Deputies president Robert Monde. "The drum always beats before the dance."

Supporters of Aristide say the United States has made too many empty threats to frighten Haitian army leader Raoul Cedras.

"They are convinced President Clinton will not invade," said Father Antoine Adrien, who represented Aristide in unsuccessful negotiations to restore him to power.

Marines practice, just in case they're needed

"We're 100 percent ready to go in," said Cpl. Joe Bagley, 21, of Canandaigua, N.Y. "Marines, we just like to do things. If we're going to do it, I'd like to do it, get it over with."

About 1,200 Marines and Navy SEALS wrap up a five-day training exercise today with a mock evacuation of Americans from the Roosevelt Roads Naval Station on Puerto Rico's east coast. They held three previous evacuation practices in the Bahamas in mid-July.

After that, it's back to Haitian waters to wait.

Their commander, Navy Vice Admiral Jay L. Johnson, said an invasion is not imminent but his troops have to be prepared.

"As long as we have to be out there, we've got to be ready," Johnson told reporters aboard the USS Mount Whitney, the control ship for the four-vessel assault force parked off Haiti for three weeks.

Nearly 1,000 Marines and sailors participated in combat training exercises on the Puerto Rican island of Vieques Wednesday through Saturday. They splashed ashore in amphibious landing craft and practiced firing with grenade launchers, rifles and machine guns against targets made of old tires and rusty, abandoned vehicles.

The training was supposed to intimidate Haiti's military rulers and break the monotony of weeks at sea for the Marines. The Navy tried to get its message across by transporting correspondents, television crews and photographers to the beach on Vieques and then to the Mount Whitney and other assault vessels.

Johnson said he commands 15 ships and 8,000 personnel assigned to carry out three tasks in the Caribbean.

Argentina detains suspects in bombing of Jewish center

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (NYT) — Following a trail of parking lot tickets and auto repair bills, police have detained three Buenos Aires men suspected of preparing the truck bomb that killed about 100 people here last week.

Blue-collar bit players in what appears to be an international plot, the three are a used car dealer, a mechanic and the owner of an automobile "chop shop."

Detectives believe the white Renault van used in the attack was altered with parts of other vehicles, either to hinder an investigation or to build a better bomb.

To direct the full force of the blast at a Jewish community center, an interior wall of the van was reinforced with steel and then packed with bags of earth.

Over the weekend before the Monday morning blast, it was parked at a public lot across the street from the Hospital de Clinicas, two blocks from the bombing site. This public hospital took in the largest number of the 236 wounded in the blast.

The police continued raids around this capital Saturday, hoping to get closer to the masterminds of the bombing. The federal investigating judge, Juan Jose Galeano, is expected to make public a preliminary report next week.

Justice Minister Rodolfo Barra announced that the government would submit two anti-terrorism bills to Congress next week. One would set prison terms of 18 to 25 years for people convicted of "illicit terrorist association or public incitation or apology."

Another would set up a fund to reward people who give the police information on terrorist groups in Argentina.

The Argentine government, which seemed Wednesday to be on the verge of breaking relations with Iran, has now decided to await the investigating judge's report.

Asked if any conclusions had been reached about the bombing, Argentine Foreign Minister Guido Di Tella said Friday at the United Nations, "The answer is no."

"We are pressed to jump to conclusions, to interrupt the procedures of the judicial process, to condemn countries that might be involved," he told reporters. "We will not do that."

Undoubtedly, economic interests also contribute to Argentina's caution about breaking relations with Iran hastily. Over the last decade, sales to Iran have accounted for about two-thirds of Argentina's exports to the Middle East.

Bosnian arms embargo has some holes

■ Analyst: Recent arms that get through include sophisticated Chinese and Soviet anti-tank missile systems, U.S. Stinger anti-aircraft missiles, 20,000 AK-47s, mortars.

By Maud S. Beelman
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The cargo ship, carrying guns and rockets hidden behind containers of Egyptian cotton, got caught. The arms flights from Iran, chartered in Russia, apparently didn't.

When it comes to the arms embargo on Bosnia and the rest of former Yugoslavia, more seems to get through than gets stopped.

International bickering over whether to lift the embargo has created a policy vacuum that limits aggressive policing. In the United States, there is strong pressure to arm Bosnia, unilaterally if necessary.

"Lip service is being paid to enforcement of the arms embargo on former Yugoslavia because I think it suits the West, particularly Washington, that the Croats and the Bosnians are receiving arms," said Paul Beaver, a Balkans military analyst for Jane's Information Group of defense journals in London.

"It's almost as if it's an alternative to a constructive policy. You just have to look at the very obvious signs" that arms are getting through.

The arms embargo imposed on all of the former Yugoslavia in 1991 was intended to prevent the spread of war, but its effect was to freeze into place the weapons superiority of the Serb-dominated military.

All sides tried to get around the embargo. From April 1992 to April 1994, according to figures just compiled by Beaver, $660 million worth of arms and ammunition went to Croatia, $476 million to Serbia and the Bosnian Serbs, and $162 million to the Muslim-led Bosnian government.

Beaver said his figures came from interviews with suppliers and officials, and from TV film of weapons in the field.

The transfer of weapons to Bosnian government forces has increased since April. The reason: opening of land routes from Croatia following the creation, under U.S. auspices, of a Bosnian Croat-Muslim federation in mid-March.

"Arms are getting through. They're not getting through in a very large quantity," said Victor Jackovich, the American ambassador to Bosnia. "That may be an offshoot of (the federation), but it wasn't the original intention."

Since April, a greater number and variety of weapons and support systems have reached the Bosnians, analysts say. Senior Bosnian army commanders, speaking on condition they not be named, have confirmed regular arms shipments. Croatian government officials have formally denied being a conduit for arms to Bosnia.

According to Beaver, new arms reaching Bosnia over the last four months include three to four dozen sophisticated Chinese and Soviet-built wire-guided anti-tank missile systems, up to 20 U.S.-designed Stinger anti-aircraft missiles, up to 20,000 AK-47s and similar automatic weapons, mortars and rocket-propelled grenades. The Bosnians also have received U.S.-made night-vision equipment and secure field radios that help them probe Serb-held territory.

"What the Bosnians haven't got is anything which could drastically change the course of war," such as main battle tanks or long-range field artillery, Beaver said.

Analysts say most of the weapons apparently were bought with money from Muslim countries, notably Iran, Saudi Arabia and Turkey. The financial aid also has allowed Bosnian officials to hire military advisers, most of them Turks and Germans, Beaver said.

Unusual alliances form in the murky world of international arms dealing. A charter air company in Russia, a traditionally ally of the Serbs, has flown about 1,000 tons of munitions in the last six weeks.

Ex-minister charged in abortion murders asks judge for advice

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A former minister seemed relaxed — almost nonchalant — as he asked for the judge's advice Saturday about finding a lawyer to defend him in the killings of a doctor and his bodyguard outside an abortion clinic.

Escambia County Judge James Roark III asked Paul Hill if he wanted a public defender or planned to use a private lawyer.

"I haven't decided as of yet, sir," said the 40-year-old, strawberry blond defendant. "I don't know how the system works here."

Then Hill asked the judge: "What would be the wisest thing to do?"

Roark advised him to take a public defender with the understanding that he could change to a private attorney later.

"OK, I'll try that," Hill said.

Hill's demeanor angered some who came to watch the proceedings.

"He had no apparent distress in what he has been charged with doing," said Caroline Tesche, a lawyer for the Feminist Majority, an abortion rights group.

■ Related story/12A

She came to Pensacola to urge federal, state and local authorities to investigate possible connections among acts of anti-abortion violence across the nation. A multiple jurisdictional investigation would allow authorities to determine any connection between attacks on doctors.

The slayings Friday of Dr. John Bayard Britton and James Herman Barrett came nearly 17 months after abortion doctor David Gunn was shot to death at another Pensacola clinic.

Hill, who had advocated the killing of abortion doctors as "justifiable homicide," appeared before Roark in a small courtroom at the Escambia County Jail.

When the judge asked if he had anything else to say, Hill mused: "Hmmmm . . . may I keep this arrest report?"

He explained he wanted to see what he was charged with.

The charges are two counts of murder and one count of attempted murder. Barrett's wife, June, was wounded in the arm.

Officials: Bentsen diverts agency's Whitewater papers to White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen asked his agency's independent investigator last weekend for copies of interviews from an ongoing ethics review of the Clinton administration's handling of Whitewater, officials said Saturday.

Bentsen, who ordered the review and was among those interviewed, forwarded the Treasury inspector general's documents to the White House so it could prepare for congressional hearings, the administration officials said.

By law, the IG's office is supposed to be free of political interference.

Administration officials said they saw nothing wrong with Bentsen's request and the documents were simply forwarded to White House counsel Lloyd Cutler. They said no one except Cutler saw the information.

"Nothing we did compromised the integrity of the investigation," Cutler said in an interview. "The IG was essentially finished with the investigation."

He said the White House and Treasury arranged to get the IG reports to save his staff from doing duplicative interviews. "It was more economic," he said. Cutler was the leadoff witness in the House Banking Committee hearings into Whitewater last week.

But the arrangement drew immediate criticism from outside the administration.

Sherman Funk, an inspector general for 13 years at the State and Commerce departments before retiring last year, said it was "totally inappropriate" for an IG to release investigative interviews from an ongoing review.

"The whole purpose of the IG is their independence, and if their independence can be questioned than the very usefulness of the IG is impaired," Funk said.

Another former IG, Chuck Dempsey, said he would have immediately rejected the request and then reported it to Congress. "You just don't do that. You don't turn interviews of an investigation over for politicians to use," said Dempsey, who was IG at the Department of Housing and Urban Development during the Carter and early Reagan years.

Clintons, Gores hold health-care rally in Missouri

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Exhorting Americans to "finish Harry Truman's fight," President Clinton stood front and center in the former president's hometown Saturday to demand victory in the long battle for guaranteed health insurance.

"Harry Truman would say: 'The buck stops here.' The buck stops in Congress and the buck stops with you," Clinton told thousands of cheering supporters massed on Independence Square. "Let's push it over the finish line."

Clinton teamed up with his wife, Hillary, and Vice President Al Gore and his wife, Tipper, for a campaign-style rally designed to ignite a public outpouring of support as Congress nears a critical point in the health-care debate.

It was their first joint appearance outside Washington since the campaign, and the White House clearly was trying to recapture some of the energy and enthusiasm that accompanied the unveiling of Clinton's health care plan last year but later gave way to doubts about the details.

Clinton's audience included busloads of "reform riders" who are riding the Health Security Express.

But even as Clinton denounced the "hot air and hot signs" characterizing the rancorous health-care debate, protesters in the distance chanted their dissenting views.

Supporters chanted in return: "Pass It Now! Pass It Now!"

Sixteen-year-old Rachel Crowthers, who rode the bus from Portland, Ore., told the crowd she's been treated "like a second-class citizen" since going on Medicaid to meet her medical bills for cancer treatments.

When protesters booed the soft-spoken girl's speech, Vice President Gore told the crowd, "It made me realize how completely out of touch they are with the people of this country. Unbelievable."

Hells Angel 'wannabe' gets murder verdict

HILLSBORO, Ore. (AP) — A man described as a Hells Angels "wannabe" was convicted Saturday of murdering a woman, her 6-year-old twins and a family friend 17 years ago, allegedly at the orders of a gang leader.

Robert G. McClure, 47, was sentenced to four consecutive life terms immediately after the verdict, reached by the jury after about six hours of deliberations.

McClure, who claimed he was framed by the outlaw bikers club, sat impassively as the verdicts and sentences were read. His lawyer, Lisa Maxfield of Portland, said McClure would appeal.

Prosecutors contended McClure was under orders from Odis "Buck" Garrett to kill Compton in retaliation for her testimony against several Hells Angels in a 1976 San Francisco prostitution trial.

McClure wasn't charged until 1991 after inmates came forward saying he had bragged to them about the killings while in prison on a drug conviction. Inmates said McClure described how the children's heads were shattered by his bullets as they clutched their teddy bears.

The inmates said they agreed to testify for the state because killing children was a crime even they couldn't stomach.

Judge Jon B. Lund called the trial one of the "most egregious" murder cases he'd ever heard, telling McClure he killed "in a heartless and cold-blooded fashion."

■ Court transcripts also indicate Simpon spied on his ex-wife while she had sex with another man.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson hounded his estranged wife, spying on her as she had sex with another man and once telling the man at a restaurant: "I'm O.J. Simpson and she's still my wife," according to grand jury testimony.

"I was for sure intimidated," Keith Zlomsowitch testified of the restaurant encounter. He described Simpson's tone as "serious, if not scary. Just deep, threatening."

Zlomsowitch was among 17 witnesses who testified before the grand jury last month, according to transcripts released Friday by the grand jury office after portions were leaked to news organizations.

The grand jury was later disbanded out of concerns over pretrial publicity. Following a preliminary hearing, a judge ordered Simpson to stand trial on charges he murdered his 35-year-old ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman, 25.

Simpson pleaded "absolutely, 100 percent not guilty" to charges that could carry the death penalty. Trial was set for Sept. 19.

Simpson's lead attorney, Robert Shapiro, was out of state and unavailable to comment on the grand jury testimony.

The grand jury testimony paints Simpson as a man unable to break ties with Ms. Simpson, whom he divorced in 1992, once watching through a window as Ms. Simpson and Zlomsowitch had sex in Ms. Simpson's living room in April 1992.

Zlomsowitch is believed to be the "Keith" about whom Simpson is heard screaming on a 911 police recording of Ms. Simpson's frantic call for help last Oct. 25.

The grand jury testimony also detailed police and scientific evidence that didn't emerge at Simpson's preliminary hearing.

Another criminalist testified that he found signs of blood in the sink and drain of Simpson's shower, but there weren't enough blood samples to perform detailed tests on the genetic makeup of the blood.

A police detective testified that when Simpson returned from Chicago the day after the slayings, he said he couldn't remember how he cut himself on his middle finger, but thought he did it before going to Chicago. Later, Simpson's lawyers said Simpson cut himself in his Chicago hotel room after breaking a glass.

Zlomsowitch, director of operations for Mezzaluna, the three-restaurant chain where Goldman worked, testified before the grand jury on June 21.

He testified that on one night in 1992, after an evening out at clubs, he and Ms. Simpson had a wine-and-candlelight sexual encounter on her living room couch.

Zlomsowitch said he returned the next day, meeting Ms. Simpson near the pool where her two children were swimming. While he was sitting on her back and massaging Ms. Simpson's neck, he looked up and was startled to see Simpson.

Zlomsowitch quoted Simpson as saying: "I watched you last night. I can't believe you would do that in the house. I watched you."

Wildfires continue to scorch Western states

LEAVENWORTH, Wash. (AP) — A speeding forest fire destroyed several houses near this Bavarian-theme tourist town Saturday and forced workers to shut down the water plant.

"Everything is disrupted. The streets are pretty well deserted. Smoke is hanging in heavy and there's a lot of anxiety," said city administrator Mike Cecka.

About 25 miles northeast, a fire that had burned across 79,500-acre of grass and pine trees was moving away from the lake resort town of Chelan, where a number of houses were evacuated overnight.

Fires started mostly by lightning also burned out of control in Utah and Montana, where a tanker plane crashed and killed its two crew members, and elsewhere across the West. Conditions in Oregon had improved enough that more than 200 state firefighters were being sent to help Washington state crews.

The Rat Creek fire near Leavenworth broke out Friday in Icicle Creek canyon south of the town in north-central Washington and flared from about 40 acres to 1,000 acres during the night.

Elsewhere:

■ Oregon fire crews that had been slowed by rugged terrain made progress Saturday on that state's last big blaze. The Mendenhall Fire more than doubled in size to 7,500 acres during the morning.

■ Nevada's biggest fire still out of control had burned 2,000 acres north of Elko.

■ The Elevator Canyon fire sprawling across the Idaho-Utah border had grown to more than 20,000 acres.

■ In Idaho, 400 firefighters fought a group of six blazes that had burned across about 3,000 acres near Idaho City, about 30 miles northeast of Boise.

■ Three lightning fires had joined in a single 11,300-acre blaze in the Klamath National Forest in extreme northern California.

One year later, Baby Jessica becomes Anna, born to shop

By Greg Smith
Associated Press

BLAIRSTOWN, Iowa — When the public knew her as Baby Jessica, she was a terrified little girl, screaming and crying as she was carried away from the only home she had ever known after a bitter custody fight.

Now the dark-eyed, dark-haired youngster says she's Anna, not Jessica. She has a new home with a sister and swings and a watchful dog.

And she has new interests.

"I can tell you, she does like to shop. She likes to shop and so does her Aunt Rob. Whenever we are together we go shopping — McDonald's and shopping. Anna loves chicken nuggets with french fries and lots of ketchup," said Robbie Schmidt, the girl's aunt.

"I can guarantee you she's doing fine. She's wonderful. As far as Anna is concerned, she is Anna Jacqueline Schmidt and she will tell you that. That is her identity. If we've ever been out in public and maybe someone has come up and called her Jessica, she has informed them, 'My name is Anna Jacqueline Schmidt' and she often wonders why they call her that."

On Aug. 2, 1993, Baby Jessica was transferred under court order from the home of Jan and Roberta DeBoer of Ann Arbor, Mich., to birth parents Dan and Cara Schmidt, who named her Anna Jacqueline Schmidt.

The couples had battled for more than two years in Iowa and Michigan courts over the little girl — a fight that polarized the country over the issues of children's rights, birth parents' rights and adoptive parents' rights.

Cara Schmidt, then unmarried, gave birth to the little girl in Cedar Rapids on Feb. 8, 1991, and gave her daughter up for adoption. But she named the wrong man as father.

The DeBoers were granted custody, but on March 8 they learned Cara had gone to court to get her baby back. Then Dan Schmidt identified himself as the baby's father and sued to win custody. He and Cara married on April 11, 1992. The DeBoers fought for custody through courts in Iowa and Michigan. The U.S. Supreme Court rejected their pleas.

Then, in the frenzy of her transfer from the DeBoers to the Schmidts, scores of reporters and cameramen crowded around 29-month-old Jessica, catching her screams and tears.

"Coming out of that house and with all the turmoil in the house and all the camera people outside, that's what sent her crying," Robbie Schmidt said.

Sunny Pensacola becomes Fort Sumter in national abortion war

By Robert Dvorchak
AP national writer

'We don't need to have the reputation as a Dodge City or Tombstone.'

— State Sen. W.D. Childers

PENSACOLA, Fla. — It's a cosmopolitan center at the base of the Bible Belt, a city that beams with pride at its Spanish colonial heritage, its sun-bleached beaches off the emerald waters of the Gulf of Mexico and its distinction as the cradle of naval aviation.

But after the second slaying in 17 months of a doctor outside an abortion clinic, after four bombings, after countless confrontations that have become routine, Pensacola is also the Fort Sumter flashpoint in the national abortion war.

"We've become a kind of magnet for a small group of terrorists. It's one thing after another," said Dallas A. Blanchard, associate professor of sociology at the University of West Florida and a United Methodist minister.

Blanchard, co-author of the book "Religious Violence And Abortion: The Gideon Project," echoed the horror of many Pensacolans to Friday's latest bloodletting: "Oh, no. Not again. Not here."

But he added: "It's not a reflection of the community. It's a reflection of a small minority drawn here for terrorism — a political act designed to place fear in the operators of abortion clinics and the physicians who work there. It's working."

Blanchard described the city — with its metropolitan population of 344,000 located in Florida's western panhandle near the Alabama border — as the "most liberal community east of New Orleans on the eastern Gulf Coast."

It attracts a diverse mix of visitors — tourists who sunbathe on the sugar-white sand, visitors to the Naval Air Station where the U.S. Navy trains pilots, college kids who frequent the city's trendy hangouts and seafood restaurants.

Yet politics are historically conservative here, where the Spanish first attempted to colonize Florida in 1559 and the area has been under the dominion of the Spanish, French, British, Confederate and U.S. flags.

And its religious roots are deep. Church listings span eight pages of the Yellow Pages, including one church that sits across from a topless bar. One stretch of highway leading from Alabama reportedly has one church per mile.

Its most notorious landmark now, however, is the Ladies Center, a two-story abortion clinic dwarfed by towering oak trees on the city's northern edge near the municipal airport.

On Friday, the day abortions are performed, Dr. John B. Britton — wearing a bulletproof vest — and a bodyguard, retired Air Force Lt. Col. James Barrett, were shot in the head and killed. Barrett's wife, June, was wounded. All of them sat in a silver pickup truck that had just pulled into the clinic's parking lot.

Britton had succeeded Dr. David Gunn, a center doctor, who was murdered on March 10, 1993, at another Pensacola clinic.

The Ladies Center was also bombed on June 24, 1984, and was one of three sites blown up on Christmas Day of that year in what four convicted participants called "a birthday gift for Jesus."

Six protesters were arrested there in 1986 after they raided the center, which is protected by an eight-foot high wooden fence and adjoined by a triangle of ground called the Holy Innocents Plot erected "In memorial to over 26 million babies murdered since 1973 in the American holocaust."

The man held in Friday's slayings — Paul Hill, a former Presbyterian minister and a father of three who moved to Pensacola three years ago — was a regular Friday demonstrator outside the Ladies Center.

Among the anti-abortion literature he has distributed was an "Unwanted" poster — listing Britton's picture, age, address, history and the script: "This man has murdered thousands of unborn children, therefore, he is guilty of shedding innocent blood."

The bloodshed has sickened Mayor John Fogg, who assumed office on an interim basis the day of the double slayings.

"It's an aberration, the work of a small group of radicals trying to maximize exposure," Fogg said.

"We don't need to have the reputation as a Dodge City or Tombstone," said state Sen. W.D. Childers, who gave his support to any measure that would prevent violence at abortion clinics.

"It's like we're in Beirut and we don't know who'll snipe at us," said Marcia Norcutt, personnel director at the North Florida Women's Health and Counseling Services.

FALLS CHURCH, Va. (AP) — Federal officials asked the public for help Saturday in finding out who set a fire behind an abortion clinic here.

A "gasoline-powered incendiary device" with a timer went off Friday night outside the Commonwealth Women's Clinic in Falls Church, said Patrick Hynes, a special agent for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. The clinic, which has been the scene of numerous protests, is about 7 miles outside Washington.

A witness reported the fire to a passing police officer, who put out the blaze after only minor damage was done, Hynes said. He declined to describe the incendiary device in any more detail, saying it might hamper the investigation.

Hynes said Planned Parenthood and the National Abortion Federation are offering a $100,000 reward for help finding and convicting those responsible.

Ribbon cutting

Wal-Mart has scheduled a ribbon-cutting ceremony for its new Wal-Mart Supercenter, 4517 N. Midland Drive, at 8 a.m. on Aug. 19. The public is invited to join the celebration. The 204,482-square-foot store — the newest prototype developed by Wal-Mart — will offer a full-line grocery store complete with meat counter, bakery, produce and frozen foods, as well as a wide variety of general merchandise. The store will be open 24 hours, seven days a week. As part of the new Supercenter's commitment to the community, Tom Van Vranken, Wal-Mart Supercenter director, announced that a $1,000 scholarship will be given yearly to a deserving high school senior from the Midland area.

Shopping spree

Mervyn's and Midland Jaycees have joined hands to give 10 local youngsters the opportunity to shop for school clothes. The two-hour shop ping spree is set for 7:30 a.m. Saturday at Mervyn's. The students were selected by the Jaycees with assistance from schools and community agencies. More than 5,000 children nationwide will go shopping, thanks to Mervyn's and co-sponsor, L.A. Gear, which is providing Disney cassettes and books for the students. After they go shopping, the youngsters will be treated to refreshments.

Jury selection to begin in Midland woman's murder trial

■ Defendant faces charges in shooting death of another woman at Midland night club last November.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Jury selection in the murder trial of Sherry Henderson, 20, of Midland, begins Monday in 238th District Court.

Ms. Henderson has been charged in the shooting death of Angela "Stuff" Perkins-Belcher outside a Midland night club on Nov. 27, 1993.

Ms. Perkins-Belcher died after receiving one gunshot wound to the chest from a .38-caliber handgun. She was pronounced dead at the scene by a justice of the peace.

Before the shooting, Ms. Perkins-Belcher was involved in an altercation with the sister of the accused, according to police reports. The incident occurred at the Zodiac Club on the city's south side.

The disturbance escalated and those involved were ejected from the establishment. The fight continued outside, witnesses said.

Ms. Henderson is accused of drawing the weapon and firing once into the chest of Ms. Perkins-Belcher.

Ms. Henderson then reportedly left the scene. Midland police officers later arrested her at a convenience store on Front Street.

District Judge John Hyde on Friday denied a motion for a continuance in the trial since many material witnesses have received subpoenas ordering them to appear this week.

A defense attorney made the motion because he is recovering from surgery and is experiencing pain, according to statements made in court on Friday.

Car seats, safety belts give children needed restraints

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

It may be easier for a frazzled parent just to let a small child into a vehicle without any thought to restraining him in a seat or seat belt, but it's not safe and, in some cases, it's not legal.

From the time a baby is born, the law requires he be restrained in some sort of safety device — even as he is brought home from the hospital for the first time.

"It is a federal law that any baby leaving a hospital be taken home in a child safety seat," said Midland Police Sgt. Brian Bogart.

"The parents have to have one in the car or the hospital must provide one, at the parents' expense."

Thus begins a lifetime of safety seats and selt belts, all required by law.

'You can pretty well tell if they are putting a child in a seat or belt when they are getting in the car.'
— Sgt. Brian Bogart police officer

From infancy until 2 years of age, a child must be restrained in a federally approved child restraint seat. For babies, the seat lies down and faces backward.

For toddlers, the seat faces forward and has a padded bar around it. "These seats are more padded and give the child a cushion against getting hurt," Bogart said.

The seat should have a label stating it is approved by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Children from 2 to 4 years of age must be in a child seat or seat belt depending on the child's size and weight.

"Parents need to be aware of the child's size," he said. "We had a 3-year-old killed because he was in a seat belt, which he was too little for, and got his head snapped against the car door and broke his neck."

From 4 to 14 years of age, children in the front seat must wear a seat belt. Beginning at 4 years of age, an individual does not have to be restrained if he is riding in the back seat.

However, police recommend everyone in a vehicle wear a seat belt.

"I recommend it," Bogart said. "I have seen the end result of people in the back seat who weren't belted. When I was going through accident reconstruction training, we were given an incident where a person in the back seat was ejected from the front to the back during the accident and took the person's head off who was sitting in front of him."

Vehicles can be stopped simply if an officer spots an unrestrained child or adult.

"In some states, it is a secondary offense, which means there has to be another, primary reason for stopping the vehicle," he said.

"However, in Texas, an unrestrained child or adult is a primary reason to stop the car, which I think is a very good thing to be able to do."

Parents receive a citation for transporting a child without restraint and could be fined from $24-$50 for not restraining children 14 years of age and

Big, small contributions boost Bush, Richards campaign coffers

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards and GOP challenger George W. Bush have each raised about $8 million, big money but still behind the $50 million spent in 1990 when Clayton Williams used his own millions to try and become governor.

Over the last 12 months, Richards has raised $8.3 million to Bush's $7.7 million. Computer analyses of reports released last week show that in the period from Feb. 28 to June 30, Bush has raised $3.5 million, and Richards has collected $3.1 million.

In that period, 83 percent of Bush's money came from within Texas. Of the money Richards raised, about a third came from out-of-state contributors.

And if the money is any indication, Bush is more popular in Houston and Fort Worth, while Richards has the support in Austin and San Antonio.

Both candidates have raised scads of money from Dallas, but Bush is ahead in that city, which so far has been the richest one in Texas in terms of campaign contributions.

In 1990, a total of $50 million was spent by Richards, Williams and five other major candidates.

Gov. Ann Richards, GOP challenger George W. Bush have each raised approximately $8 million.

Thousands of people have contributed to Bush and Richards this year, most giving $100 or less. But both campaigns have sizable stables of givers who contributed more than $5,000.

Richards raised $1.4 million of her money from those contributors, while Bush got $1.1 million from the big givers.

Still, the campaigns touted grass-roots support.

"We're particularly proud of our small contributors," said Richards spokeswoman Cindy Rugeley. "It shows we have a lot of support from working men and women."

"I think that our extensive base of small donors in Texas, in contrast to our opponent's out-of-state donors, tells a largely unreported story about this campaign," said Karen Hughes, a spokeswoman for Bush.

Ms. Rugeley said Bush has been relying on supporters of his father, former President George Bush.

"He's got 31 of Team 100 (a national group of big-money Republican contributors) that have given him money — that's the group that raised money for his dad's campaign," she said. "He's getting a lot of help from his daddy's friends."

Big donors to Richards included two $125,000 contributions from Democratic Governor's Association PACs; $100,000 from Daniel Robinowitz, a Dallas businessman who owns part of a planned casino in New Orleans; and two contributions totaling $125,000 from the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Arthur Schechter of Houston gave $39,000, and Fort Worth investor Robert Bass contributed $20,000.

Richard Rainwater, a business partner of Bass' and part owner with Bush of the Texas Rangers baseball team, gave $50,000 to Bush in this period. Rainwater also has large investments in casino gambling.

DEATHS

Byron Johnston

Memorial services for Midlander Byron Johnston are to be at 2 p.m. Monday at First Baptist Church. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Johnston

He died July 24 in an automobile accident near Abilene.

Johnston was born March 2[illegible] 1945, in Tyler, where he was reared and educated. He served as class president of the 1962 graduating class of Robert E. Lee High School in Tyler.

He graduated from Tyler Junior College in 1964 and Austin College in Sherman in 1967.

He married Jan Henderson on Oct. 28, 1972, in San Angelo.

He has lived in Midland since 1972.

He began his career in the petroleum industry in 1967 when he joined Texaco's gas department. He joined the staff of Lone Star Gas as senior gas supply representative for the Gulf Coast and West Texas. He joined Valero Transmission in 1974 as assistant vice president and district manager, gas supply for West Texas. He joined Perry Gas Transmission & PGP Gas Products in 1977 as senior vice president of business development. He became president and chief executive officer of Wilson Transmission in 1982. Johnston became president and owner of Enermark Inc. in 1984. He served as senior gas contract representative for Exxon from 1985 until 1992. At the time of his death, he was senior regional manager for Western Gas Resources.

He was active with the Boy Scouts and received his Eagle Scout award in 1958. He served as campaign manager for the Boy Scouts of America in 1985. He was a Junior Achievement advisor from 1968-69.

He was a member of the Southwest Basketball Officials Association from 1967-81.

He served as board member and president of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Midland.

He was a member of the Natural Gas Society of the Permian Basin and was president in 1977.

He served as youth counselor from 1976-78 and as financial campaign chairman in 1984 for St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

Johnston was active in the Midland Junior Baseball Association and Optimist Basketball and played a major role in the construction of Little League facilities in Midland.

Survivors include his wife, Jan Johnston of Midland; two sons, Clay Johnston and Blake Johnston, both of Midland; his mother, Louise Johnston of Midland; and a brother, Jack Johnston Jr. of Tyler.

Honorary pallbearers are to be Mark Leaverton, Leonard Trout, Bill Stovall, Paul Freimal, Gary Shumskie, Dr. Ronald Boren, Ronnie Farish, Bill Fair, Kent Finley, Dan Leonard, Walter Baker. Bob Landreth, Fred Walsh, Art Johnson and Dennis Spence.

The family requests that memorials be made to the American Diabetes Association, Midland Field Office, 10 Desta Drive, No. 120B, Midland, Texas, 79705, or Midland Junior Baseball Association, HC 31, Box 22, Midland, Texas, 79707.

Millard Hamman

Services for Millard Conrad "Duck" Hamman, 87, are to be at 3 p.m. Monday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Beth Ann Anton of Hope Lutheran Church officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Thursday at a local nursing-care center following a lengthy illness.

He was born Dec. 27, 1906, in Appanoose Township, Hancock County, Ill., where he was reared and educated.

He married Ulah Harriet Brown on Jan. 10, 1930, in Nauvoo, Ill.

They lived on a farm outside of Nauvoo until 1949, when they moved to Midland.

UT's tougher academic standards for its athletic recruits succeeds with better teams

By Suzanne Halliburton and Jeff South
Associated Press

'It's more important for me to graduate than it is to play in the NFL.'

— Tre Thomas, sophomore

AUSTIN — Call University of Texas sophomore Tre Thomas the model recruit for the 1990s. As a high school senior, he was listed as one of the top five overall athletes in the country and received scholarship offers from all the top football programs.

Equally impressive to recruiters, faced with ever-increasing academic standards for their student athletes, were Thomas' classroom credentials. He scored 1,010 on his Scholastic Assessment Test, 400 points more than the minimum required by the NCAA to accept a Division I scholarship. He also carried a 3.7 grade point average on a 4.0 scale.

Thomas, whose mother is a lawyer and whose father is a manager at a food service company, is considered to have the talent to eventually play in the National Football League. The teen-ager from Sugar Land broke into the Longhorns' starting lineup midway through his freshman season before a shoulder injury ended his year. At 6-foot 1-inch and 202 pounds, he's bigger than most defensive safeties, and he's faster.

Yet playing professional football is not his chief goal.

"It's more important for me to graduate than it is to play in the NFL," Thomas said.

Although it might seem unusual, given the history of athletes' academic performance, Thomas is more of the rule now than the exception on the Texas football team.

According to an analysis by the Austin American-Statesman of the team's high school grades in college-preparatory classes, Texas is one of the best prepared teams, academically, in the country.

Officials believe these strong high school grades combined with the team's equally impressive average on the SAT eventually will translate into higher graduation rates.

An analysis of scholastic information provided by the NCAA showed that UT's graduation rates have ranged from poor to average. When the NCAA first released graduation rates five years ago, reflecting the freshmen who enrolled in 1982-83, the men's athletic department at UT had a 38 percent graduation rate.

The NCAA recently tabulated rates for the class that entered college in 1987-88, finding that the UT men's department had improved its graduation rate to 43 percent. Combined with the women's department's 77 percent, UT had an overall graduation rate of 52 percent for student athletes, which ranked 64th in the country out of the NCAA's 103 major programs.

Yet the 1993 football team's GPA and SAT scores out of high school rival those of traditional academic schools such as Rice, Stanford and Northwestern.

The analysis was done on the freshmen entering in 1990-91, 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94. Two classes were recruited by former football coach David McWilliams, and two were signed by current coach John Mackovic. The GPA was an average of grades in college-preparatory courses in math, natural sciences, social sciences and English.

The data showed:

The UT football team has a combined GPA of 3.07, the fifth best in the country behind Stanford (3.5), Rice (3.38), Northwestern (3.23) and Duke (3.08). The average GPA for football players at all Division I-A schools was 2.68. Texas A&M, the Longhorns' rival, had a GPA of 2.81.

The average SAT score on the team was 873, the 17th best in the country. The average SAT score for football players at all Division I-A schools was 850. Texas A&M's combined SAT was 830.

Of the schools that will form the Big 12 Conference, starting in 1996, UT is No. 1 in both GPA and SAT scores.

The four recruiting classes between 1990 and 1993 featured some of the top high school prospects in the country. Of the 18 first-year players last fall, half were honor graduates at their high schools. And this same group, according to most national recruiting services, was ranked in the nation's top 10 for its athletic talents.

"I think that says we're going to win some games perhaps other teams might not," Mackovic said. "I think you'll find that the best football teams tend to be a little brighter."

So far, the better grades haven't translated into more wins. UT hasn't won the Southwest Conference since 1990, and under Mackovic, Texas has posted a 11-10-1 record. However, the Longhorns are overwhelming favorites to win the conference this fall, and early polls have ranked Texas as high as No. 9 in the country.

But the grades, perhaps, are more important than recent wins in these days of increasing academic reform. Proposed NCAA academic standards will force the best football teams to become brighter.

In 1986, the NCAA instituted tougher academic requirements, known as Proposition 48. Under that rule, athletes must average at least a 2.0 in 11 college-preparatory classes and score a minimum of 700 on the SAT or 17 on the American College Test to sign with a Division I school and become eligible to accept financial aid their freshman year. Schools still can sign athletes who did not qualify, but those athletes cannot play or practice with the team their freshman year, nor can they receive financial aid from the athletic departments.

Tougher standards are set to go into effect in August 1995, although there is an increasing split between university presidents and coaches on whether to keep the higher requirements.

Under the upcoming Proposition 16 rules, a sliding scale would force an athlete with a 2.0 GPA to score 900 on the SAT or 21 on the ACT. An athlete next year would have to maintain a 2.5 GPA to accept a scholarship with a 700 on the SAT or a 17 on the ACT. An athlete also would have to pass at least 13 core classes.

Texas has consistently voted to stiffen requirements.

"We voted for Proposition 16," said DeLoss Dodds, Texas men's athletic director. "We want kids to come in and be ready to be here. We want them to have very strong academic standards."

Thomas Hearn, president of Wake Forest University and a former member of the Presidents' Commission that initiated these reforms, believes athletes will not have a problem meeting tougher requirements.

A recent study, however, by the NCAA's Special Committee to Review Initial-Eligibility Standards, projected that 72.2 percent of black student athletes would be ineligible under Proposition 16.

"Every time we have talked about raising standards, we have seen this hysterical reaction," Hearn said. "We have seen that with the passing of Prop 48 that graduation rates are going up. More studies are showing that more athletes are qualifying."

RESTRAINTS: Children up to 2 must be in safety seats younger. Anyone 15 years or older receives a citation for failing to wear a seat belt and is fined.

Bogart said the city has about a 60-70 percent child restraint compliance, depending on what survey is used.

He said a state survey was conducted within the past year with state officials sitting on different streets and writing down whether a child was restrained or not restrained in passing cars. The problem with the survey is that small children cannot be seen.

"Our officers do the same survey but park outside of day-care centers to see if parents are complying with the law," he said.

"You can pretty well tell if they are putting a child in a seat or belt when they are getting in the car. It's a pretty accurate way of measuring compliance."

Midland has one of the highest seat belt compliance percentages in the state, according to the same state survey, with 88 percent of Midland's residents buckling up.

"Last year, we had pretty low compliance, so we implemented the Occupant STEP Program, where we targeted residents not wearing seat belts," he said. "It lasted through the summer months last year and resulted in a higher compliance. However, that will probably only last a couple of years, and then people will start getting lazy again."

Jackpot climbs to $10 million

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 1, 20, 27, 37, 47, and 49.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $10 million.

Report: Police withheld slaying information

PASADENA (AP) — Police in a Houston suburb withheld information about the fatal shooting of a police officer three years ago, distorting the public perception of the case, a newspaper has reported.

On July 11, 1991, Marvin William Harris, 40, killed himself with a single shot to the face from a high-powered rifle, officials said.

The gun was the same weapon Harris used the day before to shoot Pasadena police officer Jeff Ginn, 29, in the head and chest at close range, authorities said.

The Houston Chronicle reports in its Sunday editions that it has obtained never-disclosed Pasadena police files that show:

- The marijuana police claimed Harris was burning in his back yard, causing Ginn to stop at his house in the first place, did not exist. No traces if narcotics ever were found in Harris' home, yard or body.
- Harris did not emerge from his house firing at Ginn as the officer approached, as police reported.
- Initial reports that Ginn never had the opportunity to defend himself were found to be wrong the next day but were not corrected by police.

Vermont inmate offers to die in place of condemned Texas man

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals refused Saturday to block an Aug. 2 execution for death row inmate Robert Drew, whose cry of innocence has received unusual support from a convicted murderer in Vermont, Drew's attorney said.

The ruling was 5-4, according to a news release from the New York offices of Kunstler and Kuby.

The action could not immediately be confirmed Saturday afternoon. There was no answer at the appeals court, and prison spokesman David Nunnellee said no immediate word of the order had reached state prison officials Saturday.

The Texas attorney general's office said it doesn't get involved until the case reaches the federal level, said spokesman Ron Dusek.

Drew's attorneys say they plan further appeals. And if they're upheld, Drew has a standing offer to relinquish his spot to Doug S. Mason II.

Mason wrote a letter to Drew's lawyers from his prison cell in Swanton, Vt., offering himself to the executioner instead of Drew, a Vermont native.

"I'm willing to go in his place and give them a show of death, plus I'm spiritually connected more than flesh," wrote Mason, who is serving 15 to 30 years for murder. "Please do not think of this as crazy . . . "

Mason said his offer is "serious and sincere THIS IS NO JOKE, for Life and Death is NOTHING TO JOKE ABOUT!"

Drew's lawyers faxed it to the news media. It is just one more wrinkle in the case against Drew, whose death warrant was signed with a smiley face.

Drew was convicted in the 1983 stabbing death of 17-year-old Jeffrey Mays. He and Ernest Puralewski hitched a ride with the Alabama teen in exchange for gas money, then stabbed Mays when they arrived in Harris County.

Puralewski got a life sentence in exchange for testifying against Drew, but recanted his story about Drew's role 101 days after Drew was sentenced to death.

But it could not be considered during appeals because Texas law says new evidence must be presented within 30 days of sentencing. That decision outraged Vermont officials who oppose the death penalty.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals decided that the face, which appeared on documents in the case since 1988, did not violate Drew's constitutional rights. The federal courts agreed.

Book deal could affect key witness' credibility in two trials

DALLAS (AP) — The policeman who headed the investigation of a woman accused of arranging the murder of her husband's mistress may have lost his credibility in two court cases because of a newly discovered book deal.

A court motion and a legal expert on Friday challenged the contract signed by former Richardson police investigator Morris McGowan, saying it could impact the upcoming trial of Joy Aylor and the case of convicted hit man George Anderson Hopper.

An attorney for Hopper filed a motion with the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin seeking a new trial.

Hopper was sentenced to death by a Dallas jury in March 1992 for the 1983 murder of Rozanne Gailiunas, who was believed to be the mistress of Larry Aylor.

M. Michael Sharlot, acting dean of the University of Texas law school and a noted author and expert on criminal law matters, said the payments to McGowan could be "dynamite" in Hopper's case.

McGowan was the key witness against Hopper and he secured his confession, which was contested by defense attorneys.

The appellate motion says McGowan had a letter of agreement with Dallas author Carlton Stowers to get money from a book and movie rights at the time of Hopper's trial.

McGowan eventually got about $100,000 from it, documents show.

Defense attorney Peter Lesser filed an affidavit saying McGowan didn't tell prosecutor Kevin Chapman before or during the Hopper trial about the money. Chapman found out about it and had it confirmed by McGowan in mid-July, according to the document.

McGowan, now a fraud investigator for MCI, declined to comment on the book deal.

"I just don't want to do anything at this particular point on my behalf to influence that particular trial," he said.

Ms. Aylor goes on trial Monday for the alleged murder-for-hire scheme. An assistant prosecutor says he doesn't believe the new information will affect Ms. Aylor's case because it doesn't rely heavily on McGowan.

State District Judge Pat McDowell has ruled that prosecutors cannot present evidence that Ms. Aylor also arranged for a 1986 attempt on the life of her husband.

During a Friday pretrial hearing, McDowell denied a defense motion that would have kept out other evidence about Ms. Aylor's reported actions after the 1983 killing.

The entire saga — which lasted more than a decade through several countries while Ms. Aylor was a fugitive — has been the subject of a television miniseries and two books.

Fort Hood unit mobilizes to battle fires

FORT HOOD (AP) — A 500-member battalion of the 1st Cavalry Division has been mobilized to help fight wildfires sweeping an Idaho forest, officials said Saturday.

The National Interagency Fire Center has dispatched a training team to Fort Hood to prepare the battalion for deployment in the Boise National Forest on Wednesday, a First Cavalry spokesman said.

Another battalion of 500 troops from the First Cavalry has been alerted to stand by in case further reinforcements are needed, the spokesman said.

Two Marine Corps battalions from the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force at Camp Pendleton, Calif., have already been deployed to help fight fires in the Wenatchee National Forest in Washington.

All told, firefighters Friday were still battling 25 major fires in eight western states and British Columbia that had burned about 150,000 acres, said fire center spokeswoman Charlene Browning.

Error lets man plead guilty to lesser charge

BURNET (AP) — A man on trial for murder has pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of manslaughter because a key phrase was omitted from the murder indictment, making that charge invalid.

The trial of Curtis Ray Holloway, 41, ended abruptly Thursday when prosecutors noticed the phrase "intentionally and knowingly" was left off the indictment.

Holloway, accused of beating a man to death with a hammer, could have received a life sentence had he been convicted on the murder charge.

Burnet County District Attorney Sam Oatman noticed the mistake after three days of jury selection and several hours of testimony. He told the judge, the jury was dismissed, and by Thursday afternoon, Oatman and the defense had agreed to a plea bargain.

Holloway pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the killing of James R. Holley, 44, of Burnet and was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Holloway was accused of beating Holley and stuffing his body in a closet in Holley's home in July 1992. Holloway had been staying in the house for about a month. Holley had befriended Holloway after picking him up hitchhiking.

SSC's demise drains water district

By Linda Leavell
Associated Press

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — Steve Sievers supervises the agency that provides water to many rural Ellis County customers.

He's drowning.

Sievers, general manager of the Buena Vista-Bethel Special Utility District, says the district lost 30 percent in revenue as the state bought the water users' land to make way for the super collider. Now, the massive physics project has been canceled, but Sievers still faces expenses and a large debt.

The net result: a $55,000 loss so far this year, with the district operating at a deficit of about $9,000 per month. Sievers estimates that revenues must be $30,000 monthly to break even.

Department of Energy officials have shown polite concern about his predicament, but can offer little more, he said.

"Every entity that we have talked with acknowledges the problem, they understand the problem — it's very simple to see. They don't offer any solutions," said Don Walker, president of the district's board of directors.

The utility district was once prosperous — so much so that it took a $1.78 million loan from the Farmers Home Administration for systemwide improvements that were completed in 1988. Shortly thereafter, the state began buying what ultimately became one-fourth of the district's land.

"It was a disaster at first until we tried to work with the Department of Energy and the state of Texas. Eventually, the collider began buying water off of us for construction," Sievers said. "It never met the point of where it replaced our supply of lost revenue, but it was growing."

The initial loss was $10,000 per month, although the collider project began making up some of the difference. The collider even put in $1.1 million to help the district upgrade its fire protection ability, Sievers said.

Congress canceled the collider in October. Since then, Sievers and the board members have been trying to figure out how to stem the financial hemorrhaging.

Almost $100,000 in reserve funds is gone; $10,994 monthly loan payments are due to the FmHA; even the collider-financed improvements require another employee plus maintenance.

"We're just waiting on some word from somebody on what direction to take on this," Sievers said. "We're trying to meet our obligations. Fortunately, before the collider, we did have some reserve money. That's basically carried us to this point."

M.J. "Mayo" Pena, state director at large of the FmHA-Rural Development Administration, said his agency has contacted Energy Department officials, hoping they will offer the district some financial compensation. The FmHA also may be able to negotiate some assistance on the loan, Pena said.

State investigates shelter for wild animals

HOUSTON (AP) — The state is investigating allegations of unlicensed care and possible abuse by a group that rescues injured wild animals.

The focus of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's probe into the Texas Wildlife Rehabilitation Coalition is the group's shelter, a makeshift sanctuary in a Houston shopping mall, and its director, Vivian Steele.

Wildlife department officials are concerned that, among other problems, Ms. Steele may have delivered hundreds of sick birds and small animals to unlicensed volunteers, and then falsified state records about such transfers.

In a letter outlining the probe, officials also contend that because of untrained and unlicensed staff at the shelter, "incorrect diagnosis and treatment was resulting," The Houston Post reported Saturday.

Ms. Steele, who has managed the shelter since it opened in 1992, denied any serious violations, saying most of the trouble stems from her distaste for battling the paperwork and government rules in getting permits.

A state permit is required to legally handle and care for a stray or injured wild animal. A separate federal license is needed to treat migratory birds.

Ms. Steele also blamed the controversy on politics within Houston's animal-rights community.

"We're caring people. And I don't think they have the right to try and destroy our little shelter," she said.

Officials also are checking allegations of inhumane mercy-killing at the shelter, as outlined in a 1993 report from the Houston Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The SPCA said it received accounts from former shelter workers that some birds allegedly had their necks broken by human hand on a regular basis. The SPCA also described an incident in which a heron allegedly was killed by slamming a car trunk on its neck.

Ms. Steel said she and other volunteers do break necks of some small songbirds, but only if they are received when no veterinarian is available and are in extreme pain.

But she vehemently denied the alleged heron-slamming incident.

State officials stressed that the charges of improper euthanasia would only play a minor part in their investigation. The real question, they said, was whether Ms. Steele violated permit rules.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Students sometimes tell Midland College success stories best

By Elise Coombes

Coombes

At Midland College we spend a lot of time trying to tell our success stories, but sometimes our students say it the best. The following "thank you" letter to college President David Daniel tells what education is about at Midland College:

Dear Dr. Daniel:

In May 1994, I received a finance degree at the age of 50. A good portion of my academic work was accomplished at Midland College, and I am grateful that such outstanding faculty and facilities are available in our community. I chose to take as many classes as possible from Midland College because it is closer, it is less costly, and the credits readily transfer.

I've been pleased with every teacher that I've had at Midland College, all of whom have gone as far as possible to provide "useable" education rather than just a passing grade. I know other students who credit their teachers with providing the foundation that lead to further academic success.

Yours truly,
Joel D. McElrath

Success stories begin with registering for classes, and early fall registration begins Monday and continues through Aug. 11. In less than an hour, returning and transfer students can fill out an application, see a counselor if necessary, register for classes and get parking stickers and student I.D. cards made — all more than two weeks ahead of regular fall registration Aug. 24 and Aug. 25.

Students eligible to register during this time include any person who has enrolled before at Midland College, whether he or she took the class five years ago or this summer. Students who enrolled in concurrent classes at Midland College through their high school also may register early.

Students transferring to Midland College may register early as long as they have college transcripts and Texas Academic Skills Placement (TASP) test scores in hand.

Those transfer students without transcripts may have registration delayed until the transcripts are received.

Registrar Don Cates reminds students that TASP is state-required, and students must take the test before completing nine semester hours.

Some students may need to complete the testing required for math and English courses and to comply with TASP. Testing will be Monday through August 11; Mondays, 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Tuesdays-Thursday 8 a.m.to 5 p.m.

Early registration is 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Aug. 4 and Aug. 8 through Aug. 11. Time permits for students who plan to enroll during regular fall registration will be issued August 15-19 and August 22-23. For more information on early and regular fall registration, call 685-4501 or visit the Student Services Office in the Midland College Student Center.

Many Midland College employees are active in state and national organizations, and the latest employee to serve in a leadership position in a state group is Mary Lou Blakeney, personnel director.

She was recently elected vice president of the Texas Association of Community College Human Resource Professionals (TACCHRP). She is one of the few women to hold an executive position in the organization.

As vice president, she will be in charge of the programs the group presents at its twice-yearly meetings. TACCHRP's purpose is to keep its members informed about the constant changes in benefits, including insurance and retirement plans, and personnel. The organization gives members a forum to share ideas and gives members a chance to have more input in legislative matters.

Staff Report

Two classes at Midland College this fall will give students a chance to explore the field of social work.

Introduction to Social Work and Social Welfare as a Social Institution are being offered this fall with instructors who are practicing social workers in the Midland-Odessa area, said Will Morris, division chair of Social and Behavioral Sciences.

"Introduction to Social Work is a course students should take to find out if this is what they really want to do," Morris said.

The courses are particularly valuable for students with an interest in psychology or sociology, he said. Course work includes studying the philosophy and practice of social work and studying the major divisions and types of social work with their methods and objectives.

Introduction to Social Work or Social Welfare/Social Institution are offered Tuesday and Thursday nights. Students who need information about the classes may contact Morris at 685-4641.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

Patrons can now use library's three new exterior book drops

Sandra Wegner

For more than 30 years, library users have been returning books through a drive-by book drop in the west wall of the downtown library.

But no more.

Three new stainless steel outside book drops — standing at the southwest corner of the Rosalind Redfern Building, 301 W. Missouri Ave. — are now in operation.

Use of the new book drops, which were purchased by the Friends of the Library, will result in more useable space within the building and a more secure building. At least one library fire in Texas in recent years has been blamed on vandalism and an outside wall book drop.

Our new book drops are not sitting in the prettiest spot on the library lot; in fact, they are next to the trash bin. There is a certain amount of danger in this, but there was no other possible site that would allow books to be put in the drop on the driver's side or that the staff wouldn't ask for hiking pay to get to.

Our new book drops lock when they are full so no one can stuff overflow materials in and risk their being removed by the wrong people.

The library policy has always been that no compact discs, cassettes, videos or other non-book materials may be put in book drops. Non-book items run a high risk in being damaged by books dropped on them. Book drops are also likely to get very warm, and the library already has plenty of evidence of what heat can do to plastics.

Folks continue to leave cassettes, etc., in their hot cars and the result is not pretty. Please do not risk library materials or your money by putting non-book items in the book drops.

Saturday is the last day for children participating in the summer reading program to get their certificates. These look great on bulletin boards, refrigerator doors or in scrapbooks. After "who read how much" is tallied, the top 10 readers get tickets for two free prizes. Thank you, Little Ceasars! The next top 10 readers win posters. Over 900 children signed up for summer fun.

The downtown library will resume winter hours, August 22. That means the library will be open 9 a.m.-9 p.m., Monday-Thursday, and 9 a.m.-6 p.m., Friday and Saturday. Until August 22, the downtown library is open until 9 p.m. only on Monday nights. Tuesday through Saturday, closing time is at 6 p.m. Hours for Centennial Branch Library at Midland Park Mall do not change during summer.

* * *

Mark your calendars now. The Friends of the Library annual book sale will be October 13-16. If you have books to donate, the Friends will be having a special book drive August 29-Sept. 2.

Ten thousand dollars is a lot of money, especially if earned 10 cents at a time. That's how many used magazines have been sold in the library foyer since spring of 1991 by the Friends of the Library. You donated the magazines and you bought them. With the money, the Friends have bought a wide variety of items for the library: book carts, computer, typewriter, cabinet, printer, sturdy rolling cart to hold the meeting room's giant-screen TV, projection screen for the meeting room and numerous special items for children's programming or summer reading programs.

The library staff is grateful to the donors and buyers and especially Friends' volunteer Ed Gorence who spends a lot of time keeping the sales area in order. Right now the sales rack is blessed with an abundance of National Geographics.

These would be great for classroom use, teachers.

Cookery! How many times have you used that word in general conversation lately? Library catalogers use it all the time because that is the most common subject heading for cookbooks. The library's computer catalog lists over 260 different subject headings beginning with the word cookery.

The catalog indicates area or ethnic cookbooks (Cookery, African or Cookery, American Kentucky), food type cookbooks (Cookery, Beef or Cookery, Tofu) or limited purpose cookbooks (Cookery for one or Cookery for Allergics.)

Wiley coyotes pursue exotic animals

HARLINGEN (AP) — Exotic animals such as Turkin hens and angorra goats have become favorite meals for coyotes in Cameron County.

Bill Verbout says coyotes kill about 100 of the Turkin hens each year on his 30-acre exotic animal ranch in Le Feria. They've also taken out two fainting goats and two angorra goats.

And while Verbout says he's killed a handful of the wiley coyotes, he says he's learned to respect them.

"They're about the smartest animal there is," Verbout said, adding that they can scale 6-foot fences and "they can smell a gun."

David Trevio, a trapper for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said he's known of coyotes that will get through fences by digging under traps without setting them off.

But Verbout hopes the predators haven't figured out electricity. His prize emus, all 23 of them, live behind a 6-foot fence, and another electrified one.

A breeding pair of emus costs about $15,000, and could be worth as much as $26,000 by next year if the coyotes don't get them.

BRYAN (AP) — While William Mobley prepares to give up the Texas A&M chancellor's office for a return to teaching, the man ready to replace him faces a protest by the faculty senate.

But members of the Board of Regents say they're happy with interim chancellor Barry Thompson and they plan to ignore the staff's request to consider other candidates.

"I certainly don't have any thoughts about rescinding what we did," said Mary Nan West, chairwoman of the regents.

Thompson, the former president of West Texas A&M University, became interim chancellor on July 22. He must wait at least two more weeks before the title becomes permanent.

"We need somebody now, and I think he's perfect for the job today," said regent John Lindsay of Houston.

But on Wednesday the faculty senate's executive committee released a statement asking regents "to rescind their announced intention to name a permanent TAMUS chancellor without the benefit of a legitimate search."

The group wrote regents in June asking for a national search with faculty input.

"The chancellor is an extension of the board. It doesn't have any interest down in the bowels of the faculty," said regent Billy Clayton.

Although the faculty senates of the other six universities in the A&M System have not joined the protest, the president of the main campus' staffers group insists their voice should be heard.

"We do feel it's important to have faculty input into the choice of a chancellor," Mark Weichold said. "The chancellor does set the tone for the system and the system schools, and that does affect the faculty."

Thompson takes office Monday, and the state Legislative Budget Board will be on campus for initial budget negotiations Aug. 18.

West Texas man reminisces about his real cowboy days

By Michelle Elizardo
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

EARTH — For years cowboys have been glorified as gunslingers and lonesome wanderers. But John Murrell, 83, says his life as a West Texas cowboy wasn't like that at all.

Murrell — who worked at the sprawling Mashed O Ranch from 1929 until it was sold in 1973 — says he never slung a gun as a cowboy. But he did round up plenty of cattle and cook his share of steaks over an open fire.

He started out as a cook at the ranch, which spanned 181,000 acres in Bailey and Lamb counties. And in the years that followed, he worked his way up to ranch manager.

The ranch, owned by Amherst founder W.E. Halsell, was once a part of the former XIT Ranch.

Sitting in his Earth home — the walls covered in cowboy photos and ranching artifacts such as whips, chaps and branding irons — Murrell reminisces about his cowboy days.

He speaks of driving the chuck wagon during three-month roundups that took him hundreds of miles from home three or four times a year. During those trips, the cowboys would run the cattle, brand them and sometimes have to wean the calves.

One year, Murrell says, they were out from spring until fall. "That was a long summer."

At the ranch, cowboys usually had their own section of land to tend. They would ride through the pastures, checking the windmills and making sure the cattle had plenty of water. They also doctored the animals when needed.

'The winters were a lot worse then than it is now — if you didn't have chaps, you'd freeze.'

— John Murrell

They worked hard despite sometimes brutal weather.

"The winters were a lot worse then than it is now — if you didn't have chaps, you'd freeze. In '32, I pretty near froze my legs pinning calves west of Muleshoe," Murrell says, standing in front of his frayed, green chaps that now hang on his wall.

The cowboys lived on the ranch and stayed in bunkhouses, Murrell says. But it wasn't much fun, he says, because they had rules and regulations to follow there.

They had to be at the pasture they were working before dawn. "You went to bed early 'cause you'd have to get up early," Murrell says.

So early, he says, "for years, I ate breakfast in the dark."

As Murrell sits on his coffee table surrounded by his pictures and old articles of himself and the ranch, he says the years at the ranch were different than they are now.

Julie Cole, Midland High School PTA president, Susan Norris, MHS PTA treasurer, Susan Duffey, Goddard PTA president, and Judy Canon, San Jacinto PTA president, recently attended the Texas PTA's 1994 Summer Leadership Seminar at the University of Texas.

They were among more than 2,000 PTA leaders from across the state who attended some of the 125 workshops on leadership, parenting in the 1990's and issues affecting children today. Workshop topics presented included legislative issues, site-based decision making, TAAS testing and PTA leadership skills.

MHS, Goddard, and San Jacinto PTAs are affiliated with Texas PTA, the largest child advocacy organization in the state.

Ray and Dely Garcia of Midland will welcome a new "son" next month: Karol Hricisak, a Youth For Understanding (YFU) International Exchange student from Slovakia.

Hricisak, who will be a student at Midland High School, will live with the Garcia family for an academic year and will participate in all family activities, from vacations to household chores. While sharing the culture of Slovakia with his host family and schoolmates, he will learn about U.S. culture.

More information about hosting YFU international students is available from YFU's volunteer for the Midland area, Jimmy A. and Ann Hicks at 694-3533 or by calling YFU's regional office at 1-800-USA-0200.

Because of increased flooding in Georgia and Florida, it is necessary to locate new host families for 21 exchange students originally placed in these areas.

International Student Exchange, Inc., (ISE), is presently seeking host families for students from a number of different countries. Students between ages 15 and 18 are carefully screened by ISE for suitability. They bring their own spending money and are covered by health insurance.

While living with you, a student attends the local high school and is expected to bear his or her share of household responsibilities. The length of stay can range from six months to a full year, depending on your wishes. An ISE representative will help you select a student from student applications, which include family photos and biographical essays.

For more information on these excellent students, please contact ISE (International Student Exchange Inc.) at 1-800-233-4678.

It's time to strike up the band for Lee High School students. LHS students enrolled in the band program are required to attend summer band.

So grab your band instruments — the summer band program begins 8 a.m. Monday at LHS. The program will last 11 days; some are half days and some are full days of practice.

The purpose of summer band is to prepare students for the upcoming football season and marching contests. Students learn and review marching fundamentals, basic playing skills, discipline, commitment and esprit de corps. Special orientation concerning Lee Rebel Band traditions and procedures is given to sophomores and new students.

Each sophomore or new student is assigned a senior as "big brother" or "big sister." The purpose is to help new band members know what is expected of them and to help them feel welcome in the band program.

During the second week of summer band, 10 different groups or platoons are appointed. Officers of each group create a marching show that will be presented at a picnic. Ex-band members serve as judges, and the winning group will then receive a dinner from the booster club.

Calling all high school students: registration time is here.

Rebel muster for Lee High School seniors is set for 8 a.m.-1 p.m. Tuesday, 8 a.m.-2 p.m. Wednesday for juniors and 8 a.m.-2 p.m. Thursday. School pictures will be taken for underclassmen, and yearbook fees will be accepted. Yearbook signing night is set for Aug. 13.

Midland High School's "Dawg Days of Summer" registration is set for 8:40 a.m. to noon Aug. 9 for seniors, Aug. 10 for juniors and Aug. 11 for sophomores. Drug testing will be offered for students interested in participating in the D-FY-IT (Drug Free Youth in Texas) program.

A regular bus schedule will operate to take students to MHS at 8:30 a.m. and return them home at 10:30 a.m.

Freshman Rebel Muster is to be Thursday in the Lee Freshman High School cafeteria. Students will have their pictures made; they may purchase picture packages, receive I.D. cards, receive locker assignments, receive class schedules, purchase yearbook and student directory, pay art fees and get free immunizations.

The schedule is, according to first letter of last name:

- A-H: 8 a.m.-10 a.m.
- I-Q: 10 a.m.-noon
- R-Z: 1 p.m.-3 p.m.

Tax credit plan is worth considering

A recommendation for tax credits on marginal wells presented to Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary by representatives for the National Petroleum Council is certainly worthy of strong consideration by the Clinton administration. After years of declining oil prices and lackluster oil patch activity, the domestic oil industry needs the boost it could get from such a program were it carried out in proper fashion.

Under the proposal presented by the petroleum council, the tax credit would provide marginal well operators a certain dollar amount per barrel of oil if the average price of oil fell below a certain amount. The "safety net" provided through the tax credit potentially could prevent the abandonment of 50,000 marginal wells and provide price stability for the segment of the oil industry that accounts for nearly one-quarter of domestic oil production.

While the tax credit could mean the difference between numerous marginal wells being abandoned or kept producing, the level at which the credit kicks in would be critical. Oil industry spokesmen have indicated that a credit which kicked in when the price of oil dropped below $20 would be worthwhile for the industry. If the tax credit were to kick in at lower levels, the credit would come too late to help oil operators stay in business.

The point of the proposal by the National Petroleum Council is to prevent the abandonment of wells that may be needed for this nation's energy security. With that in mind, administration officials should seriously consider this proposal.

The domestic oil industry is desperately in need of tax relief. In Texas, the Railroad Commission is close to proposing a package of tax incentives to the Texas Legislature, according to Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers. Earlier, the Railroad Commission recommended a tax incentive for inactive wells to the Texas Legislature, which was enacted and added nearly $700 million to the economy, she said.

It's time for government to step in even more to shore up an industry vital to this nation's security.

O.J.'s case shows race has no place in courtroom

The O.J. Simpson case has taken a nasty turn. It was already a bad situation with the nature of the crime and the circus atmosphere following Simpson being charged, but now race has been brought into it.

Although we are realistic enough to know that the justice system in this country is not blind as it should be, the ugliness of racial problems are too often injected into situations where it is not appropriate.

In O.J.'s case, we believe his celebrity status is causing a furor over his innocence, rather than the fact he is black and that he had been married to a white woman whom he is accused of killing along with a white man. . . .

We're never going to make progress in this country when discussions revolve around race. Let's get beyond this and look at people as humans. Forget the color of skin.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On July 31, 1777, the Marquis de Lafayette, a 19-year-old French nobleman, was made a major general in the Continental Army after offering his help to the rebelling American colonists.

On this date:

In 1556, St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus — the Jesuit order of Catholic priests and brothers — died in Rome.

In 1948, President Truman helped dedicate New York International Airport at Idlewild Field. (The airport was later renamed John F. Kennedy International Airport.)

In 1991, President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev signed the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty in Moscow.

Ten years ago: The U.S. men's gymnastics team won the team gold medal at the Los Angeles Summer Olympics in a major upset over the Chinese that included perfect performances by Mitch Gaylord, Bart Conner and Tim Daggett.

Five years ago: A pro-Iranian group in Lebanon released a grisly videotape purportedly showing the body of American hostage William R. Higgins dangling from a rope, a day after his kidnappers threatened to kill him.

One year ago: A U.S.-brokered truce halted Israel's weeklong military offensive in southern Lebanon, launched in retaliation for guerrilla attacks that killed seven Israeli troops. Belgium's King Baudouin I died at age 62; he was succeeded by his brother, Prince Albert.

House bill paves highways with pork

Anderson

Come this November, Doolittle may have something else to brag about back home: $2 million in federal highway funds to help build a "loop" around a heavily congested area of Lake Tahoe, Calif. Doolittle's project is hardly unique. It's just another drop of pork in a lard-bucket of a highway bill recently approved by the House of Representatives.

Despite partisan strife on health care and crime, House lawmakers are forging rare consensus by dividing up the spoils of public works projects. For a conservative like Doolittle, winning money for his highway loop was as simple as writing a letter. "We didn't have to do any arm-twisting or anything," a Doolittle staffer told us. "They (Public Works Committee staffers) said they were accepting applications. All we needed to do was write a letter and present it. We got (the project) and it amazes me."

This year was supposed to herald a new era for this kind of public works spending. It's the year that Vice President Al Gore promised to "reinvent government," which included a pledge to end the wasteful practice of loading up highway bills with "demonstration projects" to placate politicians. Now it's gut-check time for the reinventing-government crowd.

The House and Senate versions of the highway bill could hardly be more different. The Senate bill to designate the National Highway System is literally three pages long and adds no new spending.

But the House literally took the low road. Its version of the highway bill is 176 pages long, most of it laced with line-item requests by members for special favors and "must-need" projects. Rep. Norm Mineta, D-Calif., chairman of the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation, boasts about producing a bill that trimmed a list of more than 900 requests totaling more than $30 billion to a mere 283 projects. But demonstration projects will still cost taxpayers $1.5 billion if the House version stays intact. The two sides will iron out their differences in conference.

Senate public works chairman Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., controls the fate of the highway bill in the Senate and vowed to us that there will not be a National Highway System bill this year unless all the demonstration projects are taken out. "Essentially we've got to put a stop to all this pork barrel," Baucus told our associate Andrew Conte. "Some members of Congress want to spend dollars in their districts regardless of the merit and regardless of the deficit."

Though the results are the same, pork barrel spending on public works is operating under an assumed identity this year. With demonstration projects getting a bad name, these projects have now been euphemistically labeled "high priority congressional projects." So what do our elected representatives consider "high priority" for the coming year? Here is a partial list:

■ Retiring Minority Leader Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., received $2 million for the Peoria Heartland Riverfront Project complete with restaurants, shops and festival sites.

Conservatives need lesson from Goldwater

BEAUMONT — Political conservatives would do well to listen to one of the founders of the modern American conservative movement.

Barry Goldwater, age 85, is trying to wrench the Republican Party back to a truer definition of conservatism and away from the moralistic preaching of those who have captured the souls of many in the party.

While Goldwater has made surprising pronouncements before, his current crusade is protection of gays and lesbians from job discrimination.

In a recent commentary published in The Washington Post, Goldwater pointed out that several Fortune 500 companies already have adopted policies banning discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. On the flip side, he called attention to the fact that a national restaurant chain has "adopted a policy of blatant discrimination against employees suspected of being gay."

Why, he asks, would anyone tolerate policies promoting discrimination against gays or African-Americans, Latinos or women?

Goldwater, the former Republican senator from Arizona and the 1964 GOP presidential nominee, takes appropriate notice of those who will use his views on gays and lesbians as a wedge to further divide conservatives and liberals.

"I am a conservative Republican, but I believe in democracy and the separation of church and state," Goldwater writes.

Then he goes right to the heart of the matter. "The conservative movement is founded on the simple tenet that people have the right to live life as they please, as long as they don't hurt anyone else in the process," writes Goldwater.

"No one has ever shown me how being gay or lesbian harms anyone else. Even the 1992 Republican platform affirms the principle that 'bigotry has no place in our society.'"

Goldwater extols his pride in his party's stance for "individual rights and liberties. The positive role of limited government has always been the defense of these fundamental principles."

"The radical right has nearly ruined our party. Its members do not care about the Constitution and they are the ones making all the noise," he writes.

Imagine that.

Barry Goldwater, the man whose enemies once pilloried him as the embodiment of the radical right — the man who many feared as a heartless war monger — now is leveling well-aimed salvos at the newest incarnation of his party's right-wing fringe.

Goldwater's view of political conservatism stands the test of time. It is an ideology that keeps government out of as many aspects of people's lives as possible.

Many neo-conservatives suggest that Goldwater's ideas are obsolete. They suggest the conservative movement has grown past the "simple tenet" of Goldwater's time.

But the religious right, headed by people such as Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson, has perverted Goldwater's conservatism. They claim the conservative mantle, but then suggest that government has the right — if not the duty — to impose laws that discriminate against people because of what they do in the most private areas of their lives.

The fear mongers have scored victories in numerous states, winning approval of a statewide anti-gay initiative in Colorado. In Oregon, denied a statewide victory for a similar measure, religious right activists are marching community-by-community throughout the state preaching the message of bigotry and fear. Voters in some places are enacting municipal ordinances that discriminate on the basis of people's sexual orientation.

Is this what has become of conservative thought in this country? Is it all right to espouse "conservative values" while insisting that government's heavy hand bludgeon us with moralistic mandates?

Goldwater's plea has had an impact because it comes not from a fuzzy-headed liberal, but from a true-blue, old-school conservative.

"It's time America realized that there was no gay exemption in the right to 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness' in the Declaration of Independence," writes Goldwater.

"Job discrimination against gays — or anybody else — is contrary to each of these founding principles."

Health care grows more confusing everyday

A noble sense of public duty to dilate wisely on the great health-care battle is at war within me against the shameful suspicion that I haven't the faintest notion what it's all about.

Baker

Suspicion is about all that's left in me anymore about the health-care matter. I suspect that many, if not most, members of Congress are equally baffled.

I suspect this doesn't much matter, since whatever Congress does will be the product of a small circle of insiders, with the rest going along in befuddlement under pressure of the astounding amount of money the lobbies have flung into the battle.

There is too much "I" and "me" here, but how else to get to something vital that rests so heavily on pure suspicion? My suspicion is that if I haven't the faintest notion what it's all about, neither does most of the rest of the populace.

This is not meant as a boast. To the contrary, it is an admission of the sad fact that my job requires devoting a lot of time trying to keep up with life "inside the Beltway."

If steady devotion to that drab chore leaves the faithful student baffled about what's going on, it seems probable that the greater public, too wise to waste so much time on such dim stuff, must be equally mystified.

A few points are obvious. One is that the Clintons have roused the opposition of one of the most formidable coalitions of moneyed power since the PAC's, the so-called "political action committees," replaced political parties as instruments for electing and controlling Congress.

So we see the tawdry spectacle of the PAC's taking charge on a great national issue.

The collapsed party is the Democrats'. The Republican Party seems as unified as ever, but it is an illusory unity. In the health-care battle, the PAC's are out to break a Democratic president, which gives them common cause with Republicans.

Since President Reagan, the Republicans spiritually have become a party of opposition, even when they control the presidency. Health care simply doesn't test their famous party muscle against the power of big PAC's like the insurance and drug industries' and the medical lobby.

The PAC's, of course, have been blessed in having Clinton as their opponent. He is the most flexible of presidents, and when he chose to make health care the great issue of the age he picked an issue that needed a president with Woodrow Wilson's stubborn iron if there was to be any chance of prevailing.

Had he committed himself to all-out combat from the outset, he might have backed something like the Canadian single-payer plan.

Why the single-payer plan was dismissed out of hand is a question for historians. Perhaps it was Clintonian flexibility.

It must have been obvious from the start that the insurance industry would be a mighty opponent, yet the original Clinton plan began by handing the insurance industry the first trick. It was to operate through private insurance companies. Some called it an insurance-preservation plan.

Since then flexibility has followed flexibility. No, universal coverage isn't all that important now so never mind that old veto threat. Never mind about financing the thing with the hidden tax collected by employers.

A remarkable aspect of all this has been White House failure to create a public consensus for a program that would be acceptable to the president and possible to pass in Congress. It is rare to enact controversial legislation until a national consensus on it is reached and it becomes, in the words of the late Sen. Everett Dirksen applied to civil rights legislation, "an idea whose time has come."

Whatever is being pasted up cannot be an idea whose time has come. The public has no idea what a health-care bill should do. Yet politicians are desperate for anything they can call a "health-care bill" in their campaign commercials. We are in danger of a confusion whose time has come.

Bill of Rights is now worth 'diddly-squat'

The answer to Lance Brock's question about our judicial system is easy.

Judges, attorneys and police are so afraid they will violate these criminals' so-called rights that it's easier to give them a little slap on the wrist and say "Naughty boy-/girl don't do that again," than to face lawsuits not only from the felons but from their very concerned families. In my opinion, criminals have no rights!

They violated the rights of the victims (this fact obviously is of no concern to anyone — who can the victims sue? The felon and his family?), but if someone says something to these felons, or the handcuffs are too tight or they stub their big toe, they (felons) are quick to cry out, "You've violated my civil rights, and I'm gonna sue!"

The Bill of Rights, when composed, was a good thing. It has been so adulterated by bleeding hearts and unscrupulous attorneys and felons that today it's worth diddly-squat!

Clinton implies it's not so bad for staff to steal

Two or three weeks ago in the Reporter-Telegram an article, "Clinton rails at conservative critics," appeared. I now quote from that article. Clinton's temper flared as he conducted a radio interview for KMOX from Air Force One as he flew to Missouri to promote anti-crime and national service initiatives.

One question that appeared to grate on him dealt with the stories that the White House staff members had taken towels from staterooms during their stay aboard an aircraft carrier in Europe earlier this month. "We're not sure that just the White Staff did that," Clinton insisted. "There were press people, there were a lot of other people on that boat who were not members of the White House staff," he said.

First point — "We're not sure that just the White Staff did that." Clinton here indicates that if people other than his staff took some of the towels it would then be OK, or at least not so bad for his staff to steal. Typical Clinton mentality.

Second point — The commander in chief of our armed forces called an aircraft carrier a boat.

Let's all hope that we don't have a serious military conflict, and especially not before January 1997.

New terminal will be total waste of money

Last Saturday I rode Southwest Airlines Flight 264 from Midland to Houston. When I purchased my ticket, I was very surprised to note that a $3 tax had been added to the $8.30 tax already on the ticket. When I asked about it, I was told it was for the Midland PFC and was to be used for a new terminal building.

As a student on a very limited budget, I resent being charged this PFC. Since I don't even live in Midland, isn't this something like "taxation without representation," and haven't revolutionary wars been fought about that? I think the Midland terminal building is fine as it is and to build a new one will be a complete waste of money.

No creature deserves fate of city's pigeons

I am writing in reference to an incident that took place in front of my office on Monday, July 25. I had just arrived at work and begun to open shop when I noticed a large object slam into the entranceway sidewalk. That object turned out to be a rather attractive pigeon of multiple colors, which, I add, seemed to be in perfect health aside from the broken wing it sustained during its crash.

This pigeon did not hit the pavement due to an untimely turn or other navigational error, but from what I experienced, proved quite clearly that it was from the so-called "fast acting" poison that is being used to eliminate the abundance of pigeons that has occurred over the past years.

Several minutes passed with the bird just sitting there holding its broken wing above the body. Then I noticed a sudden and violent change in the bird's condition, which resulted in a slow and painful death for this creature. The most obvious symptoms were the spastic convulsions, such as wings bent straight up in the air, head beating into the ground, periods of slamming into easily noticed objects, and above all, moments of rolling up into a ball on its back and shaking violently.

What bugs me is the obvious pain this bird was going through. True, pigeons are noted for carrying diseases and being unclean animals, but after clearly seeing the pain involved, I determined that not even the most harmful creature deserves this fate.

I would deem it wise to reevaluate the current methods being used to dispose of these pigeons and come up with something quicker and less painful, or simply let them live in peace.

We need new system for dispute resolution

Today I had the privilege of being invited to participate in the jury selection process for a civil case to be heard in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court. It's a privilege that I respect and for which, as a United States citizen, I am deeply grateful.

The individuals whose case was being presented obviously had serious differences of opinion regarding the handling of a matter in which no life threat was revealed, no wrongful deed had occurred, which left the plaintiff no redress, and no serious life-threatening consequences continue to exist today, more than two years after the first legal action occurred.

The plaintiff's attorney, seemingly a very bright woman who wanted to serve her client and the judicial system with integrity and dignity, reminded the prospective jurors during the voir dire that her client did not wish to be in the courtroom this morning. She insisted that this case had been brought to court only because of the unwillingness of the defendant to resolve the matter, despite the many and great efforts of the plaintiff. This attorney also carefully questioned jurors around the issues of punitive, in addition to actual, damages and the determination of appropriate attorney's fees. The matter of access to water, the crux of the issue, did seem to have caused considerable inconvenience and frustration.

These persons involved in litigation certainly needed and deserved assistance with the resolution of their dispute. As I observed these individuals and heard the comments made to the prospective jurors, I felt very discouraged that 42 persons had spent two hours a piece listening attentively to a discussion about a disagreement that could have been settled in a mediation, arbitration, dispute resolution system or small claims court.

With all the legal acumen and the progressive minds in Midland, why do we not offer such dispute resolution options to our citizens? I am confident that there are numerous persons in our community with the background and expertise to see that such a court could be established and effectively operated at little or no cost to the community.

I have great respect for Judge Hyde in whose court I served on a criminal jury several years ago. I also believe Judge Hyde and the other fine judges in our community would respond to the need for such a dispute resolution system if the people of Midland and Midland County wanted it.

Wouldn't such a system make our community a better place to live? And wouldn't we be better off in the long run if the courts had more time to try the really serious cases that are currently backlogged in the scheduling process? And wouldn't our citizens feel much more willing to participate and serve on juries if they could see that their time was being used to address the really serious legal issues that are plaguing our courts?

Where is that "someone" in our community who has the expertise to help solve this problem?

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Barry

Even so-"perfect couples" experience conflict. Take Canada geese. They mate for life, so people just assume they get along well; when people see a goose couple flying overhead, honking, they say, "Oh, that's SO romantic." What these people don't realize is that honking is how geese argue. ("Are you SURE we're heading north?" "YES, dammit." "Well, I think we should ask somebody.") The only reason they mate for life is that they can't afford lawyers.

It's the same with humans. Even if you love somebody very much, you eventually discover that this person has irritating habits, such as leaving toenail clippings around the house as though they were little art displays; or not disposing of the potato-chip bag after eating everything in it except three salt molecules at the bottom; or secretly being also married to somebody else; or humming the song "Horse With No Name"; or responding to every single statement you make — including obviously factual ones, such as that Montpelier is the capital of Vermont — by saying "Well, that's YOUR opinion."

No matter how much you love your spouse, eventually the smooth, unblemished surface of your relationship will be marred by a small pimple of anger, which, if ignored, can grow into a major festering zit of rage that will explode and spew forth a really disgusting metaphor that I do not wish to pursue any further here. This is why you married couples need to learn to cope with your anger, unless you are Roseanne and Tom Arnold, in which case you need to move to separate continents and shut up.

For an excellent example of a married couple coping with anger, we turn now to an incident that occurred several years ago involving my brother, Sam, and his wife, Pat, when they were on a long car trip. After many hours on the road, they reached Charleston, S.C., where they were going to visit an old family friend. Pat was driving, and Sam was giving directions, and they got into an argument about the way he was giving them. (If you don't understand how such a petty issue could cause an argument, then you have never had a spouse.)

So Pat decided, OK, if Sam was so good at directions, then HE could drive the stupid car. She got out, slammed the front door, and opened the back door to get in the back with their 2-year-old son, Daniel. And then she decided, hey, why should she ride in the back, like a child? So she slammed the back door. But before she could open the front door, Sam, assuming she was ... the car, drove off. Pat was left standing, all alone, at night, with no money, wearing a T-shirt and a miniskirt, in what turned out to be a very bad neighborhood.

"Hey, pretty lady!" called a male voice.

Meanwhile, in the car, Sam was driving with great intensity and focus, reading street signs, making left turns and right turns, showing Pat (he thought) just how excellent his directions were. It was not until he had gone a considerable distance that he realized Pat was being very quiet.

"Pat?" he said.

Silence.

"Daniel," said Sam, trying to sound as calm as possible, "is Mommy back there?"

"No," said Daniel.

"OK, Daniel," said Sam, performing a high-speed turn. "Just be calm." He immediately became lost.

Meanwhile, back in the bad neighborhood, Pat, walking briskly away from various admiring males, found a bus station with a pay phone, called 911, and explained where she was.

"Do NOT go outside," said the 911 person.

Meanwhile, at the bus station, another officer, sent by the 911 person, had found Pat, who was explaining the situation.

"My husband and I were having a disagreement," she said, "and ..."

"Oh," said the officer. "A domestic."

"Hey," said the first officer. "I got a domestic here."

"It's NOT a domestic," said Pat.

Pat was taken to the police station, where the officer called the old family friend — this being the only person Pat knew in Charleston — and explained the situation.

Fortunately, Sam also called the old family friend, and he and Pat were reunited at the police station, where Pat graciously elected not to seek the death penalty. So everything worked out fine except that to this day Daniel becomes mildly concerned when Mommy gets out of the car.

Anyway, I hope Pat's and Sam's experience serves as a lesson to you spouses about the importance of not letting your anger fester, and of using proven psychological techniques for dealing with conflict in your marriage. For example, on long car trips, one of you should ride in the trunk.

Scammed on collider, Texas should see cash!

Texas was scammed. The federal government said it was committed to building the super-conducting super collider and Texas got on board with a $440 million investment.

Then, like a fly-by-night confidence man, Uncle Sam left Texas holding the bag. All Texas had to show for its investment was a big hole in the ground.

Last October a fickle Congress canceled the $11 billion project, which had already spent $2 billion in installing the collider's infrastructure.

Friday (July 22) Texas started down the road to compensation. A tentative deal would give Texas as up to $205 million in cash as well as title to the buildings and land on the super collider's sprawling campus.

That sounds promising.

The buildings and equipment retained by Texas would allow it to operate a state-of-the-art cancer treatment facility, regional supercomputing center and magnet development laboratory, state officials say. U.S. Congressman Joe Barton, R-Ennis, said the three facilities could create up to 3,000 jobs.

Let's make this agreement stick, and accept only cash.

By Donna Cromeans
Kerrville Daily Times

KERRVILLE — The children sat around the open campfire listening to the stories and songs of the Buffalo Soldiers. Closing their eyes to protect them from the smoke, they could almost see a clear picture of the men they were learning about and wondered if they could have been as strong or as brave.

Then the director yelled, "Cut!" and Elesha White, Alexis White, Nika West, Trey Anderson and Greg McClenaham were brought back to the present. The five children from Kerrville were taking part in the filming of a very special documentary for the Discovery Channel.

The program, scheduled to air Thanksgiving weekend, features an all-black reenactment group that commemorates the 9th and 10th Calvary and the 24th and 25th Infantry also known as "Buffalo Soldiers."

Taking part in the filming at Fort McKavett State Historical Park in Abilene last month were the Soldiers in Blue Buffalo Soldiers co-sponsored by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, Soldiers in Blue Committee from Abilene, and the five Kerrville youngsters who are Jr. Buffalo Soldiers and part of the Dream Team Youth Leadership Program.

The Dream Team is a local non-profit multi-cultural organization dedicated to helping others help themselves achieve goals in life. Its motto is "Bringing Unity to the Community."

"One of our goals is to help kids head toward the future, but they can't do that until they learn about their past," says Laressa Smith, executive director of the program.

Smith contacted Ken Pollard of the Texas Parks and Wildlife for information about the Buffalo Soldiers and he arranged for the Kerrville group to take part in the filming.

"The segment that we're doing for the film shows us (the Buffalo Soldiers) talking to the kids about the difficulties the Buffalo Soldiers faced in this countryside," Pollard stated. He is the TPWD regional maintenance specialist and coordinator of the Buffalo Soldiers program.

"The children are always inspired when they hear stories about the roles their ancestors played in building this country. Being a part of the production is really a nice reward for these kids who have worked so hard."

Eddie Dixon, who designed the Buffalo Soldiers monument at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. took part in the program, as well as Eric Strong, a storyteller who specializes in stories about the Buffalo Soldiers, and Lt. General John Q. Taylor King of Austin.

The children learned that the Buffalo Soldiers were organized by Congress soon after the Civil War for western duty against the Indian nations. They were called "buffalo soldiers" by Native Americans because of their thick, curly hair and buffalo skin coats they wore in winter. There were stationed at Buffalo Soldier Forts and other military outposts from Texas to the Dakota territories to help with this country's western expansion. They were often the first and fiercest in battle.

Prior to filming, the Jr. Buffalo Soldiers got a chance to explore Fort McKavett and visit the Buffalo Soldiers Museum there. They were even allowed to try on some of the uniforms.

"They wore big, heavy blue coats with buttons all down the front," said 11-year-old Nika West, who felt swallowed up by the uniform, "and their shoes looked like moccasins."

"They were real hard and real skinny," said 9-year-old Elesha White.

The boys were filmed talking about how they felt about the Buffalo Soldiers. The girls took part in some other scenes and are featured in storytelling around the campfire.

All the children got to meet former "Good Morning, America" host David Hartman, who narrated the film.

After the filming, the girls talked about other things they had learned.

"The Buffalo Soldiers were treated worse than other soldiers," said 8-year-old Alexis White, "but they worked hard, never had a deserter and kept going. They took care of each other."

Elesha White added, "and they never gave up."

Among the things the soldiers had to do for survival was to drink the blood and urine from their horses during one campaign. The group was also shown the spot where the first Buffalo Soldier was killed.

"They were always ready for battle no matter what," said West.

Wichita halts Angel rally

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Wichita center fielder Randy Curtis played the part of the reluctant hero at Christensen Stadium Saturday night as the Wranglers defeated the Midland Angels 6-4 to move within one game of climbing out of the Texas League West cellar.

In the seventh inning, Curtis lost what appeared to be a harmless fly ball off the bat of Jose Monzon. It fell for a run scoring double as Midland tied the game at 4-4.

In the top of the eighth, Curtis hit a leadoff homer, his first of the year in 32 games with Wichita, to claim hero status, one he would like to forget.

"It felt really good to hit the homer, but I also feel bad about it," Curtis said. "I would rather have gone 0-for-4 and make that catch in the seventh. Instead, that blew the lead and cost (starting pitcher) Glenn Dishman the victory."

Wichita took a 4-0 lead in the third o"' Midland starter Dom Johnson, who pitched w . save the third. The Angels battled back wit' two in the fourth on Mike Wolff's 12th homer the year, a two-run shot with one out. They tied it in the seventh when Larry Gonzales drove in one run with a double and scored the tying run on the "lost" ball in center off the bat of Monzon as Curtis looked on helplessly when the ball fell safely just behind him and to his right.

"I just didn't see the ball at all," Curtis said of Monzon's high fly to center. "It was twilight and tough to see out there. It was one of those balls hit at just the right time of night.

"Still, good things happen when you are able to separate different parts of the game. My approach was to let go of the defensive part and that made a difference."

1994 PRO FOOTBALL HALL OF FAME INDUCTIONS

Hall honors Dorsett, White

■ Inductee Bud Grant gives poignant speech on emotional day while Dallas greats Tony Dorsett and Randy White remember Tom Landry-led Cowboys.

By Chuck Melvin
AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio — The cold, calculating, stone-faced image Bud Grant cultivated during 18 years as the stoic coach of the Minnesota Vikings was washed away Saturday as he choked back tears during his enshrinement into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Inducted along with Grant during a frequently emotional ceremony that lasted more than two hours, were Dallas running back Tony Dorsett, San Francisco cornerback Jimmy Johnson, Cleveland running back Leroy Kelly, St. Louis tight end Jackie Smith and Dallas defensive tackle Randy White.

None of the acceptance speeches was more poignant than Grant's. Many in the audience had to wipe away tears as he credited his father with inspiring him to make it in professional sports.

"When I was born, my name was Harry," Grant said. "I was a Junior. Well, you can't have two Harrys in the same house, so my mom nicknamed me Buddy Boy and dad called me Kid. Buddy Boy got shortened. Maybe if I was a boxer, I would have been Kid Grant.

"You can't imagine what an honor this is. If mom was here — she's 93 and

There should be more Cowboys in Canton

By Denne H. Freeman

Analysis

AUSTIN — Where have all the Cowboys been?

That's the question you ask yourself as you look at the Professional Football Hall of Fame honor roll.

This Saturday Tony Dorsett and Randy White will make it a six-pack.

Shouldn't there be more Cowboys in there like Chuck Howley or Mel Renfro or Rayfield Wright?

"I think there has been a bias against the Cowboys," Dorsett said. "Maybe it's jealousy or something because the franchise has been in so many Super Bowls. We got too popular. A lot of people don't like that 'America's Team' stuff."

Dorsett said such names as Don Meredith and Bob Hayes should be considered.

"Bob Hayes changed pass defenses in the NFL," Dorsett said. "It was strictly man-for-man until Hayes came along. Teams had to invent the zone defense to stay with Bob."

Certainly, Dorsett and White are worthy additions.

Dorsett was the first legitimate breakaway threat for the Cowboys. He currently ranks third in career rushing behind Walter Payton and Eric Dickerson.

Of course, Dorsett will always be remembered for his 99-yard touchdown run from scrimmage against Minnesota.

"That's a record nobody can break," Dorsett said. "Somebody may tie it but nobody can break it."

Dorsett had 46 games in which he rushed for 100 yards or more. Dorsett will be introduced by Landry.

White, another first round pick by the Cowboys, was a nine-time Pro Bowl selection and will be introduced by former line coach Ernie Stautner.

He was co-MVP of Super Bowl XII with Harvey Martin as the Cowboys whipped Denver 27-10.

White ranks second on the all-time Dallas sack list with 111, including 16 during the 1978 season.

'Showtime' McDowell shows Cuba, Russia

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia — It was "Showtime" for the U.S. boxing team at the Goodwill Games.

Benjamin "Showtime" McDowell, a 24-year-old U.S. Army enlistee at Fort Bragg, N.C., broke the Cuban-Russian domination in boxing by winning the only gold medal for the Americans on Saturday.

McDowell, a light heavyweight, scored a surprising 9-7 decision over Cuban Dihosvany Vega.

"This is my biggest international win," said McDowell, the 1994 U.S. champion. "I was the underdog and I like being the underdog.

"Maybe I can realistically think about the Olympics now, but first I want to take a vacation. I don't want to get burned out on boxing."

While McDowell saved the U.S. team from a shutout, three Americans lost — two by shutouts.

Flyweight Carlos Navarro of Los Angeles was outpointed by Waldemar Font of Cuba 18-14. Middleweight Shane Swartz of Fort Collins, Colo., was beaten by Olympic gold medalist and world champion Ariel Hernandez of Cuba 8-0. And 6-foot-8 super heavyweight Lance

GOODWILL: Miller leads U.S. gymnasts

(From 1C)

Whitaker of Northridge, Calif., who has boxed for only a year, lost 17-0 to Alexi Lezin of Russia.

Overall, the powerful Cuban boxing team finished with six gold medals and the Russians had five in the 12-division boxing competition.

The U.S. also picked up a gold and silver in wrestling. Townsend Saunders, a 149½-pounder from Phoenix, took the gold, rallying to beat Vadim Bogeev of Russia 6-5. World champion Melvin Douglas, a 198-pounder from Mesa, Ariz., got the silver, losing to two-time Olympic gold medalist and five-time world champion Makharbek Khadartsev of Russia 1-0 in a referee's overtime decision in the final.

In the other wrestling final, Magomed Azizov of Russia pinned Carlos Castillo of Cuba at 4:05 in the 136.5-pound class.

Meanwhile, gymnastics began, with Russia winning the gold medal in women's team competition with 117.375 points, followed by Romania with 116.000, Ukraine with 115.630 and the United States with 115.375

Russia's Dina Kochetkova had the top score of the competition with 39.15, while Shannon Miller, the all-around world champion each of the past two years, was third with 38.875. The top 16 gymnasts return for the all-around final Sunday.

Miller had the top mark of the competition, 9.950, on the floor exercise. However, she had two slight missteps and scored 9.725 on the vault. She also had 9.675 on the uneven bars and 9.525 on the beams.

Cycling also got under way, with Russia's Vyachesla Dzhavanyan outsprinting Britain's David Williams for the gold medal in the men's 125-kilometer (77-mile) road race. Both were timed in 2 hours, 44 minutes, 33 seconds.

The riders started and finished at the famous Hermitage Museum, riding a circuitous course past the Peter and Paul Fortress and going over the Troitsky Bridge to Palace Square.

In preliminary round volleyball action, Peru upset 1992 Olympic champion Cuba 3-2 (15-11, 15-5), 13-15, 12-15, 18-16), the United States defeated the Netherlands 3-0 (15-10, 15-8, 16-14), China beat Japan 3-0 (15-10, 15-8, 15-11), and Russia downed Germany 3-0 (15-11, 15-6, 15-10).

Russia won the gold medal in water polo, defeating Germany 11-9, and Italy beat Spain 9-8 for the bronze.

McDowell, a fighter for the past five years with a 44-2 record, has no intention of turning pro.

"I'm just in the Army and they let me box," said McDowell, who is enlisted until 1997 and hopes to be a sergeant.

"The Army has produced some good fighters," he said. "I like it because it lets me train and lets me do what I do best. That's one more reason I signed up so I can focus on my boxing."

The inexperienced Whitaker was no match for Lezin, losing to the three-time Russian national champion for the third time.

Lezin, a left-hander, continually befuddled Whitaker, beating him to the punch at almost every opportunity and preventing the American from using his height and weight advantages.

"He beat me, he beat me good," Whitaker said. "He was faster than me and I was about two seconds late with every punch I threw."

Navarro, nicknamed "The Southpaw of Gold," appeared on his way toward winning the gold in his slugfest with Font. He was leading the Cuban by two points in the third round before tiring.

Navarro blamed his weakness on making the 112-pound weight limit, and said this would be his last fight in the flyweight class. He plans to go up to 119.

In the other boxing finals, Russia's Ramazi Palyani, the world bronze medalist, upset Joel Casamayor, the Olympic featherweight champion from Cuba, 15-8, and light welterweight Hector Vinent of Cuba, the Olympic and world champion, beat 1993 European champion Nurhan Suleymanoglu of Turkey 21-6.

DT II faces nightmare comparisons

TORONTO (AP) — The toughest competition for the United States at the World Championship of Basketball won't be Croatia, Russia, Canada or Puerto Rico.

The toughest competition will be a memory, or more properly, a dream.

Dream Team II, as it's known, has more than enough NBA talent to win the tournament. Coach Don Nelson, from the old school of coaches who usually won't say more than they have to, has already guaranteed victory in the 16-team event, which starts Thursday with the Americans playing Spain.

But even if Dream Team II is too good for the rest of the world, it will inevitably be compared to its predecessor, the original Dream Team of Magic Johnson, Larry Bird, Michael Jordan, Charles Barkley and Scottie Pippen.

The most important numbers during the 10-day run of the World Championship, in fact, might not be the outcomes of games, but the margins of victory. After all, Dream Team I won the Olympics by an average margin of 44 points.

"There's no pressure to win at a certain margin," Nelson says. "The pressure is to play well and win, and I think we're going to do that."

But no one doubts that the comparisons to Dream Team I will be constant and merciless.

"The comparisons started before we even got here," forward Dominique Wilkins said at training camp in Chicago. "They will look at us very hard, maybe harder than the first team, because they are looking at us to do what they did and more. We've got a reputation to uphold."

Nelson, chronically short of big men during his NBA coaching career, is practically giddy over the wealth of talent at his disposal. He promises numerous starting lineup changes to give his charges playing time, if not in every game, at least throughout the tournament.

"We know and everyone else knows it's hard to play 12 guys in a game," Nelson said. "That's just too many. Chuck Daly started different guys every night, and I think it worked out to let everyone play."

In an exhibition against Germany on Tuesday night, Nelson started a relatively small lineup of Kevin Johnson and Reggie Miller at guards, Dan Majerle and Larry Johnson at forwards, and Alonzo Mourning at center. But that group was designed more to keep the local fans in Charlotte happy than anything else.

Dream Team II is perceived as younger and more brash than the 1992 Olympians, who seem destined to be remembered as supremely talented and savvy, but perhaps over the hill.

The generalizations have a certain ring of truth, but there are exceptions to both. Jordan and Barkley were brash even on a team of gigantic egos, and David Robinson and Pippen were still to reach their peak as NBA stars.

Neither is Dream Team II a bunch of swaggering kids barely out of college. Wilkins, Mark Price and Joe Dumars are past 30 and apologize to no one in knowing how the game is played.

There is no question, however, that Dream Team II has its share of the "I Am King of This Realm" types of players — notably Shaquille O'Neal, Miller, Shawn Kemp, Derrick Coleman and Steve Smith. They will be watched closely to see if they adopt the "team first" approach taken by the 1992 squad.

"I think that team understood how to play together," said Kevin Johnson, who has learned how to share the spotlight in Phoenix with Majerle and Barkley. "They knew how to put their egos in check. They knew how to win, and I think that's something we have to develp here."

Majerle and Mourning have a special incentive to do well in Canada. Majerle was a member of the 1988 Olympic team of collegians that lost to the Soviet Union, and Mourning was on the World Championship team that lost in Argentina in 1990.

"I still have strong feelings about not winning the gold medal the last time around," Mourning said. "I don't think a lot of people realize I was a member of that team. But, hey, I'm representing my country, and that's what it's all about. We definitely have the upper hand in that we have a dedicated group of guys who are serious to win the gold medal. I truly think this team will be embraced by the American public because anyone represening their country is going to be counted on to bring home the big medal."

Bringing home the gold could be even easier than it was for the 1992 team because the competition won't be as stiff.

Absent from Canada will be four of the best foreign players from the 1992 Olympics — Drazen Petrovic of silver medal-winning Croatia, Detlef Schrempf of Germany, Sarunas Marciulionis of bronze medal-winning Lithuania, and Alexander Volkov of Russia. Petrovic was killed in a car accident last year, Lithuania lost in the European qualifying tournament and Schrempf and Volkov chose not to play.

Croatia, with current and former NBA players Toni Kukoc, Dino Radja and Stojan Vrankovic, is a heavy favorite to win silver, but Petrovic was one of the few foreign players not intimidated by the U.S. team in 1992.

"I think Croatia will be the best opponent," Nelson said, "but I'm not 100 percent sure of that. You can be surprised who shows up in the international game."

Nelson said that while the Americans appear to be far ahead of the world now that the United States is using NBA players, the days when college stars could carry the weight in international competition are over.

"The team that lost in Argentina four years ago had some terrific college players like Mourning, Billy Owens and Kenny Anderson, but they were lucky to win the bronze medal," the coach said. "The world caught up to our college players."

Still, Nelson, said, Dream Team II has to look at itself as a group of "young guys who haven't won anything yet. Until we have that gold medal around our necks, we have to win by as much as we can. We're not taking anything for granted. We're working hard to get ready."

"We should beat anybody we play handily, so we just have to prepare ourselves to play anyone that comes along. We hope this will be the best experience they've had in their lives."

L.A. Olympics set up legacy of funding for young athletes

By Ken Peters
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — A decade ago, the Olympics provided Los Angeles a shining moment, a charmed time for a city that in later years was battered by rioting, earthquakes and fires.

While those glorious weeks of light freeway traffic, a drop in crime, and smiling strangers saying "hello" on the streets are a distant memory, the legacy of the 1984 Games lives on in Los Angeles.

In the unlikely setting of an inner city beach volleyball court, Rose Villacarlos dives into the sand hauled in from the seaside, slaps the ball skyward, and yells in delight as a teammate spikes it over the net.

Across town in East Los Angeles, Father Carmine Vairo watches approvingly as youngsters whoop and slip down the slide and into the pool.

Near downtown Los Angeles, Richard Allen looks around the old building being transformed into a state-of-the-art gym and explains how he envisions it as a haven where children and their parents who live in a "war zone" of gangs and crime can come to work out or to watch amateur boxing matches.

Over by the Coliseum, Robert Arellanes talks about the Kids In Sports program that will give urban youths and their parents the binding, growing tradition in sports that suburban kids enjoy. At Dorsey High School in South Central Los Angeles, Monika Schloder demonstrates to a group of minority coaches the latest methods of teaching youngsters how to swim.

The 15-year-old Villacarlos, the youngsters at the Salesian Boys and Girls Club, the children and parents who will use Allen's gym, and the others are benefiting from the 1984 Olympics.

Those Games, which began on July 28, were the first free-enterprise Olympics and left a gift for amateur sports in America and for youths in Southern California in particular.

The $225 million profit from the LA Olympics was divided among the U.S. Olympic Committee and various national sports federations, which received 60 percent, and the Amateur Athletic Foundation in Los Angeles, which received $90.6 million, the other 40 percent.

The AAF uses interest earned on its share of the money to grant funds to established youth programs, initiate its own programs, and for a wide variety of other programs to benefit amateur and youth sports. As of March, the foundation had spent $57.3 million, including 625 grants totaling $27.5 million.

"To me, it's amazing," Vairo said. "I was in Canada before I came here, and they're still paying off their debts from the Olympics in Montreal."

The Los Angeles Games, which breathed new life into the Olympic movement, were the first without heavy government involvement. Much of the profit came from sponsorships sold to corporations, and the LA Olympic committee also was able to save money by using existing facilities for most sports and housing.

Atlanta, host of the 1996 Olympics, will have to build more facilities for its Games, and it plans to donate those facilities as its main bequest.

"We learned a lot just from meeting with people from Los Angeles," said Bob Brennan, spokesman for the Atlanta organizing committee. "We continue to pick the brains of those people there who can help us."

Dallas, Houston begin preseason schedule

Moon, Cowboys meet again

IRVING (AP) — For a preseason opener, tonight's game between the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys and the Minnesota Vikings has some spice to it.

Barry Switzer makes his professional coaching debut as Jimmy Johnson's replacement and Warren Moon quarterbacks his first game for an NFC team, the Vikings.

Switzer is trying to downplay his first coaching foray in five years. He retired from coaching at Oklahoma with the fourth-best career winning percentage and three national titles in 16 seasons.

He became the third coach in franchise history when he was hired by owner Jerry Jones on March 30 after giving Johnson a $2 million goodbye check.

"It will be an exciting time," Switzer said. "It's something I haven't been a part of for a long time and I'm looking forward to it. I don't think there will be a whole lot of pressure because of it just being an exhibition game."

Switzer said he didn't think he would get pre-game butterflies but admitted "the old adrenalin might be flowing a little more than usual."

Moon comes to Minnesota after making a name in the run-and-shoot offense in Houston. The Vikings run a more standard offense with a tight end.

"It will be kind of strange not seeing Warren in the run-and-shoot," said Cowboys safety James Washington. "But he's still a great quarterback no matter what offense he's in."

Under Moon's guidance, the Oilers won 10 of their last 11 games (eight of nine in preseason and two of three in regular season) against Dallas.

"Moon's always tough on us," said defensive coordinator Butch Davis. "He'll probably hit 22 of 27 and everybody will be saying how sorry our offense is. It will be a different look from him in a different offense. It's a good test for our secondary. We'll be looking at a lot of guys. Maybe Warren won't play for very long."

The Cowboys plan to rest Super Bowl MVP Emmitt Smith.

"Emmitt told me he was going out for at least one series and I told him if he does he won't get the ball," Switzer said. "We want to look at our young guys and rest our difference-makers."

Switzer said quarterback Troy Aikman will play "one or two series. When he comes out, tight end Jay Novacek and (fullback) Daryl Johnston will also come out."

Dallas Cowboys tight end Jay Novacek jokes with fellow tight end Scott Galbraith in a short workout Saturday in Austin.

Starting receivers Michael Irvin and Alvin Harper also will be sitting out. Both are recovering from shoulder injuries.

Minnesota holds a 4-2 lead in preseason games against Dallas, which lost 13-7 to the Vikings last year in Texas Stadium.

The Cowboys beat Minnesota 37-20 in the regular season last Dec. 12.

A crowd of over 50,000 was expected for the 8 p.m. kickoff.

Oilers, Kansas City break in Arrowhead's new grass field

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Houston Oilers, adjusting to life without Warren Moon, and the Kansas City Chiefs, breaking in a host of new players, will all play second fiddle tonight to grass.

Nothing in the Oilers-Chiefs exhibition game, will get as much attention as the Arrowhead Stadium playing field.

Every season in the NFL, players come and go. But how often does a field change character? In the case of Arrowhead, which unveils its new grass surface Sunday night, it happens every 22 years.

"I'm excited about it," said Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer, describing himself as "a traditionalist."

"As a player, I much preferred competing on grass," Schottenheimer said. "Plus, I just like to be able to go out and smell freshly mown grass."

Workmen have worked most of the spring and summer installing the new surface. The Chiefs' neighbors in the Harry S Truman Sports Complex, baseball's Royals, will put in grass in time for the 1995 season.

"I think we're all going to like it," guard Dave Szott said. "It has to be easier on the body."

The Chiefs have played their home games on artificial turf since Arrowhead opened in 1972. They're hopeful injuries may be reduced with their new grass surface.

"The players are getting bigger, stronger and faster. And everybody agrees the game's played faster on artificial turf," Schottenheimer said. "Logic would dictate then that if you look at our game over the next decade, we expect players to get bigger, stronger and faster. And if that's the case, the type of contact collisions that result ... would be more dangerous on artificial turf."

The Chiefs will end up playing 12 of their 16 regular-season games on grass this season. Sunday night's game will mark the first time the Chiefs and Oilers have met on grass since Nov. 8, 1970, when the Chiefs posted a 24-9 victory at Kansas City's old Municipal Stadium, which was long ago torn down.

"There will be times, once a few games have been played and the weather turns bad, when it won't look as neat and fashionable as it looks now," Schottenheimer said of the grass. "But you won't see players with the bruises that everybody agrees is a particular type of injury relative to artificial turf."

Rookie QB scrambles to Falcon win over San Diego

■ NFL Preseason

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Rookie quarterback Perry Klein scrambled 5 yards for a touchdown with 37 seconds left Saturday, lifting the Atlanta Falcons past the San Diego Chargers 21-17 in the annual Hall of Fame exhibition game.

Klein, a fourth-round draft choice from C.W. Post, dropped back on 3rd-and-goal, then sprinted to the right corner of the end zone. He had earlier hit rookie Bert Emanuel — a converted quarterback — for a 41-yard touchdown.

Klein's touchdown run, set up by a late interception, capped what had been a frustrating fourth quarter for the Falcons and gave them their first lead.

Klein moved them into scoring range twice before in the period, but he barely overthrew a diving Joe Rogers in the end zone with about 10 minutes left and was intercepted by Chris Johnson at the Chargers' 9 with 4:38 to play.

Atlanta got the ball back when Charles Washington picked off a pass by rookie Jeff Brohm and returned it 14 yards to the Chargers' 31. Klein then completed two passes to Corey Dixon and Anthony Wallace carried twice for 7 yards to set up the winning TD.

The Chargers led 17-7 at halftime but couldn't score again. Stan Humphries got them started quickly with a 36-yard TD pass to Shawn Jefferson on the second play of the game.

John Carney's 24-yard field goal put San Diego ahead 10-7, and they stretched the lead to 17-7 late in the second quarter when rookie Willie Clark intercepted Gagliano's deflected pass and returned it 86 yards for a touchdown.

The game was typically sloppy for an NFL preseason opener: The Chargers committed 11 penalties, the Falcons 10.

Dolphins 20, Giants 19

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Pete Stoyanovich kicked a 21-yard field goal with 2:57 to play after the Giants fumbled a punt and Miami rallied in the second half to defeat New York in the preseason opener for both teams.

Stoyanovich's third field goal came on the fourth play after Omar Douglas muffed a pooch punt by Jim Arnold at the Giants 15, and gave the Dolphins a 20-17 lead.

The Giants, who had tied it minutes earlier at 17-17 on a 24-yard field goal by Brad Daluiso, had a chance to pull the game out as Kent Graham hit Eric Weir with a 47-yard pass and later ran 15 yards to give New York a first and goal at the Miami 3-yard line. However, Gary Downs fumbled on first and goal and Brant Boyer recovered for the Dolphins.

Arnold ran out of the end zone for a safety with 10 seconds to play to close out the scoring in the game which featured the NFL's first 2-point conversion since the league changed rules this year.

The 2-pointer came on a pass from Dolphins backup quarterback Doug Pederson to tight end Rob Coons and followed a 1-yard, fourth-down touchdown.

New Orleans coach Eagles collapses during basketball game, dies at age 45

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Tommy Joe Eagles, basketball coach at the University of New Orleans, collapsed while playing basketball Saturday and died a short time later. He was 45.

Eagles was playing basketball at Salt Lake Community College when he apparently had a heart attack. He collapsed while passing a ball to Aaron Swinson, one of his own former players when he coached at Auburn. Paramedics were unable to revive Eagles.

The coach, who accepted the New Orleans job in May after resigning from Auburn, was in Salt Lake City to visit Scotty Robertson, an assistant for the Phoenix Suns, and three of his former players.

"Everybody is kind of in shock," university spokeswoman Kit Lipps said.

Eagles, a Louisiana native who played and later coached at Louisiana Tech, resigned under pressure in March after Auburn posted a disappointing 11-17 season. His record at the Southeastern Conference school was 64-78 in five seasons, during which the school failed to make the NCAA tournament in which it had been a fixture from 1983-88.

HALL: Emotions fuel ceremonies

(From 1C)

couldn't be here — I'd look at the pride in her face. If dad was here, he'd stand up and say, 'The kid made it. He finally made it.' "

During 18 years with the Vikings from 1967 to 1985, Grant went 158-96-5, leading his team to the Super Bowl four times — all losses.

"If you're going to succeed — survive is maybe a better word — you've got to handle losing," he said. "You die every time you lose, but you've got to get over it."

Kelly's induction came 18 years after he was first eligible, perhaps because his accomplishments with the Browns always seemed to pale in comparison with those of his predecessor, Hall of Famer Jim Brown. The seniors committee acted to put Kelly in the Hall this year.

When Brown abruptly retired in 1966 to pursue an acting career, Kelly stepped in, and Cleveland's offense scarcely missed a beat. He led the NFL in rushing in 1967 and '68 and scored 90 touchdowns in his 10-year career.

Kelly, like Grant, wept as he thanked his family and friends.

"I never felt I was in the shadow of Jim," he said during a news conference before the ceremony. "It was an honor for me to play with Jim. Jim helped me out a whole lot. He was pretty much responsible for me making the team.

"This is a great honor. It's been a long time coming. I'm kind of upset that it took so long, but I'm still honored to be among such great football players."

White and Dorsett were teammates during some of the best seasons of Tom Landry's Cowboys in the 1970s and '80s.

Although both were highly publicized athletes in college, neither was a sure thing in the professional ranks — Dorsett because of his size, White because the Cowboys initially played him out of position at linebacker.

Both quickly erased the doubts.

After winning the Heisman Trophy at Pitt, Dorsett went on to rush for 12,739 yards, including 48 100-yard games and eight 1,000-yard seasons.

He also set a record that can never be broken, scoring on a 99-yard run in a Monday night game against Minnesota. It was one of his 90 touchdowns in a career that ended with Denver in 1988.

Landry presented Dorsett for induction.

"Everybody said I'd be too small to play pro football at 188 pounds," said Dorsett, who as a youngster once loaded his pockets with rocks in an unsuccessful attempt to boost his weight above the minimum required to play football.

"I never dreamed I'd play 12 seasons. The man in the hat, coach Landry, brought me along. He taught me discipline. He taught me to set goals. These are things you take with you in life."

White thanked Landry for sticking with him during the early years, before he'd moved to the defensive line.

"Some people said coach Landry was not a great motivator. He's one of the greatest motivators I've ever been around in my whole life," said White, who was nicknamed the "Manster" — a mix of man and monster — by former Cowboys defensive back Charlie Waters.

White totaled 111 sacks in his career and was the NFL's defensive player of the year in 1978.

Smith, who finished his career with Dallas that year after 15 seasons with the Cardinals, was the leading career receiver among tight ends when he retired, although many of his receiving statistics have since been eclipsed by the likes of Ozzie Newsome and Kellen Winslow.

Smith averaged an impressive 16.6 yards per catch, a figure he attributes to the Cardinals' innovative offense at the time.

"When we first started getting the tight end down into the secondary, defenses weren't set up to deal with that," Smith said. "The guy just wasn't used to seeing me down there."

Cowboys fans remember Smith differently, still scorning him for dropping a wide-open 10-yard pass from Roger Staubach in the end zone of the 1979 Super Bowl that Dallas lost 35-31 to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Johnson, a first-round pick from UCLA in 1961, played both receiver and defensive back early in his career before settling in as one of the best 1-on-1 cornerbacks in NFL history.

He totaled 47 interceptions in 15 seasons as a starting defensive back for the 49ers, a number that was artificially low because opponents rarely threw in his direction.

He was presented for enshrinement by his brother, Rafer Johnson, the gold medalist in the decathlon at the 1960 Olympics.

"Rafer Johnson is my hero," Johnson said. "Most kids have a hero in another city. I had a brother that I was always able to talk to and get the direction I needed. I wish we could split this trophy right down the middle, because he surely deserves half of it."

FREEMAN: Hall shuns Cowboys

(From 1C)

Todd for bringing him out of his shell.

"My rookie year, Doug thought I was being unresponsive with the press and told me I'd never be a big deal in the NFL if I didn't start giving better interviews," White laughed. "He jumped my case good. I'm glad he did."

And now somebody needs to jump the case of the voters who select the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

There should be more Cowboys in Canton.

Here are some more candidates:

—Lee Roy Jordan, who anchored the "Doomsday Defense" from his middle linebacker position for 14 years. He was named to the Pro Bowl five times and All-Pro twice.

—Mel Renfro, the Cowboys all-time interceptor with 52 and a 26.4 average in kickoff returns. He was a five-time All-Pro.

—Chuck Howley, the MVP of Super Bowl V. He was a six-time Pro Bowl selection.

—Don Perkins, the first Cowboys player to rush for more than 6,000 yards. A former six-time Pro Bowl selection.

—Rayfield "Big Cat" Wright. Perhaps the best Dallas offensive lineman in history. A six-time Pro Bowl selection.

Mansell overcomes Michigan fears to capture pole position

■ Marlboro 500

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — For a guy who finds Michigan International Speedway's high-banked track more than a little daunting, Nigel Mansell seems to have overcome his fears quite nicely.

Mansell, who won the Marlboro 500 last year en route to the PPG IndyCar World Series championship as a rookie, took the pole Saturday for Sunday's race at the two-mile oval with a fast lap of 233.738 mph.

That was fast enough to draw oohs and aahs from the big crowd enjoying the warm, sunny Michigan morning, but not quite quick enough to surpass the all-time auto racing qualifying record of 234.275 set at Michigan last year by teammate Mario Andretti.

"We were flat out pretty well all the way around," Mansell said. "I think the track's gotten a little slower. We were sliding a lot more. But no complaints at this time."

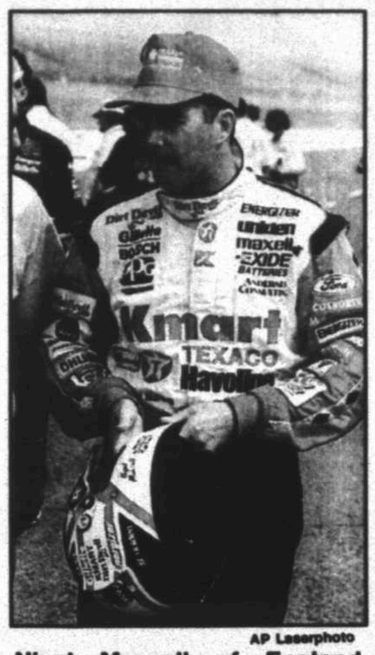
Mansell had to smile when asked how his feelings about the Michigan track have changed since he first saw it last July.

"I didn't know what I was thinking when I first saw it. It is truly daunting," the former Formula One champion said. "But the track has got all the ingredients.

"It's one of the most challenging circuits in the world. To do more than 230 miles per hour is quite something. You have to have your setup just right. That's why being with a team like Newman-Haas is so important.

"It's a bit of a survival race, a wild race. It's a punishing circuit. You have nearly constant speeds of maybe 226 and the gearbox, engine and drivers as well have got to maintain it. Then the drivers are very close, too. There are probably eight drivers that could win tomorrow."

The Michigan field will line up three-wide for the start for the first time since 1990 and Mansell will share the front row with Raul Boesel and Michael Andretti, Mario's son and a two-time Michigan winner.



AP Laserphoto

Boesel, from Brazil, had a fast lap of 232.672, while the younger Andretti, coming off a victory two weeks ago in Toronto, lapped the track at 232.543.

Both Mansell and Michael Andretti had turned unofficial laps over 235 in the morning practice session, but the sunny day warmed up the track just enough to slow the cars down in the qualifying session that began just before 11 a.m. EDT.

"On the 235 laps in the morning, my car wasn't moving around anywhere near as much as when I qualified," Mansell said. "I think it's just track conditions changing."

Robby Gordon, the 25-year-old phenom who is fourth in the season points — trailing Penske drivers Al Unser Jr. and Emerson Fittipaldi and Chip Ganassi Racing's Michael Andretti — will start from the inside of the second row with a qualifying lap of 230.649.

Mario Andretti, 54, making his last start on the Michigan track as he goes through one final year as an Indy-car driver, was fifth at 230.345, followed by Stefan Johansson of Sweden at 228.771.

"I'm going to try to enjoy this one as much as I can, since it's my last (500-mile race)," Mario said. "I'd like to come away with some good results so I can have a good memory of it."

No other auto race in history has had five qualifiers over 230 mph.

The Team Penske drivers, including Paul Tracy, have won seven of nine races this season — Michael Andretti has won the other two. But at Michigan, their Ilmor-powered cars have been overshadowed by drivers with Ford Cosworth power.

Ford-powered cars took the top five starting spots in the 28-car field, with Johansson, in a year-old Penske chassis, the fastest of the Ilmor entries.

Fittipaldi, from Brazil, was the fastest of the Penske drivers, taking the seventh position at 228.710. Tracy was 11th at 226.825 and Unser, who has won five races this season, including the Indianapolis 500, was a disappointing 14th at 226.376.

The pole was the third of the season, tying Mansell with Unser for the series lead in that category, and the ninth of his two-year Indy-car career. It was only his second pole on an oval track. His first came last July on New Hampshire International Speedway's one-mile circuit.

Unser Jr. wins finale, Martin takes series

■ IROC

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Al Unser Jr., getting some late help from new series champion Mark Martin, won the International Race of Champions finale Saturday at Michigan International Speedway.

Unser, an Indy-car star who is currently leading the PPG Cup points race, led only the final four laps of the 50-lap race on Michigan's high-banked, two-mile oval.

Unser's record eighth IROC victory, and third at Michigan, was the culmination of an impressive comeback after he tried a low move on the banking and went all the way from second to ninth near the midway point of the race.

"I got caught making a low move and the low line just wasn't the place to be today," Unser said. "I had to come from the back and I just tried to start picking them off one by one on the outside."

He was back among the top five by lap 34 and stayed with the leaders the rest of the way, finally moving past Martin to take the lead on lap 47.

That's the way it finished, with Martin, satisfied to protect second place from fellow NASCAR Winston Cup stars Rusty Wallace and Dale Earnhardt, finishing 0.347-seconds — about 1½ car-lengths — behind in the race among 12 identically prepared Dodge Avengers.

"There at the end, I knew if I pushed him to the finish and stayed second I'd win the championship," said Martin, who won $200,000 and a new Avenger passenger car. "I just wanted to stay second and count those points. I really, really wanted to win this thing."

Unser, a two-time IROC series champion and now a four-time runner-up, said he didn't even know who was second at the end, adding, "It didn't make any difference. I was trying to win the race. I just was hoping whoever was second would stay in line because I wanted to stay out front in the clean air."

Wallace, who led twice for 27 laps, wound up third, followed by Earnhardt, road racers Tommy Kendall, Jack Baldwin and Geoff Brabham, who had won the last two Michigan IROC races, NASCAR's Kyle Petty, former Indy-car star Danny Sullivan and sprint car champion Steve Kinser.

NASCAR's Dale Jarrett crashed out of the race after being hit from behind by Kendall on lap 12, while former Trans-Am champion and current Indy-car rookie Scott Sharp hit the wall after a spinout involving Sullivan on lap 20. Baldwin brought out the third and final caution flag when he slid broadside on lap 21 after bumping Earnhardt. Baldwin had to pit for new tires but was ale to continue.

Caution laps do not count in IROC and it was shortly after the restart following the Baldwin incident that Unser fell to the rear of the field.

"The high line was the way around the track," Unser said. "Once I figured that out, the rest was pretty easy."

Martin finished the series with 66 points. Unser, Wallace and Earnhardt tied for second with 56, but Unser was awarded the runner-up spot, Wallace third and Earnhardt fourth based on the finishing positions of Saturday's race.

Baldwin was fifth in the points, followed by Kinser, Petty, Jarrett, Kendall, Sullivan, Brabham and Sharp.

The drivers split up $735,000 in prize money, with second place worth $100,000 and none of them taking home less than $40,000.

Ferrari grabs top 2 German GP starts

HOCKENHEIM, Germany (AP) — In a shocking development, Ferrari found itself back on top — for the first time in four years — when Austrian Gerhard Berger won the pole Saturday for the German Grand Prix.

And the Italian Formula One team didn't stop there. Sitting on the outside of the front row for Sunday's race will be Berger's teammate, Frenchman Jean Alesi.

"I am very happy to be in the front row," Berger said after qualifying at 146.582 mph. "This was important for the team, because we are working harder and harder to come back on the top level.

"It's important to keep the motivation high on the team."

Ferrari, the top Formula One team in its heyday, has been little more than another unit filling out fields for the likes of McLaren, Williams and Benetton for the last several years. Ferrari won its last previous pole at the Grand Prix of Portugal in 1990.

But Berger said the sweep of the front row may not mean a thing Sunday.

"Under race conditions, I am still not as happy with the car as I am in qualifying," he said. "This circuit is better for us than others, so I think we could be strong here and compete with Williams and Benetton."

The Austrian driver said he gave it all he had in qualifying.

"I was pushing like hell on that lap," Berger said. "I went wide in one corner because I braked too late and I lost time there. Otherwise it was a perfect lap.

Trevino still tied in Senior Long Island

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — After bogeying three of his first seven holes Saturday, Lee Trevino steaded himself and shot a 3-under-par 69 to remain tied for the lead in the $650,000 Northville Long Island Classic.

Trevino, winner of five Senior PGA Tour events this year, shares first place with 50-year-old rookie Jay Sigel, who shot a 67 on the par-72, 6,775-yard Meadow Brook Club for a two-round score of 9-under 135.

"I've got to play to beat Jay," said Trevino, who needs one victory to match Miller Barber's career-leading 24 on the senior tour.

Jerry McGee, in his second year on the circuit, posted Saturday's best round, a 66, and was at 137.

"Don't sell McGee short, either," Trevino said. "He's been knocking on the door and is ready to jump in and win."

Jimmy Powell, who shared the first-round lead with Trevino, fired a second-round 73 for 139, one stroke better than Bob Dickson, who also had a 73.

Defending champion Ray Floyd also had a second-round 73 and was in a large group at 142. Also in the same group was Jim Colbert, winner of two of the last three tournaments. He saw his string of consecutive sub-par rounds end at 10 when he shot a 72.

Trevino, who had 27 putts in the opening round, had 17 on the front nine Saturday and wound up with 31.

"I could have easily been over par on the front nine," said the 54-year-old Trevino, who was even-par 36 at the turn. "I wasn't comfortable with the putter today as yesterday.

"Birdies were hard to come by because of all the rain the past few weeks and because of the heavy traffic on the course all week. As they say, though, it's the same for everyone."

Trevino, who has won the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA Championship twice apiece, has never had a solid tournament at Meadow Brook.

"This course has never treated me good," he said. "I usually manage one bad round, and I sure hope it doesn't come tomorrow.

"My driver has been the biggest difference this week. I made it in my own garage just last Monday. I am able to turn the ball left, and that's something you have to do if you want to shoot scores here."

STRIKE: Big players stand to lose big bucks

(From 1C)

to defeat a salary cap even though they have the most to lose.

"There's no way the players are cracking," Clemens said.

No players would be paid during a work stoppage, according to lawyers for both the Major League Baseball Players Association and management's Player Relations Committee. For each day of a strike, they would lose 1-183rd of their salary. For players making the $109,000 minimum, that's $596 per day.

"The players are very solid," insisted Will Clark of the Texas Rangers, who would lose $21,858 per day.

Dick Moss, a player agent and the union's general counsel from 1966 to 1977, predicts these negotiations will end like all others for the owners since free agency began.

"They always lose and they always say going into a situation like this, 'We're going to win and we're going to show these guys.' That's not in the nature of the beast," Moss said. "The players always win when they stick together and players are more unified than they've ever been."

In the past two negotiations, commissioners Peter Ueberroth and Fay Vincent took management's salary cap proposals off the table, which angered the hard-line owners. Since forcing Vincent to resign in September 1992, owners have kept the commissioner's office vacant so they wouldn't have the same problem during this negotiation.

"The one person who always acted in the best interest of the game always screwed the owners," Atlanta Braves president Stan Kasten said Friday. "The commissioner can't force the players to accept anything. All he can do is impose things on the owners. ... We've never collectively bargained a solution. We've always had one shoved down our own throats. This time we won't."

Chicago White Sox chairman Jerry Reinsdorf, viewed by many as the most influential owner, says the union's talk about players' freedom to play in the cities of their choice is a smokescreeen. He says the union's chief desire is to preseve the current system, which has helped escalate the average salary from $51,501 in 1976 to $1,188,679 on opening day this year.

"They just raise all kinds of issues so they can avoid the main issue," Reinsdorf said. "Obviously this association has no interest in addressing our problems. One of the obligations of the union is to negotiate the problems of our industry."

Union head Donald Fehr and players insist that there are no problems. Teams had record revenue last season, estimated by the PRC at $1.88 billion, and the 28 clubs collectively made a profit of $50.3 million according to the PRC estimate.

But Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council that took over following Vincent's departure, says 19 teams are losing money and need change. He says financial doom, forecast by owners repeatedly after an arbitrator forced free agency after the 1976 season, is upon the industry.

"Tomorrow is here. Nobody is sorrier about that than I am," Selig said.

"The owners make no product," he said. "Only the players are producing income."

Players will get about 58 percent of baseball's revenues this year. Owners are proposing a 50-50 split and consider that generous.

"We could have come up with some sort of a low-ball offer," Reinsdorf said. "We chose not to do that."

Players view management's offer as a low-ball proposal.

"The owners, if they had any sense, would realize the players have no other choice than to fight this," Moss said. "The owners say they are making too much money to afford this (strike). The owners if they had any sense would realize the players are making so much money they can afford this."

While players and owners squabble, others take financial hits. The Greater Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce estimates the Reds' economic impact at $110 million a year. That works out to $1.3 million a home game.

"It's not a business loss you can recover," said Pat Swinton, manager of the Westin Hotel in downtown Cincinnati.

Swinton said her hotel could lose about $100,000 in room reservations and another $30,000 in restaurant and lounge business.

And then there are the concession vendors, the grounds crews, the ushers, the parking attendants and the store owners near ballparks. They have no say.

In a way, the players feel the same way. They say a strike is necessary because owners are threatening to impose a salary cap after the season if there isn't a labor agreement.

"This is not a fight of the players' making," Fehr said. "They really don't have much choice in the matter and it is terribly unfortunate."

Angels explode out of slump

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Chili Davis homered twice, including a grand slam, and drove in a career-high seven runs as the California Angels beat the Texas Rangers 14-4 Saturday night and stopped an eight-game losing streak.

Davis gave the Angels a 4-0 lead with his third-inning grand slam, the fifth of his career and second this season. He hit a sacrifice fly in the five-run fourth, then hit a two-run homer in the sixth, his 23rd this season.

Davis homered from both sides of the plate in the same game for the eighth time in his career and moved past Ken Singleton into fifth place on the career list of home runs for switch hitters with 247.

Chad Curtis hit his career-high 11th home run in the ninth for the Angels, who had 18. Curtis went 3-for-5 with four RBIs.

Yankees 6, Indians 5

NEW YORK — New York beat Cleveland for the 10th consecutive time, winning 6-5 as Wade Boggs singled home Mike Gallego with the go-ahead run in the sixth inning.

With the score tied 4-4 in the sixth, Gallego and Pat Kelly singled with one out off Larry Casian (1-5). Boggs singled with two outs off Derek Lilliquist and Paul O'Neill hit an RBI double, ending a career-high 0-for-22 slide.

Joe Ausanio (2-0) allowed one hit in 1 2-3 innings, Carlos Baerga's 15th home run of the season in the eighth. Steve Howe got two outs for his 14th save.

Tigers 14, Athletics 2

DETROIT — Chad Kreuter tied a major league record with three sacrifice flies, and Milt Cuyler went 3-for-4 with a homer to lead Detroit to a victory over Oakland.

Kreuter became the ninth player to hit three sacrifice flies in a game, and the first since Toronto's George Bell did it on Aug. 14, 1990 against Chicago.

Brewers 5, Red Sox 1

BOSTON — Cal Eldred allowed four hits in six innings to outduel Roger Clemens and lead Milwaukee to a win over Boston.

John Jaha and Jody Reed homered for the Brewers, who have won seven of their last nine on the road. Jaha led off the fourth with his 11th homer and Reed, who played for Boston in 1988-92, hit a three-run shot in the eighth.

Eldred (10-10) worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the first and allowed his only run in the fifth. Four relievers held the Red Sox to just two hits over the final three innings, with Mike Fetters getting the final four outs for his 15th save.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 5

BALTIMORE — Leo Gomez homered in a three-run seventh inning that carried Baltimore past Toronto.

Harold Baines also homered for the Orioles, who snapped a four-game losing streak. Dwight Smith and Mark McLemore each had three singles in Baltimore's 15-hit attack.

Joe Carter and Devon White homered for the Blue Jays, who have lost four of five. Carter has home runs in three straight games for the third time this season.

White Sox 4, Mariners 2

CHICAGO — Jack McDowell pitched a five-hitter and Frank Thomas hit his 36th homer as Chicago moved a game ahead in the AL Central by beating Seattle.

Chicago's victory and Cleveland's loss at New York allowed the White Sox to regain the division lead less than two weeks before the Aug. 12 strike date set by the players' association.

McDowell (9-8) struck out seven and walked one in his fourth complete game winning for the sixth time in seven decisions. He is 9-1 against the Mariners.

Royals 5, Twins 4, (11)

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Brent Mayne singled in pinch-runner Vince Coleman with one out in the 11th inning to give Kansas City its eighth straight victory.

Bob Hamelin led off the 11th with a single and moved to second on Felix Jose's single off Mark Guthrie (4-2).

Billy Brewer (4-1) retired one batter in the top of the 11th to pick up the win.

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Mark Portugal pitched eight effective innings and hit a two-run double, and Darryl Strawberry homered Saturday, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 6-4 victory over the Colorado Rockies.

The win was the Giants' 16th in their last 20 games. San Francisco, which entered the game trailing Los Angeles by one game in the NL West, were 9½ games behind the Dodgers on July 7.

Portugal (10-7), who has hit safely in 13 of his 20 starts this season, capped a three-run rally in the fourth inning with his double. He gave up nine hits and four runs, three earned, in eight innings. Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his 25th save in as many tries.

Strawberry, who joined the Giants on July 7, atoned for a fourth-inning error in right field with a double and his third home run, a solo shot in the fifth.

Reds 7, Padres 6

SAN DIEGO — Brian Hunter hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning to give Cincinnati a victory over San Diego to stay in first place in the NL Central.

Phillies 5, Braves 2

ATLANTA — Lenny Dykstra hit a two-run triple to highlight a four-run rally in the ninth inning that gave Philadelphia a victory over Atlanta.

The Phillies battered reliever Greg McMichael (5-3) for four straight hits in the ninth to send the Braves to their eighth loss in 13 games. McMichael, who started the ninth protecting a 2-1 lead, has blown nine saves in 29 chances.

Kim Batiste opened the ninth by beating out an infield single, and moved to third on Mike Lieberthal's double. Pinch-hitter Mickey Morandini blooped a single to right, scoring Batiste with the tying run.

Pirates 3, Mets 2 (10 innings)

PITTSBURGH — Pinch-hitter Lloyd McClendon singled over a five-man infield with the bases loaded and none out in the 10th inning, giving Pittsburgh a victory over New York.

The single, McClendon's seventh pinch-hit of the season, ended a game in which Pittsburgh rallied with two outs in the ninth to tie it against Bret Saberhagen.

In the 10th, Carlos Garcia doubled, Jay Bell drew a walk from Roger Mason (2-5) and Orlando Merced reached on a fielder's choice on which Bell was safe on a close play at second.

Expos 7, Marlins 3

MIAMI — Sean Berry drove in the go-ahead run in the seventh and hit a three-run triple in the ninth as Montreal extended their lead in the NL East with a victory over Florida.

The first-place Expos have won 10 of their last 11 to open a 3½-game lead over the Atlanta Braves, who lost 5-2 Saturday to Philadelphia.

Rondell White and Marquis Grissom homered for the Expos, who handed the Marlins their fifth straight loss.

Tim Scott (5-2), who relieved Kirk Reuter during the Marlins' three-run fifth, and struck out Jeff Conine with the bases loaded to end the inning, picked up the win.

John Wetteland pitched the final 1 1-3 innings for his 21st save.

Cardinals 10, Cubs 7

ST. LOUIS — Gregg Jefferies hit a two-run homer as Bob Tewksbury and St. Louis snapped losing streaks with a victory over Chicago.

Jefferies had three hits, including his 11th homer, as the Cardinals snapped a six-game losing streak. The Cardinals have lost 19 of their last 28 home games.

Tewksbury (11-10) allowed six runs and 11 hits in 5 1-3 innings to halt a personal three-game losing skid.

Hall of Fame nominee Carlton was in own world on the mound

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — When Steve Carlton was on the mound, he was in his own world, a place where he shut out everyone — the media, the opponents and even his teammates.

Mike Schmidt and Larry Bowa still talk about the day in 1977, the season Ted Sizemore joined the Philadelphia Phillies, when they cooked up a prank to pull on the new second baseman.

In the middle of a game, they suggested that Sizemore call time, go to the mound and tell Carlton to "calm down."

"Lefty was standing there, rubbing up the ball, and here comes Size," Bowa recalled. "And Lefty just says, 'Don't take another step ... I'll handle this side of the diamond. You handle yours.' And poor Size — it was like he hit a brick wall. That's how fast he stopped."

And that was more talkative than he usually was during his Hall of Fame career. On Sunday, he might finally tell everyone what he was thinking all of those years during his induction ceremonies in Cooperstown.

To Carlton, pitching was merely an elevated game of playing catch, often with Tim McCarver, where the mental and physical came together for 60 feet, 6 inches.

Standing tall, Carlton never smiled or frowned, no matter whether the batter struck out or reached on an error, no matter whether he won or lost.

Teammates remember the afternoon in West Palm Beach, Fla., during an exhibition game against Montreal when third baseman Kiko Garcia picked up a foul ball and fired it back to Carlton, who wasn't looking. The ball hit Carlton squarely in the head, but he merely picked it up and resumed pitching.

There also was the day when Billy Williams hit a liner back through the box that caught Carlton. The ball left an imprint of the stitches on his neck, but Carlton just threw to first base for the out.

"He had that mystique about him, even among us," former Phillies teammate John Vukovich said.

Rizutto refused to go away, makes Hall of Fame

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Phil Rizzuto was called "Scooter" because of the way he covered shortstop for the New York Yankees, zipping all over the place, the defensive glue of a dynasty.

The job description on a team that had, among others, Joe DiMaggio, Yogi Berra and Mickey Mantle, was simple, according to Rizzuto.

"All they needed was somebody to catch the ball, make the double play once in a while, get hit with a pitch and not get hurt, beat out a bunt and we were in the World Series," he said.

"Not because of what I did, but they needed a shortstop."

They got one of the best. Dismissed at first as being too short — he stands just 5-foot-6 — Rizzuto refused to go away. He made it to the majors in 1941 and played 13 years, all of them with the Yankees. Those teams won nine American League pennants including five in a row from 1949-53, and eight World Series.

Rizzuto had a career batting average of .273 and was the AL Most Valuable Player in 1950 when he batted .324 and scored 125 runs.

After his playing career ended — he was released on Oldtimer's Day in 1956 — the Yankees still couldn't shake Rizzuto. He moved into the broadcast booth and has been there ever since, becoming a New York institution with birthday greetings and restaurant recommendations interrupted only occasionally by play-by-play.

Thirty-eight years as a baseball broadcaster by itself might have been enough to get Rizzuto to Cooperstown. He didn't want to get there that way, though. "I would never accept it if they elected me as a broadcaster," he said.

Rains delay 'C' softball tourney

Rains Saturday delayed the Men's Class C State Softball Tournament by two hours. Games were scheduled as late as 2 a.m. this morning with play resuming at 8 a.m. The championship is set for 1:30 p.m. today with an "if" game scheduled for 2:45 p.m.

The Midland Stars are among those still undefeated through the first four rounds of the tournament.

The Stars defeated the El Paso Brewers and Cardenals of Big Spring.

Other teams still undefeated were: El Paso Eagles, Midnight Express of Levelland, Laredo Hustlers, El Paso Drillers, Budweiser of Temple, Ray Vess Jewelry of Alice and International Awards of Lubbock.

Judy's Bonding and the Trophey Den of Odessa are among those team fighting through the loser's bracket. Judy's Bonding defeated Bi-Rite of Midland 27-1 to advance late Saturday.

The Red Devils of Andrews came back from a loss to Budweiser of Temple to defeat Buena Vera of Odessa 16-13, to remain alive in the tournament.

Others alive in the loser's bracket are: Indios of Big Spring, Kunkel's Eliminator of Fredricksberg, Pablo's Cannons of Monahans, the El Paso Brewers and Amvets of Waco.

Fuller leads GTCC Jr. tourney

Former Midland Lee golfer Kaimi Fuller shot a 74 to take the first round lead of the Green Tree Country Club Junior Championship Saturday.

Fuller, who will be attending the University of North Texas this fall, leads Cody Vaughn by two shots heading into today's play.

Ben Jones leads Ryan Thompson and Bucky Vaughn by three strokes in the 15-and-over division.

Here are the first round results of the Green Tree Junior Club Championship played Saturday.

7-9 (nine holes)— 1. Brent Bennett 53, 2. Dillon Farish 56, 3. Justin Stevens 63.

10-year-olds (nine holes)— 1. Mike Unger 45.

11-12— 1. (tie) Jason Lindgren and Joe Frazier 47, 3. Josh Haney 48, 4. Chris Tear 49, 5. Colby Weinstock 50, 6. Scott Scherer 51, 7. Daniel Pender 52, 8. Drew Miller 56, 9. Daniel Cooper 80.

15-16— 1. Ben Jones 78, 2. (tie) Ryan Thompson and Bucky Vaughn 81, 4. Sandy Talley 94, 5. Chris Mertz 96.

ANGELS: Wichita closes within one

(From 1C)

Curtis then connected off Johnson (5-7) for a 5-4 lead. Wichita scored an insurance run in the ninth. It was a tough loss for Johnson, who had nine strikeouts in the game.

"He (Johnson) has pitched well against us this year," said Wichita catcher Jerrey Thurston, who hit his fourth homer of the year against Johnson in the four-run third. "We were lucky we got to him in the third. I think that one inning he started getting pitches out over the middle of the plate and it's a good thing we got to him then because he was great the rest of the game."

Jason Thompson had a two-run double in the fatal third while Sean Mulligan had a run scoring single.

The victory moved Wichita within striking distance of catching Midland in the battle for third place. Both teams would appear to be out of the second half hunt at this stage of the season, but Thurston still feels this is an important series for both teams.

"Nobody wants to finish in last place," Thurston said. "This is a battle for respect. I don't know about Midland, but for Wichita, we have had some good games and some really bad ones in the second half. What we want to do now is play well enough to at least get respect from ourselves. We want to battle out from the bottom position."

ANGEL DUST: Midland still owns a huge 15-8 advantage over the Wranglers this season ... The two teams play again at 7 p.m. today in the second game of a short five-game homestand ... Dishman left the game in the seventh with a 4-2 lead. Bill Wengert (5-7) replaced him and got the win despite giving up two runs in his one inning of work ... Dustin Hermanson got his seventh save, thanks to a double play turned in by the Wrangler infield to end the game. It was the only Wichita double play of the game. Midland had four DPs...

Landry still fan of Dallas Cowboys

By Mike Fisher
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

AUSTIN — According to a certain famous ex-coach, the Dallas Cowboys still are reaping the benefits of his era's accomplishments, have an owner in Jerry Jones who stubbornly "does things his own way" and have a coach in Barry Switzer whom he viewed as "the enemy."

And who is this ex-coach so willing to share his opinions about the heirs to the franchise he helped build?

It's Tom Landry.

"Our tradition we established years ago is still something that's being built on, because so many of the people from our era, the Roger Staubachs and so on, feel a kinship to the present group," said Landry, the first of the only three coaches the Cowboys have had. "I do keep up with them as a fan, not as an insider. But from what I can tell, it's still a team that should be very successful."

Landry, replaced by Jimmy Johnson in 1989 after 29 seasons at the Cowboys helm, now has been away from coaching for the same amount of time Switzer had between jobs. Landry said he can identify with what Switzer has experienced in the last five years.

"Not the part about wanting to get back in," Landry said with a laugh. "The part about knowing there might have been some positives in getting out. The demands of coaching, the regimentation, the repetition. Those things wear on you as you get older."

The 69-year-old Landry, recalling the opinion of some that his age had caused the sport to pass him by, said the concept of being too old to coach is as ridiculous in the case of Switzer (who will be 57 this fall) as it was in his situation.

"I don't see age as being any big problem," Landry said. "They said it about (Miami's Don) Shula, too. It's a matter of one loss being too many for some people. Shula keeps winning, and how old he is doesn't matter.

"It's different, because he's different. In my case, after 29 years, it was about time to get out. But (Switzer) was such a very successful coach at Oklahoma, obviously a very talented coach, that the move back in has got to have him excited."

Landry said he rarely has crossed paths with Switzer, despite their shared interests in college football.

"My only real knowledge of him is from my days at the University of Texas," Landry said, "and Barry was the enemy."

But Switzer recalled being impressed with Landry when they would meet at Fellowship of Christian Athletes gatherings in Oklahoma or when Switzer would visit the team's headquarters as a guest of former Cowboys scouting chief Gil Brandt.

"I've always liked Coach Landry and always thought of him as a legend," Switzer said. "I'm friends with Gil, and he'd bring me around to see Coach Landry, who was always studying, always coming up with game plans, always working to be the best."

Landry is scheduled to be in Canton, Ohio, this weekend to see ex-Cowboys Randy White and Tony Dorsett join him in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Landry is to serve as Dorsett's presenter during Saturday's ceremonies. He called it an honor to be able to share the stage with them in Canton and at Texas Stadium, where this season White and Dorsett will become Ring of Honor members.

"It's nice to have a couple of Cowboys coming in, and Jackie Smith (who closed his career with Dallas after starring with the Cardinals), too," he said. "It's nice to have company there. Anytime a Cowboy gets recognition, it's special to me."

The recognition Landry received last year after accepting Jones' invitation to join the team's Ring of Honor hasn't mellowed the old coach's view of the man who fired him.

Landry made a point of saying he does not feel close to the organization, despite the friendly Ring of Honor show produced in 1993.

"I haven't been too welcomed to any events," Landry said. "Jerry wants to do these things his own way, and that's his right."

Record crowds see Frontier Days rodeo

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — It was another rough day for roughstock riders, including five-time world all-around champion Ty Murray, at Saturday's performance of the 98th annual Cheyenne Frontier Days rodeo.

Like the previous day, the animals won most of the battles in bull riding, bareback and saddle bronc, with a 78 being the highest ride of the day. That did not, however, stop a crowd of 17,078 people from attending, breaking the old single-day record by 70 people.

Among the big names they came for was Murray, the defending world champion in bull riding and overwhelming front-runner for his sixth world all-around title, with Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association earnings of $128,460 through July 24.

Murray's scores of 68 in the bareback and 70 in the bull riding left him out of the money for the second go-round and out of Sunday's final round. His saddle bronc score of 74 was good only for an eighth-place tie and $28 check. But it also gave him a 151 cumulative score for second place going into Sunday's finals.

"A guy doesn't get disappointed if he feels like he did all he could do," said Murray, of Stephenville, Texas. "As long as I feel that way, then I'm pleased with myself."

Murray said he needed a much better bull to have had a chance at winning that event.

"He just slung his head a lot. Kind of a mean bull," he said.

The day did see two position changes in the leader board.

David Dohlman Jr. of Allen, Okla., roped his calf in 11.1 seconds to beat out 323 other calf ropers to win the round and its $6,168 prize. He also entered first place in the cumulative standings with a time of 24.1. Dohlman credited Saturday's time to drawing a weak calf that had never run before at the rodeo.

"I knew he was going to be good and he waited on me and I roped him pretty good," he said.

Dohlman knows, however, that he can't rest on his laurels Sunday.

"I got a second and a couple tenths on them. That's not much here," he said. "It'll be tough. I'll just be glad to win something."

The other lead change was a 74 by Ryan Rodewald of Colorado Springs, Colo., that tied for first in the second round of rookie bronc riding. Rookie bronc riding is held for riders who have not made enough money to gain professional status with the PRCA.

Steer wrestling saw some action among the leaderboard, with Todd Suhn of North Platte, Neb., grabbing a 9.7-second time for third place and Brad Gleason of Ennis, Mont., taking fourth with a 9.8-second time.

Dohlman's payout was the largest among the winners of each event in the second round. Myron Duarte of Peyton, Colo., won $4,353 for taking first in the bull riding with an 85 score, while the next biggest money winner was Todd Boggust of Paynton, Saskatchewan, whose 8.3-second time won him $4,135 in steer wrestling.

Spanish women to duel in Women's Hardcourt

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — Spain's Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and Chonchita Martinez won in straight sets Saturday, setting up a championship confrontation between the world's second- and third-ranked players in the U.S. Women's Hardcourts tournament.

Sanchez Vicario, the top seed, ended the hopes of fifth-seeded Iva Majoli of Croatia 6-3, 6-3.

Martinez, the defending champion and seeded second, survived a 50-minute rain delay and eliminated fourth seeded Amanda Coetzer of South Africa 6-4, 6-4.

They meet Sunday in the $80,000 final. The outcome will not change their rankings.

The two Spaniards have met six times as professionals, the last time when Sanchez Vicario won 6-3, 6-1 in the French Open. She leads 5-1 overall.

Sanchez Vicario will be seeking her fifth title this year, including the French. Martinez has won three times, including Wimbledon.

Sanchez Vicario started slowly after playing two singles matches and a doubles match Friday because of rain delays. But at 3-3, she took control.

She broke for a 4-3 lead when the hard-hitting Majoli missed on two tries for winners and then missed an easy backhand.

By the second set, Sanchez Vicario was chasing down everything and the 16-year-old Majoli, the 23rd-ranked player in the world, tried to hit still harder and began missing.

Sanchez Vicario got the only service break she needed in the fourth game when Majoli missed an overhead.

"At the beginning, maybe I was not moving so fast after yesterday," Sanchez Vicario said. "At 3-all, I started to feel more comfortable, and at the end all my shots were making winners."

Majoli began hitting harder, but Sanchez Vicario called it risky. "You can win the point, but sometimes you make more errors," she said.

Martinez kept her record perfect at 6-0 against Coetzer, ranked 13th in the world. She also has not lost in 18 sets in two years of this tournament.

She led 4-1 before the rain delay, and afterward Coetzer pulled back to 5-4. But Martinez broke for the set when Coetzer hit a backhand wide and a forehand long.

Martinez fell behind 4-3 in the second set, but Coetzer had trouble with her serve, hitting only 55 percent of her first serves and double faulting four times. Martinez broke Coetzer two of the last three games to end the match.

Rookie Pride in St. Jude tie

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Rookie Dicky Pride nearly holed out for eagle on No. 17 in taking the lead, only to bogey the final hole and fall back into a tie for the top spot after Saturday's third round of the $1.25 million Federal Express St. Jude Classic.

Pride's approach shot from 185 yards at No. 17 bounced a few feet short of the cup and collided with the pin, which prevented the ball dropping into the hole. His tap-in for birdie left him alone in front at 14-under par.

But he gave that advantage away on the 18th, when he drove into the water and took a bogey to finish a round of 67 that left him at 13-under 200 after 54 holes.

Pride, a two-time All-Southeastern Conference golfer for Alabama, was joined atop the leaderboard by Russ Cochran, another former SEC player from Kentucky, and Gil Morgan. Cochran, a left-hander, shot 65 and Morgan had a 63.

Jay Haas led another threesome at 201 after a 68 on Saturday. Second-round leader Fuzzy Zoeller shot a 70 and Gene Sauers had a 67.

Pride, who qualified for the PGA Tour last fall, has struggled in his first season with ligament damage in his left wrist, missing the cut in 12 of 17 tournaments.

But he showed improvement two weeks ago with a course-record 64 in the second round of the Deposit Guaranty in Mississippi. He finished eighth in the rain-shortened tournament, winning $20,300.

Pride moved into the lead with a birdie on the par-4 13th, only to bogey 14. He birdied 16 and 17 to regain the lead before stuimbling on the final hole.

After taking a penalty, Pride's approach went over a mound and landed near a drain. But he pitched onto the green and sank the bogey putt to retain a share of first place.

Alfredsson avoids Welch's collapse

CANTON, Mass. (AP) — It was happening again. Helen Alfredsson was throwing away another third-round lead.

Bogey at the 13th hole. Bogey at the 15th. Suddenly, a two-stroke advantage had changed into a three-way tie for the lead in the LPGA Ping-Welch's Championship on Saturday.

Then the Swede who collapsed a week earlier in the U.S. Women's Open caught herself. No more bogeys. No more frustration.

She parred the next two holes, then birdied the 18th to end the day with a one-stroke lead at 8-under-par 208 after shooting 70.

Juli Inkster, the second-round leader, and Annika Sorenstam were tied for second at 209. Pat Bradley, the first-round leader, and Gail Graham were at 210. Graham shot 68, Sorenstam 71 and Inkster and Bradley 72.

But while Alfredsson was struggling, none of them made a strong enough run to knock her out of a share of the lead.

A strong run wasn't necessary a week ago in the Open when Alfredsson completely fell apart after taking a six-stroke lead seven holes into the third round. But she was 8-over for the next 11 holes and finished the day in third place, two strokes behind leader Patty Sheehan.

Things didn't get any better Sunday. She shot 6-over 77. When her self-destructive slide had ended, she was tied for ninth and in tears.

She had a brighter look when she walked off the 18th green of the 6,137-yard Blue Hill Country Club course after ramming home her fifth birdie of the day, making her the sole leader.

Alfredsson had climbed into a tie for first with Melissa McNamara when she birdied the ninth hole to go 8-under. She took the lead by herself when McNamara bogeyed the 11th.

Then another birdie at the 12th, a par-5 with a narrow driving area and heavily trapped green, put Alfredsson ahead by two strokes at 9-under. The worst was yet to come.

When she bogeyed the 13th and 15th, there was a three-way tie at 7-under among Inkster, McNamara and Alfredsson. When McNamara bogeyed the 17th, only Alfredsson and Inkster were tied for the lead.

Tour rookie Sorenstam, another Swede, survived a choppy round in which she bogeyed her first three holes. But she had only one bogey and five birdies the rest of the way.

Inkster, who won this tournament in 1991, played steadily with pars on the first 12 holes. She bogeyed the 13th, then birdied the 14th and finished with four more pars.

Bradley was happy to shoot par Saturday and had to birdie two of the last three holes to climb back into contention. She was 7-under after two holes, then made double bogey on the 386-yard third.

Graham missed the cut in the only three tournaments she played the last six weeks.

NOTICE

The City Council of Midland, Texas will meet in regular session on August 9, 1994, at 10:00 a.m. in the Council Chambers, City Hall to consider the proposed Statement of Objectives and the Community Development Plan for the 1994 Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Program.

A total of $1,566,117 consisting of $1,381,000 in 1994 Entitlement funds, $130,117 to be reallocated from prior program years, and $55,000 of anticipated program income (from business loans, rehabilitation loans, lot clearing and demolition programs) will be available for the 1994 CDBG program.

The Community Development Plan recognizes the CDBG objective that funds shall primarily be used for activities which benefit low and moderate income persons. Generally, Community development needs are those identified in the City's Centennial Comprehensive Plan, the City's comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy, the Midland Introspective: A Report on Community Needs, and Objectives - 2000. To address local objectives, 1994 funds are proposed to be used as follows:

Senior Nutrition Program $52,600

Home Cleaning Program $17,000
Cleaning service for elderly and handicapped residents of Hillcrest and Langtry apartments.

Prime Time After School Care $25,000
YMCA's after-school care at DeZavala, Milam and Washington Elementary Schools for low and moderate income children.

Summer Child Care Program $20,000

Battered Women Center Improvements $46,500

Southeast Youth Center Improvements $50,000
Construction of facility to house the Southeast Outreach, Inc.'s youth programs. Site to be in low and moderate income area in Southeast Midland.

Housing Rehabilitation Program $108,000
Financial assistance for rehabilitation of low and moderate income single-family, owner-occupied homes. Funds include $8,000 of anticipated program income.

Housing Emergency Repairs Program $50,000

Homeownership Incentive Program $25,000
Down payment and closing cost assistance for low and moderate income first-time home buyers.

Affordable Housing $200,000
Funding to support development of affordable housing through land acquisition, public improvements and financial support. Sites to be selected later will be in Neighborhood Housing Services areas.

Neighborhood Street Paving Program $350,000
Paving and related improvements in low and moderate income neighborhood streets to be selected later.

Park Improvement Program $190,000
Continued development of the Reyes/Mashburn/Nelms Community Park ($150,000), Sparks Park expansion program ($25,000), and facility improvements to Hidalgo Park ($15,000).

Lot clearing $50,900
Clearing of overgrown lots in slum/blighted areas. Funds include $12,000 of anticipated program income.

Demolition Program $60,000

Target Area Code Enforcement $38,092
Intensive code enforcement in slum/blighted areas.

Economic Development Program $35,000
Business loan program by Midland Economic Development Company. Funds consists of $35,000 of anticipated program income.

Program Administration $163,200
Indirect Cost Plan $71,000

Contingency $13,825

TOTAL: $1,566,117

The above activities should not cause displacement of residents. In the event that circumstances require that displacement occur, it will be conducted in accordance with the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Act of 1970. Also, should the loss of low income housing become necessary, such activity will be performed in accordance with the City's Residential Antidisplacement Plan.

Citizens are encouraged to comment on the proposed Statement. Both the proposed and the final statement of Objectives will be available for examination during regular business hours in the City's Planning Division Office, Room 220, City Hall, 300 N. Loraine. The final Statement will be forwarded to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development on or about August 24, 1994.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas, will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:00 P.M. AUGUST 18th, 1994 for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for providing a Total Heating, Ventilation, Air Conditioning (HVAC) Equipment Maintenance and Service Contract. These services are contained in the specifications entitled, "City of Midland, Texas, Midland International Airport, Total HVAC Maintenance and Service Contract", dated July, 1994.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The items of work included in the Contract consist of the following facilities: (1) Terminal Building-/Central Utilities Plant; (2) Flight Service Station Building; (3) National Weather Service Station Building; (4) LaForce Office Center; (5) Airport Maintenance Building; (6) Parking Lot Buildings; (7) Air Cargo Building; and (8) Midland International Airport-Airfield Lighting Vault. The work will also include other miscellaneous materials, equipment, machinery, superintendence and labor as required in the performance of a Total HVAC Maintenance and Service Contract.

A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is in an amount equal to five percent (5%) of the required amount of the performance bond and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, acceptable to the City of Midland, and accepted according to the latest list of companies holding certificates of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States of America. Proposals submitted without bid guaranty in the form of cash certified check or bid bond equal to five percent (5%) of the required amount of the performance bond will not be considered.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish a performance bond and a payment bond each in the amount which equals one-fifth (1/5) of the total cost of the five (5) year contract, written by a responsible surety company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344 passed by the 56th legislature, Regular Session 1959.

All lump sums and other applicable prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous contract thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonable or "unbalanced" prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid.

Bidders are expected to inspect all buildings (facilities) of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

This contract is NOT and AIP project. Although the successful bidder is required to adhere to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, as amended, as to the equal opportunity clause contained in these specifications, the Bidder must supply all the information required by the proposal form.

In all areas of employment, women and men will be afforded equal opportunity for employment. The employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.

This contract is subject to Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action, Minority Business Enterprise Contract provisions, and other requirements stated in the Instructions to Bidders and other sections applicable to the contract specifications and documents.

All bidders and proposers shall make good faith efforts to contract to small business concerns owned and controlled by socially economically disadvantaged individuals (DBE). In the event that the bidder for this solicitation qualifies as a DBE, the contract goal shall be deemed to have been met. Individuals who are rebuttably presumed to be socially and economically disadvantaged, include women, African Americans, Hispanics, Native Americans, Asian-Pacific American and Asian-Indian Americans. The apparent successful bidder (proposer) will be required to submit information concerning the DBE's that will participate in the contract. The information will include the name and address for each DBE, a description of the work to be performed by each named firm, and the dollar value of the contract (subcontract). If the bidder fails to achieve the contract goal as stated herein, it will be required to provide documentation demonstrating that it made good faith efforts in attempting to do so. A bid that fails to meet these requirements will be considered non-responsive.

Information for bidders and bid packages are on file in the office of the Director of Airports, Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas 9506 LaForce Boulevard, Midland, Texas 79711; phone number (915) 560-2200. These bid documents may be purchased at the above office for the non-refundable sum of $50.00 per set.

Cashier's check, certified check, bank money order, bank draft on a state of national bank in the amount of five percent (5%) of the total bid price stated in the proposal, made payable without recourse to the owner or a bid bond in the same amount from a reliable corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas and acceptable to the Owner, must accompany each proposal as a guarantee that the bidder, if successful, will enter into a contract, and make bond in accordance with the requirements of the specifications. the Owner reserves the right to retain any check, bank money order or bank draft as liquidated damages in the event the bidder withdraws its bid after the proposals are opened and before official rejection of the bid by the Owner, or, if successful in securing; the award of the contract, the successful bidder files to enter into the contract and fails to furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and Payment Bond, each in the full amount of the contract price, executed by a surety company or surety companies authorized to execute surety bond under and in accordance with the laws of the State of Texas.

The Owner reserves the right to reject any irregular proposal and the right to waive technicalities if such waiver is in the best interest of the Owner and conforms to state and local laws and ordinances pertaining to the letting of construction contracts.

The Owner, in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seg.) and 49 CFR Part 21, Nondiscrimination in Federally Assisted Programs of the Department of Transportation, hereby notifies all bidders that it will affirmatively assure that minority enterprises are afforded full opportunity to submit bids in response to this invitation and will not be discriminated against on grounds of race, color, or national origin in consideration for an award.

The proposed contract is subject to 49 CFR Part 23 concerning the participation of disadvantaged business enterprises and is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965 and to the Equal Opportunity Clause contained in the bidding documents.

The proposed contract is subject to the Aviation Safety and Capacity Expansion Act of 1990.

A pre-bid conference concerning this project will not be held.

NOTICE

Sealed bids will be received until 4:00 p.m., August 15th 1994, to be opened at 5:00 p.m. at the Boys and Girls Club of Midland, 110 E. New Jersey, Midland, Texas for the following bid:

Turn Your Dreams Into Reality

North of Loop 250 on Mockingbird Lane is one of Midland's newest subdivisions: Mockingbird Heights.

Currently in its first phase of development, Mockingbird Heights is home to some very innovative and original homes.

This large (approximately 4,100 square feet) property family home certainly falls into this category with a whole host of attractive design features lights flood the work surfaces with natural light while the kitchen window looks out onto the front patio across the immaculately angled double sink.

Even a gourmet chef would feel at home in this kitchen. A built-in spice rack under the cupboards, sliding shelves in all of the low storage areas to make access easier, separate pull-out bins for garbage and recyclables, and two trash cans (for ease of sorting) complete all details that the builder has added to provide the ultimate in convenience.

Beauty-different amenities for different "beholders"

Chaparral Realtors

Remember the day you first saw your present home? It was striking - a beautiful home with clean lines and an impressive silhouette against the morning sun. Inside - it sparkled, and you wanted to stay forever.

You've no doubt heard the expression "Beauty is in the eyes of the beholder!" In other words, each of us makes judgements about beauty based on our internal set of values. It is also the reason not everyone wants to buy the same home.

What does perception have to do with buying or selling a home? Plenty. Even when offered in "model home" condition, a property will not be attractive to all prospects who see it.

Even with professional decorating, some prospects will say the colors are too bland, or too gaudy. The rooms will be too cramped (or too spread out). The yard will be too small - or too big to mow. In another words "You can't please all all the people all of the time."

Even the "perfect" home must be exposed to a variety of prospective buyers before a sale will take place. The needed exposure is gained through effective home marketing by a real estate professional.

Marketing is the practice of identifying likely buyer groups, then targeting them with extensive advertising and promotional activities. It's not quite as simple as putting a sign in the yard and an ad in the paper.

For example, parents with three school-age children are likely to perceive a four bedroom home near a park, and two blocks from the elementary school , as "beautiful". To a single professional, a townhome in close to dining and entertainment might equate to "beauty."

When selling a home, the owners can make sure it is offered in "model home" condition, but it is their real estate representative who provides the appropriate buyers to appreciate it.

Pat Oreth
President /Midland Association of Realtors

One improvement to your home that has both an immediate and future benefit is attractive lighting. Whether you are in the process of selling your home or not, appropriate lighting in your home can brighten rooms, accent architectural features and furnishing, and leave a favorable impression.

There are several types of lighting, each with a different purpose and effect to consider when updating your lighting scheme. Remember that rooms need different lighting based on your family's activities.

Ambient or general lighting is the overall or background lighting in your home. It should be without glare and evenly dispersed.

Local lighting is that light needed for specific tasks such as reading, cooking and sewing. These tasks can cause eyestrain, so effective lighting is essential. Accent lighting also can be used to pin point or bathe a particular area in light.

Since the kitchen is often the most frequented room in the house and cooking requires a well lighted area, it should be brighter than most rooms. Kitchens may require both general and local lighting. For general lighting, luminous ceiling light is ideal. Florescent light fixtures placed under cabinets supplies bright shadowless light for detailed tasks and is energy efficient.

Although overhead lighting may be sufficient for bedrooms, you may prefer several table lamps with switches by the door and on the lamp itself for easy accessibility. You also might want to consider a lamp that is adjustable for reading, perhaps one that can be mounted on a bedside table or on the wall above the bed. A swing-arm, wall mounted lamp is perfect.

Versatile lighting in the family room makes any activity possible. Lamps that hang from the ceiling with adjustable height or pivotal ceiling fixture are options. A ceiling fan lamp is a great combination for air and light, especially in a commonly used room.

Torchiers placed around the outside walls of the dining room give the room an elegant look, as light bathes the upper portions of the room. Of course, a chandelier in the dining room can determine the mood for the whole room as well as reflect your personal style.

Artwork can be displayed more prominently with spot lighting using specially designed art lights that attach to the frame of the picture. Decorative corners with knick-knacks or planters also can be brought into sharper focus with spot lighting. Wall sconces work beautifully to make hallways decorative and more interesting.

Since energy efficiency often is a concern, knowing which types of lighting save energy is useful. The most efficient lighting source is florescent, using 75% less energy and lasting up to ten times longer than other types of lighting. Another tip for saving energy is to use motion sensor lights for areas outside your home such as near the garage for back porch. Lights turn on as you approach, rather than being used for hours at a time. Timers can save energy while giving the impression your house is occupied.

There are no absolutes in the decisions regarding lighting your home. I is a matter of taste as anything else, but remember you work hard to make your home beautiful...Show it off with appropriate lighting.

310 General Help Wanted

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.

OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, July 31, 1994 — SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

COMING . . .
FOCUS ON OILFIELD CHEMICALS

BRIEFING

Prices gain

Oil prices gained strength in the past week, largely due to reports that the strike by oil workers in Nigeria was having an impact on production in the country, the world's 10th largest exporter.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate for September delivery closed at $19.77 a barrel late in the week. The posted price rose to $18.50 a barrel.

Natural gas prices closed late in the week at $1.86 per thousand cubic feet.

Acquisition closed

Abraxas Production Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of San Antonio-based Abraxas Petroleum Corp., has closed its previously announced acquisition of West Texas oil and gas properties.

The acquired properties consist of 38 oil and ga wells, of which Abraxas will take over operations on a total of 33, of which 25 are natural gas wells and eight are oil wells.

The $28 million cash acquisition was funded through a credit facility recently negotiated with First Union National Bank of North Carolina. The acquisition more than doubles the company's year-end proved oil and gas reserves, and represents the largest net transaction in the company's history.

More drilling

In the Permian Basin, 115 rigs were working, up from 108 last week and just below 117 a year ago.

Lea County, N.M. was the most active in the Basin with 12 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 11 rigs and Midland County with nine rigs.

Also moving up was the national rig count, which gained six rigs to 779, above the year-ago count of 765.

Among major producing states, Texas showed the largest gain, nine rigs, while the largest decrease was in Oklahoma, six rigs.

Wildcats set

Conoco Inc. has staked 13 wildcats in Terrell County.

All 13 are staked to 14,000 ft. and are located 20 to 26 miles westsouthwest of Sheffield.

Also, HPC Operating Inc. has completed an 86-barrel Pennsylvanian Limestone oil find in Dawson County, three miles north of Ackerly.

Domestic outlook brighter

■ Positive industry results seen in several categories.

Staff Report

HOUSTON — Things are looking up for the U.S. oil and gas industry says a well-known energy accounting firm.

The three leading indicators for the U.S. oil and gas industry — exploration and development spending, production replacement rates and reserve replacement costs — all showed market improvement in 1993, according to the 1994 Arthur Anderson Oil & Gas Reserve Disclosures survey.

The survey which annually analyzes operating and financial information filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission by 250 public companies, is considered one of the most comprehensive surveys and analysis of oil industry activity.

SPENDING — The annual review of results reported by substantially all publicly held oil and gas companies showed that exploration and development (E&D) spending in the United States rose $1.5 billion, or 11 percent, to $14.5 billion in 1993. The major oil companies increase domestic E&D spending by only $500 million, or 5 percent, to $8.7 billion, while the independents increased E&D levels by $1 billion, or 21 percent, to $5.8 billion.

"These increases in 1993 are the result of the relative strength of natural gas prices, compared to

Drilling may increase in second half

Staff Report

HOUSTON — "Basic factors indicate a positive outlook for increased U.S. industry activity for the rest of this year." said Ray D. Cashman, publisher of World Oil magazine.

In his annual mid-year letter to oil industry executives Cashman said second-half 1994 drilling should be up significantly in the U.S., with an expected increase to 15,115 wells drilled, up 2,840 over first half 1994. Full-year 1994

The sun breaks through a pumpjack north of Midland. The oil and gas industry is showing a break through in several categories according to a recent survey.

Production declines still a major problem

Staff Report

While there was improvement in finding and spending categories, the news on the production side was less than heartening, and reflective of the mature nature of the U.S. oil and gas industry. Most of the negative findings had to do with declining U.S. oil and gas production:

■ The survey companies sold in-place 400 million barrels of U.S. proved oil reserves, a decline of 39 percent from 1992. Sales of domestic gas reserves decreased 25 percent to the lowest level since 1990.

■ U.S. oil production by the survey companies declined 5 percent to 1.9 billion barrels; since 1989, domestic oil production has declined 12 percent. Foreign oil production in 1993 increased 3 percent to 2.9 billion barrels.

■ U.S. gas production remained unchanged from 1992 levels at 16.4 trillion cubic feet (tcf).

Pitts

Recently I was discussing the subject of environmental overkill with a representative of a major oil company.

"Why," I asked, "are major oil companies so much quicker to run backwards and paint themselves green than they are to stand and fight the obviously unfair, unjust, unnecessary, unconstitutional and un-American environmental regulations handed down by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)?"

"A lot of it has to do with the threat of jail time," he informed me. "It has gotten that bad."

I doubted him at first, but after further investigation learned he was right on target. The environmental extremist crowd, it seems, have dipped into their legal arsenal and come up with a new and very effective technique for curbing public resistance to its cause. It's called criminalization, and it is powerful enough to even take the starch out of major oil companies.

In the past, most environmental infractions were considered misdemeanors, but today an increasing number are being prosecuted as felonies, says Mike Wofford, a Phillips Petroleum Co. attorney specializing in environmental law. He said the trend to criminalize liability offenses, by converting misdemeanors and fines to felonies and time, is bringing a whole new level of concern to the petroleum industry.

Attorneys say everyone from field hands to corporate presidents are now in danger of becoming felons as the result of real or imagined, intentional or accidental, environmental infractions — that it only takes one zealous environmental investigator or prosecutor and one sympathetic judge for some innocent people to land in jail.

There is strong evidence to suggest that this move toward criminalization of environmental offenses is not so much a move to protect anyone from anything as it is a new form of ideological intimidation — a means of getting reluctant oil companies in lock step with radical environmental policies. In other words shut-up and sign-on or go to jail.

Commenting in PhilNews, the company publication for Phillips Petroleum Co., Attorney Wofford says criminalization of environmental law is a nightmare come true but part of the federal government's announced intention to make environmental laws tougher and to expand the use of criminal investigations and sanctions in enforcing environmental law.

He said the Federal Prosecution Act of 1988 requires EPA to hire 200 special agents by the end of 1994 to conduct investigations into environmental crimes, and that oil companies from now on can expect to face more felony charges over environmental disputes.

Thus far the investigators have not been hired, but the mere notion that an environmental gestapo could be loosed on American industry to ferret out environmental felons is sending shock waves all the way up the management chain. Not that anyone is guilty, but simply because it is so easy for zealots to find unfriendlys and pin something on them.

OUTLOOK: Brighter

1992 when prices dropped to the lowest level in more than a decade," said Victor A. Burk, managing director of oil and gas industry services for Arthur Andersen.

"The outlook for an increase in domestic capital spending in 1994 was dampened early in the year by low oil prices, although many companies anticipated that strong domestic natural gas prices would justify exploration and development spending increases for natural gas in 1994. While price volatility continues to be a threat, as oil prices have improved, the industry has become cautiously optimistic and I anticipate many companies will increase their domestic exploration and development spending in 1994 as well as 1995," he added.

U.S. exploration spending increased $300 million in 1993, up nearly 10 percent from 1992, with the majors' exploration expenditures rising 5 percent, and the independents' 18 percent. U.S. development expenditures increased $1.2 billion, or 13 percent, to $10.3 billion in 1993. The majors increased development spending by 5 percent, while the independents boosted their expenditures by 26 percent to $3.9 billion, the highest level in five years.

Outside the United States, total E&D spending declined for the second consecutive year to $30.7 billion, 4 percent lower than 1992. The decrease was due primarily to a stronger U.S. dollar and the completion of several major development projects in the North Sea. The majors cut foreign spending by 6 percent, although the independents increased expenditures by 5 percent.

During the five-year survey period, foreign E&D spending by all survey companies exceeded the U.S. total by nearly $70 billion, a trend exhibited by U.S.-based survey companies in recent years. In 1992-93, foreign E&D spending by U.S.-based companies surpassed domestic spending by $3.1 billion, a reversal of the trend from 1989 through 1991, when domestic E&D spending by U.S. companies outweighed foreign spending by $8 billion.

"The strategic focus for many of the U.S.-based companies continues to be international exploration and development, where opportunities for meaningful impact on reserves, production and cash flow are greatest," said Burk. "However, many companies believe attractive opportunities still exist in the U.S. despite government legislation and regulations limiting access to the most promising areas. Attractive domestic targets include sub-salt and deep water plays in the Gulf of Mexico and improved recovery projects, all made possible through continuing advances in technology."

REPLACEMENT RATES — U.S. production replacement rates for both oil and gas rose in 1993 to the highest levels since 1990. U.S. oil production replacement from "additions only" - which includes reserve additions from new discoveries, reservoir extensions and improved recovery techniques - increased from 47 percent in 1992 to 58 percent in 1993. U.S. oil production replacement from "all sources" - which includes reserve additions, revisions and net purchases and sales of reserves - increased for the first time since 1990 to 64 percent in 1993. Over the last five years, the survey companies replaced only 54 percent of their U.S. oil production through "additions only" and just over 70 percent when "all sources" are considered.

U.S. gas production replacement from "additions only" rose from 55 percent in 1992 to 69 percent in 1993, the second highest level in the five-year survey period. When "all sources" are considered, the survey companies replaced 98 percent of their U.S. gas production, up from 59 percent in 1992, reflecting lower net sales of reserves in 1993. Over the five-year survey period, the companies replaced 65 percent of their U.S. gas production from "additions only" and 87 percent when "all sources" are considered.

Foreign gas production replacement from "additions only" rose from 96 percent in 1992 to 103 percent in 1993. The "all sources" rate increased to 88 percent, up from 54 percent in 1992, as a result of substantial net sales of reserves in 1992 and an increase in foreign gas reserve revisions in 1993 of 1.8 tcf. Over the five year period, the survey companies replaced 104 percent of their foreign gas production from "additions only" and 113 percent from "all sources."

REPLACEMENT COSTS — The cost of replacing U.S. reserves dropped to the lowest level in five years during 1993. U.S. "additions only" reserve replacement costs declined from $6.66 per barrel of oil equivalent (BOE) in 1992 to $6.28 per BOE in 1993, while "all sources" replacement costs decreased from $4.82 to $4.69 per BOE.

"The overall decline in domestic reserve replacement costs in 1993 in primarily due to the increase in U.S. proved reserve additions of about 400 million BOE, as well as the benefits from cost-reduction efforts and technological advances over the last several years," said Burk. "In addition, many companies have reduced their reserve replacement costs by focusing on core areas where they have competitive advantages through established infrastructures and operating or technical expertise."

It is interesting to note that the majors' U.S. "all sources" reserve replacement costs dropped from $4.93 per BOE in 1992 to $4.20 in 1993, while the independents "all sources" measure increased from $4.72 to $5.28 per BOE. However, when considering "additions only," U.S. reserve replacement costs for the majors and independents are virtually the same. The low crude oil prices at year-end 1993 resulted in net downward oil reserve revisions for the independents and, therefore, higher reserve replacement costs.

Foreign "additions only" reserve replacement costs fell 18 percent, from $9.46 per BOE in 1992 to $7.73 in 1993, primarily a result of decreased foreign exploration and development spending in 1993. The foreign "all sources" measure also decreased, from $6.33 per BOE in 1992 to $5.59 in 1993.

Over the past five years, the survey companies replaced U.S. reserves at an average cost of $6.94 per BOE based on "additions only," and $5.01 per BOE based on "all sources."

Comparable five-year foreign reserve replacement costs averaged $8.14 and $5.30 per BOE, respectively.

Shell posts second quarter loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co., blaming costs associated with an Ohio chemical plant fire plus other special charges, reported today a second-quarter loss of $194 million.

Income for the same period last year was $203 million.

The Houston-based energy and petrochemical firm said the special charges plus costs from the explosion and fire at its Belpre, Ohio, plant reduced second-quarter earnings by $451 million.

Three people were killed May 27 when five tanks containing as much as 4 million gallons of styrene burned, along with 400,000 gallons of diesel fuel. Styrene is used in making plastic. The plant, part of a 15-acre Shell complex 70 miles north of Charleston, W.Va., makes thermoplastic rubber for automotive parts, wire, footwear, adhesives and cable coverings.

Losses from Shell's chemical products segment alone were $233 million, which Shell blamed on litigation, property losses, damage claims, the write-off of idle assets and the sale of a subsidiary.

Shell does not post per-share earnings because it is a wholly owned subsidiary of Royal Dutch-Shell Group of Cos.

Houston-based Shell's revenues were $5.1 billion for the quarter, down from $5.5 billion a year ago.

Shell Chairman Philip Carroll said the company's principal business segments continued strong operational performances despite difficult price and margin conditions.

"This reflects the vastly improved cost structure, which has been achieved over the last three years."

At one time individuals who actually committed environmental crimes were held accountable, but increasingly managers and companies as a whole are being placed at risk of criminal prosecution, if it can be found that management was in a position to have known about the crime and failed to prevent or stop it.

Sentences of up to five years are not uncommon for environmental "crimes" and in worst case scenarios sentences of up to 15 years can be handed out to an individual who willfully breaks an environmental law knowing that it could harm others. Fifteen years in jail for failing to comply with an environmental law is a pretty stiff sentence in anyone's book.

In some cases the time may be deserved. But when one considers that proposed environmental sentences are stiffer than those handed out to drunk drivers who knowingly get drunk, and kill innocent people, the strong stench of political agenda invades one's nostrils.

Considering the disparity of punishment one wonders if the issue is really one of public safety or control and power. Could it be about enlightened, liberal environmentalists and judges getting insensitive, greedy and dirty business by the whatevers?

Such speculation is fueled by some of the recent "creative sentences" passed down by the courts in environmental cases, and the fact that past compliance records are factored into the severity of the sentence of the company or individual charged with environmental crimes.

In other words, if an oil company charged has a good record of running backwards, kissing EPA behinds, and painting itself green, the judge may go a little easier on sentences if the company is ever found guilty of an environmental law.

But those with a history of resisting compliance might not find the going so easy in court. In fact, with environmental investigators on the loose, their record alone just might land them in the courthouse.

If that isn't offensive enough, some sympathetic judges have taken to rubbing salt into the wound of environmental "criminals" with what they call creative sentences. For instance, in Ohio a judge ordered five businessmen, found guilt of environmental crimes, to become members of the Sierra Club. Other courts have required defendants to make contributions to environmental groups. If judges can go this far, and apparently they can, will they next order individuals — even entire corporations — to undergo environmental sensitivity training? Will they order oil companies to hire a certain quota of their employees from environmental groups? Don't laugh. It could happen.

With a stacked deck, the incentive for oil companies to not resist proposed environmental policies becomes obvious — stay out of jail.

At the same time the environmental agenda becomes equally obvious: Get control.

I am no conspiracy hunter, but it seems clear, to me, that it is the express intent of the radical environmental agenda to criminalize environmental laws and crank up the level of intimidation with the threat of jail terms in order to remove resistance and speed up compliance to radical regulations. If that is not the intent, it is certainly the effect.

It's a safe bet that the new president in 1996 will be a conservative, and one item at the top of his agenda should be to do whatever it takes to reign in EPA — even if it means gutting the out-of-control bureaucracy with massive budget cuts. Even Democrats now confess that something must be done to bring EPA, an agent of the radical econuts, under control. EPA alone is not to be totally blamed, Congress bears some responsibility for its ill-advised laws that have increased the agency's power. Putting a hobble on the Environmental Protection Agency won't be the total solution to what is becoming environmental terrorism, but it will be a start.

DECLINES: A problem

while foreign gas production increased 5 percent to 9.7 tcf, the highest level in five years.

- U.S. proved gas reserve declined slightly to 103.2 tcf, or approximately a 10-year reserve life based on 1993 production. Foreign proved gas reserves decreased slightly to 158.4 tcf, representing a 16-year reserve life.
- U.S. proved oil reserves decreased 3 percent to 19.5 billion barrels, while foreign proved oil reserves remained virtually unchanged at 28.8 billion barrels.

DRILLING: On incline

U.S. drilling will increase about 5 percent over 1993 to 27,390 wells.

He said activity in the Gulf of Mexico should increase 8 percent in second half 1994 to 63 wells drilled, for a remarkable 1994 total of 1,220 wells, higher than earlier projections."

Said Cashman: "Two factors are raising expectations for a better second half: continued strong gas demand with prices at $2-plus per MMBtu in the U.S., and perceptions that worldwide crude oil supply/demand figures are closer than they have been in many years. These factors have significantly boosted prices over the fist half, with WTI spot prices rebounding to the $20/bbl range."

"It appears that the market is convinced the gas bubble is gone. The first normal winter in years plus accelerating U.S. economic growth caused a spurt in demand that has continued. Gas storage volumes were drawn down to their lowest level since records have been kept. That storage has to be refilled by late October, which will support prices through what is normally the low demand part of the year."

- Drilling of 15,115 wells in the last half, up 2,840 over the first six months;
- Drilling of 633 wells in the Gulf of Mexico in the second half, up 8 percent, giving a total 1,220 wells for all of 1994 — significantly higher than earlier expectations;
- Total drilling of 27,390 wells and 151.4 million feet of hole, up about 5 percent in both categories over estimated 1993 drilling.
- An average 1994 rig count of 783, up 4 percent from 1993's average of 753.

Internationally, the World Oil editors say that "gains in newer oil/gas provinces will just about offset continued slumps in some traditional areas, such as Eastern Europe, Western Europe and the Middle East, to keep 1994 drilling activity outside the U.S. at about the same level as 1993. A dramatic increase in expected South American drilling and a substantial gain in drilling for the African continent are projected. Outside the U.S., 35,386 wells are expected to be drilled in 1994."

BRIEFS

USX-Delhi Group buying two gas plants

DALLAS — USX-Delhi Group has announced that Delhi Gas Pipeline Corp. has agreed to acquire the Aker and Teas Gas Treating Plants from Texaco Exploration and Production Inc. The plants are located in Freestone County, Texas.

Each plant consists of a sulfur recovery unit with related pipelines and compression facilities. The treating capacity of the Aker plant is 190 long tons per day of sulfur, and the Teas facility can treat 175 long tons per day.

Nabers raises over $1 million for campaign

Railroad Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers says she has exceeded the $1 million mark in fundraising for her bid to retain her seat on the Texas Railroad Commission. In her Contributions and Expenditures Report filed with the Texas Ethics Commission, Nabers showed her campaign as having raised more than $1 million by the June 30th deadline.

Bellweather, Odyssey Partners to merge

Bellweather Exploration Co., an independent energy company based in Houston, and Odyssey Partners, Ltd., a privately held exploration company based in Dallas, have agreed to merge. Odyssey will become a wholly owned subsidiary of Bellwether, and owners of Odyssey will receive 916,665 shares of Bellwether common stock and $5.5 million in cash. Odyssey will maintain its principal office in Dallas, Texas after the merger.

Commission issues horizontal permits

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission granted 70 permits for horizontal wells statewide in June, reflecting a surge in activity from the previous month, and marking the strongest showing since April, 1992 when 72 horizontal permits were issued.

By comparison, 58 permits for the advanced technology wells were issued in May, 51 in April, and 60 in March, 1994.

So far, the Railroad Commission has granted 330 new permits for horizontal wells in 1994. In all, a grand total of 3,985 permits for horizontal wells have been issued in Texas since 1994.

There was just one new horizontal permit issued in all of the Pearsall (Austin Chalk) Field in June, that to an operators in LaSalle County.

By comparison, 33 permits were issued to those drilling horizontal holes in the Giddings (Austin Chalk) last month. Fayette and Lee Counties led the rally with 11 each, while operators in Burleson and Washington Counties accounted for a total of 14, posting seven each.

Also, Brazos County added another seven permits last month, raising its total to 389.

The prolonged horizontal play in the Giddings Field has now accounted for a total of 1,373 permits through June 30, compared to 1,298 granted to operators in the Pearsall Field through the first half of 1994.

Horizontal completions increased in June as drilling was concluded on 42 of the advanced technology wells, raising to 3,194 the number of horizontal wells completed in Texas since 1984.

Bellweather amends registration statement

HOUSTON — Bellwether Exploration Co. has filed an amendment to a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission registering 4,250,000 shares of its common stock.

Of these shares, 3,750,000 shares are being offered for the account of the company and 500,000 shares are being offered for the account of certain stockholders. Howard, Weil, Labouisse, Friedrichs Inc. and Principal Financial Securities Inc. will act as representatives of the underwriters.

Bellwether will use a portion of the proceeds of the offering to fund the cash consideration related to the previously announced merger with Odyssey Partners Ltd., its share of Odyssey's 54-square-mile 3-D seismic program designed to image a field overlaying a salt dome in south Louisiana and its share of the drilling on certain other exploratory prospects owned by Odyssey.

Bellwether is an independent energy company based in Houston.

Amoco forms electric power subsidiary

The nation's fifth-largest oil company said it plans to form a subsidiary, Amoco Power Resoufces Corp.

The new unit will be based in Houston, said Daniel Dietsch, a Houston Amoco spokesman.

The office of the independent power company will begin with a staff of about 20 workers, Dietsch said. It will be headed by Inge B. Fretheim, currently president of Amoco Canada's marine drilling company based in Calgary, Alberta.

The new firm hopes to enter joint ventures, focusing first on areas where Amoco has a presence or is developing relationships.

Amoco already owns and operates approximately 800 megawatts of generating capacity worldwide in support of its operations. One of these power plants is part of the refinery in Texas City, Dietsch said.

Texaco to tone down gasoline ads

HOUSTON (AP) — Texaco will tone down advertising claims for its Clean System3 premium gasoline after a challenge from rival Chevron.

Instead of claiming its new gas is a "breakthrough in technology" capable of "changing what gasoline can do," Texaco now will offer meeker announcements.

The ads will now say the gas is "a breakthrough in Texaco technology."

Chevron took its complaints to the National Advertising Division of the Better Business Bureau, arbiter in the case.

After a three-month review, the bureau issued a nonbinding ruling, confirming Texaco's claims that Clean System3 makes autos run cleaner. The gasoline performs better than 70 percent of the competing gasolines on the market, according to the Engine Research Center at the University of Wisconsin.

However, the center also found that the Texaco gasoline did not perform better than premium grades made by Chevron.

UPRC results even with year-ago results

FORT WORTH — With record hydrocarbon sales and transportation volumes, Union Pacific Corporation increased net income 11 percent to $220 million or $1.07 cents per share. This compares to second quarter earnings last year of $198 million or 96 cents per share.

Union Pacific Resources Company (UPRC), the wholly-owned oil and gas subsidiary of Union Pacific Corporation, achieved second quarter earnings of $72.4 million, which as essentially even with last year's second quarter results of $72.2 million. Natural gas volumes were up 37 percent from the same period last year. Plant liquids volumes were up 26 percent for the quarter; however, crude oil volumes were down 6 percent compared to the second quarter of 1993 due to the first quarter sale of the Wilmington field. Overall, volumes were up 21 percent over the second quarter 1993.

Natural gas realizations were $1.87 per thousand cubic feet (Mcf) versus $1.72 per Mcf last year. Plant liquids prices were below last year at $8.98 per barrel compared to $10.25 per barrel in 1993. Crude prices also were lower in the second quarter 1994 than in the same period last year, $15 29 per barrel versus $17.11 per barrel. However, both plant liquids and crude prices were stronger this quarter than in the first quarter of this year and rose solidly in May and June.

The company moved forward in developing the assets acquired in the first quarter's Amax Oil and Gas transaction. Three operated rigs currently are drilling in the Ozona field in West Texas and construction plans are being developed for two new gas plants. Four wells have been drilled on the South Texas properties. UPRC plans to spend $85 million in 1994 in continued development of the Amax assets.

Midland Resources sees revenues rise

Staff Report

Midland Resources announced unaudited results for the second quarter of 1994.

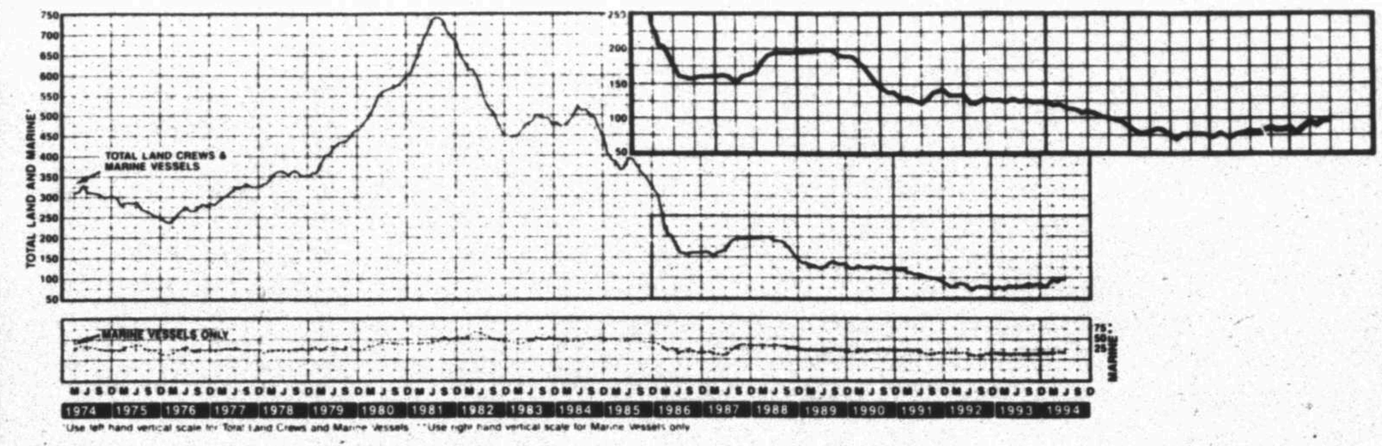
The company reported net income of $252,000 or 7 cents per share on revenues of $1,560,000. This compares to a loss of $26,000 or 1 cent per share on revenues of $1,198,000 for the same quarter a year ago.

Quarterly earnings were up cents per share and quarterly revenues were up 30 percent from the same quarter last year, despite the 10 percent drop in average oil prices. Second quarter natural gas production increased 61 percent to 349 million cubic feet and oil production increased 10 percent to 42,420 barrels. These increases were principally due to several successful recompletions in the prolific multi-pay Frio sands of the Copano Bay field property.

Natural gas and oil reserves at mid-year improved substantially with an estimated 78 percent increase in oil reserves and 49 percent increase in gas reserves., Product price improvements strengthened mid-year reserve estimates, however, the predominate factor in the reserve increase was the successful test in the Jameson field of the recently developed extreme overpressure completion technique. This advanced technology completion technique, coupled with downhole pump design improvements, and computerized well treatment programs developed in conjunction with Sandia National Laboratories, has enabled the company to accelerate plans to fully develop the field and expand the scope of the development program.

Broad applications of advanced technology, wherever possible, have continued to enable the company to trim costs. Production expenses in the quarter dropped from last year by 29 percent to $5.59 per net equivalent barrel. These efficiencies are certainly due in part to assistance from and cooperative efforts with the National Laboratories under the Department of Energy-sponsored Natural Gas and Oil Technology Partnership. Utilizing advanced technology to achieve improved efficiencies in both development and production is clearly a critical component to future enhanced profitability.

US SEISMIC CREW COUNT



Seismic activity rises

The Society of Exploration Geophysicists reports that the number of land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and its waters rose in June. The number of land crews increased by three to 69 while the number of marine crews fell by two to 20, making a total of 89 crews working on and offshore U.S.

OC schedules petroleum tech courses

ODESSA — Odessa College has announced its schedule of petroleum technology classes for fall 1994.

The classes will be held evenings from 7 to 9:50 p.m. on the Odessa College campus.

Mondays, "Petroleum Overview," "Drilling Methods" and "Natural Gas Processing" will be offered.

Tuesdays will bring "Well Workover Methods," "Industrial Safety" and "Computers for Petroleum."

Wednesday, "Rotary Drilling Fluids," "Gas and Liquid Measurement" and "Hazardous Waste and Emergency Response" will be offered.

On Thursdays will be "Environmental Issues" and "Computers for Petroleum."

Odessa College will offer "Well Completion Methods" from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. as an extension service in Andrews.

In addition, the program will offer a Safety and Environmental Technician certificate program.

Fall courses that apply toward the certificate or an associate's degree in petroleum technology will be "Industrial Safety," "Hazwoper," "Environmental Issues," "Petroleum Overview," "Computers for Petroleum," "Report Writing" and "Business and Professional Speech."

Four additional petroleum technology certificate programs are being offered for well head pumper, gas compressor operator, gas plant operator and refinery panel operator.

Classes will begin August 24 at 5 p.m.

Early fall registration runs from July 27 to August 11 from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Mondays through Wednesdays and 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursdays. Fall registration for new students is August 18 and for returning students on August 23. Late registration is August 25-September 6.

The courses can be taken for credit or non-credit and petroleum scholarships are available.

Staff Report

- U.S. petroleum imports (crude and products) in June were 9,558,000 barrels per day (b/d); imports same month in 1993 were 8,805,000 b/d.
- Total imports in June as a percentage of total U.S. domestic petroleum deliveries were 54.5%; imports as a percentage same month in 1993 were 51.5%.
- Persian Gulf petroleum represented 20.7% of total U.S. petroleum imports in April; 22.1% same month in 1993.
- Average price for barrel OPEC crude oil $16.38 (7/8/94) (DOE).
- Average refiner acquisition cost for barrel U.S. crude oil $14.71 (April 1994) (DOE).
- U.S. crude oil production in June was 6,538,000 b/d (of which 1,498,000 b/d was Alaskan); total U.S. production same month 1993 was 6,795,000 b.d. U.S. natural gas liquids production same month 1993 was 6,795,000 b/d. U.S. natural gas liquids production in June was 1,768,000 b/d. Same month in 1993 was 1,753,000 b/d.
- U.S. natural gas marketed production was 52.9 billion cubic feet daily (cf/d) in April; marketed natural gas production same month in 1993 was 53.1 billion cf/d.
- U.S. deliveries from primary storage of motor gasoline in June were 7,766,000 b/d; deliveries of motor gasoline same month in 1993 were 7,700,000 b/d.
- U.S. deliveries from primary storage of distillate fuel oil (home heating and diesel) in June were 2,950,000 b/d; deliveries of distillate same month 1993 were 2,863,000 b/d.
- Count of active rotary drilling rigs in U.S. as announced 7/1/94 was 766; average for 1993 was 754; all-time high of 4,530 announced 12/28/81. Record low 596 announced 6/12/92. (Baker Hughes Inc., Houston).

English well sets drilling records

HOUSTON — Anadrill, acting as an integrated service contractor for BP's Wytch Farm extended reach drilling project, recently set a new world record for a single motor run in 12-1/4 inch hole, while drilling the field's F21 well.

The well, drilled in May with a PowerPak steerable motor assembly, an M3 MWD tool and a Hycalog PDC bit, drilled 11,225 ft. in one 278-hour run,

The 11,225 ft. run also established new records for a single PDC bit run and single run MWD footage in 12-1/4 inch hole. The previous motor run record was 9,728 ft., set in the North Sea; the previous PDC record was 11,213 ft., set in Venezuela.

Total depth of the F21 well was 20,360 ft., and total horizontal displacement was 17,896 ft., with a tangent section of 82 degrees. The 12-1/4 inch section was completed six days ahead of schedule, with 96 percent of footage drilled in rotary mode over the record one.

"As our fourth well at Wytch Farm, the F21 gave us the ideal opportunity to assimilate the data and experience from the previous three wells to fine tune both the well design and assembly performance in order to further increase drilling efficiency," said Andy Hatch, Anadrill's well planning and engineering coordinator on the job. "The performance on the record-breaking run was greatly aided by the adoption of oversize motor stators to accommodate the relatively high circulating temperature and low hydrostatic pressures that are unique to extended reach drilling at Wytch Farm," he added.

Hatch also cited effective hole cleaning as a significant contributor to the Wytch Farm wells' success to date.

The Wytch Farm field, located on the South Coast of England, is the largest onshore oil field in Western Europe, producing some 90,000 barrels per day from the Sherwood Triassic reservoir. A portion of the recoverable reserves extend offshore.

BP originally planned to develop the field's offshore reserves by building an artificial island at a capital cost of $260 million, with first oil forecast for 1996. However, in late 1991, the company concluded that extended reach drilling could reduce capital expenditures by 50 percent and advance first oil by three years, to 1993, and opted instead for that alternative.

Santa Fe posts quarterly figures

HOUSTON — Santa Fe Energy Resources announced second quarter income attributable to common shareholders of 2 cents per share and provided a status report on its projects in Argentina, Bolivia and Indonesia.

The company reported second quarter 1994 earnings of $4.1 million with earnings attributable to common shares of $1.6 million. For the comparable period in 1993, the company reported net income of $4 million with earnings attributable to common shares of $2.3 million or 2 cents per share.

Operating income for the quarter was $12.8 million compared with $15.4 million in the second quarter of 1993. Discretionary cash flow for the period was $39.1 million or 43 cents per share compared with $44.5 million or 50 cents per share in the 1993 period.

Crude oil production in the second quarter averaged 66,000 barrels per day, compared with production of 67,300 barrels per day in the 1993 period. Natural gas production for the quarter averaged 138.4 million cubic feet per day, compared with 161 Mmcfd in the same quarter last year. The lower production volumes are a result of the non-core asset disposition program initiated in October 1993.

Oil prices recognized by Santa Fe Energy in the quarter averaged $12.63 per barrel, compared with a recognized price of $14.52 per barrel in the 1993 period. Natural gas prices recognized by Santa Fe in the second quarter averaged $1.77 per thousand cubic feet net of a 5 cent per Mcf hedging expense. For the comparable 1993 period, Santa Fe recognized natural gas prices of $1.79 per Mcf net of a hedging expense of 27 cents per Mcf.

Revenues for the quarter totaled $99.7 million compared with $116.3 million in the 1993 period primarily due to the higher prices and production volumes in the quarter last year. Total costs and expenses for the 1994 period were $86.9 million, down from $100.9 million in last year's quarter. When compared ton a unit of production basis, operating costs were reduced from the 1993 period by an average of 20 cents per barrel of oil equivalent due to cost reduction efforts. In addition, depletion, depreciation and amortization expense was reduced by 13 percent due to the disposition of non-core assets and to the producing property impairment recorded in 1993.

In Argentina, Santa Fe has successfully completed six wells and three additional wells are scheduled to further develop the company's 1993 Sierra Chata natural gas discovery. A gas sales contract has been sighed with Metro-Gas, a large Buenos Aires gas distributor, with delivery to begin May 1, 1995.

Another exploratory prospect is scheduled to be drilled near Sierra Chata on the Chihuidos block CNQ-10 in the third quarter of 1994 with two additional wildcat exploratory wells scheduled to be drilled on CNQ-7 by year end.

Announcements of new oil fields in Vietnam set for near future

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — Foreign companies exploring for oil and gas in Vietnamese waters will announce as many as five new discoveries in the near future, Vietnam's senior oil and gas executive said.

Ho Si Thoang, chairman of the state-owned oil monopoly PetroVietnam, reiterated Vietnam's sovereignty over an offshore area claimed by China and said his company's drilling activity there is continuing despite reports of interference by Chinese ships.

Vietnam's most recent oil discoveries with commercial potential were announced in June and July by Japan's Mitsubishi Oil Co. Ltd. and Malaysia's Petronas Carigali off the southern Vietnamese coast.

"I can affirm that in the very near future, Vietnam will have other formal declarations about new oil fields," Thoang said at a news conference.

Speaking to reporters afterward, he named South Korea's PEDCO, AEDC of Japan and British Petroleum as three of the companies that have yet to announce their discoveries. The companies still must drill at least four wells at each site to prove whether these finds are commercially viable, he added.

Several American companies are among those now negotiating with PetroVietnam to explore in Vietnamese territory, Thoang said.

"Some (U.S.) companies want to 'farm into' (existing) blocks, some companies want to negotiate on new blocks and some ... are now processing seismic data on other blocks," he said. Thoang would not identify the companies, but said he hoped PetroVietnam would sign contracts with new U.S. partners soon.

Five American companies already have won approval to explore here since President Clinton's removal of the 19-year U.S. economic embargo against Vietnam on Feb. 3. They are Mobil Corp., Occidental Petroleum Corp., Atlantic Richfield Co., Kerr-McGee Corp. and Union Texas Petroleum Holdings Inc.

PetroVietnam has signed 28 production-sharing contracts with foreign oil and gas companies since Vietnam enacted its law on foreign investment in 1988.

These companies are not unduly concerned about competing territorial claims between Vietnam and neighboring China, Thoang said.

"You can evaluate by their activities," he said. "You can see that they are continuing to do their work very normally."

Mobil, Occidental and ARCO, for example, are operating in areas claimed fully or in part by China. Occidental and ARCO already have started exploratory drilling, and Mobil plans to sink its first well next month.

Tensions between Vietnam and China worsened earlier this month when Beijing reportedly sent ships to blockade a Vietnamese drilling platform in the Tu Chinh area, about 250 miles east of the Vietnamese coast. China already had awarded Tu Chinh, which the Chinese call Wan'an Bei 21, to Crestone Energy Corp. of the United States. Vietnam insists the area lies within its own exclusive economic zone.

"In this current situation, I don't think any country, including China, can block Vietnam's ownership of the waters in a rude way," Thoang said. "So I affirm that the exploration activities of Vietnam are still being carried out normally."

Thoang spoke at a conference to announce PetroVietnam's second international oil and gas conference, scheduled next March. Organizers say they expect more than 200 companies to participate.

Vietnam currently produces commercial quantities of oil at only one offshore field, Bach Ho (White Tiger), 75 miles southeast of the Vietnamese port of Vung Tau. Two other fields — Rong (Dragon) and Dai Hung (Big Bear) — will begin producing later this year, Thoang said.

PetroVietnam expects to pump 7 million tons of crude oil from all three fields in 1994. It hopes to achieve an annual output of 15 million to 20 million tons by the year 2000, he said.

Commission issues $88,500 in fines

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has assessed $88,500 in administrative penalties to 11 oil and gas operators for violations under commission well plugging and pollution rules.

John F. Shanley of Dallas was ordered to pay $15,500 for seven inactive and unplugged wells on a Young County lease.

Searoc Oil Co. Inc. of San Antonio was assessed $6,000 for two unplugged wells in Frio County; Terry L. Stellflug of Newberg, Ore. was penalized $18,000 for three inactive and unplugged wells, none of which was equipped with a wellhead assembly, on leases in Caldwell County.

In addition, Alrich Oil & Gas Inc. of Corpus Christi was ordered to pay $5,000 for an unplugged well and for failure to backfill an open pit on a lease in Atascosa County; Leigh Operating Co. of Dallas was assessed $5,000 for failure to cut off surface casing three feet below the ground upon completion of well plugging activity and for failure to backfill four open pits on a Haskell County lease.

Bill Horn Jr. of Graham was penalized $11,000 for one inactive and unplugged well, for oil-saturated soil and for failure to backfill an open pit containing basic sediment and oil on a lease in Upton Count; Lucros International Corp. of Van Buren, Ark. was ordered to pay $14,000 and reimburse the state Oil Field Clean Up Fund $225 for four unplugged wells, for discharges of oil and saltwater and for an unpermitted pit on a Runnels County lease; Anchor Operating Co. of Houston was assessed $4,500 for for discharges of oil on a lease in Fayette County.

JSB Petroleum of Houston was penalized $3,500 and ordered to reimburse the state Oil Field Clean Up Fund $639 for discharges of oil and saltwater on a lease in Chambers County; and Glencair Resources (USA) Inc. of Toronto, Ontario, Canada was ordered to pay $4,000 for one inactive and unplugged well, for which required commission forms were not filed, on a Coleman County lease.

One operator agreed to pay a penalty without admitting any violation of commission rules. Amax Oil & Gas Inc. of Fort Worth was assessed $2,000 for discharges of oil and gas waste on a lease in Rusk County.

To date in 1994, the commission has assessed $2,776,881 in well plugging and pollution penalties, compared to $1,643,901 in such penalties levied during the same period last year.

Offshore platforms built by robots

N.Y. Times News Service

JUPITER, Fla. — To meet today's demands for construction, maintenance and repairs on deep-water oil platforms, the ideal diver has to have arms seven feet long, be able to dead-lift more than three tons and be ready to toil for days, without rest or complaint, more than half a mile beneath the surface.

In other words, the diver must be a robot.

In the petroleum industry, robots are increasingly displacing human divers, making it possible to produce oil and gas from greater and greater depths.

An estimated 175 of the machines, which can weigh several tons and cost more than $2 million each, now serve the energy industry on sites from the North Sea to the Gulf of Mexico to the South China Sea.

On a recent day in Jupiter at the factory of the leading undersea robot maker, Perry Tritech Inc., a top-of-the line Triton machine was undergoing final tests before being shipped to Asia for a partnership including Amoco and Chinese national oil company.

Drew L. Michel, a deep-water robotics consultant who helped broker the purchase, snuggled up to the front of the Triton as if it were an old friend. "Think about this replacing a diver," he cooed. "His eyes are the sonar and the cameras, and these are his arms," he said, reaching down to the machine's claws.

Michel, president of ROV Technologies Inc., is the nation's, and probably the world's, leading consultant for oil companies on underwater robotics. (ROV stands for remotely operated vehicles.)

He recently handled a Shell Oil order for a robot from Perry Tritech to operate from its Auger platform at a record, 2,860-foot depth in the Gulf of Mexico, almost 2,000 feet beyond where human divers venture.

The diving robots, which look something like garbage dumpsters outfitted with titanium claws, can perform all sorts of deep-water maintenance and repair feats, like drilling, cutting and bolting.

They can even replace the 90-pound gaskets in blowout preventers that keep wells from spewing oil or natural gas. A robot can do the repair job, which might take a human crew two days, in two hours.

The robots are operated remotely by three-person crews working aboard the oil platform or a repair ship, guided by video cameras on the robots or, in cases of total darkness or murky water, by sonar systems.

Outside the oil industry, underwater robots have dug trenches for telecommunications cables operated by such companies as AT&T and British Telecom. They have also been deployed for retrieving airplane wreckage or the black box flight recorders in crashes including the Korean airline disaster and the Challenger shuttle explosion.

Michel says that robots remove the rationale for risking human life, whether underwater or in outer space. "What I'm saying is, 'Hey, there's no reason to put a man in space, and there's no reason to put a man at the bottom of the ocean'," he said.

So rapidly are undersea robots improving in reliability and sophistication that Perry Tritech has ruled out color sales brochures that quickly go out of date.

Rather than buying a robot outright, oil producers usually pay a company specializing in underwater operations, like Houston-based Oceaneering International, a daily rate, ranging from $5,000 to $8,000 for the largest machines. These companies also provide round-the-clock crews, normally two teams of three people.

The first remotely operated vehicles, developed by the United States military in the 1960s, did not replace divers. Rather, they aided them by monitoring and scouting.

The military still uses undersea robots, but most of the uses are hush-hush. They include spying, mine-hunting and general salvage in water as deep as 20,000 feet.

In 1975, oil companies began using simple underwater robots that had lights, a video camera, and depth and direction sensors. By 1977, these machines allowed Shell to build a platform in the Gulf of Mexico in 1,025 feet of water.

The collapse of the oil market in the early and mid-1980s nearly halted the building of sophisticated underwater robots. But in the last few years about 50 of the heaviest duty machines have been sold, mainly by Perry Tritech, but also by undersea operators like Sonsub Inc., of Houston.

And nearly all the 175 or so heavy-duty machines in existence are fully employed, Michel said — unlike almost every other category of oilfield equipment.

Virtually all the robots for underwater industrial use have tethers to transmit power and data. The machines are built to work for days on end, sending back a flood of pictures, from several cameras, through fiber optic cables.

The simplest models are mere underwater eyeballs, bristling with lights and cameras and costing about $500,000. The most sophisticated vehicles, like Perry's $2.5 million Triton model for Amoco, weigh as much as 4 tons, and the supporting equipment can weigh an additional 34 tons or so.

Winding and unwinding a tether thousands of feet long, and keeping a bobbing ship or oil platform from jerking the robot around, requires a huge spool or drum that is lowered into the water with the robot.

The equipment on the surface includes a crane and winch for lowering and raising the robot and tether spool.

Two shipping containers above board complete the system. One houses racks of controls, video monitors and recorders. The other is a workshop.

Below, on an aluminum frame, hang motors; cameras; hydraulic piping and pumps; thrusters that look like tubes with dual propellers spinning inside, and, in front, the arms.

The most sophisticated arms have vise-like claws and shoulder, elbow and wrist joints that allow a full range of motion. The robot's arms, known in the trade as slave manipulators, are operated from the control room by master manipulators.

These master manipulators, of dense black plastic, shorter and thinner than human arms, also have joints. Equipped with dials and switches, they are attached to a laptop or desktop control panel resembling a souped-up Nintendo game.

Like a human arm tethered to a brain and nervous system, the manipulator can learn.

Unlike industrial robots that know only how to repeat the same simple tasks again and again, an undersea robot can be taught various operations — turning valves, inspecting welds and the like — that it can memorize and later repeat at the push of a few buttons on the control panel.

New oil sought in old Ohio wells

■ Meridian Oil is betting the world's first giant oil field, in Ohio, still contains oil.

Associated Press

LIMA, Ohio — Rich farm land near this northwest Ohio city yielded the world's first giant oil field, producing 380 million barrels of oil in 50 years.

Then production declined, and freewheeling wildcatters headed to Texas and Oklahoma.

Now a Houston-based company believes the field may not be dry.

Meridian Oil Inc. said it plans to spend $2.8 million to tap 22 wells in the next 30 days in suburban Perry Township.

The company plans to use a low pressure water injections system to force oil toward the wells. Production had slowed because wells were dug in such quantity and proximity that reservoir pressure that pushes oil to the surface was depleted.

"The field was abandoned before the advent of modern secondary recovery technology. Meridian hopes to use advanced technologies to significantly increase the recovery of oil from the field," company spokesman James Leahy said.

The 22 wells are on 640 acres of the Trenton formation, or Lima-Indiana field. That field yielded 380 million barrels of oil between 1885 — when it was discovered by Ben Faurot — and 1935, when the last well was abandoned.

At the time, the field was the world's largest in production and size, according to Meridian and Ohio's oil and gas division.

The discovery of oil transformed the area. More than 76,000 wells dotted the land from Lima through Findlay, Bowling Green, Gibsonburg and beyond.

Ohio's oil production peaked at 24 million barrels in 1896. But by the 1920s and 1930s, production had declined.

Today, there are only a few hundred wells in northwest Ohio, most producing less than 10 barrels a day.

Most of Ohio's nearly 30,000 active wells also produce less than 10 barrels daily, said Michael McCormac, spokesman for the state Natural Resources Department's oil and gas division.

State production last year was 8.2 million barrels, placing Ohio 18th in the nation for production, he said.

Meridian officials said the search for more oil should create jobs but declined to say how many.

The company has leased the land from Palladian, a Lima-based oil and gas company, and will own and operate the wells.

Meridian is the nation's largest independent oil and gas company, owning more than 10 million acres and 12,000 wells in the United States. It specializes in coalbed methane production and horizontal drilling.

"If it works, there is all sorts of potential," McCormac said about the venture.

Perry Township Trustee Harold Cox said he believes Meridian will hit pay dirt.

"There is more oil down there, I know there is. ... They used to produce a lot of oil years back. I believe they can do that again," Cox said.

Trustee John Burgess Jr. said he will reserve judgment.

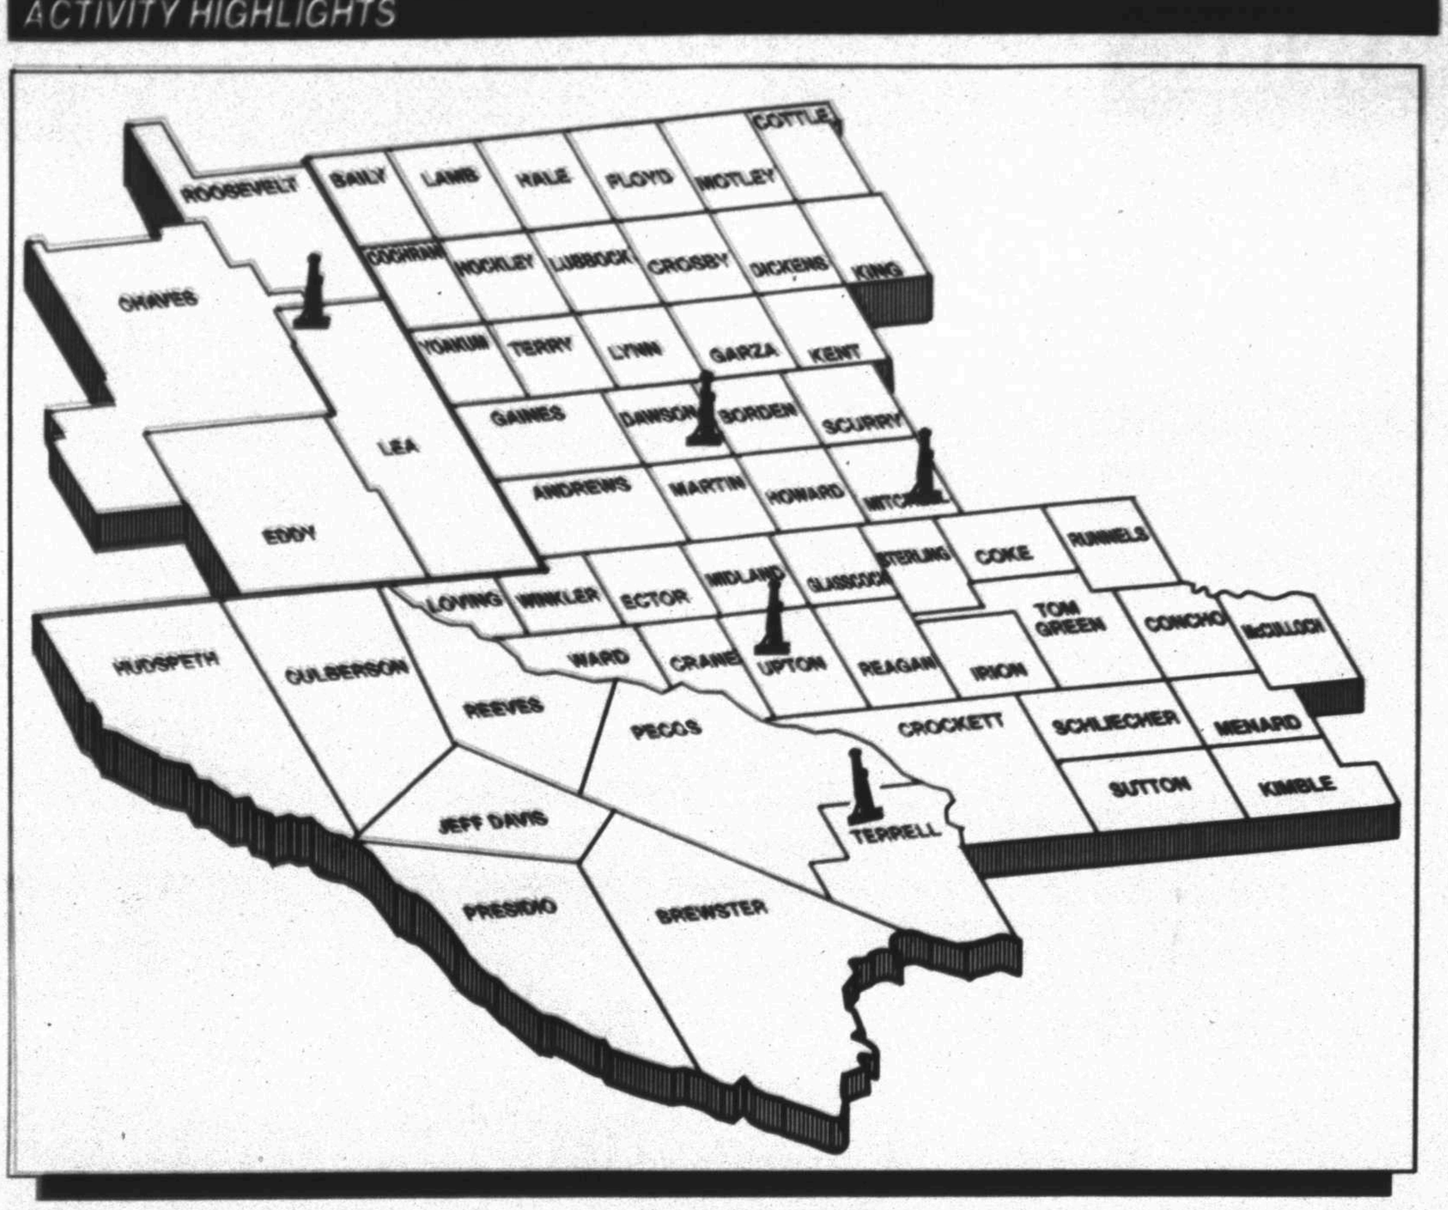
ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS



Conoco stakes 13 wildcats in Terrell

Staff Report

CONOCO INC. has staked 13 wildcats in Terrell County, 24 to 26 miles west-southwest of Sheffield.

Three are staked o the Creek Ranch lease, one in Section 13, one in Section 35 and one in Section 36 of Block 1, CCSD&RGNG survey.

A fourth is staked on the Hackberry "49" lease, Section 49, Block 102, John Gibson survey.

Conoco has staked three on the Horsehead lease.

The remaining six are staked on the Independence lease, sections 33, 34, 35, 37, 39 and 40 of Block 2, CCSD&RGNG survey.

All 13 wells are staked to 14,000 ft.

Dawson yields Penn Lime strike

A Pennsylvanian Limestone discovery has been recorded in Dawson County, three miles north of Ackerly.

HPC OPERATING INC. potentialed the No. 1 W.G. Reed to pump 86 barrels of 32.5 gravity crude, 20 Mcfd and 123 barrels of water from perforations 9,211 to 9,216 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of NeFe acid.

Permitted as a 9,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 9,216 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,211 ft.

The well topped the Dean Sandstone at 8,250 ft. and Pennsylvanian Limestone at 9,160 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,851 ft.

Location is 780 ft. from south and 1,075 ft. from west lies of Section 35, Block 34, T-4-N, T&P survey, Abst. 57.

An Upton County recompletion has yielded a Fusselman discovery in Upton County, 14 miles northeast of Crane.

CHEVRON U.S.A. INC. recompleted the No. 12 McElroy Ranch Co. "119" to flow 33 barrels of 56.7 gravity condensate and 499 Mcfd on a 20/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 250 psi. The well flowed from Fusselman perforations 11,510 to 11,575 ft., which had been acidized with 6,600 gallons of 15 percent acid.

Originally drilled to 12,408 ft., the well was plugged back to 11,947 ft. with seven inch casing set at 12,283 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,813 ft., include the Wolfcamp at 7,530 ft., Strawn at 9,530, Devonian at 10,614 and Fusselman at 11,502 ft.

Strawn discovery pumps 77 barrels

TDC ENGINEERING INC. potentialed the No. 3R Wallace "C" to pump 77 barrels of 44 gravity crude, 155 Mcfd and 77 barrels of water from perforations 6,986 to 6,996 ft. No treatment was reported.

Permitted as an 8,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,424 ft. and plugged back to 6,928 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,423 ft.

The well topped the Strawn at 6,971 ft. and Ellenburger at 7,180 ft. on ground elevation of 2,266 ft.

Location is 300 ft. from north and 2,665 ft. from east lines of Section 33, Block 12, H&TC survey, Abst. 1093.

TDC has asked for a new field designation of Silver Creek (Strawn Limestone) for the discovery.

Lea plugback nets new pool discovery

A Lea County, N.M. plugback operation has yielded a new pool discovery in the Lane Southeast (Abo) field.

LOBO RESOURCES LTD. finaled the No. 3 Shell State to pump 14 barrels of 40 gravity crude, 20 Mcfd and 33 barrels of water from perforations 8,852 to 8,876 ft. The interval was acidized with 10,000 gallons of 20 percent HCL acid.

Total depth is 9,815 ft. and the well was plugged back to 9,400 ft.

Tesoro Petroleum profits off 17 percent

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Profits fell 17 percent for Tesoro Petroleum Corp. in the second quarter as rising crude oil prices cut into refined product margins, the company said Wednesday.

For the three months ended June 30, Tesoro earned $1.23 million, or 2 cents per share, on revenue of $211 million. During the second period of 1993, Tesoro earned $1.49 million, for a loss of 6 cents per share after dividends were paid, on revenue of $186.2 million.

The company said its refining and marketing segment had a $5 million operating loss for the quarter, as crude oil prices rose more rapidly than product prices.

"We were frustrated with these unusual market conditions in the second quarter, but with stabilizing crude oil prices and recent improvements in product margins, we are optimistic about the outlook for our refining and marketing operations for the remainder of the year," Mike Burke, Tesoro's president and chief executive officer, said in a news release.

USX sets dividend for Marathon stock

PITTSBURGH — USX Corp. board of directors has declared dividends of 17 cents per share on USX-Marathon Group common stock and 5 cents per share on USX-Delhi Group common stock.

The dividends are payable September 10 to stockholders of record at the close of business August 5.

Coastal earnings climb 46 percent

HOUSTON (AP) — Coastal Corp. said its second-quarter earnings increased 64 percent from a year ago and were led by gains in its natural gas and coal businesses.

Net income for the quarter was $43.1 million, or 37 cents per share, compared with $26.3 million, or 23 cents a share, for the same quarter in 1993.

Revenues were $2.5 billion for the quarter ending June 30 and $2.6 billion a year ago.

Kerr-McGee net income down 10 percent

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Kerr-McGee Corp. said its net income for the second quarter was down 10 percent from the same period last year, primarily because of higher interest expenses and other non-operating factors.

The Oklahoma City-based energy company said its net income was $30.4 million, or 58 cents a share, compared with $33.7 million, or 70 cents a share, for the second quarter of 1993.

The company had an operating profit of $74.5 million, up 4 percent, in the second quarter over the $71.4 million reported in the second quarter of 1993.

The company credited improved results from refining and marketing and from chemical operations for the increase in operating profit. The increase in refining and marketing was because of higher wholesale margins resulting from lower product costs.

Restructuring boosts Chevron earnings

Chevron Corp., the nation's biggest petroleum refiner and marketer earned $257 million, or 39 cents a share, for the April-June quarter, compared with $50 million, or 8 cents a share, for the same period of 1993.

The company took a $515 million charge in last year's second quarter mostly for restructuring domestic refining and marketing operations. Special charges reduced profit for the just-ended quarter by $5 million.

Excluding the special charges in both quarters, Chevron earned $262 million, or 40 cents a share, compared with $565 million, or 87 cents, a year ago. Revenues fell 11 percent to $8.8 billion from $9.9 billion.

The company's U.S. refining and marketing business lost $42 million.

Chevron earned $645 million, or 99 cents a share, for the first six months of 1994, vs. $551 million or 85 cents a share in the first half of 1993. Revenue for the first six months of 1994 totaled $17.1 billion, down from $18.9 billion in the first two quarters of 1993.

Phillips reports earnings fall 37 percent

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. reported a 37 percent decrease in second-quarter earnings, mostly due to depressed oil prices and lower profit margins in refining.

Phillips reported a net income of $76 million, or 29 cents a share, compared with $121 million, or 46 cents a share, for the second quarter of 1993. Total revenues in the second quarter were $3 billion, down from $3.3 billion last year.

Second-quarter earnings were helped by a $16 million gain from favorable legal rulings, the company said.

Wayne Allen, chairman and chief executive officer, said results were hurt by lower prices for crude oil, natural gas and natural gas liquids. Phillips' average worldwide oil price was $14.96 a barrel for the second quarter, compared with $17.14 a barrel for the same period last year.

Also, gasoline prices declined more than the price of oil used to feed the refineries, resulting in lower profit margins for refining.

Allen said second-quarter results were helped by chemical sales and efforts to cut costs. He said a stronger market for basic chemicals and plastics has led to higher demand and improved prices.

Rowan Companies narrows amount of loss

HOUSTON — Rowan Companies Inc. reported improved unaudited financial results for the second quarter ended June 30, 1994.

The net loss amounted to $5,832,000 compared to a net loss of $8,197,000 in the second quarter of 1993. The per share loss was 7 cents versus an 11 cent loss in the year earlier period.

The six month net loss amounted to $11,820,000 or 14 cents per share, compared to a net loss of $21,706,000 or 29 cents per share for the same period of 1993.

C.R. Palmer, chairman and chief executive officer, commented, "We have renewed confidence that the worst is behind us."

Rowan Companies Inc. is a major provider of international offshore contract drilling and helicopter services. The company also operates a mini-steel mill, a manufacturing facility that produces heavy equipment for the mining and timber industries, and a marine division that has built over one-third of all mobile offshore jack-up drilling rigs.

Tidewater sees stronger earnings

NEW ORLEANS — Improved average day rates coupled with lower repair and maintenance costs for its marine fleet and increased utilization of an expanded gas compression fleet resulted in stronger first quarter fiscal 1995 earnings as compared with a year ago and the previous quarter for Tidewater Inc.

For the first fiscal 1995 quarter ended June 30, 1994, the company posted net earnings of $13.4 million or 25 cents per share, compared with $8.2 million or 15 cents per share, for the same quarter last year. Comparable earnings for the quarter ended March 31, 1994 were $5.2 million or 10 cents per share. First quarter 1995 results were favorably impacted by a $1.7 million pre-tax settlement of prior years property tax disputes and a pre-tax gain from the sale of assets of $2.3 million.

Revenues of $133.3 million for the three months compare favorably with the same quarter last year revenues of $129.2 million and last quarter's revenues of $125.8 million.

Valero Energy profits plunge 83 percent

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Profits plummeted 83 percent in the second quarter for Valero Energy Corp. as its refining margins were hurt by crude oil prices that rose without a similar increase in product prices, the company said.

Valero earned $4.2 million, or 3 cents per share, on revenue of $416.1 million in the three months ended June 30. During the year-ago period, Valero earned $24.7 million, or 56 cents per share, on revenue of $321 million.

"Weak refining margins caused primarily by the sharp rise in crude oil prices without a corresponding increase in product prices contributed to a disappointing second quarter," Bill Greehey, chairman of San Antonio-based Valero, said in a news release.

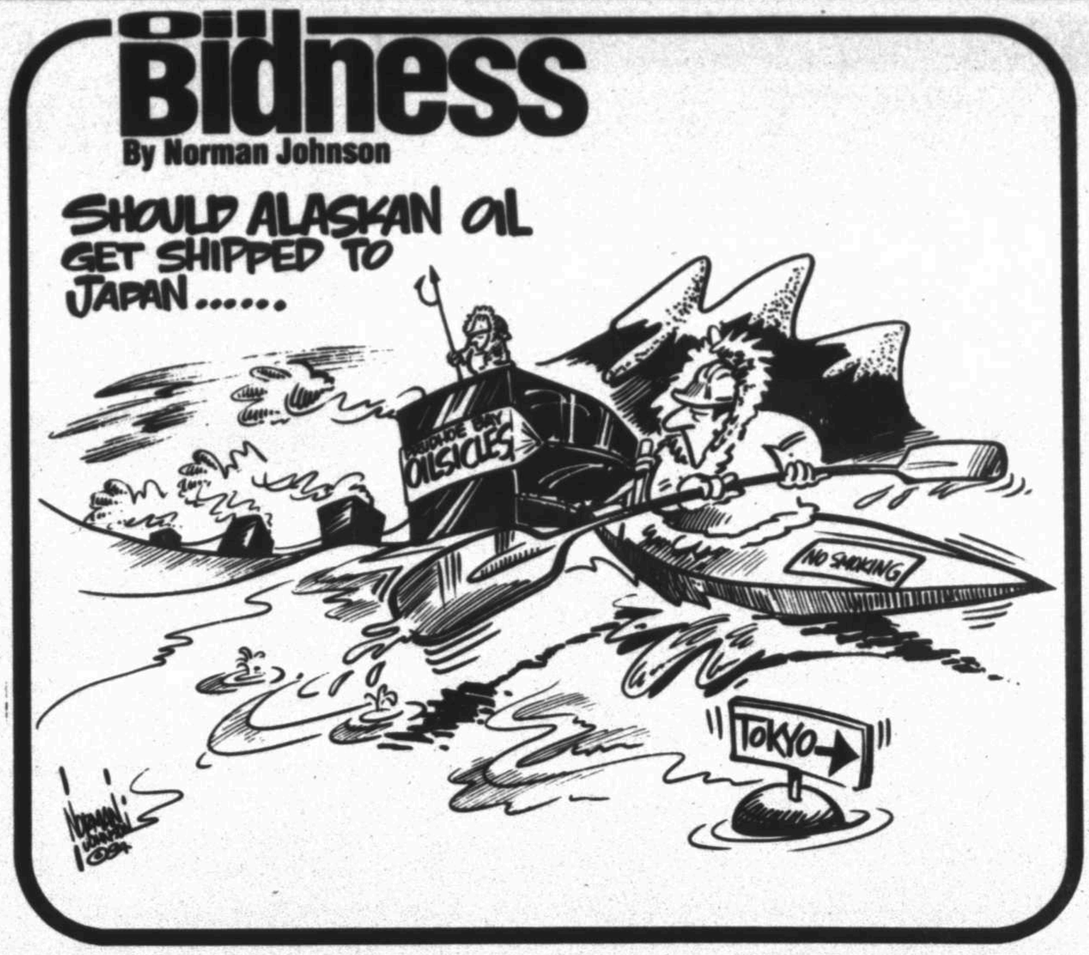
Dowell uses coiled tubing to clean wells

HOUSTON — Using a coiled tubing unit as a replacement for a snubbing unit, Dowell has successfully cleaned out 20 high-pressure wells for four operators in South Texas. The cleanout operations, conducted between January and June, have occurred at depths of up to 14,000 feet and working pressures of up to 10,000 psi.

Using coiled tubing has saved both time and money. Wells can be serviced in three to four days as opposed to six to eight days with snubbing units. Overall cost savings for coiled tubing versus snubbing are estimated at 40 to 65 percent.

Coiled tubing cleanout operations are also safer than snubbing, according to Dowell Technical Manager, Coiled Tubing, Neil Walls. "Snubbing units require multiple connections with every joint of tubing," he said. "Those connections and their inherent safety risks are eliminated when coiled tubing is used."

"With coiled tubing," Walls continued, "the well is under constant control, and the string is always in motion so there is less chance of sticking."



Plains sells preferred stock

HOUSTON — Plains Resources has sold 200,000 shares of its Series C Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock for $20 million.

Among the investors which purchased these securities are Kayne, Anderson Investment Management Inc., State Street Research & Management (purchased for MetLife Separate Account EN) and Eos Partners. In connection with this transaction, Robert V. Sinnott, a senior vice president of Kayne, Anderson will join Plains' board of directors.

Each share of the Series C Preferred Stock has a stated value of $100, bears an annual dividend of $10 payable at the company's option in either cash or additional shares of preferred stock.

LAS VEGAS

Text and design by Elizabeth Edwin

LAS VEGAS — Dreams come true and hearts break; opportunities are seized and opportunists seize; big names entertain the masses and no names try to make a name; all of these are a part of Las Vegas. And it's all a part of the glitz, glamour and lights that makes up the city known for it's entertainment and gambling.

For the tourist who has never visited Vegas, there are unlimited treasures waiting. For the tourist who hasn't visited recently, there are several new additions to catch the eye.

Although some people like the downtown area of Vegas, many prefer the newer areas along the "Strip" where the "can-you-top-this" attitude is firmly in place. Each new property attempts a gimmick that is bigger and better than the last to pull visitors their way.

From brightly lit, computerized marquees and famous entertainers at the hotels to the promised of fame and fortune in the casinos, each property vies for the tourist's attention and dollars.

Some of the newest properties to add their marquees to the Strip are the MGM Grand Hotel and Theme Park, Treasure Island and the Luxor. Each is impressive in its own right, with as many similarities as they have differences. The addition of these three resorts added an additional 10,530 rooms and suits to the 77,449 already available.

In fact, the American Hotel and Motel Association reports that Las Vegas is home to 12 out of the top 13 largest hotels ever built. They are — listed in order of most rooms to least — the MGM Grand Hotel and Theme Park, Excalibur, Flamingo Hilton, Las Vegas Hilton, The Mirage, Treasure Island, Bally's, Circus Circus, Imperial Palace, Luxor, Stardust and Riviera. The only other hotel to make the list was the Hilton Hawaii at number 10.

While you would think this might make rooms easier to reserve and possibly lower room prices, so far that hasn't been the case. Hotels all along the Strip and many in close proximity report steady room occupancy and no vacancies are a frequent occurrence

Please see VEGAS/2F

LAS VEGAS

"Starlight Express" (center left), staged at the Las Vegas Hilton, features the brilliat music of Andrew Lloyd Webber in a high-tech laser and light production with characters who dance and sing while roller skating from the stage to runways in the audience and balconies over the audience. The costumes and make up create the illusion of each charater being a train car.

LAS VEGAS — Dreams come true and hearts break; opportunities are seized and opportunists seize; big names entertain the masses and no names try to make a name; all of these are a part of Las Vegas. And it's all a part of the glitz, glamour and lights that makes up the city known for it's entertainment and gambling.

For the tourist who has never visited Vegas, there are unlimited treasures waiting. For the tourist who hasn't visited recently, there are several new additions to catch the eye.

Although some people like the downtown area of Vegas, many prefer the newer areas along the "Strip" where the "can-you-top-this" attitude is firmly in place. Each new property attempts a gimmick that is bigger and better than the last to pull visitors their way.

From brightly lit, computerized marquees and famous entertainers at the hotels to the promised of fame and fortune in the casinos, each property vies for the tourist's attention and dollars.

Some of the newest properties to add their marquees to the Strip are the MGM Grand Hotel and Theme Park, Treasure Island and the Luxor. Each is impressive in its own right, with as many similarities as they have differences. The addition of these three resorts added an additional 10,530 rooms and suits to the 77,449 already available.

In fact, the American Hotel and Motel Association reports that Las Vegas is home to 12 out of the top 13 largest hotels ever built. They are — listed in order of most rooms to least — the MGM Grand Hotel and Theme Park, Excalibur, Flamingo Hilton, Las Vegas Hilton, The Mirage, Treasure Island, Bally's, Circus Circus, Imperial Palace, Luxor, Stardust and Riviera. The only other hotel to make the list was the Hilton Hawaii at number 10.

While you would think this might make rooms easier to reserve and possibly lower room prices, so far that hasn't been the case. Hotels all along the Strip and many in close proximity report steady room occupancy and no vacancies are a frequent occurrence

Couple honored with festivities

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

After a honeymoon to Cancun, Mexico, Jim Lane and his bride, the former Catherine Furgeson of Midland, will make their home in Lubbock, where the groom is employed.

McKnight-Harrison

They were united in marriage Saturday evening at First United Methodist Church. The bride's parents, Nell and Don Furgeson, hosted the reception afterwards at the Plaza Club. Music was provided by the LaCroix Quartet.

Festivities for the couple began in January with an announcement dinner in La Bodega's Garden Room. The party was hosted by Mrs. Danie Lebow, longtime friend and neighbor of the Furgeson family.

In May, Catherine and Jim were honored at a "Honey-Do" shower and supper at the home of Sharon and Wilson Heidelberg. The other host couples were Joyce and Joe Baressi, Jann and Vince Bash, Mary Margaret and Fred Byrom, Frances and Don Carlton, Gayle and Doc Dodson, Annalon and Bill Gilbreath, Judy and Bill Jackson, Patricia and Bill Maurer, Mary and Ron McFadden, Louan and Glenn Rogers, Norma and Jack Sherman and Betty and Bill Sumner.

Wedding week festivities began Friday morning with a Sip, See and Share party at the Furgesons' home. Guests included the wedding party and out-of-town guests, among them longtime friends Becky and Duane Moore, formerly of Midland and now of South Lyons, Mich.

A manicure party was held that afternoon at Studio 14. Hostess was the bride's aunt and godmother, Zelta (Mrs. Wallace) Hess of Lubbock. Guests were Catherine's wedding attendants and their mothers.

The groom's parents, Mary Lou and Bob Lane of Houston, hosted the rehearsal dinner Friday evening at Midland Country Club.

On her wedding day, Catherine was honored with a lingerie shower given by Carrie Hall and Shannon (Mrs. Claudio) Lenisa at Carrie's home, and a bridal luncheon in Midland Country Club's Garden Room. Hostesses for the latter event were Gayle (Mrs. Doc) Dodson, Paula (Mrs. Jim) Henry, Nickie (Mrs. Les) Oppermann, Betty (Mrs. Greg) Richardson and Chris (Mrs. Charles) Thomas.

Before leaving on their honeymoon, Catherine and Jim are special guests this morning at a brunch being given by Catherine's grandmother, Jo Kirksey, and her sister and brother-in-law, Amy and Bobby Muzyka of Lubbock, at Mrs. Kirksey's home.

The groom's parents will host a reception for the newlyweds on Aug. 20 at Champions Country Club in Houston.

A BIG WEST TEXAS welcome is extended to Frances (Mrs. Marvin B.) Wade, who recently moved here from Nacogdoches. She is the mother of Midland attorney Burgess Wade, who is joined by his wife, Margaret, and their daughters, Elizabeth and Catherine, in making her feel at home in the Tall City.

Mrs. Wade is a new member of First United Methodist Church and already involved in activities at Manor Park, where she resides.

STEVE AND KARIN McFARLAND and family of Lima, Peru, have been houseguests the past week of Robert and Peggy Nash in Midland. Steve, son of Mrs. Nash, is a foreign service officer. He serves as chief of the political section in the U.S. Embassy in Lima.

TEXAS A&M STUDENTS Loyd Mashburn and Marie Butcher were united in marriage on July 2 at Coker United Methodist Church in San Antonio. A big Aggie WHOOP! was heard as the Rev. John Hargis introduced them as husband and wife.

The bride's parents, Molly and Joe Butcher of San Antonio, hosted a reception at the Fort Sam Houston Officers' Club following the ceremony. All of the Aggies present gathered on the dance floor for a group photo with the bride and groom during the reception.

On the even of the wedding, the groom's parents, Allene and James Mashburn of Midland, hosted the rehearsal dinner at Mama's Restaurant in San Antonio.

The couple are at home in Bryan-College Station until Loyd's graduation from Texas A&M in December. They will be moving to Plains, Kan., where Loyd will be employed by DEKALB Swine Breeders, beginning in January of 1995.

Besides showers in San Antonio, Marie was honored locally with a bridal shower in the home of Sharon (Mrs. Roy) Graham. Co-hostesses with Sharon were Diane (Mrs. George) Anderson, Robbie (Mrs. Mike) Curry, Sandra (Mrs. James) Donnell, Nelda (Mrs. Glen) Evans, Pam (Mrs. Ronny) Flowers, Charlotte (Mrs. Russell) Gunter, Cathy (Mrs. David) Harris, Shirley (Mrs. Bobby) Mariott, Kay (Mrs. Dwight) Martin, Linda Morgan, Cathy (Mrs. Scott) Niemann and Betty (Mrs. Glen) Simpson.

CLUB NEWS

CHAPTER DD, P.E.O. SISTERHOOD

Chapter DD of the P.E.O. Sisterhood met in the home of Donna Eby with Dee O'Neill as co-hostess. Program on the P.E.O. Continuing Education Fund and Educational Loan Fund was presented.

MIDLAND PANHELLENIC ASSOCIATION

Midland Panhellenic Association met at the home of Carolyn Strong. Jeri Wood gave the treasurer's report. Jamie Knorr discussed obtaining copies of the bylaws for representatives. Bylaw changes were proposed and passed. Members voted to donate $50 to Project Graduation '94. Ms. Strong distributed a summary of the year's activities and accomplishments and thanked members for their work. New officers were installed and notebooks given to their successors.

AARP

American Association of Retired Persons, Midland chapter #256, met at Midland Senior Center with 58 members and two guests in attendance. Leta Brown presided. Art Shaw gave the invocation and Olen Ashlock led the Pledge of Allegiance. Ms. Brown read "On This Day" by Ken Brown from the Reporter-Telegram and "Myself" by Edgar Albert Guest. Margaret Vaughan read the minutes. Louis Gibbs reported on health care reform. Edith Hall led a program on "Sing-A-Long." Bill Messner accompanied her on the piano. Lavelle Herring led the birthday song. Fellowship and table games followed.

Making early reservations is one way to be sure you stay at the hotel of your choice when you visit Las Vegas, but if you find that all rooms are booked, there may still be other options.

Some visitors start their gambling early, taking a chance the hotel will have a cancellation or no-show. But with this option, the guest must be willing to stay somewhere other than their choice spot and to spend some time looking for other accommodations. Another option is booking a trip through a travel agent who may have connections with certain hotels or who may have information about tour services which book blocks of rooms in advance, often offering them at discounted prices.

One such service is TransGlobal, a vacation wholesale company. This service, new to the Midland/Odessa area, offers nonstop charter flights aboard a Boeing 747-200 called Express One from Midland to Las Vegas and back. By flying non-stop, it takes only a couple of hours to get to Las Vegas instead of wasting more than half-a-day in travel time with airport layovers.

TransGlobal also has options for discounted room and rental car reservations. You can choose from 20 hotels — at varying prices — including the MGM Grand and Treasure Island at the Mirage. Included in the trip is a first day free rental car through Value Rent A Car, as well as a free day trip to Laughlin (optional) and a free Funbook with discount coupons. Vacations with TransGlobal can be booked through a travel agent.

THE LARGEST new addition to Las Vegas' Strip is the MGM Grand with 5,009 rooms. It's impressive entry from the Strip is through the paws of a huge, golden replica of the MGM lion. The glass doors feature brass handles — an "O" with a "Z" through it. As you walk in, you enter the Emerald City in the Land of Oz and are greeted by the sight of the wizard's castle with Dorothy, the Tin Man, the Lion, the Scarecrow and Toto on the Yellow Brick Road. Visitors can go through the castle and see many of the other Oz characters as well.

Throughout a portion of the casino area of the MGM Grand, life-size "Wizard of Oz" characters can be seen overlooking the slot machines. As the Land of Oz makes way to Hollywood, a bridge of neon lights on a low ceiling represents the rainbow. In Hollywood, figures of big-time, big-name stars dot the area with all of Hollywood's glamour.

The MGM Grand Adventures Theme Park is 33 acres of rides, shows, themed streets, restaurants, shops and a backlot of stunts, magic, movies and more for the kids, or those who are kids at heart. There are rides such as the Grand Canyon Rapids, Lightning Bolt, Over the Edge or The Haunted Mine. Themed areas can transport visitors to Asian Village, a Parisian Street or a New Orleans Square. Admission to the park is extra, but it provides unlimited access throughout the park. Adults are $18.95 for the full day, with children ages 4-12 costing $13.95. Children 3 and under are free.

Close by is the new Luxor hotel with its imposing sphinx guarding the entry. Inside the pyramid-shaped hotel, the elevators move at an angle to service the 2,526 rooms. The multi-level lobby, entertainment and casino areas also features seven themed restaurant and an ice cream shop, a ride around the "Nile," a chance to take a sensory ride on an "Indiana Jones" style archeological trip and much more. The skylines of ancient villages, as well as current day Manhattan, form the backdrop for the restaurants and activities.

FARTHER DOWN the Strip, next door to the Mirage, is Treasure Island, a recently opened casino and hotel built with family travelers in mind. Pirates, sunken or buried treasures, damsels in distress, wooden planks, skeletons and even life-sized pirate ships floating in the lagoon are all a part of the decor. Arcades and game areas are available to help entertain children for hours.

One of the most popular events at Treasure Island is the Pirates' Battle in Buccaneer Bay which happens several times each day. Visitors crowd the wooden bridges and walkways to see the British frigate HMS Britannia sail around skull point to confront the pirates' ship. It is a pyrotechnic battle complete with blazing canons, firing muskets, smoke and even fire when the British hit the pirates' ship. Some of the sailors are even thrown from their ships into the bay. In the end, one ship sinks the other, but you'll have to visit to find out which one.

The show is free and many visitors discover it when just passing by and suddenly can no longer move in the crowd. Show times are posted along the hotels front walkway. If you hang around for a little while after the show, you can watch as the sunken ship is brought back to sailing condition and reversed into position for the next show.

A monorail connects Treasure Island to The Mirage, home of the Siegfried and Roy show with its infamous pride of white tigers and other wild animals. Although the show is expensive — $72.85 a ticket, which includes the show, two drinks and a souvenir program — if you like fantasy and imagination mixed with excitement, beautiful costumes, magic and showmanship presented to a rock opera sound track in an unrelenting pace that keeps you guessing what will happen next, then this is the show for you. In addition to the white tigers and other wild cats, Siegfried and Roy also make an elephant disappear before the audiences' eyes. They are left to wonder where the elephant could have possibly gone for a short time, then the pachyderm reappears.

THE SHOW IS high-tech complete with a larger-than-life monster that rises from the floor and captures the two stars — still in sight — in its clutches. In a blink of an eye, Siegfried and Roy disappear from the monsters grasp and appear in the audience.

The Mirage also has a pristine habitat where at least two white tigers are on display almost continuously. The open-air, snow-white environment allows viewing from behind glass from inside the hotel. The area is almost always crowded, but with a little patience you can usually make it to the front row. Although the tigers are usually asleep, there are times when the tigers pace and play, and sometimes even swim.

A video about Siegfried and Roy and their animals plays continuously at the display which explains the duos commitment to halting the extinction of the graceful white tigers, as well as giving the viewer a glimpse of their home and hint of their personalities.

The Mirage also features a dolphin habitat which is popular with the little ones. It has a small admission price, but for those who haven't visited Sea World's petting pool, it can be quite an experience. Visitors can watch the dolphins swim, flip and dive from above and below the 1.5 million gallon sea water pool.

For those who are around the Mirage from dusk to around 1 a.m., there is a volcano in front of the hotel which erupts each evening at about 15 minute intervals, shooting flames as high as 40-feet into the air. The special effects make it appear as thought the lava is flowing from the top of the volcano down the mountain and into the water. Steam even rises from the water. Viewing is free.

CONTINUING DOWN the Strip will lead to The Forum Shops and Caesars Palace.

Inside the Forum Shops — a 240,000 square foot indoor shopping area with 65 shops and restaurants — shoppers feel as if they're outdoors. The mall's ceilings are painted sky blue with changing cloud formations projected from cloud machines. Large fountains adorned with Roman statues grace the mall. One fountain draws large crowds several times a day as the stone figures amazingly come to life and present a show for shoppers featuring dialogue, laser lights and sound effects.

Caesars Palace is worth the trip just to see the scenery. The Roman decor adorning Caesars' entry features statues of Roman gods and goddesses, red carpets and an overall elegance. Inside, show room entertainment brings in many big names — such as David Copperfield, Natalie Cole and Ray Charles — as well as lounge acts.

For food, Caesars Sunday Champagne Brunch — which features an incredible array of food — is a great buy and great food.

For dinner and a show, Excalibur Hotel/Casino is the place to go. King Arthur's Tournament — at $24.95 per person — presents its loyal subjects with a meal of cornish game hen, twice baked potato, vegetable, bread and dessert which is all to be eaten with your hands. Your drink is served in a stein.

The show, set in King Arthur's Arena, features a tale of war and romance in a medieval setting with King Arthur, Queen Guinevere, Merlin and the Knights of the Round Table atop there steeds. There is jousting, pageantry and magic. Audience members cheer for their knights by banging their

DEAR ABBY

Widows can avoid scam by telling con artists to scram

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you concerning the grandmother who was entering all kinds of contests and lotteries she received through the mail or telephone.

Van Buren

I used to work in a bank and recall seeing my fellow coworkers save many customers thousands of dollars by talking them out of sending money to scam artists. All of these customers were over 65.

I remember a 70-year-old woman coming to my window to withdraw $2,000 from her savings account. She told me she was sending it to another city by Federal Express and it HAD to go out today. She did not know that her daughter had telephoned to let us know that her mother had received a telephone call from someone saying she had won a brand-new Cadillac, but she had to send $2,000 to have it sent to her! She was told if she didn't send the money immediately, she would lose the Cadillac.

I immediately got hold of the bank manager. He invited her into his office and spent nearly an hour convincing her that the contest was phony. She didn't send the money.

Abby, those crooks zero in on the elderly. It's usually a widow who is on a small fixed income whom they can take for $2,000 or $3,000. When this happens, the people who lose the money never report it because they feel so foolish.

Please tell your readers that if they are asked to send money to receive a prize, it's a contest they should avoid. — EX-BANKER

DEAR EX-BANKER: Thank you for giving me the opportunity to remind my readers to beware of any contest that requires the contestants to send money in order to be eligible for a prize.

Money is NEVER a prerequisite to enter a legitimate contest.

DEAR ABBY: A couple of years ago, my husband had an affair with a divorced woman from our church. (I'll call her Betty.) Betty had my husband's child. The affair ended, and I forgave my husband because we have three children of our own. It was agreed that my husband would have nothing to do with Betty's child, who was not given his name. Betty asked for no child support.

My problem is that we all attend the same church, and Betty flaunts her (and my husband's) child to everyone. This is a small town, and everybody knows everybody else's business. I find myself hating my husband and Betty, and wishing she had aborted the child. Our children are asking questions and it is killing me. I've tried to discuss my feelings with my pastor. He says, "The Christian way is to forgive."

I am losing my spirituality because my beloved church has become a painful agony for me. My husband refuses to attend another church. Besides, it's the only one of its kind for miles around. Betty is also a long-standing member, and would never leave. (Her ex-husband was a well-respected pastor.)

If I left my husband, he would surely fight me for my children, and I couldn't bear that. What would you do, Abby? — FALLING FROM GRACE

DEAR FALLING: I would insist that my husband go with me to another church — even though it would require a longer drive. If he STILL refused to go with me, I would take my children to another church without him.

For Abby's favorite family recipes, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet No. 1, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

When cooking low fat way, figure on figs

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

As summer's parade of fresh fruits floats by, keep an eye out for fresh figs.

With their meaty flesh and sweet pear-melon flavor, they add heartiness to summer desserts, without adding fat or many calories.

You can choose between Black Mission or Calimyrna figs for this honey-spice compote.

The pear-shaped Black Mission fig has a purple skin and a pink interior. The large, round Calimyrna fig has greenish yellow skin and pale pink flesh.

CHERRY-FIG COMPOTE

1½ cups white grape juice or apple juice
1 tablespoon honey
4 inches stick cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
8 fresh Black Mission or Calimyrna figs
4 medium peaches or nectarines, pitted and sliced
½ cup dark sweet cherries, pitted and halved
Whipped cream (optional)
Ground nutmeg (optional)

In a medium saucepan stir together grape or apple juice, honey, stick cinnamon and nutmeg. Bring to boiling over high heat; add whole figs. Return to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer over low heat for 5 minutes.

Add peaches or nectarine slices and cherry halves to the mixture in the saucepan; heat through. Serve the compote warm or chilled. To chill, cool the compote slightly, then cover and chill in the refrigerator for up to two days.

Before serving, remove the cinnamon sticks. If desired, top each serving with a dollop of whipped cream and ground nutmeg. Makes 8 servings.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Zinnias can bring bright color to summer gardens

By Deborah A. Benge

Want something in your garden for color? Want it tough, heat tolerant and easy to grow? How about quick bouquets and lots of bright flowers for drying? If these appeal to you, zinnias could be the answer.

Benge

There's a zinnia for everybody. Colors range from hot and rich to cool pastels. Red, orange, purple, pink, salmon, yellow and white — that's the palette of zinnias you can grow and enjoy. They're not only beautiful, they're easy to grow as well. They bloom fast from direct-sown or transplants and they'll keep right on blooming until fall frost.

Zinnias can be directly seeded in mid-summer and will produce an abundance of color until late fall. Hot weather doesn't seem to bother them as long as they get a good soaking every five to seven days.

Zinnias are easy to grow, even for beginners. They need sun — at last five to six hours daily for satisfactory bloom — warmth and well-drained soils which don't hold puddles after a heavy rain or irrigation. Choose an area free from competing tree and shrub roots.

Work up the soil by spading to a depth of six to eight inches and incorporate organic matter and a slow-release fertilizer. A soil test will give you the best indication of any fertilizer needed but in the absence of a test, use a complete fertilizer with an approximate ratio of 3-1-2.

To plant zinnias, follow these instructions:

- Work up the soil in the planting area and level the soil.
- Sow zinnia seeds evenly and thinly, cover with ¼-inch of fine soil.
- Keep the soil slightly moist all the time until the seedlings are up and growing well.

Seedlings usually emerge about seven to 10 days after planting. When they have one or two pairs of true leaves (not counting the pair that unfolded at emergence), thin or transplant to the distance recommended on the seed packet. As a general rule, large flowering zinnias need at least 18 to 24 inches of growing space in all directions, and small flowering zinnias need at least 12 to 15 inches.

Thinning is very important because it gives the remaining plants the room they need to thrive. Crowded plants often grow spindly, excessively tall and are more prone to disease, including powdery mildew.

Powdery mildew is a common problem affecting these relatively carefree plants. This is fungus that appears as a whitish talcum powder on the leaves. The disease is most apt to strike during damp, cool weather, especially late in the season. You can reduce the risk of mildew by spacing your plants as recommended on seed packets to avoid crowding and allow good air movement. Water zinnias at ground level so leaves don't get wet. If mildew becomes a problem that warrants spraying, there are several fungicides that will control powdery mildew.

Cultivate the soil occasionally to keep the zinnias weed-free or put down a mulch. Water deeply about once a week during dry, hot weather. Drip, soaker hoses or flood irrigation is best to avoid leaf burn from salts and fungus diseases.

Pick lots of zinnias to enjoy in bouquets. Remove faded flowers and seed heads to encourage more bloom and to keep your garden looking tidy.

Check your favorite nursery or garden supply store for seeds in the color and plant size you need. A wide assortment in zinnia seed packets can usually be found on nursery seed racks.

Tall or short plants, large or small flowers, solid colors or bicolors — take your pick. There are zinnias for just about every taste or purpose. It's no wonder zinnias are one of the most popular flowers with gardeners.

Just a few more flowers that can be planted now for late summer and fall flowering include marigold, periwinkle, petunia, cosmos, portulaca and ageratum. Don't want to plant from seed? Many of these can be found in local garden centers.

I know it's hot, but take advantage of mornings or late afternoons and put some summer color out. Don't go through the summer and fall without color. Sow some seeds or plant transplants right now.

The 20th century is winding down, and decorative furnishings from the first half of the century are well on their way to becoming antiques. Chief among pieces considered museum classics are those that came out of the Bauhaus, including Breuer chairs and the Jena teapot.

This small design school was organized in 1919 by architect Walter Gropius at Weimar, Germany. It moved to Dessau and then to Berlin, where it closed in 1933. Although short-lived and not particularly successful at home, the Bauhaus has had worldwide influence on home furnishings development, Ursula Ilse-Neuman says.

Ilse-Neuman is curator of "Bauhaus Workshops: 1919-1933" at the American Craft Museum in New York. The exhibition marking the 75th anniversary of the Bauhaus founding runs through Oct. 9. On display are 85 famous and lesser-known objects made at the school, or manufactured from prototypes designed there.

Creating a finished product at the school is noteworthy because designers prior to Bauhaus typically sketched their ideas and handed them to an engineer to make the working drawings or to a craftsman or artisan to build.

The school set what would become the standard method of teaching design, with separate workshops for researching new materials and technologies and for working with wood, metal, clay, fiber and glass.

Hitler's Germany was not hospitable to the ideas or the designers, whose ranks included leftists, freethinkers and Jews. Many of the leading lights of the school — Gropius, Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, Marcel Breuer, Anni and Josef Albers and Laszlo Moholy-Nagy among them — migrated to the United States and dispersed, carrying their ideas with them. Gropius taught at Harvard and Josef and Anni Albers taught at Black Mountain College in North Carolina and later at Yale University.

"In retrospect, the furniture workshop may have been the most important workshop," Ilse-Neuman says. "It revolutionized the way homes are furnished."

Indeed, Bauhaus furniture deviated from the ornate, heavy pieces that were the norm. Breuer, who was in charge of the furniture workshop, devised tubular steel chairs with flexible seats and backs that were both light and strong. His Wassily chair of 1925 is believed to be the first to use tubular nickel-plated steel.

Breuer and others also tackled the concept of ergonomics, or how a chair and the human body work together. They experimented with standardized furniture with interchangeable parts and designed space-saving items such as nesting tables.

In the textiles workshop, the cover for Breuer's tubular steel chair was created for durability. Called "eisengarn," or iron yarn, the fabric is cotton yarn treated with wax and paraffin. Anni Albers developed light-reflective and soundproof materials and weavers created tapestries in abstract modern art designs.

The glass workshop experimented with heat-resistant glass. The Jena teapot, clear with a glass infuser, a glass coffee maker and modular glass refrigerator storage containers are among items on view at the museum.

Even the differing points of view of Bauhaus members turned out to be prophetic. Some, especially Hannes Meyer, the Swiss architect who became the Bauhaus director in 1928, "emphasized the designer's social responsibility to provide low-cost, well-designed objects for the common man," according to Ilse-Neuman.

Others, she says, such as Mies van der Rohe "incorporated formal perfection and costly finishes in manufactured objects." Still others, notably Johannes Itten, trained students to express themselves in unique ways. Which of these three strains of modernism is most important is still argued today.

"The Bauhaus members were not the first or the only modernists," Ilse-Neuman says. "But they are the most forceful and the best-known, perhaps because they had to leave Germany. The uniqueness of the Bauhaus lay in the extraordinary group of artists assembled by Gropius. It was their genius and personality that shaped the character of the institution and its students."

Marcel Breuer's armchair, the Wassily, circa 1925, is one of several lightweight modern designs from the Bauhaus Workshops that helped transform the way we furnish our homes. This nickel-plated tubiar steel chair with eisengarn, a specially-treated cotton fabric, is on view at the American Crafts Museum in New York through Oct. 9 as part of the 75th anniversary of the Bauhaus movement.

Berries make great summer fare

Associated Press

Raspberries and blackberries are among the ingredients in a tempting peach sorbet with raspberry melba sauce. The recipe is an adaptation of classic peach melba, made with fresh peaches, ice cream and raspberry sauce. Other summer desserts made with berries: berries with yogurt-citrus sauce and berry trifle.

PEACH SORBET WITH RED RASPBERRY MELBA SAUCE

29-ounce can peaches, drained, juice reserved
1 cup sugar
⅓ cup light corn syrup
¼ cup fresh-squeezed lemon juice
1 cup water

For the sauce:
12-ounce package whole frozen raspberries, thawed
1 tablespoon raspberry or blackberry liqueur, or to taste
⅓ cup sugar
About 3 cups fresh raspberries or a 12-ounce package frozen whole raspberries, partially thawed

For the sorbet: Drain peaches, reserving 1 cup of the juice. Combine reserved juice, sugar and corn syrup in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly until sugar is dissolved. Reduce heat; simmer for 3 minutes. Cool to room temperature. (To hasten cooling, saucepan may be placed in a shallow pan of ice-cold water.)

Process drained peaches in a blender or food processor until smooth, about 10 seconds. Add lemon juice, water and syrup mixture. Process another 10 seconds or until combined. Pour into an 8-inch square pan; freeze for 4 hours, or until firm enough to scoop.

For the sauce: Thaw raspberries; process in a food processor or blender for 10 seconds, or just until smooth. Strain through a fine sieve to remove seeds. Stir in liqueur and sugar. Refrigerate until ready to serve. (Sauce is best if made ahead to allow flavors to mingle.)

To serve, scoop and layer sorbet, raspberry melba sauce and fresh or partially thawed raspberries in six tall parfait glasses, starting with a layer of sauce on the bottom. Serve promptly. Makes 6 servings.

BERRY SUMMER TRIFLE

2 12-ounce packages whole frozen raspberries, thawed
½ cup sugar, or to taste
½ cup angel food cake, cut into 1-inch cubes
1 teaspoon cream sherry per glass
Raspberries and blackberries, washed and drained
8 ounces light whipped topping
6 2-inch gingersnap cookies, crushed

Process thawed raspberries in food processor or blender until smooth, about 10 seconds. Strain, if desired, using fine sieve to remove seeds. Stir in sugar. Set aside.

Cover bottom of eight dessert glasses with about 1½ tablespoons raspberry puree. Add angel food cake cubes; fill to half full. Sprinkle with cream sherry. Drizzle 3 to 4 tablespoons raspberry puree over cake. Fill remainder of glass with mixed berries, leaving room for topping. Top with whipped topping. Sprinkle with crushed gingersnaps. Makes 8 servings.

SUMMER BERRIES WITH YOGURT-CITRUS SAUCE

Raspberries, blackberries and blueberries, fresh or frozen
Green grapes
1 cup plain yogurt
¼ cup honey
2 teaspoons lemon juice, freshly squeezed
2 teaspoons lime juice, freshly squeezed
½ teaspoon lemon peel, finely shredded
½ teaspoon lime peel, finely shredded
Butter cookie or shards of waffle cone (for garnish)

Gently clean fruit; combine in large bowl. Divide fruit among four goblets or parfait glasses.

For the sauce, combine yogurt, honey, juices and peels. Spoon sauce over fruit in each goblet; garnish with cookie. Makes 4 servings.

Associated Press

Enjoy the freshness of summer with a strawberry almond chocolate tart. Use a prebaked 9-inch pie shell. Make a quick chocolate sauce in your microwave oven, drizzle over the pie shell and chill in the refrigerator for 1 hour.

STRAWBERRY ALMOND CHOCOLATE TART

1 pre-baked 9-inch pie shell, cooled
¼ cup strawberry jam
1 cup (6 ounces) semisweet chocolate chips
⅓ cup sweetened condensed milk (not evaporated milk)
1 tablespoon Amaretto liqueur or ½ teaspoon almond extract
2 cups sliced strawberries
3 tablespoons toasted almonds
Spread pre-baked pie shell with the ¼ cup strawberry jam

Cook semisweet chocolate chips and sweetened condensed milk in a medium microwave-safe bowl on 100 percent power (high) for 1 minute. Stir until smooth.

Cook on high a few seconds longer, if necessary. Stir in liqueur.

Pour over jam in pie shell; spread to edges. Chill for 1 hour or until chocolate is set.

By Marian Burros
N.Y. Times News Service

Sweet local corn and tomatoes are in markets now, and they are the best that summer has to offer. For a change, make patties by mixing the corn with some chicken and adding a few seasonings to heighten the sweet flavor. If you wish, complete the meal with a slice of good country bread.

CORN-AND-CHICKEN PATTIES WITH BASIL SAUCE

8 ounces whole onion or 7 ounces chopped ready-cut onion (1⅓ cups)
1 teaspoon canola oil
2 ears corn or 1 heaping cup corn kernels
8 ounces skinless, boneless chicken breasts
⅓ cup dry bread crumbs
1 tablespoon hot-sweet mustard
½ teaspoon ground cumin
Black pepper to taste
6 tablespoons nonfat yogurt
2 tablespoons reduced-fat sour cream
8 to 10 large leaves basil (to yield 2 tablespoons chopped)

Chop onion, if whole.

Heat large nonstick pan over very high heat. Add oil, and reduce heat to medium high.

Add bread crumbs, mustard, cumin and pepper to food processor. Mix well. Stir onion into the mixture.

Shape six or seven patties. Brown on both sides in the pan used for the onion, cooking for about 10 minutes.

Mix yogurt and sour cream.

Wash, dry and chop basil, and stir into the sour cream and yogurt. Serve with the patties.

HONEY-MUSTARD TOMATOES

2 ripe medium-large tomatoes
1 to 2 tablespoons hot-sweet mustard
Freshly ground black pepper.

Wash, dry and trim tomatoes; slice thick. Spread the mustard on each slice, sprinkle with pepper and serve.

Approximate nutritional analysis per serving: 70 calories, 1 gram fat, 0 milligrams cholesterol, 85 milligrams sodium.

AMARILLO — There was a time when Thomas Austin Preston Jr. spurned food and sleep for the thrill of playing high-stakes poker games, some of which would last for days.

At the end of those marathon sessions, win or lose, Preston often would play dominoes or even take up poker games with other players.

"Action is my nourishment," he once said.

That still may be true. But Preston is 65 years old now, and he's beginning to find nourishment in other places.

Witness one day last month, a somewhat typical day in the life of the man more commonly known as Amarillo Slim:

Preston's cowboy hat, ringed with a rattlesnake hat band, just clears the top of a door frame as he strolls into the clubhouse at Preston West Par 3, his golf course south of Amarillo.

He tips the hat back on his head and laments the results of an overnight hailstorm.

"This thing hurt us last night," Preston said of the storm.

The course is lush and green and its water hazards appear full from recent rains. But some of the greens show pock marks from the hail, and Preston immediately notices that several trees and shrubs have lost their leaves to the flurry of ice.

Thomas Austin Preston Jr., known better as Amarillo Slim, poses in his south Amarillo golf course. There was a time when Preston spurned food and sleep for the thrill of playing high-stakes poker games, some of which would last for days.

PRESTON STILL dresses like an authentic Texas high-roller — custom boots, a short-sleeved shirt embroidered with his name and fastened with gold buttons, and a massive gold ring of the Lone Star State dotted with diamonds.

That is perhaps the only way a stranger might recognize the poker-playing legend in a crowd.

"I'm old and wore out," Preston said, when prodded abut his poker-playing days.

"I'm pokered out. Poker for me for about the first two hours is fun. After that I feel like I want to be anywhere else. I get bored."

This from the man who won the 1972 World Series of Poker and its $60,000 top prize after 22 hours at a poker table?

Indeed. Now he has other things to occupy his time.

Preston hosts poker tournaments at casinos all over the world, but he also is involved in several businesses. And he and his wife of almost 45 years, Helen, have five granddaughters.

He hosts grand openings at casinos, racetracks and riverboats that offer gambling. And Preston provides several racetracks with tip sheets of his picks of the day, which are sold to patrons. He also has dabbled in movies and recently did some publicity for the motion picture "Maverick."

"Warner Brothers called me and wanted me to do the publicity for the movie because it's a poker movie," he said. "Come to find out, it's a damn comedy. But the whole world thinks it's a poker movie."

IT GOES without saying that Preston is among the inner circle of high-stakes gamblers. He talks nearly non-stop and prides himself on the way he intimidates his opponents.

Preston may be a legend among poker players, but his fame transcends the gambling world.

He has addressed the National Press Club, gambled with Willie Nelson, appeared on the Tonight Show, been featured in Esquire magazine and once was recognized by President George Bush at a race track.

Although Preston claims he's never had a job, he founded "Amarillo Slim's Super Bowl of Poker" at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas. He hosted the annual event for 16 years until it was discontinued in 1991.

"I had a title," he said of his work with Caesar's. "I was the international director of special events. I don't know what I did because we didn't have any foreign casinos."

Preston may be less enthusiastic about poker these days, but he still travels to Las Vegas nearly every month. And he still is willing to wager on "anything that's competitive or the outcome is in doubt."

"I love that," he said. "I thrive on that. That's a tonic for me."

The Amarillo gambler has won more than his share in the poker world — as much as $1.7 million in a single card game. But he also has lost thousands in high-stakes poker games.

And he's lost in other arenas.

Preston pleaded guilty in 1979 to a misdemeanor federal charge of failing to pay a special wagering tax in connection with a federal bookmaking case. He was fined $5,000. Federal prosecutors dropped a more serious charge of operating an illegal gambling business. His attorney at the time said Preston was minimally involved in the sports bookmaking operation.

Not even the great Amarillo Slim has won them all.

THE WORLD may know Preston as a gambler. Helen Preston knows her husband as a family man.

It's true Preston once won $100,000 betting on his son in a game of golf. It's also true, Helen Preston said, that she's never seen her husband gamble in a high-stakes game.

"I never really was a part of his poker world," she said. "I really chose to stay home with the kids. I didn't then and still do not today know all that much about gambling."

Helen Preston met her husband-to-be in high school, but the two did not begin dating until Thomas Preston was in the military.

"He was a pool player," she said. "I'm from an old-fashioned family. I was born and raised at Claude and of course my mother said 'oh no.'"

But the marriage worked out and the two celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary on July 22.

"I think it's the times when he's home that I've most enjoyed," she said.

Bill Cox, an Amarillo author who wrote a book with Preston called "Play Poker to Win," noticed the gambler's dedication to his family while the two collaborated on the book.

"He's always done real well by his family," Cox said. "He always had them foremost in mind, it seemed to me, because he always took care of them."

HELEN PRESTON said she does not resent her husband's gambling lifestyle, or that he was often away from home plying his trade.

"He's pretty much a self-made man," she said with admiration. "He loved it and that was fine with me."

Before Preston was known for his penchant for poker, he literally made a name for himself playing billiards. The nickname Amarillo Slim stems from his days as a pool player, a game he said he gave up for his family.

"When my kids started school, I decided I didn't need to be all over the country playing pool, so I quit," Preston said.

Preston loves gambling, and most would agree that the world loves Preston.

"I think he's proficient in his business and he's of course real humorous," said Cox, the writer. "He's got sort of the Will Rogers wit — real dry — about him."

Preston has shown much of that wit in the way he has won some peculiar wagers over the years. He once bet that he could hit a golf ball a mile and then accomplished the unbelievable feat — on a frozen lake in Michigan.

Another notorious bet involved a game of table tennis in which Preston was allowed to choose the paddles. He chose a skillet, with which he had become proficient in playing the game, and easily won.

Preston later bet another man to a game of table tennis, again with the stipulation that he be allowed to choose the paddles. Three weeks passed between the time of the bet and the match.

"WELL THAT wasn't by accident," he said. "I'm going to give that guy plenty of time to practice with a skillet."

But when Preston showed up, he didn't bring a skillet. He handed his competitor a Coca-Cola bottle to use as a paddle and, once again, easily vanquished his foe.

Preston's most famous bet may have been his five-day raft trip down the middle fork of Idaho's Salmon River, also called the River of No Return, in November 1972.

The rules were simple: If Preston survived, without help, he would win the bet.

Some residents who lived near the river were not as astonished about the wintertime voyage as the national media, who covered the event from start to finish.

The residents mocked Preston's adventure, for which he won $31,000, saying their children had floated down the river on inner tubes and even driftwood.

In response to his critics who said the river was traveled often in winter, Preston said, "Funny thing — I didn't notice any traffic."

By the time Preston was 20, he was giving billiards exhibitions while serving as a goodwill ambassador for the European Constabulary.

Some would say that proficiency at pool is the sign of a misspent youth. For Preston, the game of pool was a stepping stone to fame as a poker player. That opened other doors, and Amarillo Slim went on to become a household name in the Panhandle and around the country.

PERHAPS IT is not every mother's dream for her little boy to become a professional gambler. But for Preston, it somehow seems right.

"I'm at peace with me and I'm at peace with my maker and to my knowledge, I'm at peace with the whole world," he said, as he sat in the clubhouse at his golf course.

Study shows that not every battered spouse is female

By Deborah Hastings
Associated Press

When the police came they refused to take a report. When he called battered women's shelters, they refused to help him.

Stanley Green, 42, an unemployed transportation engineer now living in Washington state, says he was beaten by his wife. But people often don't believe him, and he finds that degrading and humiliating.

Though the O.J. Simpson case has focused new attention on spousal abuse, little, if any, mention has been made of men who are battered by women.

Society simply doesn't take the issue seriously, victims and psychological experts say. Men who claim such abuse are deemed wimps and laughed at despite studies conducted since the 1970s showing women are just as likely as men to strike partners during domestic arguments.

"People are afraid of this issue," said researcher Murray Straus, co-director of the University of New Hampshire's Family Research Laboratory and co-author of some of the largest and most respected studies ever done on family violence.

People are fearful, Straus said, because those research findings confound conventional thinking on the issue of domestic violence. Some feminists and battered women's advocates have accused him of betraying women by publishing the results.

STRAUS' NATIONAL surveys, conducted in 1975, 1985 and 1992, found that men are just as likely to be victims of domestic violence as women. In 1991, responding to accusations of gender bias, Straus retallied female responses to his 1985 study. According to women respondents, men were more likely to be assaulted by spouses.

Those results don't match national crime statistics. According to Department of Justice figures, women report an annual average of 572,032 spousal abuse cases. Men report an average of 48,983. The wide gap, men's advocates say, is caused in part by the refusal of many battered men to seek help.

When they do, there are few options. Most domestic violence hot lines and programs serve women. There is one haven for battered men in the United States, a seven-bed Victorian house in St. Paul called the Men's Shelter of Minnesota.

"Part of the reason that there is almost no shelters or help for men is because we're brought up to solve our own problems and not to admit we need help," said Alvin Baraff, a clinical psychologist with MensCenter Counseling in Washington, D.C.

'Part of the reason that there is almost no shelters or help for men is because we're brought up to solve our own problems and not to admit we need help.'

— Alvin Baraff
clinical psychologist

"We're taught to take it like a man," Baraff said. "Most of the men I've worked with don't hit back. One man I'm treating did call the police. They had him step outside. The message was 'Why can't you control your wife?' He went back inside. The fight continued. She ended up stabbing him. He went to the emergency room and told them that he fell on his own knife."

STRAUS AND his researchers found that men were seven times more likely to injure their partner. He attributes that statistic to physical size differences between men and women.

"Fewer men are put in as serious a situation as women are," Straus said. "They're less likely to be terrorized and dominated."

He sees the problem of women who batter men as damaging to both parties.

"Men have a double shame," he said. "They have not only the shame of being attacked, but they also have society's shame that a real man should be able to handle his woman."

"Women suffer," Straus said, "because sooner or later it's going to be her turn. And she's already reinforced the standard of being able to hit your partner within a marriage."

Green said he and his wife, a successful doctor with her own practice, were legally separated in 1990 when she attacked him in a Long Beach, Calif. parking lot. They have since divorced. Both moved to Washington.

According to Green, she slapped and kicked him during an argument, then beat him on the head and shoulders with a car phone when he tried to call for help. The police came, Green said, but refused to write a report.

"People don't want to believe that women are capable of violence," Green said. "It's part of this mythology that women are always the victims and men are always the aggressors."

Long Beach Police Cmdr. Anthony Batts said Green filed an internal affairs complaint over the incident.

"A thorough investigation was conducted," Batts said. He declined further comment, citing personnel confidentiality laws.

THE POLICE department, Batts added, believes spousal abuse affects both sexes: "To deal with the issue of domestic violence, you have to look at it from the viewpoint that women and men are victims."

Green said his eight-year marriage was punctuated by sporadic violent outbursts from his wife. She would slap him, or scream, curse and throw things. The 1990 incident was the worst, he said, damaging his ribs and cutting his head.

His reasons for not immediately leaving are similar to those of battered women. His wife was the principal breadwinner, he said. He stayed home with their children. He had little money and little self-esteem.

"What I did was more of the female role," he said. "I moved into her world. I was intimidated by her.

"The problem is that most agencies and most people don't believe it can happen to men."

Sale away: Garage sales offer oceans of bargains

By Christy Gonzales
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Armed with a list of addresses culled from the classified ads, a detailed city map and $20, Brenda Geeslin hits the streets at 8 a.m. every Friday and Saturday. Thus begins her life as a garage sale junkie.

By 9 a.m., Geeslin is at her fifth garage sale and is the proud new owner of a plastic bat and ball, a Velcro ball and mitt set, and a collection of lipsticks in flowery cases.

The toys are for her nieces, but the five lipsticks (only 25 cents) are hers.

Dressed in her garage-sale jean shorts (50 cents) and denim hippack (25 cents), Geeslin, 49, explains the practicality of garage sale shopping.

"Everything is so expensive today," she says. "I bought a dress at a garage sale for $1 and it costs $70 in the store."

It's the chant of the garage-sale shopper: One person's junk is another person's treasure. And in today's high-priced world, "thrifty" has come to mean "smart shopper," rather than "cheap."

Even Geeslin's friends realize the advantages that garage sales offer.

"People call me up and ask me, 'Will you look for this for me?' As if I'm going to the mall!" she says with a laugh.

BESIDES BEING an economical form of shopping, going to garage sales is a form of entertainment ... a fun and rewarding getaway for the garage sale junkie.

But for the more zealous, like Geeslin, it's more than that. It's a sport.

"It's cheaper than my husband's golf ... and I come home with something," she says. "All he does is hit a ball!"

As with any sport, you can be a spectator, you can participate, or you can put your heart and soul into it and "play" the game. At this point, going to garage sales takes on a new meaning. It becomes an obsession.

It's easy to get hooked. Geeslin got started 20 years ago when a Fort Worth neighbor shared some trade secrets. Since then, Geeslin has gone to garage sales every weekend, and has infected friends and relatives in the process.

Now, Geeslin, a homemaker, lives in suburban Burleson but still shops in her old Wedgwood neighborhood because she knows the streets there best.

But just in case, she had the Wedgwood part of her city map photocopied and enlarged and then laminated to aid her in her quest for bargains. There is a method to her madness: She checks the newspaper for a listing of the sales in that area and then writes them down to help plot her course. It's almost impossible just to drive aimlessly and look for garage sales, she says.

"You got to have a plan and just 1-2-3-4 'em," she says as she sprints to the car for garage sale No. 9.

SHE AND her daughter, Tina Farnell, even invented their own garage sale lingo. A "2-for-1" is one garage sale right next to another. A "free one" is a garage sale that's not on their list.

Usually Geeslin takes $20 and quits when she runs out of money. Unlike some garage-sale junkies, she says she buys only things in "near-perfect condition. Otherwise, it's not worth it."

In less time than it takes to fasten a seat belt and start a car, Geeslin has hit another garage sale. It's No. 9. This time, she's encouraging Farnell to offer $2 for both the "Little Mermaid" and the "Beauty and the Beast" posters. The garage-sale dealer is asking $4.

"That's the fun part, getting them to take less. It makes you think you're getting an extra bargain," Geeslin says. "You've got nothing to lose by asking."

Once the money in her garage-sale cigar box is gone, Geeslin has her own garage sale, usually twice a year. And the money in the box is strictly for garage sales.

"I'm real fanatical about it," she says.

She has one rule about her garage sales: "I don't buy to resell," she says.

Tony Irwin of Fort Worth, on the other hand, makes a killing on other people's "junk." While feeding his $50- to $75-a-day habit every Thursday through Sunday, Irwin buys items that supplement his antique store in Waxahachie, 40 miles southeast of Fort Worth.

He once bought some school desks for about $10, then refinished them and collected $125 for each one. A Disneyland tray that cost him 25 cents sold for $95. Occasionally, however, he loses money. But overall, the profits and adventure outweigh the losses, he says.

HE NOTES that the first time he attended a garage sale, in 1988, he felt awkward looking through other people's old stuff. But he got over it and made a few good buys.

Whatever the reasons for their addiction, the list of garage-sale junkies goes on.

Ruth Parker, a retired live-in caregiver in nearby Arlington, says that she's been a garage-sale junkie for more than 20 years. She lost a lot of items that were in storage and is in the process of rebuilding her treasures. Her method?

"I just go around and see if I can find any bargains. Naturally, I do," she says.

From one table, she picks up items (almost everything on the table) and drops them into a box. She doesn't seem to be overly selective.

"When I cash my check" (kerplunk — in goes a jewelry box) "I usually just drive around" (kerplunk — a knickknack) "and" (kerplunk — another box) "hit a couple of garage sales" (kerplunk — some coasters), she says.

By the end of Geeslin's Saturday venture (a total of 44 garage sales), she has amassed quite a bit. In addition to the toys and lipsticks, her new fortune includes two cross-stitch books (25 cents), a "101 Knock-Knock Jokes" book (10 cents), an Applause bunny (50 cents), a purple shirt and pants set for Grandma ($1), an AM/FM radio "with" a battery (50 cents); and a 75-cent "Beauty and the Beast" dress to go with the 25-cent "Beauty and the Beast" socks she bought for her niece.

Geeslin's notoriety as a garage sale maniac has spread not just to her friends and family, but to her church as well. For her 40th birthday, member Van Houser read Geeslin's eulogy, "The Garage Sale Queen." Her epitaph says it all:

"A car backed from the garage
"Where she thought there was a sale."

Afternoon tea teaches etiquette, respect

By Lynne K. Varner
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — On a bustling street on the south side of Seattle, where rows of houses and businesses vie for attention, a cozy Victorian tearoom is decorated with flowered wallpaper, chintz cushions and china dolls. There Beethoven's Fifth Symphony duels with the scent of freshly brewed ginger-peach tea.

Six patrons sip tea at a long oak table and discuss the World Cup, the weather and occasionally digress into a little gossip. Harkening back to the gentle mannerisms of a bygone era, the six ladies — the best of friends — refer to one another as Ms. So-and-So.

"I was in California where it was 103 degrees and I went outdoors barefoot. I ran back into the hotel and did not come out for the rest of the day," Ms. Divai says.

The ladies titter into their teacups and nibble finger sandwiches with the crusts neatly removed.

It would be just another afternoon tea at The Wellington if not for the fact that the "patrons" are 12 years old or younger.

They are students in Miss Gwyn Baker's Finishing Touches class, where after 12 sessions they will have learned personal hygiene, how to have proper tea, the art of conversation and even polite, classy retorts for rude people.

BAKER'S CLASS is about more than etiquette. It also imparts real-life lessons to children whose lives may depend on it. For example, nearly all public schools offer some sort of conflict-resolution class, but in the heat of summer, children often forget what they learned and become violent.

Baker said that when she asks children why they hit one another, they respond that they did not know anything other than to hit.

"What I was seeing was a lot of young people, especially those of color, who did not realize they had choices," she said.

"If you want to beat up people, people will beat you up back," said Ms. Suzi Baker, a 7-year-old who is also Baker's daughter.

"And if you want to say nice things about people, people will say nice things back," she added.

As the six young students munch on cookies and poppyseed cake, Ms. Dominique Williams-Grant, 9, tells of the anger she feels when her friends dismiss her serious ambitions of being a poet. Before taking Baker's class, Ms. Williams-Grant says she would have hit the offending person.

"Sometimes we do bad things and we don't want to do them, but it's out of habit, what I like to call learned behavior," Miss Baker tells the class.

Another tea, another lesson.

"Believe in yourself. Always strive to be the best you can be, and always be in control of yourself," Miss Baker instructs as her students head out to a white wicker sofa where they will sit in the sunshine for their 15-minute break.

BAKER WAS one of eight children reared by a single parent. Sunday teas functioned as family get-togethers. Impeccable manners were a must in a household where nine people crowded the dinner table.

For the past eight years, she has taught classes on table setting and manners, proper introductions, finance, grooming and the art of conversation to children ages 8 through 12.

For her current crop of students, Baker waived the normal $150 fee for 12 classes because many of the parents said they could not afford the class.

At first she was reluctant to waive the tuition, thinking parents who said they could not afford the class "could pay $100 for a jacket that will get their child killed."

But Baker said the defining moment came when a young child asked to be allowed in the class, saying she no longer wanted to gossip or use slang. And, the girl said, she wanted to like herself more.

"That was a strong statement for a 10-year-old," Baker said.

She now has a waiting list of 24 students.

Crystal Brown had long wanted to enroll her daughter Shermaine in an etiquette class. But the tuition was too steep for the stay-at-home mom and her military husband. She had even considered driving Shermaine, 8, to a class that cost $10 a session.

"The class has enhanced Shermaine. She used to answer the telephone by saying, 'Who is it?' and she used to be much more self-centered," Brown said.

At The Wellington, afternoon tea has ended.

Watching her students pile into a waiting car to go home, Baker says, "I want those kids to be whole, to be the best human beings they can be. I don't want them on Oprah 30 years from now."

In most divorce settlements, fairness is in eye of beholder

N.Y. Times News Service

Even in divorce cases without great animosity, partners are often disappointed to learn that the court's sense of fairness is quite different from their own.

"I spend considerable time persuading people to let go of the myth that somehow the court will be the accountant for all the things done in marriage and what will come out the other end is a 'fair' settlement," said Cicily Maton, a financial planner in Chicago who specializes in divorce. "I tell them: 'Forget fair. The best you can hope for is an equitable settlement based on case law.' "

Ms. Maton had a client who had been very frugal and spent little on herself while her husband built his law practice. "She felt it only fair that she be given some credit for what she had done and that the maintenance and child support reflect her sacrifice," Ms. Maton said. "I explained that all she could expect for her effort was a pat on the head."

In another case Ms. Maton handled, the husband earned considerably less than the wife, chiefly because he had made a decision to stay at a job with lush benefits while his wife job-hopped to increase her salary.

When it came time to divorce, she insisted that his fat pension be put on the table as one of the assets to be split. "He didn't think that was fair," Ms. Maton said. "I see his point. But the court will not give him credit for being the prudent one."

Brownies are low-fat dessert

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Be ready to win brownie points with these chocolate wonders. Kids love them because they taste great; parents love their low-fat score. The fat-lowering tricks include using less sugar, switching to skim milk, substituting egg whites for eggs, relying on cocoa powder for chocolatey flavor and adding fewer nuts. Drizzle with a nonfat icing and watch them disappear.

CAKE BROWNIES

Nonstick spray coating
¼ cup unsalted margarine
⅔ cup sugar
¼ cup unsweetened cocoa powder
1 egg white
½ teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup all-purpose flour
⅓ cup skim milk
¼ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
⅓ cup chopped walnuts or pecans
1 teaspoon powdered sugar
Chocolate Icing (recipe below)

In a medium saucepan melt the margarine. Remove from the heat. Stir in the sugar and cocoa powder until combined.

Add egg white and vanilla to saucepan. Using a wooden spoon, lightly beat just until combined. Add flour, milk, baking powder and baking soda. Beat with the spoon until combined. Stir in walnuts or pecans. Spread the batter into the prepared baking pan.

Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 16 to 18 minutes or until a wooden toothpick inserted near the center comes out clean. Cool in pan on a wire rack. Sprinkle with the powdered sugar. Drizzle with Chocolate Icing; let stand for 30 minutes or until icing is set. Cut into bars. Makes 24 bars.

Chocolate Icing: In a small mixing bowl stir together ½ cup sifted powdered sugar, 1 tablespoon unsweetened cocoa powder, ¼ teaspoon vanilla and enough skim milk (1 to 2 tablespoons) to make an icing of drizzling consistency.

Also shown in King Arthur's Arena is "Sooper Dogs," a show staring canines from Moore's Mess O'-Mutts, as the trainer affectionately calls them. The dogs are all from animal shelters around the United States who have been trained to preform tricks — except for Newton who simply is introduced and that's all he does to earn his room and board. A portion of the proceeds from the show and the sale of training books and videos goes to animal shelters.

The show also features The Championship Frisbee Catching Dog and the Sports Agility Team. Tickets are only $4.95 and includes the show and a souvenir frisbee.

Merlin's Magic Motion Machine provides life-like trips via a simulator to a variety of locations. There is a small fee charged, but there is a 50 cent discount on the stub of the tickets from the knights or dog show that can be used. The arcade area also is a popular spot for young and old.

ANOTHER SPECTACULAR show — although again pricey at $49.50 per person — is Andrew Lloyd Weber's Starlight Express at the Las Vegas Hilton, just off the Strip. With the speed of a runaway train, these performers on roller skates will dance and sing their way through this high-tech laser and light production. At times, the actors even use runways into the audience and balconies above the audience for the production.

The show is about a little boy's dream where his toy trains come to life in a competition between steam, electric and diesel engines. The musical score showcases elements of rock 'n roll, rap, jazz and country and western mixed with an incredible amount of special effects including high-tech staging, pyrotechnics, lasers, fiber optics and more than 1,400 color lighting configurations.

The famous Hilton Theatre has been reconstructed into a huge oval "theatrical Amusement park," complete with ramps, raceways and embankments that bring the audience right into the show.

The Las Vegas Hilton once was the home of The King of Rock 'N Roll, holding the only exclusive contract on Elvis. Several items which belonged to Elvis can be seen around the hotel encased under glass, including one of Elvis' white suits and a signed guitar.

While the entertainment is tops for some visitors, the gambling is what many others visit Las Vegas for. No matter what your game is, Las Vegas is bound to have it. From the slot machines that are waiting to take your quarters at the airport to the private Black Jack tables at some of the more exclusive casinos, there is something for everyone who has the dream of getting lucky. While some are lucky, many others are not.

For the amateur, slot machines are the most popular and the casinos make it as easy as possible for them to play. Slots no longer have to use a pull handle, the player can simply push a button to take that chance roll. Employees wander the areas making sure guests have something to drink and plenty of change.

AP Laserphoto

IN FACT, some of the newer slot machines even offer the convenience of taking bills in the denominations of $1, $5, $10 and $20, or if you'd prefer, your MasterCard, Visa, American Express, Discover and Diner's Club cards. Scary.

Casinos also feature an abundance card games, including Black Jack and Poker, as well as Roulette.

Off the Strip, Vegas has an abundance of sites and activities as well. For those who like to shop and save money, there are two factory outlet malls not far from the Strip. Those who like music and food may want to check out Hard Rock Cafe Lave Vegas where costumes worn by rapper Hammer and Elton John — among many other items — are proudly displayed.

Day trips to Hoover Dam, the Grand Canyon, Laughlin and Lake Mead also are popular with discount coupons offered is several of the tourist magazines that can be picked up free at many of the hotels.

So whether you go to Vegas to spend a lot of money, to win a lot of money or just to find inexpensive entertainment, if you like bright lights and excitement, you are bound to have fun.

For more information about traveling to Las Vegas or what entertainment will be performing on certain dates, contact the Las Vegas News Bureau, 3150 Paradise Road, Las Vegas, Nev., 89109-9096; (702) 735-3611; or the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce at (702) 735-1616.

Maine coon cats are unusual

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Maine coon cats are descendants of Angora cats brought to Maine and Massachusetts in the mid-19th century by mariners returning from the Far East.

They have raccoonlike coats of streaked brown and a prominent neck ruff. Maine coon cats can withstand extremely cold weather and are said to be good rat-catchers.

Waco takes on updated elite polish

By Michelle Hancock
N.Y. Times News Service

WACO, Texas — Back when the Elite Cafe called itself the "E-light," greasy burgers dominated the menu, Baylor University reigned over the city and Baptists ruled Baylor.

Waco was thought of as conservative and pious, a place where tent revivals were common and musical concerts under the starlit heavens were not. To most travelers, Waco was a strip of budget motels and fast food restaurants to speed past on Interstate 35 after stopping in West for kolaches. Waco was on the way to some other city, like Austin or San Antonio.

But that was before the Elite got a facelift, a shrine to Texans' true religion — sports — sprang up on the Baylor campus, and cult leader David Koresh and his band of Branch Davidians besmirched Waco's piety.

Now the "E-lite" is called the "Uh-leet," cream of carrot soup is a specialty, amaretto sours are the drink of the day, and a mural of convivial folk eating — and drinking from wine glasses — says more about the way things have changed in Waco than any tourist brochure might indicate.

Free outdoor concerts and musical performances outnumber tent revivals, laser-light shows slash the heavens, an elaborate library pays homage to two famous poets, and a new state-of-the-art zoo, art exhibits, drag boat races and golf tournaments exemplify the new Waco.

There's even an entire old Texas farming town to tour, the Gov. Bill and Vara Daniel Historic Village, donated to Waco and transported from near Liberty by the former Baylor board of governors member and his family. The 20 old but structurally sound buildings from this first Anglo settlement in Texas include the two held most sacred by Texans in the old days: a church and a saloon.

GROUPS AS varied as Trout Fishing in America and Johnny Bustamante & the LA Band perform in Indian Spring Park this summer. The Chisholm Trail once crossed the Brazos River here, and a graceful suspension bridge built by John Robling as prototype for the Brooklyn Bridge still makes the crossover. Alcohol is allowed, but those who wish not to partake may remain in a designated "dry" area, a small reminder that, yes, this still is Waco.

As does the notice at the top of James Wood's brochure describing his mule-drawn wagon tours of several Waco historical sites. "Christian owned & operated," it brags — warns? — promising fans, cushioned seats and a smiling driver. Well, why not? Wood's previous job was wrestling alligators and handling snakes at Texas Safari. Driving a mule team and shuttling tourists — no sweat for Wood, even in 100-degree heat.

"No man in the wrong can stand up against a fellow that's in the right and keeps on a-comin'," Ranger Capt. Bill McDonald once said. The weapons that kept them coming are on view here, including the deluxe wood and gold inlaid Model 8 Remington Frank Hamer used to kill Bonnie and Clyde.

Jim Bowie's knife is here, along with a picture of Bowie — muttonchops, receding hairline, direct gaze — holding it. So is the flintlock rifle with solid gold fittings taken from his dead body at the Alamo by a Mexican soldier. An eagle atop half a globe decorates the stock; the other half of the world broke off somewhere sometime. In battle? In the messy lawsuit that finally landed the rifle here? No records on that.

SANTA ANA'S saber is preserved here as well. So is the plain and deadly efficient shotgun Billy the Kid used to kill his last victim, and a fancy and impractical saddle inlaid with 18 pounds of gold and silver, and 293 diamonds, rubies and sapphires.

Today's heroes of the sports world — better make that the sports world according to Texas — are honored at the Texas Sports Hall of Fame. Kids love this place and with good reason. Many of the exhibits are interactive. They can punch a button beside a Southwest Conference mascot and hear the school song, step into an NBA player's "footprint" that dwarfs their own, and try on a Dallas Cowboys or Houston Oilers football helmet.

Kids also take to the Dr Pepper Museum, where a definitive answer is provided for the most-asked question: Is there prune juice in Dr Pepper? Answer: Absolutely not.

The must-see here is a rare bottle created for former Vice President Lyndon Johnson that features the vice presidential seal. Johnson had commissioned the bottles for a party honoring President Kennedy and his entourage, planned at Johnson's Texas ranch after their visit to Dallas in November 1963.

The atmosphere is much more sedate at the Armstrong Browning Library, which pays tribute to poets Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning. Remember: "How do I love thee? Let me count the ways ...."

Actually, this may be the most spiritual place on the Baylor campus. Docents speak of "Robert and Elizabeth" in reverential tones. Sunlight sends colorful prisms through stained glass windows depicting Elizabeth's "Sonnets from the Portugese" and Robert's "Pied Piper of Hamelin. There's even an altarlike setting in which rests a bronze cast of the couple's clasped hands.

THE LIBRARY, which began as the personal collection of Dr. A.J. Armstrong, a former head of Baylor's English Department, has been described as too smarmy by some, the ultimate in romance by others. Attitude may have a lot to do with the state of one's own romantic life.

Of course, some things don't change in Waco. Baylor students still go to George's for an 18-ounce schooner of beer called "The Big O," and the place to eat barbecue has been Jasper's since 1919.

Amaretto sours and "lite" anything are as alien at Jasper's Barbeque as a loss by legendary Baylor football coach Grant Teaff. Jasper's remains a no-frills kind of joint, filled with rundown furniture as eclectic as the suit-and-tie businessmen and overall-clad laborers who queue up at lunch.

Bill Ferguson bought out the founding Demaria family four years ago, but he didn't change a thing. The beef, bologna and sausage are still served up by the pound on butcher paper, along with pickles, onions, stacks of white bread and a beef broth-based dipping sauce. Ferguson says he can always tell a newcomer because they don't know how to order, and they expect a knife and fork. The trick to eating here: Take a piece of white bread, load up half of it with meat, fold the other half over the meat, dip it in the sauce, bite, chew and mop those dribbles off your chin with a paper towel.

Leftovers can be tasty as fresh food

NEW YORK (AP) — The second time around, leftovers can be just as tasty as the first time.

Kitchen experts advise reheating leftovers as follows:

- To keep macaroni and cheese moist, gently stir in sour cream beforehand.
- Cold pasta should be rinsed with hot water and rewarmed in the preheated sauce.
- Lightly spray wrinkled rolls with tap water. They'll revive after five minutes in a 350-degree oven.
- Reheat rice in the top of a double boiler. Add two tablespoons of liquid to each cup of rice.
- Vegetables can be put in individual cooking bags and sealed. When you are ready to reuse them, toss into a pot of boiling water, cover and heat about 10 minutes.

Family get-togethers can cause pleasure or stress

By Erma Bombeck

The relatives are coming! The relatives are coming!

Somewhere today, Nancy is pulling together new underwear for the entire family. Her husband, Roy, is vacuuming the car for the first time since he bought it. Suitcases have been borrowed, car games assembled and coolers stocked in preparation for a trip to visit family members Sis and Raymond.

Bombeck

Meanwhile, Sis and Raymond are into serious cleaning and decorating so the visitors can't see how they really live. They have stocked food, borrowed cots and high chairs, and waxed the driveway. No one will use the bathroom until after the company has seen it.

If there's anything more exciting than the first 24 hours of a family reunion, I don't know what it is. There is tearful hugging, laughter and cries of, "Go play with your cousins. We have a lot to talk about."

At the end of two days, Nancy and Roy realize that TV at Sis' house is not better than it was at home. Raymond works all day and Sis hangs on the phone. Nancy never knew her sister ate lamb before.

Sis and Raymond, who opted to sleep on the sofa bed in the living room, feel as if they're on a float at the Rose Bowl. Sis never realized before that her sister is domestically dead. She doesn't know how to turn on the stove or the washer or load a dishwasher. Her kids change clothes every three hours and leave the refrigerator door open as though they're awaiting the Second Coming.

By the fifth day, Nancy and Roy actually are carrying around a portable fan to protect themselves from Raymond's cigarette smoke. Sis and Raymond's kids are children with whom their children would not be permitted to play at home. Nancy has been packed for two days.

Sis and Raymond are beginning to show signs of testiness, too. They are sick of the comparisons between their mall, their baseball team, their economy, their weather and that of their houseguests. Their nephews do not know how to put the toilet seat lid down and they eat like lizards. Sis and Raymond are counting the hours until their relatives leave.

Mixing lifestyles and families is sometimes as risky as freshmen experimenting with chemicals in a science lab without supervision. But the marvel of it all is that family reunions are lot like giving birth: No one remembers the pain. Next July, Sis and Raymond will pack the kids in the car and head out for a visit with Nancy and Roy, where they will tell their children, "Go play with your cousins. We have a lot to talk about."

Mayonnaise makes magic for fish

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Mayonnaise, capers and mustard make a quick stir-together sauce that needs no cooking. Instead, the sauce warms as it coats the broiled fish. This recipe opts for the nonfat mayonnaise, but any type works fine.

GROUPER WITH SPICY MUSTARD SAUCE

2 tablespoons lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon cracked black pepper
Nonstick spray coating
¼ cup nonfat mayonnaise dressing or salad dressing
2 tablespoons finely snipped chives
2 tablespoons skim milk
1 tablespoon finely snipped parsley
1 tablespoon capers, rinsed and drained
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
Few dashes bottled hot pepper sauce

Thaw fish, if frozen. Cut into serving-size pieces. Sprinkle fish fillets with lemon juice and pepper. Spray the unheated rack of a broiler pan with nonstick spray coating. Place fish on the rack. Broil 4 inches from heat for 4 to 6 minutes or until the fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

Meanwhile, for sauce, in a small mixing bowl combine mayonnaise or salad dressing, chives, skim milk, parsley, capers, Dijon-style mustard and hot pepper sauce.

Transfer the fillets to serving plates. Spoon the sauce over each serving. Makes 4 servings.

GROWING UP WITH MUSIC

Ian Moore began his performing career at 19 playing for tips at Austin's Black Cat Club.

"I played to mostly bikers," Moore said. "There was a little tip jar and the only money made was money people tipped you. It was pretty funny. Very humble beginnings."

At the time, Moore was bringing in around $40 to $50 a night.

"If you got $100 you were just happening. It's so funny looking back at that.

"That was a long time ago. Between every song, you had to beg for money. You had to remind (the audience) you were only playing for tips, and if they didn't tip you, you weren't going to have money at all. Fortunately, there's a lot of good people in Austin."

It took pleading with the owner to be able to play in the first place.

"The first time I ever played live was not with the band I had been playing with. I had been trying to get a gig at the Black Cat and had been hassling Paul, the owner.

"Maybe he'd never heard me play" before.

He said the owner brought in a bass player and a drummer and told him the three of them would have to make up the music as they played.

"I was nervous. It was my first gig. I get up there to play (with) Paul Crow of Agony Column — I was playing mostly blues and he had no concept how to play blues. He and I were coming from such different worlds and, 'Oh, man, how are we going to get through this?' And it ended up being great. I guess Paul loved it because we ended up getting gigs there."

Now 25, Moore has been crisscrossing the country since the July 1993 release of his self-titled Capricorn Records album. Since the release of his album, Moore, a former lead guitarist with Joe Ely, has made television appearances on "Late Night with David Letterman," "Today" and "Entertainment Tonight."

(From 1G)

"It was like a snowball," said Moore, referring to the speed with which his career began moving since his album release.

He has just returned from headlining a European tour. Before that he completed the first leg of the Lynryd Skynyrd/Ted Nugent tour as a special guest. He joins the second leg of ZZ Top's North American Tour on Aug. 9.

"I don't really like opening up for people. As far as for my career, I like doing headline tours. If I am going to open up, ZZ Top is pretty cool. I grew up really liking them. ZZ's a great band, and I'm just excited to be a part of it."

Moore grew up with music.

"I was kind of born into it. My dad was kind of a free mind and music was just a big part of my life. We had a lot of musical friends (and) my dad had an amazing record collection. I just grew up loving it, and I was really drawn to music."

Moore's father, Ralph Moore, played the flute and the drums for recreation. He had numerous blues, soul, jazz and country records.

"My dad wasn't a big, huge rock 'n' roller. He liked Buddy Holly better than Elvis. I grew up loving Elvis. He was one of my idols. My dad was more of a beatnik type.

"My mom (Susan Moore, who plays a little bit of piano) liked Joan Baez. Dad liked everybody from Johnny Ace to Bobby Bland to The Temptations. He liked Johnny Cash. He knew Johnny Cash was a traveler. He liked (Bob) Dylan, of course. He related to those who were living a different lifestyle than him — traveling and living outside the norm."

Although he wasn't born in Austin, he considers Austin home. His parents were living there months before he was born. Then they moved to Berkeley, Calif., where his dad was doing research. While the couple was there, their son was born.

'I was kind of born into it. My dad was kind of a free mind and music was just a big part of my life. We had a lot of musical friends (and) my dad had an amazing record collection. I just grew up loving it, and I was really drawn to music.'

—Ian Moore

"From the time I was born (I went) to see live music all the time. In Austin, everybody just went out to see bands. We used to have a club called The Armadillo, which had an amazing selection of music and had ballet. It was like a cultural mecca in Austin.

"We would go to see a good blues band one night and then my mom would take me to see the ballet the next night. That was really a wonderful time in Austin."

When he was 6 years old, Moore began playing violin. He had been inspired by hearing The Cobras —whose membership included another Austin guitarist — Stevie Ray Vaughan, now deceased — with whom the adult Moore has been compared. Even as a child, Moore wanted to play the guitar, but his mother encouraged him to learn violin.

"There's a group in Austin, the University of Texas String Project, it's a wonderful program that teaches kids classical music from a really young age. When I was 14, I ended my violin career. And about 18 months later, I started my guitar career."

Although he "loves classical music," Moore said he "didn't feel he could get enough from playing it. I didn't get to create anything you know.

"The only time you would get to interpret the music is in a solo piece. When you are playing in a symphony, you are part of a different sound. It's a beautiful thing but it doesn't give a whole lot of room for solo interpretation.

"The music's been around 500 years. What right do you have to come in and tear it apart?

"Music is a very tangible, alive thing. One of the nice things about the kind of music I play is I don't have any rules. I can do anything I want as long as I'm willing to live with the results."

His classical background influenced the way he views music.

"I have a much more universal view of music. I abhor trends. I can't stand what's hip. I look at music as a deeper thing. It goes back thousands of years, not what's happened the last two months on MTV."

Moore isn't fond of categorizing his music.

"I don't like to . . . put it in the rock category . . . The music I play — it's a very rooty, emotional, deep groovy music. Very groove-oriented. Sometimes it's very bluesy; sometimes not. It doesn't really fit into a category."

And he isn't interested in "innocuous" rock.

One "turning point in my life was when I went to California. I had gotten a gig with this guy . . . (who) was not what he claimed to be. I thought it was blues rock, but it was this ridiculous innocuous rock. It had nothing to say. What a joke. But I had committed to the gig. I was young, naive. I didn't know.

"I went back from that and realized I hated that style of music and hated that aspect of the music industry. And I was not willing to do that and to make it. I could just as well stay home in Austin and play clubs."

When he returned to Austin, he was reunited with his drummer, Michael Villegas. He considers this another turning point in his life.

"It's a pretty brilliant band," Moore said.

He said the band's abilities shine more on the album they are working on. It's due out this summer on Capricorn.

"I have something I'm really excited about. I just did a live concert two nights here in Austin."

The two nights will find their way on tape in five songs being released this month.

One of the most important meetings in his life involved talking with another musician.

"Probably the coolest thing that ever happened to me musically was having a serious heart-to-heart talk with Albert King about blues guitar and about life."

Moore, whose girl friend, Kerensa Hill, is getting her doctorate in psychology at the University of Texas, knows what he wants to do with his life.

"Hopefully, I plan on making music that still matters when I am old. And as soon as I stop doing that, I hope I have the good sense and the pride to get out of it."

West Texan's art is more than cowboys, broncos

by Rick Smith
Associated Press

STREETER — Sculptor Garland Weeks has made his reputation as a western artist, but the title chafes him like a badly fitting pair of boots.

"I have never wanted to be known as a cowboy sculptor," said Weeks, who lives and works in a small community west of Mason.

"My stuff is of the human figure. It just happens to be that I sometimes put western-type clothing on them.

Weeks has a farm-and-ranch background, and he looks like a long, tall cowboy, but doesn't like to be stereotyped as a "cowboy artist."

One of the reasons, he said, is that most cowboy subjects "have been done.

"And how many more times do we have to sculpt bucking horses? At some point in time, the world will sink from nothing more than the weight of badly sculpted bucking horses.

A sixth-generation Texan, Weeks grew up on a Wichita Falls farm, worked in the agriculture business, rodeoed and began his art career by sculpting scenes from western life.

"You need to sculpt and paint what you know best," he explained.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JULY 31, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The business climate will be favorable for those deals you are so good at putting together. Growing pains lead to some parent-child conflicts. Patience and the ability to listen will ease an otherwise trying transition. Vacation trips will be more satisfying than business travel. Keep your eyes open in romance. Neglecting your mate could have dire consequences!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: economist Milton Friedman, movie producer Sherry Lansing, tennis great Evonne Goolagong, actor Wesley Snipes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An interest in conservation could grow stronger now. Contributions from the whole family will make a project successful. A trip to the seaside could be beneficial to your health.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be as flexible as possible when planning a community or church affair. An effort to raise funds for a good cause receives a helping hand when prominent figures get involved. Mix business with pleasure.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Influential people want to help you get back on top again. Choose the right moment to make your move and things will go well for you. Travel is well worth the cost. Visit friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A household budget or a teen-ager's allowance could cause arguments. One can only appeal to everybody's sense of fair play. Positive thinking is the key to overcoming lingering doubts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The different pieces of your life come together today. Unspoken marital problems can weigh heavily on the heart. Emphasize shared goals if hoping to make a fresh start.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make your own evaluation of recent events and trends. Someone who is trying to advise you may be out of their depth. Trust your instincts. Something that once brought happiness can do so again.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Intuition allows you to do all the right things in love. A business fracas ends; make overdue changes while you are in command. A misunderstanding with the neighbors will be resolved. Put out the welcome mat.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Whoa! Those of you who have been extravagant must call a halt. It is much harder to get out of debt than into it! The romantic scene looks promising. Be clear about your expectations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Arrangements you make on behalf of family members should be kept confidential. If you have any doubts about someone's honesty, speak up. It cannot hurt to take extra safeguards. Keep your own counsel about romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone may urge you to put up funds for what may be a risky venture. Say "no." Keep tax records up to date. Saving receipts will prevent a lot of headaches later on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Enjoy the day for what it has to offer. There will be plenty of time to worry about certain events if and when they happen. Spread some sunshine. Tennis or swimming helps you stay trim.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Adopt a policy of cooperation and conciliation towards family members. If loved ones balk at your plans, withdraw without arguing. Concentrate on hobbies and artistic pursuits. Play a musical instrument or sketch your surroundings.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are at their best when in a position to run things. From day one, they will greet life's challenges with vigor and enthusiasm. Outgoing and competitive, these friendly Leos will try almost any sport or game. Winning is important to them, and so is their independence.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠ Those adages that players keep quoting will be the death of us. Although they do apply in many situations, every hand is different and must considered on its own merits. All the foregoing is occasioned by someone pontificating: "Lead up to weakness; lead through strength."

In this highly competitive auction, South had the opportunity to be a genius. A pass of five diamonds would have resulted in an unsinkable contract. However, we do not blame that player for correcting to five hearts.

West reasoned East had to have club values for the opening bid and elected to make matters easy for partner by leading the ace of clubs and continuing the suit when East signalled with the king.

The moment of truth had arrived. East decided to lead up to weakness and shifted to the king of spades. A grateful declarer happily won the ace, drew trumps and ran diamonds to make the rest of the tricks.

There were two good reasons why East should have ignored the adage. First, with two aces West would surely have doubled five hearts. Secondly, if West did not want to double, the correct defense would have been to cash the ace of spades at trick two, then lead another club.

Look what happens if East switches to a diamond at trick three! The best declarer can do is overtake the queen of diamonds with the king and try to cash the ace. Unfortunately, East ruffs and declarer overruffs. Declarer can get back to the board with a club ruff to try to cash a high diamond. But East ruffs again, stranding declarer with a spade loser. Down one.

Texas performers reunite at Lincoln Center

By Shirley Jinkins
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — It's a long way from Lubbock to Lincoln Center (West Texans like to say it's a long, long way from Lubbock to anywhere), but one Panhandle-conceived project is making the trek, and reuniting an extraordinary group of singers-songwriters-actors-playwrights in the process.

The Terry Allen-Jo Harvey Allen musical "Chippy," based on the true-life diaries of a wandering West Texas call girl during the Depression, opens Wednesday for a four-day run at Lincoln Center in New York, as part of the eighth annual Serious Fun Festival. "Chippy" premiered in June at the American Music Theater Festival in Philadelphia, and the soundtrack CD, "Songs From Chippy," was released last week by Hollywood Records. Tentative plans call for the play to tour Texas in the fall.

"Chippy" is musical theater of Texas, by Texans, and for Texans (as well as others). People are calling them the Lubbock Music Mob, this loose configuration of baby-boomer avant-garde Texas types that includes co-composers Joe Ely and Butch Hancock, Wayne "The Train" Hancock, Jo Carol Pierce, and (Central Texan) Robert Earl Keen, as well as actors Jill Parker Jones and Barry Tubb. Rounding out the contingent are musicians Richard Bowden, Dave Heath, Lloyd Maines and Davis McLarty, most of whom work primarily out of Austin these days.

The thing that connects them is the Panhandle. Everything from the arid acoustics, to tree deprivation, to the theoretical ease of intercepting creative signals from space has been credited as inspiring the special brand of brand of frenzied artistic activity that has gripped Lubbock from the days of Buddy Holly to the present.

In Lubbock, explained Terry Allen, "You have that bible Belt segment, but at the same time you have an openness. There's always that collision between having that sparseness, which created incredible music — and also inspires incredible efforts to get out of there." But nobody ever really leaves Lubbock, he added, not spiritually.

Lubbock inspires strong bonds, said Jo Harvey Allen. "There's a patriotism among West Texans, so much so that friends of ours from other places say 'What is this? I'm jealous — you still have the same friends from high school,' " she said in an interview from Santa Fe, N.M., now home for her and Terry. "Practically everyone in this is from Lubbock."

The Allens are in total agreement with (and are living examples of) the notion that there's a whole renaissance of Texans working specifically in multimedia, from music to theater to visual

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Performance set

The West Texas Jazz Society is bringing the Dave Zoller Sextet to Odessa for a 2 p.m. performance Aug. 14 at the Odessa Radisson, formerly the Hilton.

The event is free to WTJS members and $10 to non-members. Students are $2. Reserved seating is an additional $5. Checks may be made payable to West Texas Jazz Society,. P.O. Box 10823, Midland, 79702.

■ Concert planned

Sounds of the big band era and jazz are on the program when Dow Jones Average with Max Howard entertains at the Summer Sunday Lawn Concert today at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The free family entertainment starts at 7:45 p.m. on the museum grounds.

Dow Jones Average is a group of business men who have performed together for 16 years. Howard, longtime Midlander and morning show host at KMND Radio, provides color commentary for the concert.

Leader of the group is Carvel Mills, who plays saxophone. Jim Ross plays the piano with Gary Burnett at the drums and Mark Lowe playing bass.

The museum invites those attending to bring seating and picnics or snacks.

The concert scheduled for Aug. 7 features The Shades.

■ Collectibles shown

Collectible guns, knives and accessories come to Midland Center, Main Street at Wall Avenue, Saturday and Aug. 8 at the Texas Gun and Knife Association's second show here in 1994.

Premature speculation that the new Brady legislation recently passed by Congress would affect the size and number of exhibitors at the gun shows has proven unfounded, said Don Hill, president of the Texas Gun and Knife Association.

The Brady legislation only affects the sale of handguns by licensed dealers, said a release from the Texas Gun and Knife Association. Because some of the pistols sold at the show are offered by private collectors, they are not affected by the new law. And the Brady legislation does not apply to long guns or gun accessories, both of which are popular items at the shows.

The show also will feature wildlife art, historical artifacts, Texana items, Native American and military memorabilia and gold and silver jewelry.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Aug. 7. The public is invited to buy, sell, trade or brouse.

■ Course offered

INGRAM — A course in the ancient art of rope braiding, often described as "weaving with rainbows," will be offered in a fall class taught by Rodrick Owen of Oxford, england, at the Hill Country Arts Foundation.

Registration deadline is Friday and the class is set for Oct. 24-26 in the HCAF's Visual Arts Center here.

Owen is an expert on two families of braids, pre-Hispanic Peruvian and Japanese, and will be teaching only three workshops in the United States this year including the one in Ingram, which is entitled "Trazditional Japanese Braid Making."

A first-time instructor at the HCAF, Owen is a textile artist and teacher whose work has been exhibited in Great Britain, the United States and Japan.

Tuition is $200 for the three-day class. For more information call 1-210-367-5120.

■ Exhibit on display

ALPINE — An exhibition of watercolors by the Taos Society of Watercolorists is on display at the Museum of the Big Bend, campus of Sul Ross State University, through Aug. 22.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged.

■ Music show set

RUIDOSO, N.M. — Castle Mountain Music Show here is set for 2:30 p.m. Aug. 7.

The Gospel Sing began in 1992 with the purpose of providing a non-denominational environment in which people could get together and listen to gospel music.

The show features the castle's own house band, castle Mountain Music Makers as well as other area talent.

Those interested in performing may call 1-505-257-6180.

■ Carlin to perform

FORT WORTH — Stand-up comedian George Carlin will make his first appearance at Casa Manana Theater at 8 p.m. Aug. 7.

Tickets, priced at $28.50, may be purchased by calling 1-817-332-2272 or any TicketMaster outlet. This concert was rescheduled from the previous date of June 4 due to Carlin's back surgery.

Also, Casa Manana will present the pop-rock opera "Evita," winner of seven Tony Awards, including Best Musical, as its fourth summer production, playing Tuesday through Aug. 14. Performances are at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday with 2 p.m. matinees Saturday and Sunday. Tickets range from $18 to $24 and are available by calling 1-817-332-CASA.

■ Reception set

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University, is hosting a public reception and awards presentation for the Watercolor Horizons Group from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Aug. 14.

The exhibit will remain at the institute until Sept. 4.

Also on display is the exhibition "Echoes of New Mexico," paintings by Dorothy Peterson of Roswell, N.M., through Aug. 21.

Mrs. Peterson, a native of north-central New Mexico, maintains a working studio in Roswell and teaches at Eastern New Mexico University and the New Mexico Military Institute. She is listed in "Who's Who in American Art" and "Who's Who of the West."

She has served as a member of the New Mexico Arts Commission since 1983. She was formerly a faculty member at Midland College.

No admission is charged. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

■ Entries due Sept. 15

Entries for the World Day of Poetry Competition are due Sept. 15 at the Permian Basin Chapter of the Poetry Society.

The competition will be judged by Carol Reposa, award winning poet form San Antonio.

There is no entry fee for the contest. Poems may be open form and open subject with a 50 line limit. Only three poems may be submitted per person. Cash prizes will be awarded.

The awards ceremony will be held on the World Day of Poetry, Oct. 15, in conjunction with a poetry workshop given by Reposa at Midland College.

Contest entries may be submitted to World Day of Poetry Competition, 110 S. Dewberry, Midland, 79703.

For information including competition rules, call 694-5193 in Midland or 1-366-9281 in Odessa. Copies of the roles may be obtained at UTPB, Odessa College, Ector County Library, Midland County Library, Midland College and Pages & Prints.

■ Talent needed

Auditions will be at 7 p.m. Monday at the Angelo Civic Theatre, 1936 Sherwood Way.

Auditions are simple and baseball players, night club party people, singers, demons, dancers, peanut vendors and enthusiastic baseball fans are needed. There are singing and non-singing parts as well as a variety of roles from small to large.

"Damn Yankees" is sponsored by GTE. For more information call 1-949-4400.

and performance art. Everyone from Lyle Lovett to Alvin Crow has dabbled in theater and/or film in addition to music-making.

Jo Carol Pierce, Austin-based actor and playwright who acts as the narrator in "Chippy," said Texans are more adept at working in multimedia projects, and less likely to label themselves as only singers, or authors, or actors, because their smaller markets tend to bring people from different media closer together.

Pierce, who was formerly wed to Jimmie Dale Gilmore, explained some of the Lubbock Music Mob's background, which all stems from several mid-'60s graduating classes of Lubbock's Monterey High School.

"We were just the gathering of misfits that didn't fit in to any of the other cliques," she said from her home in Austin. "I met Jimmie Gilmore in the Gifted Underachievers class. I don't know why I was in there; I made B's. He didn't, though.

"We were so proud to be in that class that we were motivated to underachieve to an even greater degree."

Jo Harvey Allen said the best illustration of the Panhandle mystique is her husband, whom she married right after graduation and with whom she left town immediately.

"When we first left and went to California, he was running away," she said. "It was about 10 years before he realized all his music was really about Lubbock."

Terry Allen is an artist, songwriter and playwright who studied art at the Chouinard Art Institute in Los Angeles, and is best-known for his multimedia touring exhibit "Youth in Asia," seen here last year at the Modern Art Museum of Fort Worth. He and Jo Harvey also collaborated on the musical "Pioneer," and he's currently working on a musical drama, "Juarez," to be directed by David Byrne. In addition to co-producing "Songs From Chippy" with Joe Ely, Terry Allen's latest CD is the acclaimed "The Silent Majority."

Jo Harvey Allen is herself an actor, playwright and performance artist, having toured her one-woman show "As It Is In Texas" and "Counter Angel," about a truck-stop waitress. Her acclaimed "Hally Lou," about a snake-handling tent revivalist, is set for a reading this fall in New York, and she'll open her new one-woman show, "Homerun," next spring in North Carolina. She has authored two books, "Cheek To Cheek" and "The Beautiful Waitress," and she has been seen in character roles in "Fried Green Tomatoes" and other films, and a starring role in the CBS-TV pilot "Elysian Fields."

Jo Harvey Allen is also the woman behind "Chippy." The play, drawn from 35 years' worth of diaries kept by the West Texas prostitute, is set in the oil boom of the late 1930s. "I met the woman who had the diaries 10 years ago. I actually saw the real diaries," she said. They were in two stacks marked "Bundles From Heaven" and "Parcels From Hell." Jo Harvey optioned a booklet of the diaries, then she and Terry began fictionalizing the character.

"We had always wanted to do a piece with all these friends from Lubbock," Terry Allen explained. "We had general ideas of the stuff we wanted to do."

About a year ago, "Chippy" came together in earnest out of a series of vignettes and musical offerings during a theatrical workshop in Philadelphia. The cast of six grew to 13.

Terry Allen said the cast got down the feel of the 1930's Panhandle. "We're all sort of second-generation Chippy's customers," he said. "It was very close history to us as well."

Musically, the sense of time and place easily set the tone. "Bob Wills and western swing music was getting together in those days," Terry Allen said, and they were free to imbue the recorded project with a tinny quality to replicate radio broadcasts of the day.

Among them all, the musicians wrote over 30 original songs. The CD includes 19, the play has 28.

The soundtrack is a gem, with deliciously sensual/sad dobros, steel and mandolins sliding across lonely lyrics.
