Bush gives top adviser authority to seek court order to halt recount

George W. Bush gave a top adviser authority Friday night to seek a court order stopping Al Gore's campaign from securing manual recounts of contested ballots in Florida, as both sides of an improbably deadlocked presidential election looked to the judicial branch for help in the make-or-break state.

In a war of nerves, Bush's camp pressed Al Gore to concede Florida without multiple recounts, yet Democrats pressed ahead with their protests — determined to find enough votes to erase Bush's advantage in initial counting. "The quicker we get this resolved the better off it is for the nation," said Bush, even as his camp considered whether to seek the injunction.

Replied Gore campaign chairman William Daley: "This campaign is not over."

That is what worried some Democrats across the country, who sought to carefully balance support for Gore with suggestions that his options were dwindling.

"I think that people's patience is

Train, truck collision injures one

By Brian Rogers

Miguel Jimenez, 50, was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital Friday night after the truck he was driving was hit by a train. Midland police officer Jim Sevey said the man was talking and coherent when he was taken from the scene by ambulance.

Officials at Midland Memorial Hospital said the man was awake, alert and stable.

Jimenez was in a silver Ford F150 going north on Carver Street when he attempted to cross the tracks. He was struck on the driver's side by an eastbound train at about 9:15 p.m..

Although the airbag did deploy, officials at the scene didn't know if Jimenez had his seatbelt on. No one else was in the truck, according to police.

Sevey said witnesses on the scene said the signal lights were working correctly, although there is not a crossing arm at that intersection.

"Certainly crossing arms are ideal, but in the absence of that, people crossing the tracks need to be paying attention," Sevey said.

After the truck was hit, it slammed into a junction box on the north side of the tracks. The truck's toolbox and a wheelbarrow that was in the bed were scattered after the collision.

"We've got debris scattered 75 yards down the line," Sevey said.

Oxy's $100,000 gift gives United Way new record

From Staff Reports

The gifts just keep coming.

The United Way of Midland Friday announced a major campaign contribution by Occidental Petroleum has led to a rare revision of its campaign total. The $100,000 Oxy gift pushes the official total raised in the 2000 United Way campaign to $3.1 million, a new United Way of Midland single-year record for campaign fund-raising. The previous all-time high was $3.056 million, raised in 1997.

The decision to adjust the campaign total to reflect the higher amount following Oxy's contribution was made during a meeting of the United Way executive committee Wednesday afternoon.

Cynthia Y. Benson, executive director for the United Way of Midland, said revising the campaign total is extremely rare, but considering the significant amount of the contribution, the adjustment in the total was more than justifiable.

"We're so very grateful to Oxy," Ms. Benson said. "Their generosity has not only pushed us over the top, but their gift ensures that many more people in our community will benefit.

"And because this gift pushed us to an all-time high campaign record in Midland, it's important to give recognition to Jose Cuevas, our campaign chair, and to our many volunteers and donors who made it happen. This is most definitely a time for celebration."

Cuevas said Oxy's donation is another example of the generosity of those who help the United Way.

"This really serves as a shining example of corporate responsibility to the communities that Oxy serves," Cuevas said. "With these dollars, we'll truly be able to provide more services to more people. This is a victory for the people of Midland. Many more folks in our community will be served due to their

Celebration brings honor to veterans, tears to many eyes

By Danielle Belton
Staff Writer

Carl Pirkle couldn't stop wiping his eyes.

The principal of Rusk Elementary, Pirkle, a tall middle-age man who has been in the teaching profession since 1966, could not stop crying. Even when Rusk Elementary School intern Jessica Martin pointed Pirkle out she described him as the man with the blue tie who was crying. She joked he was always crying. And he cried most of the show and even more afterward as people came up to shake his hand and hug him. But he did not cry in a loud or uneasy way — just in a way that made him have to wipe his eyes every few minutes or so.

But he didn't cry alone. Nearly half of the audience had eyes marked by red veins. Women stood with their arms folded across their chests quietly sniffling, while men blinked hard and rubbed at their blurry eyes.

No one cried alone.

Rusk Elementary was one of the many schools in Midland that was putting together a celebration for American veterans, but their show was one of the largest with more than 500 people in attendance and

Americans react to election with amazement, weariness

By Helen O'Neill
Associated Press

After days of recounts and recriminations, Americans remain incredulous, and some say they are wearying of this tortuous presidential election.

"It doesn't matter anymore. Bush ... Gore ... just give us a president," said Clarissa Wilkison, 25, of Bismarck, N.D.

Barbara Smith, a 57-year-old storeowner from Marne, Mich., said she was so "stressed" by the agony of it all that she couldn't bear to watch television anymore.

"This is a nightmare for our country and I think our country is going to be so divided, whoever is president," said Smith, who voted for Bush.

The best thing for the country, she said, would be an early — and graceful — resolution, no matter who the final winner is.

"I think we have to go back to our Constitution and the policies we have set up for voting," she said. "There has to be some process of the law. Now there are lawsuits and all the lawyers are down there, and no one knows what's going on."

"I usually think everyone is honest," said Terri Tripp, a 42-year-old insurance agent from Omaha, Neb., who voted for Bush. "But now I am wondering if they could be fixing votes."

Added Barb Sutherland, a 46-year-old Omaha secretary, also a Republican, "It all makes me wonder if they could be playing around with the votes."

The Democrats "are almost on the verge of inciting a riot," said Anthony Angotta, a 46-year-old service station owner from Stamford, Conn. and a lifelong Republican. "They are trying to do what they couldn't accomplish at the polls."

Angotta said the entire country loses the more the process drags on.

"It will keep instilling a hostility, an anger in the people, a feeling that we've been robbed; the election was stolen from us," he said. "Was it really or was it just close?"

As for the controversial ballot in Palm Beach County, Fla., "If someone is in school and they fail a test, should he be allowed to take it again?" Angotta said. "Where does it stop?"

At the ballot box, says Lynette Shuster, a 35-year-old mother of two from Pittsburgh, an independent who voted for Bush.

"When you go in to vote, you have to know your rights," said Shuster, who has grown bleary-eyed watching the drama on television. "It seems like there are a bunch of crybabies out there, and no one wants to take responsibility for their actions. MOVE ON."

"I think the whole thing is a shame," said Rose George, a teacher from Hilton Head, S. C., who voted for Bush. "You've had your vote. You've had your recount. Now let's get on with it."

But getting on with it means different things to different people. Some, like Trish Hallam, a Democrat from Morrisville, Pa., say voters in Palm Beach County should cast their ballots again. Like others around the country she wondered "why everyone doesn't have the same balloting."

Others wondered if the process could get even more confused in the Electoral College.

"It wouldn't surprise me if some of the electoral college voters weren't voting the way they were supposed to," said John Ryan, a 59-year-old iron worker from Chicago. Ryan, who voted for Gore, described the election as "a soap opera" and said he wouldn't be surprised at shenanigans from either party.

"It's frustrating to see what's happening now," he said.

In Harlingen, 75-year-old farm laborer Salvador Garcia marveled at the quirks of the democratic system he so proudly participates in. Garcia wouldn't say whom he voted for, but hinted that he preferred Gore.

"If the American people are smart enough to invent a rocket that goes all the way to the moon," he says with a snort, "why can't they invent a card that won't confuse people?

"Let me talk to them," he said. " I can do it."

Some took a more optimistic view.

"It'll make our country stronger in the long run," said Jim Mckey, a 64-year-old salesman from Scottsdale, Ariz., who claims to be descended from a soldier who fought under George Washington. A lifelong Republican, McKey said he voted for Gore because he was impressed by the Democratic candidate's energy. He still thinks Gore would make a better president. But, he says, enough is enough.

"I don't think there's voter fraud out there that doesn't go on all over the country. It's sour grapes," McKey said. "You can open up a can of worms like this in any county in the country."

Jeff Neal, a 40-year-old branch manager for an investment company in Chicago, said the nation "should rejoice in the process. We should all recognize the historical moment we're living in. I wouldn't be surprised if younger generations that have distanced themselves from the process, if this captures their attention and they will take part."

Hillary Clinton, others call for scrapping Electoral College

WASHINGTON — With the prospect that George W. Bush will be elected the next president without a popular majority, Sen.-elect Hillary Rodham Clinton joined lawmakers Friday in calling for a constitutional amendment to abolish the Electoral College.

Clinton, speaking in upstate New York, said she would support legislation next year to scuttle the Electoral College, a body that is receiving extensive attention in this election because of the virtual tossup in Florida's presidential results.

"We are a very different country than we were 200 years ago," Clinton, elected Tuesday to the Senate from New York, said at a news conference. "I believe strongly that in a democracy, we should respect the will of the people and to me, that means it's time to do away with the Electoral College and move to the popular election of our president."

Eliminating the Electoral College in favor of direct elections would take years to accomplish, if at all, because it would require an amendment to the Constitution. That process would require the concurrence of two-thirds of the House and Senate and three-fourths of the states.

The fate of Tuesday's presidential election will come down to which candidate wins Florida's 25 Electoral College votes.

The Electoral College today is made up of 538 electors, equal to the number of representatives and senators from the 50 states, plus three electors from the District of Columbia. A candidate needs 270 electoral votes to win.

Nationally, Vice President Al Gore holds a slim majority in the popular vote and in the Electoral College. Bush holds a slight lead over the vice president in Florida. But if a recount and tally of absentee ballots show that Bush has in fact won Florida, the state's electoral votes will elevate him to the presidency — even though Gore has won the popular vote nationally.

Gore's aides have threatened to challenge the Florida results in court.

Rep. William Delahunt, D-Mass., a member of the House Judiciary Committee, said Friday that he also would sponsor legislation to elect presidents by popular vote.

"The Electoral College may or may not have made sense in 1787. But through 21st-century eyes it is as anachronistic as the limitations on suffrage itself," Delahunt wrote in the Boston Globe.

Steven Hill, an analyst with the Center for Voting and Democracy, said: "This may be the push we need to get rid of the Electoral College."

In most presidential campaigns, a candidate wins a majority of votes in both the Electoral College and the popular tally. In 15 elections, the winning candidate has won a plurality of popular votes and the majority of electoral votes. President Clinton won a plurality, not a majority, of popular votes in 1992 and 1996.

Only three other times in U.S. history has a presidential candidate lost the popular vote but won in the Electoral College. The last time that happened was in 1888 when Benjamin Harrison defeated President Grover Cleveland.

Lawmakers have attempted before to begin the process to amend the Constitution and elect presidents directly by popular vote, to no avail. Illinois Republican Rep. Ray LaHood has tried since 1996, but the legislation has made no headway in the Judiciary Committee, the panel that must first approve the proposed legislation.

Likewise, in 1992 the Senate held hearings on the idea, and in 1968 the House went so far as to approve an amendment that would allow direct election of presidents, but it was stopped in the Senate.

The main reason that the legislation has gone nowhere is because lawmakers are loathe to tinker with the Constitution — the overarching document that provides the architecture for the functioning of the three branches of government and the process by which presidents are elected.

Still, poll after poll has shown that most Americans favor scrapping the Electoral College.

In 1980, a Gallup Poll asked, "Would you approve or disapprove of a constitutional amendment to the to do away with the Electoral College and elect the president with the total votes cast?" An overwhelming 67 percent of respondents said they approved, while 19 percent disapproved. In 1977, 73 percent of respondents wanted direct presidential elections, while 15 disapproved. Even as far back as 1944, a poll found that 65 percent of respondents favored scrapping the Electoral College and 23 percent opposed.

In laying out the workings of the federal government in the fledgling republic, the founders of the country considered several options before settling on the Electoral College to elect presidents.

For example, they considered allowing either Congress or the states to choose the nation's chief executive. But those options were discarded out of fear that either would invite excessive corruption and political bargaining. In addition, the founders were worried that election by Congress would upset the balance of power between the executive and legislative branches.

The founders also considered direct elections by popular vote but discarded it out of fear that people would tend to vote for candidates from their own state because it was difficult to learn about out-of-state candidates in an era when information spread slowly.

The fear was that no president would emerge with a sufficient majority or that the most populous states would dominate the political scene.

So they settled the Electoral College, a system that tempers the influence of larger states. While it has been tweaked over more than two centuries, the Electoral College functions like this: each state is allocated a number of "electors" equal to the number of its senators (two) plus the number of its representatives in the House. The overall number changes with a state's population fluctuations. In most states, whichever presidential ticket wins the popular vote in the state also wins all of the electors.

Whichever candidate wins a majority of Electoral College votes wins the White House. Generally, the candidate who wins the nation's popular vote also wins the majority in the Electoral College.

That may not be the case this year because of Florida's make-or-break vote in the Electoral College.

Robert Naiman, an analyst with the Center for Economic and Policy Research, argues that the system, while designed to even the playing field among states, is unfair to those with greater populations. "In Wyoming, one vote in the Electoral College corresponds to 69,000 voters. In California, one electoral vote corresponds to 180,000 voters," he said.

But Robert Dallek, a Boston University historian, said that direct election of presidents could foment political instability.

"If you only had a popular vote, what would happen probably is that you would get a lot of splinter parties and it would be increasingly difficult for the major two-party candidates to get a popular majority," Dallek said. "Then it could be that elections get turned over to the House to decide."

ELECTION: New Mexico back in too-close-to-call column going to be fairly limited," said Gov. Jim Hodges of South Carolina.

"He needs to rise above it and say, 'So be it.' You deal with the hand you're dealt," said Paul Feleciano, longest serving Democrat in the Kansas Legislature.

Bush clung to a razor-thin lead in Florida — the crucial White House state with its 25 electoral votes — after county officials completed a machine-counted review of the 6 million ballots cast. Still to come were an unknown number of votes from Floridians living overseas and the state's official certification, due next Tuesday.

In Florida, Gore advisers cited confusing and irregular ballots to press for follow-up recounts by hand in four predominantly Democratic counties. They won approval in three — one recount began Friday, two more today — and the fourth request will be heard Tuesday.

In a late-night conference call Friday, Bush gave James A. Baker III — the former secretary of state who's protecting the Texas governor's interests in Florida — authority to seek a court injunction barring the manual recounts, according to several GOP officials involved in the discussions. The officials said it was very likely the injunction would be sought, but stressed that it was up to Baker to make the final decision. A source close to Baker said the former secretary had not decided. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity.

Baker had said earlier that he's prepared to "vigorously fight" the manual recount because they open the process to mistakes and fraud that are avoided by machine counts.

To buy some time, Gore's lawyers asked the state's Republican secretary of state late Friday to defer certification of the results until the manual recounts are complete. The recounts could drag on, though canvassing board members face fines of $200 a day after Tuesday.

Republicans were getting into the act: At Bush's request, Palm Beach County officials will perform a mechanical recount today of all ballots while conducting a separate recount by hand for Gore.

"The entire effort that's going on now in Florida is aimed at making sure that whoever takes office in January as president of the United States will do so with full legitimacy," Gore running mate Joseph Lieberman told CBS.

"As frustrating as this wait may be," Daley said earlier, "what we are seeing here is democracy in action."

Frustrated described Bush to a T.

"We will be prepared" to take office Jan. 20, the governor told reporters, taking a break from planning what he hopes will be a transition to power. He and his aides acknowledged that he can't claim victory before the overseas votes are counted and certified.

"There are still votes to be counted," Bush said.

And so Republicans moved on several fronts to blunt Gore's ballot challenges. Bush strategists considered seeking recounts in GOP areas of Florida if Democrats started having success in their recounts, a senior strategist said.

An unofficial tally by The Associated Press in Florida's 67 counties showed the Texas governor with a 327-vote lead. State officials said their recount showed Bush leading by 960 votes with one county left. That was Palm Beach County, where the AP showed a big Gore gain.

Not counting the Sunshine State, Bush had won 29 states for 246 electoral votes. Gore, who added Oregon to his victory column Friday, had won 19 states plus the District of Columbia for 262, with 270 needed for victory. New Mexico, with five electoral votes, remained too close to call.

Gore's lead in New Mexico was down to about 100 Friday night.

The incomplete national popular vote totals showed Gore leading Bush by 218,441 votes: 49,244,746 to 49,026,305 — about 48 percent each.

Despite the show of confidence, Bush said it's "a little early" for him to contact the outgoing Clinton administration about the mechanics of transition. He also tabled plans to resign as Texas governor and hand the reins to his Republican lieutenant governor during the transition; that decision will wait until after the election is resolved, aides said.

For his part, Gore was at the vice president's residence in Washington, where he played touch football with his family. He talked of winning, then added with a smile: "I'm talking about the touch football game."

His Democratic allies were not so optimistic about the presidential race, and many were opposed to legal action.

"I think everybody is waiting to see what happens but the general feeling is that Bush will probably win," said Gene Bushmann, former chairman of the Missouri Democratic Party. He praised Gore's effort, but said, "I think going to the lawsuit stage would be too much."

Former Arkansas Sen. Dale Bumpers said Gore should consider calling it quits after Florida's absentee ballots are counted.

"There might come a time when the vice president would be well served to say the country's interest is more important than the interests of one person or political party, and go ahead and concede," Bumpers said.

Hodges said Gore has a right to seek recounts, but doubted that a legal challenge of confusing Palm Beach ballots would work. "Generally, most successful challenges have been on fraud," he said.

POLICE REPORTS

Sexual assault

Henry P. Hernandez, 35, remained in custody Friday after being arrested Thursday on a charge of sexual assault of a child.

Hernandez was arrested at San Jacinto Junior High School where he was a teacher's assistant. The alleged offense did not occur at the school or involve any of its students.

He has been suspended without pay, pending the outcome of the investigation. Hernandez has been employed by MISD for nine years.

TEARS: World War I veteran attends Rusk celebration nearly 200 veterans seated as special guests. The crowd nearly filled up half of the Confederate Air Force's airplane hangar.

"The first time we did this it was in the school gym and it was so crowded," Pirkle said. "Then we moved it out here last year and they asked us to come back."

Pirkle said the show was so big because everyone wanted to be involved. The original program, which used to only involve a few grades, now involved the entire school. The students had been practicing since classes started in September. Some had even given up their lunchtime recesses to practice their songs and dance routines.

The program, entitled "Stars and Stripes 200," featured Rusk Elementary students singing patriotic songs and performing dance routines to entertain and honor veterans from past American wars and those who served during peacetime — or as Pirkle said to the audience, "From Kosovo all the way back to World War I."

There was one World War I veteran in attendance. Lewis B. Elliott was a friend of Pirkle's father-in-law and took quite a bit of searching to find. There was a bit of confusion about Elliott's age. Everyone kept saying he was 104 when in actuality he was quite younger — he was only 103.

Born on Sept. 1, 1897, Elliott served during World War I while stationed in Arizona along the Mexican border. It was after the Mexican uprising when he served in the medical department in the U.S. Army. Living in Colorado City now, Elliott was escorted to the program by his daughter, Frances Godwin.

After the show, Elliott and all the other veterans enjoyed a picnic lunch with a group of students and his daughter. His student escort for the day, Rusk sixth-grader Brittanie Watson, 11, was more than excited to share her lunchtime with Elliott and Ms. Godwin.

"It felt very good that I would be able to honor the people who fought for us in World War I," she said. "I've been learning in school that they fought for us and saved our nation. I thought the program was real cool thing to do for them."

Brittanie Watson was one of the many Rusk students who sang in the choir during the program. The students — all decked out in different variations of red, white and blue — sang an assortment of different military and American songs. At one point in the program, they sang the official songs of each branch of the military. Those veterans who could stood when their song was played. Many of them smiled. Some waved to their grandchildren who were in the program.

Rusk had its very own "boogie woogie" bugle boy on hand in the form of Glenn Morgan.

Morgan, the father-in-law of Rusk teacher Sharon Morgan, played "Taps" on his horn for the veterans who died in war and who recently passed away. Tom Morgan, Glenn's son, was glad to see his father there playing: "It's good to show appreciation for the veterans' contributions and at the same time teach the kids. And it gives my dad a chance to play his horn."

ACCIDENT: Collision injures one

crossing bars installed at railroad crossings in Midland, said, "This accident illustrates the need for people in Midland to be cautious. The trains are moving faster than they have in the past, and we're also seeing more trains come through."

Although Burns did not know if the intersection is currently scheduled for a crossing arm, he did say, "Four crossing arms for Midland intersections have been designed and paid for, and I would like to see Union Pacific move faster on installing them."

This is at least the fourth major train collision in Midland this year.

On July 6, Michael Moore, 44, was hit while driving a semi across the intersection at Midkiff Road. Moore wasn't seriously hurt.

On June 10, Danny Martinez, 44 and his son, Matthew, 11, were killed when their van was struck at the same intersection. Martinez's wife, Debbie, 37, died later of injuries sustained during that accident.

Bill Walker, 61, was killed Jan. 27, when his van was struck by a train at the "G" street intersection.

None of the intersections that were the sites of those wrecks had crossing arms.

Ironically, this week Union Pacific offered a free train ride and on-board safety presentation to students, police officers and community leaders across the state. The train was in Midland-Odessa on Wednesday and Thursday.

DONATE: Oxy gives United Way $100,000

generosity."

Pat Oenbring, president and general manager of Oxy Permian, said his company's gift was in keeping with its increased presence in the Permian Basin. In April, Occidental Petroleum announced it had purchased Altura Energy, the Permian Basin's largest producer.

"With the purchase of Altura Energy this year, Oxy's presence in Midland has increased dramatically," Oenbring said. "We felt like this donation was commensurate with our presence here and an important part of our responsibility to the people of Midland."

Keith Weiser, president of the newly formed WestWin Energy Company, and a United Way volunteer who served as chair of a division within the Energy Sector that solicits energy companies with a presence in Midland but headquartered elsewhere, played a lead role in gaining the contribution by Oxy.

"I appreciate Oxy's commitment to the Permian Basin, and I am especially grateful to Pat Oenbring for his sincerity in addressing this need," Weiser said.

Oxy's gift follows by four months BP Amoco's announced contribution of $150,000 and by three months the announcement that the Fasken Foundation and Abell-Hanger Foundation would underwrite administrative and campaign costs for the year 2001.

"A campaign's success is accomplished by its community, and this is especially true in Midland," said Beki Moorehead, campaign director for the United Way of Midland. "The Oxy gift is a great finish to a terrific outpouring in our community. There are many companies, employee groups and individuals who have given either for the first time or who have increased their giving. We are thankful for each one."

Celebrate VETERAN'S DAY

Many Midlanders agree: Let's get it over with

By Timothy V. Kreitz
MRT Correspondent

Midlanders expressed a wide array of opinions and philosophies on Friday regarding the current recount of ballots going on in Florida. But despite their varied points of view, most agreed on one common theme: They want it to be over with.

"Let's get it done," said Marisa Adam, a local landscaper. "Something obviously went wrong somewhere (with the ballots), but dragging it into the courts or revoting would probably yield the same results we have now. They should just total the votes and elect somebody."

More than 19,000 Florida ballots were nullified when it was discovered that more than one presidential candidate had been selected. The Al Gore campaign believes the nullifications were a direct result of difficult to understand ballots that confused voters.

Earlier this week, Gore campaign chairman Bill Daley said the Democrats may dispute the election results within the federal court system if Gore is not declared the winner.

"It's just like the Democrats to pull such a stunt," said Midlander Andra Brian, who felt Gore campaign officials were more concerned with their own interests than those of the country as a whole. "I saw the layout of the Florida ballot on television," she added. "You'd have to be a complete nitwit not only to fill it out wrong, but to then cast it into the box instead of asking for another one."

Some 15,000 votes were nullified in Florida during the 1996 presidential election, in which the same style of ballot was used. The nullification of the ballots resulted in no revote or civil litigation.

"Perhaps the voters were too timid or even embarrassed to ask for another ballot," said Jerome Hoelscher. "We all goof up now and then, but why cry about it now, after the fact, instead of at the voting places where the ballots could've simply been given back to the elections administrators and fresh ones issued."

"The media got ahead of itself. That's dangerous."
— Jesse Munoz

Others felt the real problem with this year's election lies not in the Florida debacle, but in the continued existence of the Electoral College, which casts votes on behalf of the voting population. "It should probably be eliminated," said homemaker Frankye Johnson. "This is a sad situation for the country."

She added that although the 2000 election should be resolved according to current rule, the possibility of making a change in the system should not be ruled out. "If this election had been decided by the popular vote, we wouldn't even be having this discussion right now," she said.

Referring to the election as "a big mess," Janice Stevenson felt it was best to just relax and let things play themselves out, adding it would require patience and cooperation on everyone's part to resolve things efficiently. "I did my part — I voted," she said. "I'm going to let it go now and accept whatever the outcome may be."

Longtime Midlander Tom Mitchell, who has lived in West Texas since 1949, remembered a time when elections were more civil and gracious in nature. "Politics in general have become too aggressive and mean," he said. "People should realize that the left and right will never completely see eye to eye, and start working on ways to compromise and work together."

Mitchell went on to say that despite its flaws, the American system of government is the most dependable and fair in history, and that, in his opinion, the electoral college should remain intact.

Jesse Munoz felt the news media may have played at least a partial roll in creating the close election race with inaccurate initial projections that Gore would win Florida, which may have affected voter turnout in Western states. "The media got ahead of itself," he said. "That's dangerous."

Munoz added that "they are doing the right thing" in Florida, and the system is viable and dependable as it is.

Most also seemed to agree that the problems experienced in this year's election have given the United States an undeniable black eye on the world stage.

"The Europeans are all laughing at us right now," Mrs. Brian said. "We need to resolve this thing and move on."

Hoelscher agreed with the need for a timely conclusion. "If Bush comes out on top, Gore should be gracious and concede the election," he said. "It's the right thing to do."

Dedicated to All African American Men & Women Who Served

We fought too! African-American men and women served, fought and died for America. A black man was one of the first to die in the beginning of the Revolutionary War, while other free blacks joined the army. There were others, such as the all black units like the 54th Massachusetts during the Civil War, the Buffalo soldiers during the Indian Wars, the 369th Infantry Regiment in WWI, the Tuskegee Airmen and the Red Ball Express in WWII, and the last black unit in the 24th Infantry Regiment in Korea.

Blacks also fought in Vietnam, Desert Storm, and every war and conflict in between. In early years blacks were segregated, treated unfairly and poorly but continued to fight with honor and dedication. Black men and women fought for freedom and equality, although they were denied these freedoms at home. Discrimination and segregation continued in America, but despite this, generation after generation of black men and women continued to serve and fight for America with the hopes that someday they to could enjoy the rights and freedoms as other Americans did.

To the Midland community: be proud of our Black Veterans. To the Black Veterans: wave your flags, be proud, say to your children and grandchildren: we fought for America, too. Let our people know that we, the Black Veterans earned us the right to be called Americans, and that we are to be treated the same as all Americans.

Faked war stories as old as battle itself

CLEVELAND (AP) — If Joseph Shearer could say one thing to men and women in uniform this Veterans Day, it would be this: I'm sorry.

Shearer, 64, is an Army veteran who was caught lying about his military record.

Shearer isn't the first man to exaggerate his military exploits. Fabricated stories of battlefield heroics are as old as war itself. But each time, it seems, other veterans react with pity, puzzlement and anger.

"I get irritated — they're pretending to be something they're not. Most veterans don't even talk about their service," said Joe Hrusch, a member of a Veterans of Foreign Wars post in suburban Cleveland.

B.G. "Jug" Burkett, a Vietnam veteran from Dallas, has made it his hobby to expose fraudulent vets. In more than a decade, Burkett estimates he has examined 2,000 newspaper stories and TV reports involving veterans' service records. About 75 percent of the vets' claims in those stories contained at least some element of fabrication, he said.

"The majority tend to be lower-income, working-class guys who haven't done much in life," he said. But as war heroes, "everybody sees them differently."

Lying about military records goes back even further than the days when the Roman legions marched across Europe, he said.

In the 1950s, about a dozen men to claiming to be the last living Civil War veteran all turned out to be phonies, Burkett said.

More recently, Darrow Daily of Clarksville, Tenn., conceded that war records show he could not have been at the Korean hamlet of No Gun Ri, where he claimed to have witnessed the killing of a large number of civilians during the Korean War in 1950. Daily was among a dozen ex-GIs cited in a Pulitzer-Prize winning story by The Associated Press as supporting the accounts of the killings given by Korean survivors.

Joe Hrusch said that he is irritated that people lie about their military record at a VFW Post last month in Solon, Ohio. Hrusch is a member of a Veterans of Foreign Wars post in suburban Cleveland.

Vets who make up stories insult servicemen who died for their country, said Steve Van Buskirk, a spokesman for the 1.9-million-member VFW at its headquarters in Kansas City, Mo.

In Shearer's case, a South Korean charity invited him to visit that nation for ceremonies honoring Americans who participated in the war.

Shearer, who lives just outside Cleveland, spoke to The Associated Press while he was in Korea about being wounded in battle and about comrades who died in the fighting. His brother, Donald Shearer, read an account of the ceremony and called the AP to challenge Joseph Shearer's claims. Confronted with a military document showing he served in Korea after the war, Shearer admitted he lied.

"Duke" Tully resigned in 1985 as publisher of the Phoenix Gazette and the Arizona Republic after admitting he fabricated a heroic military record that included service in Vietnam and Korea.

Former Rep. Wes Cooley of Oregon was convicted in 1997 of lying on official documents for claiming to have served with the Army in Korea during the war there. Actually, he hadn't left the United States.

In 1996, Adm. Jeremy "Mike" Boorda, chief of naval operations, committed suicide after it was learned that he was wearing Vietnam combat decorations he did not earn.

South Africa: Outrage over videotape of white police attacking black men

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A videotape showing white police officers setting dogs on three black men, beating them and shouting racial slurs has outraged a nation ashamed of its apartheid past and sharpened debate on the pace of change.

The videotape, broadcast Tuesday on state television, apparently was filmed two years ago by one of the policemen during the attack. The officers said the attack was staged as a training exercise for the dogs. News reports said the officers later showed the tape for entertainment.

Since the broadcast, South Africans have flooded newspapers with letters expressing outrage, some calling for the death penalty to be reinstated. The story has dominated South Africa's media, even overshadowing the undecided U.S. election.

Although most South Africans — black and white — have reacted by demanding tough measures to root out police racism, a few wrote newspapers to support the policemen, underlining the deep divisions that remain in post-apartheid South Africa.

"We don't have a lot of time to solve these kind of problems. The event should be dealt with like a national emergency," Abdul Minty, deputy director-general of the Department of Foreign Affairs, told reporters Friday in Pretoria.

The six officers were charged with attempted murder Wednesday and remanded into custody until Nov. 17, when they are scheduled for a bail hearing.

Sally de Beer, a spokeswoman for Police Commissioner Jackie Selebi, said the black men in the attack were accused of being illegal immigrants. The attack took place at a field northeast of Johannesburg, he said.

The videotape showed the officers punching the men when they tried to defend themselves. The bleeding victims, their clothes in tatters from the dog attacks, were then forced to stand in a line as some of the officers hit them.

Now, police aren't releasing any details about the victims.

Zizamele Cebekhulu, president of the Police and Prisoners Civil Rights Union, said racism had been institutionalized in the police service and it is very far from ending.

Although 58 percent of police officers are black, according to official statistics, specialized squads — such as dog units — remain largely white, Cebekhulu said.

De Beer said there are several programs to deal with racism in the police force and that Selebi, after seeing the videotape, is considering more.

Since the broadcast, people have complained about police attacking them with dogs.

"The misuse of police dogs seems to be a regular occurrence in some dog units in the country," the Independent Complaints Directorate, which investigates complaints against police, said in a statement Friday. It listed four incidents in which suspects were mauled by dogs dating to May 1999.

Tuesday's broadcast comes four months after two white police officers received suspended jail sentences for beating two black hijacking suspects and setting a dog on them. The British Broadcast Corp. aired footage of that attack last year.

Such brutality, common during apartheid years, still occurs regularly, Cebekhulu said. Amnesty International said Friday it "has continued to receive corroborated evidence ... of the torture and severe ill-treatment of individuals in the custody of law enforcement agents."

On Friday, the tiny right-wing white Herstige Nationale Party issued a statement saying "hysteria" over the attack was misplaced.

"The continued excessive publicity on the incident will only encourage racial hatred against whites," party general secretary Louis van der Schyff said.

Jody Kollapen, a member of South Africa's Human Rights Commission, said the attack indicates the country's hopes of quickly turning into a "Rainbow Nation" where people all colors live in harmony were too high.

"While those concepts made us feel good, they were also a bit unrealistic in that they did not consider the depth of racial hatred in South Africa and its history," he said.

Five Palestinians, Israeli soldier killed in clashes; Palestinians set new terms for talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians on Friday set tough new terms for a resumption of peace talks, as five Palestinians and an Israeli soldier were killed in widespread clashes in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak, meanwhile, said the assassination of a West Bank militia commander wasn't just a one-time warning and that Israel would go after other gunmen if shooting attacks on Israeli enclaves don't cease.

The killing of Hussein Abayat, a regional commander of the Tanzim militia, "was meant to make this standard clear," Barak said during a tour of the West Bank's army headquarters. "Whoever hits us will be hit."

Abayat was riding in a car when he was killed by a missile from a helicopter gunship Thursday. Two women bystanders were also killed in the attack.

The militia, linked to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement, has threatened revenge. In a first retaliation, Palestinian snipers fired Friday on Israeli troops guarding Rachel's Tomb in Bethlehem, part of the region Abayat commanded, and one soldier was critically wounded. The soldier, 20-year-old Sgt. Shahar Ukrat, died of his wounds Friday night, the army said.

Five Palestinians, including a 14-year-old boy, were killed in clashes in the West Bank town of Jenin and in Gaza. The Gaza deaths included two Palestinians shot and killed by Israeli soldiers at the Karni and Erez crossings between Israel and the Gaza Strip.

Late Friday, 28-year-old Raed Mekhsed was caught in a heavy exchange of fire between Palestinian gunmen and Israeli soldiers in Hebron and was killed by a bullet that hit him in the back while he was in his car, hospital officials said.

Palestinian reports identified him as the son of Saadi Mekhsed, a senior Palestinian security official who was in the car at the time of the shooting. Rumors spread in Hebron that Raed Mekhsed was actually killed in an Israeli attempt to assassinate his father, Israel radio reported.

At least 187 people, most of them Palestinians, have been killed in six weeks of fighting.

A further escalation of violence could overshadow Barak's meeting with President Clinton at the White House on Sunday. U.S. officials have not specifically condemned the Israeli strike, but have warned that violence would only beget more violence.

Barak, meanwhile, said it would be "a little too far-fetched" to expect the talks with Clinton to result in a resumption of negotiations. First, he said, there must be a substantial reduction in the violence.

Arafat, who met Clinton on Thursday and went to the United Nations on Friday, said he was ready to attend another Mideast summit, provided it was well planned and success was guaranteed.

However, senior Palestinian negotiator Ahmed Qureia on Friday set new conditions for a resumption of talks.

Qureia said Israel would have to declare a settlement freeze; the United Nations, the European Union, Russia, China, Egypt and Jordan would have to be brought in as mediators besides the United States; both sides would have to reaffirm that talks are based on U.N. resolutions calling on Israel to withdraw from war-won land; and an international force would have to be deployed to protect Palestinians against Israeli troops.

The Palestinians have raised such demands in the past, but never as a precondition for returning to peace talks.

"After everything the Israelis have done, it is very clear that this uprising will not stop" unless a Palestinian state is established or conditions are met for a resumption of negotiations, Qureia said.

Arafat went to the U.N. Security Council on Friday with his demand for a 2,000-strong U.N. force to protect Palestinian civilians in Jerusalem, the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Israel opposes such a U.N. force.

Near the West Bank town of Ramallah, Palestinian gunmen leading hundreds of rock-throwers traded fire with Israeli troops. Witnesses said Israeli tanks fired shells at an abandoned building from which Palestinians were shooting.

In Bethlehem, thousands joined Abayat's funeral procession. The march began in Bethlehem's Manger Square in front of the Church of the Nativity that marks the traditional birthplace of Jesus. Church bells rang for Abayat, a Muslim.

The 37-year-old Tanzim commander and father of seven children took a CIA intelligence course in the United States several months ago, according to Palestinians. The U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv would not comment.

Israeli troops later clamped a closure on Bethlehem and Ramallah, meaning Palestinians were barred from entering or leaving the cities.

OPEC meeting unlikely to boost world oil supplies

LONDON (AP) — Despite tight supplies in world oil markets, OPEC is expected to forgo any increase in crude production when its members meet Sunday to assess market conditions.

Consumers subsequently should not count on seeing prices for heating oil or gasoline fall any time soon, some analysts say.

OPEC's official line is that it will stick to quotas adopted last month, and energy analysts say the cartel probably won't adjust its output level before year's end.

In fact, when it does decide to modify its output, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is more likely to cut crude production than to raise it.

Oil ministers from OPEC's 11 member nations meet this weekend in Vienna, Austria. It is their fourth policy meeting of the year — an unusually intense schedule.

OPEC is keen to appease the United States and other key importers that have demanded relief from expensive crude, yet it fears pumping too much oil and causing prices to plunge.

The cartel decided to pump an additional total of 3.2 million barrels a day at its three previous meetings, and added 500,000 more this month after prices remained above a key benchmark for 20 consecutive days.

OPEC President Ali Rodriguez has ruled out further increases for now.

"There won't be a change in oil output policy," he said Friday.

Rodriguez, Venezuela's oil minister, often speaks on behalf of the group, although OPEC members still must reach a formal consensus.

OPEC produces almost 40 percent of the world's crude, with an official output of 26.7 million barrel a day. It actually produces much more: 29.5 million barrels in October, according to the Paris-based International Energy Agency.

That hasn't been enough to ease energy prices back from some of the highest levels since the Gulf War.

Heating oil futures jumped 6 percent Thursday to $1.016 a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange, sparked by an IEA report noting "serious concerns" about low fuel inventories as winter approaches. Prices dipped slightly to $1.011 Friday.

Crude futures were trading up 3 cents to $33.95 a barrel on the Nymex, while North Sea Brent crude was trading at $32.09 a barrel on the International Petroleum Exchange in London, down 7 cents.

High prices triggered an automatic increase on Nov. 1 of half a million barrels a day in OPEC output under an arrangement the group's members agreed to beforehand.

This arrangement requires OPEC to add 500,000 barrels to its daily production if the average price for OPEC crude exceeds $28 for 20 consecutive trading days.

Because prices are all but certain to remain above $28 for another 20 day stretch — OPEC should, in theory, decide to hike production once again in the near future.

However, OPEC has been inconsistent in meeting such commitments. Its members argue that bottlenecks at refineries and steep fuel taxes are to blame for high energy prices in many countries and say the world is awash in crude.

Peter Gignoux, head of the petroleum desk at Salomon Smith Barney in London, expects OPEC to defer any production hike until at least the end of the year.

Many OPEC members already are constrained from producing enough oil to meet their current quotas, making another increase all the more improbable.

OPEC is haunted by its decision to boost output in December 1997, just before the financial crisis in Asia caused demand to plummet. By December 1998, prices had dropped to around $10 a barrel, wreaking financial havoc on oil-dependent OPEC members.

Many OPEC officials worry that this scenario might repeat itself in late winter and early spring, when history suggests demand for crude will slacken.

Doctor says team aboard space station has friendly relations, excellent health

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russian doctor monitoring the health of the crew aboard the international space station said Friday that the three were upbeat and in excellent condition, a news report said.

The crew, American Bill Shepherd and Russians Yuri Gidzenko and Sergei Krikalev, had good appetites and were sleeping well, Dr. Yuri Katayev told the ITAR-Tass news agency.

"They are quite satisfied with their space menu," Katayev said, according to ITAR-Tass. The food aboard the station is a mix of Russian and American cuisine.

The space station, occupied by the crew on Nov. 2, has an exercise bike and a treadmill. Though it will expand a great deal in the next few years, the station currently only has three modules and about as much room as a standard bus.

Katayev said the crew hadn't complained about the noise level in the station, though a Russian module, Zvezda, didn't meet NASA safety standards for noise.

"The level is appraised as acceptable," Katayev said.

Friday's work started with Gidzenko congratulating his son on his birthday, Katayev said. He said the crew's friendly relations with each other was helping their work in the station's cramped quarters go more smoothly.

'Dogs can't keep Benson down

■ Rebels' stout defense shuts out Midland High, gives star tailback chance to get motor warmed up.

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee has showed all year long they can outscore just about anyone. Friday night, in the Battle of Midland, the Rebels didn't need to.

After being shut down in the first half, Cedric Benson showed why he is the best running back in the history of Class 5A in the state of Texas with 210 yards and three scores, but it was the Rebel defense which earned the game ball in Lee's 24-0 blanking of the Bulldogs Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

The result was another Midland Lee win over the Bulldogs, the Rebels' 12th straight in the series.

The win pushes Lee (8-2 overall) to 4-1 in District 4-5A play. Thanks to Abilene Cooper's 17-14 win over Abilene High, the Rebels' district title, their fifth in sixth seasons, will be shared with the Cougars. Despite Lee's win over the Cougars earlier in the season, district rules state that teams with equal records share the championship.

Lee also knows where and against whom it will play next week. Due to Odessa Permian's emotional 28-0 win over Odessa High, the Rebels are going to the Big School (Division I) bracket of the Class 5A playoffs. Lee will travel to San Angelo for a bi-district matchup with San Angelo Central. That game will take place next Friday at 7:30 p.m.

"We needed to do this. We needed to play a tough hard game," Lee head coach John Parchman said. "A tough, hard game won't do anything but help us, confidence-wise."

A tough game is what the Rebels got, whether they wanted it or not. Midland High (4-6 and 1-4) came to play much like last season. A double-digit underdog, MHS surprised the Rebels and the overflowing Memorial Stadium crowd, which was in excess of 13,000, keeping the Rebels off the scoreboard for the whole first half. The Bulldogs also held Cedric Benson to 26 yards rushing.

In the second half, Lee ended all hopes for a MHS shutout with Michael Wynn's 30-yard field goal. Trouble for the Bulldogs followed over Lee's next three possessions, because the Rebel Express hit full throttle.

First, Benson broke out on a third-down scoring burst of 56 yards.

Then in the fourth quarter, Benson capped an eight-play, 44-yard drive with a seven-yard scamper.

The final score again came from Benson and again came from seven yards out. His third touchdown of the game was the nail on a 13-play drive which milked more than six minutes off the clock.

Benson came to life in that second half, following his line for 184 yards and three scores. He called it "his best game" against the Bulldogs.

"It showed Rebel pride," Benson said of the second-half outburst. "We knew we didn't get things done in the first half."

More proof to Lee's dominance showed because the Rebels never punted in the second half and were 6-of-7 on third-down conversions.

"You can only contain Cedric so long," Midland High head coach David Browning said. "Our kids played as hard as they could play. They played their hearts out.

"Eventually they keep hammering at you, and offensively we couldn't sustain things long enough to keep him off the field. They hammered and hammered, and eventually, the dam breaks. But it was not from a lack of effort from our kids' part."

While the offense scored, the defense recorded its second shutout in the last three games. Last year MHS exploded offensively in the 35-28 Lee win. This time, Lee stepped up and showed playoff form in the regular season finale for both teams. Lee forced four turnovers, held MHS to 1-of-9 on third-down conversions and limited the Bulldogs to 160 total yards (75 rushing and 85 passing).

"It is the crosstown rivalry game and you always want to look better in front of the home crowd," Lee defensive end Dwight Washington said of the shutout. "They were getting a few plays early, but other than that, things worked well."

Washington, Fred Thrweatt and the rest of Lee's defensive line were in Midland High's backfield almost all night, or at least that is what it must have seemed like to MHS quarterback Chris Howard, who was 9-of-23 for 85 yards. Half of Howard's incompletions came on passes thrown out-of-bounds to avoid taking a sack.

When he threw to a receiver, it didn't always

Frenship prevents Steers from getting share of 4-4A title

BIG SPRING — They didn't come out of it with a district championship, but the Big Spring Steers emerged from Friday night's showdown against a top 10 team none the worse for wear.

After giving up the first 25 points to No. 9 Wolfforth Frenship in the first half, the Steers looked like a different team for most of the second half, but it wasn't enough to claim a piece of the District 4-4A title, as Frenship held on for a 25-23 victory. It was the second straight loss for Big Spring (6-4 overall, 5-2 in district), which will nonetheless head into the playoffs next week against Canyon High at 1 p.m. in Lubbock's Lowery Field.

Frenship will share the district title with Andrews, which defeated Levelland, 40-6. Andrews defeated Frenship 36-35 in overtime last month.

It might appear that the Steers are stumbling into the playoffs when

Mustangs start playoff run with familiar road trip

DALLAS — The Midland Christian Mustangs fell one game short of winning a district title with a 35-28 loss at Fort Worth Christian last week. The painful memories of that defeat, however, can be erased with a state championship run.

The 7-3 Mustangs hope to kick off that state championship run at 2 p.m. today when they travel to face 6-3 Dallas Bishop Dunne in a TAPPS 4A bi-district playoff game.

"This will be our fourth trip to the Metroplex," said Midland Christian coach Greg McClendon. "Our last trip is the only trip we had that we didn't get done what he had set out to do. We had some adjusting to do to the mud and once we got adjusted, we ran out of time.

"But this is the playoffs. It doesn't matter what the conditions are, we're going down there to win the football game."

Despite the loss at the hands of Fort Worth Christian last week, McClendon saw a lot of positives in his football team.

"This last loss was a real aggravating loss because we thought we were the better football team," McClendon said. "We felt the weather played into their hands, we felt the calls went their way and we still came back after being down 35-6. I promise you

Buffs whip Seagraves, grab playoff spot

By Garrett Luft

STANTON — The Stanton Buffaloes used their consistent rushing attack and a strong defensive effort to put themselves in the playoffs with a 28-8 victory over Seagraves Friday night.

Clay White ran for 115 yards and three touchdowns on 15 carries, while Jeremy Hull ran for 98 yards on 18 carries. Yet Hull's best plays were made on the defensive side of the ball, as he led the Stanton defense, which held the Eagles to only 202 yards of total offense.

"Jeremy played wonderful on defense," said Stanton coach Mark Cotton. "(Seagraves) had their defense assigned to stop him (on the offensive side of the ball)."

It did not look as if Stanton (8-2 overall, 4-1 in District 3-2A) would have an easy walk to the playoffs early in the game. After driving from their own 37-yard line to the Eagles' 20 on the first drive of the game, the Buffaloes failed to convert a fourth down passing play and Seagraves took possession of the football.

On the very next play, Seagraves' Lewis Mijares ran 80 yards for a touchdown around the right side, and a two-point conversion put the Eagles up 8-0.

After trading punts, the Buffaloes put together a solid drive. Unfortunately for Stanton, though, senior quarterback Keith Cook was hit late after an option pitch and suffered a mild concussion. Cook did not return for the rest of the game.

The Buffaloes picked up anyway with junior Ryan Kelly under center and continued the drive to the Seagraves' 4-yard line, but the

Chargers enter quarterfinals vs. mysterious foe

EDEN — The Trinity Chargers are about to go up against the unknown.

We're just not talking figuratively but literally.

When the 8-2 Chargers takes on 2-2 Giddings State School in today's 2 p.m. TAPPS 3A quarterfinal game, who knows what Trinity may be up against. Finding out about Giddings may be more of a mystery than who's going to be the next President of the United States.

"They've only played four games and we only have one film on them and that was the first game of the year," said Trinity coach John Wilkins. "It's a crazy deal. In all the years I've been involved with football, I've never had a situation like this. They don't even film their games according to them. Trying to get information on them was like trying to break into Fort Knox.

"It's been a hard week, mentally, for the coaches because we've had to kind of guess what they might do. We just have one film on them and that was from the middle of September."

Big, loud Kyle Field crowd will welcome top-ranked Sooners

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M fans will attempt to set a world record for stadium sound volume when No. 1 Oklahoma comes to town Saturday.

It's up to the Aggies to give them something to cheer about.

"It's kind of hard to hold the emotions down right now," said fullback Ja'Mar Toombs, who admits he might be inclined to yell a little himself.

Come kickoff, Toombs and the rest of the 23rd-ranked Aggies won't be holding anything back. Neither will the mega-loud Kyle Field faithful, who are expected to number 86,000-plus, becoming the largest crowd ever to see a football game in Texas.

Sasha Hollar, a senior on the Midland Christian volleyball team, was named to the All-State team in Class 4A in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools.

Hollar made the first team, while another Lady Mustang, sophomore Hayley Whiteside, landed on the second team. Together, they helped lead MCHS to a 26-4 record.

Joining Hollar on the first team were Noelle Christensen of TAPPS District 1-4A rival Lubbock Trinity and Jessica Bowden and Erin Hickman of San Antonio Castle Hills, the team that knocked MCHS out of the playoffs. Eight other players were on the first team

MCHS also drew its share of honors in District 1-4A. Hollar was voted both the Most Valuable Player and the Offensive Player of the Year, while Whiteside was the Defensive Player of the Year.

Finley's buzzer-beater lifts Mavs over Spurs as Smith watches

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks want the ball in the hands of clutch-shooting swingman Michael Finley in crunch time.

Finley delivered Friday night, hitting an off-balance 22-foot jumper as time expired to lift the Mavericks to a 79-77 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

"He can make a shot out of nothing," Mavericks guard Steve Nash said. "We're always confident he can get a good look."

San Antonio's Avery Johnson had tied the game at 77 with a 3-pointer from the right corner with 4.1 seconds left.

Finley, who finished with 20 points, took Greg Buckner's inbound pass, dribbled to his left and launched a fallaway jumper over Sean Elliott with just over a second left. The shot swished as the final buzzer sounded, and Finley was mobbed by his teammates.

"It's a play we work on quite a bit in practice," said Finley. "Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. The ball felt good when it left my hands. Luckily, it went in."

Playing with a bruised left shoulder, Dirk Nowitzki added 18 points and 10 rebounds for the Mavericks, who wanted to put on a good show for free agent forward Joe Smith. Dallas owner Mark Cuban spent the afternoon trying to convince Smith to sign with the Mavericks.

Smith and his agent, Dan Fegan, sat beside Cuban in baseline seats. Smith visited the Mavericks locker room before the game and at halftime.

The Reunion Arena public address announcer introduced Smith to the crowd, and Smith smiled as he was cheered when his image was shown on the arena's big screen.

Fegan has said Dallas, Chicago, Atlanta, Miami and the New York Knicks are all in the running for Smith.

Cuban said he wanted Smith to come to Dallas to see the city and meet with the players.

"I didn't want to put on the hard sell," said Cuban. "Joe wanted to see what Dallas is all about. We just want to let him know we want him to be here."

Jacks pay back Buzzards quickly

EL PASO — The Odessa Jackalopes got some sweet revenge on the El Paso Buzzards with a 4-2 victory Friday night.

The Jacks avenged a 4-2 loss to the Buzzards at home Friday night.

After a scoreless first period, El Paso jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the second period. But the Jacks had a response to the Buzzards' outburst with three goals of their own in the second.

Tim Hill scored off assists from Jason Heywood and Scott Hillman, Mike Sanderson got a power play goal off an assist from Hill and Derek Laxdal, and Trevor Allman got an unassisted shorthanded goal for Odessa.

The Jacks, who outshot El Paso 37-28, added an insurance goal in the third period as Sanderson went in unassisted.

Each team went 1-for-3 on power play opportunities.

BIG: Steers enter playoffs with two-game losing streak

you add this week's loss to the previous week's 35-21 setback against Snyder. However, Big Spring beat powerful Frenship 23-0 in the second half Friday night, giving the Steers something positive to carry into next weekend.

"I'm not much of a moral victory type of guy," admitted Big Spring coach Dwight Butler after the game. "We're out here to win, and that's why we have a scoreboard.

"Do I believe that this helps our young men build character? Yes I do."

Had Big Spring gotten a little more time, the question of whether or not the game could be considered a moral victory might not have ever come into question. After a hopeless first half, the Steers benefited from some Frenship kicking game mishaps to claw back into it.

With 3 minutes, 35 seconds left in the game, Big Spring's Jason Woodruff bulled in from eight yards out and kicked the subsequent extra point to cut the lead to 25-23. If the Steers held defensively, they would give themselves one last chance to pull off a miracle rally.

Frenship (8-2, 6-1) took over at its own 15-yard line after the kickoff and quickly made a first down, but the Steers forced the Tigers into a fourth-and-one at their own 38 with the clock winding down toward a minute. Opting not to play it safe, Frenship decided to go for it, and the gamble paid off when Jorge Rodriguez picked up six yards to seal the victory for the Tigers.

That Big Spring was even in a position to make Frenship sweat a little in the final minutes was an impressive enough accomplishment for the Steers.

"They could have laid down and quit but they just can't do that," Butler said of his team. "We played tremendous defense in the second half. You just can't get 25 down against a team like that.

"We knew we were a better football team than the way we played in the first half."

In that first half, the Tigers showed why they were so good, but perhaps did it a little differently than expected on offense. Frenship scored on its first three possessions largely behind its ground attack, mildly surprising since the Tigers boast the returning Class 4A Player of the Year in quarterback Kendal Briles, who transferred from Stephenville.

Briles didn't do much damage against the Steers in the air, completing only 6-of-14 passes for 90 yards and no touchdowns, but he was Frenship's leading rusher with 65 yards on 14 carries, and scored what proved to be Frenship's final points on a 10-yard run with 1:44 left in the first half. Mark McClendon scored Frenship's first touchdown on a 27-yard run, and Barry McCormick scored on the next one from two yards out to give the Tigers an 18-0 lead.

It was on Big Spring's next possession that the game really turned against the Steers. Big Spring drove to Frenship's 25 when it faced a fourth-and-seven and elected to go for it. Jason Choate, who didn't complete a pass in six attempts, threw late down the left sideline and Gentry McGaha intercepted it, returning the ball 80 yards for a score to give the Tigers an 18-0 lead.

But as efficient as Frenship was in the first half, it was as inefficient in the second half. Big Spring held the Tigers to only 26 yards in the second half, and twice the Tigers snapped the ball over their punter's head to give Big Spring great field position for scoring drives of only eight and 19 yards which cut the lead to 25-16.

"We were able to get there in that position (to force a punt) but playing great defense in the second half," said Butler. "We've been able to put pressure on the punter all year."

The Steers pulled off a trick of their own after Woodruff (who gained 112 yards on 18 carries) scored early in the second quarter to cut the lead to 25-14. Woodruff waited on the far left side of the field and looked as if he was tying his shoe to kick the extra point, when the ball was snapped to the holder, Choate, who completed a pass to Woodruff for two points.

"We've been working on it about a week," said Butler. "(Woodruff) always adjusts his show and no one ever goes out there on him."

Bulldogs put on defensive clinic: How to stop Rebels for one half

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Some hungry playoff football coaches may become best friends with Midland High head football coach David Browning and defensive coordinator Larry Currie in the week's to come.

At least, half a friend because they will only want half of MHS' game film against Midland Lee.

For one half, the Bulldogs put on a defensive clinic in how to slow down Lee's Cedric Benson. El Ced was held to a meager 26 yards rushing in the first half, his lowest yardage production in any half of his career when he played the entire half.

But that was the first half. El Ced went on a 184-yard rampage in the second half to help Lee take a 24-0 win, scoring on every drive in the second half.

"We had a good plan," Browning said. "Our defense executed, but when you are up against the best running back in the state, and there's just one leak in the dam, it's really hard to stop.

"But I'm so proud of the way our kids played. This is a thin team and we are undersized against everyone we play, but the one thing is that these kids are going to play hard. We've come from being a roll over team to one that comes to play."

Benson, playing his last regular season game and maybe last at Memorial Stadium before a sellout throng of more than 13,000, finally won out, scoring all three of Lee's touchdowns and a final 210 yards on the night.

"I think some of us were not ready for this big game hype and it took some time for us to play like Rebels," Benson said. "We were not prepared at first, but we refocused and got it done."

Benson had a 67-yard touchdown run called back in the third quarter. Lee did score a field goal on the possession.

"I wasn't disappointed that I didn't get the yards or the touchdown on that play, but I was exhausted and had to go back and start it all over again," Benson said. "That was the disappointing thing. Midland High came out and played tough defense in the first half."

Lee coach John Parchman said nothing was really changed at the half.

"We didn't really change anything about what we were doing, but we wanted to see if we could get a body on a body, but we weren't going to do anything fancy," Parchman said. "Midland High did a great job of playing defensive football in the first half. (Linebacker Matt) Bose and (defensive lineman Michael) Glasscock, who was playing hurt, are real warriors out there. You can't take anything away from what they did."

Lee quarterback Nick Hand also said that nothing changed at the half, saying, "Midland High played strong 'D' in the first half, but I think we just decided to play. Oh, the coaches made some minor adjustments at the half, but nothing big. We just needed to pick it up."

Midland High defensive back James Smith, who blocked a Lee field goal attempt by Michael Wynn in the first half to keep the score deadlocked at 0-0, said, "We based our whole defense on stopping Benson," Smith said. "They made some good adjustments at the half and we weren't able to adjust. We fought as hard as we could, but just fell short. We watched some film on what some other teams did against Benson and that helped us in what we did."

But Lee did wear down the Bulldog upset effort with a defense that disrupted the offensive timing of the Bulldogs, who could never quite get the offense rolling. In fact, MHS' deepest penetration into Lee territory during the game was the Rebel 49-yard line.

One key was Paul Gonzales, who has been a defensive back all season, but was moved to linebacker this week to replace the injured Robert Rogers. Gonzales had two interceptions.

"It's been forever since I've had a linebacker have two picks in one game," said Lee defensive coordinator Kelvin Ratliff. "That was awesome since he's had only three days of workouts at that position."

Gonzales admitted that he was nervous going into the game.

"I really didn't want to play linebacker, but it was for the best of the team," he said. "I was nervous at first, but I was feeling more comfortable as the game went on. I really don't count that first interception because I fumbled it back at the end of the play. But we did score off the second one."

The Lee defense wanted the shutout.

"This is the best to get a shutout against MHS," said Lee defensive lineman Fred Threatt. We had one this year (Odessa Permian) and we were all talking about getting one more."

MHS' Glasscock, the defensive warrior according to Parchman, wouldn't talk after the game. He had left his game on the field.

As for Browning, he's going bird hunting today. The valiant battle had been fought. He won't be recounting ballots.

As for Parchman, he's still working on Back-3-Back. Next Friday in the Class 5A Big School playoffs, Lee will be in San Angelo to meet Central in the bi-district round at 7:30 p.m. Central lost to Lubbock Monterey, 41-33, Friday night to finish in second place in District 3-5A. Monterey wins the district championship and plays Abilene High while Amarillo High will be Abilene Cooper's opponent. Cooper defeated Abilene High 17-14 Friday to earn a district co-championship with Lee.

He'll probably destroy the first half of this tape. And coaches better look for Browning on the bird lease.

Cooper 17, Abilene 14

ABILENE — Abilene Cooper defeated Abilene High, 17-14, at Shotwell Stadium Friday night, in a game that turned out to be good news for both teams.

Cooper finished in a tie at 4-1 with Midland Lee, earning a District 4-5A co-championship with the Rebels. Abilene High, on the other hand, lost the game, but got good news from Odessa when Permian derailed Odessa High, 28-0, giving the 2-3 Eagles a berth in the state playoffs.

Cooper will play District 3-5A's third place Amarillo High in the Small School bi-district round next weekend at site and date still to be determined. AHS will meet 3-5A winner Lubbock Monterey for the second time this season next weekend.

Cooper's Tremaine Diles rushed for 95 yards while quarterback Jordan Neal passed for 186 yards. AHS' quarterback Kevin Goodman was held to only 68 yards passing and he was intercepted twice.

Permian finishes at 2-3 in district play, the same as the Bronchos. OHS won its first two district games, but lost its last three. A win would have sent OHS to the state playoffs. Abilene High, also 2-3, beat both OHS and Permian in district play to earn playoff advancement.

Permian scored in every quarter and mashed OHS is total yardage, 315-150. Jayson Dorman rushed for 111 yards fro Permian and quarterback Justin Whitaker passed for 125 yards while running for a touchdown and passing for one.

Rams will play Canidate

ST. LOUIS (AP) — This week is finally the week the St. Louis Rams take the wraps off their first-round draft pick.

Coach Mike Martz said running back Trung Canidate, who dressed but did not play last week, will see action in the first quarter Sunday at New York against the Giants.

"I'm excited where he is right now," Martz said Friday. "So I'm anxious to see him play a little bit."

A little bit would be a lot for Canidate, who's been dogged by injuries. He missed most of training camp with a high ankle sprain and has missed all but two games of the regular season with a sprained foot.

"This is looking like it, finally," Canidate said. "I'm not going to shoot the gun, but it's looking like I'm going to be getting out there.

"I made it through this week feeling good, so that's the main thing."

Justin Watson will start at running back in place of the injured Marshall Faulk, out 2-4 weeks after undergoing arthroscopic knee surgery on Monday. But Martz said Watson and Canidate, whose blazing speed convinced the Rams to draft him, could alternate later in the game.

GAME: Rebels break out in 2nd half come with success. Lee's Paul Gonzales, who moved from defensive back to linebacker this week, had two interceptions.

"We had a good plan, but they did a good job of coverage more than anything else," Browning said. "A lot of those passes were designed to be thrown quicker than that, and they covered us up and banged on us. We couldn't get open."

The Rebels battled MHS' offensive sets and balanced play calling with an effort which has some feeling really good about the upcoming playoffs.

"There is a lot of pressure in a game like this," Lee defensive coordinator Kelvin Ratliff said. "They (the defense) have not always handled adversity well, so this was a good sign. They showed maturity tonight."

GAME NOTES: Cedric Benson finished the regular season with 1,980 yards and 29 scores... His second touchdown gave him 100 rushing touchdowns for a career... Parchman runs his record to 6-0 versus MHS. His teams still have not lost to MHS, Permian or Abilene High...

The No. 1 Defense: MHS finished with the second-best defense in 4-5A. MHS allowed 338 yards to move its season total to 2,466. AHS allowed 249 to Cooper to run its total to 2,468. Permian allowed 150 yards to run its season total to 2,430. Thus, Permian finishes with the top-ranked defense in 4-5A...

MCHS: NFL vet coaches Bishop Dunne

most teams get beat 65-6 because everything that could possibly go bad went bad. But our kids rose up, challenged and came back. I was very proud of our kids even though we lost.

"I still feel in the road through the playoffs, we're going to be one of the big chiefs."

Bishop Dunne is coming into the game as the champion out of District 2 after a 3-0 win over Dallas First Baptist last week. The Falcons are coached by Kenneth Davis, who was a standout running back for the Buffalo Bills and Texas Christian University.

"It's a lot different than being a player," said Davis, who's in his third year of coaching the Falcons and getting his first playoff experience. "You're the individual that's calling the plays. What I bring to the table is the experience of knowing what to expect out on the football field and what kind of mindset an individual should have."

Davis said his team is just happy to make the playoffs and is well aware of the experience the Mustangs have in the postseason.

"I know this is not Midland Christian's first trip to the Metroplex and I know they're a good football team and a proud football team," Davis said. "They have to be a good football team to be where they are."

The Falcons haven't torn up their opponents this year but have been very solid this year on both sides of the ball.

"They're real athletic, have good size and have quite a bit of speed," said McClendon about the Falcons.

On offense, the Falcons run a split-back veer led by running back Ryan Searcy, although Davis said that as many as four different backs may carry the ball.

Defensively, the Falcons will crowd the line of scrimmage with nine to 10 players and will also play man-to-man coverage in the secondary.

And once again, the Mustangs will be outsized by their opponent. The Falcons average 290 pounds per man on the line, led by tackle Chris Anglin at 6-foot-3, 325 pounds. With that size on both sides of the ball, in order for the Mustangs to be successful, they have to keep a balanced attack on offense.

"When they put all those big guys up front, they can make it tough on you to run the football," McClendon said. "Our advantage is when they put them all up there then they also have to stop our pass.

Last week against Fort Worth Christian, the Mustangs — behind junior quarterback Jamie Beeghley — went to air 26 times and completed 13 passes for 178 yards in the muddy conditions.

"That's as good a job that you can do in the mud," McClendon said. "I can't tell you how muddy it was. Once you get into the mud like that, it's hard to snap the football and it's hard to hang onto the football."

The Mustangs don't want to think about last week anymore, they're ready to start their playoff run on a positive note.

"I feel really good about the playoffs," said lineman J.D. Machacek. "The mindset of this football team is just different than the past years. I'm ready to go."

"I have high expectations," said fellow lineman Roan Moreno. "I can't really predict anything. All we can do is play our heart out like it's our last game."

PLAYOFF NOTE: The winner of this game takes on the winner of Houston First Baptist and Austin St. Michael's in the semi-finals at a time and place to be determined.

STANTON: Buffalos make playoffs again

drive was cut short when Hull fumbled into the end zone and the Eagles recovered for a touchback.

The Stanton defense picked up the slack for the early offensive sputters by holding Seagraves to zero first downs following the opening 80-yard run.

Kelly looked a little rough around the edges at first. A fumbled snap and two consecutive illegal procedure penalties began his first full drive on the field, but that was the last of his troubles for the evening.

Kelly threw his first pass of the evening for a 47-yard completion to receiver Ruston Pardue that put the Buffaloes on the Seagraves' 5-yard line late in the first half. White ran for a touchdown on the next play to cut the Eagle lead to 8-6.

Following the kickoff, Seagraves quarterback Carl Cavazos was picked off by Pardue, who returned the interception 40 yards to the Eagle 20-yard line with just under three minutes remaining in the half.

Kelly made the most of the opportunity by tossing a touchdown pass to Jon Cotton two plays later. Kelly was 4-of-7 passing on the night for 107 yards.

"Ryan is a good quarterback, there's no doubt about it," said Cotton. "We're really blessed there. He's a good option quarterback and throws the football pretty well. We really didn't miss a beat with him.

"I'd love to have a senior in there, but Ryan stepped in there and did a great job. I was really proud of him."

"I felt great," said Kelly of his performance. "That's probably the most fun I've ever had in my life."

Stanton now prepares for a bi-district playoff with Sundown that is set for next Friday night in Seminole. Kickoff is tentatively set for 7:30 p.m.

"I haven't looked at Sundown, but I've heard that they have one of the best defenses in the South Plains," said Cotton. "We've never played Sundown since I've been here, so I don't know a lot about them."

A&M: Big crowd awaits No. 1 Oklahoma

between the Denver Broncos and New England Patriots on Oct. 1.

Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops plans on being ready for everything, even the Aggies' fans. The Sooners practiced all week to the blare of Aggie songs.

"I don't know what they are, but I'll know by the end of the week," Stoops said.

The Aggies will turn up the heat as high as possible. It's their chance to shine on a national stage against a team that handed them their third worst loss in school history, 51-6 last year.

A victory would keep the Aggies (7-2, 5-1) in the race for the Big 12 championship.

The Sooners (8-0, 5-0) have even bigger stakes. They are trying to win their first national championship since 1985 and help quarterback Josh Heupel take another step toward the Heisman Trophy.

"We've proven, I believe, through this year's play that we're not a fragile team, that we've been able to handle the difficult situations," Stoops said. "There's no way that A&M can be more motivated than us. We've got a lot here on the line."

Heupel, who directed the win over the Aggies in Norman last year, has been unstoppable this season. He ranks fourth nationally in passing and total offense and the Sooners offense leads the nation in scoring at 45.9 points per game.

"Pressure is being 0-8," Heupel said. "That's pressure. It better be fun. Noise after a certain level is just noise. There comes a point when you can't hear, whether that's 50,000 fans or 80,000 fans."

TRINITY: Coaches try to make do with thin scouting report

And just getting the information they did get was like pulling teeth from an unsedated tiger.

"We've just had to kind of make up plays against them," Wilkins said. "We didn't have anything on them (last weekend) and we were just twiddling our thumbs. Finally, we went home because there was nothing we could do. How do you prepare for a team like that? We tried to get information about them from their opponents but they wouldn't return our phone calls."

What is known is that Giddings, a school for troubled youths, is in District 5, a two-team district, and it had a bye in the first round of the playoffs. In their only district game, the Indians defeated Austin State School for the Deaf, 20-0. The Indians aren't familiar with a homefield advantage because they don't have a field to call home. All their games are away.

"We can see that they have talent, speed and quickness," Wilkins said. "They do a good job of running to the football on defense. Their technique is not real refined, but of course that was the first game. I'm sure they've gotten better. They're a dangerous football team."

The Indians look like they will run the ball a lot and will use sweeps and misdirection type plays. In that one game film the Chargers saw, of the 48 plays the Indians had, 44 of them were running plays.

"Their forté is speed to the outside," Wilkins said. "They've got a little fullback that will hit you up the middle. He's little but he's quick."

On defense, the Indians look to run a 5-2 set, and they tend to utilize their quickness to make plays.

"We had a good week of practice and I don't think our kids are taking them lightly," Wilkins said. "We saw the one film on them and we saw their team speed and I think that got our kids' attention. I hope it did because they're the type of team that can make you look bad."

The Chargers are coming off a very good start to the postseason after a 55-19 pounding of Watauga Harvest last week in the bi-district round.

"We're doing some good things on both sides of the football," Wilkins said. "Defensively, we have some lapses at times. But I think for the most part we're doing some good things, and it's about time. The season literally ends in three weeks for us. If we go all the way then the season is over November 25. By this time next week there will only be four teams left and we want to be one of those four."

PLAYOFF NOTES: If Trinity wins today, the Chargers will advance to play the winner of the Katy Faith West-Tyler Gorman game at a time and place to be determined. Tyler Gorman was defeated by Cedar Hill Trinity in the first round, 36-7, but Cedar Hill had to forfeit because it used an ineligible player.

Fresno State aims to get TCU started on new streak — losing

FORT WORTH (AP) — Fresno State will have to be content with trying to give No. 18 Texas Christian a losing streak.

"Yeah, it would have been great to play them when they were undefeated," Fresno State coach Pat Hill said. "But I think it's even better now, because after this game there will be one less team in the WAC race."

A week after having its dreams of an undefeated season and BCS bowl appearance ended with an expected loss at San Jose State, TCU (7-1, 4-1) needs a win Saturday against Fresno State (5-3, 4-1) to stay near the top in the Western Athletic Conference.

Last week's 27-24 loss cost the Horned Frogs more than a shot at their lofty goals. It took away their control of the WAC title chase.

"We've got to rely on somebody else. That's one thing I didn't want to do," said LaDainian Tomlinson, the nation's leading rusher at 181 yards per game. "I hate doing that, trying to rely on somebody else. I hate not being in control of your own destiny."

If Texas-El Paso (7-2, 6-0) wins Saturday at Rice, the Miners will be assured a piece of the WAC title, no matter what happens the following weekend when they play at TCU. California rivals San Jose State (7-3, 5-1) and Fresno State end the season against each other.

After finishing in a three-way tie for the title last year, TCU wants to win the title outright this season — its last in the WAC before moving to Conference USA.

The biggest challenge for the Frogs this week is to forget about what could have been and concentrate on the goals still within reach.

"Hopefully we don't have to refocus. We just continue to focus," said TCU coach Dennis Franchione. "I'd like to think that this team has enough heart and fight and grit to do that."

Park captures his second pole of the season for Pennzoil 400

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — Even though Dale Earnhardt's protege is on the pole, the seven-time Winston Cup champion seemed to lose ground in his quest for a record eighth NASCAR title.

Driving one of the two cars owned by Earnhardt, Steve Park captured his second pole of the season Friday in the opening round of qualifying for the Pennzoil 400 at Homestead-Miami Raceway.

Park, the final Winston Cup driver on the track, zipped around the nearly flat 1 1/2-mile oval at 156.440 mph, slightly faster than Ricky Rudd and points leader Bobby Labonte.

"It's very important to start up front," said Park, who finished third last week in Phoenix. "This track is hard to pass on and we knew how important it was going to be to qualify."

Park has one career victory, winning at Watkins Glen in August. Since then, the 33-year-old New Yorker has five top-five finishes and eight top-10s. He is 11th in the Winston Cup points standings.

In his only other start from the pole, at the Food City 500 in March, he finished seventh.

"We've struggled in the past and we're getting just rewards for what we've been through," Park said.

Rudd qualified second at 156.408, followed by Labonte at 156.223, Jimmy Spencer at 156.191 and rookie Casey Atwood at 155.718.

Unlike last year at Homestead — when Pontiacs dominated qualifying, practice and the race — only two Pontiacs qualified in the top 10. Last season, teammates Tony Stewart and Labonte finished 1-2 to cap the manufacturer's best performance of the year.

Stewart qualified 13th on Friday. Labonte, meanwhile, moved a step closer to clinching his first Winston Cup championship.

"If you're in my shoes, you definitely want to wrap it up last weekend, but you couldn't do that," Labonte said. "So, this weekend? Yes, and then if it doesn't happen we want to do it next weekend. But the sooner the better for us."

Labonte leads Earnhardt by 218 points and Jeff Burton by 226. He can clinch the title Sunday by finishing fifth or better. He also can clinch if he leads a lap and finishes sixth or better; if he leads the most laps and finishes seventh or better; or if he finishes the race with a 185-point lead over Earnhardt and Burton.

Burton, who still has an outside chance at the championship, qualified 30th. Earnhardt was 36th and, like the rest of the drivers who were not in the top 25, will have the opportunity to requalify or stand on the first-round speed Saturday.

"We've been off the whole time in practice," Earnhardt said. "I'm really disappointed. I thought we could run faster than that. We were off everywhere."

Three-time NASCAR champion Darrell Waltrip, racing in his final season, will start 24th. Waltrip said he would have skipped the race if he didn't make the field based on speed because he has one provisional remaining and he wanted to save it for next week's season finale in Atlanta.

Baylor regents extend coach Steele's deal

WACO (AP) — Baylor University has given a contract extension to head football coach Kevin Steele, despite his 3-17 record at the school.

The Bears are on their way to becoming a winning program in the Big 12, Athletic Director Tom Stanton insisted after regents approved the action on Friday. The university declined to release details, citing its status as a private institution.

Steele is in his second season at Baylor after serving as an assistant on the NFL Carolina Panthers. It is his first head coaching job. He replaced Dave Roberts, who was fired after consecutive 2-9 years.

Steele was 1-10 in his first year at Baylor and is 2-7 this year. The Bears, winless in conference action, play their final home game against Missouri (2-7, 1-5) on Saturday.

Price hangs onto 2-shot lead at windy, wacky Valderrama

Associated Press

SOTOGRANDE, Spain — The cork trees seemed to close in on Nick Price as his lead began to shrink. Even with Tiger Woods quietly climbing into contention, Price had other worries in the American Express Championship.

Valderrama Golf Club proved again Friday that with any kind of wind, the quirky course can take on a life of its own.

One day after blitzing Valderrama with 11 birdies, Price escaped from a windy and wacky round with a par 72 for a two-stroke lead over Hidemichi Tanaka.

Relieved to still be leading the $5 million World Golf Championships event, Price also braced for the worst.

"It's like walking a tightrope," he said. "You feel that if you fall off, it's going to take you a long time to get back on again. It's a strange golf course in that respect. You almost get claustrophobic on it."

He still had some breathing room.

Despite bogeys on two of the final four holes, Price was at 9-under 135 and will be paired Saturday with Tanaka, whose 66 was the best score of the day.

Woods, trying to become the first player in 50 years to win 10 times in one season on the PGA Tour, was the only player in the 54-man field to avoid bogey against the winds that blew about 20 mph off the Mediterranean Sea.

Woods had a 3-under 69 and was only five strokes behind, helped by a great par save after hitting into the water on the dastardly par-5 17th for the third consecutive time.

"I played hard," Woods said. "Consequently, I was able to shoot a nice number and get myself right back in the tournament."

Padraig Harrington had a 73 and was at 138, while Mark Calcavecchia (65) and Duffy Waldorf (67) were another stroke back. Two other Americans, Bob May and Chris Perry, were in the group with Woods at 140.

Colin Montgomerie, who must win the $1 million first-place prize for an eighth consecutive European tour money title, renewed his optimism. He holed a 100-yard wedge from the fairway for an eagle at No. 2, then made a hole-in-one at No. 12.

It was his second ace in two tournaments.

"I told you I haven't given up," said Montgomerie, who had a 67 and at 142 was in the hunt.

Indeed, no lead is ever safe at Valderrama.

Just last year, Woods led by two shots with two holes to play only to take triple bogey at the much-criticized 17th. He wound up winning in a sudden-death playoff, with floodlights attached to cork trees as the gallery cheered every misfortune.

"It's great entertainment for the fans," Price said. "But it's not very fair for us players."

Friday was entertaining, all right.

Only 14 players broke par, down from 28 in the first round when a relatively serene Valderrama played nearly two strokes easier.

Mike Weir of Canada appeared to be on his way to a solid round when his 4-iron came up inches short and rolled back into the water at No. 17. After a drop, his chip skirted just past the flag and trickled just long enough to roll to the edge of the green, then over the back into the water again.

He took triple bogey.

"That's Valderrama," Weir said. "You're one inch between being 5 under and 1 under."

Perry appeared to get a break when his tee shot down the left side of the 18th wound up in the cork trees. He had a line to the green, but also an acorn under his ball. The approach came up short, and Perry came out with a bogey — along with a sigh of relief.

"Today was just a day to get by," he said.

That's just what Woods did, especially at the 17th. He hit a 9-iron to the green after a 366-yard drive. But the wind, which was at its back, knocked down the ball as it was trying to climb and it settled on the bank, with nowhere to go but into the water.

"I thought it was a good shot," Woods said. "Just as it got to its peak, you could just see it get batted back down."

The forecast is for more flag-snapping winds through the weekend, which puts the tournament in just about anyone's hands.

The biggest surprise among the leaders was Tanaka, who qualified for his first WGC event by finishing third on the Japanese tour's money list. He holed a long putt for eagle at No. 7 and didn't make a mistake the rest of the way.

"Every hole is tough to me," he said. "The ball comes everywhere. I just focused on keeping the ball straight."

SAG slaps Woods with $100,000 fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Screen Actors Guild has teed off on Tiger Woods.

The union fined the golfer $100,000 for shooting a nonunion Buick commercial during the six-month strike against advertisers by SAG and the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists, Daily Variety reported Friday.

The union's trial board on the case also agreed to suspend $50,000 of the fine, but that would be reinstated if Woods makes a commercial during any future strike, the Hollywood trade paper said.

The decision was reached after a three-day hearing this week. Woods took part in the hearing by telephone and agreed to the decision, Daily Variety said.

Bottom seed Fernandez stops Nelson

DORADO, Puerto Rico (AP) — Argentina's Vicente Fernandez beat defending champion Larry Nelson 2 and 1 on Friday in the first round of the Chrysler Senior Match Play Challenge.

Fernandez, seeded last in the 16-player field, will face John Jacobs in the quarterfinals on the Hyatt Dorado Beach East course. Jacobs edged Spain's Jose Maria Canizares 2 and 1.

Nelson was seeded first after leading the tour with $2,708,005 and six victories.

"I think I just played a little better than Larry today," said Fernandez, a three-time winner in five years on the senior tour. "I putted a good deal better than him overall. With the match-play format, one of the two of us had to go home."

Teens hang out at Solomon's Porch

■ Abundant Life Worship Center hosts the city's youth once a month.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

They're leaving the porch light on for teen-agers the night of Nov. 18 when the Brackens Brothers and an a cappela group from Golf Course Road Church of Christ will be singing.

It's Solomon's Porch, where teen-agers are welcome to come and meet friends, or bring friends, and where the food is low-cost and plentiful, the music is good and loud, and no matter how many problems a teen has or how inadequate they may feel, they'll be welcome.

This is the second year for the monthly events for teens at Abundant Life Worship Center where the emphasis is on fun, but there is also a time and a place for adolescent peers to get together one-on-one or in small groups to iron out life's thornier problems, or simply to vent a little about a recurring frustration among people their age.

Although the original concept was the brainchild of Dene Redmon, wife of the center's pastor, the Rev. Ken Redmon, the events are put together almost exclusively by teen-agers, from the planning to the cleanup, with only the food concessions and occasional logistical assistance provided by adults.

Mrs. Redmon said a long-held dream of hers had been to provide a safe place where young people could gather and enjoy themselves without the destructive influence of drugs or alcohol.

"For years, our daughter, Natalie, and I had wanted the church to hold gatherings for the young people. I tried to think of somewhere but there was never any place big enough where kids would be comfortable coming, with room to play games and a stage large and with good enough acoustics for bands, until our church built on an activity center two years ago.

"When that was finished, Natalie and I knew we had our place."

It had come too late for Natalie, now 24, to participate as a teen-ager, but her adolescent years weren't so long ago that she had forgotten what kids like:

Free-enterpriser shares his piece of Domino's pie

By Jim Suhr
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — His childhood spent in and out of foster care, Tom Monaghan didn't dream of being a firefighter, doctor or astronaut, as kids often do. Even as a second-grader, he wanted to be a priest.

"I believed it was the highest, most important thing I could do as a human being," he says.

Monaghan, now 63, never became a priest but has kept the faith, lavishing on Roman Catholic causes tens of millions from the Domino's Pizza empire he founded and built largely on a 30-minute delivery guarantee.

The married grandfather pledges to die broke, as if recalling the parable that it's easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to reach heaven.

Behind the scenes, the former Marine and one-time owner of big-league baseball's Detroit Tigers has devoted $50 million to Ave Maria School of Law, which he opened here in August.

He owns a Catholic radio station and monthly Catholic newspaper. Raised by nuns he describes as "holy and close to God," he has built a convent. And he has organized model Catholic elementary schools, a fellowship for Catholic business leaders, and a nonprofit legal organization, Thomas More Center for Law and Justice, that defends religious rights.

Monaghan

"I think the most important thing I can do is to help people get to heaven — and mainly myself," Monaghan says, smiling.

"There's no kidding about that — he wants to take as many people to heaven as he can," says Bowie Kuhn, the former baseball commissioner and a close friend. "There's nothing artificial about him. He's very genuine stuff."

Monaghan's trucker father died when he was 4. His mother said she was unable to support Tom and his younger brother, James, who spent their childhood in foster homes and orphanages, including a Catholic boys home in Jackson.

Young Tom considered one nun there his surrogate mother — his "everything" amid the daily regimen of rosary, morning prayers and nightly benediction.

"If anybody was ever brought up in a situation where God could be believed, it was us," he recalls.

At 12, returned to his mother, he was taken under the wing of a parish priest who gave him jobs around the church and "was like a father."

In 10th grade, Monaghan entered a seminary, only to be asked to leave after pillow-fighting, talking in class and, the factor he blames most, his mother's complaints he didn't write home enough.

"I was crushed. I cried," he says. "I felt there wasn't anybody in that seminary who was more serious about being a priest than I was."

After high school, he attended what now is Ferris State University in Big Rapids, then the University of Michigan. But, penniless, he joined the Marines in 1956.

During this period, for the first time, Monaghan questioned his faith. Were Scriptures exaggerations? Did Christ really rise from the dead?

Then the bookworm picked up a text from a base library: John Stoddard's 1922 book "Rebuilding a Lost Faith by an American Agnostic."

"I never had a doubt since then," Monaghan says.

Monaghan had always had an entrepreneurial side — as a boy, he raised and sold vegetables and shoveled snow for cash — and after three years in the Marines, he bought a corner newsstand. Reading newspapers, he says, made him politically astute, notably about Irish

Sociologists explain religion's changing role

By Richard Vara
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Religion sociologists were once the Rodney Dangerfields of the social science world. They got no respect.

"Religion is not going anywhere, so why are you guys studying religion?" was the reaction of sociologists in the 1960s and '70s, said Stuart Wright, sociology professor at Lamar University in Beaumont.

But the smug, skeptical smile is long gone.

Religion sociologists are now called upon to explain to national leaders faith-related issues ranging from the impact of American Judaism on Israeli diplomatic policy to the theology of Branch Davidians.

Religion sociology is a burgeoning speciality within the 13,000-member American Sociological Association, said Helen Rose Ebaugh, sociology professor at the University of Houston and president of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion. In the five years since it was established, the religion specialty has more than 500 members, one of the largest in the association.

The society recently had its 51st annual meeting in Houston. The Religious Research Association, a group of religion sociologists who focus on denominational studies, also met, Ms. Ebaugh said. More than 650 religion sociologists and allied social scientists such as psychologists, political scientists and others attended, including scholars from China, Nigeria, Brazil, Japan, South Africa and Israel.

That is a far cry from the few hundred scholars who met in the 1970s, when Ms. Ebaugh and Wright began attending society conferences.

"In the 1970s, sociology of religion became very tangential," said Ms. Ebaugh, a former Roman Catholic nun who received her doctorate in sociology from Columbia University in 1975. "Not much attention was paid to religion among sociologists."

One reason was that Harvard theologian Harvey Cox predicted in his 1965 best seller, "The Secular City," that religion would no longer be an integral societal engine in modern, secularized American society. The influence of religion would be minimal, unlike its influence in previous generations, Cox wrote.

Bolstering Cox were declining membership reports from mainline Protestant denominations throughout the 1970s.

Moreover, religion sociologists were then survey-oriented and dependent on statistical data for comparisons and analysis, Ms. Ebaugh said. Because of the separation of church and state, the U.S. Census does not collect religion information.

But the world of religion sociology changed dramatically beginning in the 1980s, Ms. Ebaugh said. Qualitative

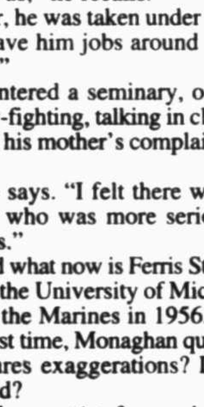
God's ultimate victory on cross is humbling reminder for the victors

Last Saturday dawned slowly, the cloudy sky a luscious blanket over the city, encouraging sleepers to snuggle deeper. A friend called at 9 a.m. "I hope I didn't wake you," she said.



Williams

I responded, "I wish." By 9 a.m. I'd already been pebbled to death by circumstance and subjected to the elements for over an hour. You see, Stockton and I had failed to read the fine print in the Children's Maintenance Manual for the Middle Years: "You will sacrifice sleep and comfort for your children's activities." We had set the alarm for pre-dawn so we could get to the annual Soccer Turkey Shoot Out by 7:15 a.m..

The first challenge was simply arriving on time. Next, after dropping off our daughter, I went to grab a cup of cappuccino. The 7-Eleven didn't have cappuccino. OK, I'd have coffee with French Vanilla creamer. No French Vanilla. OK, I'd have Amaretto. No Amaretto.

When I arrived back at the field, I discovered my portable chair had been removed from the car and stashed in our garage. I'd have to stand instead of sit. In the rain. For an hour. Drinking nondescript caffeine.

As if the morning hadn't already slid into an early nadir, the girls were losing, in spite of many silent prayers. One of the team mothers sidled up and whispered, "I wonder whose side God is on anyway?"

I told her the joke I'd always heard: If two teams pray for victory, what does God do? Answer: He sits back and enjoys a good ball game.

At the end of the game, the coach comforted the girls. They still had two games to go that day, and if they won both of them — why, then, we would all get to repeat the whole drizzling dawn scenario on Sunday. The team mother looked at me with a new light in her eyes. "Maybe God is on our side after all."

"Whose side is God on anyway?" This question haunts me, not so much on days when I'm pecked to death by the ducks of petty irritations, but when life seems to be hurling big disasters. The movie, " The Longest Day," a classic film on the invasion of Normandy in World War II, poses the same question. When the weather seemed to prevent the invasion, an American officer said, "I wonder whose side God is on?," and later, when the invasion was a success, a German officer pondered the same thing. I guess I'm so used to thinking that God was on our side in that war that it never occurred to me there were God-fearing Germans praying to the same God for victory, too.

I don't know the answer to the problem of "sides." Although I often pray for a particular outcome, I have a sneaking suspicion that God is larger than any one side in any contest — from soccer to elections to war — and that He can redeem whatever happens, win or lose.

Knowledge of God's ultimate victory on the cross is a great consolation when it seems that we have been defeated. It is also a humbling reminder when we have won.

CHANGE: Rise of religious right caught many sociologists off guard research relying on field research using interviews and case studies became accepted study methodology.

Nationally, the rise of the religious right caught sociologists off guard — or at least most of them, Ms. Ebaugh said. University of Virginia religion sociologist Jeff Haddon was among the first to find in the mid-1980s that while the mainline denominations were hemorrhaging members, conservative evangelical churches such as Seventh Day Adventists, Baptists and others were growing and changing the religious landscape.

"Twenty-five percent of the United States (population) is now evangelical according to the estimates," Ms. Ebaugh said.

Internationally, diplomats and political scientists were stunned by the rise of militant Islam, especially in Iran where the progressive, pro-West shah was forced into exile in 1979.

"As we become more global and we look at the world, whether it is in Bosnia or Northern Ireland or Latin America or Serbia or at the Middle East, so much of the conflict has religion at its heart," Ms. Ebaugh said.

Funding was one of the most important changes for religion sociologists in the past decade. Two major American Foundations — Pew Charitable Trusts and the Lilly Endowment — began distributing millions of dollars for religion research, Ms. Ebaugh said. The Ford Foundation recently added an initiative on religion, she said.

The funding is important, said Wright, an expert on new religious movements.

"Every study I did (in the '80s) I just had to do on my own," he said. "I could not find funding for it."

Politicians, educators, the media and denominational leaders increasingly rely on religion sociologists to help them understand the role of faith in changes in family relations, generational differences and the role of women in the United States.

This year's conference focused on religion and transnationalism. Religion is being impacted dramatically by the globalization being brought about by technology and rapid travel, Ms. Ebaugh said.

No societal change has been as dramatic as the impact of immigration on American religion. As Hispanic, Asian and African immigrants have moved to the United States and especially to gateway cities like Houston, they have brought their languages, cultures and religions, Ms. Ebaugh said. They have profoundly changed the Houston religious landscape, she said.

Ms. Ebaugh and fellow professor Janet Saltzman Chafetz wrote "Religion and the New Immigrants," based on their three-year study of immigrant communities in Houston.

The study, financed by a $380,000 Pew Charitable Trusts grant, found that new immigrants had established more than 730 religious congregations in the city. Their presence is challenging established churches as they seek to reach out and accommodate the immigrant groups, Ms. Ebaugh said.

Ministers, pastors and congregations want information on how to approach the new migrant communities and how to incorporate them into congregational life.

"The most common question today is, 'In what language do you pray?' " Ms. Ebaugh said. Researchers found that one Houston Protestant congregation had 51 different ethnic groups speaking 48 different languages.

Not only are the new immigrants changing the local religious scene with new temples, mosques and worship centers, but they are also changing religion in their home countries, Ms. Ebaugh said.

A second Pew grant of $500,000 financed a study by Ms. Ebaugh to examine how Houston immigrant communities were changing religion in China, Guatemala, Mexico and other countries. Their impact goes far beyond sending money to build a new room on a temple or buy pews for the home church, Ms. Ebaugh said. Evangelical Protestant Mayans from the mountainous areas of west Guatemala have established three tightly knit congregations in Houston, she said.

Jacqueline Hagan, a sociology professor and co-director of the UH Center for Immigration Research, traveled to the impoverished mountain villages and was surprised to find that religion permeated the decision-making process of potential immigrants.

"It turned out to be far more important, central and fundamental to immigration than I had anticipated," said Ms. Hagan, who had previously visited the same area 10 years ago.

Villagers considering the perilous, costly trek to Houston consulted the Protestant evangelical ministers and elders, seeking divine assistance to help make their decisions.

Decision-making was at the heart of fasts and prayer services held in outdoor areas where a yes or no was given by lay leaders speaking in tongues and then translated into the native language.

Ms. Hagan said that funds sent back to the area went not only to the church but also helped construct new roads and schools. That in turn may lessen the need for the impoverished residents to move far away looking for better living conditions, she said.

GIVE: Philanthropist storing away treasures in heaven

(From 1C)

Catholic presidential candidate John F. Kennedy, whom Monaghan idolized.

Monaghan later changed his political affiliation to Republican. "I was a free-enterpriser at heart, and I didn't believe in so much government interference," he says.

Then Monaghan enrolled at Michigan. To help pay for school, he and his brother borrowed $900 and bought a pizzeria. James Monaghan later traded his share to his brother for a used Volkswagen.

Tom Monaghan added stores and in 1965 renamed the company Domino's. Eventually, it grew to 6,100 outlets.

As Domino's grew, so did Monaghan's extravagance. He bought the Tigers in 1983. He paid $8 million for a 1931 Bugatti. He shelled out for all things Frank Lloyd Wright, including $1.6 million on a dining room table and chairs.

Yet again, a book changed his course. After reading "Mere Christianity" by C.S. Lewis, in the late 1980s Monaghan unloaded many of his pricey "toys."

Starting in 1989, he took two years off from Domino's to explore religious goals. He supervised the building of a cathedral in Nicaragua and built a mission in a Honduras mountain town.

He also spoke out against abortion, prompting a nationwide boycott of Domino's by the National Organization for Women.

He returned to Domino's in 1991 after its fortunes worsened. He righted the company, then sold nearly all of it in 1998 for undisclosed millions.

That has allowed him to focus more on Catholic matters.

Critics have questioned Monaghan's motives and means, lately over his fledgling Ave Maria law school, which he envisions as "a West Point for Catholicism and the law."

'I hope that some of the things I do carry on, but I don't put my name on anything. I think that's the wrong reason to give.'
— Tom Monaghan, founder of Domino's Pizza

Some detractors believe he seeks to create religiously radical attorneys, perhaps to lobby against abortion. Others suggest his money would have been better spent on any of the nation's more than 20 existing Catholic law schools.

"Much of the media has made him out to be what he is not — kind of a quirky, eccentric figure. Maybe that sells papers, but that's not the Tom I know," says James Ryan, a federal appeals judge who serves on some of Monaghan's charitable boards. "He's the very embodiment of Christian service."

Says Kuhn: "He sometimes handles things in a way people don't understand. He draws criticism, and it breaks my heart because I know his motivation is good, decent and proper."

Monaghan says he's just following his conscience.

"I hope that some of the things I do carry on, but I don't put my name on anything. I think that's the wrong reason to give," he says.

"If I were to get rewards, I want it to be in the next world, not this one."

FUN: Board made up of teens plans activities for Solomon's Porch

(From 1C)

Plenty of food; music that's loud and hot; board games, mind games, games that get you together.

The first event was held a year ago last summer with a Christian rock concert, and with Natalie and Dene Redmon officiating at the food concessions. Since it's beginning, the entertainment has been supplied by local bands and singing groups, but last summer a friend of the Redmons, a guitarist who writes his own songs, came from Houston to perform.

The Redmons from the very beginning have preferred to be facilitators at arms length, preferring to leave the management to those most knowledgeable about adolescent affairs. They invited the church's teen-agers to help with the planning, and out of that grew a teen-age planning board, out of which grew a contest to name the monthly parties.

Rohni Childers, an Abundant Life member, came up with Solomon's Porch, the winning name.

The board also designed the décor. Kids coming for their first time write their names on a wall in fluorescent ink, so that when the lights go down, the names sparkle like stars. Another wall holds the names of all the bands that have played there so far.

This is an event that teen-agers can afford. There is no cover charge, although a love offering is taken for the bands, which for the most part are made up of local kids. The food and drinks are sold for a nominal amount.

Although it started as an Abundant Life activity, Solomon's Porch last summer went ecumenical, with teen-agers from as many as 12 churches from around town joining the board. Mrs. Redmon, who is president of the board of Area Mission Outreach Services (AMOS), said the monthly Solomon's Porch events had suffered a decline in attendance after about five months, and she was trying to find a way to revive interest.

"Then it came to me. AMOS had gone ecumenical, with good success, and that would probably work for our kids. So we invited kids from other churches' youth groups to sit on our board, and we're having good attendance again."

Sharon Hawke, a member of Abundant Life, is one of the board members who has been in on the planning from the beginning. She said there is no danger they'll run out of ideas for activities.

"We've had a lot of different bands, and we once had an open mike night, with a karaoke," she said.

To discourage cliques among the attendees, they devise ice breakers of all kinds, and try to keep the momentum going from the moment the kids start to arrive. Some ideas for events down the road include a scavenger hunt, and next year, a huge fall festival with multiple bands and activities such as the Rock the Desert activity held at Holy Trinity Episcopal last August.

"Of course, to have something like that, we're going to have to have a bigger location," Ms. Hawke said. "We're working on that."

The board recently held a logo design contest, and the winning logo will be transferred to T-shirts to be sold at future Solomon's Porch events.

She said the foremost goal of the board is to provide a place for teen-agers to come and feel free to be themselves.

"If you have something on your mind and don't feel comfortable talking to a parent or some adult, we want you to know we're here to listen," Ms. Hawke said.

"There's always going to be a place and time for one-on-one. And there will never be any alcohol or drugs."

Mrs. Redmon said the church also provides an on-site security patrol during the event, which runs from 7 p.m. to about 10 p.m.

Solomon's Porch is located at Abundant Life Church, 4801 Princeton. It meets the third Saturday of each month. All teen-agers are welcome. For more information, call 570-9070.

American Film Institute gives Streisand Life Achievement Award

LOS ANGELES — American Film Institute to Barbra Streisand: Love the way you were.

The institute will make Streisand the first female director to receive its Life Achievement Award at a Feb. 22 ceremony in Beverly Hills.

"Barbra Streisand is a living legend who epitomizes the essence of American film," AFI board member Howard Stringer said. "She is a pioneer in everything she does, whether it's acting, directing, writing, producing or singing.

Streisand has won two Academy Awards, 10 Golden Globes, 10 Grammys, two Peabody Awards, three Emmys and a Tony.

Her film credits include "Funny Girl," "Hello, Dolly!," "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," "The Owl and the Pussycat," "What's Up Doc?," "The Way We Were" and "A Star Is Born." She directed "Yentl," "The Prince of Tides" and "The Mirror Has Two Faces."

Among the 28 previous award recipients are Harrison Ford, Dustin Hoffman, Steven Spielberg, Jack Nicholson, Billy Wilder, James Stewart, Alfred Hitchcock, Bette Davis, Orson Welles, James Cagney and John Ford.

NEW YORK — Carson Daly will have his American pie to go.

The MTV heartthrob is engaged to "American Pie" actress Tara Reid, Us Weekly reported in its latest issue.

The two have been dating since March. Daly had been carrying a ring around in his pocket for a few days, waiting for the right moment.

On Oct. 29, the couple was riding through New York in a cab and got stuck in traffic. They decided to get out and found themselves in front of a church. Daly decided the moment was right and popped the question. She said yes.

LOS ANGELES — The Screen Actors Guild has teed off on Tiger Woods, fining the golfer $100,000 for shooting a nonunion Buick commercial during a six-month strike against advertisers.

The union's trial board suspended half the fine but will reinstate it if Woods makes a commercial during a future strike, Daily Variety reported Friday.

Woods took part in this week's three-day hearing by telephone and agreed to the decision, Daily Variety said.

Guild spokesman Greg Krizman had no immediate comment, but he and Woods were expected to issue a joint statement.

The strike, held to protest how actors are paid for commercials, began May 1.

A day later, Woods refused to shoot a nonunion Nike ad and issued a statement of support for the strike. But in July, he made the Buick ads near Toronto, saying he had to uphold his relationship with his sponsors.

The strike was settled last month.

LOS ANGELES — Is Larry Hagman as evil in real life as oil baron J.R. Ewing of television's "Dallas," or is the actor's personality closer to that of the lovable astronaut who wooed Barbara Eden in "I Dream of Jeannie"?

We'll just have to wait for the tell-all book to find out.

Simon & Schuster has landed the rights to Hagman's planned memoir "Hello, Darlin': Tall (and Absolutely True) Tales About My Life," Daily Variety reported Thursday.

The publisher agreed to a "low-six-figure deal," the newspaper said.

Hagman, 69, said the book will touch on his experimentation with the drug LSD, his recent liver transplant and his Harley-Davidson motorcycles, among other things. He also plans a traveling stage show based on his life.

NEW YORK — Darryl Strawberry says he has no desire to play sports anymore.

"I've called it over for me. That's it. I'm done," the suspended New York Yankees slugger said in an interview to be broadcast Sunday on "Dateline NBC."

Strawberry, who received a jail sentence Thursday for leaving a substance-abuse center to go on a drug binge, said he was not very optimistic about the future.

"I've reached a point of understanding, you know, that life is going to come to an end one day for me," he said.

Last week, Strawberry said during a court hearing that he wanted to die and went on a drug binge last month in hopes it would kill him.

The judge urged Strawberry to resume the treatment he was undergoing for recurring colon cancer "or you are history."

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bill Gates and his wife are giving about $15 million to the city's public schools.

The grant from the Microsoft founder's private philanthropic foundation was reported Thursday in The Oakland Tribune.

A foundation spokesman said an announcement would be made Tuesday.

The grant is to be administered though the nonprofit Bay Area Coalition of Essential Schools and is expected to be used to develop small schools throughout Oakland and to reorganize its large public high schools into smaller ones.

In September, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation announced $56 million in grants to school districts nationwide.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 11, 2000:

You have your hands full this year. You will not be able to complain about boredom. Unexpected developments will become a trademark. You will need to learn the art of being flexible and giving up rigidity. Others often challenge you. Learn to let others play out their agendas and see what happens. By stepping back, you gain. If you are single, you will have many interested admirers. You might often feel that it is difficult to know how much to give. Experience proves to be an excellent teacher. If attached, your relationship heats up. You need to acknowledge your partner and accept him. TAURUS can challenge you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Unexpected developments start your day. This pattern could continue all day long. Maintain a sense of humor and work with others, except perhaps about a financial decision that could have you screaming "ouch" in the background. Tonight: Go wild.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★★ Use your personality to help others relax. Someone to whom you give a lot of authority does the unexpected. You might wonder about the hows and whys. Another doesn't see eye to eye with you. Know that there will be no agreement, but there can be acceptance. Tonight: Be politically correct.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ Step back and do little. You might need and want some time off. Vanish if you must. Think carefully about someone at a distance. Adjust your plans if need be. Clear out a problem by asking questions. Tonight: Take a night off.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Money discussions demonstrate different kinds of thinking. Invitations come from both friends and loved ones. You decide to juggle all your offers. Trust your popularity. Tonight: Where the gang is.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ The unexpected runs riot. You might attempt to get people and events under control, but you might not be as successful as you would like. Plan to visit an older relative but also just to go out. You enjoy yourself when you're far away from your home. Tonight: Try a new restaurant.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Be willing to let go of what feels comfortable and to opt for excitement. Not everyone sees eye to eye with you. Just say no, or worry less about varying your plans. Tonight: Stay open to ideas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★★ One-on-one relating draws different results than you had anticipated. You might be stunned by how another puts down your ideas. Listen to someone carefully, but recognize that this person is too serious. Don't juggle finances. You could have an unexpected backfire. Tonight: Talk about a problem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★★ Understand more of what you need from another. This person could be a bit willful or insensitive. Though you might want to let this person know how upset you are, this type of action ultimately won't work. What do you want here for the long term? Tonight: Go along for the ride.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Help another out of a problem. You somehow might be uncomfortable with what is going on. Listen to what another shares, but also recognize how frustrated this person might be. Your efforts to put something back together can work. Tonight: Just don't let anyone push you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★★ Your sense of humor manifests with another. But events could take a stab at your wallet if you are not careful. Keep a degree of sanctity when dealing with a loved one. A child or loved one could be playful. Tonight: Prepare to be up till the wee hours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★ You stun others with your reactions. You might not be sure about what you need to do to make a situation work. You might want to toss the situation in the air, because it doesn't work as it stands. You believe you don't have a lot to lose. Check again before you increase the uproar. Tonight: Play it conservatively.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Keep talks going, despite what you are hearing. On some level, you might feel shocked. You might think another really doesn't understand you. Try to understand where this individual is coming from before reacting too strongly. Avoid being judgmental. Tonight: Out at a preferred spot.

Governor's camp creating image of president-elect

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush said Friday that he and his aides are planning for "a potential administration" despite the continuing vote count in Florida.

"This administration will be ready to assume office and be prepared to lead," Bush said at the governor's mansion.

Bush stopped short of saying Democratic Vice President Al Gore, who apparently won the popular vote nationwide Tuesday, should concede the election.

"Each candidate and each team is going to have to do what they think is best, in the best interest of the country," Bush said.

For a third day after voting in the presidential election, the nation remained uncertain Friday who would become president as Florida votes were still being counted and controversy swirled around some ballots there.

That state's 25 electoral votes will determine the next president.

Florida Secretary of State Katherine Harris said it could be as late as Tuesday before the state has certified ballot results from all 67 counties following a recount. It could be even longer before mail-in ballots cast by Floridians overseas are counted, she said.

An unofficial tally by The Associated Press of the recount in Florida's 67 counties showed the Texas governor with a 327-vote lead over the vice president in the state.

Bush said he is mindful that some votes have not yet been counted, but said his staff is laying the groundwork for moving to the White House.

"I'm in the process of planning in a responsible way a potential administration," he said.

Bush was flanked by running mate Dick Cheney, who is heading his transition team; foreign policy adviser Condoleezza Rice; chief economic advisor Lawrence Lindsey; and Texas chief of staff Clay Johnson.

Gore's campaign officials have been critical of the Bush team for preparing for a presidency at this point.

For the most part, Bush displayed his typical easy-going manner as he joked with a select group of reporters inside the large parlor of the governor's mansion.

Bush wore a bandage on his right cheek that covered an infected ingrown hair or boil that developed over the last few days of the campaign, said Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes.

His cautious remarks Friday were the first time Bush has spoken publicly since Wednesday.

Since then, Bush has met with Lt. Gov. Rick Perry, who would replace Bush as governor if he becomes president. If Perry moves up, the Texas Senate would elect Perry's successor from its 31 members.

Bush would not say Friday whether he intends to resign the governorship early, before the Florida vote dispute is settled.

"The responsible course of action is to prepare, and that's what we're doing here in Austin, Texas. We're taking our time, we're in a very low-key manner preparing for a possible administration," he said.

He and Cheney were planning more meetings this weekend at Bush's ranch near Crawford.

About 50 demonstrators gathered outside the governor's mansion Friday to protest alleged vote irregularities in Florida and to criticize Bush for moving ahead toward a presidential transition.

"No fuzzy math. Read my lips," they shouted as they carried signs and marched in circles around the mansion.

"Fraud in Florida?" one sign said.

"George, wait and see," read another.

"This is an issue about voter participation and the right of every American to have their vote count," said Samantha Smoot, executive director of the Texas Freedom Network.

Bush was preparing to announce key roles in his administration for Rice, expected to be named national security adviser; retired Gen. Colin Powell, likely to be named secretary of state; and former Transportation Secretary Andrew Card, probably as White House chief of staff.

Asked whether he was worried about the legitimacy of his administration should he become president, Bush said he believes in the Constitution.

"I'll live by the Constitution. We've had two vote counts already, and I'm pleased with what's happened," he said. "Our job will be to unite the country."

Unknown Cassatts on display for first time

HOUSTON (AP) — A century-old collection of 204 artworks by the American Impressionist Mary Cassatt is almost literally seeing the light of day for the first time.

Cassatt, considered one of the most important artists of the 19th century, sold the drawings, prints and etchings to a Paris art dealer early in the 1900s. They have been in private hands ever since.

Houston's Meredith Long & Co. and New York's Adelson Galleries began exhibiting the pieces for the first time Friday and are offering them for sale at prices ranging from about $5,000 to $600,000.

"These are so pure. It's as if they haven't even been out of the studio," said Barry Walker, curator of prints and drawings for the Museum of Fine Arts in Houston.

Most of the pieces are drawings and prints. Though the works are roughly 100 years old, the white paper has retained its brightness, and the colors remain rich. The condition of the prints can be attributed to the care exhibited by the owners.

"When they were sold, they went from one drawer to another. This is really the first time they have been exposed to the light," Walker said.

Cassatt was the only woman and the only American asked to join the Impressionist movement, whose leading lights included Edgar Degas, Camille Pisarro, Claude Monet and Edouard Manet. The daughter of a wealthy Pennsylvania businessman, Cassatt permanently settled in Paris in the 1870s.

The collection reflects Cassatt's usual choice of subject: the mother-child relationship and the daily activities of the bourgeoisie.

"We are releasing Cassatt's works as she saw them. They are pretty much unaltered since they left her hands," said Marc Rosen, a New York art dealer and expert on Impressionists. "It's analogous to the situation of finding buried ancient ruins, things that have been preserved by accidents of time."

The road from studio to exhibition began sometime between 1906 and 1914, when French art dealer Ambroise Vollard persuaded Cassatt (1844-1926) to part with her studio collection. After Vollard died in 1939, his heirs sold the essentially unknown pieces to another Paris dealer.

That dealer, whose identity has been withheld, followed Vollard's lead in keeping the pieces tucked away. Rosen met the dealer in the mid-1970s and cultivated a relationship that paid off when the collector's heirs asked him to sell the art.

"Her works are rare on the market. An exhibition of this kind brings it to the attention of people who didn't know they exist outside of museums," Rosen said.

Budget luxury:
2001 Hyundai Santa Fe SUV

RoadWorthy!

By: Ken Chester, Jr.

Each year I get the opportunity to drive over 100 different vehicles – expensive German sedans, American cars, trucks and inexpensive imports. It takes a lot to impress me. Usually vehicles loaded-to-the-gills at luxury prices do not ring my bell. Every now and then, I get an opportunity to evaluate a vehicle that offers an excellent balance of features, high assembly quality and price. The 2001 Hyundai Santa Fe SUV is one such vehicle.

Available in base, GLS and LX trim levels in front or all-wheel drive, this Korean-made entry is based on the mid-size Sonata car platform. The robust chassis offers consumers a unique combination of car-like driveability, steering, ride, handling and braking with truck-like seating height and profile with the traction and security of the optional all-wheel drive.

Engine choices include a large displacement 2.4L Sirius II DOHC 16-valve four-cylinder engine or powerful 2.7L Delta DOHC 24-valve six-cylinder motor. Gearbox options are the standard five-speed manual with overdrive or a four-speed H-Matic automatic transmission. The slushbox is an electronically controlled, fully adaptive automatic with a manual shift override feature for precise control.

On the road, the optional six-cylinder engine has great acceleration. Midrange performance is of particular note. A brief adventure off-road proved the Santa Fe is up for the task. Nimble and responsive, limited traction situations do not reduce driver confidence.

An independent front suspension with MacPherson struts, coil springs and anti-roll bar work together with a fully-independent trailing arm design with multi-links, coil springs and hydraulic shock absorbers in the rear. B.F. Goodrich P255/70R16 Long Trail T/A radial tires work with the suspension to keep everything in prospective. Great brakes.

Inside the cabin, Hyundai engineers paid close attention to the needs and wants of the American consumer. Excellent outward visibility is joined with convenient displays and controls. The climate controls are the easy grip variety. Dual power points on the dashboard, map pockets in both front doors and unique cupholders in the center console make this environment very hospitable. The center armrest covers a cavernous storage bin while the overhead console features a place for sunglasses.

In the midst of all the creature comfort lavished on driver and front passenger, the rear seat occupants are not ignored. There is loads of leg room, cupholders built into the rear doors, and armrest and assist handles for all four doors to facilitate entry and exit. The rear seat is a 60/40 split that folds flat with the cargo floor after the removal of the headrests.

In the cargo area, a hidden release opens just the rear window only for small packages or the entire liftgate for more bulky items. A low, flat floor throughout the vehicle facilitates loading, entry and exit. The Hyundai has a cargo capacity of 29.4 cubic feet. With the seats folded flat, the capacity is increased to 78.0 cubic feet.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers are as follow: 2.4L – 149 hp at 5,500 rpm and 156 lb/ft of torque at 3,000 rpm; 2.7L – 181 hp at 6,000 rpm and 177 lb/ft at 4,000 rpm. EPA fuel economy ranges from 21 city/28 highway for the front drive/four-cylinder/manual to 19 city/23 highway for the four-wheel drive/six-cylinder/automatic. Both engines use regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are easily accessible but not clearly marked.

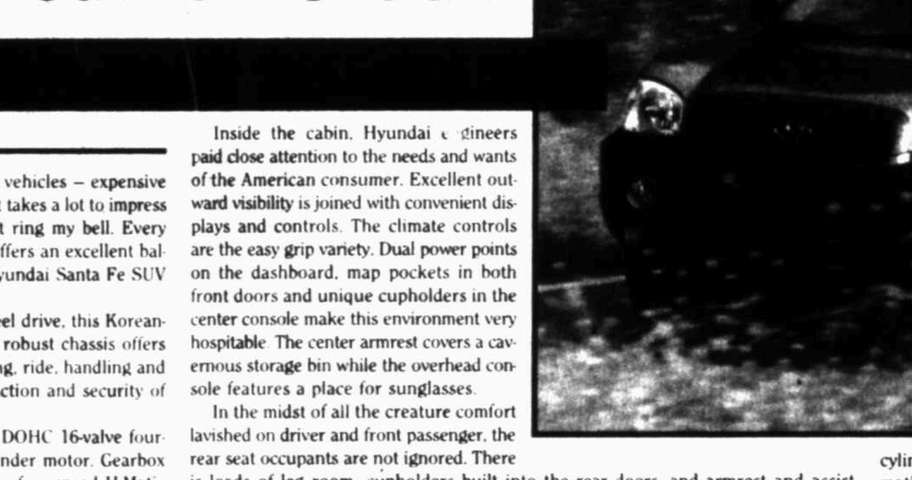
Standard safety/security equipment includes: dual front airbags. GLS adds: fog lights, power door locks, keyless remote entry and alarm system. LX adds limited slip rear axle. Optional safety/security equipment includes four-wheel anti-lock brakes (part of $1,545 Option Pkg. 4), and traction control (part of $595 Option Pkg. 11 and $890 Option Pkg. 13, GLS/LX only).

The base Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2001 Hyundai Santa Fe SUV starts from $16,499 for the base four-cylinder, two-wheel drive model up to $21,999 for the top-of-the-line LX six-cylinder, four-wheel drive. Destination charges add $435 ($585 in Alaska). Dealers report improving supplies. There are no rebates.

Aggresively in the game:
2001 Nissan Frontier pickup truck

RoadWorthy!

By: Ken Chester, Jr.



Nissan has upped the ante in its mission to elbow its way to the front of the line for the hearts and wallets of the American compact truck consumer. The 2001 Nissan Frontier pickup resolved most of the criticism leveled at it when the truck was launched during the 1998 model year.

Its outward appearance boasts an industrial look to it – featuring a new front facia, hood, fenders bumper, grill, headlamps, fog lamps tailgate and badging. Two-wheel drive models now sport color-keyed fender flares while the fender flares have been enlarged on the four-wheel drive models.

Available in Regular, King or four-door Crew Cab models and two- or four-wheel drive, the Frontier is designed to become the breakout product for Nissan similar to the Xterra SUV that is also based on the same chassis. Nissan offers the Frontier in XE, SE and SC trim levels. The Desert Runner model returns for the new year – a two-wheel drive King Cab pickup on a heavy-duty four-wheel drive chassis.

The automaker didn't just stop with an aggressive new look. It equipped the truck with the muscle to back it up. The base engine is the reliable workhorse 2.4L four-cylinder engine. A 3.3L V-6 was added to the Frontier lineup in 1999.

For 2001, the Nissan Frontier becomes the only compact pickup truck in the American market offering a factory installed supercharged six-cylinder engine. The supercharged primer mover is available on Desert Runner, King Cab and top of the line Crew Cab models. Transmission choices include a five-speed manual with overdrive or a four-speed automatic with overdrive.

On the road, the regular 3.3L V-6 engine mated to the optional four-speed automatic delivers a strong performance. An independent double wishbone front suspension equipped with torsion bars and a stabilizer bar is mated to a solid rear axle with multi-leaf springs to produce car-like handling and control.

Inside the cabin, a new instrument panel cover, gauges, steering wheel fabrics and colors combine to complete the industrial make-over of the Frontier. Two dashboard mounted power points and a center console that holds several cupholders makes the cab a pretty friendly place. Rear seating for adults in the four-door Crew Cab model is a bit snug, but tolerable for short distances. Passenger grab handles and available step rails ease entry/exit.
