THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN CHILI.

A portrait of Lady Lisburne, wife of Earl Lisburne, formerly Regina, daughter of Don Julio de Bettincourt, attache to the Chilean Legation in London, who is considered the most beautiful woman in Chili.

O. B. Fleming Celebrates Seventy-Third Birthday.

On last Friday, O. B. Fleming, familiarly known as "Uncle Bud," passed his seventy-third year and on the Sunday following gave a dinner and an all-round day of entertainment for more than seventy-five friends.

It was a great day in the life of this sturdy pioneer, and a day that will long be remembered by those who were recipients of his hospitality.

The ranch house, located on one of the best divide ranches in this section of the state and surrounded by all the necessary equipment for present-day ranching, was filled to overflowing by the guests, long before the noon hour. The day was beautiful and with every condition favorable to the event.

A long table seating some twenty-five guests had been provided and every kind of good eats, known to man, was served. Barbecued chevon, turkey, pork, salads, cakes and pies galore, and so many other good things that it was impossible to "get round" were served.

"Uncle Bud" was born in Gonzales County in 1850, moved to Bell County when a lad of 15 and five years later to San Saba County. In 1880 he moved with his good wife to Kimble County and settled at the place where R. M. Stevenson now lives. Three years ago he moved to his present location. He is truly a pioneer and typical of that whole-hearted, sturdy and honest type that has made the pioneers the subject of so many stories. He has seen wonderful development in this section of the State and the fact that he has always helped to blaze the trail and has always been for churches, school and the better development of the community in which he lived has made him an important factor in the progress of this county. He is the father of three boys and two girls, all of whom have grown to manhood and have followed his example as useful citizens. Ed Fleming, whose tragic death occurred last year, and Mrs. O. B. Fleming, who died last year also, are the only members of the family not living.

Along with some fifteen or twenty children, the following were honored on this occasion, and all attest the splendid entertaining ability of "Uncle Bud" who is hale and hearty, even if he has passed his allotted time: Judge and Mrs. Coke R. Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Bundy, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Watson, Dr. and Mrs. R. H. P. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. M. Huffman, Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Cowser, Mr. and Mrs. L. Kirkpatrick, Mr. and Mrs.

Ernest Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. Will Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Cowser, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cowser, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. Terry Cowser, Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Fleming, Troy and Lacy Fleming, Earl and Orris Huffman, H. G. Perry, Oren C. Reid, J. D. Motley, E. A. Loeffler, W. W. and John Savage, Misses Velma Fleming, Lana Cowser, Lela Huffman, Leta Bayless and Leodie and Jewell Savage.

Blow With Rock Causes Death of Brady Farmer.

Brady, Jan. 15.—Sam Cole, aged about 50, died at noon from injuries received in an altercation Saturday afternoon at Rochelle, 10 miles north, during which he was struck in the head with a nine and a half pound rock by Otis Mitchell, aged about 21 years.

Mitchell is under arrest on a charge of murder, and will have his examining trial here Tuesday. The difficulty was the culmination of bad feeling between Cole and Charles Mitchell, father of Otis Mitchell, which had existed for seven years.

When the elder men met on the streets of Rochelle Saturday they engaged in a fistfight in which Cole is alleged to have been getting the best of his opponent when the younger Mitchell went to his father's assistance with the rock as a weapon.

More Fine Chickens.

Another example of what a few good chickens will do in the way of producing revenue is shown by the experience of Chris Schraub in raising chickens of the Lakenfelder breed. About a year ago Mr. Schraub purchased a cockrel and two hens for $9. During the year he has raised nearly 75 from the eggs of these two hens. Last week, he sold 18 poulets at $2 each. He has about the same number left, besides the 25 or 30 that has been eaten.

More good cattle, sheep, goats, hogs, chickens and turkeys are going to make Kimble County a producing county.

Search Was Made for Lost Boy Friday Night.

Considerable excitement was created last Friday evening when it became known that the small son of Boyd Jetton had been missed by his parents and it was thought that the boy, who was seen going towards town late in the afternoon, was lost. Many people were out searching for him in all parts of the town, when he was found asleep under a bed at home.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR CHAMBER of COMMERCE

The Following Communication Addressed to
E. A. Loeffler is Evidence of Popularity
Enjoyed by Kimble County as Future
Play Ground for All Texas.

The following letter has been received here and is self-explanatory.

The value of a State Park located near Junction on the Llano cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. It would be a permanent asset to this whole section of the State. From the standpoint of desirability, this location cannot be questioned. Of course, the fact must be considered, that it is very doubtful if the legislature at this time, will see fit to appropriate money for any new improvements or new propositions of any kind, but the time is coming and this is not too early for the Chamber of Commerce and others interested, to line up solidly for such a move that will keep the Llano River before the minds of the public.—Editor's Note.

MERIDIAN HIGHWAY ASS'N San Antonio, Texas.

Mr. Emil Loeffler,
Junction, Texas.
Dear Mr. Loeffler:

There will be a bill introduced in the present Legislature to establish a State System of Parks. It will provide for the State taking over the Fort Davis Park, and the Rabb Palm Grove Park below Brownsville, which Mr. Rabb has donated for this purpose with the understanding that both these parks will be turned over to the Federal Government to be maintained as Federal Parks. Then our plan is to establish five or six State Parks and have just recommended to the Legislative Committee the following sites:

- (1) Bosque County, between Meridian and Clifton, on the Meridian Highway.
 - (2) Paladuro Canyon, in the Panhandle.
 - (3) Alto Frio Canyon.
 - (4) A site to be selected, near Junction, on the Llano.
- My plans are to help you people any way I can in selecting this site. We will have to have

"LET'S GO."

"There isn't any business," wailed the sad and gloomy man; "I haven't made a dollar since the armistice began." But I couldn't help reflecting, as I heard his story through, That the hopeful, cheerful hustler seems to have a lot to do.

I've been in business places where the air was thick with gloom, And the men were sad and solemn like the mourners at a tomb, And there wasn't any business or an order coming in— And, what's more, there never will be till those fellows start to grin.

"There isn't any business"—aren't you weary of the cry. Men have caught the gloomy habit and they sit around and sigh; But the hustler, I have noticed, who has quit his easy chair, And is confidently working, seems to gather in his share.

It is time to get the business, it is time to hustle out, With a man's faith in the future—much too long we've scattered doubt, Much too long we've sobbed and whimpered, much too long we've talked of woe; Now it's time for optimism and the hopeful phrase: "LET'S GO!" —The Informant.

a blue print of it and from fifty to one hundred photographs to be fixed up in album form for use in the Legislature. I am taking it for granted, of course, that you people will be more than glad to get in on this Park System and I will say furthermore, that I have canvassed the section to a great extent, and find that the people, even up around Brady, San Angelo and Mason, all that country up in there are throwing their support to the Junction Park.

The committee appointed by the last called session of the Legislature to make inspections and recommendations, have asked me to organize a State Park Association composed of the people of each community who are seeking to have a park established, and as many influential men and women as possible from the larger cities favoring the Park System.

The chairman of the Legislative committee was called home the other day on account of the death of his brother-in-law, and I expect to have a conference with that committee next Monday. Following that conference, I will submit definite plans for the State Organization, and I will be very glad indeed, if you will take this up with the Chamber of Commerce in your city or any other reliable parties you may wish, and begin to whip your proposition into shape as quickly as possible.

My idea of a State Association will be to use the chairman of each local park committee as the executive committee or board of directors, but I will appreciate any suggestions you may have to offer along this line.

Thanking you in advance for a prompt reply, I beg to remain, Yours very truly, Pox Supper at Eight-Mile School House a Success.

Last Friday night was the date of a very enjoyable occasion at the Eight-Mile School House where Miss Lessie Chandler is teacher.

A crowd that filled the school and left many on the outside, was there early for the box supper and dance afterwards.

After a brief address by Judge J. B. Randolph, he introduced Ex-officio County Superintendent Weaver H. Baker, who made a short address. After the speaking, Judge Randolph sold the boxes and displayed fine talents as an auctioneer. After the selling ended, two cakes were offered for sale. One brought $4 and the other $2.50. Then a voting contest was entered for the most popular young lady. This produced $53.70; the boxes sold for $109.00, which made the total for the night $162.70; a very creditable showing.

Quite a crowd from Junction were present and Junction boys bought about a third of the number sold. The proceeds from this supper goes for the benefit of the school.

The people of that community are to be highly complimented on their interest in their local school. They have one of the nicest school buildings in the county, recently completed.

Lack of Proper Sympathy Is Blamed on Age.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Mrs. Percy V. Pennybaker of Austin, chairman of citizenship of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, said yesterday at the forum luncheon at the Women's Club that after years of study she has come to the conclusion that the closing of the door of sympathy between youth and age is 90 per cent the fault of age.

Mothers should turn back the pages of life to page 21, to understand their daughters. They are so apt to forget and skip pages. They have been through the page of 21 if they would only remember, Mrs. Pennybaker said, but their daughters can not read page 45.

"We are," said Mrs. Pennybaker, "the normal evolution of our generation as youth is of theirs. One of the accusations of young girls is that mother does not talk as one reasonable human being to another, but as a critical judge."

"The most important of all professions is the profession of home-making. There is not enough preparation for it."

"The proper study of woman is man and the proper study of man is woman. There is a lack of understanding between man and woman which should be overcome. Why can't men understand the heart-hunger of women for attention and spoken words of affection? It is not enough for a woman to know her husband loves her, she likes to hear him say so. Why does not a man realize the power this gives him over a woman, these courtesies? Little boys should be taught to understand how much spoken affection means to women, so he will know afterward how to treat his wife."

"On the other hand, women must learn that a man comes home for peace and contentment and should not be bothered with petty house details and troubles. She has no more right to burden him with these than he has to burden her with details of his business."

"Perhaps this is the reason so many men marry especially for their second wives, are their stenographers and confidential secretaries. Every problem every girl as a part of her education should have a short period at least in the business world."

Sam and Dan Honig and A. C. Kirchoff, from the east end of the county, were in Junction last Saturday. While here they called at the Eagle office and Dan ordered the paper sent to him at Harper for a year. Sam Honig has been one of our valued subscribers for a long time.

THE ROVER

By George Randolph Chester

A FLYER IN AUGERS

They seemed particularly unpleasant this afternoon.

"It has been necessary for nearly three years," objected Walter Henderson, the thin director with the multiplicity of wrinkles between his eyes.

Diggins' hard-boned face became harder.

"As I have so often explained, we have been competitors," he declared, again respectfully. "Until that is eliminated, we can scarcely show a profit."

"At present we show a deficit," gruffly criticized big Hal Tullingham, who was an extensive coal operator, and was impatient of any moribund proposition.

"You can't conduct a campaign of this sort without heavy expense, and some loss," argued Diggins. "We've gradually monopolized the market, and when we have finally shut out competition, we shall be able to pay fancy dividends."

"I don't believe it," again snapped Cuspard, rising, and jamming his hands in his trousers pockets. "Diggins, you started after young Greenwood a scalp two and a half years ago, and you've been promising us, every three months, that you'd have him out of the way by the next quarterly meeting. He's still making augers!"

"He's operating at a loss," retorted Diggins. "The end has to come some time, and we can stand the strain better than he. We have more capital."

"I object!" wheezed the asthmatic old president of the First National bank. "We have double his capitalization, but we haven't any more cash! It's my opinion we have less! We're in debt!"

"So is Greenwood!" growled Diggins.

"How do you know?" demanded Cuspard.

"It's impossible for him not to be," argued Diggins. "He's a wasteful young fellow, who spends money on such fool office embellishments as pinstriped waste baskets with gold monograms!"

"If he's in debt, I don't know it!" wheezed the president of the First National. "The only paper of his that ever found itself through my place is checks, and none of them ever came back!"

J. E. Cuspard stood up again.

"Somebody's been making monkeys of us!" he declared, without being too specific. "I've been picking up my tail every morning for two years, to look for the bankruptcy of the Greenwood Square-Hole Auger company, and by George, I believe we're going to beat them to it!"

"I believe it myself," snarled a weakened old director with three absurd hairs on his head. "Our concern's in a rotten condition! Why don't you consolidate with Greenwood?"

"There's no terms to be made with him," complained Diggins. "He won't stand for any alterations in the name of his father's firm, nor would he share the management of the consolidation. When I found him so bullet-headed, I refused to talk any more with him."

A stolid looking fat director who had not yet taken part in the discussion, now spoke.

"Oh, h—!" he said.

"I've gone just far enough with this thing Diggins!" announced Cuspard angrily, and Diggins felt a chill wave in the room, for Cuspard was the principal stockholder. "I've heard so long that this fool college kid was tottering, that I'm going to find out about it! I move this meeting adjourn for one hour!"

"Second the motion!" wheezed the president of the First National.

Chapter VIII.

"Now, Ames, I'll take that share of stock," agreed Cuspard, popping into the lobby of the Tyler Avenue hotel.

"Here's your hundred dollars."

"It's already assigned," replied Ames, producing the document in question. "I knew you'd be back after it."

Cuspard glanced hastily at the certificate and shoved it in his pocket.

"Come on," he said, and he led the way to his automobile. "Look here, Ames," he demanded, as they whirled down the street, "what's your interest in this?"

"Three-fold," explained Ames pleasantly, and with no hesitation. "First, I have an aversion, which amounts to a passion, to wasted business opportunities; second, I have developed a sincere admiration for Rick Greenwood; third, I'm to get $25,000 if the competition is removed from the square-hole auger business."

For the first time that day J. E. Cuspard laughed.

"That's rich," he admitted. "The boys will enjoy that when I tell them."

Young Richard Greenwood looked up in surprise as Cuspard and Ames plunged into his office.

"Young man I want to see your books," Cuspard demanded.

"What?" gasped young Greenwood, with a look from Cuspard to his friend Ames.

"I have a right to see them," asserted Cuspard crisply. "I'm a stockholder in this company," and he tossed down his certificate.

Greenwood glared at Ames with contracted brows.

"You've done this!" he angrily charged.

"I bet you," grinned Ames. "Business is business, Rick, and it's pretty cold-blooded."

"I'm in a hurry," interposed Cuspard. "The Diggins company's board of directors is waiting for certain information."

Young Greenwood, with little knots working in the muscles of his jaw, first rang for his bookkeeper, and then decided to go himself. He came in a moment later, with a huge armful of books, and slammed them on the desk, meanwhile glaring ferociously at John Ames.

"Help yourself!" he blurted.

"All right," accepted Cuspard with a chuckle, and coolly set down at Greenwood's desk, while the young president of the Greenwood company went to the window and fiddled on the piano, and John Ames sat down, and smiled and smiled.

There was one thing about J. E. Cuspard. He knew a bookkeeper's book from cover to cover, with his eyes shut; and the way he sailed through the Greenwood ledger was a joy to the Greenwood bookkeeper, who had followed in, to hover over the process.

She had streaks of gray in her hair, and she had kept those books like a set of engravings since the elder Greenwood had put them in her charge, twenty years before. Cuspard looked up once, to see her standing there.

"Yours?" he queried.

She nodded.

"They're great," he told her, and went on with his job. Presently he looked up again. "Let me see your balance sheets of about this date, one, two, and three years ago," he directed.

"Yes, sir," she said with alacrity, for J. E. Cuspard was a nice man even though Greenwood didn't like him.

She went to Rick to find out. "He wants to see the balance sheets," she whispered.

"All right, Mary, show them to him," he ordered, in a queer mixture of earnestness for Cuspard, and affection for Mary.

Fifteen minutes later J. E. Cuspard folded a piece of paper, and stuck it in his pocket and stalked out of the door. John Ames, smiling serenely, strolled out after him; for the atmosphere of that office was too tense for a traitor.

Half an hour later J. E. Cuspard came back, followed by the serenely smiling John Ames. Cuspard threw a huge bunch of documents on the table.

"Would you like to have this bank?" he inquired of young Greenwood, who had risen at his desk, to resent this second imposition.

"What is it?" blurted Greenwood, backing away from it.

"Eighty-five per cent of the stock of the Diggins Mortising Auger company," explained Cuspard. "The boys brought it with them to the meeting today, and I just went up to make a collection of it."

"I don't understand," faltered the young president, seeking the eyes of John Ames; but that traitor was grinning out of the window on which Greenwood had drummed.

"Take it," urged Cuspard. "Consolidate the concerns, run a bluff competition with them; do anything you please. We're busy men, and tired of fussing with it."

The blood began to come back to Rick's cheeks. He drew the certificates toward him.

"I don't understand," he again faltered.

"You'll get on by and by," chuckled Cuspard. "Young man, I want to congratulate you," and grasping Rick's limp hand, he shook it briskly.

"You've kept 90 per cent of your business, you don't owe a cent, and you're running a three-year-old automobile. Take that stock and give us ten-year notes for it."

"I'm afraid I haven't capital to swing both companies," worried Greenwood.

"You can get all you want at the First National," advised Cuspard, looking around the room. "Where's that pinstriped wastebasket with the gold monogram? Oh, yes, here it is. How did you come to buy that thing, Rick?"

To express my attitude toward my father's business," Rick explained, smiling. "By the way, what about Diggins?"

"Oh, I'd give him a good job," decided Cuspard as he went out of the door. "You better give Ames his twenty-five thousand."

Rick walked over and shook John Ames by the hand. They stood there chuckling at each other like two fools.

Chapter IX.

Rick's Mummy was giving a "party" in honor of Rick's triumph. John Ames, still puzzled, watched Margaret in the midst of a group of her admirers, and suddenly realized why he had been puzzled: why there had never been between Margaret and himself the intense attraction which can ripen into love.

A happier little friend of Ned Cuspard was introduced to her; and John saw the handshake which passed between them. He saw, too, the light in her eyes, which had never been in his own.

Queer he had not realized it before. This was Nature's eternal effort at readjustment. Something within the tall Margaret Greenwood, of which she was entirely unconscious, made it impossible for her to ever love a tall man; and something within the tall John Ames had made it impossible for him to love the beautiful and attractive Margaret Greenwood.

"I think I shall be going away tomorrow," he told her at the close of the evening.

"Oh, no!" she protested, genuinely pained. "We shall miss you. We've been such good friends!"

Again he felt the thrill of her voice and saw the fire beneath the chill of her eyes and noted the red fullness of her lips.

"I guess I'm doomed to be a wanderer," he lightly said, and shook hands with her in farewell.

His own hand came away willingly, but he was no longer puzzled!

Agreements Openly Arrived At.

In the consideration of a thing that vitally concerns your neighbor, have you a right to discuss it or to arrive at an agreement during his absence?

Isn't our declaration that a man shall be tried before a body of his peers not only the surest guarantee of our political liberty, but the safest course to pursue in business?

Doesn't secret diplomacy defeat its own ends daily? Isn't secret diplomacy an admission of a desire to take an unfair advantage of the parties debarré?

When justice, truth and equity are in the balance, could brave men hesitate to let the eyes of the world, especially those most vitally concerned, look in on their proceedings?

In all courts, councils, or conferences where one's interests are being dealt with, shouldn't he not only have the right to hear what is said of him, but speak in his own behalf? And isn't the debarring of him an admission that he is to be unfairly dealt with?

In all cases where the interrogated's welfare is at stake, the answer would always be in the affirmative.

The interdependence of every unit of business makes it essential that every unit should be dependable, and no unit of business is dependable when ignorant of any portion of the facts of its existence and duties.

In his "Looking Forward by Looking Backward 20 Years,"

Albert H. Gary, chairman of the Board of the United States Steel Corporation, brings out the point that open and frank business is the safest and wisest business.

He says, "The surest and wisest of all regulations is public opinion, but sound opinion can not be formed excepting on the facts. To deny to the public the right to investigate any organization is in effect to deny it the right to gain the facts on which to base a judgment. It is hardly possible to have serious industrial disturbances if all the facts are known. In the graver strikes of the last several years the facts have not been known."

When diplomacy shall be open and above board; when business agreements are arrived at under the spotlight of public opinion; when men learn the great lesson that every advantage gained over a competitor through fraud or trickery, or deception is a millstone additional hung about the neck of business; when our agreements of whatever sort are openly arrived at, then great business disturbances will be reduced to a minimum, and individual welfare will be a reciprocating progression placing the whole structure of civilization on safe and secure grounds.

Should business adopt the practice of open and above board negotiations, it would do more to weed out the bad and secure the right results than all the legislation extant. In fact, legislation almost uniformly results in strangled business with no benefits accruing to the public.

Open and above board business carries within its own activities every check essential to safe and sound business.

This would be the consistent and logical development of business which would provide a natural and consistent progress.

This need of open and above board practice of arriving at business agreements is, of course, accentuated as you climb the scale of business. When it is purely barter, and the exchange remotely affects the interests of others than the bargaining parties, the secrecy surrounding the negotiations is not so hurtful; but as you climb the scale each transaction affects increased numbers until the whole commonwealth is involved in such transactions as the sale of a railroad or the pooling of a nation's cotton.—Texas Commercial News.

Nothing Makes an Inroad Without Making a Road.

The road reflects human progress. Check that fact up any way you please; note the sort of roads the Romans made when they were at their peak in every other way; observe the roads in a modern American city or town which is on its toes and alive. Then contrast those roads with the poor apologies for thoroughfares which exist in any community where there is no desire for any sort of progress, commercial or spiritual. The test works—every time. You'll never find any community which is slack about roads which is not also slack about other fundamental matters. The whole matter was summed up by Dr. Horace Bushnell of Hartford, back in 1846:

"If there is any motion in society, the road, which is the symbol of motion, will indicate the fact. When there is activity or enlargement or a liberalizing spirit of any kind, then there is intercourse and travel, and these require roads. So if there is any kind of advancement going on, if new ideas are abroad and new hopes rising, then you will see it by the roads that are building. Nothing makes an inroad without making a road. All creative action, whether government, industry, thought, or religion, creates roads."

That is why the question of good roads and of building new roads in this country cuts far deeper than the matter of humoring the motorist or increasing prosperity. A good road pays back dividends in every sort of coin. For a road well built and well kept up means a people also well built and well kept up.—Collier's Weekly.

Sheriff Will Make it Hot for Those Who do not go Straight.

Sheriff Hise and Deputy Adams are arranging plans that will make Brownwood a very uncomfortable place for drifting loafers who might make up their minds that this is a good town in which to ply their trade of faking and doing nothing worth while. Hereafter strangers who come to Brownwood without any kind of business and belong to the class of drifters, will be required to get in touch with the sheriff's department and "punch in" regularly while they are here. Sheriff Hise also said today that this being out all times of night by folks who have no other business than to be just loafing around, will be changed up in short order and folks who persist in such conduct will be promptly arrested and given an opportunity of telling it to the judge the next morning. Brownwood extends a hearty welcome to all worthy people, who mean well, but for those who do not mean well and are classed with the faking species, rough skidding well splintered will be on the program.—Brownwood Banner-Bulletin.

Farmers to Pool Chickens And Sell Car Load Lot.

Arrangements are to be perfected at a meeting of the Farm Bureau at the court house at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon for the shipment of a car load of poultry some time next week. At the same time officers and directors are to be named for the ensuing year and a delegate is to be chosen to attend the Farm Bureau meeting at Dallas, January 17 to 19.

Dor Brown, county agent, announced Thursday that the pool of chickens would be open to all and that those desiring to ship in the pool would be notified by telephone as to the date for the shipment, which probably will be along towards the latter part of next week.

He advises today that hens are bringing 14 cents a pound, but that a better price should be obtained in the pool. The Farm Bureau meeting Friday is an annual affair for the election of officers and directors and for a report on the work of the year. T. N. Robbins, farmer and stockman and director of the Guaranty State Bank is the president.—San Angelo Standard.

Death of Mrs. F. S. Fawcett.

Last Saturday news reached Kerrville of the death of Mrs. F.

S. Fawcett of Johnson City, mother of W. A. Fawcett of this city. Mr. Fawcett had started on a trip to Grand Rapids, Mich. but a telegram announcing his mother's death reached him at Dallas, and he returned to San Antonio and was met by his wife Saturday night. Sunday they went to Cheapside the former home of Mrs. Fawcett where interment was made.

Mr. and Mrs. Fawcett and the other relatives have the sympathy of The Sun together with that of many friends in their bereavement.—Kerrville Mountain Sun.

Destructive Fire Occurred At Ozona Last Week.

Fire of unknown origin Wednesday night destroyed the two-story rock building belonging to Couch & Cox, corner 10th St. and Power Avenue, entailing a loss of approximately $15,000, with a total insurance of $6,200. The rear of the building was occupied by the postoffice, which, fixtures, books, records and accounts, all C. O. Ds and other package mail, all other undelivered mail, mail sacks, postal and envelope stock, a few stamps and a small amount of cash, was a total loss.

The entire second story was occupied by F. E. Piner, who had living rooms in front and his Ozona Boot shop in the rear. Mr. Piner lost everything. The boot shop machinery, stock, etc., was valued at $3,000, on which there was $1,200 insurance. No insurance on household goods, the value of which would run into probably five or six hundred dollars.

THE LENGTH OF LIFE.

By Phebe K. Warner.

There is no service in the name of religion so pathetic as a dishonest funeral. Did you ever go to a funeral of an aged person and get away without hearing these words: "The Lord's will be done." Which, being interpreted, means go on with your ignorance, go on with your crime, go on with all your bad habits, go on with your carelessness. You would have died anyway, because it was the Lord's will for you to die or you would not have died. The preacher tells those comforting lies out of pure sympathy. He knows better, but he has to say something. And half the time he does not dare to tell the truth and place the blame where it belongs, so the only comforting thing to do is to blame all our losses and all our sorrows and anguish onto the Lord, for "He beareth all things."

We sometimes think if all the money spent on flowers and all the time spent on the most of our funerals could be spent for health clinics it would be much better for the world and it would save the world a lot of premature expensive funerals. But far more than that, it would save millions of useful years of life for the American people.

Different authorities give different figures on the average length of a man's life. But the latest we have seen is that of Dr. Livingston Farrand, president of Cornell University, who says that the average length of life now in our country is 56 years. He claims this is three and a half years longer than in 1910 and fifteen years longer than in 1870. If this be true, then the American people have been adding an average of about four months to their ages every year since that date.

But whether it is true or not, let's look at a few other facts. In India, where the people suffer from the most dense ignorance, the average length of life is 24 years. While the longest lived people in the world are New Zealanders. The people of this faraway country live an average of 60 years. Now the question for sane people to answer is this: Is it the Lord's will for the people of India to live only an average of 24 years, or is it their ignorance of all the laws of health? Is it the Lord's will for the New Zealanders to live an average of 60 years, or is it their knowledge of the laws of health? Does the Lord have different standards of life and different lengths of life to mete out to different nations?

New Zealand will be remembered as the "land where babies never die," because for years New Zealand has been studying and working to save her babies. New Zealand protects her mothers of every class and kind. The government of New Zealand insists and demands that certain health laws be observed throughout their domain. As a result a child seldom dies in that country under 5 years of age; while in the United States we are losing 300,000 children every year before they are a year old.

But the United States is gaining some. In the last 20 years the death rate among infants has been cut over one-third, and the tuberculosis death rate has been reduced a half; typhoid fever deaths have been reduced four-fifths; smallpox has been almost eliminated; and diphtheria, measles and scarlet fever have been materially reduced.

"U. S. S. NEVADA DAY."

Officers and crew of the U. S. S. Nevada were honored by "Special Day" at the Brazilian Centennial Exposition held in Rio de Janeiro recently

And how has all this been done? Through health education. There is no knowledge so needed in our Nation today as the knowledge of how to keep well and strong. How to feed and clothe the children to keep them well and growing normally every day of their youth. How to keep the school boy and the school girl well and strong and still educate them in their books. There was a time when a weak-backed, weak-eyed, weak-blooded college graduate was the symbol of high culture and mental development. But "them days is gone forever." The world wants physically strong men and women as well as mentally strong people. The enjoyment of poor health is not as popular as it used to be. People still sympathize with those who are sick and can not help it, but the world is getting tired of unnecessary chronic illness and disease.

But in looking over these comparative figures of the length of our lives the greatest thing is the fact that these extra days have been added to the useful years of our life. Not just to the children's lives, but those extra 15 years have been added to the 40 years that used to be the limit. And it will always be so—every year of life that can be saved will mean that some useful man or woman will live a year longer to rear their family and build their home.

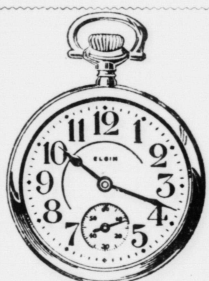

Do you see anything in this for us all to think about and do? Should we all know more about the laws of health? Is there any way we can help prolong the lives of all the people in our community or our State? Is this knowledge worth spending a little time and even money to learn? Is it worth putting into our schools, even if we do have to drop some of the less essential? Would you rather your child came out of school strong and healthy and able to use what he had learned than to know a few more facts and be a physical wreck?

The educational directors of our national system of education have decided that HEALTH must be the first objective of a child's education. Are we with them in this? And will we every one do our part to lengthen the lives of the children of today?

Chamber of Commerce Luncheon Postponed Indefinitely.

Just on going to press, we were instructed to announce that the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce that was to be held on Tuesday night, the 23rd, will be postponed indefinitely, due to so much sickness at the present time. There being so many cases of "flu" at present has made it necessary to avoid public gatherings as much as possible until the situation is improved.

Brady Barber Shop.

Brady, Jan. 16.—Explosion of the water heater at 7 o'clock this morning in the Jones Barber shop was heard and felt for several blocks around and caused a rush to arms on the part of the citizenship, who thought burglars had blown the vault of one of the local banks.

Pieces of the stove were blown nearly through the walls of the building, a studding being cut nearly in two and all windows in the building were blown out. The heavy plate glass windows were shattered. Two barbers and the shine boy were in the shop at the time and were moved about in their chairs by the impact of the explosion, although they were not injured.

STATE CAPITAL NEWS

From The Austin Statesman:

Absolute Harmony Needed
To Secure Proper Action.

Austin, Jan. 14.—Although the Thirty-eighth Legislature has been in session less than one week, exactly 200 bills have been introduced, more than can be passed in the next 200 days, if proper consideration is given to the various measures.

Several of the bills introduced were in line with the Governor's legislative program.

Of the 200 bills, 125 were presented in the House while 75 were introduced in the Senate.

Before the Legislature proceeds very far in its legislative venture, a strong effort is to be made to obtain a working agreement and plea for harmony. This effort is expected to be decided in the House Monday morning when the resolution of Representative Joe Moore of Hunt, on this subject is to be considered.

The resolution, according to its author, indirectly affects the klan question and it is to forget this issue that the resolution was prepared. Under this resolution the members are asked to pledge themselves to a devotion to duty, and "suppress the injection of any and all questions that tend to divide the Legislature and obstruct the constructive work" of the Legislature.

The resolution was also signed by Lewis T. Carpenter of Dallas, late candidate for speaker and eight other members of the House.

Following closely on the heels of this resolution came the anti-klan bill introduced by Representative Fugler of Harrison. This bill is expected to come up for consideration in committee during the early part of next week, according to Fugler.

The bill would require all secret organizations to file with the county clerk in the various counties where there is a camp or lodge, a complete list of its officers and members for the scrutiny of the public. As this measure is expected to create much interest and opposition the committee is expected to set aside a definite date for its consideration so that those interested may appear.

Fugler said he desires early consideration of the measure.

The klan question is also scheduled to come up for consideration Monday in the Senate, when the resolution offered during the early part of this week by Senator Burkett and others commending the action of Governor John M. Parker of Louisiana in his efforts to bring justice to those guilty of murder in connection with the Moore-house parish tragedy. When this resolution was introduced it was referred to Senate Committee on State affairs.

This committee has decided to report the resolution favorably with an adverse minority report. Action on this report is scheduled for Monday.

Another subject of importance to come up in the House for consideration on Monday is the concurrent resolution by Representative Laird of Angeline, proposing a legislative investigation of the recent awarding of textbook contracts by the textbook commission.

Laird would have a sweeping investigation made into this proposition, and the resolution provides for the appointment of a joint committee from the House and Senate to conduct the investigation.

The committee would consist of five members of the committee on education from the House and three from the Senate.

Despite the strong appeal made by Governor Neff for a constitutional convention, the majority of the House and Senate members are apparently opposed to the joint resolution on the subject introduced by Representative's Rountree, Quaid, and others.

The resolution is now in the hands of the House committee on constitutional amendments and is expected to come up for hearing during next week, although no date for hearing on the subject has yet been fixed.

It is the plan of the proponents of the resolution to have it considered at as early a date as possible.

Fight on Text Book Contract
Brewing in the Legislature.

That there is a fight brewing in the Legislature over the expenditure of the textbook commission of $1,500,000 in new contracts for textbooks for the public schools is virtually assured, judging by the statements of various members of the House and Senate. That the storm center will, as usual, be in the House is also virtually assured. Representative J. Roy Hardin of Kaufman County, expressed the opinion that exceedingly poor judgment was exhibited by the textbook commission in the expenditure involved in the new contracts.

The Kaufman County man declared that he was one who strongly favored a thorough investigation of all circumstances incident to the $1,500,000 contract. He said he would endorse and support a resolution calling for the resignation of members of the textbook commission if the investigation developed the exercise or lack of exercise of judgment in making the new contracts.

"There has been a well defined spirit of indignant surprise throughout the State over the extravagance in expending the school money for textbooks," said Representative Hardin. "I have been unable to justify this recent expenditure of money, nor have I heard any one else justify it. It is to be assumed that the members of the commission have reasons to advance justifying this expenditure, and if so, I am in favor of giving the commission the opportunity to give those reasons to the Legislature," was the comment of the Kaufman County man.

Representative W. E. Pope, of Corpus Christi, laughed when the matter was broached to him. "Yes, I have heard that there was considerable feeling over the spending of this sum for new textbooks, but it is something that ought to be investigated, and until the investigation has been made it is not for me to say, who, why or how," said Mr. Pope. Last session I attempted to obtain passage of legislation that would in some measure curtail the wasteful spending of school funds, whether those funds were part of the textbook fund or belonged to the scholastic fund. Legally, I questioned at the time the practice of transferring funds from one account to another, and I still question the legality of manipulations," said Mr. Pope. The Corpus Christi man was the author of the famous Pope amendment, which during the first and second called sessions of the Thirty-seventh Legislature was the principal weapon of offense and defense of the Nueces County representative in his fight to regulate and circumscribe the expenditure of State funds to specific purposes for which appropriations were made. In his campaign on the floor of the House during the last Legislature, Representative Pope contended that when money was appropriated for a specific purpose the money was not to be used for any other purpose, and the Pope amendment was the legislative device the Nueces County man forged and wielded with what his opponents admitted was painful accuracy and efficiency.

F. H. Burmeister of McMullen County, veteran legislator and admittedly one of the ablest members of the Legislature, remarked that on its face the action of the textbook commission in making the new contract involving an expenditure of $1,500,000 showed a lack of judgment. Presentation of all the facts and circumstances incident to the expenditure ought to be made and a committee from the Legislature appointed to gather all the facts bearing upon the contract, was the McMullen County man's comment. "It would appear that the spending of this money at this time was ill advised," said Mr. Burmeister "and although I have not personally made a comparison of the old textbook and the new one contracted for, I have been informed that the new book is not so superior as to justify discarding of the old one. However, it is expected that an investigation will be made and the facts presented to the Legislature."

Senator H. L. Darwin of Paris a member of the Senate committee on education, questions the judgment of the commission in adopting a new textbook at this time, involving the expenditure that it does. He expressed himself as desiring to wait until all the facts are gathered, when he and the other senators inclined to question the commission's action, will be in a position to follow such course as the facts warrant.

Queer Feelings

"Some time ago, I was very irregular," writes Mrs. Cora Robie, of Pikeville, Ky. "I suffered a great deal, and knew I must do something for this condition. I suffered mostly with my back and a weakness in my limbs. I would have dreadful headaches. I had hot flashes and very queer feelings, and oh, how my head hurt! I read of and of others, who seemed to have the same troubles I had, being benefited, so I began to use it. I found it most beneficial. I took several bottles and was made so much better I didn't have any more trouble of this kind. It regulated me."

Cardui has been found very helpful in the correction of many cases of painful female disorders, such as Mrs. Robie mentions above. If you suffer as she did, take Cardui—a purely vegetable, medicinal tonic, in use for more than 40 years. It should help you.

Melson Bill Asks $4,500,000 Aid For Public Schools.

An emergency appropriation of $4,500,000 for the Texas public school system is the chief of five items on the legislative program of the joint legislative council of the federated women's clubs of the State, according to an announcement given out Saturday from executive headquarters here. Other measures on the program are a survey of the Texas penitentiary system, State assent to the Sheppard-Towner maternity act, strengthening of the prohibition laws, and an educational survey.

The emergency school appropriations bill will be the first of the measures sponsored by the women's organizations to be submitted to the legislature. This bill has already been drafted by Rep. J. M. Melson of Sulphur Springs, the author of the bill making a $3,500,000 appropriation for the public schools at the last legislative session.

"I am giving this bill to the press for publication, Rep. Melson said, with the distinct understanding that there be included with its publication an earnest invitation to all the friends of the public schools in the legislature be made to join with me in presenting it the very first day we are in session. The text of the Melson bill follows:

Be it enacted by the legislature of the State of Texas:

"Section 1. For the purpose of promoting and aiding all the public schools of the State, four million, five hundred thousand dollars ($4,500,000) is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the State Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the same to be added to the available school fund for the scholastic year, beginning September 1, 1922, and ending August 31, 1923, and to be distributed in accordance with the statutes now controlling the distribution of the available school funds of this State, as shown by articles 2725, 2726, Chapter 9, Title 48, Revised Civil Statutes of the State of Texas.

"Section 2. That fact that many of the public schools of this State are in imminent danger of being closed for the lack of funds, creates an emergency and an imperative public necessity that the constitutional rule, requiring bills to be read on three separate days in each house, be suspended, and that this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage, and said rule is hereby suspended, and it is so enacted."

Central Texas Radio Fans May Listen to Legislature.

Equipment has been ordered by Dr. J. B. Hall, director of WNAS station, which, when received, will expand the activities of the local broadcasting station operated jointly by the Texas Radio Corporation and the Austin Statesman considerably.

With the receipt of this equipment, Dr. Hall will be in position to install a portable set in any assembly hall where the transmitters will receive music, speeches and singing direct and relay them to the station where they will broadcast all over the nation. Central Texas radio fans may have an opportunity to hear members of the Legislature debate important questions of the day without coming to Austin. Those who do not often have the privilege of attending a religious revival or hear a beautiful church service will have an opportunity of hearing these meetings through this arrangement.

In adding this new service the Austin Statesman is co-operating with the Texas Radio Corporation in giving its readers the latest in radio service and enabling them to receive news and happenings immediately as they happen.

That radio is gaining in popularity in Austin as a result of the broadcast service rendered by WNAS station is attested by the fact that an expensive receiving set of the latest type has been installed in the home of E. H. Perry, prominent cotton factor of this city. Mr. Perry Friday night heard Los Angeles plainly over his new set. D. C. Reed, another prominent cotton broker of Austin, has also ordered the installation of an expensive receiving set at his home.

Method Calling Constitutional Convention in Controversy

That a constitutional convention must be called by a vote of the people instead of by the Legislature has not been officially ruled upon by the Attorney General, it was stated today by Assistant Attorney General Sutton.

A resolution has been drawn by the attorney general's department at the instance of the governor, providing for the call of a constitutional convention by popular vote and setting July 4, of the present year as the time of the election. At the same election delegates to the convention may be chosen, according to the resolution.

A number of legislators hold the opinion that the legislature can legally call a constitutional convention, others hold that the legislature has no authority to call such a convention and only by popular vote can such a convention be called.

It is also the opinion of many members of the legislature that amendments must first be submitted, voted on, and if accepted these amendments must be incorporated in documents to be submitted to the people for adoption as the constitution of the State.

Houston Woman Appointed Bacteriologist for State.

Appointment of Miss Bettie Lee Hampil, of Houston, as State Bacteriologist, to succeed Dr. G. M. Graham, was announced today by Dr. W. H. Beasley, acting state health officer. Mr. Graham was asked to resign recently when fifteen employees of the health department were released.

It also was reported that W.

INTERESTING FACTS

106,327 Ford Cars and Trucks

Retailed In November.

Approximately the same number scheduled for delivery this month.

What Does this Mean?

THIS Volume of deliveries to actual owners is entirely unprecedented for this time of the year—

IT HAS Taxed the manufacturing ability of the Ford plants working at full capacity—

IT INDICATES a volume of business during the rapidly approaching months of "heavy demand" which will be far beyond the maximum of production schedule which the Ford Motor Company has set—

AND That means a Ford shortage even more acute than the one which existed last Spring and Summer. DEALERS' Stocks all over the country are low—there are no reserves to draw upon to meet the demand for delivery—

THERE Is no way in which dealer reserves can be built up, as deliveries have been made to customers as fast as Cars could be manufactured since last April.

THE Only way you can protect your desire to obtain prompt delivery of a Ford even at this time is to place your order immediately.

THIS Emphasizes more strongly than anything we could possibly say the necessity of your making prompt arrangements with a Ford Dealer for the listing of your order, particularly if you are contemplating the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer.

We believe you are entitled to know these facts as they actually exist..

Merry Wives Party.

Another link was added to the Merry Wives' chain of good times Thursday afternoon, January 11, when Mrs. L. L. Skaggs entertained the club at the home of Mrs. Weaver H. Baker.

After several games of the ever-popular "500," Mrs. C. R. Stevenson was awarded the first prize, a green earthenware baking dish. The second prize, a set of hand painted table numbers, was won by Mrs. U. D. Kendrick. Mrs. A. J. Hamer won the pretty powder puff, which was the guest prize.

Fruit salad with mayonnaise, dainty sandwiches, angel food cake and hot chocolate were served to Mesdames C. R. Stevenson, H. O. Patterson, L. F. Boyle, J. D. Motley, H. O. Denman, U. D. Kendrick, W. H. Baker, C. T. Holekamp, C. M. Wolf, A. L. Mudge, A. J. Hamer, W. P. Riley, G. C. Martin, and Misses Cecil Martin, Elsie Buck, Dorothy Mudge, Bonnie Oliver, and the hostess.

At this meeting Mrs. Clyde V. Cochran was elected a member of the club.

Mrs. Raymond Allen will entertain the members of the Merry Wives Club and their husbands, at her ranch home, January 30th, at 8 p. m.

Anniversary Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Durst celebrated their forty-seventh wedding anniversary Friday, January 12, 1929.

A number of friends were bidden to partake of a splendid turkey dinner and all the good things that accompany the royal bird.

The many friends of this happy young couple wish them many more such happy anniversaries and trust that the coming years will add all things good to the golden store of their lives.

Those enjoying the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Durst were: Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Harrison, Mrs. L. Jetton, Mrs. G. W. Farmer, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Farmer and family, and Mr. W. R. McKee.

Revision of Present Laws To be Asked by Women.

Austin, Jan. 17.—Elimination of all legislation discriminating against women of the State will be advocated before the Legislature now in session by the Texas branch of the National Women's Party. To this end bills providing for laws a mother equal guardianship of her children, to give a married woman the right to her own earnings, to make the divorce law equal for men and for women, to require the joinder of the wife with the husband to the sale of all community property, to permit a married woman to choose her legal domicile for voting and similar purposes, and to amend the constitution so that women may not be barred from jury service.

The decision to support this program has been reached here by the Texas Women's Party officers in conference with Miss Lavinia Egan of Shreveport, La. a member of the council of the National Women's Party, with headquarters at Washington, D. C. Miss Egan, who is a former president of the Louisiana State Federation of Women's Clubs, is in Austin on a state-wide tour of Texas, lecturing in the interest of the women's party.

The conference on the women's legislative program was held at the home of Mrs. Kate G. Winston of Austin, state treasurer of the women's party. In addition to Miss Egan there were present, Mrs. Rena Maverick Green of San Antonio, state president; Mrs. Clara Snell Wolf, former state president; Mrs. J. E. Pearce, chairman of the Tenth congressional district of Texas, and a number of other women interested in the women's party work.

Miss Egan outlined to the Austin women that the present program of the National Women's Party is to remove all forms of subjection of women, whether in law or in custom.

Births.

A fine boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Forest J. Weldon last Thursday night, and has been named Jackson Forest. He takes the first name from his grandfather, Weldon, and the last from General Forest of the Confederate army. His grandfather was General Forest in many of the hard fought battles of the Civil War and was killed by "Yankees" shortly after the war closed. Mrs. Weldon and the baby are doing nicely.

On the 11th inst. Mr. and Mrs. Bradford became the proud parents of a ten pound baby girl, who has been christened Mamie Joe. The young lady and her mother are at the home of her grand parents, Judge and Mrs. J. B. Randolph, and both are doing nicely.

Meditations and Unbiased Reflections of a Married Woman

A man's point of view depends entirely upon which woman he happens to be looking at.

Whether it is the woman he has promised to "love, honor and cherish" or some other woman, who means nothing in his life.

Whether it is his own beloved "Rib," or some woman for whom he does not feel the moral responsibility which Adam felt for Eve when she took that teeny-weeny bite of the apple.

Love has such a way of tinging a man's viewpoint!

For instance—what would seem shocking or undignified in the woman who bears his name, strikes him as merely vivacious and daring in another woman.

What he calls tactless or awkward in his own wife, he considers "frank and original" in another woman.

A foolish remark or a bit of kittenish by-play that makes lush for his own wife, makes him smile when committed by another man's wife.

What he regards as "forward" or "dictatorial" in his own wife, he calls being "the life of the party" in another man's wife.

"Sloppiness" in his own wife is just "artistic carelessness" in another woman.

A joke that makes him wince or choke when told by his own wife meets with a wink or a hearty laugh whispered by another fair one.

What he would regard as obvious "make-up" on his own wife's face is merely a "well-done bit of camouflage" or an attractive "first aid to nature" on another woman's face.

What would strike him as deliberate deception or dissimulation in the woman he loves, seems merely "elusively uncertainty" or "fascinating mystery" in a woman for whom he doesn't care a German mark.

A bizarre "get-up" on his wife becomes a "stunning outfit" when worn by another man's wife; and an "impossibly low" gown on the wife of his bosom becomes "dashing" or "revealing" on any other woman.

What he laughingly calls "high-brow" in his own wife may be only "aspiring" in another woman; and what he regards as amazing nerve and courage in another woman becomes plain "foolhardiness" if attempted by his wife.

And what he laughs at as "childishness" in the partner of his joys and sorrows, he smiles at as "charming naivette" in another man's wife.

And the strange and the sad and the funny part of it is, that it's LOVE, love, love that makes the viewpoint veer 'round!

It's love that takes away our rose-colored glasses—and hands us a microscope!

O Love, what blessed inconsistencies are cherished in thy name!

For how would a woman know that her husband loved her if he didn't find fault with her?—Helen Rowland, in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.
