Firefighters take prevention programs to schools this week

By KERRI SMITH
Staff Writer

Fire Prevention Week is this week and this is a great time to learn how to prevent fire, what to do in case of a fire in your home and how to educate children on fire safety.

Pampa firefighters will present fire prevention programs at all of the schools and daycares this week according to Fire Chief Kim Powell.

"We will be going to all of the public elementary schools, the private schools and also the daycares in Pampa for Fire Prevention Week," Powell said.

The program consists of teaching the children what to do if their clothing catches on fire, which is stop, drop and roll. They also want to teach the kids that they need to have smoke detectors in their homes, their families should have an evacuation plan and should practice evacuating at least twice a year and what to do if they get caught in their home during a fire and cannot get out.

"If you can't get out of your house in a fire, do not hide in a closet, under the bed or in any secret place," said Fire Marshal Keith Fisher during a program this morning at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic School. "You should lay in the middle of your bedroom floor and cover your mouth. If you hear a firefighter yelling for you, you should yell back as loud as you can and let them know where you are. Do not be afraid of the firefighter because they are just there to help you and your family."

Fisher and the other firefighters presenting the program told the students they need to know their address in case they have to call for help and they need to know how to dial 911 in case of a fire or other emergency. They also explained to the children that matches and lighters are not toys and should not be played with.

The National Fire Protection Association gives other fire safety tips on their Web site www.firepreventionweek.org. Store matches and lighters out of the reach of children and explain that they are for adults only. If there are lighters around the home, make sure they are the child resistant type. Children should be told that if they find matches or a lighter they should tell an adult.

According to statistics provided by NFPA, seven out of 10 fatal home fires involve children, most of them age 5 and younger. Not only are matches and lighters a problem, but also candles, stoves and cigarettes.

The NFPA recommends that families have two escape routes at their home and practice these at least twice a year. Choose an outside meeting place where everyone should meet after escaping the home. Make sure kids know that once they are outside, they need to stay outside. Tell them they should not worry

City, CRMWA, school board meetings scheduled

The Pampa City Commission will hold a public hearing in connection with their regular meeting Tuesday afternoon concerning an ordinance to tax tangible personal property in transit.

The Texas Legislature passed a law during their session last spring that would exempt from taxation goods, primarily inventories, that are stored in a location not owned by the owner of the goods and transferred within 175 days. Included in the exemptions are certain petroleum products.

Unless the city commission votes to tax these products, they will be exempt.

In other business, the city commission is expected to appoint Darville Orr to the Gray County Appraisal District board of directors.

They will also consider the plats of the Duncan Street Subdivision, Pampa Villages and Hampton Villages.

Following the regularly scheduled meeting, the commission will have a work session to discuss tax abatements.

The Pampa City Commission will meet at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the commission chambers at City Hall.

Pampa's annual tribute to folk singer and former resident Woody Guthrie ended Sunday morning with gospel music on the outdoor stage at the Woody Guthrie Inn, 400 S. Cuyler.

Performers Sunday morning included Tim Justice of Lefors, Jack and Carolyn Selby of Pampa, Charlie Powell of New Mexico and Guthrie impersonator K.C. Mathey, who sang "Bound for Glory," a song by Guthrie, as well as a song of Mathey's which he performed in his own singing voice.

The weekend's schedule of events began Friday with the opening of the Woody Guthrie Center at 320 S. Cuyler, along with a "pickin' tent" on the west side of the center. The center is the former Harris Drug, where Guthrie was employed dur-

Mayor Lonny Robbins, center, has issued a proclamation designating October as National Domestic Violence Awareness Month in Pampa. Witnesses to the signing are Tralee Crisis Center Executive Director Dee Dee Laramore, left, and Administrative Assistant Karen McGahen. For 23 years, Tralee Crisis Center has provided crisis intervention services and safe shelter for victims of domestic violence for Pampa and the surrounding area. The non-profit agency plans to highlight qualities that will help end violence in the home by sponsoring the fifth annual Honorable Man March at 5:30 p.m. Oct. 23. The March will begin with the reading of the proclamation on the steps of City Hall and continue to the Knights of Columbus Hall at Cuyler and Browning streets. A reception to honor the 2007 Honorable Man and all nominees will conclude the day's events. The public is invited to participate. One-page nominations for this year's Honorable Man may be sent to Tralee Crisis Center, P.O. Box 2880, Pampa, TX 79066-2880 or e-mailed to tralee@amaonline.com.

Off-duty deputy kills 6

By ROBERT IMRIE
Associated Press Writer

CRANDON, Wis. (AP) — The residents Tyler Peterson was hired to protect and serve can't understand how the 20-year-old who shot six of their young people and critically injured another could have passed a background check to become a sheriff's deputy.

Peterson was shot to death after opening fire early Sunday on a group of students and recent graduates who had gathered for pizza and movies on their high school's homecoming weekend. Peterson was off-duty from his full-time job as a Forest County deputy sheriff; he also was a part-time Crandon police officer.

David Franz, 36, who lives with his wife two houses from the duplex where the shooting occurred, said it was hard to accept that someone in law enforcement was the gunman.

"The first statement we said to each other was, how did he get through the system?" Franz said. "How do they know somebody's background, especially that young? It is disturbing, to say the least."

Sheriff Keith Van Cleve said he would meet with state Attorney General J.B. Van Hollen this morning to discuss the case.

Crandon Police Chief John Dennee said it would be handled by the state Department of Criminal Investigation because the suspect was a deputy and officer.

Peterson was killed Sunday afternoon, eight miles north of Crandon in the rural town of Argonne, Dennee said.

Crandon mayor Gary Bradley said Sunday that a sniper killed the suspect, but Van Cleve would not confirm that officers shot him.

The gunman's motive was unclear, but the mother of a 14-year-old victim, Lindsey Stahl, said the suspect may have been a jealous boyfriend.

"I'm waiting for somebody to wake me up right now. This is a bad, bad dream," said Jenny Stahl. "All I heard it was a jealous boyfriend and he went berserk. He took them all out."

Dennee declined comment on whether Peterson had a romantic relationship with any of the victims.

The lone survivor of the shooting, a male, remained in critical condition Monday at St. Joseph's Hospital, according to nursing supervisor Penny Funk.

The white, two-story duplex was about a block from downtown Crandon, a town of about 2,000 located 225 miles north of Milwaukee in an area known for logging and outdoor activities. The victims had gathered for what Dennee described as "a pizza and movie party."

Three of the victims were Crandon High School students, said school Superintendent Richard Peters, and the other three had graduated within the past three years.

"There is probably nobody in Crandon who is not affected by this," Peters said, adding that students "are going to wake up in shock and disbelief and a lot of pain."

Bush vs. Texas over Mexican's pending execution

By MARK SHERMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — To put it bluntly, Texas wants President Bush to get out of the way of the state's plan to execute a Mexican for the brutal killing of two teenage girls.

Bush, who presided over 152 executions as governor of Texas, wants to halt the execution of Jose Ernesto Medellin in what has become a confusing test of presidential power that the Supreme Court ultimately will sort out.

The president wants to enforce a decision by the International Court of Justice that found the convictions of Medellin and 50 other Mexican-born prisoners violated their rights to legal help as outlined in the 1963 Vienna Convention.

That is the same court Bush has since said he plans to ignore if it makes similar decisions affecting state criminal laws.

"The president does not agree with the ICJ's interpretation of the Vienna Convention," the administration said in arguments filed with the court. This time, though, the U.S. agreed to abide by the international court's decision because ignoring it would harm American interests abroad, the government said.

Texas argues strenuously that neither the international court nor Bush, his Texas ties notwithstanding, has any say in Medellin's case.

Ted Cruz, the Texas solicitor general, said the administration's position would "allow the president to set aside any state law the president believes is inconvenient to international comity."

The Supreme Court will hear arguments in the case Wednesday.

Medellin was born in Mexico but spent much of his childhood in the United States. He was 18 in June 1993, when he and other members of the Black and Whites gang in Houston encountered Jennifer Ertman and Elizabeth Pena on a railroad trestle as the girls were taking a shortcut home.

Ertman, 14, and Pena, 16, were gang-raped and strangled. Their bodies were found four days later.

Medellin was arrested a few days after the killings. He was told he had a right to remain silent and have a lawyer present, but the police did not tell him that he could request assistance from the Mexican consulate under the 1963 treaty.

Medellin gave a written confession. He was convicted of murder in the course of a sexual assault, a capital offense in Texas. A judge sentenced him to death in October 1994.

Medellin did not raise the lack of assistance from Mexican diplomats during his trial or sentencing. When he did claim his rights had been violated, Texas and federal courts turned him down because he had not objected at his trial.

Then, in 2003, Mexico sued the United States in the International Court of Justice in The Hague on behalf of Medellin and 50 other Mexicans on death row in the U.S. who also had been denied access to their country's diplomats.

More than 100 attended the barbecue dinner and street dance Saturday night, according to Reed Echols, an event organizer. Rick Scott entertained during the dinner, and Brad Mathis and the Fencewalker Dance Band provided music for the dance.

New this year was dedication of the small building west of the center. The building, from which food and drinks are dispensed during the annual tribute to Guthrie, was named "Alice's Restaurant" in honor of a song by the same name which was written, performed and recorded in the 1970s by Guthrie's son Arlo.

Guthrie, a folk music singer perhaps best known for writing the song "This Land Is Your Land," lived in Pampa from 1929 to 1937. He was born July 14, 1912 in Okemah, Okla., and died Oct. 3, 1967, in New York.

He learned to play the guitar while in Pampa, and wrote and sang his first songs here. He married a Pampa resident with whom he had three children before leaving Pampa.

They will also consider authorizing water taps for Pampa and Tahoka.

Most of the meeting will consist of status reports, including reports on the salt cedar eradication project, ground water rights acquisition and well field expansion phases two and three in Roberts County.

They will also hear a report on future water authority needs.

The board will consider spare well field motor purchases, hear a report on surplus property sales and consider the purchases of unbudgeted items, as well as hear quarterly reports from the National Park Service and General Manager Kent Satterwhite.

They will consider a revision of CRMWA bylaws, review quarterly financial statements and employ an auditor for their 2006-2007 financial transactions and five-year management audit.

The board will also officially recognize the service of Ray Renner, a former CRMWA director from Lamesa.

The board will meet at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday at Plainview Country Club.

Global warming debate sure to get hot and heavy

The debate over global warming and the economic impact that policy changes will have on nations around the world hit new highs recently.

As more than 80 heads of state and government met in New York on Sept. 25 to discuss international action on climate change, the U.S. Congress was holding hearings, too.

Former President Bill Clinton told the Financial Times newspaper in advance of the meeting in New York that he disagreed with a recent United Nations report that states that climate change policies would reduce economic growth.

Mr. Clinton also said he believes that the United States must take the lead in cutting carbon dioxide emission. He said China and India should not be expected to cut their carbon emission unless the United States took the lead.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill former House Majority Leader Dick Armey, who now heads an 850,000-member group called FreedomWorks, was testifying before the U.S. Senate Environment and Public Works Committee.

He said efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions will be a "costly undertaking that will have a significant impact on the economy."

Mr. Armey noted that the reallocation of resources away from existing uses would be the primary method of achieving climate change goals, but this would be virtually impossible to achieve without government subsidies and regulatory relief.

"Limitations on the use of carbon-based fuels constitute a supply shock in the energy market," Mr. Armey, who holds a Ph.D. in economics, said. "Throughout the economy, consumers will face increased energy costs as well as higher prices associated with new product efficiency standards. These higher prices will reduce economic activity and have an adverse impact on employment."

Mr. Armey cites a study by economist Michael Canes that states that the restrictions on fossil fuel use would cost tens of billions of dollars annually; the price volatility associated with the cap on energy use, which could have "periodic GDP growth impacts of a few tenths of 1 percent"; rent seeking costs, which could be as high as $60 billion per year; and the monitoring and information costs, which could be as much as $1 billion per year; and the monitoring and information costs, which could be as much as $1 billion per year in the United States alone.

A paper by Arthur Laffer and Wayne Winegarden notes that under a cap and trade program, the economy could shrink by 5.2 percent by the year 2020.

"Sound energy policies are critical to a strong economy," he said. "Energy is an input to all the goods and services we consume. It heats and cools our homes, and fuels our transportation system. Affordable and reliable energy is an important component to continued economic growth, and the potential for new global warming mandates poses real costs for the economy and consumer."

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Oct. 8, the 281st day of 2007. There are 84 days left in the year. This is Columbus Day, as well as Thanksgiving Day in Canada.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 8, 1871, the Great Chicago Fire erupted; fires also broke out in Peshtigo, Wis., and in the Michigan communities of Holland, Manistee and Port Huron.

On this date:

In 1869, the 14th president of the United States, Franklin Pierce, died in Concord, N.H.

In 1918, Sgt. Alvin C. York almost single-handedly killed 25 German soldiers and helped capture 132 in the Argonne Forest in France.

In 1934, Bruno Hauptmann was indicted by a grand jury in New Jersey for murder in the death of the son of Charles A. Lindbergh.

'I hope we never live to see the day when a thing is as bad as some of our newspapers make it.'

— Will Rogers
American humorist (1879-1935)

In 1945, President Truman announced that the secret of the atomic bomb would be shared only with Britain and Canada.

In 1956, Don Larsen pitched the only perfect game in a World Series to date as the New York Yankees beat the Brooklyn Dodgers in Game 5, 2-0.

In 1957, the Brooklyn Baseball Club announced it was accepting an offer to move the Dodgers from New York to Los Angeles.

In 1967, former British Prime Minister Clement Attlee died in London at age 84.

In 1981, at the White House, President Reagan greeted former Presidents Carter, Ford and Nixon, who were preparing to travel to Egypt for the funeral of Anwar Sadat.

In 1982, all labor organizations in Poland, including Solidarity, were banned.

Ten years ago: Scientists reported the Mars Pathfinder had yielded what could be the strongest evidence yet that Mars might once have been hospitable to life. Gueorgui Makharadze, a diplomat from the Republic of Georgia, pleaded guilty in Washington to charges stemming from a car crash that killed Maryland teenager Jovianne Waltrick. (Makharadze was sentenced to seven years in prison; he initially served his term in a U.S. prison, but was later transferred to Georgia, where he was paroled in 2002.)

Five years ago: A federal judge approved President Bush's request to reopen West Coast ports, ending a caustic 10-day labor lockout that was costing the U.S. economy an estimated $1 billion to $2 billion a day.

Reality check: America is no longer a superpower

The American government has come to resemble the characters in "The Wizard of Oz." We have the Cowardly Congress, a president without a brain, and a foreign-policy establishment without a heart.

Our politicians are still trying to play the empire game long after the age of empires has ended. Blinded by arrogance, they cannot see that with every passing day, the world needs us less and less and hates us more and more. We are passing through that phase when the grandeur of the empire exists only in the minds of politicians who have insulated themselves from reality.

A friend of mine, a classical scholar, sometimes tells his students, "No one woke up one morning in 476 A.D. and said, 'Gee, I'm in the Dark Ages.'" The transition from the heyday of Roman power to a stage of barbarism was a gradual process. We are in a process of change. No one is going to announce on TV that the U.S. is no longer a superpower.

Nevertheless, the signs are there if you look for them. A nation that was able to help crush the Axis powers in three and a half years hasn't won a war since then. We have had four years of struggling with an insurgency in a small, poor and broken country. Our economy is shaky under mountains of debt. Our once-great industrial power has been shrunk by decades of stupid free-trade policies. Half of our people make less than 42,000 inflated dollars a year.

Charley Reese
Columnist

Where we were once the arsenal of democracy, today there is hardly a major weapons system that doesn't rely on imports of one kind or another. Much of the industry that is left is foreign-owned. Japan, which once lay prostrate, dominates the American car market. It is extremely difficult to find anything today that is not made in China or some other cheap-labor country.

In the meantime, the cowardly Congress doesn't have the guts to tackle any of the major problems confronting the American people. Our president continues to embarrass us practically every time he opens his mouth in public. The foreign-policy establishment is riddled with aging draft dodgers agitating for more wars – against small countries, of course.

True, we still have lots of nuclear weapons, but do you think any American president would want to get into a nuclear shooting match with China or Russia? Look at how we reacted to two airplanes crashing into two office buildings. What do you think we would do if San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco became radioactive ruins with millions of casualties? We are not prepared mentally, spiritually or materially to deal with a nuclear war.

We are like all empires in their final stages. We have grown soft. We like our comforts. We don't wish to be inconvenienced. We like poor Mexicans to do our stoop work and poor Americans to do our fight-

Saddle fit and cinches: it's important to do it right

Does your saddle fit your horse? I'm sure it fits you or you wouldn't be sitting in it enjoying your equestrian activity.

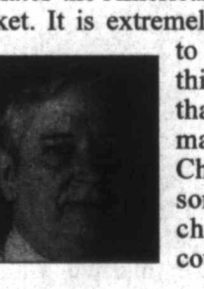

Rule of thumb: If there is a dry spot on your horse where that saddle sat upon its back, it doesn't fit properly. If raw spots or white hair starts appearing on your horse's withers in patches or "splotches," your saddle doesn't fit!

If there is no space between the front middle area (where the hole is behind and under the horn) of the pommel, your saddle doesn't fit!

If the tree in your saddle is broken, it may pinch your horse and send it into an achingly, uncontrollable escapade.

To check your tree there are two ways to be sure your tree is secure. Turn your saddle upside down on horn (or pommel if hornless) and cantle. Push down on both skirts of the saddle at the same time and watch the center of the saddle. If it moves with pressure, chances are the tree is cracked or broken. Turn you saddle over. Firmly grasp pommel (or horn) and rim of cantle and pull toward each other. If there is a lot of flex your tree is either cracked or broken.

Horse Tips

Most cinches have either one or two "O" rings in the center. When you "cinch up." those O rings should be centered on an imaginary line between front and back legs. Do the same with the flank (back) cinch, if you use one.

Flank cinches should be pulled up to a space of two fingers between the cinch and the belly of your horse. Any more space than that is a disaster waiting to happen.

I have seen horses have the flank cinch two to three inches from their bellies. I have seen horses kick forward to shoo flies away and catch their hind foot in the flank cinch. If the billet did not break or the cinch break, the result was disastrous if not fatal to the horse.

Euthanasia is a strong case to take time to ensure your cinches are secured properly.

Be safe. Ride smart.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: For many people, home is a place where they feel safe and secure. But what happens when "home" becomes a place you need to escape from because of a fire? If you don't have an immediate answer to that question, you are not alone. Many individuals do not have a plan, or practice what to do in the event of a fire. But these life-saving steps are critical. Eight out of every 10 fire deaths in the United States occur in homes. Each year, between 2,500 and 3,000 people are killed in home fires, while an estimated 12,000 to 13,000 suffer injuries. All of us must share in the responsibility of protecting ourselves, our homes and our communities from fire. Ideally, this means preventing fires from happening in the first place, but it also means being prepared to escape should a fire occur. Planning and practicing escape from a fire makes it more likely that people will survive one. All families should also make sure they have working smoke alarms. In order to successfully escape a fire, it is vital to be alerted to one as early as possible. Smoke alarms should be on every level of your home, inside each sleeping room and outside each sleeping area. They should be tested once a month and should never be disabled or have their batteries removed. I hope that everyone reading this will take the time during Fire Prevention Week (Oct. 7-13) to review fire safety and practice a home fire escape plan. Resources for developing a plan and safety tips are available at www.fireprevention-week.org. -- JAMES M. SHANNON, PRESIDENT, NATIONAL FIRE PROTECTION ASSOCIATION

DEAR JAMES: There's an old saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." So thank you for offering me the opportunity to remind everyone about the importance of being prepared in advance for an emergency evacuation in case of fire -- or some other natural disaster. Readers, this year the National Fire Protection Association is focusing its annual public awareness campaign on home fire escape planning. The theme: Practice Your Escape Plan. Having an escape plan in place is essential to being prepared to act quickly in case of emergency. To develop a home fire escape plan, identify two ways out of each room and designate a meeting place outside. Make sure the plan addresses any specific needs of household members. Also, consider that some people may not awaken to the sound of the smoke alarms and may require help to wake up. Having an escape plan that has been practiced in advance allows more time to get out if a fire occurs. And should a fire strike, those precious moments can mean the difference between life and death.

DEAR ABBY: Can you please settle a disagreement? I am a single guy who occasionally does some traveling with four friends. (Two couples.) Some think the hotel room should be split per person, and some think per bed. Which do you think is more fair? -- TRAVELING MAN

DEAR TRAVELING MAN: The room should be paid for by dividing the bill equally among the number of heads on the pillows. In your case, that would be a five-way split if all of you are sharing a room, or a three-way split if you are sharing a room with one couple.

DEAR ABBY: When filling out a job application, what would you write as the "Reason for Leaving" if you were fired? -- SANDRA IN STONE MOUNTAIN, GA.

DEAR SANDRA: You should write "personal reasons" on the application. During your interview if you are asked about it, under no circumstances should you lie or say anything bad about your former employer. Sometimes employment doesn't work out for the simple reason that there was a "personality conflict."

COLUMBUS DAY

In Spanish he is called Cristobal Colon, in Portuguese Cristovio Colombo and in Italian Cristoforo Colombo. Italian mariner and navigator Christopher Columbus was widely believed to be the first European to sail across the Atlantic Ocean and successfully land on the American continent. Born between August and October 1451, in Genoa, Italy, Columbus was the eldest son of Domenico Colombo, a wool-worker and small-scale merchant, and his wife, Susanna Fontanarossa; he had two younger brothers, Bartholomew and Diego. He received little formal education and was a largely self-taught man, later learning to read Latin and write Castilian.

Columbus began working at sea early on, and made his first considerable voyage, to the Aegean island of Chios, in 1475. A year later, he survived a shipwreck off Cape St. Vincent and swam ashore, after which he moved to Lisbon, Portugal, where his brother Bartholomew, an expert chart maker, was living. Both brothers worked as chartmakers, but Columbus already nurtured dreams of making his fortune at sea. In 1477, he sailed to England and Ireland, and possibly Iceland, with the Portuguese marine, and he was engaged as a sugar buyer in the Portuguese islands off Africa (the Azores, Cape Verde, and Madeira) by a Genoese mercantile firm. He met pilots and navigators who believed in the existence of islands farther west. It was at this time that he made his last visit to his native city, but he always remained a Genoese, never becoming a naturalized citizen of any other country.

Returning to Lisbon, he married the well-born Dona Filipa Perestrello e Moniz in 1479. Their son, Diego, was born in 1480. Felipa died in 1485, and Columbus later began a relationship with Beatriz Enríquez de Harana of Cordoba, with whom he had a second son, Ferdinand. (Columbus and Beatriz never married, but he provided for her in his will and legitimatized Ferdinand, in accordance with Castilian law.)

By the time he was 31 or 32, Columbus had become a master mariner in the Portuguese merchant service. It is thought by some that he was greatly influenced by his brother, Bartholomew, who may have accompanied Bartholomew Diaz on his voyage to the Cape of Good Hope, and by Martin Alonso Pinzon, the pilot who commanded the Pinta on the first voyage. Columbus was but one among many who believed one could reach land by sailing west.

By the mid-1480s, Columbus had become focused on his plans of discovery, chief among them the desire to discover a westward route to Asia. In 1484, he had asked King John II of Portugal to back his voyage west, but had been refused. The next year, he went to Spain with his young son, Diego, to seek the aid of Queen Isabella of Castile and her husband, King Ferdinand of Aragon. Though the Spanish monarchs at first rejected Columbus, they gave him a small annuity to live on, and he remained hopeful of convincing them. In January of 1492, after being twice rebuffed, Columbus obtained the support of Ferdinand and Isabella. The favorable response came directly after the fall of Granada, the last Moorish stronghold in Spain, which led Spanish Christians to believe they were close to eliminating the spread of Islam in southern Europe and beyond. Christian missionary zeal, as well as the desire to increase Spanish prominence in Europe over that of Portugal and the desire for gold and conquest, were the primary driving forces behind Columbus' historic voyage.

Columbus would make four voyages to the West Indies, but by the end of his final voyage, Columbus' health had deteriorated; he was suffering from arthritis as well as the aftereffects of a bout with malaria. With a small portion of the gold brought from Hispaniola, Columbus was able to live relatively comfortably in Seville for the last year of his life. He was emotionally diminished, however, and felt that the Spanish monarchs had failed to live up to their side of the agreement and provide him with New World property and gold, especially after Isabella's death. Columbus followed the court of King Ferdinand from Segovia to Salamanca to Vallodid seeking redress, but was rejected. He died in Vallodid on May 20, 1506. His remains were later moved to the Cathedral of Santo Domingo in Hispaniola, where they were laid with those of his son Diego. They were returned to Spain in 1899 and interred in Seville Cathedral.

Harvester tennis downed by Demons

By JORDAN REAGAN
Sports Editor

The Pampa Harvesters tennis team welcomed Dumas Saturday for their second meet with the Demons.

In a familiar outcome, the Harvesters were defeated 18-1 by Dumas, the same score as the first time the two teams faced off when opening district Sept. 18.

Also as in the Harvesters' district debut, Kevin Frels won the only match for Pampa, defeating Dumas' Riley Deshazo in #2 boys singles 6-3, 6-4.

Frels and doubles partner Jack Ware were defeated by Deshazo and Rafael Jurado 6-3, 6-2.

The JV team was defeated by Dumas 3-15, with Holly Gage picking up a win in girls singles, and the teams of Savannah Smith and Nikki Yamashita and Mikala Furgason and Erin Buck winning their doubles matches.

PJHS girls cross country remains undefeated

The Pampa Junior High cross country team had yet another successful run at West Texas A&M University this weekend.

The girls team continued thier winning streak and took first place with a 7-point lead over second place Borger.

Pampa brought eight junior high girls to compete with 183 runners, and three boys to run with 70.

The team will travel to Canyon again this weekend to run at Canyon High School in their last meet of the season.

Individual results from WTAMU are as follows:

Girls	Place	Time
Arin Rice	1	12:26
J'Cee Holmes	5	13:07
Kaitlynn Ramirez	7	13:25
Kendle Ramey	24	14:16

Carr helps Panthers beat winless Saints

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — David Carr momentarily feared his career was over when Will Smith twisted him to the turf on a bone-crunching sack.

Overcoming back pain that showed in the stiffness with which he walked from the locker room, Carr returned for the second half and made enough clutch throws to help Carolina come from behind to defeat the winless New Orleans Saints 16-13 on Sunday.

"It was like somebody was stabbing me in the back every time I threw the ball," said Carr, making his second straight start for Jake Delhomme, who hurt his throwing elbow.

Carr found Steve Smith for a game-tying, 17-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter, then hit Smith again to set up John Kasay's 52-yard winning field goal as time expired.

Describing the hit he took from Smith late in the first quarter, Carr said he felt as if every bone in his back popped.

DALLAS (AP) — Consider the Sooners revived.

Only a week after a second-half breakdown seemed to rob Oklahoma of its lofty goals for the season, the Sooners (5-1, 1-1 Big 12) are one giant step closer to erasing the bad memories of that 27-24 loss to Colorado out of their minds.

"It's still there, but we know that we've got a lot that we've got to do to erase that," tight end Jermaine Gresham said after catching two touchdown passes in the Sooners' 28-21 win over No. 23 Texas on Saturday.

Even as it trails Texas A&M (5-1, 2-0) by a game in the Big 12 standings, the South Division title still arguably runs through Norman. Oklahoma and Texas have combined to win the past eight Big 12 South titles, and the Aggies must come to Norman in three weeks to stay in first place.

And beyond that, the Sooners are back alive in the national championship picture after losses by Southern California, Wisconsin and Florida bumped them up to No. 6 in The Associated Press rankings and No. 5 in the other two polls in a college football season that has been turned on its head the past two weeks.

The key for Oklahoma was avoiding back-to-back losses in a Red River Rivalry game that was more like a double-elimination playoff game.

"We knew that was a must-win game," Gresham said.

Quarterback Sam Bradford rebounded after the first shaky performance of his young career, when he threw two tipped interceptions in the second half at Colorado the previous week. The redshirt freshman seemed unfazed by the big-game atmosphere of the rivalry played at the Cotton Bowl.

"He did a great job out there, the way he presented himself," receiver Juaquin Iglesias said. "I know my first OU-Texas game, I didn't act nearly as he did. It was going too fast for me out there.

"He stood in the pocket for us, he made a lot of plays for us and he's been doing what he's been doing since he started."

Surviving Texas wasn't the only hurdle for Bradford and the Sooners, though. Next up is a home game against No. 11 Missouri, which obliterated then-No. 25 Nebraska 41-6 on Saturday in its Big 12 opener.

The game will feature Bradford, the nation's top-rated passer, and Missouri's Chase Daniel, who ranks third in the nation with an average of 380 yards of total offense per game.

Venables said the key would be changing up defensive looks against Missouri's spread, no-huddle approach and limiting the Tigers' ability to run the ball.

"If they have success running the ball, we won't be able to stop the pass, I promise you," Venables said.

Coach Bob Stoops said tailback Allen Patrick, who sat out much of the second half against Texas, was not seriously injured and instead was suffering from cramps. Patrick ran 35 times for 157 yards last year in a 26-10 win against Missouri.

With Yanks' season on brink, Damon's homer rallies New York over Cleveland

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Torre knew it. Johnny Damon knew it. And the fans at Yankee Stadium certainly knew it, too.

With one more loss, Torre's run as manager might end after 12 championship-filled years.

When Roger Clemens was chased in the third inning and the Yankees fell behind by three runs, it appeared the end of an era was drawing near. Then, the Yankees awoke to save their season and perhaps Torre's job.

Damon lofted a go-ahead, three-run homer in the fifth inning, rookies Phil Hughes and Joba Chamberlain rescued the Rocket and the Yankees rallied past Cleveland 8-4 Sunday night, closing within 2-1 in their first-round AL playoff series.

"We all love Joe Torre, and we would love for him to win another championship," Damon said. "I think Joe Torre is a guy who commands a lot of respect. He's meant so much to the Yankee organization. And, you know, we get to play for him at least another day and, hopefully, longer."

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner blustered Saturday that Torre's hot seat was close to a boiling point. "I don't think we'd take him back if we don't win this series," he told The Record of New Jersey.

Torre was his usual stoic self before the game, and one sign read: "DO IT FOR JOE."

It sure looked grim for Torre when the Indians chased an injured Clemens in the third inning, building a 3-0 lead as Trot Nixon homered, and Ryan Garko and Jhonny Peralta drove in runs.

Damon had three hits and drove in four runs, starting the comeback with an RBI single in the third off former-Yankee Jake Westbrook. New York, which hadn't gotten back-to-back hits in the series, then strung together three opposite-field hits to left from Hideki Matsui, Robinson Cano and Melky Cabrera for a run in the fifth.

Damon worked the count to 2-0 against Westbrook and hit a sinker with no sink on a high arc to right. As it cleared the wall to put the Yankees ahead 5-3, Cano raised both hands in the air down the third-base line and jumped twice. Damon went into a trot, and the crowd of 56,358 leapt with him.

"It's great seeing the crowd go crazy," Damon said.

In a game that mirrored the Yankees' rebound from a 21-29 start, Cano added a bases-loaded RBI single in the sixth off Aaron Fultz. When a charging Nixon overran the ball in right field for an error, two more runs scored.

This time, the Yankees and Chamberlain weren't bugged — on Friday, he allowed the tying run to score when a swarm of flying insects distracted him in Cleveland.

"I was still taking them off today," Chamberlain said. "It was nice to be able to come in and see things."

In an unprecedented postseason of sweeps, all other division series ended in three-game wipeouts. But the Indians, at least for a night, were denied their first trip to the AL championship series since 1998.

Paul Byrd tries to close it out Monday night for the Indians, with the Yankees starting Game 1 loser Chien-Ming Wang on three days' rest.

"I feel like we made a statement in Game 1, and I feel like they made a statement here tonight, especially being down 3-0," said Byrd, 1-4 with a 4.82 ERA in his career against New York.

Kicker's career day leads Texans to 22-19 victory over winless Dolphins

Brown tied an NFL record with three field goals of more than 50 yards, including the winner from 57 yards with 1 second left, to lift the Houston Texans to a 22-19 victory over the Dolphins on Sunday.

Brown aggravated a sore heel on his non-kicking foot early in the game and took an injection at halftime to ease the pain. He booted four field goals in the second half, capped by his career-best on the second-to-last play.

The Texans (3-2) are off to the best five-game start in their short history.

"That's why I love playing the game, for situations like that," Brown said. "I just told myself to go out there and enjoy the moment, make sure you get enough on the ball, make sure you make really good contact."

The Dolphins (0-5), meanwhile, have concerns that go beyond their eighth straight loss.

Green left the field on a stretcher and was taken to a nearby hospital for observation. He was back with his teammates after the game, but coach Cam Cameron didn't know when the 37-year-old Green might return — or whether he might just consider retiring. He missed half of last season after the first concussion.

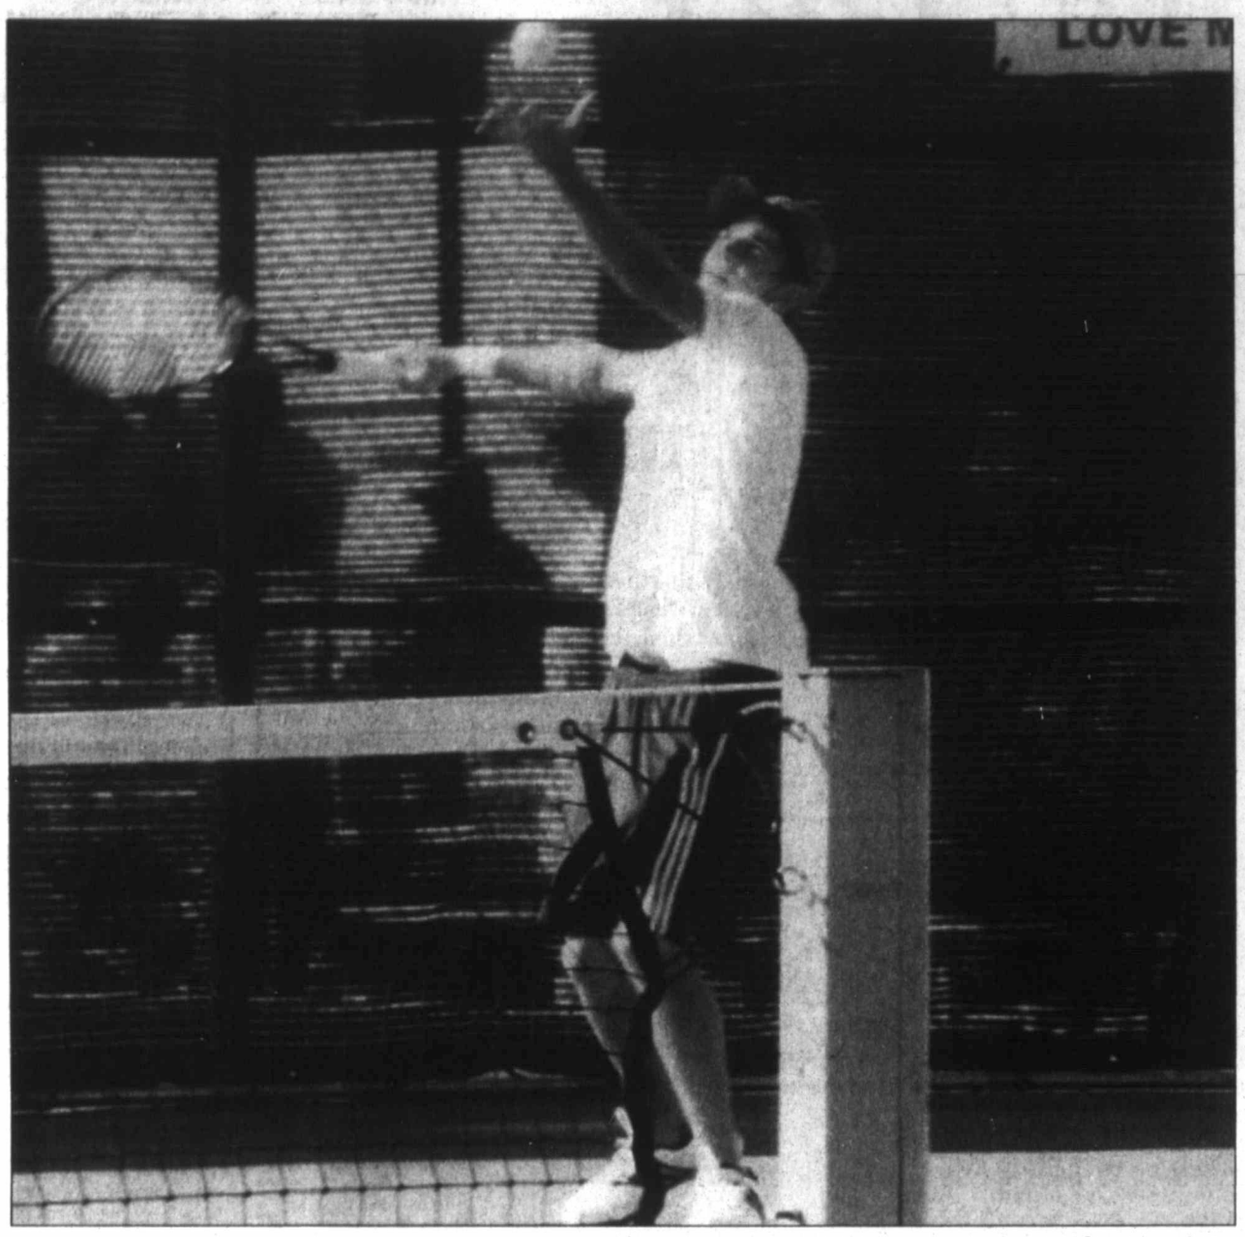

"Without getting into speculation," Cameron said, "that will all work itself out."

The scary hit had an ugly epilogue.

Johnson, a defensive tackle, stood over Green and taunted him after the play, drawing a 15-yard penalty.

"It was a malicious hit," Johnson said. "It was uncalled for. He's like the scarecrow. He wants to get courage while I wasn't looking and hit me in my knee instead of trying to hit me in my head. God don't like ugly, you know what I mean?"

Johnson was escorted back to the locker room about 20 minutes after the tirade to issue an apology, but still seemed more upset about the penalty itself than his reaction to the hit.

"We're not going to do that," Houston coach Gary Kubiak said. "That's not going to be accepted around here."

Cleo Lemon replaced Green and played decently in only his fifth game in four seasons, going 15 of 27 for 151 yards.

He guided the Dolphins to the Houston 38 in the fourth quarter, but the drive stalled with 1:40 left and Cameron opted to punt. Jay Feely, who kicked four field goals, tried to convince Cameron he could hit a 56-yarder, but Cameron shot him down.

"Of course, I'm not going to doubt it," Feely said. "I understood when the coach grabbed me and said, 'Hey, I got total confidence in you. But you've got to understand the situation in the game.'"

Kubiak had no such reservations when it was Brown's turn to try one more long kick.

"That's as impressive as I've ever seen," Kubiak said. "And then to put that on top of it, I'm kind of at a loss for words. It's special. I don't know if we'll ever see that again."

The Dolphins are off to their worst start since losing the first six to open the 2004 season. And now, they face a long stretch with their second-string quarterback.

"We will find the positives," Cameron said.

The Texans were far from flawless on Sunday. Schaub fumbled and threw an interception, and Houston couldn't finish drives all day, instead relying on Brown's leg.

Schaub was 20-of-34 for 294 yards, playing with a thigh bruise on his right leg.

His 24-yard pass to Owen Daniels got Houston to the 4-yard line midway through the fourth quarter. But the Texans settled for another field goal that tied it at 19 after a 2-yard gain by Ron Dayne and two incomplete passes.

Feely's 48-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter had put Miami back on top at 19-16.

Ronnie Brown had 23 carries for 114 yards to become just the second player in Dolphins history with 100 yards rushing in three straight games. Ricky Williams did it three times.

Last year's top draft pick, Houston's Mario Williams, got his third sack of the season. Texans receiver Jerome Mathis was placed on the injured reserve.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Oct. 9, 2007:

You might want to break many of your patterns. Success will head in your direction if you think through a goal, project or desire. At this point, your mind and heart will be connected. With that unity, you will be close to invincible. Often people drop too much responsibility on you. You need to incorporate new technology into your daily life. If you are single, scrutinize a love interest before taking the romantic plunge. A person might come along who is emotionally unavailable. You don't want to deal with that issue. If you are attached, schedule some weekends away together at favorite places. Let warmth in. LIBRA can be challenging.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Gracefully change gears midday. You might hope that a different interest will help make the day easier. You have many options, but "easy" is not one of them right now. Avoid losing your temper; the damage could be rough. Tonight: Sort through invitations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You will speak your mind even if others would prefer you didn't. A partner could be antagonistic, perhaps as part of a control game. Pull out and don't get into this battle. No one can win. Focus on your daily routine. Tonight: Find a stress-buster.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You might want to be playful and more direct with someone you really care about. This person, more so than many, appreciates your levity. Others react in ways you didn't anticipate. Be as direct as possible. Tonight: Pretend that it's still the weekend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Use the morning, when you have more spunk and get-up-and-go. Knowing when to back down might save the day. Others could easily be irritated, and you might feel bewildered. Don't act without some forethought. Tonight: Order in.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ You will feel a little more energized as the day ages. Nevertheless, challenges surround you regardless of which direction you head in. Avoid acting on your anger. Be honest with yourself and clear out negative feelings. Tonight: Hang out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You encounter an obstacle whether you want to or not. Pull back and take your time, especially with a family member or property investment. You might be irritated at the cost of realizing a goal. You need to let others know when you have had enough. Tonight: Pay bills first.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Midday, you might want to change gears or at least do something different. As you are responding to your inner voice, this change is excellent. Still, somebody you look up to might be quite critical. Listen but don't react. Tonight: Do your thing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Use the a.m. as if there is no tomorrow. You will like what emerges as a result. Whatever unfurls in the afternoon is best kept close to your chest. Someone could be very touchy. If possible, don't react. Tonight: Take some much needed personal time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Others might be depending on you a little too much for your taste. Know that you might not be able to change their habits, but you might want to revisit your attitude. A meeting in the afternoon proves to be worthwhile. Tonight: Find your friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Reach out for different and stronger answers. You might not always be on top of your game. The willingness to stretch and find answers earmarks your abilities. Take charge of a situation. Tonight: Out late.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ You might want a partner to dominate, even if you don't realize it yet. He or she needs to see the end results of his or her actions. Let this person take the blame if there is a boomerang. Backing away could be the smartest action. Tonight: Try a new restaurant.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Others certainly have control. True to form, you might want to toss in your interest and go in another direction. Evaluate carefully before allowing impulsiveness to take over. Someone makes an overture toward you. Tonight: Even if you don't agree, listen to a dear friend.
