More Than 600 Visitors At Road Houses Are Arrested

HAMMOND, N. J., Oct. 21. (US)—More than 600 persons were arrested early today when 35 state troopers under Captain Villa Carter raided a dozen roadhouses between Gloucester and Mount Ethrain. It was the largest and most spectacular raid ever staged in Southern New Jersey.

The hundreds of men and women prisoners, most of whom were patrons of the roadhouse, were taken to Camden in buses chartered by the state troopers and in private automobiles. All were arraigned before justices of the peace and held under $1000 bail on charges of violating the state liquor act. Two hundred of the prisoners were unable to furnish bail and went to jail.

G. O. P. AT SEA RASKOB WRITES

Indifference, Evasion And Deceit Are Charged

NEW YORK, Oct. 21. (AP)—John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman, in an open letter to Dr. Hubert Work, Republican, national chairman, made public at Democratic headquarters today, declared that the Republican party "has now become simply the prohibition party of the United States."

"I have noted a general call to arms to all your speakers, from Mr. Hoover down, since our demonstration that the issue of the policy of protection is no longer in politics," Mr. Raskob wrote. "I quite understand your perturbation. Without that issue, your party has only one permanent policy left. You now become simply the prohibition party of the United States."

Evasion Charged

Going into a discussion of Governor Smith's attitude toward the Underwood tariff and Mr. Hoover's attitude on the post-war wheat price, Raskob charged Work and other Republican leaders with deliberate misrepresentation of facts and with evasion of his challenges to prove the truth of their assertions.

He said the purpose of his first letter to Dr. Work, in which he offered to resign as national chairman and vote for Hoover if Dr. Work could prove that Governor Smith had endorsed the Underwood tariff, was "frankly to raise a question of your veracity."

"Your reply," he wrote, "contains neither proof nor retraction of, nor reference to, your assertion. I assume from this that you thus express indifference to the question which it was the purpose of my letter to raise.

Indifference Cited

"This is not the first occasion in this campaign in which you have led, and your speakers have followed, a course evincing a like indifference to the same virtue. You recently and publicly charged Senator Robinson with falsely asserting that Mr. Hoover had held down the price of wheat after the armistice. I promptly referred you to the cable in which Mr. Hoover himself had accepted responsibility for keeping down the price of wheat. You did not reply personally, but, almost immediately afterward, Senator Borah read to a farm audience in Minneapolis all the numbers of the correspondence of which this cable was the climax—all of which was irrelevant to the point in issue—but omitted the crucial cablegram which I had brought to your attention.

"I know of no other public document so deceitfully conceived as this speech of Senator Borah's."

On the tariff question, Mr. Raskob referred Dr. Work to Governor Smith's Louisville speech and said he desired to "commend it to your candidate as a much needed example of a man taking a definite stand on a political question."

"I can see no useful purpose in continuing the discussion between us," he concluded. "I am willing at any time to meet and discuss issues on accurate and clear-cut statements of fact, but I cannot do so on the basis of such misquotations and misstatements as have uniformly characterized your side of this correspondence."

Her talk here is the result of a talk she recently gave over the radio from a Fort Worth station. Several Wichita Falls women heard her speak, and the invitation was immediately extended to her to appear on the platform here for the Monday night rally.

The exact time of Congressman Williams' arrival had not been definitely announced Sunday night.

The stage will be filled Monday night with women who are working for the election of Gov. Alfred E. Smith in Wichita Falls and Wichita county.

STILL POPULAR

Thousands View Zep at Hangar Week After Arrival

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 21. (US)—If it were not for the exceptional orderliness, and the lack of frenzied din, you would have thought the Graf Zeppelin had just landed at Lakehurst today. More than 50,000 persons crowded the aviation field to pour through the hangar in a thin stream, and emerge into a sea of humanity, autos, trucks, buses and even airplanes on the other side.

They began arriving at dawn, and all through the crisp brightness of an almost perfect fall morning, men, women and children passed in an admiring line by the giant German dirigible which made the first successful commercial crossing of the Atlantic.

AL PROMISES TO SPEAK OUT

'Spokesman' To Get Axe If Smith Is Victor

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 21 (UP).—Gov. Alfred E. Smith will abolish the mysterious anonymity of the "White House spokesman" and will talk directly to the people every day if he is elected president, he announced today as his 11-car special train brought him back to Albany from his second and last political invasion of the West.

Smith said he would take the public into his confidence about the problems of state and would go about the country discussing the issues of government in the same way he is discussing them in this campaign.

"We have never had any kind of Republican candidates but silent ones, with the exception of Roosevelt, that I can remember," Smith said. "I should like to hear a president get up once in a while and say:

"'Now here is the condition, here is what you are up against, and here is my solution of it. Talk to your congressman and talk to your senator, and if he has not got a better one, tell him to follow me.'

"You get the people interested in the government," Smith said, "if you talk to them about it in a way they can understand.

"The Republican party in this campaign talks in glittering generalities about helping the farmer, about being a friend of the farmer—they are going to give him the protection of the tariff, when they know in their hearts that the tariff alone does not work for the farmer. They knew that four years ago. They do not do anything about it, they only talk about it.

"The same thing applies to prohibition. Hoover says it must be worked out constructively. What does that mean? You would not expect the candidate to say it ought to be worked out destructively."

Precipitation Light But Checks 'Drouth' In District

The temperature in Wichita Falls was slowly falling early Monday morning, having reached 52 degrees at 1 o'clock.

Wichita Falls' first "norther" swept into the city Sunday night on the heels of a light rain which interrupted the drouth and a day suggestive of winter was promised for Monday.

HOOVER GOES TO AL'S HOME

Republican Speaks Tonight In New York City

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21 (AP)—Herbert Hoover moved to an enemy stronghold tonight to deliver the last blow of his eastern campaign for the presidency. At Madison Square Garden, in the home town of his Democratic opponent, the Republican candidate will make his last speech east of the Mississippi river tomorrow night after a day spent with New York party leaders in mapping out strategy for the closing days of the drive.

Although New York city in the past has given Governor Smith large majorities, Republican leaders who have visited their standard bearer here during past weeks have expressed belief that Hoover will be able to trim down this margin enough for the upstate Republicans to deliver the electoral vote for the Republican party.

Some of them have said that many persons who supported the New York governor in past campaigns, would not vote for him for president and that these defections would materially cut down his total in New York city.

That the Republicans face a hard fight if they hope to carry the state, has been conceded.

SUPREME PRICE ASKED LAD FOR SHOOK DEATHS

Young Defendant Is Found Guilty Of Part In Dual Killing

SECOND DEATH VOTED

Davis Gets Same Verdict Given Clyde Thompson At Eastland

EASTLAND, Texas, Oct. 21 (AP).—Two 17-year-old Eastland county youths, sentenced to death in the electric chair within five days of each other, occupied adjoining jail cells tonight.

Tom Davis was the second to hear the death sentence pronounced against him.

A jury which began deliberating late yesterday found him guilty on a charge of the murder of Lucian Shook last month near Leeray and fixed the supreme penalty. Clyde Thompson, his companion, was given death for the same crime Tuesday night.

Cases Appealed

Both sentences were appealed.

Lucian Shook and his brother, Leon, both in their teens, were shot and beaten to death a short distance from their cabin in the oil fields. Thompson and Davis, arrested the next day, signed statements.

Woodrow Wilson Davis, 12, brother of Tom, was indicted for murder but later was granted immunity that he might testify in trials of the two older boys.

While Thompson's trial lasted only two days, defense counsel sought longer for Davis.

The defense also had filed a motion for a suspended sentence in event of conviction.

Boy Hides Face

Davis' face was hidden in a handkerchief when the jury announced its verdict. His emotion, if any, was hidden. Officers supported him as he stumbled from the court room. His mother and father and brother heard the sentence pronounced.

Throughout Davis' trial his counsel sought to show he was sub-normal mentally, and the unwilling tool of Thompson. The defendant declared that the statement he had given authorities consisted largely of what he had been told by Thompson.

Wichita Falls will be host to the president of the world's greatest advertising organization, the International Advertising association, when C. C. Younggreen of Milwaukee speaks at the convention of the tenth district of the association here Tuesday.

Mr. Younggreen is a member of Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen, Inc., of Milwaukee, one of the largest advertising agencies in the Northwest, and was elevated to the presidency of the I. A. A. at the last convention at Detroit in July. In one way, the visit of Mr. Younggreen here will be in the manner of a Texan returning home, as he was stationed at the Fort Worth flying field during part of the World war, and later served as advertising councilor for a Texas oil syndicate.

A legion of bold little placards, autocratically announcing "No solicitors allowed," started Mr. Younggreen in the advertising profession when he was 21 and just out of college. He became an advertising solicitor for a publisher in Topeka, Kan., and continued in the profession.

Edward St. Albans Dies on Texas Mail Plane; Borglum's Name Given

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 21. (AP)—Edward St. Albans, 50, oil operator of Laredo, Texas, and husband of Mary St. Albans, noted writer of fiction, died in an airplane at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon while being rushed to a San Antonio hospital after hemorrhage of the stomach at Laredo.

Confusion in reports here led to the belief that the dying man was Gutzon Borglum, an internationally prominent sculptor and artist. At the time of the report, Borglum was on a train speeding toward San Antonio from Raleigh, N. C., which strengthened the report.

Mary St. Albans, who writes under the pen name of Mary White, accompanied her husband from Laredo in the regular air mail plane between Laredo and San Antonio. She did not know that her husband was dead until the body had been taken from the plane at Winburn field near here and taken to the city.

Wayne Parks, manager of Winburn field, said he had been asked to dispatch a plane to Laredo to bring "Borglum" back to the city. He said a close friend of the Borglums, in reporting that the sculptor was ill, so described the illness that it was apparent the friend was speaking of St. Albans.

TOURISTS DARE JUNGLE ROADS

Intrepid Pair Reaches Highway System

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 21. (US)—Augustin A. Bartolini and Nuncio Ciolfi, hailing from the city of Buenos Aires in a little old Ford of antedeluvian vintage, do not need a Pan-American automobile highway to get their flivver to the city of their dreams, New York.

They have just reached the southern head of what may be called the North American good roads system. At Pijijiapam, state of Chiapas, where Bartolini and Ciolfi are taking a much-deserved rest, begins one of the passably good highways of gravel which some miles distant connects with Mexico's national boulevards.

Between Mexico City and Laredo the Argentinians will have good roads, though not all of them as yet are paved. Beyond Laredo all of their troubles will be behind them. If on the way north it should be their luck to have some bandits catch up with them, the appearance of their tin Lizzie is bound to soften the heart of the cavaliers of the road.

So far as they could these joyriders used the good roads of Argentina. For quite a distance they traveled on country roads and finally trails were all that was left them. When these ended the open spaces along beaches, rivers and over jungle meadows were taken to. Great mountain ranges were traversed in a similar manner, and often it was a case of pushing the old thing along instead of riding in it.

The intrepid tourists are in tiptop physical condition, and now that the worst is over their one great desire is to get a glimpse of the famous Broadway.

Production Of Cheese Plant Falls Below Demand As Milk Supply Drops

The wide open market for milk in Wichita Falls was illustrated Sunday by C. L. Teissler, manager of the Kraft Cheese company plant, who said that cheese is being shipped in here from other Kraft plants to supply the local cheese demand.

"We are receiving such a small quantity of milk now that we are unable to supply the local demand for Kraft cheese," said Mr. Teissler.

"Of course, the long dry spell is mainly responsible for this condition.

"However, it is food for thought on the part of farmers and those owning small tracts near town, for they may by keeping a few cows add considerably to their income from milk. The demand for milk at the Kraft plant never diminishes. We would be very glad to receive 25 times the amount of milk we are now receiving at the plant."

said, "but I don't suppose I would have been in advertising at all if it hadn't been for those signs. Maybe that sounds foolish, but I was young and I saw a future in advertising, a future of little battles and struggles, epitomized in those signs."

At Kansas university Mr. Younggreen played the leads for the dramatic society, published the football programs, was head of the Y. M. C. A., and did all the many other things that make for importance in college.

When the United States declared war he was commissioned from Washington as a lieutenant of aviation and attached to the Royal Flying corps of Canada. After the armistice, mustered out as a captain of aviation, he went to Racine as sales promotion manager for the J. I. Case Plow Works company, and left Racine five years later for his present position.

In Milwaukee, Mr. Younggreen is a prominent leader in the civic and social life of the city. When Milwaukee plans a welcome, as to a trans-oceanic flier, Charlie Younggreen superintends it with pride and efficiency which has earned him the title "Milwaukee's Grover Whalen." He is vice commander of his local post of the American Legion a member of many clubs and organizations, and a fair golf player.

Following his election to the presidency of the I. A. A., he was guest of honor at a testimonial dinner given by the Advertising club of Milwaukee, in co-operation with a citizens' committee made up of city and state officials, including Governor Zimmerman, one of the chief speakers at the banquet.

Mr. Younggreen is scheduled to speak here Tuesday afternoon at 2:40 o'clock on the "Future of Advertising."

Ballard To Open New Dance Club

Announcement of the opening of a new dancing club on the Henrietta road one-half mile from the city was made Sunday by R. L. Ballard. Lease for the building has been signed, Mr. Ballard said, and preparations completed for the first dance Tuesday night. The dances will be given each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday night through the winter, it was stated.

Ballard's dance orchestra will furnish music for the affairs. Receipts for the first week of the new enterprise will be donated to the Democratic club here, Mr. Ballard stated.

ADDRESSES

MRS. WILLIAM D. MOORE

OF DENTON

AND

HON. GUINN WILLIAMS

Congressman of This District

The Great, Underlying Issue:

"DEMOCRACY and AMERICANISM

VS.

CORRUPTION and INTOLERANCE"

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY—ITS ORIGIN AND HISTORY The Federalists—guilty of open treason and disloyalty to the new flag—despised and repudiated by the people—forced to select a new party alias—that America might forget a hateful effort to restore autocratic rule—styled themselves REPUBLICANS.

For years denied the public confidence—without influence—helpless—shunned by the intelligence and patriotism of America—then came the approach of the war between the States. Then—hatred, intolerance, and sectionalism, seeking an alliance by which it might break down the constitutional obstacle which prevented a minority from overriding the will of a majority—enlisted under the banner of republicanism.

Thus recruited—bargaining governmental favors for party support—espousing no ideal or principle of democracy—licensing the East and North to levy tribute on the the West and South—prostituting and subverting the general interest of the people and the country to party welfare—REPUBLICANISM HAS SUPPLANTED AMERICANISM FOR NEARLY SEVENTY YEARS.

AGAIN EXPOSED—AGAIN CONVICTED OF TREASON AND DISLOYALTY TO THE PEOPLE—ONCE MORE REPUDIATED AND REJECTED BY THE INTELLIGENCE AND PATRIOTISM OF AMERICA—DESERTED BY THOUSANDS in every State of the Union—the ex-Federalists appeal once more to HATRED, BIGOTRY AND INTOLERANCE—to recruit their shattered ranks—AND SO HATEFUL THEIR REGIME—SO NOTORIOUS THEIR SHAMELESS BETRAYAL OF THE PUBLIC CONFIDENCE—they must go abroad for those replacements so essential to any victory on November 6—THEY HAVE COME TO THE SOUTHLAND FOR THOSE RECRUITS—THE SAME SOUTHLAND THEY SCORNED AND INSULTED—THE SAME SOUTHLAND REGARDED AS A CAPTURED PROVINCE DURING ALL THESE YEARS—THE SAME SOUTHLAND WHOSE FORCED TRIBUTE HAS FILLED THEIR PARTY COFFERS SINCE 1865—AFTER INJURY—INSULT—Religious hatred and intolerance may forget—but the intelligence and the patriotism of the Southland—will remain true to tradition—to the principles of that party which has been steadfast in victory and in defeat—to the true ideals of democracy and Americanism.

By your presence show yourself to be numbered among the faithful. Come out. Support your party in this National crisis. TELL THE WORLD YOU BELIEVE IN THE PRINCIPLE OF RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

Every open minded person is heartily welcome to our meeting. We want you to hear the real facts in this campaign.

"Twilight In Gypsyland" To Present Leading Musicians Of City Nov. 5

One of the most important musical events of the season will be staged in the Woman's Forum when "Twilight in Gypsyland," a gorgeous musical extravaganza, will be presented Monday afternoon and night, Nov. 5. A score of Wichita Falls' most prominent vocalists and musicians with a chorus of 60 voices chosen from numerous choral organization of the city will be heard.

Proceeds from the entertainment will go to the building fund of the Woman's Forum.

Treat for Music Lovers

"Twilight in Gypsyland" is not an operetta and it is not a revue, but an elaborate presentation of enchanting gypsy melodies for solo, trio, quartet and ensemble voices with beautiful costumes and scenic and lighting effects. Rehearsals for the show have been in progress for several weeks under the direction of Mrs. Lois Parker, and everything is in readiness for the production.

All music lovers, it is said, will find something to their liking in "Twilight in Gypsyland," which runs the gamut in vagrant music lore ranging from selections ranging from from Verdi's gypsy opera, "Il Trovatore" to lilting musical comedies and tuneful ensemble pieces.

With the exception of two, all of the singers who will appear in the production are Wichita Falls artists. These are Carlenton Bowman, baritone of Denver, Colo., and formerly of Wichita Falls, and Fitzhugh Crain, tenor, formerly of Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. Bowman is coming to Wichita Falls after a northern concert engagement as a courtesy to the Woman's Forum. He will be remembered as one of the city's leading singers before moving to Denver some years ago to continue his studies for grand opera.

Features of Program

The program will present the following features:

Prologue by Miss Joline Woods.

Hola chorus followed by "Gypsy Band of Dreams," (Bliss), Miss Modina Howell, Mrs. C. N. Cameron, Miss Katherine Sullivan and Miss Nina Baker.

O' These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (US).—A man at dinner looked bored to death. A lady whose gay spirit even that party couldn't dampen insisted upon talking to him.

"Are you married?" she purred.

"I'm not," said the man, shortly.

"You're such a nice man," said the silly thing, "it's strange you never married!"

After listening to her for another moment the man added: "I wish my father never had."

"I wonder why I'm not popular?" asked a girl with good looks, money, education and intelligence.

The two sweet things with whom she was lunching said: "My dear—you are. We all adore you!"

But when she left to keep an engagement, the girls talked it over. "I'll tell you why she isn't popular," said one of them, "no matter where she is, or who she is with, or what the topic of conversation, she always wants to give the impression that she knows more than anybody, about everything. She wants everybody else to feel hopelessly ignorant.

"I knew a man like that once," said the other girl, "and no one ever wanted him at a party. He was the loneliest soul I knew."

Mrs. Foster Welch of Southampton, returning to England, says that in America the men think too much of the women and the women too little of the men. "The American women take all the courtesy and genorosity of the man as if it was their right," says she.

They are a convincing lot. If they didn't make the men think it was their right, they wouldn't get it.

And if you don't think the American women are the best looking, best dressed, best cared for women in the world, read this statement issued in Chicago by the beauty specialists in convention there:

"American women spend $3,472 a second to be beautiful.

"In one year 17,856,000 boxes of rouge were used.

"In one year the women bought 55,047,000 jars of cold cream.

"The talcum used weighed about 60,000 tons.

A California woman got a divorce because her husband read nothing but detective stories. She was a highbrow and admitted it right out in court. He said he was too ignorant to appreciate her kind of literature.

If she is hunting a man who doesn't like detective stories better than highbrow literature, she better borrow Diogenes' lantern.

An Omaha deb was within three days of the marital noose when she fled and left the man and the recipients of the wedding invitations without an explanation. That was several years ago. The other day she met a man she used to know in college, who, it is quite evident, knew her. They met Tuesday and Thursday they eloped and were married.

It's a mistake to give a woman too much time to think. And it's a mistake to ask her. Tell her.

Are You Run Down, Weak, Nervous?

To have plenty of firm flesh and the ability to do a big day's work and feel "like a two-year old" at night, you must eat three good meals a day, relish your food and properly digest it. If you can't eat, can't sleep, can't work, just take a teaspoonful of Tanlac before meals.

Mr. Joseph A. Culver, of 812 S. Main St., Muskogee, Okla., says: "I was a nervous wreck and forced myself to work and eat. I felt like quitting work before the day was up. On taking Tanlac, my appetite picked up so I could eat anything, soon slept well and gained 10 lbs."

Tanlac is wonderful for indigestion and constipation—gas, pains, nausea, dizziness and headaches. It brings back lost appetite, helps you digest your food, and gain strength and weight. It contains no mineral drugs; it is made of roots, barks and herbs, nature's own medicines for the sick. The cost is less than 2 cents a dose. Get a bottle from your druggist. EXPERTS GIVE CAKE RECIPES

Mrs. Chitwood To Explain Fundamentals Of Art

Editor's Note: Ida M. Chitwood, author of the article below, is one of the best known culinary experts in the country. She is to open the Record News and Daily Times Cooking school at the Memorial auditorium Monday, offering to the housewife of Wichita Falls a series of lectures and cooking demonstrations lasting for four days.

IDA M. CHITWOOD
Noted Culinary Expert

Have you ever wondered where all the cake recipes came from? Every cook book you look over has a chapter on cakes and each recipe looks different. But if you study these carefully, you will find that they are not so different after all, and that they are really variations of two kinds of cakes—those made with shortening and those made without shortening—and if we learn the general method of mixing these two kinds of cake, which we shall in the Cooking school, it will be easy to follow all recipes.

Use of Shortening

Cakes made with shortening are possibly the most popular, so let us first discuss the rules for mixing them. Step number one consists of blending together the shortening and sugar. If this is dohe thoroughly, the texture of the cake will not be grainy. This process is called "creaming" and is done by pressing the shortening and sugar against the sides of a bowl with the back of a wooden or metal mixing spoon until the mixture is of a smooth creamy consistency. Next the eggs are added. After the eggs are well mixed in, the flour is measured, sifted and mixed with the other dry ingredients such as salt, baking powder and spices. This flour mixture is then added to the sugar mixture, but it is not all put in at once. First some of the flour goes into mixing bowl; then some of the milk called for by the recipe, and after each addition, the ingredients in the bowl are beaten well. When all the flour and milk are in, the batter should have a final beating, lasing anywhere from one minute for plain cake to three minutes for the richer ones. When not beaten long enough, the cake has a porous open texture, with large holes; on the other hand, too much beating makes a close grained, tough cake.

The method for mixing the other kind of cake—those without shortening—starts by separating the yolks from the whites of the eggs. For sponge cake the yolks are beaten until thick, then the sugar added gradually and last the beaten whites, flour and flavoring are folded in.

Sponge and angel cakes require a slower oven than cakes made with shortening—from 320 to 340 degrees—depending upon the depth of the pan in which they are baked.

For baking any kind of cake an oven thermometer should be used instead of trusing to the "feel" of an oven. We are not all equally sensitive to the heat, and what may feel "slow" to one person may feel "medium" to another. An accurate temperature for baking cakes is next in importance to careful measurements of the ingredients which go into it. A cake baked in too slow an oven rises over the sides of the pan and has a coarse open texture, while one baked in too hot an oven becomes solid and close-grained with a hard crust.

Cakes should be allowed to cool on a wire cooler so that air can circulate around them. When turned out on a bread board or other solid surface, moisture condenses and makes them wet and sticky.

As soon as cake is cooled it may be frosted or "iced" and put away in a tin cake box in a cool place. The care of cakes after baking is an important factor in their keeping—the longer they are exposed to the air, the more quickly the cake dries out.

Of cakes made with shortening, the plainer ones should be used the same day or at least by the day following. Layer cakes which are put together with soft "fillings," however, and the richer cakes made with more shortening and more eggs, will keep fresh for several days.

Hints to Housewife

There are some salient points in cake making that it is well always to bear in mind—

Use level measurements.

Sift flour before measuring.

Gather all ingredients together and grease your cake pan before starting to mix your cake.

Cream shortening and sugar together thoroughly. On this depends the good textured cake.

Beat cake batter from one to three minutes after all ingredients are in. Rich cakes require longer beating than plain cakes.

Don't let cake batter stand around after mixing. Have oven at correct temperature and put cake in at once.

When baking without a thermometer or oven regulator, divide the baking time into quarters:

1st quarter—Cake batter should rise.

2nd quarter—Cake should continue to rise and begin to brown.

3rd quarter—Rising should be completed and cake continue to brown.

4th quarter—Cake should settle and shrink from pan.

When cake is done, it will spring back when pressed lightly with the finger.

It shrinks from the sides of the pan.

Cool cake quickly—on wire rack—but do not let it dry out.

Frost cake as soon as cool.

Keep left-over egg whites covered and in a cool place so that they will not dry out.

Plan to use up plain cakes quickly as they become stale sooner than rich cakes made with plenty of eggs and shortening.

Dorinda's Diary

THE DUTY OF PARENTS

It is hard to make children behave,
It is hard to make children obey,
It's a difficult thing to be grave,
There are many harsh words we must say;
Yet, sooner or later, we find
We must often be stern to be kind.

It is hard to refuse when they plead,
It's always much easier to give,
But children ask more than they need,
And will just as long as they live;
And the parent is worse than the child
Who permits little feet to run wild.

It takes courage and strength to say "No"
When "Yes" is the pleasanter word,
But to give what we shouldn't bestow
Is wicked as well as absurd;
Far better a few tears today,
Than many to shed when we're gray.

We're not good to the child when we give
What we know is no good for his years,
If we've thought for the life he must live
We must sprinkle our love with his tears;
To our task we must be reconciled:
It's not easy to bring up a child.

HE was a little fellow about 4 years old. I watched his mother give him the bottle of highly colored, red candy—because he cried for it. She had already given him bananas, apples, oranges and chocolate candy, for the same reason. Every time the "butch" went through the car he stopped at the seat where the little boy sat with his mother and the same scene was enacted: She would tell him he couldn't have whatever it was he wanted, he would say "why?", she would say, "just because," he would start shrieking, kicking and crying and she would buy it and he would sit back and start eating.

Because I had known his mother since she was a little girl and loved her and the little boy too, I got up, dressed hurriedly and went to them when the whole car had been aroused by his screams of pain, as his stomach rebelled at its load—at some hour in the night. He clung to me and looked into my face with frightened eyes as the doctor, who had been a passenger in the same Pullman all day and who had watched the same scenes I had, thumped and felt over the hot little body. "Pity it isn't his mother instead of him," said the doctor to me, "a woman who has no more sense than to let a child have all the things he has eaten isn't fit to have a child," and he glanced scornfully at the mother, who sat weeping.

It was so much easier to give him what he cried for than to be bothered to tell him why it wasn't good for him to have it, and to be bothered with taking him into the dressing room and there, away from others, having it out with him. "We must often be stern to be kind," but it takes time. "It is hard to refuse when they plead," but it is harder to face the consequences if we give in to their pleadings. "We must sprinkle our love with his tears." We must love him enough to say "No." And if we say "No" we must give him a reason for it and then stay by it. "Just because" to a child when he asks why he can't do this or have that is an insult to his intelligence.

Some mothers say "No" and then look the other way when he takes it, to keep from having to stop whatever they are doing long enough to take it away from him and tell him why it isn't good for him to have it. He soon gets to the place where he takes anything he wants, no matter to whom it belongs . . I have seen Charlie twice since the night he kept a Pullman full of people awake after having his way about what he ate. The first time he had just received a suspended sentence to the reformatory for taking a neighbor's car in which to take a trip after his father had locked him up to keep him from taking it. His mother was in a sanitarium from the shock, although most any one could have prepared her for it any time during the years up to the night he took the car. The last time I saw him he sat cowed and white in the Dallas jail, lifting his sick, frightened eyes to mine much like he did the night on the train when he was so ill.

"OH, CHARLIE, CHARLIE, why did you do it?" I asked him, for this time he and two other boys had held up and robbed a man on the highway, and both father and mother were too sick from shock to visit him and I had gone out of pity for them all. "I don't know," he said . . . "only I needed money and dad wouldn't give it to me." . . . . "Why didn't you go to work?" I asked this boy who had never been required to do a lick of work. "I don't know what I could have done," said he, and burst into tears, and I did too, for I knew he had been given everything except the desire and strength of character to do something for himself . . . "It takes courage and strength to say "no!" And it gives courage and strength to the child that has "No" said to it.

I'LL have a nice, quiet time the rest of the week, for Jezica is as mad as hops at me and she'll stay mad until Monday afternoon at least, when she'll have to phone to see if John, our mutual yard man, will be over Tuesday. She knows he will, but she has gotten into the habit of calling and asking, and her habits are as fixed as the moon. She boasts that she never changes her mind, so naturally, she never changes her habits. It was about that very thing she got so furious at me. . . It was Thursday morning when that peppy young "norther" was going 'round bracing up all those left limp by the continued hot weather.

Jezica had phoned eerly that morning and asked me to go to town with her, but I told her I had to clean house, which I fully intended doing until that frisky young "norther" came galloping in. I had put my broom down and was standing at the window watching all the young trees dancing with the "norther," when, suddenly, I heard the sound of wild geese right over the house and I decided right then there'd be no house cleaned that day. By the time I got outside the geese made a silver wedge against a far sky, but I struck right out after them, with the young "norther" lifting me up, occasionally, right into their midst. I was just beginning to ask questions of a little goosey, white around the mouth from flying so far when Jezica hailed me from terra-firma, "Dorinda! I thought you were going to clean house today." I made a hole in the blue sky and sat down in it with the tired little goose in my lap, thinking Jezica would see three was a crowd and go on to get out of the rush, but not Jezica!

"Don't look any dumber than you are, Dorinda, just tell me why you told me you were going to clean house and then get out and chase all over the country," said Jezica. "Well, I changed my mind," said the lady in the hole in the sky, while she strove frantically to hold the little goose which was struggling to rejoin its mates growing shadowy in the distance. Jezica looked up at me. "I have my opinion," said she, "of people who are always changing their minds; inconsistent, I call it. Inconsistent!" She fairly shouted the last word, and being out of her reach and way above her, I did something I had always wanted to do—I sassed her and argued with her!

"There is no one who is consistent that isn't an old mossback or a stick-in-the-mud," says I, "and you people who never change your minds, and never make mistakes, never grow, for we learn from our mistakes and grow when we change our minds!" . . . The little goose struggled free from my arms and circled over my head long enough to say, "Goodbye, Dorinda! I am glad I have met a bigger goose than I. Don't you know to sass and argue with people you must get down on their level." . . . I watched until the little goose was out of sight. . . I like little geese. . . . Jezica was looking rather astonished, as we all do when a worm turns, but it takes more than astonishment to shake Jezica. Even when I dropped from the sky like a blazing rocket and jumped up and down on the seat of her car, to show her how mad I was being called down from "gadding in the sky," she went right on from where she had left off.

"Inconsistent, I call it. Just like you were about Mrs. 'So and So.' Once you couldn't stand her and now you like her." She took her hands off the steering wheel, folded her arms and looked at me with that Now-Answer-That air. "I don't see that there is any comparison in changing my mind about a woman you had prejudiced me against and changing my mind about going to town with you, but since you've mentioned it, something happened to change my mind in both instances," I answered. "I happened to be thrown with Mrs. 'So and So' and found she had many fine qualities which I would never have known she had if I hadn't been thrown with her. What did you want me to do? Go on disliking her even though I have changed my opinion about what sort of woman she is? . . . Most of the women in this town I have disliked, I did through prejudice from things you have told me."

From Jezica: "Prejudice! Who was talking about prejudice? I was talking about inconsistency. About you telling me you were going to clean house and then in 30 minutes finding you a mile from home . . ." I broke in on her in a voice that would have done justice to an auctioneer, so bland and forceable it was: "You can't talk about inconsistency without thinking of consistency, your own that you rave so much over, your boast that you are consistent and never change your mind, yet that is prejudice. If you would wipe your prejudices away you would see many reasons for changing your mind." Jezica tried to break in several times, but this was my first time to ever broadcast, so I sat back and opened my mouth and let all those who wanted to listen in do so.

"This is a changing world, my dear Jezica," says I, my voice growing smooth and oily as I realized I had her at my mercy for once, "why should our minds be stationary and grow rusty? You might as well keep your body from outgrowing the clothes you wore as a child as to try to keep your mind from outgrowing certain ideas you once possessed. Webster gives as the definition for consistency, 'a degree of density' . . . clever of old Daniel to put that in. It is just the right definition for some of the consistency you are forever throwing in my face." Jezica was sputtering something at me and trying to start the car, but I sat up on the back of the seat, looked up at the sky from whence I had fallen and went right on, although a crowd was following us listening to the words of wisdom falling from my once silent lips.

"'Consistency thou art a jewel,' some one has said," I continued. "Even so, and 'consistency thou art a fuel,' a fuel to feed the flame of 'blah' and vanity. Consistency is a fuel that keeps the fires of bigotry burning. A fuel that sizzles under old opinions and makes ashes that smother new and enlightening ideas. Consistency is the fuel that makes a smoke that blinds our eyes to new truths, to new beauty, to new friendships. It is the fuel that burns out sympathy, tolerance and love. . . ."

I was just going good when Jezica drove up in front of my house and stopped. I stepped out on the running board with some parting words on the end of my tongue, but she fixed me with a cold eye and said: "If you are through making a fool of yourself I would like for you to tell me where you went after telling me you were going to clean house." . . . Oh, Jezica, all my words I strung together for your special benefit you scatter with the same old gesture. . . If I had told her I was running with a young "norther" after a wedge of silver that finally dissolved into the sky, she would have been just as mad, so I just didn't answer her, but walked haughtily to the door and, slamming it in her face, I turned and confronted the broom that was leaning exactly where I left it, but singing,

"Geese may come and geese may go,
But cleaning goes on, forever."

And says I to myself, as I kicked the broom viciously on the ankle, "Why is it in this changing world, when you go off and leave a dirty house you come back and find it still dirty?" —DORINDA.

Bourland Speaker At Farm Banquet

WELLINGTON, Texas, Oct. 21.—A number of progressive farmers of Collingsworth county were the guests of honor at an informal banquet given here Wednesday night by the Wellington chamber of commerce at which Andy Bourland of Vernon, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, was the principal speaker.

Bourland urged the farmers of this section to give their support to the road bond election which is now before the people of Collingsworth county, assuring them that a paved highway running across the county would be of untold benefit to them.

S. R. Pinkston, president of the Wellington chamber of commerce, said the purpose of the banquet was to get a number of representative farmers together that they might become better acquainted with the real purposes of the chamber of commerce.

Other speakers at the banquet were Homer D. Wade of Stamford, manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce; L. F. Sheffy of Canyon; J. E. Biggs of Amarillo and C. L. Geesey of Wellington.

As the Day follows the Night

AS SURELY as the day follows the night, Wichita Falls stands upon the threshold of an era of industrial development which will be as thrilling and as picturesque as has been the past history of this remarkable city.

Sometimes the most worth-while things are the least obvious. It seems to have been so in the case of Wichita Falls. In the outset there was very little to recommend this location as one peculiarly fitted for the building of a great metropolitan center. Men were attracted to this section of Texas, however, whose vision was far-reaching. They foresaw that Wichita Falls was destined to become a great city.

Accordingly they instituted a program of foundational industrial work which required the greatest courage and fortitude to carry forward. These men pioneered industrial Wichita. Today their efforts are gloriously in evidence. On every hand the force of their determined optimism is felt. National recognition of the correctness of their forecast, made a quarter of a century ago, is daily being given. They have laid the foundation of a mighty city.

This heritage they are tendering to a new generation, whose capacity for going forward with it is reflected in today's sound developments.

The TEXAS ELECTRIC SERVICE COMPANY has had a part in Wichita Falls' development since 1914. And this Company feels that it partakes fully of the spirit of Wichita Falls, that it has an understanding of the needs of this city and its surrounding territory which enables it to plan its future along the most constructive lines of helpfulness to this great wealth-producing area.

Woman Wonders Why Mothers Do Not Leave Home More Often

Nobody Asks Why Wives Leave Home, but the Wonder of It Is That More of Them Don't—For Home to Mother Is Just One Long Round of Toil, With No Thanks From Hubby at the End of It.

A woman correspondent writes: "I often read about 'Why Girls Leave Home' and 'Why Husbands Stray From Their Own Firesides," but nobody ever displays the slightest interest in 'Why Mother Leaves Home.' Mother is a fixture that nobody takes for granted will stay put. She is not supposed to up and leave, and if she does a very howl of horror goes up.

"You never hear any one say: 'Why, I don't blame her! Look what she had to put up with! Flesh and blood couldn't bear it.' It is always: 'Imagine Mrs. Stay-at-Home running away like that! Surely her husband will never take her back. Think of her leaving her children—mere babies! How can a mother do a thing like that?'

"So we have our Mrs. Stay-at-Home cleaning, scrubbing, sewing, baking, washing, ironing, shopping, cooking, bathing babies, washing dirty faces and hands, changing torn stockings, dresses and jumpers, bandaging cuts and bruises, answering a hundred and one questions, putting on clean dresses and suits, only to have to change them again in an hour, answering the eternal call of M-o-other.

"And then comes Father. But home to him is a place to vent his ill humor. "Where is my shirt, Sadie? Where is that tie? If you would only leave things where I put them I could find them." Sadie puts down the baby, stops to stir the stew, opens the oven door to see if her biscuits are done, stoops to pick up the shirt he has just removed and finds under it the shirt and tie he asked for.

"Why does mother leave home? Heavens and earth, how comes it she stays there as long as she does? Many a time have I felt like packing up and making a swift getaway. The only thing that has kept me is—I can't leave my babies and I can't take them away from their daddy! But I gave away my suitcase so I would not be tempted beyond my strength some day.

"When we were first married hubby just loved to help me with the housework. He would put on the percolator in the morning so I could dress in peace and he would help me wipe the dishes in the evening. But after our first baby came he fell off, and now, when we have two babies and I need a little help, he is too tired to lend a hand or he has an appointment or there is a picture he would like to see at the corner show.

"No sympathy from father. Instead: 'All you have to do around here is the housework, and to hear the way you carry on one would think you worked yourself to death. If you did anything, I'd say nothing.'

"Well, father, if housework and taking care of the kids isn't work, why do you object to doing it for a few minutes when I ask you to give me a little relief?"

"' Well,' says father, 'you can go gadding all day long. 'Sure I can, with a little toddler hanging to my skirts and a baby in my arms and a bagful of sterilized milk also on my arm and both children crying and fretting because they are out of their accustomed environment and missing their nap time. Great fun, that!'

"Perhaps once a month father takes us to the movies and I stand in the lobby with the baby because she behaves better there. By the time the picture is half over Buddy is out there, too. Father enjoys the picture while I watch the youngsters, and he pats himself on the back as we go home for having given his wife a little diversion.

"When husband needs a new suit he goes to his tailor and gets one. His shoes are the best. But when I break the news to him that I need new clothes it precipitates a domestic cyclone.

"'The devil you do,' cries hubby. 'You know we have to get coal and wood, the rent is due, the insurance has to be paid and the grocer and the milkman,' and so on and on and on. By the time he is through telling me the extent of our bills I feel like a criminal and all thought of anything to wear has fled.

"Once in a while I have bought a new dress without letting him know I intended to get one, and that was worse, if possible, than asking for one. 'You do that trick again and I will pack up and go. You can at least let me know what you intend doing with my money.' It's always my money, yet there have been moments when he gave me credit for saving everything we have.

"Some friends invited us to their camp to spend the week-end. Father thought it best not to take the children and break up their regular routine. Besides, they might catch cold. So I wrapped up his bathing suit, tucked in his fishing tackle, and off hent went gayly, leaving me and the youngsters behind.

"But I don't mind. I have been through an outing once already and I spent the time getting the lunch and doing the camp chores and keeping the children out of danger while father swam and fished and came in to eat and went out again, and had a great time.

"Why Do Wives Leave Home? Why don't more of them leave home? That's the wonder of it, that any plain, ordinary human woman has the courage and the heroism to carry on day after day, as so many women do, overworked, doing over and over ceaselessly the same monotonous round of daily tasks for which she receives neither money nor thanks. Seeing her romance crumble into dust. Seeing the man she idealized turn into a poor, miserable bully and petty tyrant.

"The pity of it is that it is all so unnecessary. For all that we drudges of wives need to take the weight out of our burdens, to make our labor worth while, to ease our taut nerves, is just a little help from our husbands, a little consideration a little unselfishness and a few kind words.

"It's true that not many wives do get up and quit a job that they find unbearable, but, Oh, how many millions of us there are who wish we could."

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

It's almost pathetic that Cherie should have had to go to a dozen florists before she found these autumn leaves. Poor child. That's what she gets for living in the city. Two dollars for autumn leaves. Which match, be it noted, her brown velvet hat and her brown velvet coat with its semi-princess almost-fitted lines.

She must be starved for the country to stick so closely to these autumn leaves which are quite naturally of all the shades of yellow and red and orange most suitable to autumn leaves. They are a striking background for a dress of rich brown velvet sprinkled thickly with tiny dots of many colors (notice the peplum).

And, perhaps we are a little dull or we'd have noticed it before) perhaps she knows herself that for a brown tulle evening gown there's no more harmonious accessory than a bowl of autumn leaves. Brown is chic for evening now and yet brown is not the most striking color in the world. The proper background should be considered. Cherie's dress has three tiers to its skirt, each tier edged with many rows of velvet ribbon. The tulle itself is spotted with many gold eyelets. Dina's frock, also brown, also tulle, also tiered, also fitted, needs nothing more said about it. Dina wears gold jewelry to give her costume the necessary glint of light.

FARMER ADDS TO DAIRY HERD

Collingsworth Man Buys Car of Jerseys

WELLINGTON, Texas, Oct. 21.—Waddell Bailey, one of the most successful diversified farmers of Collingsworth county, has recently purchased a carload of Jersey cattle, making his herd the largest daily herd in Collingsworth county.

The cattle were shipped here from Cleburne last week. A total of 35 head were purchased, involving $3,000 in the deal. Thirty-three purebred Jersey cows and two registered bulls were included in the shipment.

Mr. Bailey now owns 200 head of purebred Jersey cattle, which is the largest dairy herd in this section of the Panhandle.

He has really proven that there is an advantage in this method of farming and has been gradually adding to his herd from the time he started several years ago. He makes two trips to market every day with dairy products which affords a continual income.

Sam Houston's Home Becomes Spot Of Beauty Under State Allowance

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, Oct. 21. (AP)—The once neglected home of Sam Houston, ranking almost equally with the Alamo as a shrine of Texas liberty, soon will become a beauty spot of the state through dedication of a memorial park and the completion of a paved highway which will bring the site within a few hours' drive of the populous centers of the state.

For many years after his death careless citizens allowed time to pass without adequate expressions of their recognition of the first president of the Texas republic and later their United States senator and governor.

In 1910, through the initiative of students of the Sam Houston State Normal school, money was borrowed to supplement their own offering and undergraduates paid for the Sam Houston residence, surrounding grounds and log cabin law office. Through the action of many owners the old home had been removed from its old location to serve as a boarding house and the warrior's office was utilized as a stock barn.

Both buildings were replaced and now stand where they were in General Houston's lifetime.

Through patriotic devotion, a recent Texas legislature appropriated $15,000 to be expended for repairing the home and restoring the structure as it originally was in the 50s. Agricultural barns then located on the grounds were removed, the landscape was terraced and the grounds were beautified by countless plants and shrubs.

The park, designated as Sam Houston park, will be officially opened in May when Sam Houston Teachers college observes its 50th anniversary.

A monument erected in 1911 at th egrave of General Houston in Oakwood cemetery here will also be an object of interest to tourists and Texans. At the unveiling 17 years ago William Jennings Bryan delivered a tribute, and with a part of the proceeds of the great commoner's lecture, the title of the Houston homestead was obtained and passed by deed as gift to the people of Texas.

Mexican Laborers To Return Home Jobless

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 21. (US)—According to immigration authorities here, 30,000 Mexican laborers are expected to return to their native country in the near future. Many of them have already re-entered and so great is the regression that the crowd is hard to handle at the Mexican points of entry.

The explanation made for the movement is that work on the cotton fields of Texas, and employment generally in the American southwest and west, is hard to get. With conditions not any too good in Mexico the outlook for those returning is not encouraging.

SOUTH DAKOTA IS CONTESTED

Both Parties Plan Garrison Finish

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Oct. 21. Both parties are preparing to stage a hot finish in the fight over South Dakota's five electoral votes.

Republicans are about to bring Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt into the state. She was to have spoken here but objections were made by local Republican leaders who felt she would do more harm than good so instead she will speak at Mitchell. Democrats will have Senator Joe Robinson, vice presidential candidate, and former Governor Nellie Tayloe Ross of Wyoming and most important of all, Frank Murphy, Minnesota Republican farm leader, who bolted after his futile fight for the equalization fee at the Kansas City convention.

Republicans in South Dakota are suffering most from the bitter attacks made on Hoover in the preconvention fight by the two Republican senators of this state, Norbeck and McMaster.

Republicans Quoted

Democrats are quoting these two Republican senators. Holiton Davenport, head of the Smith organization, said during a recent radio debate: "I wonder that if it is really true Mr. Hoover has been such a friend of the farmer, how it is possible that our two Republican senators right down there at Washington got such a contrast ing impression of him."

Davenport s Republican opponent in this debate incidentally was Mike Luddy, a local attorney and a Roman Catholic. Both sides have tried to keep the religious issue submerged in this state. Pulpit politicians are noticeably absent in South Dakota.

Prohibition is something of a factor but farm relief receives most attention. One Republican leader told the United Press that three weeks ago he feared Smith might carry the state on the farm issue but that Borah had turned the tide by taking a bold offensive in favor of Hoover in a recent speech at Mitchell.

Nearly 10,000 Indian votes are a factor. Democrats are going after them in a well-financed campaign. Chief White Blanket, one of the few survivors of the attack on Custer, is leading the Democratic activities among the Indians. Senator Curtis, Republican vice presidential candidate, and a Kaw Indian, recently visited some of the reservations in the state and with an interpreter won many supporters.

Demo Farm Body

Within the last 48 hours a pro-Smith farm organization has been set up by George Peek, one of the sponsors of the McNary-Haugen bill. They have a comprehensive plan, it is understood, for lining up Republican and independent farmers for Smith. Republicans are somewhat concerned as to the effect this organization will have and are trying to get Senator McNary to speak in the state to the effect that he believes Hoover's plan is better than the bill which bears his name and upon which the Democrats are basing their South Dakota campaign.

Odds are slightly in favor of Hoover and Bulow but the fight is not over. In 1924 Coolidge received 101,299 votes; Davis, 27,214; and La Follette, 75,355.

Local Deaths

GEORGE M. BEARD

Funeral services for George M. Beard, 72, of Big Spring, who died in a local hospital Saturday, will be held at Albany Monday, it was announced at the Hines mortuary Sunday. The body was forwarded to Albany early Monday morning.

Mrs. George M. Beard of Big Spring and Mrs. Lelia Sullivan, a daughter living at Carpenter, Okla., made the arrangements here and accompanied the body to Albany.

Mexican Newspaper Cites Morrow And Son As Example Of Tolerance

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 21. (US)—The roots of Yankee greatness are nourished chiefly by Yankee tolerance in the opinion of the Mexico City newspaper "Excelsior," whose editorial writer this morning devoted a quarter of a page to a long dissertation on the difference between Mexican and United States political methods.

The editorial cited the fact that Dwight W. Morrow Jr., young Amherst student, is favoring Governor Smith for the presidency, while his father, Ambassador Morrow, is known to be for Herbert Hoover. The difference in political opinion of the Morrow family is used by the Excelsior as the text for its editorial.

Such a thing would be impossible in Mexico without tearing asunder the family, causing the gravest situation in the entire circle of relatives and friends affected, says Excelsior. Outsiders who envy the tremendous material prosperity of the United States without paying their respects to an intellectual advance equally colossal, ought to see in this case of a politically prominent father entrusted with an important mission by the Republican executive of the United States and accepting his son's political initiative in the opposite direction as a matter-of-fact thing, the reason why a country in which such a thing is possible has become the leader of mankind.

The newspaper remarked:

"Here tolerance is as natural as pulque and corn; there tolerance is as much a Yankee product as automobiles and locomotives."

WHEAT KING IN CHICK BUSINESS

Snyder Farmer Sets Out For New Record

Special to The Record News

SNYDER, Texas, Oct. 21.—Giles Garner, most generally known outside of his home town as the wheat king of the world may yet become known as the "chicken king" or something similar.

Garner won fame as a wheat producer when his land produced 86 bushels per acre when 20 was average on the other farms in the section. He was one of the representatives from Snyder on the West Texas Chamber of Commerce agriculture-dairy-poultry motorcade to California recently. On this motorcade he observed how the ultra modern construction of the chicken houses, and the methods of poultry feeding employed, were causing the Californians to reap rewards from poultry that were unheard of before these innovations were tried.

Consequently, he is now building on his farm near Snyder, a model chicken house. His flock of hens will have private homes with numbers on them to enable him to keep a check on their output. The hens will not have electric lights to wake them at four o'clock in the morning for food as has been the custom with hens that were fed food containing ruffage. They will be fed on whole grain at night which will take 12 hours to digest. It has been found that in this way the hens get more rest and are better producers.

Mr. Garner does not intend to devote all of his time to chickens to the point of neglecting his wheat or other projects. He has lately received from the experimental station at Perth, Australia, three varieties of drought resisting wheat named "Nongaar," "Nowawa," and "Gywyas Early" wheat which he will use for propagating purposes.

Political Animosity To Big Business Dies Rapidly Under New Diffusion

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (US).—Political hostility to Wall street has fast been dying.

The widespread diffusion of ownership in corporate securities makes a disappearance from the vocabulary of the nation phrases like a disappearance from the vocabulary of the nation to phrases like "watered stock," "malefactors of great wealth," and "the money trust."

The new public confidence in the operations of the financial district imposes higher obligations on bankers. Like other human beings, financiers are human, and they need constructive criticism. Organizations like the Investment Bankers Association of America, which has been in convention in Atlantic City the past week, perform a genuine service in pointing out constructively the flaws in present day financial methods and habits.

Before the convention of makers and fashioners of security patterns, the new danger of watered stocks was pointed out. As a matter of fact, if the bankers do not overcapitalize companies—thus watering their stock—the public in these days of emotional finance and unrestrained optimism do so at the open market place. When stocks sell substantially above 10 times earnings, the investor should look critically for evidences of overcapitalization of demonstrated values. Stocks which sell 25 times earnings, for example, reflect hopes concerning the future rather than present day realities. Some such hopes are fulfilled, and the optimistic wax wealthy, but in other instances disappointment results as it becomes apparent that the seller was wiser than the buyer.

Georgia Democrat Thinks Al Sure Victor

ATLANTA, Oct. 21 (AP).—Major John S. Cohen, Democratic national committeeman from Georgia, issued a statement here today, declaring that "every indication at this time points to the election of a Democratic president and a Democratic congress on Nov. 6."

"It is my matured opinion that if the balloting were held today Governor Smith would be elected by a comfortable margin of electoral votes and that by Nov. 6 his majority will grow to surprising proportions," he said.

Crosby County Needs 1,000 Cotton Pickers

Special to The Record News

CROSBYTON, Texas, Oct. 21.—Although the cooperation of C. W. Woodson, assistant director of the United States Department of Labor, stationed at Fort Worth, and his staff of assistants scatered over the state, has been secured to help place cotton pickers in Crosby county, there is still a great need for more pickers. A thousand pickers are badly needed at this time.

Cotton in this county is much better than was expected a few weeks ago, and it is opening rapidly. The farmers are offering $1.25 a hundred pounds to get it picked but are having little success in getting pickers. Almost all the farmers have good accommodations for caring for help, and some have gone to east and south Texas to secure them.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Gene Fowler, who is one of the best newspaper men in New York and was recently made publicity representative of Madison Square Garden, formerly covered all the sensational electrocutions and hangings for the New York American. He saw the Snyder-Gray electrocution and was present when Gerald Chapman was hung.

"I don't believe Chapman was guilty of the crime for which he was hung," said Mr. Fowler the other night.

"When I went to cover the story, I had never seen him and was prejudiced against him, but I heard him talk in a plea for his life the night before he was hung. He was quite, self-contended and declared he was the victim of abuse. Not that I have any sympathy for crooks, nor am I undertaking to defend this master criminal, but he had a color which is lacked by most men convicted of murder, and, in fact, most women, too. I saw Mrs. Snyder for the first time when she walked in to sit in the electric chair and I was surprised at her appearance. She looked small, worn out and acted as if she didn't know what was going on. She was just an old hag.

"Chapman's pal, Dutch Anderson, once told an interesting story about Chapman's personality. The two had stolen an automobile, and somewhere they got into a row with one of those well known road hogs who turned out to be a big bully. Chapman talked to him quietly and advised him not to lose his temper and undertake to bully people, as it might get him licked. After the argument quieted down, and the two crooks were rolling along in the stolen automobile, Chapman turned to his friend and said:

"'I had that fellow covered all the time with a gun in my pocket. I could hardly keep from shooting. He made me so mad.'

"Of course the bully had no idea he was addressing his remarks to such a desperate character as Gerald Chapman, but this dramatic individual had gotten his name and address and took the pains to write him a letter advising him to be careful whom he bullied in the future and telling him how near he had come to death the day before. Chapman told him frankly who he was."

I wonder if the bully has calmed down since as the result of his experience?

This writer overheard a discussion recently of the best way to receive criticism and applause. It was agreed that the actor or speaker who appeared to be overwhelmed by applause, which he pretended was unexpected, did not ring true, but the performer who took it in his stride as part of the show made a much better impression. As someone recently said, "It is impossible to hit yourself as hard on the chin as someone else can sock you."

The same applies to criticism. There is the fairly old story of George Bernard Shaw, who was present years ago at the opening of one of his plays. A spectator appeared to be displeased with the theme and performance and showed his displeasure by standing up in his seat and hissing loudly. Like everybody else in the audience, Mr. Shaw heard him and arose in his usual dignified way. With a wave of his hand he said to the hissing enthusiast,

"What are we two against so many!"

Professor, Take Hope

THE teacher in the American college or university, proverbially underpaid, can take hope. In the not-distant future his salary will be supported on a scale more lavish than anything yet dreamed of.

This is the prediction of Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, in an address at the convocation of the University of the State of New York.

American prosperity, says Mr. Filene, is largely due to education. It needs nothing in the world so much as trained brains. The business world is discovering that it can best get these from the colleges and universities. As a result, increased budgets for education expenses will be met cheerfully and promptly.

That is Mr. Filene's view. It sounds reasonable. Commerce and industry owe more to the realm of higher education than they realize.

Loud-Speaking Airplanes

THE advance of aviation has brought with it one development that cannot be regarded with equanimity.

In New York certain airplanes equipped with loud speakers fly over the city and indulge in outdoor advertising at its worst. Voices from these flying loud speakers bawl forth the merits of this or that face cream, movie, cigaret or what-not in a manner that can be heard all over town. There is no escape from it. Anyone in the streets below gets this raucous appeal to buy drummed into his helpless ears, whether he likes it or not.

It is to be hoped that this thing doesn't spread. Our cities are noisy enough now without this added clamor. It might be a good thing to see if the statutes governing public nuisances wouldn't cover the case.

The State Park

PROF. A. K. LOBECK of the University of Wisconsin, returning from a trip to Europe, reports that one of the features of American civilization that interests Europeans most is our rapidly-growing habit of establishing numerous state parks.

"The idea of a state park every 100 miles or so captivates their fancy," says Professor Lobeck. "The fondness abroad for the outdoors, and the love for picnics, is universally apparent, but the masses there must go to established places of entertainment. Everywhere tourists or picnickers encounter the prospect of invading strictly private property."

Practically every state in the union is interested in the matter of parks and new ones are being established constantly. It is a splendid program. We still have thousands of square miles of unspoiled countryside; to preserve as much of it as possible for recreation is a far-sighted course.

Zeppelin's Dream

THE ARRIVAL in America of the great dirigible Graf Zeppelin shows once more the vast power that lies in the hands of an ardent dreamer.

The man who is called level-headed and practical may seem to rule the world; but always sooner or later, he moves at the bidding of someone who can forget practicality and devote himself to visions.

Count Zeppelin was a dreamer. When he served as military observer with the federal armies during the American Civil War he was attached to the balloon section, then being tried out as an experiment. The balloons were not highly effective; but their use inspired the young German with the beginnings of his great dream—a dream of an airship that could sail through the skies with safety and efficiency.

For the rest of his life he devoted himself to this dream. At the dawning of the century he launched his first dirigible. It was a success—an amazing success, for those days. Zeppelin became famous. His very name became, in the public mind, synonymous with the word dirigible.

Today the old count is dead and gone. But his dream is just beginning to reach its full development. The mighty airship that bears his name crossed the Atlantic against adverse conditions, carrying a score of passengers in luxury and safety, with a crew of some fifty men in addition. The feat, naturally enough, took the world by the ears. Solid financiers are beginning to believe that the dirigible can be made to ring cash registers.

To be sure, all of this about the potency of dreams and dreamers is fairly old stuff. But in an age where we pride ourselves on our hard-heartedness and practicality, it is worth keeping in mind. And there is one more point to it.

The dreamer who makes his dreams come true is not the "idle dreamer" of tradition.

To play with a dream in the back of your mind, turning it over every now and then but letting it always remain there a mere fancy, is to accomplish nothing. A real dreamer, of the type of Count Zeppelin, is necessarily one of the busiest mortals on earth. He gives himself to his dream so wholeheartedly that h can neither think of nor work at anything else. The task of making a dream come true can be defined as someone has defined genius—1 per cent inspiration and 99 per cent perspiration.

This combination—the ability to visualize something new and the energy to make it a reality—is somewhat rare. When it does occur, however, the world moves. A new continent is found, a new machine is invented to lighten the drudgery of millions, a quicker method of communication is developed, or the bonds of time and space which hold mankind in a circumscribed orbit are loosened. The transatlantic trip of the Graf Zeppelin is just another case in point.

DIVERSIFIED FARMING MOVING WEST

A county demonstration agent recently made this prediction. That at no distant date farmers in Wilbarger county would be forced to practice diversification and depend more on chickens, eggs, hogs and cows for their money if they would stay on the farm. This diversification program several years ago was put into practice in the eastern sections of this state and he says it is gradually drifting westward.

GRAHAM BUSINESS GOOD

The Graham merchants and most all lines of business report good trade. All agree that it is not as rushing as in times of bumper crops and recently discovered oil pools, but trade is steady. The town is full of people if we are to judge from the fact there are no vacant houses, all apartments and hotels occupied. Graham's trade territory is gradually being extended through good roads entering them and from the further fact that the merchants are offering their goods at as cheap prices as will be found anywhere.

The Room Under the Stairs

The Baffling Story of a Man Who Read of His Own Murder

By HERMAN LANDON

Copyright by G. Howard Watt — Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

Synopsis of Preceding Installments

Thomas Dean, successful young novelist, has hidden from the world his old name Paul Forrester, because the latter was connected with a self-defense killing out West, and Dean still carries the scar of that encounter. But a series of circumstances swirls him into a vortex of mysteries. First he reads a deathbed confession of the murder of Paul Forrester five years before, made by Martin Lamont, western business man, on a visit to New York, and witnessed by Dennis Littleby, famous lawyer, and Dr. John Ballinger, well-known doctor. Then a mysterious lady, Viola Gray, visits him and Lieutenant Shane finds the remains of the murdered man in "The Room Under the Stairs," of Dean's deserted family home. A watch marked "P. F." completes the identification, although Dean finds pieces of another watch crystal at the scene of the murder. Later an attempt is made on his life by Freddie Mills, a hired assassin, and Dean's subsequent appearance alive produces a startling effect on both Miss Gray and Dr. Ballinger. Finally, after Dean has heard a woman's screams through the dying man's telephone, Lamont is murdered, and Dean trails the lawyer to a hidden room in the latter's house. There he finds Shirley Lamont, the dead man's daughter, held as prisoner and is discovered by Littleby, who warns them both and mysteriously vanishes. Trapped together they can find no way out of the secret room. Meantime, Lieutenant Shane finds Miss Gray in "The Room Under the Stairs" at the old Forrester home and shares her discovery of an important piece of paper. Together they set out for Littleby's house.

Black Moments

Miss Lamont's cry, quavering on a note of fear, roused Dean from the momentary daze that had seized him when darkness rushed down upon them.

"There's no danger," he told her, fumbling in the blackness until he found her hand. "Something's happened to the light—that's all."

"Turn them on—quick, Tommie!" she pleaded. "Such dreadful things always happen in this room when the lights go out like that."

It sounded mysterious, but he asked no explanations, but picked his way to the table where an electric lamp had been burning under a soft green shade a few moments ago. A touch confirmed his suspicion, which he had refrained from communicating to the girl, that the blotting out of the lights had been a deliberate move, possibly intended to serve as a prelude to further surprises. Striking one of his few matches, he saw that the filaments in the bulb were intact, and it was the same with the light fixture on the wall. Some one had shut off the current by throwing a switch in another part of the house.

The match went out. Observing that the darkness seemed to fill her with incomprehensible terrors, he struck another.

"A fuse must have burned out somewhere," he remarked as casually as he could. "Let's sit down here and talk."

He placed a chair for her. With a long, doubting look at his face, signifying strong skepticism in regard to the burned-out fuse, she sat down beside him with a slight nestling movement of her shoulder. The second match went out, leaving an interval of darkness that seemed something more than just ordinary gloom. He felt a shiver passing through the shoulder that was lightly touching his own.

"My last!" he groaned inwardly, as he struck another match on the bottom of his shoe. In its glow, the girl was darting quick, frightened glances to all sides, as if suspecting the presence of some invisible danger. It reminded him of the cryptic statement she had made just after darkness swooped down over them: "Such dreadful things always happen in this room when the lights go out like that." The words carried a hint of some terrifying experience heralded by the abrupt going out of the lights and explained the expression of dread with which she looked about her.

The last match flickered out. He gazed fixedly at the dying shimmer of the stub, and then an intensified darkness, with something subtly appalling in it, rolled over them. Her trembling shoulder moved a little closer to his in an intimacy of dread, giving him a gentle thrill.

It was odd how, even in these black moments of suspense, he was capable of experiencing life's softer emotions.

"How close it is!" she murmured after a while. "I can hardly breathe."

"Only imagination," said Dean lightly, trying to reassure her, but the remark had confirmed a disquieting impression of his own. Until five minutes ago there had been a slight current of air in the room, hinting at the presence of a concealed ventilator somewhere, perhaps high in the domed ceiling. Now this had ceased, leaving only an oppressive stillness in the stagnant air.

"I hope Littleby took the hint I gave him," he added, trying to take her mind off the present and its uncertainties.

"About the pieces of glass?"

"Yes, and about Lieutenant Shane trying to guess what they mean. I hope Littleby takes it to heart. He is a very shrewd individual, the kind that weighs his chances carefully before he acts. He may decide that murder is risky business."

He felt her hand quivering within his own. "Let's not delude ourselves, Tommie. Littleby is a cold, conscienceless blackguard."

"But he has a wholesome respect for his own skin."

"But don't you see? He is determined to kill us because he thinks he will be safer as soon as we are out of the way. We might as well face the inevitable."

"And follow Littleby's advice and meditate on the uncertainties of life. I refuse. The subject is too depressing. Anyhow, as long as there is life there is hope. If Littleby means to sneak in on us through one of his secret passages and attack us in the dark, he'll have a fight on his hands. I have been still so long that I feel the need of a bit of healthful exercise."

"Oh, but he wouldn't attempt anything so crude as that. Littleby fights with subtle weapons, and he never takes unnecessary chances. I know."

"I wonder how much you know, Lee!"

"A lot, but not everything. Please don't ask me. I couldn't explain. I could tell you of many strange things that have happened since I came here, but my head begins to swim whenever I try to reason out what it all means."

"Then don't try. Just tell me what has happened," he persisted, thinking it better that her thoughts should be occupied with the past than with the unknown terrors the next few hours might hold in store for her. "What delayed you on your way to New York?"

"I was not delayed. I left Wichita thre hours after I received the telegram announcing my father's illness. Thirty-six hours later I arrived in New York and went direct to Kew Gardens, in accordance with the instructions in the telegram. It was quite late—nearly midnight, Mr. Littleby, himself, let me in, and I inquired immediately about father.

"He answered evasively, though it didn't strike me that way at once, saying that father was under the influence of opiates, and that the physician had left positive orders that he should not be disturbed. Then, remarking that the servants had retired, he offered to show me to my room. I suspected nothing until I found myself a prisoner in this very room."

"The viper!" muttered Dean savagely. "He gave out the report that you had been delayed somewhere between Wichita and New York, that no one really knew what had become of you. Nobody doubted his word, and there was no apparent reason why anyone should. But what about day before yesterday, when the butler met you on the stairs?"

"Oh, that was an accident. One of the servants—he is in Littleby's confidence, I suspect—has been bringing me food three times a day. On this patricular occasion I caught him off his guard and managed to follow him when he left the room. Out in the hall I escaped from him, then promptly lost my way. The house seemed so big, and I didn't know which way to turn. I ran helter-skelter, all the time hoping to find the room where father was. I was a bit dazed when I met the butler on the stairs and gave him the only explanation that came to my mind. I let him show me to the drawing room, hoping I would have a chance to escape as soon as he turned his back. For a minute or two I sat there trying to collect my faculties, and then—I scarcely knew what happened, but I was forcibly carried away, and when things began to clear again I was back in this room. After that they watched me even more closely than before."

"Is that all?" asked Dean gently, when she had paused. Her recital had been interesting, but it had explained nothing, if possible leaving the mystery even more involved than before.

"No, not all, but I don't like to think about the rest. It's too horrible. It was all the harder because when Littleby came in to see me, I had to retrain my feelings. I felt myself turn cold with hate every time I saw him, but I dared not say a word. I was in his power, and he never neglected to emphasize the fact. Sometimes I felt as if— But let's not talk about it, Tommie. Anything is preferable to that. Do you suppose it is still raining outside?"

"Most likely," he replied absently struck by a new and vaguely alarming impression. Something drew his gaze upward through what seemed a limitless stretch of blackness.

"But in the morning, Tommie, the sun will be shining, the winds blowing, the birds singing. It is always that way after a storm. I wonder—"

She paused. Vaguely his mind completed the sentence while he continued to gaze upward, to where a few gray flecks seemed to swim in the gloom.

"Oh, yes," he said confidently, answering her unfinished question, "we'll be there to enjoy it. I'm sure the old sun will be so glad to see us that he will smile more brightly than ever."

"My lungs are simply aching for a few whiffs of ozone after being locked up in this stuffy old place."

He sat rigid, spellbound. Up there toward the ceiling a flock of sinuously fluttering wisps of gray seemed to mock his tone of airy confidence. In vain he tried to tell himself that it was an optical illusion produced by his overwrought senses and the soundless blackness that surrounded them. Moment by moment the gray specks took on a more vivid reality.

"I wonder if you really feel the way you talk," she murmured, "or whether you are only trying to cheer me up. There is a possibility that you may be wrong, that we may never see the sunlight again, and that possibility makes everything look different, doesn't it? I never imagined one could see things so clearly in the dark." She laughed nervously, with a little catch in her throat. "I feel as if most of the things I've lived for don't matter at all any longer. And other things that seemed insignificant before—how big and wonderful they appear now! Just suppose, Tommie, that the worst should happen and—"

"But it won't," he interrupted doggedly. "Don't be a pessimist."

"I am just wondering," she went on, "if you and I would be sitting like this, close together, with my hand in yours, if there wasn't a chance that in a little while we should both be dead."

"Oh, Death, where is thy sting?" quoted Dean lightly, watching with growing intentness the strange spectacle overhead. Now there were a myriad shimmering wisps up there, a translucent blanket of mist that was gradually descending toward them, giving him an impression of something loathsome and menacing.

As yet the girl appeared to have noticed nothing. "Just think!" she continued, speaking scarcely above a whisper, "a little while ago I couldn't and words harsh enough to describe how I felt toward you. I thought you were even more despicable than Littleby. Now—"

"Yes, now?" he asked softly, for the moment letting his attention wander from the grimly fascinating spectacle overhead.

Her hand stirred ever so slightly within his own, a gesture at once infinitesimally small and yet marvelously eloquent. In the next moment he felt her start forward.

"Look!" she exclaimed, releasing her hand, and he knew she was pointing to the gray, luminous host gleaming vaguely through the blackness. "Isn't it beautiful?"

"Wonderful," he assented in a queer voice, feeling a sharp inward twinge. For the moment she could see nothing but a phenomenon of rare beauty in a thing that to him meant on-creeping death. Beauty and death! What grotesque intermingling of contrasts.

"Did you ever see it before?" he asked. "Is that what you had in mind when you spoke of certain dreadful things having happened in this room?"

"Oh, no! The omer was something quite different. There is nothing dreadful about this. It's lovely—like a silver mist rising over the waters. But this," with a touch of awed wonder creeping into her tone, "isn't rising. It is falling instead. What do you suppose it means?"

Dean remained silent, searching his mind for a plausible subterfuge, but finding none. He had noted a queer little huskiness in her voice, but could not tell whether it was due to excitement or something else. The mist was gradually drawing lower, circling like wind-scattered fog over their heads, luminous in itself yet apparently incapable of transmitting light.

"What is it, Tommie?" she repeated. "I feel so queer, as if I were dreaming and wide awake at the same time. There is a hot sensation in my nostrils and my throat. Tommie, you don't suppose that—"

A tremor of her shoulder told him that the faint poisonous breath that stirred in the air, gradually growing more pronounced, had installed a suspicion of the truth in her mind. A treacherous dizziness, unaccompanied by physical pain, but striking terror to his senses, was rising to his head. Inwardly he cursed his helplessness to combat the insidious, venomous thing that was stealing into their bodies with each intake of breath.

"Littleby is trying to frighten us," he declared. "I'll make him pay for this. If only—" He started up from the chair as an idea suddenly came to him. "The hall!" he exclaimed. "Why didn't I think of that before? We can close the door and—"

Excitedly he took her hand and conducted her to the small hall outside the room along whose farther wall he had searched in vain for an opening that had admitted him to the apartment. The venomous mist, like a ghostly exhalation, seemed to fog their steps. He closed the door, but the deathly essence seemed to seep through myriad cervices filling the darkness with an absymal breath.

"It's no use, Tommie," the girl murmured. "There is no escape. We might as well—"

She paused and stood leaning breathlessly toward him. Through the door came a low buzzing sound.

"The telephone," muttered Dean. "Littleby is willing to make terms. You stay here."

PAST TENSE

I'd gladly leave my present life—
The life I live to-day,
And go back to that happy life,
Now dim and far away.
For life back in those olden times
Was made of solid stuff.
My life to-day is speed and rush,
And fight, and strain, and bluff.

But I persume as I grow old,
And sands of time flow fast,
I'll learn the sweetest parts of life
Were far too good to last.
I'll always turn about and look
At times I've known; you see,
The greatest things in mortal life
Are things which used to be.

Health And Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper

MASCULINITY AND FEMINITY

For many years psychologists had no difficulty in describing the differences between masculine and feminine characteristics. Men were more aggressive, adventurous, untiring, and had a scientific reasoning mind. Women were shy, retiring, more emotional, delicate, imaginative.

But within the last few years, there has been a remarkable change in the mental attitude of the two sexes so that they are becoming more alike. Men are cultivating many of the finer qualities, such as a love of the artistic and the finer emotional qualities, and women are entering the business, scientific and athletic fields and acquiring much of the aggressiveness and scientific reasoning of the male.

The clinging vine type of woman who used to faint whenever a strong man came near, has disappeared. Women are learning to brag about their strength rather than expect sympathy for their weakness. They have discarded their enveloping skirts, bustles, corsets and other clothing monstrosities so that their wearing apparel today is actually more sensible than that worn by men. Girls' feet are becoming larger and their figures slenderer. In fact, many writers describe their heroines as having figures slender as a young boy's.

The bullying man who built his superiority by sheer physical brutality has passed on with the going years. Intellect is today far more important than muscle for maintaining leadership. Men are becoming slenderer, more alert and possibly more sensitive. Men excel at many of the trades that might be considered effeminate. Some of the leading dressmakers, perfumers, artists and poets are men. On the other hand women are entering the business world. Two among the largest real estate concerns in Los Angeles are headed by women. Women are entering politics, mechanics, newspaper work, and many other trades that were formerly considered exclusively men's domain.

In spite of this switching of positions, there is no danger of any great biological change, but the mental and emotional adjustments which are taking place in our time should bring about more happiness and better health to both sexes.

Many of the lower forms of life are bisexual as, for instance, the snail is both male and female inside of the same shell. Such abnormalities occasionally appear in the human family, but they are unable to reproduce themselves. But it is true that in the embryo both male and female begin from the same original form, and only develop differently so that both men and women have some physical as well as mental qualities in common.

While men and women will never appear alike physically, the mental changes which are taking place will lead to a better understanding between them and the age old sex antagonisms will gradually disappear. We can no doubt look for a better civilization when women are stronger physically and more mentally aggressive, and the masculine force and ruggedness of men is tempered by the more delicate qualities.

Yellow Skin

Question: A. J. asks: "What causes the skin to become yellow about the eyes and mouth? What can be done about it?"

Answer: Your trouble is undoubtedly caused by what the layman knows as biliousness. This means some disorder affecting the liver or gall bladder. When these organs do not function properly because of overwork, some of the bile is retained in the system, making the skin show a decided yellow tinge. A short fast followed by a proper diet usually brings about a clearing up of the skin within a short time.

Question: Reader writes: "My mother made some bacon gravy for the cornbread and, knowing there was no bacon in the house for two weeks, I questioned her and found she had been holding the bacon grease ever for two weeks in a can. She stood me up and down that it was still healthful food if kept even longer in the cooler."

Answer: In the first place I do not advise the use of bacon grease in the making of cornbread, but it will keep for weeks and even months without spoiling if it is kept in a fairly cool place.

Superfluous Hair

Question: Marilyn A. writes: "I use peroxide on my face and arms for bleaching purposes and have been told it will grow superfluous hair. Please tell me if this is true."

Answer: There is evidence to show that the continued use of peroxide will discourage the growth of hair rather than to promote it.

By FLORENCE VIDOR

Florence Vidor hails from the big open spaces of Texas where the men drill on oil wells and the women are Governors. Florence did not have a stage career to point back on when she tried breaking into the movies, but she did have a husband who was a director, King Vidor. One of the first pictures she played in was called "Grounds for Divorce"—and Mrs. Vidor's performance reached such a point of excellence that she was made a star, and she and Mr. Vidor celebrated by getting one.

Florence Vidor

"One of the funniest incidents I know of," Mrs. Vidor told me, "is a true story about the little daughter of a friend of mine. One day the little girl came into the house after having a violent tussle with her particular chum. Her mother reprimanded her, and concluded by saying.

"'It was Satan who suggested to you the pulling of Gertrude's hair!'

"'I shouldn't be surprised,' the child replied musingly. 'But,' she added proudly, 'kicking her in the shins was entirely my own idea!'"

Tillman County Gins Turn Out 5,687 Bales

FREDERICK, Okla., Oct. 21.—The federal report shows but 5,687 bales of cotton were ginned in Tillman county from the 1928 season, counting round bales as half bales, compared with 13,308 bales for the corresponding period last year. Of this number about 400 bales were ginned at Davidson, 1,500 at Frederick, 225 at Manitou, 1,100 at Grandfield, 1,000 at Tipton and 2,000 at the other establishments of the county.

At that time some cotton men in the eastern part of the county reported about 20 per cent of their cotton was ginned, while cotton men in the western part reported about 10 per cent ginned. If their estimates are correct, Tillman county will gin around 60,000 bales of cotton from the 1928 crop.

The weather since Oct. 1 has been favorable for cotton, there having been little or no rain to lower the sample and the white staple has been opening rapidly.

JUST KIDS By Ad Carter

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE "FAMOUS FIRST LADIES"

"In case of real danger, fly to the woods with the children," Abigail Adams' husband wrote her. Bravely she went about her daily tasks with an undismayed heart and cool head, the dangers of the Revolution all about her. Pestilence broke out in the neighborhood and entered her home. Although weak herself from illness, she turned her home into a hospital for the stricken ones.

"I am distressed but not dismayed," she wrote her husband. Before the war was over, John Adams was reunited with his family for a time.

Then he was sent to France as commissioner for the United States, and later went to England as minister. Mrs. Adams joined her husband in London.

When John Adams was elected president, the capital was at Philadelphia, but just at the end of his administration it was moved to Washington. In 1801, Mrs. Adams held the first New Year's reception in the nearly completed "president's mansion." It is said that clothes-lines were strung in one of the unfinished public rooms, and here Mrs. Adams hung her washing. (To Be Continued)

Record News Sports Editor

Four teams are undefeated in class A football championship of district 1 of the Texas Interscholastic league. With every eleven having engaged in at least one game, a line on the strength of the contenders for the district title is available. And it seems from opening games that the Amarillo Sandies are to be the team to beat.

The Sandstorms buried Plainview under a 95 to 0 score Saturday. This may indicate Plainview is not so much. Vernon beat Plainview, 25-0 and that suspicion is further strengthened. But the establishment of a 95-0 score against any sort of opposition is no little feat and coaches of other elevens today doubtless are figuring ahead with both eyes and an ear to the clash of their team with the Sandies.

In the other conference game of last week, Wichita Falls eked out a 12-7 verdict over Electra. Statistics are said to show that Electra outplayed Wichita Falls in punting, passing, tackling, running with the ball and carrying the water bucket. But the scores shows Wichita Falls won. As football is played on the field and not on newspapers, it goes for a victory for the Coyotes.

Vernon, which had defeated Plainview as above narrated and Lubbock, conqueror previously over Quanah, are other conference teams with clean slates. Electra has won one and lost one, Quanah being the victim of the Tigers.

Moore To Face Formidable Vet

Warnie Smith and Dempse Meet Here Wednesday

Dempse Moore, Wichita Falls light heavyweight battler, goes up against the most formidable opponent he has encountered in several months when he tackles Warnie Smith of Oklahoma in a 10-round boxing bout at Spudder park on Wednesday night.

Moore last week returned to the squared circle in Wichita Falls and knocked out Joe Hewitt, training partner of Babe Hunt, the redoubtable Oklahoma heavyweight who is classed by many boxing experts as an up and coming youngster in the heavyweight championship division.

Warnie Smith comes to Wichita Falls Wednesday night with several victories to his credit. He has knocked out the veteran Jack Matlock and has done the same for Jimmie Bean, another good light heavyweight.

Warnie is a battler of considerable experience, having been actively in the game for more than 10 years, during which time he has been in several hundred fights.

By way of satisfying the wrestling fans, Promoter Alex B. Ross has also scheduled a finish mat match between George Barnes and Bulldog Joe Turner of St. Louis. Barnes and Turner are experienced welterweights and will show the customers their wares under New York commission rules.

Two four-round boxing bouts will also be presented by Promoter Ross by way of preliminaries to the main boxing-wrestling show.

Collingsworth Crowd Hears Demo Speaker

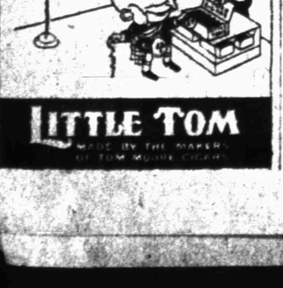

WELLINGTON, Texas, Oct. 21.—An unusually large crowd of enthusiastic Democrats heard former Congressman James Young of Kaufman speak here Friday night in behalf of the candidacy of Alfred E. Smith. Mr. Young was for 16 years a member of congress and retired undefeated. Among the subjects he discussed here were prohibition and the effect of a Democratic administration upon it; religious issues as injected into this campaign; farm relief; the tariff question; immigration and the record of the Republican administration for the past eight years.

Congressman Young is well acquainted with the issues of the present campaign, and his speech evoked prolonged applause at frequent intervals.

The speaker was introduced by Senator-elect C. C. Small of Wellington.

"This Little Tom," said old Sandy McPherson
Who's known as a most economical person,
"Is worth every penny I pay for the smoke."
And that, gentle reader, is not a Scotch joke.

Hornsby May Change Uniform Again

Indications are that the majors' winter shopping season will open with a deal between the Cubs and Braves by which Rogers Hornsby will play with his fourth club in four seasons. Chicago is reported to have offered Outfielder Webb, Pitcher Root and Second Baseman Maguire and a big cash consideration for Boston's $40,000-a-year-manager.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

REVENGE FOR DEFEATS sustained in previous years, in some instances sought in vain for many moons, was achieved last Saturday by grid elevens. Intersectional clashes and sectional affairs between rivals of ancient traditions saw a reversal of past supremacy, as a day of hard football, marked by the further defeat of other hitherto unbeaten elevens, was recorded. Texas Aggies were virtually eliminated from the Southwestern conference race by a 6 to 0 defeat at the hands of T. C. U. While this result was something of an upset, it must be remembered that the Frogs for several years have been fighting the Farmers on even terms and that the Christians, in preliminary games showed such power as to indicate they would be formidable this year.

◆ ◆ ◆

A CONFERENCE ELEVEN upset the mighty Centenary Gentlemen, when Baylor captured a surprisingly easy victory by 28-7 at Shreveport. Other conference clubs played to form in two games. Texas defeated Arkansas, 20-7 and S. M. U. piled up a 53-13 count on Rice.

◆ ◆ ◆

For the first time in the history of their grid relations Georgia Tech scored a victory over Notre Dame down at Atlanta. An upset was achieved on a southern gridiron when the once powerful Crimson Tide of Alabama was defeated by Tennessee. Vanderbilt was extended to trim Tulane. Virginia, which had fought Princeton a scoreless tie the previous week, went to defeat at the hands of Virginia Military institute. West Virginia conquered Washington and Lee.

◆ ◆ ◆

THE FAVORITES WON in the Big Ten. Illinois, 1927 champions, launched its 1928 season with a win over Indiana, 13-7. Minnesota crushed Chicago, 33-7. Michigan has yet to win a game, the Wolverines sustaining their third straight loss, this at the hands of Ohio State, 19-7. Wisconsin and Purdue battled desperately to a 19-19 tie. Northwestern was extended by Kentucky, 7-0, in a non-conference engagement and Iowa had a practice session with Ripon.

◆ ◆ ◆

KANSAS FINALLY beat their old state enemy, Kansas State or Aggies, whichever one prefers to call them. Missouri showed class in trimming Iowa State. Oklahoma scored the sole touchdown of the game to defeat Creighton. Oklahoma Aggies suffered another crushing defeat in the north, this by Marquette, following their rout the previous week by Creighton. Nebraska scored a point after touchdown to repulse the invasion of Syracuse from the east, 7 to 6. Colgate scored an intersectional victory over Michigan State at Lansing.

◆ ◆ ◆

A tremendously strong Army juggernaut achieved the first victory ever scored by a Cadet eleven over Harvard by winning Saturday, 15-0. Yale, another ranking eastern outfit, vanquished Brown handily. Bucknell and Lafayette played a scoreless tie. Carnegie Tech flashed impressive strength in beating Washington and Jefferson by three touchdowns. Dartmouth annihilated Columbia. Fordham rallied from its defeat the previous week by New York U. and ran up a victory over Holy Cross. Princeton beat Lehigh, 47-0.

◆ ◆ ◆

NAVY EKED OUT its first win of the season after three losses, beating Duke, 6-0. New York beat Rutgers with reserves. Pennsylvania reversed a Penn State victory of last year with a 14-0 triumph. Pittsburgh had little trouble beating Allegheny. All "little three" teams won. Amherst from Hamilton, Williams from Rensselaer and Wesleyan from Rochester.

◆ ◆ ◆

CALIFORNIA and Southern California, foremost contenders for the Pacific coast conference title, played a no-decision 0-0 engagement. Oregon smothered Washington, 27-0. California (Los Angeles) defeated Romona. Colorado Aggies, Rocky Mountain conference champions, lost to Utah.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21. (AP)—Rogers Hornsby apparently is set for his perennial transfer. He has been with three different clubs in three seasons and fandom now is buzzing with talk about purported plans for the Rajah's trade to a fourth club—the Chicago Cubs.

Newspapers in both New York and Chicago have stated that the trade will be consummated and at least one Boston paper quoted "reliable authority" that the Braves were ready for "any deal for Hornsby that will strengthen the club."

The talk among baseball men has it that the Cubs have offered Pitcher Charley Root, Second Baseman Fred Maguire and Outfielder Earl Webb and casn for the Boston manager. Boston, the reports state, has insisted on Outfielder Cliff Heathcote, an old Chicago favorite, instead of Webb.

Men close to the game predict that the Cubs will have to turn over at least $200,000 in cash and players for the National league's greatest hitter.

The deal undoubtedly will be one of the biggest in which Hornsby has figured but it cannot possibly approach in interest the transactions by which the champion senior loop batsman was traded first by St. Louis to New York and then by New York to Boston.

It was the suddenness of those moves that shocked baseball fandom. The Rajah had just piloted his Cardinals to their first world's championship when the Red Birds' management announced his transfer to the New York Giants for Fordham Frankie Frisch and Jimmy Ring. That was on December 20, 1926.

Hornsby had a big year with the Giants. So, Giant fans, too, were surprised when on January 10, 1928, it was announced that he would go to the Braves in exchange for Catcher Frank Hogan and Outfielder Jimmie Welsh.

The old St. Louis star performed in championship form with the Braves, capturing his sixth National league batting title and playing his usual brilliant game afield. He succeeded Jack Slattery as Boston manager in June and immediately sought to build up the team with major and minor league clubs, but his club finished last.

With the end of the season, the management began looking about for opportunities to trade its $40,000-a-year-star for playing material and cash with which to cut down a heavy deficit for the year.

In obtaining Hornsby from the Giants, the Braves assumed a two-year contract calling for an annual salary of $40,000. Then when he was elevated to the managership he was tendered a new six-year contract at the same salary. This proved an unbearable burden for a club attracting the meager "gates" the Braves did on their home field.

If the Braves do get Root and Maguire they will receive a pair of pretty good ball players. Maguire, a Toledo American association product, batted .277 and fielded well for the Cubs. Root, who is 29 years old, did not do so much in 1928 but he won 26 games to lead the National league in 1927. He won 14 and lost 18 in 1928.

As for the Cubs, they appear ready to do almost anything within reason to get Hornsby into a Chicago uniform. The Bruins have lost out on a couple of National league pennants in the last two years partly because of a weak infield. Owner William Wrigley and Manager Joe McCarthy believe Hornsby is the man they need to make the Cubs a pennant-winner.

Three Tilts Played In Big Six League

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 21 (AP)—Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas share leadership of the Big Six as the conference enters a period of titular clashes after nearly a month of the season has passed with only three games bearing on championship been played.

Each of the three leaders has played and won one Big Six game. Nebraska gained the top more than two weeks ago with a win over Iowa State while yesterday Missouri stopped Iowa State again and Kansas defeated the Kansas Aggies. The Cornhuskers from Nebraska took an important intersectional game from Syracuse. Oklahoma has not yet played a conference game.

CITY ELEVENS ON ALIEN GRIDS

Tribe To Arlington, Pack To Vernon This Week

Victors in their first conference games last week, Wichita Falls Junior college and high school elevens turn their attention to hard clashes this week, both on alien gridirons.

E. A. Baggett's Indians, who flashed some power Friday in repulsing Ranger junior college, 9-0 here, meet the North Texas Aggies Thursday at Arlington in their second conference engagement.

The Indians emerged from Friday's game without injuries and with Olin Dickey, a star back; Tom Black, guard, and Ed Howell, sub end, resorted to the squad this week by the meeting of scholastic requirements and indication that the fighting Bill Habern will be available at guard, prospects look good for the Aggie tilt.

Bud McCallum's Coyotes took a 12-7 verdict at Electra Saturday in their prep conference lid-tilter. Though statistics show the Electra lads outplayed the Pack, the Coyotes came back with the long end of the score. Thus they still are very much in the race for the title. Vernon will be their next conference foe next Saturday on the Lions' field.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The Army called on Harvard for the first time in a century.

The affair was such a success that Harvard wants to make it a centennial affair.

The West Point eleven pulled all the books off Harvard's seven-foot shelf and tore the lining out of the Boston Huddle.

This is what they call establishing better athletic relations.

He was told that he was only a plebe and must wait another year for that privilege.

It spoiled his whole visit.

2 CONFERENCE GAMES CARDED

Texas Plays Rice, Aggies Meet Arkansas Saturday

Leaders of the Southwest conference pigskin chase take a little breather this week and then it will be bang, bang down to Thanksgiving day.

Only two conference conflicts are scheduled Saturday, the browbeaten Texas Aggies trouping over to Fayetteville for a ruckus with the Arkansas Razorbacks and the increasingly respected Texas Longhorns swooping down on the luckless Rice Owls at Houston.

Three other members of the circuit hit what looks to be soft spots just before that final four weeks' struggle down the home stretch. The Baylor Bruins, flushed with their 28 to 7 chastisement of the cocky Centenary Gentlemen, entertain the St. Edwards' university Saints at Waco. The S. M. U. Mustangs, a 53-13 victory over the Rice Owls under their belts, take on the Trinity Tigers at Dallas. Coach Matty Bell's surprisingly efficient Texas Christian university Frogs meet the Texas Tech Matadors at Fort Worth.

Baylor Bears Rally

With the week's schedule holding nothing that promises to have any particular bearing on the outcome of the conference race, backfence critics can turn their attention the next six days to contemplation of the rapidly approaching climax of a chase as hard to dope out as any the Southwest conference has seen. Or they can dwell in retrospection upon the startling events of the past weekend. If ever a conference trip had the dopesters wondering which way to turn the present one has.

Probably the most significant event of the past week was the efficient manner in which the Baylor Bears riddled the Centenary Gents in their fray at Shreveport. Already counted out of the conference money, the Golden Bears gave a performance that presaged trouble for somebody before the season closes. What Washam and Gilliland, slippery Bear backs, did to Centenary they are likely to do some of the conference big boys.

And another factor that must be considered before the Mustangs and Lockhorns divide up the chips between them is that unbroken string of victories piled up by the Texas Christian. Not only are the Frogs sharing first place with the Ponies and Steers this week, but they thus far have given no indication of heading cellarward. Regarded in opening weeks of the season as about on a par with Rice, the Frogs appear determined to prove the sensations of the conference.

No Doubt About Frogs

If there was any doubt of the power of Matty Bell's eleven it was dispelled in Saturday's clash at College Station. Played to a standstill most of the way, the Frogs had enough left to sall into the conference champs and fight their way to a touchdown and victory in the last quarter. It has been agreed all along that the Farmers were weaker than last year, but the Christians' win over them Saturday is not to be taken lightly.

In Grubbs and Griffith the Frogs appear to have a pair of backs that will deal any club in the conference misery. Between them, the two marched half the length of the field to give the Frogs' victory in that last determined spurt against the Aggies.

Steers Show Power

The Longhorns' triumph over the Razorbacks had no surprise element attached. The Porkers put up an awful scrap for a while and then wilted before their powerful adversaries. Rufus King and Dexter Shelley and Baldwin and Beular took turns at ripping the Porker line until they had hung up a 20 to 7 victory. There doesn't appear a chance of the Longhorns being slowed down until they meet the Mustangs two weeks hence at Austin. That game might settle things for fair.

Neither the Mustangs nor the Longhorns should be extended to win this week so they promise to be primed and cocked for their tilt.

Koepke Victor In Auto Race

Dad Harrier Nosed Out In Last Lap Of Feature

Al Koepke of Topeka, Kan., captured the Texas-Oklahoma sweepstakes, feature race yesterday of the curtailed auto race meeting at the Fairgrounds here. The races, scheduled to have been held Saturday and Sunday, were called off Saturday on account of the small attendance.

There were 14 starters in the sweepstakes, which was led by Dad Harrier, 68-year-old driver, until the last lap when he was nosed out for first place by Koepke.

George Barringer, Wichita Falls driver, was forced to the pits early in the race with motor trouble.

Harrier and Koepke escaped an accident after receiving the finish flag when their cars crashed into Ralph Graves' mount, which had lost a wheel and stopped in the middle of the upper turn of the track. They managed to halt their cars and escaped injury and with no damage to the machine.

Griffin Cartheart, riding in a motorcycle race, was thrown from his bike but also escaped injury.

According to Don C. Onley, an official of the races, the meet will be held here again Sunday, Nov. 4.

Harrier won the class A race yesterday, the first event, of five miles, with Pat Cunningham of St. Joseph, Mo., second and George Barringer third. The time was five minutes, five seconds.

Ted Griffin of Wilson, Okla., won a dash of three miles in 4:02. Paul Mackey and Oscar Coleman, both of Dallas, were next.

Barringer won another three-mile affair in 3:18, with Cunningham second and Koepke third.

Barney Oman of Los Angeles and Koepke were the only drivers to retain straw hats on their heads in a novelty race and finished in that order.

Gus Labude of Lawton, Okla., won the 10-mile motorcycle race in 5:52.

Johnson, S. M. U.	3	0	0	18
Kiersky, Baylor	3	0	0	18
Washam, Baylor	3	0	0	18
Potter, Baylor	2	1	3	18

Running his total points for the season to an even five dozen, Redman Hume, Southern Methodist university flash, almost doubled the total of his nearest competitor for honors when he added 19 points to his string Saturday.

Burgess of A. & M., whose point total was stationary while his team took its second successive 6-to-0 beating, has 36 points to his credit, while Hume now boasts 60. Three players, McElreath of Baylor, Braden of Rice and Toler of T. C. U., dropped out of the list of leaders as a result of Saturday's games. They were replaced by Johnson of S. M. U., Washam of Baylor and Potter of Baylor.

Potter of Baylor qualifies as the most versatile scorer to date, having added to his team total by touchdowns, a field goal and by making points after touchdown. He is the first player in the conference to score in three departments and the first conference kicker to hang up a goal from the field.

Although she rolled up 53 points yesterday, the biggest total of any conference team for the day, S. M. U. was one point after touchdown short of the total team score collected by Baylor. The Bears have now chalked up 137 points and S. M. U. has 136. A. & M., in spite of two successive scoreless days, is in third place with 111.

Last week every team in the conference had scored more points than had been scored against it. This week two of the teams are in the red in that respect, Rice having scored only 57 against 90 points and Arkansas 42 against 45. T. C. U. retains the prettiest record of the conference, having beaten all comers to date, kept her goal line inviolate and yielded only three points, on a field goal, to opponents. Team statistics:

Team—	Won	Lost	Points	Op. Points
Baylor	4	1	137	21
S. M. U.	4	1	136	33
A. & M.	3	2	111	13

Gregory Quits As Leader Of Oklahoma City Club

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 21. 5 CONTENDERS IN BIG 10 RACE

Minnesota, Illini and Ohio State Stay in Fight

CHICAGO, Oct. 21 (AP)—Minnesota, Illinois and Ohio State were shoved farther forward in the race for the Western conference gridiron championship as the result of yesterday's games, with Wisconsin sliding backward, its championship aspirations dimmed.

The situation tonight finds the Badgers somewhat out of the championship rating as the result of being held to a 19 to 19 tie by Perdue. The surprising result of the combat was the most significant of yesterday's games, as all other contests ran fairly true to form.

Ohio State heaped more grief on Michigan, beating the Wolverines 19 to 7. Minnesota slaughtered Chicago, 33 to 7, while Illinois whipped Indiana, 13 to 7.

Iowa and Northwestern chalked up non-conference victories, the Hawkeyes burying Ripon college under a 61 to 6 score, while Northwestern snatched a 7 to 0 victory from the Wildcats of the Blue Grass state.

Iowa's chances for fame in a race will come up next Saturday when the Hawkeyes meet Minnesota at Iowa City. Iowa was licked before it started last year, but there is a strong suspicion prevailing that the boys from the Tall Corn state will uncover some surprising football against the bone crushers from Minnesota.

The game will have an important bearing on the championship race and dominates the card of five games Saturday. Illinois will have Northwestern to dispose of at Urbana, while Ohio State will meet the Indiana outfit at Bloomington. Michigan probably faces more misery in taking on Wisconsin at Ann Arbor while Purdue will seek revenge over Amos Alonzo Stagg's much mauled Maroons at Chicago.

DEATH FINDS SINGER BITTER

One-Time Prima Donna Is Victim Of Poison

CHICAGO, Oct. 21 (AP).—Belle Applegate played her last part in the drama of life yesterday and today, in death, she was the center of a new drama. Its first scene ended with the reading of a farewell letter in which she accused her country of ingratitude to a one-time prima donna and her brother of withholding the legacy left by her husband. Monday a new scene will open in the county offices, with the public administrator ready to take his cue.

"The end of an opera star," the woman wrote at the close of a bitter note explaining why she took poison. Once, as Mme. Phedris Ago'n, she smiled at the plaudits of operagoers in the capitals of Europe. A few days ago, no longer a star, but still hopeful of a place in the cast of the Chicago Civic opera, she came here from her Louisville, Ky., home for an audition.

She never kept the engagement. Illness quenched hope, and in an Evanston hotel they found her, dying from a self-administered potion, and nearby a half-dozen notes of heart-broken explanation.

She might have clung to life, she wrote, had the money left by her husband come ,nto her possession. Before he died, a World war victim, he entrusted to her a brown, sealed envelope which was not to be opened until his death.

"It will make you independent for life," she said he told her. But she had not needed the money, with her earnings in opera and his insurance to support her. Then, when she sought the trunk in which she had locked the envelope, "no member of my family would answer me or send a card concerning it." The trunk was in possession of a brother, Dr. Joseph Applegate of Detroit, she charged.

Relatives have claimed her body, and it was to be sent to Louisville for burial. Meanwhile, in the absence of a will, the public administrator assumed charge of an investigation into the "brown envelope" of which she wrote, and a coroner's jury was sworn in to be ready for an inquest.

Opera Artists To Miss New Season

CHICAGO, Oct. 21 (AP).—With the opening of the civic opera season only 10 days distant, and several new artists already here rehearsing for debuts, word came from Buenos Aires today that another of the principal artists of the Chicago company will be away this year.

Claudia Muzio cabled that ill health of her mother would prevent her leaving the South American city to fulfill her contract with the civic opera.

Rosa Raisa has already advised the company that she could not return from Italy for the season. She is an expectant mother.

Today { At the Theaters

MAJESTIC: Colleen Moore in "Oh Kay." Comedy. Topics of the Day. Paramount newsreel.

STRAND: "King of Kings," with H. B. Warner and an all-star cast. Special vitaphone short subjects. Pathe newsreel.

OLYMPIC: Conrad Nagel and May McAvoy in "If I Were Single." Comedy. Pathe newsreel. Bill Saling at the Wurlitzer pipe organ. China matinee from 12 to 6 p. m.

MISSION: "Mullen's Musical Maids," with 16 persons in the cast. On the screen, "Swift Shadow," with Ranger, the wonder dog. Comedy.

GARDEN: Last times of Hoot Gibson in "Riding for Fame." Comedy.

GEM: Last times of "Foreign Devils," with Tim McCoy. Comedy.

No greater sermon was preached Sunday in Wichita Falls than that taught by the presentation of "King of Kings" at the Strand theater.

This assertion is corroborated not only by opinions expressed by many who crowded the Strand theater on Sunday, but also by the fact that the Sunday audience included many persons not in the habit of frequenting theaters on the Sabbath.

Much of the impressiveness of the production is due to synchronization. Biblical truths are more impressive when accompanied by appropriate music. A choir of unusual volume and training is employed to add color to dramatic scenes in the picture.

The Jews offer to the Savior an earthly crown to the accompaniment of Hosannas sung by an invisible choir. The wrath of the Almighty in crashing asunder the mountains and in rending the skies with thunderbolts following the crucifixion of His Son is heard as well as seen to a strident discord of brass instruments.

"King of Kings" shows one diversion from "Ben Hur" and other picturizations of the life of Christ in that the Christ role is played and not symbolized. In "Ben Hur" when the presence of the Christ was necessary, only the hand of the Savior was ever visible. But the fineness of the fiber of the Son of Man is creditably taken by H. B. Warner, cast in the role of Jesus in "King of Kings."

Cecil B. DeMille, director of the production, makes more than his wonted use of symbolism in this picture. And the more one knows of the Bible the more highly does he appreciate the fine points of the settings.

Nor should those of purely secular mind remain away. The superpicture is laid amid a richness of impressive scenes calling for the maximum number of superlatives.

Another point in favor of "King of Kings" is that one is not led through scenes depicting the Nativity. Pictures of the life of Christ have usually thus been opened.

H. B. Warner and Rudolph Schildkraut in "King of Kings," now running at the Strand theater.

Colleen Moore in "Oh Kay" offers a contrast to the heavy picture just discussed. She plays a comedy role in the picture now being shown at the Majestic theater.

Announcement has been made by C. M. Morehead of the Mission theater that there will be three complete changes of vaudeville program weekly by Joe Mullen, who heads "Mullen's Musical Maids," appearing here for an indefinite engagement.

Bill Saling opened his season at the Olympic theater as pipe organist and accompanist Sunday, when he gave a group of accordion selections in addition to his program on the Olympic Wurlitzer. Mr. Saling is said to be one of the most versatile artists in the South.

Royal Birthdays On Roumania's Calendar

BUCHAREST, Oct. 21 (AP).—Within the next 10 days Roumania will observe two royal birthdays with national festivities and pomp.

Oct. 25 the nation will felicitate little King Michael on his seventh birthday, while on Oct. 29 it will wish many happy returns to dowager Queen Marie on the fifty-third anniversary of her birth. Already large quantities of toys and other birthday gifts have arrived from abroad for King Michael, who is living with his mother, Princess Helen, at Bucharest in the house abandoned by former Crown Prince Carol.

Queen Marie is confined to her country villa at Balcik, suffering from an attack of influenza. Her doctors, however, believe she will be recovered in time to receive birthday congratulations from her friends at home and abroad.

CHURCH HERE OPENS REVIVAL

South Side Baptists Hold Special Services

A two weeks revival service began at the South Side Baptist church with the Sunday morning services when Rev. T. J. Furniss, pastor, delivered a sermon "Consecration." He preached on "A Revival" at the evening services.

Beginning Monday for a period of two weeks, services will be held by Rev. Mr. Furniss at 10 o'clock each morning and 7:30 o'clock each evening, except Sunday morning when the regular 11 o'clock service will be held.

Special music will be given at each service with C. P. Mosley in charge of the singing. The Sunday services were attended by responsive congregations. Rev. Furniss said.

COMES
"Flying to Fame"

Zooming down from the clouds came a strange plane, motor full on, in spite of its precipitous dive. Slim jammed his throttle wide and their own ship leaped forward like a greyhound.

Still the stranger seemed to gain.

The wind screamed through their struts.

Suddenly Tubby shouted: "Look, they're firing on us!"

A curious wisp of smoke seemed to dance in front of the pursuing plane. As they watched they could follow the course of the tracer bullets, as they burned by, like slivers of rainbow light. Tubby, bracing himself in the caroming cabin, raised his rifle to his shoulder. Before he could fire, there was a crash of splintering glass. The tracer bullets had found their target.
