Midwest Hit By Storms

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A line of thunderstorms swept across the Midwest Wednesday night and early today, leaving at least two persons dead and causing widespread power outages.

Thunderstorms also boomed across most areas of Texas, from the Panhandle to the Gulf Coast, but there was more wind than precipitation at most places.

Vicious thunderstorms accompanied by torrential rain, winds of 80 mph and hail raked Lower Michigan Wednesday night, leaving at least one person dead and three others missing when two sailboats capsized in the Detroit River.

Detroit Edison Co. had damage "scattered all over the place," according to a spokesman, who estimated that 30,000 Edison customers were blacked out. Half of those were in Detroit.

Consumers Power Co. estimated at least 20,000 of its customers were without electricity because of downed lines.

Funnel clouds were sighted in the Chicago, Springfield and East St. Louis areas, but authorities said none of the twisters were seen on the ground.

The Wednesday night showers were a good example of how West Texas nearly always has to pay for its rain.

A long, uncomplicated shower is almost as rare as a hurricane for Lubbock and the South Plains, and the joy of rain is usually tempered by the distress of hail, sand, lightning, gale-force winds or even tornadoes.

While a sandstorm blasted the South Plains Wednesday night and funnel clouds threatened— but failed—to scare the dickens out of Dickens, area towns and cities recorded up to more than a half-inch of hard-won rain.

Lubbock had .15 at Lubbock International Airport to bring its 1978 total to 7.70 and remain far behind the 10.20 recorded at this point last year.

Other totals were .41 at Abernathy, .20 at Crosbyton, .08 at Dimmitt, .10 at Floydada, .27 at Hereford, .57 at Jayton, .02 at Levelland, .15 at Tulia, .05 at Matador, .39 at Paducah, .12 at Plains, Plainview and Post, .14 at Seminole, .01 at Silverton, .16 at Snyder, .09 at Spur and .54 at Tahoka.

Temperatures soared again over much of the area Wednesday, reaching 106 at Matador and Paducah. Seminole recorded 102 and Spur, Jayton and Lamesa all had 101. It was an even 100 at Plainview and Post.

Lubbock's high was a relatively cool 95.

The forecast calls for clear to partly cloudy skies today, tonight and Friday, temperatures in the low 90s today, high 60s tonight and high 90s Friday and light and variable winds today and tonight.

Rain reports at Hub City fire stations were of .05 at 918 Zenith Ave., .04 at 3320 35th St. and .18 at 4814 50th St.

Dickens County Sheriff Bill Stone reported sighting a couple of funnel clouds Wednesday night but said they did not touch the ground.

Northeasterly winds rushed to 25 mph in Lubbock and gusted to 50 mph in Lynn County, where policemen said some windows were blown out in Tahoka.

The turbulent weather developed as a weak cold front that had been stalled over the Panhandle broke loose and came down through the South Plains, weathermen said.

Thunderstorms and showers were spread from near El Paso to San Angelo.

Union Panel Votes Down Postal Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the nation's largest postal union voted against a proposed labor contract today, but decided to to submit the tentative settlement to rank-and-file members for a ratification vote.

The national bargaining advisory committee of the American Postal Workers Union voted 29-to-15 against the tentative three-year accord. But then the committee voted 30-to-9 to send the proposed contract to the union's 280,000 rank-and-file members for a ratification vote.

But at least one member of the committee threatened to go to federal court to block the move, saying it violates the union's constitution.

The proposed contract aready has sparked wildcat walkouts at mail centers on the East and West Coasts.

The APWU president, Emmet Andrews, who was one of the negotiators for the accord reached with the Postal Service last Friday, said in getting approval to send the contract to the rank-and-file: "I would urge that they ratify it," he said.

John Richards, president of the Pittsburgh area local, said he planned to file suit in U.S. District Court here to stop Andrews from issuing the contract for ratification.

Richards said the principal objections by local leaders was that the wage increase is not high enough and that local officials were unhappy with about six work rule provisions, including the Postal Service's right to continue assigning mandatory overtime.

Andrews noted that in previous years when there was strong opposition from local leaders to proposed contracts, the contracts were ratified by the rank-and-file anyway.

The APWU is one of four unions that represent a total of 554,000 postal workers. It is the only one that calls for an advisory committee vote.

All four unions are expected to send out mail ballots within a week, and the results likely will not be known until at least mid-August.

Meanwhile, postal officials here said wildcat strikes by union members at facilities serving New York and California were slowly abating.

Postal Service officials said worker attendance improved Wednesday at bulk mail centers for New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles, where some employees walked off the job last Friday to protest the contract.

Ninety percent of the work force was on the job today at Kearny, N.J., and at the New York center in Jersey City, N.J., as effects of the work stoppage continued to fade.

Attendance at the San Francisco center in Richmond, Calif., reached 74 percent for the Wednesday morning shift, up from 69 percent the day before. Attendance at the Los Angeles center was 90 percent for the Wednesday morning shift, McLean said.

The Postal Service has sent letters of dismissal to 92 employees at the three centers for participating in the walkouts, which are prohibited by federal law. More dismissals were likely, said McLean.

He added that processing of packages and second-and third-class mail was running close to normal despite the walkouts.

Water Crisis Brings Annexation Appeal

By SYLVIA TEAGUE

Residents of the Yellowhouse Canyon addition southeast of Lubbock say they have been without water for days and weeks at a time.

This morning about 15 of the residents presented a petition with 71 signatures asking the City Council to annex the area so they can receive city water.

Although council members were sympathetic to the plight of the waterless residents, any council action must go through channels and it looks like a long, hot summer before the water situation is resolved.

Robert L. Gibson of 4215 E. 61st St. told the council the lack of water from a private water system has "totally paralyzed the area with fear.

"Not having water has plagued the neighborhood the past two summers, and often there is no water in fire hydrants or in mains," Gibson said.

When there is no water, residents must "travel across town to take baths or to get water for sanitary purposes. We can't run our air conditioning or care for our yards or gardens," he said.

"It's reducing our lifestyle to primitive levels."

Willie Washington, director of the Lubbock County General Assistance Agency, described the water situation as "dangerous and critical."

Residents say they have not been able to learn who owns the private water company, and they also said there are rumors that one of two wells supplying water to the addition has gone dry.

The Planning and Zoning Commission, which must take up all annexation requests, will consider the Yellowhouse Canyon residents' plea to be added to the city as a "high priority item." The commission will then recommend action on the request to the City Council.

While the matter is under consideration, city officials will investigate the possibility of selling area residents emergency water. However, that action would require an agreement with a private system owner.

In other action this morning, council members decided to give home builders a one-year trial period to bury electric cables directly underground rather than enclosed in a plastic conduit as required by city ordinance.

Henry Huneke, representing the West Texas Home Builders Association, said the conduit is too expensive and does not adequately protect the cable as it is supposed to do.

Under the agreement with the home builders, electric cable between alley and house would be buried three feet underground, rather than two feet as is presently required. Huneke also promised his organization would police cable burial to prevent future accidental service cutoffs.

The council postponed action on two

Man Slain In Hassle Over Car

By PAT CARLSON

A 35-year-old car lot owner was shot to death today when he and a companion attempted to repossess a pickup at an East Lubbock residence.

William Tommy Wright of 1318 25th St. died at 9:50 a.m. at West Texas Hospital, an hour after gunfire erupted at an E. Bates Street house.

Wright and Rodney Peterson, 33, who reportedly lives at the 4406 Ave. H car lot, both were fired upon by an angry resident in the driveway of the home. Peterson was grazed on the inside left forearm, but was not hospitalized.

Police arrested a 33-year-old man at the scene.

According to police, Wright and Peterson backed their wrecker into the driveway and hooked onto the pickup. As the vehicle was being lifted, its owner came out of the house with a .22-caliber rifle and walked to the wrecker.

Peterson said that when he and Wright saw the weapon pointed at them, they stated they were not armed and told the resident they had papers from a Slaton bank to repossess the truck.

Faced with the firearm, Wright and Peterson reportedly then told the man they would lower the pickup back to the ground. Peterson got out of the wrecker and walked back to the hoist as Wright stayed behind the wheel.

Wright, sitting in the wrecker with both its doors open, reportedly told the dis-

BOB BERGLAND
Opposes Change In Laws

Bergland Lauds Farm Co-Ops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland today defended farm cooperatives and warned against tinkering with federal laws in an effort to increase competition in the marketing of the nation's food.

"Before any law or set of laws is declared 'obsolete', it is absolutely essential to understand what the consequences of change will be," Bergland said.

The secretary's comments were in testimony for the National Commission for the Review of Antitrust Laws and Procedures, which is looking into allegations that some large farm co-ops have used their muscle unfairly to enhance food prices and cut out competition.

"When you deal with the food supply of an entire nation, and the livelihood of those who produce it, experimentation must be approached with extreme caution," Bergland told the panel.

Almost three years ago, a staff report by the Federal Trade Commission said that while some cooperatives are beneficial to both consumers and producers, "other cooperatives dominate certain product areas such as milk and some fruits, vegetables and nuts. The market power of many of these cooperatives appears to be enhanced by federal and state marketing orders."

On Jan. 17, 1977, a few days before the Carter administration took office, the Justice Department antitrust division issued a report on milk marketing in which questions about co-ops generally were raised, including the possibility of reshaping the Capper-Volstead Act of 1922 and putting co-ops "on an equal footing" with other corporations.

Bergland, a former Minnesota farmer and co-op member, said that "my own view, I believe well supported by history, experience and research, is that the Capper-Volstead Act and our marketing or-

Teachers' Pay Increase Defended By Officials

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With Wednesday's school board-approved pay hike, Lubbock teachers this fall will be making at least 15 percent — and as much as 22 percent — more than they did two years ago.

But Lubbock Independent School District administrators say teacher salaries here still are not competitive with the private sector or with many other Texas school systems.

Charting the rise in school employee salaries is a difficult task because they are affected by three different factors:

—The state sets minimum salary schedules for all Texas school districts. In its two most recent biennial sessions, the Legislature has raised these base pay levels significantly. And even though 1978 is an "off year" for the Legislature, the current school finance bill provides for a small increase in the base for the coming year.

—The state pay scales are structured so that for each year of service, most teachers advance a step on the salary ladder. An exception is that teachers must stay on the top rung of the ladder for two years. Thus, top-experienced teachers do not move up a step immediately.

—Using their own tax monies, local school districts supplement the state minimum salaries through "local increments."

Here are some examples of what has happened in Lubbock when all those factors are compounded.

In the 1976-77 school year, the state base pay for a beginning teacher with a bachelor's degree was $8,000. Lubbock's local increment for that level was $503, meaning a local salary of $8,500.

For the 1977-78 year, this teacher has moved to Step 1 (one year's experience). The state base for that level had just been increased, to $8,740. With the local $500 increment, the Lubbock teacher made $9,240.

For the coming year, the same teacher moves to Step 2. The state base for that level will be $9,110. The Lubbock school board plans to raise the local increment to $700, for a $9,810 salary.

In effect, this teacher will be paid 15.4

Four Survive Blast, Sharks

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Two men and two boys, tossed into the Atlantic when their 28-foot pleasure boat exploded, survived a night floating 300 yards away from where several sharks were tearing at the body of a dead female companion.

As they waited for rescue, bolts of lightning knifed through the sea around them.

"Visibility was down to about zero," Coast Guard Chief Boatswain's Mate John Langhorn said Wednesday, hours after the four survivors were brought to Edisto Beach, S.C., where they refused medical treatment.

An Edisto Beach resident had reported seeing the explosion Tuesday night at 8 p.m. The survivors were rescued about 12 hours later.

The lightning may have saved the survivors from the sharks.

"It surprised me these four stayed together and didn't get attacked by sharks," said Deputy Sheriff James Craven. "Maybe the only thing that saved them was the sharp lightning we had." Lightning struck the water near the survivors several times during the night, Coast Guard officials said.

Craven said the explosion threw everybody but Larry Coyle, 65, of Charleston from the boat. He jumped in when it was apparent the boat would sink, said Craven.

The survivors tied themselves together in a circle, with lifejackets and floating cushions from the boat. They saw that the woman had been killed in the explosion and cut her adrift, Craven said.

The crew of a 41-foot search boat found the survivors still tied together and floating about 5-to-8 miles off Edisto Island.

A Coast Guard helicopter pilot spotted the woman's body later. Crewmen stood on the helicopter's rescue platform battling sharks with a boat hook until they were able to retrieve the body of Barbara Ann Woodham, 58, of Charleston.

Charleston County Coroner Ray Shokes said the woman's body was severely mutilated.

Petty Officer 2nd Class David Giza said he was told by one of the survivors that the woman had died when a gas line on the "Miss Anne" exploded and the vessel caught fire.

Besides Coyle, the survivors were identified as Sam Boger, 39, of Summerville, owner of the boat; his son, Earl Boger, 15, and Jay Johnson, 12, of Summerville.

Despite persistent storms, Coast Guard officials say the search vessel and the 95-foot cutter "Cape Morgan" searched for survivors or debris all Tuesday night. The only helicopter that could reach the area ran out of fuel and had to return to base.

Two helicopters returned to the scene early Wednesday. The survivors were taken off the search boat by helicopter.

Craven, who investigated the accident, said the "Miss Anne" had left Edisto Marina Tuesday around 6:30 a.m. to go fishing in the Gulfstream, 50-to-60 miles offshore.

"They fished all day and were on their way back in, when they ran into problems with the fuel pressure in one of two tanks built into the boat," said Craven.

"The engine sputtered and backfired. That's when the explosion occurred."

Five Surveyors Trying To Determine If White House Sinking

WASHINGTON (AP) — On his bad days, Jimmy Carter probably thinks for sure the White House is sinking. Surveyors are trying to find out if it is.

On his good days, it might seem to the president that the White House is rising above the swamp on which much of the nation's capital is built. The surveyors are looking at that possibility, too.

Using stainless steel rods, tape measures and computers, a team from the national geodetic survey branch of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration is trying to determine whether the White House is actually on its way up or down or just holding steady.

The five surveyors are in the midst of making precise measurements and calculations to determine if the four-story, 132-room executive mansion, with 150 other rooms in two wings, is being moved ever so minutely by shifts in the earth that could crack the walls and weaken the structure.

It's too early to tell whether the White House is rising, falling or staying put, said NOAA officials. Significant shifts are not expected. None was discovered when a similar survey was made four years ago.

But there have been some shifts since the last extensive White House renovation, done during the Harry S. Truman administration. A survey shortly after the work was completed in 1952 turned up a subsidence of four-hundredths of an inch.

During that renovation, wooden timbers were replaced with steel and a concrete foundation was sunk 24 feet below the basement.

The soil on which the White House is built "is not the most stable earth in the metropolitan area," said Rex Scouten, the chief White House usher, who requested the survey.

The only structure between the White House and the Potomac River one-half mile to the south is the 81,120-ton Washington Monument, built on swampland. Using the monument as a guide, the White House could be sinking.

If the obelisk keeps dropping at the current rate of 0.47 feet a century, all 6,666 inches of the monument will be gone from view in 113,000 years, "give or take a few thousand years," said Jack Stringer, a spokesman for the geodetic survey.

Stringer said that when the team of five government surveyors placed a new marker on the White House South Lawn, near the tennis court, they drilled 26 feet into the soil and hit only one rock. The marker will be used in future examinations as a reference point.

The current survey began Wednesday and was due to be completed today. Then, at least 10 days of computations will be needed to compare the new figures with previous measurements to determine whether a shift is taking place.

The surveyors use "benchmarks" placed in the White House over the last 26 years. Holes have been drilled in the outer walls, lined with tubes and plugged.

Orchestra Files Lawsuit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Members of the Electric Light Orchestra have filed a $200 million lawsuit to prevent a record distributor from selling what they say are damaged albums for half their going price.

The suit, filed Wednesday in Los Angeles Superior Court against United Artists Music and Record Group, Inc., alleges United Artists withheld 760,000 copies of the album "Out Of The Blue" from the inventory being sold by Jet Records and United Artists and improperly stored them, causing warping.

Jet Records and band members Jeff Lynne and Bev Bevan alleged that unless United Artists is barred from selling the albums, the company will "dump" the records by selling them at prices lower than Jet currently charges its own distributors.

Where Is Elvis' Motorcycle?

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A Baltimore entertainer says he owns Elvis Presley's customized motorcycle and the late singer's personal Bible. No way, counters Presley's father, Vernon.

The possession flap erupted after auctioneer Vic Mattucci announced that entertainer Jimmy Velvet planned to sell the bike, Bible, Presley desk and other mementoes at an auction near Baltimore Aug. 5.

Mattucci says he can't believe the elder Presley's statement. "It's like unbelievable. This stuff was all sold by Vernon Presley in the ballroom of the Regency Hyatt Hotel in Nashville on Dec. 14, 1977," he said Wednesday.

The suit states that five new "Laugh-in" productions were turned out by Schlatter beginning Sept. 5, 1977, without specific permission and approval of the two stars and their Romart Corp. The Schlatter firm also was producer of the original "Laugh-in" shows.

Castro Blasts President

MIAMI (AP) — Fidel Castro assailed the human rights push of President Carter while the United States maintains relations with "the racists of South Africa" and the "Zionists who have uprooted the Palestine people."

"How can they talk about human rights in a country where a millionaire and beggar live side by side; where the Indian has been exterminated, the Negro discriminated, women demoralized, and great numbers of Chicanos, Puerto Ricans and Latin-Americans are hated, exploited and humiliated," said the Cuban president in a Wednesday night speech to mark the 25th anniversary of his revolution.

On July 26, 1953, Castro and his followers attacked the army barracks in Santiago de Cuba, leading to the downfall of former President Fulgencio Batista.

Castro criticized U.S. relations with "the racists of South Africa who have oppressed 20 million Africans" and "the aggressive Zionists who have uprooted the Palestine people from their lands and have prevented them from returning to their Arab countries."

In his two-hour speech, Castro said that every U.S. president has a rhetorical phrase for Latin America.

ARNOLD MILLER

UMW Board Turns Down Recall Effort

DENVER (UPI) — The United Mine Workers International Executive Board adjourned its meeting two days early, dismissing a recall effort against union President Arnold Miller on constitutional grounds and giving him a vote of confidence.

"We have completed a very productive board meeting and handled some divisive activity and put that to rest," Miller said after the board adjourned Wednesday. He said the recall effort failed to follow the UMW constitution.

"You must file charges before you get petitions. There have been a lot allegations, but no charges. And there is a hell of a lot of difference between allegations and charges," he said.

Attorney H. John Rogers, representing Miners for Recall, the group seeking Miller's ouster, said a court suit would be filed.

"A majority of the UMW's International Executive Committee Board has usurped the constitutional powers of the rank and file," Rogers said in a statement issued from Martinsville, W.Va. "Suit will be filed at the appropriate time to regress this usurpation."

The board meeting opened Tuesday to consider organizational and energy development-related issues. It was scheduled to last through Friday, but Miller said board members moved rapidly through the agenda and finished work early.

West Virginia miners organized the recall effort against Miller, 55, who recently recovered from a stroke and heart attack. He said the ouster attempt was started because of dissatisfaction with his election and his health problems.

"My doctor says I am able to work normal 8- to 10-hour days. It (the recall) is a moot question right now. In the past six years I have been through of a lot of controversy," he said. n

The executive board voted 14-5 with four abstentions tc reject the recall petitions on the constitutional grounds, Miller said. The board followed the action with a vote of confidence for him and the other executive officers.

"If they want to recall me, they will have to start all over," Miller said, referring to a section of the UMW constitution requiring that charges be filed against him first.

Bill Bryant, a spokesman for the dissident Miners for Recall, said 31,000 signatures had been collected on petitions calling for Miller's ouster. Neither Bryant nor any member of his group attended the board meeting.

Miller assumed the UMW presidency in 1972 after the ouster of W.A. "Tony" Boyle, now serving a prison term for ordering the murder of a former UMW opponent.

Miller won a second term in 1977 with only 40 percent of the vote against two other candidates and headed the union during the 111-day strike against the nation's coal companies this year, the longest nationwide strike in the union's history.

"I am going to finish out this term and run again. All these detractors in the union have been divisive. The next time around, they get their horse in the races and let's run. I'll beat them again," Miller said.

Philip Crane Eyes Presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Philip Crane, a conservative from Illinois, says he will seek the 1980 Republican nomination for president and will make a formal announcement sometime before Labor Day.

Crane on Wednesday met privately for about 25 minutes with Ronald Reagan, who unsuccessfully sought the GOP presidential nomination in 1976, and told him of his plans.

The congressman, who was Reagan's Illinois campaign manager in 1976, said Reagan did not appear surprised at his decision and that he believes the former California governor might also seek the GOP nomination.

If Crane announces his candidacy before Labor Day, he most likely will become the first formal presidential contender for 1980.

A number of other prominent Republicans — including Reagan, former president Gerald R. Ford, and Sens. Robert Dole of Kansas and Howard Baker of Tennessee — have been active in speaking tours, but none has yet to say publicly he will run.

As a newcomer to a national candidacy, Crane, 47, said he was making the early move in an attempt to gain recognition. "Without the name of Ford or Reagan it's going to take a lot more work," he said in a telephone interview Wednesday night.

An informed source, who declined to be identified, said Crane requested the meeting with Reagan, the conservative who narrowly lost to Ford in the 1976 GOP race for president and who has made clear he has not ruled out running in 1980.

Reagan was in the nation's capital because of a Republican fund-raiser.

Asked about Crane, the 67-year-old Reagan declined to go into what was discussed during the meeting, but called the Illinois congressman "a very articulate man...a fine Republican."

Crane during the past year has maintained an active speaking schedule around the country and has become a prominent figure among conservative Republicans.

Elected to Congress in 1969, he represents Illinois' 12th District in suburban Chicago. He is a former professor at Bradley University in Peoria, Ill., and was an early supporter of Barry Goldwater, the party's presidential nominee in 1964, and Reagan in 1976.

Carter Backing Ouster Of GSA's No. 2 Man

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter reportedly supports ousting the deputy director of the troubled General Services Administration, the chief supply and rental agent for the federal government.

GSA Director Jay Solomon asked Carter's permission to seek deputy Robert T. Griffin's resignation, the Washington Post said in today's editions.

Quoting unnamed administration sources, the Post said Solomon was convinced that he cannot control the agency as long as GSA employees are unsure which of the two men — he or Griffin — is in charge.

The decision came amid allegations of corruption at the agency aired in news stories by The Associated Press, the Post and at hearings by a Senate subcommittee.

Solomon was named to head the GSA over a year ago while Griffin has been there 35 years.

Griffin is a friend of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., who tried unsuccessfully to have Griffin named GSA director.

Carter says he's disturbed by the accusations of widespread corruption and that he wants the problems cleared up.

He gave unqualified support to the efforts of Solomon to rid the agency of the practices and the people who investigators say have engaged in illegal activities for years.

'Sweeps' Form State Guild

NOTTINGHAM, N.H. (UPI) — Fourteen of the state's chimney sweeps have formed what they say is the nation's first statewide chimney sweep guild to clean their ranks of cheats and publicize safety tips on wood-burning stoves.

Dennis Furry, 38, who runs Robin Goodfellow's Chimney Sweeps, said the increasing popularity of woodburning stoves is bound to produce new legislation regulating stove installation and chimney sweeps.

"We want to get the jump on it," he said. "We'll police our own people."

"There's a lot of chimney sweeps who really don't know what they're doing," Furry said.

"We call them 'bagmen.' They drop a bag of sand down the chimney, collect the money and leave. They're giving us a bad name."

Furry said the number of newcomers to the profession — including women — has "grown tremendously" because 51 percent of New Hampshire's residents burn wood and need someone to clean their chimneys.

Furry, a school teacher who turned to sweeping a year ago to make some extra money, said the group hopes to work with state officials on drafting new laws.

"There's got to be some legislation," he said.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

At No Loss For Wards

WHATEVER THEIR personal views in the matter, Lubbock school trustees have a duty to defend against every point raised in a federal court suit to force a ward system on the district.

The incumbent trustees were elected at-large and, unless and until that system is changed by a majority vote of the people who elected them, the trustees are honor-bound to do all they can to preserve the system.

We therefore find it more than a little distressing that the trustees appear undecided about how to respond to the lawsuit filed by several black and brown residents. That legal response should be full and automatic.

THERE ARE PRO and con arguments, some of them valid and others not so pertinent, on both sides of the question whether school trustees or city councilmen should be elected from geographical wards rather than at-large.

In our opinion, however, this is a political decision and not one that properly should be decided by judicial decree.

The right of self-determination in governmental affairs is basic to the American political process. The state and federal courts should not force any system on the people, but should let the people themselves determine how to govern themselves.

Under the doctrine that all men are created equal—and under the Constitutional prohibition against discrimination on account of race—a ward system drawn up to more or less guarantee the election of any person on account of race is clearly suspect.

Under the doctrine of separation of powers, the courts ought not interfere in a legislative expression of the people's will in self-government. Courts should, rather, content themselves with the judicial side of government.

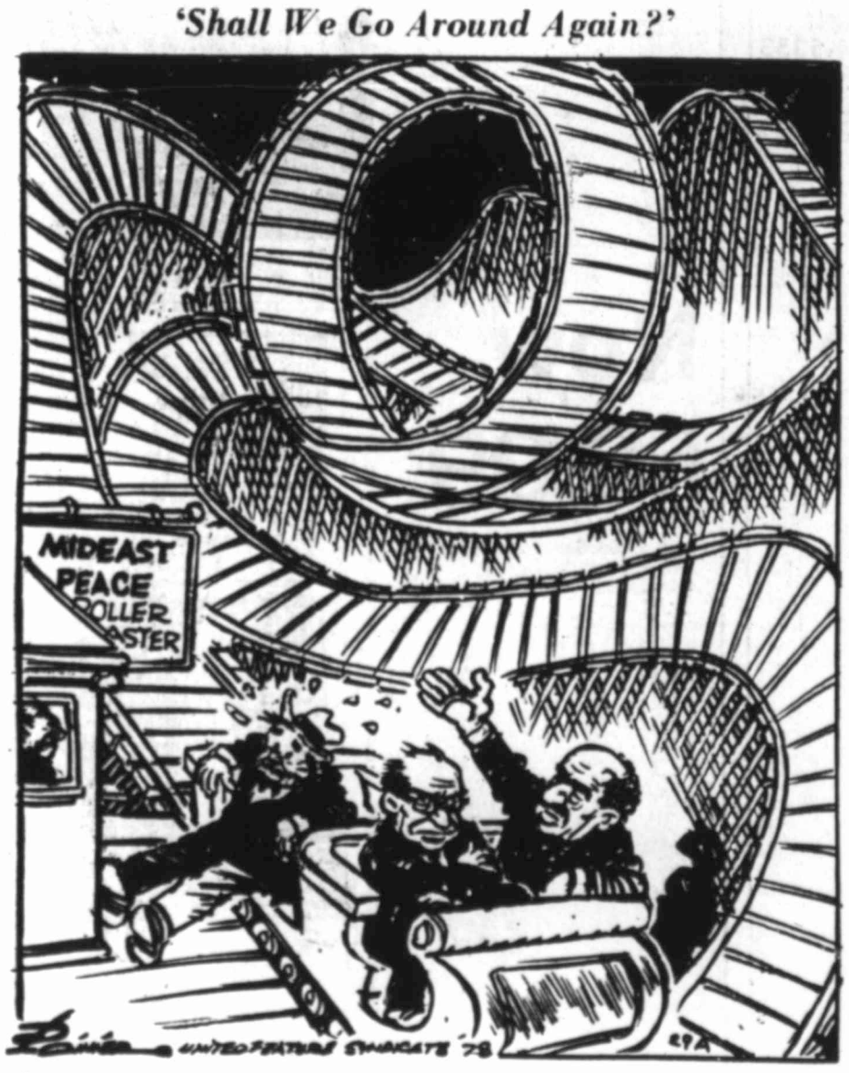
IF A CITY OR school district votes to have ward elections, then the courts would have the duty to make certain that no group or geographical area was unfairly represented or discriminated against.

If the voters will, however, that trustees and councilmen be elected at-large, then there can be no question but that each person's vote—be he black, brown or white—has precisely the same weight as any other person's vote.

If a court rules that such an at-large system discriminates on the basis of race, the court itself is guilty of a racial bias.

School trustees should not be a party to any erosion of basic American human rights of self-determination. It is their duty to defend the Lubbock taxpayers against any abuse of judicial powers, notwithstanding their own views on whether the voters should adopt a ward system.

'Shall We Go Around Again?'



ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May

An A'Resting View

REPORTS THAT I spent a whole week in the mountains doing absolutely nothing are vicious exaggerations started by My Sweet Wife.

In the first place, it wasn't a week. It was only five days.

In the second place, on the third day I arose and started the car. Drove it forward a foot, reversed it to the starting point, killed the motor, got out, shut the door and looked MSW straight in the eye.

"There, now," I said, "you can't go telling anybody I didn't move the car all week."

The five days on the Rio Ruidoso were, in fact, filled with activity. I had promised the guys at the office that I would think of them slaving in my absence.

I keep my promises. This one I kept at precisely 2:10 p.m. (Mountain Time) on the second day of my sojourn. It's important not to procrastinate in such matters.

JUDGE AND MRS. M.C. Ledbetter of Morton saw to it that we were well entertained throughout our stay.

We kept Mr. and Mrs. Cy Fields of Morton up past midnight once, for example, just sitting by the river and telling stories.

To be honest about it, the only story I remember at this time was told by Mrs. Fields. It harked back to the days of the brush arbor revival meetings Somewhere in Texas.

"Everybody would leave their babies asleep in the wagons," she said, "while they went to the meeting just a few feet away. Then, they'd climb in and drive home late that night.

"One dark night, though, a bunch of the older boys switched all the babies around—and nobody knew until they got home that they had the wrong kid with them."

THE CLYDE BROWNLOWS of Amherst filled the void left in our lives when the Fieldses couldn't stand sleeping under electric blankets in mid-July any longer.

Between them and the Ledbetters, my sleep was limited to about 14 hours a day. That accounts for why I came back to work this week without being fully rested.

Hopefully, though, when I come to that day of Permanent Retirement I won't run in to anything like what Mrs. Ledbetter says happened to her mother.

"She had taught school all her life," she recalls, "and a lot of her former students, covering three generations, came to her retirement party.

"One grandfather brought his grandson along because, he said, 'I wanted him to meet the teacher who l'arned me all the grammar I know.'"

AS WE DROVE BACK into Lubbock, I felt a little like the boy in "The Reivers" who was surprised, after being gone from home for four days, that nothing had really changed except himself.

The first thing I noticed was that the highway signs along Spur 327 and Loop 289 still are grossly inadequate.

If a motorist blinks his eye, he's likely to miss the only sign that tells him which lane to get in or which exit is his.

Judge Ledbetter, back in Ruidoso, had told the story about an area man who had started out from west of Lubbock for Fort Worth. Did fine until he started around Loop 289 here.

"About the third time I passed Don Crow Chevrolet," he reported later, "it dawned on me that I had missed a highway sign somewhere."

IN OUR ABSENCE, Iranian students who are so impoverished and oppressed at home that they can come to college here had demanded their "rights" to stage a protest march in residential Lubbock.

Another minority group had filed suit in federal court demanding racially identifiable school trustee seats here. This came right on the heels of a ruling, in the same court, that racially identifiable classroom seats are unconstitutional.

Taxpayers still were protesting valuation increases and demanding cuts in the city budget while, incongruously, saying nothing about a Postal Service wage increase that represents more fat right here in Lubbock than can be found in the entire city budget.

But the clincher came when I drove to work after my five-day absence. Those head-high weeds at curbside near Ave. L and 30th St. were still there.

I knew then that I was home. And that nothing had changed.

Holmes Alexander:

In Carter We Don't Trust

WASHINGTON—More important than what the American people know about their country, its leaders and the world crisis is what they feel.

This is true because, without direct access to all the realties about what is criminal or churchly, physical suffering or mere dissatisfaction with the imperfect, military nakedness or national security, we don't actually know—just think we know.

That is why the good feeling, or the gnawing dread, should rate ahead of knowledge that is alleged to be accurate. Hodding Carter, the assistant secretary for State Department public affairs, the other day released a 1900-page paperback, "Foreign Relations of the United States, 1950" but all the information here had to be "cleared," which is to say "censored."

MAYBE SOME OR ALL of it is true, but maybe not. Much more pertinent is how Americans feel about those mid-Truman years (was it wise to recognize Israel? To fight in Korea?) than to have the many statements by men and committees of the day.

Parallel reading to this volume is Phillip Kingsley's (1975) tough book on war correspondence from Crimea to Vietnam, in which he shows that the first casualty is truth.

And it is helpful that photography and now electronic cameras have supplemented the pencil.

But you can readily perceive from Kingsley's volume that the civilian population of the world doesn't know what really happened to the Light Brigade or at TET.

KINGSLEY TELLS US that we can only "feel" a battle or a war through the imagination of a creative artist.

He was specifically referring to Frances Fitzgerald's fine novel, "Fire In The Lake," but he probably had not overlooked "The Red Badge Of Courage," a vivid "inside" battle story by a non-combatant. The feeling is what counts.

The ability of the concerned citizen to feel rather than merely to know is also vital in the field of President Carter's military policy.

An example of this feeling comes out in the Fortune article (June 19) by Louis Kraar. It carries the maybe-so title "Yes, the Administration Does Have a Defense Policy, (Of Sorts)."

The article is based on a White House publication, "Decision-18" which makes it almost the same if Gen. McClellan were telling a reporter how he intended to capture Richmond or Gen. Westover was saying how he saw a light at the end of the tunnel (which neither did).

—President Carter, in Decision-18, insists we are dealing with an "incomplete superpower," one which can't solve its economic problems and one that is gawky as an adolescent in world affairs.

Carter's problem is one in credibility and communication, which is not an original or exclusive opinion, but a pretty general one. He could be absolutely right. The Soviet Union may be a hollow shell.

I know some well-educated people who believe Carter is calm and decisive, rather than the opposite. They believe he has the split-second judgment of pace, like a Kentucky Derby jockey. But I wish there were more persons who felt that way and that Carter could make their tribe increase.

His fault, and perhaps his failure, is that he hasn't made people believe in him.

Most 'Objets d' art' Worth Less In Time

THE POPULARITY of "collectibles"—so-called "limited edition" medallions, coins, records, ingots, plates, spoons, statuary, you-name-it—has rocketed to such peaks in recent years that the mass market has become crowded to the point of saturation.

Your chances of finding a "winner," therefore, are steadily diminishing. And the signal to you now is: be on guard! New editions of artistic pieces that have caught the public's fancy are flooding the market in a flow estimated at more than 1,000 a year!

Increasing numbers of manufacturers are entering the "collectibles" market. A chilling appraisal by Aetna Life and Casualty, one of the nation's largest insurers of personal property and "objets d'art" is that 80 percent of all collectibles are worth less now than on the day they were purchased.

REFLECTING THIS deterioration in the market's attractiveness is the report in the new 1978 "Guidebook to Franklin Mint Issues" (fifth edition) that the Kennedy Memorial medal is still at $40 to $50, higher than the $25 issue price, but no higher than the 1977 listing.

A set of 15 gold medals for the prime ministers of Canada that came out in 1971-72 at $570 is now ranging from $1,100 to $1,250. That's a gain, obviously, but not so sensational considering what $570 would have earned at 7 percent simple interest in the same span of time. In fact, not sensational at all.

But of course, some "instant collectibles" do and will continue to climb significantly in value over a period. For instance, a limited edition Franklin Mint sterling silver plate, which sold in 1970 for $100, is now being offered by one dealer for $550.

But such increases in value are becoming extremely rare.

(1) THERE IS NO established market through which to resell collectibles—which means no established prices and no simple ways to bring potential buyers and sellers together.

(2) With markups at 240-270 percent on many collectibles, you have virtually a built-in loss if an item sells for only the worth of the material from which it is composed.

(3) Manufacturers widely advertise the charms, plates, commemorative coins, statues, etc., in Sunday newspaper supplements but, cautions Aetna, often with incorrect appraisals and sometimes at prices dramatically higher than true market values.

Consequently, Aetna, for one, will not insure such items for more than their actual purchase price. In its words, "the price obtainable when the collector decides to sell is often a small fraction of the so-called market price used for appraisals of the collectibles."

(4) DESPITE WHAT you might think, silver—the raw material of many collectibles—is not recession-proof. Silver sold at 24 cents an ounce in the mid-1930s, during the great depression, its lowest price in a century.

(5) If you are a fledgling collector, you must be wary of outright fraud, when a so-called "floater" will try to sell a replica of famous originals to innocent collectors as the "real thing."

"Limited editions" produced after expiration of the production cut-off date also have been foisted upon unsuspecting collectors by unscrupulous manufacturers.

The question you must face is: how much will an assortment of instant collectibles, bought today, be worth five years from today?

"It is practically certain the collectibles advertised will be worth less than they cost, with no market in which to sell," Aetna says bluntly. You, an owner, will be lucky to salvage half your investment if you sell the piece.

In essence, you must heed the time-honored cliche of "let the buyer beware." As a newcomer, Aetna suggests you:

* BUY WHAT PLEASES your own esthetic taste.

* Buy only from a manufacturer, mint or dealer whose reputation and integrity you have verified.

* Buy what fits your pocketbook and under no circumstances borrow to purchase the piece.

* Do not view commemorative art as a hedge against inflation or protection against deflation—but rather as a speculation.

Some collectors, suddenly pressed for cash and forced to sell, have had to accept as little as 30 cents on the dollar for their collections.

* Insure your collectibles against a wide range of losses by an "all risks hobby collection policy," available on listed "collectibles" at $15 per $1,000 of insurance coverage for one year.

This type of policy provides much broader coverage than you could get under a homeowner's policy.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Best Defense Is No Offense

WASHINGTON—Of all the federal agencies engaged in harassment of the American business community, none is more feared or resented than the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).

The commission is more powerful in some respects than other agencies dealing with safety, health or trade practices. Among the bureaucracies, it stands like Goliath.

Well, Goliath got his comeuppance the other day. The story should infuriate the taxpayers, but it offers hope to the business community.

The Datapoint case demonstrates that it is indeed possible for an employer to fight back successfully against the massive, malicious power of government attorneys who are obsessed with the prosecution of frivolous charges.

The company was organized in 1968; it nearly went bankrupt in 1971; it has managed to survive handsomely in the highly competitive market for computer software, but in December of 1970 it was in serious trouble.

That was when the company gave a very modest raise in pay to an employe named Helen Sierra. According to the record, she was dissatisfied; she disrupted production lines; she stirred up dissension. She was fired.

In May of 1972 she sued, charging that she had been discriminated against because she is a Mexican-American. Another two years passed, and in April of 1974 the EEOC suddenly joined Mrs. Sierra with a lawsuit of its own. By this time Datapoint was on its feet.

The company was proud of it affirmative action program. It keenly resented the charge of discrimination, and it refused to be pushed around.

EEOC's suit came on for trial in March 1976, before U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., in San Antonio.

KEEP IN MIND, if you will, that the commission had charged Datapoint with every kind of racial discrimination known to the Civil Rights Act. Datapoint had spent nearly two years preparing its defense against these charges.

And on the morning of trial, without an advance word to the company or to the court, EEOC's counsel blandly abandoned 90 percent of its accusations.

In support of the few charges that it still pursued, counsel offered nothing but "raw numbers." These were statistical exhibits, including some memoranda prepared on the day before trial.

NO EXPERT statistician was put on the stand. In a classic understatement, the EEOC's appellate counsel later would acknowledge "serious errors in the preparation of this case."

Judge Wood's findings make it clear that these errors were more than merely serious. He totally exonerated the company in his original opinion of April 1976. The government appealed to the Fifth Circuit, and lost on appeal.

The case then went back to Judge Wood in April of 1978 on the sole issue of awarding attorney's fees to a prevailing defendant in a civil rights suit.

On June 28, Judge Wood handed down an order that would blister the hide of an elephant. He found EEOC's trial counsel guilty of "contumacious behavior" in failing to observe the rules of federal procedure.

The commission's claims against Datapoint were "groundless and unreasonable." The suit was brought "vexatiously."

The charges were pursued "for the sole reason of increasing Defendant's expenses and to increase the nuisance value of the suit."

IN SUM, "THE EEOC's case was brought and prosecuted in bad faith." The majority of the EEOC's claims "were frivolous and were known by the EEOC to be frivolous at the time it filed its initial complaint."

Judge Wood then awarded Datapoint $66,540 in attorney's fees, on top of $21,350 earlier awarded in costs of trial preparation.

This means that the contumacious, frivolous, groundless, unreasonable and vexatious conduct of the government's trial lawyers already has cost the taxpayers $87,890.

A spokesman in the office of trial counsel insists that "we had a good case against Datapoint, but it was not well presented."

If the same shocking professional misconduct were to occur in private industry, somebody's head would roll. But within the EEOC, contrary to the familiar story, a complacent Goliath will clamber back to his feet and continue along his costly, contumacious trail.

Experts Foresee Slowdown In Housing Boom

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — With mortgage rates approaching 10 percent and with loans getting harder to obtain, the great housing boom of the past year and a half seems likely to become muffled over the next few months.

This cannot be stated with certainty, because homebuyers, cognizant of the 12 percent appreciation in prices over the past year, have not let the rising cost of money deter them. But there must be a limit.

Consumer debt for cars, appliances, home mortgages and all other goods and services is now approaching $1 trillion. It rose 15 percent last year, when interest charges alone came to 6 percent of take-home pay.

Moreover, money is getting scarcer. Savings and loan associations, the largest mortgage lenders, are not attracting money as quickly as they would like. Their rate of savings is declining. That means loans will, too.

That is the bad news. But buyers need not feel all the news is negative. With a decline in the market there usually comes a slowdown in the rate at which housing prices rise, and that was a huge 12 percent last year.

And, while mortgage rates might continue rising over the next couple of months, they too are destined to stabilize and maybe even fall in the final quarter of the year.

By how much? Perhaps by a quarter-point, says Dennis Jacobe, an economist for the U.S. League of Savings Associations. Any greater decline would depend on a lowering of inflation in general.

Analysis

Unhappily, those prospects are not very bright. G. William Miller, the Federal Reserve chief who considers inflation his biggest foe, expects the annual rate to decline only ¼ percent to ½ percent a year.

What this forecast adds up to is a decline in the rate of housing construction and sales. Last year new housing starts came to 1.95 million units. This year, Jacobe anticipates a figure of 1.8 million.

Does it also add up to recession? "We think there is the possibility of a recession in the next 9 to 12 months," said Jacobe, echoing what seems to have become in recent weeks the consensus forecast.

Recession! Recalling again the severe encounter of 1974-1975, Americans shudder when they hear the word. But recessions are expectable, although varying in intensity and duration.

In fact, these past 41 months constitute one of the longest recession-free periods in our modern history. A correction, as they say, is overdue, although most economists foresee it as mild and brief.

Still, when homeowners hear of economic declines or stagnations they worry, understandably and responsibly. After having grown faster than inflation for many years, can market values now plunge, they ask?

The savings and loan people, who have $490 billion invested in housing, think not. Those increases over recent years have been solid, not speculative, they say. They are based on demographics and costs.

If people were buying houses not to live in but simply to secure them while prices rose, then there would be cause for worry, said Jacobe. But people have been living in those houses, he says.

The prices, therefore, are soundly based, said Jacobe. The market, he said, is "not a house of cards."

Still, based on the amount of consumer debt and the rise in prices and the high interest rates, that market seems to need a rest during which it can shore up its underpinnings. It may come late this year.

'Hill Person' Encounters LA Smog

(EDITOR'S NOTE: UPI's Jeff Wilson is one of Southern California's "hill people" — those who look down with scorn on the flatlands known as Los Angeles. But there is a problem: to get to work, he must put up with the same smog the "flat people" face all day and all night. Here is Wilson's first-person report on Sunday's encounter).

By JEFF WILSON

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — I have the dubious distinction of being a "hill person" one of those thousands who cherish winding through the Southern California foothills to perch above the millions of "flat people."

We rave about the crisp morning breezes, the clear air and those chaparrel-covered hillsides that lift us above the concrete and congestion in the "flats."

In wonderment, we view as uninhabital the smog, the heat and the crowds.

As I drove to work in the Los Angeles Civic Center this week from my home in Tujunga, a rustic sort of community nestled along the San Gabriel Mountains, I wondered why we hill people felt so blessed.

Ignorance, may in fact, be bliss.

The Southern California Air Quality Management District, a governmental group that analyzes air samples to tell us how rotten the atmosphere really is, said the air would be "un-healthful." As though we could choose whether to breath or not.

I descended into the layer of grimy air, reacting with stinging eyes and a dull but painful tightening of the chest. It was the first time I ever gave much thought to breathing.

They say there have been more traffic accidents since the pollution settled over Southern California. I would guess it's from distracted drivers leaning back for cleansing drops of Visine.

I don't ever remember air coming in chunky style. In moments I was popping out my sooty contact lenses, a relieving sensation I can only compare to removing my boots at the end of the day.

My breaths were shorter and I began to feel a headache coming on. Was I getting enough oxygen? I thought I'd better concentrate more — oxygen in, carbon dioxide out.

Passing a fire station, I wondered if they would give me a hit of oxygen. I rolled my tongue around to gather some saliva and swallowed a couple of Excedrin.

Maybe some Allerest would help?

My head was pounding as I eased onto the Golden State Freeway and looked through the filthy haze toward the Civic Center — a dozen gray buildings sticking up from the flats.

I parked on Broadway Street and furiously scrounged through the glove compartment for some medication. Anything. I didn't care.

Tears were streaming from my eyes, my nose was stopped up, my throat dry with dissolving Excedrin particles and my chest tightening more and more. Gawd, no more pills.

I looked out the windshield and saw soot already settled on my hood. Jeez, I bet this stuff eats through wax.

Stepping from the elevator on the eighty floor, I felt relieved to be in the cool, clean, controlled environment of a downtown highrise.

Italian Parliament Votes To Keep Title

ROME (UPI) — Members of Parliament voted overwhelmingly Tuesday against giving up their right to be called "honorable."

The Chamber of Deputies voted 60-323 to defeat a Radical Party proposal that woulb have done away with the traditional title of parliamentarians, "the Hon. so-and-so."

It also voted 103-277 to reject another radical proposal that female parliament members be identified in official records by last name only, like their male colleagues.

The Radicals, a small but vocal civil rights group, argued that the current practice of identifying woman members by name and surname amounted to verbal sex discrimination.

Louisiana's Coal Supplies In Spotlight

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — The energy shortage that drastically increased the price of oil and gas is making Louisiana's vast supplies of lignite coal a marketable commodity, Gov. Edwin Edwards says.

The governor announced this week the planned construction of the first utility plants in Louisiana that will burn lignite to be mined near Shreveport.

"When gas was selling for six to ten cents per thousand cubic feet and oil was being produced and sold at a dollar and a half a barrel, it was not economically feasible to build plants to use lignite, which has a relatively low BTU (heat producing) capacity," Edwards said.

At a news conference, the governor said the Cajun Electric Power Co-op, Inc., a consortium of 13 rural utility companies, will construct two 540-megawatt generating units to supply power to 200,000 homes.

The Phillips Coal Co. of Dallas — a subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum — will mine the 4.8 million tons of lignite needed annually to fuel the generators. Edwards said Phillips will develop a surface mine near Armistead, La., — about 40 miles southeast of Shreveport — for the fuel.

"Land that will be stripped in order to reach this coal — most of which is within 200 feet of the surface of the earth — will be reclaimed and restored after it's completed so that as experience tells us...and history shows it will be more productive than it is in its native condition today," the governor said.

"This will be the first lignite coal mine in Louisiana and the first coal mining venture of the Philips Coal Co.," said company spokesman William Bohon.

Unknown Town Reports Many UFOs

DENVER (UPI) — University of Wyoming professor Leo Sprinkle says there is a small town somewhere in the nation which has had more than its share of UFO sightings in recent months.

Sprinkle, 49, a psychology professor who devotes much of his time to interviewing people who have sighted UFOs or who have talked with aliens from other worlds, says he will not identify the community. The townfolk don't want the publicity.

"There is a town we call Clearview, because its residents don't want the identification of the community known, where all sorts of sightings have taken place recently," Sprinkle said. "There have been cattle mutilations, humanoids encountering people and all sorts of inexplicable things going on."

Sprinkle made the comment while in Denver to address the International Speakers Congress. Sprinkle said he personally has interviewed hundreds of persons who claim to have seen or spoken with aliens from other worlds.

"These people are, quote-unquote, normal, average people who genuinely believe they have had communications with aliens from outer space," Sprinkle said. "I think we are being shown that there is life out there. The question is who is showing us."

Sprinkle said he also has observed the spaceships. He said he sighted his first UFO when he was a college student in Boulder 27 years ago.

"At first I scoffed at it," he said. "I figured it was a balloon or a helicopter, some kind of government deal, so I dismissed it. But six years later, my wife and I saw another one near the Flatirons in Boulder, and I was puzzled because there was something going on that I couldn't figure out."

Sprinkle said he now hypnotizes people who spot UFOs and studies their psychological reaction. He said people who make such sightings could be dreaming or fantasizing, but through hypnosis and polygraph tests, he has determined that most of the people he investigates are telling the truth.

"That is what's exciting for me," he said.

"Many people I have spoken to have said that once aboard the ship, the creatures ask all kinds of questions about nuclear energy," he said. "They seem to say that man is polluting the world with nuclear power and better get his act straight or else."

One Wyoming hunter told Sprinkle he had zeroed in on a bull elk and watched with amazement as the bullet stopped in mid-air and floated gently to the ground. The hunter, Sprinkle said, told him a spaceship then appeared and he was invited inside the ship.

Once inside the craft, the man saw a cage filled with elk, Sprinkle said. The man said the aliens placed an X-ray-like machine in front of his chest and then told him: "You're not what we're looking for. You can go home."

Sprinkle said the man was extremely nervous after the experience, but "calmed down considerably through hypnosis. He now jokes that he is a UFO reject."

Chrysler Hikes Auto Prices

DETROIT (AP) — Economics in the Land of the Rising Sun have once again made Detroit the land of the rising price.

Chrysler Corp. announced this week that it is increasing base prices on its 1978 Dodge Colt and Plymouth Arrow about 1.3 percent, or an average of $77, as a result of a plunge in the value of the U.S. dollar against the Japanese yen.

It is the second price boost on the Japanese-made passenger cars. In December, the automaker also cited the appreciation of the yen in relation to the American dollar as the basis for the increase.

The Colt and Arrow are produced for Chrysler by Mitsubishi Motors.

The new prices are effective on units sold to dealers as of Monday. They do not apply to vehicles that already were in dealer stocks.

Advertisers Neglect Black Americans

By MARY TOBIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — National advertisers are not reaching Black America and will fail to do so as long as marketing is directed at the suburban middle-class couple with two children, according to a representative of the black communications industry.

Eugene D. Jackson, president of National Black Network, a nationwide radio network aimed at the black audience, said, "Advertisers have for the most part neglected this vital segment of the economy which last year amounted to $80 billion and which, if a separate country, would be the eighth largest in the world."

In the June issue of Black Enterprise, a magazine for black executives, economist Andrew F. Brimmer predicted the total personal money income of black Americans will reach $100.7 billion in 1978.

Jackson said the common approach to reach this segment of the market has been "to put Bill Cosby or Sammy Davis, Jr., in a commercial and it will appeal to blacks and whites."

This neglects a black viewpoint that is decidedly different from the traditional white middle-and working-class goals, Jackson said.

"I suggest that advertisers consider a scientific approach to the black audience — assume there are certain unique elements in the black experience, then focus on those elements."

Some firms are developing creative strategies to reach Black America and Jackson said these firms will have an advantage in reaching the largest potential international market — emerging African countries.

"The black American and the black African are diverse in many ways, but our experiences as blacks give us much in common."

Jackson said U.S. business already is practicing segmented marketing. "There are commercials pitched to the young marrieds, the working person and the teenager. The black audience is another segment."

Jackson cited one product for which blacks represent 25 percent of total sales. This firm is running a campaign aimed at the 50-and-over audience. "Since 65 percent of the black population is under 35, they're missing a large part of their potential sales with this campaign," he said.

Jackson said there are some instances where a single approach works. For example, a drink commercial which shows a racially-mixed group of construction workers.

"Since this situation is common to the black male, he can identify with it."

But commercials pitched to middle-income suburbia totally miss the majority of blacks, who are by and large either urban dwellers or rural poor, Jackson said.

Jackson, in approaching national advertisers, tries to debunk myths about the black consumer, the most persistent of which are:

—Blacks are exceptionally brand loyal. "This is what we call 'default marketing.' Blacks have historically tended to trust what they know, but with increasing sophistication and mobility they are more willing to try new products."

—Blacks are less style conscious. "All you have to do is walk on Madison or Park Avenues at noon and look at your black professional man and woman. I would go so far as to say that during the last decade, many major style trends have originated with the black community."

Spanish Students Lag In Schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half of the nation's Hispanic students who usually speak Spanish end up as school dropouts, according to a new government survey.

The National Center for Education Statistics also reported that one-third of the students who usually speak Spanish were two or more years behind their age group in high school. Among Hispanics who usually speak English, 18 percent were two or more years behind and 15 percent were dropouts.

California Town Used To Financial Restrictions

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

PARLIER, Calif. (UPI) — The sun is at its afternoon best or worst, high in the sky, the temperature is 102 and the main street, named Fresno for the San Joaquin Valley capital 24 miles to the north, is almost empty of shade and humanity.

The first bar, La Cantina Salinas, has a "Closed" sign in one of the front windows, the sort of window bars prefer, giving a sense of openness but high enough so only an eight-foot-high policeman or wife could peer through.

Going north, the El Sarape Cafe is shut. So is the El Charro cafe, their neon beer signs unlit. Next, the pool hall also is closed, waiting for sundown and the return of the Chicano workers from the nectarine, plum and raisin fields, a desert irrigated into America's fruit basket and largely tended by persons who came north from south of the border.

Further north, beyond a parking lot and across a street, is the El Tropical Restaurant, also closed until sundown, and then the Rivoli. Tonight's movie: "Empressa Mexicana."

This, says City Administrator Daniel F. Ayala, is the only one of California's 450 cities in which every member of the council and all the city department heads are Mexican-American. But, like all California cities and towns, it now must deal with Proposition 13, the landslide June referendum that dictated property taxes be cut from 2½ to 1 percent.

Ayala has not bothered to check the final June ballot results. Proposition 13 carried California by about two-thirds of the vote; Purlier, the city administrator reckons, may have voted no. There is a reason.

Basically, most Californians look upon their troubles as the woe of success, of wealth. Not so Parlier, "The Buckle of the Raisin Belt."

In 1970 its population was put by Washington at 1,900. Today Ayala figures it at about 3,000. More than population as changed.

Certainly, the red brick Parlier Methodist church stands, in architecture and theology, a symbol of a society spread from England across the Atlantic to the colonies and west with the pioneers. But that landmark to yesteryear is no longer a symbol of Parlier.

The newer church building, the Roman Catholic Our Lady of Sorrows, more fits. For after the 1970 census the Mexican-American population thought about it, making up 85 percent of the residents. And it acted.

"The Chicano — and that is a word I believe even folks on the East Coast now understand — got his act together in Parlier. The Anglo police chief had gone. The five-member city council had to pick a new chief.

"Well, the five councilmen were all Anglos," saij Ayala. In Chicano eyes, even a man of Japanese ancestry was a political Anglo. The Japanese and the Armenians, San Joaquin ministries of yesterday, had made good. The owned the land on which Chicanos worked.

The city adminstrator spread his hands on his neat, small desk. His office is in a city hall no bigger, no glossier than a 1930's motel. Inside the front door is, to the left, a counter where two women greet day-to-day problems — payment for a new wrench, where to sign the document — and to the right is the door to Ayala's office.

"The old city councilmen made a mistake," Ayala said.

"There was a Chicano who had been on the police force 17 years. But the council picked an outsider for chief, an Anglo. The 85 percent acted.

"There was a recall. Out went the five Anglo councilmen. Now Purlier is the only California city with every councilman and every department head a Chicano."

Ayala smiled. "It was a heady time in Parlier. And some mistakes were made."

The all-Chicano council built a $500,000 community center, an architectural and popular beauty sitting at the north end of town like an orchid on an old dress.

Ayala said the city really couldn't afford it but, well, it was built. "I suppose it's just as well. Building that center now would cost at least $2 million and it certainly is used." It was an expression of the Chicano majority's elation over taking control of their civic destiny.

"I was hired in December 1976, long after the Chicano takeover," Ayala, 28, said. "I found a city with a $300,000 annual budget and a $120,000 deficit."

"Parlier has a reputation of being a labor camp, the supplier of the muscle to tend the fruit farms. And most of our money, for the city, comes from federal, state and county aid.

"Our property taxes? Well, about $60,000 a year. So, under Proposition 13, that will be cut to $20,000. Big deal. We're used to working under fiscal restrictions."

The administrator passed a hand over a stack of federal and state fiscal program guidelines.

"Our new $750,000 water improvement? Farm Home Administration (U.S. Department of Agriculture) aid."

Like most Californian local officials, Ayala was not exactly sure what if any cuts Proposition 13 will bring. "I think the campaigners for Proposition 13 and its foes rather overstated their cases," he said.

Ayala said he would not shrink from the cutbacks. He battled the $120,000 deficit that way. He cut the city payroll to about 30 persons.

"Raking leaves is no solution for a city's economic woe," he said. Ayala said having one man in a parked truck, another leaning against the truck and a third leaning on a shovel solved nothing. And the beautiful community center would not add dollars either.

"Some towns see a need for industrial growth and the officials and the businessmen get together and say, by George, we'll all work together and we'll succeed." Ayala smiled. "Usually, that doesn't work."

To make Parlier grow he has hired as a city consultant the former development director of Los Angeles. Ayala himself had just returned from Los Angeles where he is wooing a bedding manufacturer with a lure of lower taxes, cheaper labor and shorter commuter times for employees, having them fresh at the job without pausing through a grind of freeway trafficking.

And the Chicanos have matured. A Main street sign advertises that this Spanish-speaking city's movie house now will show "American" films on Saturday. And Ayala has helped insure the one Anglo official, the woman treasurer, stays in office; "she's very qualified," he said.

Minorities, even Anglos, have their rights and uses.

And, although property tax and thus Proposition 13 does not directly affect most of Parlier's city employees, it has created a problem.

"Take the police force," said Ayala. "It's nine persons. Three are paid by property taxes or general revenue. Six are paid with federal aid, CETA (Concentrated Employment & Training Act).

"If less property tax means I have to chop from the police department, that means I would have to let go one of the first three. But, under CETA rules, I would have to fire the six CETA-paid police officers first."

Last In A Series

Ayala was marshalling arguments for Washington, reasoning to show that he shouldn't have to fire six in order to fire one.

Still the administrator smiled. Others in California may wring hands and gargle over how to balance Propofition 13 with civic tranquility. But Parlier is still too excited by its Chicaro success to fret.

"Me? I was born and raised five miles from here," Ayala said. "I was the eldest son and my father's greatest wish was to get me out of the fields. He had high hopes. He wanted, above all, for me to become a barber.

"Now, today, I cut other things than hair," the deficitfixer said.

A block away, on the main street, an Anglo businessman expressed surprise when asked if he had voted for Propositiom 13. "Hell, yes, I voted for it. What nut wouldn't?"

Leo Bise, plumber of Parlier, said he felt Ayala and the city would handle Proposition 13 well. "I came from Oklahoma in '35 and never ever been on welfare, except for three months in 1954 so my daughter could get on with her schooling. And I don't think Proposition 13 is going to hurt a city that's already on welfare."

Across town, the truck route, the Acapulco Cafe was open and a driver of a load of nectarines was ordering the $1.65 special of enchilada, taco, beans and rice.

While waiting, he studied the wall decorations, portraits of Eleanor Roosevelt, Franklin D. Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy and a plaque reading: "This area zoned for consenting adults only."

In the kitchen the Mexican-American couple at the stove judged Proposition 13 of relatively little matter. Keeping the corn tortillas soft and hot occupied them. Outside two boys, members of the Parlier Police Cadets, chatted about how plumber Bise had given them a plug to light up their snow cone stand.

German Neo-Nazis Gain Strength, Police Attention

Right-wing causes have had virtually no support among the voters in recent West German elections. But a new report from the West German constitutional security agency shows hard-core neo-Nazi gangs tripled their strength to 900 members in 1976-77.

The ultra-rightists committed 600 criminal acts in 1977, doubling their illegal activities from 1976, according to excerpts of the report published by the Social Democratic Party weekly newspaper Vorwaerts.

Police are particularly alarmed that some gangs are copying tactics of leftist urban guerrillas, stealing weapons and identity papers, robbing banks and setting up hideouts around West Germany, said Heinz Pensky, the Social Democratic security expert in parliament.

He said the leftists welcome conflicts with the extreme right because they want to provoke what they think are fascist, police-state tendencies of West German society.

No longer content to vandalize Jewish cemeteries or rekindle Nazi doctrines at private meetings, the gangs of young Germans are taking to the streets to challenge police.

About 60 persons were injured June 17 when 2,000 leftists clashed with 3,500 rightists at a neo-Nazi rally in Frankfurt. About 1,000 police were called in to restore order in the biggest and most violent clash this year.

Last weekend police broke up an illegal rally of 100 neo-Nazis at a beer hall in northern Germany after authorities had forbidden their pro-Hitler demonstration in Hamburg.

Three policemen and three of the leather-clad demonstrators were hurt in the bottle-throwing melee. Michael Kuehnen, the 23-year-old leader of the group, was charged with illegally displaying Nazi emblems, punishable by up to three years' imprisonment.

Police also have found a link between West German and U.S. neo-Nazis. Hanover police, who formed a special commission earlier this year to investigate neo-Nazi and anti-Jewish slogans smeared over the walls of city buildings, said leaflets and posters distributed in the city came from the American Nazi Party of Lincoln, Nebraska.

Hanover officials said the neo-Nazis were a "small, politically unimportant band."

Namibian Pact Still Shaky

Analysis

By SERGE SCHMEMANN

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The Namibian agreement that five Western powers are submitting to the U.N. Security Council this week could still fall apart.

But it already is a major diplomatic achievement for the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Canada. And it is a triumph for U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young and his deputy Donald McHenry.

Despite optimistic talk of the transformation of South-West Africa into independent Namibia by the end of the year, the preparations for elections, the writing of a constitution and the formation of a multi-racial government for the big territory on the southwest coast of Africa could take at least a year.

A lot could go wrong in that time. But in 15 months, the United States and its four partners have overcome monumental obstacles to their proposals for a U.N.-supervised transition to independence in which all factions will participate.

They won agreement both from the militantly anti-Communist, white-supremacist South Africans and the Communist-backed, black nationalist SWAPO, the South-West Africa People's Organization.

They secured the cooperation of the leaders of the black African "front-line" states despite their years of commitment to SWAPO's "freedom fighters" as the "sole legitimate representatives of the Namibian people."

They had to work against escalating South African threats to go it alone, against guerrilla assassinations within South-West Africa and against South African army raids on SWAPO bases in Angola.

They also had to contend with African mistrust of their motives and goals.

By bringing such diverse factions to agreement, the five Western governments have restored the West's credibility among the blacks of southern Africa. This should enhance their potential to help resolve the far more difficult and more threatening racial confrontations in Rhodesia and South Africa.

They also demonstrated to black Africa that they can offer a peaceful alternative to the guns and Cubans offered by the Russians.

It was Young, America's first black ambassador to the United Nations, who initiated the Western mediation efforts. He reversed years of American neglect and African mistrust to win the trust and help of the five front-line black presidents — Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, Samora Machel of Mozambique, Agostinho Neto of Angola and Seretse Khama of Botswana.

McHenry, also a black and a seasoned diplomat, patiently shuttled between New York and southern Africa to fashion the delicate diplomatic web.

Neither South Africa nor SWAPO is happy with the package the Security Council is being asked to approve.

The South Africans face the prospect of a Marxist government on their northwest border since SWAPO, if it can stay together, will probably be the strongest political force in Namibia.

SWAPO is unhappy because it had to abandon two major demands, for the incorporation of the port enclave of Walvis Bay into Namibia and for the withdrawal of all South African administrators and troops before independence.

Under the Western plan accepted by South Africa, the disposition of Walvis Bay, a former British enclave halfway up the coast, is left to negotiations after independence. But a SWAPO representative in New York claimed Sunday that the five Western powers had agreed on a resolution calling for the "re-integration" of Walvis Bay into independent Namibia.

South Africa is not likely to agree to that. Thus the agreement could come apart before it ever went into operation.

Republican Ascent Worries Democrats

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Western Democrats are worried about the ascent of the Republican Party in their region and say they need more money from the party and responsiveness from the White House to stop it.

Party workers and officials attending the Western States Conference of the Democratic Party here Sunday engaged in a sometimes heated discussion with National Chairman John White and President Carter's political coordinator Tim Kraft. Frank Hesse of Albuquerque drew applause when he said under Carter the party is losing the allegiance of Indians, blacks, hispanics and Jews.

Texan To Dig For 'Jackson Crossing Treasure'

By JAMES R. KING

MULLIN (AP) — The "Jackson Crossing Treasure" has been legend here for more than 150 years. Some — perhaps sheepishly — have even dug huge holes hunting for it.

So far the rugged canyons and rocky, rattlesnake-infested hills have failed to surrender a single nugget.

But cattleman Bill Murray, whose 640-acre ranch here just southeast of Brownwood includes the legendary treasure site, feels he has a reasonable chance of recovering the buried treasure, estimated to be worth more than $2 million, with the help of an inventor from Colorado.

Excavation is set to begin in October.

"If I get that gold I'll really dress this place up," said Murray, 55, standing on a ridge overlooking the flatrock bottom of a small river.

"That river is the Pecan Bayou, and those rocks are the original Jackson Crossing," he said, stabbing the air with his pipe. The river cuts a ragged canyon on the edge of his land for a mile and half. "That's where those Spaniards was moving gold on 10 burros.

"Some Indians were camped nearby, and they attacked the Spaniards. They had one hell of a battle for two or three days," Murray said, holding onto the limb of one of the thousands of pecan trees that crowd both sides of the river.

The Spaniards took the buckskin bags of gold from the donkeys and hid them somewhere in the area, he said, apparently hoping to come back later and recover them.

"Some of them did get loose," and lived to tell the story of the Jackson Crossing Treasure in New Orleans, the rancher said.

Murray has heard the legend of the buried treasure since he and his wife Ann moved here from Lubbock in 1949. But rearing two daughters, tending cattle and goats and making it through the droughts left no time to dig for the gold himself.

While on vacation in Colorado last year Murray caught the interest of inventor-engineer Maylon Scow.

Negotiations followed. A contract was signed. "I get half, and they get half if they find it," Murray said.

"That old boy knows what he's doing," Murray said during a bumpy pickup truck ride over a weather-rutted hill.

"It's serious business with old Maylon. He thinks the gold is here. He's got one heck of a machine — that son a gun can read and write. It'll tell you where to go. It'll reach out there. It'll talk to you."

Scow, owner of the Rio Grande Mineral Development Corp. of Denver, says his machine, called a "Gamma Ray Scanner," could revolutionize modern treasure hunting.

The scanner combines the principles of radar and a laboratory device that analyzes the electron flow of ions in minerals. Each mineral has its own electron flow pattern, which Scow says "is just like a blood type. You can't mistake it."

Scow brought his suitcase-size machine here last winter and scanned the entire ranch. He said the scanner "indicates several potential gold deposits," but he was not specific.

"He went out with his machine four different times," Murray said. "He wouldn't let me go with him, and he wouldn't tell me where the gold is at. But I don't mind -- I can see his point." If Murray knew where it was, he could dig it up himself.

Scow's assistant, Clarence Gregory, said when the Colorado firm returns in October to dig, it will bring heavy drilling equiment.

"We can drill to the deposit in a number of days," Gregory said. "There will be some pick and shovel work." He said he anticipates digging to depths of between 15 and 50 feet to recover gold nuggets and bars the company expects to be worth at least $2 million, not counting the value of some silver that he said showed up on the scanner.

Gregory said the scanner indicated the Jackson Crossing treasure was not all buried in the same underground spot.

The Rio Grande company, which originally dealt mainly in mineral surveys and geophysical studies, has added treasure hunting as a major operation since the invention last year of Scow's macnine.

Gregory said several scans have been made off the coast of Florida and the Bahamas in search of sunken galleons, and he said the location of a ship with an estimated $1 billion in gold was pinpointed by Scow's machine.

Back near his ranchhouse Murray parked in front of a rustic building. A sign read: "Whoop 'n' Holler Ranch."

"That's my dance hall," he said. "We have square dances here two or three times a month. If we find that gold I'm going to dress this place up," he said, relighting his pipe.

Sun-Dried Fruit Easy To Make

By SHARI LEWIS

These days when the sun is high in your sky (most of the time, anyway), put it to work for you. Sun drying used to be considered the best way to preserve fruit. The idea is that the bacteria (which spoils the fruit) needs water in order to live — so when you get the water out of the fruit, the bacteria can't grow in it.

Delicious dried fruit is very simple to make. Wash, peel and remove seeds from peaches or apricots. Slice into pieces about ½ inch thick. Spread the slices on a board outside, in a place where there's sun all day long. Cover with cheesecloth (to keep the bugs away). When the top side of the fruit begins to dry, turn the slices over. Take your board into the house at night so moisture doesn't hit the fruit, making it take longer to dry.

Apples are even more fun to dry (and, in my opinion, more fun to eat). Peel 'em, take out the whole center core and slice them across so you get slices like doughtnuts (or bagels, if you prefer) about ½ inch thick. Then string the apple rings on a rope or a broomstick and hang to dry, covered with cheesecloth.

These apple rings look as interesting as they taste — that's what I call cute fruit!

Federal Funds Fight Pro-ERA Boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers are being paid in part with federal funds to fight a pro-ERA boycott against Missouri, a state that has not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment, a state official says.

Don Hiskey, a spokesman for the Missouri attorney general's office, said some part of a $253,394 federal grant his state received last fall from the Justice Department is being used to cover some of the salary and travel costs tied to the anti-boycott case.

Missouri is suing the National Organization for Women, the sponsor of the campaign to boycott states that have not ratified the proposed Equal Rights Amendment. Similar antitrust cases against NOW are pending in Nevada and Louisiana, but none of the three has come to trial.

Hiskey said "there is no way I could estimate a figure" on how much money has been spent in the suit against NOW. However, he said, three members of the state's antitrust staff are spending part of their time on the suit.

The Washington Star today quoted an unidentified Missouri official as saying the federal money spent for prosecuting the anti-boycott case was "probably very minimal." The official said the state had spent only about $100,000 of its grant and that the antitrust action might have taken well less than one-fourth of that.

Mildred Jeffrey, head of the National Women's Political Caucus, said her organization is protesting such use of federal funds by Missouri.

"When the Congress set aside funds to establish antitrust divisions in the states, we don't think they intended for the money to be used to inhibit First Amendment rights of individuals or organizations," she said.

"We believe the Missouri suit is an attempt by those opposed to ERA to block an effectively constitutional lobbying tool. Federal funds should not be used to harrass individuals or organizations that are exercising their constitutional rights."

The federal government provides $10 million a year to the states to beef up their antitrust programs and all but a half dozen states have applied for the funds.

Ky Ewing, a deputy assistant attorney general, said Washington does not review what cases the money is used for. "What the states do with the funds is the states' business," he said.

The NOW boycott is designed to keep convention business away from the 15 states that have not ratified the ERA, in an attempt to put economic pressure on their legislatures.

The Star said two of the lawyers from the Missouri attorney general's office whose salaries are paid entirely out of federal grant money are Nanette Laughery and Greg Hoffman.

Two others whose names have appeared on legal documents in the case — Roger Bern and Walter Theis — are being paid entirely from state funds, the newspaper said.

Challenger Near Win In Chess

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — The most exciting game so far in the 13th world chess championship adjourned today with challenger Viktor Korchnoi on the attack against champion Anatoly Karpov and in a good position to score the first victory of the match.

The game, the fifth of the competition, was adjourned until Friday after 42 moves and five hours of play. Experts agreed that the 47-year-old Korchnoi, who celebrates the second anniversary of his defection from the Soviet Union on Friday, could defeat the 27-year-old Soviet titleholder.

Karpov made his 42nd move before the game adjourned and it was sealed in a large white envelope that will be opened when play resumes Friday.

"Korchnoi has a very good chance for a win," said Argentine grandmaster Miguel Najdorf. "He played a very good game."

Raymond Keene of England, one of Korchnoi's seconds, stood in the convention center auditorium looking at the final position of the pieces and said, "I think white is winning." Korchnoi was playing white.

Karpov and Korchnoi had played to draws in their first four games.

The challenger used the same opening he did in the first and third games — pawn to queen's bishop 4. Karpov responded with the Nimzo Indian defense, just as he did in the third game.

On the fifth move, Karpov changed from pawn-takes-pawn, which he had played in the third game, to pawn to queen 4.

This was the variation played by Russian grandmaster Alexander Tolush against former Russian world champion Mikhail Botvinnik in the Soviet team championships in 1965. Botvinnik, playing white, won that game.

Heavy rain from a tropical storm pelted the roof of the $3.5 million convention center, creating a steady din in the auditorium. A power failure caused a one-minute blackout while Karpov was debating his 23rd move, but the lights were quickly restored and play resumed without incident.

Only about 50 spectators braved the heavy rain and wind to watch the game in the 1,000-seat center.

Under new tournament rules, the champion, who wins $350,000, is the first player to win six games. The loser gets $200,000. Draws do not count in the scoring.

Henry Ford's Grandson Dies At 59

CHEBOYGAN, Mich. (UPI) — Benson Ford, a grandson of auto pioneer Fenry Kord who was passed over for his company's chairmanship because of ill health, died of an apparent heart attack early today aboard his yacht.

Ford, 59, who had a history of heart problems, was a Ford Motor Co. vice president and director and had worked closely with Ford dealers.

He sat on the sidelines during a recent company shakeup that put the youngest of the three Ford brothers, William Clay Ford, in a position to succeed the eldest brother and company's current chairman, Henry Ford II, when he steps down in four years.

The shakeup culminated two waeks ago with the ouster of Ford President Lee A. Iacocca.

Benson Ford died while sleeping on his yacht in the Cheboygan River at 1:10 a.m., a state police spokesman in this northern Michigan resort town said. Ford's wife, Edith, was with him at the time.

The couple had planned to return to Detroit Wednesday, but stayed overnight because of bad weather.

Ford, the second son of the late Edsel Ford, was born in Detroit on July 20, 1919, was chairman of the No. 2 automaker's dealer policy board and, since April 28, 1941, was a member of the company's board of directors.

Ford also was a member of the company's executive, policy and strategy, finance, product planning and design committees and a principal stockholder in the firm founded by Henry Ford in 1903.

A company proxy statement in April, said Ford owned more than 31,900 shares of common stock, more than 1.8 million shares of Class B stock and more than 17,500 shares of Ford Motor Co. of Canada, limited common stock.

After two years at Princeton University, Kord joined the company in 1940 in engineering laboratories and experimental garage in Dearborn, a Detroit suburb where the firm's world headquarters are located.

He later was transferred to the purchasing department as part of his father's plan to have him learn all phases of the auto business.

Massive Recall Contemplated

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what would be the largest action of its kind, the government expects to decide soon whether to order the recall virtually of every Ford car and truck manufactured with an automatic transmission between 1973 and 1978 — a total of 9 million vehicles.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration began an investigation last November after the independent Center for Auto Safety said 100 accidents and 12 deaths were caused by the transmissions in those cars jumping from park into reverse by themselves.

Agency spokesman Hal Parris, responding to a Washington Post report that a decision on the recall is expected next week, said today: "We're trying to get some conclusion as soon as possible, but I don't expect any preliminary finding for at least two or three weeks.

"We haven't made a determination yet one way or another on what should be done," he added.

Truck Mishap Injures Five

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — A truck carrying pesticides and herbicides from Greeley, Colo., to Dumas overturned during a collision with another truck early today and spilled the toxic chemicals over Interstate 25 south of Colorado Springs.

Five persons— the two truck drivers, a state patrolman, an ambulance driver and an apparent hitchhiker riding in one of the trucks— were hospitalized for observation of possible chemical poisoning. Four were listed in serious but stable condition.

Traffic on the busy highway was rerouted on U.S. 85 through Widefield and Security while a decontamination crew from the Balcon Chemical Co. of Greeley worked with a team from the U.S. Environmental Protrection Agency and the Colorado State Patrol to clean up the spill.

Lt. John Hollis of the Colorado State Patrol said one truck apparently was trying to pass the other when they collided about 2:15 a.m.

"The drivers are incommunicado so we really can't talk to them about what happened," said Hollis. "One truck was passing the other and the other changed lanes. The driver of the pesticide truck waspinned under the vehicle and definitely ingested parathion."

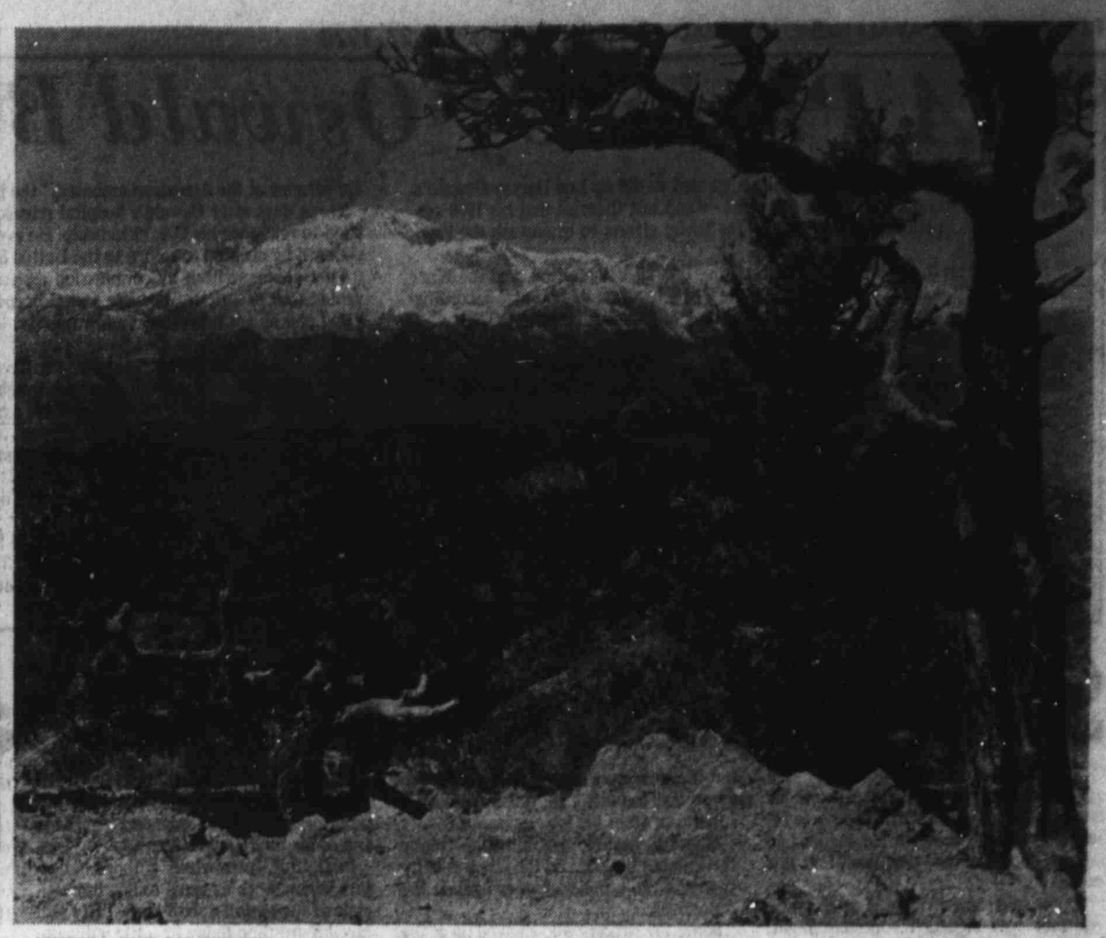
MAGNIFICENT PANORAMA — Deep red sandstone, carved through the centuries by wind and water, presents a spectacle of imposing grandeur at Colorado National Monument. Petrified wood, dinosaur bone framents and evidences of early Indian habitation have been found in the wildlife sanctuary.



AMERICA THE BEAUTIFUL — The "Purple Mountain Majesty" of Pikes Peak, towering "Above the Fruited Plains" of Colorado, inspired the beautiful hymn. Again this year, thousands of Colorado vacationers will thrill to the incomparable scenic grandeur and varied recreational opportunities at the Top of the Nation.

Western History Unfolds On Tour Of Colorado

Blend unique history, magnificent scenery, and varied outdoor recreation. Add the spices of more than 1,000 events. Mix according to your own taste and you have the zesty recipe for a Colorado vacation. At each turn along Colorado's super skyways and pebbled paths, dramatic history unfolds like the pages of an exciting western novel.

Colorado, organized as a territory in 1861, justly earned the nickname of "Centennial State" when it became the 38th state exactly 100 years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Relatively young in years, Colorado has had an eventful and varied history. The vacationist seeking to broaden his historical knowledge can find old landmarks, trace weathered records and see history in the making.

Multi-lane, all-weather highways now parallel the beaten tracks and rutted routes of the explorer, trapper, trader, gold-seeker, soldier, Indian, railroader, and settler. Colorado visitors can ride along the adventuresome paths of the historic Santa Fe, Navajo, Cherokee, Smokey Hill, Emigrant, and Trapper trails.

Throughout the Centennial State, historic markers and relic-filled museums vividly unfold the saga of such Colorado explorers as Escalante, Dominguez, Captain Zebulon Pike, Major Stephen Long, Lieutenant John Fremont, Colonel Kit Carson, Captain John Gunnison, Jim Bridger, the Bent brothers, Nathan Meeker and Chief Ouray.

More recent history may be relived by a visit to the Molly Brown House, Governor's Mansion, State Historical Museum, Larimer Square, Ninth Street Park, State Capitol, and U.S. Mint in Denver.

Also, the Maxwell House, Hamill House, and Hotel de Paris in Georgetown; the Teller House and Opera House in Central City; the Victorian Bloom House and adobe Baca House in Trinidad; Robison Mansion and Rudd Cabin in Canon City; Meeker Museums in Meeker and Greeley; the Dexter Cabin, Healy House and Tabor's Matchless Mine in Leadville; Thatcher Mansion and El Pueblo Museum in Pueblo; Buffalo Bill's grave and Mt. Vernon House near Golden, Fort Collins and Boulder pioneer museums, and the Osgood Castle at Redstone.

Colorado Springs also opens a treasure of historic memorabilia. Here, Katherine Lee Bates composed "America the Beautiful" after viewing the panorama from the summit of Pikes Peak. Historic museums include the American Numismatic Museum, Clock Museum, Colorado Car Museum, Air Force Academy, El Pomar Carriage House, Hall of Presidents, Buffalo Bill Wax Museum, National Carvers Museum, May Natural History Museum, McAllister House, Will Rogers Shrine, Pioneer Museum, Ghost Town, and Manitou Cliff Dwellings.

Colorado's historical background is multi-faceted. The natural wealth of the land, both in precious minerals and scenic grandeur; railroads built to carry man and materials across the rugged Rockies; the Indian, both friend and foe of the pioneer; and the U.S. Army which led the conquest of this virgin land, all are represented.

Since the shout of "Pikes Peak or Bust" in 1859 touched off that first rush to the Rockies, Colorado has been a land of mineral wealth. Today, abandoned mine tunnels yawn beside the highway. Mining boom towns such as Aspen, Central City, Georgetown, Cripple Creek, Leadville, Fairplay, Breckenridge, Silverton, Telluride, Ouray, Gunnison, and Creede climb red gulch walls. Ore mills, Victorian-styled homes, quaint churches, adobe missions, gilded saloons, and museums overflowing with authentic artifacts help unlock the treasure of Colorado's golden past.

Visions of the tumultuous gold and silver era are quickly conjured up by a visit to one of the state's 300 ghost towns and mute mining camps. Spurred by rising gold prices, many mines are again in operation and some offer guided tours. Visit the Edgar experimental mine at Idaho Springs. Gold panning is also available.

Railroads that once carried mineral wealth from virtually inaccessible mines and mills today offer the visitor a fascinating trip into yesterday. One-day narrow gauge excursions through some of Colorado's most spectacularly rugged scenic areas are conducted daily through the summer between Durango and Silverton, Colorado, and between Antonito, Colorado over precipituous Cumbres Pass to Chama, New Mexico. Shorter trips via the old-fashioned steam train are offered at Cripple Creek, Central City, Silver Plume, and Heritage Square near Golden.

The Colorado Railroad Museum at Golden and the Forney Historic Transportation Museum in Denver house extensive collections of Colorado railroad memorabilia. The Moffat Tunnel on the scenic mainline of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad is named for a pioneer who realized the nearly impossible dream of a railraod across the Rockies. The Pony Express and first railroad station is now a museum at Julesburg.

Indians called Colorado the "Land of the Long Look." Colorado vacationists can enjoy a long look at Indian lore throughout the state. Mesa Verde National Park in southwestern Colorado is the extensive ruins and artifacts left by an ancient Indian civilization which inhabited the area about 800 years ago. Nearby are Hovenweep, Yucca, and Lowry ruins. In this same area near Durango and Cortez are two Indian reservations: the Southern Ute Indian reservation near Ignacio, which offers a complete Indian vacation complex, and the Ute Mountain Indian reservation at Towaoc, specializing in fine Indian pottery.

Beecher Island near Idalia, Sand Creek near Eads, and Summit Springs near Sterling in eastern Colorado, as well as Meeker in northwestern Colorado, are battle sites which serve as mute testimony of tragic misunderstandings between the settler and Indian.

Many areas throughout Colorado have mineral hot springs which were ceremonial grounds and spas where Indian tribes gathered for recreation of body and spirit. Today, these springs beckon urban-weary visitors, and Indian lore is still very much alive. The Koshare Interpretative Indian Dancers, a Boy Scout troop, interpret Indian Dances and rituals in their kiva-museum at La Junta.

Many of the forts and trading posts which played an important role in Colorado's historical drama can be seen today. Some of the trappers, for effective barter with the Indians, established trading posts, which for the most part were Colorado's pioneer forts. These included Fort Pueblo, Fort Lupton, Fort Vasquez and Bent's Fort. Fort Garland near Alamosa was a military post commanded at one time by Colonel Kit Carson. Pike built a stockade near LaJara. These forts have been restored and are open to the public. Most have extensive historical collections.

Colorado's annual events include the Central City Opera and Drama Festival; Pikes Peak Hill Climb; river raft races at Salida and South Fork; yacht regattas at Grand Lake and Dillon; Music Festival, Ballet West, and Winterskol at Aspen; Steamboat Springs Winter Carnival; chuck wagon suppers at Colorado Springs, Durango, and Estes Park; "A Night in Old Denver"; Arapaho Glacier hike at Boulder; Navaho Trails Fiesta at Durango; pack burro races at Fairplay; Colorado State Fair at Pueblo; and rodeos and barbecues in practically every Colorado community.

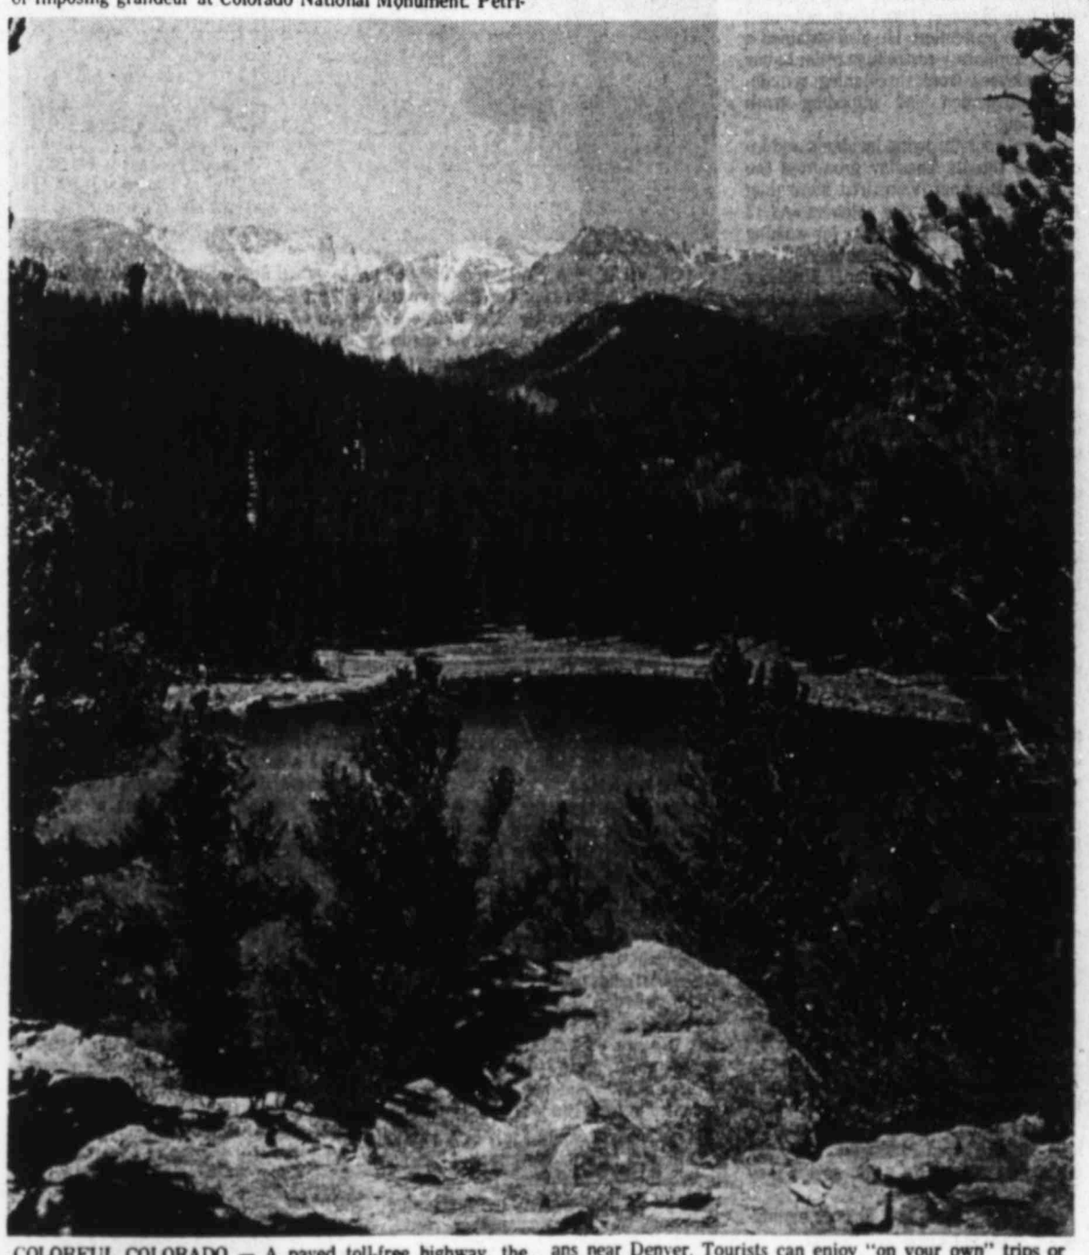
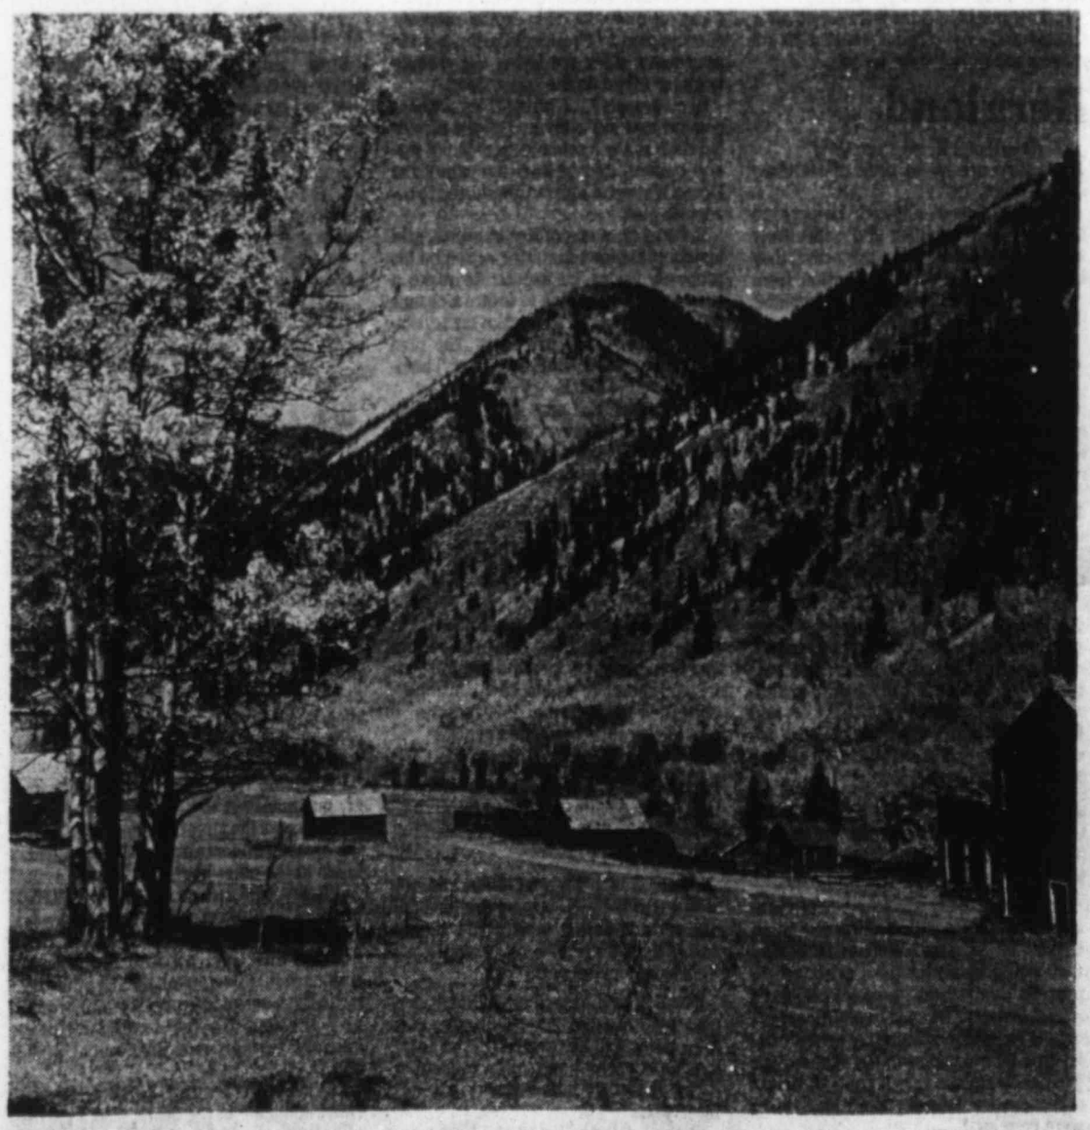
Whether your fancy turns to campgrounds, picnic and recreation areas, warm water lakes, trout streams, pioneer museums, ghost towns, boating, jeeping, or photography, Colorado can fill the bill. All-inclusive package tours are available.



COLORFUL COLORADO — A paved toll-free highway, the highest in the nation, takes Colorado visitors past emerald Echo Lake to the snow-crowned summit of 14,264-foot Mt. Evans near Denver. Tourists can enjoy "on your own" trips or take advantage of guided package tours.



MUTE TESTIMONY — Colorado vacationers will find a dramatically beautiful land filled with reminders of the fabulous gold rush days of a century ago. Spread across the jagged face of Colorado's high country are more than 300 ghost towns. Many of the forgotten cities are accessible by car or jeep.

TROUT COUNTRY — Hagerman Peak with Snowmass Lake cradled in its lap is one of more than 800 Colorado peaks which rise to an altitude of more than two miles above sea level.

CIA Probe Of Oswald Blocked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA officials wanted to dig up Lee Harvey Oswald's corpse to examine a scar on his left wrist — and test theories that his 1959 suicide attempt in Russia was a cover-up for Soviet efforts to brainwash the Kennedy assassin.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover blocked the 1964 CIA suggestion, and the Warren Commission decided not "to force the FBI's hand on this point," according to documents obtained by a private researcher and made available to UPI.

The CIA considered Oswald's alleged suicide attempt four years before he killed John F. Kennedy "one of the crucial points in Oswald's experiences in the Soviet Union," said an internal Warren Commission memo written in early 1964.

Oswald supposedly "deeply slashed" his wrist in a suicide attempt while touring Russia on Oct. 21, 1959, on learning that his request for Soviet citizenship was denied.

He recounted the episode in his diary, obtained after the assassination by U.S. agents. The Soviets later reported he was treated from Oct. 21-28, 1959, at the Botkinskaya Hospital in Moscow for a self-inflicted wound on the left wrist.

The CIA felt "if the suicide incident is a fabrication, the time supposedly spent by Oswald in recovering ... in a Moscow hospital could have been spent by him in Russian Secret Police custody being coached, brainwashed, etc., for his appearance at the American embassy," the memo said.

Three days after Oswald's hospital release, he appeared at the embassy and tried to renounce his U.S. citizenship. He eventually was allowed to stay in Russia until he decided to return to the United States in 1962.

The memo, written by commission assistant counsel W. David Slawson, revealed CIA skepticism because Oswald reportedly slashed his wrist so deeply "that had he not been found a few minutes later by his Russian tourist guide he would supposedly have died."

"It is this suicide which is supposed to have convinced the Russians of his sincerity and caused them to change their minds about letting him enter the Soviet Union," the memo said. "It is, therefore, a crucial occurrence."

Slawson's memo was dated three months after Oswald was killed by Jack Ruby in the Dallas police station. He said he saw no point in challenging the FBI on the issue unless examination of Oswald's decayed remains "could establish ... that the scar represents what was once a deep wound of the kind which could cause sudden death by bleeding."

Followers of conspiracy theories contend there is a strong possibility Oswald was a Soviet agent when he shot Kennedy. The memo and other Secret Service files were obtained under the FOI law by Michael Levy, a freelance researcher who still suspects there was a conspiracy.

Strikers Get New Deadline

By The Associated Press

The mayor of Tuscaloosa, Ala., today gave 245 garbagemen until Monday to return to work or be fired. He earlier had set a back-to-work deadline for this morning.

Union spokesman Willie Harper said a contract was signed Wednesday night, but the workers would remain off the job to protest the city's refusal to remove a supervisor from his job.

Mayor Ernest Collins, although calling the walkout illegal, said the city would investigate the union's charges against the supervisor.

Some 150 strikers who showed up at the city garage this morning dispersed when told the deadline had been extended. Supervisory workers manned garbage trucks for limited collections.

In Detroit, meanwhile, garbage collectors began work as usual today, but officials of the nation's sixth-largest city still faced a deadline today to settle a dispute over their mandatory overtime policy.

And in San Antonio, where a tough-talking city manager fired 177 striking workers earlier this week, 28 sanitation trucks rolled on their routes Wednesday, each with a police car protecting its flank.

Embattled city officials were cautiously optimistic after a relatively quiet day. No incidents of violence were reported after City Manager Tom Huebner beefed up police protection. He also obtained a 10-day temporary restraining order to bar ex-employees from threatening remaining garbagemen and impeding trash collection.

Several rock-throwing incidents and increasing threats Tuesday prompted the move by Huebner, who fired more than 140 garbagemen, 22 dog catchers and 15 airport maintenance workers for walking off their jobs in a wage dispute.

"It's been much quieter," Huebner said. "But the next couple of days will be critical. We'll keep the police protection beefed up."

Officials planned to again cover about half of the routes today. The extensive police protection, centered around a special task force of 60 officers and cars, will continue indefinately, it was indicated.

A special review board of city officials and supervisors reinstated six fired garbagemen Wednesday after determining that the men were intimidated by strikers. The board is reviewing appeals individually.

"All of these men remained at home, afraid to go to work," said Huebner. "They were intimidated. We had included the appeal process in the dismissal notices. This is consistent with our policy."

But Councilman Rudy Ortiz, who says Huebner is promoting violence with his tough stance, plans to ask the council tonight to fire the city manager. Ortiz admits he has no more than three votes on the council, since Huebner is strongly supported by Mayor Lila Cockrell and eight of the 11 persons on the city council.

Mayor Cockrell and most of the other residents of the relatively affluent north side of the city have done without garbage collection service since Friday.

More than half of San Antonio's 313 garbagemen walked off the job Saturday after the city council approved a 6 percent wage hike for all city employees. The union had sought a 9.3 percent hike for its members.

Within hours, Huebner fired 106 strikers. He fire about 35 others on Monday when they refused to work, saying they feared for their safety.

The dog catchers and airport maintenance workers were fired Tuesday.

San Antonio garbagemen now earn an average of $759 per month. The starting salary is $3.15 per hour for trash collectors and $3.28 per hour for drivers.

In Tuscaloosa, pickets were set up after Collins and city officials refused to remove a supervisor from his job.

Benefits Aimed At Homeowners

WASHINGTON (AP) — House taxwriters agreed today on a provision that would allow nearly all homeowners to sell their residences without having to pay capital gains tax on the profits.

The House Ways and Means Committee voted for the provision as an amendment to the $15-billion tax cut bill on which it is working.

Under present law, the profit on sale of a residence is considered a capital gain and is considered taxable as such unless it is reinvested in another residence.

There are also special provisions for persons over 65 who sell their homes but do not buy others. Depending the extent of the gain, they may avoid all or part of the capital gains tax.

The provision adopted by the committee would apply to everyone regardless of age. It would exclude from capital gains tax the profit, up to $100,000, on any sale of a principal residence, defined as one occupied at least two years by the owner.

The exclusion would apply only to one sale in each owner's lifetime, but the rollover provision of present law would be retained for the benefit of persons selling one residence and buying another.

The Treasury estimated the provision would cost about $747 million a year in lost tax revenue.

There are increasing indications that Congress may vote deep capital gains tax cuts opposed by President Carter, but the president's allies are laying the groundwork for a fight on the House floor.

Rep. Joseph L. Fisher, D-Va., whose compromise bill is favored by the administration as the least objectionable of several options, said he does not expect the House Ways and Means Committee to accept his plan.

But Fisher, a committee member, said he will press for committee action on his proposal, saying he expects to make a strong enough showing to insure a chance to substitute his version when tax legislation reaches the House floor. The plan has the backing of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, dealt a painful blow Wednesday to the administration's hopes of minimizing reductions in the capital gains tax. The tax applies to profits on sale of stocks, real estate or other assets held at least a year.

Long proposed the deepest capital gains tax cut — a 19.5 percent maximum rate — advanced so far by any highly placed member of Congress.

The measure given the best chance of clearing the Ways and Means Committee would set the maximum tax at 35 percent. A strongly-backed Republican proposal would set it at 25 percent. The maximum in Fisher's version would be 37.25 percent, with much of the benefit directed to home owners and investors in new businesses. The theoretical top rate for the tax under present law is 49.1 percent, but the treasury says few persons pay more than 40 percent.

Long said in a talk to the National Press Club that his committee, which will consider any tax legislation passed by the House, "will recommend a large cut in the tax rates on capital gains," regardless of what the House does.

The ultimate legislation, unless tax revision bogs down completely, will be shaped in a Senate-House conference.

Praising the late President John F. Kennedy's 1963 tax cut program as a tonic for the economy, Long said part of it which was not enacted at the time should be revived now. He pointed to the part that would have set the maximum capital gains tax rate at 19.5 percent.

Long also endorsed a substantial across-the-board tax cut for both individuals and corporations, but stopped short of embracing the plan for a one-third cut in tax rates as advanced by Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., and Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., a proposal which has been endorsed by the Republican national leadership.

The Ways and Means Committee Wednesday rejected a series of proposed amendments, several of which would have limited the deduction for business entertainment, though not as drastically as Carter has proposed.

Teachers' Salaries Defended percent more than he or she made in 1976.

In the same way, the Lubbock teacher who was on Step 2 in 1976 made $9,120; as a Step 3 teacher in 1977, he made $10,100; and as a Step 4 teacher for the coming year, he will make $11,095. That amounts to a 21.7 percent hike over two years.

Between the 1976-77 year and the 1977-78 year, the local increments were kept the same: they ranged from $500 to $1,000. The increases teachers got were from the "steps" and the boost in the state base. Those increases generally amounted to 8-11 percent.

For the coming year, the state base will go up slightly ($80 to $150 per teacher); and most teachers will again move up a step (an increase of $280 to $580). From the state, that amounts to a raise of about 4.5 percent — except for top-experienced teachers, who can't advance a step.

Superintendent Ed Irons originally proposed having the local increments for the coming year start at $700 and run up to $1,250. Teachers would have received $200 to $300 (a local raise of about 2.5 percent) under this plan.

The school board adopted a salary schedule with increments ranging from $700 to $1,475. Teachers who had been getting a $500 increment would get an extra $200; teachers who had been getting $700 would get an extra $525; and teachers who had been getting $1,000 will gat an extra $475.

When the state-related and "step" increases are figured in, teachers will be getting raises of 6-7 percent at the low-experience end of the scale; 9-10 percent in the middle-experience years; and about 4.5 percent at the top experience end.

The current local increments cost about $1.4 million. Irons would have raised the cost, with his original plan, to $1.9 million. The school board's plan raises the cost of local increments to $2.15 million.

Teachers had asked for increments ranging from $1,000 to $2,200, at a cost of $1.5 million over the current cost. Their plan would have cost, overall, $2.9 million.

Under the school board's plan, local teachers will make $9,210 to $14,605 on the bachelor's degree scale, and $9,810 to $16,565 on the master's degree scale.

Israel Discounts Egyptian Action

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A delegation of Israeli military technicians, unexpectedly thrown out of Egypt by President Anwar Sadat, arrived here today aboard an Egyptian commercial flight.

Israeli officials and diplomats here attempted to downplay the importance of the dismissal, announced Wednesday. Prime Minister Menachem Begin said it was a minor matter and chances for peace are still excellent.

"This is not the end, only the beinning of a process," said the delegation's leader, Col. Yaacov Heychal.

Heychal said the atmosphere during their six months in Egypt had been "very friendly and good...the Egyptians were very sorry to see us go."

But other diplomatic observers interpreted the move as pressure for Israeli concessions in peace negotiations.

The delegation of military men, which stayed in Egypt after peace talks between the two countries broke down in January, was asked to leave by Sadat "since there was no need for their presence," the Egyptian government television service announced.

The order came after Egypt accused Israel of not reciprocating its peace overtures and termed further negotiations as "a waste of time" unless Israel comes up with new terms that can be negotiated.

Begin in a TV interview said he received a telegram saying the 10-man delegation should be recalled, and agreed to bring it home.

"They don't have a central role. If their hosts don't want them....we'll receive them back here happily," he said.

The delegation accompanied Defense Minister Ezer Weizman to Cairo in January when he began discussions with Egypt's defense minister of Israeli withdrawal from Sinai.

Currently such gas sales are permitted only in a C-3 general retail district but council members want the commission to look into allowing convenience store gas sales as a specific use in the C-2 zones.

Any action on the two zone case appeals will come after the recommended change in the zoning ordinance.

The council set two public hearings on Aug. 10. A proposed ordinance regulating substandard housing will be the subject of a 5 p.m. hearing and at 5:30 p.m. citizen comment will be accepted on a community development block grant program.

gruntled man that he was getting ready to lower the vehicle and slowly reached for the lever.

As he moved, the man fired a single shot, striking Wright in the chest, police said.

The assailant reportedly then reloaded the rifle and fired again, this time in the direction of Peterson, who was standing at the rear of the wrecker. The second shot, however, hit a piece of metal on the vehicle, wounding Peterson only with fragments.

Police said Wright fell from the wrecker, but managed to get up and run to a house across the street. Peterson ran past the armed resident to where Wright had fallen at the other house.

Officers, who arrived a short time later, arrested the suspect without incident.

EMS attendants labored over the victim near the front porch of the nearby residence and doctors at the hospital reportedly were able to revive him when his heart stopped a short time later. However, he was pronounced dead at 9:50 a.m.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack, who ruled homicide in the death, said a partial autopsy would be performed later today to remove the bullet.

Legislators Push Tax Proposals

AUSTIN (UPI) — Rep. Doug McLeod, D-Galveston, says an amendment preventing the Legislature from passing a personal income tax would give Texans enough incentive to support a proposed constitutional amendment providing owners of agricultural land and residential homesteads tax relief.

The House Wednesday passed the amendment prohibiting lawmakers from levying a state tax on net personal income.

"I think this is the right time to pass something that would give people reason to support this constitutional amendment," McLeod said.

McLeod's amendment was added to a constitutional amendment introduced by Reps. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad; Lyndon Olson, D-Waco, and Jim Nugent, D-Kerrville, which gives tax breaks to agricultural land owners and homowners.

The House Wednesday trudged through seven hours of sometimes tedious deliberations on the constitutional amendment. But the real test for its passage was expected today.

Reps. John Bryant, D-Dallas, and Luther Jones, D-El Paso, promised to work to defeat the constitutional amendment if it was not tied together to a property tax reform bill introduced by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange.

Bryant and Jones tried unsuccessfully to table the amendment, which was introduced as a substitute to one the Constitutional Amendments Committee had drafted.

Bryant and Jones were annoyed because Von Dohlen, the committee chairman, did not give the committee warning that he was drafting the substitute.

"We worked on the committee for three weeks and now the chairman has seen fit to substitute it (the committee's amendment)," said Jones. "It is not fair and it not wise."

Bryant said there were enough votes in the House to defeat the proposed constitutional amendment if Peveto's bill, which would establish guidelines for a statewide uniform system of property appraisal and would create a single appraisal board in each of the state's 254 counties to replace the more than 2,000 existing appraising units, was not included.

"If an amendment is included to pass the Peveto bill, then I think the constitutional amendment will pass," said Bryant. "If not, I think the chances are very good we will defeat it."

The House Wednesday also passed an amendment by Rep. Bill Sullivandt, D-Gainesville, that exempts one automobile per family from all city, county or state tax rolls.

The Senate today was scheduled to vote on a proposed constitutional amendment backed by Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby that would authorize the Legislature to provide homestead exemptions from school property taxes with additional tax breaks for senior citizens, tax agricultural land on its productive value, and require local governments to call public hearings and inform voters any time local taxes were increased.

The Senate Finance Committee passed the bill 12-0.

The proposal does not require that the state reimburse local governments for property taxes lost under the agricultural and homestead tax exemptions, but Hobby said the state would have an implied obligation during the 1979 session to provide for such reimbursements.

"I think it would be a serious mistake for this Legislature to put in the constitution the obligation to reimburse local governments," Hobby told the committee.

"Once you open that door and start down that hallway, it won't be long until the state is paying most of the costs of hospital districts and other districts as well as school districts."

He said the proposed amendment, coupled with legislation repealing the state sales tax on utilities and increasing inheritance tax exemptions, could reduce taxes by almost $1 billion during the next three years.

"I think this session of the Legislature will have produced a substantial benefit to the people of this state if this resolution passes," Hobby said.

Humane Society Concerned By Pet Care

By MICHAEL B. McPHEE

BOSTON (AP) — Man's best friend, huh? Every single day in animal shelters, veterinarians' offices and animal control agencies across the country, 17,500 dogs are destroyed, the Humane Society of the United States says.

There are 41,300,000 pet dogs, not including strays, in the United States, according to the most recent survey taken two years ago. That means that one in every six people, or 43 percent of all American households, have a dog. Yet slightly more than 10,000,000 of those dogs will ever live to a ripe old age, said Guy Hodges, one of the Humane Society's directors.

The Pet Food Institute of Washington funded a study to find out what happens to a dog after it's born into the country with one of the highest standards of living in the world. Of pet dogs alone, 26 percent will be given away, 18 percent will die in accidents, 6 percent will run away, 9 percent will be abandoned at animal shelters and about 16 percent will die of some illness, the survey found.

"These statistics very definitely indicate that the level of concern and the level of care is less than adequate," Hodges said.

A recent 10-year study in California found that only one in 13 dogs will remain with its original owner. Hodges said the definition of owner did not include the breeder or person who brought the dog into the world, but, rather, the first person to adopt the dog with some idea of permanency.

More than 7.5 million dogs end up in animal shelters each year. That sounds somewhat reassuring until you realize that only one in 13 of those dogs will ever be adopted or returned to their owners. The other 6.9 million will be destroyed, except for a small percentage used in research and therapy, Hodges said.

Most dogs are destroyed with an injection of barbiturates, which is the most humane method, causing death in a matter of seconds. Some are gassed with carbon monoxide and others are destroyed in decompression chambers where they die from lack of air, Hodges said.

Most animal shelters cremate the dogs on the premises but pollution control standards are curtailing that practice to some extent. Others are taken to land fills and a small number are used by industry, such as for the making of soap. Some furriers are buying cat and dog skins now, said Hodges.

Some dogs are spared and used as guide dogs, for research or companionship in hospitals and nursing homes.

"A man was in a hospital, I think it was in California, for 20 years," Hodges said. "The staff had always thought he was a mute so they gave him a dog for companionship. He spoke as soon as the dog was brought in."

According to an American Kennel Club survey last year, 51 percent of all dogs are registered purebred, although that figure has been declining for the past five years. In 1976, 54.3 percent of pet dogs were purebred. The average purebred is 4 years old and weighs 32 pounds.

Poodles, including standards, miniatures and toys, are the most popular purebred dogs and have been since 1960 when they replaced the cocker spaniel, the survey showed. The second most popular purebreds are Doberman pinschers, which last year replaced German shepherds, dropping them to third. Fourth most popular are cocker spaniels and fifth are Irish setters.

Rosalynn Defends Husband

NEW YORK (AP) — Rosalynn Carter concedes in an interview with the New York Times that her husband the president has an image problem but says she does not think the public perception of him is accurate.

"They think he's incompetent — he is not incompetent. They think he's indecisive — he's not indecisive," the first lady said at a luncheon meeting recently with editors and reporters of the Times.

"He's very strong, he's very determined, he knows what he wants and he doesn't back down, but he knows that in politics you have to compromise," she said in a story published in today's editions.

She blamed a variety of factors for the poor image including a press that she said focuses too often on negative or irrelevant details, an "open administration" that airs policy differences in public and a post-Watergate mood of public distrust.

"I don't think people trust anybody. I'm not saying that's bad, because so much has happened in the past that caused people to react that way," she said. "Maybe it's good."

Drive For Democracy In Latin America Challenges President

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A coup in Bolivia, the ouster of a member of Chile's military junta and the jailing of an opposition leader in Paraguay threaten President Carter's campaign to expand democracy in Latin America.

Although the Carter administration's drive for human rights has provoked bitter reaction from some of the hemisphere's military regimes, those in Bolivia and Ecuador were nudged into calling elections and Uruguay's has promised one in 1981.

In some countries where elections are still a long way off, there has been a notable relaxation in repression. But recent reverses in the region's slow advance toward civilian government present new challenges to the U.S. president.

The Bolivian rebellion led by Gen. Juan Pereda last weekend was the first successful coup in Latin America since Carter became president in 1977. Pereda, the military government's presidential candidate in the election July 9, was credited with a majority, but the National Electoral Court found evidence of widespread fraud during the campaign, voting and vote-counting. It annulled the vote and called for a new election in six months.

Pereda, a former air force commander, launched an armed rebellion Friday. The military rallied behind him, President Hugo Banzer resigned, and Pereda was sworn in.

On Monday, Gen. Augusto Pinochet's junta in Chile ousted its only liberal member, Gen. Gustavo Leigh, because he called publicly for elections in five years. Pinochet says he doesn't want elections for another 10 years. Meanwhile, all political activity is banned.

In Paraguay, dominated for nearly a quarter of a century by Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, opposition leader Domingo Laino was grabbed by a group of armed men on an Asuncion street after meeting in Washington with officials of the Carter administration and calling for an end to all foreign aid and loans to the Stroessner dictatorship.

The U.S. Embassy immediately expressed concern, and the government denied having anything to do with the abduction. Later it admitted Laino was under arrest, and his lawyer said the embassy's quick intervention may have saved his life.

Washington's relations with Chile and Paraguay were already frosty. The Justice Department is conducting a highly sensitive investigation into the bomb death in Washington of Orlando Letelier, the ambassador to the United States for the Marxist Allende government which Pinochet and his junta overthrew.

Pinochet has denied that his government was involved in the assassination.

The Carter administration has suspended aid to the Paraguayan government, and the new American ambassador in Asuncion, Robert White, is considered one of the State Department's human rights advocates.

Association Will Meet Friday

Members of the Lubbock Property Owners Association will gather at the Municipal Auditorium at 8 p.m. Friday to discuss the city's tax cutting efforts.

Association spokesman Gene Medley said the meeting will be primarily informational. "We haven't had a real meeting for some time and the members don't know what's really going on," he said.

Various members will present reports to the membership and make recommendations to "get them thinking about areas where they want to go about approaching the city," he said.

"Some areas may be costing us more than they are worth," Medley said, referring to city services.

He said questions also may be raised concerning the city's list of potential service cuts which officials say would be necessary if all the association's demands are met.

The group has asked the city to cut the tax rate by 25 percent, remove the property tax on automobiles and raise the homestead exemption for the elderly to $10,000.

City officials said cuts of that magnitude would require budget cuts of $5.5 million.

Medley denied Friday's meeting would be a "pep rally" to stir up the group's members prior to Monday's preliminary public hearing on the city budget.

"I don't know how you could get people stirred up who are already concerned about taxes," he said. "We're not trying to get people stirred up — they already are."

Salary Increases Please Teachers

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For the moment at least, taxpayers and teachers seem satisfied with the "compromise" budget proposed by the Lubbock Independent School District board of trustees.

The board Wednesday night tentatively decided to reduce its tax rate 18 cents — backing off an earlier proposed cut of 23 cents.

And school trustees, after raising teachers' hopes for 10 percent pay hikes, again retreated — trimming the proposed salary increases by 1 to 4 percentage points.

"We're very happy," Wendell Huddleston, president of Lubbock Classroom Teachers Association, said of the pay hikes. His group had been pushing for bigger increases.

"Any time the tax rate moves down, it's a good move," added Dr. Gene Medley of the Lubbock Property Owners Association. "I'm sure pleased with 18 cents. I'd be more pleased with a larger cut."

He said the school tax cut proposal probably will come up at his association's Friday meeting. The tax protest group will decide whether to investigate the school budget and lobby for more tax relief.

School board president Charles Waters called the proposed budget a compromise between "conflicting interests" — relief-minded taxpayers vs. salary-minded employees.

"We probably didn't cut the tax rate as much as taxpayers want, and we didn't raise salaries as much as teachers want," Waters said. He added: "This is the most difficult budget I've ever been through."

Compromise was evident in the split nature of the school board's votes. Waters and Lynn Stafford voted against down-scaling the pay hikes; Harold Harriger and Mrs. Stafford voted against down-scaling the tax cut.

The product was a $41.35 million local operating budget that, in Waters' words, "includes something for everybody."

The budget still is tentative. Superintendent Ed Irons said a public hearing probably will be held next month after the city-school tax office has produced a final tax roll.

If the actual roll is higher than the estimate plugged into the budget, some trustees indicated they may push for additional tax relief.

On Monday, Irons presented the school board with a proposed local operating budget of $41.34 million for the 1978-79 school year. That represented an increase of 7.6 percent over the previous year.

Irons' proposal included pay hikes of about 7 percent — 4.5 percent from the state and 2.5 percent from local funds.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Stafford proposed that the budget be increased to about $42 million so that teachers could get an extra $300 each in local funds. That would have boosted their raises to about 10 percent.

Harriger fought to hold the budget to $41.5 million. The school board compromised by instructing Irons to come up with a 341.5 million budget that includes pay hikes close to Mrs. Stafford's suggestion.

On Wednesday, Irons revealed his plan. By raising the total budget from $41.34 million to $41.5 million, the district would "free up" $180,000; by making various budget cuts — some already ordered by the board — the district freed up another $310,000.

That gave Irons another $470,000 to plow into salaries. This was enough, the superintendent said, to give Mrs. Stafford's proposed $300 raise to all teachers with four or more years of experience.

Irons also illustrated how, by using their remaining project surpluses of $2.33 million in the general fund and $2.58 million in the debt service fund, trustees could reduce the district's tax rate 23 cents:

—He said the maintenance and operation tax rate could be cut from $1.31 to $1.20 per $100 assessed value. This would reduce the projected surplus for August, 1979, from $2.33 million to $942,000.

—Irons said the debt service tax could be cut from 27 cents to 15 cents. This would reduce the projected surplus in this account from $2.58 million to $1 million.

On a motion by Harriger, the board voted 5-2 to trim the extra $300 raises to

Workers Start Hunger Strike

AUSTIN (UPI) — Members of the Texas Farmworkers Union camped on the Capitol grounds have encountered only frustration in their move to inspire legislative action to would provide them with collective bargaining rights.

About 15 workers remained outside the Capitol Wednesday night, beginning the fourth day of their protest. The demonstrators say they are on a hunger strike which will not end until the special session of the Legislature ends or Gov. Dolph Briscoe agrees to their demands for collective bargaining.

Briscoe Tuesday met with the leaders of the group but said he would not allow the Legislature to consider their topic.

"The reason for our hunger strike is that we are not pleased with the kind of answer the governor gave us on our pleas for collective bargaining rights," said Jesus Moya, a TFU organizer from Pharr. "He told us he wasn't going to give us collective bargaining rights and he said he strongly supported the right to work law."

Moya said police turned on water sprinklers about 3:30 a.m. Wednesday and drenched some farm workers who were sleeping on the Capitol grounds.

Then about 6:30 a.m., the chief of Capitol security awakened the farmworkers and told them to leave.

"That's the kind of welcome they're giving us, the people who produce food for the whole state of Texas," Moya said. "We're going to stay on the Capitol steps and we plan on sleeping here tonight. We're going to stay as long as the session continues."

Since Briscoe has refused them, Moya said the TFU would seek support from Attorney General John Hill, the Democractic nominee for governor in the November general election.

City Sign Ordinance Approved By Court

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The city's controversial sign ordinance, enacted in mid-July of 1975 and challenged in court soon after by the Lubbock Poster Co., has been declared valid by the Seventh Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo.

Writing for the court, Justice Carlton B. Dodson said Monday the "challenged provisions of the ordinance constitute a constitutionally valid exercise of the City of Lubbock's police power."

Plaintiffs Iva Edington and Homer L. Hensley, co-owners of the Lubbock Poster Co., a billboard agency, contended in their original suit filed in Sept. 1975 that the ordinance deprived them of due process, denied freedom of speech to noncommercial advertisers and amounted to seizure of company property without just compensation.

At the time the suit was filed the plaintiffs asked the court to enjoin the City of Lubbock from enforcing any provisions of the sign ordinance until the issue was settled.

In their suit the partners contended the ordinance—which set guidelines on the location, erection, construction, reconstruction, alteration and use of buildings, structures, etc.—would through its economic impact destroy the company.

The original non-jury suit was tried in Judge William Shaver's 140th District courtroom in May 1975 and was not concluded for 10 days.

The trial culminated with Judge Shaver declaring a portion of the ordinance, that section dealing with the "nonconforming use and amortization provisions," void. That appeased the billboard company.

However, the dual nature of the judgment satisfied neither the city nor Lubbock Poster Co. and both parties subsequently appealed.

The city wished those provisions ruled void by Shaver to be affirmed by an appellate court, while Lubbock Poster Co. owners wanted the entire billboard section of the ordinance voided, which the trial court did not do.

The most recent judgment means the city's provision relating to "nonconforming use and amortization" has been affirmed, as has the balance of the sign ordinance.

However, a higher appeal is a virtual certainty, observers say.

Under the proposed sign ordinance, the city would give companies a 6 1/2-year "amortization" period to comply with the ordinance's provisions. The gradual time-frame is provided, in theory, so that businesses can recoup any losses incurred during the period.

If the ordinance is affirmed in toto, billboard advertisers would have until Jan. 1, 1982, to comply with its provisions.

Specifically, the ordinance sets forth guidelines on the location, proximity, size, separation, setback and height of billboards. It is this comprehensive nature of the ordinance that the sign company has opposed from the outset.

No one associated with the case expects the decision handed down this week to be the final word in the nearly three-year-old case.

Teachers Will Keep Jobs, Estes Says

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas school superintendent Nolan Estes says the district will not fire the 52 per cent of its first-year teachers who failed a required intelligence test.

Not even the 11 teachers who could not correctly answer 10 of the 60 IQ test questions will be dismissed, Estes said Wednesday.

The tests were given to 535 first-year Dallas teachers.

Estes said the school district rates teachers on their classroom performance and the IQ tests may be dropped if it is shown the scores are not an indicator of performance.

PRISONERS RELEASED

BANDUNG, Indonesia (AP) — The Indonesian government released 3,921 prisoners held since the attempted Communist coup 13 years ago and said it plans to free nearly 6,000 more in October and December. The government freed 265 of the coup prisoners in May and 10,000 last year.

School Tax Rate Offers Savings

Lubbock school trustees have proposed cutting their per-$100 tax rate from $1.58 to $1.40. Here is an explanation how that would affect taxes on a $40,000 home.

The school system assesses property for tax purposes at 60 percent of its value. Thus, a home last appraised at $40,000 is being taxed at an assessed value of $24,000.

At the old tax rate of $1.58 per $100 assessed value, school taxes on that home would have been $379 a year. Under the proposed rate of $1.40 per $100 assessed value, taxes would be only $336.

That represents a tax decrease of $43, or 11.3 percent, on a $40,000 home. Most homeowners pay their property taxes through their monthly mortgage bills. As a result, the $43 cut would be spread over 12 monthly mortgage payments — meaning a savings of about $3.60 in each mortgage bill.

For most parts of Lubbock, the school tax cut would be an actual savings. But in the city's southwest — where residential property has just been revalued for the first time since 1973-74 — it is a different story.

Assessed values of southwest homes are going up an average of 50 percent. Under the school board's proposal, instead of increasing by the same proportion, school taxes will rise only about 33 percent for those homeowners.

School officials say it's important to put this year's proposed cut in context with previous tax reductions. For instance, in 1974 the district's tax rate was $1.88. It dropped to $1.73 for 1975 and 1976, and then was trimmed another 15 cents, to $1.58, last year.

Thus, by setting the 1978 rate at $1.40, school trustees will have cut their rate by about 26 percent from its 1974 level.

"Dear Charlie & Omar:

Why all the fuss about percentage? I have been playing for years by the seat of my pants, and I would bet I could hold my own with most players.

Sincerely,
A Fan"

Dear Fan:

You might be right, but our experience has shown that anyone who plays by the seat of his pants will, from time to time, have a boot planted firmly thereon. Consider this hand where North-South have reached a reasonable three no trump contract.

The bidding has one point of interest. As a passed hand, South feared that his partner might pass a one diamond response, so he made the value response of two no trump. North had no difficulty in raising to game.

West led the queen of hearts, and declarer was faced with a relatively simple problem. He can afford to lose the lead only once. To come to nine tricks, he must develop one of the minor suits. If he tries clubs, he must find the queen with West. If he plays on diamonds, he has to rely on the suit splitting 3-2. Which is the right suit to tackle?

If you play by the seat of your pants, you will guess one or the other. About half the time you will guess right; the rest of the time you will end up wishing you had chosen the other suit.

If you know anything about the odds, you will have no problem deciding what to do. The chance of finding the queen of clubs with West is 50 percent. The percentage of a 3-2 diamond split is 68. Are you sure that the seat of your pants is a more reliable guide than the knowledge that a diamond lead to trick two gives you more than a third better odds than playing on clubs?

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: This year, as in previous years, my husband has invited his sales team to our mountain cabin for a weekend of fishing.

This year, unlike previous years, his sales team now includes a young, unmarried woman who happens to be very attractive. (All the men are married and middle-aged.)

Abby, would you believe that some of the wives are making a big fuss because they feel that it is improper for a single girl to sleep under the same roof with their husbands?

Our cabin is a six-room chalet with sleeping accommodations for 12, and this trip involves five men and one girl.

All the wives respect your opinion, so please tell us what you think.

D.M.'S WIFE

Dear Wife: The woman member of the sales team is entitled to the same benefits as the men. If your husband excludes her in deference to nervous wives, he'll be guilty of sexist discrimination. So relax. It's a new, new world, Ma'am.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for six years and it seems like 60. We have three beautiful children, 5, 3 and 13 months old. My husband is a steady worker, he makes a good salary, and he doesn't drink or run around. Those are his good qualities. But when he comes home, he always greets our children with a slap in the mouth. He always finds some excuse to hit one of them. He uses me as a punching bag if he feels like it, too.

He tells the kids, "Don't touch the car. It's MINE!" (Everything is HIS.) He doesn't talk, he yells.

The kids are scared to death of him and so am I. He hasn't taken me anywhere in two years. I begged him to go to the priest with me, but he refuses. He says if the priest comes here he'll throw him out. He won't take me to church so I pray at home, but I have to hide when I pray or he'll say I'm cracking up. Maybe I am. Am I?

WORRIED

Dear Worried: A physician can tell you if you're "cracking up." See one immediately. Tell him what's bothering you, and if he prescribes counseling, by all means go. If your community doesn't offer a refuge for battered wives and abused children, they should have one.

You don't need your husband's permission to see a priest. And if you continue to live with this abusive man, who is probably sick, you are sicker than he is.

HANDBAGS GET TOP GRADES — The sweet school girl charm is shaping up an important daytime look. Innocent collar borders, dual print effects or widely cinched waists have an impact. Quilted, printed and embossed, handbags graduate into to shoulder, in-hand and clutch designs. Hobo shapes are head of the class in this category, while shirred, flapped and ladylike duffles take top grades. Little or no structure is in evidence ... the shape takes a cue from the drape.

Exchange Program Brings Japanese Youth To Texas

The hospitality of the Texas South Plains is being extended to 14 Japanese who will take up temporary residence in six area counties.

As part of the 4-H Labo International Exchange, 12 Japanese youths will become for a month, the sons, daughters, sisters and brothers of 12 area families. The young people, who are between the ages of 12 and 18 were accompanied to the area Tuesday by a tutor-chaperone, who is also from Japan.

Dr. John Pelham, state 4-H youth leader, said the Labo Foundation has sent several thousand Japanese youth to the United States, primarily in the western states, over the past several years. This summer, some 1,700 youth will be visiting in 18 states.

A total of 68 Japanese youth will come to Texas. They will live with Texas 4-H host families who have requested a visitor. This year Extension Service Districts 1, 2, 4, 11, and 12 are hosting the visitors.

In District 2, six counties will host the youths and their chaperones. In Bailey County, the Robert Hunt and Robert Lunsford families both of Muleshoe, will host two of the visitors.

In Castro County, the Clarence Behrends family of Hereford, will act as hosts.

In Floyd County, the Harold Ford and Jerry Williams families, both of Lockney, will sponsor some of the visitors.

Visitors will stay at the homes of the Wyatt Howell and Roy Smith families at Seminole in Gaines County, and also with the Elmer Seilers family in Seagraves. The Wayne Upton family of Seminole will host an adult.

The Marion Parker family of Plainview in Hale County will host a visitor.

In Lamb County, the Gerald Graham family of Dimmitt; the Ray Joe Riley family of Hart; the Jimmie Craft family of Muleshoe; and the Ray Brooks family of Littlefield, will all host some of the visitors.

"The purpose of the Labo Foundation program is for young people to learn another language and to become familiar with another culture firsthand," said Dr. Pelham, who is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "They are expanding their efforts this year and including Texas for the first time."

"We hope to host more youth next summer and be able to include additional districts," Dr. Pelham said. "Also, next summer we hope to join the reciprocal program and send Texas 4-Her's to Japan for a month's stay with Japanese host families."

Grapes Provide Summer Salad, Drinks

Grape Juice Provides Gelatin Salad Flavor

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (Special) — One of the sweetest of the season's bounties is the gathering of family and friends to share good food and good company under a summertime sky. And the crisp and natural taste of grape juice can easily and economically help you to compose the perfect picnic.

The glorious heart of this meal is a three-tiered gelatin mold fashioned from summer's fruits and the red, white and purple varieties of that famous juice. If it sounds a trifle tricky to put together something this lovely, don't be deceived. This beauty is simple and fun to prepare. And one of the assets of choosing such a recipe is that it can be done several days ahead and then wrapped and stored in the refrigerator just waiting for barbecue day. And whether you choose to serve it as a salad with tender garden lettuce and a sour cream dressing or wait to bring it on as a luscious finale accompanied by gently whipped and lightly sweetened cream, this mold will undoubtedly highlight the meal.

Chicken, grilled to a deep and glistening brown, some fresh sweet corn and young beans, crusty rolls or breadsticks and plenty of icy cold juice are all nearly effortless delicacies to scrumptiously complete your picnic table. So plan to celebrate in the sun.

THREE RIBBON
GRAPE SALAD

1st layer:
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1 bottle (24-oz.) red grape juice
2 cups sliced strawberries
2nd layer:
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1 bottle (24-oz.) white grape juice
2 cups stemmed seedless green grapes
3rd layer:
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
3 cups purple grape juice
2 cups diced, peeled apples

For the first layer, stir gelatin into 1 cup of red grape juice in a small saucepan. Stir over low heat until gelatin is dissolved. Stir in remaining red grape juice. Chill until syrupy. Pour a ½-inch layer into bottom of lightly oiled 11½X4½X4-inch mold. Arrange some of the strawberry slices in attractive pattern in gelatin. Chill until almost firm. Stir remaining strawberries into remaining gelatin and pour over bottom layer. Chill.

Second layer — stir gelatin into 1 cup of white grape juice in a saucepan. Stir over low heat until gelatin is dissolved. Stir in remaining white grape juice. Chill until syrupy. Fold in grapes and pour mixture over the layer in the mold. Chill.

Third layer — dissolve gelatin in 1 cup of purple grape juice in a saucepan. Stir over low heat until the gelatin is dissolved. Stir in remaining purple grape juice. Chill until syrupy. Fold in apples. Pour mixture over layers in mold. Chill until firm.

To Serve: As dessert, place slices on plates and top with whipped cream or whipped topping. As salad, place on bed of lettuce leaves. Serve with dressing of mayonnaise and sour cream. Makes 12-14 servings.

GRAPE JUICE PUNCH

1 pt. lemon sherbet
1 qt. soda water
Mint leaves, if desired

Pour grape juice into 4 tall glasses. Add 2 scoops of sherbet into each. Slowly add soda, filling glasses about ¾ full. Garnish each glass with Mint leaves, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

British Doctors Caution Women

LONDON (AP) — Britain's two pioneer test-tube baby doctors are cautioning infertile women not to raise their hopes too high yet and advising foreigners seeking their treatment that they and Britain can't take care of them.

The birth of 5-pound, 12-ounce Louise Brown, the first authenticated case of a baby born after conception outside the womb, was "the end of the beginning, not the beginning of the end," Dr. Robert Edwards told a news conference. "We wish to be very modest about what we have done. We have a lot to learn."

"It is obvious this is not immediately available to everybody," said Dr. Patrick Steptoe, Edwards' colleague in the 12 years of research and experimentation that culminated in the birth of the baby Tuesday to 30-year-old Lesley Brown.

It wasn't known why the parents named the child Louise. Earlier, it had been speculated that Mrs. Brown would name her daughter Patricia in honor of Steptoe.

Steptoe said the facilities he and Edwards have been using are inadequate and are no longer available, that they are now looking for new quarters and financing to continue their research, and that Britain has no facilities for would-be mothers from abroad. But he added a note of hope for the childless.

"There are a number of teams already starting this work. We think that within a fairly reasonable time, given the proper facilities, this could become applicable all over the world."

The London Daily Express reported that doctors at London's St. Thomas' Hospital also are experimenting with test-tube fertilization and that a woman underwent an egg-extraction operation there Wednesday.

Mrs. Brown came to Steptoe and Edwards two years ago for help because a blockage in her Fallopian tubes that prevented conception could not be corrected. The two doctors took an egg from one of her ovaries, fertilized it with her husband's sperm in a laboratory dish and implanted the dividing cell into her uterus, where it developed normally. Mother and daughter are reported in fine condition.

One basic problem is when to implant the fertilized egg in the patient's womb. Edwards and Steptoe disclosed that after Mrs. Brown's egg had been fertilized it was kept in an incubator for 2½-3 days before implanation.

An estimated 40 percent of infertile women have the same problem as Mrs. Brown. But research on test-tube conception in the United States has been curtailed since 1975, when the Department of Health, Education and Welfare barred federal funding for it unless the projects were approved by the Federal Ethics Advisory Board.

The board, which has been marking time on the issue, announced after the British success that it would begin gathering information next month on such controversial related matters as the discard of fertilized eggs, donor eggs and using surrogate mothers to carry fetuses.

"I think we're going to be very cautious about this," said the board's vice chairman, David Hamburg.

U.S. doctors are likely to be extremely hesitant about laboratory conception because of the $1.5 million damage suit a woman has brought against New York's Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center because one of its doctors destroyed a culture she claims was to have been implanted in her womb.

However, a spokesman for the American Medical Association, Frank Chapell, said lawyers for the organization "don't see any significant ethical problems. This is an extension of artificial insemination and sperm banks, which we've had for years."

Twin Dies In Surgery

DALLAS (AP) — An infant girl remained in critical condition this morning at Children's Medical Center after the operation to separate her from her Siamese twin claimed her twin sister's life.

The dead girl, described only as "infant B" at the family's request, died at 8:45 p.m. Wednesday after suffering difficulty breathing. The seven-hour separation procedure had ended some six hours earlier.

Dr. Ted Votteler, a pediatric surgeon who headed a medical team of 40 in the complex operation, said the girls were joined through the lower chest, through some abdominal organs and at one leg.

The three-week old twins shared a liver, intestinal tract, bladder and leg, the doctor said at a post-surgery news briefing.

"It's about the worst connection you could have," said Dr. William Dammert, a surgeon who assisted in the operation.

The critical condition of the surviving girl, "infant A," was described as to be expected of any infant after a long operation. "No other problems are obvious at this time," Votteler said.

The shared leg was used only for skin covering and after the operation each twin had only one leg, he said.

LOOK Sets Up Center

Training sessions will be held next week for about 60 volunteers who will staff a telephone information center on Lubbock's court-ordered school integration plan, a desegregation support group announced Wednesday.

Betty Anderson, information center chairman for Lubbock's Opportunity for Our Kids, said the sessions will be conducted Aug. 3-4 at the Wesley Foundation, 2420 15th St.

For a six-week period beginning Aug. 7, the organization will sponsor the information center. The phone number will be 765-8546.

"Since there may be some apprehension and uncertainty in implementing the desegregation plan, we feel the center can minimize the problem by providing complete, accurate and honest information to parents and the general public," Mrs. Anderson said.

"In several communities where court-ordered integration systems have been implemented, it has been found that rumors significantly aggravate tensions. The harmful effects of rumors can be offset if police, public officials and community leaders quickly and effectively verify and circulate facts," she said.

The U.S. Justice Department's community relations office is assisting in the information center. Through the center, volunteers and school officials will be able to answer questions about desegregation on a 24-hour basis, Mrs. Anderson said.

Sailboater Drowns In Detroit Storm

DETROIT (AP) — One person drowned and three others were missing after two sailboats overturned in the Detroit River during a heavy thunderstorm, police said.

Seven people were aboard one boat and six aboard the other during the storm Wednesday night, according to the police Harbormaster Division.

The Coast Guard rescued nine survivors, police said. The body recovered was that of an unidentified woman.

Utility Commission Hears Bell Request

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. officials underwent little questioning today over their request to delete $174.160 from a $214.3 million rate hike request.

Appearing before the Texas Public Utility Commission, company officials formally presented the deletion request, which came after the U.S. attorney in Dallas reported conducting a criminal investigation of a former employee.

PUC Chairman George Cowden said a final order in the case will come "early next week," and indicated the company's request to delete the questionable funds would be granted.

"I would be very surprised if it were not disallowed (from the rate hike request)," Cowden said after the 20-minute hearing. "No intervenors objected, but it would be up to the commissioners when we adopt an order."

Bell attorney Jon Dee Lawrence testified at the hearing that the company would provide the utility commission with any new figures provided by the U.S. attorney's office.

"The company intends to do the right thing, whatever the facts might be," he said.

Another Bell attorney, Ford Hall, said in opening statements that the company was not allowed to delve into or answer questions about the underlying facts being investigated by a federal grand jury.

"We, of course, do not know if an indictment, or indictments, will be returned, and we do not know if any wrongdoing will ultimately be established," he said.

Neither Bell nor federal prosecutors have said which former employee is under criminal investigation. However, the Dallas Times Herald has reported in a copyrighted story that Ray Acker, former head of the company's corporation data systems, is under investigation.

The questionable purchases occurred during periods used to determine the $214 million rate request and a previous $57.8 million increase in December 1976, according to information furnished by federal prosecutors.

The Texas Supreme Court upheld the PUC's method of determining the earlier rate increase Wednesday after the company claimed the increase did not provide enough revenue.

Area Youth Wins Honor

IDALOU (Special) — Ken Mull of Idalou, Area I Future Farmers of America (FFA) vice president and Lubbock District president, has been selected from a list of statewide candidates to attend the annual series of FFA leadership conferences in Washington, D.C.

A member of the Idalou FFA chapter, Mull will be sponsored by the Texas A&M University Collegiate FFA chapter at the July 31 to Aug. 5 conferences.

Each summer, the national FFA organization conducts a series of leadership conferences in the nation's capital, which includes workshops, meetings with other students and banquets, as well as sightseeing.

The purpose of the conferences is to provide high school students of vocational agriculture and agribusiness an opportunity to further develop their personal leadership abilities and explore citizenship responsibilities.

Mondale Praises Family Farmers

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale said this week that the centerpiece of the Carter administration's farm policy is to strengthen the income of all farmers.

Addressing the Southern Commodity Producers Conference, the vice president praised the family farm as the basic source of American values.

The three-day agricultural meeting allowed farmers to exchange information and ideas about their products and to view exhibitions of farm equipment, chemicals and seeds.

Auditions Scheduled For Adult Singers

Auditions for "Man of La Mancha," set to play Sept. 15-23, will be held at Lubbock Theater Center, 2508 Ave. P, at 2 p.m. Sunday and at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Dow Jones Average Slips .08

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed today, pausing after the rally of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed 15.59 points Tuesday and Wednesday, slipped back .08 to 847.11 by noontime today.

Gainers maintained a 5-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts have attributed the market's recent strength in large measure to enthusiasm over the exceptionally strong second quarter earnings being reported by many companies.

But brokers noted some hesitancy today as traders awaited the weekly money supply statistics from the Federal Reserve at today's close, and the government's monthly report Friday on consumer price trends.

Pan American World Airways led the active list, up ⅛ at 8⅛. On Wednesday the company reported sharply higher second-quarter earnings.

Vornado climbed 1⅛ to 15⅜ on word that Interstate Properties, one of two concerns that have recently acquired Vornado shares, had increased its holdings of the stock.

The NYSE's composite index rose .06 to 55.67. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .30 at 153.18.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 13.74 million shares as of noontime, down from 16.72 million at the same point on Wednesday.

Pesticides Approved For Grasshoppers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four newly approved pesticides can be used to kill grasshoppers destroying crops and rangelands in the West, the government says.

The Environmental Protection Agency granted approval Wednesday for use of Dimethoate, Furadan, Dursban and Orthene. EPA spokesman Larry O'Neill said Nebraska and Kansas requested permission to use new pesticides to battle the grasshoppers.

The pesticides already are approved by EPA for use on some crops, and their use was simply extended to new crops that are being ravaged by hordes of the insects, O'Neill said.

Dry Weather Hurts Crops

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — Agricultural conditions still are deteriorating across most of Texas because of hot, dry weather.

Despite scattered weekend rain, crops in some locations are dying from lack of moisture, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reported Wednesday.

Cotton in the Rolling Plains is poor condition and needs rain in the next week and soybeans are dying in Southeast Texas and the Coastal Plains. In some locations sorghum is being cut for hay or grazed because it will not produce a grain crop.

Fruit and nut crops also are suffering. Peach yields are low in many areas and the fruit is not sizing properly because of dry conditions. The once-bright pecan outlook is fading with some nut shedding underway in the east and south.

Hay production has been severely affected by the extended dry spell, the service reported, and yields in many areas are down 50 percent or more. Hay prices have increased greatly and will continue to climb unless rain comes soon.

Harvests are in progress in the southern, coastal and central areas. Cotton, corn and sorghum harvesting is active throughout South Texas and the Coastal Bend.

Land preparation also is progressing, the service reported, with wheat farmers in the Plains working toward fall plantings.

Rice Growers Join Group

CLEVELAND, Miss. (UPI) — About 135 Mississippi rice growers voted to form a state chapter of the National Rice Council Wednesday, joining Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana in the group.

Joe Rice Dockery of Cleveland, newly elected president of the Mississippi chapter, said participant producrs paid dues equilvalent to 3 cents per hundredweight or 1.35 cents for each 45-pound bushel.

Bill Goldsmith, executive vice president of the national council, said the agency spent $1 million advertising rice in seven national women's magazines and other publications.

"Studies and research tell us that 85 percent of all homemakers in America have rice in the pantry. Our objective is to increase the frequency of putting it on the menu," Goldsmith said.

He said the agency plans to distribute nationally this fall an education film for home economics teachers and students.

Si Grider, director of international relations for the council, said another $1 million was spent overseas in promotion work in Europe, the Middle East and Africa.

Deputies Nab Teen-Ager Charged In May Slaying

Lubbock County Sheriff's deputies Wednesday arrested a 19-year-old Lubbock man who was charged in May with the slaying of Javier Gutierrez.

Deputies found Joe Martinez Cabarrubio shortly before 2 p.m. in an apartment in the 400-block of N. University Avenue. Cabarrubio reportedly was digging an "escape tunnel" in the dirt floor of one of the apartment bedrooms when deputies arrived.

The alleged suspect told lawmen he threw the pistol used in the incident into the Canyon Lake on N. University Avenue and, according to reports, took deputies to the scene. A diver was scheduled to begin a search of the lake today.

Cabarrubio was charged May 25 with the shooting death of the 17-year-old Gutierrez of 1831 San Jose Dr. Police found Gutierrez, who was shot once in the back of the head, in the 2100-block of Emory Street about 9:30 p.m. May 23. He died about four hours later at Methodist Hospital.

A woman at the scene told police the victim had fought with another man in front of an apartment just before the shooting. Other witnesses provided the same description of the suspect and of the vehicle — a light-blue 1968 Ford pickup with a white left door — that left the scene.

A nearby resident reported hearing four shots and police recovered a bullet near the front door of the apartment where Gutierrez was found.

Elsewhere, in the city's fourth armed robbery in just two days, a 29-year-old Lubbock man told police a black couple brandishing a pistol took his $390 watch and $210 in cash early Wednesday.

Virgil D. Merriweather said the pair approached him in the 1700-block of E. Broadway about 7:30 a.m., and the man pulled a pistol before ordering Merriweather to go behind a nearby building.

He said the duo told him to lie face-down on the ground and took the valuables.

Merriweather said the woman wore a stocking over her head while the man, who was carrying a .32-or .38-caliber pistol, concealed his identity with a ski mask.

Trish Ann Pike reported a camera and stereo, as well as $12 cash, missing from her 4501 51st St. home. Reports indicated entry came after the burglar pried the front door.

Bob Hill, owner of a restaurant at 1207 Oak Ave., said whoever broke into that firm made off with 370 pounds of meat, valued at $800.

Bette C. Jacob of 3102 4th St., No. 9, told police someone took a $1,500 diamond pendant from a jewelry box at her home during the last four days.

Forty-two tires, valued at about $1,350, were reported stolen from a tire company at 3412 Ave. A by the firm's owner, Gerald M. Ince. Ince said the burglars broke a window in an overhead door late Tuesday or early Wednesday to get to the goods.

Mary F. Spencer, manager of a restaurant at 1519 E. Broadway, told police whoever ripped the coin boxes from a pool table, cigarette machine and juke box at the business got only about $30 in change for his trouble. But the burglar did cause about $300 damage to the machines, she said.

Review Scheduled On Viets' Status

An officer from the district headquarters of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas will be in Lubbock Aug. 7 to meet with Vietnamese refugees who wish to have their status reviewed.

A spokesman for the Border Patrol here said the immigration official will be in the grand jury room of the Federal Building from noon until 5 p.m.

He urged all Vietnamese in the area with questions about their status as aliens in this country or about citizenship applications to be present.

Mascot Enters 'Hall Of Flame'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Muggs, a fire station mascot for 13 years until he died in April, will be entered in the station's "Hall of Flame" Sunday — but not because he rode to fires on the back of fire trucks.

Muggs, a German Shepherd, won the admiration of firemen in the 12th Fire battalion by guarding their possessions in the station while they were away fighting fires.

Before Muggs arrived, firefighters said, television sets, radios and shoes and clothing would disappear while they were away. But Muggs put a stop to that. In his 13 years, he bit 72 would-be burglars.

Each time Muggs bit a thief, he was taken to the dog pound and each time the firefighters would bail him out.

The firefighters buried Muggs near the flagpole outside the station and put up a gravestone with the dog's name on it.

Now, alongside pictures of retired firemen and major blazes in the "Hall of Flame," will be a picture of Muggs.

The firefighters have another German Shepherd mascot now — and so far he has bitten one would-be burglar.

Local School Lawyers Told To Prepare For Defense Of Lawsuit

In a carefully worded motion, Lubbock Independent School District trustees have authorized their attorneys to defend them against a lawsuit challenging the district's at-large election system.

But it's still unclear whether the school board has come to grips with the issue of at-large vs. single-member district elections.

On a motion by trustee Brad Crawford, the board Wednesday unanimously instructed its lawyers to take "whatever legal steps are necessary to successfully defend this suit." The vote was taken after a 15-minute closed session with school attorney Tom Johnson.

The lawsuit in question is a class-action complaint filed in federal court Friday by eight minority voters. They contend their constitutional rights are violated by the present method of electing school board members.

The current system is at-large, meaning citywide voting with no residency restrictions. The plaintiffs are seeking a single-member district system, by which certain seats on the board would be designated for particular geographic areas of the city.

The suit, similar to action pending against the Lubbock City Council, says at-large elections dilute the voting strength of minorities. The plaintiffs are asking $31 million in damages due to alleged past discrimination.

Most current school board members say they back at-large elections. But at least two trustees — Lynn Stafford and Jose Ramirez — advocate a combination of at-large and single-member district systems.

Depending on their stance, trustees seemed to interpret Wednesday's motion differently.

School board president Charles Waters said the action was the board's way of saying it will "not at this time" change its election process. He said trustees want the suit to "run its course" through the courts.

"We're going to fight it," said Waters. While he has "no personal objections" to single-member district elections, he believes the public wants at-large elections.

Mrs. Stafford sees Wednesday's vote in a somewhat different light. She said the action was the board's way of "defending ourselves against allegations of past discrimination" — and against the claim of damages.

Mrs. Stafford stressed that her vote was "not a vote against single-member districts." She said she still hopes that the school board adopts an election system that ensures one representative from each of the city's five high school zones and two at-large members.

Carter Watching Lozano Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is "aware" of a West Texas civil rights investigation into the death of a Mexican-American, a White House aide says.

The aide, Rick Hernandez, says Carter is watching developments in the case of Larry Lozano, who died Jan. 22 in the Ector County Jail at Odessa where he had been confined for 12 days.

Lozano's death was first termed a suicide, but a coroner's inquest later ruled it accidental.

Some Mexican-American groups have angrily protested both rulings, claiming the Pecos man was beaten to death by sheriff's deputies.

Hernandez, a deputy assistant to the president, said Wednesday he mentioned the Lozano case to Carter "as an example of a human rights violation."

"Because of that, he (Carter) is aware of the case and concerned in a general nature."

Hernandez said, however, that Carter is not personally involved in the Lozano case at this time because it is still a pending matter with the Department of Justice.

"The Justice Department has to decide on the merits of the case ... we cannot get involved politically," he said.

"The president is obviously very concerned about human rights here and around the world. The president wants to make sure human rights are upheld everywhere and especially in this country."

A federal grand jury investigating the Lozano death recessed indefinitely in Midland last Friday after hearing 66 witnesses over a five-day period. It has released no findings yet.

Additionally, Ector County District Attorney John Green announced earlier this week he had officially closed the Lozano case, absolving Ector County Sheriff's Department deputies of any wrongdoing in Lozano's death.

Earlier Wednesday, Hernandez was quoted by the Midland Reporter-Telegram as saying Carter was "very interested in this case and in any case where there are possible human rights violations."

"I cannot tell you about what the president and I discussed, because it is not privileged information. We're in a very tender legal area which involves possible prosecution by the Justice Department, so I am limited in what I can say. I don't want to prejudice the case because there may be some innocent people involved," Hernandez told the newspaper in a telephone interview.

Pay Raises

cut to only $1 million, school officials said, the rate eventually would have to be raised once the district gets court approval to sell bonds authorized by voters last year.

Harriger suggested that instead of cutting the debt service tax rate to 15 cents, it be reduced only to 18 cents. This would have left $1.5 million in debt-service reserves, a figure his colleagues said still would be risky.

On a 5-2 vote, the board settled on a 20-cent debt-service tax. School officials said this would allow bonds to be sold without necessitating a future hike in the rate.

By taking 11 cents off its maintenance tax and seven cents off its debt service tax, the board reduced its overall tax rate 11.3 percent — from $1.58 to $1.40.

$225. This reduced the overall budget from $41.5 million to $41.35 million and put about $150,000 back into general-fund reserves. The reserves were thus boosted to about $1.1 million — a more comfortable figure.

The board then discussed the debt-service reserves. If the surplus here is

Most of the 2,800 native Americans who came for the week of political demonstrations and religious ceremonies left after they ended last Friday.

But their suburban Maryland campsite, which was scheduled to be closed Monday, remained open because several hundred Indians, many of whom walked here, were unable to leave.

The United Methodist Church, the principal private financial backer of "The Longest Walk," has collected money to help the Indians return home.

But the Rev. John P. Adams, director of the church's Department of Law, Justice and Community Relations, said, "We've extended this agency as far as it can go."

CHILDREN KILLED

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Three children were killed early Wednesday in the second apartment-house collapse in Cairo in three days. Only part of the four-story building caved in, or the toll of sleeping residents would have been greater.

Flu Program Wins Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of experts has given a clean bill of health to the government's proposed program to inoculate the elderly and chronically ill against flu, but chances appear slim Congress will pay the costs.

Most states have expressed an interest in mounting an inoculation drive this fall, but without federal funds they won't be able to, doctors from the U.S. Center for Disease Control told a special flu conference on Wednesday.

Only 10 states now plan to use their own funds to offer shots through public health clinics, according to a CDC survey. About 40 states say they would if federal aid were available.

Health Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. asked the gathering of about 60 medical experts, public officials and others to review the government's recommendations for the approaching flu season, and to help restore public confidence in flu shots, which, he said, still are suffering a backlash from the 1976 swine flu shot program.

The conference endorsed the current immunization plan, saying the benefits were "overwhelming" compared with the risks of complications from the shots.

The House last Thursday refused by a 2-1 margin to give HEW a special $15 million appropriation to start annual immunization programs in the states. It voted instead to provide only $3 million for more research on flu vaccines. A Senate appropriations subcommittee has voted to kill the entire request.

Federal doctors said that without government financing, poor persons may not be able to get shots.

Twelve million Americans get flu shots annually from private physicians, including about 8 million of the 42 million in the high risk groups. The HEW plan calls for immunizing 8 million or 9 million of the high risk group by the end of the 1979-80 flu season.

The HEW doctors and other experts said the risk of death from flu during an epidemic is one in 5,000, while the death risk from complications from a flu shot is one in 2 million. The flu vaccines, while not perfect in protecting against flu, are believed to provide protection in at least seven out of 10 cases, they said.

Congressional critics, in blocking the $15 million appropriation last week, said they feared the program was "Swine Flu II."

Not only did the feared epidemic never occur, but several hundred of the 45 million Americans who got shots became ill and some died. The government is facing more than 1,400 damage suits totaling $775 million, including 439 from persons who contracted the rare, paralyzing Guillain-Barre syndrome.

Dr. William H. Foege, CDC director, said the debate over flu immunization has dwelled upon the problem of side effects from the shots. "Someone should also have to assume responsibility for those who die from influenza" because they couldn't get shots, said Foege.

He said a flu shot campaign this winter could save 1,200 lives.

The 10 states with their own plans for flu immunization clinics are Alabama, Alaska, California, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Nevada, Oklahoma, Virginia and Washington.

Safety Experts To Probe Gondola Mishap Cause

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Safety experts have been called in to examine a tower of the Skyway ride at the Six Flags Over MidAmerica amusement park, where a gondola car slipped off its cable and plunged 75 feet to the ground, killing three riders and critically injuring a fourth.

More than 100 people were stranded on the ride for more than four hours Wednesday before rescue teams removed them with aerial equipment and ladders.

The victims were 15 seconds into the two-minute ride when their car, one of 28 on the Skyway, reached the first tower. The tower has a pair of T-shaped steel support arms on each side and one of them apparently snapped as the car passed, knocking it off the cable.

"The car dropped off at the first tower," said park spokesman Bob Kochan. "The cable is still intact. It did not snap."

Safety experts were flown in from Los Angeles, where Six Flags has its headquarters, to examine the Swiss-made ride.

A similar gondola ride at Marriott Corp.'s Great America amusement park near Chicago slipped from a support tower runner earlier this year, trapping dozens of riders for several hours, but injuring none.

Dead in Wednesday's accident were Trisha Weeks, 10, of suburban Chesterfield; her cousin, Christian Johnson, 15; and Miss Johnson's brother, Clark F. Johnson, 25. The Johnsons were from Rivesville, W.Va. Trisha's sister, Janine, 12, underwent surgery at St. Joseph Hospital in Kirkwood and was reported in critical condition.

The car landed in a clump of bushes behind a restaurant, missing the crowds which pass below as it traverses the park like a ski lift. Mike Glennon, assistant personnel manager at the 503-acre park, said the car landed near a costumed park employee who greets visitors.

"He just happened to be right there and gave first aid to one of the injured girls," Glennon said. "Then he took off his costume to cover them."

Betty Clark was standing near the ride with her three children.

"We didn't see what happened, but we heard the sickening thud, and people started running all over the place," she said.

The ride is equipped with a safety mechanism that halts it immediately after a malfunction. If not for that mechanism, park officials said, the other cars may have fallen.

Fire departments using snorkel equipment and aerial ladders worked four hours getting stranded passengers down. The ladders had trouble reaching parts of the ride which rise more than 125 feet in some spots.

Jerry Stimbridge, a policeman from Evansville, Ind., who was touring the park with is family, said, "It took a while for the crowd to find what happened. All of a sudden the Skyway stopped with people stuck in the cars.

"There was no panic, but I'd hate to have been up there and see what those people had to see," Stimbridge said.

Parks Close Cable Ride

ARLINGTON (UPI) — Six Flags Over Texas at Arlington and Astroworld at Houston have closed cable lift rides until officials investigate the deaths of three persons and injuring of a fourth on a similar gondola ride at the Six Flags amusement park in St. Louis.

Bruce Neal, public relations managers at the Arlington park, said Wednesday there was nothing to indicate the rides were unsafe but they were closed pending a complete investigation of the accident in St. Louis.

"We have absolutely no reason whatever to suspect there could be a problem of any sort with our version of the ride," Neal said. "However, we have closed the Astrolift until we know exactly what happened to the similar ride in Missouri.

"Because of our very rigid safety standards, we feel it is only prudent to suspend operation of the ride until we know what happened up there."

Neal said the Six Flags Over Texas gondola ride had been inspected as recently as Wednesday morning as a matter of routine.

Pathologists Studying Portions Of Albert Einstein's Brain

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — A tightly kept secret that portions of Albert Einstein's brain have been floating in preservative fluid and under scrutiny since the physicist's death in 1955 has been reluctantly revealed.

A team of pathologists has been probing Einstein's brain, apparently following a request made by the discoverer of the theory of relativity, since the Princeton Medical Center autopsy April 18, 1955. That procedure was presided over by Dr. Thomas S. Harvey, the center's former chief pathologist who moved to Wichita in 1975 and admitted Wednesday he brought the brain portion with him for study.

Harvey, who told the New York Times in 1965 that a team was preparing to investigate the late physicist's brain for physical clues to his genius, was reluctant Wednedsday to say what, if anything, had been found in 23 years of research.

The pathologist confirmed he was studying a section of Einstein's brain but he would not say how the study was progressing, what part of the brain was involved or where it was stored. However, Harvey admitted to a reporter that he brought the brain section to Wichita in 1975 when he transferred from New Jersey.

The existence of the portion of Einstein's brain in Wichita was discovered by Steven Levy, a reporter for the New Jersey Monthly, after several months of tracing. Levy's story, being published today, says he viewed portions of brain material floating in preservative liquid in a large Mason jar in Harvey's laboratory in Wichita.

It also says the Einstein family was upset by the New York Times 1955 story and ordered doctors entrusted with the brain to withhold all publicity. A news conference scheduled a week after Einstein's death was canceled.

Levy quotes Harvey as saying publication of the study is "perhaps a year away." He also quotes Harvey as claiming, "So far the brain's fallen within normal limits for a man his age."

Levy said Einstein, who used to claim "My brain is my laboratory," requested that his brain be removed for posthumous study.

Court Ruling Expected To Alter UIL Thinking

HOUSTON (AP) — At 6-11, 250 pounds, schoolboy star Greg Kite doesn't appear to need help in pursuing a basketball career but U.S. District Judge Finis Cowan has given him a helping hand anyway.

In a move that could eventually change the future of high school basketball in Texas, Cowan Wednesday issued an injunction that prohibits the University Interscholastic League from punishing Kite for attending two summer basketball camps next month.

Kite filed suit against the UIL, claiming the league's ban on varsity athletes participating in summer basketball camps violated his right to improve his skills.

But Cowan's helping hand so far only is extended to Kite.

Cowan was careful to point out that his ruling applied only to Kite and UIL Director Bailey Marshall warned that any other Texas schoolboy who attended a summer camp would be in violation of the UIL rule.

"We hope all the youngsters throughout the state realize this rule was just for this one youngster and anyone else who might go to a summer camp would be in violation of the rule," Marshall said.

Despite Marshall's warning, Kite and his attorney Dean Steffey, saw the ruling as opening the gates for other athletes to attend camps.

"In five years I think you will see a tremendous upgrading of high school basketball in Texas," Steffey said. "I think he (Kite) has opened the door for other high school athletes too. You can't let Greg go and nobody else."

"I'm just happy I'll be able to go to the camps and that maybe other athletes will now have a chance to go to camps and improve themselves," said Kite, who averaged 19 points and 15 rebounds as a junior last season on Houston Madison's district championship team.

Marshall said the UIL's next move would be to try to formulate some type of rule that would permit summer camps with restrictions and try to get it approved.

"It could be sent to member schools by next April," Marshall said. "If they turn it down I don't know what will happen. I guess we'll be back in court a lot."

Marshall said he didn't expect too many similar suits the rest of this summer because most summer basketball camps already are completed. "But if more suits are filed, I guess we'll be back in court," he said.

"Public interest has never been served by denying an individual of his constitutional rights," Cowan said, adding that Kite would suffer severe harm if not allowed to attend the camp.

Marshall said he foresees trouble ahead if summer camps eventually are approved for Texas.

"We know other states have less restrictive rules and they've had trouble with it," Marshall said. "The youngsters are pressured to attend. It won't solve the problems just putting restrictions on the camps."

While the Kite case has been the central topic of the 46th annual Texas High School Coaches Association coaching school under way here, the all-star football and basketball teams continued preparing for their weekend North-South clashes.

South coach Doug Ethridge of Port Neches-Groves and North coach Don Beck of Perryton each said their teams were starting to gell as units.

"The offense is starting to pick up and they are really learning to work together well," Ethridge said following Wednesday's workouts.

Ethridge said he has decided that Seguin's Lawrence Sampleton will kick extra points and Milton Collins of Blooming Grove will handle kickoff chores.

Beck said North all-star Artis Cavanaugh of Breckenridge has a twisted ankle and teammate Jerry Sanders of South Garland suffered a case of heat fatigue, but both are expected to be ready for Saturday's battle in the Astrodome.

In North workouts, former Monterey quarterback Ron Reeves has been used primarily as a linebacker. It is expected that he will be playing there in the game Saturday night. Reeves has signed to play this fall at Texas Tech.

Terry Teagle, a 30-points-per-game shooter from Broaddus, remained hobbled by an ankle injury. South coach Bob Latham said Teagle's status remained in doubt for Friday night's game at Hofheinz Pavilion.

Billy Kidd, a Keller, Texas coach, snapped the attendance record when he became the 7,982nd registrant, marking the 25th consecutive year the school has established an attendance record.

Cowboys Work On Goal Line

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, in the longest practice sessions of summer camp so far, worked on goal-line situations and held passing scrimmages Wednesday between the first offensive and defensive units.

The National Football League champions ran a total of 45 plays from scrimmage, with the first 15 being goal-line carries by fullbacks Robert Newhouse and Scott Laidlaw and tailbacks Tony Dorsett and Doug Dennison.

Runningback Preston Pearson sat out the day's two workouts with strains of his back, groin and hamstring, team officials said.

In passing drills that followed the goal-line workout, the Cowboys' veteran defensive unit, working on its 4-0 alignment for passing situations, picked off five aerials — two each by Cliff Harris and Thomas Henderson and one by Randy Hughes.

During the passing drill, tight end Billy Joe DuPree, already practicing with a fractured left thumb, had to leave the workout when he split the webbing between two fingers on his right hand while catching a pass. Although the injury required nine stitches, DuPree is not expected to miss much action, doctors said.

Free agent kickers Ove Johansson and rookie Jay Sherrill, bidding to replace missing All-Pro kicker Efren Herrera, concluded the afternoon workout with field goal attempts. They did not distinguish themselves, observers said.

State NBC Meet Opens

Ernie Helweg, who has seen his Town Draw Brewers win all 13 times the've taken the field this summer, rates his squad's chances as "good" as the Texas State NBC Tournament opens a four-day run at Mackenzie Park today.

The Brewers, who captured the West Region championship here Sunday, will face the Del Rio Mustangs, the runner-up at Kerrville, in an 8 p.m. contest tonight.

The teams learned Tuesday they could add three players to their 22-man rosters after Regional play, so Helewg was busy trying to locate new bodies.

"We've got excellent play out of personnel this summer," Helweg pointed out. "We've got an A-1 mound staff in Pete Mills, Chuck Johnson, Jimmy Huffman and Doug House.

"But House is primarily a reliever should one of the other three guys get in trouble.

"And in a tournament of this sort, you've got to win four or five games, so everyone needs more pitching and we're no exception."

"I think we'll be able to hit with anyone in this meet," said the manager of the Brewers, a team comprised mainly of former and present Texas Tech baseballers. "Scott Leimgruber (catcher), Bryan Cowan (left fielder), plus Foster turned in some excellent defensive plays last weekend.

Other first-round games today pit the Lubbock Z's against the Austin Senators (an at-large selection) at 4 p.m.; the Bryan Bombers (runner-up at the Brenham sectional tournament) will take on the Abilene Salta Bulls (third-place finisher here last week) at 6, and the 10 p.m. game will match a pair of regional winners, Austin Family Life (Brenham champ) against the Kerrville Kats (Kerrville tourney).

The Z's, who finished fourth in the Lubbock Regional, have been designated as the home team.

There will be four games Friday starting a 4 p.m. and five games Sturday beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday's finals, a possible doubleheader, will begin at 6 p.m.

Admission will be $2 per session—four games—or $5 for a tournament pass.

Lodging, Transportation Woes Point To Lack Of Festival Planning

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The National Sports Festival is an idea whose time has come, according to officials of the U.S. Olympic Committe, although as late as a month ago, an idea was all it was.

But following a modest opening ceremony Wednesday night, competition began today in 18 Olympic sports at the Air Force Academy to the north and Pueblo to the south in the inaugural National Sports Festival.

In only four weeks, the games were organized at the new USOC training center here, sites selected and prepared and commitments received from more than 2,100 athletes.

Airline seats are at a premium until next Tuesday; hotel rooms are booked solid for 30 miles around the city. For transportation of the athletes, charter buses, tour buses, school buses and even church buses have been appropriated.

The logistics of it were staggering, and in many cases it shows how hastily the festival was put together.

In basketball, for example, the festival committee failed to ask soon enough to get the National Collegiate Athletic Association to waive restrictions on its athletes participating in summer play. The result is a somewhat unsatisfactory combination of high school, junior college and small college prospects.

Although many of the country's top amateur athletes are here, it's also true that in most events, there aren't enough of them to go around, to insure Olympic calibre competition.

"It's no mystery who is going to win a lot of the events," said one coach, who did not wish to be identified. "But who will finish is another matter."

The quality of competition suffered a bit even on the eve of the festival as it was announced that the Amateur Athletic Union's heavyweight boxing champion, Greg Page, decided now was the time to turn professional.

Yet with the nagging setbacks, USOC officials say the short-order extravaganza is a success just because it has come into being, and they hope that in future years it will realize the potential they envision as a way to bolster this country's sagging Olympic fortunes.

Officials are quick to point out that the effects of the National Sports Festival, even at its optimum impact, probably won't be felt until the Olympics of 1984 and beyond. The festival, planned as an annual event except in Olympic years, needs time to grow and establish its traditions.

They started off optimistically enough Wednesday night as the symbolic flame was lit atop the summit of nearby Pikes Peak and carried by relay runners into Memorial Park where the torch was ignited, balloons released into the balmy evening sky and the festival officially opened.

Before it's over Sunday, champions will have been crowned in 26 sports, in some cases deciding regional supremacy under a unique formula of competition between the east, west, midwest and south quarters of the United States.

Records may or may not be broken in the process, but officials hope it's the start of a tradition of unified competition that will bring the country and its athletes a sense of pride in their amateur sports and the Olympics.

Why Not Start All Over Again?

CHICAGO (AP) — White Sox president Bill Veeck insists it's not a hustle to hype attendance, but he plans to "open" the White Sox 1978 season for the second time Friday night.

"The whole idea is to get the players to forget about what's happened so far and get their minds on turning things around the rest of the year," Veeck said Wednesday. "We'll have bands and introduction of players — the whole bit. Just like on the regular opening day."

The White Sox, who have played well in streaks so far, were amid a nine-game losing streak Monday when Veeck made a rare appearance in the team clubhouse and gave a brief pep talk.

"I wasn't complaining. I told them to forget about the mistakes they've made. I told them that the mistakes have not been all their fault. I've made some too," said Veeck. "I told them that I'm starting over just like they are.

"I'm excited about it and I think the players will respond, too. . .At least I hope so," he added.

The players may have already responded. After the clubhouse chat, the team swept a two-game series from the Milwaukee Brewers, who came to town with the second best record in baseball. The Sox will play two more games against the Oakland A's before the "second" season opens Friday night against Texas.

Hurt seriously by the loss of outfielders Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble to the free-agent market during the off-season, Chicago opened the 1978 campaign in April with a new look.

Now, they have an even newer look with a change of managers — Larry Doby replacing Bob Lemon; a major trade, Bobby Bonds for Claudell Washington; key injuries — loss of All-Star Chet Lemon for several games with a leg injury — plus the acquisition of several minor leaguers.

The visit to the clubhouse, while rare, was not unprecedented. Veeck said he could remember one other occasion when he addressed one of his teams.

"That was in 1949 when I had the Cleveland Indians," he said. "I had to explain to the players that nobody made any money from the movie 'The Kid From Cleveland,' which was about Lou Boudreau. It was possibly the worst movie ever made."

Veeck said the season reopener is not just another promotional stunt. "We feel its important that we try to get on the right track. If having another opening day does it, then our mission will be accomplished."

Doc Furnishes Correct Cure

By The Associated Press

Doc Medich had just the right prescription for the ice-cold Texas Rangers Wednesday night, and Lou Piniella had a pretty good one for New York's feverish Yankee fans, too.

Medich handed the Boston Red Sox only their second shutout of the season, slamming the door with a two-hitter, and Bobby Bonds drilled a two-run homer in the eighth inning for the 2-0 victory that ended the Rangers' eight-game losing streak.

Piniella waited for an even more dramatic moment, the bottom of the ninth inning, before unloading a three-run homer that propelled the Yanks past Cleveland 3-1. That cheered up the fans who had been hollering for Billy Martin and booing his replacement, Bob Lemon.

"Maybe there is a law of averages," Medich mused, thinking about the Red Sox' red-hot performance the first half of the season and their current slump, which includes setbacks in seven of their last eight games.

"You have to be a little lucky," added Medich, who yielded only Fred Lynn's double in the fourth and Butch Hobson's single in the fifth and set down Boston's final 14 batters. "When you think Boston, you think down — and that's where my pitches were all night long."

Medich retired the last 14 batters in a row, but added, "I was really getting tired. . .I just didn't want to come out. I kept the ball down and when you think Boston you think down."

Medich, who leaped into the stands to save a Baltimore heart attack victim with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation earlier this month, said:

"Some of us were talking tonight and a few Rangers are going to go over to Arlington Memorial Hospital to take a course. It's something we talked about during our losing streak. I think it helped take our minds off what's been happening to us. You start thinking about life and death, and it puts baseball in perspective."

He added, "I was a little lucky. We played great defense and they're in a slump."

Yanks 3, Indians 1

Piniella's homer off Rick Waits was his third of the year and came after Mickey Rivers and Thurman Munson had singled.

"I haven't seen as good a breaking ball with as good rotation in the league all year," Piniella said of Waits' curveball — which explains the homer. It came off a fastball.

"It was a fastball right right down the middle," said Cleveland catcher Gary Alexander. "Rick shook off a sign for a curveball. He wanted to get the fastball in — but he didn't get in enough."

Lemon was the target of mild booing by some of the 20,379 fans. On occasion they chanted "We want Billy!"

"You think I'm deaf?" Lemon replied when someone wondered if he'd heard the crowd. "I knew I had to get something. I knew I wasn't going to get roundly cheered, but it wasn't as much against me as it was that they wanted Billy.

"I figured I'd get that. It wouldn't be natural, the years Billy has had here, for them not to boo. It could have been worse. There could have been 50,000 fans."

And what, he was asked, did he think of the cliff-hanging finish? "I'll take 'em like this — but I hope they're not all that way."

Royals 12, Mariners 3

Kansas City had plenty of power — 14 hits — including Pete LaCock's homer and Fred Patek's two-run triple. But for the first six innings it was Doug Bird's power that had the fans cheering.

He had a no-hitter going. Then suddenly, manager Whitey Herzog was on the mound and Bird was gone after a pair of walks and Tom Paciorek's two-run double in the seventh. Steve Mingori took over and allowed just one more hit, Paciorek's single in the ninth.

"Whitey goes by how many pitches I throw and limits me to about 100," Bird said. "That's where I was in the seventh." In fact, he threw 101.

Angels 11, Brewers 9

Milwaukee had a chance to cut into Boston's 5½-game lead in the AL East, but they ran into Joe Rudi. He drove in five runs, four with a grand-slam homer in the first inning.

So it was the Angels who got the victory, which kept them within three games of front-running Kansas City in the West.

Blue Jays 5, Twins 1

Balor Moore scattered eight Minnesota hits and Toronto struck for five runs in the fourth inning, the final two on Luis Gomez's triple, to trim the Twins.

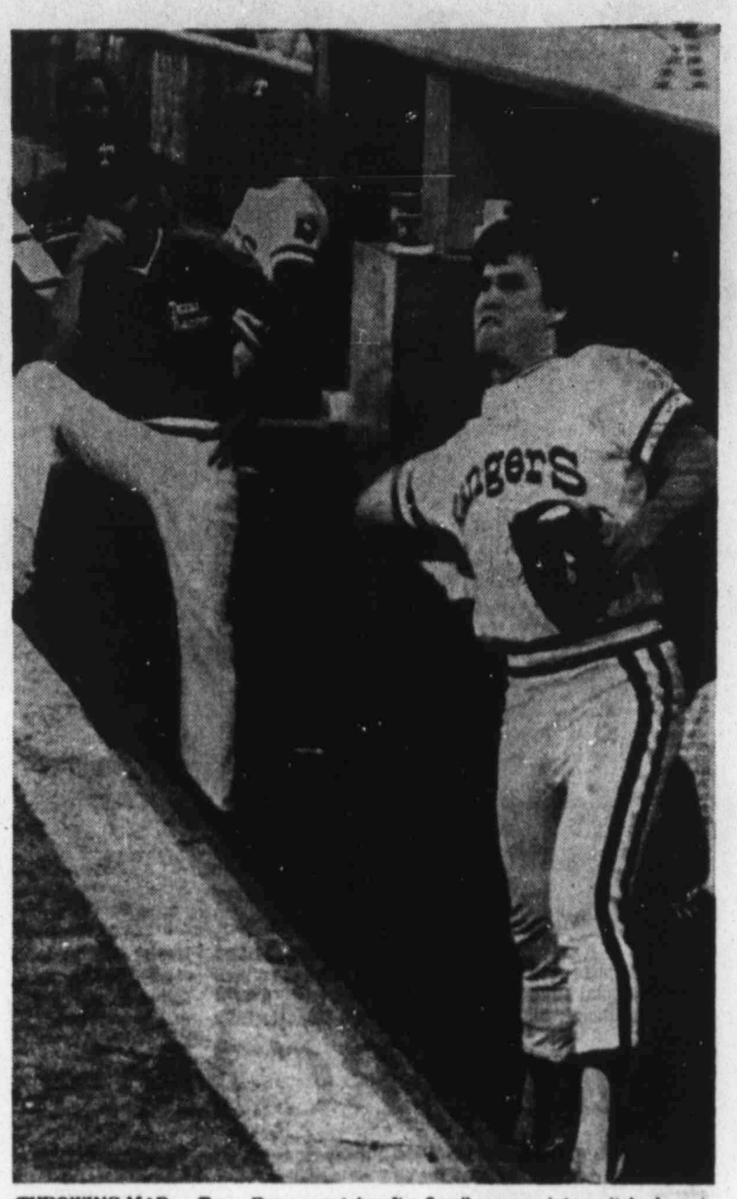
Orioles 9, Tigers 6

Jack Billingham, who pitched shutouts his last two times out, had to settle for a less-than-complete effort this time — nine hits allowed in 6 1/3 innings before Bob Sykes took over.

He got offensive support from Jason Thompson and Aurelio Rodriguez, who drove in two runs apiece.

A's 8, White Sox 4

Glenn Burke hit a two-run single in a three-run fourth inning and Dave Revering homered to highlight Oakland's 15-hit attack against Wilbur Wood and two White Sox relievers. Eric Soderholm had a homer for Chicago.



THROWING MAD — Texas Rangers catcher Jim Sundberg goes into a pitcher's motion as he prepares to throw another piece of equipment onto the field after being ejected from Wednesday night's game at Arlington. Sundberg was thrown out for arguing over a third strike during the first inning of the game and had to be restrained at the plate. When he returned to the dugout, he showed his anger again by littering the field with an assortment of bats, helmets, and gloves as he moved to the locker room. (AP Laserphoto)

Boxer's Retirement Lasts Only Two Years

TOTOWA, N.J. (AP) — Leo Randolph captured a gold medal in the 1976 Olympics — and retired from boxing.

He was at the ripe old age of 17, and nine years of competitive boxing had destroyed his desire. He called it quits right after the Olympics and went back to high school. Only recently did he start his professional career.

It's been only two years, but people already forget that Randolph was one of five United States boxers to bring home gold from the Montreal Olympics.

Overshadowed by fellow Olympians Leon and Michael Spinks, Howard Davis and Sugar Ray Leonard, Randolph went to work for Boeing Aircraft after graduating from high school.

Randolph has fought and won twice in two pro appearances and recently signed to tangle with Jimmy Magnifico of Hasbrouck Heights at the Ice World in Totowa on Aug. 17.

"My main desire in taking this fight is to get some exposure in New York," said the 120-pound bantamweight. "Right after Montreal I was so exhausted after nine years of fighting that I decided I wouldn't box again — forever."

He kept true to his word, taking up gymnastics his last year in high school and finishing third in the still rings in the Tacoma City High School Championships.

"Leo had been boxing from the time he was nine until the time he was 17," said Joe Clough, Randolph's trainer. "That's a lot of training, dieting and losing weight. He needed a break. He needed a change of pace and it happened to be gymnastics."

After high school he then went to work for Boeing and stayed completely out of the ring until knocking out Alfonso Deldillo in the second round in his June pro debut.

"I talked to my coach and had a good offer. It helps the community and I missed boxing anyhow," he said by phone from Tacoma. "And not just because other people were doing good."

The "other people" — the Spinks brothers, Davis and Leonard — all sent telegrams to Randolph prior to his first fight.

"Their success had little influence on me — not enough to make me come back," said Randolph, who will earn $1,000 for fighting Magnifico. "But their success makes me train harder. I was surprised to see Spinks get up so quick. I'm not jealous of their success."

Randolph was the first of the five to win a gold medal and had the best amateur record, 167-7, of the group. He said his boxing purses will go to support his mother and hopes to be the first American in 30 years to be the bantamweight champion.

Norman's Negligent Charge Rejected

SAN DIEGO (AP) — For the second time, a Superior Court jury has rejected former San Diego Chargers tight end Pettis Norman's bid for compensation for alleged negligent treatment by the team physician for the National Football League club.

Following a civil trial before Judge George A. Lazar, the jury Wednesday absolved Chargers physician Dr. E. Paul Woodward of any negligence. The trial was in connection with treatment of a 1974 injury that eventually forced Norman's retirement from pro football.

Midland Retakes Lead With Win Over Tulsa

By The Associated Press

Midland is back in the driver's seat of the Texas League's Western Division today after one day out of the lead.

The way to the top was a 7-3 victory Wednesday over Tulsa. It didn't hurt that Tuesday's leader, San Antonio, lost to Arkansas 7-3 to fall one-half game out.

The remaining league action Wednesday was Amarillo's 8-7 defeat of Shreveport.

Midland's Kurt Siebert slammed a two-run homer in the fourth inning. George Riley, 2-0, claimed the victory, and the Drillers' Dave Righetti, 4-5, was tagged for the loss.

Arkansas pitcher John Fulgham, 5-7, struck out 11 Dodgers and walked only two on the way to his win. The losing pitcher was Rick Sander, 6-8, who was relieved in the third inning when the score was 5-1.

Amarillo's Steve Smith hit a single in the bottom of the ninth to send in Joe Hicks for the team's winning run. Tom Telleman improved his record to 4-5. Rick Brandt took the loss for Shreveport.

Kratzert Wants Birdies While Watching Stork

Kratzert is the defending champion in the $210,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open. He captured the $42,000 first prize last year with a 19-under-par 265. It was the last victory on the Professional Golfers' Association tour for Kratzert, who is now in ninth place on the 1978 money-winners list having earned $134,140

Kratzert is confident he can repeat his performance this year, but his mind may be on other things besides golf. His wife, Cheryl Ann, is home in Fort Wayne, Ind., expecting their first child "any day now," Kratzert said.

The 26-year-old Kratzert said Wednesday he's "trying to get my game in shape. I hit the ball well today. I think I can repeat," he said after scoring a 3-under-par 68 during the Celebrity Pro-Am.

The 1977 GHO victory gave Kratzert the confidence to play more aggressively. "A lot of guys keep from winning by being a little timid. After winning the first one, you have the confidence to go ahead," Kratzert said.

Only one golfer has ever repeated at the GHO. Billy Casper won the tournament in 1963, 1965, 1968 and 1973. No golfer has won the title in consecutive years.

There are nine former GHO champions in the field this year at the 6,354-yard Wethersfield Country Club course. In addition to Kratzert, they include George Archer, Don Bies, Gene Littler, Bob Lunn, Rik Massengale and Dave Stockton.

Massengale said Wednesday that he has "played the worst this year since being on the tour." The 1976 winner has watched his swing and found he is moving his head on the down-swing. But the "cure has not come around yet."

"The guy who wins this tourney is going to have to make a lot of birdies. That's hard to do on this course," he said.

The competition also includes Andy Bean, the leading money winner on the PGA circuit this year. Bean has won $245,558 and holds a narrow margin over Jack Nicklaus.

But the GHO has not attracted the top names on the circuit. Nicklaus, Gary Player and Arnold Palmer are not among the entrants. Also absent is the popular Lee Trevino and Andy North, the winner of the U.S. Open.

Green finished in a tie for first in the 1975 GHO, losing to Bies on the second playoff hole. He shot a 67 Wednesday, as did Morgan. Morgan, who made a charge at Jack Nicklaus in the final round of the Philadelphia Golf Classic and finished second, shot a 4-under-par 67 Wednesday.

WHEN THE DUST CLEARED — Trying to stretch a single into a double fell a few inches short for Tulsa's Eric Bejcek during the opening game of the Colt League Baseball Tournament here Wednesday night. All he came up with, however, was dust and an out. Putting the tag on the Tulsan is Abilene's Pat Stokes. Abilene went on to win the contest 5-4. The tournament continues rest of the week. Hosts Take Opener In Colt Tourney

The host Lubbock Colt all-stars squeezed past Lawton, Okla., all-stars 5-4 in first-round action of the Colt League Sectional Baseball Tournament here Wednesday night.

The Hub City team wil meet Abilene tonight at 8:30 at the Colt League field at 40th and University. Lawton will play Tulsa at 6:30 in a loser's-bracket game, as the double-elimination tournament runs through Saturday.

Lupe Vasquez was the winning pitcher for the Lubbock Colts. He relieved starter Jim Duran in the third inning and struck out six batters rest of the way.

Cornejo Upsets Tanner On Clay At Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Roscoe Tanner's only tournament on clay this year has proved a disappointing one.

Tanner, the No. 4 seed in the $175,000 Louisville International Tennis Classic was upset Wednesday by unseeded Patricio Cornejo of Chile, 6-4, 6-3.

"It would take me two weeks to get use to playing on this surface if I practiced every day," said Tanner. "I just feel like I haven't been playing enough matches and I'm making too many errors."

Cornejo said, "He (Tanner) isn't in as good of shape because I haven't seen him in any tournaments the last two weeks. Maybe this isn't his surface, but he has the respect of other players and he is a good player on this kind of court."

Tanner wasn't the only seeded player to fall to a non-seeded opponent in Wednesday's second round. No. 11 Stan Smith lost to Terry Moor 6-4, 7-6, and No. 12 seed Hans Gildemeister of Chile lost to Rod Frawley of Australia 5-7, 6-1, 6-4.

"I made some good shots and he made some good shots, but he scored on them in the first set," said Smith. In the second set Smith needed just one point to win in the tie-breaking 12th game. But Moor won the next three points to win the match.

Meanwhile, No. 1 Brian Gottfried beat Mike Cahill 6-4, 6-3 and No. 2-seeded Eddie Dibbs, the LITC runnerup last year, had an easy time with Bruce Manson. Dibbs two weeks ago won at Cincinnati in the Western Open and was runnerup last week in the Washington International.

"This is one of my favorite places to play on the Grand Prix tour," said Dibbs. "I had everything going for me hitting the ball so deep."

Other seeded players who won were No.3 Manuel Orantes of Spain, who beat Ivan Molina of Medellin, Columbia, 6-1, 6-2. No.5 Harold Solomon, the LITC champion two years ago, defeated Bernard Fritz of France 7-6, 6-7, 6-1.

Dick Stockton, No. 6 seed, was a winner over Ricardo Fagel 7-6, 6-0. Wojtek Fibak of Poland, the No.7 seed, bested Ishmail El Shaffei of Egypt 6-3, 2-6, 6-0 and No.8 seed John Alexander of Australia stopped Pat DuPre 6-1, 6-1.

Jose Higueras of Spain, the No. 9 seed, was victorious over Billy Martin 6-1, 6-3; No. 10 Jaime Fillol of Chile beat Keith Richardson 4-6, 6-3, 6-1; No. 13 Phil Dent beat fellow Australian Peter McNamara 6-2, 6-1 and No. 16 Victor Amaya defeated Victor Pecci of Paraguay 1-6, 2-6, 6-0.

Dixie Cruises Past El Paso

Mike Reed was the winning pitcher for Lubbock, collecting eight strike outs. He also added a home run to help the cause.

Dixie, which managed 12 hits, was led by Reed's three hits, along with a homer by Doug Hatch.

The group is managed by Gib Weaver and coached by Bill Loper..

Tunisia retained its commanding overall lead in the gold medal standings with a total of 26. Nigeria follows with 16 and Algeria is next with 12.

STOKE MANDEVILLE, England — American competitors took three gold medals in the World Wheelchair Games. In the men's pentathlon, Ray Clark won a gold in Class 5. Sharon Rahn finished first in Class 4 of the women's pentathlon and Roy Nungester captured a gold in shot put Class 2. Two other Americans reached finals. Jon Brown advanced to the weightlifting finals while Mike Dempsey qualified for the final in table tennis Class 5.

CBS Scores On 'Billy Martin Show'

By HOWARD SMITH
Associated Press Sports Writer

When Martin made his farewell address as Yankee manager Monday afternoon at the Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City, there was only one film crew on hand, a crew from CBS' Chicago Bureau. Martin, grim and haggard, tried to read a statement of resignation, broke down in tears and had to be led away by team officials.

It was a tremendously moving moment and CBS used its exclusive film nationally on the evening news show. ABC, with several tons of equipment in town for the Monday night ballgame, came up empty.

The CBS crew that filmed Martin's resignation was in Kansas City on another assigment, covering Rev. Jesse Jackson and his Operation Push. When the latest chapter in the Yankees-Martin drama began to break Monday morning, the film crew was directed to the hotel to see if they could come up with anything.

The hotel was jammed with writers, radio people and no fewer than six TV crews representing the three networks and three local stations. The Yankees announced that there would a statement on the situation later at the ballpark and that nothing would happen at the hotel. All the camera crews left for the ballpark except one.

Rick Brown, producer with the CBS crew, phoned Martin in his hotel room and Martin said he'd be down shortly. So Brown decided to ignore the mass exodus of the other camera crews and stay put for a while. It paid off.

"We knew we were the only ones who got it," said Susan Karaher, assistant manager of CBS' Chicago Bureau. "It was lucky, but it was also diligence and hard work."

ABC, down but not out, tried to get the film from CBS for use during the Monday night game. Film exchanges of sporting events are not uncommon, but was this a sporting event?

"We pursued this story as a competitive news event," says Larry Doyle, acting national news editor for CBS. "If our people through good work and tenacity get a story on our own I don't see that it's necessary we share it. We consider this a news story.

"ABC requested it and I refused."

ABC did a decent job on the story, getting interviews with Yankee officials and players. But it didn't get Martin or the resignation film. CBS had that one alone.

ABC's telecast of the Yankees-Royals game last Monday night, which included updates on the turbulent Yankee situation and inserts on Pete Rose's bid to tie the National League consecutive game hitting record, was the second highest rated Monday night game ever. But it still got beat by Miss Universe.

From 7-10 p.m. CDT, ABC's baseball drew a 16.2 rating and 30 percent audience share. The only regular-season game that was rated higher was the game on NBC in April, 1974 when Hank Aaron hit his 715th career home run, surpassing Babe Ruth.

CBS, with two situation comedies followed by two hours of long-stemmed beauties that make up the Miss Universe Pageant, had a 22 rating and 37.7 share.

When Rose extended his NL record hitting streak to 39 games, most observers were surprised it lasted that long. But Joe DiMaggio, holder of the all-time record of 56 games, was not among them.

DiMaggio, who was profiled four years ago on the syndicated television series "Greatest Sports Legends," indicated at that time that Rose was a threat.

DiMaggio completed his incredible streak in 1941, the same year Ted Williams batted .406 and, ironically, the same year Rose was born. Most baseball fans have long felt that Williams' mark might one day be surpassed but that DiMaggio's streak would probably stand forever. But the Yankee Clipper thought otherwise.

"In my lifetime I do not expect anyone to hit .406 again," said DiMaggio on the "Legends" show. "but I would not be surprised if a hitter like Pete Rose or Rod Carew broke my hit streak. I think that is possible."

Cheerleaders? Not In Pittsburgh

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — Dallas has its Cowgirls. Los Angeles has its Embraceable Ewes. Miami has its Dolphin Star Brites. Cincinnati has its Ben-Gals. And in St. Louis it's the Big Red Line.

But the Pittsburgh Steelers will have none of that.

"We just feel that 'cheerleaders' is a misnomer in the National Football League," said Steeler publicity director Joe Gordon.

"They don't lead cheers in the traditional sense and if you would dress them in sweaters, skirts, bobby socks and white bucks, I don't think they'd be too popular. They're primarily for television."

The craze started when the Dallas Cowboys introduced the Cowgirls. They were an immediate television success and were copied shortly afterward in four other cities.

"We feel there's a better alternative to entertaining our fans than using partly clad women who do not contribute anything other than appearing," Gordon said.

"We're not against cheerleaders or critical of the teams that have them," he said. "They just do not generate the type of entertainment normally associated with football games."

A team of 30 women, 21 of them models, recently formed a cheerleading squad in the hopes of dancing on Pittsburgh's sidelines. But they were rebuffed and so far have performed only at outside engagements wearing the Steelers' gold and black colors.

"The players don't pay any attention to what's happening on the sidelines," quarterback Mike Kruczek said during a break in practice at the Steeler's St. Vincent College training camp.

"As far as entertainment for the people, it would be an added feature to the game. There's enough good looking girls in the city. It wouldn't be too hard to find 30," he said.

"I can't comment on that," chimed in quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who is married to ice-skating star JoJo Starbuck.

"My wife would get mad if I said anything. I personally don't think they can find 20 girls pretty enough. Do you?" he said, laughing.

"In college, organized cheers and cheerleaders are great," Swann said. "But the only pageantry in the National Football League is the Superbowl. Otherwise it's business.

And Franco Harris? "I never thought about it," he said.

Gordon said the team has explored several alternatives to cheerleaders, but he did not elaborate.

"We think from the standpoint of cheering, our fans are the most enthusiastic in the league," Gordon added. "They don't need any stimulus."

Lemon's Firing, Hiring Shocks Even Out

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Bob Lemon looked around the home team manager's office at Yankee Stadium and wondered to himself how in the world he went from being so dumb to being so smart this fast.

Three weeks ago, on June 29, he was informed that the Chicago White Sox no longer required his help in their dugout, making up lineups, plotting strategies and doing all the other little things managers do to kill time.

Then, 26 days later, on Monday, July 24, he was informed that the New York Yankees now required his help in doing those very same little things.

Surprise.

Lemon inherited the manager's job in New York when Billy Martin finally self-destructed in Chicago Sunday night with a marvelously constructed but ill-advised two-pronged attack on slugger Reggie Jackson and owner George Steinbrenner. "They deserve each other," Martin reportedly said of Jackson and Steinbrenner. "One's a born liar and the other's convicted."

Good-bye Billy.

To replace the volatile Martin, the Yankees chose a placid Lemon, who lost his job in Chicago to Larry Doby right around the time Steinbrenner was telling the world that Martin was safe in New York through the end of the season. George, of course, didn't take into account the terminal attack of loose lips that would force an early departure for his manager.

The switch came so swiftly that there was no time to change the interior decoration in the manager's office. Still left from the Martin regime was the Charlie Brown poster that advises, "A smile makes a lousy umbrella," and the list of company regulations. Rule One says the boss is always right and the Rule Two advises that "If the boss is wrong, see Rule One."

But now that he's there, the new manager intends to take charge. His first important decision was the return of controversial Reggie Jackson to right field in today's doubleheader against Cleveland. At the same time, Thurman Munson, the designated right fielder in the Steinbrenner-designed Yankee lineup shift that went into effect after the All Star break, will once again become the catcher.

"I talked to them and they both said they'd do anything I wanted," Lemon said. "That's got to make you feel good."

Was he aware that the owner had constructed the alignment that he was now shuffling?

"They hired me to run this club," said Lemon. "I can take advice and constructive criticism, but when it comes to nut-cracking time, I'm the guy who's going to get hired or fired. He has the right to suggest things, but I've never been with anyone who demanded anything. I don't think I'd like that."

Lemon knows he is inheriting a hot seat. Martin was the people's choice, everyman's hero, who told the boss where to get off. Following him is no easy task and Lemon found that out Wednesday night in his first game at home.

Royals Lose Pair In 12-3 Victory

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals' 12-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners Wednesday night was not without its cost.

Both third baseman George Brett and catcher John Wathan were forced to leave the game with injuries, and Manager Whitey Herzog said he was unsure when they would return.

SD Scrimmage 'Too Slow'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego offensive line coach Bob McKittrick says he was hoping for some tougher competition when his forwards took on the Los Angeles Rams defenders in a training session.

"Their tempo was so slow that consequently our reaction was slow," McKittrick said Wednesday after the National Football League teams worked out against each other at the University of California at San Diego.

At the Rams' preseason training camp in Fullerton, the Los Angeles offense and Charger defense met for a similar scrimmage with Los Angeles coach George Allen looking on. Jackie Simpson, Chargers defensive coordinator, described that prelude to the teams' Aug. 12 meeting in Los Angeles as bit more brisk.

"We were going so well," Simpson said of the 100-play session. "They were coming pretty good, too."

Rose Keeps Streak Alive; Clark Finally Misses

By The Associated Press

Rose extended his National League record consecutive game hitting streak to 39 Wednesday with a fifth-inning double in the Cincinnati Reds' 12-3 loss to the New York Mets. Clark saw his 26-game streak end at the hands of Silvio Martinez and the St. Louis Cardinals, who edged the Western Division leaders 2-1.

"I get the feeling I'll get a hit every game 'cause I'm swinging so well," said Rose after he rocketed a double to right-center field off Mets starter Nino Espinosa in the third baseman's third at-bat of the game. Rose had grounded out and walked his first two times up.

"It was a legitimate double, and I earned it because I fouled off a few pitches first," he added.

"When I got to second, Tim Foli (New York's shortstop) said they were trying to make me pull the ball by crowding me in the hole.

"On the first-inning groundout, Lenny Randle was where I had gotten three hits the other nights, in the shortstop hole. I signed a ball before the game for him and his wife, then he robbed me of a hit in the first.

"Nobody on defense can dictate where I'll hit, though. If they put three guys in the shortstop hole, I still should be able to get a hit."

"I thought my best shot for a hit was a ball I hit in the hole in the fourth," Clark said. Garry Templeton made a fine stop and threw him out on a close play.

"But if the wind was blowing out at all, the ball I hit in the first would have gone out." Instead, it was caught by Lou Brock near the left field fence.

"I would have liked to make it longer, but I got the team record," Clark noted. "I'll have other batting streaks."

Meanwhile, Rose's streak continues and the 37-year-old star is within one game of Ty Cobb's 40-game streak and two away from George Sisler's 41-gamer. In the distance is Joe DiMaggio's modern major league record of 56 games, set in 1941.

"It's too early to talk about DiMaggio," said Rose. "Maybe when I get up around 45 or so, you can start talking about DiMaggio."

Rose tries to equal Cobb and then Sisler Friday night in a doubleheader against Philadelphia. Phillies left-hander Steve Carlton, off whom Rose is 0-for-11 this season, is expected to pitch the opener of that twinbill.

"I have my work cut out for me but I'm due against Carlton," said Rose.

Rose insisted he's not worried about when the hitting streak might end.

"The end will probably come in a tired game, when the whole team isn't hitting," he said. "A guy might pitch a jam-up game and two-hit or one-hit or even no-hit us. Who knows?

"But they're gonna have to get me out, I won't choke. I'll get my rips."

Asked whether the hitting streak has helped him get "revved up" for games, Rose, known for his enthusiasm and nicknamed "Charlie Hustle," reacted with an astonished look.

"It doesn't take much to get me up for baseball," he said. "Once the national anthem plays, I get chills. I even know the words to it now."

Colleges Show Gate Increases In Basketball

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — National basketball champion Kentucky surpassed all five of its attendance records this year, and the Big Ten conference led the list of 10,000-plus average draws, NCAA statistics show.

A summary of attendance figures released Wednesday showed Kentucky averaged 23,335 for 16 home games, including a single-game record for Rupp Arena of 23,608.

The Big Ten placed six of 25 teams on the list of schools averaging 10,000 or more attendance. The Western Athletic Conference placed four on the list, and the Atlantic Coast, Southeastern and Big Eight three each, along with three independents.

Those five conferences also set records in averages per game, leading an increase in Division I of 1.2 million for a record 17.6 million. National attendance for all 1,253 senior college teams hit 29.1 million, 63,000 higher than last year's record figure.

NIT champion Texas led attendance increases by doubling its previous figure to 12,583. Ohio State was next with a gain of 5,845; then came Michigan State, up 4,834, Iowa State, 3,433 and Fresno State, 3,361.

In NCAA Division II, the leaders in per-game averages were Norfolk State at 4,226, Tuskegee 4,000, Southwest Missouri 3,990, Youngstown State 3,963 and Mississippi Valley State 3,949.

In Division III, the leading schools were Calvin, Mich., 3,630, St. John's, Minn., 3,000, Scranton 2,647, LeMoyne-Owen, Tenn., 2,453 and Savannah State, Ga., 2,250.

Nets Given Added Time

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — An "agreement in principle" to sell the New Jersey Nets has given the beleaguered National Basketball Association team an extended deadline to resolve its shaky financial status.

NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien extended the deadline that was to expire Friday until the week of Aug. 7, saying he has been advised the sale of the team is imminent and that he should allow more time for negotiations.

"The sale is subject to a number of conditions, including the making of satisfactory arrangements with creditors of the Nets," said O'Brien in a prepared statement from Ireland, where he is vacationing.

The team's debts have been estimated as high as $19 million.

Nets owner Roy Boe has been negotiating with former Madison Square Garden president Alan Cohen, who is representing Joseph Taub of Tenafly, N.J.

"I have been advised that an agreement in principal concerning the sale of the Nets has been reached by Boe and a group headed by Taub and represented by Cohen," O'Brien said.

Boe, the financially pressed owner of both the Nets and the New York Islanders of the National Hockey League, apparently is about to wash his hands of both teams.

Astros 5, Expos 0

The younger half of the knuckleballing Niekro act, Houston's Joe, tossed a four-hitter and drove in a pair of runs with a double and a single, while Bob Watson and Enos Cabell homered for the Astros.

"I call my bat the 'Polish Hammer,'" said Niekro, who preferred to talk about his pitching and the advice he got from older brother Phil. "When I was having trouble earlier this year, I was trying to throw all my pitches too hard. I had a long talk with Phil and he said to 'go out and get 'em, and if you don't get 'em that time, then get 'em the next.' That really boosted my confidence."

Braves 4, Phillies 2

Big brother Phil went out and got the Phillies for the 20th time in 32 liftime decisions against the NL East leaders.

Niekro, 12-10, pitched an eight-hitter in beating the Phillies for the fourth time this season. He also helped build a run with a fourth-inning single.

"I don't know why I keep beating the Phillies," said Niekro. "I don't see any difference. It just seems we get enough runs to beat them. . .I don't think they look bad. They gets hits."

Dodgers 8, Cubs 0

Steve Garvey slammed a bases-loaded homer, Davey Lopes had a three-run, inside-the-park home run and Burt Hooton hurled an eight-hitter as the Dodgers moved into second place in the NL West, 1½ games behind San Francisco and a half-game ahead of Cincinnati.

Chicago starter Dave Roberts walked Reggie Smith and Ron Cey with two out in the third before facing Garvey, who lined a 3-2 pitch into the left field stands.

Padres 6, Pirates 5

Phil Garner's two-run homer and Frank Taveras' two-run double rallied the Pirates before Fingers shut the door in the ninth.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Swallow your medicine if you're called to own up to a past commitment. You made the obligation. You alone are responsible for it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Brooding because you think you can't have something you really desire is no way to get it. Put your thinking cap on, roll up your sleeves and you'll find the way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to force yourself to come out of your shell if you find you're in a withdrawn mood. The answers you seek are not found in retreat.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It'll be hard to hold back confidential information because you will want to tell another what the score really is. Betrayal would be worse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Indecision comes from anticipating the worst. Don't let negative thinking rob you of experiencing tomorrow's wnders.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Fault finding will delay any progress you hope for in your work tomorrow. Don't be a party to hypercritical or disapproving behavior.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In social situations tomorrow, take care what you tell another. You may not know it, but you could be saying the wrong things to the wrong persons.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unresolved family topics that get everyone uptight might make a showing again tomorrow. Nothing will be gained except frustration.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) None of your natural talent will be able to come through and projects will be more difficult tomorrow if you're too negative about something you're working on.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you haven't the wherewithal and you fool around with something speculative tomorrow, be prepared to get your fingers burned. It will be no day to gamble.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Being critical of your loved ones is not the way to endear yourself to them tomorrow. All it will get you is the title of nit-picker.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Incorrect or invalid information will be floating around tomorrow. Take anything you hear with a grain of salt — and don't pass it on.

Your Birthday

July 28, 1978

You should take positive steps this coming year to strive for several things that might have appeared difficult to obtain heretofore. Conditions that could make success possible are now developing.

Independence Date Set For Dominica

LONDON (AP) — Dominica will become an independent republic on Nov. 3, the date in 1493 on which Christopher Columbus is believed to have discovered the small British island in the Caribbean, the British Foreign Office announced.

Dominica, an island of 304 square miles and 75,000 people, is in the Windward chain between Martinique and Guadaloupe. The Foreign Office said Dominica would apply for membership in the British Commonwealth.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, July 27, the 208th day of 1978 with 157 to follow.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

French novelist Alexander Dumas and American actor Keenan Wynn were born on July 27 — the former in 1824, the latter in 1916.

On this day in history:

In 1789, the U.S. Department of Foreign Affairs was established, later to become known as the State Department.

In 1909, Orville Wright set a world record by staying aloft in a plane for one hour, 12 minutes and 40 seconds.

In 1953, after two years and 17 days of negotiations, the war in Korea was declared at an end.

In 1974, the House Judiciary Committee voted 27 to 11 recommend the impeachment of President Richard Nixon on an article relating to Watergate.

A thought for the day:

Senate Passes Bill On Reform School

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate voted 28-0 today to transfer the state reform school at Gatesville from the Texas Youth Council to the state prison system.

The measure now goes to the House.

The transfer includes six units and approximately 1,000 ares of land.

Prison officials purportedly have talked of using the facilty for a reception area or for a medical or drug treatment center for inmates.

Man's Pets Spark Furor In Neighborhood

By CARRICK LEAVITT

CONCORD, Calif. (UPI) — Duane Ripley says his whole life is wrapped up in his assorted pets — all 355 of them.

But some of his east San Francisco Bay suburban neighbors are getting tired of all that lion and monkey manure.

Ripley has 11 monkeys, two leopards, three mountain lions, a Himlayan bear, two bobcats, seven raccoons, two African lions, seven fallow deer, 33 assorted goats, four sheep, three ostriches, a llama, three pigs, one mini-mule, five horses, two black swans, 28 pigeons, 24 doves, 48 quail, two alligators, a turtle — well, you get the picture.

There also are calves, 14 dogs, rabbits, turkeys, geese, lovebirds, chucker partridges, ringnecked pheasants, mini and mandarin ducks and 75 chickens.

The Concord City Attorney's office this week filed a complaint in Superior Court against Ripley and now he's got 30 days to reply to allegations that excessive numbers of flies move about his property, that odor drifts over the fence and that he is operating a private zoo in an area restricted to single-family dwellings.

"I've been here 15 years," Ripley, 38, said this week while affectionately scratching Norman, his 500-pound lion. "And now all of a sudden I'm getting this."

What he'd really like, Ripley says, is to open a zoo for the public. "I have no other plans for my life except opening a zoo."

Ripley, who claims he is a distant relative of Robert Ripley of "Believe It or Not," fame, says he spends $2,000 a month for feed, ranging from monkey chow, hay and feed pellets, to frozen chickens for his big cats.

His funds come from operating a dog grooming and kennel business, he said. "I also trade horses, stuff like that."

"I don't care if it's a private non-profit zoo or supported by investors. I've got 30 days to plead my case," he said, moving past Richard, a black swan and stopping to feed a bottle of soda pop to Bear, a greedy 9-year-old Himalayan bear.

"What he has now is a de facto private zoo," says Mark Commerford, assistant city attorney. He wants the number of animals reduced to a point where the property would be clean and sanitary.

CBS Shows Dominate Nielsen Co. Ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ten of the nation's most-watched evening television shows, including a "One Day at a Time" rerun, were on CBS last week, according to the latest A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

ABC's hit "Laverne and Shirley" and "Happy Days," now also in reruns, made the top 20, but the former emerged 11th and "Happy Days" 15th in ratings for the week ending July 23.

The figures show that on a nightly average, CBS shows last week were seen in 10.6 million homes. ABC and NBC each averaged 9.3 million homes.

CBS's "One Day at a Time," in topping the Nielsen list of 60 rated shows, was seen in an estimated 16.9 million homes. By contrast, the week's lowest-rated show, a women's golf match aired Sunday on ABC, was seen in about 3.3 million homes.

Four other CBS shows followed "One Day at a Time" in top ratings: "M-A-S-H," 16.5 million homes; "All in the Family," 16.2 million; "Lou Grant," 15.6 million; and the canceled "Switch," 14.6 million.

DR. LAMB

Small Meals Advised

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have recently been in the hospital for X rays. They show I have a hiatal hernia. Every time I eat I feel bloated and cannot sleep because of a smothering feeling. I got a wedge for my bed to elevate my head and I take Gaviscon tablets after meals and also a Valium. My doctor did not give me a diet to go by. Also, I have been seriously constipated and seem not to be able to get relief except from an enema.

Will I always feel this bad? I'm 47 and weigh about 120. I'm 5-feet-5. All my weight is in my stomach and waist. I am so uncomfortable and just drag around all day. The doctor did not explain what this is and what I can expect. I need to know for peace of mind, so I can get to feeling better and become a wife and mother again.

DEAR READER — A hiatal hernia literally is a rupture of a portion of the stomach through the normal hole in the diaphragm. The hole gets enlarged and the portion of the stomach slides in and out of the large hole.

When a portion of the stomach slides through the hole into the normal closing mechanism so that the contents in the stomach can leak backward into the lower part of the esophagus (food tube). This causes burning and irritation that some people experience with hiatal hernia and esophageal reflux (the term for the leak out the top of the stomach into the lower esophagus).

Your bloating and swelling may not be related to your hiatal hernia in view of your comment about being constipated. Rather it may indicate the presence of a spastic or irritable colon and gas problem.

Your doctor didn't give you a special diet for a hiatal hernia because it doesn't always matter quite so much what you eat as long as you don't eat very large meals.

A person with such a hernia should plan to eat multiple small meals a day never filling the stomach very much and to not lie down until at least two hours ater eating. The whole object is to let the stomach empty as much as possible,so when you lie down there won't be a lot of material in the stomach to leak backwards into the lower esophagus.

Also you don't want to put any pressure on the stomach which would squeeze it and squirt the material in the stomach back into the lower esophagus. That's why girdles, tight belts and any other tight garments are forbidden. It also should be obvious propping up the head of the bed is advisable, although some people do use a wedge.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-8, Hiatal Hernia, Esophageal Reflux to give you more information about what the hernia is and what you can do in your daily life and the types of meals you can use to help you out.

Hiatal hernia is a very frequent problem and other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. I also am sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Irritable or Spastic Colon and Constipation to give you a program for this problem.

Speakers At Conference Explore Basics Of Public Education

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

Common sense answers to questions about the basics in public education were given a while back at a Portland, Ore., conference sponsored by, among others, the Council on Basic Education.

Diane Ravitch, keynoter and assistant professor at Teachers College, Columbia University, likened a basic education to a liberal one — "both of which rest on the premise that what happens in school is intrinsically important."

"Educators must once again understand that they have an important job to do, that schools do make a difference," she said.

She knocked "radicals and social scientists who in the past 10 or 15 years have claimed...that schools don't make a difference."

"This is a spurious argument that has become a self-fulfilling prophecy. Now, the public is disgusted with the idea of schools as custodial institutions; the anti-intellectual tide in American education is ebbing," she said.

In main education fields, other experts spoke on what basics mean to them

Highlights of their presentations at the meeting also sponsored by the Portland Public Schools, neighboring Beaverton Public Schools, Portland State University and Lewis and Clark College:

Science: Students of all ages should participate in scientific experiments and then be able to "frame questions with more precision" and appreciate diverse lines of investigation," said Dr. Howard J. Hausman, former director, Pre-College Division, National Science Foundation. "The content and structure of science, together with development of processes used in the sciences, helps students to learn to think critically — an important education goal."

English: Precision also was stressed by Dr. Stanley B. Greenfield, professor of English at the University of Oregon. "A consciousness of language and the levels of language, and an awareness of the possibilitties of precision and the pitfalls of imprecision in communication are desirable goals of English instruction," he said. The goals can be achieved by "learning to control the word and sentence." He recommended that schools push poetry "because poems embody language at the most conscious level of precision."

Mathematics: The goal of mathematics is not rote learning, a la the method used in the schoolhouse of the 1880s, but problem-solving "and a knowledge of principles, patterns, and notational agreeements," according to Karen Billings, who teaches math at Roosevelt Junior High in Eugene, Ore.

Foreign Language: Training courses and courses that educate should not be confused, said Harry Reinert, teacher of German and English at Edmonds High in Edmonds, Wash. "The former enables one to make a living and the latter make the living worthwhile." Learning a language is intrinsic in any educational program, he says, "and enables students to gain insight into human intelligence and into other cultures, and to experience the joy of cracking a secret code."

History, Government, Geography: There's a national fascination with the past but enrollment in history courses has declined, Dr. Thomas C. Mendenhal noted. "History has beeen diluted as it has become amalgamated with the social sciences and as concepts have superseded facts, according to Mendenhal, head of Smith College from 1959 to 1975 and former professor of history at Yale. "It is time to bring back history...taught chronologically," Mendenhal said. "History ...gives a unique perspective on the individual, his world and his place in it."n

The Arts: As school boards tighten budgets, arts programs get a low priority, according to Harry S. Broudy, visiting distinguished professor, College of Applied and Fine Arts, California State University at Los Angeles. He said the arts should be taught to all children because "a knowledge of the arts is essential to a cultivated mind."

Competency testing is a factor in basic education but one authority said "minimum competency testing "focuses too much on the lower end of the scale."

Robert L. Ebel called for stiffer tests. He recalled that really hard tests given in the 1920s and 1930s nurtured excellence. Ebel is a professor of education and psychology at Michigan State University.

CB Convac

By INK DIPPER

No, you can't sell or lease your used 23-channel CB unit, But, yes, you can continue to operate it.

Probably no ruling made by the Federal Communications Commission has created as much confusion among CBers as the order in mid-1976 that banned the sale of 23-channel units in favor of the new 40-channel sets with more rigid technical specifications to reduce television interference and increase the outlets available to CB users. It went into effect on Jan. 1, 1977.

In a recent trip that covered 15 states, many jamborees, and a lot of coffee get-togethers with CBers from Florida to Nebraska, these were the questions that were asked most often. The ruling states clearly that no citizens band radio can be sold that has not passed the FCC's specifications. It is totally silent on the matter of use and, therefore, makes continued operation of these units legal.

This column has touched upon this subject several times in the past, but we didn't realize that there was as much confusion over it as this trip indicates. We have protested the way in which the FCC decided to handle the increase in channels that CBers had been requesting for many years prior to the 1976 ruling.

The FCC's peculiar delayed-action timing increased the number of 23-channel sets on the market by millions. This meant that the TVI incidence simply was multipied. It also broke many manufacturers who were faced with taking back 23-channel sets then in the distribution pipelines and converting them to 40 channels. And the public was subjected to a flood of inferior 23-channel sets at prices that made them very attractive, all to beat the Jan. 1, 1977, deadline.

There are, of course, a lot of other questions that the main one of sale generates. Can you give away a 23-channel unit? Sure, if it is to another member of the family, and was purchased before the Jan. 1, 1977 deadline. Can it be given away as a door prize for a church bazaar? Probably the commission would consider this an incentive, but it would be okay.

A dealer can take your 23-channel unit in trade against the purchase of a 40-channel radio because, in the FCC's ruling, that would take the 23-channel set out of the sales stream.

Can you sell an RV, a van, a mobile home, a pickup truck with a 23-channel unit in it? Yes, if it is permanently installed in the vehicle.

Doyle Boster of Lincoln, Neb., is a veteran CBer. It's a part of his working life as a sales executive who travels a lot of miles. He has wondered about many aspects of the ruling. Are converters okay? They're okay if they have passed the FCC specification tests. And, most of them haven't.

Are there any 23-channel models that are aproved under the new requirements? Not to this writer's knowledge. The manufacturers are not building sets with less than 40 channels, so we don't know of any 23s that have been approved.

What does a dealer do with the sets he takes in as trade for partial payment of a 40-channel unit? He generally cannibalizes it because "ham" operators are great buyers of these parts. The FCC says it must be a "bag of parts" that is sold to insure that the unit has been permanently disabled.

One area of the ruling that seems to belie everything concerns walkie-talkies. These are hand-held units that consist of a built-in microphone an attached antenna, internal battery supply, and have the capability to transmit and receive. Those on the market now can be sold until Aug. 1, 1978. Then, they, too, must be subject to FCC specifications.

To Doyle, and the many others who have wondered about these questions: 23 is in use, but out; 40 is in, but represents a small part of the total sets outstanding.

Net Earnings Up At ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — American Broadcasting Cos., Inc., has reported record earnings in the second quarter, based on profits from ABC Television Network that were the highest in the company's history.

Net earnings for the quarter were $41.8 million, up 24 percent from $33.8 million in the second quarter last year and a record for any quarter.

Earnings per share in the 1978 second quarter were $2.27, up 22 percent from the $1.86 reported last year.

Revenues in the 1978 second quarter were $472.9 million, up 24 percent from $382 million in 1977.

The firm said the second quarter earnings included a provision for losses of about $13 million from the sale of some ABC Record and Tape Sales Corp. operations and the anticipated loss from disposing of the rest of that division's businesses.

ABC said it expected to realize $10 million or more in profits from the sale of theater properties in the third quarter.

Man Denies Accusation About King

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A St. Louis man who was in prison with James Earl Ray shortly before the murder of Martin Luther King Jr. says claims that his brother-in-law was offered $50,000 to kill King are false.

A contract offer allegedly made to John Paul Spica's brother-in-law, however, was investigated by the House Select Committee on Assassinations, because of "circumstantial connections" leading to the Missouri State Penitentiary, where Ray was incarcerated in 1967, the New York Times has reported.

In an interview Wednesday with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Spica said he knew nothing of the matter, and called his brother-in-law "a liar."

Spica and Ray shared the same cell block and for a short time worked together in the bakery at the prison in Jefferson City, records there show.

Spica's brother-in-law, Russell G. Byers, told the Times he turned down the $50,000 offer "in late 1966 or early 1967" to kill King.

Spica, who was paroled in 1973, was serving a life sentence for murder. Ray escaped in April 1967 and later pleaded guilty to King's murder. King was fatally shot April 4, 1968.

The Times story said Byers had told the House committee that two men from Imperial, Mo., had offered him the money on behalf of a group of conservative businessmen to kill King.

Byers could not be reached for additional comment Wednesday.

"The investigators in Washington know all about Byers' story and they have checked it out and they know there's no truth in it," he added. "At no time did I ever convey an offer of $50,000 to James Earl Ray to kill Martin Luther King Jr.," Spica said.

In 1977, U.S. Rep. Gene Snyder, R-Ky., received a letter from a retired Louisville policeman about being offered $500,000 on two occasions in 1967 to kill King.

Snyder said Clifton E. Baird named three FBI agents and several policemen alleged to have been involved in the plot. Baird appeared at a closed hearing before the King subcommittee in December 1977, and has said he believed "one or two people might have been involved in a prank that involved giving some kind of an offer of $500,000" to kill King.

OFFICIALS NAMED

MOSCOW (AP) — Two long-time Communist Party members have been named to important posts in the Soviet republic of Estonia, the Soviet news agency Tass says. Karl Vaino, 55, was named first secretary of the Estonian Communist Party's central committee, and Johannes Kebin, 72, was named president of the presidium of the Estonian legislature. Kebin succeeds Artur Vader, who died in May.

Fortune Says GM Largest World Firm

NEW YORK (UPI) — General Motors Corp. edged out Exxon in 1977 to regain its position as the world's largest industrial company — a position it last held in 1973.

The current edition of Fortune magazine said 1977 aggregate sales of the top 50 among the world's industrial giants rose 12.5 percent and net income increased by 10.7 percent. The increases still did not top those registered in the strong recovery year of 1976 when sales rose 13.4 percent and net income went up 23.5 percent.

The magazine said 22 of the 50 top industrial firms were American companies with combined sales amounting to 56 percent of the total. Seven were German and six were Japanese.

The top 50, in order of sales and income growth: General Motors, Exxon, the Royal Dutch-Shell group of London and The Hague, Ford Motor Co., Mobil, Texaco, National Iranian Oil, British Petroleum, Standard Oil of California, International Business Machines;

Gulf Oil, General Electric, Chrysler, Unilever 9f London and Rotterdam, IT &T, Standard Oil of Indiana, Philips' Gloeilampenfabrieken of the Netherlands, Atlantic Richfield, Francaise des Petroles of France, Siemens of Munich, Volkswagenwerk of Germany, ENI of Rome;

Owner Of Brothel Fighting IRS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service claims a Nevada brothel owner owes more than $7 million in taxes but concedes that he can deduct prostitutes' salaries as a business expense.

Joe Conforte, challenging the assessment in the U.S. Tax Court here, said the IRS should also let him deduct rebates to cab drivers plus his brothels' legal fees and linen costs.

In an appeal made public Wednesday, Conforte said "the deductions for salaries and wages of prostitutes, rent, utilities and taxes and licenses (allowed by the IRS) are substantially understated."

Prostitution is legal in Nevada's Storey County, where Conforte owns Mustang Ranch, the state's largest brothel. The IRS makes little distinction about the legality of a business when it assesses taxes or allows deductions.

On June 2, U.S. District Judge Roger Foley of Las Vegas rejected Conforte's suit, describing him as a "despoiler of women" and "a pimp sitting on the banks of the Truckee River thumbing his nose at the U.S. government."

Three days later, however, Foley reversed himself and dismissed Conforte's complaint "without prejudice," meaning Conforte could continue the suit in another federal district court.

Conforte's attorney said Wednesday that Conforte and his wife, in joint returns, had claimed smaller profits from the brothel but had not calculated the salaries as deductions.

However, Tax Court records showed that the IRS, in figuring his taxes from 1973 to 1976, deducted the prostitutes' salaries as business expenses.

The IRS said in documents filed April 4 that the brothel near Reno had gross receipts averaging $2.7 million yearly for the four years. In figuring his taxes, the IRS deducted about $1.2 million per year in wages and salaries for prostitutes as part of $1.4 million in expenses. His net brothel income subject to taxes averaged about $1.3 million, it said.

The IRS calculated part of Conforte's income from papers found in a trash bin in the summer of 1975. One "trick sheet" bore the names of 38 women and the amounts they made in a 24-hour shift. They ranged from $10 to $736.

Conforte's attorney, Harvey D. Tack of Los Angeles, described the IRS assessment as "grossly excessive" and asked for a trial in Los Angeles.

In the appeal filed in Washington July 14, Conforte said, "The expenses which have intentionally not been considered by the IRS ... include legal fees ..., insurance, cleaning supplies, laundry, linen, rebates to cab drivers, office supplies and fuel."

The IRS, said, however that "all or part of the deficiency in the income tax ... is due to fraud with intent to evade the income tax." It asked for about $5.5 million in taxes plus penalties bringing the total to $7.3 million.

Conforte and his wife, Sally, are appealing the Sept. 16 conviction of four counts of business income tax evasion in U.S. District Court in Reno. Conforte was sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $40,000, but his wife's 16-year sentence was suspended. Both have filed appeals.

Decision May Aid Walus

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A federal court ruling that upheld the citizenship of a man who concealed his past as a Nazi death camp guard has given new hope to alleged former Gestapo agent Frank Walus, who was stripped of his citizenship.

But Feodor Fedorenko, who was permitted to keep his citizenship in the federal ruling Wednesday, found little relief for himself. His lawyer says Fedorenko has gone into hiding, fearing that someone might try to hurt him following the court decision.

U.S. District Judge Norman C. Roettger ruled that Fedorenko, 71, could keep his citizenship despite having concealed the fact that he had been a guard at the Nazi death camp at Treblinka, Poland.

Fedorenko's lawyer, Gregg J. Pomeroy, who said that his client was out of the state for safety precautions, expressed concern.

"This wouldn't be the first time someone has won in court then lost on the street," said Pomeroy after he talked to Fedorenko by phone.

Walus, 55, was accused in Chicago of murdering Jews as a Gestapo agent in World War II Poland and then hiding that part of his past from U.S. immigration authorities.

During his trial, Walus maintained that he actually was doing forced labor on German farms during the period of his alleged war crimes. Four German farmers supported his testimony, but several prosecution witnesses flown in from Israel identified him as a murderer of Jews.

Federal Judge Julius J. Hoffman found Walus guilty of lying to immigration officials and ordered him stripped of his citizenship. Walus turned in his citizenship papers July 10, but has filed an appeal of Hoffman's decision with the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.
