Program lets families make pact to prompt proper behavior

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

In a perfect world here's the way it happens: Bob, a 14-year-old, goes to a movie with some friends. After the movie, he comes home, returning when he says he would.

Or in a perfect world, it might happen like this: Bob goes to a movie with some friends. After the movie, Bob comes home and walks in the door 90 minutes after curfew.

The next morning, Bob's parents say, "As punishment, no phone calls or TV privileges for a week, plus you get to scoop Fido's poop in the back yard."

In a perfect world, Bob says, "Thanks for the punishment; it'll never happen again. I promise." And it doesn't.

But the world, of course, is far from perfect. However, scenarios such as those are possible, even in households filled with imperfection, because of the Family Pact Program.

It is the brainchild of Southwest Mediation Corp. Mediation is a process by which two disputants are led through a method of conflict resolution by a team of two trained mediators.

Southwest's mediators are Steve Gandy and Steve Brooks, who also are trained in family mediation.

"Family Pact is a mediated contract between family members," said Preston Chancellor, CEO at Southwest. "A trained neutral third party facilitates a structured process by which parties may negotiate an agreement which meets the needs of all involved."

Family Pacts are mediated agreements — actually signed contracts —that set up behavior standards for children, as well as offer incentives for desired behavior. The child signs and is expected to comply with the agreed-upon behavior. The parents and child agree upon appropriate consequences for improper behavior. Agreements can cover a variety of behaviors including, but not limited to, issues such as drug or alcohol use, school attendance or performance, sexual abstinence, social friendships, group membership and curfew limits.

All parties are equally invested in the mediation process, and each has the right and obligation to express his or her viewpoint in an atmosphere of trust and cooperation.

All clients are confidential and the nature of their pact remains between participating family members. However, one local woman, who asked that she and her family not be identified, said her pact has been nothing but positive for her and her family.

"It helps to eliminate a lot of arguments," she said. "A lot of things are decided ahead of time, like bedtime, and nights out with friends and money issues. It helps for us, as parents, to clarify our position on how we feel

Department of Commerce rejects anti-dumping claim

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Independent producers, Monday, expressed disappointment over a Department of Commerce decision to not investigate charges that Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, Mexico and Iraq dumped crude oil in the U.S. market at prices so low they crippled domestic oil producers.

Save Domestic Oil (SDO), the Oklahoma-based group that filed the petition, charged that the foreign producers sold oil in the United States in some cases for less than it cost to produce and in other cases for less than they sold it in other markets, such as Japan. They also claimed that government subsidies to the government-owned oil companies violated U.S. trade laws.

The Department of Commerce said it rejected the case for lack of support. The department said a survey of 400 oil companies indicated most were opposed to the action. "Without adequate industry support, Commerce is prohibited by law from initiating investigations, and will take no further action," said a written decision on the Department of Commerce Web site.

"We're crushed, absolutely crushed," said Bob Landreth, a Midland independent and member of the SDO Executive Committee. "We worked on this day and night. It is awful."

Harold Hamm, chairman of Save Domestic Oil, said SDO had more than proved its support for the petition, claiming that the Commerce Department kept changing the rules. "They changed the rules after we gathered the support of 31 oil and gas associations, representing most independent domestic producers," said Hamm.

When the American Petroleum Institute, which represents the major oil companies, tried to head off the petition claiming that it did not have the needed 25 percent support to have legal standing, SDO launched a last-minute battle to gain support from independent producers.

"We obtained letters of support from producers, accounting for over 30 percent of domestic production," said Deane Stoltz, another Midland producer and member of the SDO Executive Committee.

Had the domestic producers been successful in gaining the support of the Commerce Department, tariffs of as high as 177 percent could have been imposed on offending producers, beginning in 2000.

The petition was opposed by major multi-national oil companies and approximately 100 energy consumer groups in the United States, who claimed that imposed tariffs would cre-

Some parents opt for MISD alternatives

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

When the bell signaling the first day of school rings this morning, 22,256 Midland children are expected to sit down in a classroom provided by the Midland Independent School District.

Some 3,400 other Midland children will take an alternative education route in no way related to MISD.

In Midland, there exist at least 10 alternatives to MISD, and many of those have waiting lists. So great is the apparent fleeing of traditional public schools that Midland's largest experiment into the charter craze had so many applicants it had to request an extension of its charter.

Midland Advantage Charter School originally contracted to educate 540 students, but it had to extend that to 120 more students.

The school currently has about 600 students in grades K-5 ready to begin class on Aug. 23. The remaining 60 need only to turn in their paperwork.

Lisa O'Brien, communications representative for Advantage said, "The response has been overwhelming."

Hollee Robinson, director of Eagle Charter School, also noted a very good response to her program. Eagle will educate 50 students in grades 9-12 and has an additional 12 students on a waiting list. Classes at Eagle began today.

Officials with Richard Milburn Academy, the third new charter school, could not be reached for comment.

Trinity School, a private alternative, has about 570 students enrolled. Midland Christian has 1,125 students; Hillcrest School, 40; Hillander School, 310; and St. Ann's Catholic School, 400. Calvary Christian School will serve about 100 students.

Without counting students that are home-schooled, that adds up to about 3,395 students that choose, for one reason or another, not to attend classes at MISD.

That's a lot of students but more importantly for MISD, that's a lot of money. According to Art Martin, executive director of business services for MISD, for every student who goes to another district or another educational institution in Midland, MISD loses more than $4,000. Therefore, MISD stands to lose a minimum of $13.5 million because of students attending other schools in Midland.

The question is, "Why would Midland parents, who already have to pay taxes to MISD, choose to — in some cases — spend even more money to send their children elsewhere?"

According to Superintendent Joseph Baressi, Jr., the most prominent reason would be because those schools offer a religious setting not allowed in public schools.

City Councilman Don Washburn, who has both of his children enrolled at Midland Christian School, agreed with Baressi.

"We chose to put them there to get a Christian education," Washburn said, adding that his wife works at Midland

School board agenda item could spark debate

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Today's school board meeting, once again, has the potential to inspire lively debate. The board will consider revising its policy on public participation at board meetings, and at least a few citizens plan to protest.

According to Superintendent Joseph Baressi, Jr., the item was requested by Board President Rebecca Oekerman, and a copy of the revision is included in the board agenda.

Under "Limit of Participation" the revision reads, "Audience participation at a Board meeting is limited to the portion of the meeting designated for that purpose. At all other times during a board meeting, the audience shall not enter into discussion or debate on matters being considered by the board."

Before the revision, the policy said participation was limited to "time allotted for persons who have requested that an item be placed on the agenda."

That portion has been omitted and the policy goes on to state that the only time allowed to address the board would be 30 minutes. Previously, the public has been able to request placing an item on the agenda and receive a 15-minute time slot to address the item.

The way the policy revision reads, that time would not be allowed and the public would not be allowed to address an issue as it arises for consideration.

"That was not the intent of this," said Ms. Oekerman. "If you sign up to give a 15-minute presentation, you're welcome to come talk about anything you want to address."

She added that the policy is designed to consolidate "on-the-spot" public comment into one time period. Currently, audience members can show up at the meeting, fill out a card and request up to three minutes to address any issue on the agenda. Those speakers are given the time to speak when that item is up for discussion.

According to Ms. Oekerman, the revision would actually expand the topics available for comment. She said her intent was to allow the 30-minute comment period as well as 15-minute presentations requested by parties far enough in advance to be on the agenda. The only comments to be heard during the 30-minute time slot, according to Ms. Oekerman, would be from those who sign up to speak at the actual meeting.

She added that the additional benefit would be that those speaking could address any issue during that 30 minutes, whether or not it was on the agenda.

"We can, in fact, encourage more participation than what we have right now," she said.

However, some Midlanders are going by how the policy revision reads right now, and they're not happy.

"I think there is a board member or maybe two that would like to ignore public opinion," said Cindy Bond, secretary for the Midland Federation of Teachers and a Lee High School teacher. "I think parents, students, concerned citizens and teachers should have the right to speak to the issues as the board discusses them.

MISD: Parents of almost 3,400 students choose alternatives

(From 1A)

Christian as well.

Washburn said that his decision to place his children in private school doesn't have anything to do with MISD.

"My kids have been in private school since they started. Since my kids were never in public school, I don't really have an opinion on it. Some people tell me it's (MISD) good and some tell me it's not."

For students enrolled at religious schools, religion might be an understandable motive. But what about students choosing charter schools?

Ms. Robinson, with Eagle Charter School, said that many of the students and parents she spoke with chose the new program because of personalized instruction.

She added, albeit reluctantly, that many chose Eagle because of problems they had at MISD.

"Several told me how afraid they are to go back to MISD ... afraid of being jumped, being beaten up, not being able to concentrate in class because they are wondering who is going to jump them," Ms. Robinson said.

She added that she has some students who should be classified as sophomores or juniors but can't read. According to Ms. Robinson, many of those non-reading students are unfinished products or dropouts from MISD.

The reasons for seeking an alternative education are myriad as are the different Midlanders choosing other education forms.

In addition to Washburn, Councilman Jose Cuevas and Mayor Bobby Burns both have children in private schools, as does City Attorney Keith Stretcher. There is even a school board member with a child in private school — Patricia Hodges of District 6. Ms. Hodges also has a child in public education.

Though Burns has personal reasons for putting his child in a private school, Cuevas' reasoning is directly related to MISD.

"I've become real concerned with the quality of their education," Cuevas said of his recent decision to pull his two youngest children out of public schools.

Among the councilman's concerns are class sizes that he says are too large and the lack of a challenging educational environment.

•No one could be contacted from the Richard Milburn Academy regarding this article. However, in the spring, a representative said that classes would start in August and that enrollment would be around 200 students.

"In their early years, they were basically high achievers," Cuevas said. "They learned to read and write early. But when they got into their elementary years, they were always grouped in slower groups to assist teachers in teaching slower students. That bothered me a lot."

Another thing that bothers Cuevas is that he has even made such a decision.

"I was a strong supporter of public school and I still want to be a strong supporter of public school. I always believed that people who sent their kids to private school were neglecting their responsibility by saying my children aren't there and I no longer have to worry about that institution."

He added that by parents putting their children in private schools, the system is lessened for those children whose parents can't afford private education.

However, "I have come to the conclusion that my kids are very valuable and their education is very valuable. At this point, that far exceeds me making a statement by keeping them in public school," Cuevas said, adding that the system and the institution need a lot of work.

"I just don't have a lot of confidence in the administration right now and I don't have a lot of confidence in the administrators."

He added, however, that he does have confidence in local teachers, but that the board of trustees have a lot of work ahead to bring MISD above mediocrity.

A common denominator among many of those involved in alternative education sources was support for local teachers.

"It's a shame because the teachers there have a lot to offer. The teachers are very good," said Carolyn Moreno, who has also decided to take her children out of public schools this year.

Among her top reasons for the move are discipline problems in public schools and what she perceives as too much attention to the TAAS test.

"I don't know how teachers can teach a class if they are having to discipline kids all the time. It affects their learning when a teacher can't fully teach the class. Another thing is they are so hung up on passing the TAAS. Last year, everything focused on the TAAS. I don't think it should be that way. There is a lot more to learning than focusing on the TAAS," Ms. Moreno said.

Hope Gilbert, a teacher and student recruiter at Advantage, added that part of the problem is lack of support for teachers at MISD. Ms. Gilbert is a former MISD and ECISD teacher.

"I don't think there is a lot of support for teachers and I think there is even less support for their students. Who you are determines how you are treated and the education you receive," said Ms. Gilbert, who has heard several other reasons for leaving MISD in her new role as a student recruiter at Advantage.

"Many parents wanted to start their child in kindergarten at one school and stay there," she said, adding that parents are fed up with busing, which is evidenced in the fact that the schools largest class is fourth grade.

Still, there are those, even among parents not choosing MISD as an education source, who feel that MISD should be defended, supported and improved by participation of the whole community.

"The public school system is vital to this community. We need good public schools to up the ante for all the other schools," Washburn said, adding that MISD is a good public school system. "If you have a good public school backbone, it's going to force other private schools to be as good as they can be. It all starts with good public schools."

Washburn added that it's easy to be critical of MISD but that running the school district is a tough job with little recompense.

The mayor added, "I do believe that our school system is much better than the public perception. I think one of our challenges as Midlanders is to talk with pride about our public schools instead of continuing to put them down."

BOARD: Meeting to begin at 4 p.m. today

(From 1A)

Ex-MISD employee Alma Marshall also plans to speak against the revision.

"I think this is an attempt to ignore public input and I think that interferes with freedom of speech," Ms. Marshall said. "When the issue is under discussion is when the board needs to have public input."

Ms. Marshall also is concerned that the comment period will be granted at the beginning of the meeting. Board meetings begin at 4 p.m., and Ms. Marshall is concerned that working parents would never be able present their comments to the board.

Ms. Oekerman, however, said "It's not a public meeting. It's a business meeting held in public. We are happy to have anyone come and speak, but it's the board's meeting. It's a business meeting being held by the board."

She added that it was not her intent, in bringing this item, to eliminate public comment nor is that the intent of anyone on the board.

"We are simply trying to make a time at the beginning of the meeting for anyone who would like to speak to any issue they would like to speak about."

The board will meet at 4 p.m. at the Midland Independent School District administration building.

Other items on Tuesday's agenda include a one-hour budget story, approval of salary schedules for 1999-2000, modifications to the district's zero tolerance, drug and alcohol policy and hearings regarding uniform exemptions.

PACT: Children can also make requests

about certain issues. We don't have to argue and that conflict that might have come up, usually doesn't. But if it does, we'll have already decided how to handle it, and we have already agreed on it. And it works well for our daughter who knows the answer before she asks, so she doesn't bring a lot of those potential problems up."

The woman's daughter said, "You get to negotiate without arguing. We sit and talk about it. A late bedtime means an additional chore. It's good because if you stay drug-free on your drug test, you can get rewarded. I got my own telephone."

Drug test?

Sometimes, but not always, as part of a family's mediation contract, children will agree to submit to random drug tests administered by their parents. Sounds a bit rough at first, but Brooks said the kids involved eventually see the benefits

"No. 1, it tells the parents, 'Hey, I'm not doing drugs,'" Brooks said. "No. 2, it gives the kids a very viable reason to just say no.

"They're out with some friends, for instance, and their friends say, 'Hey, let's go smoke a joint.' All they have to do is say, 'I can't, I have a contract.'"

In return for good behavior and the subsequent rewards, contracts also can be structured to where the children ask the parents for something.

"We've had kids say, 'I want an hour of your time where you can sit down and talk with me, or, I want you to give up that six-pack on the weekends and come watch a movie with me.' It's truly a level playing field where parents can make requests and they make known their needs to the children and the children can do the same thing."

Gandy told the story of one child who asked his mother to quit drinking beer and to stop bringing men over to the house and smoking dope with them.

"The kid said to his mother, 'You told me what you want, now I'm gonna tell you what I want. You can test me as often as you want; you just quit drinking. She said to her kid, 'It's really bothering you that much?' The mother didn't realize what she was doing to her family."

Brooks said that when a family sits down at the dinner table, it's usually Mom and Dad and then it's the kids. "Some kids are very reluctant about expressing themselves at the dinner table, unless it concerns an issue that they are really angry about."

The outcome of the family mediation process, according to Chancellor, has been an unqualified success.

"It's been tremendous, even with the tough kids," he said. "We have a family pact, but at the same time, we trust our daughter."

Clauses in the family contract are divided into money issues (allowance, college funds), curfew issues (weeknight, weekend, bedtime), leisure activities (TV, radio, music privileges), personal appearance (makeup, hairstyle, clothing), family and household responsibilities (chores, language), social activities (friends, social groups), drug/alcohol use (testing, paraphernalia), behavioral issues (school performance, school behavior) and consequences for violating the terms of the contract.

ate higher energy costs. Energy experts say the tariffs would have impacted about 60 percent of the oil being imported into the United States.

Others, however, said the tariff would have been uncollectible because the countries alleged to have dumped crude oil into the United States would only have rerouted their oil.

"We clearly had the support required under law," Landreth said. "Commerce apparently gave the multi-national oil companies a voice in this matter and that appears to be a violation of the spirit of the law, if not the letter."

The Oklahoma Independent Producers Association (OIPA), the first group to endorse the anti-dumping action, said it was a matter of "following the money." In a heated response, Dewey Bartlett, Jr., OIPA president, said small independent producers were drowned in a tidal wave of foreign influence peddling and big oil money. "These global Goliaths sing the siren song of 'free markets' to the American people, while partnering with foreign tyrants in an overt strategy to dismantle the U.S. oil producing industry."

He said domestic oil producers had been treated like second-class citizens by the Clinton administration, noting that the Clinton energy policy was "cheap energy at any price."

Bartlett said the fact that more than 2,000 domestic oil producers supported the petition was lost on the Department of Commerce.

Landreth said members of the SDO Executive Committee would not have any statement until they have an opportunity to review the Commerce Department decision. "We will talk to our lead attorney and decide the next course of action."

Obie O'Brien, head of government relations for Apache Corp. said, "We won to a certain extent because it forced some folks to pay attention to this issue." Apache was one of the large domestic producers supporting the petition.

Yeltsin fires fourth prime minister in less than two years

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin fired his prime minister and Cabinet on Monday for the fourth time in less than two years, raising new questions about his stability and plunging the country into an all-too-familiar cycle of political turmoil.

Yeltsin named a former KGB agent, Vladimir Putin, as his acting prime minister and said he was choosing him as his handpicked successor. But few believe that Putin, a politically inexperienced bureaucrat, has any chance of being elected president.

Reaction was harsh across the political spectrum.

"Who will take a prime minister seriously if they change them like gloves?" Communist Party leader Gennady Zyuganov asked in a radio interview.

Boris Nemtsov, a former deputy prime minister and a prominent figure on the right, said: "It's hard to explain madness. The people have grown tired of watching an ill leader who is not capable of doing his job."

Yeltsin gave no reason for firing Sergei Stepashin and, in fact, praised him "for his good work" during his three months as prime minister. In a nationwide television address, Yeltsin said he wanted to name Putin to the job to lay the groundwork for the 2000 presidential elections.

"I'm convinced he will serve the nation well while working in this high post, and Russians will be able to appraise Putin's human and business qualities," Yeltsin said. "I trust him. But I also want everyone who will come to the polls in July 2000 and make their choice to trust him too."

The Russian Constitution bars Yeltsin from a third term, and the Russian media has speculated that he and his advisers are considering the possibility of postponing or canceling elections in a bid to extend his tenure.

Zyuganov predicted that Yeltsin would impose emergency rule as a pretext for remaining in office.

The 68-year-old president has been in ill health for much of his second term, and his erratic behavior has raised questions about his mental stability. But he has appeared somewhat more robust in recent months.

Putin, 46, who once served as a KGB agent in Germany, has lately been serving as head of the Federal Security Service, the main successor agency to the KGB. He said he intended to follow Yeltsin's plan and run for president.

At this point, Putin would appear to be the darkest of dark horses in any presidential race. A bland figure little known to the general public, he hardly seems in the same league as established leaders such as Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov and former Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov.

The endorsement of Yeltsin, whose own popularity ratings are generally lower than 5 percent, is a mixed blessing.

"He's a bureaucrat rather than a national leader," said Yevgeny Volk, a political analyst with the conservative Heritage Foundation, dismissing Putin's electoral prospects. "He has no charisma."

Putin predicted there would be no sweeping changes in the Cabinet, although technically all its members were fired and will have to be reappointed.

Still, the change at the top will shake the country politically, as did the dismissals of former prime ministers Viktor Chernomyrdin, Sergei Kiriyenko and Primakov — all fired within the past 17 months.

In Washington, the Clinton administration reacted cautiously, saying it is ready to work with Putin. "Clearly it is within President Yeltsin's prerogative" to make such a change, said David Leavy, a national security spokesman for the White House.

U.S. officials most recently worked with Putin in resolving Russia's role in the NATO peacekeeping force in Kosovo, Leavy said.

The changes did not bode well for Russia's enfeebled economy because foreign lenders are unlikely to release any new aid until a new government is in place. It also may hold up talks on rescheduling some of Russia's mammoth foreign debt.

Trading on the Russian stock exchange was suspended Monday after the benchmark Russian Trading System index fell 11 percent in the first hour. Trading later resumed and the index rallied to 101.72, down 1.4 percent from Friday's close at 103.15.

The ruble also began to fall immediately upon news of Stepashin's dismissal, going from 24.9 to the U.S. dollar to 25.9 in street trading.

The commotion comes at a potentially perilous time, when Russian forces are being deployed to put down the largest internal uprising since the 1994-96 war with the breakaway republic of Chechnya.

Russian troops have been shelling the positions of hundreds of militant gunmen in the Caucasus mountain region of Dagestan, adjacent to Chechnya, since Saturday. Stepashin's last official act — although he apparently didn't know it at the time — was to dash to Dagestan on Sunday for urgent meetings with regional and military leaders.

Stepashin, long known as one of Yeltsin's most loyal aides, appeared shaken in a farewell speech to the Cabinet.

Putin's confirmation hearings are scheduled to begin next Monday in the lower house of parliament, the State Duma, Speaker Gennady Seleznyov said. Some legislators predicted swift approval.

If Putin were voted down three times, Yeltsin would be obliged to dissolve parliament, something the lawmakers are unlikely to want. They face parliamentary elections in December and may not want to lose the advantages of incumbency.

Envoy heading into Sierra Leone jungle to negotiate with rebels

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (AP) — A former junta official headed into the forests of Sierra Leone on Monday, hoping to gain the release of about 20 hostages being held by his onetime rebel colleagues.

Several hours later, the soldiers freed four more hostages and promised to free the remainder Tuesday, according to a top government official.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he had received word by radio that three U.N. military observers and a Sierra Leonean journalist had left the soldiers' camp and had reached a government-controlled checkpoint.

He provided few other details, except to say that one U.N. observer had asked to stay behind as a confidence-building measure to ensure the freedom of the rest of the hostages Tuesday.

His account could not be independently confirmed.

Earlier Monday, Abdulai Mustapha, a special assistant to President Ahmed Tejan Kabbah, said that former junta official Idrissa Kamara had returned to the soldiers' camp to seek the freedom of the prisoners.

Kamara was captured by his former junta colleagues Friday after he tried to negotiate a hostage release. He was freed Sunday morning with five U.N. drivers, but returned that night to help negotiate the release of 13 more hostages.

It was not immediately clear if Kamara, who is now a top adviser to rebel Revolutionary United Front leader Foday Sankoh, had left the camp Monday night.

The remaining hostages include 10 soldiers from the West African intervention force known as ECOMOG and two members of the Sierra Leone army.

About 150 civilians who had been taken hostage during Sierra Leone's civil war are also expected to be freed Tuesday, the official said.

The reported releases came six days after a group of former junta soldiers seized about 35 people outside Freetown, sparking a crisis that has highlighted the divisions among Sierra Leone's rebels and jeopardized the West African nation's fragile peace.

One hostage freed Sunday said as many as 2,000 disenchanted members of the former junta are based at the jungle hideaway.

The hostages were captured Wednesday by former junta soldiers who are allied with Sierra Leone's brutal Revolutionary United Front rebel movement.

The junta, led by Lt. Col. Johnny Paul Koroma, governed Sierra for 10 months beginning in June 1997, ending when the military regime was ousted by ECOMOG.

The Moores have really enjoyed their new patio enclosure from Mid-West Glass. Call Brandon Herring today for a free estimate.

Mid-West Glass can enclose your existing patio

A patio enclosure can make a good thing better

You have a nice patio (it collects leaves, dirt and trash that blows in from down the alley). It's covered, so you can stay dry while watching it rain (except when the wind blows hard from the south). You used to have nice furniture on your patio (until the Rottweiler chewed up all the cushions). You tried to enjoy breakfast in the cool mornings (you got tired of fighting the flies for your muffin).

Now that school has started, you'd really like to enjoy the cool of the mornings on your patio or porch—if you could.

Have you thought about a patio enclosure from Mid-West Glass? A patio enclosure can keep dirt and trash from collecting in the corner. Screened windows will keep you and the insects apart. When it rains, you can close the windows partially or all the way. And you can choose which pets, if any, are allowed to come in.

In fact, you can choose from a variety of windows that will let you control the breeze: open them all the way on a calm day, or just a little when it's windy. Some windows allow for up to 75 percent air flow.

Want to heat and cool the room? Let Mid-West install insulated windows and doors to reduce air conditioning costs. Tinting is also available.

Mid-West can enclose just about any area that already has a pad and a roof. Installation usually takes only three or four days, causing very little disruption of your life. It costs much less than adding a regular room.

Mid-West's Brandon Herring reports that many of his customers add indoor-outdoor carpeting and cushioned-type outdoor furniture, to make the patio room especially comfortable and enjoyable. Mid-West has a variety of finish colors to choose from. Brandon says the most popular colors are white, bronze and mill finish.

An enclosed patio is also great for summer entertaining. You can serve snacks or barbecue from the patio, keeping out those uninvited insects (and that too-friendly puppy dog). Other uses include an exercise room, a place for flowers and potted plants, an entertainment room for teenagers and just about anything you can imagine.

You might be surprised at how easily and cost-effectively you can improve your patio or back porch. Even when days are hot, mornings and evenings are usually quite comfortable in West Texas, so you could use that improved patio almost every day. Estimates are free, so call Brandon today at Mid-West Glass.

Mid-West Glass offers glass and windows for any use, as well as patio enclosures. Located at 906 W. Front, the phone number for a free estimate is 682-7373.

Scooter's Plumbing offers one step to LOWER electric bills

If you have an older air conditioner that you've nursed along the last few years, it may actually be cheaper in the long run to replace it with a high-efficiency Carrier unit from Scooter's Plumbing. That one step could slash your electrical costs.

Tim Mabry of Scooter's says if you're replacing an older refrigerated unit with a Carrier Weathermaker 38TXA, you should see your electric bills drop dramatically. "This 13-SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating) unit will cost about 30 percent less to operate than standard 10 SEER units."

In May of this year, the Schneider family had Scooter's Plumbing replace their two evaporative coolers with a 38TXA. Lee Ann Schneider reports, "Our electric bills only went up about $15-$20 per month." That's for a 3000 square foot house.

The unit is also very quiet, especially for one that can cool such a large house. Lee Ann says you have to stand right next to it to know it's running.

She adds that Scooter's technicians patiently answered all her family's questions, "And I can ask a lot of questions." They were pleased with the workmanship and would definitely recommend Scooter's to anyone.

The Carrier 38TXA uses the environmentally-friendly Puron® refrigerant. because the refrigerant currently in use in most systems, R-22, will begin being phased out in 2004 due to international environmental agreements. That means it will most likely become more expensive as it gets harder to obtain. Puron, on the other hand, is expected to be the refrigerant of choice for the foreseeable future, meaning it will be plentiful throughout the life of the next unit you buy.

This impending phaseout is what has prompted builder Steve Ekstrom to install Puron units exclusively in new homes he builds. "I think the old refrigerant is going to get very expensive after they start phasing it out," Steve says. "Any unit needs service from time to time, and it could get expensive for units that don't use Puron." He also notes that any air conditioner installed today will likely be in use long after the beginning of R-22 phaseout in 2004.

The 38TXA is also quietly reliable. It uses the new Copeland Compliant Scroll Compressor, the company's most reliable (and quiet) compressor. Steve has installed several Puron units over the last year and reports no problems with any of them. "I didn't have any problems with other Carrier units either, so that's not a surprise."

Steve relies on Scooter's because, "They're always very conscientious, hardworking and quality-oriented."

When you let Scooter's Plumbing replace your worn-out air conditioner (or evaporative unit) with a quiet, reliable Carrier unit, you can stop worrying about how to stay cool this summer—and for many summers to come; and save on utility bills at the same time.

Scooter's Plumbing, Heating and Air Conditioning, TACLB018113E, provides complete plumbing, heating and air conditioning service. They feature Carrier products, while they service all brands. The phone number is 682-5984.

Don't buy a lemon

Lemons are okay on the produce aisle and in lemonade—but you can't drive one to work or to school. So before you buy a used car, take it by Automotive Specialties and let owner Bill Ogden check it out thoroughly.

Bill will check the vehicle's brakes, engine, exhaust system, tires, radiator and cooling, air conditioning, tires, belts, hoses and even the radio. After Bill spends an hour with your prospective purchase, you'll have a good idea of whether you're getting a good deal or not. If the car is in bad shape, this checkup could keep you from wasting a few thousand dollars on a vehicle with serious problems.

This thorough checkup can reveal much about the vehicle's overall condition, helping you determine if you're getting a good deal or not.

Whether you're buying a used car for school, work, car pooling or other uses, don't risk buying a lemon. Let Automotive Specialities inspect it first!

Automotive Specialties is located at 706 South Colorado, one block east of Big Spring Street. Bill and his staff are ASE certified and are experienced with all domestic and most import cars and trucks. They offer fleet service, state inspections and warranties on their repairs. The phone number is 683-8693.

Fervor and mysticism fuel fever over solar eclipse in Holy Land

JERUSALEM (AP) — In a city where omens, portents and apocalyptic visions are practically a local industry, Wednesday's solar eclipse is capturing the imagination of mystics of all stripes.

Even though Israel and the Palestinian lands do not lie directly in the eclipse path, the expected partial darkening of the heavens is viewed by many — Christians, Jews and Muslims alike — as an awesome display of divine power.

And for a few, those moonshadow moments offer a foretaste of millennial doom.

In the realm of the secular, the eclipse offers a rare opportunity for scientists. Naturalists will be able to observe the behavior of Israel's rare vultures and night-blooming plants, and monitor endangered sea turtles whose normal night-hatching habits might be thrown off by the eclipse.

Israel's Science Museum will play host to hundreds of school children, offering daylong education programs, a viewing area protected by special filters and eclipse-viewing glasses, on sale for $4 a pair.

But the eclipse, like so many daily events here, will be pervaded by religious overtones.

At Islam's third-holiest shrine, the Al Aqsa mosque in Jerusalem, Muslims will offer a special eclipse-linked prayer, dating back 15 centuries, which appeals for God's mercy. The mosque will be shuttered and darkened for the occasion, religious officials said.

Jerusalem's highest Islamic authority, Mufti Ekrimeh Sabri, said worshippers also can offer the eclipse prayer at home — where Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Authority is urging people to stay during the eclipse.

Wednesday is a national holiday in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, with businesses and government offices shut down. Mothers are being urged to keep their children indoors rather than risking eye damage by allowing them outside.

For apocalyptic Christians who have been flocking to Jerusalem in anticipation of the millennium, Wednesday's celestial display offers fresh confirmation that the end of the world is nigh.

"The eclipse goes together with everything else in the sky. ... To me, it means that something is coming about," said a 27-year-old Seattle man who gave only his first name, Raymond. He came to Jerusalem two years ago because "God woke me up and told me there was no more time to mess around, he was going to come back."

"The Bible says there will be signs in the heavens," said Sharon, a fiftyish woman from Sacramento, Calif., one of a group of several dozen Christian pilgrims who have settled on the Mount of Olives to await the second coming of Christ.

"All together, with all the other signs ... this is leading up to the Rapture," she said of the eclipse.

Mainstream Christian theology attaches no special significance to eclipses, but biblical references to them abound. Eclipses also appear in Jewish folklore, often as a symbol of introspection and repentance, said Rabbi David Rosen, an educator and anti-defamation activist.

He cited a Jewish blessing that applies to natural phenomena such as thunder and lightning, praising a God who "performs the wonders of the universe."

"Saying this particular blessing during an eclipse would certainly not be out of place," he said.

AP Photo

In south Cornwall, England, Monday, Lindsey Harrison, 11, optimistically tries out her eclipse sunglasses at the Lizard Eclipse Festival. Resort owners in the southwest of England are fearing the worst as Wednesday's total eclipse of the sun, the first seen in Britain since 1927, may be obscured by heavy clouds and rain.

Burned village, scuffle on bridge show that hatred has yet to end in Kosovo

ZITINJE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Surrounded by the charred hulks of other homes deserted by Serbs, flames and smoke poured from a house Monday in the Kosovo village of Zitinje.

The burning of every Serb remnant in the village except for a small church — along with a third day of scuffling between French soldiers and ethnic Albanians trying to march to the Serb part of the town of Kosovska Mitrovica — showed the hatred that persists in Kosovo eight weeks after the end of NATO's bombing campaign.

Most of the province's estimated 200,000 Serbs have fled since the war ended. The 250 Serbian residents of Zitinje, 25 miles southeast of Pristina, left last week, and U.S. troops moved in to protect their belongings and houses from revenge-minded ethnic Albanians.

But when NATO forces decreased their presence on Friday, ethnic Albanians struck quickly. By Monday, every house with a Serbian Orthodox cross painted on it was destroyed.

Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic withdrew army and police forces from Kosovo in June in exchange for the end of NATO airstrikes. Since then, minority Serbs have increasingly become the targets of hate crimes committed by ethnic Albanians, seeking revenge for atrocities committed by Serbian forces before and during the bombing.

U.S. Lt. Col. Tim Reese said his troops tried to prevent the revenge arson in Zitinje by collecting furniture, valuables and even stray farm animals for safekeeping in a building in the middle of the village.

Then U.S. troops allowed ethnic Albanians to claim property that had been stolen during the war if they had documentation or could identify it.

"We thought that would kind of lower the temptation to loot," Reese said.

Yet ethnic Albanians were ready with gasoline and matches Friday, and by Sunday, more than 40 houses were burned, along with the Serb possessions stored by the soldiers. The rest burned Monday.

Bujar Zeqire, 22, said he came over from the nearby ethnic Albanian village of Ballanc to see "that the houses are burned properly."

"In my case, they killed my uncle, so how can I like them?" he said.

In Kosovska Mitrovica, French peacekeepers set up barbed wire across a central bridge connecting the Serbian and ethnic Albanian sides of town after a third straight day of scuffling with ethnic Albanians trying to cross in large numbers.

About 500 youths stormed the bridge but were held off by 40 French troops. The confrontation was a repeat of Saturday's and Sunday's attempts by ethnic Albanians to cross the bridge.

Tafil Jusufi, one of those involved in Monday's protest, accused the French peacekeepers of "creating a new border" to keep ethnic Albanians out of the Serb-dominated part of Kosovska Mitrovica, 20 miles north of Pristina.

A senior U.N. official, Mary-Pat Silveira, said serious violence was likely if a large ethnic Albanian crowd crossed the bridge because Serbs gathered on the other side were probably armed.

Kosovska Mitrovica, a mining center valued by both Serbs and ethnic Albanians, is divided by the river into predominantly Serb and ethnic Albanian communities.

Start of school can be filled with real dangers

The start of school every year in Midland, Greenwood and the surrounding area brings with it a dramatic change from the laid-back lifestyle of the past several weeks.

Today, when school resumes in Midland Independent School District, and Thursday, when it begins at Greenwood schools, students, parents, teachers and others will take up old trails that were put aside over two months ago. Summertime activities have reigned for more than two months, but now it's time to get back to the books. Labor Day is drawing closer and soon football will start to compete with baseball for the national attention span.

While many residents look forward to this change and the gradual closing of the summer season, others may not yet be ready to put the lazy days of summer behind them. A lot of students may fit into that category. They still are not ready to give up sleeping late and vacations for the rigors of the classroom and school work, and they may still be half asleep while traveling to school for the first few days.

Traditionally the start of school can be a particularly dangerous time for youngsters and those who are not quite so young any longer. In the excitement of getting back to school, renewing old acquaintances, meeting new friends, and embarking on a new school year, accidents can happen quickly. A child can dash into the street in front of an automobile or a young driver engulfed by the excitement around a school can make a tragic error. Serious injury or death can be the tragic result.

Motorists should also reacquaint themselves with school zones throughout the city and make a conscious effort to reduce their speed. That is important to prevent accidents.

The start of school is an exciting, emotionally-charged time. It is a time that should be enjoyed, not marred by an avoidable accident. Let's make the start of this school year a safe one!

Woodstock replay fell short of 'garden'

You can't go back to the garden. Not if the garden is Woodstock. Instead of a love-in, this year's 30th anniversary of the historic 1969 festival ended with looting and violence.

About 225,000 people attended the event, which had little in common with the original other than the name.

This time around it was neither stardust nor golden. The concert-goers were reportedly searched at the gates to ensure they were bringing in no food or drink. And the musical acts reflected the times: Fewer songs of peace and love, more songs of alienation and angst. Some of the bands that performed even egged on the rowdiest of the fans.

The weekend was simply an excuse to party at a long rock concert. No one will remember the performances 30 years from now, not in the way that today we recall such epochal musical moments as Jimi Hendrix reinventing the national anthem.

Observers at this year's fest say conditions were squalid and the food and drink were overpriced. But poor conditions don't excuse rioting. They don't excuse violence.

If there is going to be another festival next year, fine. Just don't call it Woodstock. That's an insult to the name.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 10, the 222nd day of 1999. There are 143 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 10, 1846, Congress chartered the Smithsonian Institution, named after English scientist James Smithson, whose bequest of $500,000 had made it possible.

On this date:

In 1821, Missouri became the 24th state.

Five years ago: President Clinton claimed presidential immunity in asking a federal judge to dismiss, at least for the time being, a sexual harassment lawsuit filed by Paula Corbin Jones, a former Arkansas state employee.

One year ago: Secretary of State Madeleine Albright announced a $2 million reward for information leading to the conviction of terrorists who bombed U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, killing 224 people, including 12 Americans.

Mrs. Clinton spins God to excuse adultery

Only a couple that has been emboldened by their escape from impeachable offenses would try to spin God. But Hillary Rodham Clinton — veteran of cattle future profiteering, a failed attempt to nationalize health care, champion of children raised by the government village and not parents — has done just that and more in an interview for Talk magazine. In it she reduces herself to that Tammy Wynette, stand-by-your-man caricature she said she was trying to avoid in 1992.

Thomas

In remarks that should encourage every man who has wandered, or has been prone to wander, from his wife into the arms of other women, Mrs. Clinton again enables a man who has never been forced to accept responsibility or be held accountable for his actions (some other account will pay his $90,000 contempt-of-court fine, not him). It's not his fault, she says, that he is a tomcat. He had a troubled childhood. Plenty of people who had troubled childhoods don't do what he does. It's about moral choices. He's depraved, all right, but it's not because he was deprived.

Mrs. Clinton is a textbook enabler. Even her "enemies" reappear. That "vast right-wing conspiracy" is mostly responsible for the Clintons' troubles. Never them. Always us.

Mrs. Clinton surveys her marriage and sees success in the number of years between affairs. She sounds like a car salesman discussing miles per gallon. Look how far he can go without a fill-up. The years between the Gennifer Flowers affair and whoever she found out was after that were "a very good stretch."

Bill Clinton has been a "good" father and husband, she says, leaving us to wonder what would constitute a bad husband and father and how a man who has not had an affair would rate with her. Maybe she grades on the curve.

In the most enabling comment of all, Mrs. Clinton refuses to lay any blame at her husband's feet, but claims his concealment of affairs were designed to shield her. Clinton, of course, does not limit his lying to sex. He can lie about anything, from important to trivial matters, such as golf scores and whether he was the first president to host the late John F. Kennedy Jr.'s return to the White House.

But it's when she dabbles in theology that Hillary Clinton outrageously misrepresents the doctrines of sin and grace. Borrowing from Catholic theology, she says, "there are sins of weakness and sins of malice, and this was a sin of weakness." While it is true that a murderer is worse than a person whose parking meter expires, both are lawbreakers. In a theological sense, our reference point is to a Holy God, not theologians or personal opinion. So when a real saint, Paul, writes that "all have sinned and fallen short of the glory of God," he does not engage in a theory of moral relativity. He diagnoses a human condition that is true for all, regardless of how individual sinners categorize their sins. None of us, including a first lady, gets to make the rules or render judgment.

Bill is "sorry," she says, which, in another context, could be an accurate diagnosis. But sorrow that doesn't lead to repentance is no more than personal disgust at getting caught. Bill Clinton, like all of us, is responsible for the choices he makes. It's bad enough when he refuses to accept responsibility. It is worse when those closest to him won't do what is in his best interest, namely, announce that his day of reckoning has arrived.

"Peter betrayed (Jesus) three times," says Mrs. Clinton, "and Jesus knew it but loved him anyway." Bill Clinton is no Peter, and she is certainly no Jesus. But the analogy is revealing. From the beginning, these two have seen themselves as the saviors of the world and those who oppose their agenda as sons of Beelzebub. This is why they have been able to get away with so much. To oppose saints is to oppose God Himself.

So we have moved to another level. The Clintons are beyond all accountability because, like the Blues Brothers, they are on a "mission from God." God help the rest of us sinners.

MISD doesn't need lawyer; board needs to read law

There is no need for a full-time attorney at MISD to keep the board from violating the Open Meetings Act. The superintendent has been on thejob long enough and attended enough meetings that he should be aware of requirements and be capable of advising a new board.

On chance that he isn't, let me quote some law for our community. The Open Meetings Act is actually cotained in the Texas Government Code. Sections 551.O71-084 of that law list the specific exceptions to requirements that meetings be open. To go into a closed meeting a quorum of the governmental body must first meet in open session and announce that a closed meeting will be held and identify the applicable section of Ihe law that grants it (551.101). Any vote resulting from the closed meeting must be held in open session (551.102). A certified agenda or tape must be made of the closed session (551.104) and kept for at least two years. This year the legislature changed 551.075 and no longer permits "staff briefings" in closed session.

Section 551.144 makes it a crime for a board member to permit a closed meeting in violation of the law. They each need to become familiar with sections 551.071-084. If they call or aid in calling a meeting; close or aid in closing the meeting to the public; or simply participate in the illegally closed meeting — they commit the elements of the offense.

Section 551.145 makes it a crime to participate in a closed meeting knowing that a certified agenda or tape is not being kept. Therefore, you had better ask and don't let old members lead you to jail through your silence.

In closing, let me quote Section 552.001 of the Government Code which states, "The people, in delegating authority, do not give their public servants the right to decide what is good for the people to know and what is not good for them to know. The people insist on remaining informed so that they may retain control over the instruments they have created."

JFK's presidency was nothing to talk about

I feel compelled to write this letter after reading Jack Anderson's column of July 23rd in the Midland Reporter-Telegram titled "JFK Jr. was the personification of Camelot." Anderson as the chief liberal of the media continues to perpetuate the Kennedy myths. A quote from his column is "The Camelot years had changed political discourse in the country, and future presidents harked back to the era to such a degree that it may be said that the modern political age in America began with the Camelot years.

This statement is the biggest load of fertilizer that I have ever heard. Norman Podhoretz in his July 29th article in the Wall Street Journal stated, "The fact remains he (JFK) did very little in office of any great weight except lead us into Vietnam." JFK's presidency was at best a non-event. The media always talks about the man but never his presidency, because there was nothing to talk about.

In closing I would like to address the Lloyd Bentsen quote Anderson discusses in his column. The now famous Bentsen statement to Dan Quayle during their debate was, "I knew Jack Kennedy, Kennedy was a friend of mine, You're no Jack Kennedy."

Bentsen was right, Quayle did not try to have sex with as many Washington, D.C. prostitutes as he could while in the Capital. Quayle did not behave in a manner that is a disgrace to both his family and country. If the Kennedy White House was Camelot thank God we have moved past that type of behavior in the people's house — or have we?

Pay raises for Congress and president not necessary

Congress is going to give itself a 4 percent pay raise. Of course, members aren't calling it a pay raise. They call it a cost-of-living adjustment. They are already better paid, better pensioned and better benefited than 95 percent of the American people.

Reese

But these politicians know that political apathy pays — them, of course. They know they can add 4 percent to their $133,000-a-year paycheck and people won't notice or won't care or will care but will forget about it by the next election.

They don't deserve it. And let's see if they give a 4 percent cost-of-living adjustment to military retirees, federal retirees and Social Security recipients. You should not hold your breath. You should not bet that they will. They know the benefits of public apathy, and they have mastered the art of hypocrisy.

Congress also wants to pay presidents $400,000 a year. This, too, is nonsense. Americans do not interview applicants for the job and then bid for them against other potential employers. They elect them. Nobody worthy of the office aspires to be president for the money. A president's salary really should be considered a token honorarium.

Everything a president needs is provided. Few jobs on earth are as generously expensed as the president's. The present $200,000 is more than adequate. The office has never gone vacant for lack of candidates. The same is true of Congress, too. People who run for Congress for the money shouldn't be there, though today many such people are.

Some people think I joke when I refer to the empire, but it's true. American presidents today act like emperors — disdaining the Constitution, posting troops where they please, attacking nations when they please. Moblike, the press follows him everywhere as if anything he might say or do is of immense importance.

When presidents go abroad, they travel emperor style with a huge entourage and a fleet of limousines airlifted to wherever they are going. It may strike you as strange, but when President Teddy Roosevelt attended the state funeral of some royal figure in England, he declined the offer of a gilt carriage as inappropriate for the head of a republic. Instead, he walked in the procession, attired in a plain suit.

President Franklin Roosevelt, at his Warm Springs, Ga., cottage, often asked the cook to whip up a picnic lunch. Then he would drive two or three of his friends up the road into the Pine Mountains and spread a blanket alongside the road. There, they would enjoy the view and the fried chicken.

Roosevelt also guided the nation through a two-ocean global war against powerful opponents with a White House staff of about 15 people. There are now in excess of 2,000 people attached to the White House.

Younger Americans simply have no idea how plain, simple, free and truly republican this country used to be. And how efficient that much smaller government was. Having no basis for comparison in their life experiences, they don't realize how corrupt, bloated, costly and inefficient the federal government has become.

But, as the pols know, ignorance and apathy are profitable for politicians.

A report on the Clintons will be delivered 'at earliest practicable moment,' Starr says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five years after taking office, Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr promised Monday to wrap up his investigation before the 2000 New York Senate election that is being eyed by Hillary Rodham Clinton. He said he would deliver his final report "at the earliest practicable moment."

"We are trying to move forward very, very rapidly ... and we are doing so," Starr told reporters in Atlanta where he attended the American Bar Association's annual meeting.

The prosecutor declined to say whether the president or first lady were out of legal trouble.

Even if he brings no further charges, Starr has gathered evidence for a final report that political opponents could use to question Mrs. Clinton's credibility during any campaign.

That evidence includes billing records showing the first lady did legal work in the 1980s for a savings and loan real estate deal that federal regulators concluded was a "sham." Before the records appeared, Mrs. Clinton testified she knew almost nothing about the deal.

Prosecutors also have gathered testimony from former associates at her former Arkansas law firm and from her former Whitewater partner, the late James McDougal, that could be used to call into question various statements she has made to investigators.

In a separate television interview, Starr praised an Arkansas judge's decision to fine Clinton $90,000 for giving false testimony about his intimate relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

"I thought it was very strong language," Starr said of the decision by U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright, who ruled Clinton had been in contempt of court.

"This is a very distinguished judge who looked at the facts and came to these conclusions," Starr said on NBC's "Today" show. "And I would just add that the system, did, in fact, work."

Starr made clear in Atlanta that his report, which would be turned in to the panel of federal appeals judges who appointed him in August 1994, would not draw any conclusions about conduct and would simply lay out the evidence gathered by grand juries and his investigators.

"Congress did not want a final report to be an avenue for alleging that one or more individuals had engaged in criminal conduct," Starr said.

"I would anticipate that the final report will come at the earliest practicable moment. It would need to be a comprehensive final report that is factually straightforward, that does not engage in characterization."

He did not give a possible date for the final report. But when asked whether he plans to finish before the 2000 election, Starr replied, "The answer is yes."

Starr's declaration comes after incessant attacks on the length and $40 million-plus pricetag of his investigation. The inquiry began with the Whitewater allegations about the Clintons' business deal in Arkansas but was expanded by federal court to include a controversy about FBI files, possible lies by presidential aides in the White House travel office firings and the Lewinsky case.

Polls show Starr's investigation is widely unpopular with the public, and the prosecutor himself acknowledged recently that the perception of his investigation played a role in his decision not to try two figures whose first prosecutions ended in mistrial.

On another matter, in the NBC interview, Starr said he "was horrified" when Congress quickly released his report containing graphic sexual detail of Clinton's relationship with Ms. Lewinsky.

Starr's report on possible impeachable offenses found "substantial and credible evidence" of perjury and obstruction by the president.

"I don't think I did enough to warn the Congress, to say ... this is sensitive material," Starr said. "But I really did think, and I don't mean to criticize Congress, it made its decision and it was a broad bipartisan decision that we're simply going to turn this information over to the American people."

Starr said he saw the television interview in which Mrs. Clinton early on in the Lewinsky scandal blamed her husband's problems on "a vast right-wing conspiracy." Starr said that he "simply took it as her sense of loyalty in light of the president denying the facts."

It would be up to the special appeals court that appointed Starr to decide on how much of his final report to make public.

But some details are known already about what investigators found about Mrs. Clinton's role in the 1,000-plus acre Castle Grande project south of Little Rock.

13 farm workers killed in trailer-labor van collision

FIVE POINTS, Calif. (AP) — A van loaded with farm workers driven by an unlicensed driver slammed into a truck on a remote road in the early-morning darkness Monday, killing 13 people and renewing worries about the safety of laborers who often cram into vehicles to get to work in the fields.

The 1983 Dodge Ram van smashed like an accordion on impact. Most of the 10 men and five women in the van were sitting without seat belts on two carpeted benches installed on each side. California Highway Patrol Officer Brian Yokley said.

It's illegal in California to have anyone ride without proper seats and seat belts, but certified farm vehicles are excluded from the law. This van received its last annual certification in 1997, but had not been certified since, the highway patrol said.

The van's driver was among those killed. Two other passengers were injured. Authorities did not identify them.

The driver didn't have a license and his driving privileges had been revoked because of several violations, CHP Officer Eric Erickson said. The driver, from Fresno, had been cited for not wearing a seatbelt, not having a license, and was once arrested for drunken driving. Erickson said there was no conviction for the DUI, but it wasn't clear why.

The truck driver, who wasn't injured, had a clean driving record. He was turning his rig around on the two-lane road after parking on the shoulder to sleep, Erickson said. The rig's two trailers were empty.

The van "couldn't avoid hitting the tractor-trailer," Erickson said. "Their brakes locked up."

The van was going at least 55 mph, and the skid marks were 50 to 80 feet long, Erickson said. The accident happened shortly after 5 a.m., just southeast of this tiny town in Fresno County. The laborers had just gotten off work sorting tomatoes in the fields, Erickson said.

In central California's agricultural heartland, farm workers are often transported in crowded vans — a problem that has contributed to a disproportionate traffic death rate among Hispanics in the area.

The highway patrol is so concerned that it has a team focused entirely on vehicles overcrowded with farm workers.

Six officers, dubbed "Los Centinales" — or "the Sentinels" — have spent the past three summers patrolling before dawn, stopping trucks and vans of farm workers to check whether the vehicles are complying with state codes.

"We stop those vehicles that are obviously overloaded ... the back end is sagged down because of the weight of the people," said Sgt. Jorge Chaidez, who runs the unit out of the highway patrol's office in Fresno. "I've seen up to 22 people in a small van."

Dora Portillo, 26, said the van involved in Monday's crash was owned by her grandfather, Jose Lopez Rosas. He wasn't in the van, but she said her father was among those killed.

Ms. Portillo said she and her mother also had been working in the fields, and the two women had taken a different ride home.

"He told my mom, 'You go ahead and go with them, so you can rest and go to sleep,'" Ms. Portillo said, sobbing.

One of the injured survivors, a 17-year-old girl, was in critical condition. The other, a man, was in serious condition.

Administration asks approval for transplant policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with a supportive report by an independent scientific panel, the Clinton administration is asking Congress to allow its policy on organ transplantation to take effect.

"I hope you will read the report," Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala wrote in a letter sent to every member of Congress. "It is thoughtful, balanced and clear."

The report by the Institute of Medicine, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences that frequently advises the government, essentially supports the administration's approach to allocation of scarce organs for transplant. For its part, the other side wrote its own letter to Congress, focusing on a few areas where the report supports its concerns.

"The Department of Health and Human Services should go back to the drawing board with the transplant community and agree on new policies that will benefit all patients," wrote Dr. William D. Payne, president of the United Network for Organ Sharing, which runs the nation's transplant system under an HHS contract and strongly opposes the HHS policy.

The essential problem is supply and demand: There were nearly 21,000 transplants performed last year but more than 4,800 people died waiting for a new organ.

At issue is how to distribute donated organs among some 65,000 patients now waiting for transplants.

The transplant network and much of the transplant community supports the current system, which relies heavily on geography. Organs are offered locally first, then regionally and then nationally — meaning a relatively healthy patient who is located close to the organ donor often gets offered an organ before a sicker patient elsewhere.

Last year, the HHS issued regulations directing the network to remake its system and give organs to the sickest patients first.

The network objected — both to a new system and to HHS telling it what to do — and lobbied Congress for a change. Congress put the rule on hold for a year and asked the Institute of Medicine to study the issue.

In the meantime, the HHS has been negotiating with transplant surgeons and hospitals and plans to issue a revised version of its regulations within weeks. The network agrees the discussions have been productive.

A moratorium on the rule's implementation expires Oct. 21, and the HHS is asking Congress to let it take effect.

"I believe the report ... puts to rest the misunderstandings and misrepresentations that have surrounded our recommendations," Shalala wrote to members of Congress last week.

The report recommends that the regulations be implemented by establishing larger areas for the sharing of livers, the organ that has generated the most controversy.

It agreed with the HHS that the department should take an active role in overseeing the transplant system. And it said the network should make more data available more quickly, affirming another aspect of the HHS rule.

But it did not totally support the department. The HHS has cited disparities in the length of time people must wait for transplants as one of the chief reasons for remaking the system. But the Institute of Medicine said that waiting time is a misleading indicator.

The network is seizing that point to argue that the entire HHS rule is wrongheaded.

"The Institute of Medicine has questioned the basic medical premise of the pending federal organ transplant regulations," Payne wrote last month, the day after the report was released. "Therefore, the regulations should be withdrawn."

White House says details of $250 billion tax cut negotiable

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a hint of movement, a White House official said Monday that if Republicans would agree to a $250 billion, 10-year tax cut for the middle class, the Clinton administration would be open to negotiations over the package's details.

"As long as we agree on the size, and that it should be targeted to working families, we certainly would be willing to compromise with both Republican and Democratic members of Congress on its exact composition," Gene Sperling, chairman of the White House National Economic Council, said in an interview.

President Clinton on Sunday made conciliatory comments about his hopes for a compromise with Republicans this fall over tax cuts and spending. But Sperling's remarks seemed to be the first time the White House has explicitly suggested that it is not necessarily wedded to the targeted tax cuts for retirement savings, long-term health care and other expenses it has espoused so far this year.

The comments still leave the White House significantly short of the $792 billion, 10-year measure Republicans pushed through Congress last week. Clinton has promised to veto the bill, and GOP leaders have shown little interest in settling for a $250 billion version.

"It pales in comparison to what a majority of members of Congress have voted to put on the president's desk," said Pete Jeffries, spokesman for House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill.

The GOP bill includes a 1 percent reduction in all income-tax rates, an easing of the "marriage penalty" tax paid by many married couples, a capital gains tax-rate cut, elimination of the inheritance tax on large estates, and a slew of tax breaks for business.

In an alternative that the Senate rejected, Senate Democrats proposed increasing the standard deduction for joint and single filers and the itemized deduction for married couples. They did not embrace universal savings accounts, federally subsidized retirement accounts for individuals that was the core of Clinton's tax-cut plan.

As administration officials have said all along, Sperling said that before discussing tax cuts, the two sides would first have to agree on extending Medicare's solvency, providing a prescription drug benefit and financing other domestic priorities.

Historical facility getting new look in Big Spring

\By Art Sinclair
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The roof of the Big Spring Municipal Auditorium, which was heavily damaged by a hailstorm in 1996, has been restored with $240,000 in insurance funds, according to Assistant City Manager Emma Bogart.

Another $175,000 in insurance funds has been used to repair extensive damage to the interior of the building, she said.

But there is still work to be done.

The stage is being replaced and new stage curtains are ready to be installed. In addition, damaged ceiling tiles must be replaced and hand painted to match the original coloring and the peeling plaster on the walls is being restored.

The auditorium was built in 1932 and has stood as a citadel of culture.

Internationally recognized musical artists, such as Mantovani, Arthur Fiedler, Elvis Presley, Hank Williams Jr. and Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, have graced the stage.

Indeed, stand at center stage and you can even hear the "The King." Francis Wheat, administrative assistant to S[illegible]e Sen. Robert Duncan, said, "When my friend Julie Shires and I saw Elvis the first time, we thought he was too much; in fact we thought he was downright vulgar. In a couple of years we changed our minds."

Ms. Wheat thought that the greatest performer to step into the sweeping spotlight "was Wayne Newton. He put his whole heart and soul into his performance."

Becky Crane, director of Parks and Recreation for the city of Big Spring, said the repairs should be complete sometime in September or early October.

"The next major project will be a new sound and lighting system," Ms. Crane said.

Any non-profit organizations that wishes to use the facility may do so. The city of Big Spring charges a $200 refundable cleaning deposit. The city is hopeful that more conventions will make use of the 1,400-seat auditorium.

A miniature Statue of Liberty, on the lawn of the regal facility, stands as a symbol of hope in the heart of Big Spring.

UTPB's Cluster conference benefits small school districts

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Leadership in the classroom, for the most part, is left in the hands of the educators. After college, teachers sharpen their skills with in-service sessions and workshops throughout the year. However, a number of the smaller school districts in the area lack the funds to provide their teachers with top-notch instruction on the latest and newest teaching methods.

Region 18 may have found a solution to this problem with its 1999 Permian Basin Cluster Staff Development conference which was held Aug. 3 in Odessa.

An estimated 1,325 teachers and administrators from Andrews, Buena Vista, Crane, Iraan-Sheffield, Kermit, McCamey, Monhans-Wickett-Pyote, Pecos-Barstow-Toyah, Rankin and Wink-Loving Independent School Districts each took part in the conference.

Participants attended workshops on topics ranging from classroom discipline to creating an Internet field trip, according to UTPB's public information officer Teri Brooks.

Region 18 Director of Curriculum Instruction, Marie Lambert, said it marked the third year for the program to be held at the university. She said when some of the larger schools wanted to participate in the Cluster Development they turned to UTPB.

Local teens to explore cyberspace

By Matt Josefy

Many local teens are being allowed a special chance to "venture" into cyberspace.

Scott Smith, a local business man in the marketing and research field, is facilitating the development of the coed Boy Scout Venture Crew 270, which will help local teenagers explore computers.

The program will branch into many different directions to include programming, gaming, web graphics, and hardware. Smith and more than a dozen teens began meeting in May, utilizing a computer lab provided by the International School of Business.

Ideally, a number of area professionals will serve as consultants to the group, sharing [illegible]owledge and resources of the complex industry.

While the opportunity will be especially meaningful for those without access to computers at home, many of those involved have extensive computer knowledge already.

Ross Abel, for instance, has already set up web pages on his own. One that he did for his enjoyment was a page for the band "Jimmie's Chicken Shack." In fact, he even received recognition from the band's official site.

The page has received more than 2,000 hits to date. Appropriately, Ross is in charge of the web design group which is exploring the possibility of setting up a site to represent area scouting and the program.

Smith

Ross is a sophomore at Lee High School this year. Although having been involved in scouts is not a criterion for participating in the post, he has been a scout in the past.

He encourages others to get involved "to see if you have an interest in computers. Anything you want to learn, we can work on."

Andrew Troschinetz, on the other hand, wants "mostly to learn hardware." Andrew is a junior at Midland High School.

"This is a good way to work in teams and with professionals. Almost everything is driven by computers and technology is expanding exponentially," he said of his participation.

Toschinetz

His plans to be a software engineer are partially prompted by realizing that job projections for the future lean heavily towards having prime opportunities in computers.

Smith is excited about future possibilities. "We might put on something like Computer Trade Days; the opportunities are limitless. We are taking scouting one step further into cyberspace," he said.

"It's almost scary to see guys out of school getting jobs making $80,000 a year," he continued.

Newly completed Big Spring Junior High School welcomes first students

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Halls that have been filled with the sounds of hammers and saws all summer long heard their first students Monday morning, as the newly constructed Big Spring Junior High School opened its doors for the 1999-2000 school year.

Principal Bill Tarleton said attendance for the first day was good, and expects to see even more before the end of the year.

"As of this morning, we had 639 students in attendance," Tarleton said. "I expect we'll probably have about 650 by the end of the week, and around 700 by the middle of the school year."

Tarleton said the first day of school is hectic, as usual, but he and his staff are certainly enjoying the new facilities.

"The teachers really seem to like it here," Tarleton said. "I think the students are really enjoying it as well. It really offers a better environment for them to learn in."

Although the opening of the new junior high marks a time of advancement for the Big Spring Independent School District (BSISD), as with all advancements, something is left behind.

"I'm sure all of the staff has a soft spot in their heart for the old Runnels building," Tarleton said. "That building will always be a part of this school, as well as this district. However, this new building offers so many things that will help us do our jobs better through the year, I'm sure no one will want to go back to Runnels."

The addition of the new $10.5 million dollar building to the district came after nearly two years of construction, meeting delays of every variety.

BSISD Business Manager Ron Logback said Monday's back-to-school activities have kept his office more than busy, but it certainly is a good thing to see such a large project come to fruition.

"We've been really busy all day, but it's worth it," Logback said. "It really is great to see the kids utilizing the new school building. It makes all of the work worth it."

Tarleton said the biggest challenge facing students at the new facility is learning where all of their classes are located, as well as getting there in time.

"A lot of the kids say they are having trouble getting to their classes in the five minutes we've given them," said Tarleton.

So what do the kids think of the new junior high?

"I really like it," Jonathan Lusk said. "It's really big."

CLUSTER: Successful program draws teachers from area towns

(From 1B)

The program has been so successful Ms. Lambert said teachers are willing to drive for miles just to attend.

"Every year the superintendents ask their teachers if they want to come back next year and each year they say yes," Ms. Lambert said. "There are teachers here from Iraan which is an hour and a half away, and Pecos which is more than an hour and a half away. Those teachers are having to get up early to get here on time. I think that says a lot for the program."

School of Education Dean for UTPB Pete Ienatsch said by joining together, the schools are able to benefit from speakers and presenters they would otherwise be unable to afford.

"We've had speakers and presenters from as far as Texas A&M come to past meetings," Ienatsch said. "There is no way each school could benefit from the speakers if they had their staff development conferences on their own."

Another advantage of the cluster group conference, according to Ms. Lambert, is the specialized training teachers can get in the session.

SCOUTS: Program helps prepare students for future in computers

(From 1B)

in charge of the community service aspect, which ties the program back to purposes synonymous with scouts. "Our main idea is to build computers and put them in local nursing homes, set up with easy e-mail access." He brainstormed the idea because of a grandparent who lives in a nursing home.

"The whole purpose of what we're doing is taking care of the people who have taken care of us," he said.

As far as the post is concerned, he looks foward to "having access to the computers and being with people who have a common interest. And the expert knowledge we get from the guest speakers."

Tyler Baimbridge, another MHS sophomore, plans on entering into graphic design for video games and movies. Though he has experimented on his own, "this gives you a lot more help than if you were doing it on your own. We've already had people come in and teach us about games and networking."

"I hope this gets big," he concludes.

The group currently meets every other week. Sponsored by Boy Scouts of America, Exploring-Venturing Posts are intended to provide male and female teenagers the chance to explore various career opportunities. Contact Scott Smith at 699-0846 for further information about this program.

Some governors helping Bush achieve their dream

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gov. Tommy Thompson wanted to run for president, but was blocked by harsh reality: A fellow Republican governor — George W. Bush — has a few more things going for him.

"His name is Bush. He's from Texas. He can raise a ton of money. And he's better looking than me," the Wisconsin governor said with a grin and a what-can-you-do shrug of his wide shoulders.

"Other than those few things, I'd be the front-runner."

Like quietly envious bridesmaids, several Republican governors are loyally helping Bush fulfill a dream that they once had for themselves.

Thompson, who early this year questioned whether Bush had accomplished much as governor, will ride his motorcycle in Iowa to rally Bush voters this week. He opened Bush's Iowa office in June, and has raised more than $300,000 in Wisconsin for the leading Republican candidate.

Thompson has Bush's ear on education and welfare issues.

Michigan Gov. John Engler helped rally GOP governors behind Bush, and has raised about $2 million for his colleague.

Montana Gov. Marc Racicot, a key policy adviser, flew to Austin, Texas, in late May to help Bush prepare for his first campaign swing. He also will campaign in Iowa this week for Bush, who is competing in the state GOP's straw poll Saturday.

Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating has impressed Bush's political team with his television appearances on Bush's behalf.

Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge is credited by Bush backers for locking down his state's political operation, and raising $1.4 million before July. Ridge also lends Bush policy advice, particularly on how Republicans can be more effective champions of the environment, the governor said in an interview Monday.

New York Gov. George Pataki scored points with the Bush campaign by setting aside ill feelings toward Rudolph Giuliani and endorsing the New York mayor for Senate. Bush believes a united GOP front will force the presidential Democratic nominee to campaign harder than usual in a state Democrats must win to retain the White House.

According to Bush advisers, they didn't explicitly ask Pataki to endorse Giuliani; they did urge the New York governor to make sure the party was not bitterly divided after this fall's Senate primary.

Pataki got the message.

Twenty-one of the 31 GOP governors have endorsed Bush, with several more in the pipeline. Bush is counting on the state leaders to ignite their political operations, raise money and offer advice that would help him replicate their political successes in a national election.

"No one knows the mindset of a state better than the governor so governors are the masters of the message," Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes said as the state leaders gathered at the National Governors' Association. Bush and his brother, Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, did not attend.

To various degrees, Pataki, Ridge, Keating, Racicot, Engler and Thompson mulled seeking the presidency or were considered potential candidates. Now they're auditioning for the vice presidential nomination or a Cabinet post.

Engler, Ridge and Pataki — listed in order of likelihood — have the best chance to end up on Bush's list of potential running mates if he wins the nomination.

Keating, a former FBI agent, would have a shot at returning to the Justice Department as attorney general. Keating is a top criminal justice adviser to Bush.

Racicot could benefit from the precedent of putting a western state governor in charge of the Interior Department.

Thompson could fit into several Cabinet posts.

Govs. Paul Cellucci of Massachusetts, John Rowland of Connecticut and Bill Owens of Colorado have lower national profiles, but are working hard to nominate Bush. "I'll have the troops up in New Hampshire," said Cellucci, considered a potential Cabinet official.

Job advancement is not all that motivates the governors to help Bush: Electing the Texan would show that their moderate, pragmatic approach to politics is more successful than the route taken by congressional Republicans, several governors said.

"This is a way for us to lead, to put our agenda forward," said Utah Gov. Michael Leavitt.

No matter how hard the governors try, envy is a hard feeling to suppress.

Leavitt said a colleague pulled him aside recently, and said with a touch of sadness: "Maybe I should be president."

According to Leavitt, the governor, whom Leavitt declined to name, concluded that a leader emerges from each generation — and this was Bush's moment. That governor has endorsed Bush, Leavitt said.

Leavitt realized himself that Bush had emerged in December, when he visited Israel with the Texan and watched fawning crowds flock. That night, Leavitt wrote in his journal: "I've seen fate fall on a man today."

It was a fate Bush's fellow governors had long hoped might fall on them.

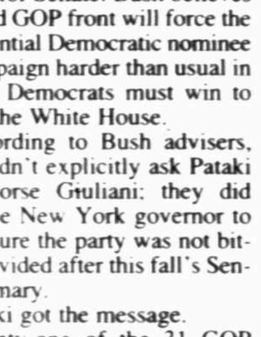
TEMPLE BAPTIST CHURCH
Summer Bible Conference '99


Dr. Bruce Melton
August 11 • 7 p.m.
No stranger to Temple Baptist Church, Dr. Bruce Melton has been a friend to this church and to the Thorpes for many years. A graduate of Baptist Bible College, Dr. Melton has earned his Master of Divinity and Doctorate from Louisiana Baptist Theological Seminary, and currently is a candidate for a Doctorate of Ministry from Liberty University.
Dr. Melton has pastored the Central Baptist Church in Huntington Beach, California for the past 22 years. The congregation recently completed a 1000 seat sanctuary and is currently involved in building a multi-purpose family life center. The church operates Liberty Christian School with an enrollment of 400. In addition to these pastoral responsibilities, Dr. Melton is active in the Baptist Bible Fellowship having held numerous positions in its leadership. He is currently serving as the President of Baptist Bible College West. We look forward to Dr. Melton's return to Temple this summer.

After mild start to summer, Texas heating up

DALLAS (AP) — Pat Connally stands in the middle of a warehouse, shaking his head in disgust at the stacks of tires he must search through each day.

The National Tire and Brake salesman hasn't eaten lunch yet, but the sweltering conditions inside the airless room have left him worn out and drenched in sweat.

"It almost kills me," Connally said of the heat. "At first, I didn't think we were going to have a summer. June was easy, but this is horrible."

The increasing temperatures aren't just a figment of Connally's imagination. Weather conditions were relatively mild for most of Texas through the middle of July, but triple-digit temperatures have become routine over the past two weeks.

Mineral Wells was one of the hottest spots Monday at 106 degrees. Late afternoon temperatures also reached the triple digits in Dallas, Del Rio, Fort Worth, Killeen and Laredo.

Meteorologist Michael Mach at the National Weather Service in Fort Worth said there are about 15 100-degree days in North Texas during the summer. Monday was No. 16, Mach said, and there's no relief in sight.

"Right now, there may be an isolated thunderstorm, but 95 percent of the area (North Texas) is not going to receive a drop," he said.

Many areas likely will remain under heat advisories for at least the next two weeks, meteorologist Roland Nunez said. Such advisories go into effect when heat indices reach 105 degrees and low temperatures remain above 80 degrees.

Chris Taylor, a junior at Plano West High School, sprays water on his face to cool off during football practice in Plano Monday.

"As long as this ridge of high pressure is over us, there's not going to be any change at all," Nunez said. "For the next few weeks we don't expect it to get much cooler."

Despite the recent warming trend, conditions aren't expected to approach the disastrous proportions of last summer's heat wave, which included 42 consecutive 100-degree days and claimed 131 lives in Texas.

That state of emergency prompted President Clinton to give $33 million in federal funds to the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs, which coordinates a program offering free and discounted air conditioners to low-income households.

While the department is receiving no federal money this year, spokeswoman Amy Lemen says the ongoing Low Income Housing Energy Assistance Program remains in effect as the summer wears on.

"We absolutely see the demand picking up," Ms. Lemen said. "But until it gets to the emergency status that we had last year, we're continuing to operate as normal."

No corner of the state has escaped the heat. In Southeast Texas, La Marque High School football coach Larry Walker said his staff has made sure players will have adequate fluids and rest when practice begins this week.

"When I was still playing, asking for water was a no-no," said Walker, who is entering his 27th season as a high school coach. "But times have changed, and now we get the players all the water they can drink."

On Sunday, U.S. Border Patrol agents found and treated a 50-year-old woman and three teen-age girls who were suffering from extreme heat stress near Del Rio. So far this year, agents in the Del Rio sector have rescued more than 30 people from heat-related life-threatening situations.

In Wichita Falls, where temperatures reached 104 degrees at Dallas Cowboys' training camp, Lisa Reynolds persevered under her blue and white tent and sold hats and T-shirts to eager fans.

"If I wasn't here, I'm sure I would be getting calls all day tomorrow about why I wasn't selling," Ms. Reynolds said. "The heat isn't stopping anyone from watching the Cowboys practice and it's not stopping them from wanting to buy hats, either."

One of the few people enjoying the soaring temperatures is Paul Toler, owner of Emergency Ice, which provides ice and services ice machines for many Dallas-area restaurants.

Because of warmer tap water and increased demand for ice, Toler said business has increased 70 percent over the past two weeks.

"This is the best time of the year for us," Toler said. "I guess in our business, someone else's misery is our pleasure."

Mexican truckers say Department of Public Safety inspections are slowing them down

PHARR (AP) — Increased inspections by state troopers at an international bridge are slowing down trade, Mexican truck drivers say.

Mexican truckers who make it past U.S. Customs inspections at the Pharr-Reynosa International Bridge are then usually greeted by three Texas Department of Public Safety troopers lined up to conduct safety inspections on the trucks.

DPS fines the truckers for cracked windshields, faulty signals and other things that need repair. Occasionally, troopers take trucks out of service. All that adds to the cost and time needed to deliver goods across the bridge, truckers told The (McAllen) Monitor for Monday editions.

Mexican trucks are, on average, much older than U.S. trucks and are considered not safe enough to share the road with cars.

Oscar Garza Herrera's company runs 10 trucks between Reynosa and warehouses on the U.S. side of the border. He says most Mexican truckers don't have the financial backing to buy new trucks and replacement parts.

"We can't compete against the equipment U.S. companies have," Garza Herrera said. "We consume what they throw away."

Foreign trucks cannot travel past checkpoints in either country, so short-distance deliveries between factories in Reynosa and U.S. warehouses make up the $100 billion in trade between the two countries.

U.S. officials should give truckers more opportunity to make repairs before issuing tickets, Garza Herrera said, considering the important role they serve in linking U.S. and Mexican commerce and the short distance Reynosa trucks travel to nearby Hidalgo and Pharr.

But DPS says safety comes first.

"We're not going to compromise on safety to the public," said Sergeant Larry Pruitt, DPS supervisor of vehicle safety in Hidalgo, Willacy and Brooks counties. "Mexican trucks are expected to be at the same standards that a Texas truck has."

Mexican trucks aren't targeted, Pruitt said. His troopers mainly patrol highways monitoring U.S. trucks, but vehicle safety at the international bridges is also important.

"The secret to compliance is that if we aren't there, there won't be compliance," Pruitt said.

A federal grant Pruitt received last November allows him to send three patrols to the bridge for two days every week. The extra patrols are set up at random.

The federal funding runs out this month, so inspections might be scaled down.

Increasing trade doesn't equal loose safety standards, according to Jim Giermanski, a regents professor at Texas A&M International University in Laredo.

"Inspections are a deterrent to trucking companies running poor equipment," he said.

While some Mexican companies maintain fleets equal to the best U.S. companies, Giermanski said many Mexican trucking companies don't have a consistent system for keeping up their equipment.

Smaller Mexican trucking companies, such as Garza Herrera's, are even facing tougher equipment standards in their own country.

The Mexican national congress recently approved a law, endorsed by the country's major truck manufacturers, that will require many equipment upgrades that truckers say are too costly.

That could thin the ranks of border trucking companies when the law goes into effect next year.

"These conditions make it hard for us to do our job," Garza Herrera said. "It's going to drive us out of business."

Longtime employee killed in CITGO refinery explosion

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A man who worked for CITGO Petroleum Corp. for 30 years died Monday in a refinery explosion.

Around 10:45 a.m., a blast happened in a utility block containing steam boilers at the Corpus Christi refinery, company officials said in a news release. Two employees were inside the utility block at the time.

Lonnie V. Wright, 54, a multi-skilled maintenance leadman who'd worked for CITGO since March 1969, died. The Corpus Christi man left a wife and two children.

Kenneth B. Thomas, 52, a multi-skilled specialist, was injured but was treated at CHRISTUS Spohn Hospital and released Monday afternoon, hospital spokeswoman Rita Patrick said.

CITGO is investigating the cause of the explosion. There was no fire and the rest of the plant continued operating normally, company officials said.

Tulsa, Okla.-based CITGO refines, transports and markets petrochemicals and other industrial products.

Coalition calls for later start to school year

AUSTIN (AP) — A San Antonio-based coalition encouraged school districts Monday to push the beginning of school back to September, saying an early start isn't educationally beneficial and undermines teacher development.

Texans for a Traditional School Year contends that public schools have traditionally started Sept. 1 or later, but have recently been opening their doors in early to mid-August.

"The result is a bloated school calendar that has created shorter summers," said Tina Bruno, coalition executive director. "That means teachers have less time to pursue professional development and students who need to work have less time to do so."

Ms. Bruno noted that Plano Independent School District started classes last week, while Austin students begin this week and many Houston children return next week.

"Starting school in August provides no educational benefit, yet it creates headaches, heartaches and hardships," Ms. Bruno said.

There are currently no state requirements for when classes should start, but students must be in class 180 days a year.

In some schools that start classes early, winter and spring breaks are getting longer and districts scatter other days off during the year, she said.

"Working families who must foot the bill for child care during the many breaks the longer school year creates would have one less burden on their household budgets" if classes began later, Ms. Bruno said.

There have been several attempts in the Legislature to establish a standard calendar that starts in September, but some districts say that would mean delaying midterm exams until after winter break, which disrupts studies.

"We don't want our students to have to study over winter break," said Carole Greisdorf, spokeswoman for Plano Independent School District, which began classes Aug. 2.

Ms. Greisdorf said the early start is a benefit to students and teachers who can take college summer courses, since the school year ends May 19th.

DEAR ABBY

Best friends pay high cost for lessons in partnership, trusting

DEAR ABBY: Last March, my best friend, "Emma," and I opened a business together.

We had a falling out three weeks ago and haven't spoken since. She's very stubborn and can't admit when she's wrong. On a hunch, I called the 24-hour banking service for our business account. Lo and behold, the balance was zero. A week ago it held more than $200. I checked further. There have been four ATM transactions in the last two weeks - all withdrawals. One was done at a store where business was more than likely done; however, the others were done at the supermarket.

Van Buren

Abby, we were best friends - or so I thought. I feel Emma stole the money. She didn't let me know we owed people who had helped us get started, so of course I have to pay them back.

I am so angry and hurt I don't know what to do. Our friendship is over. I'm really going to miss that because Emma was like a sister to me. I don't know what to do from here - take her to court, scream at her, tell the world or just let it go. Your thoughts, please. - STEPPED ON AND USED IN N.J.

DEAR USED: Now that you have vented, call your former business partner and ask her to account for the money that was supposed to be in the business account. She MAY have had a legitimate reason for withdrawing the funds.

You did not indicate how much money you feel obligated to pay back to the individuals who helped the two of you start the business. Since it was a partnership, you should not be on the hook for more than 50 percent of it. Add to it the money that should have been left in the joint account. If it's more than you can comfortably afford to lose, by all means take her to small claims court. If not, consider this an expensive introductory course in business accounting and safeguarding your investment - and write her off.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been annoyed by something for some time. We have a few friends who visit us at least twice a week. They insist upon hugging at every greeting and goodbye. Whether at my house, in public or elsewhere - hugs are expected.

Should we just grin and bear the excessive hugging? Or should we avoid the hug and address the issue with them? -OVER-HUGGED IN LONG BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR OVERHUGGED: Tell your friends, as kindly as possible, that not all people are equally demonstrative -and that all the hugging they take for granted makes you uncomfortable. Assure them of your caring and friendship, and ask them to please understand. If they are true friends, they will.

DEAR ABBY: When writing thank-you notes, how do you deal with gifts from a group of people? Do you write an individual thank-you to each person who signed the card, or can you send a "group" thank-you? - TRAECY IN CLACKAMAS, ORE.

DEAR TRAECY: Much depends upon how many people make up the "group." For example, if the group comprises approximately 25 to 30 or more people, one thank-you note would be sufficient.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Aug. 10, 1999:

Your personality draws others to you. Know your priorities. Confusion sometimes marks your relationships; turn it around by asking questions and observing others' actions. Many options appear, professionally; finally, you get your just rewards. You feel good about what life offers you. Be ambitious, and you'll create even more. If you are single, intensity marks your relationships. There could be a lot of ups and downs. If attached, the two of you will become even more of a team. Add to your relationship with a greater commitment. LEO understands you too well!

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ What once was difficult now becomes easy. Your need to convince others as well as yourself might encourage spending. Be clear about what you are doing. Make calls. You might not have the whole picture just yet. Tonight: Finding a reason to celebrate won't be difficult.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Take a personal matter into consideration. You might feel like you have it all under control; actually, there are signs that you may have pushed beyond your limits. A partner helps you figure out exactly what has happened here. Tonight: Home, or wherever you feel most comfortable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Conversations flow, though you might not understand just how much of yourself you are revealing. Others make a point of asking your opinions. You might be flattered as another's actions signal a change in your relationship. Tonight: At a favorite place.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Use your savvy and intelligence to make money. You are on a high cycle, knowing what you need and what to do. Listen to your instincts with others; they might reveal a lot more than they realize. Career and daily matters need balancing. Tonight: Balance your budget.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Finally, you get it together and are ready to move on an important work-related project. Your personality helps melt others' resistance, which could be significant. You see a new side of another and of a personal situation. Tonight: Your call.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Take some time off to relax. You need time to review where you are coming from. It is likely that you have changed more than you realize. Listen carefully to feedback. Tonight: Take a break from all of your obligations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Aim for what you want, now that you have a partner in your pocket. This person is more than willing to support you in any way possible. Together, you are capable of making a substantial amount of money. Go over short-term obligation. Tonight: With friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Others look to you for leadership and guidance. You give good advice and know how to direct others to their goals. Decide how much you want to invest in your career and image. You could find that priorities change. Why fix something that is working? Tonight: Put in extra hours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You reverse a stand, but no one is really surprised. You've been changing a lot; others have observed how different you are. Mobilize your high energy and get the job done. Others feel like you have a lot going for you, and you do. Tonight: Off to the gym.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Get down to basics with associates. Don't let "fluff" divert your attention. A relationship could be most enticing, but remember where your priorities are. Reconstruct financial agreements so that they work for you. Another will attempt to distract you. Tonight: Be vulnerable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Others clearly seek you out and want you. Think about limits you have established within your home life. Caring flows between you and a friend — could there possibly be more between you? Tonight: Where the crowds are.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ You might not be sure which way to go with work. You could be overwhelmed by a boss who changes course. Staying on top of what is going on puts a great deal on your plate. Be focused on the job. Tonight: Clear your desk first.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♢	1♠	3♢	3♠
4♢	4♠	5♢	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠ Study the bidding and play of this deal. Did anyone err? If so, who?

East's jump to three spades was pre-emptive. Ideally, East's hand should have been more distributional to take that action when vulnerable. Also, with so much defensive strength and weak trumps, North should have doubled four spades rather than compete, so that player is guilty of a major bidding charge.

West led a spade, taken by declarer's ace. The ace and queen of diamonds were cashed, after which South ruffed a spade on the table and discarded the remaining spade on the king of diamonds. Next, the nine of hearts was led to the four, five and king. West switched to the queen of clubs, won in dummy, and a trump to the jack and queen lost to the ace. Declarer claimed the rest of the tricks to fulfill the contract.

What is your verdict?

East was a victim of that old adage, "second hand low." All East has to do to sink the contract is to cover the nine of hearts with the jack. West then captures South's queen with the ace but, with the K-8 of hearts poised over declarer's 10-7, West must score two more trump tricks to defeat the contract one trick.

Incidentally, four spades can be defeated three tricks as long as the defenders do not allow anything to get away.

Jet over Travolta house creates buzz

ISLESBORO, Maine — The island is abuzz after residents reported a low-flying jet circling the island home of John Travolta.

Some Islesboro residents assumed Travolta was at the controls of the large passenger jet that reportedly circled the actor's home three times last month.

Residents are used to Travolta, a licensed pilot, buzzing around in smaller planes, but some say this was over the top.

The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating, but spokeswoman Arlene Salas would not say who owned or was flying the plane. If any charges are filed, that information will become public, she said.

"He was not 500 feet from my window," said Agatha Cabaniss, publisher of The Island News, who lives across a cove from Travolta's 42-room home.

ALBANY, N.Y. — Anywhere else it would be an oddity, but this is New York's U.S. Senate race.

Al Lewis — better known as "Grandpa" on the 1970s television show "The Munsters" — says he is considering a Senate run.

The 89-year-old cigar-chomping comedian announced Monday he was setting up an exploratory committee. He also took a shot at his likely rivals, dubbing New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton "Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum."

Al Lewis wants to throw hat into New York Senate race.

All three are eyeing the seat being vacated next year by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

It wouldn't be Lewis' first foray into politics. Last year, he unsuccessfully ran for governor on the Green Party ticket. He got 52,533 votes.

LONDON — A driver who hit the Queen Mother's official car was fined $1,120 Monday and banned from driving for two years.

Queen Elizabeth II's 99-year-old mother was not in the Daimler when it was struck on July 4 in Surrey.

Prosecutors said Eamon Reidy had a blood-alcohol level 2 1/2 times the legal limit for driving when his vehicle hit the Daimler. Reidy, 32, sped off before abandoning his vehicle and running across fields where he was spotted by a police helicopter, prosecutors said.

Reidy's attorney, Lesley Barry, said her client drank two glasses of champagne at his parents' wedding anniversary lunch and later had three pints of beer at a pub.

GRAND RAPIDS, Minn. — Mickey Rooney tossed gold foam bricks from a carriage as he helped Judy Garland's hometown celebrate 60 years of "The Wizard of Oz."

The 78-year-old actor, a childhood friend of Garland's and frequent co-star, rode in the town's annual Judy Garland Festival parade Sunday. He was carried in the same black carriage that took the Tin Man, the Scarecrow, the Cowardly Lion and Garland, as Dorothy, into the movie's Emerald City.

Garland, who left the northern Minnesota town at the age of 4, later died of a drug overdose. Rooney played the wizard in a touring stage version of the show.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — He wore togas in "Spartacus," but Kirk Douglas says give him boots and chaps any day.

Kirk Douglas says he'd rather be in cowboy boots any day.

"Some of my best memories are from doing Westerns," Douglas told the audience at Saturday night's 17th annual Golden Boot Awards. Douglas received the Motion Picture & Television Fund award for lifetime achievement.

Among the Westerns he starred in were "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral" and "The War Wagon."

Other Golden Boot Awards went to "Maverick" star James Garner, "Bonanza" creator and executive producer David Dortort, actress Julie Adams ("Bend of the River"), stuntman Jack Williams, R.G. Armstrong ("Gunsmoke") and the late DeForest Kelley ("Star Trek").

Nixon's 'smoking gun' Watergate tape to be available in January

WASHINGTON (AP) — FOR SALE: Richard M. Nixon's once-secret White House tapes.

Hear him order the theft of a think tank file: "Break in and take it out!" Listen to him talk about the kind of person he wants to head the IRS: "I want to be sure ... that every income tax return I want to see, I see." Replay the famous "smoking gun" conversation about Watergate that led to his resignation 25 years ago.

The taped conversations — Nixon's salty language and all — go on sale in January.

"In the past there has been a lot of interest in using the tapes on the air," Susan Cooper, a spokeswoman for the National Archives, said Monday. "Researchers have been interested in having their own copies and professors have wanted them for their classes. We are just responding to a demand."

Ms. Cooper said the archives would not profit from the sale of Nixon tapes. Prices for the cassettes will be set to cover the cost of copying and packaging them, she said.

The archives has a total of 3,700 hours of Nixon tapes. But the public will only be able to buy copies of 264 hours of so-called "abuse of government power" tapes that contain conversations about the break-in and bugging of the Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate on Memorial Day weekend in 1972, the subsequent cover-up and wrongdoing by the president or his staff.

Making copies of the tapes was an issue in 1992 when historian Stanley Kutler and Public Citizen, an advocacy group, sued the archives, saying the Nixon tapes weren't being released fast enough.

Lawyers for Nixon intervened in the suit, and in 1993, they got a court order banning any further release of tapes until all personal and private conversations were returned to the president.

In a compromise reached in 1996, the parties agreed that if all the tapes were not opened by January 2000, the archives could make copies of the abuse of government power sections for public release.

Pandy Byrd and her two sons Nolan, 7, left, and Austin, 10, tour the Nixon Library in Yorba Linda, Calif., Monday. Aug. 9, is the 25th anniversary of Nixon's departure from the White House.

John Taylor, director of the Richard Nixon Library & Birthplace Foundation in Yorba Linda, Calif., said he thinks the recordings should be projected on the backdrop of the Vietnam War and released only within the context of the war and other events of the day.

"History will only have the complete story of the Vietnam-Watergate era when it has seen all the tapes in the context and in the light of the documentary record," Taylor said. "I do not believe history will fully understand Watergate ... until it come to terms with the fact that that was a wartime administration and that Richard Nixon was a wartime commander in chief."

Some of the most popular snippets of tape:

■ A March 21, 1973 conversation between Nixon and John Dean, counsel to the president, who remarks that the Watergate affair had become a "cancer" on the presidency. "We have a cancer — within —close to the presidency, that's growing," Dean tells Nixon. "It's growing daily. It's compounding, it grows geometrically now."

■ A June 30, 1971 recording when Nixon is heard telling his chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, and others to arrange a break-in at the Brookings Institution, a think tank in Washington, to obtain Vietnam War files. "I want them just to break in and take it out. Do you understand?" Nixon tells Haldeman. "You're to break into the place, rifle the files and bring them in."

■ A May 13, 1971 recording where Nixon talks about a prospective IRS commissioner. "I want to be sure that he is a ruthless son of a bitch, that he will do what he is told, that every income tax return I want to see, I see," he said. "That he will go after our enemies and not go after our friends. It's as simple as that."

■ The "smoking gun" conversation on June 23, 1972 — just six days after the Watergate burglary. That exchange with Haldeman revealed that the president was interested in using the CIA to derail the FBI's Watergate investigation and led to his resignation on Aug. 9, 1974.

Regulators allege abuses by firms, say most day-traders lose

WASHINGTON (AP) — Securities day traders, most of them heading for losses, are being misled by host firms that promise them quick riches and make improper loans to keep them trading, state regulators contended Monday.

The report by the North American Securities Administrators Association resulted from a seven-month investigation of the growing day-trading industry. It came 11 days after Mark O. Barton shot and killed nine people at two day-trading firms in Atla a where he had traded and lost thousands dollars.

A consultant hired by the regulators concluded in an accompanying analysis that 70 percent of all day traders end up losing money. A trade group said the consultant's sampling was too limited and hardly representative.

"If day-trading firms want to become part of the mainstream, they need to play by the same rules the rest of Wall Street follows," said Peter Hildreth, president of the association, which represents securities regulators in the 50 states, Canada and Mexico.

"If they don't get their act together they will be under increasing regulatory pressure," said Hildreth, who is New Hampshire's director of securities regulation.

The report said there are now 62 day-trading firms operating with hundreds of offices around the country — serving roughly 4,000 to 5,000 traders.

These firms provide their trader-customers with computers and high-speed hookups to trading networks. They charge commissions for each trade.

Day traders ride the tiniest ups and downs of the stock markets, squeezing profits by buying and selling shares rapidly.

The traders, many of whom have abandoned their regular jobs, are distinct from the 5 million or so amateur investors who occasionally trade on the Internet at home or at work.

The state regulators hired an independent consultant, Ronald L. Johnson of Palm Harbor, Fla., to look at one firm — All-Tech Investment Group Inc. Barton shot some of his victims at All-Tech's Atlanta office.

Johnson, who based his analysis on a sampling of accounts at All-Tech, concluded that 70 percent of all day traders will lose money.

Only 11.5 percent of traders demonstrated the ability to do profitable short-term trading, according to Johnson's analysis.

In a telephone interview, Harvey Houtkin, founder and chief executive of All-Tech, dismissed Johnson's study as "a self-serving piece of garbage."

Houtkin said his firm's customers have to have at least $25,000 to invest and must demonstrate competency in trading. The company's Web site contains a warning about the risks, but he said many customers are not warned directly.

"Our clients are very sophisticated, relatively well-heeled, they know what they're doing," he said. "To think that these people don't understand risk is almost insulting."

The Electronic Traders Association, an industry group of day traders and online traders, also issued a statement questioning Johnson's study, saying that it "focuses on only one branch office of 287 branches of one firm."

All-Tech, the statement said, "was not a member of ETA. No one branch office is representative of the industry."

Even so, the Electronic Traders Association also released a set of "ethical principles" for its member firms that it said addressed many of the issues in the NASAA report.

In their investigation of a dozen day-trading firms, the regulators contended the companies often lured investors with deceptive advertising about a high success rate and potential wealth, accepted people as customers who weren't suited for day trading and didn't have enough money to invest, improperly loaned money to customers and failed to keep accurate records.

In many cases, the report said, customers at day-trading firms loaned each other money, encouraged to do so by the firms.

"Some day traders ... commonly trade beyond their means," the report said.

James H. Lee, head of the Electronic Traders Association, maintains that most day traders make money. Some firms claim success rates of 60 percent to 70 percent or higher.

State regulators already have cracked down on several day-trading firms. Since last fall, Massachusetts has filed or settled complaints against seven firms. In Texas, authorities closed two firms accused of operating without state licenses.

In their report, the regulators urged the day-trading industry to more closely screen potential investors and more fully disclose the risks of the practice.

The National Association of Securities Dealers, which governs the Nasdaq Stock Market, recently approved such a rule — requiring firms to disclose the risks to customers before they open accounts.

In addition to the disclosure rule, the state regulators said the NASD also should adopt a rule specifically prohibiting day-trading firms from promoting and arranging loans among their customers, even though the activity already violates existing laws.

Investigator says suspect wrote about Trench Coat Mafia

CONYERS, Ga. (AP) — A note found under the bed of the 15-year-old boy accused of wounding six classmates at his high school in May referred to his "brothers and sisters" in the Columbine High School group called the Trench Coat Mafia, an investigator testified Monday.

Georgia Bureau of Investigation agent Gary Nicholson said the handwritten note in a notebook was found along with three typewritten sheets of bomb-making instructions taken from the Internet.

"One big question I leave behind for you to find is why," said the note, read by Nicholson during a juvenile court hearing for T.J. Solomon. "But for the sake of my brothers and sisters related to the Trench Coat Mafia, those answers will have to remain out of the public eye."

The two gunmen who killed 13 people and then themselves at Columbine High in Littleton, Colo., on April 20 were members of the Trench Coat Mafia, a group of students who considered themselves outcasts in the school social scene.

This is the first time a connection has been raised between Solomon and the Columbine gunmen, Dylan Klebold, 17, and Eric Harris, 18.

The juvenile court hearing, which is being held to determine whether Solomon should be tried as an adult, was expected to end Tuesday with a ruling from Judge William Schneider.

Solomon faces 21 charges, including aggravated assault and weapons violations, in the May 20 shootings in the commons area at Heritage High School in Conyers, 20 miles east of Atlanta. He could be sentenced to five years in detention if Schneider decides to keep the case in juvenile court. If convicted in Superior Court, Solomon could face 351 years in prison.

CASA DE AMIGOS
35th Anniversary

I began as a volunteer organizing and teaching crafts for the Senior Program at Casa de Amigos. We wove place mats, made refrigerator magnets, polished stones and set them, painted ceramics, painted on glass, made Christmas tree ornaments and all kinds of decorations for the seniors' homes.

When an opening for a volunteer coordinator came a year after I had been volunteering, I applied. The years from 1984 through 1988 that I served as a volunteer coordinator for Casa de Amigos were fulfilling and fun. We had up to six staff members quartered in a 12' X 14' room. For all our close quarters, I never remember a disagreement between any of us sharing the room. At Christmas, we also had the added challenge of maneuvering around waist deep piles of children's gifts that people generously donated for us to distribute. There was no other place to sort them.

Alice Brown

The homemaker educator, Liz Valenzuela, shared the office but spent most of her time in another room where she taught homemaking and parenting skills. That room also served as a craft room, a board meeting room, a staff meeting room, a sewing room, a ceramics room, and a special party room. The Director of Education also shared the small office with me. Judy Morris was the Director of Education at that time. I tried to do my work early in the morning because Judy became very busy helping with the after-school tutoring program. The vans arrived with loads of children from either DeZavala or Crockett Elementary Schools. Margaret Hernandez picked up the children from the schools and took them home after tutoring. At that time we had several oil companies that donated employee time for those willing to spend an hour and a half of their work day, one day a week, at Casa de Amigos helping a child who needed extra attention with his/her reading skills. Those volunteers also gave much love to the children they tutored. We had many faithful volunteers who tutored for many years.

When the after-school tutoring ended, the partitions were quickly pushed aside and the room that held the senior citizens in the day and the school children immediately after school was then set up for evening GED and ESL classes. Our daytime and evening ESL and GED teachers and coordinators shared our little office as their base of operations.

Next door to that one small office on the far west end of the building was the library. A group of senior citizens used it for a prayer meeting room. I loved to hear them praying together, but as the meetings proceeded, their prayers grew louder and louder. My desk faced the library wall. The prayer meetings often became so loud that all I could do was join in and say the "amen" to their prayers from my office.

As always, we worked within a tight budget. When I proposed preparing a nice printed newsletter to replace the mimeographed one, we were not sure the budget could be stretched to cover printing and mailing costs. It was decided that we would sell advertisements on the back of the Casa Caller to offset printing costs. I recruited the first advertisers for that back sheet. When I receive my Casa Caller, I see many of the same advertisers supporting that newsletter fifteen years later. In those days, we only mailed out 400 newsletters. The rest were counted out by the size of various congregations and put into the trunk of my car. I personally delivered them to the many churches that supported Casa de Amigos.

In all, the years spent at Casa de Amigos were memorable and fun. I always had a satisfied feeling of helping others to help themselves.

Missions end 'Hounds streak at six

■ RockHounds head to Sun City for critical five-game series with Diablos.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland RockHounds' longest winning streak of the season ended at six at Christensen Stadium Monday night in a 7-3 loss to the San Antonio Missions, but there is still a major pennant race going on in the wild Texas League West.

El Paso won the first game of a doubleheader Monday in El Paso against West leading Wichita. The second game was headed into extra innings at press time. If El Paso managed to sweep both of those games, Midland would move to within 1 1/2 games of Wichita while El Paso would be just two out and San Antonio just 2 1/2 games back.

Midland travels to El Paso for a short five-game road trip today and returns to Midland next Sunday where those Wranglers will arrive in what looks like a series that will add to the already steamy Dog Days of August.

On Monday at the Rock Yard, Midland had the broom in hand, apparently set for a five-game sweep of the Missions, but pitcher Luke Prokopec and shortstop Rich Saitta had other ideas.

Prokopec (5-10) let the first three 'Hounds he faced score, but then pitched six consecutive scoreless innings as the Missions dug out from the 3-0 start by Midland, mainly on the bat of Saitta, who went 4-for-4 on the night with four RBIs.

Saitta, who is listed as 5-foot-10 and 170 pounds, probably can't reach any of those figures. He looks like a small match stick out at shortstop. But what he can do is wield a pesky bat as he moved his average above .300 with his perfect night at the plate.

Saitta drove in a run with a single in the fourth and then gave the Missions a 4-3 lead in the sixth inning with a two-run single. San Antonio never trailed after that, but Saitta added an RBI double in the eighth just for good measure.

"That (going 4-for-4) was a first for me this year," Saitta said. "The first couple of times at the plate, I was just trying to put the ball into play and they fell in for me.

"After the first four games against those guys (Midland), we needed this one. It turns out to be a big win for us because we're still in the race after losing four in a row.

"You don't like to lose four in a row at home or on the road to anyone, but this turns out to be a big game. We're chasing both Wichita and Midland and we're still close. We've got Midland at our place for the last five games of the season, so this could get really interesting."

After giving up three first inning runs, Prokopec retired the next seven Midland batters in order. He faced the minimum in the second, fifth and sixth innings. Midland stranded nine runners on the night, leaving two runners at third base and two on in the ninth.

Midland scored three quick runs of Prokopec in the first as Tim Garland doubled and scored on a single by Justin Bowles. Adam Piatt singled and Mark Bellhorn walked before Prokopec got his first out by sending T.R. Marcinczyk down on strikes.

HALL OF FAME GAME

'Boys welcome back Browns

Cleveland wins NFL exhibition contest, 20-17

By Tom Withers
AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio — As the opening kickoff toppled end over end, three painful years of life without pro football stopped in Cleveland.

The Browns were back on the field, back in the NFL and back in front of the same fans who couldn't say goodbye to them.

Just yards from the Hall of Fame's doors, and in the city where pro football was born, the new Cleveland Browns' rebirth became reality Monday night with a 20-17 overtime victory against the Dallas Cowboys in the Hall of Fame Game.

"Somebody pinch me, I must be dreaming," Bobby Johnson of Massillon yelled as the game kicked off.

Phil Dawson kicked a 20-yard field goal with 8:06 remaining in overtime for the Browns, who capped an emotional day with a victory.

The winning drive was set up by rookie cornerback Daylon McCutcheon's second interception.

Browns rookie quarterback Tim Couch dazzled in his pro debut as the Browns, the NFL's first expansion team with a history, began a new football era in Cleveland.

Couch, the No. 1 overall pick in April's college draft whom the Browns hope will eventually lead them to a Super Bowl title, looked like a seasoned pro in his first NFL game. He completed 11 of 17 passes for 137 yards and a touchdown.

After replacing starter Ty Detmer early in the second quarter, Couch overthrew his first attempt before completing 10 straight. He and rookie Kevin Johnson hooked up for 24-yard scoring play in the second quarter, giving the Browns a 14-7 lead.

Jason Garrett threw two TD passes for Dallas, which rested most of its regulars after the first quarter. Troy Aikman finished 9-for-11 for 85 yards in limited action.

But whether they had won or lost, the night belonged to Cleveland and the Browns, whose first win was also the first game as a head coach for Chris Palmer.

Browns fans hadn't been able to cheer their beloved team since Dec. 17, 1995, the final game at Cleveland Stadium after former owner Art Modell announced he was moving his team to Baltimore.

But once Modell left and the shock wore off, Cleveland fought back and convinced the NFL to bring a team back in 1999. The league also agreed to keep the new team's nickname, colors and history the same.

To showcase the Browns' return, the league switched this year's Hall of Fame Game from Saturday to Monday night so a national TV audience could see the new Browns' debut.

"It's a proud night for the NFL and Cleveland," commissioner Paul Tagliabue said moments before kickoff. "Now the tradition and

Lukas joins other racing greats in Hall

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. — "Lucky" Lukas? No way.

D. Wayne Lukas has conditioned more champions than any other thoroughbred trainer, won a record 13 Breeders Cup races and amassed more than $200 million in career purse earnings — but don't call him lucky.

"I don't believe in the luck factor," Lukas said Monday, moments after being inducted into the National Museum of Racing's Hall of Fame. "If you have to depend on luck in this game, you're gonna get beat a lot."

Also inducted Monday were jockey Russell Baze and thoroughbred racehorses Exceller, Miesque and Gun Bow.

The list of Lukas' achievements is long enough to line a racetrack. Highlights include receiving the Eclipse Award as the nation's top trainer four times, winning the Belmont Stakes three times and winning 12 Triple Crown races. His most recent Triple Crown victories came this year, when Charismatic won the Derby and the Preakness.

Lukas has led the nation in earnings 14 of the last 16 years, and his 1998 mark of $17.8 million is a record that still stands.

With the ceremony spotlight centered squarely on him, Lukas, 63, chose to share the glory with a half-dozen assistants who gathered around him onstage.

"Those records would never have happened without these guys," Lukas said, his voice shaking. "You guys have propped me up, carried me. And I know I wasn't easy to work for."

"There's a tradeout here, and I got the best in the trade — just like I do every time I trade (horses) with you guys," he said, grinning at the other trainers in the audience.

His assistants joked about Lukas' short temper and "expletive-laced tirades," but they were heavy in their praise.

"So many things have changed in our industry because of Wayne Lukas," said former Lukas assistant Mark Hennig. "So many trainers never run multiple divisions, and he's shown us the reality that any race is just one flight away."

Even with his success, Lukas said it "hasn't always been blue skies and clear sailing in my career."

"I've been solidly criticized by certain people in the industry and the media who don't always agree with what we do. But I make no apologies for what we've tried to do," Lukas said.

"It's my nature to push the envelope every time," he said. "If you want a coach who wants to walk the ball up the court, you better get another guy, because we're going to run and press all the time."

Armstrong says hometown is his family

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Lance Armstrong kicked cancer and won the Tour de France. Yet on Monday, he was humbled by the outpouring of support from his hometown.

"The city of Austin ... when I was diagnosed and became sick in this city, they became my family," Armstrong said.

"They were the ones that reached out. They knew Lance as the cancer patient. Now, hopefully they know me as Lance the cancer patient who won the Tour de France.

"This is all a little overwhelming," he said.

Thousands of Austinites withstood temperatures of up to 101 degrees for an evening downtown parade in Armstrong's honor.

Armstrong, 27, shocked the cycling world last month when he capped a remarkable comeback from testicular cancer that had spread to his lungs and brain to win cycling's most prestigious and grueling event.

Organized by the city and the Lance Armstrong Foundation for cancer research, the public was invited to ride bicycles in the parade in front of the floats.

Most of the cyclists wore yellow — the signature color of the Tour de France leader — and tied yellow balloons to their bicycles.

Armstrong brought up the rear of the parade, but he rode in a car with his wife, Kristin. The only yellow he wore was on a baseball cap.

Loud applause broke out when Armstrong appeared, and many along the parade route cheered, "Way to go, Lance."

"I've followed the Tour for 12 years," said Randy Lindberg, 26, an Austin furniture salesman and one of about 4,000 cyclists who lined up an hour early to start the parade. Lindberg said he rode his bike 10 miles in the heat to get to the parade.

"I'm not a native Texan, but it's good to see a hometown guy do well."

Yellow banners hung along Congress Avenue, which cuts through downtown Austin, and "Vive le Lance" was the catch-phrase of the day on yellow hand-held fans and placards.

"His story is truly a fairy tale," said Debi Ames, an accountant who was one of thousands to stretch along 15 city blocks, hoping to find some shade from which to watch the parade.

"This man never gave up. I want my daughter to grow inspired by determination like that," Ms. Ames said.

The parade lasted about 45 minutes and ended at a music festival at a downtown park.

In an afternoon news conference, Mayor Kirk Watson — also a testicular cancer survivor — presented Armstrong with the city's Distinguished Service Medal.

Watson said he gave the award to Armstrong, "For your private survival and your public spirit so that others may live their dream."

Armstrong also met Gov. George W. Bush, the frontrunner for the Republican presidential nomination, presenting him with one of the yellow jerseys he wore dur-

Blue Jays bomb Rangers, 19-4

Associated Press

ARLINGTON— The Toronto Blue Jays set a team record with 25 hits, including Carlos Delgado's fifth home run in four games, in a 19-4 rout Monday night over the Texas Rangers.

Shawn Green, who drove in five runs, Homer Bush and Tony Batista also homered for Toronto.

Green, Bush and Jacob Brumfield each had four hits as Toronto broke the club record of 24 set on June 26, 1978, against Baltimore.

The 25 hits were the most ever allowed by Texas. Toronto matched the AL high for hits this year done by Baltimore on June 13 at Atlanta.

Rangers reliever Doug Davis made his major league debut and was tagged for 10 runs and 11 hits in 2 1-3 innings. Green hit a three-run shot in the sixth on Davis' third pitch, and the rookie later gave up a three-run homer to Batista and a two-run drive by Bush.

■ AL Roundup

Delgado's homer off Mike Morgan (12-7) in the first inning was his fifth in the series, matching a Texas record for most home runs by an opponent in a set. John Mayberry of Kansas City had five in a three-game series on July 1-3, 1975.

It was Delgado's 31st of the season and 13th career against Texas, most ever by a Rangers opponent.

The 19 runs were the most Toronto had ever scored against Texas, and the most allowed by the Rangers this season.

Blue Jays starter Joey Hamilton (5-6) allowed three earned runs on five hits in five innings.

Ivan Rodriguez hit his 23rd homer in the Texas first. Rafael Palmeiro hit his 28th homer to lead off the third inning.

Royals 5, Red Sox 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jeff Suppan pitched a four-hitter against his former team and Jermaine Dye homered twice as the Kansas City Royals beat the Boston Red Sox 5-2 Monday night.

Johnny Damon had a single, double and triple and three RBIs as Kansas City stopped a four-game losing streak.

Suppan (7-6), taken by Arizona after the Red Sox didn't protect him in the 1997 expansion draft, allowed solo home runs by Trot Nixon and Troy O'Leary.

Mark Portugal (7-9) allowed all five runs — four earned — and seven hits in six innings.

Devil Rays 10, Orioles 9

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Paul Sorrento homered for the second straight game and Tampa Bay won its sixth straight against Baltimore.

Sorrento hit his ninth homer in the fifth inning, a two-run shot off Jason Johnson (3-6), who allowed nine runs and 12 hits in four innings in his first start against his former team.

Rookie Ryan Rupe (6-6) gave up five runs and five hits in five innings. Roberto Hernandez pitched the ninth for his 31st save.

Matos adds controversy, spark in Braves victory

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Pascual Matos, denied a three-run homer when the umpires reversed a call, followed with a two-run single in the eighth inning for his first major league hit, giving the Atlanta Braves a 5-3 victory over the Houston Astros on Monday night.

Matos was called up from Triple-A Richmond last weekend when Eddie Perez dropped his appeal of four-game suspension. Though certain to go back to the minors after Perez returns, Matos provided one of the most memorable moments of the season after entering the game when the Braves used a pinch-runner for starting catcher Greg Myers.

Matos, who was 0-for-7 in his major league career, batted against Doug Henry (1-2) with one out in the eighth and runners at second and third in a 3-3 game.

On the first pitch, Matos sent a towering drive down the left-field line that was ruled a homer by third-base umpire Larry Vanover.

While Matos celebrated in the dugout, the Astros argued the call with the entire umpiring crew. After a brief discussion, they called Matos back from the dugout, saying the ball had hooked just outside the foul pole.

Television replays were inconclusive, but Braves manager Bobby Cox, with a good view of the ball from the first-base dugout, argued only briefly.

Matos wasn't through, however. He lined a single past a diving Russ Johnson at third, scoring Ryan Klesko and Andruw Jones to break the tie.

John Rocker worked the ninth for his 23rd save.

Braves starter John Smoltz had a chance to pick up his first win since June 18, despite giving up 11 hits in seven innings. Trailing 2-1, Atlanta rallied for two runs in the seventh on Gerald Williams' sacrifice fly and a two-out single by Chipper Jones.

But Rudy Seanez (6-1) couldn't hold the lead in the eighth. Carl Everett led off with a double, tagged up and moved to third on a fly to right, then scored on Paul Bako's sacrifice fly.

■ NL Roundup

Dodgers 9, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Kevin Brown (13-6) allowed two hits in seven scoreless innings before leaving with a blister on a finger on his right hand.

Orel Hershiser (11-9) allowed three runs, six hits and five walks in five innings. Eric Karros had four RBIs.

Reds 4, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Denny Neagle (3-3) limited his former teammates to one hit in seven-plus innings — his longest start in an injury-interrupted season. Scott Williamson finished up the two-hitter for his 16th save.

The Reds are 37-16 on the road, a record better than the home mark of every major league team except Oakland, which was 40-17 going into Monday night's game.

Mike Cameron had a two run single, his fifth hit in two games, in a three-run fifth against Todd Ritchie (10-8).

Cardinals 12, Phillies 6

PHILADELPHIA — Fernando Tatis hit his third grand slam of the season.

Tatis, who had hit his only two previous grand slams in the same inning April 23 at Los Angeles, hit his third on Billy Brewer's first pitch in a five-run fourth.

J.D. Drew, the Cardinals outfielder who is hated in Philadelphia because he refused to sign with the Phillies after the 1997 draft, did not play due to a bruised right hand but was booed loudly during batting practice.

Ron Gant homered twice for the Phillies.

Kent Mercker (5-4) allowed four hits in the first inning, but only two after that. Steve Schrenk (1-2) gave up six earned runs and seven hits in 2 1-3 innings.

Diamondbacks 10, Cubs 7

CHICAGO — Matt Williams keyed a six-run eighth with a go-ahead RBI single off Scott Sanders (4-6) as Arizona overcame Sammy Sosa's 43rd homer and opened a 5 1/2-game lead over San Francisco in the NL West.

Omar Daal (11-6) won for the eighth time in 10 decisions, giving up two runs and four hits in seven innings.

Marlins 5, Giants 4

MIAMI — Mike Lowell hit his first career grand slam and Dave Berg hit an RBI single off John Johnstone (4-5) in the ninth as Florida rallied from a 4-0 deficit.

Lowell's slam tied the game in the eighth, spoiling what would have been a triumphant return for Livan Hernandez, traded by the Marlins last month.

Jesus Sanchez (3-4) got two outs for the win, getting Mueller to fly out with the bases loaded to end the ninth.

Expos 8, Padres 0

MONTREAL — Jeremy Powell (1-4) allowed six hits in eight innings and Jose Vidro hit his first career grand slam as Montreal won for the eighth time in 10 games.

Matt Clement (5-11) allowed five runs and six hits in five-plus innings and is 0-4 in his last seven outings.

Brewers 7, Rockies 6

MILWAUKEE — Mark Loretta singled home the winning run in the ninth inning to give Milwaukee the win.

Dave Veres (2-4) gave up a leadoff single in the ninth to Marquis Grissom, who was sacrificed to second. After an intentional walk to Jose Valentin, Veres walked Alex Ochoa to load the bases.

Loretta, who went 3-for-5, then singled to left, scoring Grissom.

Angel Echevarria hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth off Bob Wickman (3-5) to tie it at 6. It was the ninth homer of the year for Echevarria, who went 3-for-4.

Umpires strike still a possibility

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Baseball umpires may still strike this season but their union head told them to wait until the National Labor Relations Board rules on their unfair labor practice complaint.

"At about the same time that we withdrew the resignations, baseball engaged in a series of very, very serious unfair labor practices that could create a strike," union head Richie Phillips said Monday. "The law is that if the unfair labor practices the other side is engaged in are of a very serious nature, that could legitimize a strike in the face of a no-strike clause."

Umpires, not waiting for the Dec. 31 expiration of their labor contract and wanting to force an early start to negotiations, announced July 14 that they would quit en masse.

But that plan collapsed 13 days later after 27 umpires either refused to resign or withdrew their resignations. The rest of umpires then withdrew, but baseball hired 25 new umpires from the minors and accepted 22 resignations, effective Sept. 2.

Umpires then filed an unfair labor practice charge last week. The NLRB is not expected to rule until next month.

The possibility of a strike was first reported Monday by Newsweek, but Phillips said he has argued against a walkout.

"Many of our members are interested in it. Many of our members just want to go home," he said. "I've counseled them not to go home. I've counseled them to put their faith in the National Labor Relations Board and the National Labor Relations Act."

Phillips admitted the union was concerned that some umpires wouldn't go along with a strike.

"It's too soon to be talking about that," he said. "I am not at all focused on an exacerbation of the situation. That doesn't mean that it won't happen, but first I have to try to get it resolved."

Umpires also filed a lawsuit against baseball in federal court in Philadelphia. Owners plan to file a motion to dismiss sometime this week.

Douglas out; Tyson searches for opponent in comeback fight

By Tim Dahlberg
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS — Scratch Buster Douglas from the list of possible opponents for Mike Tyson's latest comeback bid.

Despite published reports to the contrary, Tyson's promoter said Monday that Douglas would not be Tyson's opponent for his first fight since his release from a Maryland prison.

That leaves Tyson still searching for an opponent for the scheduled Oct. 2 fight, with the list of possible fighters now apparently down to 33-year-old Orlin Norris and 30-year-old Zeljko Mavrovic.

Promoter Dan Goossen said that Douglas, the first fighter to beat Tyson, was not in proper physical condition to get ready in time for the fight. Douglas reportedly weighs more than 300 pounds and would have been closely scrutinized by Nevada boxing officials before being allowed to fight in the state.

"Buster Douglas is not in fighting shape and will not be by October," Goossen said. "Mike is anxious to return to the ring and is looking to fight someone that will be physically and mentally ready to fight in October. At this point, Douglas does not fit that description."

Tyson's manager, Shelly Finkel, is now trying to sign either Norris or Mavrovic for the comeback fight. If he can't find an opponent within the next two weeks, though, the Oct. 2 date at the MGM Grand hotel-casino in Las Vegas could be in jeopardy.

The 39-year-old Douglas had emerged as an attractive opponent for Tyson, who was eager to fight the man who knocked him out in the 10th round on Feb. 11, 1990, after entering the ring as a 42-1 underdog.

Douglas lost the heavyweight titles to Evander Holyfield and was hospitalized in a diabetic coma after his weight soared to more than 400 pounds.

After leaving the hospital, Douglas began exercising and this led to his return to boxing. Since coming back in 1996, he has won eight of nine fights against mostly mediocre opponents but was knocked out in the first round by Lou Savarese on June 25, 1998.

Norris, the older brother of former junior middleweight champion Terry Norris, is a former cruiserweight champion. Despite 26 knockouts on his 49-5 record, Norris is defense-oriented and his fights are often devoid of action.

At about 220 pounds, Norris would be closer to Tyson's weight than would Douglas. Norris would have much less of a height advantage over Tyson than Mavrovic, who is 6-foot-4.

Mavrovic (27-1, 22 knockouts), a former European champion from Croatia, is an aggressive fighter. He lost a WBC title bid to Lennox Lewis on a unanimous decision last Sept. 26.

Five grand slams in one night for 1st time

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

Five grand slams were hit Monday night, the first time that's happened in 129 years of major league baseball

Fernando Tatis of the St. Louis Cardinals and Jose Vidro of the Montreal Expos got it started early. Mike Lowell of the Florida Marlins connected, Bernie Williams of the New York Yankees followed and Jay Buhner of the Seattle Mariners set the record.

Four grand slams had been hit in one day many times since major league baseball began in 1871, but never five. The last time four had been hit was July 28, 1998.

This has been a season of slams in the big leagues. The five raised the majors' total to 96 — the record of 141 was set in 1996.

After becoming the first player to hit two slams in the same inning on April 23 at Los Angeles, Tatis hit the third of his career on Billy Brewer's first pitch in the fourth during a 12-6 win at Philadelphia.

With three slams this year, Tatis tied Jim Bottomley (1925) and Keith Hernandez (1977) for the Cardinals' record.

Vidro connected on his first pitch from Carlos Almanzar in the sixth inning of the Expos' 8-0 win over visiting San Diego. It was his first grand slam in the majors and Montreal's first since last Aug. 27.

Lowell hit his first career grand slam on a 3-1 pitch in the eighth inning against San Francisco's John Johnstone, who had just relieved starter Livan Hernandez. The home run tied the score at 4, and Florida went on to beat the Giants 5-4.

Williams' sixth career slam came at Oakland on a full-count pitch by reliever Mike Oquist, capping an eight-run second inning that gave the New York Yankees an 8-0 lead over the Athletics. Williams started toward first after taking a 2-2 pitch for a ball, then returned to the plate as his teammates laughed in the Yankees dugout.

Buhner connected in the sixth inning at Safeco Field on a 3-1 pitch from John Snyder of the Chicago White Sox, giving the Mariners a 6-3 lead. The three grand slams in one day tied the AL record, last accomplished last Aug. 14.

There have been 57 slams in the AL this season and 39 in the NL. Both leagues set records in 1996, with 81 slams in the AL and 60 in the NL.

L.A. Coliseum Commission meeting produces mixed results

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The president of the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum Commission tried to put a positive spin on Monday's special meeting called to discuss the stalled effort to bring an NFL expansion team to Los Angeles.

It wasn't easy.

"Yeah, there's a lot that was accomplished today," Sheldon H. Sloan said. He declined to elaborate.

"I'm not going to tell you. We have better things to do than sit around and talk for two or three hours (if it's not productive)," he said.

"You can see that there is support for ongoing discussions. I have cautious optimism. Right now, I have a confidence that everybody's going to sit down during this quiet time and think about it."

Zev Yaroslavsky, another member of the panel, spoke in much different terms following the two-hour, closed-door meeting at the Coliseum offices.

"I think it's fourth-and-long," Yaroslavsky said. "It's a long shot at this point. Right now, we're farther away than we've ever been."

And, Yaroslavsky might have added, the clock continues to tick.

Negotiations focusing on a remodeled Coliseum as home to the NFL's 32nd franchise broke down last week, with the league saying it would consider other potential stadium sites.

The stieking point in negotiations was over public money the NFL wants for parking and other improvements to the area.

The NFL decided in March to grant Los Angeles an expansion team, but set a Sept. 15 deadline for details to be finalized, with Houston to be considered if that doesn't happen.

"I wouldn't bet the farm, if I owned it," Yaroslavsky said. "I wouldn't necessarily bet against it. This thing has more lives than a cat. There are a lot of keys, there are a lot of egos."

When asked if he thought it was possible for the NFL to come to an agreement with another venue, Yaroslavsky replied, "I don't know of any. I may be wrong. It'll be hard to do it here."

Yaroslavsky, a Los Angeles County supervisor, has spoken out against public money going to the project.

The commission issued a statement championing the cause of Los Angeles for an expansion team and expressing hope that the NFL "will come to recognize the benefits of a Coliseum-based solution as it continues to review its options."

The statement also mentioned a letter sent to NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue by Eli Broad, head of the Coliseum effort, last week that proposed some public funding.

"While I do not specifically endorse this, or any other proposal made since that date, the commission recognizes that aspects of the proposal have merit and deserve further discussion," Sloan said in the statement.

Disney spokeswoman calls possible sale of Angels rumor

BURBANK, Calif. — The Walt Disney Co. said reports it is considering selling the Anaheim Angels are rumor.

"We do not comment on rumor," Chris Castro, director of corporate communications for Disney, said from her Burbank office.

Citing an unidentified baseball source, the Los Angeles Times reported Monday that Disney is considering a sale but hasn't spoken with potential buyers. The New York Times had a similar report Sunday.

"I think there are some thoughts that they would like to sell," the Los Angeles paper quoted its source as saying. "But I'm also not sure that they are not changing their mind day-to-day.

"I think they are in the internal debate stage and haven't gone so far as to listen to offers or talk to prospective buyers. I think it is a situation that should be watched closely."

The Angels had high hopes entering the season and a high payroll as well — a franchise-record $60 million. But they have fallen out of contention in the AL West during the last month and trailed first-place Texas by 20 games going into Monday night.

Man struck, killed by lightning during baseball game

THOMASVILLE, Ga. — A Thomas College student was struck by lightning and killed while pitching in a scrimmage baseball game.

Ben Jackson, 22, was hit about 5 p.m. EDT Sunday as he stood on the pitcher's mound at the Brookwood School, Thomas County Emergency Management Agency officials said. He died about an hour later at Archbold Hospital.

Jackson had one more semester remaining before graduating from Thomas College, a four-year private school.

Enqvist survives first-round scare at ATP Championship

MASON, Ohio — Thirteenth-seeded Thomas Enqvist of Sweden survived a challenge from hard-serving qualifier Wayne Arthurs of Australia on Monday to win 7-5, 7-6 (7-1) in the first round of the $2.45 million ATP Championship.

"I've been struggling lately, and my confidence maybe isn't where it should be," Enqvist said. "I knew before the match that he has a tough serve. There were lots of times when I'd get to deuce, and he'd hit a couple of serves and the game would be over. I felt that I played pretty good from the baseline."

Eleventh-seeded Tommy Haas of Germany stifled an early challenge from 19-year-old Xavier Malisse of Belgium, the tournament's youngest player, and pulled away to a 7-5, 6-2 win.

Haas broke Malisse at 5-5 in the first set to gain the advantage, and he enjoyed three service breaks while winning six consecutive games in the second set.

"I got in yesterday, so I didn't have much time to prepare," Haas, 21, said. "We were both feeling each other out, and we both missed a lot of balls early. I started to get some confidence in my shots in the second set, and I started playing the game I normally play, which is more risky."

Earlier, MaliVai Washington, the 1996 Wimbledon finalist who is trying to come back from two left knee surgeries, lost to France's Arnaud Di Pasquale, 6-4, 6-3.

Di Pasquale will face third-seeded Andre Agassi in the next round.

Giants' Strahan gets high-dollar deal; Anderson still holding out with Falcons

Associated Press

Mike Strahan, the New York Giants' all-Pro defensive end, got the contract extension he wanted.

Edgerrin James, Lamar King and L.J. Shelton, three of the NFL's unsigned first-round draft choices, continued to maneuver.

Strahan, the defensive end whose 29 sacks the past two seasons are the most in the NFL, signed a four-year, $32 million contract on Monday that could make him the NFL's highest-paid defensive player.

Only Dallas cornerback Deion Sanders will make more than Strahan, averaging $10.3 million annually. To earn that, Sanders must play more than 70 percent of the Cowboys' defensive plays and he's currently sidelined after surgery on a toe that kept him out much of last season.

Strahan, who at 27 is entering his seventh season, was a second-round pick of the Giants in 1993. He will receive a $12 million signing bonus and $400,000 in salary this year, $4.6 million in 2000 and then $7 million and $8 million the last two years of the deal.

Strahan was entering the final year of a contract he signed three years ago. He told the Giants in the offseason he wanted a new deal done before the end of training camp.

"I am extremely happy. They made a commitment to me and I think we made a commitment to each other," Strahan said after signing the contract between practices at the University at Albany. "I am happy to be in New York. I love New York and never wanted to go anywhere in the first place. So I'm glad they were able to get an agreement."

James, meanwhile, arrived in Indianapolis with his agent Leigh Steinberg in hopes of coming to terms with the Colts. He was the fourth overall draft pick and is already figured as the starter at running back in place of Marshall Faulk, traded to St. Louis.

"I decided I wasn't going to sit at home in California and Edgerrin wasn't going to be in Florida as training camp progresses," Steinberg said. "I'm hoping that since we have come so far, we can narrow the gap and get Edgerrin into camp. Thus far, I view our talks as constructive and now is the time to get this resolved."

Team president Bill Polian said the two sides are not any closer to an agreement.

"The young man is holding out. They haven't made any movement off a ridiculous number, which is $11 million to sign for five years," Polian said. "That's not acceptable, that's not do-able under any circumstances. They haven't made any movement off voidable years."

Shelton remained a holdout with the Cardinals, who are threatening to pencil him out of their plans for this season.

"When and if L.J. Shelton comes in, anything we get out of him is a bonus," coach Vince Tobin said. "We've got to get ready for a football season. I've been around too long to worry about something I don't have."

In Shelton's absence, Matt Joyce is the No. 1 left tackle, but Anthony Clement, a second-year player who missed virtually all of last season with back surgery, has come on strong in training camp. Tobin said Shelton would really have to impress the coaching staff to get back in the mix when he finally agrees to a contract.

"If you're trying to make our football team, you need to be in camp," Tobin said. "You don't get significant playing time by where you're drafted. You get significant playing time by what you do on the field."

King, a defensive end who was Seattle's No. 1 choice, got the same sort of message.

"Right now, Lamar should be getting a little nervous," said Holmgren, the Seahawks' coach and general manager. "He's starting to slip behind everybody and you can't allow that to happen with a young player."

In training camp news:

Falcons

All-Pro running back Jamal Anderson, holding out of training camp in a bid for a new contract, plans to be at Furman University on Tuesday to meet with coach Dan Reeves.

While Reeves downplayed the meeting, it signaled a major break in the holdout that has kept Anderson off the field since camp began July 29.

Since he is under contract for this season, Anderson accumulated $60,000 in fines — $5,000 per day — as of Monday. The running back, set to make $2.6 million in the final year of his current deal, has been seeking a new five-year contract with a signing bonus of at least $8 million.

Also, defensive end Chuck Smith returned to practice for the first time since spraining a toe during the first day of training camp on July 29.

Panthers

The promising season of Carolina Panthers rookie cornerback Tony Booth ended with a knee injury that will require surgery and at least six months of rehabilitation.

Booth, a seventh-round draft choice who was getting rave reviews from coach George Seifert, injured his left knee during the team's morning practice. Tests showed a complete tear of both the anterior cruciate and medial collateral ligaments, Seifert said.

"He was obviously doing very well. It's a disappointment, an extreme disappointment not to have him this season," Seifert said. "A lot of players go through these types of things and go on to have great careers, so that's how we basically have to look at it."

Starting safety Mike Minter was knocked unconscious shortly before Booth's injury. Seifert said Minter likely would miss most of the exhibition season but should be ready for the Sept. 12 regular-season opener at New Orleans.

Dolphins

Running back J.J. Johnson, Miami's top draft pick, is expected to miss up to 10 days after straining his left hamstring in a weekend scrimmage.

Johnson, the first of Miami's two second-round draft picks, said he heard a "popping" sound as he went down after catching a 15-yard pass in Saturday's scrimmage against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Lions

Offensive lineman Aaron Gibson, Detroit's first-round draft pick, will undergo several weeks of rehabilitation on his injured shoulder.

Gibson, the 370-plus-pounder from Wisconsin, met with Dr. James Andrews, an Alabama-based orthopedist, on Monday morning and Andrews recommended rehabilitation, team spokesman Steve Reaven said.

He has a "50 percent chance to come back in and play" this season, coach Bobby Ross said.

The team feared Gibson, the 27th overall pick, would require surgery.

BROWNS: Couch throws TD pass

history can go on for another century."

Clad in brown and orange, some wearing jerseys with names like Kosar, Brown and Kelly stitched on their backs, Browns fans arrived early to tailgate in parking lots and on tree-lined side streets before walking to Fawcett Stadium, which was packed with a record 25,156 fans.

"We've waited three years for tonight," said Scott Moot, of Canton. "Nothing matters now, our Browns are back."

Even the Cowboys were happy to see the old orange helmets again.

"It's good to see the Dawg Pound back in the NFL," Aikman said.

The Browns had just 11 months to assemble a coaching staff and team, and before the game Cleveland president Carmen Policy, who won five Super Bowls in San Francisco, said he couldn't remember being as nervous.

"I think it's important we look like a professional team," Policy said. "I'd like to come out of tonight with the impression that we're not an expansion team on the field."

At times, the Browns looked like any first-year franchise. They committed three straight penalties on a drive in the first quarter, and were guilty of other silly infractions.

But Cleveland's defense, expected to carry the team, forced four turnovers. Corey Fuller picked off Aikman in the back of the end zone to stop one drive.

Capitalizing on an early fumble by Aikman, the Browns scored on a 1-yard dive by Terry Kirby in the first quarter to take a 7-0 lead. Seconds before Kirby went in, a large dog bone bounced off the turf in the end zone, a reminder of the Browns' days playing in front of the Dawg Pound at Cleveland Stadium.

Dallas tied it in the second quarter with Garrett throwing a 35-yard TD pass to MarTay Jenkins.

Phil Dawson kicked a 23-yarder in the third to tie it 17-all.

Danny Kight missed a 46-yard field goal attempt as time expired in regulation for the Browns.

After 3-year wait, Browns fans more than ready for football

By Rusty Miller

CANTON, Ohio — Usually an emotionless excuse to weed out marginal players and help get the rest in condition, Monday night's Hall of Fame exhibition game was different.

The debut of the expansion Cleveland Browns against the Dallas Cowboys caused a frenzy in this city of 84,000 that considers itself the birthplace of professional football.

They went wild when rookie quarterback Tim Couch threw his first touchdown pass. They cheered loudly when veteran linebacker Chris Spielman, a Canton native, was announced as a Cleveland starter. And they stuck around to the finish, when Daylon McCutcheon's second interception led to Phil Dawson's 20-yard field goal and a 20-17 Browns victory in overtime.

Cars pulling off the Hall of Fame exit from the nearby four-lane interstate were greeted by a man wearing Browns colors head to toe. He was offering seats for $200 a pop, and that was four hours before kickoff.

Despite a face value of $32, there were reports of tickets going for $800, such was the demand by long-suffering Cleveland fans to get into the 25,000-seat high school stadium just 50 miles from their home city.

His name sounded like something that might come out of the fanatical Browns cheering section called the Dawg Pound, but Mike Woofter was wearing a Dallas Cowboys jersey as he strolled in.

Even though Woofter's allegiance was clear, he said he still relished being on hand for the first game of the new Browns, three seasons after owner Art Modell moved the franchise to Baltimore.

"I felt for their fans when the team left," he said. "All that tradition. You don't mess with tradition like that."

Adding to the frenzy was the location. Massillon, just a few miles down the road, still hands out tiny footballs to each newborn baby in town.

"Football is life here," Woofter said, shaking his head.

Wearing a tie-dye design in brown and orange, Browns fan Andy Weyand said he had to pinch himself that the franchise was returning.

"I can't believe they're back already," he said. "Three years ago, 1999 seemed so far away."

Out in the tailgate area, where Browns fans started arriving 10 hours before kickoff, three hard-core local fans were working roasting pit to celebrate the return.

"That's a turkey on one end, beef on the other and that's Art in the middle," Scott Moot said. At the center of the spit was a big, plump pig.

It wasn't just the fans who were caught up. In his Hall of Fame induction speech Saturday, former Browns tight end Ozzie Newsome saluted the vocal followers of the New York Giants and Buffalo Bills. Then he shouted, "I want to give you an official welcome to the Dawg Pound!"

Game officials said they handed out roughly 500 credentials to reporters and photographers. For the first time, an auxiliary press box was set up in the nearby hall.

"I can't remember having more than 150 or 200 before," said Joe Horrigan, in charge of media for the Hall of Fame. "This is by far the most demanding game we've had."

A blimp and TV news helicopters hovered over the scene hours before the players took the field.

RACE: Baze was brief with remarks

(From 1C)

Baze was short with his remarks and blushed as he accepted the honor, which he called "an embarrassment of riches."

In his 25-year career, Baze has ridden 6,662 winners and earned more than $94.5 million in purses. He has also been the only rider to record 400 or more wins in each of the last seven years.

For the past four years, Baze has been awarded the Isaac Murphy Award, presented by the National Turf Writers Association to the jockey with the highest winning percentage.

"The reason I have been able to set those numbers that I have for the last couple of years is because I've been able to go out every day and do it," Baze said. "I've been blessed that I haven't been injured."

Exceller, who raced from 1975 to 1979, came from 22 lengths back to beat two Triple Crown winners in the 1 1/2-mile Jockey Club Gold Cup in 1978. Exceller won by a nose over Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew and Affirmed.

Miesque, who was based in Europe for her entire racing career, made two starts in the United States, won two Grade I races, and was voted two Eclipse Awards. She also won a total of eight Group I races in France and England.

Gun Bow raised eyebrows in 1964 when he defeated Kelso by 12 lengths at the Brooklyn Handicap, setting a track record of 1:59. That autumn, they split in two dramatic duels in the Aqueduct and Woodward Stakes. Gun Bow raced from 1963 until 1965 and earned $798,722.

"He assured me he washed it," Bush quipped.

"This man is one of the great sportsmen of the century," Bush said. "He rode them into the ground."

Armstrong said he'll compete in two mountain bike races in the next month and then start thinking about next year's Tour de France.

"The Tour is the biggest event in our sport," Armstrong said. "The encore is to try to win again."

Report: Underwood to report back to Minnesota Vikings training camp

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dimitrius Underwood said he will return to the Minnesota Vikings training camp after spending the last week trying to decide between his love for football and his obligation to the ministry, according to a report Monday night.

Underwood, the Vikings' first-round draft choice, said he decided to return Monday after having a 75-minute phone conversation with former Green Bay Packer Reggie White, an ordained minister, the Star Tribune of Minneapolis said in its online version.

Underwood said he would accept whatever consequences he might face from the Vikings, including suspension or termination of his contract. White encouraged Underwood to return.

"I totally understand what this young man has been going through, and he is to be commended for having the strength to go through all of this," White told the newspaper.

The 22-year-old defensive end walked out of the Minnesota Vikings training camp a week ago, leaving his family, his agent and team officials to speculate about his motive and whereabouts. The Star Tribune spoke with Underwood in a Philadelphia hotel lobby Sunday night while Vikings officials moved to cut ties with the first-round draft choice.

"Deep down in my heart, I know I was not called to do that kind of work," Underwood said of the ministry. "But recently, in the last month, I feel the Lord's been pulling me there. And I know that that is a huge conflict of interest, because what am I going to do in order to support my family?"

Stocks fall again as bond yields soar

By Elleen Glanton
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks struggled to another loss Monday as long-term interest rates soared to a 21-month high in the bond market.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 6.33 points to close at 10,707.70. The blue-chip index sputtered throughout the session, rising as many as 47 points and sinking as many as 30 from Friday's close.

Broader stock indicators were also lower. The Standard & Poor's 500 fell 2.45 to 1,297.84, and the Nasdaq composite index fell 28.99 to 2,518.98.

The Dow is now 4.5 percent below its record high, set just last month, and the Nasdaq is 12 percent below its record, also set July 16. Analysts are divided over whether the market's protracted sluggishness signals a broad correction, or if it's merely a step back from prices that had soared too high, too fast. Wall Street considers a drop of 10 percent to be a correction, or a pause in a rising market.

Arthur Hogan, chief market analyst at Jefferies & Co., said it's unlikely that the market will break out of its trading range until Aug. 24, when the Federal Reserve is expected to raise interest ratesfor a second time this summer, hoping to slow the growth of the nation's economy to a noninflationary pace.

"Their move is in the bag," he said. "But until they make that move, we'll see a lot more of this sideways action."

Fears of higher interest rates have pressured stocks and bonds for weeks, and bond prices plunged sharply on Monday, sending yields sharply higher. The yield on the 30-year Treasury bond climbed to 6.23 percent, the highest level since Nov. 4, 1997. With yields rising, bonds are becoming an attractive, less volatile alternative to stocks.

"Stocks can no longer count on a strong economy and lower interest rates," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Wells Fargo & Co. "Rising interest rates will damage economic growth and earnings expectations."

Russian President Boris Yeltsin kept world markets slightly off balance Monday after he fired his prime minister and the entire Cabinet. It's the fourth time in 17 months he has dismissed the government.

While the broad market sputtered, a flurry of deals and new products spurred some gains for computer-related companies. Advanced Micro Devices rose 1 13/16 to 19 3/16 after releasing a new computer microprocessor it says can outperform Intel's high-end chip.

Net2Phone Inc., a company that provides telephone service over the Internet, rose 3 7/8 to 20 3/8 after NBC agreed to take an ownership stake in exchange for prominent placement of Web site links.

Data General rose 4 1/4 to 17 7/16 after agreeing to be acquired by EMC Corp., a larger rival in the computer data-storage business. EMC fell 3 to 57.

As companies complete their preparations for the Year 2000, computer businesses are likely to thrive, Hogan said.

"Most industries have completed their preparedness, or they're close to doing so," he said. "These companies are doing well because there's going to be a lot of demand once that hurdle is cleared."

The sharp decline of the Nasdaq, which is dominated by technology stocks, may also indicate that those shares are ready to level out or improve, said Rao Chalasani, chief investment strategist at Everen Securities.

"The Nasdaq has taken the brunt of the market's decline and the Dow has bucked the trend," he said. "It may be the Dow's turn."

Also Monday, MCI WorldCom fell 3 13/16 to 77 7/16 after saying it will offer evening long-distance service for 5 cents a minute, matching a plan by rival Sprint. Analysts fear the price cuts will eventually harm earnings.

Crude rallies

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude rallied to its highest levels in 21 months on the New York Mercantile Exchange amid reports of an explosion at a Corpus Christi refinery.

The Citgo problem renewed concern about a recent string of refinery problems that have reduced production across the country, particularly to the key California market. Still, analysts said processing would see little impact.

Natural gas futures also rose in thin trading despite expectations for cooler temperatures in key consuming regions. The cooler weather likely would lower demand from utilities that power turbines up during heat spells as more consumers turn on air conditioners and fans.

September crude oil rose 29 cents to $21.27 a barrel; September heating oil rose 0.68 cent to 55.21 cents a gallon; September unleaded gasoline rose 0.21 cent to 66.04 cents a gallon; September natural gas rose 2.3 cents to $2.721 for each 1,000 cubic feet.

Soybean futures prices pushed higher Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade amid concern that widespread weekend showers did little to relieve bone-dry crops.

On other markets, energy futures gained.

Soybeans finished higher after a seesaw-session in which investors attempted to assess the impact of weekend rains across Midwest growing regions.

Rainfall totals reached 2 inches in some areas. But some of the areas most affected by drought saw only minor rainfall.

Investors were betting rain later this week in Illinois and Indiana — two key growing states that have seen extended dryness — also will prove inadequate for reviving fall-harvested crops.

The U.S. Agriculture Department reported after trading had ended that soybean crop ratings nationwide deteriorated last week, from 57 percent in good to excellent condition to 54 percent.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose Monday, gaining against the Japanese yen as well as the euro in a quiet trading session.

Not even Russia's latest political upheaval was enough to lift the dollar out of its summer doldrums. Russian President Boris Yeltsin fired his government for the fourth time in two years.

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at $1.0712, down from $1.0756 late Monday. The dollar also was quoted at 115.20 Japanese yen, up from 114.73.

Earlier Monday, Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers reiterated the Treasury's longstanding position that a strong dollar is in the U.S. economy's interests. Summers made the statement in response to a question from reporters after giving a speech to an economics club in Chesterfield Township, Mich.

Midland Red Oak firm on track to reach heady goals

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Five years after its formation, Midland Red Oak Realty has built a portfolio of 3.5 million square feet in properties in 10 cities in Texas, Oklahoma and Arizona.

Company President Neill McClung said the company is just getting started.

"We plan to double Midland Red Oak-owned properties, and therefore the MRO Management side as well, over the next 18 to 24 months," he said, adding that the company is on target to record between $38 million and $40 million in gross revenues this year.

Red Oak is owned by Southwest Royalties, principally owned by Tripp Wommack. McClung came to Southwest Royalties from Heitman Properties, where he specialized in turnaround properties. Faced with an unwanted transfer to Phoenix, he and Wommack — who had consulted with him on some property he owned near Midland Country Club — discussed starting a real estate acquisition and management company.

McClung joined Southwest Royalties and in the first six months did several land buys before making its first property acquisition, Midland's Plaza Oaks Shopping Center. The company now owns properties in Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Victoria, Austin and San Antonio, Tulsa and Oklahoma City and Tucson.

Bill McClain, president of MRO Management, a wholly-owned subsidiary that manages not only Red Oak's properties but 2.5 million square feet of properties for third parties, said that his subsidiary will grow as Red Oak grows.

"Our goal is to continue being a substantial fee management company in Midland as well as in those markets where we own properties," McClain said. "As we buy properties, we'll go out and try to acquire fee properties as well because we'll have the infrastructure in place."

At the present time, Red Oak is in various stages of negotiations on the purchase of eight office towers, McClung said. The properties are in San Antonio, downtown Oklahoma City, Tucson, Albuquerque, New Orleans and Colorado Springs. And, he added, he is scouting possibilities in California, in keeping with the company's original goal of focusing on the Southwest, from Louisiana to Oklahoma and west to California.

McClain came to Red Oak when his previous employer, The Davis Company, was acquired by Red Oak last year. Davis Co. president Don Davis became Red Oak's director of acquisitions.

McClung credits the Davis acquisition and Davis and McClain's skills as brokers and property managers with giving Red Oak a foundation for its growth. He praised Steve Person's ability in accessing capital, and Wes Tune's skills in assessing potential acquisitions for also aiding the company's growth.

"Our idea in buying Davis was, first, it was a great financial investment, and it has been. But the overriding reason was the strength and depth of its management. The MRO team was stretched way too thin. I had my hands in all the leases while still looking for new acquisitions. I needed Don and Bill as brokers and managers to help with our business. The third reason for the investment was the Davis Co. gave us a platform for accounting and reporting recognized by investment and equity lenders on Wall Street, so no one would question our ability to make an acquisition or manage a property," McClung said.

The company recently completed a $105 million recapitalization package with Lehman Brothers in New York. The package gives the company financing not only for acquisitions but for improvements to new and established acquisitions, McClung said.

The company looks for acquisitions that have value-added potential through physical improvements and mark-ups of below-market rents and offer superior fundamentals, including irreplaceable locations in a recovering or dynamic market that offer high traffic counts and strong demographics.

McClain said he believes the company's growth area will be outside Midland in Southwest markets, in towns like San Antonio and Tucson, that have turned from buyers' markets to sellers' markets and real estate values are rising.

Still, both men said, they are proud to be headquartered in Midland. And McClung sees a strong future for the town.

"I'm bullish on Midland" said the San Angelo native. "I believe it will become the independent oilman's capital of the world, and the independent will emerge bigger than the majors were."

Energas requests rate adjustment in 67 West Texas cities

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Energas Co. has filed a request with the 67 cities in its West Texas system for a rate adjustment that could bring it an additional $9.8 million in revenues.

Dan Alderson, southern region public affairs manager for Energas, said that the company has invested $64 million in its West Texas division since 1996, including improvements to its plants, additional communications technology and the installation of a national call center in Amarillo.

To bring Energas some relief from those investments and to ensure funding to maintain those improvements, "we felt this is the appropriate time for a rate increase," he said.

If the full increase is implemented, Energas estimates it would cost the average customer an additional $3.64 on their monthly bill, an increase of 8.8 percent. Midland's portion would be $1.2 million.

Mike McGregor, Midland city manager, said, "We anticipate we will suspend their rates, probably through Dec. 12, which prevents them from implementing the increase."

After all 67 cities in the system have suspended the rates, a steering committee of representatives from the cities will be formed to study the rate case with a third party consultant and make a recommendation. The recommendation will then be negotiated between the committee and Energas.

"If all goes smoothly, the new rates will go into effect around Dec. 8," Alderson said.

The last rate adjustment Energas received was in the fall of 1996.

At the time, "they agreed not to file any rate cases for two years, so they've gone almost an extra year," McGregor said.

In addition to the rate adjustment, Energas is seeking to restructure its rates by separating the gas commodity cost from the utility's cost of service. Company officials said the move would let customers distinguish between the cost of gas, currently passed through to the customer from the supplier, and the cost to Energas of serving the customer. They added that the proposal should effectively smooth out fluctuations in customer gas bills that frequently occur during cold weather, when demand for gas heating increases.

The Texas Railroad Commission estimates the average cost of natural gas to a consumer is $5.30 per thousand cubic feet (MCF).

If Energas was to receive the full amount of its request, Alderson said the cost to its customers would be $5 per MCF, based on an average use of 6 MCF per month.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Take stock of where you stand on retirement goals

By Eric Tyson

Q: I am 32 years old and my husband is 39. We have two children ages 4 and 5. Our current retirement assets are as follows: $26,000 in my husband's 401(k), $31,000 in the State Teachers Retirement System in California (I am currently not contributing to it because I have moved out of the state, and I am also staying home with my children until they are school age). We also have $7,000 in several Vanguard stock-oriented funds and $11,000 in USSA Performance First Index Account. Given our age and ages of our children, should we have more money set aside at this point? Should I keep my money in the State Teachers Retirement System, or should I transfer it to a qualified IRA (I plan on someday returning to California)? Should the $11,000 in the Index Fund stay, or should we move it to something else? We have $4,000 available for emergency money, and we both have stable job prospects.

Tyson

A: The amount of money you "should" have at this point in your life depends upon what your long-term goals are as well as the rate at which you save new money. For example, suppose after crunching some numbers for retirement planning purposes, you determine that given your retirement goals and current assets, you should be saving $500 per month.

Further suppose that you are actually saving $600 per month. In that case, you would actually be a bit "ahead" of where you need to be given your goals.

Now, if you find that you're actually saving less than you need to accomplish your desired goals, don't despair. You might modify your goals or find a way to save more of your income.

The USAA investment is a savings-type account that currently pays 4.3 percent. You could move that money into something more aggressive for your longer-term goals if you're comfortable with your emergency reserve. At a minimum, I like to see people with three months' worth of living expenses for emergencies.

As for deciding whether to keep your funds in the pension plan from your old job, doing so would certainly be the path of least resistance and not a bad financial choice. To be more precise financially, you again need to crunch some numbers. Compare the expected monthly pension payments with the amount you could reasonably expect to have if you invested the pension money yourself.

Q: I am employed full time and contribute the maximum to the 401(k) program at work. Until June 1998, my wife was also employed (she has no earned income since then) and contributed the maximum to the defined-contribution fund offered by her employer. While she was employed and while I was contributing to my 401(k), she opened a nondeductible IRA and made annual contributions, contributing the maximum through 1998. Given that she has no income for 1999, and providing the contribution limit has been raised, can she continue to contribute to the same nondeductible IRA and, if so, up to what maximum amount?

A: As a so-called nonworking spouse, your wife may contribute up to $2,000 to an IRA so long as you, as the working spouse, have earned income of at least $2,000 during the year ($4,000 if you also desire to contribute to an IRA). Your wife can contribute to her existing IRA.
