Kissinger Says USSR Must Make 'Solid Offer'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told the Soviet Union today there will be no further U.S. proposals on limiting nuclear weapons until the Kremlin comes up with a solid offer.

Using blunt terms at a news conference, Kissinger also ruled out a summit meeting between President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev until the "chasm" is bridged.

In a clear warning, Kissinger said that "the United States will not stand still for any hegemonial aspirations."

Kissinger stressed that the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) are lagging not because of any differences between the State and Defense departments, although he acknowledged occasional disagreement between ousted Defense Secretary James R.

Schlesinger and himself "as you would expect of two individuals with strong minds."

Saying arms negotiations are in "stagnation," Kissinger declared the United States is prepared to look "for an honorable compromise."

But he emphasized that Soviet rejection of the last American offer, relayed by Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in September, rules out a modification of the U.S. position until the Soviets make "some reasoned response."

At the same time, Kissinger said, "We do not conceive right now of a summit without a SALT agreement."

This four assessment of current U.S.-Soviet relations followed by 24 hours a virtual acknowledgment by Ford that a nuclear arms accord and a summit meeting with Brezhnev are beyond reach this year.

Ford spoke on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Kissinger said, however, that Ford's trip to China is on schedule and does not depend upon substantive results.

He said an American president has not been in Peking for almost four years and that periodic "exchanges of views" between the two countries are desirable.

Kissinger also rejected the notion that his own reception in China last month was cool.

Significantly, perhaps, he used a common Chinese pejorative against Moscow in warning the Russians that Washington will stand guard against "hegemonial" moves.

On other subjects, Kissinger made these remarks:

—U.S. Ambassador Richard Murphy has been called home from Syria to discuss prospects for another Israeli withdrawal in the Golan Heights.

—He is "prepared to justify every covert operation (by the Central Intelligence Agency) I am familiar with as in the national interest."

—The Soviet Union earlier this year shipped a substantial amount of military equipment into Angola, and Cuba has sent in military advisers as well as supplies. The United States, meanwhile, is committed to the "territorial integrity" of the former Portuguese African colony, which achieved independence today.

Carrillo Trial May Be Reset

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas House members now want to delay the Senate impeachment trial of Duval County District Judge O.P. Carrillo until 1976.

The House Board of Managers, which was named after the House voted impeachment articles against Carrillo, voted Saturday to ask that the Senate trial proceedings scheduled to resume Nov. 18 be postponed again.

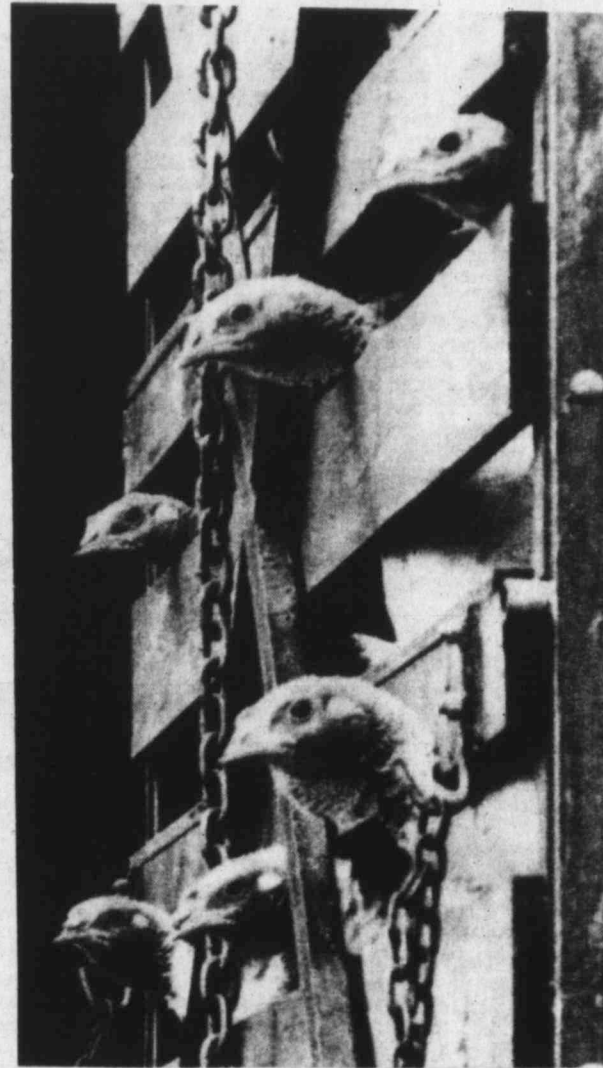

The Senate trial has been postponed twice previously, once for Carrillo's trial on income tax evasion in Corpus Christi and again for a closed door hearing by the Texas Judicial Qualifications Commission.

The House group decided Saturday that a delay until January was necessary. They said their case against Carrillo would be damaged by a holiday break at Christmas time in the testimony.

"Once we start the trial in the Senate we want to go until we finish," said Rep. DeWitt Hale, D-Corpus Christi, chairman.

Hale said Carrillo's attorney Arthur Mitchell, would be presented with the postponement plan to get his reaction.

Although the Senate is scheduled to resume the trial Nov. 18, a member of the state attorney general's staff predicted the testimony in the private Judicial Qualifications Commission hearing would not be completed until near Thanksgiving, which would push the Senate trial resumption into early December.

GOBBLE GOBBLE — Texans will join Americans in eating tons of turkeys this Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays at a cost that is as much as ten cents per pound higher this year than last, according to the growers association. These gobblers are heading for a processing plant in Salem, Ore.

U.N. Includes PLO In Mid-East Efforts

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly called today for the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization "in all efforts, deliberations and conferences on the Middle East" held under United Nations auspices.

The vote was 101-8 with 25 abstentions on the first of two Arab resolutions in support of Palestinian rights.

The late morning vote preceded a scheduled late afternoon vote on a controversial resolution saying that Zionism "is a form of racism."

The anti-Israeli bloc claimed enough votes for passage of the anti-Zionist measure. An American delegate predicted Congress would respond with "very punitive" action if the General Assembly adopted it.

Clarence M. Mitchell Jr., a member of the U.S.

delegation, told a newsman he expected Congress would "react very strongly" if the anti-Zionism resolution was approved. He said Congress' action "would be very punitive, whatever it is."

Western members were making a determined effort to get it shelved for at least a year.

But Western Europeans said privately that there was no agreement yet among opponents of the resolution as to whether the nine countries of the European Common Market or the Scandinavian countries would put in such a motion, or whether there would be such a motion.

The assembly's social committee on Oct. 17 rejected a postponement motion by Sierra Leone by a vote of 65-40. The committee went on to endorse the resolution by a vote of 70-29 with 27 countries abstaining and 16 absent. Thus less than half the U.N. members cast affirmative votes for the resolution.

Since then extraordinary opposition has been mobilized against the resolution in the United States and other Western nations. America's chief U.N. delegate, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, warned that adoption of it would give international legitimacy to anti-Semitism and could force the United States to disassociate itself from the Assembly.

Zionism is the movement for a Jewish national homeland in Palestine which brought Israel into being in 1948. Supporters of the resolution contend that Zionism is racist because it is exclusionist, and that anti-Zionism is not the same as anti-Semitism. But diplomatic sources said the resolution was devised by the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Arab countries as a substitute for their earlier unsuccessful campaign to oust Israel from the United Nations.

Israel said the resolution was the first organized assault on the Jews since the Nazi era. The U.S. House of Representatives in a resolution sponsored by 436 of its 437 members asked the General Assembly to reject the resolution.

The two resolutions on Palestine are a follow-up to the assembly's actions last year recognizing Palestinian rights to nationhood and the right of return to lands occupied by Israel since 1948, and giving the Palestine Liberation Organization observer status at the United Nations.

One resolution sponsored by 50 countries expresses grave concern that no progress has been made toward gaining the Palestinian rights enunciated a year ago. It would set up a Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People to draw up a program to be submitted to the Security Council for action by next June.

The other resolution calls for the PLO to be invited to all conferences on the Middle East as a full participating member, including the Geneva Arab-Israeli conference. Israel has said it would never negotiate with the PLO.

The World At-A-Glance

AGADIR, Morocco (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Moroccans began pulling out of the Spanish Sahara today after King Hassan II declared that their march to claim the territory for Morocco "achieved its objective." But officials stressed the 350,000 volunteers would remain near the border to strengthen the king's bargaining power. Hassan, announcing the withdrawal in a televised Sunday night, said he would return from his command post at Agadir to Marrakech to resume negotiations on the future of the 105,000-square-mile Spanish colony.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and four other Democrats are presenting President Ford a proposal to provide New York City with federal loan guarantees. But Ford remains strongly opposed to any legislation that will help the city avoid default. "I'm always hopeful that we can work together, but with the deadline (for default) extending anywhere from Nov. 14 on, I think it is time to face up to this situation," Mansfield said of the meeting today.

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Tear gas disrupted a pro-government rally Sunday night as Premier Jose de Azevedo was condemning left-wing extremism. Nearly an hour after the premier began speaking to about 20,000 persons gathered in Lisbon's main square, someone set fire to the political banners raised by the anti-Communist sponsors of the meeting, and tear gas grenades were thrown from the roof of the adjacent navy ministry building.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli troops killed four Arab guerrillas who infiltrated into Israel from Lebanon during the night, the Israeli military command announced today. No Israeli casualties were reported. Military sources said the Arabs managed to penetrate only 200 yards past the border. A communiqué said security forces found the guerrillas at 8 a.m. near the border town of Metulla after a search during a heavy rain.

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard says a car bomb found near the home of former Prime Minister Edward Heath was part of an Irish Republican Army campaign against leading public figures. The owner of the car noticed a duffel bag containing the 10-pound bomb underneath it about 1:30 a.m. Sunday and called the police, who defused it. It was the fourth bomb incident in London's fashionable West End in less than three weeks.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nomination of an ex-Georgia congressman to head the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has no better than a 50-50 chance of clearing its first Senate hurdle because of his votes against fair housing, civil rights and consumer protection, according to Senate sources. Some members of the Senate Banking Committee are said to believe that President Ford's choice of Ben Blackburn, 48, an Atlanta Republican defeated last year for a fourth House term, may test the tradition of congressional courtesy that often gives preference to former members of Congress nominated to high executive branch posts. The Banking Committee was to open hearings on the nomination today.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is investigating allegations that Internal Revenue Service Commissioner Donald C. Alexander blocked tax investigations. The probe was described by an FBI spokesman Sunday night as "a preliminary investigation to determine if any federal violations might be involved" and was undertaken at the request of the Justice Department's Criminal Division.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key strategist for Ronald Reagan says the former California governor will challenge President Ford in "as many primaries as possible" for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination. But the strategist, James H. Lake, dismissed President Ford's statement Sunday that all GOP candidates should run in all of the 30 or 31 primaries. "The President of the United States has always been expected in his party's primaries to take on all comers and defeat them," Lake said in an interview, adding that a challenger such as Reagan needs only to build momentum in a cross-section of early primaries to establish himself as a serious contender.

Says Patty Will Plead Not Guilty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst, declared mentally competent to stand trial, will not plead guilty to federal bank robbery charges, one of her attorneys says.

Albert Johnson would not say Sunday whether the 21-year-old newspaper heiress will plead innocent today when she appears before U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Carter. But he did say "she is not going to plead guilty."

The charges against her stem from the April 1974 robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch by the Symbionese Liberation Army. The government claims that Miss Hearst, who had been kidnapped by the terrorist group on Feb. 4, 1974 but later renounced her family and joined her captors, willingly took part in the $10,690 robbery.

She also faces 11 state felony counts in Los Angeles County, including armed robbery and kidnapping. Johnson met with Miss Hearst at the San Mateo County Jail Sunday along with parents, Randolph and Catherine Hearst, and her sister, Anne. The family gathering appeared to be in preparation for today's proceedings, but the Hearsts declined comment when they left the jail.

BULLETIN

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — A judge ruled today that doctors may not unhook a life sustaining respirator from Karen Anne Quinlan, who has been in a coma for seven months.

"It is a medical decision whether or not Karen should be removed from the respirator," said Superior Court Judge Robert Muir Jr. "Just as that decision is a medical one, the continued care and treatment of Karen is a medical one."

Therefore, Daniel R. Coburn as Miss Quinlan's guardian in all medical matters.

Rite To Honor Deceased Vets

Big Spring High School will sponsor a brief memorial service honoring deceased veterans Tuesday, 8 a.m., in the main foyer of the High School building.

A wreath will be placed at the plaque that was dedicated earlier this year to honor veterans. Various service groups will attend, and taps and the national anthem will be played. The public is invited to attend.

Portugal Gives Angola Freedom

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Angola, Portugal's last and richest African colony, was handed over to the "Angolan people" in an unusual ceremony today that ended 500 years of Portuguese rule without recognizing any of the three liberation groups fighting for power.

Portugal's high commissioner, Adm. Leonel Cardoso, announced the handover at noon — 12 hours ahead of schedule — in the ballroom of the government palace in a statement to journalists.

"I regret on behalf of Portugal that it has not been possible to hand over to a nation in which the three African movements are united," Cardoso said.

His announcement that Angola was being handed over to the "Angolan people" reflected Portugal's position that it would not grant power to only one of the warring liberation movements.

However, the Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola — MPLA — which controls the Angolan capital militarily, is expected to unilaterally declare the nation's independence Tuesday.

Cardoso said he would routinely lower the Portuguese flag at dusk today for the last time at the ancient fort of Sao Miguel overlooking the scenic Bay of Luanda.

The high commissioner was flanked by Portugal's air, naval and army chiefs in Angola as he made the announcement.

The last Portuguese troops in the country will board a frigate sometime tonight bound for Lisbon, leaving behind a country wracked by civil war.

Lebanese Chief Wants To Disarm Private Armies

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Premier Rashid Karami today was reported considering a plan to disarm all of Lebanon's warring Christian and Moslem private militias and guerrillas, leaving only the Lebanese army and the Palestinian guerrillas with weapons.

Karami's plans also were said to include measures to alleviate the estimated $4.5 billion in economic losses and accompanying unemployment resulting from the past seven months of street warfare between the country's Moslem majority and Christian minority.

There was speculation that Karami, a Moslem, was encouraged to enlarge the 18,000-man army's role by a clash Sunday between troops and militiamen of the right-wing Christian Phalange party.

One soldier and three Phalangist gunmen were killed when a detachment of troops stormed a Phalangist barricade on the Beirut-Damascus highway at which 11 Moslems had been kidnapped. It was the first clash between the army, which the Moslems contend is pro-Christian, and the Phalangists since the on-again-off-again civil war began last April.

Troops at another army roadblock seized a shipment of 95 mortar shells concealed beneath flour being trucked from Syria to Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

Meanwhile, a delegation from the Vatican headed by Paolo Cardinal Bertoli conferred with Karami and other leaders to do what it could to strengthen the shaky cease-fire.

Bertoli also met with four of the country's leading Maronite Christian politicians — President Suleiman Franjeh, Interior Minister Camille Chamoun, Foreign Minister Philippe Takla and Karamel Assad, the speaker of Parliament.

GOING UP

Clear today and fair Tuesday. High temperatures today in upper 60s, low tonight in upper 40s. Temperatures Tuesday in mid 70s. Easterly winds at 5-10 miles per hour today, becoming southeasterly tonight, 5-12 miles per hour.

Joint Committee Will Study Appropriations

Two Texas members of the congressional delegation are on the joint Senate-House conference committee which will seek this week to resolve appropriations differences which include the fate of bachelor officers quarters at Webb AFB.

They are George Mahon, chairman of the House appropriations committee, which previously cleared the project, and Sen. John Tower, ranking minority member of the Senate military affairs committee, which also had given its blessing.

Apparently in favorable position, the $3,937,000 project was axed last week by a subcommittee of the Senate appropriations committee. It was one of three military construction projects in Texas which got shaved from the recommendations to the appropriations committee.

Sen. Tower was hopeful that the committee as a whole would reconsider; instead, it took the recommendation of the subcommittee.

Over the weekend the conference committee was named, and Mayor Wade Choate left at noon Monday to be in Washington Tuesday morning when the conference committee is to meet.

RON MERCER

Ron Mercer, Chief Executive Officer of Big Spring Industrial Growth and Development and, Executive Vice President of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce, resigned today effective Nov. 30.

A five member selection committee has been appointed by the chamber board to begin screening applicants for the vacated position. No chairman for the committee has yet been appointed, and there are no particular applicants at this early date, according to Terry Hanson, chamber manager.

The announcement of resignation came during the monthly meeting of the Chamber Board of Directors at noon in the Holiday Inn. Mercer's letter of resignation read "Due to severe personal family problems which have occurred during the past year, my two children and I agree that a change at this time would be for the best interests of us and the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce."

Mercer came to Big Spring Jan. 15, 1972 from the Phillips County Chamber of Commerce, Helena, Ark. He served as chamber manager here until July, 1974, when the Big Spring Industrial Growth and Development Foundation was formed and he was named Chief Executive Officer.

Prior to that, Mercer had served on chambers of commerce in Sidney, Neb., Scott's Bluff, Neb., and Salina, Kan.

TOWERING INFERNO — Fireman responded to an alarm for the blazing Big Spring City Dump, 10:36 p.m., Saturday. The first truck did not return from the fire, which was started by hot trash, according to officials, until 1:30 a.m. Sunday. A second truck remained to control the fire until 4:30 a.m. Sunday.

Lack Of Enthusiasm Noted

The kickoffs for the election campaigns are getting close. Members of the Congress are acutely aware of them. If nothing else indicates it, Congress' lack of enthusiasm for election campaign reform does.

The House has jettisoned a proposed regulation to tighten the rules. Earlier, the Senate threw out another one.

What the actions add up to is a retreat from the reform spirit generated by Watergate, in favor of the preservation and protection of incumbents. It's a sorry performance.

The House rejected a resolution proposed by the Federal Election Commission which would have required members of Congress to file their campaign financial reports with it. Obviously, not filing the reports will lessen the commission's ability to enforce spending rules, or to find violations.

The Senate earlier rejected a move to have congressional office accounts figured as campaign contributions. These accounts are used to defray expenses of congressmen — such as sending "newsletters" to constituents, maintaining staffs and offices in the home district and the like — very useful as campaign tools. Not counting contributions to or expenditures of these funds as campaign gifts and expenses gives incumbents a dollar edge on challengers in limited election spending.

These are the first two new regulations proposed by the Federal Election Commission; both have failed of adoption. That gives clear indication that despite its rhetoric, Congress remains committed first to re-election, and only second to reform of the process.

Kitty Low For Campaign

Things are tough all over. Families are having a hard time making ends meet. The federal government is facing a deficit of approximately $60 billion during this fiscal year. It seems natural, therefore, to discover that there may not be enough money to go around in the federal presidential campaign kitty.

The Treasury Department has $62 million in the campaign fund. An additional $40 million to $50 million is expected from those who authorize a $1 deduction on their income tax returns before the April 15 deadline in 1978. But the proliferation of presidential candidates threatens to bankrupt the fund.

In order to qualify for federal funds a candidate must raise $5,000 in each of 20 states in contributions of $250 or less. He is then eligible to receive up to $5 million in federal matching payments to help finance his primary campaign.

The first $44 million in funds is earmarked, evenly split between Democrats and Republicans. Each of the parties will get $20 million for general election expenses and $2 million each for the two major party conventions. What is left, say $61 million, can be divided among the eight Democrats and one Republican already announced as candidates, with two more Democrats and one Republican considered likely contenders. If there are more than 12 candidates, and each raises $5 million which is matched by $5 million from the fund, bankruptcy of the fund would follow.

Maybe it will serve them right. Modesty is not one of the attributes of those who want to be president. They can cut down on their budget just as less ambitious Americans must.

Sadat Snubbed

Marquis Childs

UNITED NATIONS — Whether the City of New York or this deeply divided world parliament will be the first to expire is an open question. The antagonism in Congress and the country is directed in almost the same degree at the U.N. and New York, which happens to be the site of an institution that began with such bright hope and now seems hopelessly mired in the conflict setting the Third World against the developed West.

IF NOTHING else, this proves once again the tragic error in choosing this site. In a polyglot city pressure groups have, repeatedly by mass demonstrations, tried to thwart the objectives of the U.N. Only by massive police force, at a considerable cost to the city, has violence been prevented in past episodes.

Whether in view of the deep hostility in the Middle East and notably in the Arab world there could ever have been a propitious time for President Anwar Sadat to visit the United States is doubtful. But in all honesty it must be said that it would be hard to imagine a worse time than the present.

Sadat had the courage — and it took a great deal of courage in light of the animosity of Syria and other Arab states — to sign a disengagement agreement with Israel.

He had the courage to expel the 20,000 Russian military advisers who had tried to dominate his own military forces. He put an end to his dependence on Soviet weaponry.

But even as his trip was being planned with encouraging portents, the Arab and Third World nations planted a time bomb here at the U.N. That was the resolution equating Zionism with racism. It was a deliberate insult to Israel and to Jews in America who have supported the Zionist cause with such zeal and so generous an outpouring of money.

The Egyptian delegate was one of the 70 voting in favor of the resolution. To have done otherwise would have made Sadat's position in the Arab world even more uncertain than it is today.

To be sure, Egypt might have abstained as did nearly as many delegates as the 26 voting against the resolution. That would nevertheless have been taken as another black mark to be added to the score toted up by his Arab enemies beginning with the agreement with Israel.

Within his own country the Egyptian president must contend with forces that see the Israeli agreement as a sellout of the Palestinians and their yearning for a homeland.

The contradictions in all this are amazing to behold. Mayor Abraham Beame has been imploring the Ford administration and the Congress to save New York from bankruptcy and chaos. In turn, the State Department had been imploring Beame to give Sadat an official, if not a friendly, welcome to his city.

According to newspaper reports the Mayor anguished over this for hours. After all, he was the first Jewish mayor of New York. In the end he said no to Washington's pleas. Gov. Hugh Carey found that his schedule was so crowded he couldn't possibly find half an hour to greet the Egyptian visitor.

The response in Congress to the Zionist resolution was a foregone conclusion. The outcry arose that the United States must cut off or at least drastically curtail support for the U.N. and its various agencies. The same threat was made following an attempt to exclude Israel from participation in some of the work of UNESCO. These threats cannot be discounted. They are taken by many, both in and out of Congress, as the response to a slap at the United States for supporting an ally in the Middle East.

PRESIDENT SADAT is a bold and forthright man who has thus far been able to stand up to his enemies at home and abroad. One positive result of his visit to the United States is to re-enforce his friendly relationship with President Ford, initiated when the two met at Salzburg last summer.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

I was on the City Council at the time H. V. Crocker retired. He had been with the city 42 years, fire chief for 28 years. I found him to be a very efficient employee. He knew more about the city's operation than any person that I have come in contact with. He was the type of person that would speak out if he thought something was wrong. The employees and citizens trusted him. He attended the last City Commission meeting that I was present, opposing the garbage being moved to the front. I asked him point blank if it would work and he said "no." And he gave his reasons, but the council paid no attention to his suggestion. So, he carried it to the people who carried petitions and received overwhelming support. This was tabled in order for it to die down, then bring it out when no one was there objecting; to raise the rates, which is not needed with proper management.

Dear Editor:

Congratulations go to Mrs. Carpenter for writing the best article we have seen in a long time pertaining to Women's Lib. She voiced the opinion of many women, we are sure. We, too, wonder what it will be like for the future generation of girls, when men are afraid to open doors for them, tip hats and "treat them with courtesy."

We believe, as does Mrs. Carpenter, in equal pay for equal work for women, but we are tired of hearing Women's Libbers run all over those of us who still believe in a little old-fashioned courtesy. We still expect men to open the doors for us (and we are thrilled when they do so), and we still want to see men stand when a lady enters the room, and other such examples of "male chauvinism." So we say to all you Women's Libbers: you go ahead and rant and rave all you want to about your rights, but leave ours alone.

Our thanks to Mrs. Carpenter for saying to Women's Libbers what we, and other women, have been wanting to say for a long time. Your article was well received by many, and we appreciate it.

Tiger By The Tail

John Cuniff

NEW YORK (AP) — A

tiger stalks the hallways of American industry, and a lot of corporate officials don't know what to do about it, said the authority on business management.

"How do you hold a tiger by the tail without it turning on you?" he asked rhetorically.

The tiger, said Eugene Jennings, management professor at Michigan State University, is the young, ambitious, eager, tough and confident young manager who is determined to rise swiftly into the corporate hierarchy.

In the 1960s this type of person was sought avidly. He was encouraged. He was given all the rope he needed and was told, in effect, to either haul himself up by it or hang by it. The opportunity was there. Upward mobility was relatively easy in the expansive 1960s. But now, in the 1970s, the economy isn't growing nearly as fast. The potentially mobile manager thus becomes frustrated by the corporation.

Sitting directly above the young tigers, who range in age between 30 and 35, is an immobile layer of older managers, stymied by the recession, and insecure and worn down by the stresses of today's world.

Jennings observes that the younger managers often are forced to challenge this upper layer because of the pressures of inflation. Their families are growing, their expenses are rising.

Moreover, he adds, "Many of these tigers were raised by parents with a higher standard of living than they, the young generation, can afford." The only way out of their financial pinch, he said, is upward mobility.

They are eager to advance. They are hardworking, willing to learn, ambitious and competitive. They can't easily be intimidated by authority. They scorn incompetence, and know that they have abilities.

They might be considered by some people to be squares, said Jennings, who has made a decade-long study of corporate mobility, has written many books on the subject, and is a personal adviser to corporate chairman.

Tissue Constantly Changing

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I found a large lump on one of my breasts and immediately went to the doctor. He checked it and had me come back two weeks later, when my period was over. This time the doctor told me it had gone down 99 per cent. Can you explain what happened? — T.L.

I think I can. The breast is a dynamic organ. By this I mean that its cells and glands are in a continual state of cyclic change. The milk glands are particularly responsive to the cyclic ebb and flow of hormones in the menses.

Some become cystic — filled with fluid. This fluid will increase before your period and decrease afterward. It is a normal reaction. I concur with your doctor that you have nothing to be concerned about. But you are wise to investigate such things, and with the wide publicity breast lumps are getting these days, I can understand your concern.

Later on your physician may even want to draw out some of the fluid to analyze its contents.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A grandson of mine was hit by a car and had to be in a hospital for surgery. His spleen and appendix had to be removed. He is 18 and is worried about this. Does it harm the body to have these parts removed? He would really like to know. — Mrs. D.P.

The body can get along nicely without the spleen, whose duties are taken over by other structures, and the appendix serves no particular function in the body and is not missed.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have had diverticulosis since 1964. Until recently I was on a low-residue diet. Now my doctor tells me I can eat anything I wish, with the exception of things like corn and nuts.

I have been taking medication recently for this condition. What has caused the change in thinking regarding the low-residue diet? — L.B.W.

The change in approach stems from the observation that diverticula (the out-pouchings from the bowel wall) may be a result of pressure within the bowel, which is turned is caused by a lack of residue in the stool. This lack of residue (bulk), if you will, tends to decrease bowl volume and, by simple laws of physics, causes a build-up of pressure.

It is this pressure which is thought to push outward in weakened segments of the bowel lining, often where a small artery penetrates the colon wall.

In recent years, drugs have been developed to effectively control the bowel activity (peristalsis) in the restriction has given way foods. Thus, broad dietary restrictions have given way to these drugs and normal diets.

Your doctor apparently has your diverticulosis well under control, and continuing medication and the narrow diet restrictions should keep it that way.

Tennis, Anyone?

Around The Rim

Tommy Hart

Attribute it to what you will, but I rarely watch college football anymore — in person or through the magic of television.

The hardy perennials, blessed with too much money and too little compassion, get a little more vicious each fall. The have-nots simply hang on for dear life, remembering a gentler era — not unlike a wretch crawling in a desert, seeking an oasis he cannot see and will never reach.

THE ONLY thing that counts in big-time college football these days is to be No. One on the national charts and, if not No. One, No. Two. Time was when the alumni danced in the streets if their team finished with a 7-3 record, but no more.

You're not supposed to be happy with just a win these days. The idea is total annihilation. Even a 45-7 rout of a traditional foe doesn't set very well, when someone rated above you slaughters a foe, 69-0.

Oklahoma flogged an intra-state rival, Oklahoma State, recently and got booed for its efforts because the head-hunters in the stands reasoned the Sooners had lost face with the poll takers. The flower of mankind at Ohio State, as it turned out, did better that day.

Time was when the parochial schools in the Southwest Conference exuded class and the state-supported schools changed coaches every other year in quest of decency on the football commons. Now, for the most part, the privately-endowed institutions take the ouls, count the house and consider themselves blessed if they get into the end zones occasionally.

THE COACHES with the velvet touch, possessed of horses they refuse to stable even though the decisions have been nailed down, are prone to rationalize for their brutality in strange ways.

One says you can't ask a boy not to go out there and do his best. Another lays the strap to the NCAA, growling that the limitations placed on travel squad size did not permit him to make use of the freshmen in school.

Many a school which used to be quite respectable in football has fallen upon hard times. Army can't compete anymore. Duke is down. The Ivy League schools long since moved off center stage. The Big Ten probably could more properly be called the Big Two and Little Eight.

The schools with the muscle invariably fill the stadiums, you say? Maybe so, but few are living within their budgets, and the situation is getting worse. If it deteriorates further, some citadels of learning might even have to forego building that library that has been promised for years.

The pros years ago envisioned the problem of too much concentrated strength and invented the draft. The colleges probably need it.

Some of the savants suggest a super conference and would relegate the chronic losers to satellite leagues but even in a super league somebody would develop the habit of losing consistently.

The enchantment in college football may have gone out with the graduation of Doak Walker. Certainly the game has been deteriorating since then.

Exit Schlesinger

William F. Buckley, Jr.

Count me in, please, among the bereaved by the loss of James Schlesinger. Along with just about everyone else, I deem Henry Kissinger the most persuasive advocate in the republic, and inasmuch as his policies — as distinguished from his motivations — are in my judgment wrongheaded, I sometimes wish he were less lucid, less eloquent, though one takes pride in the sonority of his prose and the craftsmanship of his arguments.

SCHLESINGER, INCREDIBLY, is in the same league. All the more painful that he should be dropped from the Cabinet — for the sole purpose, if we are to take President Ford at his word, of creating a team with which Mr. Ford feels comfortable. There are those of us who would prefer that Mr. Ford endure a little discomfort, rather than that he should strive so successfully to cause the Soviet Union to be comfortable. The elimination of Schlesinger will in all likelihood create a new Soviet holiday.

It happens that a fortnight ago I met the Secretary of Defense and asked him a few questions the answers to which are especially pertinent under the circumstances...

Q. ARE YOU affected by the crystallizing ethic of the Sixties: namely, that the Secretary of Defense, like the Secretary of State, is morally bound by the foreign policy (they administer)? Or is it your idea of a civil servant that one doesn't permit oneself to ask that question (about a policy dictated from above)?

Mr. Schlesinger: Certainly not the latter. I think that you have two questions there. The first was: Could a public official carry out a policy that happened, for a variety of historical reasons, to have earned the disapprobation of the intellectual community? The answer to that is certainly. It's one responsibility, if the policy is in the national interest and it is right to carry it out. On the other hand, if one has moral misgivings of one's own of a serious nature, one has the obligation to withdraw.

THE NEXT question asked whether there is an ethical distortion between the responsibilities of the civil servant and the policy-maker — between the corporal and the Secretary of Defense.

Mr. Schlesinger: The policy maker, if he disagrees with policy in a serious way, should depart.

Q. IS THE Secretary of Defense ex officio a policy maker?

Mr. Schlesinger: That's correct... If the forces under his command or under his scrutiny are being used in a way which he regards as inappropriate and he has no sympathy with the policy, he should turn the office over to somebody who does have sympathy with the policy, because he would be ineffective in carrying it out.

Q. FROM WHICH we may infer that you were not out of sympathy with our policy when you became Secretary of Defense?

S. That is correct. Having identified himself as entirely in accord with the United States effort in South Vietnam, Mr. Schlesinger paused to deliberate the effects of our failure there.

S. I THINK that it's clear, in terms of our own policies, that the patience of the U.S. public for a protracted conflict, apparently unsuccessful, is quite limited and that consequently our own policies should be geared not to that kind of protracted conflict; that a military engagement should not be permitted with the involvement of American forces to extend over many years; and that that requires an alteration in our strategy. In Vietnam we had, we thought, the staying power. It turned out not to be the case. And I think that we can draw that conclusion with regard to our own policies, and I suspect that other governments will draw what inferences they will from this experience.

My Answer

Billy Graham

Whenever I read the Bible a lot of questions come to me about things I do not understand. Is it wrong to have questions, or are we to accept everything on blind faith? C.J.P.

No, there is nothing wrong about using our minds when we turn to the Bible. God gave them to us, and often our questions can lead us to a greater understanding of God's truth.

On the other hand, the Bible warns us repeatedly against indulging in "foolish and unlearned questions" (II Timothy 2:23) which are of no profit. The real test is this: Are we seeking God's answers to our questions? The rich young ruler asked Jesus a crucial question,

"Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" (Mark 10:17). However, he was unwilling to accept Jesus' answer, which demanded a willingness to leave and follow Christ completely. Our questions should not lead us to greater doubt, but greater faith and trust in God and His Word. Someone has said, "It is not what I do not understand in the Bible that bothers me, but what I do understand."

The tragedy is that many people today question God and the Bible, but they never are honest enough to question themselves and the foundations upon which they are building their lives. This kind of self-examination can be the best thing for us, because it can lead us to Jesus Christ, the only sure foundation of living.

Possible NYC Default Hurts Small Governments

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A fire station in New Cumberland, a municipal building in Monroeville and a golf course in Bethlehem are early casualties of New York City's faltering financial situation, local officials report.

These and other projects have been delayed and some may never get built. The reason: municipalities are discovering that the Big Apple's possible default — which would mean the city could not pay its bondholders principal, interest or both — is causing them to pay excessive interest on the bonds they sell to finance improvements. Planned bond sales have been postponed indefinitely.

Pennsylvania's secretary of community affairs, William H. Wilcox, said a New York default would seriously affect Pennsylvania's municipal governments and result in job losses. He had no estimate on the potential job eliminations statewide.

"There's already a problem of marketing the bonds at a useful rate," he said. "It's not a sense of panic, it's a sense of holding back. Communities are taking a watchful, waiting posture. That means less construction, less investment and fewer jobs."

If municipalities sell their bonds at high interest rates there will be another problem, Wilcox said. "It will mean higher taxes. It's doubtful that any lower interest rates will offset higher costs in construction," he said.

The fire station in New Cumberland would cost an estimated $250,000 to $300,000, according to ef-ficials in the Harrisburg suburb. Construction would generate about 30 jobs.

The Pittsburgh suburb of Monroeville is delaying a $1.2 million bond issue for at least six months, according to borough manager Marshall W. Bond.

That leaves the community unable to move ahead on the proposed municipal building, which Bond said is sorely needed in a borough that has grown from 20,000 residents in 1957 to 32,000 today.

Mayor Gordon B. Mowrer of Bethlehem has eliminated sewer projects, street resurfacing and a maintenance garage.

And he's taking a hard look at the proposed golf course. He says he would support it only if golfers paid fees that would repay principal and interest for the borrowing.

Outstanding Texas Mothers Named For Book

TEMPLE, Tex. (AP) — Ten Texas women have been named outstanding Texas mothers for inclusion in a special bicentennial publication to be published next year.

The Texas entries, which also include 20 runners up, were named Saturday at a meeting here of the Texas chapter of American Mothers.

The book, "Historic Mothers: 1776-1976," will include pictures and biographical sketches of persons living and dead from each of the states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

The ten Texas mothers are: Mrs. G.V. Brindley and Mrs. R.E. Wendland of Temple; Mrs. R.G. LeTourneau of Longview; Mrs. U.S. Smith and Mrs. Earl Gillis of Fort Worth; Rev. Mary Louise Rowan of Dallas; Mrs. Manuel Gonzalez of El Paso; Mrs. J.E. Berling of Houston; Mrs. R.L. Biese of Austin; and Dona Rosa Maria Hinojosa de Belli, a South Texas pioneer.

Ford Opens Texas Office

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — State campaign headquarters for President Ford opened today in a northeast Austin office building.

Mrs. Berl Milburn, former deputy state GOP chairman who is Ford's campaign director, announced eight key leaders for the May 1 primary campaign.

She said Mrs. Marvin Selig of Seguin, and Doug DeCluit of Waco, would serve as deputy state campaign directors. Regional coordinators for Texas are Mrs. George Gray of Dallas; Don Jansen of Houston; Arthur Troilo of San Antonio; Ed Palm of Fort Worth; Mrs. Joe Richardson of Beaumont and Mrs. John Root of El Paso.

Pilot Given Choice Before Gunman Falls

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Told to choose between death by gunshot or plane crash, the pilot of a light airplane kicked a teen-aged hijacker out the door as the craft plummeted downward, the flier said.

"You have a choice of dying in an airplane crash or dying from a bullet wound," Richard Leibundguth said he was told after the pistol-wielding youth began talking of suicide.

The crumpled body of Jack R. Johnston, Jr., 19, a high school dropout from Evansville, was found in a field near Cape Girardeau, Mo., on the Mississippi River, authorities said.

"He was mixed up, confused. He couldn't seem to find himself," said Patricia Johnson, the youth's aunt.

She said Johnston had been worried about money he owed on an organ he had purchased on credit. Johnston was out of a job and couldn't make the payments, she said. She said the youth had been in the Army, but had received a medical discharge because of an accident.

"The only thing we know for sure is that the boy is dead," said the boy's father, Jack R. Johnston. He said his son did not own a gun and expressed disbelief the youth would do such a thing.

The father, an aircraft mechanic at the Evansville airport, said his son was "in a real good mood" when he ate breakfast with the family.

Leibundguth, a pilot for Tri-State Aero of Evansville, said the youth called at 11 a.m. Saturday morning to arrange a sightseeing trip. Leibundguth, who turned 26 Sunday, said he was assigned to take the youth aloft in a two-seat single engine Cessna 150 Aerobat.

He said that after they were airborne, Johnston pulled a .22-caliber revolver and ordered him to head for Kentucky. Once over Paducah, he was ordered to head across Illinois towards Missouri, he said.

When over Missouri, Johnston offered the grisly choices and ordered the plane to be thrown into a spin, Leibundguth said.

After the plane began spiraling, Johnston, on the downward side of the airplane, locked his left arm in the pilot's right arm and stuck the muzzle of the gun in his ribs, Leibundguth said. A shot was fired as the two men wrestled for the gun and he kicked Johnston out the door, which had popped open, Leibundguth said. He said he recovered from the spin after falling 5,000 feet, to a little more than 3,000 feet above the ground, then landed and called police.

Mississippi County, Missouri, Sheriff W. J. Simmons said the shot grazed the buckle of the pilot's seat belt.

An FBI agent in Missouri said Sunday no weapon had been found, but a search was continuing.

To Honor Ambassador

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The United States ambassador to Honduras, Phillip Sanchez, will be honored by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, a spokesman has announced. Sanchez was selected as honorary alumnus of the year from more than 350 nominations nationwide, said Dr. Norman A. Baxter, president of Fresno State University. Sanchez is a graduate of Fresno State and a former Fresno County administrative officer.

October Dry After Wet Nine Months

October was drier than usual but the U.S. Big Spring Experiment Station still showed total precipitation 7.9 inches above normal for the year to date.

After 0.54 of an inch was measured Oct. 22, the last and only significant October rain, the total was 26.71 inches.

Evaporation claimed 6.33 inches of water. The average for 25 years has been 6.00 inches.

Temperature hit a record low of 37 degrees on Oct. 2. The high of 88 degrees set no new records when it was witnessed on Oct. 9 and 10.

On the average, it was neither much cooler nor much hotter than most Octobers. The average daily high was 77 degrees as compared to the normal October average of 78. Daily lows averaged 50 degrees for October, 1975, while 51 is normal.

Similarly, wind kept almost normal average speed, 3.5 miles per hour. The station reports 3.6 miles per hour is the average.

Fear Of Public Gunman Robs Church Sparks Marine Collection Plate

Acceptance

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Fear of public reaction to the court-martial of a woman Marine lieutenant charged with having sexual relations with enlisted men forced the military to accept her resignation under honorable conditions, her attorney says.

A court-martial had been ordered for 2nd Lt. Mary Niflis, 23, later this month on charges of having sexual relations with six enlisted men. The Navy had offered only an undesirable discharge. But it was announced Friday that the secretary of the Navy had accepted her resignation and that she would be given an honorable discharge.

Jay Jeffcoat of El Centro, Calif., her civilian lawyer, said Sunday in a telephone interview that the Marine Corps decided that the outcry provoked by news coverage up to now would only be a "sneak preview" of what was to come.

Jeffcoat, who termed the military response to her alleged misconduct "a classic example of unequal justice," said the trial would have involved "allegations with explicit sexual detail which, even covered by responsible journalists, would have been sensational."

He said, the best offer a Pentagon lawyer made last week was an undesirable discharge "with a loss of all veterans' privileges."

Lt. Niflis, who is divorced from a Marine she met in basic training, was charged last July with "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman" for having alleged sex acts with the six at the Marine Air Corps Station here.

Jeffcoat criticized the Marine Corps for failing to charge any of the men. He said some of the sergeants allegedly involved "were told their careers were on the line if they didn't cooperate." Jeffcoat said they were assured there would be no charges in return for their help.

The lawyer said there is little distinction between an honorable discharge and a general discharge under honorable conditions.

"Each carries the same benefits," he said. "It really didn't make too much difference to us which one it was."

Lt. Niflis says she will have no comment until she is a civilian.

But in Southbury, Conn., Mrs. Jean Rickard, 66, the officer's mother, said she still wants a congressional investigation of her daughter's treatment.

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)

— Just after Alma McCray asked "God to bless those who have given," a gunman broke into a Baptist Church and made off with the collection plate, police said.

It happened while members of the Cooper Row First Baptist Church near Shreveport were singing their prayers at the conclusion of the Sunday service.

A bandit with a pistol pushed inside and told male members of the congregation to drop their wallets on the collection plate. About $60 was taken.

"Everybody realized what was going on but they were sure surprised," said Willie Jackson, the 67-year-old assistant pastor. "We were having a good time serving the Lord and we couldn't think of anything to do."

Caddo Parish Sheriff's Deputy Willie Jones said the man fled in a late model car. A paper bag containing five empty wallets was found by police.

Jackson, who said about 20 persons were in the church during the holdup, said the bandit got his wallet which was empty. He said some of the women in the congregation hid their purses under the pews. There were no children in the church.

Eva B. White, an usher, said the bandit tried to come in during the offertory prayer but she held the door shut.

"As soon as the prayer ended he lunged through the door and grabbed me by the shoulder and said, 'This is a stickup! Don't move or I'll shoot!'" she related.

Criticize Watergate

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Bob Woodward, one of the two Washington Post reporters who won the Pulitzer Prize for their Watergate stories, criticized those who continue to dwell on the Watergate affair.

"I think anybody who's clamoring for more is sort of clamoring for more blood," Woodward said Wednesday night at Yale University's Trumbull College.

"I think we know what happened in Watergate and I think it would be a healthy thing for the country to get to other matters that loom very, very large," he said.

another person. David Switzer, a member of the theology faculty at Southern Methodist University who has worked with the suicide prevention center, said more study is needed on how the Dallas rate compares to that of other cities.

But, he said, the current figures "indicate something is out of kilter here."

DALLAS (AP) — The suicide rate in Dallas has climbed sharply in the past few years and now is above the national average.

The Dallas Health Department reported recently that from October 1974 until September 1975, 157 Dallas residents killed themselves, compared with 111 for the previous 12-month period.

That is an rate of 17.64 per 100,000 population, while the national average is 12.5.

Dr. Seymour Perlin, an authority on suicide, said in a recent interview that the Dallas rate "was surprisingly high. It tells you something is happening in the community. It says people are giving up on the community or the community isn't responding."

The Dallas Suicide Prevention Center, which provides around-the-clock referral services, currently handles between 800 and 1,000 telephone calls a month.

Josef Caldwell, clinical director for the center, said the suicide rate could be attributed to the high proportion of single and transient persons living in Dallas. Suicide experts say single persons are far more prone to commit suicide than those married or living with

Republicans Make Rules For Presidential Primary

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas Republicans have decided to make their own rules for 1976's so-called presidential primary that was promoted by a Democrat-controlled legislature to help Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex.

In other action Sunday, the 62-member State Republican Executive Committee approved 1976 plans for a party-sanctioned statewide committee to funnel campaign money and effort to GOP candidates with the best chances of winning.

"It's ridiculous," State GOP Chairman Ray Hutchinson said. "This is not a presidential primary at all. If a presidential candidate comes into your district he cannot ask you to vote for him. He has to ask you to vote for Joe Blow who is his candidate for delegate to the national convention."

The state committee also elected by a 33-30 vote a new national committeewoman from Texas to replace Mrs. Rita Bass Clements, Dallas, who resigned.

Mrs. Pat Archer, wife of Rep. Bill Archer, R-Tex, of Houston, was chosen over Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, after a long, sometimes-heated campaign. Mrs. Archer reportedly had the personal support of Sen. John Tower, R-Tex.

Tower told the committee afterwards that it was "an election we could not lose one way or the other."

Four different resolutions were adopted by the state committee to set the stage for the election of national convention delegates next May as required by a new law pushed by supporters of Bentsen in the 1975 legislature.

The law, effective for 1976 only, requires that at least 75 per cent of a party's delegates to the 1976 national conventions must be elected by voters in the first primary from the 31 senatorial districts. The delegate candidates will be identified on the ballot by the presidential candidate they support or as uncommitted. The remaining delegates will be chosen at the June state conventions.

By a 63-1 vote the GOP committee decided to elect four delegates from each of the 24 congressional districts to get 96 of its 100 delegates to Kansas City. The other four will be named at the June 19 state convention in Fort Worth.

Texas Democrats plan to name 75 per cent of their delegates by referendum in the 31 senatorial districts, and 25 per cent in state convention.

In addition to confirming the June state convention for June 19 in Fort Worth, the committee set the Sept. 11 Second State Convention for Austin.

GIFT TO VETERANS — Mrs. Martha Ford, department commander, Mrs. Katie Spivey, commander Unit 47, Mrs. Margaret Caldwell, region 1 junior vice commander, and Mrs. Catherine Early, department adjutant, all from the Disabled American Auxiliary Department of Texas, present to Dene Sheppard, chief of voluntary services at the Big Spring VA Hospital, a $500 donation for the hospital. The money was raised from the sale of Christmas cards by the auxiliary and will be used to buy a color television for one of the hospital's day rooms. Each VA hospital in the state received a similar donation.

COMMUNITY CENTER New Base Theater Is Initial Step

The first step toward Webb AFB's new community center was made recently when funds were approved for a new theater. The Air Force staff stamped its approval on spending $550,000 from nonappropriated funds for the all brick and concrete building. The Secretary of the Air Force has yet to sign it.

To be located on the corner of Simler and Avenue C, the theater will seat 350 as compared to the present 600-seat building which has been declared fragile in a wind-storm.

Eventually Avenue C will be closed off and the community center will extend from the bowling alley to the credit union with parking spaces in between. Future new buildings to be included in the center are one for arts and crafts, a chapel annex, library, post office, clothing sales store, child-care center, base exchange and commissary. All will be permanent type buildings.

Base officials are shooting for November 76 for completion of the theater. The contract is expected to be let around the first of the year, with invitations for bids going out within a month.

The theater will feature a formal rounded proscenium stage which is a type that extends out beyond the curtain. Seats will be in rows following the rounded stage pattern of alignment.

All new equipment will be installed in the theater, including projectors and screen and concession furniture. A parking lot for 78 cars will be the first portion of the larger parking area planned for the whole community center.

Fewer Persons Die By Violence

By The Associated Press

Fewer persons than usual died violently in Texas for a second straight weekend.

The toll between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday tabulated by The Associated Press amounted to 11 fatalities, including nine on streets and highways and two homicides. For the same period a week earlier there were reports of just three deaths.

The latest victims included: Ira Dixon, 34, of Beaumont died Sunday night in a collision at Nederland in Southeast Texas. Seven other persons suffered injuries.

Two teen-agers were killed Sunday in a car which ran off a road and overturned about three miles west of West Columbia. David Paul Drake, 18, and Nancy Gay Lakey, 18, both of Sweeny, were dead on arrival at a hospital.

Elven Rogers, 40, of Brenham, died Sunday about three hours after he was injured in a traffic accident about eight miles north of Bellville. State police said the car Rogers was driving left the road and overturned three times.

Joe Louis Ortiz, 20, of Houston, died Sunday shortly after the car he was driving and two other vehicles were involved in a collision on a Houston freeway.

Elias Carlos Martinez, 52, of Houston was killed Saturday night when he was struck by a car. Police quoted a witness as saying Martinez was "jogging" when the accident occurred.

Terry Michael Trainham, 12, of Euless, died Saturday after being struck by a car as he tried to cross Airport Freeway in Euless.

John Felix Krus, 59, a

Chrane Named Local Dealer

Bill Chrane Auto Sales, 1300 East 4th St., has been named this area's factory authorized dealer for Coachmen Industries Inc., of Middlebury, Ind., the nation's largest full-line manufacturer of recreational vehicles and related products.

Chrane's will carry the full line of Coachmen recreational vehicles, including camping trailers, van campers, mini motor homes, and Class A motor homes, in a variety of lengths, floor plans and decor.

Bill Chrane, owner of the dealership, has been an automobile dealer for ten years and has recently added recreational vehicles to his dealership. In addition to automobiles and recreational vehicles, he also carries boats and marine products.

Houston cab driver, was found shot to death Saturday. Police said the body was next to his cab, shot three times in the back of the head. Officers said robbery apparently was the motive.

A 55-year-old Houston man, Herbert McKinney, was killed Saturday when he was struck by a car as he attempted to cross a highway, police said.

Billy Barton, 25, of Duncanville, was killed Friday night when his car hit a bridge support at the intersection of Marvin Love Freeway and Lyndon B. Johnson Freeway in Dallas.

Houston police said John Johnson Jr., 45, was found shot to death in a field Saturday after an argument at a tavern. They said he apparently was shot inside the tavern and ran outside before he died.

TFU Conclave Is Dec. 5-6

Farmers from across Texas will converge on Fort Worth Dec. 5-6 to attend the 72nd annual convention of Texas Farmers Union. The meeting in the new Hilton Inn, downtown, Fort Worth, will focus on the theme of "1976: The Year for Parity and Abundance."

Texas Farmers Union President Jay Naman of Waco explained that the theme for this year's Farmers Union convention is intended to dramatize the need for a national food policy. "If abundant food supplies are to be provided to the consumer at reasonable prices, we must provide farmers with the incentive to produce. This means the number one priority of this government should be the adoption of a national food policy."

Headliners who will address the Farmers Union convention include United States Senator John Tower, Texas Attorney General John Hill, Rocky Mountain Farmers Union President John Stencel of Denver, Agriculture Commissioner John White and National Farmers Union Insurance President Ray Novak of Denver.

Facilities Due To Be Expanded

COLORADO CITY — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission will hold public hearings Nov. 21 in Austin on the second phase of an expansion and building program being undertaken at Lake Colorado City State Park.

The plan calls for expenditures of $1,197,641 in construction of new camping sites, picnic facilities and a new trailer dump station. The first phase of the park's development was completed in 1973.

DEATHS

Mrs. Hamby

Mrs. Victoria Ellen Hamby, 103, died at 2:45 a.m., today in a local nursing home.

Services will be at 10:30 a.m., Wednesday in the Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel, with the Rev. Jene Greer, pastor of Wesley United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Hamby was born Victoria Ellen Berry Dec. 19, 1871, in Arkansas. She married Joel F. Hamby March 4, 1894, in Arkansas. Mr. Hamby died May 25, 1960.

They moved to the Luther community from Ballinger in January, 1921. She had resided in Big Spring since 1949. She was a member of the Wesley United Methodist Church.

Priest Is Fined For Celebrating Mass In Home

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — A 71-year-old Catholic priest who still says Mass in Latin is going to court to appeal the $250 fine imposed on him for celebrating Mass at a private home.

For the Rev. Joseph E. Gedra, his case today in Fairfax County Circuit Court centers around the question of constitutional freedoms of religion and assembly and how they fit with a controversial county zoning ordinance.

Father Gedra had been convicted last August by a lower court judge of violating the ordinance barring virtually any kind of regular church service in a section of this Washington, D.C., suburb zoned for single-family homes.

The Fairfax ordinance also is being challenged by a group of 12 Baptist congregations in the county and a woman who holds regular Bible study sessions in her home.

Father Gedra and his Church of the Assumption were turned down in 1973 when they sought to obtain a special permit to use his residence as a church.

Leonard Konecny, a county zoning inspector who brought the charges against Father Gedra, said the request was rejected because "having a church there was not in keeping with the best interests of the neighborhood."

The priest's lawyer, John Matonis, has contended that the zoning ordinance is unconstitutional because it limits the practice of religion and the right of free assembly.

"It's discriminatory against religion," he said. "If it were some other kind of meeting that was being held in someone's home, then they wouldn't do a thing about it."

Matonis also said "the absurdity of the whole thing" was emphasized by a 1969 Supreme Court ruling that an individual can show pornographic movies in his home. "It's under the protection of the Constitution to show pornography in a private neighborhood, but when it comes to religious services there, it's another thing."

Another challenge to the ordinance has come from the Ketocin Association of Regular Baptists, a 2,000-member group that has brought a federal court suit charging that the ordinance infringes on their right to worship together in their homes.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert R. Merighe last month granted a temporary order restraining the county from enforcing the zoning rule, but another judge subsequently refused to extend the stay.

However, the Baptist group's lawyer, Gilbert K. Davis, noted that following last week's election, the chairmanship of the local board of supervisors had shifted to a member who had been against enforcement of the ordinance.

"I think there's a very good possibility that the board, now that it has a different make-up, will take some positive action to rescind that ordinance," Davis said Sunday.

Act One Way Or Another Bicen Alcove On Bid, Court Is Told Open At Webb

A Federal Aviation Administration official from Albuquerque, N.M., today advised County Commissioners Court to accept or reject the proposal from Trans Regional Airlines for fixed-base operation.

But Bill J. Howard said the county should be non-discriminatory.

"In other words, use the same yard stick to measure his contract" as was used in granting Big Spring Aircraft Inc. the lease of Howard County Airport, Howard said.

Trans Regional is seeking

More CBs Lifted

Several citizen band radios have been stolen in Coahoma, the sheriff's office reported today.

Red Harding said one was taken from his car while it was parked by his home.

At O. D. Daniel Trucking Co., two were missing from trucks.

And Gaylen Harding reported $70 worth of tools and a citizen band radio stolen from trucks at the Reid Brothers Fina Service Station.

Key Club Will Undertake Trip

The local Key Club will undertake an endurance mission Tuesday, hoping to inspire the Big Spring High School football team in its final game with San Angelo Friday.

Key Club members, 26 of them, will "walk" the BSHS "victory bell" from the city limits to San Angelo football stadium, working in relays.

The bell likely will arrive in San Angelo sometime Thursday and be secured at the stadium until game-time Friday night.

Lone Star District Plans Dec. 2 Recognition Event

On Dec. 2, the Lone Star Scouting District will hold its annual recognition banquet at Howard College. The banquet recognizes the services of unit leaders and other volunteers who have given special service to boys during the past year. Featured speaker will be Dr. Kenneth Patrick, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

Scouts from Troop 16 and Troop 1778 who became Eagles during the year also will be spotlighted, as will those leaders who have earned training and service awards and who have attained their goals in President Ford's 1975 Boy Round-up. A bicentennial closing will be presented by the Webelos of Pack 305.

The program, under the direction of Walter Wheat, will be emceed by J. Arnold Marshall and will contain two surprise occasions; a to obtain a second lease on the airport and to compete with Big Spring Aircraft.

Insufficient grounds or safety are acceptable reasons for rejecting the airlines' proposal, Howard said.

The apparent lack of enough business for two airport operators is not.

"LIKE TITANIC" The county was not concerned about whether Trans Regional failed in the venture, County Attorney W. H. Bill Eyssen Jr. said.

"Just as long as they can sink like the Titanic without leaving any unsatisfied judgments on us," Eyssen added.

"All we're trying to do is see that there will be a service out there from somebody," Commissioner Ikie Rupard said.

If it was determined the county discriminated and had "granted an exclusive right" to Big Spring Aircraft, Howard said the FAA would not provide any more federal funds or surplus property for the airport.

"CONFIDENTIAL" County Judge Bill Tule did not want to open a financial statement from Louis Rosenbaum, president of Trans Regional, because the statement was marked confidential to the county judge only.

R. E. McClure, vice president of Trans Regional, told Judge Tule he would have copies of the statement addressed to commissioners court and Eyssen.

What about the news media? Judge Tule asked. "If the confidentiality of it has been removed, it's gone," Eyssen said.

Eyssen said any objections he uncovers will be "blown to the public whatever they might be."

The court plans to make a decision on the lease proposal two weeks from today.

A permanent Bicentennial alcove has been created in the Webb AFB library with displays being changed periodically. The current theme features H. C. McBarron's "The American Soldier," 1781-1855 to be shown through Thanksgiving.

The transition of uniforms from "the pomp and ceremony" European version in the 1790s gave way by 1855 to standard dark blue frock coats and "gig" caps.

Even more outstanding in the American military uniform was the lack of decorations until the Civil War. Only a "Purple Heart," created by George Washington in 1782, had been awarded for "singularly meritorious action."

The library is open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays and from noon to 5 p.m. on weekends. It is currently receiving the Bicentennial Times monthly, published by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration. Back issues will be on file. Information on grants for programs, statewide activities and gratis material is given in the publication.

Another display features American Revolution posters by Leonard Fisher. In one drawing, "The Swamp Fox Strikes Again," Francis Marion of South Carolina is in action against the British.

Reading materials such as Stember's guide to the American Revolution, War in the South, will be included.

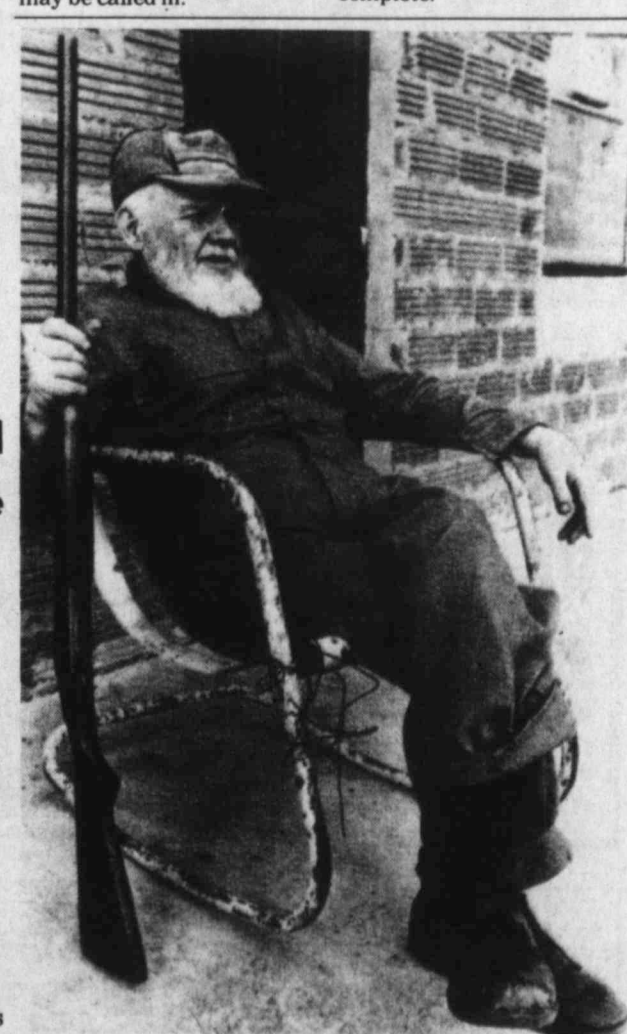

Committee Post Is Turned Down

LAMESA — Mrs. Gladys Shipley, tax collector-assessor for the Lamesa Independent School District, has declined an invitation from the governor's office to become a regional director in a statewide survey of property values.

Had Mrs. Shipley accepted the appointment, she would have been granted a leave up to six months to help complete the survey.

Domino Champs

LAMESA — Marshal Coborn and Richard Gentry have been crowned domino champions of Dawson County, having survived all challenges in a tournament that took four months to complete.

THEY SHALL NOT LAY PIPELINE — Glenn O. Young, an 80-year-old retired special judge, sits on the front porch of his home at Sparks, Okla., armed with a shot-gun. Young says he'll use the shotgun and a .22 caliber pistol to keep an oil company from laying a pipeline across his property.

SNIP AND IT'S OPEN — The camera caught this historic moment for Malone and Hogan Clinic Sunday afternoon when Dr. P. W. Malone and Dr. J. E. Hogan, founders of the association of physicians 37 years ago, cut the ribbon symbolically opening the new clinic facilities. A large crowd thronged through the new three-story plant located adjacent to the new hospital. Pictured with the founders, from left, are Dr. Thomas Frist Sr., vice president and founder of Hospital Corporation of America, and John Neff, right, HCA president who had come to congratulate their neighbors.

Two Who Founded Clinic On Hand To Cut Ribbon

While several hundred people watched, the two men who founded Malone and Hogan Clinic here 37 years ago, cut a ribbon Sunday afternoon symbolizing the formal opening of the new building bearing the founders' names.

Throughout the next three hours, a few thousand more came to tour the striking three-story, 60,000 square foot structure with its battery of physician offices, treatment rooms and auxiliary and administrative facilities.

"If this clinic building doesn't serve people," said Dr. P. W. Malone in welcoming those assembled for the ribbon cutting ceremonies, "it is for naught."

Dr. J. E. Hogan, his colleague when the health enterprise was founded here Nov. 1, 1938, echoed this sentiment. Like Dr. Malone, he paid tribute to their physician associates and to the clinic personnel. It was through their dedication, along with encouragement of wives, which had contributed most to the clinic's growth, he said.

Saluting the clinic group, an association of private physicians which owns and operates the new plant, Dr. Thomas Frist Sr., Nashville, Tenn., vice president and chief medical officer of Hospital Corporation of America, which owns the neighboring Malone-Hogan Hospital, said "you have here a health complex as fine as any in the nation." It was significant, he said, that both were private undertakings and as such were taxpayers, rather than tax consumers.

With Dr. Frist to wish their neighbors well were John C. Neff, president of HCA, and 10 other HCA and builder-supplier representatives.

Among special guests were Fred Kasch, of Kasch Bros., the builders, also Bertha Schugart and Maurine W. Sweeney, former early-day staff members, and D. S. (Schley) Riley, former clinic administrator. Among staffers showing visitors through the handsomely appointed building were June Matson Asbury and Carol Hull, the senior employees.

Physicians, their wives and families, along with other guests were honored at a luncheon immediately preceding the open house. R. L. Heith, clinic administrator, said that he was delighted at the response of the public to the opening of the new facilities.

Hise Will Head TSTA District In 1977-78

Lynn Hise, Big Spring, was named president-elect of District 18 of the Texas State Teachers Association at a meeting last week at Odessa Permian High School.

Hise will enter training for the post next June 1 and will assume office during the 1977-78 school year. The election was held at a House of Delegates meeting Thursday night.

Mrs. Lois Phillips, Big Spring, was elected to the office of district secretary and will assume office next June 1. Like Hise, she will serve for one year.

Over 3,000 teachers attended the District 18 convention Friday. Coach Faye O'Dell, athletic director at Perry High School, Perry, Okla., was the featured speaker at the general session Friday morning.

Coach O'Dell combined anecdotes with a motivational message on national and spiritual issues, stressing as his theme "God Bless America."

Representing the local TSTA unit as convention delegates were Mrs. Janice Rosson, Mrs. Lynn Calvert, Mrs. Rhonda Rothell, Mrs. Betty Birdwell, Mike Cowley, Mrs. Ruth Ann Box, John Stiles, Mrs. Vivien Buckner, Mrs. Mary Nell Hise, Harvey Rothell, Mrs. Chris Mullins, Ms. Peggy Irwin, Mrs. Lucy Bonner, Mrs. Shirley Shroyer, Mrs. Phillips and Hise.

Also attending the House of Delegates meeting were Ernest Boyd as chairman of the Credentials Committee and Don Green as chairman of the Auditing Committee.

Trio From Here New Acolytes

Among 33 new West Texans who took their second steps toward final ordination as deacons in the Ministry of the Acolyte at the Sacred Heart Cathedral in San Angelo Sunday were Peter Gregg, David King and Wayne Rock, all of Big Spring.

Ennie Sanchez, Stanton, also undertook training to become a permanent deacon in the Catholic Church. Prime duties of the 33 acolytes will be assisting a priest or deacon during the liturgical celebration or Mass. The acolyte also may distribute communion during Mass after he has received the host from the celebrant. The new acolytes are within the San Angelo Diocese.

Lock Broken Car Hits Tree

Daniel Sanford, 1402 Birdwell Lane, said he had parked his car at the rear of 1601 Main St. Friday night. But, police related, he returned later that night and discovered the steering lock had been broken and the vehicle rolled half a block and into a tree.

STILL SELLING LECHEs — Harry Neff, a Philadelphia druggist since 1923, still sells leeches. The parasitic bloodsuckers are seldom recommended by doctors anymore, but Neff said he has a small, but steady, demand when he can get the small leeches. Right now, said Neff, he's waiting for some from London. The only two wholesale leech outlets in the U.S., both in New York, closed last year, he said.

Jail Crowding Causes Escapes

THIBODAUX, La. (AP) — LaFourche Parish Sheriff Bobby Tardo wants Gov. Edwin Edwards to help him relieve overcrowding at the parish jail, where prisoners staged their second jailbreak in a month Saturday.

"If I have to go to court and file suit I will," Tardo said.

Local officials around the state have made similar complaints, and state officials so far have been unable to come up with a quick method of relieving the population pressures at Angola.

U.S. District Court Judge E. Gordon West issued the order prohibiting admission of more inmates at Angola, following an earlier order requiring the state to reduce the chronic overcrowding at the sprawling prison farm.

The State Corrections Department is considering everything from putting some prisoners on an old ship to housing them in vacant public buildings around the state.

Public opposition has blocked some of the plan to transfer inmates out of the isolated Angola area, with voters saying they don't want prisoners housed near their neighborhoods.

Tardo has seven inmates who have been sentenced to Angola but are still in the LaFourche Parish jail because of the federal court order, he said.

"This is an old jail and is certainly not the best facilities for these needs," Tardo said.

In Saturday's incident, four inmates broke out of the jail, chased a deputy down Main Street and through a plate glass window. Three of them took a hostage and fled in her car, Tardo said. A fourth fled on foot.

All were recaptured by nightfall and one was shot in the leg, but there were no serious injuries.

For three of the prisoners it was their second jailbreak in one month, Tardo said.

The inmates were identified as Nolan Anthony Schouest, 24, of Lockport; Norris Fanguy, 26, of Houma; Johnny Thibodeaux, 28, of Orange, Tex.; and Francis Ferigny, 33, of Golden Meadows.

Egyptian President Presented Painting

HOUSTON — Egyptian president Anwar Sadat was presented a painting by Texas' official state artist, Jack White.

White made the presentation at the finale of ceremonies arranged to honor and entertain the Egyptian ruler and his wife during their first visit to Texas. Sadat was obviously pleased with the painting of a longhorn cattle drive, and asked enthusiastic questions concerning White's technique.

The program was held outside Houston at the ranch of Mr. Hugh Marshall, and included a rodeo, an Indian tribal dance, and a Western style shoot-out. The Egyptian president appeared to enjoy these festivities, but stated that he was most impressed with White's painting.

White was appointed Texas State Artist earlier this year, and also serves as official artist for the Texas Rangers. He is best known for his opulent gold works called "echrusesos". The original technique involves an overlay of gold leaf onto a painting on glass.

White owns a gallery in New Braunfels housed in the historic Prince Solms Inn; is founder of a wildlife foundation called Running Springs; and has served as president of the Texas Cowboy Artists, XII.

Gavel Club Has Meeting

The Past Matrons Gavel Club of the Laura B. Hart Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star met Thursday evening for dinner at La Posada. Mrs. Charles Boland presided during the business meeting.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. E. A. Fiveash and Mrs. Bill Griesse.

During the devotional period, members shared their "Greatest Blessings".

Mrs. Fiveash was elected treasurer for the remainder of the year.

Gives Structure

Wheat flour contains gluten to give a structural framework to breads. Other flours contain little or no gluten. If a gluten-free recipe is needed, follow ones using only corn, potato, rice, soy and tapioca flours, advises Mrs. Mary Sweeten, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Dear Abby

No Funds Appropriated For Parent Locator Service

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column that wives who have been deserted by their husbands and who have had to go on welfare to support their families should write to the Parent Locator Service, in care of the Health, Education and Welfare Office in Washington, D.C.

You said that department would locate the absent parents through Social Security records, and they would inform the wife of her husband's whereabouts. In the past, such information was considered confidential, and the department refused to give it out.

Well, I followed your advice, and the HEW wrote back saying they were sorry but they couldn't help me. How come?

Thanks for nothing. DESERTED IN TEXAS DEAR DESERTED: Last August, a spokesman for the HEW wrote to advise me that the whereabouts of an absent spouse would no longer be confidential if he deserted his family and failed to meet his financial obligations. I was advised to inform my readers to write to the HEW in Washington, D.C., for assistance in locating absent spouses.

After that item appeared in my column, the HEW in Washington, D.C., was inundated with requests for help. All were refused.

When I demanded an explanation, they apologetically told me that such a bill had been passed, but that Congress had failed to appropriate the funds to provide that service — and then asked that I please inform deserted wives to apply to their state welfare department for assistance in locating an absent spouse.

DEAR ABBY: To the woman who calls herself

Congratulations

Position Important

When sewing engineered or large scale designs, select pattern styles with few horizontal or vertical seams which can break up the design. The back shirt pattern is usually positioned over the largest or boldest design. Other pattern pieces, especially shirt fronts and sleeves, are also usually positioned to continue the design from the back.
