Short Ballot Law In Texas To Be Tested

Secretary Of State Says She Will Refuse To Comply With Legislative Provision And Asks Love To Aid

Doubts Validity

Law Provides Names Of Party Nominees Be Printed On The Ballots Instead Of Names Of 23 State Electors

(By The Associated Press)

AUSTIN, April 23. — Mrs. Jane Y. McCallum, Texas secretary of state, announced today that unless compelled to do so, through mandamus, she would ignore a recently enacted law providing for voting direct on presidential candidates in arranging the general election ballots.

The law, enacted by the forty second legislature, provided that names of party nominees for president and vice president should be printed on the ballots instead of names of the twenty three state electors (one for each representative in congress.)

Shorter Ballots Sought

The legislature proposed the innovation in the interest of a shorter and less involved ballot. It was pointed out that a number of the states voted directly for the nominee instead of electors.

Although the Texas attorney general's department held the new law constitutional in an opinion to Mrs. McCallum, she said she still doubted its validity and in a letter to former state Senator Thomas B. Love of Dallas, suggested that he bring mandamus proceedings to test the statute.

Mrs. McCallum said she and Mr. Love had conferred over the validity of the new law.

Precaution Taken

She said that despite the attorney general's ruling she was "unable to overcome a conviction that further precaution should be taken to insure participation of this state in the electoral college."

Mrs. McCallum said she believed the law was violative of section four

(By The Associated Press)

APPLE SPRINGS, Tex., April 23—Fellow townsmen since childhood, a farmer and a constable killed the other here late this afternoon in a duel precipitated when the two men met on the street.

The constable, Walt Crow, 55, was shot three times with a small caliber pistol. He died within 15 minutes.

Brent Hollis, 44, farmer, also was shot three times. He died instantly.

Neither of the men uttered a word before or after the tragedy.

Witnesses said that the battle took place when the two men, between whom ill feeling is known to have existed for the last three years, met face to face in front of a drug store.

Walking in opposite directions, each of the men appeared to have drawn his gun as they came within 15 feet of each other.

The shots rang out, the roars of the guns blending as six shots were fired from the pistols in the hands of the two men.

Both tumbled to the ground as the shots ended. Hollis was dead when the first person rushed from a drug store and knelt over his prostrate form. Crow did not speak after the shooting, witnesses declared.

The two men, both of whom have spent their entire lives at this town, are known to have meen unfriendly three years, it is believed of a remark said to have been made about a woman relative of one of the men.

Rains Fall In Wide Sections

High Wind And Sandstorm Felt At Amarillo As Aftermath To Moisture; Other Parts Of State Aided

In some portions of the Panhandle and the South Plains, there were high winds and hail, but no great damage was done. At Amarillo, wind attained a velocity of 55 miles an hour.

The rains fell after an interval that had caused fears of drouth in some sections. At Wellington a dry period ended that had begun early in February.

Sand Follows Rain

The phenomenon of a sandstorm following a rain visited Amarillo. Blown from the south, dust filled the air until vision was hampered and twilight haze developed.

Sweetwater and Shaufler reported three inches of rain; Snyder, one inch; Shamrock, a heavy rain; Longview, a hard rain; Denton, nearly an inch, Dallas, .29 inch; Sherman, .5; San Antonio, .78; Austin, .7; Palestine .12; El Paso, Del Rio, Corpus Christi and Brownsville, traces.

For Sunday showers were forecast in East Texas, and colder weather, with a probability of frost in north and west portions, of West Texas.

Husband Faces Murder Charge

Father Of Seven Slain In New Mexico Charged With Murder Of Wife; May Face Count In Death Of Children

(By The Associated Press)

EL PASO, April 23.—Melquiades Espinosa, husband and father of seven persons slain at their home near Berino, N. M., three weeks ago, was charged with the murder of his wife, Filomena, in a complaint filed before Peace Justice Tom Abalos at Las Cruces this afternoon.

District Attorney J. Benson Newell said he ordered the charges filed when it appeared certain that attorneys for Espinosa would seek his release from the Dona Ana county jail on a writ of habeas corpus.

Espinosa has been held in jail since the day following the murders in which his wife and six children were slain.

May File Others

Although he does not have sufficient information to go to trial in the case, Newell said, he believes he has enough cumulative evidence to warrant filing of charges and holding Espinosa until the murders are cleared up.

Similar complaints will be filed charging the murder of the children if attorneys are successful in effecting Espinosa's release, the district attorney said.

Espinosa probably will be given a preliminary hearing Monday or Tuesday, Newell said.

Story Of Anaconda Pool Told By Two Witnesses; Missing Bear Traders Turn Up After Lengthy Search

BY NATHAN ROBERTSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 23. — The object for days of an unavailing senate search, two of Wall street's big bear traders—Thomas E. Bragg and Bernard E. Smith—calmly walked into a committee room today and proceeded to tell a story packed with startling surprises for their eager inquisitors.

John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, Fred J. Fisher, W. C. Durant and W. F. Kenny, they testified, had been associated with them in a gigantic $32,000,000 pool on Anaconda copper in 1929. They lost heavily.

Woman Included

In addition, they said Mrs. Michael J. Meehan, whose husband was specialist in radio on the floor of the stock exchange, engaged in a pool on that stock in 1928 and 1929. A subpoena has been issued for Meehan.

William Gray, counsel for the committee, announced that if the committee approved, Raskob and others mentioned by the two would be called upon for testimony.

Bragg was the first to testify. Senator Couzens of Michigan drew from him the story of the Anaconda pool.

Has No Business

After being sworn, Bragg was asked his business.

"I have no business," he replied. "I am a speculator." He added that he had played the "bull" side of the market up until 1929, and in September of that year went short.

He said he went into the Anaconda pool and lost about $400,000. He denied, under persistent questioning, that the pool was formed to manipulate the stock.

When Smith took the stand he

Maneuvers Of Three Men Are Accelerated; Developments Expected Soon; Curtis Away On Secret Mission

(By The Associated Press)

NORFOLK, Va., April 23.—Maneuvers by three Norfolk men seeking to bring about the return of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr., were accelerated tonight as at least one of the principals indicated their negotiations were moving towards a climax.

While maintaining his usual silence regarding details, the very Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock intimated that some important development was expected soon as a culmination of three secret missions undertaken this week.

Curtis Is Away

John Hughes Curtis, contact man for the negotiations, was away today on a mission presumably in connection with the negotiations. While Dean Dobson-Peacock said that he himself made a plane flight of several hours duration early this morning.

Dean Dobson-Peacock said he would not tell what progress had been made and when conclusion of their negotiations might be expected.

Development Expected

"I don't know myself," he said, intimating however, that some important development might be expected soon.

It could not be learned if the present mission engaging Mr. Curtis and the flight made today by the clergyman were to points near to those which Mr. Curtis went on other of his missions. The trips made earlier this week by the two men were to points in New Jersey and New York.

Patman Says Bankers Inspire Propaganda To Defeat Bonus Measure And Declares That He Has Evidence

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 23. — The crack of rifles in Nicaraguan jungles reverberated in the senate today with a charge by Lewis of Illinois that American marines had been "murdered" there after being sent to protect the "investments of private bankers."

Three marines were slain Thursday in a clash with an insurgent band in northern Nicaragua.

Demands Withdrawal

Demanding withdrawal of the marines, the Illinois Democrat said "All we get from our government" about the affair is that those killed were repelling the assault of "insurgents." He added the "insurgents" felt they were repelling an invasion of their country.

"The lives of our young men have been used as pledges for the investments of private bankers," Lewis asserted. "There is no justification for sending our soldiers there."

Pledge Is Cited

The marines were being kept in Nicaragua to support the present administration, Lewis charged, because it is under some "pledge to pay these debts to private American bankers."

As a result of the course pursued by the United States, Lewis said, this country has no friends in Central and Southern America.

Secretary Stimson said last year that all marines were to be withdrawn from Nicaragua after the presidential election there next November.

Sheriff Launches Beer 'Joint' War

Almost coincident with the opening of the beer season in Lubbock, the sheriff's department Saturday launched a drive on the "joints" which resulted in the destruction of the equivalent of about 1,000 bottles of "suds" in three raids.

Two men were arrested; one was charged with pro law violation and a complaint probably will be filed against the other Monday. Bond of W. G. Jones, arrested on Avenue B when 150 bottles of beer were destroyed, was set by Justice H. K. Porter at $350. Ten gallons of unbottled liquor also was poured out.

In the raid last night, a man—possibly 75 or 80 years old—was arrested on Avenue E. The sheriff's department destroyed 380 bottles of beer and poured out 25 gallons of liquid. In a raid east of town, five gallons of liquid was poured out. Beer making equipment at each of the places raided was destroyed.

Child Dies Of Wound As Innocent Holdup Victim

(By The Associated Press)

DETROIT, April 23. — Billy Reynolds, 8, victim of two bandits interrupted in holding up a grocery store, died in a hospital this afternoon.

The two bandits, Frank Mohr, 39, and Theodore Liley, 26, both of them fathers, were captured shortly after they sent two bullets crashing into Billy's chest and abdomen as he entered the grocery store of Garnet Ritchie last night. The child had gone to the store to deliver a magazine to Ritchie, one of his customers.

As he entered the store, Ritchie cried: "Look out; it's a hold-up!" a shot in the back was Ritchie's reward, and, as the child screamed, two more shots were fired in rapid succession. One of them pierced both of Billy's lungs and the other entered his abdomen.

Both bandits surrendered after one had been wounded in the hand. Police said both admitted the holdup and other robberies.

Ritchie, whose wound was not considered serious, identified the pair.

"Talk Hard Work, Not Hard Times", Advice Of Insurance Company Head At All Day Business Session Here

"Times are more nearly normal now than they were between 1923 and 1929," Harry L. Seay, of Dallas, declared here yesterday at noon before a gathering of Lubbock business men and South Plains representatives of the Southland Insurance company.

"Soft times," said Mr. Seay, who is president of the Southland, "make soft men. We want through such a period of soft times what it is only natural for economic conditions to again settle to a practicable basis.

Gives Men Advice

"A lot of this present depression," he continued, "is mental and one thing is certain—the more we talk about it the more attention we give it. Let's don't talk depression—let's talk hard work!"

Occasion for Mr. Seay's speech was a luncheon tendered Southland agents and a few invited guests at Hotel Lubbock as a post of an all-day business session held here Saturday. Col. Bill Talbot, Dallas, agency manager for the insurance concern and apostle of "Buy Texas Goods," was also present and spoke along the line of "Take Care of Texas and Texas Will Take Care of You."

Neil H. Wright, district agent for the company, presided as toastmaster and Mayor J. J. Clements welcomed the visitors to Lubbock.

About 40 were in attendance.

Clean-up and Paint-up

Lubbock, Let's Go!

Both State and National recognition were brought to Lubbock in 1930-31 because of the excellent record made during Clean-Up and Paint-Up Week. Silver loving cups were awarded the city in both instances. Thousands of pounds of nails were picked up by Boy Scouts. Campfire girls were also active in this movement. Hundreds of walls were papered, woodwork was re-painted and buildings repaired. All these things could not have been accomplished had not the people of Lubbock put their shoulders to the wheel and put the job across. It is typical of Lubbock people to do this in all good movements. They will do it again this year, and we pledge our co-operation toward bettering the city of Lubbock in every respect.

Size Of Man, Not Concern, Counts Most

Giant Corporations Are Not Faring So Good During Depression; Management Is Thing That Counts

BY ROGER W. BABSON

BABSON PARK, Florida, April 23—There is such a thing as business getting too big. In every successful corporation there must be one man capable of dominating the whole business. This depression proves that with the huge corporation, the task is almost too great for one man to handle, no matter how capable he may be. As long as business is small or medium-sized there are men big enough in brain and character to guide the business to success even through hard times. That is why some of the smaller companies are actually doing better today than the giant corporations. Out of 1,500 well-known industrial companies only 57 showed increased profits in 1931 over 1930. The remarkable thing is that 43 of these were medium-sized or actually small concerns. Twenty-five of them were below the million dollar earnings class and 17 of them below the half-million. This proves that the moderate sized business, capably managed, can be more successful under present conditions than the giant corporations.

Roger Babson

The small business man is still the backbone of this country, despite the enormous growth of many corporations. The majority of the country's total goods is still produced by small manufacturers. Hence, while I recognize the economic need for mass production and mass distribution as practised by large corporations, and while I believe they can do much to help business by such drives as Ford and General Motors are now putting on: nevertheless, the real improvement will come only as the multitude of small business men substitute courage for fear. The smaller companies should take full advantage of the opportunities which are peculiarly theirs under present conditions. Now, as never before, it is the size of the man rather than the size of the business that determines success.

Small Concern More Flexible

Trying to grow too fast was one of the chief causes of this depression. In so-doing business overexpanded, over-produced, overbuilt, and over-speculated on the future. As a consequence, many big corporations grew unwieldly, topheavy with expense, and wide open for trouble when the boom stopped. Medium-sized and small concerns can make rapid readjustments to depression conditions. They are more flexible, they can adapt their products to changing demands without the enormous costs entailed by the big corporation. Most of all, when changes are necessary the man at the head of the small concern can make them swiftly and surely because he personally knows the whole condition of his business, including accounting, financing, selling, labor, products, and prices. Big companies move more slowly, because no one man can carry all that knowledge.

In studying the reports that come to me from many small concerns I have been impressed by the manner in which a number of them have scored gains in earnings, even though sales have declined. One reason is that closer control has made possible quick and thorough over-hauling of operating costs. Another reason is that the small company can make a profit on small special orders, whereas the big concern with a vast amount of machinery and floor space would lose money on such orders. It costs too much to start up a big plant for a small order. More and more these little companies have been getting the business. The smaller concern as a rule is not burdened with the heavy debt charges that must be met by many over-expended corporations. Also, the small concern carries smaller inventories and, therefore, has not suffered the heavy losses experienced by many big concerns through commodity price declines.

Take Employees Into Confidence

One big advantage of the small business man is that he is much closer to his employees. Often times he knows them personally. In these trying times he can explain to his workers the necessity for economies and secure their cooperation, rather than their ill-will. My advice to the small business man is to get rid of any inferiority complex he may have acquired because of big corporation competition. He should wake up to the advantages he now possesses over the big competitor. Also he should carry this message to his employees. Let them know that the small company for which they work has a chance just as good and perhaps better than the big industrial giant for making a strong come-back in sales, earnings, and general recovery. This will do more than anything else to help the morale of the workers, and secure their whole-hearted cooperation in any sacrifices necessary to accomplish the desired results.

Little Fellows First

As we come out of this depression it will be the ably-managed small and medium-sized companies that make the first gains in profits. When times were booming the industrial giants had a big advantage because their huge plants were operating at capacity and, therefore, at costs lower than the small business could meet. Now, however, the situation is reversed. The little fellow is going to have his innings. With big plants operating at a fraction of capacity, over-head and idle machinery quickly raise costs and eat up profits. The closely-knit, compact, well-managed small company bears no such burden. Furthermore, he should heed the greatest lesson of this depression which is: "Be satisfied with less speed than we had from 1925 to 1929." Build solidly, even though slowly; maintain quality at low cost even though the temptation may be strong to make cheap goods. In this way, by playing fair with the public, with employees, and with competitors the small and moderate-sized concern can turn the present depression into the keystone of its future success.

General business as measured by the Babsonchart is now 36 per cent below the normal X-Y Line, compared with 35 per cent a month ago, even with adjustments for usual seasonal movements.

Classification Of Local Dairies To Be Given May 1st

Grades and reclassifications of dairies selling milk in Lubbock will be announced May 1, D. F. Wulfman, city bacteriologist, said Saturday.

Because of high winds carrying sand and dust it has been impossible for dairies to comply with certain requirements, as they have not been able to paint buildings and effect some other improvements, Wulfman said.

Last week, Wulfman said, he found milk of three dairies not up to butterfat requirements. If any dairies are found to be distributing such milk this week, it will be condemned, he said.

Beginning May 1, containers must have labels giving the grade the milk has received, and the name of the dairy and its permit number, and failure to use such labels will result in condemnation of the product, the city bacteriologist added.

Native Of Sweden, Inspector Oscar S. Norling Of Lubbock, Aids Uncle Sam In Deporting Of Undesirable Aliens

BY GORDON WEBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff Writer

A native of Sweden aids Uncle Sam in deporting undesirable aliens. He is Inspector Oscar S. Norling, immigration officer, of Lubbock. Norling was born in Stimorbo, Smedgebacken, Sweden, and came with his parents to the United States when he was five years old.

"Where do I look like I was born?" several persons suspected of illegal residence in the United States have asked Norling.

"Well, where do I look like I was born?" Norling has shot back.

Started Friday 13th

Since Oct. 13, 1925—it happened to be Friday but he doesn't mind—Norling has been in the immigration service. His chief work now is with Mexicans, about 10 per cent of which in this section he estimated illegally crossed the international boundary.

He takes question and answer statements from each suspect—planting a trap and attempting to lead the alien into it. Years of residence on the Mexico-United States border and employment in Mexico gave him fluent Spanish. He speaks Swedish, also.

"Only information on which you can make your case stick lies with the suspect," Norling explained. "And the only way to get it is to set a trap and lead him into it; and if one trap fails, spring another."

As Norling continued to tell, in his unaccented, clear English, of his work, his fingers were rolling loose tobacco in thin brown paper. He sealed the cigaret, crimped down one end, and with the thumbnail of his right hand scraped a match into life. Norlings Brown cigarets—Mexican style—are noticeably small around. They are about half the size of a ready-rolled.

The inspector is compactly built, a man's man for every inch of his five feet, ten and one-half inches. His grey eyes, under bushy, sandy brows, are hard as flint when he is grilling a suspect. His complexion, eyes, sandy hair all tell you Norling is a Nordic, but you would not guess he is not a native American. He was naturalized during the World war, while in the army.

Settled In Chicago

The Norlings settled in Chicago and then went to Aurora, Ill. From Aurora they went to Brownsville in 1908. Three years later young Norling, then 17, went into Mexico as a lineman for a railway company, and later with mining interests. His experience as an officer dates to 1924 when he became a Cameron county deputy sheriff.

During the World war he served as a liaison agent with the brigade headquarters of an artillery unit.

With what aliens has he had dealings?

"Arabs, Syrians, Canadians, Chinese, Japanese, Scandinavians—" Norling began. "You might as well get a list of the nationalities. Even in the section in which I have worked—Texas, New Mexico and Arizona—I have handled practically every one."

The price smugglers are paid by aliens for entry into the United States varies, of course, with the risk and the wealth of the foreigner-born. Some are brought across for as little as $2. One Chinese paid $2,650 for faked entry papers, and wondered why they were not effective.

Inspector and Mrs. Norling and their daughter live at 2323 Eight street. Both Mrs. Norling and their six-year-old daughter often travel with the inspector, and the daughter already has a record of having traveled more than 70,000 miles without having ridden a train or a bus.

Funeral Services Are Held Friday For Plainview Boy

PLAINVIEW, April 23. (Special) Funeral services were held here April 22 for Joseph P. Lane, eight year old son of Mrs. J. B. Short and grandson of J. S. Lane of Lubbock, who died Thursday. The lad died after an attack of diphtheria. A brother, Jack, and a sister, Janelle, two aunts, Mrs. W. C. Jones of Tahoka, and Miss Dorothy Sawyer of Plainview, also survive.

Spur Ex-Service Man Mails Set Of Pictures To Mother Of German World War Vet

SPUR, April 23—(Special)—J. B. Morrow, local ex-service man, recently mailed a package of pictures which he had had since the World war, to Germany and behind the act is a story.

During the World war Mr. Morrow, while serving in France, found a German soldier's pack and in it were some kodak pictures and other papers. He was unable to find the owner of the pack and brought the articles home with him.

Some months ago he wrote to American Legion headquarters and related his story. They got in touch with a German ex-service organization, Des Reichsverband Deutcher, Charlottensstrasse 85, Berlin, S. W. 68, Germany.

In reply he received word that the German soldier's mother was Frau Wwe Brakeln, Kreis Hoxter, Germany.

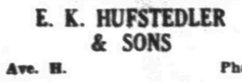

Eight earthquake tremors were felt in Oban, Scotland, recently.

Headquarters For Sports Lovers Is At Mallory's Firm

Supplies For Fishing, Hunting, Golf, Tennis And Camping Are Found At Store; Complete Line Of Lawn Furniture Also Being Offered

Those who like the great out of doors and its sports, fishing, hunting, golf, tennis, camping, etc., find that their headquarters for all sorts of supplies for these sports is at Mallory's store, Main at Avenue J, where a most complete line is to be found.

A new line for Lubbock, is a complete line of lawn furniture at popular prices, says J. W. Mallory, owner, who recently made extensive purchases of a complete stock.

"We are carrying a complete line of Peacock lawn furniture in chairs, stools, porch gliders and the like," he said. "We will have a wide range to select from and in case persons prefer a color we do not have we will order it for them. Heretofore it has not been possible in Lubbock to have a very extensive range of lawn or porch furniture to select from.

Camping Is Popular

"Another line we handle is a large variety of camp cots, tents and other camping equipment. One would be surprised at the number of people who camp out in the spring and summer. We have tarpaulins and wagon covers and there is a steady demand for these from truck drivers.

"For the fisherman who is particular about his fishing tackle, I know of no better line than the Shakespeare or Pflueger lines. We carry both and both are popular. Even the most particular man can be fitted out from these two lines.

"We carry a complete line of golf balls and hunting equipment along with ammunition in season and in fact, there is nothing in the outdoor sports lines that we do not handle.

Clothing Carried

Besides these special lines, Mr. Mallory handles a general line of gent's furnishings and clothing. He carries shirts, shoes, underwear, men's work clothes, neckwear, overalls, etc.

Buck and Pool are the standard lines of work clothing handled and a wide range is on hand to select from.

The Perfecto man's shirt is the featured brand of that line. There are dress shirts and work shirts of all kinds, both winter and summer.

Unionsuits and athletic underwear in a variety of sizes are carried regularly in stock.

Mr. Mallory has been in the gent's furnishing business for more than ten years. He came to Lubbock several years ago as manager for the W. F. Crawford store in the same location as of present. Last September Crawford closed out his store and Mr. Mallory, who remained in Lubbock because he felt that this is the coming section of Texas and West Texas in particular, re-opened a store in the same location under the name of Mallory's.

The location is well known and Mr. Mallary reports an increased trade week by week and month by month.

More Interest Is Taken In Floral Work, Davis Says

Manager of Texas Floral Company Says Residents More Interested In Beautification Work Now; Company's Line Of Supplies Largest In Area

Residents of Lubbock and the South Plains are taking interest in gardens, flowers and yard beautification more and more every spring, take the word of J. C. Davis, manager of the Texas Floral company, 2107 Twenty-first street, who has been in business here since 1926.

Opening his business here in 1926 with a small stock of plants and cut flowers, Mr. Davis' concern has grown until now he carries the largest supply this side of Fort Worth and is able to fill any size order.

Has Had Much Experience

Mr. Davis came to Lubbock with much experience in the floral business although he was and still is a young man. Prior to moving here, he was with the Brownwood Floral company, Brownwood; Trout Floral company, Breckenridge; Philpott Florist, Abilene and the long Floral company, Dallas, the largest floral house in the southwest. Mr. Davis was employed as a designer for the latter firm. Coming to Lubbock, he was with the Glenn Floral company for a while before opening his own business.

Mr. Davis carries the title of the youngest florist in Texas although he has been engaged in the business for the past fourteen years.

Take More Interest

"In the six years that I have been here," Mr. Davis said, "I have noticed a steady increase in beautification work by residents, both here and in the surrounding territory. People are beginning to take more interest in their yards and premises and more plants, shrubs and flowers are being put out now than ever before. Seems like the 'boom days' just wouldn't allow much of this activity."

Mr. Davis grows all of the flowers he offers for sale in his own floral house here. Hundreds of varieties are constantly grown ed for instant sale and an order on almost any type of cut or pot flower can be filled immediately. In addition to his cut and pot flowers, Mr. Davis handles a complete line of bulbs, small shrubs, ornamental vines and other floral supplies. Included in the lot are perennials and annuals of all kinds as well as seasonal blooms such as lillies, chrysanthemums, violets, poinsettas and etc.

Carries Other Supplies

Besides the above mentioned supplies, he also carries a line of nursery stock. Gold fish and supplies and novelties for interior and exterior decoration are also listed in his stock. Funeral designs are a specialty.

When Mr. Davis opened his concern here, he was its only employe. Now he has seven people employed and is continually employing 'extras' for seasonal work.

Besides rush order service offered as a specialty by the firm, Mr. Davis is a member of Florists' Telegraph Delivery association and is able to fill orders for flowers to be delivered to almost any point in the United States and Canada as well as numerous other places in Europe and South America.

Lubbock Plans For Farm Bureau Federation Meeting Here May 5 And 6

Attendance Of Thousand Seen At Convention

Lubbock, Tech, South Plains Gain Recognition In Convention Edition Of Texas Cooperative News

LUBBOCK, Texas Technological college, and the South Plains generally received considerable recognition in a South Plains convention edition of the Texas Cooperative News, devoted principally to a quarterly meeting of district 18 of the Texas Farm Bureau federation here May 5 and 6. Attendance is expected to total about 1,000.

A program for the regional convention here has been revised and supplemented. Sessions will be in the Uptown Dance palace. A farmers' supper will be at the Hilton hotel.

Stone On Program

James C. Stone, chairman of the federal farm board, remains scheduled as a speaker, although little hope is held that he will be present.

Frank P. Frist, president of the Texas Farm Bureau federation, of El Paso will be general chairman.

The revised program, excepting entertainment features, follows:

Thursday—Miss Margaret Weeks, dean of home economics at Technological college, will preside at the morning session beginning at 10 o'clock; Mayor J. J. Clements and Roscoe Wilson, vice-chairman of the Technological college board of directors, will deliver addresses of welcome; John T. Orr, vice-president of the Texas Farm Bureau federation and agricultural commissioner of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, of Dallas will respond; Miss Bess Edwards, state home demonstration agent, of College Station will address the assembly.

C. A. Barron, vice-president of the Texas Cotton Cooperative association, of Lamesa will preside at the Thursday afternoon session beginning at 1:30 o'clock; R. J. Murray, general manager of the Texas Cotton Cooperative association, of Dallas, and James C. Stone will make addresses; greetings from the American Farm Bureau federation will be delivered by M. S. Winder, executive secretary of the American federation, of Chicago.

Plan Farmers' Supper

The farmers' supper at the Hilton hotel will follow at 6:30 o'clock Thursday night. Idus Gillette, president of the Southwestern Irrigated Cotton Growers association, of El Paso will be toastmaster. Winder and Stone will speak.

Friday—Mrs. M. S. Hudson, district federation director, of Hale Center will preside at the morning session beginning at 10 o'clock; E. L. Corbin, secretary of the Texas federation, will give messages from Dr. Homer D. Wade, director of public relations for the Texas Cooperative council, will speak on "State and National Federations in Legislation"; Mrs. Phoebe K. Warner, rural club writer-lecturer and Democratic candidate for congressman-at-large, of Claude will speak.

Douglas Pounds, general arrangements chairman, of Acuff will preside at the Friday afternoon session beginning at 1:30 o'clock; E. F. Creekmore, general manager of the American Cotton Cooperative association, of New Orleans, and Winder will speak.

Entertainment numbers on the program were announced Saturday afternoon by R. N. McClain, assistant Lubbock county farm agent and chairman of entertainment committee.

Band To Play

The Lubbock High school band will play selections at the opening of the first session the morning of May 5. A male quartet composed of Homer Garrison, James Potts, Jack Stalcup and G. W. Williamson will present vocal selections that afternoon. The four and all others on the entertainment program, excepting some members of the Westerner band, are Lubbock county Four-H club members.

A ballad, "Three Old Maids and Three Old Bachelors," will be given at the farmers' supper the night of the 5th. Williamson, Edwin Merrill, Cyrus Brown, Edith Merrill, Murel Squires and another young woman not yet chosen will appear in it.

A string quartet composed of Stalcup, Williamson, Pete Miller and Olen Dorling will perform at the morning assembly the second day.

Alfred Wardlow and Smith Edwards will be presented the second afternoon in a dialog, "Hired and Fired."

Child Genius Abandons Dolls For Ibsen, Schopenhauer

Ava Louise DuBard, 11, shown above, is the brightest genius discovered by the psychology department of Southwestern University, Memphis, Tenn., in a study of 1,000 children covering a period of five years. Her intelligence quotient—or IQ rating, as the psychologist expresses it—is 181, which makes her mental age 19. An IQ rating of 140 or above classes a person as a genius. Fifty-one genluses were discovered in the 1,000. Ava Louise will enter junior high school next September. She makes A grades in all her subjects except art. No effort has been made to push her in her school work, as her parents want her to develop a well-balanced life. She enjoys playing with children her physical age as well as with those her mental age. She reads a lot, mostly classic authors, likes movies—and has a boy friend.

Democrats To Uphold Pledge

County Executive Committee Will Meet Here Saturday To Determine Action; Plans Of Convention Up

With Chairman J. K. Wester of the opinion that the only way for Lubbock county Democratic delegates to be seated at the state convention is for the county group to accept the pledge, the executive committee of the party in this county will meet Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the courthouse.

E. B. Speck, a member of the committee, of Lubbock, who at the last meeting of the group April 9 voiced opposition to the pledge, said Saturday night he did not intend to launch a fight to keep the committee from accepting the allegiance.

Times Unsettled

"If it is the concensus of opinion, however, that the pledge is absolute and unconditional, I cannot afford to take it myself," said Speck. "These are very unsettled times politically, and I am bound to make some reservations as far as a moral issue is concerned."

Chairman Wester has issued a plea for hafmony in the ranks of local Democrats.

"If we fail to adopt the pledge, we can be ruled out of the state convention if any group protests the seating of our delegates," said the chairman.

Urges Big Attendance

The committee next Saturday also may consider plans for the precinct conventions Saturday, May 7, and the county convention, Tuesday, May 10. Mr. Wester urged an attendance of all committee members, "as this is an important meeting."

Committee members are:

Precinct 1, Tom Garrard; No. 2, George Boles; No. 3, E. B. Speck; No. 4, L. C. Ellis; No. 5, J. H. Brewer; No. 6, J. H. Adams; No. 7, J. F. Goodnight; No. 8, Douglas Pounds; No. 9, J. B. Reid; No. 10, W. A. Dunn; No. 11, J. T. Vance; No. 12, Jim Burroughs; No. 13, Otto Simms; No. 14, R. T. Dopson; No. 15, Lonnie Williams; No. 16, L. W. Wilke; No. 17, A. W. Shipp; No. 18, W. B. Shelton; No. 19, H. H. Johnson; No. 20, C. M. Doyle; No. 21, G. M. Eubanks; No. 22, S. C. Shelton; No. 23, Bob Brown; No. 24, E. C. Foster; No. 25, A. C. Hanna; No. 26, J. W. Buchanan; No. 27, J. H. Goodman; No. 28, O B. Powell; No. 29, Fritz Fuchs; No. 30, McDuff Gamble; No. 31, James L. Benton; No. 32, W. A. Pincher.

Carpenter Has Office Appeal

Chief Deputy For Past Four Years In Collector's Office Says Experience Qualifies Him For Election In July

Promising an honest, economical, courteous, efficient and impartial administration based upon six years of experience as deputy in the office, Wm. Hurley Carpenter, Saturday issued a formal announcement of his candidacy for the office of tax collector of Lubbock county. Carpenter has been a candidate since the first of the year but had been delayed in issuing a formal announcement.

"My experience in the tax collector's office for the past six years thoroughly qualifies me to carry on the work," Mr. Carpenter declared. "I know the type of service the tax payers of Lubbock county are entitled to and if elected, I shall strive to render an honest, economical, courteous and efficient service to all alike. I have made a thorough study of the work of the office and have familiarized myself with the many laws under which it operates."

Chief Deputy Since 1928

Mr. Carpenter has been chief deputy since 1928, prior to that time he had served more than two years as deputy under Collector I. F. Holland. He has been in active charge of the office for the past eighteen months due to the illness of Collector A. J. Clark who died April 5. He was continued in the same capacity under Mrs. Clark who was appointed collector by the court. He has resided in Lubbock since 1925, coming here to enter Texas Technological college where he was a star athlete. He was a student in Texas A. and M. before entering Tech. Carpenter is married and has one child, two years old. He is a home owner.

"It has been my pleasure to install a simplified bookkeeping system in the office and also an alphabetical card file system for keeping check on automobile owners by name as well as by license number, without any additional cost to the state or county," Mr. Carpenter pointed out. "This has been very helpful to car owners in cases where license receipts have been lost. The crowded condition around the automobile registration windows in January has been relieved to a certain degree in the past two years and if elected I promise to give automobile owners more relief in this respect."

To Mail Out Statements

"If elected, it wil be my plan to mail every taxpayer who renders his or her property a statement just as soon as the tax rolls are completed. This will enable the taxpayer to come in before tax paying time and correct any error that may appear. You will always find me willing and ready to accommodate in any way possible.

"I shall be glad to have any citizen visit the office and see how we are carrying on the work," Mr. Carpenter continued. "I also invite you to investigate my character and qualification and then if you see fit to give me your vote and influence, I assure you it will be greatly appreciated."

Mr. Carpenter promises, if elected "to stay on the job and do one man's work myself, thereby making it possible to pay back to the county just as much in excess fees as possible." He continued, "the only direct way the tax collector has of helping to lower taxes is by keeping the clerical and other expenses of the office as low as possible. I will be glad to do my part in this respect."

Better Marketing Conditions For Sweet Potatoes Sought

AUSTIN, April 23. (AP) — Better marketing conditions are being sought by the producers of Texas sweet potatoes, with the producers, the East Texas Chamber of Commerce and the state department of agriculture cooperating.

E. T. Crozier, chief of sweet potato certification for the department of agriculture, expressed belief that formation of an efficient marketing association would be of material aid, pointing out that Louisiana sweet potato growers were benefitted greatly by a state law requiring uniform packing and grading and that effective marketing had enhanced the value of citrus products grown in the Rio Grande valley.

Uniform grading and packing would give Texas sweet potatoes better sale values in the northern and eastern markets, Crozier said.

The sweet potato industry ranks seventh in value of Texas farm products, the industry having experienced a phenomenal growth in the past few years.

Farm Bureau Official Will Arrive For Big Convention

E. L. Corbin, secretary of the Texas Farm Bureau Federation, is to arrive in Lubbock today and will remain in this territory until after the district convention in Lubbock May 5 and 6.

Mr. Corbin, Mrs. M. S. Hudson of Hale Center, and N. H. Payne will tour Lubbock, Dawson, Lamb, Hale, Hockley and Crosby counties inviting the residents to attend the convention.

SPYING ON SPORTS

BY COLLIER PARRIS

As you read this, unless you do your reading earlier than we think you do, the Texas Tech Matadors, about thirty of 'em, Coaches Pete Cawthon, Dutchy Smith and Del Morgan, Manager Bo Williams and this correspondent will be bowling along over the western prairies in a couple of busses bound for the border. That is, we'll all be bound for the border except the Matadors, their coaches and the manager. They'll stop at El Paso, and rest up for a football game with the Texas School of Mines on Monday night.

Unless the plans go haywire and the busses go screwy between the time this is written and 6 bells Sunday morning the contingent will be on its way. Funny time of year to be playing football, we'll grant you, but what're you going to do when you don't have track and baseball and when you have a big squad of good football players working every day as if it were mid-October?

A poor bunch of correspondents, those lads who went east the other day to play baseball in the Central League. We've had only two reports about the former Hubbers who departed more than a week ago for Akron. They spent the first night at Claremore, Oklahoma, it was learned from a letter mailed home by one of the wanderers. That they actually did arrive in Akron is learned from the Akron Times-Press. The paper says:

"Akron's Central League baseball season opened unofficially this afternoon (Thursday) with nine players who had reported two days in advance of the training schedule passing the ball around at League Park under the direction of Manager John J. McCloskey. All but three of the players who reported early hail from Texas, and all are tanned from playing the early spring Texas sun. The list include Jack Ratliff, catcher; Willis Knight and Lowell Dobbs, pitchers; Bailey Hollite and Howard Ballard, infielders; Darwin Gaither, Ed Hambright and Ray Marshall, outfielders. Bill Geier, a port side hurler, the only Texan in camp, is from Rochester, N. Y. The full squad of 18 players is expected to be on hand for the official opening of training season Wednesday."

Goose Goslin reported at the batter's box the other day swinging a strange looking implement which looked like a cross between a zebra's hind leg and a potato masher. He called it a bat. It looked like a bat except that it had vertical black and white stripes about an inch wide running from end to end. The pitcher in the box took one look at it, called for a recount and the league banned the bat. The pitcher claimed that he couldn't tell whether he was throwing at an escaped convict or a barber pole, and got no kick out of anticipating the results of a pitched ball.

The banning of the bat recalls reading about other tricks batsmen have pulled and tried to pull calculated to bamboozle the box boys. It also recalls that it hasn't always been the pitcher who resorted to trick stuff in order to turn the tide of victory. More than a decade ago trick ball pitchers were put on the run and all their fancy stuff but the spitball taken away from them. The attacks leveled at the hurlers made them look like burglars who were stealing strikeouts by fair means or foul.

True, many elbowmen of that period were doing virtually everything to the pellet but insert a charge of dynamite into it. They roughed the hide, loaded the seams with parafine, nicked the covering, discolored it, sanded it, smoothed it and otherwise abused the missile until it acquired a hop like an insane grasshopper. But the batters were also at work.

Many batters in the old, rough days did things to their bats almost fantistic and extra legal as were the incantations which the pitchers performed with the spheres. A favorite trick was to give a light bat slugging power by boring a hole down the heavy end and inserting buckshot into the crevice. When the shot were packed in tightly and covered, an ordinary bat became a pidgeon. Heavy bats were given a deceiving lightness by reversing the process. Cork was inserted instead of lead. Some batters drove tiny nails into the heads of their clubs. Freak bats of irregular shape have made their appearance from time to time. There was the bottle bat introduced by Heinie Groh, a clumsy looking thing but the hitter did things with it. Another type has been the flat club which has been planed down a bit. But it's usually the guy who is hanging onto the little end that puts power in the powerplant.

Tech Matadors Battle Miners

Coach Cawthon And Crew Off Today For El Paso To Play Grid Game Monday Night; 29 Players Make Trip

Two bus loads of football coaches and players were to have departed from Lubbock early this morning heading toward El Paso where the Texas Tech Matadors and the Texas College of Mines Orediggers engage in a regulation gridiron melee Monday evening.

The game is to serve as an anteclimax to the spring training programs in fashion at both schools. The Matadors, nearly fifty of them, have been training almost daily for the past four weeks. Coach Mack Saxon's Miners have been going for about the same length of time. Both teams have pointed toward the game for the last week.

While a spring football game is unusual insofar as the time of year is concerned, the lack of other spring activities—track or baseball—has thrown the burden of keeping athletics going on the football coaches and players.

Cawthon hopes to send almost three complete teams against the Miners Monday night in an experimental process and with the idea of giving youngsters a taste of varsity football. Facing an unusually tough schedule next fall, the Matador mentor does not believe in waiting until next fall to build the foundation for a team.

Twenty-nine players, Coaches Cawthon, Smith and Morgan and Manager Bo Williams are making the trip.

Golf League Opens Today

South Plains Loop Opens With Three Matches Today; Tahoka And Post Teams Play Here; Littlefield At Slaton

The South Plains Golf League, organized a week ago today, opens its official season schedule on three courses today. Two matches will be played at Lubbock and one at Slaton.

The Lubbock Country club will play host to the Post club, the latter fortified by the presence of Charles Quails, West Texas Golf association champion.

Tahoka's golf club sends a team here to battle the Meadowbrook Golf club lineup on the latter layout.

The Santa Fe Club at Slaton will be the scene of matches between Slaton and Littlefield teams.

Play At 1:30

All matches are scheduled to start at 1:30 o'clock. The three-point system of scoring will be used, i. e.: the matches will be in twosomes, the individuals being credited with each nine-hole and 18-hole victory by one point each.

The absence of three Meadowbrook stars, Billy Holmes, Lyle Holmes and Walter Pendleton, who are playing with Shamrock in a tournament today, threatens the strength of the team. Manager Bill McMillan announced yesterday that his team would be picked from the following qualifiers: Sid Thrash, Lane Denson, Larry Hines, B. R. Bryant, Jess Lockhart, Leland Mast, Neil Vanzant, Howard Hunt, Dutch Wigginton, D. A. Dowell and Otis Felty.

Representing the Lubbock Country club against Post will be the following probable lineup: Joe Dick Slaughter, John Edmisson, Ross McWhorter, E. T. Daniels, V. O. Jennings, J. O. Smith, Lawrence Bacon and Henry McLarty.

The Slaton team will be composed of Carl Lewis, H. A. Ferrell, J. A. Reynolds, Roland Anderson, Claud Anderson, R. W. Ragsdale, N. R. Carter and O. M. Ramsey.

Teams are composed of the first eight ranking stars of each club, and only the scores of the designated team will count. However, it has been announced, as many members who desire may play matches with members of opposing clubs.

Babe Ruth Contributes Fifth Homer And Triple In Orgy Of Yank Hitting; Browns Lick Sox; Cleveland Wins

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, April 23.—Knocking Rube Walberg from the hill in the first inning and continuing their assault on three of Connie Mack's crop of young pitchers, the Yankees slammed the Athletics for a 16 to 5 verdict in the final today before 41,000 fans.

The Athletics scored all their runs in the opening frame, when they clouted young Gordon Rhodes from the box. Ivy Paul Andrews took up the burden after five runs were across, forced Walberg to hit into a double play, and from there on held the Macks in his good right hand. They found him for six hits in eight innings, but could never solve him with men on the sacks. In the fourth he fanned the great Al Simmons with the bases full of Athletics.

It was a different story for the Yanks. Not only did they fall on Walberg lustily in their half of the first to more than make up the deficit, but they were equally successful in solving the youngsters, Deshong, Cain and Krausse, who followed in that order. Their fourteen hits were combined with twelve walks, ten of which came in the first four innings.

Babe Ruth was in the middle of the festivities, hitting his fifth homer of the season in the first inning with one on and smacking a long triple to left field in the third with a pair on the paths.

Something New--A Motorcycle Polo Game Today

Also A Wall-Crashing Act; Lubbock And Big Spring Teams Battle On Motorcycles

A MOTORCYCLE polo game, the first to be played in Lubbock, is scheduled to begin at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at a field on the Plainview highway two miles north of this city. Teams from Big Spring and Lubbock are the slated contestants.

The game is free to the public, officials having announced no admission charges will be made.

As an added attraction, one of the riders will race his machine at the rate of approximately 80 miles an hour through a solid board wall ten feet square. "Daisy May," as the wall crasher is called, has performed the feat eleven times without serious mishap.

Lubbock and Big Spring motorcycle polo teams will be clashing for the second time this spring. On Easter Sunday they played to a four-all deadlock on the Big Spring field. A large crowd was attracted by the singular type of game and the skill with which the riders manipulated their machines and the ball was startling.

Combining some of the rules of football and regulation polo, the motorcycle game is played on a field three hundred feet long by 100 feet wide. Five players make up a team and they are listed in the lineup as right and left forwards, center, guard and goal keeper.

The ball is an inflated sphere about the size of a volleyball, and the players kick it from goal to goal, circling about it on their machines and kicking while traveling at more or less a rapid pace. Spills and thrills are not infrequent.

Wade Anthony, president of the Lubbock Motorcycle club, has announced the following probable starting lineup for Lubbock:

The Big Spring starting lineup probably will consist of Jack Gutstone, No. 1 and captain, right forward; Cecil Thixton, No. 2, left forward; Sid House, No. 3, center; R. L. McIntosh, No. 4, right guard; Joe Dorsey, No. 5, goal keeper. Claude Williams, Ray Pamphlin and Lloyd Shortice are substitutes.

Officials of the game are Bill Bodal, referee and Henry Lemons, time keeper. The game is played by quarters of 15 minutes each.

Five American League Players Tied With 4 Homers Each; Giants Set Pace At Batting But Win Few Contests

(By The Associated Press)

CHICAGO, April 23. — Jimmy Foxx, Philadelphia's first baseman, already has a brilliant start toward a slugging comeback.

In eight games of the American League season Foxx, who hit .291 in 1931, piled up a batting mark of .500 to lead the regulars and in addition was tied for home run and triple hitting honors, led in total bases with 34, made the most hits, 16, and headed the scorers with 11 runs.

He shared the home run leadership with Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Sammy Byrd, all Yankees, and his teammate, Mickey Cochrane, at four each, and was tied with Bill Dickey of the Yankees and Sammy Vest of Washington with two triples.

Ruth led in runs batted in with an even dozen. Base stealing honors were divided between Jack Rothrock and Hal Rhyne, both of the Red Sox. Six players, Tom Oliver, Boston; Carey Selph and Lu Blue, Chicago; Roy Johnson and Harry Davis, Detroit, and Buddy Myer of Washington, had four doubles apiece.

Tiger Slugger Second

Following Foxx, the individual batting leaders were: G. Walker, Detroit, .470; Gehrig, New York, .428; Oliver, Boston, .400; Johnson, Detroit, .385; Ruth, New York, .381; Dickey, New York, .370; Byrd, New York, .367; Goslin, St. Louis, .367; and Porter, Cleveland, .364.

Detroit had three hurlers among the half-dozen who had won two and lost none. The Tigers were George Uhle, Whitlow Wyatt and Earl Whitehill. They had for company Wes Ferrell of Cleveland, Montie Weaver of Washington, and the Yankees' young southpaw star, Vernon Gomez. Alvin Crowder, another Senator, was the leader in strikeouts with 19 in 28 innings.

Ludstrom, Terry And Critz Monopolize Loop

NEW YORK, April 23. (AP)—Three New York batsmen, Freddy Lindstrom, Bill Terry and Hughey Critz, took nearly all of the National League's batting honors for the first week of the 1932 campaign.

They hold the first three places among the regular players in the averages which include last Wednesday's games, Lindstrom with a .452 average, Terry with .424 and Critz with .412. Among them they share one another "first" as each has made 14 hits, and in addition, Lindstrom has scored the most runs, ten, and Terry leads in homers, with four, and in runs batted in with eleven.

Behind this trio at the top of the first week's batting averages come Spohrer, Boston, at .409; Herman, Cincinnati, .400; Wright, Brooklyn, .391; Suhr, Pittsburgh, .387; Shires, Boston, .375; McCurdy, Philadelphia, .364; and V. Davis, Philadelphia, .357.

Five Hit Doubles

Five players made four doubles apiece in eight days to share the lead. They are Glenn Wright, Brooklyn, Jim Collins and Frank Frisch, St. Louis, and Paul and Lloyd Waner, Pittsburgh. Babe Herman of Cincinnati walloped three triples to take first place while two Pittsburghers, Pie Traynor and Paul Waner, stole four bases apiece.

Although they won few games, the Giants showed the way in slugging with a club average of .308 against .269 for the second place Pirates. The Cubs and Phillies compiled .977 fielding averages to tie for the top.

Only two pitchers, Charles "Red" Lucas of Cincinnati, and Eddie Holley, Philadelphia's 30-year-old recruit, managed to win two games without a defeat but 15 others remained entirely on the right side of the won and lost ledger with a single victory.

Vines Defeats Allison To Win Singles Title

National Champ Gains Revenge For Two Recent Losses To Texan And Pairs With Frank Shields To Win Doubles

(By The Associated Press)

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, N. Y., April 23. (AP) — Ellsworth Vines, jr., slim youngster who bulks large in the United States Davis Cup plans, set at rest fears that he might not regain his national championship form by trouncing Wilmer Allison in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4 today in the singles final of the Mason and Dixon tennis championship.

Vines gained ample revenge for defeats by Allison within the last two weeks in the finals at Pinehurst and New Orleans. He played fast, aggressive tennis, and after the first set had the Texan under complete control.

Allison faded after contesting the first set stubbornly and his shots lacked the extra punch that marked his steady play for the past six weeks on the southern tournament circuit. He appeared to suffer a letdown, although Vines' aggressive attack never gave him a chance to organize.

Miss Virginia Hilleary, of Philadelphia, and Miss Virginia Rice, of Boston, had little difficulty winning the women's doubles championship final, downing Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, and Miss Florence Leboutillier, of Westbury, N. Y., in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2.

After winning the singles, Vines came back with Frank X. Shields of New York to annex the men's doubles title in straight sets from Marcel Rainville of Montreal, Canadian Davis Cup star, and Eugene McCauliff of Yonkers, N. Y.

Vines and Shields won the encounter 6-1, 9-7, 6-1.

Mr. and Mrs. John Van Ryn, Philadelphia, won the mixed doubles title, defeating Virginia Rice of Boston and Frederick C. Baggs of New York in the final round. The score was 6-3, 6-3.

Uncle Billy Disch's Steers Down Rice Institute, 10-3

AUSTIN, April 23. (AP)—The University of Texas baseball team defeated Rice Institute here today, 10 to 3, to take the second of a two-game series. Yesterday the Longhorns defeated Rice 3 to 2 in eleven innings.

The Texas batters nicked Dixon and Perranella, Rice hurlers, for eleven hits, one of them a homer by Sullivan that scored one man ahead of him. Winton, Texas hurler, yielded nine hits but they were scattered. Winton also had errorless support while the Owls made two costly errors.

Les Cazzell Leads Sandies To District 1 Track Title

Alaska Jaunt Changes Made

Newest Ship Plying Alaskan Waters Secured For Texans Who Will Make Journey To North Next June

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

AMARILLO, April 23.—A slight change in the dates of the annual Amarillo Globe-News goodwill and vacation trip to Alaska was announced last night by Wilbur C. Hawk, sponsor, and Earle Brame of the Santa Fe Railroad after recent conferences in Chicago with officials of the Canadian National Steamship Company.

The schedule or itinerary remains the same except that the excursionists leave Amarillo the evening of June 4, instead of June 1 and return June 21 instead of June 18.

By making this change, the newest and finest steamer cruising the Alaskan waters, the "SS Robert," has been obtained and the deadline for reservations, which originally was set for April 1, has been moved up to May 15, approximately two and a half weeks before the start.

Ship Two Years Old

The "SS Robert" is only two years old and accommodates 400 passengers with all outside staterooms. Under the revised schedule it sails from Vancouver, B. C., at 10 A. M., instead of 3 P. M., and it will be on June 9.

The same points will be visited in Alaska and along the railroad route and the same hours spent at each point. The "SS Robert" will be the first steamer out for Alaska on the summer vacation cruises and regularly makes Sitka, Skagway, Juneau, Prince Rupert, Ketchikan and other points included on the original tour map.

By using the "SS Robert" the steamship company allowed reservations to be made almost up to the time to start instead of two months ahead of the date of departure from Amarillo as originally demanded by the line and the railroad over which the special train will travel. The long land swing is northeast to Kansas City, Des Moines and into Canada, then west to Banff, Lake Louise and across the Canadian Rockies to the Pacific Coast.

Return Is Same

The return railroad route remains the same, through Seattle, Portland, up the Columbia River Gorge and through the Rocky Mountain states home by way of Denver.

While a large number of the party already have been signed up and deposits made, Mr. Hawk warns that the time is short and the deposit of one-fourth or $75 of the all-inclusive round trip fare of $300 must be made at the earliest possible date and cannot be accepted after May 15. The remainder need not be paid until the date of departure.

All reservations and checks should be mailed to Wilbur C. Hawk, general manager of The News-Globe, Amarillo, or, if additional information is sought, call or write Mason King at the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

tion-wide propaganda to kill the cash-bonus movement was made in a statement today by Representative Patman (D., Tex.).

"I have in my possession evidence to show that the big rich of the nation have put at the disposal of our opponents hundreds of thousands of dollars to fight us.

Claims Belittled

"People cannot pay inflated debts with deflated dollars. That is what Wall street wants done—the holders of bonds the people voted on themselves to make public improvements when their commodities would pay two or three times as much as they will today."

Patman belittled claims of Democratic and Republican leaders that sponsors of the new-money plan to cash the bonus will lack the 145 signatures needed to force a house vote.

"We can get them if necessary," Patman said.

The ways and means committee planned to end the bonus hearings next week.

Clean-Up Drive

children in cleaning vacant lots and removing tin cans, paper and dead weeds. Many garden plots will be plowed and planted.

Originated In Missouri

The clean-up and paint-up idea originated in St. Louis, Mo., 20 years ago when a man by the name of Clark conceived the idea that by cleaning up and painting his house and making the surroundings attractive others would follow his example and his city would be made a cleaner, healthier and more thrifty place in which to live. Since that time, about 7,000 cities in the United States have undertaken the drives.

It is the purpose of the campaign in Lubbock to secure the cooperation of every family in first cleaning up the premises from front curb to back alley, and then the thorough cleaning of the house inside and out, and the painting and finishing of all woodwork which needs rejuvenation, officials said.

Prizes Are Offered

A number of prizes have been announced. Boy Scouts, who will report on alleys, will receive seven "pup" tents. Troop winning first place will receive four tents; second prize will be two tents, and third prize, one tent. The scouts will be judged on promptness, completeness and neatness of the reports.

Troops previously have been assigned to districts and will make two reports. The first check-up will be to determine places where cleaning is needed. The second inspection will be to check on results.

American flags, ranging in size from three by five feet for first prize to two by three feet for fifth prize will be given to schools for their work. The negro and Mexican schools will compete for $5.

Cash Prizes Carded

In the essay contests, in which children from the sixth to the eleventh grade will take part, three prizes of $5 will be given in the several divisions. The essay subject is "Why a Clean-Up Campaign in Lubbock."

Four thousand clean-up, paint-up buttons have been received and everyone taking part in the campaign will receive a button. They are being distributed to school children.

Chairmen and committees directing the campaign under the direction of the steering committee are:

Officials Named

Municipal: J. J. Clements, George E. Benson and Wiley L. Metcalfe.

Schools: Supt. M. H. Duncan.

Publicity: Hugh Norman and C. W. Ratliff.

To Make Inspections

Members of women's clubs will make three inspections. The first, Monday, will be to make notes of houses and premises needing to be cleaned. A fireman or an officer will accompany the women on the second inspection, Thursday, and if the needed cleaning has not been given the resident will be requested to clean the place. The final inspection and check-up will be made Tuesday, May 3.

District assignments have been made as follows:

Members Of Troop 4 Winners In Contest

Boy Scouts removed 9,510 pounds of junk from the streets of Lubbock Saturday in the third annual campaign to start off the city's clean-up drive.

Members of troop No. 4, sponsored by the First Presbyterian church, won first banner in the campaign by collecting 2,768 pounds of scrap iron, nails, trash and whatnot. The troop averaged 163 pounds of junk for every active member.

The mobilization banner went to troop No. 6, which had 96 per cent of its membership present at the north side of Central Ward school at 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Second banner went to No. 4, with 88 per cent present; and third to No. 3, with 87 per cent. Seventy-eight scouts reported at 8:30, and Executive D. T. Jennings of the South Plains area estimated that about 100 boys participated.

Second prize in the pick-up campaign went to No. 5, which accounted for 106 pounds of junk per each active member. No. 8 was third with an average of 100 pounds per member. No. 8, incidentally, accounted for 1,900 pounds of junk, and No. 5, for 1,448. The competition was based on pounds collected per member.

The boys started from Central ward to their assigned districts with sacks and tags. City trucks began hauling in the sacked junk at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Sacks were weighed in at city hall and credited to the various troops.

Officials of the clean-up campaign expressed appreciation for the work of the scouts in starting off the drive.

If No Rendition Is Made And Property Is Assessed On A Higher Valuation The Owner May Not Protest

April 30, next Saturday, is the last day for property owners to render valuations on which state and county taxes for 1931 will be based, A. B. Ellis, Lubbock county tax assessor, said Saturday.

If no rendition is made by midnight of April 30, and property is taxed on a higher valuation than the owner believes proper, he is not entitled to a protest, Ellis explained.

Candidates Speak At Hockley Meet

LEVELLAND, April 23. (Special.)—About 300 Hockley county citizens heard district candidates speak at the courthouse at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. County Clerk J. Warren Pearcy presided, and a number of Hockley county candidates also spoke.

Candidates for district attorney spoke first, each presenting his candidacy in 15 minutes. Speakers, in order, were Dan Blair, George E. Berry and Frank Brown, all of Lubbock.

Robert H. Bean, Judge Homer L. Pharr, both of Lubbock, and W. P. Walker of Crosbyton, all candidates for the 72nd district judgeship, each talked 20 minutes; Jess Levens, senatorial candidate, and Tom Carter, candidate for representative, were present but did not speak. Ladies of the Methodist Episcopal church served cake and ice cream.

The district candidates will speak at Acuff Wednesday night.

Short Ballot

of article six of the Texas constitution which requires the vote to be by ballot in all elections by the people.

She said that since the law provides that the names of persons to be voted for as presidential electors shall not appear on the ballot, "then the amendment contravenes section four because a ballot which does not contain the names of the persons to be voted upon is no ballot."

Mrs. McCallum wrote Love:

"In view of the importance of this question and the public interest involved, I trust you will, at an early date, prepare and file the necessary (mandamus) proceedings."

Thomas Love To Take Up Fight

DALLAS, April 23. (AP)—Thomas B. Love said here today he would comply with the request of secretary of state Jane Y. McCallum to bring suit in the state supreme court to test the short ballot law enacted by the last legislature.

"I have no doubt the law is constitutional and is a good law," Love said. "I shall be glad to comply with Mrs. McCallum's request. The suit will not have to be brought until this fall when the ballot is being made up. Electors are not chosen until the state convention next month."

Judgment For Plaintiff Is Rendered In Suit Saturday

A judgment for the plaintiff was rendered late Saturday by a jury in county court in the case of R. I. Wilson against the State Life Insurance company of Indianapolis.

Amount involved was about $450. Wilson sued on a disability clause in the policy.

Bear Traders

was asked if he was known as a "big short operator."

Denies Bear Raiding

"Yes, sir," he replied.

"You have been known as a big raider?"

"No one has called me a raider to my face, and I don't know what is meant by raider," he retorted. He agreed without any show of resentment, however, that he had heard he had that reputation.

He denied any knowledge of pools operating with the aid of a specialist who knew the pending orders of the stock in question.

"Anybody who would do that would pick a pocket," Glass interjected.

To Study Records

The committee made no attempt to delve into the short operations of the witnesses, leaving that for future investigation after studying their records.

Smith, a member of the exchange, said he had used his wife's name in the radio pool. He testified that Rockefeller, Mrs. Elizabeth Meehan, Bragg and W. F. Kenny participated but in this instance was not sure about Raskob and Fisher.

"They may have been," he said.

Senator Couzens questioned both witnesses closely about their income tax returns. Both said they had made them annually.

The committee will meet Monday to determine its future course.

Amarillo And Pampa Teams Win District League Honor

CANYON, April 23. (AP)—Amarillo High school boy debaters took first place from Hereford in the district interscholastic league meet here tonight.

The Pampa girls defeated the Hereford girls for similar honors.

The debate finals completed the two-day meet to select entrants in the state finals.

Omnibus Retrenchment Bill Will Be Introduced Monday

WASHINGTON, April 23. (AP) — A weary and much-harassed economy committee whipped the far-reaching $200,000,000 omnibus retrenchment bill into final shape today for introduction into the house on Monday.

The bi-partisan group planned to work over the week-end to prepare for the expected heated battle over the controversial measure when its consideration is begun Wednesday.

Ohio River Yields Up Body Of Woman; Victim Of Crash

STEUBENVILLE, O., April 23. (AP) —The Ohio river today yielded up the body of Dr. Carol S. Cole, St. Louis woman physician, who perished when an east bound air mail plane crashed during a terrific storm over this region a month ago.

Hal George, of Detroit, pilot of the plane, was killed instantly when the ship crashed into the river near here. Dr. Cole was en route east to visit a sick daughter when the accident occurred.

Germany's Voters Again Are To Decide Supremacy Battle

BERLIN, April 23. (AP)—For the third time within six weeks five-sixth of Germany's voters will cast ballots tomorrow to decide a struggle for supremacy in which the Republican parties and Adolf Hitler's national socialists are the chief opponents.

The elections will determine the political complexion of the diets in Prussia, Bavaria, Wurttemberg, Hamburg and Anhalt.

Danger Of Violence Thought Passed In Ohio Mine Areas

COLUMBUS, O., April 23. (AP) — A second attempt to bring operators and united mine workers officials together failed today, but Governor George White reduced the eight companies of soldiers in the field by half in the belief the danger of violence has passed.

The governor said he believed law and order has been restored sufficiently that the remaining guardsmen could meet any emergency.

TULSA SELECTED

DALLAS, April 23. (AP) — Girl scout leaders of the Cactus region today selected Tulsa as the site for the next annual leaders' conference.

Allred Bitterly Criticized By Calhoun In Borger Talk

BORGER, April 23. (AP)—Inefficiency, extravagance and personal exploitation in office were charged against Attorney General James V. Allred by Clem Calhoun, candidate for attorney general, in a campaign speech prepared for delivery here tonight.

Calhoun claimed Allred had increased the cost of operating the attorney general's office and had increased the personnel over that of his predecessor from 30 to 41 persons. Calhoun said Allred was "the most expensive attorney general Texas ever elected."

Calhoun criticized Allred's efficiency in regard to prosecution of anti-trust suits against oil companies.

Roosevelt And Smith Will Clash Tuesday For Favor

WASHINGTON, April 23. (AP) — Forces behind Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith will clash next Tuesday in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania in primary battles that may decide whether the dominant Roosevelt candidacy can be checked sufficiently to block his nomination.

Of the 490 Democratic delegates chosen to date, Roosevelt now has 255 pledged and claimed for him, with Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois far back in second place with 58.

Man Who Tried To Murder Ortiz Rubio Dies In Pen

MEXICO CITY, April 23. (AP) — Federal penitentiary officials announced Daniel Flores, who attempted to assassinate President Pascual Ortiz Rubio on his inaugural day, Feb. 5, 1930, died tonight in the prison from a heart attack. He was 27 years old.

The assailant escaped the death penalty because of a new penal code in effect then and was sentenced to approximately 20 years imprisonment.

GALVESTON CHOSEN

WE

The ladies of Lubbock and the South Plains pledge ourselves to patronize BRAY'S, as this institution recognizes the fact that we put QUALITY before PRICE . . . and as they have, at great expense, added features to their plant, in both personal and machinery, in order to give us better work, and as they are giving us HIGH QUALITY CLEANING AND PRESSING, at no added cost. BRAY'S, positively, will not sacrifice QUALITY. In doing this they would completely tear down their efforts, of the past seven years, of making BRAY'S the outstanding cleaning and pressing service on the South Plains. BRAY'S have experienced men and ladies in each department, with years of satisfactory service, behind them.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, April 23. (AP)—Cotton was active for a short Saturday session. The close was steady, at or near the top level for the day 1 point net up to 2 points net down.

The market rallied during the second hour owing to shorts covering for over the week-end and some improvement in stocks. Washington report said in effect that the farm board would liquidate its cotton holdings after July 31 by slow degrees. Prices reached new highs for the day in the late trading with May at 5.89 and July at 6.10, 5 to 6 points from the lows. Both active months closed 2 points net down for the day.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, April 23. (AP)—Cotton was more active today with increases near months liquidation absorbed by trade buying.

After selling off to 6.11 at the start, prices rallied and closed at 6.14. The final tone of the market was steady at net declines of 1 to 2 points.

The decline to 5.93 for May evidently attracted an increased trade demand. Prices worked back to about yesterday's level and the close was within a point or two of the best at 5.95 for May and 6.38 for October.

Stocks Are Undismayed By Declines And Start Mild Recovery Saturday

BY JOHN L. COOLEY
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, April 23. (AP)—Undismayed by sharp declines in the previous sessions, stocks accomplished a mild recovery today. Absence of important carry-over selling encouraged a firmer tone and final prices of most leaders represented small advances.

Wall street was much more interested in the short selling inquiry than in the market itself, giving scant attention to fluctuations. Business totaled 471,370 shares, the smallest for a Saturday since February 27.

Week-end news seemed to bring some grounds for encouragement. Steel mill operations in the Youngstown district are back to 30 per cent of capacity, which would indicate that automobile orders had picked up. Reports from Washington said the senate planned to push the tax bill and that it was expected congress would adjourn before the political conventions.

Quotations ranged as follows, basis carloads, freight paid, delivered Texas Gulf ports, export rate, or Texas common points. Wheat, No. 1 ordinary hard milling 59 1-2 @60 1-2; No. 1 hard 13 per cent protein 60 1-2@61 1-2; 14 per cent 62 1-2@63 1-2; 15 per cent 64 1-2@65 1-2; 16 per cent 65 1-2@66 1-2. Delivered Texas common points: Oats, No. 2 red 28@29.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 23. (AP) — Widespread moisture relief in drouth districts gave a sharp setback to grain values today, but stock market rallies later helped overcome part of the loss.

Downswings carried wheat temporarily to about 7 cents a bushel lower than last week's top prices and tumbled corn and oats to new bottom quotations for the season and for many years back.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1-8 to 1-2 under yesterday's finish, corn unchanged to 1-8 to 1-4 lower, oats unchanged to 3-8 off, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents down.

Mrs. S.M.N. Marrs Suggested To Fill Husband's Office

AUSTIN, April 23. (AP) — Appointment of Mrs. S. M. N. Marrs, widow of the late state superintendent of public instruction, to fill her husband's unexpired term has been suggested to Governor R. S. Sterling.

Pat Dougherty, secretary to the governor, said today a number of telegrams from persons residing in various parts of Texas had been received by the chief executive urging him to appoint Mrs. Marrs.

Governor Sterling was not in his office and it was not known when a successor to Mr. Marrs would be named. It was believed the governor favored C. N. Shaver, superintendent of Huntsville schools for the place.

Lamesa Man Invents Sub-Irrigator

Farmers And Business Men Of Dawson County Are "Sold" After Demonstration; Patent To Be Obtained

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LAMESA, April 23.—Several hundred farmers and business men of Dawson county and Lamesa witnessed the first demonstration of the sub-irrigator on the G. W. Holley farm 16 miles southwest of Lamesa Friday.

The invention was made by Joe H. Foster who will receive his patent May 3. It was noticeable that every farmer who witnessed the demonstration expressed himself as "sold" on the practicability of the project.

A large tank is mounted and pulled by tractor. It carries from 500 to 1,000 gallons of water which may be placed on as large a plot of ground as desired. Generally, one or two gallons per yard is used, according to Foster. A valve is placed in the rear of the tank to regulate the flow of water. A large hose makes the connection from the tank to directly behind and beneath the plow which opens a narrow furrow where the water is deposited. After the water is deposited the loose mulch soil falls back upon the water, thus keeping any evaporation from taking place. It is said in this section from three to five irrigations is sufficient to double and triple average yields.

Foster now has plans on foot to finance his project and predicts in the near future most every farm in West Texas will be using it with more intensified cultivation and greater yield per acre.

New Plan Of Insurance Loans Approved By Commissioners

AUSTIN, April 23. (AP)—Approval has been given by the Texas board of insurance commissioners to a plan whereby holders of insurance policies may borrow money to pay premiums from a premium finance company and then pay the premium finance company on the installment plan.

The unearned premium is assigned by the policyholder to the finance company, which is given the right to have the policy cancelled when the policyholder becomes in arrears in his payments. The unearned premium then is returned to the finance company.

Raymond S. Mauk, fire insurance commissioner, said the move was made by the insurance commission to aid policy holders temporarily short of funds to maintain their policies in force.

Slaton Rotarians To Have Charge Of Program At Ralls

(By Staff Correspondent)

SLATON, April 23.—The Slaton Rotary club has accepted the invitation of the Ralls Rotary club to be in charge of the program of that club on Friday, April 29, Allen J. Payne, secretary, states.

Three weeks later, on May 17, the club will go to Levelland to assist in the program there.

School Boys Near End Of Excursion

Two Sudan school boys, who left their homes last Tuesday on a tramping lark, were at the city police station last night, happy in an unlocked jail cell. They planned to ride a freight train into Sudan early Sunday.

With 35 cents apiece, they struck out for Wilson, Okla., to visit relatives of Roy Tidwell, 15-year-old seventh grade student. The relatives were not at home and Tidwell and his companion, Rector Johnson, 14-year-old ninth grade student, began the return trip.

A Lubbock man picked up the boys near Vernon, brought them to Lubbock and gave them "a square meal, the first one we had since we left home." Both were anticipating being at home again, "taking what's coming and going back to school."

MRS. HOUSEWIFE has many interests competing for her attention. She can devote only a small part of her day to shopping. Obviously she cannot visit ALL the stores in an effort to shop to her best advantage.

Therefore she selects those stores which have given her advance information through the advertising columns of her daily newspaper. She has learned that it is always more efficient, and usually more economical, to do the greater part of her shopping right at home with her Avalanche and Journal.

It is not enough for you to give better values or service in your store. You must let Mrs. Housewife know about them. It is not enough to employ good salesmen. You must do your preliminary selling in Mrs. Housewife's own living room. The wise, modern shopper reads 'Avalanche-Journal papers for guidance. Is your message there?

For two consecutive years Lubbock has won first in the State of Texas in its clean up campaign. During both of these years Lubbock has received high ranking in the United States—having received hundreds of letters from all parts of the United States inquiring just how the campaign was conducted.

Aggressiveness of Lubbock citizens alone is responsible for this wonderful showing competing against every city throughout our nation.

Last year's report shows that 1370 flower boxes were planted, 3585 trees planted, 2464 rubbish piles destroyed, 1090 insect breeding places destroyed, 3385 rats killed, over 15,000 pounds of nails picked up out of the city streets by our local Boy Scout troops, over 1000 walls papered, and hundreds of homes painted.

The above is only a few of the many things accomplished by the citizens of this city during last year's effort to make Lubbock a better town in which to build a home.

Slater Succeeds Miner In Local Recruiting Post

Sregt. Edward O. Slater arrived in Lubbock, Friday, from the district United States army recruiting office at Fort Bliss, and will succeed Sergt. M. J. Miner as the officer in charge of the Lubbock recruiting station at 817 1-2 Broadway.

Sergeant Miner, previously on recruiting duty at El Paso and for a year at Big Spring, came here July 1, 1931. He has been ordered to Fort F. E. Warren at Cheyenne, Wyo., for duty beginning next Saturday with the first United States infantry, of which he is a sergeant.

Two former service men were reenlisted here this month. They were Benny F. Hampton, discharged from the 23rd infantry at Fort Sam Houston last March 26 and re-enlisted for the first infantry at Fort F. E. Warren, and Sam E. McDonald, discharged from the 12th field artillery at Fort Sam Houston last January 30 and re-enlisted for the field artillery at Fort Sill, Okla.

No new men are being accepted here for the army, and the only former service men accepted are those re-enlisting within three months of their last discharge, Sergeant Miner said.

Mystery Story Puzzles Beaumont Postoffice Officials

Letter Mailed In Letterbox Turns Up In Bock Taken From Library Three Hours Later And No One Knows How; Amateur Detectives Dig Out Their Magnifying Glasses

BEAUMONT, April 23. (AP)—Beaumont has a mystery story that has postoffice officials stumped, and now the details have been sent to the postmaster general for his department to puzzle over.

J. O. Carter, local store manager, mailed a letter in the street letterbox in front of his store at noon. The letter, bearing his return address, was addressed to Charley Lockhart, state treasurer, cigarette division, Austin.

About 3 p. m., Miss Normarine Carter, no relative to J. O. Carter, arrived home from Tyrrell library with four books she had just drawn from the library. At 4 p. m. Albert W. Carter, Miss Normarine's father, walked into J. O. Carter's store, asked for the manager and handed him the same letter he had posted in the letter box four hours earlier. It had not been cancelled or postmarked.

Albert W. Carter informed J. O. Carter that the letter fluttered from a book his daughter had drawn from the library an hour earlier.

How the letter, which contained a check for more than $100, got out of the mailbox and into a book at the library, a block distance from his establishment, never getting near the postoffice, is what puzzles J. O. Carter. Also Postmaster Charles Ledwidge.

J. O. Carter will sign an affidavit that he mailed the letter himself in the box and that he has not been in Tyrrell library in months. Miss Normarine Carter has not been in Carter's store in months. And Ledwidge will sign an affidavit to the effect that so far as he can ascertain the mail box has not been tampered with.

The queerest part of all, perhaps, is that out of 53,000 books in the library, Miss Carter selected one which contained this letter, mailed three hours earlier.

It is too much for Postmaster Ledwidge, so he sent the letter and details to Postmaster General Brown for further investigation.

Meantime, amateur Beaumont detectives are digging out their magnifying glasses and false whiskers in an attempt to figure the mystery out.

"Victory Fund" In Texas Falls Short

HOUSTON, April 23. (AP)—Lewis Fisher of Houston, chairman of the Democratic "Victory Fund" of Texas, has issued a statement expressing disappointment at the relative scarcity of contributions.

"For a while they were coming in rather well from the rest of the state—never much from Houston," he said. "Fort Worth has responded better than any other Texas city."

The state quota is $50,000. For the nation it is $1,500,000.

Paris Places Designs On Sweaters

New Patterns Add Cut And Color To Summer Ensemble

BY JEAN PATOU
Written for NEA Service

PARIS, April 23.—It was the determined simplicity of the informal ensemble which made us all adopt, a few years ago, that ideal garment, the sweater. As each season came, new modifications were brought to the original idea and these variations account for its popularity. The sweater lasted on, without any sign of lassitude on the part of women, for a record length of time in the annals of fashion.

As the fundamental theme of the informal ensemble, or suit, of which the sweater was an important number, could never be subjected to any very radical change, this garment became almost a classic. It also explains why we all endeavored to get away from it for a while.

It was only after having completely modified its aspect that I consented to revert back to the sweater this season. So far as form is concerned, the old uniform pattern has been abandoned. Heretofore, the only outstanding characteristic of a sweater was the more or less original selection and disposition of colors. Today it is an integral part of the ensemble, and is no longer condemned either to regularity of cut or design which, after all, were the cause of its disgrace with both creators and women.

The sweater now represents much more than that, as it supplies its quota to the silhouette and is therefore indispensable to the homogenity and harmony of the ensemble. In some cases, too, it supplies the outstanding feature.

The latest sweaters all evidence a much greater amount of thought and technique of cut, which sufficiently motivate their return to the mode, besides the novelty appeal in the new interpretations.

One of the new forms of sweaters which has found great favor this season has an irregular basque effect finishing in a point at the front. At first glance looks like the top of the dress, an effect enhanced by the design and coloring. Another which has proved almost as popular is the sweater blouse of hand-knitted wool, which is worn tucked into the skirt.

There is also a number of new ideas in the medium employed for sweaters this season. Some time ago I had discarded jerseys because they were too closely woven for strenuous wear, but much to my regret, as they are the most agreeable fabrics for informal clothes. This year, however, the manufacturers have created a number of open-worked jersey weaves which are delightful as well as hygienic, and I have used a good deal of these. The hand-knitted blouse or sweater, though, is perhaps the newest idea. As with all things executed by hand, there is a certain quality besides a choice of patterns and stitches that can rarely be achieved in machine-made materials. The exclusive woman will welcome these as she can thus ensure a design for her own use without fearing to see it copied immediately.

READING ALOUD

The wise parent reads to the child before the age of two from his pictured story books or magazines. In the home it is better, as a rule, to read to the child than to tell him stories. In the first place, nearly every parent can read a story — few can tell one well and fewer still can clothe the story in language equal to the written word, provided it is wisely chosen. If the story is well illustrated, the child will look at the pictures as we read. Gradually what he hears as he looks becomes associated with this picture. As the same story is repeated, new associations are established, new images are aroused; the picture waxes in attractiveness. It gives new meaning to the context.

When we read, we should select the story with care so that the same fine language patterns are heard by the child over and over. The little child enjoys verbal repetition. If we miscall a word, for instance, he corrects us forthwith; if we pause, he supplies the proper word. We are convinced, therefore, that he is acquiring meaning and vocabulary. It seems to me that I must have read "Cinderella" several hundred times to one of my children. The curious thing about it is that, whereas I sometimes grew very mechanical in my reading, often letting my mind wander into wool gathering, the child would manifest rapturous delight and demand the story again.

Good stories offer a variety of expression rarely found in the speech of parents. When he is read to, the child learns word, phrase, and sentence patterns which he invariably imitates unconsciously later on in his speech.

In our home we read to our children from the time each was about 16 months of age, and kept on reading to them long past the time when they

The Woman's Angle

BY BLANCHE E. BEAN
Avalanche Woman's Editor

GALVESTON—If a young woman, of 25 for instance, could step into our world today after having slept through five thousand years, how might she be distinguished from the modern young woman?

A thing to prod fancy happened the other day when a group of excavators from the Egyptain University's archeological expedition unearthed two coffins from the depths of Giza plateaus, near the pyramids, and found inside the bodies of two royal ladies who died some five millenniums ago. One was that of a young woman approximately 25 years of age. The other is believed to be that of one of the royal ladies of the fourth dynasty. Each body was richly adorned with jewels and one wore a perfectly cut tunic embroidered with faience beads—a model not unlike the styles worn today.

With all of our assurance that we are different from the women of past centuries, such discoveries as these suggest that these women may have been simply our prototypes after all.

Sweep away the conventionalities of the twentieth century; forget the trivialities of introductions, of table service, the dogmas that guide most of our every day activities, and one might find that women are very much the same today and five thousand years ago. This 25-year-old maiden might, with the touch of some fairy's wand, arise like the sleeping princess and walk in our midst indistinguishable from the woman of today.

Her tunic might pass as a creation that had come from some famous Parisian shop. Her sandles worn without stockings might be little different from the styles that fill shop windows this spring. Her hair might hang in careless ringlets and be caught by a gay band to match the embroidery of her gown while the gold necklace of 50 pieces that has been clasped about her neck these many centures could provoke the envy of less fortunate lassies—it would be treasured as the rare antique that it is. And garbed thus, might she be so different from today's woman?

The chances are that her nails were carefully groomed those 5000 years ago—polish even might have been applied that would approximate the colorful liquids used today. And, to make the story complete, we can't be too sure that her toe nails were not equally well treated. Essentially, women are probably the same today that they were fifty centuries ago when these two bodies were sealed away to sleep in their fineries.

THE OLEANDER

ADDED to the profusion of flowers in Galveston now are the oleander blossoms—an array that has given to this town its name of the Oleander City. White and pink blossoms are filling every street with color. The deeper shades of red are a little late in bursting buds and other colors will come on later.

Oleander trees and bushes line almost every street of this city and more are being planted all of the time.

How the oleander came to Galveston has almost been forgotten but it was brought to this island by some of the first white settlers. One story is that the Spanish monks brought the shrub in and another is that mariners brought it here from the West Indies after it had been imported there from Jamaica. It is thought that the first plants were brought in about 1841.

When it was discovered that the oleander bore no fruit, those who brought it in were disappointed but they found compensations, according to one story, when they discovered that it was so readily adapted, had such radiant flowers and that flies and mosquitoes avoid habitations adjacent to the bushes. The flowers last from now until late in the summer, adding to the beauty of the city.

This flower, known as the South Sea rose is naturally white or pink and has a single petalled blossom. With cultivation and cross breeding, Galvestonians have now developed a variety of colors: scarlet, salmon, yellow and variegated.

Four annual events are clamoring for the special attention of all parent-teacher workers now—May Day, Music Week, Boys Week, and convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. May 1, is National Child Health Day and material can be had for the asking by applying to the bureau of child hygiene, state department of health, Austin. National Music Week May 1-7, will be a good background for a little philanthropic attention to some of the local musicians. Mrs. F. L. Jaccard, state chairman of music, suggests that patriotic atmosphere is a fitting observance for present conditions. Pay especial attention to "America." "America the Beautiful," and "The Star Spangled Banner," with tableaux and the narration of their histories.

Boys' Week is for the general purpose of directing the community to the boy and will take place this year during the week beginning April 30 and ending May 7. This committee is interested in arousing a sympathetic interest in the boy's problems and thus aiding him in his development into a good citizen.

Honor State President

Mrs. A. F. Wood, president of the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers, has been honored by being asked to serve as a member on the committee on nominations for national chairman at the annual convention of National Congress of Parents and Teachers to be held in Minneapolis May 15-30. She will also be a guest Sunday, May 15, when the St. Paul City Council of Parents and Teachers will honor the national board of managers with a dinner. J. J. Hill school and Highland Park school of St. Paul are to be joint hostesses to the Texas delegates.

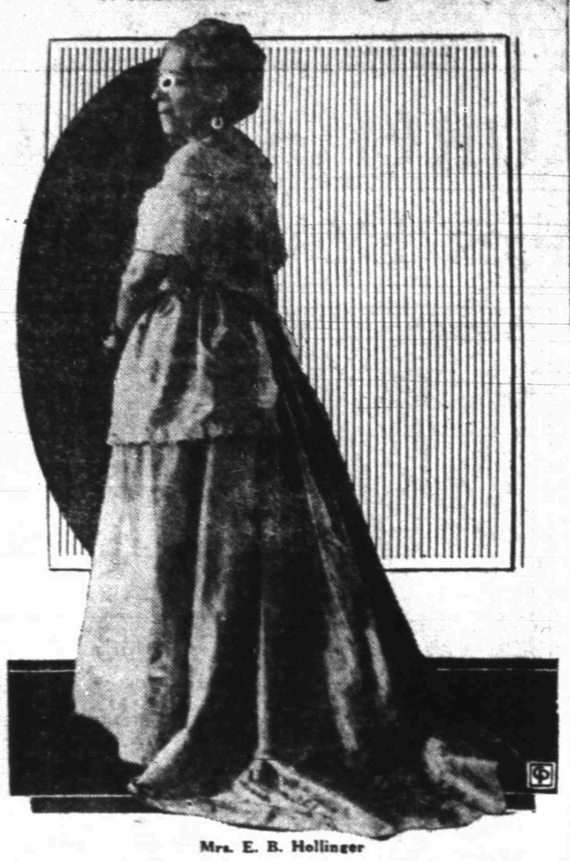

Plans are under way to honor all state founders so Mrs. Ella Caruthers Porter, founder of the Texas branch, will be featured on this special occasion. Mrs. S. M. N. Marrs, past president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and past president of the Texas branch, will address the Young Women's Christian association conference.

World Goodwill Day will be observed Wednesday evening, May 18. Dr. Augustus O. Thomas, Secretary-General of the World Federation of Education associations, will speak on "World Conditions Affecting Childhood." Mrs. A. H. Reeve, president of the International Federation of Home and School and former president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, is to deliver an address on "Our Shadow Selves."

Father-Singers as well as Mother-Singers will participate in the musical programs. Mr. H. A. Bellows, vice-president of the Columbia Broadcasting company, is to address the publicity class on Thursday morning, May 19.

Delegates will be delighted with the comfort and homelike atmosphere of the Curtis and Leamington hotels, convention headquarters. Minneapolis is the vacation capital and gateway to the Northwest with its 11 lakes and 5000 acres of parks, forming one of the most extensive park systems in the United States. This unusual city, in the heart of the land of 10,000 lakes, is an ideal location for the thirty-sixth national convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Worn At First Inaugural

Mrs. E. B. Hollinger

MRS. E. B. HOLLINGER of San Angelo, is pictured wearing a dress which was worn April 30, 1789, at the first inauguration of George Washington for president.

This dress has been in Mrs. Hollinger's family for more than 150 years, and was also worn at the inauguration of Andrew Jackson in 1829. Mrs. Hollinger says she hopes that John Nance Garner, Texas, now speaker of the national house of representatives, will become president, so she can wear it at his inauguration.

At George Washington's inauguration the dress was worn by Mary Custis, a relative by marriage of Martha Washington. At the Jackson inaugural it was worn by a Miss Tyler, niece of John Tyler, seventh president of the United States.

Both Miss Curtis and Miss Tyler were cousins of Mrs. Hollinger's great, great grandmother. Mrs. Hollinger was told by her ancestors that the Curtis family, Virginia tobacco raisers, sent to France for the materials of which the dress is made.

Mrs. Hollinger also is a distant relative of the late Mrs. Ida M. Wood wealthy New York recluse, who died recently.

CHAPTER 1

"Susan Carey!"

The girl looked up to see the brown eyes of the shorthand teacher fastened on her.

"Two words wrong today. However am I going to teach you how to spell 'believe' and 'necessary'?"

Miss Allen's tone was superior and cutting, Susan thought. The girl flushed to the roots of her hair. Oh, how she hated this business of learning to be a stenographer! She never would learn really, she felt certain of that. It was humiliating beyond belief to be haled up before the desk this way, to be reprimanded. True, there were only three other students within hearing range. The rest sat huddled around their tables, four to a group, struggling with n-hooks and vowel positions and whatnot. Horrible, horrible invention, shorthand!

Susan said in a voice she felt to be craven and faltering, "I'm sorry, Miss Allen."

The paper was shoved across the desk to her and she accepted it, returning to her table with hot cheeks and eyes downcast. Helen Marshall, her nearest neighbor, whispered softly, "Don't mind her, the old cat. She loves to get a rise from anyone."

Susan accepted the sympathy with a faint smile and the endless morning droned on. It was May and a vagrant breeze drifted through the big windows of the Block Shorthand School on the eighteenth floor of the towering new office building on Michigan avenue. It was a breeze from the lake that seemed to say, "Come and sail with me."

Susan thought of Aunt Jessie at home waiting for her to finish her shorthand course and start "bringing something in." Susan winced at the thought of Aunt Jessie staring angrily through her spectacles on hearing that Susan "couldn't seem to catch on" to this r and n-hook business. Aunt Jessie was "awfully strict." She had been raised in an old-fashioned school and believed all the old maxims. "Spare the rod and spoil the child" was one of her favorites. Also, "Beauty is only skin deep," and "Handsome is as handsome does."

Aunt Jessie wanted Susan to be "a nice, mild girl." She didn't want her to use lipstick or rouge and she grumbled even about powder. She had been known to say two years before that she'd rather see Susan dead at her feet than with makeup on her face.

All this was rather hard on Susan who was 19, dark and handsome in a tragic way, rather after the manner of Joan Crawford. Her eyes were said to be like La Crawford's, in their depth and size. The girl's face had the strong, clear cut, yet utterly feminine contour of the motion picture star's. Susan's figure was lovely, too—slim and nicely curved in the right places. Although how anyone could be expected to look attractive in Cousin Rue's season-before-last blue serge suit Susan didn't know.

The girl tried to be optimistic but sometimes when she went to movies and saw the adorable gowns the film stars wore she came home feeling cheated. She could never, never hope to wear anything but a $9.95 frock from Weegman's basement. Aunt Jessie thought there was no place like Weegman's basement.

Susan looked up from her reverie to find the handsome boy at the next table gazing at her. Odd for that good-looking, superior chap to be attending business school! He was "Mister Dunbar" to the class and Helen had whispered the day before that he had been at Harvard, had been dropped, and that his father was making him "go in for business in a big way."

"The Dunbar Wheel Works," Helen had explained, important because she knew. And Susan had glanced again at the husky, tall young man with interest. It wasn't often she had the opportunity to see such a youth at close range. All the boys who grew up in Aunt Jessie's neighborhood were learning to be plumbers or driving laundry wagons or doing something equally exciting. Young Mr. Dunbar seemed a prince from a strange land. Susan liked to listen to the rumble of his deep voice when he read his notes back to the dapper Miss Allen. It seemed faintly ridiculous that a young man who had attended junior proms, who had played football and made the college crew should be translating, "Your letter of the ninth instant received and contents noted" to a shorthand teacher.

Susan squeezed the tears back and pretended not to know that Mr. Robert Dunbar was staring at her. Just the same, his interest made the girl's heart unaccountably lighter. She set to work again with the pot-hooks and dots. She would conquer this wretched book! She would!

When she went home that evening she was able for the first time to endure without flinching the packed street car with its swaying mass of sticky, tired humanity. The car ploughed west, stopping at almost every corner, swaying, jerking, clanging. But Susan hardly noticed. She was absorbed in a dream of her own—a dream in which a tall, fair, ruddy young man with enormous blue eyes played the hero's part.

Aunt Jessie spoke to her twice at supper before Susan looked up guiltily.

"I didn't hear what you said," she stammered.

Aunt Jessie looked annoyed. Prim she was, 50 odd, her gray hair done pompadour in the fashion of her vanished youth.

"Don't see how your mind can ever be on your work, the way you dawdle at things," Aunt Jessie said sharply, "I asked you if you wanted some more potatoes."

Susan shook her head dreamily.

"Nothing but a shadow anyway, that's what you are," scolded Aunt Jessie. "You girls nowadays and your dieting!"

Susan looked down at her slim curves and laughed. No need for her to diet. She weighed 118 pounds. She was tall, too, and that helped. It was best to be tall this year of trailing skirts and what the magazines called "the romantic frock." Not that Susan owned any such! Her best frock was the last year's organdie that Aunt Jessie had let down. It had been Susan's class day dress. It was pink and had a huge bertha collar. Susan adored it. It was the nearest thing to a sure-enough party dress she had ever owned.

After she had helped Aunt Jessie with the dishes the girl flew to her room to see if the pink frock had been ironed. Aunt Jessie had promised to have it ready.

But no, there was no pink dream of a dress hanging in the narrow little closet. Susan's heart sank. Mary Ruth O'Hara was to call for her at eight and here it was half past seven already.

She called down the narrow passage. "Yoo-hoo, Aunt Jessie. I can't find my organdie any place."

The sharp voice came back, tinged with fresh annoyance: "—Expect me to do everything! 'Sif I could get around to that extra job with the spring cleaning and all—"

Susan sank down on the bed, her brows crinkled with despair. She had promised! Aunt Jessie had promised!

The ready tears started to her eyes. Then of a sudden she dashed them away after a quick glance at the clock.

"I'll do it myself," hse said. She rushed into the little bathroom where she washed her hands vigorously, ridding them of the scent of yellow soap and dishwater. She dashed cold water on her reddened eyes and flew to the kitchen. Aunt Jessie was in the back yard, discussing lettuce plants with Mrs. Sorenson, who lived next door.

Susan put the ironing board into place and plugged in the cord. She rooted out the dress in its towel wadding and sprinkled it anew. Her fingers flew and her breath came faster. Aunt Jessie hadn't wanted her to go to Rose Milton's party. That was the real reason she hadn't ironed the pink organdie. Aunt Jessie was always doing things like this. She had forgotten what it was to be young and spent most of her time trying to repress the natural youthful impulses of her niece.

But Susan would not let her conquer. She was young and that meant being alive, hopeful. Suddenly she began to sing. Aunt Jessie, coming in from the yard, regarded the girl with irritation.

"Land's sake!" said Aunt Jessie with some asperity. "You going to that fool jamboree, anyhow? I thought you'd get to bed early for once and have done with all this gallivanting."

Susan smiled at her. Her lips curved and she said good-humoredly, "Answer that front door bell, will you? That's a lamb! I hear Mary Ruth on the front stoop."

The Miltons' front parlor was filled to overflowing when Susan and Mary Ruth arrived. Susan felt shy. Most of the girls were coming with their "boy friends" and only she and Mary Ruth who was little and skinny and had buck teeth came alone—Mary Ruth because she had never had a "boy friend" and Susan because Aunt Jessie wouldn't let her come with anyone. Aunt Jessie said there was plenty of time later for all that nonsense and she wouldn't stand for Susan gallivanting all over town with every Tom, Dick and Harry.

Aunt Jessie never missed crimes or scandals in the newspapers. "Girl's Body Found in Vacant Lot," she would drone ominously, looking over her spectacles at Susan, struggling with shorthand symbols. "No wonder such dreadful things happen, the way young people go laly-gagging at all hours nowadays!"

So Susan had no admirers. She had to go to her few parties unescorted. Usually she didn't mind but tonight, somehow, she hated it. She felt conspicuous, walking down north Flornuoy cstreet with the dumpy Mary Ruth. She thought people must be hiding behind their window curtains, pointing a finger and saying, "There goes that Susan Carey. She's awfully unpopular. She's never had a beau."

"Hurry up, can't you?" she asked Mary Ruth rather pettishly. steps and into the front parlor steps and into th efront parlor when they reached Rose Milton's home. She saw a confusion of eyes, heard a gabble of tongues. She rushed straight upstairs to the front bedroom where she took off her last year's panama hat, depositing it on the already overcrowded double bed. Then she primped a bit in front of the mirror over Mrs. Milton's big mahogany dresser. The Miltons had nice things, Susan reflected. Not like Aunt Jessie, who still thought the golden oak she had bought in 1905 was the last word in style.

"How can I ever ask anyone to our house?" the girl had thought in despair. The chairs in Aunt Jessie's parlor were stiff and slippery and anyhow she preferred not to have Susan ask her friends in. Aunt Jessie liked things quiet, she said.

Suddenly Susan felt she must be going to cry. She wondered why she had come. She would be miserable, all evening. She just knew it! She would sit in a corner smiling a stiff, set smile and trying to look as if she were having a good time. The other girls would dance with their escorts to the music of the radio and Susan would sneak out to the kitchen and beg to be allowed to help with the refreshments just to conceal from the assembled company the fact that she wasn't enjoying herself. Oh, she wanted to run away! Everything was horrible and life was hopeless.

She dabbed at her eyes and leaned across the welter of hand-painted china toilet things to powder her nose. Mrs. Milton, stout and voluble, bustled in, wearing a gay, flowered georgette.

"What on earth's the matter, Susan Carey?"

The girl stammered. "I—I got something in my eye."

"Well, now, let's see!" Mrs. Milton flipped a big white handkerchief out of the top drawer and made a funnel of one corner. "Let me at it. I'm great at getting those things out. Once Papa got a piece in his eye so big he made a joke out of it. He says, 'I bet if I called the Consumer's Company they'd sent out a truck for that load of coal.' Let me see, Susan."

The girl winked her eyes rapidly, regaining her composure.

"It's all right now, honestly. I believe I've got rid of it."

"That's good." Mrs. Milton beamed at her. "You look very pretty tonight, I must say. Pink's your color. The boys'll be after you, Susan Carey. What I say is what's the use of you bothering your head with all this business course nonsense when you'll soon be stepping out and getting married." Her laugh wheezed out suddenly, disconcertingly.

Susan smiled. In some obscure way the outlook had been lightened.

"I'm going to have to earn my living in the meantime," she said.

"How's your aunt?" Mrs. Milton wanted to know.

"Oh, Aunt Jessie's fine." Susan frowned a little as she said it. Mrs. Milton's sharp eyes caught the frown.

SUSAN CAREY

ROBERT DUNBAR

"As strict as ever," she wanted to know.

Susan flushed and nodded. Mrs. Milton clucked sympathetically. "Well, as I always say, I don't believe in bringing up girls too stiff-necked," she observed comfortably. "Mine always had a good time. There's Veronica who's got herself a good husband and a nice home out in Oak Park. And Grace out in Pasadena. My girls had lots of beaux and I encouraged 'em. I believe in it. If you don't see they have a good time somebody else will. And that may not be so good. Your Aunt Jessie's old style like my mother. My mother thought we ought to sit on the front steps, all in a row, until we were 30." She laughed wheezily. "Well, none of us did. Both myself and Lide—that's my younger sister—eloped."

Susan smiled in sympathy. "But I don't particularly want to marry young, she explained. I've got to work and help Aunt Jessie because she raised me and I owe her a lot. I just want a little freedom and some fun."

"That's right. That's right." Mrs. Milton patted her on the shoulder. "Now you run along back and start having some. There are some boys there who won't want to miss you in your pink dress."

A bit reluctantly Susan obeyed. Rose Milton, a tall blond girl wearing many blue ruffles, rushed up to her. The rugs in the big front room had been rolled back and four or five couples were dancing. Not to the music of the radio. A dark-haired young man was pounding out "St. Louis Blues" at the piano in the corner. He played with his whole body. Hands, feet, even his head moved to the rhythm. Susan stared at him, fascinated.

Rose led her toward the pianist. "Ben Lampman, here's the girl I told you about, Susan Carey. She's not a nitwit like the rest of us. She has brains, Talk to her."

The young man stopped playing "St. Louis Blues" in the very middle of a mournful phrase and jumped up. He was tall and lean and vaguely rumpled looking. Susan put her slim hand into the crushing grip he offered her. Someone turned on the radio after a moment or two of grumbling on the part of the interrupted dancers and young Lampman murmured, "Want to dance?"

Susan did. Although she had so few opportunities she danced well. Even this indifferent partner could not spoil her pleasure in rhythm. The young man was the rangy sort who bumped into things and murmured "Sorry" every so often. Mrs. Milton's front parlor, after all, was no ballroom. Chairs and tables leaned out from corners to trip the unwary passerby. After a bit, rather flushed, Susan flopped into a chair and Ben Lampman fanned her awkwardly.

"Did—did anybody ever tell you that you looked like Joan Crawford?" he asked.

Susan smiled and fluttered a glance upward from beneath long lashes. "Yes," she murmured.

"I suppose like all the girls you want to go into the movies," he muttered, trying to make conversation.

"I hadn't thought about it," said Susan. "I'm learning to be a big business girl."

"That's terrible," barked Ben Lampman. "I think the men in the gay nineties were right. Woman's place is in the home."

Susan stared. She thought he must be joking. But the young man was in deadly earnest.

"Makes we sick, seeing these swarms of young girls all over down town, morning and night," he said. "They ought to be in nice kitchens or taking care of kids."

"How sil-ly!" trilled Rose Milton, overhearing this last. "Rally round, girls and boys, and listen to Ben rave. He's on the stump again."

The young man reddened. Rose grasped his hands and pulled him to his feet. "Back to the piano, you," she sang gaily.

"If that's the best you can do for Susan Carey you'd better pound out some more music and let her dance."

One of the boys Susan had known in high school, Eddie Wilkins, came up and claimed her. Susan felt a fool. What an uncomfortable sort of person young Lampman was! Eddie muttered in her ear that Ben was "kind of a socialist or something." A freak, Susan decided! But a rather interesting freak. And how he could play!

As the evening wore on Susan's eyes brightened and the flush in her cheeks deepened. She was having a good time! It was too good to be true. At 11 o'clock she jumped up, startled. Mrs. Milton and a colored woman were beginning to serve supper, but Susan dashed into the bedroom and retrieved her wraps from the mountain of coats on the big bed.

Rose dawdled after her, "Honestly do you have to go?"

Susan pulled on her gloves. "Oh, you know Aunt Jessie! She would have the police out searching for me if I stayed any longer."

"It's a shame," Rose said, "but I'll get one of the boys to take you home. You mustn't go by yourself."

"Don't bother," begged Susan. She had visions of a long walk home with a bored young man who would be annoyed at being dragged away from the feast.

When she arrived at the front door she found Ben Lampman there, hat in hand. "Rose said you were going—do you mind?" he stuttered.

"It's very kind of your," said Susan, politely. But she was rather appalled at the prospect of walking eight blocks with young Mr. Lampman who thought woman's place was in the home. He and Aunt Jessie would get along rather well.

However, Ben spared her any more harangues. He talked desultorily of music, of what he wanted to do. He dreamed of having an orchestra of his own "like Whiteman's." Susan could sympathize with this.

"I think that would be wonderful," she told him enthusiastically.

"Do you, honestly?" He was almost pathetic in his desire for approval.

"Yes, I do." And then Susan told him about her struggles with the demon, shorthand and her fear that she would never conquer what Aunt Jessie called "the business world."

Ben Lampman growled, "Stick with it. You'll be successful, I can see that. Don't mind what I said tonight about girls working. I know that's behind the times. From what you tell me you've got a hard row to hoe with this aunt of yours. You've got to strike out for yourself."

Susan flushed and stammered loyally, "Aunt Jessie is all right. She just doesn't understand."

Now they were at her doorstep. The little house looked shrouded and secretive. For a minute Susan was terribly nervous. What is Aunt Jessie should be waiting up, should call out. "Come straight in this minute, Susan Carey!" She had been known to do that.

Hastily she held out her hand. "It was awfully nice of you to bring me home," she murmured. "Thanks so much."

Ben Lampman grasped the hand feverishly. "I want to come and see you sometime," he said.

Susan felt a distaste for the young man's ardor. "I—I don't know", she said vaguely. "Maybe, some time."

"I'll telephone," he promised as she ran up the stairs.

Aunt Jessie called out, "Who was that you were talking to?"

Susan said, "Just a friend of Rose's who brought me home."

She crept into her room, turned on the light and moved about as softly as possible, making ready for bed. After she had hung away the pink dress and slipped into her worn old dressing gown she stood for a long time staring at herself in the mirror. She traced the wing-like stroke of her black brows. She widened her gray eyes and smiled at the effect.

Was it true—did she really want to be a business girl? Or was she just kidding herself because she wasn't popular with the boys as Rose Milton and most of the other girls were?

She didn't know. This young man, Ben Lampman, had disconcerted and annoyed her. Yet his obvious admiration had salved a sore spot in her ego. What had he meant by saying he knew she'd be a success?

Susan yawned and just then Aunt Jessie, to whom every creak and whisper in the little house spoke as plainly as a child to its mother, called out, "For heaven's sake, Susan Carey, stop primping in front of the mirror and get to bed. You've got to get up in the morning."

Oh, the morning! As if she'd

Poultry Pointers

By H. B. Lansden
Licensed A. P. A. Judge
Poultry Specialist, Economy Mills

Questions pertaining to points discussed in this column and to poultry raising in general will be answered gladly. Address your letter to Poultry Service Department, Economy Mills, or in this newspaper.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Lansden returned last week from a two weeks' visit in Havana, Cuba, where for the fifth consecutive year he served as judge of the Cuban national poultry exhibition, sponsored by the Cuban government. Following is an interesting account of some of his experiences during the trip.

WHAT WE SAW IN CUBA

Leaving Lubbock Tuesday morning, March 29, we reached New Orleans Wednesday morning and by noon we were abroad the ship and ready for a two-day trip on the great gulf.

Arriving at the Havana docks at noon Friday, we were met by a committee delegated by the Cuban national association of agriculture. After getting located in the Saratoga Hotel, a popular tourist hotel facing the Prado, a large plaza full of beautiful tropical flowers, royal palms and shrubbery, and just across from the new Capitol, made of native snow white marble at a cost of twenty-five million dollars, we spent the evening taking in the scenery of the old Spanish city of more than half a million people.

By six a. m. Saturday, we were on our way to the government exposition grounds, a distance of 25 miles by electric railway. (And think of the regular round trip fare of 25 cents—only one half cent per mile each way.) This road passes through rugged hills and valleys spotted with primitive little farm homes, dwellings constructed of a kind of cane or bamboo, covered with palm leaves. You see the family busy about the yard and men at work in the fields. Many are plowing with oxen hitched to crude plows with only one handle. Crops along the line consist of vegetables of various kinds, tobacco and bananas.

Vegetables and fruits are mostly carried to the city in oxcarts and peddled from hand baskets.

We found the poultry exhibit of about fifteen hundred birds all ready for judging. Most of the American breeds consisted of Brahmas, Reds, Jersey Giants, Orpingtons and Leghorns. Each year a marked improvement in quality as well as an increase in the number of entries is noted.

Bsides American breeds, there are two native breeds in several color patterns. One they call Cuban Mallso—these are in black, white and black-breasted reds. This is a game species, the males with long tails dragging the ground—beautiful birds! The females are not attractive, smaller even than our Leghorn hens, and they lay a small brown egg.

The other Cuban breed is of Spanish origin called Catalana del Pratt, in colors white, buff and partridge. These birds are very similar in size and type to our Minorca. They are good layers of white, slightly tinted eggs. Turkeys, geese, ducks, pigeons and rabbits were also among the exhibits.

Native eggs sell for 15 cents. Storage eggs from the United States are 20 cents a dozen.

The exposition is sponsored and financed by the government with a view of educating natives to more diversified practices.

Dawson County To Get County Extension Work As Soon As Commissioners Approve Plan

LAMESA, April 23—(Special)—Dawson county will have a county agent on the job as soon as the county commissioner's court is ready to install the service, Sterling C. Evans, district county agent leader, told members of the chamber of commerce in charge of that work, while here recently.

When the court decided to do away with both the county and home demonstration agents last summer, a committee headed by Dr. R. F. Nix as chairman, raised funds for the work. W. W. Evans, agent, resigned two months ago to go to Plainview but Miss Rozelle McKenney, home demonstration agent, is still here.

Mr. Evans told local men with whom he talked that the state extension service would have a man here whenever the local court decided to start the work. He indicated the state might be willing to go more than half way for the local work.

"Sunday Houses" Still In Texas

* * * * * * * * * * *

Relics Of Time When Farmers Remained In Town Saturday Night To Attend Sunday Services Are Found

AUSTIN, April 23 (AP)—Hope that Fredericksburg, in the hill country of central Texas, will take steps to preserve its "Sunday Houses" has been expressed by Samuel E. Gideon, national committeeman of the American Institute of Architects for the preservation of historic landmarks.

The Sunday Houses are a relic of the days when farmers came into town only once a week, on Saturdays, and remained overnight to attend Sunday services. Usefullness of the Sunday Houses was abolished with the coming of the automobile where farmers were enabled to make trips to Fredericksburg whenever they wished.

The idea of a Sunday house was conceived when the town kinsman of one of the farmers, who had been in the habit of staying at his relatives' house over the week-end, let it be known to his country cousin that the week-end visits were unwelcome. The farmer decided to build himself a Sunday House.

Other farmers took to the idea immediately and Sunday Houses sprung up around and in Fredericksburg. A few of the houses still stand and are used infrequently by country visitors.

Gideon said the Sunday Houses were peculiar to Fredericksburg, the only other place where there is a record of their having been used being Middletown, Conn., as early as 1660.

The Sunday Houses and older residences of Fredericksburg are splendid examples of indigenous architecture and are frank and truthful expressions of material and purpose, Gideon said.

"Had modern Fredericksburg shunned modern unnecessary innovations and conserved more of her antiquity and traditions, she would have rivalled our historical New England townships in interest for the tourist, for the antiquarian and for the historian," he stated. "As it is, there is much that is left of quaintness and interest but let us save a few of the Sunday Houses and other unique institutions in Fredericksburg in order that the future generations may enjoy some of the honest echoes of the past."

Friday, June 3 Is Date For Abernathy's Commencement

ABERNATHY, April 23.—(Special)—Friday, June 3, is the date announced for the annual commencement of the Abernathy High school, L. P. Shaw, superintendent, says.

There are sixteen seniors in the class at this time. No announcement of the speaker or the minister to deliver the baccalaureate sermon the Sunday before, was made.

Hens Lay "Two-In-One" Eggs

Plymouth rock hens in Fred Printz's flock at Crooksville, Ohio, do double duty when they lay. They all produce double-yolk eggs. The flock, consisting of 11 hens, has been carefully bred from one pullet owned by Printz several years ago. By eliminating fowls that were not of the desired type, the present "double-yolk layers" were produced. Printz is shown above with one of his hens and inset is one of the unique eggs.

Most Of Land In County Is Ready To Work

Rain Needed To Give Planting Good Start, County Agent Eaton Says; May Is Best Time For Planting Crops

LUBBOCK county and South Plains farmers are champing at their bits while waiting for the ground to get warm so that they can begin the planting of the 1932 grain and cotton crop.

So far there has not been sufficient warm weather to make the ground warm enough for planting. Another factor is that while there is apparently a large amount of sub-soil moisture, the surface soil needs more rain. Moisture also is needed to stop the blowing of the more sandy soil.

Little Planting Done

There has been but little planting so far, some corn and a little feed crops, according to D. F. Eaton, county agent. "We do not have much corn in Lubbock county except a few acres for roasting ears," the agent added.

Better than 95 per cent of the county's cultivated area that is to go into crops this year, has been prepared. Farmers are now knifing weeds and keeping the ground free of volunteer growth.

The best dates for planting, in the opinion of County Agent Eaton are between May 10 and May 20 to 25. "By that time the larger part of the sandstorms are over with, the heavier storms at least," he said. "There is not so much danger of seed being blown out. I believe that there is a better chance of the seed germinating and growing with the later planting, than that planted early."

Plant After May 1

No feed crops should be planted before the first of May, Mr. Eaton explained, because the ground is apt to be cold and seed will not germinate.

Winter wheat in Lubbock county is in need of rain, although it is not suffering as much in this section as it is farther north. East of Monroe and as far east as Becton there was a rain of about half an inch recently, that will help some, Mr. Eaton stated.

Lubbock county has very little winter barley and almost no winter rye. What there is, is in about the same condition as wheat. Some spring barley was sown and also some oats. These crops are doing as well as can be expected, the agent said.

Spring Wool Clipping Is On

Estimated Clip Of More Than 53,000,000 Pounds Is In Prospect; Buyers Arrive For Annual Purchases

(By The Associated Press)

SAN ANGELO, April 23.—Shearing machines are humming on sheep ranches all over Southwest Texas today removing the estimated clip of 53,000,000 pounds of 12-months and 20,000,000 pounds of eight-months wool from the backs of eight-months wool from the backs of thousands of sheep.

Few sales have been reported. Arrival of the wool season is attracting many buyers and transportation men into the Southwest and to San Angelo, the nation's largest inland wool market. Some of the buyers are reported to be making shearing advances.

Fight In Prospect

This season will see the biggest steamship fight the Southwest has ever known as six lines seek the wool which will be shipped to Boston. There are the old lines that have been making the shipments for years—the Morgan, Mallory, Southern and Eastern—and the new ones, Munson, Baltimore-Caroline and the Newtex. The railroads and trucks are in competition for the haul to Gulf ports. The National Wool Marketing Corporation will advance 75 per cent of the market value on wool this year, it has been announced. But the growers are puzzled over what the market value will be. Meanwhile, the growers are wondering when the final returns will be made on the clip. A plan for handling the 1932 business is expected soon from the cooperative.

The Wool Growers' Central Storage Company of San Angelo has received several clips, and now has on hand about 125,000 pounds of wool. The clip is also coming in at Kerrville, where the Schreiner Wool and Mohair Commission Company has slightly more than 400,000 pounds. The clip is coming in slowly, however.

HEIGHT SQUEEZES RAIN

Clouds are squeezed almost dry of their moisture as they rise each 1000 feet of altitude, increasing the annual rainfall at a rate of slightly more than six inches.

Geologists To Make Survey Of West Texas Potash Deposits

AUSTIN, April 23. (AP)—Engineers of the bureau of economic geology will start a survey soon to determine the extent of potash deposits in West Texas and gather additional data on the formations in which it is found.

The survey will center in the area from the Orient line of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe on the south to the Canadian River on the north, a distance of more than 275 miles.

C. L. Baker, geologist in the bureau's office at San Angelo, is making a check of oil test core drill and other data.

Plans for development of a large deposit of potash in Midland county are being made. Construction of the main shaft will be started within the near future.

The project is being carried out by a private company.

Too Many Bees

Ducks, Chickens Are Bothered

SAN ANTONIO, April 23. (AP)—Because a neighbor's bees were annoying his ducks and chickens, a San Antonio poultry fancier recently telephoned County Attorney D. F. Davis to know if something couldn't be done to keep the bees in their own back yard.

The bees bother the poultry, Davis was told. The law, Davis explaining to the complainant, does not provide for injunctions against bees crossing a street, and nothing can be done unless a bee stings a chicken. Then damages may be claimed.

Abernathy Youth Earns More Than $100 In Spare Time On Three Projects

ABERNATHY, April 23. (Special)—J. D. Vineyard, 19-year-old vocational agriculture student in the Abernathy High school, cleared more than $100 from three vocational projects that he carried on this winter before and after school hours and has his original investment of $70 in two animals.

The youth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Vineyard, well known residents of this community. He is in his third year in vocational work and is one of the star students of the class, according to his teacher, V. S. Payne.

Is Outstanding Example

"J. D. keeps accurate records on his feed costs and also his receipts," Mr. Payne said. "His project work has been good and is an outstanding example of what can be accomplished by those who keep records on their costs and seek to reduce costs and increase quality production."

The three projects were:

First, feeding of a dairy cow; animal purchased for $50; 800 pounds concentrate, $4.80; 4,500 pounds roughage, $6; labor at 15 cents per hour, $4.65; total $15.55. Receipts 372 gallons of milk at 20 cents per gallon, $74.40. Net profit, excluding cost of cow, $58.85.

Second—brood sow, cost $20; 1,20[illegible] pounds of corn, $3.70; labor, [illegible] cents an hour, $1.75; total, $5.4[illegible]. Nine pigs sold at $3.50 each, $31.5[illegible]. Net profit, not including cost of sow, $29.05.

Third—feeding out of ten hogs for market; feed costs and labor $28.98; animals sold for $54.18; net profit, $25.23.

A recapitulation shows profits were as follows: cow, $58.85; hog litter, $26.05; market project, $25.23; total $110.13.

EXPLANATION OF LAST SUNDAY'S CARTOON

The Warrior Who Led His Army To Victory After Death

El Cid, the famous Spanish hero whose full name was Rodrigo Diaz de Vivar, was born in the middle of the 11th century and died in Valencia in 1099. It is said that his death was brought about by grief over the defeat of his armies by the Moorish King Ibn Ayisha near Cuenca. To fulfill a suggestion which came to him in a dream, he ordered that after his death his body be placed in an upright position on his horse, Abieca, and his sword, Tizon, strapped to his hand. His order was complied with by his companions in arms. Thus arrayed, the dead body of the warrior rode at the head of the Christian armies, against the armies of King Burar besieging Valencia, and administered a severe defeat to the Almoravide hosts.

Series Of Oriental Fight Pictures Will Follow "Shanghai Express"

BY HUBBARD KEAVY

HOLLYWOOD—Although it has been proved frequently that timeliness has little to do with picture success, nearly every studio is preparing to take advantage of the apparent wide interest in the recent ruckus in the orient.

MARLENE DIETRICH

While the latest series of Dietrich close-ups called "Shanghai Express", has naught to do with the Sino-Japanese conflict, dealing instead with the recurrent Chinese insurrections, its opportune release set the wheels of story writing in motion.

Paramount, which made it, has a story based on the experiences of two marines (Chester Morris and Richard Arlen) in China almost ready to film.

Metro-Goldwyn has cast Clark Gable in "China Seas." It has no war sequences now, but these may be added later.

"The Roar Of The Dragon" will be R. K. O.'s offering, co-starring Irene Dunne and Richard Dix.

Anna May Wong cancelled a vaudeville engagement in order to lend her support.

Warner Oland, the Swedish gentleman who has become the movies' ace oriental, probably has been offered parts in every one of them.

Playing Safe

AT a film banquet the other night two Japanese officials were among the guests of honor.

Al Cohen, one of the better scenarists, finding himself seated next to the pair, didn't know whether they were Chinese or Japanese. Al, who never makes a blunder, safely opened the conversation with:

"Well, gentlemen, how are things on the battle front?"

HARPO MARX

I've always been concerned about the Marx brothers' manifest lack of occupations. In "Horse-feathers," their next opus, there'll be no more to worry me than the possibility of Groucho's losing his mustache.

Groucho will be a college president, Chico a bootlegger, Harpo a dog catcher, and Zeppo a football player. I think that accounts for all of them.

He's "Well Heeled"

THEY say in Hollywood that Bill Boyd is "well heeled," which as probably know, is another way saying he has saved his money.

WILLIAM BOYD

Bill has been a star for five years, ever since he made such a great hit in De Mille's "The Volga Boatman." His ambition is to be a star for six years and this is the reason:

If he works another year at his present salary, he will be able to save $50,000, thereby bringing his total savings to half a million dollars.

Looking Ahead

WHEN he has reached that goal his friends say, Bill probably will retire to spend his time yachting and golfing.

Bill's contract with Pathe is in the balance. It expired early in December and the option, at this writing, had not been taken up.

Whether the new executives of the Radio organization, which recently absorbed Pathe, will see fit to retain Boyd as one of their stars isn't worrying Bill any.

DOROTHY SEBASTIAN

He indicated that if his contract isn't renewed he'll free lance for a year or two—or until that half million dollar ambition is realized.

A short time ago Bill and Dorothy Sebastain celebrated their first wedding anniversary with a party typical of their mode of sensible living. They might have invited all of filmdom but instead they entertained eight close friends, only three or four of whom are connected with the movies.

It was a quiet, homey celebration, unaccompanied by the usual fanfare of photographs and publicity.

The Boyd living room was decorated with a huge cardboard rainbow, at the end of which was Dorothy's gift—a bucket containing fifty $20 gold pieces.

Dorothy's gift to Bill was a platinum watch chain, suspended from which was a tiny gold book listing important events during their first year.

Comedy Drama Begins Run In Lubbock Today

"One Hour With You" Showing At Lindsey; "Tarzan, The Ape Man" Be Shown Here On Friday And Saturday

MAURICE CHEVALIER in "One Hour With You" is the feature attraction of this week's theater program. It starts a three-day run at the Lindsey today.

Opposite the French star will be Jeanette MacDonald. Genevieve Tobin, Charlie Ruggles and Ronald Young head the supporting cast.

"One Hour With You" is a comedy-drama with musical interludes as in "The Smiling Lieutenant" and "The Love Parade." Movie critics have hailed it as a success everywhere it has shown.

Chevalier appears as a doctor—a specialist who gives all of his feminine patients heart-trouble.

A sensational expose of the "inside" of politics and its relation to the underworld of a big city and an intimate glimpse into the lives of the police form the plot of "The Beast of the City," starting a three-day run at the Palace today.

WALTER HUSTON

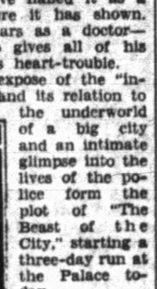

Walter Huston has the principal role as a fighting police chief. Platinum Jean Harlow, Wallace Ford and Jean Hersholt appear in the supporting cast.

Ann Harding in "Devotion" will be presented at the Lyric for three days starting today. The film was adapted from Pamela Wynne's novel, "A Little Flat in the Temple."

Miss Harding plays a double role—one as her charming self, and the other a dowdy, middle-aged governess. Leslie Howard plays the masculine lead and O. P. Heggie appears in a prominent role.

"The Misleading Lady", with Claudette Colbert, Edmund Lowe and Stuart Erwin, will be shown at the Lindsey Wednesday and Thursday. It promises laughs, romance and thrills.

Miss Colbert plays Lowe for a dupe to make him propose in order to win a wager. He retaliates by kidnaping her and breaking her spirit. An escaped lunatic, a reporter, two drunks, an avenging lover, a mystery in a mountain rendezvous figure in the story before it is brought to a happy ending.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

Another newspaper picture, "The Final Edition," comes to the palace Wednesday and Thursday.

Pat O'Brien and Mae Clarke, both of "The Front Page" fame, appear in the principal roles.

The picture deals with the story of how a newspaper scoops all of its rivals in a murder mystery because one of its girl reporters has the nerve to risk her life to get the goods on the guilty man against whom there was only the slightest evidence until she trapped him.

"Illicit" with Barbara Stanwyck, will be offered at the Lyric Wednesday and Thursday.

BARBARA STANWYCK

Joan Blondell, Ricardo Cortez and Charles Butterworth appear in the supporting cast.

"Tarzan, the Ape Man," based on the hair-raising story of jungle adventure by Edgar Rice Burroughs, will be shown at the Lindsey Friday and Saturday. Johnny Weissmuller, world champion swimmer and said to have one of the finest physiques of any man living, plays the title role.

Neil Hamilton, Maureen O'Sullivan head the supporting cast. Jungle scenes said to excell those of "Trader Horn" are promised.

"Galloping Thru," a wild western drama crammed with gun battles, thrills, chills and suspense, comes to the Palace Friday and Saturday. Tom Tyler is the star.

Hoot Gibson and his charming wife, Sally Eilers, appear in principal roles of "Clearing the Range," which comes to the Lyric Friday and Saturday.

A Monetary Conference

A Washington correspondent declares that sympathy for the idea of an international conference on silver "comes from some of the most powerful and conservative circles in the East," as it is felt that an increase in the price of the white metal would undoubtedly raise the purchasing power of many South American and Asiatic countries, thereby creating a demand for our manufactured products.

There are also many influential groups of financiers and economists in Europe who are strongly of the opinion that one of the most potent factors in the almost unexampled world-wide decline in commodity prices was the decision of the government of India in 1926, dictated from London, to adopt a gold bullion standard in place of the existing gold exchange standard and to gradually sell in the open market the excess stocks of silver held in the Indian treasury. This action was followed by a swift decline in the price of silver, which of course led to a sharp curtailment of trade activity in the Oriental countries, for silver was a standard medium of exchange for nearly a billion people from the eastern shores of the Mediterranean to the China seas.

Although the amount of silver actually sold by the Indian government has been comparatively small in relation to world production, it has nevertheless been an important price depressant. The official debasement of monetary silver by one of the largest silver using countries in the world threw out of gear the whole exchange and credit systems of vast populations, and Senator Borah is probably right in asserting that it represents, so far as America is concerned, nearly an 80 per cent reduction of purchases by these peoples.

It is therefore only natural that even the most conservative governmental and financial groups in both the old and the new worlds should give serious consideration to the problem of restoring silver as a basis of currency in those countries which up to 1926 had known no other kind of money. With silver down all over the world, the highly industrialized gold standard countries have also suffered. Increase in the price of silver to even 50 cents an ounce would enormously increase the capacity of many peoples in both hemispheres to buy goods. And such a result could easily be obtained by international action restoring silver, not as a world monetary standard, but as a token money in countries which have been accustomed to its use in that form from time immemorial.

A further measure of relief from the world-wide dislocation of business produced by the slump in silver would be the concerted purchase of a few millions of that metal annually by the treasuries of the leading Occidental nations for the purpose of "augmenting the depleted silver content of their silver coins, or of using silver instead of paper for currency of small denominations." This plan is earnestly advocated by the economic experts of some of the leading New York and London banking institutions. It would undoubtedly exert an immediate beneficial effect.

It appears that an international monetary conference is one of the most urgent needs of the world today. Not only the demonetization and disuse of silver but the maldistribution or shortage of gold has produced an unprecedented slump in prices, which, together with the mountainous debts created by the war and its appalling inflationary after-effects, has shaken the credit structure and paralyzed the trade of the world. Clearly a reasonable stabilization of the international media of exchange that will offer hope of an early release from the present intolerable economic confusions and burdens, is what people everywhere desire. And it follows that an international conference to determine the method of such stabilization is the shortest and surest way of realizing their desire.

Practical Health Problems

USING TOAST CRUSTS IN INVALID DET

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The young man who presides over the sandwich department of the cafeteria where I often have lunch, turns the sandwich three ways when completed and neatly cuts off the crusts. In doing so he removes the most digestible and, in some ways, the most nutritious part of the slice.

People with an acid type of dyspepsia or with ulcer of the stomach, find that bread causes them more discomfort than any other article of diet. This is because it calls out a maximum flow of acid gastric juice. In fact, diagnosticians use bread as the basis of a test meal and allow it to remain in the stomach for an hour, knowing that when they remove the stomach contents there will be the maximum amount of acid for their tests.

Many cases of dyspepsia of the acid type are made comfortable simply by removing fresh bread from the patient's diet.

The crust, however, still can be eaten without discomfort. The crust is of slightly different composition from the interior part of the loaf. The protein of the wheat is coagulated and hardened and in spite of that made more digestible; it is less gluey when it goes into solution. There is more dextrin and caromel in the crust.

Toast, of course, has the same qualities, and for that reason is preferred in invalids' dietaries.

Stale bread is well digested even by people with ulcer. Curiously enough, we do not know exactly what happens when bread is staled. Changes take place which are not understood. It is not simply a loss of water, for when stale bread is rebaked with a low temperature the moisture returns to the loaf. Whatever happens, we know it is more digestible and should be chosen for invalids' food.

By remembering the differences in the action of crust, toast and stale bread in the stomach, bread can be made available for all kind of people.

It is well that this is so, because it still is and probably always will be the staple of our diet.

The nutritional value of bread is unsurpassed by any other article of food on the table. It has taken man thousands of years to bring the growing of wheat, the milling and baking of flour, to its present state of perfection. It is a conquest which we will not willingly let go. Bread still is the staff of life.

Next Week: Backache.

Carries Much Weight

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 23.—A veteran of more murder trials than any other member of congress, Representative O. B. Lovette of Tennessee laid down the newspaper in which he had been reading details of the Fortescue case in Honolulu, and remarked with a connoisseur's air:

O. B. Lovette

"Next to an unimpeachable alibi, there is no homicide defense to compare with the unwritten law.

"It doesn't figure officially in the proceedings," continued the representative, "but one question to which every court, bench and all, invariably gives due weight in determining the fate of an undoubted slayer is:

"Did his victim need killing?"

"YET THE unwritten law," said the congressman, "is tricky, too.

"In choosing the jury for a case of the kind, which I was retained to defend, once on a time, I chanced to see among members of the panel, a man whom I knew to have had an experience in his own past almost identical with my client's.

"Believe me, I accepted that chap with alacrity.

"And do you know?—he concurred without the slightest hesitation," complained the Tennessee legislator, "in a verdict of guilty.

"I had to appeal and re-try the case to get an acquittal."

DOES THIS MEAN that the average jury is stupid and unreliable?—as is so often suggested.

"Oh, not at all," replied the congressman.

"The ordinary jury's intelligence is amply adequate for the task assigned to it and yet not too intelligent—therefore inclined to split hair legalistically, and get away from fundamentals.

"I would far rather trust to a jury's judgment of a witness' credibility than to the federal supreme court's. Let the chap on the stand begin to shuffle and equivocate, ever so little, and some juror who is temperamentally more or less like him is sure to notice and account for it correctly. The supreme court knows law but is weak on human nature.

"I never have encountered what I believed to be a corrupt jury.

"The system is our great bulwark against injustice, except in times of extreme public prejudice. Then it is the part of an honest prosecutor to serve as a restraining influence."

INDEED, Representative Lovette has prosecuted many more murder cases than he has defended.

Out of his 151 of them he has appeared in 110 as the state's attorney; in 15 as the regular prosecutor's especially retained assistant. He has sent four killers to the electric chair.

"But I'm through with the prosecutor's role," he says. "Even when offered to me, as occasionally it is, I refuse it."

Compunctions?

"No," answered the congressman, "but it's distasteful—hunting men down; wading in gory details."

"I CONSIDER capital punishment necessary," he added, "in extreme cases, as an example.

"Tennessee tried doing without it for a time, but it proved an unfortunate experiment. Murders multiplied. Now we electrocute for it, and for crimes against women. I'd add kidnaping. Anyway, there's been an improvement. Whatever the experiences of other states may have been, the conclusion seems plain that, with us, fear of the chair is a deterrent."

And defense retainers?—does the Tennessean refuse those also?

"Not in capital cases," was the rejoinder.

"Where life's at stake, I'll defend it."

TOO HOT

The probable slogan of the next educational campaign will be "Spare the gas and save the sniffles."

Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, of the Yale university medical faculty, is authority for the statement: "Temperatures in excess of 68 degrees direct and important effects on blood circulation, producing rise in heart rate and a fall in vasomotor efficiency. This is an important cause of colds and respiratory diseases."

Health authorities say that at least half of the population of the country is incapacitated for work at least once a year because of overheated dwellings and offices, causing an economic loss of close to a billion dollars.

So an endowed fund has been placed with Johns Hopkins university to study the so-called "common" cold and the relation of temperature to it.

It is true that Americans are the most extravagant users of fuel in the world. Foreign visitors are distressed by the high temperatures maintained indoors and astonished at the cost of heating our homes. They consider comfortable indoor temperatures that would seem unendurable by the average American.

But there is a happy medium between the cold European home and the steaming hot American domicile, and the people are gradually coming to it. The rostatic control of domestic heating plants and the knowledge that excessive temperatures are enervating are contributing to this reform in in artificial climate.

JUDGMENT DAY BY DAY

If it were necessary to take them all seriously, there would be cause for consternation in the strange fads, fool notions and queer creeds which babble their doctrines to the modern world. It is fortunate that they share one family likeness. Uniformly they fail to last long. They come and go. They flare up with promise and great expectations and are suddenly gone again, crowded out by others. Most of them have done so and will do so, and it is perhaps the best thing they do.

The cause of these outbreaks of quackery is probably the world's new knowledge piled up lately too rapidly for proper digestion. The cause of their collapse is not alone this competition among them. It is rather that they run counter at last to a truth more rock-ribbed and enduring than their own. Their weaknesses are revealed when they assail a fortress of conviction fortified with faith and armed with perception and common sense.

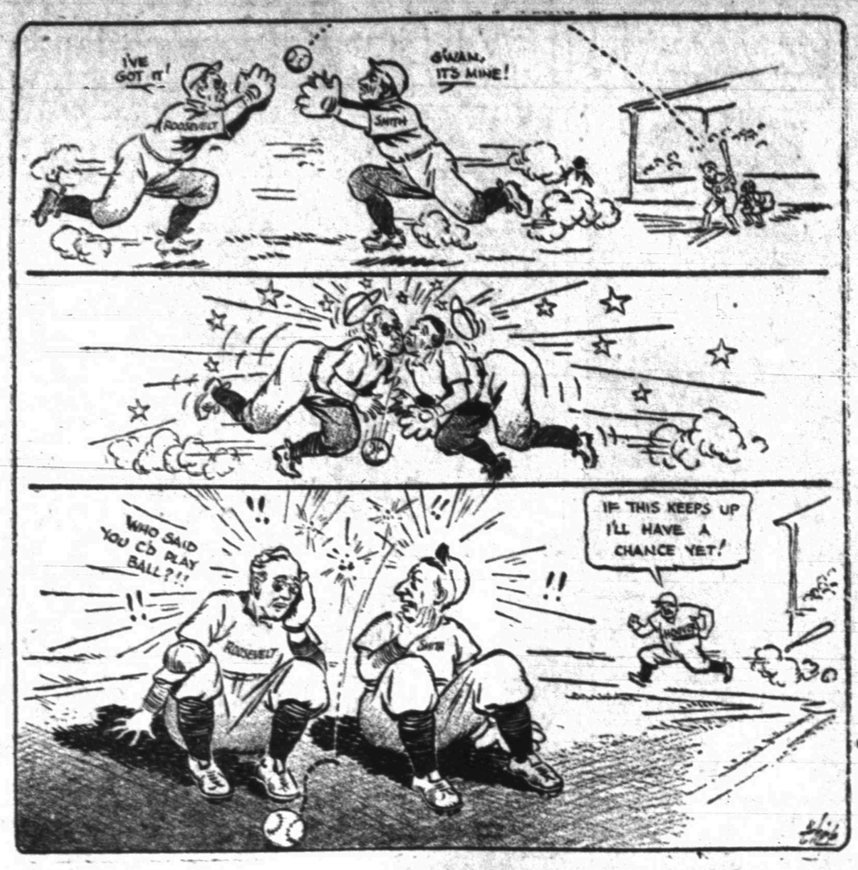

The casualties among the false claimants demonstrate that, despite all argument to the contrary, there is indeed an enduring truth. Amid the confusion of new tongues it lives on, while they are wiped out again by silence. Against its long-lived integrity they are judged from day to day, and thereby the world is kept on a reasonably even keel.

A California man sold a strip of land an inch wide for $55. From what we know of California real estate men, it's a wonder he didn't try to subdivide it.

THE NEW BOOKS

Fact And Fancy Of Folk Sketches Of Southwest Given In New Volume, "Southwestern Lore", Edited By J. Frank Dobie; Campbell Gives New Insight On Russian Situation

SKILLFUL juxtaposition of fact and fancy, of truth and tall lies, make "Southwestern Lore," the most recent publication of the Texas Folk Lore society, a delightful volume. But that is not unusual for readers of these annual compilations of folk sketches have come to expect contributions of genuine worth to the written record of the Southwest's secial heritage.

It might be well to quote the "Saludas!" or introduction to the slender volume, written by J. Frank Dobie, who compiled and edited it: "Southwestern Lore," the ninth volume issued by the Texas Folk-Lore society, is about as representative as such a miscellany could be. Bad men, razorbacked hogs, Mexican sheepherders, treasure hunters, negroes, cowboys both gringo and Mexican, plant life, songs, oil fields, Indians—the four peoples that have mingled their lore in the Southwest, as well as a wide variety of occupations and natural elements—all find representation in the volume.

Showing More Interest

"As has frequently been observed, the people who belong to the soil of Texas and the Southwest are coming more and more to show an active interest in their own environment and social inheritance. This means that civilization is advancing. The Texas Folk-Lore society has had a part in this advancement and it now submits, with faith in the public's continued support of its work, this additional record of a people's identity."

The contents include the following articles: "Folk-Lore Shooting" by Frost Woodhull; "Razorbacks" by H. B. Parks; "Cowboy Lore in Colorado," by Honora DeBusk Smith; "Myths in Oil Finding" by David Donoghue; "Folk-Lore of the King Ranch Mexicans" by Frank Goodwyn; "The Mexican Pastor" by Honora DeBusk Smith; "Folk-Foods of the Rio Grande Valley" by John G. Bourke; "Songs the Vaqueros Sing" by Joaquin Mora; "Treasure Hunting in Masterpieces of Spanish Literature" by C. C. Glascock; Grandfather Wiley and His Dream" by Julia Estill; "Buried in Bexar County" by H. B. Parks; "Captian Kidd and his Treasure" by George Keith Gordon; "Superstitinos About Cotton" by Mary Daggett Lake; "Brazos Bottom Philosophy" by A. W. Eddins; "Mr. 'Possum and Mr. Coon" by Martin L. Crimmins; "Myths and Custom of the Tejas Indians" by C. E. Castaneda; "Hell in Texas" by George E. Hastings; "Oh, Bury Me Not" by Ernest E. Leisy; "A Love-of-God Shave" by Edwin Ford Piper.

It is interesting to note that the volume is released for distribution Monday, April 25, immediately following the annual meeting of the Texas Folk-Lore soiety.

America's Best Market

TO Thomas C. Campbell, American farmer, Russia is no menace—it is America's best market.

If we do not accept the opportunity of trading with Russia we shall have thrust away a simple method of ending the depression, he says in his book, "Russia: Market or Menace," written following extensive visits in Russia as agricultural adviser to the Soviet.

To call Campbell a farmer only is perhaps a diminutive label for a man who runs a wheat farm of about 95,000 acres in Montana. He is spoken of as America's mass production farmer, and uses tractors and other machinery on a scale that is vast for this country.

In Russia he saw a farm covering 500,000 acres farmed in the mechanical manner he believes most efficient. He also saw Tamara Moskliova, and thinks that 15-year-old girl was the most expert tractor operator he met.

Russia, Campbell is quite certain will succeed—perhaps not as now constituted but with many of the ideas that have been adopted, coupled with some capitalistic theories. He was converted from deep-seated opposition to Russia after his own examination of conditions there, and describes both conversion and examination in human way.

To Fill Existing Gap

Educational authorities claim that "Oklahoma, Yesterday Today, Tomorrow" writen by Mrs. Dan Morris of Tulsa, Oklahoma, just released by the Co-Operative Publishing company of Guthrie, Oklahoma, will fill a here-to-fore existing gap in Oklahoma's history.

The book is not a biography but stories of pioneers fit into the spaces naturally where by right they belong.

Beginning with the coming of Coronado to the land of the Indian, Mrs Morris vividly portrays the development and progress of the country down to its present hectic time. No phase of its government is neglected from exclusive Indian regime to and including spectacular present administration. The old "travelling court" days is described in detail and many humorous incidents related.

Illustrations Original

The section devoted to "Ranch life and Cattlemen" is picturesque, in many instances being shown for the first time. Stories of cow-men, their customs, dress, music and colorful life are told.

The development of the state's natural resources is mose impressively told beginning with oil's first discovery down to its present development. Credit is also given the individuals responsible for the industry's recognition in the commercial world.

Art, music, literature and other crafts are given a place of prominence and early day Missions, schools and churches are compared to present day advantages. Early day towns are described and their growth commented upon.

Mrs. Morris is a West Texas woman. She was born at Hico where for years the family made their home A graduate of Baylor university, Mrs. Morris early in life decided to make writing her vocation.

Not Her First Book

"Oklahoma, Yestrday, Today, Tomorrow," is not Mrs. Morris' first book. About two years ago she had published "Tulsa Beautiful," a fascinating story of the Oil metropolis of the world. She is a regular contributor to magazines and newspapers.

In assembling the material for this work Mrs. Morris traveled thousands of miles, and personally interviewed hundreds of people, authorities on their subjects. Five years time was spent in the compilation alone and she refuses to tell at what expense. It was enormous but the result will go down in history as a notable accomplishment of a courageous woman for it took courage to visualize so great an undertaking.

Weigh Economic Problems

ARBITRARILY making the opening of congress each year the beginning and ending of this book and the volumes proposed to follow annually, Mr. Lippmann and Mr. Scroggs begin their evaluation with "The Economic Depression: the Evolution of American Opinion Prior to December, 1930."

The tale moves forward rapidly and smoothly from that point, showing the problems which confronted congress in view of the general opinions concerning the economic situation, the deepening of the decline in the early part of 1931, and on through the factors which entered into the whole situation.

The Latin-American revolutions, the critical developments in Central Europe, the conditions leading up to the moratorium, the British crisis and its resulting effects upon the United States, all are temporarily weighed.

The book contains an elaborate appendix, which includes a chronology of important events affecting American foreign relations in 1931.

Side Glances —By George Clark

"If any of you ever see your old man on the street, point him out to a cop."

IN NEW YORK WITH GILBERT SWAN

Time and Chance

NEW YORK, April 22.—Time plays fantastic tricks on many of Manhattan's aristocratic old mansions. They become elegantly appointed speakeasies, beauty parlors, rare book shops, curio stores and such.

Passing No. 9 East 55th street the other evening, I noticed large "For Rent" and "For Sale" signs in the windows. A few doors down the street, a couple of Uncle Sam's trucks were backed to the curb while raiders carried out fixtures and evidence.

Which is amusing if you remember that No. 9 was once the uptown residence of Richard Canfield, "gentleman gambler."

His historic gaming house was in 44th Street. But Canfield, having grown rich, moved up "among the swells." Blue-blooded Knickerbocker folk gasped at this effrontery. One family moved. Canfield stayed and used his residence for his art collections and personal friends. James McNeill Whistler was a frequent caller.

Shadows

At No. 11, where the rich banker Henry Redmon dwelt, there is a millinery shop, some specialty stores and a telegraph office. The old Mahany home, later a cafe, figured in a visit from the revenue lads. And the Canfield residence, I was told, was occupied by an Oriental rug merchant a couple of years ago.

For a time, a Wall Street broker had entertained important clients there. The broker maintained an office in the St. Regis Hotel. He kept open house during those good old boom years. And then moved on.

The colorful old Canfield place was turned back to the spiders and the gathering dust.

The Goose Man

A few of the picturesque old spots do manage to survive time and change, however. One such is Gansemayer's, a cafe dedicated to the preparation of the goose.

You'll find none of the Gansemayer's there, but a son-in-law, "Dad" Goldman, was still spryly about when last I visited. "Dad" is fast slipping into his eighties, but like the others he will run the famous place until, as he puts it, his "own goose is cooked."

Catch "Dad" in a confidential mood and he'll tell you a tale that runs back to the early days of New York. There was, it seems, a certain Simon Mayer, who was a Whig. Loyal partisan, he bet a dinner on a certain election. And lost! Political friends were treated to a goose dinner a la Mayer.

Overnight Simon Mayer was famous as a goose chef. From an election bet, he became a restaurateur. His name became associated so intimately with goose cookery that friends playfully referred to his as "Ganse" Mayer. Which is how the name Gansemayer came into being.

Gastronomic Tears

Of the old-time gastronomic Sherlocks, who sleuthed out the finest food and vintages of another generation, Benjamin de Casseres is, perhaps, New York's hardiest survivor. And most wistful historian.

Not a fellow to break into tears easily, Ben has been reported weeping over Mouquin's, which long since surrendered to the prohibition era. Henri Mouquin, venerable host of yesteryear, retired to a farm at Williamsburg, Va., where he passed his 95th birthday recently.

And, unless memory fails me, it was De Casseres who commented that in those bygone days the beer at Luchow's was of such character as "to make your gizzard sing Die Wacht am Rhine."

The TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN PICTURES by JOE KING

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The skinny man whom Scouty caught, soon said, "I think you big boys ought to let me go. I've done no harm and I'm a friendly lad. Who are you fellows, anyway, and why did you come here today? You will tell me honestly, things will not be so bad."

"Well, we are Tinies," Scouty said. "And trouble is a thing we dread. We merely like real pleasure and to travel here and there.

"We all felt mad at you because you captured Duncy. Tell us, was he very nice? Why, all it did was to our bunch a scare."

"We're sorry that we pulled a fast one," replied the skinny. "Let's all get together for a little while. I'll call my skinny friends.

"Then we can all have lots of fun. I'll think of things that can be done. At least, why not try out my plan? We'll soon see how it can."

"Okay!" snapped Windy. "Bring them here! And tell them there is naught to fear." The skinny fellow promptly turned and yelled a funny sound.

From everywhere the skinnies came. It looked like playing some strange game. The Tinymites shook hands as all the skinnies gathered 'round.

One of the skinnies said, "We're glad that we are friends. 'Twould be too bad to miss the chance to have some play. You'll join with us, of course. Just wait right here and you will see a sight as funny as can be. I'll ride right back here shortly on a funny rubber horse."

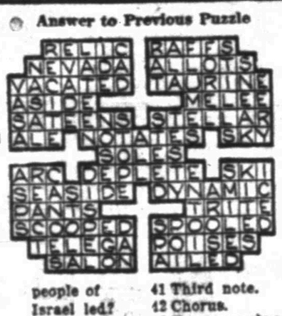

And then the skinny ran from sight. His promise soon turned out all right. Out of the trees they saw him come. The skinny yelled, "Yoo-hoo!" Said Scouty, "What a funny nag. He bounces and his big feet drag. Hey, look! It seems that he's about to bend himself in two."

Destroy Cities

ampaign Made On Prairie Dogs

SAN ANGELO, April 23. (AP)—veral cities of 96,000 inhabi-nts in Upton county are be-destroyed by the United tates government.

Texas' Taxable Values For 1931 Show $86,530,413 Decrease From 1930

Property In State Valued Four Billion

Loss Noted In Renditions Due To Shrinkage; East Texas Oil Field Area Fails To Show Any Increases

AUSTIN, April 23.—Texas' taxable values for 1931 were $86,530,413 less than in 1930, the annual report of George H. Sheppard, state comptroller, shows. The value of property rendered for taxation on the 1931 rolls was $4,241,682,299, compared with $4,328,212,712 in 1930.

In spite of the great new values supposedly created by the opening of one of the world's greatest oil fields—the East Texas pool—there was no substantial gain in taxable values. On the other hand a loss was noted.

Charged To Shrinkage

The net loss in values was virtually chargeable to a shrinkage in the assessed value of land, this item showing a decline of $86,743,598 in 1931 as compared with 1930. Town lots showed an increase in value of $24,388,947, and that may account for some of the new construction work attributed to the oil boom. Material and manufactured articles likewise increased $20,223,171 and miscellaneous property listed was up $81,229,374. Horses and mules fell off $6,148,410 and cattle $11,225,333. Sheep and goats shrank in value nearly $3,000,000. Carriages, buggies and automobiles fell off more than $15,000,000 and merchandise stocks revealed a decrease of $32,000,000. Credit other than banks showed a decrease of $21,000,000 and value of property of companies and corporations was off nearly $28,000,000.

The average taxable value of land ranged from 90 cents an acre for Culberson county, where 2,370,791 acres were assessed, to $49.92 in Harris county where 926,994 acres were rendered.

Bexar Shows Lowest Average

Of the more densely populated counties, Bexar showed the lowest average per acre assessment, $20.71. Tarrant's per acre average was $38 and Dallas' $27.50.

Harris county had the largest taxable valuations, $341,788,442, Dallas county's was $322,832,130, Bexar $191,576,852 and Tarrant $177,438,110.

The four counties embraced in the East Texas oil field showed average per acre land renditions as follows:

Rusk, $12.85; Gregg, $9.32; Upshur, $8.80; Smith, $8.25.

Ellis Has Big Value

Ellis county, in a great cotton-growing section, showed an average land valuation of $29.73 per acre, while Nueces, also a prolific producer of cotton, but in the other end of the state, had an average per acre valuation for tax purposes of $30.37. San Patricio, adjoining Nueces, and also a big cotton producer, showed $15.32. Bell county, cotton producer in Central Texas, showed an average of $22.50. Caldwell county's average was $14.74.

Cameron county, in the highly developed Rio Grande Valley area, had an average land valuation of $47.20 per acre and adjoining Hidalgo county $38.75.

Other per acre averages: Brazoria, $18.26; Brewster, $1.03; Collin, $26.36; Duval, $5.37; El Paso, $15.65; Fort Bend, $27.84; Gray, $3.63; Grayson, $24.32; Guadalupe $35.90; Lubbock, $13.82; Lavace, $1671;; McLennan, $22.32; Taylor, $8.45; Wichita, $34.02; Hutchinson, $4.33; Webb, $3.22.

The state per-acre value for tax purposes was $10.27. The average county tax rate was $1.98 1-2.

Along Auto Row In Lubbock

Brief Bits Of News About Automobile Dealers, Sales And Activities Of The Industry In Local Circles

ANOTHER MODEL ARRIVES

THE arrival of another new Ford—a closed model, first to be shown here—prevalence of weather conducive to brighter outlooks, and active salesmen combined to make last week a rather active one on Lubbock's auto row.

NEW FEATURES OUTSTANDING

The Ford "8" sedan looks more like a modern automotive product than did the initial phaeton sent here for early demonstration purposes. It shows to more clearly cut advantage the new features in body construction and interior decorating, comparing favorably with higher priced machinery.

C. C. Harrison, zone manager, and Ed Phillips, sales manager for the territory, both of Dallas, were here last week to introduce the closed Ford model and help lay sales campaigns.

Two of the V-8's will be on display Sunday in a special showing at the Lubbock Auto company's show rooms on Texas avenue. In addition there will be a 1932 model Lincoln sedan.

Harry Morris, manager of Lubbock Auto Company where the new Ford is on display, announces that the company will begin filling orders within a short time. Several orders were placed before the first new car arrived, and the list of prospects swelled appreciably. The closed model has drawn its quota of visitors the past week.

FOUR NEW PONTIACS SOLD

A splurge by Scoggin-Dickey Motor company last week easily took sales honors in the Lubbock field. Four new Pontiacs were delivered and the company sold five used cars.

A new Pontiac coach was delivered to W. B. Carter of Lubbock. Miss Grace Padley purchased a Pontiac 4-door sedan. L. H. McLarty drives a new Pontiac coupe this week. A sedan was delivered to J. K. Jackson of County Line.

USED CARS PICK UP

Sale of nine used cars by the Hub Motor company headed the second hand moving department. Two new Chryslers were also delivered. A Chrysler "6" sedan went to Charles J. Maybee of Lubbock. W. E. Alexander of Anton bought a 6-wire wheel Chrysler sedan.

Kuykendall Chevrolet Company sold a new coach to Leroy Johnson of Lubbock last week and delivered five used machines.

Ratliff-Rogers Buick moved five used cars last week.

PRICES REDUCED

While it has not announced formally the cessation of automobile business, the Davis Bros. Oldsmobile company has moved all its automobile stock, with the exception of used cars, and has placed no order for the 1932 Oldsmobile. The company has turned the bulk of emphasis on other General Motors products and reports a lively business in Frigidaire and delco light plant sales. The company was notified last week of a slashing reduction in the price of 1931 model Oldsmobiles. A large surplus of new machines, 1931, has made possible the reduction by some $200 below the retail cost of the 1932 model.

NOT SO DISCOURAGING

In the face of "hard times" and the depression, an announcement by Hub Jones of Hub Motor Company relative to De Soto sales last week is at least encouraging. Deliveries by De Soto dealers to retail customers for the second week in April were 43 per cent greater than the previous week and 95 per cent greater than the same week last year, according to the announcement. The deliveries totaled 1,601 cars for the week as against 1,118 for the previous week and 822 cars for the same week a year ago.

Ralls To Get Continuance Of 15 Per Cent Insurance Credit

RALLS, April 23—(Special)—Ralls record of 15 per cent credit on all insurance policies, will be continued another year, Carl D. Lewis and Forrest L. Robbins, local insurance men, have been advised by the state. This is the maximum credit allowed by the state insurance department.

Historical Spots And Landmarks In Texas Are Being Designated By Texas Association; Santone Has Many

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of articles on the historical landmarks of Texas, written by Samuel E. Gideon, associate professor of architectural design and architectural history at the University of Texas. Mr. Gideon is national committeeman of the American Institute of Architects for the Preservation of Worthwhile Landmarks throughout the United States.

AUSTIN, April 23. — The Texas Historical and Landmark association has marked many historic spots and buildings with memorable tablets. A list of twenty-six of these tablets, which has been furnished me from an anonymous source are as follows:

In 1897 a monument was erected in Milam Square to Ben Milam, over Ben Milam's grave. Milam led the forces into San Antonio in command of one detachment, while the other was under Francis Johnson. Milam was killed in the battle that followed.

Tablet On Alamo

A tablet may be seen on the main building of the Alamo fortress, in San Antonio, marking the scene of that sublime struggle which ended so tragically on that sad but glorious day of March 6, 1836.

A tablet on the site of the Veremendi House on Soledad Street in San Antonio, where Ben Milam was killed and where Bowie wooed and won his wife, Ursala Veremendi.

On the north side of Villita Street in San Antonio, marking the building where the Mexican General Cos signed articles capitulating to the Texans in 1835.

On the M. Halff & Company on the corner of Eas Commerce and Rusk streets in San Antonio, and one almost opposite on the north side of the street marking the places where the bodies of the Alamo heroes were burned in March, 1836.

A tablet on the site of the headquarters of Santa Anna after the fall of the Alamo. It is on the corner of Main Plaza and Acequia (now Main) Street. Citizens of San Antonio were forced to go before Santa Anna and take an oath of allegiance to Mexico.

Route Is designated

On the Navarro Building marking the route through which the Texans cut their way in 1835, in the capture of San Antonio.

On South Alamo where O'Henry (Sidney Porter) lived and labored while in San Antonio.

On St. Marys Street a restaurant, next to the corner of Houston and St. Mary's in San Antonio is a part of a house where Robert E. Lee lived. This part of the house projects inside the restaurant.

Corner of Main Plaza and Commerce Street, and on what is now a drug store in San Antonio, a tablet marks the site of the residence of Governor Musquiz in 1636, during the fall of the Alamo. The women and children were brought to his house who were in the Alamo after the fall at about two o'clock in the morning and given food succor.

First Church Marked

On the wall of San Fernando Cathedral a tablet marks the first parish church of San Antonio, and recites that from that church tower the flag of victory was raised by Col. Francis Johnson in 1885, and the flag of Mexico had been raised by San Anna.

On the East side of Main Plaza in San Antonio marks the place of the old council room, court house, etc. Here occurred a fight with the Comanche Indians, and here in 1842 General Woll surrounded the court house and captured judges, jury witnesses and spectators and carried them off to Mexico. John Twohig, was captured at this time.

The walls of the San Antonio Public Service Company at the river and St Mary's Street bear a tablet reciting the fact that it marks the home site of John Twohig, a surdy pioneer and staunch patriot, that he blew up his store on the coming of the Mexicans to prevent the powder, shot, and other material from falling into the hands of the enemy. But first he called in all the natives of San Antonio and told them to help themselves to all they could use.

The tablet on the southeast wall of the Wolff and Marx Company tells of the old Garza house. It was Milam's headquarters in 1835 when he entered San Antonio. It was a bank and a mint, and has an entrancing history.

Village Site Marked

A tablet in New Braunfels marks a large live oak tree under which the first settlers camped when they went to settle New Braunfels. The first religious services were held under this tree. It also marks the site of an Indian Village.

At Gonzales a tablet marks the ford on the river where immense herds of buffalo first crossed and thus marked a ford for the use of the trail drivers and armies.

In the country near San Antonio on the part of the land (8,000 acres) to which Antonio de la Garza obtained a grant from the King of Spain, James L. Trueheart settled and built a two-story rock house for his bride in 1848. She was a descendant of the Garzas. On this home a tablet was placed telling of Mr. Trueheart, a pioneer citizen who was captured by General Adrian Woll in 1842, and carried off to Mexico. The home now belongs to Hon. C. A. Gooth, a member of the Texas Historical and Landmark Association.

Harris Has Spots

Two tablets have been sent to Harris County, one marks the site of the old home of De Zavala, opposite the battlefield of San Jacinto, which was used as a hospital for the wounded at the battle, and one on the old De Zavala cemetery where De Zavala and his wife are buried, and where lies all that is mortal of General Castrillon who was mortally wounded at the battle of San Jacinto. De Zavala had him buried in his cemetery because he said he was "a cultured and highly educated man and a friend of the Texans, although being in the wrong ranks he felt compelled to do his duty."

Another tablet in San Antonio marks the site of Mission Concepcion battlefield where Pannin and Bowie routed the Mexcans on October 28, 1835, before the Texan Army under General Austin arrived.

A tablet at Houston, Texas on the site of the house in which Sam Houston, President of the Republic of Texas, lived 1837-1838.

Tablets placed at the following missions near San Antonio Mission Concepcion, San Jose, San Juan and San Francisco de la Espada.

Tablet on roadside in San Antonio indicating ancient acequia.

Tablet in patio of Menger Hotel in San Antonio marking old cottonwood tree and site of acequria dug by Franciscans to water certain areas.

forgotten the sarcastic short-hand teacher and the difficult tests there would be next day. Susan thought of Ben Lampman and squared her shoulders. "I'll pass those tests," she said sturdily. "And I'll get a job and make money and put in an oil burner for Aunt Jessie and get a silver fox for myself. I'll show them!"

Who it was she meant to show Susan didn't quite know.

Perhaps the neighbors who often said, "Poor Jessie Carey! She's been burdened all her life with her brother's child!" Perhaps it was that ruddy, fair-haired boy at Block's shorthand school, the one who had been expelled from college.

Irrelevantly Susan wondered what Robert Dunbar would have thought of Rose Milton's party. He probably would have been bored to death. Dancing to the radio, eating brick ice cream from a golden oak dining room table, would probably not fit in with his ideas of gaiety.

"Wonder what he's really like." Susan speculated just before she dropped off to sleep.

She had no notion how soon she was to know about that!

ALASKAN MOUNDS

POINT BARROW, Alaska—Four or five large mounds located in this vicinity are thought to be sites of ancient villages, and James A. Ford, Smithsonian Institute archeologist, has been spending the winter preparing to investigate these mounds as soon as the weather breaks. He hopes to find evidence of culture extending back 2000 years.

An automatic corn picker and husker does the work of 16 men and has made its appearance in middle-western corn fields.

Bridge Work Is Only Type Of Activity On Santa Fe Now

By Staff Correspondent.

SLATON, April 23. —The only construction work being done this year on the Slaton division of the Santa Fe is bridge work along the old K. C. M. and O. now part of the division, south of Altus, Okla.

There are several bridge gangs at work, according to J. S. Gillies, division superintendent. The work being done is rebuilding the smaller structures, the nine large bridges over the major streams having been finished late in 1931. This program took two years for the Santa Fe.

Just as rapidly as possible the Santa Fe is rehabilitating the old Orient railroad. No indication has been given of when the relaying of steel will start.

entered school. We made a careful record of everything read to them, when each story was introduced, and each time it was repeated. When each child in turn began to create yarns of fancy, as most children do, between the ages of two and five, we Boswell-like recorded many of their creations verbatim. These verbal inventions were later compared with the stories which had been read to them several months or several years before. We found in these stories by the children, which each called "my own story," many complete phrases and sentences which had appeared in the stories read at an earlier date.

In a single story by the child sentences and phrases sometimes appeared from as many as half a dozen of the stories they had often heard. Occasionally they combined several old stories in paraphrase. (This study was reported in my book, "The Learner and His Attitude.") All that the children did was to take parts frou old stories and from their own experiences and put them in new settings.
