11-YEAR OLD BOY KILLED BY TRUCK NEAR INGRAM

One of the saddest accidents in the history of the Hill Country was the death Tuesday morning of Glenn, the 11-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Smith, who live on the highway above Ingram.

Glenn was killed when he was run over by the wheels of a gravel truck used on highway construction, his death occurring about an hour after the accident. The injuring of the boy was purely accidental, according to witnesses, and no blame is placed against the driver of the truck.

It seems that Glenn, in company with several other children, was picked up by the truck, which was being driven by Joe Hill and George Knox, as he was on his way to school, and the car stopped in front of the school house to let the children get out.

Glenn had been one of the first to get out of the truck and had evidently either stooped over to tie his shoe or, as one theory has it, was attempting to get back in the truck after his lunch, which some say had been left in the car.

At any rate, when the car started Glenn either fell under the truck or was stooping down to tie his shoe, and the rear wheel of the heavy vehicle ran over his body. None of the men in the car or the children accompanying the injured child saw him fall or were aware that he had been run over until after the accident occurred. — Mountain Sun.

NEW PECAN VARIETIES LISTED IN REPORTS OF STATE SPECIALIST

In his recent able annual report on "The Pecan—Its History, Importance and Economic Value," Hon. J. H. Burkett gives some interesting data in regard of the origin of various pecans. Mr. Burkett says: "There have been so many new varieties brought into notice recently that it would be impractical to mention each one, and so the reader is referred to the general table in the official Bulletin for the complete list.

Taken from a long list, the following come from this section of the state and will be of interest to our readers who are looking to the improvement of their pecan groves:

Scene at Kentucky's Great Cave Drama

The above picture shows civilians and militia at work at the mouth of San Cave, where they labored to save Floyd Collins, but were stopped by a cave-in and later a shaft was sunk almost directly over the spot where he lay entombed. The picture to the right shows Collins as he was lying when the first rescue party reached him, and at the spot where his body was found Monday night.

FUNERAL TUESDAY CLOSES THE SAND CAVE TRAGEDY

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 17.—Looking down into the Sand Cave rescue shaft in which scores of volunteers labored for 11 days and nights to save Floyd Collins, Rev. C. K. Dickey of the Cave City Episcopal Church this afternoon conducted Floyd's funeral.

A choir of eight women from Cave City sang three hymns and the boulders were placed back upon his tomb and sealed, leaving him still locked in nature's arms, as he was caught 18 days ago.

The services around the mouth of the shaft began at 2 o'clock after M. E. S. Posey officially announced abandonment of all efforts to remove Collin's body and Lee Collins, the aged father, had agreed to let him be buried where he lay.

Just above Collin's head in the sloping eight-foot draft of the natural Sand Cave tunnel, cement and boulders were to be placed in position and the tunnel completely sealed.

Then the 12-foot lateral leading from the rescue shaft to his rock prison was to be filled back in and finally the six-foot square shaft, 55½ feet deep, was to be filled.

"Everything has been done that could have been done and man's ingenuity and modern machinery have failed," said Collins. "No more lives should be sacrificed in further attempts to remove the body."

Identified by Tooth.

Dr. Hazelett came up the shaft at 12:20 p. m. and said he had identified Collins through a gold front tooth. He announced that Collins had been dead between three and five days, when he was reached yesterday afternoon. Magistrate Turner said he had seen and recognized Collins and felt confident there was no way to remove the body without grave risk.

Identified by All.

The others who went down with Magistrate Turner and Dr. Hazelett also announced they recognized Collins, that he was dead, and that there seemed to them no way of removing the body.

Meanwhile the work of dismantling the rescue camp was proceeding rapidly, the machinery being removed and preparations for packing the tents and bedding started.

Carmichael, in charge of shaft operations, announced early this afternoon that he had ordered the cement to be used in sealing the entrance to the tomb in the lateral of the shaft.

INSTITUTE ORGANIZED FOR HILL COUNTRY

Last Friday the county and city superintendents of Bandera, Kimble, Mason, Kerr, and Gillespie counties met at Kerrville and perfected the Hill Country Teachers' Institute. It was decided to hold the first meeting of this institute at Fredericksburg, Texas, Sept. 7th to 11th of this year.

Judge Herman Usener was elected president; Miss Gertrude Wehmeyer, secretary-treasurer; and Supt. C. W. Feuge, conductor. It was further decided to hold the institute at the principal towns from year to year.

Invitations have been extended to Edwards and Blanco counties to join. On account of the fine climate conditions prevailing in the Hill country during the summer, teachers from other counties may transfer to attend institute. So far an attendance of about two hundred fifty teachers is assured.

Supt. Feuge was directed to secure the services of at least five prominent lecturers for the occasion, for high school and general lectures; one, for the intermediate grades; one for the primary grades; and one for rural schools.

Present at the meeting were Judge Ames of Bandera, Judge Bank of Mason and Superintendents Franklin of Kerrville, Miller of Junction, Dobie of Mason and C. W. Feuge of Fredericksburg.—Fredericksburg Standard

WILL WE BUILD A HOTEL FOR JUNCTION?

For several months, first one hotel proposition then another has been up for consideration, and numerous subscription lists have been circulated, but these propositions have not met with sufficient support to go on with the work.

Several business men, who, it might be stated are the same ones who always have put their shoulder to the wheel when any progressive move is on foot, have recently completed a most feasible and business-like plan for a modern, medium-sized hotel for Junction, and J. C. Ray, architect, has drawn a preliminary plan of a building that would meet the present needs and which is within the amount that these business men think can be financed.

Another subscription list has been drawn up, which is attached to a charter and other necessary papers for incorporating a Junction Hotel Co. This seems to us the most logical plan that has been so far suggested. It presents a purely business proposition—the organizing and financing of a stock company for the building and operating a first class hotel.

There is no argument about the need of a first class hotel for Junction. Any one who has given the matter any serious, unbiased thought, admits this fact without argument.

No one can deny the fact that, in order to get a hotel, the local people must finance the greater part of it. No one from the outside is going to hand us a hotel on a silver platter, just as no one from the outside is going to come in and build up our town in any other way. What is done will be done by the initiative and co-operative work of our citizens. We cannot build a hotel with wind, and we cannot build it by pulling against each other. Every one may have a different idea as to the proper location, or as the kind, as as to the size, but unless we are willing to go into this matter with a give and take attitude, keeping the best interests of the town in mind, this proposition is going to fail and Junction is going to have to continue as it is, with no prospects of bringing here many of the better class of tourist. Unless this proposition goes over, we believe that interest in the building of a hotel will become a dead issue, at least for some time. Those who have given the matter much thought and time, in an effort to devise a practical plan for a hotel, naturally cannot be expected to continue this course indefinitely, unless the business interests of the town and citizens generally, show that interest necessary to promote such a worthy enterprise, after it is presented in a manner that any well informed person cannot turn down, if he is really interested in a hotel.

The subscription list, soliciting shareholders in a corporation that will build and operate a hotel thru its directors, can be seen at the Junction Eagle office this week-end. After that time it will doubtless be in the hands of a committee, the names of which will be announced in the next issue, if the Chamber of Commerce, thru its president and directors, appoint this committee within the next few days. The shares are for $100 each. There are a good many people who can take one share, to help the cause along, and at the same time it will be a safe investment, and one that will produce a reasonable return on the money, besides the general benefit that will come from having a first class hotel here. Don't let some one, who is misinformed, tell you about this plan. Get the facts. See for yourself just what we are trying to do, then do your part. It's a business proposition. No money will be spent in promoting the enterprise and it is not being built for any one's advantage.

It's up to us all. We can either build this hotel, that town and county needs so much, or we can, by indifference and lack of interest, let the matter drag along and finally die.

IMPROVEMENTS ON S. LLANO RANCH

V. B. Hardeman and wife returned the first of the week from Dallas, where Mr. Hardeman had gone on business in connection with an extensive improvement program at his ranch which will result in making the South Llano Springs Camp one of the finest in the Hill Country.

Plans were drawn and blue prints made for a residence for the ranch that will cost several thousand dollars. This structure, which Mr. Hardeman expects to use in connection with his Tourist Camp, started last year, will be 56x45 feet, built of river washed cobble stone. A front porch 13x45 feet will have a concrete floor, and the front is of Spanish architecture. The dining room, or main living room will be 24x18 feet and will be connected by French doors with the back screened porch, which will give a commodious dining room and lobby of about 24x40 feet. The back porch will overlook the river and will be open to the south, insuring a fine breeze at all times.

Four or five bed rooms will be in the main building, but this building will be used principally for a home for Mr. Hardeman and as an eating place for the visitors, the majority of whom will be camping along the river in their own tents or in the Camp Houses.

Besides this improvement, about ten more camp houses will be built, which will bring the total to fourteen.

A concrete pier will be built near the spring and a windmill will furnish water that will be piped to each of the camp houses.

When these contemplated improvements are made, this will be one of the finest, if not the finest, commercial vacation spots in the whole Hill country.

Mr. Hardeman also plans an extensive advertisement campaign no doubt will enjoy a splendid patronage this summer and in the future.

Sallie's Temptations

SALLIE STUDIES THE JOE SCHUYLER TYPE

"Peppy, scintillating!" I remembered what Bob had said. The strange man to whom he had sounded my praises certainly would find me "flat." The reaction had set in from the excitement of the hunt and I was feeling decidedly low in spirit and mind.

I recalled the happy hours with Curtiss the last day before we had broken camp. I had never been so absolutely happy. But that was different. I had him by my side. Why had he gone to Miami? Business—Well, what of it? He probably was the sort who would always put business first. After the discovery of our love, he had left me when, of all times, he should have permitted his heart to rule his head and thrown more serious problems to the winds.

It wasn't as if he had to go to close the contract. What was one job more or less in his life? He had money. Bob had told me so.

I wanted him now. I needed his arms about me and assurances of his love. The house was lonely and because I had returned a day earlier than I expected, it was cold.

I rather enjoyed putting on evening clothes again after the rough things I had worn at camp. I loved the caress of the soft lace and chiffon. I had been thrilled with the few days of the hunt but it really was good to be back in civilization again.

I had chosen my most becoming gown. Why, I do not know. It couldn't be that I wanted to "vamp" the new man at Marjorie's for dinner. I loved Curtiss and couldn't possibly be interested in any one else and yet it was unreasonable of him to leave me all alone.

Bob's "surprise" was Joe Schuyler from New York. He and Bob had been class mates at Yale. He was decidedly the type that is well-known to girls who have gone out a lot. Of an athletic build, he danced like he had made a business of it. He would jump up during dinner, grab the nearest girl and dance to the radio or turn on the Victrola's latest jazz.

Every other word was slang, amusing and sensational. Unless one were accustomed to it, he might even be conversing in a foreign tongue. Joe was an only son and as he admitted, "it took his entire time devising new amusements to keep from being bored."

He spent his week-ends in the fashionable suburbs of New York and "Philly," where he admitted there were any number of places he could drop in at any time and feel perfectly at home. His greeting to me was "that there was only one drawback."

"What's that? I'm flattered that there's only one."

"You're not married, and I never chase around with single girls. There are too many charming matrons who are "misunderstood" and "unappreciated" and who need an alert young man to hold their hands."

"You're frank, at least," was my reply.

Joe was also one of the "do you know" kind. During dinner he asked each of us about a dozen persons who were prominent in Palm Beach and New Beach and New York. Of course, we knew some of them but what of it? I decided that night that if I ever had a daughter or son I would rather they'd be anything than a "do you know" kind.

They all had champagne and were frankly amazed because I gave mine to Bob.

"What's the matter? Did life in the open make you so pure?" Joe Schuyler asked.

"It's too precious to waste and I've sorter sworn off," I explained.

"Go on, Sallie—You didn't even have a cocktail. As your hostess, I insist. You've been acting too dignified. Not at all the Sallie we have raved about to Joe." Marjorie declared.

Bob remained silent.

I loved champagne. I wanted some too but I had made an agreement with myself that I wouldn't drink because I knew how proud Curtiss had been of me because I had let it alone at the camp.

"Too bad you picked on me for the night to abstain," Joe Schuyler complained. I've been hearing some mighty wonderful things about you too. Come on Sallie," he urged. "This might be the last bubble water you'll get on this side of the pond." He called me by my first name. No one's name had a prefix to the Joe Schuylers of the world.

I was getting Mid-Victorian and likewise was having a rotten time. It's boring being the only sober one in the crowd. You have a different perspective. Things that seemed funny to the others were perfectly stupid to me. There's not even anyone to talk to because they don't want to dwell on any one subject. I wished that I had stayed at home. I was feeling bluer all the time.

THAT GOVERNMENT IS BEST WHICH GOVERNS LEAST

The tendency of every government is to enlarge itself at the expense of its constituency. The majority can be just as oppressive as the monarch—in fact, is often more so.

Appetite grows by what it feeds on.

Clothed with a little brief authority, man loves to lord it over his fellows.

In the name of benevolence, great robberies are committed. In the name of morality, great injustices are done.

The fathers of the American Republic undertook to build against this tendency by following the rule of the minimum of government and the maximum of individual responsibility.

But in this our day, the whole trend of legislation is to do that which the Apostle Paul warned against, to-wit: To bring us into bondage.

It is government extending itself at the expense of the one man, the unit of society, who in the world's past, has been the victim of oppression from theocracies and monarchies and oligarchies and aristocracies and unrestrained democracies.

Government we must have, but let us never forget that "that government is best which governs least."—Brownwood News.

Few of us are gifted with the vision necessary to see opportunities that lie nearest at hand. And when the editor says few of us, he includes himself along with his friends. An excellent illustration of this is a story told by Professor Agassiz, and retold time and again by a famous lecturer.

There was once a man who owned a farm in Pennsylvania who became dissatisfied with farming. This was in the early days of the oil business, and he applied himself to all the aspects of the new and promising industry. He learned how petroleum was formed, how refined, and how marketed. In short, he learned all he could about the theory, and then he sold his farm for $833. Shortly after the sale, the new owner went over the place to look after facilities for watering stock. He found that his predecessor had fixed a plank across the surface of a little stream running through the farm, and this plank was set at the right depth to hold back a black sum through which cattle would not put their noses.

This was unusual. With the assistance of experts, he conducted an investigation. The black sum, they discovered, was petroleum, and the farm it was later found was one of the richest oil fields of the East—an oil field that geologists later declared was worth $100,000,000 to the state of Pennsylvania. Here the man who studied the theory of finding, refining and marketing coal oil, had been damming back a stream that was pouring forth millions in oil. The city of Titusville now stands on the farm that he sold for $833—in order to go to far away places where he thought opportunity was awaiting him. No doubt this man was no more blind than most of us here in Stephenville. The writer is of the opinion that there is plenty of wealth and opportunity to be found right in our community, and some day some man of vision will come along and see what all of us should have seen long ago.

The greenest pastures are always further up the hill. "Distance lends enchantment." In other words, we think that we must travel far away to find opportunities.

But opportunity is everywhere—nearby and far away. If you lack the necessary vision you will not find fame or fortune by traveling to the far corners of the world. If you have vision you will probably find just what you most desire right here in Stephenville.—Stephenville Tribune.

New Way to Quickly Stop Worst Cough

A remarkable new and simple method for treating a cough gives relief with the first dose and usually breaks a severe cough in 24 hours.

The treatment is based on the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful and hold your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing, without following with water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation but it instantly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. It has been established how quickly the coughing stopped with this new treatment, and the whole cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription is for coughs, chest colds, whooping cough, spasmodic croup, etc. It is excellent for children as well as grownups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful, at all good druggists. Ask for MORE TAXES.

Some credulous persons may have come to the belief after hearing the unanimity of anti-taxation during the campaign of last summer that one certain sure thing about the 39th Legislature was that there'd be no new taxes proposed.

But it looks different now. The successful candidates are in office now, and they are on the inside looking out instead of on the outside looking in, and not only are there more than a few proposals to levy new taxes, but the support some of them are showing indicates they have good chances of passage and of executive approval.

There's the gasoline tax, for instance—raising the tax from 1c to 4c a gallon. True it contemplates reducing the automobile license fees, and probably the apportionment will be fairer. But the fact remains that the increased gasoline tax and the reduced license fee will produce more money than the old law—raising more money being the purpose of most new taxes.

Then comes the "nuisance tax" on cigars and cigarettes, proposed by "Ma" Ferguson in her first message. It is counted on to raise $4,000,000 a year—$8,000,000 for the biennium. The proceeds of the tax would be devoted to a most laudable purpose and one that deserves to have the money, the educational system. But it means mulching at least part of the Texas citizenry of $4,000,000 per annum.

And a bill proposing a 10 per cent admission tax on all athletic contests has been offered. How much it will raise nobody seems definitely to know, but it ought to be good for around a million dollars a year. Nobody knows the total, but nobody doubts its purpose—which is to raise more money. Taxes on other things inevitably will be proposed at this session. A chewing gum tax already has been suggested; movie taxes, candy taxes, soft drink taxes—list can be continued indefinitely.

It isn't that one opposes raising more funds for the state government—to the contrary. The point is that candidates for office who were elected on their promises of cutting the state's expenses far into the millions and of opposing all kinds of new taxes seem to have forgotten campaign pledges with the result that prospects are good for a new crop of new taxes when the present session's laws become effective. Which is bearing down hardest on the fellows who believed the state needed a better apportionment of taxes in order to raise more money equitably and told the folks so during the campaign.—Denton Record-Chronicle.

CO-OPERATION.

In "The Nation's Business" for December is an article entitled "Making a Town by Working Together." The story of Kingsville, Texas, which learned the lesson in co-operation, and having learned it marched straight to the task of doing something well worth while. The town of Kingsville was founded in 1904 and today there are 6,000 people living happily and contented in the little city, and it is prosperous far beyond the average.

The commercial club led the way, it being supported manfully. Then came a creamery, and soon a cotton mill capitalized at $250,000.

It is the same story of a people standing together, pulling together, going forward together, prospering together, and there is no other way by which the highest possibilities that lie at its door. It is a hard lesson for old established communities. It is a lesson that enforces itself upon a new place. There is no other way for a new community. It is that or death. But the policy is just as productive of good with the older established communities. Co-operation urges progress.

THE ROBINSON LAW.

There is considerable comment over the country in regard to the repeal of certain sections of the Robertson insurance law. A bill is now pending before the legislature that repeals that part of the law that requires Life Insurance Companies to place a part of their reserves in Texas securities.

Those fostering this bill claim that a large number of insurance companies, located in other states, have withdrawn from Texas on account of this feature of the Robertson law. What of it? There are so many life insurance concerns in Texas and outside operating in Texas that we have a life insurance agent for every two or three dozen citizens. How many more do we need? No one offers the argument that the policies now offered are not as good as the ones that would be offered if several more foreign concerns were allowed to operate in the state, take money from the Texas people and invest it in securities in other states and even in foreign countries.

Personally, we believe that the Robertson law has been a great benefit to the state and we are opposed to its repeal.

NEW CHRISTIAN CHURCH FOR ROCK SPRINGS

For some months there has been talk of a new Christian church for Rock Springs to take place of the old weather-beaten structure now used by the Christian congregation.

The Leader has something definite on the subject this week. W. E. Simpson, county road engineer, was here this week, and Mr. Simpson is the architect for the new church. He says plans for it are now being made in his office at San Antonio, and they will be completed this week, and then bids on construction will be advertised for immediately.

The new Christian church is to be a white stucco building, 40x60 feet in size, and is to front the corner at the corner of College and Bandera Sts., just next to their old church. It will have a basement with four Sunday School rooms in the basement, and all the main floor will be the auditorium. There is to be a baptistry in the chancel. The new edifice is to cost $7,500.—Edwards County Leader.

NEW GARAGE FOR JUNCTION

A new garage and drive in filling station is being erected by Leon Powell on the Cloud estate corner, just north of the A. L. Bartley residence, which will front the northwest corner of the lot.

The new building is a frame structure, about 50x60 feet, and will include a work shop, ladies' rest room, men's shower bath and toilet, and a drive-in front, according to Mr. Powell.

This is one of several buildings under construction, or that will shortly be under construction, as a part of Junction's 1925 building program.

THIS WEEK'S CROSS WORD PUZZLE.

The puzzle this week by Martha Wagner is conventional in design but well worth the effort in working. It might be called the "Four X" puzzle. There are one or two sticklers hidden in the seemingly easy three and four letter words but by the well-known system of filling in from all angles they most likely will work themselves out. Miss Molesworth Honored.

Mrs. A. L. Mudge entertained the Ladies' Afternoon Club with a bridge party at her home on Tuesday honoring Miss Charlotte Molesworth of San Antonio.

The Valentine motif was carried out in the decorations and lilies. Mrs. Irven Jarvis won high guest score. Mrs. Hoekamp high club score and each were awarded a red corsage. Miss Molesworth, the honoree, was also presented with a red corsage.

A regular two course turkey luncheon was served.

Miss Ray Entertains.

(Too Late for Last Week.)

Miss Emarine Ray complimented her many friends with an apron and overalls dance at her home Friday evening.

Much fun was had. Marguerite Wright and Pierce Hoggett were awarded a big stick of red candy, having been judged the prize winning couple.

Dainty refreshments were served at a late hour.

A Silver Tea.

Mesdames Ada Dockery, Blaxton Smith, Homer Livingston,

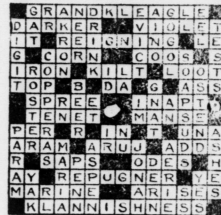

Roy Blackburn and W. B. Buster were hostesses at a silver tea given Saturday afternoon from 2 to 6 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Dockery. The proceeds will be used by the Methodist Missionary Society.

The spacious living and dining rooms each were decorated complimenting the Valentine idea. The red hearts and red crepe paper were attractively used. The pretty napkins, and heart shaped cakes and sandwiches also carried out the Valentine motif.

A most interesting and entertaining musical and reading program was enjoyed thru out the afternoon.

The plates contained fruit salad on lettuce leaves, sandwiches, cake, and hot tea.

Fortify Your Credit

through a regular, clean-cut summary of your business.

A financial statement for the farm is as important as for any other line of business.

If you have not been in the habit of making financial statements of your assets and liabilities on the farm, we urge you to start this business-like method.

Financial Statements are the best basis for credit, and will help your banker to serve you intelligently.
