PECOS COUNTY GUSHER LARGEST ON CONTINENT

Business Leaders Of District Called For Conference On Deep Oil Drilling

MEETING TO SEEK OPINION ON NEW SANDS

Conference Here Tuesday Sets Sept. 27 For Oil Rally

OTHER CITIES INVITED

Drilling Organization May Follow Survey of Area's Prospects

Business men of Wichita Falls and about eight other communities in this section will meet at the Wichita club Friday noon, Sept. 27, to discuss the feasibility of a deep oil drilling campaign in this area, according to action taken Tuesday morning when an informal meeting of about 15 local citizens was held in the office of Frank Kell.

The conference Tuesday morning, which was called by Mr. Kell, resulted in the appointment of a committee consisting of N. H. Martin, chairman; Mr. Kell, J. J. Perkins, W. M. McGregor, J. T. Harrell, J. S. Bridwell, J. F. Donohoe, W. M. Priddy and J. C. Mytinger to invite other business men of nearby cities and towns to be guests at the luncheon Friday for further discussion of the project.

The letter which is being addressed to citizens of Henrietta, Archer City, Olney, Burkburnett, Electra, Iowa Park, Vernon, Dundee and Byers points out that the meeting is being held "to get the viewpoint of as many of the leading citizens of this section as possible," and that "if there is sufficient encouragement, such steps as may be necessary to permanently organize for the movement will be taken." The letter further says that "there will be no effort to provide funds for this campaign at this meeting, as we have not yet progressed that far."

Aside from those comprising the invitation committee, the gathering Tuesday morning included C. E. McCutchen, John Hirshi, Roy L. Carter, W. B. Hamilton, C. W. Snider and J. A. Kemp.

Wounded Negro Reports Battle

Walking nonchalantly into the police station about 11:30 o'clock Tuesday night with a broad grin on his face and a blood soaked rag on his head, A. J. Evans, negro, with blood spurting from two deep gashes in his scalp, announced to officers, "I've been in a fight."

A doctor was called immediately. The negro told officers that a negro named Sam Burnett had hit him with an automobile jack shortly after 11 o'clock while they were standing on the sidewalk in the 100 block on Lake street. Police asked him what he did then.

"Took the jack away from him and hit him back," was the reply.

By the time the doctor arrived, the man had lost a great amount of blood and had become so weakened that he could not walk.

'I Loved Her,' Rings Through Peacox's Horror Story

ROYAL ROMANCE

HOOVER LIFTS TARIFF MASK

Which Prompts Pat Harrison to 'Open Up'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. (AP)—President Hoover today threw himself squarely into the senate dispute over retention of the flexible principle in the Hawley-Smoot tariff for the first time since the measure came before the special session of congress, Mr. Hoover declared it was of the utmost importance for the future protection of the farmers, industries and the consumers that there should be maintained the system adopted in 1922 by which the president may increase or lower customs duties on commodities on recommendation of the tariff commission.

The statement was issued only a few hours after Senator Simmons of North Carolina, the Democratic leader in the tariff controversy, had offered a motion to eliminate the flexible provision.

Immediately after news of the president's action reached the senate, Senator Harrison of Mississippi, contended on the floor that in issuing his statement, Mr. Hoover had "repudiated" the senate Republican leaders. He launched into a long speech on the subject, taunting the Republican leadership in his characteristic fashion.

Recalling that only last week Senator Watson, of Indiana, marshal of the Republican forces, had assured the senate that he had advised the president repeatedly to keep out of the senate tariff controversy, the Mississippian said that—notwithstanding this—when the senate reached "the heart of this whole controversy, the flexible provision, we understand the president called the correspondents in and says he is for this flexible provision."

The president said the reasons for the incorporation of the flexible provisions in the pending act, which is to be a substitute flexible which is to be a substitute for existing tariff law, were "more cogent today than ever before."

He said all tariff laws must contain injustices, and that even if a perfect bill could be written many sections of it would be rendered imperfect by changing economic conditions and the constant shifting of relations with economic life abroad.

YOUNG SLAYER GOES THROUGH GRUELING QUIZ

Quaking Tearfully, Youth Tells of Romance With Dolly Peacox

SINCERITY IN DOUBT

But Damon Runyon Asks "How Would You Act?" In His Place

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright 1929, Universal Service, Inc.)

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 24.—"I loved her!"

The old theme song of the ages tinkled—a little bit off key—through the gruesome tale that 22-year-old Earle Peacox told the jury in the court room at White Plains today of the murder of his young wife, Dolly.

"I loved her!" . . .

Old Adam said it first, in a general way, and it has been the alibi-equeal of mankind down across the thousands of years. And yet it may sometimes be true. That we know. For each man "kills the things he loves."

Dolly Peacox had been Earle's wife in name only. They couldn't ever have any children. That was the basis of the tiffs that became quarrels, and quarrels that ended in a separation that sent Dolly off with other men, but—

Peacox Sheds Tears

"I loved her" . . . There were tears in Peacox's eyes as he said it this afternoon, and as he told how he had sent Dolly's clothes to her at her request after their separation, and had tucked away among them one song called "Just a Memory," and another entitled "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses."

The slender fingers that the state of New York says clutched at Dolly's throat until the life was gone from her body, flicked the saltiness from his eyes as young Peacox related his wife's death as an accident of which he denied premeditation or intent and as he talked the spectators who crowded the court room until the air was fetid, poked their jaws forward and opened up their ears wide that they might not miss a single word of the horror story of the day. They were mainly women. Old women, young women, fat women, thin women, women of the neighborhood of White Plains and women from distant points. Eargerly they drank in the distressing tale.

Youth Unimpressed

Somehow, for all the probability of certain phases of his story, Peacox didn't get a ring of sincerity into his words. He didn't seem to be a particularly impressive witness. And yet in contemplating a man on the witness stand fighting for his life, it is only fair to ask one's self, "how would you act?"

This young fellow is in a peck of trouble. There is about him at this moment the sinister aura of the lamps above the electric chair, if the solid looking jury in the box

Mrs. Pantages' Jury Locked Up for Night

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24. (UP)—After deliberating four hours, the jury of seven men and five men which will decide the fate of Mrs. Lois Pantages, charged with second degree murder in the automobile death of Juro Rokumoto, was locked up for the night at 9 o'clock tonight.

While no information as to the result of the polls taken was given out, court attaches said that had Leon B. Henson, alternate juror, remained on the jury, he would have voted for acquittal of the wife of the wealthy theatrical man. He had confided to them, they said, that he would have "turned Mrs. Pantages loose."

Naval Difference Measured by Two Inches

Seeming Trifle Divides Great Britain and United States

By KIRKE SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. (AP)—Whittled down, the naval accord problem confronting President Hoover and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald is of just two-inch dimensions.

What they have to do is to find a formula of cruiser relativity that will permit each government to build to its own needs in six-inch gun and eight-inch gun ships without jeopardizing the national security of either in the event they ever clashed in war.

In the answer they are seeking is bound up not only vast naval expenditures but political questions that might strain Anglo-American friendship to the breaking point.

A two-inch difference in the bore of naval guns seems a trifling matter. Germany, before the world war, stuck to 11-inch main batteries for her battleships, while British and American experts worked up from 12-inch to 13.5-inch, 14-inch, 15-inch and finally 16-inch guns.

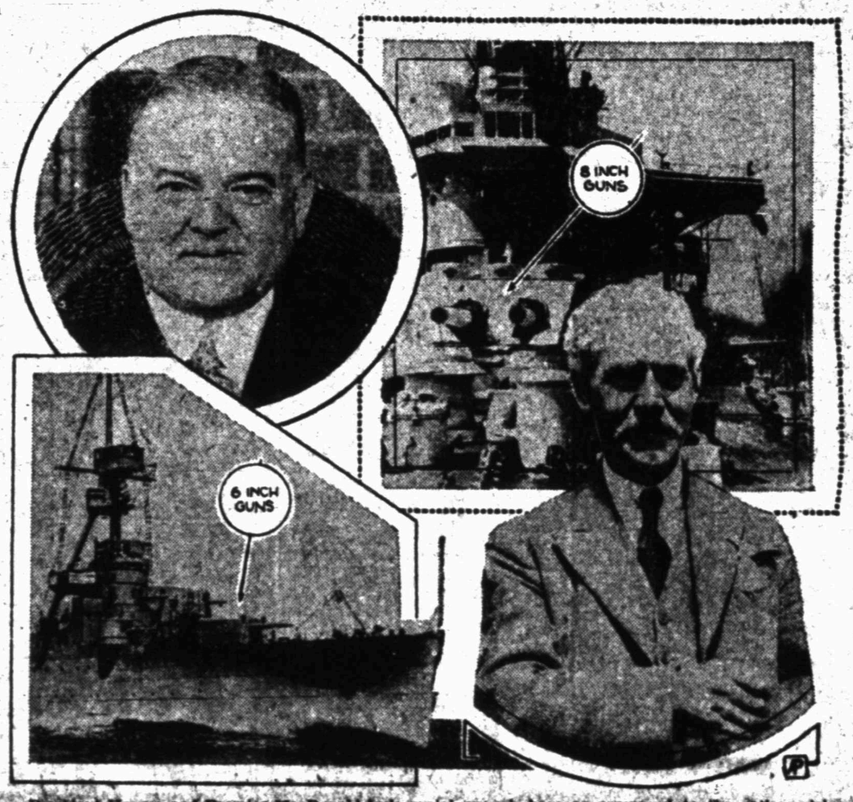

German 11-inch weapons gave a good account of themselves in battle against the heavier British calibers. Yet failure to solve a clash of opinion over the seemingly insignificant factor of a two-inch difference in gun bores threw the three-power naval conference at Geneva on the rocks.

Nowhere else in the whole range of gun calibers, from shoulder rifles of little more than one-fourth inch bore to the giant 16-inch naval guns that hurl a ton of steel and explosive 30,000 yards or more, does this vitally significant element of relativity of naval power enter into the picture.

And the reason is because a six-inch gun can be loaded by hand, while an eight-inch projectile is too heavy for that. That two-inch difference means no merchant craft can carry eight-inch guns without virtual rebuilding to strengthen decks and install mechanical means of loading her rifles.

Since the world war the United

President Hoover and Premier MacDonald look genial enough here as compared to the rather vicious appearance of the 8-inch guns on the U. S. S. Pittsburgh (upper right) and the 6-inchers on the U. S. S. Detroit (lower left). It is the difference between 6-inch and 8-inch guns that has held up Anglo-American naval accord.

UNCLE SAM TO SLASH TAXES

Increase Government Revenue Promises Cut

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. (AP)—The nation's tax bill, which in the fiscal year 1929 totaled $2,938,018,000 will be cut next year because business prosperity is rolling up an unequalled amount of income taxes.

The income taxes received by the government since Jan. 1 had totaled $1,900,578,000 at the close of business on Sept. 21, or $233,000,000 more than had been received on Sept. 20 of last year, and only $269,000,000 less than was collected in the entire 1928 calendar year.

In addition to the collections already made, the December payments and those due before that time are expected to add another $800,000,000 and bring the total of income tax payments for the 12 months of 1929 to $2,500,000,000.

In view of the immense income tax receipts the treasury will recommend that the next congress reduce taxes effective next March 15. How much the reduction will be or how it will be distributed has not been determined, but the amount of the cut will be substantial. The treasury expects that income tax payments for the first quarter of 1929, which will be made on next March 15, will equal if not surpass the payments of last March when $601,000,000 rolled into the government coffers.

The great increase in income tax payments this year was attributed by treasury officials to the active stock market which enabled thousands of citizens to take their profit and thus increase their income tax payments.

South Atlantic Storm Warning Is Posted

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. (UP)—The U. S. weather bureau tonight ordered storm warnings displayed from Miami, Fla., to Charleston, South Carolina.

"Tropical disturbance centered at 2 p. m. about 150 miles northeast of Nassau, apparently moving west-northwestward and increasing in intensity," the bureau said. "It is quite likely the disturbance will reach hurricane intensity within the next 24 hours. Caution is advised all vessels off the east Florida coast and the northern Bahamas region."

Cub Proxy Warns Against Fake Series Tickets

CHICAGO, Sept. 24. (AP)—Counterfeit tickets for world series games to be played at Wrigley field, home of the Cubs, were reported selling at scalpers' prices in Chicago today.

President William Veeck of the Cubs had his attention called to a pair of the spurious ducats and immediately warned fans against purchasing any tickets except through regular channels.

"No official world series tickets will be sold until Oct. 1 or 2," Veeck warned. "The official tickets now are being printed."

Girl of 17 Tells Story of Attack In Hobbs' Trial on Assault Charge

Women and Girls Crowd Court for Testimony; "All Men Get Fresh Sooner or Later," Bride Tells Jury

Speaking quietly in a voice that was clear in spite of its low tones, a 17-year-old girl now another man's bride, Tuesday afternoon gave a jury and a court room overflowing with curious spectators a detailed description of an alleged attack made upon her by Art Hobbs, youthful defendant in a statutory trial in progress in the 89th district court.

The girl explained that she had been 16 years old and unmarried at the time of the alleged assault. Since that time she has married and now makes her home in Dallas, she told the jury.

Defense Attacks Story

After more than an hour of direct testimony in which George Anderson, assistant district attorney, drew from her a minute account of the events alleged to have taken place in a creek bottom northwest of town on the morning of July 24, the youthful witness was subjected to a prolonged cross examination at the hands of the defense attorney, who attacked every detail of her story and sought to have her admit that the complaint against Hobbs had been filed out of spite.

Her story, which required about two hours in the telling, held the crowded room in absolute silence. Sensation seekers stood at the back of the room and in the aisleways. Young girls and women, some of them carrying the school books they were neglecting for the day, were conspicuous in the crowd, at least half of which was feminine. Judge Allan D. Montgomery early announced that he would tolerate no disorder.

The state opened its case by

FOX TO CROSS OCEAN ON POLE

Flagpole Sitter Lands New Contract

Benny Fox on his high perch atop the Marchman hotel flagpole took a rest of about 10 minutes at 9 o'clock Tuesday night after he had rung up a record of 3,116 telephone calls during the first 31 hours of his endurance flagpole sitting test. The rest was ostensibly to give his fagged out arms a rub-down with a preparation sent up to him by his wife, but there was another reason.

Benny had just received news that his agents had signed a contract for him to cross the Atlantic ocean and return perched on top of the highest mast pole of the Leviathan. The contract came as a result of a bet between a group of sportsmen at Dallas, one of whom was William Easterwood, well known for his interest in aviation and sports. This endurance feat will be without parallel in the history of flagpole sitting. Benny told The Record News that his passage had already been secured, and the deal closed and that he would go into training for the test immediately after staging a test at Amarillo similar to the one here. He will sail atop the Leviathan mast in about seven weeks.

He said the news "kinda had him up in the air." Following an afternoon of almost incessant telephone calls, Benny was forced to

BORGER WAITS MOODY ENVOY

Tension Grips Oil Town as Martial Law Threatens

AUSTIN, Sept. 24. (AP)—Gen. Jacob F. Wolters of Houston, commander of Texas troops that occupied Mexia and Galveston under martial law, is en route to Borger, Hutchinson county oil town where District Attorney John A. Holmes was assassinated and upon his advice will depend whether Governor Moody calls out the militia and takes over control of affairs there.

BORGER, Texas, Sept. 24. (AP)—A feeling of tenseness prevailed here today as word came that Gov. Dan Moody was sending a special representative to consider the possibility of martial law.

Meanwhile, Borger for a time today was wholly in the hands of city and county officers as the search for clues in the assassination of District Attorney John A. Holmes spread outside the immediate vicinity of this tumultuous oil town.

Special Investigator Clem Calhoun left to meet the governor's representative in Amarillo tomorrow to escort him to Borger where he will make a personal investigation, possibly reporting to the governor by telephone.

Four rangers, Gonzaulias, Smith, Kirby and Purvis, who talked with Calhoun until nearly dawn, had gone to Amarillo today to appear before the federal grand jury, it was reported. The grand jury was said to be considering 14 arrests made by rangers in a July cleanup here. Holmes, instrumental in the arrests, was to have appeared before the jury with data he had collected.

The data has disappeared and officers recalled Mrs. Holmes eye witness story of her husband's assassination Sept. 13. After Holmes

British Document Turned Over To U. S. Navy, Ship Quiz Learns

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. (AP)—A letter in which William B. Shearer said he had given the navy a secret British document at a critical stage in the senate debate last winter, over the 15-cruiser bill, was placed today in the record of the senate committee investigating his connections.

The communication was addressed to Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News shipbuilding and dry dock corporation. Senator Allen, Republican, Kansas, read part of the letter. Allen revealed later that he had the so-called secret British document, but that he was not ready to use it.

Frederick P. Palen, vice president of the Newport News ship concern told the committee that he was "more responsible than anyone else" for sending Shearer to Geneva at a price of $25,000.

Referring to the "press releases" and "documents" sent back to the shipbuilders by Shearer, Senator Allen asked Palen if he approved of those. He said he did but when Allen remarked that they showed that Shearer was using his influence "to foment trouble between America and Great Britain" Palen said he did not approve of that.

GAUGE SHOWS HOUR'S FLOW OF 8,529 BARRELS

Test Indicates No. 30-A Yates Can Produce 204,000 Daily

BIG WELL SHUT IN

Pool's Potential Output of 4,970,220 Barrels Is Given Boost

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Sept. 24. (AP)—Flowing 8,529 barrels in one hour, or at the rate of 204,696 barrels daily, the Mid-Kansas and Transcontinental companies No. 30-A Yates oil well in eastern Pecos county yesterday set what was believed to have been a record for initial flow on the North American continent and perhaps in the world.

The gauge was made through four 6⅝ inch lines and two four-inch lines, with 160 pounds of working pressure, from a total depth of 1,070 feet, 90 feet below the level where oil first was struck. The well became the biggest initial gusher in the famous Yates pool on Sept. 14, when it flowed 3,085 barrels of oil in 30 minutes through one four-inch and two six-inch lines with 240 pounds of working pressure. It was shut in to allow the laying of additional flow lines and operators at the time estimated the well should make between 7,000 and 8,000 barrels hourly.

The Yates field in mid-September had an average daily potential production of 4,970,220 barrels by 232 wells, compared with the daily average production in the United States of slightly more than 3,000,000 barrels. The No. 30-A Yates will swell the total.

While it was not believed the new gusher would maintain its high production rate for any considerable length of time, its flow was said to have indicated an enormous petroleum reserve in the area. The field under proration is limited to producing 13,000 barrels daily.

The No. 30-A Yates is directly west of the Mid-Kansas and Transcontinental No. 6-A Yates, completed last fall for 500 barrels hourly from 935-1,045 feet, but recently was plugged as a conservation measure to reduce oil seepage into the Pecos. The location is in section 34½ (vacancy strip) 250 feet south and 685 feet east of the southwest corner of section 60, block 1, I. & G. N. Railway company survey, less than a quarter of a mile due east of the Yates discovery producer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. (AP)—Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, lost ground today in his battle with an infection that threatened his life. Despite a third blood transfusion late this afternoon his condition grew more critical as the infection growing out of an attack of influenza spread from the left to the right side.

Dr. Edward H. King, team physician of the Yankees, issued no formal bulletin after the transfusion but indicated that Huggins had not rallied as expected. His temperature remained about 104 and he was unconscious most of the day.

GIRL TELLS OF YOUTH'S ACTS

Creek Bottom Scene Recalled in Trial Here

calling the complaining witness to the stand.

The young woman told the jury that she had left a dance at Lakeside shortly after midnight in company with Lucas Pitts, a girl called "Dutch" and Art Hobbs. Pitts was her escort, she said. Hobbs and the girl called "Dutch" occupying the rear of the machine which was arranged something in the manner of a delivery car, the witness went on.

Tells of Fight

"I thought they were taking me home," the girl declared. "Instead we went out Tenth street and turned off onto a dirt road. We made several turns and Lucas stopped the car along a little side road near a creek bottom. Art and Dutch went away. Lucas stayed with me. He caught my arm and dragged me from the car, but I got away from him. Then Art came back and Lucas left us. At first Art was friendly. Then he asked me to get out of the car. I wouldn't. He dragged me out and threw me on the ground. I fought him for about an hour, I think. When I screamed he choked me. There are still marks on my throat. He hit me in the right eye and slapped me in the face several times."

The witness said that later the other two members of the party had returned to the car and that the group had driven back to town, Hobbs taking her to her home where she said she told her mother of the affair in Hobbs' presence. Early the next morning, the girl went on, she visited the office of two physicians and later went to the courthouse to file the complaint against Hobbs.

E. F. Fruechte, counsel for the defense, began at once a persistent attack upon every point of her story. His efforts to impugn her character in the cross examination were temporarily checked by a ruling from Judge Allan D. Montgomery, forbidding questions involving specific instances of alleged questionable conduct.

The attorney through the cross examination then sought to make the witness admit that she had herself imprinted the marks later found on her throat and that she had filed the complaint in anger because Hobbs had refused to buy her a new dress.

The attention of the court and the listeners centered for some time on the description of a pair of "trunks" in red, green and white checks worn by the girl on the occasion of the struggle. The defense counsel was particular to inquire about the coloring and the dimensions of the garments and the crowd and court attendants listened with unbroken gravity to the details.

Learned About Men

The good behavior of the onlookers, or their fear of being sent away from so interesting a spectacle was again evident when Mr. Fruechte brought from the girl a few of her views about men.

"How did you get along with Mr. Pitts?" the attorney wanted to know.

"All right, the first night," was the answer.

"And the second?"

"Not so good."

"What happened?"

"He tried to get fresh."

"Fresh? What do you mean by that?" Mr. Fruechte persisted.

"Oh, he was just like all the rest."

"You've gone out with a lot of men?" the attorney suggested.

"Quite a few," the witness admitted.

"And they all get fresh?"

"Not all, but they usually all come to that," the young woman sighed.

After the complaining witness had completed her testimony, Dr. John H. Fletcher and Dr. William Rosenthal were called by the state to corroborate the girl's story of her visits to their offices. The defense continued its efforts, in cross examination, to question the moral character of the girl before the events complained of had taken place.

A large number of character witnesses will testify through the Wednesday morning session of the trial, Sam Spence, district attorney, said Tuesday afternoon. The trial is expected to continue through at least two more days, around 50 witnesses having been subpoenaed had fallen to the ground in the garage of his home, the assassin bent over the prosecutor's body, according to witnesses. Investigators said the slayer might have been assuring himself that Holmes was dead or extracting paper from his pocket.

As rangers redoubled efforts in search for clues, the possibility of martial law was considered. Some merchants protested the idea, but others said martial law would benefit the town in the end.

MARTIAL LAW DECISION TODAY

AUSTIN, Sept. 24. (AP)—Governor Moody will decide tomorrow or Thursday whether to place Borger under martial law, he said tonight.

Importuned by citizens of the Hutchinson county oil town, where District Attorney John A. Holmes, was shot to death by an unknown assailant, to use the Texas National guard in a thorough "clean-up" Governor Moody has sent a special representative to size up the situation.

"This man I have sent there to pass on the urgency of need for martial law will make a report to morrow or Thursday and I will be guided by his advice," Governor Moody said.

He refused to reveal the identity of his agent.

The governor said also he had instructed Ranger Captain Frank Hamer, who had been here several days and who went to Brownsville to appear as a witness, to return to Borger.

PEACOX VOWS LOVE FOR WIFE

Youthful Slayer Recounts Story to Jury

at White Plains fails to believe his tale that the death of Dolly Peacox was mainly accident, and does believe the state's contention that it was a matter of premeditation and deliberation on his part.

Prosecutor Merciless

The bald-headed and agressive looking Frank A. Coyne, district attorney for Westchester county, went after Peacox in merciless fashion as soon as the young fellow had concluded his story under the guidance of his own attorney. Coyne is obviously convinced in his own mind through the evidence he has gathered that Peacox is a cold blooded murderer and he belted the pallid youth with a fierce fire of questions.

He handed Peacox the automatic pistol with which Earle knocked Dolly down in the apartment, and made Peacox show the jury just how he had wielded the weapon. Peacox put it in his pocket and whipped it out again like an old time gunman making a fast draw. Then step by step Coyne carried Peacox over his own story, trying to bring out of the defendant his reasons for doing certain things that the district attorney holds argues premeditation.

"Our quarrels were the culmination of several differences, mental and physical," he said of his relations with Dolly.

Different Natures

"Our natures were different. I was content to stay at home, and Dolly liked to go out on parties. I was working evenings, and wasn't able to go out with her so she went by herself."

They first quarreled in July, 1928, when Dolly was out late and wouldn't give any explanation. Then they quarreled because he thought she was too intimate with Eugene Bussey, the missing witness, who is said to be somewhere at sea. Earle introduced Bussey, a boyhood friend, to Dolly, but he began finding letters from his old pal to the wife that Earle thought were altogether too friendly.

They got together again in the fall of 1928 and went to live together in the flat in Mount Vernon. She quit him the first week in January and left two notes, the thing starting with a quarrel because she was out until 2:30 and said she had been with her father.

Dolly's Letter Read

Attorney Syme read a letter that Dolly wrote Earle's mother explaining why she left Earle, and saying "when two kids think they are madly in love they don't stop to think of anything else."

"We kept up the pretense as long as we could, but we were not really man and wife—just a fighting pair of foolish kids. A doctor told me I was an unfortunate wife and should never have been married but I didn't know that. Earle loves me so much he would want me no matter what happened, but just the same he used to get angry, and I get cross and irritable, too. That's why I made up my mind to leave."

A letter was read by Syme written by Dolly and addressed to Kay Winters, the so-called "postoffice girl," who is said to have been the medium of transmission of letters between Dolly and her admirers. This letter related that Dolly was sticking to one fellow, "only a young boy, but gee! He is the cleanest boy I ever knew."

It seems his name was Bradley. It seems she also had a friend she called "grandpa," a doctor about 40, so you doddering old "40' guys' know what a girl of 20 thinks of that age.

Meeting Arranged

Earle got to thinking of her the night of their first wedding anniversary, and went to the place where she was living and called her up, and asked her if she would like to go for a ride.

Dolly said "yes," and came down immediately, and they started out.

Earle said they were not going anywhere in particular but wanted to get out of New York because you can't hold a tete-a-tete in traffic, which is something nobody can deny. Then Dolly said she was hungry, and wanted to know if he had anything to eat at the flat, and that's where they went.

Her remark, "I see you're still in the same old dump," has become well nigh historic, but Earle repeated it this afternoon. She said it "very scarcastic," he said, and he replied, "It's more than you can say," meaning she couldn't say she was still "in the same old dump."

"Is that so?" she said. "Yes, that's so," he replied.

That was when they began slapping each other, and after an exchange of slaps, he said: "I'm getting more than you ever gave me."

"I thought of all the things I had heard about her, and of all I'd done for her—a sort of panorama, it was," said Peacox to the jury, "and everything went black before me. The next thing that happened I was sitting in a chair, and it was very quiet in the room, and Dolly was on the floor very still, and there was a pool of blood, and I said to myself, 'Oh, God! What have I done!'."

"You don't mean the next thing that happened—you mean the next thing you remembered, don't you?" asked Attorney Syme.

"Yes," said Peacox.

"Are you trying to create the impression that your wife was a bad woman?" demanded District Attorney Coyne at one stage of the examination.

Peacox pounded the table in front of him.

"I certainly am not," he said. "I want that distinctly understood."

"Do you consider she was an immoral woman?" said Coyne.

"I won't answer that," he said.

"She may have been indiscreet, but I loved my wife, and she was good enough for me."

SIZE OF GUNS TO BE DECIDED

Hoover and MacDonald to Hold Conference

States never has considered construction of any cruiser to carry runs of less than eight-inch bore. That policy offsets Great Britain's potential fleet of converted merchantmen, to be used in war times as swift six-inch gun commerce raiders.

Great Britain, however, with her trade routes to dominions and colonies that must be kept open to preserve the "tight little isle" and the commonwealth, has felt she must have enough light cruisers with six-inch guns to police those routes at all times.

Her programs of cruiser construction have provided two six-inch gun ships for each eight-inch gunner laid down.

Now, Hoover and MacDonald, each charged first of all with the duty of safeguarding the ultimate security of the nation for which he speaks, are attempting solution of this two-inch problem on new lines.

They are trying to determine in the light of more than a century of Anglo-American peace and common pledges not to resort to war, what unequal numbers of eight-inch and six-inch gun ships for each still would spell comparative equality of naval power.

If that can be decided, without sacrifice by either of ultimate naval security, American and British naval rivalries at least can be swept into the past.

In purchasing a car from income the average allowance on a good used car usually more than covers the initial Pierce-Arrow payment

SINCE the hour when the first new Straight Eight was presented by Pierce-Arrow, there has never been a time when demand wasn't crowding production. For weeks and months it seemed impossible for certain models to catch up with orders.

The tribute that is inherent in any waiting-list has a special significance where Pierce-Arrow's latest creation is concerned. It marks a new mode in motoring—a sharp departure from all that is bulky and stodgy in fine automobiles.

The new Straight Eight is a long, slender, low-swung automobile which is today unapproached in power, in performance, or in luxury of appointment. Besides, it is Pierce-Arrow at its very finest—which perhaps explains why America has been willing to wait for it.

Schoolgirl learns simple health measure

WITH all the talk there is nowadays about the independence of the sub-deb generation, your reporter got a great kick out of hearing a grandmother describe how her granddaughter was following a good old tried and true method of improving her general health.

"My granddaughter, Margaret," says Mrs. Zell of 6231 Catherine Street, Philadelphia, "read about Nujol, was interested in it, so sent for a sample." It seems she has been taking a tablespoon of Nujol once a day since and expects to continue this treatment. Already she has found an improvement in her general health, her system functioning normally where other remedies had failed.

That's one of the best things about Nujol. It is just as harmless for young girls, or babies even, as it is for adults.

For Nujol contains no medicines or drugs. It can't possibly upset you because it works so easily and regularly, in a normal fashion.

Starting right

When it comes to health, we can afford to be guided by what older folks say. For years now, mothers and fathers and grandparents have known the benefits of Nujol. And the new crowd of girls and boys now growing up are finding that health is the most popular asset in the world today.

Nujol was perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York City. It can be bought anywhere for about the price of a ticket to a good movie. Get a bottle today and try it, won't you? In sealed packages.

JAILER FIRES AT PRISONER

Allen Halts Attack on Woman From Cell

W. W. Allen, jailer at the Wichita county jail, Tuesday afternoon interrupted with a pistol shot the efforts of Hugh D. Butler to hurl a milk bottle through the bars at his wife. The shot went wild, but its influence quieted Butler and brought an altercation which had been underway for several minutes to an abrupt end.

Two other prisoners, one of them D. J. Hoobler, under sentence of death, were in the cell with Butler. Mr. Allen said he was careful not to aim toward them and that he had no intention of wounding Butler when the pulled the trigger.

After Mrs. Butler, weeping, had been conducted from the jail, Mr. Allen explained that the wife had called to talk with Butler in connection with a divorce suit, not yet filed, which had been the subject of long controversy between them. The conference had led to a quarrel, Mr. Allen said, but the first sign of serious difficulty came when Butler seized his wife by the shoulders and jerked her against the bars, bruising her forehead. Mrs. Butler screamed, and Mr. Allen came to her rescue, prying Butler's fingers loose from their hold. He ten sent Mrs. Butler into the second of the double runarounds in that section of the jail, the jailer explained.

Butler's next move was to hurl a bottle against the bar, sending splinters of glass in all directions. It was when he seized the second bottle that the jailer used his gun. Butler immediately retired to an inner cell where he was later found prostrate upon the floor, Mr. Allen declared.

Mrs. Butler told friends that she had tried to persuade her husband to give her the custody of their child, now in the care of his parents.

Butler is being held on burglary charges in connection with the loss of $700 from the Silver store here last June. His trial is scheduled to come up in the 89th district court this week.

Banquet Honors Messenger Boys Who Boast Perfect Safety Record

In appreciation of the record made by the Western Union messenger boys in Wichita Falls during the past half year a banquet was given in their honor at the Kemp hotel Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

The Western Union offers each office in the United States a banquet each six months as a reward for prompt and efficient work on the part of the messenger boys and for a perfect safety record, according to Charles Pogenphol, manager of the local office, and the Wichita Falls office felt honored upon receiving this recognition. None of the boys here has figured in an accident during the period.

With Mr. Pogenpohl as toastmaster, the principal speakers were P. R. Napier, division manager from Dallas, and R. H. Weesner, district manager from Oklahoma City. Other speakers were P. M. Cordell, president of the Wichita Safety council, J. H. Allison, vice president of The Times Publishing company, Frank B. Creighton, scout executive, W. V. Taylor, chief delivery clerk of the local office, and Jack R. Mayes, Herman Jones and C. Lawhorn, delivery clerks. Messenger boys present were: Ernest Allen, William Carter, T. J. Allen, Raymond Allen, Frank Griffen, W. L. Nichols, Rhea Smith, Hoyt Smith, Winifred Wells, William Bindlee, Clarence Brooks, Gaylord Hebring, Morris Smith and William Adams.

OFFICER TELLS OF SHOOTING

"Never Heard of Automatic Discharge," He Says

"I did not shoot to hit Cowan and I would never have fired my gun if I had known that the shot was going to pass near him," declared Elmer Thornton, former city detective who was discharged from the police force following the wounding of Perry Cowan during a raid on an alleged dice game last Saturday night, in a statement to The Record News Tuesday night.

"It was purely an accident. My gun had not been fired in some time and if the shot went low, it was because the trigger was stiff and the shot which I intended to go into the air was pulled down by the trigger action. I did not know that I had hit Cowan and since I had intended the shot merely to frighten him and since he kept running after I fired, I took it for granted that he was unhurt and went about the business of taking the remaining men to the station.

"When I reached headquarters after my rounds out Tenth street, some of the men there asked Poe and me if we knew anything about an officer shooting a man. I told them that I had fired a shot but did not know anything about a man having been hit. It turned out that Cowan had been struck in the arm by my shot. That took me utterly by surprise.

"I am sorry for the whole matter and I consider it extremely unfortunate that I should have been the one to do it. I must confess that I had not previously heard anything about 'automatic discharge in case of unjustified shooting on the part of an officer.' I have seen innumerable officers of the law employ shooting into the air as a means of bringing a fleeing man to a halt. I have seen it used by Wichita Falls officers and I have heard of instances in which other officers have made the same mistake as mine. No such regulation as 'automatic discharge' was spoken of in their case.

"Chief Frank Burns and City Manager George Fairtrace were considerate in manner in which they handled the matter. I have no ill feelings toward any of my fellow officers or toward the officers of the city government. My sincere hope is that there will be no ill feeling toward me."

MARTIN TRIAL NEARS CLOSE

Defense Presents Testimony In Barratry Case

The state had closed its case against E. A. Martin, local attorney under barratry charges, and R. I. Kennedy, first defense witness, was under cross examination at the hour of adjournment in the county court at law Tuesday afternoon. The case is expected to go to the jury early Wednesday.

Martin is under four indictments, the first of which, on trial Tuesday, accuses him of seeking employment as an attorney to push the claims of Mrs. Lena E. McCarty against the Mutual Benefit Health and Accident association in connection with the death of John A. McCarty last June. Paul E. Parkins, indicted with Martin, Monday was sentenced to 45 days in jail and fined $250 for his part in the alleged affair.

The case for the state Tuesday afternoon followed almost the same lines developed in the trial of Parkins Monday. Mrs. McCarty testified that four men, among them Martin and Parkins, had come to her early in the morning on the day after her husband's funeral and had suggested that Martin be employed to represent her in collecting the insurance, the attorney to receive 25 per cent of any money collected.

The first indication of the line of the defense came when R. I. Kennedy, for 10 years an employe of the insurance company, said that Mr. McCarty, before he died, had asked him to get a lawyer for Mrs. McCarty should she be left a widow. Mr. Kennedy said he had believed at the time of the visit that Mrs. McCarty would need a lawyer to collect the claims.

Three other barratry charges are pending against Martin. A petition for disbarment was filed against him in the 89th district court Monday afternoon.

A Sidney, Iowa, business man wanted to show friends how easy it was to cash a worthless check. He signed it "E Z. Mark," and a few days later the sheriff traced it back to him.

He was unable to eat the supper sent up to him at 8 o'clock Tuesday night due to the soreness of his throat from talking almost constantly over the telephone. His wife again provided a remedy and sent him a medicine to ease the soreness. He took only some milk and light food.

"In all the nine years of my experience at this kind of work, I have never visited a city which was quite so interested as Wichita Falls in asking questions about my condition and my past experiences," he said Tuesday night. "I had thought that people in other places called me a great deal during my tests, but I have never found a city where the calls came in almost at the rate of two a minute as they do here, even counting the hours when the city is asleep."

Carpenter-Convict Stays in Prison After Term Is Up to Complete Job

MADISONVILLE, Texas, Sept. 24. (AP)—It remained for A. H. Woodfin, formerly of Fort Worth and Houston, to introduce a new form of convict action to the Texas prison system.

Instead of running off before his term ended, as so many of his fellow convicts did, Woodfin remained a week after his discharge at the Ferguson farm near here. Woodfin believed he was paying a debt to society he did not owe but so long as he was discharging it in the form of a three-year sentence he did not mind adding a little interest.

"I want to get that power house finished before I leave," Woodfin explained two days after his term was up. "I wouldn't like to leave 'em in the lurch."

While he was taking a three-year "rap," Woodfin, a structural engineer, rebuilt most of the buildings and fences on the farm, the manager said. And even though a free man he stayed on his job of directing the carpenter crew on the power house until it was finished.

Woodfin was doing important work in the oil fields when another man threatened the integrity of his family, it was said. "He needed killing," Woodfin asserts, "but I've had to pay for it."

J. B. H. Holderby of Fort Worth, prison board member, said that a good job awaited the former prison carpenter.

From The Mountains of Central America

Come Coffees Unlike Any Known Before!

Never "thin" or "flat"—Experts agree that this rare flavor is not duplicated anywhere else in the world

EVERYWHERE women are talking of a rare, full-flavored coffee that is never "thin" or "flat." A coffee utterly unlike any they had known before.

It comes from the high volcanic mountains of Central America, a region that produces coffees with a rare tang and mellow, full-bodied flavor that, experts agree, is different from any other known.

This coffee was first served in the famous Bohemian restaurants of San Francisco where it was brought by Folger. Travelers who discovered it there wrote back for shipments. Thus its fame spread until today two great modern roasting plants are required to supply the demand.

Rarest of Coffees

Ordinarily when you change from one brand of coffee to another, you note little difference in taste. That is because 70% of all coffee sold in the United States today (regardless of brand name) is of one common type grown in the same general region. Hence Nature has given it the same common flavor. So-called "blending" and special roasting processes (in spite of advertising talk) can not change it. For roasting coffee merely brings out whatever flavor Nature has already put in.

It is a different type of coffee that makes Folger flavor different—the rare mountain coffees of Central America. The instant you break the seal of the vacuum can, there is a rush of rich fragrance unlike any coffee you have ever tried before. And when you pour the clear amber liquid in the cup, you'll find it has a rare tang and mellow richness beyond compare.

Testing Coffee Flavor

Get a pound of Folger's Coffee from your grocer today. Drink it tomorrow morning. The next morning drink the coffee you have been using. The third morning drink Folger's again. Then decide which you like best. If, for any reason, you do not choose Folger's, your grocer will gladly refund the full purchase price. We will pay him. That's fair, isn't it? You risk nothing—so why not order Folger's now for the test?

Travel and Art Talks Feature Altrusa Meet

In a private dining room at the Wichita club Tuesday noon, the Altrusans lunched beneath a bower of southern smilax at a table where purple heather, asters, chrysanthemums and gladioli made a lovely centerpiece.

There were 22 present and after the conclusion of luncheon, Mrs. H. F. Weldon first introduced her guests and Mrs. Lillian Kerr made an interesting talk on her work of the past and for the future. Miss Gladys Milligan, also guest of Mrs. Weldon, talked of the art department of the Wichita Falls Academy of Fine Arts.

Miss Frances Brooks introduced Mrs. C. W. Snider, her guest, who spoke for several minutes on a subject that held her hearers' interest, her summer trip in the Canadian Rockies.

They drove, she said, through 500 miles of wheat fields to reach the mountains and she described the $6,000,000 hotel in Banf, from the windows of which they could see the snow tipped mountains and lovely mountain lakes. Lake Louise also was pictured to her hearers; the early morning walk she made around its shores, the lovely mountain shadows.

One feature her hearers particularly noted in the description of Banf, was the terraced lawn with yellow poppies blooming on their slopes, while from the windows of the hotel, so many snow capped peaks could be seen.

Miss Frances Brooks made a brief talk on the ideals of the Altrusans. To help girls find themselves; to help them fit into the proper vocation and give them the proper ideals of life, was the basic thought in her talk.

Those present were Dr. Fleta Woolsey, Misses Florence Watson, Frances Brooks, Eva Wallace, Myrle Neely, Gladys Milligan, Olive Olson, Catherine Henricle, Catherine Walker, Maurine Williams, Lucia Powell, Anna Belle Farquhar, Maude Thomas, Mineola Harding, and Mesdames Kathleen Nelms, Martha Holmes, Lillian Kerr, H. F. Weldon, C. W. Snider, Lillian Harbison and W. M. Cason.

Bread An' Jam

A Daily Illustrated Poem For Children

By Wymond Garthwaite

WHEN COMPANY COMES

When comp'ny comes it seems to me
I'm put to bed too awfully soon.
At times it seems to hardly be
A whole lot more than afternoon.

They laugh and have all kinds of fun,
And I don't think it's fair a bit;
I know there isn't anyone
Who cares because I'm missing it!

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Rarely do two houses stand in such perfect juxtaposition as the Walter Campbell and the Luther Hoffman houses. Two lovely women have created homes therein.

There's a long v-shaped rocky bed up the side of the Hoffman drive that they're filling with every variety of cacti they can find. They have borne blossom and berry and a hedge of spineless cacti is beginning to rise back of that bed. Some of the century plants, Mrs. Campbell brought from the Elizabet Ney home.

We were going around to view Mrs. Hoffman's patio under the chaperonage of Mrs. Campbell, and she remarked, remembering that we had written of lantana, that lantana grew waist high south of San Antonio, blossoming in every rich color. Think of having autumn burst in bloom like that.

That patio! Little Mexican jars in soft streaks of color standing on top of the wall, each holding its own variety of cactus. Swings and chairs and rugs all carrying out the same rich coloring.

Stepping inside where Indian rugs made soft pathways on the floors, the first thing we saw was a batik done by Mrs. Hoffman; in its lovely colorings, the pueblo at Taos is seen.

Later we saw pictures painted by Mrs. Hoffman; colors so lovely they cannot be described. Rocky mountain flowers that showed one sweet faced woman had absorbed in her very soul the bewitching colors of the Rockies.

A little telephone bench sweetly carved. We thought of our telephone table. But we do thank our Heavenly Father that lack of lovely things we love makes us love the lovely things no less.

A dining room with brilliant strings of red peppers hanging from the quaint wall lights. Every feature of Mexican and Spanish color that makes beauty in a home.

Alluring little panels painted into the breakfast room walls and enchanting little panels painted in the bathroom walls.

Then, the door; the great carved door that Mrs. Hoffman carved with her own hands. A replica of an old Toledo door, fifteenth century, we believe she said.

In this twentieth century, there is so much to take a woman's time. When we saw that door and realized the infinite patience it took for one woman to do it, we realized why with all its richness of color, Mrs. Hoffman's home had the feeling of peace as its halo. Patience and peace are almost always twin features in a character and they must be so, with the woman whose friends so lovingly speak of her as "Polly Hoffman."

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Poor papa!

They've got out a new necklace now, saturated with big western front diamonds, running around and hanging down from it. They call it alimony, which certainly is doing damage by suggestion. A husband would stop and think before he'd sink that much money where it didn't draw interest, but if she had enough alimony—she could have it. See?

Something should be done about these people who think up things to crush the life out of papa's purse. But nothing will be because America is a woman's country. Many a girl leaves home and a good husband, for a devil on wheels—with big soft balloon tires. All of this is supposed to spur men on to ambition, to make them work harder to become richer. But nobody knows how many men it drives to remain single, and after all that doesn't work out so sweet for the ladies.

Figuratively speaking women are killing the goose that lays the golden egg. They make him wonder why he takes the trouble to lay so many as long as it's never enough. And never being allowed more than a tenth of one per cent of what he lays, the idea is being born and nurtured, that perhaps, after all, he had better stay single and lay his eggs in a bank. After a goose's feathers are all pulled out who wants him anyway?

The reason Peggy Joyce got so much money, says a man whose money she got, is that she told every man who courted her exactly what it was she wanted. There was no trick about it. She said, "I want money," and they could produce it or pass out of the picture, and Peggy didn't care much which they did.

It was entirely a matter of choice and if they chose to amuse her by laying their golden eggs in her safety deposit box she wasn't the one to stop them.

It's too bad that a man who goes flat handing his money over to the women in his life, has to become such a pessimist. If he had as many ideas as the women, he wouldn't do it in the first place. But knowing it's your own fault doesn't sweeten the bitter cup. In time he finds out what a sap he is.

It was Dr. Holobom who said: "In each human heart are a tiger, a pig, an ass and a nightingale.

"Diversity of character is due to their unequal activity."

Woman's Forum Sponsors Exhibit Of Etchings and Ivory Miniatures

Lawrence Gallery Places Art Works On Display Here

Etching, it is said, is a side of art that is more in demand every day. On the walls of the Woman's Forum clubhouse for the remainder of the week will hang a collection that will be a treat to the art lover and a revelation to the uninitiated. Connoisseurs will find etchings done by artists who are long since gone.

A group of prints made more interesting at this particular time are a number by J. Eisenberg, an instructor in the school of Bazella in Jerusalem. Particularly so, is "The Wailing Wall," where the recent trouble started. His studies of Jewish and Moslem character, as he has translated them in both black and white and in colors, are revelations. There is "a Turk and His Pipe," and "Arab Shepherd," and "Jerusalem From Outside of the Walls," that are particularly fine specimens and one that should be mentioned also in black and white, "An Old Jew," that pictures all the pathos of the race's history.

Albany Haworth, R. A. is known by his wonderful work. Then "The Water Meadow," and "Fisherman on the Thames," by Seymour Haden are exquisite in their lights and shadows.

Henry Zeigler, the cowboy etcher, has distinctively western and cowboy scenes, and has also a portrait of Joseph Pennell, under whom he studied etching.

In a corner of the dining room hangs a group of Louis Iscart's colored etchings, exquisite in tone. Summer and winter, spring and autumn leap from that collection.

Hugard interiors are rich in color: old women gossiping together and one interior showing the toy shipbuilder.

One "Flickering Light," by E. Siemus, will attract a lover of dry point work.

Not only etchings, but exquisite miniatures done on ivory, copies of old masterpieces, show exquisite design. Madame Le Brun, Madame Recamier, the Blue Boy—all of them show on tiny bits of ivory with filagree frames in lovely metals.

The Lawrence Gallery will exhibit also portrait miniatures done to order, perfect in likeliness and in tinting.

Wednesday being the second Hostess day of the forum season, many visitors will be able to take advantage of the exhibition. Everyone is asked to look at the work, whether they wish to give orders or simply enjoy the best in art.

Several times each year, the forum has exhibits hung on the walls to promote love of art and to give one a chance to invest in beauty.

WHAT causes decay? Germs. Germs, with tartar, are also held to be a chief cause of pyorrhea.

Germs on the teeth—and there are millions—are difficult to reach. A dingy, glue-like film holds them in contact with the tooth's enamel.

This film coat gets into crevices and stays. It clings so stubbornly that only a special film-removing tooth paste can remove it satisfactorily. That tooth paste is the scientific formula called Pepsodent. Utterly different from every other, as you notice instantly when it touches your teeth.

No pumice, no harmful grit. No crude abrasive, but a creamy paste so gentle that it is recommended for children's teeth and for tender gums.

Modern Girl Is Well Fitted For Present Day Life

The Modern Girl Differs From Her Old-Fashioned Sister in Just About Every Way Possible, But She Is Equally Well Fitted to the Age Which Produced Her, Declares Dorothy Dix.

A correspondent asks: "How does the modern girl differ from the girl of the past?"

Well, the modern girl differs from the girl of the past as a chignon differs from bobbed hair, as a knee-length scanty differs from a hoop skirt, as holding on to mamma's hand differs from telling mother where she gets off.

Underneath, of course, there is still the same female girl person, but that is about all of her resemblance to the maiden of yesteryear. The modern girl no more thinks and acts like the girl of the past, or has the same ideals and aspirations than she dresses like her.

You can begin with her body, if you like. The old-fashioned girl was a soft creature with curves and dimples. The modern girl is angular and hard as nails, and she would sooner commit the unpardonable sin than be guilty of having an ounce of fat on her bones. The old-fashioned girl seldom took any exercise and spent most of her time lolling around on sofas. The modern girl goes in for athletics and thinks nothing of taking a 10-mile hike and then coming home and dancing three-quarters of the night.

The old-fashioned girl thought it elegant and refined to be frail and delicate. In our great-grandmother's time semi-invalidism was a cult, and perfect ladies swooned at the sight of a mouse, and pined away and died if their lovers proved unfaithful. The modern girl considers it a disgrace to be sickly, and if any of them ever have an ache or a pain they never mention it. It is the women of the older generation who are always discussing their symptoms, and telling all about their major operations. Never the younger generation.

The girl of the past was abysmally ignorant of the world. She was brought up in a sh-sh-sh atmosphere in which every vital fact concerning life was carefully suppressed. She never even had a frank conversation with her own mother, or was warned, except in a general way, of the temptations and dangers she was bound to encounter.

The modern girl is cynical and wise beyond her years, and when she makes a detour of the straight and narrow path it isn't through ignorance, but because she was curious about the scenery along the primrose path. And she is brutally frank. She discusses topics with any casual male acquaintance that her grandmother wouldn't have whispered to her husband, or her physician in the secrecy of her boudoir.

The old-fashioned girl laid much stress upon appearances and was careful of her good name and what the neighbors would say of her. She would have died with horror at the thought of even being suspected of going to improper places, or getting drunk. She wanted to be thought nice and good.

The modern girl seldom has a care for her reputation, and there is nothing she so little desires as to be considered ladylike. "Nice" and "good" are opprobrious epithets in her vocabulary. The highest compliment you can pay her is to call her a good sport, and she boasts of having gotten all lit up at a wild party.

The old-fashioned girl was helpless. She was taught no trade or profession and had no way by which she could earn a dollar. She knew nothing about business, nothing about how to take care of herself. Mother and father treated her as a child until she got married and her husband held her in tutelage the balance of her life.

Practically every modern girl is self-supporting and knows her way about just as well as a boy does. She is free and independent, as are only those who have their own money in their own pocketbooks. She takes care of herself among the men with whom she works all day, and so she sees no reason why she should be chaperoned in the evenings.

The old-fashioned girl had a traditional reverence for her parents and a sentimental affection for her home. The modern girl has no reverence for anything under the sun. She looks her mother and father over with as dispassionate an eye as she would any stranger, and judges them mercilessly. Mostly she thinks that their ideas are obsolete and should be scrapped, and their opinions filed away in a museum of antiquity.

When mother weeps over her, she begs her not to be hysterical, and she shrugs her shoulders at father's flirtations with his pretty stenographer, because one must have thrills, you know.

The modern girl, like the old-fashioned girl, falls in love and wants to get married, but she even goes about that differently. The girl of the past affected indifference. She pretended never to have thought of love until the man popped the question and then she said: "Oh, this is so sudden," and to her surprise discovered that she cherished a deathless passion for her suitor. And she waited for the man to do the pursuing.

Not so with the modern girl. When she sees a young man she fancies, she goes after him and runs him down. She keeps the telephone wires busy making dates. She lets him know at once that he is "it." Not infrequently she does the proposing herself and if he says he can't afford a wife, she offers to keep on with her job.

The old-fashioned girl looked at marriage from a different standpoint from the modern girl. She regarded it as a until-death-do-us-part contract, and if the marriage turned out badly she suffered and was strong.

The modern girl marries with one eye on the divorce court, and if the venture turns out a failure; if she finds that she was mistaken in her feelings, or her husband doesn't make good, she chucks it. She corrects her error of judgment instead of sticking to it.

The old-fashioned girl swallowed up by matrimony, and put up with such treatment as her husband accorded her. The modern young woman annexes domesticity to her career and runs her husband and children with one hand, and her business, or society, or politics with the other. She will not stand for the things her mother did, and if her husband wishes to stay married to her he has to go fifty-fifty.

Such are the differences between the old-fashioned girl and the modern girl. Each had their good points and each fitted the age that produced them.

OLDEST STAGE STATION USED

San Antonio Road Depot Still in Service

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 24. (AP)—Although roads beaten to its door in the past generations have been erased, the oldest stagecoach station surviving in this part of the Southwest is still in service.

Into the scrapheap of the new era have gone the once shining coaches, the rumbling wagons and the smart victorias that 70 years ago beat a trail to the George Von Plehwe stagecoach station on the Boerne road near San Antonio.

The station was born of romance and nourished by necessity. Von Plehwe, so the story goes, courted a lady-in-waiting to the empress of Austria. The courtship was frowned upon by the emperor. And so one day Von Plehwe and his sweetheart eloped into Poland, at that time antagonistic to Austria and forming a refuge for the young Austrian. But a treaty between the two countries enabled the emperor to seek return of his unruly subject.

The fugitive and his bride fled to America. It was in 1850 that Von Plehwe built the first stagecoach station here and established a freighting route from San Antonio to Chihuahua, Mexico.

Built of rock, the several houses that comprise the original settlement remain intact and in use by George Altgelt. Roofs of the buildings are very steep, for the Austrian had lived in a country where heavy snows fell.

On a hillside near the old houses Von Plehwe and his wife and son are buried. The son, Frederick, died without heirs, and the name of Von Plehwe ended, leaving only memories to tell of its romance.

Regarding

ELECTRICAL APPLIANCES

FOR many years this Company was concerned with only one problem—that of delivering dependable and economical electric energy to the home.

Then the electric appliance—of one type and another—began to play a very important part in electric service to the home. This condition brought a further and deeper responsibility to this Company—that of supplying the proper kind of electric appliances to its customers.

An electric appliance for the home should do certain definite things. First it should be efficient; that is, give the most service for the least cost price. Second, it should use the least amount of electric energy in operation, and should stand up for the longest period of service.

It became necessary, then, for this Company to adopt a very rigid policy in the matter of selecting and offering appliances for sale to its customers. So, throughout the years this Company has maintained a testing laboratory through which each appliance must pass with creditable performance before it is offered to our customers.

You can depend absolutely on the appliances which we offer to you through our stores. Each one is the best of its kind. They have been carefully tested for quality, workmanship, economy of operation and are backed by the reputation of this Company, as well as by the manufacturer of the various appliances. Enjoy the fullest use of electric service with the best of electric appliances.

Daily Editorial

FLYING machines have begun to wear their wings in tandem and all early fall fashions display dirigibles in metal sheath gowns.

Aviation has several other surprises on file at Washington, where more than a hundred thousand applications for patents have been received this year.

Genius inspired lots of 'em, but, as usual, irritation and impatience also contributed their wonted share to innovation.

A woman pricks her finger on a safety pin, bends it in a different way, begins to wonder why the manufacturer didn't think of the same simple thing and, presto! an inventor is born.

A plumber, cramped and stifling between floor joists, hopes to goodness that some day there will be a method to eliminate threated joints and elbows at partition junctions, and a pipe that snakes around corners, like electric cable, results from the thought.

A touring automobilist loses his tire rack, puts a cleat on the running board and lashes another spare to the body, then figures it would rest easier with a groove in the fender, and, behold! all recent models have 'em.

The steward on an Austrian sleeping car breaks the cutting blade off his can-opener and, in the emergency, attaches it to a piece of wood, drives a nail at the other end, taps the dingus in a circle, and is a made man.

Mrs. X, weary of lifting the hinged lid of the garbage bucket, forks it open with a stick, and her husband, being one of these handy chaps, adds a foot lever and international kitchens inherit the useful contraption.

John Doe jabs the customary ice pick into a cardboard milk seal. It won't budge. He tears a little flap, gives a tug and one more nuisance is promptly settled.

A CERTAIN antiseptic corrodes metal caps—and soft rubber corks won't stay put. So there's nothing left to do, but contrive a special stopper for the job. Whereupon, convenience is enriched by a vulcanized screw-top with fluted edges, which never slips or sticks.

Anybody with the least gumption might have worked that out. But 99 per cent of humans are blindered Dobbins, jogging through life with their brains between shafts and imagination smothered in a nose-bag.

They contact with Opportunity whenever they seize a monkey-wrench, cooking utensil or fountain pen, and aren't aware they're holding her fore-lock.

Nothing has been finally perfected. Further possibility lurks in every utility.

It may require technical training and elaborate equipment to revise dynamos or revolutionize electrical transformation; but it takes only observation and common sense to simplify ordinary tools or knock a surplus cog out of the machine one habitually operates.

Steam still rises from tea kettles for reflective young James Watts.

The key to a smug fortune is standard equipment with tinned fish. Whoever delivers a sure-fire system to salvage salmon and sardines without risk of cut fingers and infection, may write his own contract or sales orders.

The first brand of self-opening soup or baked beans will swamp the market—there's more money in a wringer-proof shirt button than an alcohol withdrawal license—and a stunt for joining wall-board without showing edge-marks would elect you to the Clover Clover.

If you hanker for private yachts and personal Zeppelins, solve an occasional problem of this sort, and royalties will soon wear paths to your doorstep.

IOWA PARK, Texas, Sept. 24.—Rolland Knox, son of Mayor and Mrs. Earl C. Knox, left Sunday for Chicago where he will enter the medical department of the University of Chicago for a seven-year medical training course.

A poet, with 28 trunks, arrived in New York from Europe the other day. And port authorities didn't even investigate.

None of Our Business

RAMSAY MacDONALD, prime minister of England, will soon be a guest of the United States. He is coming on a mission of supreme importance—an endeavor to insure the permanence of the century of peace that has existed between the two most powerful nations in the world.

Every patriotic American will wish him success. No one with the interests of this country at heart would do anything that might in any way cloud the horizon.

And yet—there is already a murmuring in the air; a murmuring that may, if allowed to proceed, mar the cordiality of our welcome and make the British prime minister the center of an undignified, petty and utterly senseless quarrel.

To listen to this gradually rising muttering, you would imagine that the great question of the hour is not, "Will America and England reach agreement on naval limitation?" but, "Will Ramsay MacDonald drink wine while he is in prohibition America?"

While in Washington Mr. MacDonald will stay at the British embassy. Technically, he will be on British soil. Legally, he will have every right to drink all the wine he cares to.

Why, then, should anyone make a fuss about it?

The question, indeed, would not be worth raising, except for the fact that a great many well meaning people seem to be bothered about it. To some people, evidently, it appears that American prohibition will in some way be mocked if the British prime minister fails to bind himself by its limitations while he is in Washington.

That attitude is not only mistaken; it is stupid and rude.

To begin with, it is none of our business. The British embassy in Washington is not prohibition territory. Mr. MacDonald may do as he likes there; it is no concern of ours.

In addition, we ought to realize that there is no sort of moral obligation resting on the premier to abide by our prohibition law.

When our ambassador to England, General Dawes, reached London, he proceeded very quickly to make it plain that he was not going to observe one of the oldest customs of the British court. He refused, quite bluntly, to wear the knee breeches that years of usage have made the correct garb for formal affairs at court. Instead, he followed the custom of his own country and wore ordinary evening dress.

Similarly, Mr. MacDonald has every right to bring his own customs with him when he visits us; and if those customs include the serving of wine at his meals—well, that is Mr. MacDonald's affair.

The whole business is hardly worth mentioning, if it were not so evident that some ardent prohibitionists seem to feel that a great wrong will be done if Mr. MacDonald does not go "dry" during his stay in Washington.

Such an attitude is utterly senseless, not to say asinine. It simply is not any of our concern.

The Mystery Remains

PROFESSOR C. JUDSON HERRICK of the University of Chicago believes that man is simply a machine that thinks.

After spending years in the study of neurology, Doctor Herrick has concluded that all life—physical, mental and spiritual—is simply a mechanistic process. He has just written a book setting forth his views, and in it he says:

"Mental processes are biological functions of the body in general and of the brain in particular, in just the same sense that circulation of the blood is a function of the heart, or breathing is a function of the lungs. A thought is a manufactured product as truly as a pair of shoes."

The present age is distinguished from all former ages by a number of things; but chiefly, it would seem, it is set apart by the fact that never until now have men been able to conceive of themselves as soulless bits of machinery.

Probably this is only natural. We live in an era that moves by machinery. We are as far removed from the social and economic conditions of a century ago as we are from the builders of the pyramids. It is not surprising that some men should come to look upon human beings themselves as mere glorified bits of mechanism.

It is a mistake, however, to think that one solves any problems by adopting such a theory.

In the old days the contemplative man felt that he had an immortal soul, that he was kin to the majestic spirit of the universe itself, that he was superior to time and change and death; and he knew, therefore, that he was a partaker in a tremendous mystery, and this knowledge gave him a sense of dignity, a feeling of exaltation, a consciousness of nobility.

Today he simply says, "I am a machine. I breathe in clear air and eat certain meats and fruits and vegetables and undergo certain experiences, and out of them I create the finished products of thought and action."

Thus he has an entirely new slant on the universe and his place in it.

But—and this is what is worth noticing—the mystery remains as great as before.

A machine? Very possibly. But what a marvelous one! A machine that can lift itself by its own bootstraps; a machine that can create beauty so compelling and haunting that the beholder, involuntarily, is persuaded of his own immortality; a machine that can be heroic, can suffer hardships for a cause, can sacrifice itself for the sake of other machines—what kind of machine is this, anyway?

The mechanistic explanation may be a very good one. The facts of physiology may support Professor Herrick's theory right up to the hilt. But the mystery is still there, as tremendous as ever. No theory can dispel it. And you may make of it what you please.

Novelettes

The shooting of Danny Ahearn of New York in a Cleveland gang tiff the other day reminds God's Gift To The Columning World that Ahearn was John Gilbert's bodyguard when the pashy cinema favorite was Doing Broadway a year ago. Gilbert, it appears, wanted to see how the inside of the Main Stem worked, its underworld characters, its midnight-to-yawning system, and its so-called wicked tricks.

But Gilbert had heard of its treachery, so taking no risks he arranged to have "One Of The Mob" protect him and his interests. Ahearn was selected because he not only knew the rounds, but had charm, manner, poise and could swap intelligent chatter.

So the team proceeded to this sin-den and that one. The various speakeasies and other colorful spots were frequented and the proprietors, learning the identity of their distinguished patron, "put on the works."

A group of desperate novices, however, seeking a reputation for daring, plotted to kidnap the movie star but bungled things by kidnaping the wrong man—Ahearn, who las locked in a flat and robbed of $3,000 in cash.

When the inexperienced badmen finally discovered their boner two days later they dispatched the $3,000 to Ahearn via special messenger and wrote him a letter of apology.

Among other post-mortems on the Big Tiff swapped across a restaurant table the other 4 o'clock in the morning was this tale. One of Manhatian's better families, hysterical with fear that their only son would have to go to war and die, had him shipped to South America, where he was safe from the draft.

The lad was kept there until two years after peace had been signed and then his influential father spent over two millions to square things at Washington. The son was then instructed to return to New York and the tribe went in their Rolls-Royces to welcome him back.

As he stepped from the pier he slipped on a greasy substance and fell, damaging his vertebrae. The spine trouble that followed has kept him in a sickroom and plaster cast ever since!

The story is similar to the one about another family who, learning that their only boy had enlisted in the navy at the time, implored him to let the head of the house arrange with his powerful friends to have him transferred to a safe spot, the quartermaster division. The boy reluctantly agreed, but once he went to sea he never wrote home and for the duration of the war they could not locate him.

When he finally returned, the lad explained that he served on a munitions ship for over a year, escaped the torpedoes of submarines and all the other horrors coming back sans a scratch.

The same week he was felled by a wild pitch on a baseball lot and died from a fractured skull.

When the New York Globe went to pieces, Robert L. Ripley, the "Believe It Or Not" expert, also faded from the Metropolitan scene, and any of the boys will tell you that the breaks come swifter when you have "New York representation." So Ripley searched for a job here but the huge army of imitators underbid him so low, but pirating his cartoon style so well that editors hired them, and told Rip he was too expensive.

A syndicate, however, took him on after two years had passed, and The New York Post bought his immensely entertaining material for a song. But those two years are practically being forgotten!

Recently the Hearst outfit bagged Ripley at a figure that must have made his competitors' heads swim. Ripley's stuff immediately crashed into 140 newspapers.

And the lads whose consciences never bothered them, as they picked his pockets, are now without portfolio and have returned to driving nails or trucks.

Those of us who get our names in the newspapers every day in the year are not as well known as you think we think we are.

Take Heywood Broun, frixample. Mr. Broun is a renowned essayist and columnist for the New York Telegram. Before his present association he served the World and the Herald Tribune and his pieces have been conspicuously featured in the paper for many years. He is quite a rounder, too, making this port and that one along the Broadway sector and the "mob" know him.

After witnessing the delightful "Sweet Adeline" show with Ruth Hale, his wife, the other performance, the Brouns went back stage to felicitate the star Helen Morgan. Mr. Broun and Miss Morgan, you might say, are pals, having watched the dawn come up like thunder many a night before the night club curfew law, as it is laughingly called, went into effect.

After great bother convincing the stage doorman that he was Heywood Broun, he was admitted back stage and ushered into the star's dressing room, already crowded with admirers.

"Hello, hello, hello!" cried Helen Morgan as she embraced and kissed him passionately, "it's so good to see you again."

"You were marvelous tonight," said Broun, "divine, wonderful, grand! This is my wife, Ruth Hale."

"Oh, you've made me so happy," said Miss Morgan as she stepped out of Mr. Broun's arms, "and I know you'll think me terrible, but what is your name, again?"

Among other tragedies of love is the sour break that came to a well known girl whose five-year romance with a money man abruptly came to an end last week. Unlike the average Broadway gold-digger, she has no intention of taking her heartaches to court to hold up for coin the man who jilted her.

The long affair ended two Mondays ago. On Sunday the lad married another woman and as she was dining in the Central Park Casino the newlyweds ankled in and were placed at the adjoining table. Leo Reisman's Orchestra, innocently enough, added to her pain by playing five "torch' tunes in a row, such as "Can't We Be Friends," "True Blue Lou," "Moanin' Low," "The Man I Love" and "What Is This Thing Called Love?"

A Broadway reporter listened to the story of jilt, and then in his eagerness for a "line" asked her the fellow's name. "Never mind that," she replied, "I don't want to hurt him or his wife."

"Well then," said the Great Gabbo, "who's the gal he married?"

"A girl friend of mine," she answered, "who was always so lonesome that whenever he took me any place I always insisted she come along."

"All Quiet on the Western Front"

By ERICH MARIA REMARQUE

Paul Baumer and his soldier comrades all enlisted in the German army at 18. During their training they were abused and persecuted by a former mail-carrier, now Corporal Himmelstoss. Hating him, they beat him up the last night. Later at the front he appears. One of the privates call him a "dirty hound." He threatens court-martial.

CHAPTER X

Muller hasn't finished yet. He tackles Kropp again.

"Albert, if you were really at home now, what would you do?"

Kropp is conened now and more accommodating:

"How many of us were there in the class exactly?"

We count up: out of 20, seven are dead, four wounded, one in a madhouse. That makes 12 privates.

"Three of them are lieutenants," says Muller. "Do you think they would let Kantorek sit on them?"

We guess not; we wouldn't let ourselves be sat on for that matter.

"What do you mean by the threefold heme in "William Tell?" says Kropp, reminiscently, and roars with laughter.

"What was the purpose of the Poetic League of Gottingen?" asks Muller, suddenly and earnestly.

"How many children had Charles the Bald?" I interrupted gently.

"You'll never make anything of your life, Baumer," croaks Muller.

"When was the Battle of Zana?" Kropp wants to know.

"You lack the studious mind, Kropp, sit down, three minus—" I wink.

"What offices did Lycurgus consider the most important for the state?" asks Muller, pretending to take off his pince-nez.

"Does it go: 'We Germans fear God and none else in the whole world,' or 'We, the Germans, fear God and—'" I submit.

"How many inhabitants has Melbourne?" asks Muller.

"How do you expect to succeed in life if you don't know that?" I ask Albert, hotly.

Which he caps with: "What is meant by cohesion?"

We remember mighty little of all that rubbish. Anyway, it has never been the slightest use to us. At school nobody ever taught us how to light a cigaret in a storm of rain, nor how a fire could be made with wet wood—nor that it is best to stick a bayonet in the belly because there it doesn't get jammed, as it does in the ribs.

Muller says thoughtfully: "What's the use. We'll have to go back and sit on the forms again."

I consider that out of the question. "We might take a special exam."

"That needs preparation. If you do get through, what then? A student's life isn't any better. If you have no money, you have to work like the devil."

"It's a bit better. But it's not all the same, everything they teach you."

Kropp supports me: "How can a man take all that stuff seriously when he's once been out here?"

"Still you must have an occupation of some sort," insists Muller, as though he were Kantorek himself.

Albert cleans his nails with a knife. We are surprised at this delicacy. But it is merely pensiveness. He puts the knife away and continues: "That's just it. Kat and Deltering and Hale will go back to their jobs because they had them already. Himmelstoss too. But we never had any. How will we ever get used to one after this, here?"—he makes a gesture toward the front.

"We'll want a private income, and then we'll be able to live by ourselves in a wood." I say, but at once feel ashamed of this absurd idea.

"But what will really happen when we go back?" wonders Muller, and even he is troubled.

Kropp gives a shrug. "I don't know. Let's get back first, then we'll find out."

We are utterly at a loss. "What could we do?" I ask.

"I don't want to do anything," replies Kropp wearily. "You'll be dead one day, so what does it matter? I don't think we'll ever go back.

"When I think about it, Albert," I say after a while, rolling over on my back, "when I hear the word 'peace time,' it goes to my head; and if it really came, I think I would do some unimaginable thing—something, you know, that it's worth having lain here in the muck for. But I can't even imagine anything. All I do know is that this business about professions and studies and salaries an sod on—it makes me sick, it is and always was disgusting. I don't see anything—I don't see anything at all, Albert."

All at once everything seems to me confused and hopeless.

Kropp feels it too. "It will go pretty hard with us all. But nobody at home seems to worry much about it. Two years of shells and bombs—a man won't peel that off as easy as a sock."

We agree that it's the same for everyone; not only for us here, but everywhere, for everyone who is of our age; to some more, and to others less. It is the common fate of our generation.

Albert expresses it: "The war has ruined us for everything."

He is right. We are not youths any longer. we don't want to take the world by storm. We are fleeing. We fly from ourselves. From our life. We were 18 and had begun to love life and the world; and we had to shoot it to pieces. The first bomb, the first explosion, burst in our hearts. We are cut off from activity, from striving, from progress. We believe in such things no longer, we believe in the war.

The orderly room shows signs of life. Himmelstoss seems to have stirred them up. At the head of the column trots the fat sergeant-major. It is queer that almost all pay sergeant-majors are fat.

Himmelstoss follows him, thirsting for vengeance. His boots gleam in the sun.

We get up.

"Where's Tjaden?" the sergeant puffs.

No one knows, of course. Himmelstoss glowers at us wrathfully. "You know very well. You won't say, that's the fact of the matter. Out with it."

Fatty looks round inquiringly, but Tjaden is not to be seen. He tries another way.

"Tjaden will report at the orderly room in 10 minutes."

Then he steams off with Himmelstoss in his wake.

"I have a feeling that next time we go up wiring I'll be letting a bundle of wire fall on Himmelstoss' leg," said Kropp.

"We'll have quite a lot of jokes with him," laughs Muller.

That is our sole ambition: to knock the conceit out of a postman.

I go into the hut and put Tjaden wise. He disappears.

Then we change our posey and lie down again to play cards. We know how to do that; to play cards, to swear, and to fight. Not much for 20 years;—and yet too much for 20 years.

Half an hour later Himmelstoss is back again. Nobody pays any attention to him. He asks for Tjaden. We shrug our shoulders.

"Then you'd better find him," he persists. "Haven't you been to look for him?"

Kropp lies back in the grass and says: "Have you ever been out here before?"

"That's none of your business," retorts Himmelstoss. "I expect an answer."

"Very good," says Kropp, getting up. "See up there where those little white clouds are. Those are anti-aircraft. We were over there yesterday. Five dead and eight wounded. It was a lot of fun. Next time, when you go up with us, before they die the fellows will come up to you, click their heels, and ask stiffly: 'Please may I go? Please may I hop it? We've been waiting here a long time for someone like you.'"

He sits down again and Himmelstoss disappears like a comet.

"Three days C. B.," Kat conjectures.

"Next time I'll let fly," I say to Albert.

But that is the end. The case comes up for trial in the evening. In the orderly room sits our Lieutenant, Bertinck, and calls us in one after another.

I have to appear as a witness and explain the reason of Tjaden's insubordination.

The story of petty persecution makes an impression. Himmelstoss is recalled and I repeat my statement.

"Is that right?" Bertinck asks Himmelstoss.

He tries to evade the question, but in the end has to confess, for Kropp tells the same story.

"Why didn't some one report the matter, then?" asks Bertinck.

We are silent; he must know himself how much use it is reporting such things in the army. It isn't usual to make complaints in the army. He understands it all right, though, and lectures Himmelstoss, making it plain to him that the front isn't a parade ground. Then comes Tjaden's turn, who gets a long sermon and three days' open arrest. He gives Kropp a wink and one day's open arrest. "It can't be helped," he said to him regretfully. He's a decent fellow.

Open arrest is quite pleasant. The clink was once a fowl-house; there we can visit the prisoners, we know how to manage it. Close arrest would have meant the cellar.

They used to tie us to a tree, but that is forbidden now. In many ways we are treated quite like men.

An hour after Tjaden and Kropp are settled in behind their wire netting we make our way in to them. Tjaden greets us crowing. Then we play skat far into the night. Tjaden wins, of course, the lucky wretch.

Note From Great Britain to U. S. A.—Am thinking seriously of declaring war on you. Have you any objections?

Answer—This is so sudden. Could consider war at this time if urgent but would prefer a later date. Urgently request postponement.

Great Britain to U. S. A.—Would not think of going to war against you without your consent and approval. Always anxious to oblige a friend. Would thirty days' postponement be satisfactory?

Answer—Think we can arrange for war in thirty days. Very kind of you to consider our convenience in matter. Kindly rush specifications stating how many ships you plan to use.

Great Britain to U. S. A.—Talked with admirals this morning. They suggest twelve (12) cruisers of 10,000 tons each, due for retirement 1937; six (6) cruisers of 5,250 tons, due for retirement 1934. Guns to be limited to eight-inch. Is this agreeable to you?

Answer—Prefer to fight you with ten (10) cruisers of 10,000 tons and eight (8) cruisers of 5,250 tons. Eight-inch guns okay. Admirals to wear up to eleven (11) yards of gold braid. Reply at once as Naval Board has golf date.

Great Britain to U. S. A.—Very glad to fight you with ten (10) cruisers of 10,000 tons and eight (8) cruisers of 5,250 tons as you suggest. Eleven (11) yards gold-braid limit satisfactory. How about gold buttons?

Answer—No admiral or rear-admiral to wear in excess of six (6) pounds of gold buttons; binoculars to be limited to three (3) pounds four (4) ounces; no fixing to begin on either side until the other side is ready. Can you let us know time of opening battle? Congress thinks we ought to know.

Great Britain to U. S. A.—How would Saturday, November 9th, at 4 p. m. do for opening battle?

Answer—Can't fight you Saturday, November 9th. Big football game on that date.

Great Britain to U. S. A.—Perhaps Wednesday the 13th will be convenient.

Answer—Date satisfactory but must we get up that early? Admirals all late sleepers. Sorry to bother you as much about details but know you wish to make battle as pleasant as possible.

Great Britain to U. S. A.—On Wednesday the 13th at noon.

Answer—Okay. Many thanks for courtesies and best wishes for a pleasant fight.

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

"He who repents should be forgiven."

The greatest need in our laws and courts today is forgiveness and proper instruction. The object of the courts should be to reclaim and help the offenders, through repentance and forgiveness and proper atonement. The sinner is always pitied by those who think rightly. Let the spirit of Christ reign in our courts and we shall have just cause to be proud of our civilization.

OSAGES TURN CONOCO DOWN

Lease Bid Must Be Raised To $40,000

Special to The Record News.

PAWHUSKA, Okla., Sept. 24.—If the Continental Oil company of Ponca City wants to be given a lease on the southeast quarter of 21-24-7, in the naval reserve pool of western Osage county, it must raise its bid of $37,000, which it made at Friday's Osage Indian oil lease sale to $40,000.

The Osage tribal council, in reviewing the sale, checking up the bonus bids made at the auction, accepted the viewpoint of Paul V. Roundy, a member of the United State geological survey, that $37,000 was insufficient and therefore it would be disapproved. The council appreciates the psychology of having the Continental drill in the Osage nation and in the next breath ordered its officers to notify the Continental that it would be allowed 10 days to raise its bid to $40,000. If the Continental refuses to raise the bid, as its agents did Friday, then the lease will be re-offered at the next sale, scheduled to be held early in the coming year.

The council's action reduced the grand total of the bonuses paid from $417,250, corrected, to $380,250, making it one of the smallest amounts taken in at a sale where such a large percent of the tracts offered were bought.

The decision of the council recalls that Ernest W. Marland, when president of the Marland Oil company, once made a bid at an Osage sale that was rejected and Mr. Marland kept his company out of the Osage for many years as a result of what he then regarded as an affront.

Activity Hums In Coleman County

COLEMAN, Texas, Sept. 24.—The Eastland Oil company pool is experiencing the most active drilling campaign that it has ever had, due largely to the completion of the Gibson & Johnson No. 1 Crowder, which came in Monday afternoon and has been producing at the rate of 2,000 barrels or better every day since. For the 24-hour gauge ending Saturday morning the well produced 2,289 barrels, this being the largest day's production since its completion. However it has produced at the rate of 110 barrels per hour for several one hour periods since its completion. This well topped the pay sand at 1958, was drilled to the depth of 1997. Since that time it has gradually drilled itself in due to pressure. At the present time it is around 2005 feet. There are 21 active wells drilling in the Eastland pool at this time. White Eagle is drilling nine on its J. P. Morris lease. The Eastland Oil company is starting a well on the J. J. Crowder, two locations west of the Gibson & Johnson well and offsetting the Gibson & Johnson 20 acre lease to the west. The Levi Smith 24-acre strip has five drilling wells and two new locations. Gibson & Johnson are drilling the south off-set to their No. 1 and making another location in the northwest corner of their lease. Tower & McKanna are drilling their Nos. 2, 4, 5, and 6. The Mid-West is drilling its No. 5 Keeney located 400 feet south of their No. 3. Most of the new locations have been made since the completion of the Gibson & Johnson well.

There are many operations starting in other parts of the county due to the interest being manifested in the county by many of the larger companies and independent operators.

"They work while you sleep"

Cascara is Good for the System

What do you do when a sluggish system tells you the bowels need a little help?

The best thing yet discovered for the purpose is still the little candy Cascaret! Take one whenever the liver and bowels are not functioning as they should.

Cascarets are pleasing to the palate, and pleasant in their action. You eat them just like candy. They work while you sleep. Gentle, but thorough. Cascarets don't stir-up the stomach or upset the system. But they cleanse the entire thirty feet of bowels in one comfortable, thorough action that leaves the system clean and sweet; leaves you with an untainted breath, uncoated tongue, and clear head.

Cascarets are made of cascara—long regarded one of the most beneficial laxatives known to medical science. They are sweetened with pure cane sugar and flavored with real licorice. Children love them. So do most grown-ups! Why take anything harsh when constipation threatens? Whenever a dull headache, lassitude, or sick stomach with loss of appetite warns you of poor elimination, a Cascaret or two is the most harmless form of help you could give a lagging system.

Take a candy Cascaret tonight and see how fine you'll feel in the morning—and for days after.

CALDWELL TO TAKE MOUND AGAINST STEERS IN OPENER TODAY

TEXANS ARRIVE IN TOP FORM

Glazner May Pitch Against Former Mates

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 24. (AP)—The arrival tonight of the Dallas Steers accompanied by a vociferous delegation of citizens found the Birmingham Barons, Southern league champions, in readiness for their second try at a Dixie series championship within two years.

The Steers were pronounced in top form when the Texas contingent docked at the terminal station shortly after 11 o'clock. Manager Milton Stock pushed his charges off to bed and a good night's sleep before the initial game tomorrow, the result of which it is predicted will have a heavy bearing on the way the series will go.

Johnny Dobbs, the Baronial ace, will depend upon the experience and master mind of Old Ray Caldwell, who has been under every kind of fire known to a moundsman in his 20 years of pitching up from the bush and through the major league, in the initial game.

Opposing Caldwell probably will be Whitey Glazner who will be serving them up to his former mates. Glazner played with the Barons and against them along other league fronts and their every whim is known to him. This will be a big factor in his favor.

Manager Stock also is a Southern leaguer, having gone from the managerial role at Mobile to Dallas this season. Other southern leaguers with Dallas are Country Davis and Joe Martina, New Orleans; Hap Morse, Nashville; Jimmie Moore and George Bischoff, Memphis.

The probable lineups:

Dallas—Faskamper, ss; Rosenthal, rf; R. Moore, lf; Harvel, or J. Moore, cf; Davis, 1b; Bischoff, c; Jefferies, 3b; Morse, 2b; Glazner, pitcher.

Birmingham—Sturdy, 1b; Black, 2b; Clabaugh, rf; Weis, lf; Smith, ss; Bennett, cf; Pickering, 3b; Gibson, c; Caldwell, p.

Cubs Bristle With Pep and Loyalty

CHICAGO, Sept. 24. (AP)—A fighting spirit, inspired by profound loyalty to William Wrigley and Joe McCarthy, pervades the ranks of the bristling Cubs as they start fortifying against the world series assault of Connie Mack's rampant Athletics.

Scouts and sports writers, who have studied baseball teams year in and year out, admit they never before have seen a happier and still determined group of players than the fighters Manager McCarthy will send against Philadelphia.

Indomitable Spirit

"What the Athletics have over the Cubs in actual playing talent, the Cubs will make up for by their indomitable spirit and loyalty," one grizzled diamond scout remarked.

The loyalty Wrigley and McCarthy have engendered has been well earned. Wrigley, who has spent approximately $6,000,000 without a cent in return for his personal bank account in building the Cubs into a championship aggregation, has been exceedingly liberal with his players and McCarthy. His big check book has been open for them most of the time and today there is a report he plans to reward his players with extra coin if they come through for him and defeat the A's for the world title.

Man Clashes With Whole Officialdom

HOUSTON, Sept. 24. (AP)—An employe of a cleaning and pressing establishment at Pasadena, between here and the bayshore, is once more a free man after running afoul of the officers, including the mayor, of his home town.

The man's first trial on an abusive language charge ended when one of the jurors jumped up with an assertion that the verdict would not be in doubt since the constitution guaranteed to every citizen "the right to cuss out any officer, anywhere, anytime."

The justice of the peace dissented vigorously and ordered another trial at which the Pasadena man was acquitted. A charge of intoxication previously had been dropped.

The charges grew out of a fight between the cleaning and pressing employe and Pasadena traffic officers. One of the officers ordered the man to go home and got not only a refusal but a beating for his pains. Another officer came to his companion's assistance and he too was mauled. The mayor rushed up and a sleeve was torn from his shirt. Vile epithets allegedly were hurled at that dignitary during the melee. The man later surrendered to the justice of the peace.

Long gains reeled off by this brace of sophomores indicated that Loyola may be in for a thorough workout Friday night at New Orleans, when the two teams meet.

S. M. U. Coach Abandons Grid Practice at Night

DALLAS, Sept. 24. (AP)—The weak showing of Southern Methodist university against Denton in the opening game last Saturday has convinced Coach Ray Morrison that night practice has no place on the gridiron. Although the Mustang candidates had almost two weeks of practice under the arc lights at Ownby stadium, they apparently derived little benefit. Only a few members of the squad took off any weight. The last two days have seen the Mustangs put over the bumps, and Morrison announced he planned to pour on more work every day until Saturday, when the Howard Payne Yellow Jackets will be encountered here.

MURDER CASE DEFENDANT RETURNED TO EASTLAND

DALLAS, Sept. 24. (AP)—Clyde Thompson, who had been held in the Dallas county jail for several months, was returned to Eastland yesterday to stand trial for the second time in connection with the slaying of two Eastland youths.

Thompson was given the death penalty at his first trial, and was transferred to Dallas for safe keeping. The court of criminal appeals, however, reversed the case and remanded it back to Eastland for a new trial.

The Next Big Fight

The next official party to be thrown in behalf of Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey may decide one of three things, the final answer being up to the fighters.

It may decide that Loughran is well in the lead when it comes to naming a successor to Gene Tunney.

It may decide the same thing for Sharkey.

It may decide that neither is to be considered when it comes to the matter of placing a crown at some future date upon the clammy brow of the next champion.

Both Loughran and Sharkey should dispel the idea that the winner, no matter what else happens, will be the pick of the field. Sharkey was a higher choice before he won from Stribling than he was after he had won from Stribling. That was a fight that set both the winner and the loser back as far as any championship dream was concerned. It is just as well to hammer in the fact that it will be quite important how the winner wins, as well as who the winner is. So far as ring history goes this occasion is a trifle too important in the way of helping to name a new champion to let either man slide by with a close decision plucked from a dull fight. Both have the stuff to put on a big show if they will only take a few of the chances Dempsey used to take—say about 20 per cent of the chances Dempsey used to take. If both refuse to take any such turn at chance there can be little real action, since both know too much to be annoyed to any great extent in a play-it-safe evening. They are two of the best boxers in the game and Loughran is the better boxer of the two. These two have enough to put on a whale of a show if they will put on the full act and make an attempt to prove something much more conclusive than most of the heavyweight fights have been.

Loughran's Claim

Tommy Loughran, one of the best boxers the game has known in many years, has always claimed that he was handicaped by too much weight making to take any chance at harder hitting.

He has his chance now to show what he can do when it comes to a matter of hard hitting. Loughran is smart and all loaded up with scientific skill. He is game enough and he has all the experience any one needs. But he can't tap his way to the top. He ought to be a first class puncher when you consider his build. He has all the muscular development a good puncher needs.

As for Sharkey—well, the Sharkey who fought Wills, Meloney and Dempsey is so far apart from the Sharkey who fought Heeney, Risko and Stribling that no one can tell about him. Two years ago he looked to be a sure bet. It all depends upon his mood for the night.

For example, golf is supposed to be a game depending upon one's mental attitude for the round. With Sharkey every fight is a matter of mental attitude. He either cares a lot or he doesn't care at all.

John McGraw used to say that Tillie Shafer could be as great a ball player or as bad a ball player as he wanted to be. Sharkey can be as great a fighter or as poor a fighter as he wants to be on the night in question. He might have been the man picked to meet Tunney in Chicago. He might have been the man picked to meet Tunney in New York. He has blown two of the biggest chances any fighter has ever known. Whether he will blow a third is anybody's guess, and yours will stand up with any of the experts, for no one can excavate into mental moods and dig up an answer.

Any one can dig up a guess, but a guess isn't always an answer, which any one who plays the races or roulette will tell you. There is quite a difference, here and there, when the time comes to pay off.

Conference Chatter

Dear Sir: Recent incidents in the Western conference make it probable that some time soon the Big Ten will pass a non-transfer rule similar to that of Yale, Harvard and Princeton. Transfer athletes usually cause an undercurrent of gossip that is not healthy for any school, and regardless of their ability are not worth the price. Such a rule may work a hardship in isolated cases but in the long run it would benefit everyone concerned.—SUNSET SLIM.

Dear Sir: Only two new coaches make their appearance in the Big Ten this year. Harry Kipke, the greatest punter since Jim Thorpe, returns to Michigan, as head coach, while Sam Williaman, one of Ohio State's greatest fullbacks, will handle the Buckeyes. Otherwise the same old crew will steer the Mid-Western elevens and the battle of wits between such men as Stagg, Phelan, Hanley and Zuppke promises to be heavy and the carnage great.—ILLINOIS IKE.

L. G. F.—The impending world series is an even-money proposition if there was ever an even-money proposition in sport.

F. T. L.—Shanking in golf is largely a matter of mental tension. So are most other golfing faults. If you are heeling or slicing use your hands and wrists to swing the club head for a while and forget everything else. You won't shank if you use both hands to throw the club head through the ball.

ROCHON TURNS IN LOW SCORE

City Playoff Entrant Makes Round in 85

Mrs. F. C. Rochon took off the highest honors of the woman's city championship go-round Tuesday morning, when, in the championship flight at the Municipal golf links, she turned in a score of 85. It was the lowest score turned in during the two days the play has progressed. She was paired with Mrs. Fred Couper.

The play Wednesday promises to be even more spirited when Mrs. Rochon will play Mrs. R. R. Fisk, medalist in the qualifying rounds played Monday. Mrs. W. E. Millican will play Mrs. W. T. Waggoner as the second championship team.

In addition to Mrs. Rochon's triumph Tuesday, other players in the championship flight exhibited unusual skill. Mrs. Fisk beat Miss Annabelle Couper; Mrs. W. E. Millican beat Mrs. Stanley McGregor; and Mrs. W. T. Waggoner defeated Mrs. J. B. Peacock.

In the class A matches, Mrs. W. P. Bolding defeated Mrs. B. F. Caldwell; and Miss Winnie Mae Giddings defeated Mrs. Roy Carter.

In the championship consolation, Miss Couper will play Mrs. Fred Couper, and Mrs. McGregor will play Mrs. Peacock.

Second Noted Turf Trainer Is Dead

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. (AP)—Samuel Clay Hildreth—"Uncle Sam" to the turf world—is dead, and with the passing of the 68-year-old trainer of Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas stable, thoroughbred racing lost its second famous conditioner of horses within a month.

Hildreth's death, which came today at the Fifth Avenue hospital, after a delicate abdominal operation yesterday, followed that of James Rowe Sr., of Harry Payne Whitney's stable at Saratoga Springs last month.

Sam Hildreth was a unique character on the turf. At five years of age he owned and trained a horse and never thereafter was he separated from the "sport of kings."

Preventing Asthma

In yesterday's article, I pointed out the necessity with the young child of developing a strong chest, especially with those who are born with narrow, tight chests and poorly functioning breathing muscles. The development of a good breathing appartus does not require any complicated exercises or treatments. Any exercise which will make the child breathe deeply will accomplish this purpose.

Those children who are encouraged at an early age to play hard games which require deep breathing will often not need special kinds of breathing exercises. In some cases it is difficult to get a nervous, sensitive, tight chested and mentally over developed type of child to play hard games. Some do not seem to be temperamentally suited for competitive games which require violent exertion, although I believe that the "mental" type of child should be carefully coached into becoming more athletic. It is always possible to force such a child to do deep breathing exercises. If such compulsory training is necessary, a certain time can be set aside each day, perhaps just after school hours, when the mother or nurse in charge can put the child through a series of exercises which will induce deep breathing. If the child has no organic defect, one of the simplest ways to make him do deep breathing is to have him take a short run, sprinting as rapidly as possible. This forces hard breathing, and is bound to develop a flexible chest. For example, have him run once around the block the first few days, and then have him gradually increase the distance and the speed of running so that such exertion always makes him breathe deeply. He should then be made to lie down and relax for a few minutes, continuing the deep breathing which has been started from the exertion. This relaxation period should continue until breathing gradually becomes normal.

This manner of making a child breathe deeply is perhaps more interesting than systematic breathing exercises, but in some cases such regulated exercises are also necessary and sometimes the only ones which should be taken by those children who have any kind of organic heart disorder.

Parents can buy any number of books on physical culture which will show how to take these breathing exercises. The object of all breathing exercises is to inhale and exhale to the fullest extent. To make these breathing exercises more interesting, it is often advisable to have the child do some light calisthenics at the same time. These should be done in different positions, such as when standing and when lying down. You will find that the breathing exercises can be used with almost any kind of calisthenics where the arms are brought from the sides of the body over the head, the air being forcibly inhaled when the arms are raised, and exhaled as the arms return to the sides. These arm exercises assist in raising the ribs upon inhalation and lowering them upon exhalation. Both the chest and diaphragmatic breathing should be practised.

It is needless to say that such exercises are also good for the adult, and the mother will do well to take the exercises with her child, but in this article I am especially urging such exercises for children in order to develop a strong chest and through this make asthma and tuberculosis virtually impossible in the child's later life.

Tomorrow, "Dietary Treatment fro Asthma."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Cold Baths

Question—W. S. asks: "Are cold baths every morning good for a person?"

Answer—Cold baths are very invigorating and help to increase the blood's circulation. Some people who are anemic or nervous cannot take real cold baths with benefit until they have practically recovered from their trouble.

Good Combination

Question—Housewife asks: "Are carrots, string beans and beets a good combination with meat and stewed fruit? If so, is it all right for me to have this combination regularly every day?"

Answer—The combination you ask about is an excellent one, and can be used with benefit at least once a day.

Vaccination

Question—E. R. S. writes: "I know several children who were vaccinated about a year ago. Their arms were not sore, and appeared to be entirely well. The scar left an indention, as usual. Recently, the place has puffed up and formed a hard, knotty pone. The children also complain of their arms being sore. Please tell the public what causes this, and also the remedy."

Answer—The remedy for such a condition as you describe is for the children to be put on a fairly long fast, say 10 days or two weeks. This is the only method I know of for getting rid of such a deep-seated infection. The experience of these children is very common, and comes from the infection from the streptococcus or staphylococcus bacteria, which are always present in the small pox vaccine.

Catarrh and Gargles

Question—M. asks: "Do salt and soda make a good gargle for catarrh?"

Answer—There is no gargle which can be said to be good for catarrh. Remove the cause from inside by changing your diet, and the catarrh on any of your mucous membranes will disappear.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. (AP)—An early advance on unfavorable features in the weather news and relatively steady Liverpool cables was checked by southern selling in cotton market and was followed by reactions. December after selling up to 18.78 early declined to 18.61 or within a point of yesterday's closing quotation, and closed at that figure. The general market closed steady at a net advance of 1 to 5 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 12 to 18 points. There was considerable southern selling attributed to hedging but it was readily absorbed by the initial demand, with the active months selling 17 to 22 points net higher during the early trading. This advance carried the price of October up to 18.39 and March to 19.05 but the southern selling continued and as son as the demand slackened, prices turned easier under realizing or reselling by some of the early buyers.

Offerings increased and the lowest prices of the day were reached in the late trading with October selling at 18.24 and March at 18.87 making declines of about 14 to 18 points from the high prices of the morning.

Closing quotations were at the lowest on most months.

Exports today were 21,808, making 762,198 so far this season. Port receipts 76,241. U. S. port stocks 1,059,124.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 24. (AP)—Although cotton scored a good advance early today it gradually eased and closed at a small net gain. The initial advance of 27 points attracted a large volume of hedge selling. This and liquidation of the October position the first notice day of which will be tomorrow caused prices to ease 25 points.

Liverpool was 11 to 12 points better than due and first trades here showed gains of 20 to 27 points. The opening trades proved to be the highs of the day. Prices soon turned easier owing to hedge selling and by the end of the first hour October traded down to 18.27 and December to 18.57 or 13 points down from the opening highs.

A rally of about 6 points on a storm warning for a tropical hurricane near the Bahamas was short lived and prices made the lows of the day in the late trading with October at 18.15 and December at 18.45 or 25 points down from the highs. January low was 18.58, only 18 points below the highs. October closed at 18.17, December at 18.46 and January at 18.53 or 3 to 4 points net higher.

Continued Professional Selling Sends Stock Market Down Again

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. (US)—Continued professional selling influenced further liquidation and closed the stock market lower again today. Report of probable tax reduction influenced rally in the early hours but most issues moved ahead rather sluggishly so that short selling broke out that quickly depressed the entire list. Steel dropped 10 points from its high to close 5¼ lower for the day while Can lost 5, Radio 3⅞, Anaconda 2⅞ and other standard industrials from 2 to 4 points. American & Foreign Power dropped 6½ points, American Telephone 3½, General Electric 5, Consolidated Gas 5, Westinghouse 4⅝ and Public Service of New Jersey 4¾. Simmons moved steadily forward against the main price trend to close 3¼ points higher. American Seaboard gained over a point due to expectation of highly favorable announcement in the near future while other oils turned irregular. Railroads slumped with industrials. Call money was held at 8 per cent and appeared in good supply. Turnover remained around the 4,000,000 share level.

Announcement of the Electric Bond & Share and Electric investors merger influenced even greater interest in the utilities. North American also gave rights for new stock, which are of value to shareholders, in connection with its expansion plans. Continued absorption of Consolidated Gas was noticeable and there was indication that the Mellon group in Brooklyn Union are showing more desire to get in the Consolidated Gas fold. While no immediate announcement may be made it begins to appear that this merger is nearer than it was. That Brooklyn Union would go in with Consolidated and Brooklyn Edison has been considered inevitable. When the combination is formed it is believed that it will be on an exchange of stock basis. United Corporation, United Gas Improvement and others are mentioned also in current merger rumors.

Best kind of absorption continued to be noted in American International. In addition to other holdings it was understood that corporation might take an interest in Cities Service. Buying of that stock was based on expectation of announcement of special development in the not distant future. Anaconda benefited early in the day from the widespread expectation that the dividend would be increased to an $8 annual basis at meeting Thursday. It is a matter of wonder, however, why the controlling interests should decide to increase payment at this time when active people in the copper trade are none too sure of the outlook for the price of the metal. If dividend were increased in might help influence copper consumers to place orders for the metal. Or it might be of some help in repairing damage done by the late lamented pool operation.

Professionals who recently were concentrating a good deal of pressure, on Steel and Radio have turned to Chrysler. There was busy circulation of bear tips, such as reports of stock hanging over the market, etc. With Ford running well ahead but other manufacturers behind last year's showing there is little inducement to buy the motors but Chrysler is in as good position as any. With earnings running at a rate that indicates $6 a share this year Chrysler has reached a level where insiders are showing more interest in the market for the stock. American Ice directors, it was rumored, would increase the regular dividend basis at meeting Friday.

The better feeling influenced by Washington advices telling of treasury recommendation of reduction in corporate taxes was wiped out when Steel turned weak again in the afternoon. Steel is harboring the largest short interest in several months. Insiders keep closest touch with the market so are not unaware of its strong technical position.

At the same time they are confident of continued improvement in earnings. The failure of the bankers to support the stock, therefore, causes belief they are unfriendly to the market as a whole for the time being. Until Steel indicates its bankers are of a more bullish mood the entire market will feel the effect.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 24. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Moderate receipts of cattle around the 11-market circuit offset the depressing influence of a slow dressed beef trade today. Demand for fed steers and yearlings was fairly broad at firm to higher prices and generally steady values were maintained on western grass steers. Chicago scored $16.35 on light and medium weight steers while choice heavy Missouri fed steers on the Kansas City market made $15.35. Good to choice stockers of light weight commanded a 50c to $1.00 premium over comparable grades of medium weight feeders. Aggregate receipts were estimated at 48,700, a shortage of 10,500 from last Tuesday and a slight decrease from a year ago.

Light and medium weight hogs opened slow at steady to 15c lower rate and on the windup were off 10c to 25c. The day's extreme top of $11.20 was paid in Chicago. Total offerings were around 82,900 against 73,701 a week ago and 94,072 the same day last year.

The sheep suppy approximated 73,600, a decrease of 7,000 from a week ago and 39,700 short of a year ago. Fat lambs were unevenly steady to 25c higher. Closely sorted native lambs brought $13.75 at Chicago.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 24. (AP)—Notwithstanding Canadian reports of blizzard conditions wheat today dropped to a new low price record for the season. The world's available supplies of wheat showed a 21,521,000-bushel increase for the week and Buenos Aires reported good rains that would greatly improve the Argentine crop prospect.

Closing quotations were shakey, 1¼c to 1⅞c a bushel below yesterday. Oats unchanged to ⅜c off, and provisions varying from 10c decline to an equal advance.

The final sinking spell came after a rally based on advices that two feet of snow had fallen in the Peace river district of Alberta province, Canada. Heavy selling to realize profits developed. After the bulge, however, the downward swing of the market was given additional impetus by Winnipeg dispatches saying 50 per cent of Canada's surplus from this year's crop had already been removed from the farms, and that the bulk of Canadian wheat would be delivered within 15 days.

Corn gave way with wheat and favorable weather over the corn belt. Oats displayed relative firmness, receipts of oats being scanty.

Nearby deliveries of lard reached a new low price record for the season. Tired holders of lard were sellers, influenced by downturns of the value of hogs.

Hollis Revival Is Attracting Interest

Special to The Record News.

HOLLIS, Okla., Sept. 24.—The Baptist revival, which started Sept. 15 at the Hollis Baptist church, is progressing in fine shape, according to statements of those who are attending regularly and taking an interest in making it go.

Rev. O. K. Webb, pastor of the church, is doing the preaching. The singing is under the direction of Mr. Riddle.

Growth in Value

ECONOMISTS have proved that properly selected common stocks in basic American industries, if held over a period of years, will, on balance, advance in dividends and market value. For every dollar paid in dividends, the companies behind Diversified Trustee Shares, Series B, regularly invest about 75 cents in the business. These reinvested earnings add to the wealth of the companies and to their potential earnings and dividends in future.

RECEIPTS OF POULTRY DROP

Egg Supply Also Fails to Meet Sharp Demand

Market decreases in deliveries of chickens to local poultry dealers during the last few days were reported Tuesday, with much of the shortage attributed to the rapidly increasing numbers of cotton pickers moving into the Northwest Texas territory.

With farmers of the district assuming the task of boarding numerous cotton hands, it was said, the almost complete cessation of chicken and egg sales is an annual phenomenon. Such items constitute the principal and most economic food supply for the emergency, it was said, and in communities where a large quantity of poultry and eggs moves regularly to the market throughout the remainder of the year, the transfers are often reversed during cotton picking season. In the neighborhood of Memphis, last year, farmers purchased large numbers of eggs from produce houses, it was said.

Efforts already have been taken by some turkey raisers in this section, officials of Armour creameries stated Tuesday, to offset by careful feeding the damaging effects of the preshent year's scanty provision of feed for range turkeys. Faced by the possible shortage of 25 to 35 per cent, in comparison with normal weight at fall marketing time, different growers have taken steps to feed their flocks intensively during the coming four or five weeks.

A carload of dressed chickens will probably leave the Armour creameries plant Wednesday night, it was stated Tuesday, representing their first carlot shipment this week.

More than 3,000 baby chicks have been taken from the incubators at the M. Johnson Poultry ranch this week, it was announced Tuesday. There are still in incubation approximately 47,000 eggs, these being in one of the three huge incubators of 47,000 capacity each. These eggs will be hatched at the rate of about 8,000 per week, it was said, and the entire lot of baby chicks represented by this series of hatchings already has been sold.

On the basis of present conditions in the poultry industry, it was said, the Johnson ranch expects the year which opens in December to be the greatest in its history. Preparations are being made there to provide the largest output of chicks ever produced here. The shipping season runs from December to July.

Practically all eggs now being sold at the Johnson ranch are from pullets, and are totalling from 360 to 450 dozen daily. There is a ready sale for every egg that can be spared, it was said, without supplying the demand.

Cotton ginnings for Wichita county passed beyond the 3200 bale mark Tuesday with the accumulated results from Kemp City reported after three days of broken communications. During the last four days the Kemp City gin has turned out 138 bales, to bring its total of 506. Cottonseed is now selling at $31 per ton at all points except Kemp City, where the price is $29. Wichita Falls' total ginnings Tuesday were 45 bales, without a report from the Jamieson gin.

NEW HIDALGO SCANDAL AIRED

Misuse of $3,000,000 Flood Fund Charged

AUSTIN, Sept. 24. (INS)—Charges of the Hidalgo County Good Government league alleging misuse of a $3,000,000 county flood control fund will be investigated by the attorney general as soon as that official is appointed, Gov. Dan Moody said today.

The attorney general's office has been vacant for several days following the resignation of Claude Pollard. The governor said an appointee to the office probably would be named late today.

A communication from the good government league urged that either a special session of the legislature be called to investigate the flood control fund administration, or that an attorney general be appointed immediately so that he might inquire into it.

Otis Rogers Sees Brighter Future

FORT WORTH, Sept. 24. (UP)—Otis Rogers expressed pleasure today over the action of the district court at Georgetown in dismissing the charge of arson against his wife Rebecca Bradley Rogers.

"I am glad that the charge was dismissed," Otis said today. "Now the future will be brighter."

The charge grew out of the burning of a building at Round Rock in September 1926. The state charged that Becky fired the building so as to detract the attention of townspeople in order that she might rob a bank.

A charge of robbery with firearms still remains against Becky in connection with the holdup of the Farmers National bank at Buda several months after the Round Rock incident. Becky has been tried three times on the charge.

ROAD SIGN MEET CALLED

Realtors to Help C.-C. Place Highway Boards

The advertising committee of the Wichita Falls Real Estate board was requested at the weekly meeting of that organization Tuesday noon at the Kemp hotel to meet soon with the chamber of commerce directors to consider the proposed erection of roadsigns advertising Wichita Falls on highways in this section.

Two plans were discussed Tuesday by the realtors, one of which proposed to include the cost of providing such signs in the chamber of commerce budget, the other anticipating the erection of large signs by different concerns here who would include their names in the municipal advertising placed on the boards.

Preference was expressed by the members present for the former plan, and Hubert M. Harrison, general manager of the chamber of commerce, expressed his assurance that the board of directors would be willing to cooperate in such a program.

Today — At the Theaters
By W. L. UNDERWOOD

MAJESTIC: "The Greene Murder Case." Multiple murders as the subject of a well-photographed problem play. Vitaphone vaudeville act. Talking comedy. Paramount sound news.
STRAND: Adolphe Menjou in "Fashions in Love." What is love? Mack Sennett talking comedy. Movietone vaudeville. Movietone news.
OLYMPIC: Milton Sills in "Love and the Devil." Educational comedy. Sportlight novelty. Lillian Murry and company on stage.
GEM: Colleen Moore in "Why Be Good?" Comedy.

Even overseas veterans of the late world war are among those who have remarked the striking resemblance between E. H. Calvert, who plays the district attorney in "The Greene Murder Case," and General John J. Pershing. Comparisons, in this case, appear not to be odious, at least to Mr. Calvert, who admits being photographed with the A.E.F. commander at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., in 1919, at the insistence of fellow-officers who made much of the confusing likeness. In that instance, it is reported, Mr. Calvert was persuaded to assume the smile of an overseas commander while General Pershing affected the serious mien of a captain "stuck" in a training camp on this side. With that exchange of dispositions, the photograph of the pair was said to offer a problem even for the astute Philo Vance—who is by way of being the screen's best detective. Mr. Calvert's pedigree records his graduation from West Point in 1885, one year ahead of his more famous prototype.

Still ruminating on the growing complaint that talking is out of place in screen drama, and that it will soon be expurgated as a detriment to art, the gradual development of auxiliary music with motion pictures has an interesting little history of its own. The first movies were, to all intents and purposes, silent except for the whirring of hand-cranked projecting machines and the flapping of loose film-ends. But not for long.

The nickelodeon soon appeared. The term implied not only the admission charge per head, but the canned music with which the inmates would be roused to deeper appreciation of those first triumphs in screen art. Whether the idea came from the studios, where plaintive or roisterous music, as the case demanded, was used to bring the actor's emotions visibly to the surface; or from the theater owner's wish to fill in those disconcerting intermissions for changes of reels, is problematical and unimportant. The nickel slipped right on through from the box office, figuratively speaking, to keep up an enervating whang-whang from the old piano down in the pit.

When the industry began to look up with a growing sense of self-respect, the better movie houses put the paper rolls back in the store-room and hired one of the town's popular pianists to supply a more elite quality of instrumental accompaniment. Those who had more dramatic musicianship than the mere knack of "putting in" on popular melodies worked out a considerable degree of aptitude in making the music fit. The greater emotional possibilities of the pipe organ soon brought such instruments into general use, and prepared cue-sheets were developed for the leading productions.

The fairyland against whose destruction orchestral musicians are now fighting in Belgium (the fight's finished here, for the time being) was inaugurated by D. W. Griffith when he had prepared a complete orchestral score for "The Birth of a Nation." Following the universal success of that production, many films were accompanied by such musical scores, requiring for large city houses the constant employment of orchestras, many of which assumed the proportions of small symphonies.

To all of this, the public seems to have taken very kindly. Even to return to canned music in the form of synchronized-sound films, though this is under protest. Nevertheless, instrumental music furnished through records for the creation of emotional receptivity remains in its field, and will probably retain at least the same measure of favor as we accord the phonograph and radio. If a few notes in the score fail to record clearly, we shall not be keenly aware of it. But with screen-speech, well, that's a different matter. Talk has been substituted for motion, and when the talk is muffled and is inaudible, it puts a hair in the biscuit.

Science Saves Him

SEATTLE.—Elementary sciences saved the lives of the skipper of an ice-bound steamer in an Alaskan lake recently. Knowing that black absorbs the rum's rays and holds the heat caused the captain to swab a long strip of refuse oil and lamp black, 40 feet wide, across the frozen lake. In a short time the ice softened enough to enable him to plow through it.

Motor Plays Violin

PARIS.—Two French engineers have perfected a mechanical violin which plays without human aid. It has a number of keys which press the strings like the left hand of a player. A revolving bow, driven by a motor, scrapes the strings to produce the various tones. Two motors are employed in the operation, one to imitate the motion of the arm and the other the swift movement of the wrist.

Before and After Childbirth
"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my first baby was born and I am taking it now for my weakened condition after the birth of my second boy. Although I never have put on any flesh I am feeling good now and the Vegetable Compound has helped me in every way. It is surely a wonderful medicine and I will be glad to answer letters for I recommend it highly."—Mrs. Fred W. Davey, Madison, Kansas.
