

LULAC settlement taken to Supreme Court

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Three persons challenging a controversial provision of a voting rights lawsuit settlement between the city of Big Spring and an Hispanic political group have taken their case to the Supreme Court of Texas.

A request to file a petition against an extension of terms granted three Big Spring City Council members was registered Wednesday with the Supreme Court in Austin, according to local attorney Wayne Burns.

Burns, representing Jack Watkins, Mary Thomas and Bill Chrane, filed a motion for leave to file a petition for writ of mandamus.

Burns said that the motion for leave is a request to the Supreme Court to hear the case.

The petition, which challenges an agreement reached by the city last August with the League of United Latin American Citizens, was denied in the Eastland state court of appeals Monday afternoon.

Burns said, "It is my understanding that the Supreme Court will decide on Tuesday whether or not to permit me to file a petition."

He said, "The Supreme Court has requested the city file an answer (to the petition) not later than 10:30 a.m. Tuesday." In its response, the city may outline the reasons it believes the Supreme Court should not accept the case, Burns said.

"Yes, we do intend to respond to the court," City Manager Don Davis said this morning.

He said he talked with the court this week and was told to send a letter explaining the city's side of the controversy.

Q. Is the Post Office planning to expand their customer parking lot?

A. According to a Post Office supervisor, Jess Crane, the parking lot is supposed to be expanded. The grassy area will be paved, and will become a parking lot for the Agricultural Soil and Conservation Service office employees, freeing their old spaces for customers. However, post office employees do not know when the expansion will take place because the U.S. Government Services Administration is in charge of the project.

USSR's Yuri Andropov dies

MOSCOW (AP) — President Yuri V. Andropov died Thursday at age 69, the Soviet Union announced today. He led the Communist Party for 15 months, ailing and out of public view the final six months of his leadership.

The announcement of his death ended months of reports that he was seriously ill with kidney and heart problems and suffering from diabetes. He had not been seen in public since Aug. 18, when he met with nine U.S. Democratic senators.

The Kremlin withheld announcement of his death for nearly 24 hours, and there was no word on a possible successor.

But if the Kremlin rulers decide to turn over the reins of power to a younger generation, the names most frequently mentioned are Grigory V. Romanov, 61, and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, 52.

Andropov's death was announced at 2:20 p.m. (6:20 a.m. EST) by the official Soviet news agency Tass, on its English-language wire. Tass said he died Thursday, but did not give a cause of death.

The only official comment on Andropov's health came when he missed the early November parade through Red Square. Officials said then he was suffering from a cold.

Andropov's brief tenure was marked by a deterioration of relations with the United States and the rupture of talks between the superpowers on limiting both strategic and medium range nuclear weapons. Relations were subject to additional strain on Sept. 1, 1983 when the Soviet Union shot down a South Korean jetliner with the loss of 269 lives.

Andropov, former head of the KGB secret police for 15 years, took the leadership of the nation of 280 million people after the death of President Leonid I. Brezhnev on Nov. 9, 1982. Brezhnev led the country for 18 years.

He started a campaign to crack down on corruption and enhance labor discipline and had placed his proteges in many key positions of the Soviet hierarchy.

Although Andropov was known to be ailing, the Kremlin issued a series of statements and speeches bearing his name and officials continued to insist until the end that he was functioning and making decisions.

The Soviet people heard the news when a black-suited announcer read the death announcement slowly and

World reaction varies

By the Associated Press

Mournful music filled East European airwaves today, and Western leaders speculated uncertainly about the future of East-West relations as news spread of the death of Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov.

In Warsaw's streets, ordinary Poles smiled at word of the passing of the Kremlin chief, whom many associate with the suppression of their Solidarity labor movement.

"We heard the news, and rushed to the liquor store to buy this brandy," joked one of a group of four young Poles, brandishing bottles of cherry brandy and chatting mirthfully.

At Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, the news seemed to stun Soviet athletes competing in the Winter Olympics. Some expressed disbelief.

"If our government hasn't told us, then it's a rumor," said a woman from Kiev, who apparently had not yet heard of the official Soviet announcement.

Three incumbents on the Howard County Junior College District board and a Big Spring Independent School District trustee filed this week for re-election to their boards.

Incumbents filing for the HCJCD board were James (Buddy) Barr, Dr. Charles O. Warren and Donald B. McKinney.

Filing for re-election on the BSISD board was Dewayne Fraser. Residents of the BSISD will elect trustees from single-member districts 1 and 3 this year. Fraser filed as candidate for District 3.

Fraser, 37, is seeking his second term of office.

College district trustees are elected for six-year terms. All three places on the board will be filled with at-large candidates this year.

Barr, a farmer and rancher in the Vincent community and a lifelong Howard County resident, was appointed a trustee in March 1975 to fill an unexpired term of Dorothy Garrett. He was elected to a full term in 1978.

Barr is a member of the board of the Coahoma State Bank and is chairman of the board for the Lamesa Federal Land Bank Association.

Warren has served the HCJCD trustees for 20 years and is a former HC student and athlete. He is a lifelong Howard County resident and owns his own dentistry practice.

Warren is a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin and received his medical degree in 1961 from the University of Texas Dental Branch in Houston.

Warren has served on the YMCA board of directors. He is a member of the Texas and American Dental Associations and past president of the Permian Basin District Dental Association.

McKinney has been a member of the HCJCD board the past 11 years. He is a lifelong resident of Howard County and lives on a farm in the Center Point community.

In addition to farming, McKinney is electrical foreman at Cosden Oil & Chemical Refinery. He attended Howard College and served in the Army Air Corps in World War II.

Mock case

MAKING A CASE — Howard County Attorney Bob Miller and Elies Hernandez of the Midland Sheriff's office look over evidence in the fictional murder of Mary Thomas as other law officers look on. The officers presented evidence they gathered in the mock case to Miller for his approval and criticism.

The victim was Mary Turner, a 32-year-old female who was found face up in a pool of blood at the Ocean Plaza Motel at 2100 Peach Street.

"Shaffer Ambulance transported the victim to Malone-Hogan Hospital, where she was pronounced dead on arrival," said the police report.

Has a murder been committed in Big Spring? Is violent crime on the increase?

No, these were the facts in a mock crime presented this week to 24 area law enforcement officers in a series of crime scene search seminars offered by the Big Spring Police Department.

Law officers from Jones County, Ector County, Midland County, Odessa, Brownwood and Big Spring took part in the seminars, which began Monday. Police Chief Rick Turner gave the officers certificates of completion after they finished the course yesterday.

The cops received classroom instruction in searching the scene of a crime, said Big Spring Police Lt. Dave Spilman, coordinator for the classes. The policemen learned how to recognize evidence, lift fingerprints, make plaster casts of footprints, interview witnesses and interrogate suspects, among other topics, Spilman said.

The officers then put this learning to use by searching a mock crime scene that had been set up by course instructors, he said.

The murder of Mary Turner was the mock crime the officers investigated.

The officers had to locate the evidence and mark it, request various tests be made on the evidence and get statements from witnesses and suspects, he said.

Finally, they had to solve the case and get a confession, Spilman said.

On the last day of the classes, the officers presented their information to County Attorney Bob Miller, who donated his time to the policemen so they could get a feeling of discussing a case with a prosecuting attorney.

Malone-Hogan Hospital pathologist Dr. Robert Rember gave the officers instruction on police autopsies with a series of slides, Spilman said.

Curriculum standards revamped

Harte-Hanks News Service

AUSTIN — After considering more than 100 changes in seven hours, State Board members Thursday overwhelmingly approved new curriculum standards increasing the number of math, science and English units required for all high school students.

Commissioner of Education Raymon Bynum said the "biggest single factor" of the new proposals is the addition of a fourth year of English and another year of science.

A board vote scheduled for Saturday on Thursday's committee-of-the-whole action is expected to be a formality. But further changes may be made in the curriculum guidelines before its final and third reading in March.

The new curriculum also would divide the high school course of study into academic and general programs. New guidelines will begin to go into effect next fall under the plan approved Thursday.

The number of credits that should be required for graduation split the board down the middle.

"We never came to agreement on whether we should require the same number of units for all students graduating from high school," said Mary Helen Berlanga of Corpus Christi, one of the few board members to vote against the final package.

"I'd like to see one plan for all students. I think we are creating an elitist group versus a sub-class group. There will be a certain amount of stigma attached to general students," Mrs. Berlanga said.

The board twice narrowly defeated proposals to make the number of requirements for graduation equal under both programs. The last vote went down 13-13.

Amendments to allow greater flexibility in the proposed advanced academic program for Texas high schoolers received a frosty reception.

The board's rules committee will discuss the absence policy Friday. A new policy is scheduled to receive final approval in April.

Politburo searched for Andropov's successor

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin will name Yuri V. Andropov's successor from among the 12 members of the Politburo, and two men, Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Grigory V. Romanov, are seen as strong contenders unless a transition leadership emerges.

There are many wild cards in the stakes, with older and powerful men expected to have much to say about the decision. It may already have been made — as Andropov lay on his deathbed, or during the 22 hours between his death and the official Communist Party announcement carried by the official Tass news agency.

There are certain to be clues forthcoming about who will succeed Andropov, but the choice won't be official until it is ratified by a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee. No meeting has yet been announced.

Gorbachev, 52, and Romanov, 61, are the youngest of the most powerful full, or voting, members of the Politburo, and many Western analysts and diplomats expect the Soviets to choose a younger man this time as general secretary of the Communist Party.

Andropov, who died on Thursday at the age of 69, was in ill health from the beginning of his tenure and lived less than 15 months after assuming the post.

Gorbachev and Romanov also are among the three Politburo members who are members of the Communist Party Secretariat, along with the 72-year-old Konstantin U. Chernenko.

The last three party leaders — Andropov, Leonid I. Brezhnev and Nikita S. Khrushchev — were party secretaries before they assumed leadership.

Some Westerners see Gorbachev as having a slight edge on Romanov, in that he has been in Moscow longer. Romanov was party chief in Leningrad until last year. The Leningrad post is an important one, but also is considered outside the Moscow clique.

Malcolm Toon, former U.S. ambassador to Moscow, told ABC Morning News that he expected no significant changes to result from Andropov's death.

GRIGORY ROMANOV

MIKHAIL GORBACHEV

GEIDAR ALIEV

KONSTANTIN CHERNENKO

"I think we're going to be dealing with the same sort of person we've seen in the leadership over the past four or five years, an old man, a member of the older generation," Toon said. "Probably somebody moving in there on a transitional basis and not any basic change in policies or behavior for a long time to come."

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger noted on ABC's "Good Morning America" that most of the Politburo members are in the 75-year age group. "If they pick another 75-year-old, then they have by definition another interim arrangement. But if they pick a younger one, the octogenarians know that they're not going to last long in office," he said.

Although both Romanov and Gorbachev have been involved in foreign affairs, Gorbachev has been given a more prominent role in internal party matters.

He supervised the start of the 1983-84 party elections, presided over the Leningrad Party meeting that picked Romanov's successor and nominated Vitaly I. Vorotnikov to become premier of the Russian Federation last year.

Many Western diplomats say Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov is the most powerful man in the Politburo. He is said to have been instrumental in Andropov's succession, and to have run the Politburo day-to-day when Andropov's health was at its worst.

But Ustinov is 75, and some reports say his health is not good. Still, along with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, 74, Ustinov is one of the veteran Politburo members who will play a role in choosing a successor.

Chernenko, as party ideologist, is certain to have influence, but he is aging and took a lesser role under Andropov.

Mikhail S. Solomentsev, 70, the former Russian Federation premier who now heads the powerful party discipline body, was elevated to full membership on the Politburo at the December, 1983, party meeting.

The appointment of such a caretaker leadership only if the Soviets decide on a caretaker leadership while a younger man is groomed for the job.

"Ustinov, Chernenko and the other older men will have a role to play in this, but it won't be as general secretary," predicted a Western diplomat who closely follows Kremlin affairs. "If there is anything the party should have learned in the last two years it is not to have an aging and ailing leader."

Politburo member Geidar Aliev, 60, has risen to new prominence under Andropov after demonstrating his abilities as an administrator by reviving the railroad industry. However, Aliev's Moslem heritage and Azerbaidjani nationality are seen as serious handicaps.

Another young Politburo member who was considered a favorite of Andropov is Vorotnikov, 57, who was elevated to full Politburo membership last December. But analysts believe Vorotnikov is too new on the Politburo to be picked for the top job, and he is not a member of the secretariat.

The other full members of the politburo are: —Viktor V. Grishin, 69, the Moscow city party chief and a full member of the Politburo since 1971. He failed to improve his position visibly under Andropov.

—Dinmukhamed A. Kunaev, a Kazakh by nationality and head of the far-flung Kazakhstan party. The 71-year-old Kunaev is seen as being too removed from Moscow politics to make a run for the party leadership.

—Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky, 65, the Ukrainian party boss who has specialized in party politics and ideology. He was considered to have been a Brezhnev man and has not taken a strong public role under Andropov.

—Nikolai A. Tikhonov, 78, is the premier of the Soviet Union and is not seen as a contender to succeed Andropov.

solely on Soviet television. He said:

"The Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, the Presidium of the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers with deep sorrow inform the party and the entire Soviet people that Yuri Vladimirovich Andropov, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, president of the Presidium of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet, died after a long illness at 16 hours 50 minutes on Feb. 9, 1984.

"The name of Yuri Vladimirovich Andropov, an outstanding leader of the Communist Party and of the Soviet state, a staunch fighter for the ideals of Communism and for peace, will always remain in the hearts of the Soviet people of the whole progressive humanity."

The same report followed shortly afterward on the Russian language Tass wire and Soviet television showed a photograph of the Kremlin, interrupting its nouncement in Moscow.

Soviet and Yugoslav flags at the Olympic Village were lowered to half-staff to mark the Soviet president's death. Soviet athletes continued to compete in their scheduled events.

The news was first announced in Brussels, by French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson, at a gathering of European Common Market and Third World ministers in the Belgian capital. Cheysson, the meeting's chairman, interrupted the conference briefly this morning for "an important announcement."

"Yuri Andropov is dead. The party leader of one of the greatest nations of the world has passed away. This is an important fact," he said. Expressions of condolence — and programming. There was no announcement of funeral plans.

On Friday morning — which dawned with the first steady snowfall in Moscow in weeks — Soviet radio and television abandoned most scheduled programming and played classical music, often a sign that a prominent figure has died.

Because of the mixture of classical music, documentary films, and winter Olympics programming on Soviet TV, there had been some speculation that a figure less prominent than Andropov had died.

But the apparently abrupt return to Moscow of Igor Andropov, the president's son and a member of the Soviet delegation at the East-West disarmament conference in Stockholm, and the increasing timbre of music, made it evident that the Soviet Union was preparing to announce the death of its leader.

There also was no immediate announcement of a successor among the 12 surviving members of the ruling Politburo. After the death of Brezhnev, it took two days to announce a new party chief, although Andropov quickly emerged as the leading contender.

Two of the most prominent members of the ruling body are Romanov, the former Leningrad party boss who was brought to Moscow by Andropov, and Gorbachev, who has assumed more influence under Andropov and was said to have been his liaison to the Politburo in Andropov's final months.

Dmitri F. Ustinov, the defense minister, was said to be the most powerful member on the Politburo after Andropov, but he is 75 years old and perhaps ill himself. It appeared certain that another veteran party member, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, 74, would also play a key role in naming a successor.

"an opening" in Moscow that would lead to a resumption of the East-West dialogue.

The center-right Dutch government of Premier Ruud Lubbers issued a statement saying the Soviet Union had made no real change in its "well-known" foreign policy positions under Andropov.

"We must not lose hope that the new Moscow leadership will assume a constructive stance in the international dialogue in search of solutions for the great problems the world is now faced with, and will thus give substance to recent indications from the Soviets indicating the need for such a dialogue," it said.

Official days of mourning are expected to be declared throughout the East bloc.

BSISD eyes tax delinquents

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Delinquent taxes, a renewal of contracts and a tour of the high school athletic training room kept Big Spring Independent School District trustees busy Thursday during their regular meeting.

Residents delinquent on their school taxes are facing a 7 percent penalty in February and a 9 percent penalty in March, said Don Crockett, assistant superintendent for business. Delinquent tax penalty rises 2 percent a month until July.

Crockett said that a tax collection firm will be sending out collection notices to delinquent taxpayers Feb. 18.

Trustees went into an executive session to discuss the contracts of several BSISD personnel. Renewed contracts include those of assistant principals and principals William McQuay, M.A. Barber, J.B. Cushing, Harlan B. Huibregtse, E.S. Morgan, Herman Smith, Wendell Ware and Jean Wilder.

Also Royce Cox, Tom Henry, Jim Holmes, Craig Fischer and Morris Molpus.

Other renewed contracts included those of Leslie Gene Adkins, director, special education; Helen Gladden and Janice Rosson, curriculum coordinators; Wade Burroughs, administrative officer; Ray Lawlis, director, school cafeterias; and William Martin, home liaison teacher.

Also assistant superintendents Harold Bentley and Don Crockett, assistant business manager and tax assessor collector Don Green; Ron Logback, athletic director; and Quinn Eudy, head football coach.

Attendance for the BSISD was listed at 4,667 for the week ending Feb. 3. This compares to 4,999 students for the same period last year.

Harold Bentley told trustees that the flu and other illnesses had struck the district hard but "attendance seems to be improving. It (the flu) is more in the elementary schools now. Absences have been running from three days to a week."

A textbook public hearing date was set for Feb. 21 at 3:45 p.m. in the board room. Superintendent Lynn Hise said "this will be an opportunity for (the public) to say anything they wish about textbooks" used in local schools.

After the trustees adjourned they visited with high school trainer Everett Blackburn, who showed them renovations within the training facilities in the gym.

Blackburn said the training area had been enlarged. He displayed several pieces of equipment, such as a mobile pain unit used in basic rehabilitation and three new whirlpools in a renovated hydrotherapy room.

Trustees will meet again Feb. 23 to discuss results of a community survey taken last semester.

Trustees approved a resolution calling for a trustee election April 7. The election will be held to fill positions for District 1 and District 3.

Trustees whose terms are expiring are President Charles Bell and Dwayne Fraser. Fraser said he is filing for re-election within District 3. As of Friday, the only candidate for District 1 is Linda Arsiaga.

Filing deadline is at 5 p.m. March 7. Candidates may file at the school business office between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Absentee voting dates are March 19 through April 3 in the county clerk's office.

On April 7 the District 1 voting will take place at the Northside Fire Station for voters who reside within county election Precinct 101.

Another polling place within District 1 is the Airport school building for county Precinct 102, except for that portion of voters within the area of the old Webb Air Force Base.

District 3 voters may vote at the 18th and Main Station. This includes voters from county election Precinct 301 and all of election Precinct 302, except the Highland South addition.

District 3 voting will also take place at the Wasson Road fire station for county election Precinct 303; for the portion of the election Precinct 304 west of U.S. 87 and south of Interstate 20, and the portion of election Precinct 102 within the old Webb Air Force Base.

Weather

By the Associated Press
West Texas: Partly cloudy through Saturday. Warmer today, but turning colder Saturday. Highs today in the 70s except low 80s extreme south. Lows tonight 40s southeast to 30s elsewhere. Highs Saturday mid 50s extreme north to mid 70s Big Bend valleys.

Fair skies forecast for state

Warm, moist air rolling from the Gulf of Mexico into the eastern half of Texas today brought patchy fog over wide stretches of the state, but forecasters predicted fair skies through this weekend.

Dense fog formed over North Texas, with visibility in the Dallas-Fort Worth area falling to zero. Fog also formed over southern, central and eastern portions of the state, the National Weather Service said.

Corpus Christi had one-eighth mile visibility. The weather service said that low cloudiness hung over the central and eastern portions of the state, while a few showers and thunderstorms lingered in extreme Northeast Texas.

In the western half of the state, cool, dry air kept skies mostly clear, with some high-level cloudiness over the high plains.

Winds were mostly southerly across the state at 5 to 10 mph, except for light and variable winds in the Edwards Plateau and Trans Pecos region.

Low temperatures ranged from the mid 50s to the lower 60s across the eastern half of Texas to the upper 20s in the Panhandle, with the 40s elsewhere in the state.

Patchy early-morning fog should again visit sections of North and South Texas Saturday, with skies then becoming fair to partly cloudy statewide. High temperatures were expected to range from near 70 degrees to the lower 80s.

Elsewhere in the nation, heavy thunderstorms moved across the Mississippi Delta region today as light rain and dense fog blanketed much of the Midwest.

Under fair skies on the East Coast, temperatures ranged from below the freezing mark in the mid-Atlantic states to well below zero in parts of New England early today.

Light showers extended from Washington state to central California, turning to snow in the mountains and across Idaho and northern Nevada.

The forecast for the rest of today and tonight called for rain spreading across the eastern third of the nation, with a few thunderstorms over the eastern Gulf Coast states. Scattered rain was expected over the northern Pacific Coast with snow in the northern Plateau region and the northern Rockies. Partly cloudy skies were forecast for the Plains and parts of the Southwest.

Today's high temperatures were expected to be in the 30s and 40s in the northern states and in the 60s and 70s in the southern half of the country.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 18 below zero in Houlton, Maine, to 71 in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Temperatures on left indicate previous day's high and overnight low to 8 a.m. EST. Temperatures on right indicate outlook for tomorrow.

Koalas confound Carter

BRISBANE, Australia — Jimmy Carter got the worst of it when he tried to give one of Australia's koalas a cuddle, according to an Australian newspaper.

The Courier-Mail reported on the front page today that the former president and his wife, Rosalynn, were holding koalas at the Lone Pine Sanctuary on Thursday when the incident occurred.

Apparently unimpressed of the honor being bestowed on him, a koala left Carter slightly damp with a stain on his shirt.

"But despite the koala's indiscretion, Mr. Carter kept right on doing what he does so well — smiling," the paper reported.

Israeli jets attack Syrians

BEIRUT — Israeli jets attacked targets on a Syrian-held mountain ridge east of Beirut today, the state radio said. American and European nationals began evacuating the war-ravaged Lebanese capital.

As many as 12 Israeli jets bombed and strafed military positions in and around the central mountain town of Bhamdoun, nine miles southeast of Beirut on the road to Damascus, setting off several fires, the radio said.

It said the air strike was apparently in retaliation for the firing of three Katyusha rockets into northern Israel from southern Lebanon.

The "Voice of the Mountain" radio station of Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and his Progressive Socialist Party also reported the air raid and said Druse insurgents were firing ground-to-air missiles at the aircraft.

In Tel Aviv, a military spokesman said warplanes struck two buildings used as staging points for attacks against Israeli forces, and hit several artillery pieces. All of the targets were destroyed and all Israeli planes returned safely, the spokesman said.

It was the first Israeli air raid against guerrilla bases in Lebanon since Jan. 4, when Shiite Moslem militia targets in Baalbek were bombed.

Israel Radio also reported today that Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers crossed Israel's Awali bridge front-line in south Lebanon and moved to within seven miles of Beirut on the coastal road. It said the patrol reached the bridge at Damour, a Christian-held area, before turning back.

Reports of the Israeli raid came as American, British, Canadian, Australian and Cypriot citizens assembled on a seaford boulevard in mostly Moslem west Beirut for evacuation by helicopter.

Jet packs elate astronauts

CAPE CANAVERAL — Challenger's two spacemen, who call themselves "Flash Gordon and Buck Rogers," said today their free flights outside the shuttle paved the way for repairing a crippled satellite on the next mission and for building space stations piece-by-piece in orbit.

Calling his jet-pack "a beautiful flying machine," astronaut Robert Stewart said, "Absolutely, it's ready for the Solar Max flight."

"I concur," agreed Bruce McCandless.

The jet-powered backpacks, which Stewart and McCandless flew flawlessly during two untethered space walks, are to be used by another shuttle crew in April to retrieve the Solar Max satellite for replacement of a defective electronics box. The satellite has been ailing in orbit since it was launched four years ago.

Challenger's five crewmen discussed their mission in a long-distance news conference as they neared the end of their journey, heading for the first shuttle landing in Florida on Saturday, with their flight log reflecting both major disappointments and the exhilarating successes of man's first unanchored space walks.

Roger Mudd returns to NBC

NEW YORK — Roger Mudd is back with "the boys on the bus."

That's the terminology for the wandering reporters who make as many stops on the campaign trail as the candidates, and Mudd will soon join their ranks again after reaching a reconciliation with NBC on new assignments Thursday.

Mudd, who had virtually disappeared from the airwaves since being dumped from the "NBC Nightly News" Sept. 2, said he's now buying a plane ticket to Iowa and hopes to be reporting from there next week. His new title is NBC's chief political correspondent.

Mudd said in an interview from his Washington office that he was "delighted" to officially be getting back to work. "For a political reporter in a presidential election year, this is the penultimate, to get out and see for yourself what's going on and then report about it and write about it."

Mudd has been going to his NBC office every day, but has kept himself off the air because of a legal disagreement with the network.

"My position was they had breached my contract," Mudd said. "If I had gone on the air doing work not normally done by anchors, it would have signaled that I had acquiesced to the breach of my contract."

Declining any specifics, Mudd said contractual readjustment had been negotiated "that satisfies both sides."

Mudd's original contract, which had seven more years to run, called for him to be sole anchor of the "NBC Nightly News." He had ignored that stipulation in allowing Tom Brokaw to join him as co-anchor in April 1982, only to have NBC steal his anchor seat a little more than a year later.

Asked if he was still bitter, Mudd said: "I had my share back then, but what I've got now is something that is a pleasure to me."

Braniff to offer discount fares

GRAPEVINE (AP) — When Braniff Inc. resumes flying operations in three weeks to 19 U.S. cities, it will offer discount fares through the use of a 5 percent rebate of the ticket price, company officials say.

The promotion will extend through Braniff's first three months of operation and will guarantee the charity a donation of at least $250,000, Slatery said.

Braniff will donate to the March of Dimes an amount equal to the discount, the airline's president said in a statement Thursday.

"We've been looking for a way, frankly, to attract passengers to our new airline," Braniff president William Slatery said. "We think we have found a unique combination to benefit both Braniff and the March of Dimes."

The rebate will be offered to travelers who obtain special coupons, Slatery said.

Braniff sought protection in bankruptcy court in May 1982, but was rescued from financial straits by the Hyatt Corp. of Chicago.

Executive robber caught

DEARBORN, Mich. — A Chrysler executive burdened by gambling debts used company cars to rob banks during his lunch hour, but was caught after he appeared a third time at the same branch and a teller "started crying and screaming," police say.

Raymond S. Miller, 53, was arrested Feb. 1 by police in this Detroit suburb, shortly after attempting to rob a National Bank of Detroit branch, Sgt. Michael Stanczyk said Thursday.

"On the day of the arrest ... he was wearing the same clothes that he was wearing the day of the first robbery," Sgt. Ray Wysocki said.

"He walked up to the same teller that had been robbed previously," Wysocki said. "She became very distraught and ran away. ... He turned and walked out of the bank. When she started crying and screaming, he must have figured something was up."

Tellers tripped a silent alarm, then "ran and hid" and "he was left standing there with nobody to rob," Stanczyk said.

Miller, driving a Chrysler-owned car, was arrested near the bank, and a weapon was recovered, Wysocki said.

"He was noticed by one of our men who were looking for a particular Chrysler model" driven in the first robbery, Stanczyk said.

"He wasn't driving that particular car, but he fit the description of the robber to a T. A check determined that the cars were registered to Chrysler Corp. Apparently, he had access to all different models."

The branch is located about a mile from Chrysler's McGraw Glass Plant, which Miller managed, Wysocki said.

Miller was arraigned Feb. 2 in U.S. District Court on charges stemming from holdups on Dec. 14 and Dec. 21 at the branch bank, and from the Nov. 3 robbery of Manufacturers National Bank's Bloomfield Hills branch in Oakland County, the FBI said.

According to police, Miller said after his arrest that he was "at my wit's end" and robbed the banks out of desperation about his gambling debts.

"He's no John Dillinger, and he's sure not your everyday desperado," Stanczyk said. "If you got down to the real reasons behind all of this, it would sound pretty pathetic — a tragedy."

"It's rare to see someone like him arrested," added FBI Special Agent John Anthony. "But it's also pretty strange to hear of someone allegedly holding the same bank up and going back a third time before getting caught."

Miller was freed on $15,000 bond pending a preliminary examination Feb. 22. Conviction on each count of armed bank robbery carries a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison, police said.

Jones wants to testify

GEORGETOWN, Texas — Gene Jones, who was arrested as a baby-killer, wants to testify on her own behalf, but her lawyers are not convinced it's a good idea.

A source close to the defense says Ms. Jones has made it clear she wants to take the stand, but that no decision has been made on whether she will testify.

Defense lawyers, who opened their case Thursday, are wary of a courtroom confrontation between Ms. Jones and Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton.

The decision on whether she will testify could be a tough one for defense lawyers. Attorneys can face legal malpractice suits from defendants they tell not to testify.

Ms. Jones, a 33-year-old mother of two, is accused of using a muscle relaxant to kill 15-month-old Chelsea McClellan on Sept. 17, 1982. Chelsea was one of six children who suffered mysterious seizures after getting injections from Ms. Jones, who worked for a Kerrville pediatrician.

The state's case, a circumstantial one, portrayed Ms. Jones as an aggressive nurse who made children sick in order to convince Kerrville hospital officials that they needed a pediatric intensive care unit.

Defense lawyer Jim Brookshire on Thursday opened his case with three witnesses who contradicted portions of the state's case. Before starting his case, he told reporters he would try to show that Chelsea was not a murder victim, just a sick child who died.

Dolly gets some tatoos

NEW YORK — Singer Dolly Parton's solution for unsightly scars is tattoos of ribbons and roses.

"Isn't that precious?" Miss Parton says.

The country music singer said she's having pink and lavender ribbons, bows and roses tattooed over her stomach and abdomen scars left from her 1982 surgery for removal of bleeding polyps.

Because doctors can't erase the scars, the 38-year-old entertainer told Ladies Home Journal, "I'll make what looks like a tiny ribbon of eyelid lace in very bright colors."

I'll make it baby pink. Baby lavender. With faint, tiny roses."

"I'll make a sweet, delicate bow with what looks to be a little end that falls over like a piece of string. Like a little streamer," she was quoted in the magazine's March issue.

For her abdominal scar, Miss Parton said, "I'm going to tattoo cross-stitches from one side to another. Like a bodice. It'll be very delicate. All the bows and ribbons will be matching."

As for her husband, Carl, "He trusts my judgment," the singer said. "He's just happy to see me looking good."

Political couple face off

WASHINGTON — For a year, Elizabeth Dole had been dreading the moment she, as transportation secretary, would have to face her husband, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, on his own turf — the committee's hearing room.

"But I've gotten to the point now that I welcome any opportunity to see him — even in the hearing room," she told reporters with a laugh after the mostly businesslike, hour-long appearance Thursday, talking about taxes on heavy trucks.

It was the first time Washington's second-most-famous couple had faced off across the witness table, and a Transportation Department official said the event was historic. It was the first time a cabinet officer ever testified before a congressional panel chaired by her husband.

"I'm honored to come before this impartial body," Mrs. Dole began following a rather formal greeting from her husband. "I've been both cooperative and uncooperative."

"I hope we can come to a quick agreement on these matters that are before us — in all three houses." That line took a few seconds to sink in before eliciting laughter from the chamber.

As Mrs. Dole rose to leave, the senator quipped, "It looks like you may get home first tonight, so you know what to do."

Dole is fond of gently complaining about his wife's late hours, which sometimes require him to fix dinner.

Lawmakers honor Skelton

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Red Skelton ribbed the California Legislature with one-liners as lawmakers gathered to praise the 70-year-old comedian.

The Senate and Assembly presented Skelton an official proclamation Thursday praising his talents, and invited him to meet lawmakers in both houses.

While on the podium, Skelton said he doesn't do political jokes. "Why pick on politicians?" he asked. "They don't do anything."

As he was leaving, the comic was introduced to state Sen. Herschel Rosenthal of Los Angeles, who had his hands in his pockets.

"It's sure good to see a senator with his hands in his own pockets," said Skelton.

Garfield's letters studied

HIRAM, Ohio — President James A. Garfield's life with his wife, Lucretia, suffered because of his long absences and her insecurity. But the marriage survived, and the couple's best years came shortly before Garfield's assassination in 1881, a professor says.

John Shaw, an English professor at Hiram University who teaches courses on Shakespeare, has taken a year off to study about 1,500 letters the couple wrote to each other between 1853 and 1881.

The couple's relationship began when both were students at Hiram in the early 1850s. They were married in 1858.

"They were very effusive in their love to each other," Shaw said. "The language was very flowery. But if you study the letters closely, you know they had a lot of difficulties in their personal and intimate relationships."

Lucretia "was a very uptight woman," Shaw said, and introverted and jealous of the attention Garfield received from other women.

After the Civil War, Garfield's political ambitions took him to Washington as a congressman. His family did not join him there until his fifth term, in 1872, and there was gossip that Garfield had affairs. It somehow got back to Mrs. Garfield, Shaw said.

"I'm positive he confessed," Shaw said. But the two later "worked things out" and remained deeply in love until Garfield's death. Mrs. Garfield survived until 1918.

Give scholarships to future teachers

With a shelf-full of recent reports bemoaning the state of American education, the topic has become political excitement. But, thus far, precious few good ideas have emerged, either from President Reagan — who eschews additional federal aid in favor of restoring old-fashioned values, as if a choice between the two had to be made — or his Democratic opponents, who have contented themselves with urging "more."

Now comes a modest and sensible proposal for federal aid in one area where it can do some good: Enticing able college students into teaching careers. Legislation introduced by Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., would provide scholarships of up to $5,000 a year, awarded regardless of financial need, to would-be teachers graduating in the top 10 percent of their high school classes. Those who received scholarships would be obliged to teach a year in a public school for every year of scholarship support — or reimburse the federal government, with interest.

The need for able young teachers is evident, for the best and brightest these days are generally not being attracted to public education. The average prospective teacher scores 394 (out of a possible 800; 500 is the average for all students) on the verbal portion of the Scholastic Aptitude Test, 419 on the math portion. And these scores, lower than those recorded for almost any would-be professionals, have been dropping during the past decade. Although the test scores are not determinative of teaching ability, the fact that relatively weak students are opting for the classroom reflects the prevailing — and quite wrong — attitude that the quality of public schools doesn't much matter.

Offering college scholarships sends a different and more positive signal about the national concern. The plan should attract better teachers — as many as 10,000 a year — into the schools. The success of the National Health Service Corps scholarships, which offer comparable aid to health professionals who commit themselves to stints in underserved areas, offers reason to believe that the program might work.

Not even generous scholarships will turn these recruits into career teachers, however. That will require higher salaries, better working conditions, and a commitment to excellence on the part of the schools. But at $75 million, this measure is a blue-chip investment in American education.

Around The Rim

By RICK BROWN

Why we do what we do

According to a story that came in yesterday on our national Associated Press wire, the president of the Edison Electric Institute says the news media have painted an unfair and unbalanced picture of the nuclear power industry, "almost to the point of hysteria."

As members of the press, we often hear complaints that we concentrate too heavily on bad news, that our coverage is unbalanced because of a perceived accent on the negative.

What readers and newsmakers need to remember is that we in the media are in the business of printing facts, and these facts are "good" or "bad" only depending on one's point of view.

It is when we place these facts into the framework of a news story that our judgment comes into play.

When facts are placed near the top or the bottom of a story, it's not because they are "good" or "bad," but because we have made a decision as to what we think is most important for people to know, what is unnecessary.

Our guiding light in making these decisions is the importance of the fact itself. How will it affect the lives of our readers, as citizens living in a democracy and as men and women living in society as a whole?

Those who complain about unfairness and imbalance fail to understand one of the basic reasons why we get paid for what we do: People want to know what to watch out for.

Examples of this principle at work abound in recent Big Spring news stories. Here's one:

A resident of a local low-income housing project says her landlord is entering her apartment without prior notice or permission. We reported this story, taking care to seek out the comments of the landlord — every story has two sides. We reported it because other residents at the project need to be aware of the problem.

So do people considering a move into the complex. So, in fact, do people who think there's not a chance in the world they'll have to move in, but find at a later date that they must.

Public officials often have complaints when the points they say they are trying to make are not the same points being brought across to the public at large by the media.

One can't blame them because their continued job security depends on their perceived competence.

Certainly, part of our duty in reporting the news is to let people know when their public officials are doing a good job.

Still, reporters so often find they have to cut through the mere PR to the real meat of what officials have to say.

And once in a while we find the job they say they're doing is not the job that's really being done.

Opinions expressed in this column are those of the staff writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the newspaper's management.

Reagan's list of real Americans

"Okay, you guys, hold it down. We have to work on the president's trip to the Midwest. Harry, what have you got lined up for Detroit?"

"We have the president sitting on the stage with a Green Beret Medal of Honor winner, two Korean orphans who have just had kidney transplants, a lady astronaut, an Hispanic Nobel Prize winner, and a 100-year-old former black slave from Georgia."

"If we use them all up in Detroit, what have we got left for St. Louis?"

"Eddie's working on that now." He's lined up a one-armed Little League baseball player, a Polish fireman who pulled six Irish kids out of a burning house, and a teacher who beats up kids who give her any back talk."

"Where does that leave us in Madison, Wisconsin?"

"Larry thinks we're in pretty good shape in Madison. We have a former unemployed steel worker who was retrained to become a nuclear physicist, a pregnant high school girl who refused to have an abortion, a survivor of the Bataan Death March, and a great-grandmother who used part of her Social Security payments to buy up a string of Pizza Huts in the Midwest."

"Listen, Mike, don't you think we're overdoing it on this trip? We've got a long campaign ahead of us."

"What do you suggest?"

"I'd like to save the pregnant high school kid for the Fourth of July."

"You mean after she's had her baby? What kind of TV picture do you think that's going to make?"

"I see what you mean. What about the two Korean kids with kidney transplants? We've gone that one already."

"It played in Peoria and it will play in Detroit. Besides the kids have to go back to South Korea in a couple of weeks."

"All right. But how about saving the Green Beret for September? He isn't going anywhere."

"Don't be too sure."

Chemical industry mixes with foreign policy

WASHINGTON — I've already reported on the American chemical industry's apparent success in getting the State Department to sabotage proposed international chemical safety regulations. Now I have evidence that the chemical companies' intrusion into U.S. foreign policy didn't stop there.

Unreleased State Department documents obtained by my associate Jack Hatfield indicate that the Chemical Manufacturers' Association and a Dow Chemical representative, Don McCollister, not only enjoyed privileged access to Foggy Bottom officials, but may have been instrumental in the discreet removal of a federal employee who refused to toe the industry's line. Here's what happened:

In July 1982, the chemical industry and McCollister were becoming increasingly unhappy over Don King, head of the State Department's Office of Environmental Affairs. It seems that King was resisting industry efforts to dictate the U.S. negotiating position at upcoming international talks on chemical safety.

European members of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development wanted to win U.S. support for stricter toxicity tests before a new chemical could be marketed. The U.S. industry wanted looser safety requirements.

King says he was willing to consider the industry's views — and even support them if they seemed appropriate — but he resented giving the chemical companies the special treatment that McCollister appeared to be demanding.

"I don't mind listening to both sides and reaching a compromise," he said. "But when one side stops asking and starts telling me what to do, I draw the line."

King's disinclination to become an industry patsy apparently earned him McCollister's wrath. According to a memo written by Richard Funkhouser, then an official of the Environmental Protection Agency, McCollister called to complain that King was part of an "old boy circuit" who was "likely to determine the U.S. negotiating position" at the chemical safety talks in Paris.

Determining the U.S. negotiating stance might have been a legitimate function of King as a government official. But it obviously displeased the chemical industry.

Funkhouser's memo said he suggested that McCollister take his complaint over King's head, and added: "McCollister said he had and would."

A written complaint given to the FBI, the General Accounting Office and Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., chairman of a House subcommittee on science and technology, raises the possibility that McCollister did indeed follow Funkhouser's advice. The testimony suggests that a CMA representative may have met with King's immediate boss, Mary Rose Hughes, deputy assistant secretary of state, and told her to fire King. McCollister also reportedly suggested that one of King's subordinates, Jack Blanchard, replace King.

The testimony by a government official says that Blanchard knew weeks in advance that he was to be King's replacement. It also suggests that a chemical industry representative pressed his case against King with other high officials in Foggy Bottom.

Sure enough, King was bounced. He was stripped of his usual responsibilities and encouraged to take an extended leave of absence. He now works at the World Bank.

And sure enough, Blanchard took over King's duties.

McCollister could not be reached for comment, but a Dow spokesman said McCollister did not influence King's departure. Blanchard denies knowing of his promotion in advance.

Interestingly, though, Blanchard's personal appointment calendar shows two scheduled meetings, with either McCollister or other representatives of the chemical industry, at about the same time he was reported to have had premonitions of impending promotion.

Footnote: A State Department spokesman said King left voluntarily and is welcome back any time.

Parents caused shyness in child

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My friends keep telling me to be more confident and not be so shy, but they don't know what I went through when I was younger. My parents always were putting me down, and never let me do anything on my own, so I can't help the way I am, can I? — A.F.

DEAR A.F.: No doubt your earlier experiences have influenced you and helped to shape you into the person you are right now. This, incidentally, is one reason the Bible places great importance on parenthood, because parents have an enormous influence on their children — either for good or for bad.

But you are wrong to be full of self-pity and assume that you can't do anything about yourself and your attitudes. You are responsible to make the best of the opportunities you have, and not sit back and say, "Oh well, I can't do anything about my problems so I will just live with them." Instead, God has a plan for your life, and he wants you to discover that plan and do it. Part of his plan for your life may well be to become a more outgoing person who has more confidence.

There are several things you need to understand. First of all, no matter what your feelings tell you, you are a very important person — especially in the eyes of God. God loves you, and the proof of that love is that he sent his only Son, Jesus Christ, into the world to die for your sins on the cross. Christ would not have done that if you were worthless — but you are instead infinitely important to him.

Then realize that God wants to use you in the lives of other people. Part of the problem with your lack of confidence is that it could easily make you withdraw from others and be interested only in your own problems. But Christ wants you to learn what it is to love other people, and to share his love with others.

shine laws" which are supposed to prohibit state agencies from pulling down the blinds when public business is discussed. The states vary in how much sunshine is permitted into the dark corners of government, but in many states, officials get around the laws by reaching informal decisions at social gatherings.

In Fairlawn, Ohio, for example, Sarah Vrandenburg heard that the city council got together at a Christmas party and reached some secret understandings that were later ratified at a public session. Ohio's sunshine law, she writes, "requires that ALL public business be conducted in public ... Any public decision arrived at from private deliberations is invalid and ... any public official found guilty of a knowing violation of the law can be removed from office."

Note to Ms. Vrandenburg: I checked out your report. It's true that the city council held an informal "kitchen caucus" at Mayor Louis "Bud" Mangels' home during a Christmas party. Decisions were reached that were later ratified. Because some council members had not been sworn in, the participants argue that the meeting didn't violate the sunshine law.

GRENADA IN THE DARK: Leftists may make a comeback in Grenada, according to a political analyst who just returned from the island. Nostalgia for the late, charismatic Marxist leader, Maurice Bishop, lingers on among many Grenadians, and the hundreds of demobilized, unemployed former soldiers of the People's Revolutionary Army keep leftist sentiment bubbling.

"One of the worst problems — and one that could end up causing problems — is that the government isn't telling the Grenadians what's going on," said the analyst. "They're starved for information." The result is a continuous round of rumors.

He also criticized U.S. authorities for allowing a "power vacuum" to continue.

Dear Abby

Upset man prescribes female doctor for his wife

DEAR ABBY: I am 38 and my wife is 37. We've been married for 18 years and I love her with all my heart. So here's the problem: It bothers me that she goes to a male doctor. I have asked her to find a woman doctor, but she says she likes her doctor and doesn't want to change.

I can't stop thinking about the fact that another man sees my wife's body, and it's tearing me up inside. I know it sounds sick, but I can't help it. We have two children, and I don't know how I ever got through it. I try to hide my feelings, but I always end up hurting her.

I can't for the life of me understand why a woman would want to go to a man doctor. I would never have a woman for my doctor. Never!

Help me deal with this, Abby.

UPSET IN BALTIMORE

DEAR UPSET: Pity you would never have a woman doctor because one examination by a competent female physician would convince you that her interest in your body is strictly professional.

I assure you, your wife's physician gets about as "turned on" looking at your wife's body as an automobile mechanic looking for a leak in the radiator. If you can't overcome this hang-up without professional help, I advise you to get it.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't throw this away thinking it's from some foolish little girl because I'm 22 and consider this a serious problem. My boyfriend is a Seventh-Day Adventist and he says his religion doesn't approve of jewelry of any kind, so I shouldn't expect a wedding ring!

Maybe I'm silly, but I can't imagine being married without one. Does it say somewhere in the Bible that wedding rings are a sin? I know I won't die without one, but all my married friends have wedding bands, and I won't feel really married without one.

WANTS A RING

DEAR WANTS: It's true, there is no "wedding ring" in the marriage ceremony of Seventh-Day Adventists. The church frowns on jewelry, but some members do not consider the wedding band "jewelry," and after they are married they wear them on their own. It is not a sin.

You are apparently not a Seventh-Day Adventist, so I advise you to talk to a local pastor of the church and ask for some educational material about what is expected of members.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old single female and also an agent with a large insurance company. I am in a predicament facing many single women my age.

My boyfriend and I live together, and because of a previous bad marriage (mine), we have decided not to include marriage in our future. However, we would like to have children. I'm afraid that my company would frown upon motherhood without marriage, but I feel I am within my rights to have a child if it will be brought up in a stable, loving home. We've considered saying we are married to ensure company approval, but we prefer to be honest.

If we choose to have a family, can I be legally terminated for this reason? I can't afford to jeopardize my career. I am paid strictly on a commission basis and nowhere in my contract is anything concerning this matter mentioned.

NAMELESS, OF COURSE

DEAR NAMELESS: If you want to know your legal rights, consult an attorney, and the women's rights advocate in your area. But if you can't afford to jeopardize your career, I advise you to live according to society's prevailing rules and get married before having a family.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Mothers' March surpasses goal

Dr. Donohue

Contributions to the Mothers' March for the March of Dimes went over the project's goal of $8,000, and contributions are still coming in. So far donations have reached more than $9,340.

Linda Floyd, executive director of the Caprock Chapter of the March of Dimes, attributes the success of the March to the volunteers who put in time and effort for the March. Proceeds will go to the March of Dimes' fight against birth defects.

Mrs. Floyd says she would never have been able to succeed in reaching the goal, much less surpass it, if it had not been for the more than 200 volunteers who walked their blocks collecting money for this effort.

The next March of Dimes board meeting will be held Tuesday at noon at Avery and Associates board room. The meeting is open to the public.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Almost every day you mention steroid drugs. Seems you must think this drug is at least a part of every cure. Question: Just what does steroid mean? How many types are there? Explain steroids. — L.N.D.

Steroid drugs are lifesavers and are used for many different illnesses. I probably mention them here with about the same degree of frequency as they are actually prescribed by doctors to treat illnesses. So they deserve the explanation you ask for.

Steroids are potent drugs and have to be used with caution and care, for they do have unpleasant side effects when used in high doses. Nevertheless, for some, those unpleasant side effects must be tolerated to control their illnesses.

Steroid refers to many naturally-occurring and synthetically produced hormones. They all have the common chemical component, a sterol nucleus. You will recognize the term "sterol" as part of the word cholesterol. Cholesterol is not a steroid or a hormone, but it does have the sterol nucleus.

There are many steroids. They include sex hormones, like testosterone and estrogen. But ordinarily, when you see the word steroid, what's being referred to are cortisone or cortisone-like drugs. Those are the kind used to treat so many illnesses.

The cortisones are made in our adrenal glands. They are hormones — adrenocorticosteroids. They are necessary for life, regulating protein, fat and carbohydrate metabolism. Their importance in medicine lies in their ability to quiet the body's overexuberant response to irritations, inflammations. One example will suffice.

Steroid drugs get lots of notice

When the rash of poison ivy is widespread, steroids are used to control this skin reaction. Steroids in this case check the inflammation. They do the very same thing for more serious diseases where inflammation is a common element.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have had two children and both times had the terrible morning sickness. I am planning my third (and last) pregnancy. What can I do to prevent the nausea? — Mrs. S.D.

It's too bad you have to endure this unpleasantness. I don't know if I can help, but I can pass on a few tips that have helped other women. You might try staying in bed about 15 minutes after awakening. Then eat a light breakfast.

Other recommendations for containing nausea during pregnancy include switching to frequent, smaller meals and avoiding dairy products. Carbonated soft drinks can help.

What is meant by a light breakfast is something on the order of dry toast and a hard or soft-boiled egg. Other well-tolerated foods include baked potato, chicken or lamb.

Publishers told not to rewrite Texas history

AUSTIN (AP) — Michael Hudson of People for the American Way says textbook publishers should not rewrite history to display only the "bright side."

Hudson, Texas coordinator for the national anti-censorship group, was one of three witnesses to testify at a State Board of Education hearing on a textbook proclamation.

The proclamation, which will be mailed to publishers March 20, sets guidelines for books on journalism, computer mathematics, physics and industrial arts, which will be used in public schools, beginning in September 1986.

Hudson said in recent years "numerous attempts have been made to remove supplemental readings or textual material covering critical historical periods, such as women's equality, slavery, the Vietnam War, civil rights, and the labor movement."

He suggested language in Proclamation 61 that he said would "make it clear to publishers that history is not to be rewritten, and that not only the bright side of our diverse and often contentious past is to be reflected in reading selections. For, if we do not learn from the lessons of history — even the unpleasant or unpopular ones — we are bound to repeat them."

Another witness, Elizabeth Judge of Houston, discussed areas of the proclamation "where discrimination is likely to surface. The idea is that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Mrs. Judge presented a list of people and books "to prevent some publisher from saying the information is not available about black, Hispanic, Indian or female individuals who have contributed to the development of Texas."

There was no mention of evolution at the hearing, but textbook critic Norma Gabler passed out copies of a newspaper editorial which said the Board of Education should be commended for its "middle-road position" on the teaching of evolution.

Last Friday, Hudson asked board chairman Joe Kelly Butler to select a committee to evaluate "anti-evolution textbook rules" and a previous proclamation on the selection of biology and science textbooks.

Hudson said board rules require that evolution — "if included — be treated as 'only one of several explanations of the origins of humankind' and in a 'manner which is not detrimental to other theories of origin.'"

Hudson also said in a letter to Butler that a proclamation adopted Jan. 14 "omits any reference to evolution in the requirements for biology and elementary science." The proclamation, Hudson said, "arguably requires deletion of information on evolution, if the publishers do choose to include it."

After the textbook hearing Wednesday, Mrs. Gabler, of Longview, distributed an editorial from The Longview Daily News that said the newspaper was "glad to report" that although the board in January "did not specifically require Darwin's theory to be taught, it did approve general concepts which allow essential elements of all biological theories to be presented."

The Feb. 2 editorial added, "The catch is that neither evolution nor creation can be taught as fact. They must be dealt with as theories. That is exactly how these subjects should be taught, and is the position taken by this newspaper."

"The State Board of Education has held to this general concept in the face of heavy criticism from such groups as People for the American Way, which insists that Darwin's theory be taught as fact. The board is to be commended for holding to its middle-road position."

Expedition believes ancient 'Lost Army' found in Sahara

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Persian army of King Cambyses marched into the Sahara 25 centuries ago and vanished beneath the sands.

The leader of a U.S.-Egyptian expedition said Wednesday his group has found several hundred graves, including bone fragments, that may have solved one of history's oldest mysteries — the fate of the "lost army."

Gary Chafetz, 36, said the bones appeared to have been buried in the Persian fashion, laid out on flat stone outcroppings among the sands, then covered with stones.

"We need to have the bones analyzed for dating," said Chafetz, a Boston writer. "If they turn out to be from 500 B.C., then one might safely conclude that these are the remains of the lost army of Cambyses."

The largest fragment is little more than three inches long.

King Cambyses, the son of Cyrus the Great, conquered Egypt's dynasty in 525 B.C. He dispatched an army from the ancient Egyptian capital of Thebes, now known as Luxor, to the temple and oracle at Amun, at Siwa Oasis, 625 miles to the northwest.

The Greek historian Herodotus quoted the people of Siwa as saying of the army, "A southerly wind of extreme violence drove the sand over them in heaps as they were taking their midday meal, so they disappeared forever."

The modern expedition was sponsored by the Egyptian Geological Survey, which was interested in having a remote part of the western desert explored and in Chafetz's use of sophisticated radar equipment that can pinpoint foreign objects in sand dunes.

With three pack camels, Chafetz, co-leader Deanne Peterson, 33, of Decatur, Ill., and two filmmakers associated with Harvard's film study center, Ned Johnston, 29, of Kenilworth, Ill., and Susan Todd, 23, of Glendale, Ohio, crisscrossed a 150 square mile patch of the Great Sand Sea south of Siwa for four months, searching for evidence of the army.

Survey director Dr. Bahay Issawi, who has written on archaeological topics, said he believed Chafetz had found the army. "Judging by the number of graves, I am sure they are the army," he said.

Dr. Carl Lamberg-Karlovsky, director of Harvard University's Peabody Museum, said in a telephone interview that the graves found by Chafetz appeared to be Persian. He said he had excavated many similar graves in Iran.

"I think it's rather remarkable what Gary found out there," Lamberg-Karlovsky said.

Hawks plow Plainsmen, 78-52

After missing their first five shots the Howard College Hawks cranked up and routed the Phillips College Plainsmen, 78-52 in men's Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball action Thursday night at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The win was Howard's fourth straight and the Hawks are 21-2 for the season and 11-1 in conference. Coupled with Odessa's 54-52 loss to Amarillo, the Hawks have a three game lead on their nearest competition (Odessa) with six league games left to play.

Coach Mike Mitchell said the win is only part of a pleasant process of late in which he said, "This team has really come on and matured in the last three weeks. They're playing well together."

He was also pleased with Howard's defense, not only because the Hawks held an opponent below 60 points for the second straight game, but because they played it well enough and long enough for the offense to come around.

Because of a less than stellar night from the field (29 of 76 for 38 percent) the Hawks were not able to administer a 69 point defeat to the Plainsmen as in their earlier meeting, but Mitchell said defense allowed

Howard to stay atop.

"Shooting depends to a degree on the amount of spring in your legs. Tonight we didn't seem to have that and that accounted for some of our poor shooting," Mitchell added. He remarked, however, "Defense is something you execute with technique and effort and that can be done all the time. We did that well tonight."

Although the Hawks as a team did not fare well from the field there were several bright spots. James Johnson carried the load most of the way in the first half by scoring 17 of his 19 points in the first half as Howard built a 36-21 lead. Jerry Stroman, limited to only four points in the first half, exploded for 18 in the second half for a game high 22. Anthony Snooks and Al Holland chipped in 10 apiece.

Howard (78) — Jerry Stroman 8 22; Hoskin 12 4; Porter 5 6; Joe Johnson 3 17; James Johnson 7 5 19; Anthony Snooks 4 2 10; Al Holland 5 0 10; Totals 31 16 78.
Phillips (52) — Sila 1 3; Simpson 4 0 8; Edward 1 0 2; Marcus Bishop 6 0 12; Miller 3 0 6; Keith Scales 4 3 11; Willis 0 1 1; Grinter 1 0 2; Lowe 1 0 2; Smith 1 1 3; Gritson 1 0 2; Totals 23 6 52.
Halftime: Howard 37, Phillips 20.

FALLING OVER — U.S. hockey player Scott Bjogstad falls on the ice during action in the Olympic encounter with Czechoslovakia. The Czech team won the game.

4-1, downing all medal hopes of the defending gold medal champions.

Steve Powers ministers to children

By RHONDA WITT
Lifestyle Writer

"I feel there is a very vital and necessary need for the children's ministry," said Steve Powers, children pastor at First Church of the Nazarene. "Children are an all together different breed. I love children."

"To me, children are so receptive to the gospel. They are so loving and so trusting," he said. "I am a firm believer that children are very sensitive to the calling of the Lord and can be saved like adults. If they can be saved as children, you don't run the high risk of losing them as teenagers or as they get older."

"One thing I try to tell the kids and impress upon them, even at an early age, is to get close and stay close to the church," Powers said. "They need to keep closely-knit to God because in the world we live, today if they don't, they will end up washed out. They should do church activities like prayer and Bible reading."

As a children's pastor, Powers prepares a service for the children's church each Sunday. "We run it like a regular church. We have music, sermons, puppets and offerings. The main thing, I have tried to emphasize is that God loves them, even if nobody else did, and he is their friend."

"My main goal is to do the best of I can to nurture them spiritually. I want them to see that Jesus and the church loves them," he said. "Jesus really loves them."

STEVE POWERS

them and has a plan for them."

The activities in children's church are interesting, Powers said. "We do a lot of strange things here. I swallowed a live gold fish to emphasize attendance. We've had Quail Dobs, the rodeo clown. Sgt. Fred Pace came to talk to us about drugs. Recently, we had a five week court session in children's church on tobacco and alcohol and what it can do to your body."

Powers has different ways of selecting a topic to talk to the children about. "I have a lot of material I have gotten through the years. Sometimes I ask the kids what they want to talk about. If it is reasonable, I try to develop on that topic."

At Christmas, the children's church presented a musical which involved 30 people. The children's church plans to do the children's musical, "Down by the Creekbank", this spring.

Another of Powers' concerns is "having things for the kids to do especially as they get a little older. I would eventually like to have an afterschool activity, so the kids to have a place to go."

"I hope someday we will have 100 children involved in the children's ministry. We now have 30 children in program. On Sunday, we have two divisions which are preschool and school age classes."

Powers cares about the children in the children's church, and lets them know it. "Each week I try to send each child a card to let them know that they have a friend and a pastor who loves them and cares for them. On their birthdays, I send them a birthday card and a dollar. To little folks it's important that someone remembers them."

As a child, Powers was very ill. "When I was 10 months old, I had Bulbar polio and a cerebral hemorrhage. The doctors told my parents that they didn't think I would live and if I did, I wouldn't be able to walk."

"The Lord healed me. I began to realize the Lord had put me here for a purpose. I always felt the Lord had a special ministry for me."

I appreciate he never try to push me into the ministry. He said that was a decision that I and God had to make. I know he loves me and is concerned about my welfare.

"I've worked with my dad on other occasions. Some people are kind of amused at a father-son combination. This is the first official job I've had with my dad."

"A GOING CHURCH FOR A COMING SAVIOR"

WHEN ARE WE GOING TO ACT OUR AGE!

From Adam to the atom, it has been a long process. But process does not necessarily mean progress. Only when we recognize our need for God will we begin to come of age. Then, and only then, will process, mushroom into progress.

"THOSE CRAZY EPISCOPALIANS"

such an unfriendly bunch!

It's true that Episcopalians don't make chit-chat during services. Or before. Or immediately after. Visitors occasionally go away saying, "What an unfriendly bunch."

Next time, don't rush away so fast.

Episcopalians don't mean to seem rude. They do mean to pay respect to God... until they're well outside the church proper.

Next time, give them a few minutes to "warm up." Stick around and get acquainted. Join them for coffee in the nearby parish hall... and perhaps some of their funny ideas will even make sense.

If you'd like to learn more about the Episcopal Church and its views, your nearest Episcopal neighbor or minister would be flattered to discuss them... without "twisting your arm." Who knows? He might even make sense.

Ads brew steaming debate over health

NEW YORK — A $20 million campaign to reheat the demand for coffee has also brewed controversy, catching "coffee achievers" such as David Bowie and Kurt Vonnegut in a debate over advertising ethics and public health.

Bowie, a rock singer, and Vonnegut, the author, are among nine celebrities retained by the National Coffee Association to appear in three TV ads aimed at perking up sales to young adults.

The ads show stars such as actresses Jane Curtin and Cicely Tyson and football quarterback Ken Anderson sipping from steaming mugs. "Coffee lets you calm yourself down, and picks you up," an announcer advises. "Join the coffee achievers."

While the ads link coffee with success, say officials of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, some studies link it with cancer of the bladder and pancreas, heart and breast disease, birth defects, anxiety and sleep disorders.

"We think it is unfair to young people to use youth figures to try to convince them that coffee drinking is part of a successful life," said Bruce Sliverglade, legal director of the consumer health group.

The Washington-based center, founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, has petitioned the Federal Trade Commission to halt the campaign as false and misleading. By claiming coffee drinking is calming, "It tries to cover up the reputation of coffee as a stimulant," Sliverglade said.

William Brooks, spokesman for the coffee association, cited health studies countering those used by the consumer group. He said that the commercials say coffee "lets you" calm down, not that coffee itself is calming. "We're saying that normal coffee consumption is not injurious to human health," he said.
