Firm to start its search for police chief

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

A nationwide search for a police chief — which will cost Midland taxpayers at least $16,000 — was scheduled to begin today.

A representative from the Bellevue, Wash., firm hired to conduct the search was expected in Midland this afternoon, an official said.

The representative will interview key city officials about what qualifications the new chief should have, said Jan Cooper, a partner in Jensen-Oldani & Associates, Inc.

The vacancy occurs next month. Police Chief Wayne Gideon recently announced his intention to resign following a critical study of the Midland Police Department.

Cost of the search will be $16,000 to $20,000, said City Manager James Brown.

Although the city has conducted such searches in-house in the past, Brown said the importance of the chief's job prompted officials to hire an outside firm.

"This is an important position," he said, noting the Police Department has more than 200 employees and an $8 million budget. "We used to do the searches ourself.

"But we do not have the expertise for this."

The firm, which recently conducted police chief searches for Bellevue, Wash. and Austin, was selected after what Brown described as a "thorough investigation."

"Everyone we talked to about them was very pleased," he said.

The interviews by the firm will be with Brown, City Council members, police officers and various citizens, Brown said.

The interviews will be used to complete a profile, Ms. Cooper said. That profile will include what educational background, police experience and other traits are sought by city officials.

Once the profile is compiled, Ms. Cooper said her firm will begin direct mail advertising to targeted candidates. Advertisements also will be placed in trade journals, job letters and other publications.

Brown said candidates from the Midland Police Department will be considered.

"We have made it clear to the search firm that people in our department also are to be considered," Brown said. "If the best is in our department, I will be thrilled to death."

Four agencies petitioning city for MidTran buses

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Four local agencies wanting to provide their clients with transportation met with city officials Tuesday to apply for classification that would allow them to receive several MidTran buses.

Casa De Amigos, the Mental Health & Mental Retardation Center, Midland Association for Retarded Citizens and Trinity Towers met with city and highway officials to apply for 16 B(2) classification. The classification will allow the city to turn some of its 17 MidTran buses over to the agencies whose clients are dependent upon the public transportation system. The buses are valued at $15,000 to $16,000 each, said assistant city manager Mike McGregor.

The city withdrew its support from the bus system on June 10, citing declining ridership and a $255,000 deficit. MidTran's commuter service will end July 11, but buses will continue to run for the social service agencies until Sept. 15. Service for the elderly and handicapped on Medicare and Medicaid, who use the buses for doctor and hospital visits, will end Oct. 31.

"There is enough time available to us, that if there is a solution out there we can find it and I think there is," said Ray Unterbrink, executive director of MARC. Between 30 to 40 MARC clients use the system to travel to and from work and to attend events.

The four agencies said they would attempt to coordinate bus service for their clients. However, the groups must find funds to pay operating expenses predicted to run between $10,000 to $12,000 per bus.

"It's that operation cost that's bothersome to us all. We're just going to have to look at the fee schedule," Unterbrink said.

The fees charged by the agencies would not exceed the present fees of $2.50 per ride or $50 for a coupon book of 44 rides, he said.

One agency, such as Casa may provide bus drivers, while another may buy insurance for the buses and another may provide maintenance for the vehicles, Unterbrink said.

The remaining buses not turned over to the groups will be sold at an auction. The proceeds will be used to pay back the federal and state agencies that help originally buy the buses in 1983, McGregor said. Eighty percent of the buses' cost were paid by the Urban Mass Transit Administration, while the state highway department paid for 13 percent and the city paid 7 percent.

Early morning rain surprises Midlanders

From Staff and Wire Reports

About .83 of an inch of rain surprised early morning risers today as a thunderstorm moved through Midland during the night.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional airport predicted that the chance of more thunderstorms would decrease in the late morning hours, with a possibility of new storms beginning again later this afternoon.

In other areas of Midland, the Midland Farmers' Co-op reported 2.25 inches of rain, while Greenwood received 1.50 inches of rain.

Today's rain brings an official total of .94 of an inch for the month and 5.26 inches for the year. Through the end of June, last year's rainfall was 5.84 inches. Midland's yearly rainfall average is 13.70 inches.

Charlie Wright with the co-op said the rain will affect the cotton is different ways. The rain may keep cotton from sprouting by pushing more dirt over some crops, but it will help crops already above ground, Wright said.

Midland police reported two minor accidents from the morning storm and numerous stalled drivers. Midland County Sheriff's Office and the Department of Public Safety said they had no reports of accidents from the rain.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms, some of them capable of producing flash flooding, were reported over a vast area of Texas early today.

Will Reagan reshape Supreme Court?

By JAMES H. RUBIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans to reshape the Supreme Court by replacing its retiring chief justice with the court's most conservative member and adding an arch-conservative.

Reagan announced Tuesday that Chief Justice Warren E. Burger is retiring at the end of the court term in July and that Justice William H. Rehnquist will be nominated to replace him.

The president also said if Rehnquist's elevation is confirmed by the Senate, federal appeals court Judge Antonin Scalia will be nominated to fill the vacancy.

Scalia's appointment is also subject to Senate confirmation.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., predicted the Senate Judiciary Committee he heads and the full Senate will move rapidly to approve both nominations.

Thurmond said Rehnquist "is highly respected and, in my opinion, will make a great chief justice." He praised Scalia's reputation for "fairness and integrity."

Despite Thurmond's prediction, Democrats likely will voice opposition to both men because of their conservatism.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said Rehnquist "has not demonstrated...the extraordinary capacity for leadership one expects in a chief justice."

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., said Scalia has passed a conservative "litmus test and I find that frightening."

Scalia's presence is not expected to alter significantly the court's ideological balance, but his youth and his recognized intellect could give the court a powerful conservative voice for decades to come.

As an appeals court judge, Scalia has voted for the right of the U.S. Park Service to bar demonstrators from sleeping in Washington parks and for a requirement that criminal defendants claiming insanity undergo examinations.

He also wrote an article calling the Freedom of Information Act, the law that defines the public's right to obtain government documents and attend meetings, "the Taj Mahal of the Doctrine of Unanticipated Consequences, the Sistine Chapel of Cost-Benefit Analysis Ignored."

Burger, saying "17 years is long enough for anybody," said he is retiring to devote full time to running the national commission coordinating the 1987 celebration of the Constitution's 200th birthday.

Approval of tax overhaul possible tonight

By CLIFF HAAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is winding down action on sweeping tax-overhaul legislation with Democrats making a last-ditch effort at collecting more from wealthy taxpayers to increase the tax cut for middle-income people.

The tax bill, in its ninth day of debate today, is heading for overwhelming approval possibly by late tonight.

The measure compresses more than a dozen individual tax rates into two rates: 27 percent and 15 percent. The top individual rate is now 50 percent.

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, is proposing to change the rate structure in the bill by adding a new top rate of 35 percent for the wealthiest taxpayers and using the additional revenue to finance a bigger tax cut for middle-income people.

According to preliminary estimates from congressional tax experts, one-third of taxpayers with incomes between $30,000 and $40,000 could pay higher taxes under the bill, while more than half of those earning more than $200,000 would get tax cuts averaging $53,000 a year.

"I believe middle America is entitled to a better tax break," Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said Tuesday.

Nonetheless, Byrd, Mitchell and others who have criticized certain provisions of the bill are quick to say they will vote in favor of the measure drafted by the Senate Finance Committee.

Mitchell, all but conceding his amendment will fail, has said he hopes to build pressure on congressional negotiators to address the issue when they meet to draft a compromise version of the separate legislation passed by the Senate and the House.

"I'm convinced the conference will correct this deficiency to some extent," Mitchell said.

Lubbock school officials discuss AIDS student

LUBBOCK (AP) — After confirming that an elementary pupil has been diagnosed with AIDS, school officials said they plan to develop an attendance policy that will balance the safety and rights of the individual against those of other students.

Officials said Tuesday that the child's parents voluntarily removed their child from summer school after learning of the diagnosis.

"I think the key thing is that we are concerned about the safety of 30,000 school kids, likewise we are concerned about the safety and emotional stability of this one child," said Gary O. Boren, school board president.

"So we're balancing both and we're trying to develop a policy that will help us deal with the situation."

Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome is an illness in which the body's immune system is damaged and no longer has the ability to fight off certain kinds of cancers and infections.

Both school and health officials declined to say where the child attended classes, but Boren said the student was in a program for homebound students at the end of the 1985-86 school year and had attended summer school for two days before his parents removed him from classes.

The child contracted AIDS through blood injections, but the source of blood is not known, said Dr. Anthony Way, public health director.

"I have no idea where the source was. The only thing I know by inference is that if the child was infected by blood products, it had to be prior to the time at which the blood was being screened," said Way, noting the screening has been in effect for about a year.

Way added that Lubbock recipients of blood transfusions in the past year are at no risk of contracting the disease because national guidelines now mandate the screening of blood for the AIDS virus.

Girl pinned in Texas derailment

NORTH ZULCH, Texas (AP) — A freight train that derailed and sent several cars careening into a depot, toppling the building onto a 7-year-old girl and her grandfather, may have broken part of an axle, witnesses said.

Vicki D'laine Jeffries of Belton was pinned under the wreckage for 2½ hours after the derailment occurred about 11:30 a.m. Tuesday. She was hospitalized in good condition Tuesday night.

The four crewmen on the 15-car Burlington Northern train were not injured. The train was carrying wheat, and there was no fire, officials said.

Gary Williams, superintendent of Burlington Northern's Fort Worth division, said late Tuesday afternoon that a cause of the accident had not yet been determined.

"We know there was a car down, but what caused the car to go down, we don't know," he said.

Witnesses said one car was off the tracks before it entered a switch where two tracks merge into one at the North Zulch crossing. North Zulch is located about 25 miles northeast of Bryan in southeast Texas.

AP Laserphoto

A car from a Burlington Northern train rests on an antique depot in North Zulch. Two persons were injured.

Billy Diserens and A.W. Hammock, two Madison County employees who were working in the area, said they saw part of the axle hanging off one of the cars. When the piece of metal hit the switch, they said, the pileup began.

L.S. Brown, a Burlington Northern special agent, earlier said he also believed a journal — a part of the axle or shaft — had broken in two after a bearing went out.

Workers from the Madisonville and North Zulch fire departments had to jack up the depot building to saw a bottom timber out from under the child to free her, said Madisonville Fire Chief Donnie Teague.

The girl was taken by ambulance to Madison County Medical Center in Madisonville about 10 miles away.

The child's mother, Elaine Jeffries of Belton, was at a relative's house less than a mile from the depot when the accident occurred. She rushed over to the scene and later said it was a "miracle" that her daughter had suffered only bruises.

In a telephone interview from his hospital bed Tuesday, Probst said he was standing outside the depot with his granddaughter watching the approaching train when he noticed that one of the cars had come off the track.

"I saw gravel that was kicking up," he said. "Whenever I saw that gravel kicking up, I told Vicki to run around behind the depot into the street," he told the Bryan-College Station Eagle.

Probst said that after watching Vicki go out of sight, he turned back just in time to see a "big ball of fire" coming from one car. He said he turned to run when he saw the wheels come off the car, but was knocked to the ground when the derailed cars piled into the depot.

Seven persons injured in clean-up mishap

SUNLAND PARK, N.M. (AP) — A steam-powered crane used in the cleanup of a week-old derailment slid down a cliff, dragging a tanker filled with hazardous material and injuring seven people, officials said.

"We're getting used to this," said Capt. Paul Venema of the Sunland Park police department.

The tanker was part of a westbound, 85-car Southern Pacific train that derailed June 7. No one was injured in that incident, but officials were concerned because several of the derailed cars carried toxic or explosive materials.

Cleanup crews were working at the site when the accident happened at about 9 a.m. MDT Tuesday.

The crane was trying to get the derailed tanker back on the tracks when it slid on the gravelly terrain, releasing a blast of steam that injured the workers, said Jack Parks, director of the El Paso civil defense.

The tanker, filled with butyl acrylate, rolled down the cliff and came to rest about 100 yards from the Rio Grande.

"When the tanker rolled downhill, one of the pressure valves came loose and released some of the chemical," said Venema.

The leak was stopped shortly after, said Venema. Several phone calls by The Associated Press to the Southern Pacific superintendent's office in El Paso were not returned.

The victims were injured by falling debris and steam escaping from the damaged crane, not from the leaking chemical, said Parks.

Butyl acrylate, used in making glue, is poisonous if inhaled or absorbed through the skin and is also highly flammable and explosive, Parks said.

Firefighters from the El Paso Fire Department sprayed the tanker with water to keep the temperature down, said deputy fire chief Don Williamson. The chemical has a flash point of 120 degrees.

Younger, more conservative court may be in store

By RICHARD CARELLI

WASHINGTON (AP) — If President Reagan gets his way, the Supreme Court will be younger and more conservative by autumn. But the changes do not guarantee greater success for the Reagan social agenda.

The president will ask the Senate to confirm Justice William H. Rehnquist as the nation's 16th chief justice, replacing a retiring Warren E. Burger. He said Tuesday he wants federal appeals court Judge Antonin Scalia to fill the vacancy.

Scalia, 50, would become the court's youngest member and would drop the average age of the justices to 68 from its current 71. If Burger, 78, stayed, the court would become the oldest in the nation's history by November.

An Analysis

Four other justices are over 77.

Scalia's judicial record since being appointed to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here by Reagan in 1982 suggests he is even more conservative than Burger.

Perhaps more significantly, Scalia is likely to be an intellectual force on the court for decades to come. While he is widely acknowledged as a distinguished scholar with strong persuasive powers, legal experts generally criticize Burger's lack of leadership.

If both appointments are confirmed, it could take considerable time to determine how Rehnquist's elevation and Scalia's presence will affect the court's secret deliberations.

Those closed-door sessions are the true test of any court member's real clout.

"The ability of one of the justices to give reasoned explanations for the decisions that are made is extremely important," says Robert Goldwin of the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think-tank. "It's not enough for him to vote the right way."

Scalia would challenge Rehnquist's standing as the court's most conservative member — joining him and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor on the court's right wing.

In many cases, especially those involving police powers, Justice Byron R. White joins the conservatives.

Much of the court's power resides in the middle, with the swing votes of Justices Lewis F. Powell, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens.

Scalia's presence could aid Rehnquist in battling Brennan, an adept consensus-maker, for those key votes.

The planned changes will not offer the Reagan administration any immediate prospects to advance in the high court those social causes it holds most dear:

ABORTION — Burger was one of four court members who last week voiced concern about the 1973 landmark legalizing abortion. His departure leaves five solid votes in support of that ruling, one the Reagan administration hopes to overturn.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION — Burger has a mixed record on the validity of preferences for racial minorities and women to make up for past discrimination. Scalia has indicated stronger opposition to such preferences.

The fate of the administration's campaign to limit affirmative action to actual victims of bias may be decided in the current court term before Burger leaves.

SCHOOL PRAYER — Scalia can be expected to support the administration's efforts to lower the constitutional barriers that separate church and state, but Burger in recent years has done the same.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE — Burger has shown little interest in overturning, rather than containing, the landmark 1966 Miranda decision requiring police to warn criminal suspects of their rights before questioning. Scalia could be more receptive to Attorney General Edwin Meese's desire to overturn Miranda, but there may not be four other votes.

One immediate change that could materialize with Burger's departure is the advent of television cameras and other electronic coverage of the court's public oral argument sessions.

Burger is vehemently opposed to such coverage for all federal courts, even though there is some sentiment among the other justices to experiment with it.

Richard Carelli has covered the Supreme Court since 1976.

CHIEF

After a pool of applicants is selected, Ms. Cooper said resumes will be screened and a list of semi-finalists will be chosen.

The semi-finalists are then interviewed personally by the firm, Ms. Cooper said. The list is culled again until the firm and city officials select finalists.

These finalists will be brought to Midland for interviews with the City Council.

The search will last several months. Since Gideon will resign June 30, Brown said the City Council later this month will name an interim chief until a candidate is selected.

Brown said he is looking for a good "professional."

"The chief should have police experience, be a good manager and a good administrator," the city manager said.

"He does not have to be a 'Super Cop'."

City Councilman Kelly Fish, District 3, also said he wants a chief with good leadership and management qualities.

District 1 City Council member David F. Godfrey agreed.

Godfrey said management skills should be the No. 1 priority for a new chief, followed by "crime-fighting" and the ability to deal effectively with the media.

"I want someone who can move the department forward."

COURT

"It's more important that we have a good celebration, an adequate celebration, than it is for me to remain on the court for another year," he said.

Burger, who in retirement will receive his full annual salary of $108,400, is serving as the bicentennial commission's chairman for no pay.

Burger told Reagan about his retirement decision on May 27. For the past three weeks, it remained one of Washington's best-kept secrets.

The chief justice stunned aides during a Chinese dinner in his office late Monday night when he revealed his plans to retire.

He said his fellow justices also were caught by surprise.

Burger, 78, was appointed chief justice in 1969 by President Nixon, an admirer of Burger's tough "law and order" views.

Burger Rehnquist

In a 17-year tenure he helped lead the court away from the liberal paths it had pursued in the 1960s into an era of caution and conservatism.

Scalia, 50, was named to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia by Reagan in 1982. He had been a law professor since 1967, most recently at the University of Chicago.

Scalia would be the first American of Italian descent to serve on the court.

He would also be the court's youngest member. Without Burger's retirement, the present court would have become in November the oldest in history.

The court's average age is 71. With Scalia, the average age would be 68.

Scalia is a Roman Catholic and the father of nine children. He is an avid jogger and is active in Washington social circles, where he and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor became friends.

O'Connor is the only justice Reagan has placed on the court so far.

Rehnquist, 61, for 15 years has ranked as the court's leading conservative. Known for his wit, charm and informal style, Rehnquist likes to discuss cases pending before the court while strolling the court's grounds with his law clerks.

His health made headlines in late 1981 and early 1982 when he suffered a withdrawal reaction after being taken off a drug used to ease a chronic back problem.

He was hospitalized, and doctors said he had "disturbances in mental clarity" that briefly distorted his perception of reality.

The tranquilizing drug was linked to Rehnquist's slurred and halting speech at that time. But there was no evidence it otherwise impeded his work. He has shown no lasting effects from the withdrawal.

A senior White House official who spoke only on condition he not be identified said Rehnquist was selected from a list of 10 to 15 candidates.

Burger refused to say whether he recommended Rehnquist or anyone else to become the nation's 16th chief justice.

TAX

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the Finance Committee chairman, and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., have worked hard to fend off major amendments to the bill, particularly emphasizing that the rates in the legislation are inviolate and changing them to finance amendments would cause the fragile measure to crumble.

But on Tuesday, for only the second time, the Senate agreed to amend the bill to preserve a tax on foreigners who profit from the sale of U.S. real estate, including farms, they do not actively manage. After an 80-18 vote to keep the amendment alive, it was passed with only a show of senators standing, thus avoiding a recorded vote.

The $1.2 billion saved by keeping the levy would go to allow farmers only to average their income over three years to figure their taxes. The amendment offered by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, also would allow individuals to deduct a greater portion of medical expenses than the bill originally permitted.

Current law allows the deduction of medical expenses exceeding 5 percent of adjusted gross income; the bill raises that to 10 percent; the amendment would cut it to an undetermined level between those two.

The Senate, meanwhile, is keeping scores of special tax breaks that the Finance Committee included in the legislation.

The Senate voted 68-31 to retain special tax cuts of $1 million apiece for two coal mine investors.

"Only two taxpayers in the whole world are being benefited," said Metzenbaum, who offered the amendment to eliminate the provision from the tax bill. The only two beneficiaries of the amendment, Metzenbaum said, were two Colorado investors in the Cimarron Coal Co., which is located in New Mexico. He said their names were not available.

"The issues are not how many taxpayers are affected but the equity and justice of the case," said Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., defending the break on grounds that the coal company needed the aid because it had entered into a lifetime contract to supply coal to a Colorado public utility at a fixed price.

In other action, the Senate:

— Defeated an effort Tuesday by Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va., to retain a special pension tax break for 20 million workers — mostly federal, state and local — who contribute to their own retirement. It was rejected 57-42.

— Agreed, 65-29, early today to retain a $500 million investment credit for the steel industry. Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., had sought to remove the break from the legislation.

Two institutions for care of AIDS patients planned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two Los Angeles area health-care companies plan to open institutions — one in Texas — designed exclusively to provide care for people stricken by AIDS.

American Medical International, a Beverly Hills firm, said it is converting a Houston hospital to treat AIDS patients and do research. Officials for the other firm, Beverly Enterprises of suburban Pasadena, said the company will open a Los Angeles nursing home for the care of AIDS patients.

"We feel there is a gap in service between the hospital and the next available thing for AIDS patients, which is home health service," said Kay Lehman, project analyst with Beverly Enterprises.

No opening date for the nursing home is set because Beverly Enterprises is still searching for a 100-bed home. The nursing home should open four to six months after a site is found, she said.

In Houston, AMI is changing its Citizens General Hospital to the Institute for Immunological Distorders, according to an AMI spokesman who was not identified in Wednesday's editions of the Los Angeles Times.

AMI operates about 150 hospitals and other health-care centers.

Beverly Enterprises is North America's largest owner and operator of long-term health-care facilities, with 1,000 nursing homes in the United States and Canada.

Neither Beverly nor AMI made projections on what profit there might be in delivering care exclusively for AIDS patients.

Both companies believe their projects will be the first devoted exclusively to AIDS patients.

Three years ago, San Francisco General Hospital was the first hospital to open a ward for AIDS patients.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome cripples the body's disease-fighting immune system, leaving its victims vulnerable to a variety of life-threatening infections and certain cancers.

AIDS is caused by a virus believed to be passed through blood and semen, but not through casual contact. Groups at highest risk for getting AIDS are male homosexuals, intravenous drug users and recipients of contaminated blood products.

Most often transmitted through sexual contact, AIDS also can be transmitted by transfusions of blood or blood products, the sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles, and can be passed from mother to child at or before birth.

AIDS

He said the incubation period for AIDS can be as long as five years to just several months. Way noted that the disease does not have to be reported until it is in its third stage, the most critical.

E.C. Leslie, LISD superintendent, said the Lubbock student's AIDS diagnosis is the first such case reported in Texas.

"In our investigation, we have been told by the Texas Education Agency and the state health department that they have not had a reported case of a school-aged child in any school district in the state of Texas (having AIDS)," Leslie said, citing an informal poll of state agencies and school districts.

Leslie said LISD officials learned about the case last week when an anonymous source informed them of a possible AIDS victim among students enrolled in summer school.

Way was contacted by school officials at that time. He said he has not received the official report. All reporting thus far has been verbal, he said.

He added that the child does not represent a risk factor for students or school personnel.

"This child will not be the source of infection for anybody," Way said, stressing that the disease cannot be transmitted in the typical school environment.

Excedrin, target of investigation

NATION

AUBURN, Wash. (AP) — Investigators were X-raying thousands of Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules early today following the death of a 40-year-old woman who swallowed a cyanide-tainted capsule.

Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were pulled from store shelves nationwide Tuesday pending further investigation into the death of Sue Snow, a bank manager who was found unconscious in her home in this Seattle suburb last Wednesday, police said. She died a few hours later.

The King County medical examiner's office confirmed Monday that Ms. Snow died of cyanide poisoning.

Investigators had uncovered nothing to suggest suicide, and the case was being treated as a homicide, Police Chief Jake Evans said.

Gerald Eastwood, an investigator in the Seattle office of the Food and Drug Administration, said that as of late Tuesday, no other contaminated capsules had been found.

About 40,000 or more capsules of the over-the-counter pain medicine from around the region were being checked by X-ray, he said. Christopher Rezendes, another FDA investigator, said if there were cyanide in a capsule, it would show up opaque under an X-ray.

Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were pulled from about 50 stores around Auburn after Mayor Bob Roegner declared a public emergency Monday night. The manufacturer, Bristol-Myers, recommended similar action nationwide Tuesday. "Although we believe this to be a local, isolated incident, we are also asking all stores throughout United States to quarantine Excedrin capsules for the time being and to remove Excedrin capsules from store shelves until we have more information on the situation in Auburn," Harry Levine, a vice president of Bristol-Myers, said in New York.

Authorities believe Ms. Snow purchased the capsules locally a couple of days before she died. Police said they had been unable to find a box or sales receipt that would show where she bought them.

At several stores where she may have shopped, however, some bottles were found with the same batch number, 5 H 1 02-Aug. 88, said Evans.

There were 56 capsules left inside the 60-capsule bottle found in her home, and three contained significant amounts of cyanide, the FDA said.

AT&T, Union pact good for both

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and a union representing 155,000 AT&T employees say the tentative three-year labor contract ending the nation's largest strike since 1983 will enhance the future of both sides.

The accord was reached Tuesday — the 17th day of a nationwide walkout by the Communications Workers of America — and provides an immediate 2 percent wage increase for 155,000 of the company's 300,000 employees and includes what union president Morton Bahr called a "quantum leap" toward lifetime job security for its members.

Likewise, Herb Linnen, a spokesman for the telecommunications giant, said the company's goals had been achieved. The agreement, he said, "positions AT&T to face the real world in which the company now operates."

A final accord still depends on negotiators for AT&T and the union agreeing by midnight Saturday on six separate pacts covering the company's various operating divisons. Those agreements also would have to be ratified by the union's members before July 28, although they would return to work in the meantime.

But the tentative national accord is expected to bring to an end what had become a costly strike for both sides, and what has been the nation's largest walkout since CWA struck AT&T in 1983.

"If negotiations are completed by the Saturday deadline, CWA members can begin returning to work the following day," Morton Bahr, the union's president, said.

Company officials had cited figures indicating that CWA members were beginning to cross picket lines and return t work. AT&T competitors, meanwnue, were reporting to trade groups this week and were beginning to pick off some of the company's business clients because of delays in filling orders for new installations.

The basic wage package offering an 8 percent pay increase between now and 1989 — 2 percent immediately and 3 percent in both 1987 and 1988 — was agreed upon prior to the June 1 walkout.

Bahr had vowed to break a pattern of "giveback" contracts by unions in recent years. However, the tentative agreement as outlined by both sides indicate that each made concessions on three issues that triggered the walkout. Those issues were:

— Cost of living adjustments (COLA) based on government Consumer Price Index figures — which have been in phone workers' contracts since 1971. The COLA framework remains, but no COLA payments will be made in the next three years. AT&T wanted the COLA provisions eliminated, arguing that they hampered the company's ability to control prices.

— Piecework bonuses of 14 percent to 20 percent for some 20,000 CWA members who work in AT&T factories. The bonuses will be folded into the hourly compensation of existing employees only, effectively establishing a two-tier wage system in which current workers will be paid more than new hires.

— Reclassifying 20,000 "systems technicians" who install, repair and maintain client telephone systems into three new job categories. Under the agreement a new category of lesser skilled technician assistants will be created at roughly half the $614 average weekly pay of experienced technicians. Bahr said the agreement now includes sufficient retirement incentives to effectively protect existing technicians from being demoted into the lower-paying category.

The agreement was reached two days after 30,000 factory workers at AT&T belonging to the rival International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers ratified a new contract virtually identical to the one rejected May 31 by the CWA.

Linnen said all the benefits won by the CWA, including continued pay differentials for night and weekend workers, will automatically be reflected in the new IBEW agreement.

Prior to the strike, AT&T and the CWA had agreed on most other issues, including a landmark $21 million company-financed job security program to retrain workers targeted for layoffs for newly emerging jobs.

While the company has maintained essential services during the walkout, callers often have had to wait up to a minute or more to get an operator to answer.

Presbyterians reaffirm abortion committments

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) voted Tuesday to reaffirm the church's pro-choice stand on abortion.

By a 281-to-266 margin, church commissioners voting at the group's annual meeting in Minneapolis rejected a measure which would have commissioned a study to reconsider opinions on the abortion issue.

"We've taken another step in the wrong direction by not taking seriously enough the diversity within our denomination on the issue," the Rev. Bart Tarman, a director of Presbyterian Pro-Life, said at a news conference after the vote.

Tarman, of Santa Barbara, Calif., said the assembly "has missed a dynamic oportunity to reconsider the church's abortion position."

The Rev. Bob Emrich of Saginaw, Mich., said the vote "absolutely reaffirmed the traditional Presbyterian position."

Two beat retarded boy

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two young boys were acquitted of manslaughter charges Tuesday but convicted of battery in the playground beating death of a retarded 6-year-old child during an argument over a bag of potato chips.

The boys, now ages 14 and 12, face up to a year in a juvenile detention center following their conviction by Juvenile Circuit Judge Emery Newell. The judge set sentencing for July 10.

The two were accused of killing Torrence Davis in November 1984. Another child had been charged originally, but charges were dropped against him last week.

The third original suspect and several other children offered conflicting testimony before Newell Tuesday. The children said Davis had been thrown down into the sand at the playground, but they couldn't agree on who did the throwing.

Wife imprisons spouse

VERSAILLES, Ky. (AP) — A woman who kept her husband tied to a bed in the basement of their home for more than two months was convicted Tuesday along with two of her children on charges of second-degree unlawful imprisonment.

A Woodford County Circuit Court Jury found Shirley Kimberl innocent of attempted murder and her children innocent of accomplice to attempted murder.

Prosecutors claimed Mrs. Kimberl and her children doused James Kimberl, 47, with water during his confinement and created drafts with a fan to make him catch pneumonia and die so they could collect on an insurance policy. Kimberl escaped through a window Feb. 7.

The defense maintained Mrs. Kimberl had been beaten for 22 years by an alcoholic husband and acted out of desperation to protect herself.

The jury recommended that Mrs. Kimberl, 40, her daughter Kimberly, 19, and son, James Kimberl Jr., 18, serve 12 months each for the unlawful imprisonment. The three have been jailed for four months.

Snuff not cause of death

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A cancer surgeon testified Tuesday he did not believe the oral cancer that killed Sean Marsee was caused by snuff.

Dr. Robert M. Byers said published papers on snuff usage and oral cancer only have dealt with people who had been using the tobacco product for 40 or 50 years.

Marsee was 18 when his cancer was diagnosed and 19 when he died after three operations.

"It bothers me that there were no local changes" in the mouth in the area where Marsee placed the snuff, said Byers, who is on the staff of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, Texas.

Runner rebounds after theft

NEW YORK (AP) — A day after losing his most prized possessions in a robbery, globe-circling runner Henry Weston ran into a streak of luck Tuesday.

First, a philanthropist offered to give the 24-year-old Briton enough money to complete the last leg of his two-year tour.

Then the New York Road Runners Club offered to help. Finally, police told Weston they had recovered a box of his stolen things.

Weston, of Portsmouth, England, arrived in New York a week ago after a two-year, 16,000-mile odyssey through Europe, the Middle East, Southeast Asia, Australia and the United States.

He was due to leave Monday for Ireland and the final leg of his trip, but was forced to change his plans when two men broke into a car parked outside his hotel and stole his passport, travel documents, slides and video equipment.

Weston plans to produce a documentary about his travels to raise money for the World Wildlife Fund.

"We've come through a lot of hell to get here and now we lose absolutely everything in New York," the disgruntled Weston said after the robbery. Weston's passport was promptly replaced by the British consulate.

AP Laserphoto

Henry Weston, a 24-year-old Briton running around the world for charity, discovered that two men broke into his car in New York and stole all his belongings. He was about to complete the last leg of a 16,000-mile odyssey when the incident occurred Monday.

Transplant foundation revising process

PITTSBURGH (AP) — One of the nation's leading organizations for matching donor organs with transplant recipients said Tuesday it has adopted a point system intended to simplify the selection process and make it more equitable.

"You can never get away totally" from subjective decisions when patients are equal or close in need, said Dr. Henry T. Bahnson, chairman of the Pittsburgh Transplant Foundation's board of directors. "But at least we'll be able to have something easily quantified and easily reviewed."

Bahnson said at a news conference that points are being assigned to transplant cases based on medical urgency, length of time waiting and other factors.

Transplant candidates requiring hospitalization, for instance, receive more points than those who still can work.

Organs will go to patients of comparable size and blood type who are highest on the list, barring complications and logistical problems, he said.

Although points were not assigned before, the selection process was essentially the same, said Bahnson. The new system, which went into effect in March, makes it easier for surgeons to choose patients for transplantation. It also makes it easier to explain why certain patients were chosen for the life-saving surgery in case of disputes.

"It allows us to measure," said Bahnson, who is chief of surgery at Presbyterian-University Hospital of Pittsburgh, a world transplant center.

Surgeons will be ultimately responsible for the final decision, according to Bahnson.

"I know patients will accept any system if they know it to be fair," he said.

Arms proposal gets mixed reviews

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest Soviet arms control proposal appears to include intriguing concessions to the United States, but Reagan administration officials are troubled because the Soviets are tying their concessions to restrictions on the "Star Wars" anti-missile program.

"We're glad they are talking, putting something down," a senior U.S. official said Tuesday in an initial assessment. "Some of the things make sense, but not all of them."

The Soviet proposal was given to U.S. negotiators in Geneva last week and then amplified by General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev in a speech Monday to the Communist Party Central Committee in Moscow.

A confidentiality rule approved by both sides limits what officials can say about the Soviet move in the long-stalemated talks. But three officials, all insisting on anonymity, said they found positive and disquieting elements.

On the plus side are these concessions:

The Soviets have dropped their demand that all sea-launched cruise missiles with ranges of more than 370 miles be banned. The United States has long objected to the Soviet demand.

Also, American fighter-bombers in West Germany and on aircraft carriers and other so-called forward-based systems would not be counted against the U.S. total under an agreement to impose new ceilings on strategic nuclear weapons on both sides.

A third concession is Gorbachev's statement that research on the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly known as Star Wars, would be limited "to the level of laboratory tests."

Previously, the Soviet leader had said he was willing only to permit "fundamental research." Gorbachev evidently is prepared to give American researchers more leeway.

On the other hand, the Soviet leader apparently is backsliding from his offer last year to reduce nuclear weapons on both sides by 50 percent.

His latest formula would cut warheads on long-range ballistic missiles from 6,100 to 4,800, and involve an overall reduction of about 30 percent in what the Soviets call nuclear "charges" — a wide range of weapons from bombs to land-based rockets.

More troubling, in the U.S. view, is Gorbachev's demand for an extension of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty for 15 to 20 years.

Congress wars over weapons question

By TIM AHERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Congress last year approved the renewed production of chemical weapons by the United States, Pentagon officials thought they had finally won a long battle. This country hasn't built such weapons since 1969.

But the Congressional go-ahead came with several strings attached, and it may be some time before nerve gas weapons are built. In fact, it may be several years.

Throughout President Reagan's first term, Congress rejected his appeal for the weapons, turning down his argument that the Soviet nerve gas build-up should be met with a similar U.S. response.

But when Reagan finally won last year, there were several conditions, including:

— An environmentally sound plan to destroy the aging stockpile of gas weapons stored at eight locations in the United States.

— A requirement that U.S. allies in NATO agree to "force goals" which include new U.S. gas weapons. The weapons won't be stored in Europe, even though that is the battleground where they are most likely to be used.

The current arsenal of weapons is stored in eight states, and local communities worry about the possibility of an accident or a leak. Those fears have greatly intensified in the 18 months since an industrial chemical accident killed more than 2,000 people in India, particularly since the nerve gas weapons are in many cases far more deadly than the chemicals involved in Bhopal.

The Army is considering three plans, all of which involve incinerating the weapons in closed containers from which the gases could not escape. Option 1 would burn the chemicals at the eight sites. Option 2 proposes sending them all to a distant incineration plant in the sparsely populated Utah desert. Option 3 proposes incineration in Utah and northern Alabama.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., announced last week he supported Option 1. He spoke for many people when he warned about the dangers of transporting the aging weapons via railroads in either Utah or Alabama. Better to burn them where they are, Sasser said, rather than ship them through states like Tennessee.

Judge opposes jewels to Marcos

HONOLULU (AP) — A federal judge Tuesday refused to delay the release of $8.4 million in assets the Customs Service seized from former Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos, and the U.S. government promised to appeal the decision immediately.

The State and Justice departments had argued that releasing the property Marcos brought with him after he was overthrown in February would jeopardize relations with the new Philippine government of Corazon Aquino.

But U.S. District Judge Harold Fong in his Tuesday ruling said ownership of the jewelry and Philippine currency would be settled on judicial grounds, not on the basis of U.S. foreign policy.

The Aquino government contends the property was taken from the country illegally, and says it is part of the wealth Marcos plundered from the nation during his rule. The Customs Service took custody of the property when Marcos and his entourage arrived in Honolulu on Feb. 26.

Fong had ruled June 6 that the Customs Service had no authority to continued holding the property.

In an affadavit filed June 9, Michael H. Armacoast, U.S. undersecretary of state for political affairs and former U.S. ambassador to the Philippines, asked Fong to delay his order to give the U.S. government time to appeal.

Armacoast said U.S. officials had repeatedly assured the new Philippine government the property would not be released until its ownership was settled in accordance with U.S. and Philippine law.

It was Armacaost request that Fong denied on Tuesday.

U.S. Attorney Daniel Bent said government attorneys Wednesday morning would ask a member of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco to overturn Fong's refusal to delay his June 6 order.

The government attorneys want the delay so that they can appeal the June 6 order itself, Bent said.

On Monday, U.S. District Judge Mariana Pfaelzer in Los Angeles, acting on a suit filed by the Philippine government, granted a temporary restraining order freezing a Beverly Hills home worth more than $4 million, $812,000 in bank accounts in California and an unspecified amount of jewelry in Hawaii.

Don't show cards

In the delicate parlance of nuclear arms control, negotiators don't always say what they mean.

Like good poker players, they keep their cards close to the vest, and rarely do onlookers learn their bottom line until talks reach the final stage. Intransigence today may not mean intransigence forever; it's just a bargaining tactic that paves the way to an acceptable agreement.

That's why President Reagan's May 27 announcement to give up Salt II, a 1979 arms-limitation treaty, seemed a wee bit hasty, to say the least. It isn't that Salt II is a particularly good treaty; it isn't. For other reasons, though, the decision to drop the treaty is ill-advised.

If Reagan intended his Salt II position as a tactic to move along the current round of U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations in Geneva, it seems to have worked well. The Soviets came up with a new proposal to cut long-range nuclear weapons, and Reagan said recently it will be given serious consideration.

Under the proposal, the Soviets seek a 50 percent reduction in both countries' arsenals of offensive strategic weapons, and in exchange, a 10- to 20-year extension of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

Extending the ABM would cause a delay in deploying a "Star Wars" anti-missile defense, but that is not much of a sacrifice. The technology is far from developed yet. Soviet negotiators, in their eagerness to block deployment of a space-based defense, have dropped their opposition to allowing "Star Wars" research. That should be a key concession, enabling U.S. negotiators to back away from their hard-line refusal to give ground on a space-based anti-missile defense. Even if the two sides agree to move ahead with research, no foolproof system is likely to emerge from it. Even if it did, "Star Wars" undoubtedly would provoke a deadly new arms race between the superpowers.

Since the Soviets take "Star Wars" seriously, however, its concept can be a weapon for peace, an American bargaining chip to be tossed on the table when the time is right.

There are some who fear that Reagan, influenced by hardline advisers, is intent on giving up on Salt II and forging ahead with "Star Wars," no matter how the Soviets respond. A gloomy premise for arms control but a premature one, too.

The president still supports Star Wars and criticizes SALT II publicly. But he also hailed Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev for talking about reducing and even eliminating nuclear arsenals.

Perhaps, then, Reagan actually hasn't given up on a negotiated arms-control agreement. Perhaps he's not ready to show all his cards.

President Reagan is too good a poker player to show his cards too early. "Star Wars" is the United States' literal "big gun" at this point. But Salt II, for all its inherent faults, may at least provide the incentive to keep the arms race to a minimum.

That fact shouldn't be disregarded.

No more 'nightmares'

I have been watching the newspapers and television media champion the cause of the insurance industry in silence for long enough. The straw that broke the silence was the sob story "Avoid 'nightmare' " on the June 9 editorial page.

It is not too surprising that the media would be a contributing factor in the "insurance crisis." I assume they do not know that the insurance industry has controlled the purse strings of the world's money for centuries. Who has the most litigation and largest army of lawyers? The insurance industry. Why? Because they do not voluntarily settle claims in a satisfactory manner and must be brought to court for justice. They will bully and run over the average insured or claimant in order to hang onto their all powerful money.

Have the recent court judgments against these companies caused their financial pinch? No, it is that some of their investments have gone sour due to the slowing of inflation, and they are blowing smoke. It is another case of the tail wagging the dog. They want to skim the cream off of the insurance business and leave the skimmed milk behind. Greedy is the only word descriptive of this maneuver. If they cannot make outrageous profits they do not want the business.

If the Windfall Profits Tax is a legitimate means of profits punishment, then the insurance industry should have been paying windfall profits for the past 150 years. They have been the "grim reapers" for that long.

Hurray for Ford Motor Co. and 65 other major corporations for forming EXEL Ltd., their own insurance company. If more companies, states, counties, cities, schools, hospitals, etc. took positive action it would be the insurance industry that has been out-foxed. They are the cause of the problem — not the claims they try to avoid. I think jurors have realized this.

We will have no more hysterical nonsense about little children being deprived or jurors wearing black hats. Insurance companies can be responsible or bar them from doing business in the state!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On June 18, 1983, astronaut Sally K. Ride became America's first woman in space as she and four colleagues blasted off aboard the space shuttle Challenger.

On this date:

In 1778, American forces entered Philadelphia as the British withdrew during the Revolutionary War.

In 1812, the United States declared war against Britain.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte met his Waterloo as British and Prussian troops defeated the French forces in Belgium.

In 1873, suffragist Susan B. Anthony was fined $100 for attempting to vote in the 1872 presidential election.

In 1940, during World War II, British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill urged his countrymen to persevere in a way that would make future generations say, "This was their finest hour."

In 1953, Egypt was proclaimed a republic.

In 1972, Britain's worst air disaster occurred when a British European Airways jet crashed shortly after takeoff, killing 118.

Ten years ago: Rep. Wayne Hays resigned his chairmanship of the House Administration Committee following allegations the Ohio Democrat had put his mistress, Elizabeth Ray, on the committee payroll. Hays resigned from Congress three months later.

CIA report cites Mexico's fairness tilt

WASHINGTON — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has taken a lot of heat for his hearings on corruption in Mexico. But while he may be faulted for lack of tact, there is no denying the seriousness of the problem. In past columns, we have exposed massive, top-to-bottom corruption.

Jack Anderson

Privately, the Mexicans themselves acknowledge this. The same high Mexican officials who complain about the indignity of the Senate disclosures readily admitted to Dale Van Atta on his three recent visits to Mexico that corruption is a critical problem that must be curbed.

The CIA and other U.S. intelligence agencies recognize this as well. But in their latest National Intelligence Estimate on Mexico, they give President Miguel de la Madrid credit for doing more than his predecessors to fight corruption.

"In particular," the secret report states, "he has worked to distance himself from the egregious corruption and failures of President Lopez Portillo (1976-1982) and other senior officials of the previous government by pursuing an anti-corruption campaign that has included the imprisonment of at least one former high official and revelations of abuses by others, and by projecting an image of fairness, competence and probity the president so far has provided generally effective and popular leadership."

In fact, the secret report suggests that the most serious threat to de la Madrid's government would be the popular perception that he is not living up to his campaign promise of "moral renovation."

Eight out of 10 Mexicans in a recent poll said they believed "that the country's current crisis is the fault of corrupt or inept officials who enriched themselves while in office," the intelligence report states. It adds:

"Though bribery, influence peddling and nepotism and illegal profiting have historically been accepted elements of the political and social systems, corruption reached such excessive and conspicuous levels during the oil boom years that senior party and government officials as well as some labor leaders are apparently blamed by many for most of the country's current problems."

The report predicted that de la Madrid will persist in his anti-corruption campaign, at least for a while, but added this warning: "There are dangers in his proceeding too quickly or casting the net too widely."

As we pointed out two years ago in a series on the high-level corruption and profiteering that were bringing the country to its knees, Mexico's problems have a far more direct and important effect on the United States than those of Nicaragua and El Salvador combined.

Actually, the Helms Foreign Relations subcommittee that deals with Mexico had planned to hold hearings last fall. A key Helms aide wrote a memo to the senator listing the topics for the hearing: U.S. economic aid to Mexico; "Mexican crimes against Americans" (like the murder of a U.S. narcotics agent in February 1985); "corruption in Mexico"; "fraud in Mexican elections"; "failure of land reform"; and "religious persecution."

Helms staffers sardonically refer to it as "The Earth Shattering Memo." It was dated Sept. 18, and in the next two days earthquakes devastated Mexico City, killing thousands.

The tragedy led to postponement of the hearings until the first of the year, and then they were delayed further by other foreign-policy crises: the fall of Haitian dictator Baby Doc Duvalier and the ouster of Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos.

Interestingly, one reasonable criticism that Helms' critics have failed to raise is that his hearings on the left-of-center Mexican government's sins have helped to keep the right-wing dictatorship in Chile out of the media spotlight.

UNDER THE DOME: Given the doubts of many military experts that the Stealth bomber will actually do what it's supposed to — evade Soviet radar — why does Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., support the $70 billion project? House insiders tell us that Aspin, the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, thinks support of the Stealth and of the Midgetman missile will effectively counter Republican charges that the Democrats are "soft" on defense. He's hoping to make Stealth and Midgetman the pillars of a Democratic defense policy that will convince the voters the party isn't a collection of wimps.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS: Imelda Marcos can be forgiven if she looks back with nostalgia on her first visit to the United States as the Philippines' first lady. Recently released State Department cables list the following items on the agenda of her two-day visit to New York City in 1966: a fashion show, a musical comedy, supper at Sardi's West, the late show at the Copacabana on the first day, then a shopping excursion and a visit to a fashionable discotheque the second day.

MINI-EDITORIAL: An era has ended. The Coast Guard's new commandant, Adm. Paul Yost, has forbidden his men to wear beards, which has been allowed since the Vietnam War. The handwriting was on the bulkhead when the Navy banned beards last year, leaving the Coast Guard the only service that permitted them. The admiral gave as his reason: "I desire our military personnel to present a neat and professional military appearance." But he wasn't even consistent in his pursuit of clean-shaven uniformity: Mustaches are still allowed. Any seafarer can tell you, a soup strainer is no substitute for a natty nautical beard.

Circumstances bringing S. Africa to senses

PARIS — The future of apartheid has been settled. The question is no longer whether it will be abolished, but when, in what circumstances, and what will follow.

Flora Lewis

That is the message of Pretoria's decision to declare national emergency, and of the world's reaction. The surprise isn't that the regime and the people of South Africa have reached this painful confrontation, but that it took so long.

But this is no time to rejoice. Things will get worse in South Africa, possibly for a long time, before they begin to get better. Many will suffer for simply being there, apart from what they do and have done.

Nor does it behoove the rest of us to feel righteous or superior. The world record on racism is foul, not only between whites and blacks, but among whites, among blacks, among Asians and others. The difference is that other societies, though still not all, moved a little earlier to recognize the disgrace on the name of humanity.

The powerful minority in South Africa clings to selfish notions that were once widely shared. The Times of London recalls a whimsical example of passionate Afrikaner belief in unacceptable old ideas. A British sea captain visited Pretoria on his voyage around the world in 1897-98. President Kruger angrily corrected him. "You don't mean round the world, it is impossible. You mean in the world," since the world is certainly flat.

But there is nothing whimsical about stubbornly insisting that human rights depend on race. The outpouring of indignation has undertones of embarrassment at South Africa's claim to be part of the modern world without recognizing the obligation to show moral as well as material advance. It is a reminder of how recently the West began to move on.

So it is necessary to express that obligation loudly and clearly enough to sweep away those old South African beliefs. The issue for outsiders is how to do that. There should be no illusion that sweet reason will suffice. The failure of the Reagan administration's "constructive engagement" and the collapse of Commonwealth efforts to mediate make that clear.

Neither should there be any illusion that measures are available to force a peaceful solution from abroad. President P.W. Botha should be believed when he says: "We are not weaklings.... If we are forced to go it alone, then so be it." Punitive action will have some effect but onlookers, however outraged, will not be decisive. The open questions will be answered by the people directly involved. The main reason for sanctions should be understood as our own need to show what we now believe, our need to show support for those who fight for dignity and decency.

This is required for Western self-respect. But it is also wise policy because it matters enormously to the West whether the regime falls in protracted massacres, what comes afterward, and what preparations are made to deal with its successor. The principled and the practical point in the same direction.

So far as possible, the focus on sanctions to implement this stand should be the decision makers, the South Africans who can make a difference. Closing consular facilities and direct air links out of Africa would be more than symbolism, for example. It would target the traveling and trading classes, primarily the establishment, since not many blacks and few dissident whites have freedom to move. Those who do would discover they, too, have some dependency on neighboring black states, not always the upper hand.

In the same way, the focus on incentives should be the development of black skills, of competent future leadership, helping the capacity for a functioning multiracial society to emerge. The real world never lives "happily ever after." There is always a price to pay for passage through an ordeal. The future should not be forgotten in the passion of the present.

The case is strong now for sharp, selective sanctions, withdrawal of finance, withdrawal of privilege, withdrawal of markets. The case is not clear for attempts to dismantle South Africa's economy. Specifics should be examined with an eye to the needs of the day after apartheid. As the relatively gentle case of the Philippines shows, it is much harder to put an economy back together than to rip it apart.

Australia's Malcolm Fraser said plaintively after helping write the Commonwealth group's report, "We are not trying to bring South Africa to its knees, but to its senses." That may be wishful. It is the right wish. Whether or not it saves lives in South Africa, which is the hope, it can save our senses.

ART BUCHWALD

'See America First' — but not on July 3rd!

It happened on July 3, 1986, less than a month from now. The "See America First" campaign had been a smashing success. Everybody without exception turned their backs on Europe and decided to visit the U.S.A. instead. They all chose to leave on the same day.

Art Buchwald

As Conway drove down to the Beltway with his family of three children, his luggage rack loaded with gear, he noticed that the traffic was unusually heavy — so much so that he was stuck on the Beltway ramp and could not move forward or backward.

He said to his crying children, "You can't see America first without some hardship. Now either sing along with Bruce Springsteen or shut up."

After an hour Conway rolled down his window and asked the driver in the next car what the hold-up was.

The man replied, "I don't know. It says on the radio every highway is gridlocked between here and Nebraska. The whole country started up their cars at the same moment."

"Where are they trying to get to?" Conway asked.

"Yellowstone National Park, I think."

"That's where we're going," Conway's wife said.

"We'll fool 'em," Conway told her. "Everyone thinks we're heading for Yellowstone Park, but we'll turn off at the next exit and go to Disney World instead."

"I wouldn't go to Disney World," the man in the next car yelled. "The fire department has just closed down Orlando, Fla., for overcrowding."

"The whole city?"

"All the way to Sarasota."

Conway's 13-year-old daughter burst into tears. "You promised to show us America, and we've been sitting here for four hours. We haven't seen anything yet."

"That's where you're wrong," said Conway. "This is America — cars bumper to bumper as far as the eye can gaze. You don't see this in the Soviet Union."

His wife said, "In the Soviet Union we could have driven from Moscow to Leningrad by now."

"Wait. Once we get out of here we'll head straight for the Statue of Liberty. No one will be there on the Fourth of July."

A motorcycle policeman walked by.

"Officer, I would like to know what the fastest way would be to get to the Statue of Liberty."

"I wouldn't try it if I were you," the cop replied. "Manhattan is ringed with the National Guard."

"What for?"

"To put down the tourist riots. Apparently every family in America had the same reservations for the same rooms, and the only way to get people out of the lobbies was to tear gas them."

"Has it quieted down?" Conway asked.

"It has, now that the mounted police rounded the tourists up with cattle prods and put them in Yankee Stadium."

"How long do you think it will take us to get to the Chevy Chase exit from this ramp?"

"Three, four days at the most."

"But we can't survive for four days waiting to get on the Beltway."

"You should have thought of that before you started heading west. Come to think of it, you're stuck — you can't move forward and you can't move back — so you're parking, right?"

"I'm parking against my will."

"I don't care what the reason is. You're still illegally parked. Here's a ticket. If I find you here in a couple of hours you'll get another one."

"This is unfair."

"I would like you to take a Breathalyzer test, too," the cop said.

"What for?"

"Anybody that takes his family on an auto trip on July 3 has got to be drinking."

Polish woman talks about nuclear disaster

FORT WORTH (AP) — The usually unclogged streets of Joanne Swic's tiny college town in Poland were filled with families trying to prevent radiation side effects shortly after the Chernobyl nuclear accident, the woman says.

Swic

Ms. Swic, a student, said she didn't know it at the time, but learned the next day of the accident at the nuclear power plant and that radioactive fallout was drifting through the air.

Some of it was landing in Bialystok, Poland, where Ms. Swic was staying.

"I am a Christian, so I started praying," she said Monday from Fort Worth, where she is visiting friends.

The families she had seen in the street were on their way to receive potassium-iodide pills, a safeguard against Iodine 131, which was present in the Chernobyl cloud. The element can enter the food chain and cause thyroid cancer or abnormal functioning of the thyroid gland.

Although Polish officials did not officially recommend that pregnant women get abortions, several doctors believed it was a good idea, Ms. Swic said.

"I have a friend who is pregnant...and she was very frightened," she said. "But she was five months pregnant. Doctors were advising women four months along, or less, get the abortions.

"My friend decided against it. She's probably still frightened."

Ms. Swic was in Bialystok to complete a one-week teaching internship, one of the final requirements for her teaching degree.

"I had to stay," she said. "I wanted to leave, of course. But I couldn't. It was the time for my internship."

Ms. Swic normally lives in Warsaw, which is further west and received less fallout.

Sad sack Cavs smell like a rose

Trade up nets top pick Daugherty

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Given the somewhat checkered history of the Cleveland Cavaliers, the last people you'd expect to see posing with the NBA's No. 1 draft pick were Gordon and George Gund, owners of this star-crossed franchise.

But there were the Gunds were Tuesday, happily holding up a Cavs jersey with No. 55 on it, even though Brad Daugherty wore No. 42 at North Carolina. Forgive the mistake. They're just not accustomed to this sort of ceremony.

Only once, 15 years ago when Cleveland chose Austin Carr, has this team had the draft's first pick. In fact, the Cavs rarely have had any first-round picks at all.

Since 1973, previous administrations have traded Cleveland's No. 1 pick in every draft except one, sometimes acquiring another team's No. 1, sometimes not bothering with that technicality.

Some of the players the Cavaliers have obtained in these trades include Jerome Whitehead and Richard Washington, Geoff Huston, Mike Bratz, Terry Furlow, Don Ford and Chad Kinch, and Randy Smith. None of them have spaces reserved in the Hall of Fame.

When the Gunds purchased the team three years ago, the NBA welcomed them into the fraternity and, as part of the purchase agreement, permitted them to buy replacement draft picks for the ones the team no longer owned. The package price for four first rounders reportedly was $1.5 million.

THE GUNDS were grateful for the league's largesse.

"You are buying a property that existed," Gordon Gund said. And that existence did not include the lifeblood of a franchise — draft picks.

"If we didn't buy the picks, we wouldn't have them," George Gund said.

In 1983, they purchased the No. 24 pick, Stewart Granger, who played one year. In 1984, they bought No. 12, Tim McCormick, then packaged him in a trade with Washington that gave them Mel Turpin. Last year, they got No. 9, Charles Oakley, and then swapped him to Chicago as part of a four-player deal that delivered Keith Lee and Ennis Whatley. This year, they bought in at No. 8 and used the pick to select Ron Harper from Miami of Ohio.

But before picking Harper, the Gunds made their draft dais debut with Commissioner David Stern and Daugherty. The appearance had its origins in a New Orleans court room when a jury found John "Hot Rod" Williams innocent of five counts of conspiracy and bribery Monday, freeing him to pursue his NBA career.

A YEAR ago, the Cavaliers, fully aware of Williams' legal problems, had picked him in the second round. With their history, it was no surprise when Stern refused to approve the contract until the young man had completed his business with the district attorney.

Once Williams was free, it gave Cleveland some roster mobility. So they went shopping. "We were talking with Philadelphia," Gordon Gund said. "We were interested in the 21st pick."

The 76ers owned that choice but when the subject was broached, Philadelphia turned the conversation elsewhere. That may have been because No. 21 was already on its way to Washington in the Moses Malone-Jeff Ruland trade. Instead, the Sixers asked if the Cavs might be interested in their lottery prize, No. 1.

What an intriguing idea, the Gunds thought. This perpetually draft-bankrupted franchise with the league's top pick. How much, they asked. The price — forward Roy Hinson and future considerations — was affordable and the deal was done.

HINSON, A quality player, was expendable because of the Williams verdict. The future considerations were affordable because the Gunds are free spenders. How much money did the Sixers get?

"A lot," George Gund said.

As much as the brothers had to pay for those NBA-awarded draft picks?

Gund just smiled.

"That's a lot, too," he said.

Mark Burgen, Andrews, flinches after chipping onto the green in Tuesday's West Texas Junior Championship qualifier at Hogan Park. Burgen eventually won the tourney with an even par 71.

Andrews golfer takes over at Hogan

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Mark Burgen of Andrews was looking forward to seeing his old pals Bobby Gee and Larry Bryan at Tuesday's stop of the West Texas Chapter Junior PGA tour.

But with Gee and Bryan off in Houston, Burgen didn't miss them at all in the winner's circle at Hogan Park after firing an even-par 71 to take the West Texas Junior qualifying tournament.

"We have a lot of competition between us, I like to play them," said Burgen of Gee and Bryan, Midland Lee's pair of hot young golfers. "I was the first one off the tee this morning, so I didn't really know who was here. I finished third in this tournament last year and Bobby won it with a 71."

But Burgen, recently back from the Class 4A state tournament in Austin where the Mustangs placed fourth, isn't taking a backseat to many junior golfers these days. Not with a 71 at Hogan Park that could have been much lower.

"I was two over on the front nine and two under on the back," Burgen said, after teeing off on No. 19 and making the turn at No. 10. "I was three under on the front, too, but then I bogeyed the last three before the turn.

"I was hitting my driver long, knocking my irons up by the stick and making some putts. I just had a pretty good day hitting the ball."

FOR HIS efforts, Burgen qualified for a pair of tournaments, the West Texas Chapter Junior Championship in Amarillo Aug. 13-14, and the Insurance Youth state tournament in Austin July 9-10 and a chance for the national Insurance Youth Golf Classic in Springfield, Ohio in August.

Also qualifying for the West Texas Junior Championship was Stanton's Greg Avery in the 16-18 age bracket. Avery, who played on Stanton's state runner-up in the Class 2A tournament, won a playoff with Odessa's Tommy Martinez on the third hole, but it wasn't easy.

Avery found himself in Hogan's mesquite rough on his second tee shot in sudden death and took an unplayable lie. But a tremendous out took him over the green on No. 20, a par-five. From there, he chipped up and putted down for par to take Martinez to another hole, which he won with par.

"This was my first ever sudden death and I guess I tensed up on my drives, I haven't hooked the ball like that all day," said Avery, a junior-to-be for the Buffaloes.

WHILE NOT qualifying for the Junior Championship, Martinez did qualify with Burgen and Avery for the Insurance Youth tournament in Austin in July.

In the younger age brackets, 13-year-olds John Cantu and Steven Ward dueled it out for top honors in the 12-13 division with remarkable 72s. Ward finally took the title on the second hold of sudden death after Cantu had made a remarkable save from the mesquite to save par on the first hole of the playoff. Both earned a spot in the Amarillo tournament.

Jeff Dietiker's 74 topped the 14-15 age group while Shaun Bishop was second with a 78, also enough to qualify for the Junior Championship. In third in the 14-15 division and qualifying for the Youth Insurance tournament in Austin, was Wade Hatter, who nipped William Sturgeon in a playoff. Both shot 79 over the first 18 holes.

Angels post meaningless win to end half, 1 ½ back

From Staff and Wire Reports

EL PASO — The Midland Angels survived rain delays of an hour and 46 minutes, quite a bit of grumbling and a brief power outage to post a 9-2 five inning win in the final game of the first half of the Texas League season Tuesday night.

Midland finished the first half 1½ games behind the TL West leading Diablos. The two teams will meet again for a six-game set to open the second half Thursday night at Angels Stadium.

Managers and players for both teams grumbled at having to play the game through the long rain delays. It started sprinkling during the national anthem, prompting one Midland player to run from the dugout and pour a glass of water on the first base line in a humorous attempt to get the game postponed.

The game finally ended nearly four hours later at 11:20 p.m. (MST) when the umpire stopped the game because of rain.

But Midland had long before socked away the victory with early runs off starter and loser Pete Kindrick, 6-4. Midland scored two in the first and three in the third to stake Vinicio Cedeno, 2-2, to an early lead.

Glen Walker continued his torrid pace with three hits and three rbi for the Angels as they pounded out 15 hits in just five innings of play.

MEANWHILE, IN the East, Jackson's Rick Lockwood and Doug Gwosdz had homers to help the Mets take a 12-5 victory over the Arkansas Travelers to clinch the first half championship in the Texas League East.

Elsewhere, San Antonio defeated Beaumont, 4-1, and Tulsa's scheduled game at Shreveport was postponed because of rain.

Tuesday's games marked the end of the first half with Jackson, the East champions, and El Paso, the West champions, guaranteed a berth in the series to eventually determine the league championship.

Texas League teams will return to action Thursday night with El Paso at Midland, Beaumont at San Antonio, Arkansas at Tulsa and Shreveport at Jackson.

Lockwood had a three-run homer and Gwosdz had a two-run shot as the Mets took the 12-5 victory over the Travelers.

Lockwood's homer came in the first inning as the Mets took charge with four runs. Arkansas came back with three runs in the second inning, but Jackson had three more in the bottom of the seventh to settle the issue quickly.

GWOSDZ HAD his homer in the seventh inning. Tom Amante had a solo homer for Arkansas.

The winning pitcher was Kyle Hartshorn. The loser was Ernie Carrasco, 5-4.

Barry Wohler and Phil Torres combined to limit the Beaumont Golden Gators to only six hits as the San Antonio Dodgers took a 4-1 victory.

Wohler, 3-3, pitched the first six inning and Torres finished the night.

Paucity of talent shows in draft

Associated Press

A Dallas resident who grew 10 inches after graduating high school to play basketball in college was among the most unusual players chosen on NBA draft day.

On the short end, the scarcity of Southwest Conference and Lone Star State picks were also noticeable.

The first Southwest Conference player selected was 78th on the list, and only six were chosen in all. Last year, Joe Kleine of Arkansas and Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist both went in the first round.

Dennis Rodman, a 6-foot-9 forward from Southeastern Oklahoma State who was drafted in the second round Tuesday by Detroit, did not play basketball when he attended South Oak Cliff in Dallas.

"I was a nobody. I had no thoughts of present plans, no future dreams, nothing," Rodman said in a recent interview.

More Draft 2B

BUT RODMAN grew 10 inches after graduating high school, playing competitively in college and becoming a three-time NAIA all-American at Southeastern Oklahoma.

"I never imagined that I might be growing up like this," Rodman said.

He was the only Dallas player selected in the draft.

The Southwest Conference's most valuable player — 6-foot-11 center John Brownlee of Texas — was picked by the Los Angeles Clippers at 78th on the list. Brownlee, who transfered to UT from North Carolina, was a high school all-American at Fort Worth Southwest.

Taken immediately after Brownlee by the San Antonio Spurs was Baylor's Carlos Briggs, a 6-foot-1 guard who was dismissed over disciplinary infractions last year.

Sacramento then took University of Houston guard Alvin Franklin.

The only other SWC players taken were Texas Tech's Tony Benford, by Boston in the fourth round; Texas A&M's Jimmie Gilbert, by Chicago in the fifth round; and Southern Methodist's Kevin Lewis, by San Antonio.

TEXAS-EL Paso had two players chosen by the third round. Center Dave Feitl, 6-11, was a second round choice of Houston, and 6-6 guard-forward Juden Smith was taken by Portland in the third.

Johnny Dawkins will be dunking for San Antonio next year.

Duke's Dawkins a hit as Spurs' No. 1 pick

By SHEILA ALLEE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs, hurting for a strong playmaker, drafted Duke guard Johnny Dawkins in the first round of the NBA draft Tuesday.

Opting for a high scorer rather than a player with size, Spurs Coach Bob Weiss said the 6-2 Dawkins "can step in and be a good contributor right away."

Dawkins was the all-time leading scorer in Duke history and the No. 2 scorer in Atlantic Coast Conference history behind Wake Forest's Dickie Hemric. He is expected to fill a gap left in mid-season last year when point guard Johnny Moore was sidelined with a rare form of meningitis.

The Spurs have indicated they expect Moore to play next year, but have been noncommittal on how strong a role he will take after suffering from the debilitating illness.

The Spurs, who drafted at No. 10 in the first round after a 35-47 season, picked Eastern Illinois center Kevin Duckworth, 6-11, in the second round. Weiss described Duckworth as "a project" whose weight goes "up and down."

Duckworth topped out at 330 pounds his freshman year, but weighs about 290 now.

"It's a project pick, but we're very excited about it," he said.

The Spurs' veteran 7-2 center, Artis Gilmore, will be 37 by the time the season starts. Although he currently is a free agent, the Spurs have indicated they intend to re-sign him.

The Spurs also chose Forrest McEnzie, a forward from Loyola, Calif., for their third pick, 48th overall, followed by Carlos Briggs, guard, Baylor University, 79; Earl Kelley, guard, Connecticut, 102; Kevin Lewis, forward, Southern Methodist, 125; and Michael Anderson, guard, Pan American, 148.

Weiss said Dawkins was selected from a group of finalists including John Williams, a 6-9 forward from Louisiana State University, and Dell Curry, a 6-5 guard from Virginia Tech.

Williams was the second choice, Weiss said. "Williams, of the group, probably has the quickest downside," he said.

Alvin Robertson at 6-4 is the team's big guard and is not a high scorer, Weiss said.

"Dawkins is a smaller guard and can handle the ball and score for us," he said.

Dawkins, in a telephone interview from New York, said he was excited about being taken in the top 10.

"I didn't know they were interested in me," he said of the Spurs. "I have my work cut out for me just trying to play."

Spurs' owner Angelo Drossos said he did not expect Dawkins to be available when the team's pick came up.

"What a pleasant surprise," Drossos said. "I don't believe a player in the draft would have made me happier. He solidifies our backcourt for a long time."

'Bama's Buck Johnson tops Rockets' wish list

By LAURA TOLLEY

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets made Alabama forward Buck Johnson their first-round pick in the NBA draft Tuesday, and then went for a seven-footer in the second stanza as a possible complement to the "Twin Towers" of Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson.

Forward Dave Feitl from Texas-El Paso, who was taken in the second round, also could serve as future trade bait, Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said.

"I'm just so happy I don't know what to say," Johnson said in a telephone interview from Birmingham, Ala. "I was very surprised they took me, but I'm very happy also."

Johnson, 6-7, averaged 20.7 points per game and 8.3 rebounds last season. He is the Crimson Tide's fourth all-time leading scorer with 1,869 points and sixth all-time leading rebounder with 933 boards.

"We've got us a small forward in Buck Johnson," Fitch said. "Buck Johnson, I think is a very impressive player. He plays with a great deal of intensity. We've happpy to have him."

Johnson said he believes he can add some depth in the forward position and perhaps do some duty at guard.

"I'm willing to do whatever the management wants me to do — to wait or play right away," Johnson said.

Johnson was a three-time All-Southeastern Conference selection. Behind his leadership Alabama reached the SEC tournament finals three times, made four straight trips to the NCAA tournament and was 85-43.

He said he was looking forward to playing with Olajuwon and Sampson.

"It's gonna be great to play with those guys," Johnson said.

Feitl said living in El Paso during college gave him the opportunity to watch the Rockets play and become familiar with their style.

"I think I can fit in," Feitl said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles. "I really feel that I can contribute a lot."

"I was very surprised. I didn't think they were looking for any inside players," he said. "It's good to go to a successful program."

Feitl averaged 11.5 points per game and averaged 5.8 rebounds. He was named first team all-Western Athletic Conference in his senior year after leading the Miners in scoring and rebounding. He also had 40 blocks this season.

In his four years with the Miners, the team won four WAC titles.

Feitl could add to the team's towering floor strategy, Fitch said. But Fitch also said Feitl could serve as leverage in a possible trade.

"But I hope he makes our club," Fitch said. "I think we took a a player that has the size and potential at making a shot at our ball club."

The Rockets chose 6-6 guard Anthony Bowie of Oklahoma in the third round and 66th overall, 6-7½ guard Conner Henry of UC Santa Barbara in the fourth and 89th overall, and 6-4 guard Andre Banks of Iowa in the fifth, 112.

The team finished by taking Robert Worthy, a Duke forward, selected 135th overall; and Ricky Olson, a Wisconsin guard, 158.

Prior to Tuesday's draft, the Rockets said they hoped to gain a point guard, but were prepared to take the "best athlete available."

But Fitch said Tuesday, "We never had any hope of a guard coming down to us."

The Rockets advanced all the way to the NBA finals without a true point guard after John Lucas was dismissed from the team March 15 for failing a drug test.

"The point guard may be a thing of the past around here," Fitch said.

Mavs hope Tarpley is 7-footer they need

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — It appears that Dallas Mavericks' star scorer Mark Aguirre and Coach Dick Motta will have to get along another NBA season.

Unable to deal the moody Aguirre, the Mavericks on Tuesday drafted 6-foot-11¾ power forward Roy Tarpley, the leading scorer and rebounder at Michigan the last three seasons.

"Roy's just short of seven feet and there aren't many of those kind of folks around," said Dallas personnel director Rick Sund. "It will be probably our last chance to draft in the top ten in a long time. We just had to beef up."

Trade rumors flew from the West Coast to Dallas but apparently the Mavs couldn't work a deal because of Aguirre's huge salary.

Sund said, "I'm sorry there is no trade announcements. There have been a lot of rumors floating around with no validity."

The hottest trade rumor at the Mavericks' NBA draft central was an Aguirre-Tarpley trade to the Los Angeles Lakers for James Worthy and either Michael Cooper or Byron Scott.

"I won't guarantee that Roy Tarpley will be here to start the season," Sund said. "You never know in this business. I might not be here or Dick Might not be here."

Sund said the Mavericks glad to have the 240-pound Tarpley who averaged almost 16 points, 9 rebounds, and 3 blocked shots per game.

"Because of Houston and Los Angeles in our conference, we have to get bigger," Sund said. "Tarpley is a good shot blocker, an excellent rebounder and a good banger. I think he will help us get better."

The Mavs did make a trade but it involved guard Mark Price of Georgia Tech who was picked at the start of the second round. Price was traded to Cleveland for a second round pick next year and future considerations.

Dallas took Louisville point guard Milt Wagner also in the second round.

"We feel Milt will make an excellent shooting guard," Sund said.

The Mavs also took Anthony Welch, a forward from Illinois, picked 62nd overall; Myron Jackson, guard, Arkansas-Little Rock, 85th; Jay Bilas, forward, Duke, 108; Greg Anderson, forward, Lamar, 131; Kim Cooksey, guard, Middle Tennessee State, 154.

Tarpley, a bit bewildered by all the trade rumors, said he would be happy to play for the Mavs.

"I've got to improve my upper body strength and I'm going to go to work on it," Tarpley said. "I don't know anything about all the trade talk. I just want to play in the NBA."

Motta said he was impressed with Tarpley during an interview.

"People who are successful in the Big Ten traditionally make the same strides in the NBA," Motta said. "I like him. He has a big body. I hope he causes me a big headache about how many minutes he plays.

"He played a lot at Michigan at center with his back to the basket. But he made some good moves facing the basket and runs the court a lot like Robert Parrish of the Boston Celtics."

Tarpley said he liked the thought of playing in Reunion Arena before the rowdy Dallas fans.

"They have the greatest fans in the world," Tarpley said. "I'm a Dallas Maverick right now and I want to stay that way."

LCC's Hays accepts Tech's baseball job

LUBBOCK (AP) — Larry Hays of perennial NAIA baseball power Lubbock Christian College has accepted the Texas Tech head baseball coaching position, Athletics Director T. Jones said Tuesday.

The hiring of Hays, 41, ends a five-week search to replace Gary Ashby.

"He brings with him years of great success in baseball and also as a man with an excellent reputation in every respect. He has outstanding character and is a leader on and off the field," Jones said.

Hays has coached LCC to a 695-381-1 record in 16 seasons. He coached LCC to the 1983 NAIA World Series championship and won eight of a possible 11 District VIII NAIA titles. This year he coached LCC to a 41-39 record and a runner-up finish in the Area 2 playoffs, losing to eventual national champion Grand Canyon.

"It's a great challenge, but at the same time it's a great opportunity," said Hays. "It is time in my life that I make a change like this and I appreciate the opportunity to do it."

Ashby was fired after three seasons, and a sixth place Southwest Conference finish in 1986. Tech was with a 34-25 overall, 7-14 in the SWC in his final year.

Kansas City's Buddy Biancalana turns two on Tony Phillips of Oakland Tuesday in American League action.

Lanier unhappy with play of front running Houston

CINCINNATI — Hal Lanier doesn't sound like the manager of a first-place ballclub these days.

His Houston Astros stayed atop the National League West despite wasting a two-run lead and losing to the last-place Cincinnati Reds 5-4 Tuesday night. That was about his only consolation after Cincinnati scored three unearned runs — two on left-hander Chris Welsh's first hit of the season — in the sixth inning for the winning margin.

"It was a (terrible) game," Lanier lamented. "We misplayed fly balls, we didn't throw guys out at the plate, we gave 'em extra runs. We don't deserve to win.

"People are going to have to start producing, one way or another, or we'll have to make some changes. I'm not really happy with what I see out there now."

The Astros wasted several scoring chances despite taking a 2-0 lead off Welsh, then helped the Reds regroup by contributing to each of their five runs.

Phil Garner hit a first-inning solo homer, his sixth of the season and third this year in Riverfront Stadium, and the Astros loaded the bases with none out in the second. Rookie right-hander Manny Hernandez grounded out to score a run, but Welsh, 2-1, pitched out of further trouble.

Eric Davis singled to start the bottom of the inning, stole second, moved up on a wild pitch, and scored on Wade Rowdon's ground out. Ron Oester bunted for a single in the fifth, was sacrificed to second, and scored the tying run on player-manager Pete Rose's double just over the head of left fielder Jose Cruz.

National League

Third baseman Phil Garner booted a grounder by Davis to start the sixth. A sacrifice, Davis's 20th stolen base, and Dave Concepcion's single through a drawn-in infield put the Reds ahead.

Welsh, a lifetime .200 hitter, capped the inning with a two-out single to score runners from second and third.

"Every squirrel finds a nut, I guess," Welsh said. "I swing hard in case I hit it."

Cardinals 7, Pirates 2

Rookie Greg Mathews pitched a five-hitter for his first major-league complete game and reserve Clint Hurdle hit a three-run homer as St. Louis beat slumping Pittsburgh.

Mathews, 3-1, retired 11 consecutive batters at one point as the Pirates lost their fifth in a row. Mathews struck out four and walked three.

Padres 8, Giants 5

Graig Nettles smacked a two-run homer on the heels of a bunt single by Steve Garvey to break a 5-5 tie and complete the San Diego comeback from a 5-1 San Francisco lead.

The Giants had grabbed a 5-1 lead after 5⅓ innings, but San Diego rallied for four runs in the sixth to tie score on run-scoring singles by Garvey, Terry Kennedy, Garry Templeton and Tim Flannery off San Francisco starter Mike Krukow and reliever Jeff Robinson, 4-2.

The victory lifted the fourth-place Padres to within 4½ games of first place Houston in the National League West.

Expos 4, Mets 2

Left-hander Joe Hesketh struck out a season-high 11 batters and scattered eight hits over 8 1-3 innings as Montreal snapped New York's seven-game winning streak and moved to within 10½ games of the first-place Mets in the NL East.

Hesketh, 4-4, walked none. The strikeout total was Hesketh's season-high and one short of his career high. He struck out nine Dodgers on May 11. Tim Burke came on to record the final two outs for his fourth save.

Phillies 11, Cubs 8

Mike Schmidt's bases-loaded single — his second hit of the inning — drove in two runs and Greg Gross drove in a run with his 101st career pinch hit as Philadelphia scored six runs in the eighth inning and outlasted Chicago.

The Phillies and Cubs combined for 21 hits, but no homers, as the wind at Wrigley Field was blowing in.

Braves 4, Dodgers 3

For the second straight night, Atlanta won a game in the bottom of the 10th inning and for the second straight night Ken Oberkfell played a key role.

After Mike Marshall led off the 10th with his second homer of the game — and league-leading 17th — to give the Dodgers a 3-2 lead, the Braves stormed right back to improve their record in extra innings to 8-1.

Rafael Ramirez hit a double down the right-field line to cap a two-run rally and score Dale Murphy with the winning run. Oberkfell's single with two outs scored Claudell Washington with the tying run.

Rangers fumble 4th in row

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The Texas Rangers, atop the American League West since May 24 but in the midst of their longest slump of the season, were well on their way to their fourth straight loss when they really swung into action.

However, it was the wrong kind of action. And it didn't involve any swings of the bats that right-hander Mike Witt of the California Angels held quiet during a nine-hit shutout.

Showing the frustrations of their losing streak, Texas coaches Tim Foli and Tom House were ejected with two outs in the ninth inning Tuesday night, just before the Angels completed a 4-0 victory over the Rangers.

Both were tossed without any apparent arguments. Foli, the third base coach, was ousted without warning by plate umpire Derryl Cousins for commenting on the size of the batter's box.

Before play could resume, first base umpire Jim Evans ejected House, the pitching coach, who was arguing from the dugout.

When play did resume, it was for only one pitch, as Geno Petralli flied to center to end the game.

"We hit line drives and the grass sucked up a lot of ground balls," said Texas Manager Bobby Valentine, whose club had weathered two earlier three-game losing streaks. "We didn't have anything to show for it. But things will start falling in for us, I guarantee it."

Witt, 8-4, managed to retire the side in order only twice in going the route for the sixth time this season. He walked one and struck out five, and his second shutout was repeatedly protected by the California defense.

The Angels managed a meager attack against Texas' makeshift pitching. Scheduled starter Ricky Wright suffered from a stomach virus and had to be replaced by left-hander Mickey Mahler, 0-2, but who pitched well in his four innings.

Doug Decinces struck the big blow with a three-run homer following singles by Reggie Jackson and George Hendrick in the fifth.

Red Sox 7, Yankees 6

Dwight Evans hit two home runs and New York's new third base coach Don Zimmer got the potential tying run thrown out at home by Jim Rice in the ninth inning as the Red Sox stretched their lead over the Yanks to 5½ games.

In the fateful ninth, Butch Wynegar and Willie Randolph opened the inning with singles.

After Rice's clutch throw, a walk to Rickey Henderson loaded the bases but Don Mattingly flied to shallow right and Dave Winfield grounded out to end the game.

The Red Sox built a 7-2 lead against Joe Niekro with five runs in the first inning, including two-run homers by Bill Buckner and Evans, who hit another two-run shot in the third.

AL Roundup

Royals 2, A's 1

Danny Jackson allowed seven hits in eight innings to end a personal four-game losing streak. Kansas City scored both its runs with two out in the fourth. Jorge Orta singled off the glove of Bill Mooneyham and went to second on the pitcher's wild pickoff attempt.

Frank White singled to score Orta and continued to second on second baseman Tony Phillips' throwing error. Steve Balboni singled White home for his 21st RBI in his last 19 games. The A's scored in the fifth on singles by Alfredo Griffin, Mickey Tettleton and Phillips.

Tigers 6, Orioles 3

Kirk Gibson drove in three runs and Lou Whitaker two as the Tigers matched their season high by pounding out 15 hits. The winning pitcher was Randy O'Neal, making his first major-league start since last Aug. 11. He yielded two runs and four hits in 6 2-3 innings for his first victory since last July 6. Willie Hernandez relieved after Larry Sheets' two-run homer in the seventh and recorded his 11th save.

Blue Jays 2, Brewers 1

Jesse Barfield, who singled home the game's first run in the 10th inning, doubled home the winner with one out in the 12th. Barfield's double drove in Willie Upshaw, who drew a walk from Milwaukee reliever Dan Plesac. Winner Tom Henke pitched two innings of hitless relief as the Blue Jays won their fourth straight.

Starters Jimmy Key of the Blue Jays and Danny Darwin of the Brewers pitched no-hit ball until the sixth and each allowed one run in 10 innings. In the Toronto 10th, George Bell led off with a double, moved to third on Upshaw's groundout and scored on Barfield's single. The Brewers tied it in the bottom of the inning on Rob Deer's one-out home run, his 12th of the season, that ended Key's shutout string at 21 innings.

Twins 4, White Sox 1

Kent Hrbek and Tom Brunansky hit consecutive first-inning home runs to give Minnesota a 3-0 lead. Winner Mike Smithson allowed 10 hits before being relieved by Keith Atherton with one out in the seventh and runners on first and third. Atherton walked John Cangelosi to load the bases but struck out Carlton Fisk and Harold Baines and earned his first save.

With one out in the first, Steve Lombardozzi singled and Hrbek crushed a pitch from Richard Dotson over the Metrodome's right-field auxiliary scoreboard about five rows deep into the upper deck for his 14th homer. Four pitches later, Brunansky hit his 16th.

Mariners 5, Indians 2

Gorman Thomas hit a three-run homer and Alvin Davis had his first five-hit game — four singles and a double — to help Seattle to its fourth straight victory behind Mike Morgan's nine-hit pitching. Morgan blanked the Indians until Joe Carter hit a two-run homer in the sixth.

Thomas homered off Phil Niekro in the second inning and Seattle chased the 47-year-old knuckleballer in a two-run fifth.

Court to review 4A mess

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has agreed to review conflicting lower court orders that one school lawyer said threaten to cancel some players' "once in a lifetime" quest for a state high school baseball championship.

The Supreme Court, acting Tuesday on an appeal by Austin Westlake, scheduled oral arguments for today.

Westlake lawyers went to the Supreme Court after it appeared that orders issued by judges in Waco and Austin had created a legal stalemate that would cancel the Class 4A state baseball tournament.

The Westlake appeal to be one of four semifinalists in the tournament said unless the Supreme Court acted, the 4A tournament probably would be canceled and players "will be deprived of this once in a lifetime experience and honor ... "

"Unless this court intervenes by mandamus, in this case of statewide importance, the sky will soon be black with criss-crossing restraining orders, injunctions and writs of prohibition," the appeal said.

State champions were determined in Class A, 2A, 3A and 5A last Friday but a deadlock between Westlake and Waco Richfield has held up play in 4A.

The University Interscholastic League has tentatively rescheduled the 4A semifinals for Friday night and the championship game for Saturday night in Austin, assuming that deadlock can be broken.

But UIL director Bailey Marshall has said if it cannot be resolved before Friday, the 4A state tournament may be canceled for this year.

Report has Bo leaning to baseball

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Bo Jackson, the Heisman Trophy-winning running back and No. 1 pick in the NFL draft, may be leaning toward a career in professional baseball even though the NFL's Tampa Bay Buccaneers have offered him a five-year, $7-million contract, according to a published report.

The Tampa Tribune, quoting an unnamed source, said Jackson was impressed with the clubhouse camaraderie and winning tradition of baseball's Kansas City Royals during a recent visit with the defending world champions.

On a scale of 1-to-10, with 10 meaning that the former Auburn star would choose baseball, the source told the newspaper Jackson "is somewhere between a six and a seven."

The Royals selected Jackson in the fourth round of this month's major league baseball draft and reportedly have offered him a five-year deal worth $5 million.

THE TRIBUNE said its source confirmed that figure was "on target," and added that the Bucs, who have described Jackson as the best prospect at his position since O.J. Simpson entered the NFL in 1969, have offered about $2 million more than the Royals.

BUCS OWNER Hugh Culverhouse said Tuesday that the NFL club has asked Jackson to inform the team by next week whether he intends to pursue a career in football or baseball. He added he does not consider the request an ultimatum.

Culverhouse issued a brief statement through the club's public relations department after The Orlando Sentinel reported Tampa Bay would reduce its contract offer to Jackson if he has not made a decision by next Monday.

The Sentinel, on Monday, interviewed Culverhouse in New York where he was attending the USFL-NFL antitrust trial.

A first: Protest upheld

PITTSBURGH (AP) — National League President Charles S. Feeney upheld Tuesday the Pittsburgh Pirates' protest that their Monday night game against the St. Louis Cardinals was prematurely called on account of rain by umpire-in-chief John Kibler.

Feeney said the game will be picked up Wednesday night at 6:35 p.m. with the Cardinals batting in the top of the sixth and holding a 4-1 lead. The game will be completed before the start of the teams' regularly scheduled contest.

The Pirates, citing both the Official Baseball Rules and National League guidelines, protested after Kibler ruled the game was official following two rain delays of 17 and 22 minutes.

Defending champions ousted by France, 2-0

MEXICO CITY (AP) — France easily ended Italy's hopes of a repeat World Cup championship and West Germany shattered the title dreams of the longshots from Morocco — by inches.

The French eliminated the defending champion Italians 2-0 Tuesday in convincing fashion behind Michel Platini, their great midfielder. West Germany's Lothar Matthaeus rainbowed and bounced a free-kick just past the Moroccan defensive wall and inches inside the goalpost with two minutes to go as the Germans ousted Morocco 1-0.

The second-round ended today with Denmark playing Spain in Queretaro and England taking on Paraguay at Aztec Stadium in Mexico City.

Third-round matchups this weekend feature the French against Brazil in Guadalajara and the Germans playing host Mexico in Monterrey on Saturday. Sunday's two quarterfinal pairings will be determined by today's results, with Argentina and Belgium already having qualified.

The Argentines play in Aztec Stadium against the winner of England-Paraguay; the Belgians take on either Denmark or Spain in Puebla.

Platini scored in the 14th minute at Olympic Stadium and helped set up Yannick Stopyra's goal in the 57th minute as the European champions outclassed the 1982 World Cup champs. It was the first time in three Cup meetings that France has beaten Italy, which still holds a 17-5-6 overall edge. The Italians had won every game between the nations in the last 66 years of international tournament play.

"We feel great satisfaction to have beaten the defending world champions," Coach Henri Michel said. "It is very important because France hadn't beaten Italy in a competitive tournament match since 1920."

"We were no match for them," Italian Coach Enzo Bearzot admitted. "We tried our best. I flatly reject any criticism of the players. They tried hard and they never surrendered.

"They had the heart I expected a defending World Cup team would have, but it wasn't a good day for us and France played at its best."

THE FRENCH also stuck to their game plan.

"They ran after the ball very much because we prevented them from playing," Platini said, explaining the strategy. "Our defense, especially the central defenders, never gave Italian strikers a chance."

World Cup

Meanwhile, Platini and midfielder teammates Luis Fernandez, Jean Tigana and Alain Giresse dominated the rest of the field.

"Our team was able to adjust to the conditions and the game of our rival. We knew how to impose our game," Michel said. "France has made progress because now we can adapt to the style of our rival, without really changing too much in our game."

At Monterrey, Morocco, the first African team to advance past the first round of the World Cup, did not try to change its game, sticking to the staunch defensive system which had made it the surprise of the tournament. But Matthaeus' 30-yard free kick bowed around the Moroccan wall to the right and then returned left just between the post an goalkeeper Badou Ezaki to beat the North Africans.

SECONDS EARLIER, Ezaki robbed Matthaeus with a sliding leg save.

German Coach Franz Beckenbauer realized his players need to be sharper against Mexico.

"Our greatest problem was our execution," he said. "The few chances we had should have been used better."

Morocco lived by its defense and died with an offense which produced only one goal in four games. But it left happy with a 1-1-2 record and the Group F title.

"By and large, we could say we're satisfied with our performance," said Jose Faria, Morocco's Brazilian coach.

Moroccan officials said they would put in a bid to host the 1994 World Cup — the 1990 event will be in Italy.

Sepp Piontek, Denmark's coach, criticized the FIFA, soccer's international governing body, for allowing Ramon Caldere to play in today's game. The Spanish midfielder received medication containing drugs on FIFA's anti-doping list while he was hospitalized for food poisoning earlier this month.

"It seems he will be able to play tomorrow," Piontek said, "so why should we have these anti-doping rules?

The Spanish federation was fined $12,000 and the team doctor reprimanded after Caldere was administered banned medication while in a hospital for food poisoning.

Opening lead: Five of ♠ Basic plays appear in as many forms as Joseph's coat had colors. Declarer failed to recognize one on this deal, and the defenders were quick to capitalize on his error.

North-South reached three no trump on a fairly standard auction. North's fifth diamond and good intermediates made his hand worth a jump to game.

A textbook opening lead of fourth-best from longest and strongest fetched the jack of spades from East and declarer's queen. South made a good play by crossing to the ace of hearts to lead a diamond from dummy, but East had been there before. He shot up with the king of diamonds and returned the eight of spades. When declarer played low, West carefully overtook with the nine. Declarer held up the table's ace, but a spade continuation forced out his last stopper. When West gained the lead with the ace of diamonds, he still had two more spades to cash for down one.

The defense performed exceptionally well, yet declarer had only himself to blame for failing in his contract. He ducked the wrong spade trick!

Observe what would happen if declarer allows East's jack of spades to win the first trick. East cannot continue the suit without giving declarer a second stopper in it and, therewith, the time to establish the board's diamonds. Nor is any shift effective. As the cards lie, declarer will end up with 10 tricks—two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and two clubs—unless East shifts to a club, then wins the first diamond to lead another club. The defenders can then get four tricks.

'America indeed God-blessed to have Kate Smith as one of her daughters'

Kate Smith

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Kate Smith touched the hearts of Americans and gave them a special pride with her sense of patriotism, said President Reagan in paying tribute to the woman who made "God Bless America" a second national anthem.

Although she had no formal music training, Miss Smith was one of the most popular radio entertainers during the 1930s and 1940s. She called her voice a "God-given gift."

Her songs made the Hit Parade more than 700 times. Among the most popular were "The Music Goes Round and Round," "White Cliffs of Dover" and her theme song, "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain."

But she was most closely identified with "God Bless America," making it a virtual second national anthem and inspiring her nickname, "radio's own Statue of Liberty."

Miss Smith died Tuesday of respiratory arrest at the emergency room of Raleigh Community Hospital, where she was taken after being stricken at her home, said nursing supervisor Mike Leisey. She was 79.

Miss Smith "was a patriot in every sense of the word...America was indeed God-blessed to have Kate Smith as one of her daughters," Reagan said in a statement from the White House.

"For many years, Kate Smith touched our hearts and souls and made us all swell with the special pride of being Americans," he said.

When President Franklin D. Roosevelt introduced her to visiting King George VI, he said, "This is Kate Smith — this is America." And, more than 40 years later, in October 1982, Reagan awarded her the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor.

Miss Smith had suffered brain damage during a diabetic coma in 1976 that made it difficult for her to walk or talk. Diabetes forced the amputation of her right leg above the knee in January, and she underwent a mastectomy on May 9.

Despite her illnesses, her death shocked the family, said her sister, Helena Steene of Raleigh. "She was ill, she was desperately ill at times, but she always came back," she said Tuesday night.

A funeral Mass will be held Thursday at Lady of Lourdes Roman Catholic Church in Raleigh, said Jeff Barbour of Brown Wynne Funeral Home. Final plans for burial have not been settled, he said.

Kathryn Elizabeth Smith was born in Greenville, Va., on May 1, 1907.

She sang for the first time in public at age 4 in a church choir. A few years later, she was singing for soldiers in Washington, and Gen. John J. Pershing gave her a medal for boosting morale, telling her, "You must keep singing, child."

Her family tried to discourage her show business ambitions, but at 17 she gave up nurse's training to seek her fortune.

After singing in vaudeville, she made her Broadway debut in 1926 in a musical called "Honeymoon Lane." The 5-foot, 10-inch Miss Smith, who weighed as much as 240 pounds, played a fat woman who was ridiculed by other characters.

She went on to play comic fat women in other musicals, though friends said the ridicule sometimes made her weep in her dressing room after peformances.

In 1930, a Columbia Records representative named Ted Collins saw her in a show and became her manager, a role he held until his death in 1964.

He booked her into the Palace, a major vaudeville house, for a record run, and on May 1, 1931, she made her radio debut in a 15-minute broadcast for CBS.

By 1933, she was the highest paid woman star in radio, earning $3,000 a week.

In 1938, Irving Berlin gave her the exclusive right to sing "God Bless America" on the air after she asked him for a song that would lift America's spirits.

That year she also began a radio commentary program called "Kate Smith Speaks," a mixture of current events, housekeeping tips and appeals for charitable causes that ran until 1951.

During World War II she traveled more than half a million miles to entertain troops. She also sold a record $600 million in war bonds and urged audiences to send letters and donate blood to servicemen.

Betty Crocker

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Tribune columnist Bob Greene, "confessing my lust" for the new Betty Crocker, is launching a nationwide hunt for a real-life version of the imaginary homemaker.

In Tuesday's editions of the newspaper, Greene said a number of male readers had written to say they shared his thoughts that the 1986 portrait of Betty Crocker recently unveiled by General Mills gave rise to lustful thoughts.

"The moment I saw that 'let's get out the cooking oil' look in Betty's eyes, I pre-heated," wrote reader Thomas Rockne.

General Mills says the portrait is based on a composite of three different models.

Said General Mills spokeswoman Marcia Copeland, "We think this contest is going to be fun, but we have no plans to get involved at this time."

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway theaters paid tribute to lyricist Alan Jay Lerner evening by dimming their marquee lights at curtain time.

Lerner, who collaborated with Frederick Loewe to create the hit musicals "Camelot," "Brigadoon" and "My Fair Lady," died Saturday of lung cancer at the age of 67.

At exactly 8 p.m. Tuesday, just as curtains within the theater district rose for the night's performances, marquee lights in the Times Square area were dimmed for one minute.

A private funeral service for Lerner was held Monday, and a memorial service was being planned for this summer.

Clint Eastwood

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (AP) — When Clint Eastwood decided to film a scene from his upcoming movie at the Swallows Inn, it made the day for four regulars at the bar.

Mike Grosse, Jim Floss, Karl Bish and Reg Nelson said they were asked to participate as extras in the film, "Heartbreak Ridge," in which Eastwood plays a Camp Pendleton Marine trying to save his marriage to Marsha Mason, who plays a waitress.

Assistant director Dean Jones said the four men appear for about three minutes as Eastwood enters the bar to seek a reconciliation.

Grosse, Floss, Bish and Nelson appear in the background drinking.

From Staff Reports

Two local oil companies have announced further cutbacks in employment, with more layoffs expected to follow.

Midland layoffs from Exxon Co. USA divisions are being estimated at 20 employees, while Amoco Production Co. said it would layoff 50 of its 800 employees in its Odessa, Andrews, and Hobbsoffices. Also being laid off are 25 of the 600 employees in the Brownfield and Levelland offices in the Permian Basin.

While the recent round of layoffs announced by Amoco involved paid professional salary personnel, another round of layoffs affecting 100 hourly employees such as roustabouts and pumpers in Texas, New Mexico and Michigan is expected to take place within a few weeks.

Altogether Amoco has laid off 225 employees at its regional office in Houston and another 125 workers at district offices in other Texas cities, New Mexico and Michigan. Nationwide approximately 1,500 of Amoco's 10,400 employees are affected by layoffs, prompted by declining oil prices.

"It involves all disciplines, include geologists, geophysicists, engineers and administration and from supervisory levels on down," said Amoco spokesman Charles Craft.

Twenty people lost their jobs Monday when Amoco closed its Traverse City, Mich., office and 10 others were offered transfers to the Amoco office in Tyler, Texas, said Amoco spokesman Gregory Clock.

Amoco earlier reduced its capital and exploration budget by about 30 percent to $3.5 billion.

To assist employees in continuing their careers Amoco has established comprehensive benefit and outplacement programs which include: up to 78 weeks severance pay for those employed 36 years; continuation of medical-life for up to one year and counselors, word procession equipment and telephone answering services to assist terminated employees in finding a new job.

The Midland Exxon cuts follow the company's announcement April 24, that it would reduce its workforce about 10 percent by voluntary departure programs, but would turn to involuntarily departure programs in the advent company ranks were not trimmed sufficiently.

Company spokesman Les Rogers says that 95 percent of desired job reductions were accomplished through voluntary measures during May. "The remaining staffing imbalances are being trimmed this week through involuntary separations."

Layoffs are expected to affect fewer than 260 Exxon Co. USA workers nationwide, less than one percent of the total 26,000-member workforce. Rogers declined to make an official estimate of the impact in the Permian Basin, but sources have estimated the local number of layoffs around 20 for Midland-based divisions.

Rogers says the cuts will primarily be in the exploration and production divisions, and that involuntarily separated employees will be provided the same benefits package as those who tool early retirement during May.

These bandits will bear gifts, not arms

From Staff Reports

In the days of the wild west, people often traveled by stage coach. Occasionally, on the cross country journey, their trip would be interrupted. Almost out of no where would come a group of masked bandits — whooping and hollering, their guns ablaze — and the stage coach would be forced to stop. The bandits would ask for the strong box and the passengers would be asked to surrender their money and jewelry.

In the spirit of the old west, the M-Squad, the official ambassadors of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, will stage a "holdup" once a week for eight weeks this summer. Assisted by the Midland County Sheriff's Department, they will stop an out-of-state family. This time, though, they will not wear masks to hide their identity; they will be armed with good will. The victims will be given a free night's lodging, a complete dinner and their choice of entertainment.

The guests might want to attend a Midland Angels' game, visit the petroleum museum, go to a performance at the community theatre or go to Water Wonderland. The M-Squad will be hosts and hostesses and will present them with a proclamation from the mayor, making them honorary citizens of Midland. Before they leave, they will be given a free tank of gasoline. All of the gifts are possible through the generousness of Midland businesses who believe in the spirit of Midland and want to share it with visitors to the city.

The guests will no doubt leave with many fond memories of their stay here and will be anxious to tell relatives and friends about their experience. The M-Squad's goal is to make the 'holdup victims' friends of Midland for a long time.

Mexico has much to offer Basin firms

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

There are products the Permian Basin can make that others want, if the Basin knew others wanted them, and the others knew the Basin made them, according to Bill Masterson, a consultant from Odessa, who is working with the Permian Basin International Trade Forum and the University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

Masterson spoke to a handful of businessmen at a meeting Tuesday, sponsored by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce (MHCC), discussing business opportunities in Mexico.

He also pointed out that, considering the financial crisis Mexico is facing, the U.S. government will most likely support any business that says it can establish trade in Mexico.

Roger Robles, president of the MHCC, commented that "There's no sense having materials sent to Hong Kong or Taiwan when the work could be done in Mexico." As Masterson observed, from Chihuahua to Ojinaga to Midland-Odessa is closer using the recently opened highway than Midland-Odessa is to Houston.

Making payment agreements involves "how well you know the people, how much mutual trust there is, and how much mutual trade," according to Howard Lukens, a professor at UTPB who has worked with the University of Chihuahua. He also supported local efforts to establish an international port of entry in Midland-Odessa and in Presidio.

The MHCC is planning a trip to Chihuahua and Parral for July 3-6, and invites any interested businessmen to join. As Robles noted, "Mexico has a substantial workforce ready and able to work."

Phillips to build plastics plant in Japan

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (SWN) — Toray Industries, Inc., and Phillips Petroleum Co. have signed a joint venture agreement to build a commercial-scale plastics plant in Japan.

The plant will produce polyphenylene sulfide (PPS), an engineering plastic resin with applications ranging from electrical and electronic parts to components for automobiles and appliances.

Phillips Petroleum Toray, Inc., a jointly owned Japanese company, will build the plant adjacent to Toray's plant near Nagoya. The facility will manufacture about 7,500 tons a year of PPS for the domestic production of industrial films, fibers and other high-tech products.

Phillips holds numerous manufacturing patents for Ryton PPS, a thermoplastic resin that withstands high temperatures and resists corrosive chemicals. The product often is compounded with fiber glass and other materials for specialized applications.

Phillips is the only company that manufactures commercial quantities of Ryton. The company developed and commercialized the Ryton manufacturing process during the 1960's and, through Phillips 66 Company, has been making it since 1973 at chemical facilities in Borger, Texas.

Economy shows sluggish growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew at a moderate annual rate of 2.9 percent in the first three months of the year, a sharp downward revision from earlier estimates, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the performance of the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, was only slightly better than for all of last year and more than a percentage point below the Reagan administration's forecast for growth of 4 percent for all of 1986.

The new estimate also marked a big downward revision from just a month ago, when the Commerce Department reported that the economy had expanded at a 3.7 percent rate in the January-March quarter.

While estimates of economic growth were weaker, the news on inflation remained upbeat. The Commerce Department said a price measure tied to the GNP rose at an annual rate of 2.4 percent in the first three months of the year, the slowest pace in almost 14 years.

While many analysts believe growth will improve in the second half of the year, they say the country will probably have to endure weak growth through the second quarter. Some analysts say growth from April through June will probably dip below 2 percent.

Economic growth for all of last year was 2.2 percent.

The prolonged weakness is coming from lackluster consumer demand, continued weakness in industrial America and a huge slump in oil and gas drilling caused by the fall in oil prices.

The Labor Department reported earlier that continued job losses in oil and manufacturing pushed the nation's unemployment rate to 7.3 percent in May as the number of Americans out of work rose by 212,000.

This weakness is expected to show up in weak GNP growth in the April-June quarter. The government will make its first estimate of growth for this period next month.

In another sign of weakness, the Commerce Department revised an earlier estimate on corporate profits after taxes to show them falling by 6.6 percent, the biggest decline in four years. The department earlier had put the decline at 4.9 percent.

The GNP report showed the economy grew by $26.9 billion in the first quarter, $6.6 billion below the estimate last month.

The department said the main reason for the revision was a weaker trade performance. The trade deficit was estimated to be growing at an annual rate of $138.1 billion in the first quarter, almost $8 billion higher than last month's estimate.

The department said that exports were rising at an annual rate of 6.6 percent, the same as the fourth quarter, while import growth slowed to a 2.4 percent annual rate, down from the 24.5 percent growth in the fourth quarter.

Analysts, however, have discounted this improvement in the trade figures, saying that much of it stemmed from a temporary halt to oil purchases by many refiners who were waiting for the price to fall farther.

Midland florist making a name for itself

By MELLA McEWEN

BUDDY'S FLOWERS, 1505 W. Wall, is putting Midland on the map.

The floral shop has reaped several honors recently from the Florist's Transworld Delivery network, FTD. First, the shop was listed among the top 500 FTD shops, which is awarded by sales figures, according to florist Judy Deeds. "When you consider how many florists there are across the nation, to be listed in the top 500 is quite an achievement," Deeds noted. There are 21,000 florists across the nation, according to Deeds, who noted that the shop had been in the top 1,000 the last four years.

Three florists from Buddy's were also honored recently. Thomas Russel, the shop's owner, Paula Eberle, and Judy Deeds received Master Florist Management Certificates from FTD. According to Deeds, only 500 of the nation's 21,000 FTD florists have received these certificates, which are awarded to those who successfully complete a series of workshops conducted by the FTD.

Eberle and Bobby Bradshaw have also just completed a workshop conducted by the FTD on the latest European designs, which are coming into fashion in the U.S. In comparing the European designs to American designs, Deeds noted that the Europeans follow nature more than the U.S. - grouping flowers the way they would naturally grow, and designing more freeflowing bouquets rather than the round bouquets Americans favor.

General Electric has announced that MERRIMAN TV & APPLIANCE WORLD, 3001 W. Wall, has been designated GE's Freight Damage Depot for a 40 county area of West Texas.

According to Arnold Wood, owner of Merriman, any appliances shipped to GE dealers in this area that are freight damaged or shipped by mistake will be brought to the Midland Deport for sale at reduced price. He said the appliances, which will include kitchen appliances and laundry equipment, will be under full warranty, excluding any appearance damages.

As a way to thank Midland and Odessa for their support, and to help out during the oil crisis, the PINOCCHIO'S PIZZA restaurants in both Midland and Odessa have rolled back their prices to 1978 level. Frank Price, manager of the Midland store, figures the reduction is approximately 30 percent on everything but beer. The offer is good for dine in and carry out.

The promotion will probably last until the end of June, but response has been so terrific it will most likely be offered again the last three weeks of July, Price said.

"It's just our way of thanking Midland for all the years of business," he said. The Midland store, located in San Miguel Square, has been open about five and a half years.

More than 500 corporations, universities and government installations have signed up to participate in the second artificial intelligence satellite symposium on June 25. The internationally broadcast educational event, produced and sponsored by TEXAS INSTRUMENTS, is designed for those who either are already involved in developing expert systems or just beginning to explore their potential. The five-hour symposium will provide specific directions and advice for implementing expert systems, as well as valuable information about strategic issues of productivity and competitiveness.

Entitled "Knowledge-Based Systems: A Step-By-Step Guide to Getting Started," the symposium is expected to exceed the 30,000-plus attendance figure of TI's first artificial intelligence (AI) teleconference last November. Downlinks for this year's conference have been arranged through TI for such corporations as AT&T, Grumman Corporation, Sperry Corporation, Walt Disney Productions, Eastman-Kodak, Bechtel, IBM, Proctor & Gamble, Kimberly Clark, Adolph Coors Company, Ford Motor Company, and many more throughout the U.S., Canada and Western Europe.

Warm Weather Entertaining

Although the fresh fruit season is still in its infancy, one apple — the green-ripe New Zealand Granny Smith — is available fresh from May to August. Co-starred with the crunchy, delicately-flavored pecan, Granny Smith apples are featured in spring-into-early summer creations just right for memorable warm weather entertaining.

Each of these distinctive recipes is designed to be done ahead to fit comfortably into almost any time schedule. Together they can be part of a buffet table, or they may be prepared individually to complement the menu or the occasion — hors d'oeuvres through dessert.

Though the essential ingredients, crisp New Zealand Granny Smith Apples and golden pecans, are common to all recipes, the results are decidedly different.

Piquant Pecan-and-Apple Stuffed Celery is a superb accompaniment to cocktails. Create a distinctive appetizer by piping or stuffing the filling into bias cut bite-sized pieces of celery. Try the filling, too, as a sandwich spread or stuffing for tomatoes.

Another impressive hor d'oeuvres idea is the Curried Apple and Pecan Dip. An intriguing blend of flavors, the dip doubles as a sauce for hot or cold meats, poached chicken and fish.

Spicy Lemon-Chicken Salad is not "just another chicken salad." Hearty but not heavy, it's ideal for warm weather luncheons and light suppers. Freshly made or made ahead, the chicken mixture is enhanced with unpeeled diced apple, coarsely chopped pecans, fresh parsley and raisins, sparked with a creamy cinnamon and tarragon dressing.

Granny's Elegant Layered Apple and Pecan Molded Salad is fun to put together. The sparkling clear gelatin base flavored with a fruity white wine shows off the layers of the sliced and diced apple, sliced romaine, contrasted with the crunchy halved and chopped pecans. It serves eight with style and keeps its elegantly attractive appearance to the last bite.

Souffle Glacé Grandmere Smith is an eye-catching dessert extravaganza. The apples, coarsely pureed in the processor with lemon, cinnamon and chocolate chips, are marbleized through a rich, yet surprisingly refreshing, cream cheese base. A do-ahead dream of contrasting flavors and textures, it's best served partially frozen, with a firm-to-solid outer layer and a creamy center similar to high-quality soft ice cream.

New Zealand Granny Smiths turn the apple season upside down, since they're the finest and freshest apple available during the North American spring and early summer. To maintain optimum freshness, keep Grannys refrigerated in a plastic bag perforated with a few holes.

Versatile pecans are the only nut native to North America. Stored in the refrigerator, they will stay fresh for at least four months; in the freezer they will seem "fresh picked" for up to two years.

Together, they make quite a team.

Piquant Pecan-and-Apple Stuffed Celery

8 ounces cream cheese, softened
1/3 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons prepared horseradish
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 New Zealand Granny Smith apple
3 ounces (1 cup) finely diced ham
1/2 cup coarsely chopped pecans
celery stalks

Combine first 6 ingredients in mixing bowl and blend until smooth. Core apple but do not peel; chop finely. Add to cream cheese mixture. Stir in ham and pecans and mix well. Cover and refrigerate until set, at least 1 hour.

Using pastry bag fitted with large decorative tip, pipe mixture onto celery. Return to refrigerator. Just before serving cut celery diagonally into bite-size pieces and arrange on serving dish.

NOTE: If not using pastry bag, form mixture into small balls using melon baller or fingers and gently press onto bite-size pieces of celery.

Curried Apple and Pecan Dip

Makes 6 to 8 appetizer servings.

1 cup mayonnaise
1 cup finely shredded cheddar cheese
1/2 cup chopped pecans
3 slices bacon, crisply cooked, drained and crumbled
2 tablespoons freeze-dried chives
2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
1/4 teaspoon curry powder
dash of white pepper
1 New Zealand Granny Smith Apple
3/4 to 1 pound large shrimp, boiled, peeled (leave tails on) and chilled

Combine all ingredients except apple and shrimp in medium bowl and mix well with spoon. Core apple but do not peel; chop finely and add to mixture, stirring well. Cover and refrigerate. To serve, spoon dip into bowl and set on service plate. Surround with chilled shrimp.

Spicy Lemon Chicken Salad

Makes 4 servings

Dressing:
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup sour cream
3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon dried tarragon, crumbled
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 cups cubed cooked chicken or turkey (1 whole chicken breast)
2/3 cup coarsely chopped pecans
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/3 cup finely chopped red onion
1/3 cup raisins
1/4 cup minced fresh parsley
1 garlic clove, minced
1 New Zealand Granny Smith apple
lettuce leaves (garnish)

For dressing: Combine mayonnaise and sour cream in small bowl and stir until smooth. Blend in remaining ingredients and mix well. Cover and refrigerate.

Combine remaining ingredients except apple and lettuce in large bowl. Core apple, but do not peel; chop coarsely and add to other ingredients. Add dressing and mix well. Chill several hours to allow flavors to blend. Serve in lettuce leaf lined bowl, or on chilled salad plates.

Granny's Elegant Layered Apple and Pecan Molded Salad

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
3 tablespoons sugar
1 cup boiling water
2 cups Johannisberg Riesling or other fruity white wine
3/4 cup white grape juice
1 tablespoon white wine vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
16 pecan halves
non-stick pan spray
1 New Zealand Granny Smith apple
1 cup thinly sliced hearts of Romaine lettuce
1/2 cup coarsely chopped pecans

Combine gelatin and sugar in medium mixing bowl and stir to blend. Add boiling water and mix until gelatin and sugar are completely dissolved. Stir in wine, grape juice, vinegar and salt and mix well. Chill until consistency of unbeaten egg white.

Lightly spray 5-cup ring mold. Spoon small amount of gelatin over base. Arrange 8 pecan halves evenly into gelatin. Return to refrigerator. Core apple but do not peel. Cut half of apple into 8 thin slices. Arrange slices over pecan halves. Place remaining pecan halves around outer edge of mold. Gently spoon gelatin over apples and pecans to cover. Return to refrigerator until set. Add romaine and cover with thin layer of gelatin; return to refrigerator. Chop remaining apple and combine with chopped pecans. Sprinkle evenly over romaine layer. Spoon remaining gelatin over top to cover completely. Refrigerate until set, at least 4 hours. To serve, quickly dip mold into hot water and invert salad onto serving plate.

Souffle Glacé Grandmere Smith

Makes 10 to 12 servings

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup sugar
1 cup boiling water
2 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 New Zealand Granny Smith Apples
3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
3 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2/3 cup chocolate chips
1 cup whipping cream
1/2 cup finely chopped pecans

Combine gelatin and 1/2 cup sugar in large bowl of electric mixer and stir to blend. Add boiling water and mix on medium speed until gelatin and sugar are dissolved. With mixer on low speed gradually add cream cheese and mix well. Increase speed and beat until smooth. Blend in lemon juice and vanilla and mix well. Refrigerate until mixture is lightly set, about 2 to 2-1/2 hours.

Meanwhile, prepare 1-quart souffle dish. Cut strip of foil long enough to wrap around upper edge of dish. Fold lengthwise into thirds. Generously butter one side. Wrap around dish allowing foil to extend about 4 inches above rim. Secure with tape and string.

Peel apples; core and cut into eighths. Place in work bowl of food processor. Add lemon juice, sugar and cinnamon. Mix, using on-off motions, until blended but apples are still coarse. Add chocolate chips and process, using on-off motions, until mixture is coarsely diced. (May be done up to 1 hour ahead; stir to mix in juices before adding.)

Just before cheese mixture is set, beat whipping cream in chilled bowl until fairly stiff. Fold about 1/3 of whipped cream into cream cheese mixture; add remaining whipped cream and fold gently but thoroughly. Add apple mixture and marbleize through. Spoon into souffle dish.

Sprinkle about 1/4 pecans around outer edge, making border about 1-inch wide; press lightly. Freeze until quite firm but not solid, about 6 hours. To serve, remove foil collar and set dish on serving plate or platter. Spoon into dessert dishes. Pass remaining pecans separately.

Note: If souffle is frozen solid, remove from freezer about 45 minutes before serving and allow to soften slightly.

DEAR ABBY

Romance proves short on love, long on work

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 67-year-old widow who just had her face lifted, but it wasn't that bad before. I have just become the "girlfriend" of an elderly gentleman who told me that he is leaving me one-third of all his assets, which are considerable.

I'll tell it like it is: He is very tight! Entertaining his girlfriend with lavish dinners and giving her expensive gifts are not his style.

I live in Southern California and he lives alone in a big house 120 miles north of here. I drive up to visit him every weekend, and as soon as I arrive, I find myself flinging the vacuum cleaner around and doing his laundry. Abby, at 67, you can't clean all day and be scintillating company in the evening, but I try.

He reminds me constantly that he's leaving me one-third of his assets — the other two-thirds will go to his married children who rarely come around.

His latest idea of a "good time" is flying to Seattle, staying in a middle-class motel and cooking fish! Can you think of anything more revolting?

He's in very good health for 84 and hopes to live forever. Do you think it's worth it? Sign me, HIRED GIRL WHO TRAVELS 120 MILES A WEEK WITHOUT CAR FARE OR ALLOWANCE

DEAR GIRL: Before you swallow these promises hook, line and sinker, ask this penny-pinching "fish cook" to put his promises in writing. Otherwise, you are wasting precious time and energy.

DEAR ABBY: I made a beautiful needlepoint picture as a birthday gift for my husband's boss. (I'll call him Mr. K.) I worked very hard to finish it and have it framed in time for his party. I was very disappointed when Mr. K. didn't open his birthday presents during the party. The next day he told my husband our gift was "magnificent" and he would telephone me to thank me personally, which he never did.

A few months later we received a rather general printed "thank-you" card. That was it!

To make matters worse, my husband was at Mr. K.'s home recently, and our needlepoint picture had not been hung anywhere. This hurt me because of all the time I had put into it — and the expense was also considerable.

If Mr. K. doesn't like it and isn't going to hang it, we'd like to have it back. How should we ask him? — FRUSTRATED IN FRESNO

DEAR FRUSTRATED: When you gave the gift to Mr. K., it became his property — to hang, put away, give away, throw away or whatever. Moreover, in view of the boss-employee relationship, to ask him to return it would be awkward and ill-advised.

DEAR ABBY: I recently gave a birthday party for my husband. On the invitation, I had printed: Regrets Only (and my phone number). Six couples did not respond. Naturally I assumed that they were coming and included them in my count to my caterer. As you know, one pays the caterer for each expected guest. The going rate in this area is $7.50 per person, so $90 went out of my pocket for "friends" who did not take the trouble to let me know that they were not coming.

What should I say to these no-shows when I see them? Should I say, "Oh, that's all right," when I feel that it is not all right? — ANNOYED AND NAMELESS

DEAR ANNOYED: If they mention the party, say, "Since you didn't respond to my 'regrets only' invitation, we expected you." If they then apologize, tell them they missed a great party.

For those who do not know that if they do not call to regret a catered affair, the hostess must pay for their plate, they know it now. Others think a "regrets only" invitation means a mob is invited, so if they don't show, they won't be missed. But that's not a legitimate reason for ignoring the invitation.

DEAR ABBY: I'm nearly 15 and my boyfriend is 16. I've been going out with him for over a year and he asked me to go to bed with him. My mother knows about my relationship with him, but I'm afraid to tell her about this because I don't know what her reaction will be. I told him I wasn't sure if I was ready yet. He told me that he won't rush me into anything I don't want to do. How do I know when I'm ready? I hope you print this because I think you will be helping other girls with the same problem. — AFRAID OF LOVE

DEAR AFRAID: It is not "love" you fear — it's sex, which is not surprising, since we fear the unknown. How will you know you are ready? When you are so sure, you will not have to ask anyone. But one thing is certain: A girl of your age is definitely not ready.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

Anglers, diners favor trout

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

America's trout season has gotten under way once again, to the delight of countless fishermen, and lovers of seafood in general.

Moist, but not fatty, these delicious fish are generally found in freshwater streams. The most popular types are the rainbow, brook and brown trout.

If you catch them yourself, these delectable sporting fish are easy to dress. But if that's not your style, your neighborhood fish dealer will probably do it for you, for a small charge.

Trout are delicious broiled, baked, poached or panfried. They are usually cooked whole. If you don't want to catch your own, fish stores carry them.

The size of the trout determines how it should be cooked. Small ones between 5 and 10 inches should be cooked quickly, usually broiled or baked.

Big trout, weighing more than 4 pounds, or about 20 inches long, can be dressed with an elegant stuffing and then baked.

Trout have very small scales, so it is rarely necessary to skin them. When boned, the entire skeleton can usually be lifted out intact. A few varieties, such as the sea trout, live in the ocean and fight their way up rivers to breed.

I like trout baked with thyme and bay leaves, as in the following recipe.

BAKED TROUT

1 clove garlic, crushed
1 medium onion, chopped
2 teaspoons finely minced fresh thyme
¼ teaspoon black pepper
6 whole trout, about ¾ pound each, pan dressed
6 bay leaves
4 tablespoons butter, melted
Juice of 2 lemons
Paprika

Mix garlic, onion, thyme and black pepper. Blend together and spread atop trout with spatula. Insert 1 whole bay leaf inside each fish. Oil a baking dish, large enough to hold fish in single layer. Pour melted butter over fish and bake 12 minutes in 400-degree oven. Remove bay leaf, and sprinkle with lemon juice and paprika before serving. Serves 6. Good with a chilled white table wine.

Alaskans expect record halibut, salmon catches

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The projected catch of Alaskan halibut and salmon is expected to reach record levels this year, officials from that state's seafood industry say. The fishing season is currently under way and runs until September.

Industry analysts estimate that landings of halibut could exceed last year's 66.4 million-pound total by as much as 10 million pounds.

WHAT'S COOKING

Teen learned to ride, cook young

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Jennifer Marcum, a soon-to-be junior at Lee High School, was very young when she started learning skills she can use for a lifetime. "My mom put me on a horse when I was 18 months old," she said, "and I've been riding ever since."

A vocational agriculture student at LHS last year, she plans to enter the distributive education program this coming school year, which means she'll both attend classes and work.

She hopes to find a job riding and training horses, because she has experience in and love for the field.

"I had one horse especially that I was training because nobody else could ride him."

Jennifer also became interested in cooking at an early age.

"I was 6 when I started cooking," she said. "The first thing I made was an omelet." She was trying to make scrambled eggs, but "I talked on the phone too long and ended up with an omelet.

"My mom was taking Spanish classes at that time, and my father can't cook, so I was trying to make myself some breakfast."

Jennifer taught herself to cook by watching her mother in the kitchen. "My mom cooks a lot. I saw her cook a lot, so I just got in the kitchen one day.

"I made lots of little things like waffles for my father in the morning and hamburgers for lunch."

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Jennifer Marcum

Now that she is older, Jennifer still cooks a lot, but her specialties are more elaborate. The following recipe for Chicken Teriyaki and Rice is a favorite of her family:

CHICKEN TERIYAKI AND RICE

3 to 4 pounds chicken pieces (or whole chicken cut up)
2 cups instant rice
⅓ cup teriyaki sauce
Salt and pepper to taste

Stew chicken pieces seasoned with salt and pepper in a 4-quart saucepan, filled about ⅔-full of water, for about 1 hour or until done. Remove chicken from broth and place in refrigerator until cool enough to debone.

Set aside 2 cups chicken broth in 2-quart saucepan; reserve rest for future use. Debone cooled chicken and place in saucepan or skillet with ⅓ cup teriyaki sauce; simmer 10 minutes.

While chicken is simmering, bring broth to boil, add 2 cups instant rice, cover and set aside.

The Midland Senior Citizens Center will sponsor a bake-off and auction for all citizens 55 years old and older in Midland County on July 16.

Judging will be done by Marian Farr and Jill Pronger, Midland County extension agents. Auctioneer will be county agent Earnest Kiker.

Entries will be accepted from senior residents of Midland County at the senior center, 2500 Delano Ave., between 8-10:30 a.m. July 16. Judging will begin at 10:35 a.m. and the auction will start at 12:15 p.m.

Food categories will be cakes, pies, candies (12-15 pieces) and cookies (12-15 pieces). Only one entry per category will be accepted from each exhibitor. Entries should be accompanied by their recipes on 3x5-inch or 4x6-inch cards with name, address and telephone number of exhibitor.

Food entries must be prepared by their exhibitors, and entered only on "no return" disposable containers covered with clear plastic wrap. Items requiring refrigeration or warming will be disqualified. Plates or containers will not be returned.

Food entries will be auctioned at 12:15 p.m. Entries become the property of Midland Senior Citizens Center.

Trophies will be awarded for first and second place in each category. Grand prize will receive a rosette. All participants will receive ribbons.

Lunch will be available at the center by reservation one day in advance. Cost will be $2.50 or by donation for those older than 60 years. For more information call 699-5023.

Allspice spices up banana bread

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Allspice Banana Bread features Jamaica's native spice. In Jamaica the bread is usually served at teatime.

Allspice berries grow on trees and have a flavor close to cloves, but with hints of cinnamon and nutmeg. The dry berries are available in whole or in ground form.

ALLSPICE BANANA BREAD

¾ cup pecan halves
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1¼ teaspoons ground allspice
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter, softened
½ cup sugar
1 large egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 large (1 pound) ripe bananas, mashed (1½ cups)
¼ cup milk
¼ cup raisins

Reserve ¼ cup pecan halves for garnish. Coarsely chop remaining pecans.

Combine flour, baking powder, allspice and salt.

Cream butter and sugar; beat in egg and vanilla. Alternately, just until blended, beat in ⅓ of the flour mixture with ½ of the bananas and milk, beginning and ending with flour mixture. Stir in chopped pecans and raisins.

Turn into a well-greased 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan, smoothing the top. Arrange reserved pecan halves on top.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 55 to 60 minutes. Let stand in pan for 5 minutes. Turn out on wire rack. Serve warm.

You're never too old for peanut butter

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

If you think peanut butter is just for kids, think again. Author Kurt Vonnegut adores peanut butter and pickles on rye, and actor Charleton Heston is fond of the gooey spread slathered on Ritz crackers.

Even famed gourmet chef Julia Child admits to a craving for corn chips dipped in peanut butter.

Many of those who loved this all-American treat as children find their passion for peanut butter growing even stronger as adults. Could this be true of anyone you know? A friend, a spouse or even you, yourself?

Take heart. You're not alone. Grown-ups with a peanut butter "habit" are encouraged to write immediately for an absolutely free Peanut Butter Lover's Survival Kit. Kit includes official membership certificate, subscription to newsletter, refrigerator magnet, bumper sticker and button proclaiming "ADULT PEANUT BUTTER LOVER."

For your free kit, write to the "Peanut Butter Lover's Fan Club" c/o Ketchum Public Relations, 1133 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10036.

Peanut butter, as we know and love it, is nearly a century old. In St. Louis around 1890, a physician was looking for a form of readily digested protein to feed to his patients. He came up with the idea of peanut butter, and the idea stuck (literally).

These days, the average American consumes something like 6 pounds of goober spread in a year.

Peanut butter and jelly are a classic combination, but almost as popular are peanut butter and chocolate, which team up with rave results (just ask any Reese's Pieces fan!). Use your microwave to turn out a quick batch of Star Bars or Easiest Ever Candy, and set your family's peanut butter lovers loose.

Peanut Butter Brownies are equally delectable — but none of these goodies is what you could call "low calorie," so watch yourself (if you can). Whether you prefer smooth or crunchy, or even if you're not too wild for the stuff on its own, you'll find the following peanut butter treats hard to resist.

STAR BARS

1 (6 oz.) package semisweet chocolate chips
¾ cup chunky peanut butter
4 cups commercial granola with nuts
¼ cup shredded coconut (optional)

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Place chocolate chips in 2-quart glass bowl. Microwave, uncovered, 2 to 3 minutes, or until melted. Stir in peanut butter; blend until smooth.

Fold in granola and coconut (if desired). Lightly butter an 8-inch square baking dish. Turn mixture into prepared dish and spread evenly with spatula.

Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate 1 to 2 hours, to set. Cut into small squares. (Store uneaten bars in refrigerator.)

Makes 25 squares.

EASIEST EVER CANDY

1 (12 oz.) package chocolate chips
½ cup chunky peanut butter
5 heaping cups cornflakes

Oven Setting: HIGH (00 percent power)

In large, deep glass mixing bowl combine chocolate chips and peanut butter. Microwave 2 to 3 minutes, rotating dish ¼-turn halfway through cooking time. Stir and blend until smooth.

Add cornflakes and blend thoroughly. Drop by teaspoonsful onto wax paper and allow to set.

PEANUT BUTTER BROWNIES

2 ozs. (2 squares) unsweetened baking chocolate
¼ cup plus 2 tbsps. butter or margarine
¼ cup peanut butter (smooth or chunky)
1 cup light brown sugar
2 eggs
½ tsp. vanilla
¾ cup all-purpose flour
½ tsp. baking powder
½ cup chopped peanuts

Oven Setting: MEDIUM (50 percent power); HIGH (100 percent power)

In 1½ to 2-qt. glass bowl, combine chocolate and butter or margarine. Microwave at MEDIUM setting 2 to 3 minutes, or until melted. Stir to blend.

Stir in brown sugar; allow to cool. Beat in eggs and vanilla, then add flour and baking powder, blending well. Fold in nuts.

Turn mixture into lightly buttered 8-inch square glass baking dish. Adjust oven setting to HIGH. Microwave, uncovered, 5 to 8 minutes, rotating dish every 2 minutes, until toothpick inserted near center comes out clean.

Makes 16 large or 25 small brownies.

Oreos spread from New Jersey to Managua

New York Times News Service

FAIR LAWN, N.J. — John Bagli loves his work. The week goes by too quickly for him. "Every time I turn around, it's Friday," he says.

While other employees at the Nabisco Brands bakery here cringe at the thought of eating an Oreo after inhaling their sweet chocolate scent all day, Bagli has Oreos for lunch. "They're the best," says Bagli, who started out 28 years ago sweeping up cookie and cracker crumbs at the bakery and is now its production manager.

He slips an Oreo, still warm, off a conveyor belt and pops it in his mouth, asking, "What do you think kept me here all these years?"

The Oreo is the world's best-selling cookie, according to the 1985 Guinness Book of World Records. Nabisco sold six billion Oreos in 1982, and $1 out of every $10 spent on cookies in grocery stores is spent on Oreos, the Guinness entry says.

Nabisco has been making Oreos since 1911 and this year it is celebrating their 75th year, an event that Bagli, now 47, says keeps his two Oreo ovens working 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The Oreo has gained the kind of status achieved by only a handful of American products. Like Kleenex or Xerox, its brand name is better known than its generic equivalent. When was the last time someone walked into a grocery store and asked for a bag of chocolate sandwich cookies?

Oreos are popular outside the United States, too. They are made in Ecuador and Venezuela, as well as in five bakeries in the United States. An American living in Managua, Nicaragua, says that even though the United States has a trade embargo against that country, Oreos turn up on the shelves of stores where goods are sold for dollars.

"We will concede that they are No. 1," said Alexander Nichols, director of advertising for Sunshine Bisquits in Woodbridge, N.J., which makes Hydrox, Oreo's leading competitor. "A lot of Americans were weaned on Oreos. This just evolved over the years."

Hydrox cookies are actually older than Oreos. Nichols said the Hydrox trademark registration shows that it has been on the market since Jan. 1, 1910. The earliest mention of Oreos comes in a letter dated July 19, 1911, from Nabisco's legal department to its operating department. The letter says the lawyers "find no objection to the adoption of the above word," namely Oreo.

Dave Stivers, the company's archivist, says the first Oreos were sold to a grocer in Hoboken, N.J., named S.C. Thuesen on March 6, 1912. Nine and a quarter pounds of Oreos cost the store $1.85 and the tin they came in cost another 50 cents. Today the average retail price of a one-pound bag of Oreos is $2.12, according to Nabisco.

Consumer psychologists have difficulty explaining how Oreos came to be so successful. The idea of combining a chocolate cookie taste with sweet sugar icing was not new. Stivers says Americans ate chocolate sandwich cookies in the 1800s.

"An Oreo is part of America," said Harold J. Kassarjian, a consumer psychologist at the University of California in Los Angeles who edits The Journal of Consumer Research. "As kids, people peeled it in half or dunked it. It's that nostalgia. Especially if you live in Yuppiedom, where everything is brand new, the Oreo is adding the stability that people are wanting so much."

To Bagli, an Oreo is simply a cookie that tastes good, and he watches daily as they march, 2,000 a minute, out of 500-degree gas ovens as long as football fields.

An Oreo takes less than an hour to make — a half hour of mixing in bins the size of Volkswagen beetles and another 20 minutes on conveyor belts being pressed into shape and then bobbing along from the third floor to the first through ovens and cooling tunnels, under the icing drum and into machines that stack and deal Oreos like cards into cellophane packages.

"Just putting the icing on is probably the most exciting because of the high speeds," Bagli said. "If you don't get exactly in line, you get icing smears."

Bins the size of hot tubs sit filled with broken Oreos at the Fair Lawn factory, victims in part of the furious pace of their production. Although some of these are ground up and returned to the original batter and others are sold to ice-cream companies to be crumbled and mixed with the ice cream, about 5 percent of the cookies wind up "B and R" — broken and rejected — and thrown away.

If something goes wrong on the line, it takes a full 10 minutes to stop the conveyor belt. Until then, with thousands of cookies cascading off the end of the belt onto the floor, "it's time to put down the plow," Bagli said, referring to the machine that clears away the cookies and discards them.

Real butter hot stuff on popcorn

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Buttered popcorn is staging a rerun in some theaters after nostalgic moviegoers balked at picking through buckets of artificially flavored kernels as they settled down for the latest flicks.

"The whole film-going experience is popcorn and butter," said Linda Friendly, senior vice president of marketing for Cineplex Odeon Corp., the second-largest theater chain in North America with 1,176 screens.

The Toronto-based theater chain recently took a giant step backwards in technology and began serving real butter instead of yellowy artificial goop on popcorn in its 395 North American theaters.

Real butter is seven times more expensive than its artificial counterpart, but Cineplex is willing to eat the difference.

"We're not raising the price because we expect that the volume increase in the purchase of buttered popcorn will compensate for that," Friendly said.

Friendly said the switch was made after a marketing survey in Canada showed movie-goers had a particular disdain for ersatz popcorn toppings.

Oreo: Stuff of legend

By PAUL GOLDBERGER
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Oreo is the stuff of legend in part because of its taste and its texture — a pleasing juxtaposition of soft, sweet cream and hard, crisp chocolate — but also because of its appearance. It stands as the archetype of its kind, a reminder that cookies are designed as consciously as buildings, and sometimes better.

The Oreo is a cookie that embraces contradictions. Not only is it dark on the outside and light on the inside, but it is lavishly ornate in its exterior design while being utterly simple within.

In an even more fundamental fashion, however, the Oreo's form leaps across stylistic boundaries.

The way in which the two chocolate wafers appear to float, held together only by a recessed inner layer of cream filling, seems to epitomize the modernist esthetic, while the richly decorated chocolate wafers are a celebration of the role of ornament. So, like a building that mixes sleek glass and gargoyles, this cookie does nothing less than transcend the gulf separating modernism and traditionalism.

The ornamental pattern of the wafer itself, however, is the Oreo's visual signature. Stamped out by brass rollers passing over sheets of chocolate dough, the pattern consists of a series of four-leaf clovers around the word "OREO," which is set within the traditional trademark of Nabisco, its manufacturer — that trademark being a horizonal oval with what looks like a television antenna extending up from it.

Around the clovers, a broken line forms a broken circle. Beyond that, the outer edge of the cookie is slightly ridged, serving both as a visual frame for the ornamental center and as a means of grasping the cookie with comparative ease.

As a design, it is pleasantly dowdy, like the wallpaper one might find in an old country house, or the wall stenciling that was common in the early years of this century, when the Oreo was created.

Although spokesmen for Nabisco say there have been no significant changes in the cookie (except for its size), magazine advertisements from past years show that this has not been the case. In the 1950s, for example, the word "OREO" was set in a circle, which was surrounded by what appears to be a garland of petals.

It was a more graceful look, a bit closer in appearance to that of the Oreo's erstwhile competitor, the Hydrox brand produced by Sunshine Bakeries. Hydrox is the Pepsi to the Oreo's Coca-Cola; it actually predates Oreo, though it is less popular. The Hydrox's ornamental pattern is at once cruder and more delicate than the Oreo's; the ridges around the edge are longer and deeper, but the center comprises stamped-out flowers, a design more intricate than the Oreo pattern.

Still, it is the Oreo that has become the icon. And after all, it is the more American-looking of the two — its even pattern, however dowdy, has an industrial, stamped-out quality. It might be said to combine homelike decoration with an American love of machine imagery, and in that combination lies a triumph of design.

Moon Pie a Southern tradition

New York Times News Service

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — The name of the visionary has been lost in the fog of history. But sometime after the turn of the century, so the story goes, a traveling salesman wandered into the Chattanooga Bakery here and made a prophetic suggestion.

"You know what you need," the salesman said, according to Sam H. Campbell 4th, vice president and grandson of the bakery's founder, reciting the story he first heard as a child. "You need two big round cookies. You need some marshmallow filling in between, and you need chocolate icing on the outside. And it's got to be as big as the moon."

And so, Campbell explains, the Moon Pie was first described, later to be perfected as a four-inch-diameter, cellophane-wrapped snack that, over the last 67 years, has not only helped sustain millions of Southerners but has also become an indelible part of the region's popular memory.

"The Moon Pie is a bedrock of the country store and rural tradition," says William Ferris, the director of the University of Mississippi's Center for the Study of Southern Culture. "It is more than a snack. It is a cultural artifact."

In the 1920s and 1930s the Moon Pie gained a foothold among working people and field hands as an inexpensive but filling lunch treat. "It was the basis of the 10-cent lunch," said Ferris. "A nickel for a Moon Pie and a nickel for an RC Cola." Variations on this theme include a nickel for a Moon Pie and a nickel for a Nehi or a Coke.

These days, the Chattanooga Bakery, which is still owned by the Campbell family and doesn't make anything but Moon Pies, turns out more than 300,000 a day, each one pretty much as the anonymous salesman envisioned, except that the icing now comes in vanilla and banana as well as chocolate, and the cakes cost as much as 45 cents instead of a nickel.

Oreos spread from New Jersey to Managua

The ornamental pattern of the wafer itself, however, is the Oreo's visual signature. Stamped out by brass rollers passing over sheets of chocolate dough, the pattern consists of a series of four-leaf clovers around the word "OREO," which is set within the traditional trademark of Nabisco, its manufacturer — that trademark being a horizonal oval with what looks like a television antenna extending up from it.

Around the clovers, a broken line forms a broken circle. Beyond that, the outer edge of the cookie is slightly ridged, serving both as a visual frame for the ornamental center and as a means of grasping the cookie with comparative ease.

As a design, it is pleasantly dowdy, like the wallpaper one might find in an old country house, or the wall stenciling that was common in the early years of this century, when the Oreo was created.

Although spokesmen for Nabisco say there have been no significant changes in the cookie (except for its size), magazine advertisements from past years show that this has not been the case. In the 1950s, for example, the word "OREO" was set in a circle, which was surrounded by what appears to be a garland of petals.

It was a more graceful look, a bit closer in appearance to that of the Oreo's erstwhile competitor, the Hydrox brand produced by Sunshine Bakeries. Hydrox is the Pepsi to the Oreo's Coca-Cola; it actually predates Oreo, though it is less popular. The Hydrox's ornamental pattern is at once cruder and more delicate than the Oreo's; the ridges around the edge are longer and deeper, but the center comprises stamped-out flowers, a design more intricate than the Oreo pattern.

Still, it is the Oreo that has become the icon. And after all, it is the more American-looking of the two — its even pattern, however dowdy, has an industrial, stamped-out quality. It might be said to combine homelike decoration with an American love of machine imagery, and in that combination lies a triumph of design.

Moon Pie a Southern tradition

New York Times News Service

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — The name of the visionary has been lost in the fog of history. But sometime after the turn of the century, so the story goes, a traveling salesman wandered into the Chattanooga Bakery here and made a prophetic suggestion.

"You know what you need," the salesman said, according to Sam H. Campbell 4th, vice president and grandson of the bakery's founder, reciting the story he first heard as a child. "You need two big round cookies. You need some marshmallow filling in between, and you need chocolate icing on the outside. And it's got to be as big as the moon."

And so, Campbell explains, the Moon Pie was first described, later to be perfected as a four-inch-diameter, cellophane-wrapped snack that, over the last 67 years, has not only helped sustain millions of Southerners but has also become an indelible part of the region's popular memory.

"The Moon Pie is a bedrock of the country store and rural tradition," says William Ferris, the director of the University of Mississippi's Center for the Study of Southern Culture. "It is more than a snack. It is a cultural artifact."

In the 1920s and 1930s the Moon Pie gained a foothold among working people and field hands as an inexpensive but filling lunch treat. "It was the basis of the 10-cent lunch," said Ferris. "A nickel for a Moon Pie and a nickel for an RC Cola." Variations on this theme include a nickel for a Moon Pie and a nickel for a Nehi or a Coke.

These days, the Chattanooga Bakery, which is still owned by the Campbell family and doesn't make anything but Moon Pies, turns out more than 300,000 a day, each one pretty much as the anonymous salesman envisioned, except that the icing now comes in vanilla and banana as well as chocolate, and the cakes cost as much as 45 cents instead of a nickel.

Nabisco celebrates Oreo sandwich cookies' 75th birthday

By JOHN DeMERS
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK — The message came down in 1911, through the channels of the National Biscuit Company: "I am in receipt of your favor of July 17, and beg to advise that I find no objection to the adoption of the above word."

Just what the favor was is lost now in the shadows of time. But it's not the least bit of a secret what the word was. The memo marked the official birth of the Oreo.

Since then, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, more than 100 billion of the cream-filled cookies have been sold. In fact, $1 of every $10 spent on cookies in American grocery stores gets plunked down for Oreos.

"Everyone loves Oreos," says Phil Gutermuth, Nabisco's vice president of sales and operations. "It's amazing how many different ways people eat them — whole, separating the sandwich and licking the frosting, dunking them in milk, cocoa or coffee, or crumbling Oreos on ice cream."

According to Guterman, even adults forget the temporary traumas of Oreo-black teeth when presented with the chance of reliving childhood memories. As he puts it: "Can you remember anything negative when you ate an Oreo?"

Some experts believe the name was based on the French word for gold — the color was used extensively in an early package design. Others say it's derived from "oros," the Greek word for mountain, because Oreos resembled that shape in the planning stages.

Yet another theory, though a bit hard to swallow, has Oreo's masters taking the OO from chocolate for the biscuit and placed them around the RE from "creme" for the filling.

The five Nabisco bakeries produce more than a million of the cookies during each eight-hour shift. Each 1 ¾-inch cookie takes an hour and 35 minutes to find its way through the process, entering the consumer marketplace with 47 calories to its name.

Yet why worry about statistics like those? Contemplate instead the fact that if all the Oreos ever eaten were piled on top of each other, they would reach to the moon and back — twice.

DOUBLE CHOCOLATE CHEESECAKE

¼ cup butter or margarine
25 Oreo cookies, crushed
2 8-ounce packages cream cheese, room temperature
6 eggs separated, at room temperature
4 1-ounce squares semi-sweet chocolate, melted
2 tablespoon vanilla extract
½ cup sugar
1 1-ounce square semi-sweet chocolate
Chocolate curls

To make the crust: In a medium saucepan, over low heat, melt butter or margarine. Remove from heat and stir in Oreo crumbs. Press evenly onto bottom and sides of 9-inch spring-form pan. Refrigerate while preparing filling.

In a large bowl, with electric mixer at medium speed, beat cream cheese until light and fluffy. Beat in egg yolks, melted chocolate and vanilla extract until smooth, about 3 minutes. Set aside.

In another large bowl, with electric mixer at high speed, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Using rubber spatula, gently fold beaten egg whites, a third at a time, into cream cheese mixture.

Pour into crust and freeze 4 hours.

On a 11-by-8½-inch sheet of white paper, draw one 6-inch circle. On outside of circle, draw 12 1-inch circles, spaced evenly around the large circle. Place on cookie sheet, cover with wax paper, securing paper edges under cookie sheet.

BLACK BOTTOM STRAWBERRY PIE

34 Oreo cookies
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 quart strawberry ice cream, slightly softened
1 pint fresh strawberries, washed, hulled and patted dry
½ cup heavy cream, whipped

In a large plastic bag, using a rolling pin, finely crush 20 Oreos. Reserve 2 tablespoons for topping. In medium saucepan, over low heat, melt the butter or margarine. Remove from heat. Stir in remaining Oreo crumbs.

Press mixture evenly onto bottom of 9-inch pie plate. Stand remaining 14 whole cookies around sides of pie plate. Place in freezer for 15 minutes. Spread strawberry ice cream evenly into crust and sprinkle top with Oreo crumbs. Freeze until firm, 2 to 3 hours.

Potency of baking powder can be lessened by moisture, age

Washington Post News Service

Moisture and age are the two biggest enemies of baking powder. Store the powder in as dry an area as possible and be sure the lid is sealed tightly after each use. Use a clean, dry spoon when measuring so moisture will not set off any chemical reaction and lessen the product's potency.

General Foods, manufacturer of Calumet Baking Powder, says that after the can is opened, its product should remain usable for one year. The expiration date printed on the bottom of each can may be used as a guide.

You can test whether baking powder is still effective by mixing one teaspoon of the powder with one-third cup hot water. If the powder is still active, it will bubble vigorously.

Ray of hope given to families of Alzheimer victims

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

The person stricken with the neurological disorder known as Alzheimer's Disease is not the only victim. There are family members, "caregivers," who suffer just as much, if not more.

"You have to be crazy to keep from going insane," one financially exhausted and emotionally drained husband said. That philosophy has helped him cope since he found his wife stricken with this form of "senile dementia" most common to the elderly.

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the Permian Basin, a family support group, met in Midland last night and heard some encouraging news, however, from the group's leader, Andy Anderson of Odessa. Reporting on a legislative hearing held in conjunction with a seminar on the disease in Lubbock last April, Anderson said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby had said that while no state funds are available, it is possible that existing funds may be reallocated in the direction of Alzheimer's Disease research. Hobby attributed the lack of new funds to the dwindling state income from the decline in oil prices.

Shaky as that promise may sound, it is a ray of hope for the family members faced with huge expenses stemming from caring for the victim. Insurance companies do not see the disease as a medical disorder, he said, therefore cutting off that aid. Medicare and Medicaid benefits may come, but only after the family has financially divested itself of everything "but the clothes on their backs." Family members are sometimes forced into less than desirable ways of coping with the costs of nursing homes, constant medical attendants in the home and medical bills.

According to research, some people are forced to mislead an insurance company in order to receive benefits by stating a diagnosis other than Alzheimer's Disease that is covered by their policy. Other spouses have been advised to divorce their Alzheimer's-stricken mate, thus rendering the victim financially eligible for Medicare or Medicaid. Houses and cars have been sold, second insurance policies taken out, savings accounts diminished to nothing. "You have to laugh to keep from crying," one widow noted.

"The graying of America" — this sociological phenomenon holds that a major demographic change occurring in the 20th century will bring more elderly people than ever before. Anderson maintains that this is the reason research has got to be continued. He said about 50 percent of those in nursing homes today have Alzheimer's Disease and that it is the fourth largest killer of the elderly, as well.

The Alzheimer's Disease Research Center at Texas Tech University is a forerunner in the research race in Texas. Headed by Dr. Tom Hutton, the center's mission provides the highest quality evaluation and treatment of patients consumed by the disease. Hutton said that actual treatment at this point, though, is confined to the resulting symptomatic problems. There isn't any way to actually attack the Alzheimer's Disease itself, yet.

Jury to decide if girl had recalled assailant's face

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Jurors deliberating the fate of a 33-year-old man accused of the kidnapping and rape of a 13-year-old girl will have to decide if the girl accurately recalled the face of the man who assaulted her or if the man told the truth when he said, "I didn't do this."

District Judge Joe Connally recessed the trial about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, telling jurors to return at 9 a.m. today. The judge told jurors he would read them his instructional charge, hear final arguments and then begin deliberations to determine the guilt or innocence of William Mitchell Dyer. Dyer has chosen to let the judge set his punishment if jurors find him guilty as charged.

Defense attorneys Tom Hirsch and Anthony Foster rested their case in the trial of the former Midlander shortly after 3 p.m. Tuesday after cross-examinination of a Lubbock psychologist about the sexual capabilities of a rapist.

Dr. Mathias E. Stricherz, who is affiliated with Texas Tech and maintains a private practice in Lubbock, went into great detail as he described the difference in the psychological makeup of rapists. Contending rapists fall into several motivational categories, Stricherz expressed the belief the man who allegedly raped the young girl was a "power rapist." He described a power rapist as a man who accomplishes his assaults through verbal threats, such as threatening to kill or maim his victim. An angry rapist, he stated, is prone to inflicting bodily injury or pain.

He based his belief that the man who repeatedly assaulted the young Odessa girl June 13, 1985 was a power rapist on having read statements the girl made to investigators in interviews and during the course of hypnotic sessions she participated in to enhance her recollections of her more than two hours of captivity.

Dyer was arrested in July 1985 and charged with four counts of aggravated sexual assault and one count of kidnapping. He is also charged in Andrews County with one count of aggravated sexual assault.

Dyer is accused of picking the girl up a short distance from Water Wonderland as she walked home after missing a ride. He is alleged to have taken her from Midland County to Ector County, then to Andrews County and back to Ector County, letting her out of a pickup truck near a friend's home in Gardendale.

District Attorney Eric Augesen Tuesday questioned Stricherz extensively about whether a rapist could successfully assault a victim five or more times in a two-hour period of time or less. The psychologist said it would depend on the individual rapist involved but it was not physically impossible. Stricherz based his opinion on interviews he has said he had conducted with "35 or 40" convicted rapists, as well as some of their victims.

The Lubbock psychologist, who is also a qualified hypnotherapist, was questioned about the depth hypnosis induced in the girl by two different Ector County sheriff's investigators. Basing his opinion on videotapes of the two sessions he viewed, Stricherz said it appeared the 13-year-old girl's hypnotic depth was "light to moderate" in both instances. He also expressed the belief the girl could just as easily have recalled all of the information she provided investigators without being subjected to hypnosis.

The girl was allegedly kidnapped around 7 p.m June 13, 1985 after she became separated from friends and had started to walk home. A friend of Dyer's from Farmington, N.M., Bill Evans, testified he met Dyer about 5:30 p.m that day at the Body Connection, a topless bar that was located on East 2nd Street in Odessa, and drank beer with him until about 8 p.m. Evans stated that after leaving the club, he drove Dyer to Welex, an oil field service company near Water Wonderland where Dyer worked, so Dyer could get his pickup truck that was parked there.

Dyer testified that after getting his truck he stopped to buy a can of snuff at a convenience store, then went into Midland and ate at Arby's, then returned to his sister's mobile home about 9:15 p.m. The mobile home was parked at a mobile home park located west of Water Wonderland.

Dyer claimed he watched the 10 p.m. television news and told the court he remembered a story about a big drug bust in Midland.

Dyer was arrested and charged in connectoion with the kidnapping and rape of the girl in July 1985 after she saw him in a KMID promotional station ad that had been filmed earlier at Welex and included most of Welex's employees.

Mauro criticizes opponent's 'name-game'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro kicked off his general election campaign here Tuesday, demanding his Republican opponent dump the "name-game" he used during the primary election and run a campaign on merit alone.

During a news conference here Tuesday, Mauro jokingly said the first time he heard his opponent, Marion Dudley Anderson, 36, of Seven Points was using the name of the world-famous Houston cancer hospital, he thought about playing the game, too, and changing his name to "Gary Indiana."

Anderson, a dance hall operator, didn't spend a cent on his "word of mouth" campaign and rolled up more than 47 percent of the statewide Republican vote in the GOP primary election for land commissioner, Mauro said.

He said his second reaction was to "get mad" because "I didn't want the people of Texas to get fooled again. I didn't want the people of Texas, whether Democrat or Republican, to vote for someone whose only qualification for elected office was a borrowed name."

Instead of getting mad, Mauro is getting on the road, traveling from El Paso to Texarkana, from Brownsville to Amarillo, from Midland to Corpus Christi to make sure Texans "know that my opponent is just another unqualified candidate with a famous name," he said.

Mauro claims Anderson is capitalizing on the good name of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston and questions why he used his initials on the ballot since he is known as Dudley in Seven Points, a town of about 650 people 50 miles southeast of Dallas.

Anderson, a former Seven Points city council member who operates the Cedar Creek Plowboys Club with his wife, took 47.3 percent of the vote in the May 3 primary and defeated Grady Yarborough, a Tyler schoolteacher, in the June 7 runoff.

"My opponent would let you think he has something to do with this world-famous hospital," Mauro said. "He would like you to associate his name with those who treat the sick and comfort the dying. But the only thing he has in common with this fine hospital is the same letters of the alphabet."

Anderson "doesn't serve the sick," said Mauro, "he serves drinks at his saloon in Seven Points. My opponent doesn't know how to manage 21.2 million acres of state lands or loan millions of dollars to veterans, he manages a dancehall."

Former bank president's embezzlement trial begins

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Bill Neal Tapp, former president of Odessa's Bank of the West, "did not maintain integrity" in the banking business and ended up embezzling or misapplying hundreds of thousands of dollars in depositors' funds, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship said at the outset of Tapp's trial on Tuesday in federal court in Midland.

"The people of the United States have a right to expect integrity in... the banking industry," he said.

"Bill Tapp doesn't want to be on trial here today," Blankinship said. "That's understandable. No one does." However, he said that "The law is the law for you, for me, for everyone."

Tapp's Fort Worth defense attorney, Frank Wright, suggested that his client was not guilty of any wrong-doing.

"Evidence is going to show business mistakes," Wright said. "Thank God we don't go to prison for mistakes."

Tapp, 42, was the $60,000-a-year president of Bank of the West when it opened for business in January 1983. He resigned in mid-1984.

"This was not a sky-scraper bank," Wright said. "It was in a trailer. It was chaos. It was conducive to business mistakes."

Wright noted that Tapp was a "major stockholder" in the bank and that any intent to defraud the bank would "injure him."

"That would be sadistic, wouldn't it," asked Wright, "because that would be injuring himself?"

He told the 12 jurors that that the government would present a "morass of papers," boxes of files, exhibits, and "complicated testimony" from up to 30 witness. However, only about half of that number of prosecution and defense witnesses, including Tapp, were sworn in at the outset of the trial.

"You are going to see a quantity of evidence on the part of the government...in this complicated bank case."

"I plan to produce witnesses to simplify it for you," Wright said. "I have been working on this case for months, and I don't think I understand every aspect of it."

In his testimony, Tapp will "tell you (jurors) exactly what happened in all of these circumstances. We are here because there is a dispute as to what happened. There is an argument here. There is a dispute."

In noting that Tapp allegedly violated banking statutes, Blankinship noted that "You can't lie and deceive" in making bank loans."

Tapp, a former bank examiner for the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency, "manipulated" to make loans and funnel money to himself and his companies," Blankinship said. He also said Tapp deceived the bank's board of directors.

In addition to embezzlement and misapplication of funds, Tapp also is charged with making false entries in bank records, issuing an irrevocable letter of credit of $100,000 without obtaining the approval of the bank's directors.

"If he obligated the bank to do something in the future, he has to have the approval of the board of directors," Blankinship said. The prosecutor said Tapp did not get the approval. Tapp's lawyer said his client did nothing illegal but did make some mistakes.

When the testimony ends, Blankinship told the jurors carefully to consider the evidence. "That's the biggest tools you've got when you go into the jury room (to deliberate) — common sense, judgment and recollections."

Hightower: Number of ailing farmers may be higher

STEPHENVILLE (AP) — The state Agriculture Department may have to revise its estimate of the number of Texans who will be forced out of ranching and farming this year, Commissioner Jim Hightower said.

Earlier this week Farmers Home Administration officials said 10 percent of the state's farmers and ranchers weren't being refinanced this year.

That means 10 percent of the state's farmers and ranchers are more than likely out of business already this year, Hightower said.

"That's much higher than we anticipated," Hightower said before presenting Family Land Heritage awards at the city park here Tuesday. "We could be underestimating it (the farm problem)."

During a speech to about 300 people attending the ceremony, Hightower said, "We are in the midst of the worst agricultural depression in the past 50 years, if not 100 years. "We are literally at a watershed."

He praised 254 farm and ranch families honored from the 20-county Stephenville TDA area who have kept agriculture land for more than 100 years.

Ten families were honored for having farm or ranchland in their families for 150 years or more.

The fact Hightower was in the heart of the West Central Texas dairyland didn't stop him from criticizing the government buyout program aimed at helping some of this area's farmers.

Hightower called the U.S. government's dairy buyout plan a "poorly conceived program" that will hurt Texas cattlemen.

"They (the Reagan administration) wanted to eliminate (milk) surpluses by eliminating farmers," Hightower said. "It doesn't even get to the problem they are trying to solve."

"It is an all-around bad deal," Hightower said.

He said Mexico, for example, is buying or has bought about 15,000 of the excess cattle from Texas.

Defendant doesn't try to justify his actions

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The ex-convict wanted no sympathy from the judge and got none.

"May I hear from you now?" U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton asked the defendant, Ronald James Organ, who has been convicted from petty theft to larceny to bank robbery.

"No, sir," replied Organ.

The judge's policy is to let the defendant argue for mitigation of his sentence or to solicit sympathy from the court in the moments before the judge pronounces sentence. Organ, a 38-year-old California man, already had pleaded guilty to making a false statement by indicating he was not a "convicted felon" when he purchased a .22-caliber pistol from an Odessa pawn shop last March 21. The judge was readying to sentence him for that federal offense.

By law, felons are prohibited from buying or owning firearms.

"I came up with a bunch of reasons (for buying the pistol)," Organ said Tuesday, "but they don't hold water. I can't justify what I did."

"What do you think I ought to do?" Bunton asked the man.

"Sentence me."

The judge prolonged the formality. In the meantime, he asked Organ's court-appointed attorney, Steve Hershberger, to speak for the defendant.

"Mr. Organ has somewhat of a spotted past," said Hershberger, who formerly was one of Bunton's law clerks. "One quality I've found in him is that actually he is a very honest man and is forthright. I think Mr. Organ is intelligent. He has a possibility to make a comeback to rehabilitate himself. He needs some guidance."

Organ has been in and out of state and federal prisons for most of his adult life and first got into trouble with the law at age 17.

The judge said that the "cold, hard" facts are that Organ's past "is not only spotted. It's pretty dog-gone dark."

The judge said that Organ apparently did not have a drug problem. Organ admitted to sniffing glue as a youngster but "that's kid stuff."

He also admitted to using the illegally obtained pistol for fun. "I was playing cowboy — out in the field shooting tin cans."

The judge pronounced sentence.

Bunton said he wished in his heart that he could have sympathy for Organ, "but I can't."

The judge sentenced him to five years — the maximum for the offense — in prison.

MAURO

Mauro — who now oversees the Veterans Land Board and Texas' public lands — said he is taking Anderson's candidacy seriously, and that's one reason he already has spent more than $300,000 on his campaign this year.

"I haven't had to change my name to run for Texas Land Commissioner," said Mauro. "Texans know who I am and what I stand for."

Since he took office, Mauro said he's collected more than $1.6 billion from the state's public lands for public education; and claims that during the last three years, Texas veterans have had the most productive years in the history of the Veterans Land Board program at no cost to the taxpayer.

"I believe Texans want more than a famous name to be Texas Land Commissioner," Mauro said. "I don't think Texans want any name-games this November. I don't think they want any Marion Dudley Andersons trying to hide behind someone else's accomplishments. I don't think they want any Gary Indianas. I think they'll elect a candidate with a solid record of achievement."

Ector County sheriff's identifies man's body

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss has identified the body of a man found just before midnight Monday as that of 56-year-old Hector Payen.

Kloss said identification was made on the basis of an autopsy done at the Dallas County forensic lab and the identification of clothing and personal items by relatives.

Two men were arraigned before Peace Justice Manuel Valles Tuesday and charged with murder in connection with the death of Payen, who had been missing since June 3. Valles set bond for 37-year-old Ned Urias Rogers, Route 2, Box 640, and Jesse Fimbers, 31, 811½ N. Golder Ave., at $50,000 each. Both remained jailed in lieu of bond early today. Rogers had already been jailed on an earlier burglary charge.

The badly decomposed body of Payen, according to Kloss, was found laying in a pasture in the 5500-block of Sierra Drive in far west Odessa about 11:25 p.m. Monday.

Kloss said the autopsy ordered by Peace Justice Jimmy Harris revealed Payen apparently died as a result of a blow to the head by a blunt object, probably a rock, and numerous stab wounds.

The discovery of the body occurred after Payen was reported missing by a niece about 7 p.m. and information received from a jail inmate.

Kloss said the apparent motive in the killing of Payen was robbery. The man reportedly had about $5 with him at the time he was killed, Kloss said.

ECISD administrator tenders resignation

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The Ector County school board Tuesday night accepted the resignation of one of the district's top administrators.

Dr. Joe L. Starnes, assistant superintendent for administrative services, resigned to become superintendent of the Mansfield Independent School District in Tarrant County south of Fort Worth.

Retiring Superintendent Bill Holm, following acceptance of the resignation by board members, said Starnes' leaving will be a "great loss" to ECISD.

Starnes joined the ECISD in June 1980 as director of personnel and was elevated to the assistant superintendent position the following year.

In other action Tuesday night, board members again refused to interfere with the administrative decision to transfer several principals, despite protests by parents and teachers at the schools involved.

Longtime school board member and president Shirley Huffaker appeared before the board in support of the administrative decision to make the transfers. She said she had not always been comfortable with some of the administrative decisions made regarding transfers, saying she had voted for the policy that allows the administration to effect such transfers exclusive of the board.

She said she believed, and continues to believe, the role of a school board member should be to set policies and then support administrators in administration of those policies.

Jim Spencer, a former ECISD principal and new board member, said he couldn't support the administrative decision on the principal transfers and made a motion to delay them until the new superintendent takes over in July. Dr. Lee Buice, another new board member, seconded Spencer's motion, but the motion was defeated by a 3-to-2 vote.

Man indicted on charges he cheated government

EL PASO (AP) — A builder who had a $7 million contract with the Defense Department has been indicted on charges he cheated the government out of more than $230,000, the FBI said.

Jaime Torres of El Paso, president of J.T. Construction Co. Inc., was indicted by a federal grand jury on four counts, said FBI spokesman Gary Webb. Torres is accused of misrepresenting information to the Defense Department, he added.

Midlander who allegedly tried to extort money to be charged

From Staff Reports

Attempted robbery charges are expected to be filed later today against a 53-year-old Midland man who allegedly tried to extort $250,000 from a local savings and loan.

Midland police arrested the man early today following the investigation of the June 13 incident at Petroplex Savings, 1004 N. Big Spring. According to a police spokesman, officers responded to a possible bomb threat at approximately 4:30 p.m. that day. According to a clerk, the man allegedly gave her a note demanding the money. He then told her he had accomplices waiting outside, and if his demands were not met a bomb would be exploded at the motor bank outside.

When police arrived, he was still at the scene. But when questioned he said he had been forced to deliver the note by several men who fled before police arrived. Subsequent investigation by detectives led to the arrest of the man.

Astronaut van Hoften leaving NASA for industry

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronaut James D. van Hoften, saying he can never hope to top his two dramatic spacewalking satellite repair missions, announced Tuesday that he is leaving NASA to take a job in industry.

"I've had two of the most memorable flights a[n] ... it's very difficult to beat that," said van Hoften, 42. "The next flight was going to be good, but I didn't think I would ever get any better than that what I had."

Van Hoften, who was named "Ox" because of his strength and 6-feet-4 size, flew on two shuttle missions and helped repair two crippled satellites during a series of dramatic spacewalks. He was scheduled to fly again, but his mission was canceled after the Challenger accident.

The astronaut said Tuesday that he is leaving the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to accept a position with the defense and space division of Bechtel Corp. in San Francisco. He becomes the fourth astronaut to leave NASA since the Jan. 28 Challenger accident caused the space shuttle fleet to be grounded.

"The accident had essentially nothing to do with the decision (to leave)," said van Hoften. "The accident makes me feel worse about leaving. I had rather leave on a high note. I don't feel good about it in that respect."

Van Hoften said he felt the report by the Rogers Commission, which investigated the Challenger accident, was correct about NASA offering little management opportunity to astronauts. He said the astronaut office was "horizontal" and that most NASA management jobs go to engineers from the flight control divison of the space agency.

"People just kind of push up against the top (in the astronaut office)," he said. Van Hoften said most astronauts had rather fly than become managers, and he added, "the government salary is not the most appealing in the world" in management.

Three other astronauts, Donn Lind, Robert Overmeyer and Owen Garriott, have resigned since the Challenger accident. NASA sources said that at least two others plan to leave soon.

In April 1984, he and astronaut George Nelson fixed a crippled science satellite called Solar Max. The work required removing and replacing a faulty electronic box, a job that was the most difficult orbiting repair attempted to that time.

And in September 1985 van Hoften captured the Syncom 3 communications satellite by hand and wrestled the 7½-ton craft into the cargo bay of space shuttle Discovery. He and astronaut Bill Fisher then rewired the craft, bypassing some failed electronics.

The next day, van Hoften spun the communications satellite by hand and then released it. The $85 million satellite later fired itself into a high orbit and now is operating.

The astronaut, who is able to bench press 300 pounds, is the tallest and physically strongest of the astronauts.

Van Hoften was born in Fresno, Calif., and said he was anxious to return to the San Francisco bay area. The astronaut said he and his wife already have purchased a home in the Bay Area and are moving next month with their three children.

Van Hoften served five years as a U.S. Navy jet pilot and flew 60 combat missions in Southeast Asia. He holds a doctorate degree in hydraulic engineering from Colorado State University and was an assistant professor at the University of Houston at the time of his astronaut selection in 1978.

A close of friend of Dick Scobee, one of the crew members killed in the Challenger accident, van Hoften was a member with Scobee of a group of astronauts who jointly owned a biplane. He and Scobee purchased the plane in California and flew it together back to the Houston area.

Coloradoan held liable for $1.25 million in death

HOUSTON (AP) — A Colorado man who struck an 8-year-old Spring girl in a 1983 pickup truck-bicycle accident was ruled negligent in the accident and held liable for $1.25 million.

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling awarded David and Kathleen Crowe, the parents of Julie Gee Crowe now living in Austin, $1 million for their loss and mental anguish and $250,000 to compensate for the girl's pain and suffering just before her death.

Sterling, in an order released Tuesday, ruled that Brad Lee Krabbe, the truck's driver of Woodland Park, Colo., was negligent and caused the youngster's death.

The girl was riding her bicycle near her home in Spring on June 17, 1983, when she was struck from behind by a pickup driven by Krabbe. She died shortly thereafter.

The 1985 lawsuit filed by her parents accuses Krabbe of negligence for failing to control the truck, speeding, and failing to brake or otherwise avoid the accident. Sterling ruled that Krabbe was liable by default since he had failed to properly respond to repeated inquiries from the Crowe's attorney.

Winter Texan survey done

EDINBURG (AP) — Almost 71,000 Winter Texans pumped an additional $92 million to the depressed economy of the Rio Grande Valley last winter, a new survey shows.

Officials at Pan American University, which released the study Monday, said it was the first time a reliable estimate had been made of the number of elderly people who move south during the winter months.

"Many people in the Valley are going to be disappointed that the numbers are not higher, but that should not be," said Richard Vaughan, president of the Valley Chamber of Commerce, which helped fund the study that put the estimate at 70,700.

There may have been more than 100,000 Winter Texans last winter, but some may have left before February, which was the peak month, according to the survey, which is accurate to within 10 percent.

Crash probe continues

DALLAS (AP) — Investigators with the National Transportation Safety Board are looking at the possibility that faulty installation of an air conditioner may have been involved in the fatal crash of a KDFW-TV station helicopter.

The May 12 accident killed a news department executive and the pilot.

"When the air-conditioning unit was installed, that posibly may have contributed to the short shaft's failure," said Armond Edwards, chief of the safety board's Fort Worth field office. Officials think that the short shaft, part of the system which turns a helicopter's rotors, may have failed, cutting power to the rotor, but the investigation is incomplete, Edwards said.

B.L. "Buster" McGregor, 57, KDFW's news operations manager, and Irvin Dean Patrick, 54, the pilot, were killed when the helicopter dived into a field in Guadalupe Mountains National Park. Wind gusts of 40 mph are considered a contributing factor.

Judge picked out of hat

GATESVILLE (AP) — Coryell County Judge Doug Smith got the luck of the draw when his name was picked out of a hat to decide his party's nomination for the seat he's held for 16 years.

A recount Monday of the results of the June 7 Democratic runoff election had left Smith and his challenger, Justice of the Peace Larry McDonald, stuck in a tie with 1,530 votes each.

The Texas Election Code prescribes drawing lots in the case of a tie in a vote recount.

"I don't think that's any way to pick a county judge," said McDonald. "But that's what the election code calls for."

McDonald had outpolled Smith in the primary, 1,671 to 1,493. But in the runoff, Smith regained the lead, 1,528 to 1,522, and McDonald asked for the recount.

Heart found for Texas boy

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — A donor heart has been located for a 3-year-old Texas boy suffering from a degenerative heart disease, a spokeswoman for Loma Linda University Medical Center said today.

Baby Nicky, one of two children at the research institute awaiting new hearts since their acceptance as candidates last Friday, will undergo heart-transplant surgery, spokeswoman Anita Rockwell said.

The toddler, who suffers from cardiomyopathy, a disease of the heart muscle, was brought to Loma Linda from a hospital in San Antonio she said.

In a story published today, the San Antonio Light identified the infant as Nicky Carrizales and said he was prepared for surgery Tuesday evening.

The tot's father, Rudy Carrizales, said that the donor heart was from a 2-year-old child. "I feel like I've aged 20 years," Carrizales, 34. "He has six weeks, six days, maybe six hours" without the surgery, Carrizales said.

Dead pilot identified

PECAN ISLAND, La. (AP) — Authorities in Vermilion Parish say the body of a man, believed to be the pilot of a marijuana-laden plane that crashed here, is that of Billy Hugh Tucker, 61, of Kilgore, Texas.

Sheriff's deputies said they discovered the wreckage on Tuesday.

About two dozen bales of marijuana were found in and near the wreckage, they said, along with two buckets of what appeared to be hashish oil, a pasty cannabis concentrate.

Deputies said the single engine plane apparently was going full speed at low altitude to avoid radar detection when it crashed Monday night or early Tuesday.

There was no fire, they said, adding that indications were the plane, equipped with an extra fuel tank, might have been bringing the marijuana from Mexico to Texas.

PUC: Electric bills lower

AUSTIN (AP) — Almost all customers of Texas' 11 major electric utility companies are paying lower rates now than they did three years ago, according to the Public Utility Commission.

The averag decrease over the three-year period was 6.2 percent, the commission said in a Tuesday report.

Among the major decreases were 19 percent for Lower Colorado River Authority ratepayers, 16 percent for Houston Lighting & Power Co. customers and 7 percent for customers of Southwestern Public Service Co.

TPEA postpones governor endorsement

AUSTIN (AP) — Declining to endorse a gubernatorial candidate, the state's largest public employee group says former Gov. Bill Clements gleaned more support than Gov. Mark White in a straw poll of delegates at its annual meeting.

The Texas Public Employees Association on Tuesday announced endorsments in more than 50 legislative races, but executive director Gary Hughes said a gubernatorial endorsement won't come until later.

Hughes said a straw poll conducted at the group's annual meeting over the weekend found Clements leading White.

Clements received backing from 60.8 percent of the delegates, Hughes said, while 24 percent favored White and 15.2 percent were undecided.

George Bayoud, Clements' campaign manager, called the straw poll "significant and important news."

"Public employees are tired of the broken promises of Mark White. They are tired of a crisis-oriented state government," Bayoud said.

White's campaign press secretary, Mark McKinnon, said the poll doesn't reflect the feelings of most state workers.

"The majority of public employees in Texas understand that Gov. White has been fighting on their behalf during the most fiscally difficult budgetary period in Texas history," McKinnon said.

"He went to bat and secured pay raises for them. We contrast that with a former governor who pledged to eliminate 25,000 state employees," McKinnon said. "The fact they decided not to endorse suggests there's a rift between the (TPEA) membership and the leadership...The leadership doesn't represent the rank and file."

White issued a news release that said the tax cut wasn't due to Clements' efforts.

"Since that is what he once promised voters he would do, it is easy to understand why he would want to try and convince voters that he actually made good on his pledge. He didn't," White's campaign said.

That plan was one which he testified against during a special session of the Legislature in 1978," White's statement charged.

"Those familiar with the process know Clements had nothing to do with abolishing the state property tax — that had, in effect, already been done by the courts," the statement added.

Clements' press secretary, Reggie Bashur, said Clements called the Legislature into special session "to get enabling legislation passed for the state property tax to be abolished."

"These type of daily news releases are not going to remove from the memory of Texas taxpayers who has helped them and who has hurt them," Bashur said.

"People know when they pay taxes and when they don't pay taxes. And they know who was in office when the state property tax was abolished and who's in office when local property taxes go up — as they will this fall," Bashur said.

Victim's father pleas for convict's life

Brock

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A 37-year-old man convicted of killing a Houston convenience store manager in 1974 faces lethal injection early Thursday morning despite pleas from the victim's father and a prosecutor to have the sentence commuted to life in prison.

Kenneth Albert Brock of Houston was convicted in the May 21, 1974, shooting death of 31-year-old Michael Sedita, a manager of a 7-Eleven convenience store. If the execution is carried out, Brock will be the fifth Texas inmate to die by injection this year and the 15th since the death penalty was resumed in 1982.

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles on Tuesday refused, in a 4-2 vote, to commute Brock's capital murder conviction even though Sedita's father asked that Brock not be killed.

"Killing Kenneth Brock is wrong. It will not change what has happened to my son," J.M. Sedita of Houston said in a sworn statement presented to the board Tuesday.

"Killing Kenneth Brock will not ease my suffering or my wife's suffering or the loss of Michael," he added. "Two wrongs don't make a right. I could not be at peace if Kenneth Brock dies."

Former Assistant Harris County District Attorney George Jacobs, who prosecuted the case 12 years ago, said he asked the parole board to commute the sentence to life in prison because he did not think Brock deserved the death penalty.

Brock's attorneys, Will Gray and Carolyn Garcia, also asked the board to grant the inmate a reprieve. They declined Tuesday to answer questions about other possible appeals.

Gov. Mark White was reviewing the case Tuesday afternoon to determine whether or not to grant a reprieve, said Leslie Benitez, general counsel to the governor. But in previous capital murder reprieve cases, White has not commuted a death sentence.

Brock, a Marine deserter who was 25 at the time of the shooting, was the first to be tried under revised capital murder laws in Texas and since then the penalty has been reserved for more heinous crimes, Jacobs said.

Brock took Sedita as a hostage after a police officer spotted him robbing the convenience store, Jacobs said. He fled with the manager in tow into nearby woods where he was soon surrounded by police, he said.

"In the excitement, the gun could have gone off," he said. Jacobs said the gun may have gone off accidently because of a hair trigger.

But Assistant Attorney General Bob Walt said Brock deserved the death penalty because he had callously killed Sedita and fired at a police officer.

Brock had been suspected in other armed robberies in the Houston area prior to Sedita's death, he said.

Brock has steadily refused media interviews while in prison, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said.

Man to bring sick daughter back from Moscow

DALLAS (AP) — Several calls to embassies, a congressman and a senator were needed before the father of a girl hospitalized in Moscow finally secured permission Tuesday to fly to the Soviet Union to see his daughter.

Gordon Riggs, father of Lisa Riggs, 17, traveled to Washington Tuesday afternoon to secure a visa and head for Moscow.

His daughter, who was part of an Irving high school tour of Eastern block nations, suffered an asthma attack and cardiac difficulties after climbing to the top of a circus arena in Moscow. She was in satisfactory condition, said the girl's mother, Cheryl Riggs.

With help from a Texas congressman and a direct call to the American embassy, the girl's parents finally learned about their daughter's condition late Monday. Riggs also received an emergency visa sooner than usual with help from Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Riggs, a Dallas computer consultant with the Federal Reserve Bank, said he would stay with his daughter about a week, until she could travel.

"If she's improving as rapidly as we are told she is, he will be bringing her home rather quickly," Mrs. Riggs said.

The Riggs, who first heard of their daughter's plight Sunday afternoon, did not know how serious the attack had been until late Monday. They said they were unable to learn of anything through the State Department.

"I'm still amazed at how I could get through to the embassy and yet the State Department, their emergency services, indicated that they could not," Riggs said. "I have a real hard time understanding that — how I can get through and the State Department emergency cannot. It's real frustrating."

A spokesman for Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, said staff members also had difficulty getting assistance from the State Department.

"The State Department is telling us they will not or cannot get through. It's more direct to call ourselves," said spokesman Bob Mansker.

Peter Martinez, a spokesman for the State Department, said he could not comment on the incident because he was not familiar with the case.

"My experience has been there's almost always an explanation why these things are the way they are. They could have called at a time the lines were not jammed up or at a time when the Soviet bureaucracy is open," Martinez said.

"It's no secret that calls from private individuals are let through more often than calls not seen as from private Americans," he said.

Mrs. Riggs said she will leave it up to her daughter to decide whether to travel again.

"I think this was kind of a freak kind of thing. It just happened. It's probably unlikely it will happen again," she said.

Diplomat's bodyguard fires at armed men

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A bodyguard assigned to U.S. Ambassador Gregory J. Newell opened fire on two armed men spotted near a terrace cocktail party at a villa where the diplomat was having dinner, police said today.

A Swedish policeman, one of two policemen assigned to protect Newell, "spotted and fired three bullets" at the two men Tuesday night outside the residence of a Swedish industrialist, said criminal superintendent Rune Rytters.

Newell, 36, and Ambassador Andres Rozental of Mexico were among some 25 guests who gathered for a dinner party at the villa of Swedish industrialist Bo Axson Johnson in Varmdo, a secluded waterside area east of Stockholm.

Rytters told The Associated Press one bodyguard came across the two men about 50 yards from the villa, where Newell and the rest of the guests where having cocktails on an open terrace.

The two intruders, who were armed with rifles, fled into the woods after the bodyguard shot at them, Rytters said.

He denied some media reports that the intruders also had opened fire. "That's absolutely wrong," he said.

As to the reason for the intruders' presence near the villa, Rytters said: "It could be anything from poachers to a planned attack against the American ambassador."

Duty officer Ingvar Eklund of the local police district told the AP earlier that "we must assume that they were planning to attack the American ambassador. He was the most controversial person there."

Rytters said about 30 police officers were searching for the intruders with dogs and speedboats. He said police were looking for two men who were about 30 years old, dark-haired and of medium height.

Police have received many tips and detained one person for questioning, Rytters said. He declined to elaborate.

The U.S. Embassy in Stockholm said it had "no comment at all" on the incident. Ulf Hogberg, assistant to the embassy's press attache, referred all questions to the Stockholm police.

Newell became ambassador in Sweden last December. He worked on President Reagan's re-election campaign and was one of several assistant secretaries of state in the Reagan administration before his appointment as ambassador.

Johnson, 68, is a member of one of Sweden's richest families and heads Nordstjernan, a company with interests in shipping, construction, steel and retail operations.

Kaj Lindgren, Nordstjernan's information director, said Johnson did not want to comment on the incident. "There is a police investigation going on so he naturally does not want to comment," Lindgren said.

The spokesman said he believed the dinner party continued after the shots were fired.

Attacks on public figures are extremely rare in Sweden. However, in February, an unidentified assailant gunned down Prime Minister Olof Palme as he and his wife walked along a Stockholm street. The 59-year-old politician's assassin has not yet been found.

South Africa extends news ban

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government today extended its news restrictions under the state of emergency to include a ban on reports of security force actions in tribal homelands. Major newspapers mounted new protests against the unprecedented muzzles.

President P.W. Botha, in a proclamation published under last Thursday's state of emergency declation, extended an already existing ban on reporting police activity to six of South Africa's 10 tribal homelands.

The four other homelands are nominally independent under South Africa's original apartheid plan which envisioned restricting voting, residence and other rights for the 24 million black majority to 13 percent of the country, with the 5 million whites in control of the remainder.

The ban on reporting police activity is one of the most far-reaching of the recent curbs on the news media, and means that most unrest and all arrests and detentions cannot be reported without official permission.

Press restrictions imposed since a state of emergency was declared Thursday also bar journalists from black townships, and forbid the dissemination of "subversive" statements.

Business Day, the Johannesburg daily which reflects the views of big business, followed up two days of calling the government's measures totalitarian with an editorial commenting, "what we have to fear is the power of the state."

Johannesburg's black newspaper, The Sowetan, which is white-owned, appeared with a three-column-wide blank space on its front page, and said it had been effectively censored from carrying pictures from Soweto, the city's vast black township.

The Sowetan said it was effectively prevented from carrying even pictures of blacks in the township playing or praying because it would have to seek police permission.

For the second straight day the paper also left its editorial column blank, reiterating that anything it had to say was effectively forbidden under the regulations.

The government Tuesday reported that 11 blacks were killed during and after a strike by millions of blacks on Monday's anniversary of the bloody 1976 Soweto uprising, bringing to 42 the number of people killed since the emergency declaration.

Reporters were taken in mesh-protected police buses on a conducted tour of Soweto Tuesday, but saw no signs of unrest in the vast black township outside Johannesburg.

The tour took the 20 local and foreign journalists through several neighborhoods in the black community of 1.5 million, but the buses did not stop and the reporters were not allowed to speak with Soweto residents.

Anglican envoy Terry Waite arrived to investigate the plight of clerics among an estimated 2,000 people jailed without charge under the sweeping emergency powers.

Waite, representing Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, toured Soweto with black Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu. Emergency regulations prohibited reporters from accompanying them.

The trouble in Soweto 10 years ago began June 16 with demonstrations by school children against a new law requiring them to be taught in Afrikaans, the language of the white Afrikaners. Riots spread through the nation and 575 people had been killed, by official count, when it subsided late in 1977.

A report released Tuesday by the Institute of Race Relations, an independent monitoring body, said 213 people were killed during May in anti-apartheid or related violence.

That was the highest monthly toll in the riots and protest that began in September 1984 against apartheid. The institute says the violence has cost 1,782 lives.

The Institute of Race Relations, which compiles its figures from police and press reports and some independent sources, said killings by security forces dropped to 22 percent of the total in May, compared with more than half last year.

It rejected government claims that blacks killing other blacks account for about two-thirds of recent fatalities, but it said black-on-black violence was responsible for 41 percent of the May deaths. The institute could not fix responsibility for the others.

Many blacks have been killed by others who see them as sellouts to the white authorities, and violence has occurred between such conflicting groups as militant foes of apartheid and conservative black vigilantes.

Trial of Achille Lauro hijackers opens in Italy

GENOA, Italy (AP) — The trial of 14 men charged with hijacking the Achille Lauro cruise ship, killing a crippled American passenger, and holding more than 300 people hostage opened today under heavy security in a Genoa courtroom.

Only four of the defendants in the case are in custody. Ten others, including the alleged mastermind behind the Oct. 7 hijacking, Palestinian guerrilla leader Abul Abbas, are being tried in absentia.

The 14 defendants are charged with hijacking the ship, murdering 69-year-old New Yorker Leon Klinghoffer, and holding 194 passengers and 189 crew members who were on board when the ship was seized between Egyptian port calls.

Sixteen men originally were indicted in the case, but Judge Lino Monteverde today ordered charges against two of them dropped for lack of evidence. They had been accused of playing minor roles.

However, the prosecution added a Greek man, Petros Flores, to the list of those on trial, alleging that his passport was used by one of the defendants to board the ship when it set sail from Genoa. Flores was indicted on the lesser charges of aiding and abetting.

About two hours into the session, two men and two women were dragged out of the courtroom after shouting "we are for the Palestinian revolution." The judge ordered a temporary recess.

Defense attorney Gianfranco Pagano, in an interview Tuesday, said the defense would argue that the defendants are not terrorists, but fighters for the Palestinian cause, and that Klinghoffer's death was not part of their plan.

Pagano said the defense also will argue that only Youssef Magid al-Molqi, the hijacker accused of shooting Klinghoffer, should be tried for murder.

Al-Molqi, 23, who has said he led the hijackers, and two other alleged hijackers, Ibrahim Fatayer Abdelatif, 20, and Ahmed Marrouf al-Assadi, 24, are in custody.

CBS cameraman deported after order upheld

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A television cameraman from the CBS News bureau in Johannesburg left for London on Tuesday after a court ruling upheld an order for his deportation.

Wim de Vos, a Dutch citizen who had lived in South Africa for 11 years, was escorted to Jan Smuts Airport direct from Rand Supreme Court.

Cameramen were forbidden to take photographs as he embraced his South African wife, Siggie, before boarding his flight. Colleagues cheered de Vos as he disappeared into the departure lounge.

Judge A. van Niekerk said Tuesday the expulsion order with just four days' notice "appears to me to be a harsh decision." But the judge added that Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha was entitled to make the order, for which no reason was given.

Mrs. de Vos said her husband had hoped to remain in Johannesburg at least long enough to attend a memorial service Wednesday for George De'Ath, the first journalist killed in South Africa's 22 months of anti-apartheid violence.

De Vos was arrested last Wednesday in Cape Town while covering a small demonstration and was charged with resisting arrest, hindering a police officer and attending an illegal gathering. Botha then issued the deportation order with a Tuesday midnight deadline.

South Africa police arrest congregation, rights group claims

LONDON (AP) — South African police arrested an entire congregation of more than 200 people at a church service in Cape Town, Amnesty International said Tuesday.

David Laulicht, a spokesman for the London-based human rights group, said the action occurred Sunday at St. Nicholas Church in the southern port.

He said the church was Anglican, but was being used by members of the Dutch Reformed Church Mission, most of whom were of mixed race.

Laulicht said South African authorities gave no reason for the arrests, and it appeared they acted under the state of emergency imposed last Thursday. "Certainly, reports coming to us indicate there was no violence" to provoke the arrests, he said.

Police took all members of the congregation to Bellville police station in Cape Town where they were photographed and fingerprinted, he said, and the men were sent on to Victor Verster Prison in Paarl, about 40 miles away.

Women and children were taken to Pollsmoor Prison in Cape Town, according to Laulicht, and police later freed children under the age of 10.

The congregation's pastor was identified as Richard Stevens, who Laulicht said had been jailed as a political prisoner in 1980.

He said Amnesty International appealed to South African authorities to release the approximately 130 people still being held, adding: "We consider them prisoners of conscience because they were arrested for trying to exercise their freedom of religious expression."

Soviet minister gets new post

MOSCOW (AP) — Pyotr N. Demichev, the conservative culture minister who enforced the Communist Party's rules for Soviet arts for 12 years, was removed today and named to the largely ceremonial position of vice president.

Demichev, 68, replaced 85-year-old First Deputy President Vasily V. Kuznetsov, the oldest man in the Soviet leadership, who retired for health reasons.

The shifts are part of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's efforts to replace the party's old guard. They were announced at a session of the national Parliament, the Supreme Soviet, which convened one of its semi-annual sessions to approve a new five-year economic plan.

Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, addressing the delegates today, reaffirmed previous pledges that the Chernobyl nuclear accident would not effect Soviet plans to increase reliance on nuclear energy.

But Ryzhkov said that safety was paramount. "The determination of a technical policy which ensures a high reliability of nuclear power stations is of importance here as in no other sector," the official news agency Tass quoted him as saying.

Honduras denies allegations

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The Honduran military denied Tuesday that any of its officers received money from a $27 million U.S aid package intended for Nicaraguan rebels.

U.S. congressional investigators testified last week that nearly $1.2 million of the humanitarian aid package went to "the armed forces" of a Central American nation, including a $450,000 check made out to the commander. The country later was identified as Honduras.

The State Department said in Washington on Tuesday that the congressional findings were "erroneous."

A statement from the Honduran armed forces press office called the allegations "tendentious," and said an investigating commission had "categorically proved that no officer of our institution was bribed."

Gen. Humberto Regalado Hernandez, chief of the Honduran armed forces, and Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes, who held that post when the check allegedly was issued, had denied the allegations previously.

U.S. jet crashes in Canal Zone

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A U.S. Air Force Stratotanker trying to land at a Canal Zone air base crashed into a hill in the jungle, killing all four crew members, officials reported.

Bill Orsbine, a spokesman for the U.S. Southern Command, said the KC-135 jet tanker, based at Grissom Air Force Base in Indiana, crashed before dawn while trying to land at Howard Air Base, three miles south of Panama City.

At Grissom, spokeswoman Capt. Nancy Conchran identified the victims as Capt. Thomas B. McDerby, 29, of New Jersey, the pilot; co-pilot 1st Lt. John M. Bristow, 25, of Illinois; navigator 1st Lt. Wayne K.S. Ching, 25, of Hawaii, and Staff Sgt. Quinn L. DeWitt, 31, of Indiana, the boom operator.

De la Madrid fires Mexico's treasury secretary in surprise move

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog has been fired by President Miguel de la Madrid in a surprise move apparently sparked by dissension in the government over the management of Mexico's economic problems.

The president's office issued a one-paragraph statement Tuesday afternoon announcing Herzog's successor would be Gustavo Petricioli Iturbide, director general of the Nacional Financiera, a government development bank.

Herzog, who was treasury secretary for 14 years, had helped guide Mexico through some of its toughest economic times. The Mexican economy is suffering from the dramatic fall in the price of oil, a precipitous decline in the value of the peso and a $96 billion foreign debt.

The government statement said Petricioli was chosen "for the proper instrumentation of the financial policy of the federal government."

Interior Secretary Manuel Bartlett Diaz, who later swore in the new treasury chief, said, "The need to strengthen the work team in times of crisis has motivated the appointment."

Hours later, the Treasury Department released the text of a letter Silva Herzog sent de la Madrid offering his "irrevocable" resignation for "reasons of a personal character."

However, a knowledgeable government official who spoke on condition of anonymity, insisted Silva Herzog did not resign. "He was replaced," he said.

He indicated there was dissension among the president's economic advisers. "There were no agreements (among the officials)...His ideas didn't go with the rest of the financial cabinet," he said. The official declined to elaborate.

Silva Herzog, a charismatic, athletic man of 51, at times overshadowed de la Madrid. He was more well-known in the international financial community than the president.

Privately, Mexican politicians said Silva Herzog wanted to be the next president, but his supporters worried that his prominence had hurt his standing with de la Madrid, who will pick the candidate of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party for a term beginning in December 1988.

He caused a flap last week by saying in an interview with The Associated Press that Mexico might suspend payments on its foreign debt. The statement was the first word from an official that Mexico might be considering such a tough stance in its debt negotiations.

An international banker, who spoke on condition of anonymity, predicted that the change in treasury leaders "would have a very big impact" both at home and abroad.

Mexico's economy has been plunged into crisis by the collapse of world oil prices during the past six months. In the past, Mexico, the world's fourth largest oil producer, has earned about 70 percent of its foreign earnings from crude sales. That money goes to stay current on the debt and buy needed imports.

Mexico is currently negotiating with the International Monetary Fund on a new financial package to help with its latest economic troubles. The foreign banker said Silva Herzog's departure might be linked to the negotiations.

In banking circles, he said, there was talk that Silva Herzog had agreed, during a secret visit last week to Mexico City by Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, on a basic outline for a rescue package that called for the government to take additional, belt-tightening measures.
