The public hearing next Monday before the Winters Council should be interesting. The one regarding parking and parking meters.

Winters is one of the few communities of its size to utilize parking meters.

One of the questions to be addressed will concern raising the fine for overparking.

Now this poses an interesting, complex, and multi-faceted question. Why? What for? How? By whom? What would be the desired results?

Lets see. Why enforce the parking ordinances and why increase from a quarter to $2 the fine for breaking the law? Well, the city could gain some revenue (money) from the parking meters and the increased fines but, someone would have to walk the streets to watch the meters daily and issue tickets to those who do not punch their nickles into the meters.

It would obviously be a police function but, our four police officers have their hands full now without having to spend the day-time hours checking on the parking meters.

If the city mom and dads decide to adhere to the ordinances about parking and to up the fine for over parking, they are going to have to find someone to watch the meters, write the tickets, collect the pennies, count them and make reports.

The cost-effectiveness of this might be questionable.

One of the things mentioned by the city as a problem was that of employees of business parking in the metered spaces. No bigger than our city is, they just as well leave their rides at home and walk to work. There is very little parking within two blocks of the business district that does not have meters.

What parking there is, is already being used, the owners charge more for the parking than the meters would cost, or the owners of space that could be used for parking want to keep their space for themselves, and use it only once or twice a week.

I agree that something should be done with the meters—either use them or take them out completely, sell them as keepsakes, and forget them.

That meeting is 6:00p.m. Monday and everyone is invited.

Guess what? I finally got a call back from the Attorney General's office. It only took them six or eight months to return the call.

They are finally, at the request of the governor, going to conduct a series of public meetings around the state to study the state's child support system, visitation and custody and items relating to welfare and working with other states.

Although none of the hearings will be in our area, they will accept written testimony.

Maybe here is a chance to get the state to enforce visitation with one's children equally with enforcement of the payment of child support.

As it is now, the sad situation can be equated to being forced to buy a ticket to a movie and not getting to see the show.

Many of the judges are interested in collecting the money and not interested in the best interests of the children who are the victims of the whole thing.

Murder charges filed in shooting

Gunfire erupted late Friday evening in an apartment near downtown Winters to climax an argument that began earlier in the evening in Buffalo Gap.

Jesus Garcia Solorzano, 25, a Mexican national, was pronounced dead about 2:00 a.m. Saturday morning at North Runnels Hospital by Justice of the Peace J.C. Hodnett.

Charges of murder were filed against 29-year old Domingo Ortiz, of Winters in connection with the shooting. Officers took Ortiz into custody on a Winters parking lot following a report of the incident.

Winters Police were first notified of the shooting incident when they were contacted by man who said that he thought that his brother had shot someone.

Officers went to an apartment at 208-A West Parsonage to investigate the report and found Solorzano in the apartment and summoned emergency medical personnel.

Runnels County Sheriff Bill Baird said that the two men reportedly began arguing in a night spot in Buffalo Gap earlier Friday evening. He said the argument apparently resumed at the apartment and ended with shots being fired.

Solorzano sustained a single gunshot wound from a .22 cal. revolver in the chest. The sheriff said that Ortiz suffered a blow to the head. He said that it was believed that an 18-inch piece of pipe, found in the apartment, was used in the fight.

Medical personnel worked for quite some time to revive the wounded man before he died in the hospital emergency room.

Winters Police officers said the shooting occurred sometime around 12:30 a.m. Saturday morning.

Bond for Domingo Ortiz was set at $50,000 by Justice of the Peace J.C. Hodnett on the murder charge early Saturday morning.

Ortiz was treated at the Winters hospital for a severe laceration to the head before being placed in the Runnels County Jail.

Ortiz was released on the $50,000 bond early this week.

Sheriff's officers said that Solorzano's body was taken to San Antonio for an autopsy.

Solorzano was a native of Durango, Mexico, and had lived in Winters for several years and worked as a carpenter.

Information concerning the incident will be presented to the next session of the Runnels County Grand Jury.

Appraisal Board votes to purchase new computer

During their regular meeting on June 4, the Runnels County Appraisal Board voted to purchase a computer system to handle the county's appraisal system.

The Appraisal Board appraises all the property in the county and provides records to the county, cities, school districts, and hospital districts—all the taxing entities in the county.

Centralization of appraisals was effected in the late 1970's following a Texas Constitutional Amendment.

The current tax records are kept on cards. Lists of who to send letters to, at what time of year, are kept on yellow tablets. An out-of-town computer hook-up keeps some records, but with more people handling the figures, more errors are likely.

Changing agriculture values, an upcoming project, is a major ordeal under the old system, according to Clayton Brazelton, Chief Appraiser for Runnels County.

With the new computer, computations will be done swiftly. The state-mandated reappraisal in 1987 will be done by the computer in considerably less time than it would have taken the staff to do it by hand, Brazelton advised.

Under the current system, an appraiser goes out, looks at possibly 10 houses in one day, and it takes about a half day to do the paperwork on them. Then the information must be stored somewhere else till the new appraisal period, not on the cards where the records are kept.

Brazelton feels his staff could not meet the deadlines coming up without the new system.

CPS Business Systems of Wichita Falls had the winning bid of $79,182. This company is the same one which set up the City of Winters' computer system. Brazelton said their proposal met the needs of the appraisal process and was the most advantageous to the board. They service what they sell, both hardware and software, he advised. They have back-up equipment in the case of a major breakdown, and can arrive in one hour in their corporate aircraft to effect repairs, Brazelton explained.

The board voted to authorize Brazelton to sign a note at Farmers and Merchants State Bank to borrow money for the computer system.

Kevin Lerner represented CPS. Others present to give details of their computer bids were Glenn Smith of Software Group and Joel Faulkenberry of Western Data.

In other business, the men voted to approve the expense-revenue report and the 1986 tentative budget.

Members present were Lynn Billups, Billy Joe Colburn, Carl Gottschalk, and Daniel Redman. James Teplick was absent.

B-1B to arrive June 29

When the Air Force's first operational B-1B aircraft enters active service at Dyess Air Force Base, Abilene, on June 29, 1985, it will be greeted by its predecessors in the long line of America's strategic bombers. The base will host an open house with the theme "The Evolution of Strategic Aviation," featuring bomber aircraft old and new.

Plans for the B-1B arrival day activities were announced recently by Abilene's B-1B Arrival Task Force in a press conference at the Abilene Chamber of Commerce offices. The task force, which has been planning the arrival for several months, is composed of Dyess personnel and Abilene citizens.

Visitors to the base will be able to view vintage World War II bombers owned and operated by the Confederate Air Force, as well as modern strategic bomber and tanker aircraft active in today's U.S. Air Force.

The arrival event's planners noted that the day's activities are scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. with a flyover of Abilene by Confederate Air Force aircraft. At 10 a.m., Dyess AFB will begin admitting visitors wishing to see the first B-1's arrival, set for 2 p.m.

In the interim, visitors will be able to see such active Air Force aircraft as the B-52, FB-111, KC-135, and C-130 on display, as well as such vintage aircraft as the A-20, B-17, B-24, B-25, B-26, and B-29. The B-29 to be displayed is reportedly the last known aircraft of its type still flying. Displays related to the B-1B will be provided by the aircraft's prime contractors.

The Confederate Air Force's vintage aircraft are scheduled to take to the air again at 12:15 p.m. This time, they will take off and fly over Dyess.

The 96th Bombardment Wing, host unit at Dyess, will receive its first B-1B at 2 p.m. The new aircraft is scheduled to arrive overhead at 1:40 p.m., fly over the airfield twice, land, and be brought to the center foreground of the other display aircraft.

The first bomber's name, chosen from those submitted by the public during a recent local "Name the First B-1B Contest," will be announced at that time, and the plane officially transferred to the 96th Bomb Wing. The open house will end at 5 p.m.

Fines levied for plugging violations

The Railroad Commission fined 18 oil and gas operators a total of $43,000 in administrative penalties recently for pollution and well plugging violations of Commission rules.

Eight operators were fined $3,000 and one $5,000 after they failed to appear at a Commission hearing called to inquire into well plugging violations. In each case, one or more wells were inactive or unplugged for a year or more. Commission rules require operators to plug or bring back into production wells which have been inactive for more than 90 days.

Receiving $3,000 penalties were Jeltex, Inc. of Houston for one well on the Fred Tyree

Business growth evident in Winters

A new restaurant and at least one new supermarket are slated for Winters in the near future. Formal opening activities are planned for June 24 for the Circle S Restaurant and Steakhouse according to owner Gene Shields.

Plans were made public Monday for a new Super Duper Food Store for Winters.

The new restaurant and steakhouse is located on F.M. 53 West between Dry Manufacturing Division offices and Bishop and Sons. It is owned by Gene and Mary Shields who also own G & M Security in Winters. The new business will be jointly managed by Shields, their daughter Sandra Hawkins, and Woodrow Jackson.

The restaurant will be open from 5 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily and will feature a full breakfast and lunch menu along with a la carte meals. The specialty will be steaks.

The Circle S will feature seating for 108 people and will have provisions for banquets and private meetings.

Super Duper Food Stores said this week that they have acquired property in the 800 block of North Main Street and have plans to construct a 14,000 square foot super market.

Travis Robison, Senior Vice-president in charge of operations for Super Duper, said that plans are being drawn now and that the project will be ready for bids within 30 days.

The supermarket chain operated a store in Winters for several years before selling last

Good-by Florida— Hello Texas

Although we had seen and heard many things in New Orleans, the tour would not have been complete without a visit to the Longue Vue House and Gardens at Metairie on Bamboo Road.

Longue Vue was designed and built between 1939 and 1942 for Mr. and Mrs. Ernest B. Stern. He was a cotton broker and she was the daughter of Julius Rosenwald, one of the founders of Sears Roebuck and Company. They used their money to build one of America's elegant estates, in the classical tradition, with gardens influenced by those in England and Spain. There is mutual rapport between indoors and outdoors with vistas suggesting formal English terraces and pastoral woods. A glimpse of the Spanish Court is also, in evidence, inspired by Alhambra's Generalife Gardens of Spain, often called a water garden, as fountains on the grounds delight visitors with the magic of dancing waters.

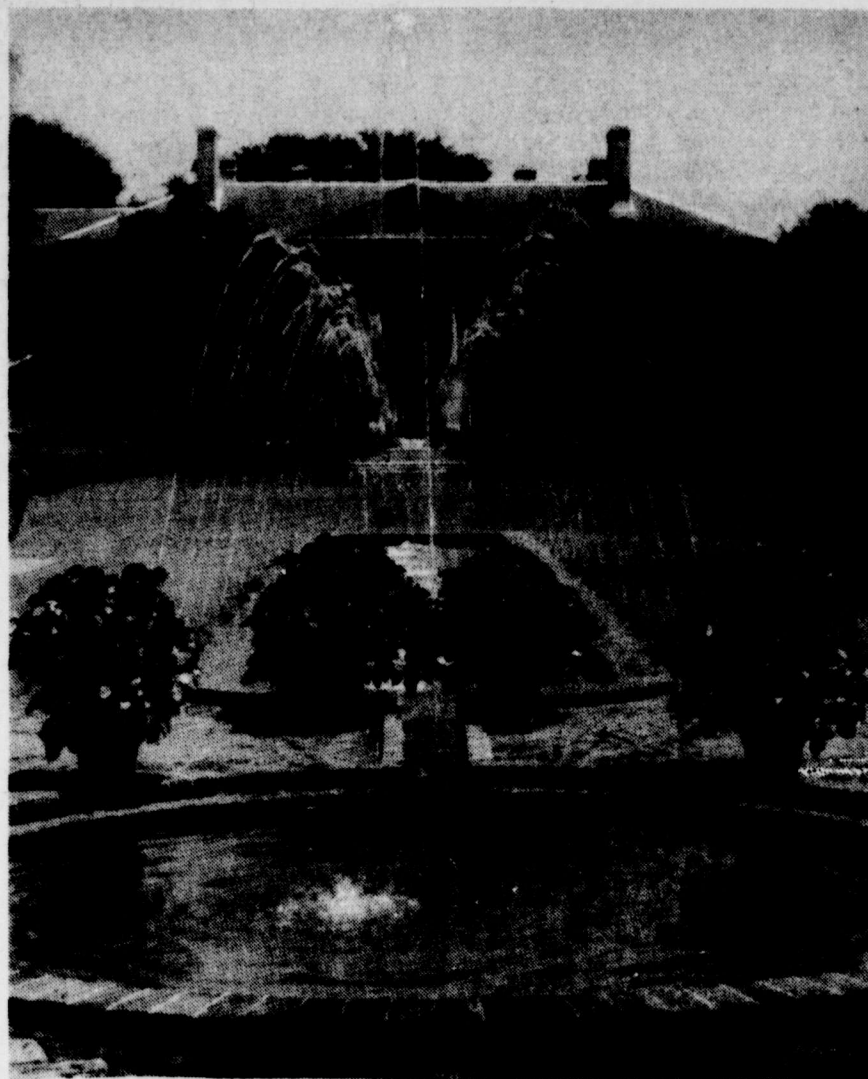

At Longue Vue modern art co-exists harmoniously with Russian carpets, Chinese rice paper wallcovering, a Washington memorial mantelpiece, and English cream-colored earthenware. Wall furnishings range from French panoramic wall-paper to framed celluloid paintings of animated films by Walt Disney Productions.

Mrs. Stern had long dreamed of giving her home to the City of New Orleans, and this was accomplished just two years before her death. The gardens of this eight acre estate, designed for year-round appeal, were first opened to the public in 1968. The basic plan is a large formal garden surrounded by six smaller ones.

One of the smaller gardens designed by Mrs. Stern is called the Yellow Garden. One column is covered by a butterfly vine, another by Carolina jessamine. Allamanda is showy in the summer. Flowering shrubs include lantana and thryallis. Annuals in pots augment the permanent planting.

Some of the women skipped this trip to visit the beauty parlor and met us at the hotel with happy faces. Marie McCollum or it could have been Loucille Middleton, seemed the happiest of all. There is nothing like a fresh hairdo to lift the spirits of a woman.

With a free night, a few of us couldn't stand to leave New Orleans without a trip down Bourbon Street. Since the street is roped off by the police, so that no cars can enter, and it was so near our hotel, we talked some of the men into going with us. Seventeen brave souls walked down the middle of the street. We looked to the left and the right but didn't go near the buildings as shadowy figures lurked in some of the doorways. My purpose in going was to see if Diamond Jim Brady still stood in front of his night club as he did about 33 years ago on my first and only visit to the area. Alas! he was gone and most of the glitter with him. The most exciting thing we saw was some boys break-dancing on the street.

Excitement was in the air on Friday morning as we were heading for Texas and would spend the night in Beaumont. However, a treat was in store for us when we stopped at Pat Huvals for lunch in Henderson, Louisiana— Pat had added crawfish to the menu when he bought the restaurant in 1954. Soon Pat's crawfish cuisine caught on. The delectable mugbug became such a part of the commercialized fishing industry that the spring flood harvest did not meet the year-round demand. None of this was known until we read the story on the menu.

Agnes Spence traded me some of her turtle soup for a piece of oyster Poor Boy. When we were leaving the restaurant, I saw a man with a huge plate of what he told me was crawfish. He offered Muriel Brown and me a taste— and we took it— tasted like shrimp with a mud flavor. Nothing like eating off a stranger's plate, but he recognized us because we had on our name badges.

Friday was fish day. The day was finished with a seafood buffet in the Jacques Restaurant in Beaumont. For the first time ever, I ate frog legs and several kinds of fish.

Somewhere along the way we stopped at Pascagoula, Mississippi, where I bought some leaded crystal ear screws and necklace. Muriel told me about the song of the squirrel that went to church in Pascagoula. I later heard the song on a juke box in a cafe.

Saturday was the day we arrived back in good old Texas and headed for La Mansion Del Norte Hotel in San Antonio on the last day of the Fiesta. Nothing like a good Mexican dinner when you haven't had one in a while. We ate at Mario's Mexican Restaurant. Then we headed for the Fiesta Parade and had some reserved seats on a wooden platform. It is good we had reservations for I read in the paper there had been a crowd of 325 thousand people present.

I did my best to see that Edna Musgrave behaved, but I was sitting three seats behind her and couldn't help it when she kissed the clown.

A number of clowns intermingled with the bands and floats and kept the parade lively. All types of bands were present from surrounding schools on up the magnificent University of Texas Band.

The Shriners could have staged a parade all by themselves with a float, horse riders, street cars, and miniature automobiles. Fort Sam Houston was observing 75 years of service; a red, white, and blue float presented health services of the Army Band; a boat represented the U.S. Navy; and the Statue of Liberty graced the Lackland Air Force entry. Highlight was the presentation of Miss Fiesta and her court.

Sunday was our last day and it started with a banquet breakfast at the hotel. A few were already talking of their trip to Alaska in August, but I remarked that I had nothing else planned for the summer. Famous last words! I ended up leaving the

Mrs. Gordon Jay Fenwick

Regina Thompson, Gordon Fenwick wed

In a double-ring ceremony at North Main Church of Christ on Saturday, June 8, Regina Renae Thompson became the bride of Gordon Jay Fenwick.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan R. West, Winters. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Fenwick, also of Winters.

Tracy Shelton, youth minister of the church, performed the 4 p.m. ceremony.

Tall green foliage plants adorned each side of an archway trimmed with green ivy and tiny white blossoms. Lavender flowers around large white bows completed the setting where the bride and groom exchanged their vows. Pot plants of deep purple hyacinths were set in the background. Pew markers for the couple's parents were made of large white satin bows with centers of lavender ribbon.

Recorded music by the Abilene Christian University Choir included "Sunrise, Sunset," "More," and "Faithful and True," the processional and recessional.

Given in marriage by her stepfather Nathan West, the bride wore a floor-length white satin gown with medium length train, made for her by her paternal grandmother. The bodice was covered with bridal lace, with large, elbow length puffed lace sleeves. Her veil of tulle, designed by her grandmother, descended from a headpiece of white silk flowers, silk ribbon, and lace. The bridal bouquet consisted of white and lavender flowers nestled in a nose-gay of tulle with long satin ribbons. She wore a cameo necklace borrowed from her maternal grandmother.

The groom wore a white tuxedo with a lavender boutonniere.

Maid of honor was Cynthia Lynn Garrett of Santa Anna. She wore a light beige street-length dress of sheer fabric printed with lavender flowers, accented with lavender ribbons at each shoulder. Bridesmaids were Tammy Fenwick, sister-in-law of the groom, Winters, and Charlotte Garrett, Santa Anna. The bridesmaids wore solid lavender street-length sleeveless dresses with fitted bodices and gathered skirts. Each carried one long-stemmed lavender rose and wore halo headpieces of small lavender flowers with matching ribbon.

The best man was Joe Lozano. Groomsmen were Rodney Fenwick and Roy Fenwick, brothers of the groom. The best man and groomsmen wore black tuxedos with lavender bow ties, cummerbunds, and boutonnieres.

Ushers were Michael Ray Thompson, brother of the bride, and Alfred Fenwick, brother of the groom.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in the Fellowship Hall. Members of the houseparty were Malia Hooten, Earlene Lingo, Melody Herring, Tammy Colbath, and Donna Sudduth, all of Winters; and Alys Pelton of Santa Anna.

The bride and groom's tables were decorated by the bride's mother and grandmother. The centerpiece for the bride's table was made for her by her aunt, Mrs. Sherry Carmona. Gracing the bride's table were candles in crystal holders give to her maternal grandmother as a wedding present 50 years ago. Deep purple candles accented the groom's table centerpiece of colorful bright tulips.

The bride's four-tiered cake was trimmed in lavender roses and green petals and served by Tammy Colbath. The groom's cake was trimmed in light brown roses and petals and served by Alys Pelton. Punch was served by Donna Sudduth.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at Holloway's Barbecue. Brisket, sausage, beans, potato salad, and all the trimmings were enjoyed by the wedding party.

A miscellaneous bridal tea was given for the bride on May 31 by Noma Eoff, Nancy Bryan, Margie Jones, Kay Guy, Joyce Bahlman, Malia Hooten, Rowena Gray, and Karen Colburn at the North Main Church of Christ Fellowship Hall. Table decorations of colorful flowers and lavender candles and ribbons detailed the table. Punch and cookies were served.

Out of town wedding guests included Mrs. A.J. Clare, Austin, maternal grandmother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Albert West, paternal step-grandparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Carmona and children; Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Woods and children, and Mrs. Ginny Scott, all of Abilene; and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Garrett, Santa Anna.

The bride will be a senior at Winters High School. She is employed by Piggly Wiggly Food Stores.

The groom attended Winters High School and is employed at John's International in Winters.

Following a trip to Abilene, they are at home at 202 Paloma.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Gideon of Abilene. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitehorn, also of Abilene.

Reverend Samuel Matta, Abilene, performed the 8 p.m. ceremony in the mirrored room of the Manor. The altar was decorated with staircase candelabras graced by fresh flower arrangements in the center.

Wedding music was performed by pianist Dorothy Torrence and soloist Pat Black, both of Abilene. Selections included "Love Lift Us Up," "Ice Castles," and the wedding song.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin taffeta floor-length gown made by Mary Shook. The fitted off-the-shoulder bodice was trimmed with lace. Lace also accented the hem of the gown. A satin bow enhanced the back waistline.

Mary Poe, my niece of San Antonio, took me to see my grandson Cliff Poe and his family of Floresville for a visit; and I returned home several days later.

I had given my partner, Virginia Allison, instructions to write me about the famous dessert they were to have: "The Coupe-of-the-Americans." She complied and I learned that it was ice cream with a brandy-like flavoring and whipped topping.

A silver candelabra centered the table. Mary Hackworth of Abilene and Teresa Goodman, Berkley Springs, West Virginia, served at the bride's table.

Warm weather increases tick population

Tick populations increase dramatically with warmer weather, causing inconvenience and health hazards for homeowners and pets.

Ticks are biting, blood-sucking parasites, and their bites may become inflamed and infected due to toxic secretions, points out Allen Turner, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Texas A&M University System. Tick paralysis, tularemia and Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever may be transmitted through tick bites.

Brown dog, American dog and Lone Star ticks are the most common in Texas home landscapes. Brown dog ticks are reddish-brown while American dog ticks are yellowish-brown when unfed and slate gray when engorged. The brown tick rarely occurs in rural areas; instead, it hides in crevices around buildings. American dog ticks are most often found along roads and trails. The Lone Star tick has a characteristic white spot on its back and commonly referred to as a spot backed tick.

A female tick may lay several thousand eggs, beginning a two-to-four-month life cycle. Remaining stages—six legged larva (seed tick) and eight legged nymph and adult—generally develop on separate host animals. After each feeding the tick drops off the host and temporarily hides until the next developmental stage.

Regardless of the species, control is basically the same for all ticks, says the Agent. Heavy infestations in the home may require treatment by professionals. Spot treatments with household sprays containing Diazinon, Dursban, Baygon, Resmethrin or Vapona will provide excellent control of light infestations.

Freezing reminders

Many people have discovered that freezing is a quick and simple way to save the surplus from their home gardens and help stretch the family food budget. "When you have a freezer, there is no out-of-season period for fruits and vegetables," says Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Marilyn Haggard. Home frozen foods can have a color, flavor, texture and nutritive value much like the fresh product, if you follow recommended practices for freezing foods, she points out. If you have questions about those practices, you can get detailed information on freezing fruits and vegetables from your county Extension office, she adds.

Farm Bureau Citizenship Seminar set

State Senator Cyndi Krier of San Antonio says she found the encouragement that led her to "become involved in government" through her experiences at the Texas Farm Bureau Citizenship Seminar as a student in the mid-1960s.

Senator Krier returns to the TFB seminar as one of several noted speakers at the 23 annual training school on the campus of Angelo State University, June 17-21. The senator, who once headed up former U.S. Senator John Tower's Houston office and served as a White House aide for Ambassador Anne Armstrong, is scheduled to speak June 19.

Senator Krier, who just finished her first session of the Texas Legislature, says she looks forward to speaking to the seminar students because she believes it will be the "best way to repay those who helped me by encouraging others to follow."

This marks the third year that the seminar is to be held at Angelo State. For several years, it was held at Baylor University in Waco. Originally, the seminar was held at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville.

Participants are sponsored to attend the seminar by county Farm Bureaus, although they do not have to be Farm Bureau members to attend. Through the years, more than 8,500 high school juniors and seniors have attended the seminar.

Purpose of the seminar is to give students a better understanding of the various forms of government in the world, and to become aware of their responsibilities as citizens, says James Gipe, Waco, TFB seminar coordinator.

The other major speakers and a brief background of each is as follows:
Glen Kimber, senior vice president of Freeman Institute, Salt Lake City.

Dr. Joseph Ioffe, a former Russian immigrant who now speaks out against socialism and communism.

Dr. Thomas Cunningham, a family life specialist from Oklahoma City.

Dr. Sam Zakheim of Denver, a Lebanese native and authority on the Middle East.

Dr. Calvin Kent, director of the Center of Private Enterprise and Entrepreneurship, Baylor University, Waco.

KRAUSE

2200A SERIES (RIGID) TANDEM DISC HARROW
SIZES 12'3" to 16'2"

Another conservation implement from the Krause Profit-Till System...

The fuel-saving Krause Disc Harrow.

Every time your disc harrow gouges the field surface, it's consuming excess fuel and swallowing profits.

But Krause Offset and Tandem Disc Harrows are engineered to minimize those problems—and put more profits in your pocket. The "flex-wing" design, originated by Krause, lets the implement follow the contour of the ground to eliminate gouging. The optional self-leveling hitch system helps, too—feathering the unit in and out of the ground for more balanced loading.

And if you're now using a moldboard plow, the reduced draft load and wider working widths can mean a dramatic savings in fuel and tillage time.

A fuel-saving rocker linkage system.

Even more fuel savings are possible in Krause's 4900 4950 series. A unique rocker linkage system reduces the risk of gouging even more. While the center wheels move backward, the wing wheels move forward, providing more uniform depth gauging of the front gangs.

Other Krause Disc Harrow features include 1-1/2" diameter alloy steel tire rods with 22" or 24" disc blades. "SuperSeal" regreasable bearings, a super-strength drop-frame design, and optional harrow attachments. And it's part of the Krause Profit-Till System.

The Krause 4900 Series Disc Harrow is part of a tillage system that helps reduce your operating costs and increase your yields. It's more economical than conventional tillage and more effective than no-till. And the Krause Profit-Till System has demonstrated that it can:

- Reduce tillage trips and tillage time more than 50%.
- Reduce erosion up to 70%.
- Reduce cost per acre more than 40%.
- Increase yields by reducing erosion, compaction, and improving moisture retention.

Doctor: I'll give him something to quiet him.

Woman: No, I want something to make him talk louder - I can't quite make out what he says.

Texas DPS commemorating anniversary

The Texas Department of Public Safety is commemorating its 50th Anniversary this year. The theme of the observance, "50 Years for Texas", refers to the creation of the Department by the Texas Legislature on August 10, 1935.

The Texas Department of Public Safety was formed with complement of 147 Highway Patrol Officers and 36 Rangers. In response to the everchanging needs of the state, the DPS through the years has acquired a large number of additional responsibilities including licensing of drivers; maintenance of driver, criminal, and traffic accident records; communications; investigation of motor vehicle thefts and illegal narcotic offenses; crime laboratory services; and coordination of disaster relief efforts. The Department's current authorized strength consists of over 2,600 officers with a non-commissioned support staff exceeding 2,300.

The Midland Regional Headquarters was established in September of 1957 and was housed for a short time at the Police Department. The Midland Office moved out of the Police Department into their own building at 3701 North Big Spring Street in February of 1958. In July of 1974 the Regional Office was moved to its present location at 2405 South Loop 250 West.

The first Regional Commander for the Midland Region was Wilson E. "Pat" Speir. Major Speir was promoted through the ranks to Colonel and retired from that position in 1980. The Second Regional Commander was Leo Gossett who has since been promoted to Assistant Director and stationed in Austin. The Regional Commander that followed Gossett was E. K. Browning who retired in 1977 and was replaced by Ira W. Dees. Major Dees is Commander of the Region Four area. The largest land mass covering 49 counties and yet the least populated. This Region covers the area west to El Paso, east to Ranger, north to O'Donnell and south to Eagle Pass. There are 287 commissioned personnel under his command with 129 support personnel in Region Four.

Major Dees, Regional Commander for the Department, has scheduled a field observance commemorating the 50th Anniversary for June 13, 1985 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the Midland Office. Dees invites all interested people to come to the celebration at 2405 South Loop 250 West in Midland. There will be displays of the past and present workings of the Department of Public Safety as well as honored guest from around the state.

Wingate Sew and Sew Club Many hands make light work

By Patsy Roach
Women's clubs in the United States were organized in the early pioneer days to provide housewives an opportunity to get out of the house, to visit with each other, exchange homemaking ideas, and to help one another with what could be long, tedious jobs. The Winters area has numerous clubs, and Wingate has one of the oldest sewing clubs in the area, organized in 1962, the Sew and Sew Club, whose activities are regularly reported in the Enterprise.

liams, and Madlin King.
The group first met in Mildred Phillips' home to organize the club and elect officers. Margie Donica (Wade) asked for the first meeting; so the ladies met with her, shelled peas, and quilted a quilt for Minnie Williams.

In those days, the members helped each other with anything that needed to be done, and Margie had a lot of peas to shell; so they shelled them, Marie said.

Their husbands did not mind their meeting together at all, the ladies stated.

Almost every woman in Wingate belongs to the club, one member said, and average attendance is about 16. We visited with these friendly, cheerful ladies Monday afternoon as they worked on a quilt for Marie Bradford, one of the original members of the club.

Marie was the first president of the club when it was organized 23 years ago. Mildred Phillips was treasurer, collecting dues of 25 cents every other month. Margie Donica, who named the club, was reporter. Grace Smith was telephone chairman. Myrtle Gannaway and Mrs. Annie Phillips were other original members.

Other early members were Mildred Patton, Minnie Wil-

Meetings were moved to the Baptist and Methodist Churches in Wingate until the construction of the Lions Club Building in 1976. Now the club has the facility reserved permanently for their meeting days.

They have always met every other week, ordinarily on Tuesday afternoons. Now they meet on Monday afternoon to put the quilt up on a wooden frame and to begin the quilting, which is finished on Tuesday.

Quilts have enjoyed increased popularity in recent years, with many women learning to quilt. Quilt shows have been held locally in the Z.I. Hale Museum, and a statewide Sesquicentennial quilt contest will be held next year.

The Sew and Sew ladies quilt a quilt each week for whichever member is the hostess (chosen alphabetically). The hostess prepares the quilt top at home.

The quilt top can be made of any type of material, and is usually made of brightly colored pieces sewn into squares with various ingenious patterns.

At the meeting, the backing is attached to the wooden frame-work, which rests on chair backs or sawhorse-type supports. Then the polyester lining is rolled out on the backing. The lining is covered with the quilt top itself, and the whole thing is firmly pinned together. The backing is trimmed, the quilt reattached to the frame, and the quilting begins.

The ladies informed us that it really is hard work to sew by hand on the quilt. Thimbles are helpful when trying to push a needle through the multiple layers of cloth, and also for protection from sharp needles.

About 16 women can crowd around the quilt at one time, Mayola Cathey, club reporter, informed. When it's rolled, only six or four can work on it. At that time, they often put up another quilt and begin work on it.

The extra quilt is usually a custom quilt which someone has hired them to do. Regular size custom quilts go for $50 or more, she said.

The club donates to the Lions Club each year and to the West Texas Rehabilitation Center. One year, Vida Talley, a member who quilts for the public, donated a quilt to the Rehab Center, Mayola said. Another year, Vida made a silk quilt for someone in Winters, who donated it to the Rehab for auction, and it brought the highest price of any of the quilts.

The club also gave a quilt to a tornado victim recently.

Many of the same women attend Senior Citizens meetings at the Lions Club Building and do baby quilts and embroidery there. They have a number of baby or children's quilts for sale; they are simply beautiful. Some feature soft pastels, while others are brightly colored to attract baby's attention.

Twenty members are currently on the roll of the Sew and Sew Club. Lorene Kinard is president, Demetra Holder of Abilene is vice president, and Ethel Polk is secretary. Lessie Robinson serves as treasurer, and Mayola Cathey is reporter.

Hospitality committee members are Edna Rogers and Pauline Huckaby, and Flossie Kirkland and Elizabeth Babb are on the telephone committee.

With about 425 quilts to their credit in their 23 years of meetings, the ladies continue to meet because, as one member put it, "We enjoy being together."

Jr. Culture Club met

The Jr. Culture Club had their last meeting of the year, on May 30.

The club officers hosted a salad luncheon at the United Methodist Fellowship Hall. A short business meeting was held afterwards.

Those members attending were; Becky Airhart, Brenda Bahlman, Jean Boles, Nancy Evans, Malia Hooten, Jan Jordan, Donna Epperson, Becky Henson, Marci McDonald, Julie Nivens, Rhea Parramore, Fran Polston, Mary Lynn Presley, Cindy Rogers, Kandy Sheppard, Marsha Shoemaker, Pennie Smith and Carol Turner.

Johann Sebastian Bach was so fond of coffee that he wrote the Coffee Cantata, a humorous one-act operetta about a stern father's attempt to check his daughter's indulgence in the coffee habit.

Speaking of the Stacy Dam

By Leona Bruce

[Editor's note: Leona Bruce, 86, an area historian who lives at the base of the Santa Anna Mountains, has researched and written an article on Morgan Stacy, the founder of the community for which the Stacy Dam is named. The article appeared in the May 30, 1985 issue of the Coleman County Chronicle.

Mrs. Bruce is the daughter of John Bannister, long time sheriff and Texas Ranger. He was killed in the line of duty, and following his death, his wife was appointed sheriff of Coleman County. Mrs. Bruce has written numerous successful books.

With Mrs. Bruce's permission, we reprint part of her article on the history of the Stacy family, town, and lake.]

A great dam is to be built on a great river, and it will be called the Stacy Dam. Flowing through hundreds of miles of inadequately watered land, the climate and terrain give this river a future lake rivaling in importance and benefits those anywhere in the United States. Other dams provide irrigation, electric power and recreation. The Stacy will give sustenance to many thousands of square miles of thirsty land and people, water for towns big and small, and recreation spots and facilities providing a whole new industry for Central West Texas.

But who was Stacy, the pioneer whose name will be on maps, in pages of state laws, in newspapers and magazines, and will ring in halls of justice and legislature? He was Morgan Stacy, born in Tennessee, son of Jess Braswell and Caroline Stacy, who left for Texas on August 20, 1852. In the train of wagons were several families of relatives; besides Morgan the Jess Stacys had three pretty daughters, Clemmie, Millie and Lula. One source says there was another daughter, but no other mention of her can be found.

The family arrived at old Warrenton, Fayette County, on October 12. After the Civil War and several moves the first Stacy arrived at Trickham on the Mukewater Creek, Jess and Caroline being believed to be the first, and joined later by James Madison Stacy and his young family.

Trickham was already a thriving town, largest in Coleman County. It had been started when the vast herds of John Chisum were grazed east of the Mukewater, and passing explorers, Rangers and cowmen needed supplies from the Chisum storage cabin. On moving his cattle to New Mexico, Chisum sold the little cabin to a young man from Alabama, Lee Shield, who moved the cabin to Trickham.

Arriving in 1879, Stacy found there a blacksmith shop, a good school, doctors and a community church and log cabins or small houses of East Texas lumber up and down the creeks. The land was fertile, the climate benign, the people friendly. Stacy began acquiring land, a gin was built on the creek bank, the cotton and wheat and the vegetable gardens made a profitable place to live. M.R. Cheatham put up a mill to grind the wheat and corn for bread, and other businesses were begun. The Indian raids had ended by 1876, though to this day there are in the Trickham street five graves of pioneers killed in the raids, a young boy and four men.

Reaching his twenties, Morgan Stacy was intrigued by the profits and the excitement of the little village. Teamsters' wagons came almost every day, bringing the plows and wire fencing, the shoes and clothes, the white sugar and calico and coal oil, all necessities in the area. It was probably his own idea to go south west, where the great herds of southern cattle were being driven to the railroad at Brownwood to be shipped to northern markets. One source says that Morgan Stacy built first either in the Lohn valley or on a creek north of the Colorado. At any rate he was soon where the cattle trail up from Salt Gap crossed the river. The larger part of this land was in the unfenced pasture of the O.H. and D. Company, says an article written in 1976 by the careful historian, Mrs. John C. Hunter. As this ranch was divided and sold, incoming farmers settled all along the creeks and the sinuous bends of the Colorado.

Morgan had gone back to a former home, perhaps DeWitt County, and married a childhood sweetheart. Young women of that time expected to live as pioneers, taking the chances of the frontier, bringing with them learning and morals and ambition. Lula Stacy was one of these, unafraid and facing the years with courage and joy. Their children were Talmadge and Jess, named for his father, and Una (Dose) and Agnes, who didn't like her name and became known as Wanda.

Morgan Stacy had the largest business, the general store selling everything the growing prosperity of the valley might name. For a time, the post office, which was named Stacy, was in a corner of this store, though later it was in a small house to the north.

As people became prosperous their homesteads were larger and neater, with flower gardens, trees and graveled driveways. Morgan Stacy's home was one of the finest, with gables, a porch rail and touches of wooden lace. For almost a generation, Morgan Stacy and his town saw rising prosperity, but as most of the people had some debt, hard times came. It may have been drouths, a financial depression, health, or advancing age which caused him to sell his big store to Jim Garner. Stacy's moves at this time are hard to trace. Did he go to Fort Worth, or was it Fort Stockton? Or Ballinger or New Mexico? None of the Stacy children lived permanently at the town where they had grown up, and they, too, were lost trace of.

In years which precede leap years, the solstices fall on the 22nd days of June and December. They fall on the 21st of those months in other years.

With the coming of years with little rainfall and small profit in farming, stockfarming or ranching became more common. The town was dwindled away, the school was consolidated with Mozelle, most young people had gone where the jobs were. Little remains but the name.

But the question of water for the west half of Texas remained. More people, more industry, more irrigation, more certainty that water would flow when needed most, this question remained. We in the Colorado watershed have known that a dam would alleviate the problem, that the six hundred miles of meandering stream between the damers at Robert Lee and Buchanan could well support a reservoir without immediate shortage below the lower one. Here politics reared its head, and elections were won and lost in the melee; political trading at last cleared the last hurdle, and the Stacy Dam seemed assured.

But wait! On May 20, 1983, up comes a new obstacle. It is Harter's Water Snake, a small creature living along the Colorado, not now listed as a federally protected animal, but it gives Environmentalists a grand chance to be seen and heard. To one who has lived along the bends of the Colorado, it seems preposterous that only south of Voss would the snake exist; the conditions of soil and water from Ballinger to the mouth of the Llano differ little, and if the snake hasn't writhed and wiggled out of the Brady bend near Stacy, it easily could have done so. And then, it might like living in the lake! It could proliferate just as successfully up or downstream.

However, Steve Halfert of the Army Corps of Engineers at Fort Worth has given notice that "the status of the snake is being reviewed under the Endangered Species Act." This may delay the dam until West Texas blisters under several more years of drouth, while PHD's from great universities spend months trying to learn what the little snake eats and what eats the little snake. At any rate we will wait while the Harter's is "reviewed."

The site of Stacy, Texas, is today a vista of fine highway and pastures and now and then a field. There is one occupied house where three Garrett sisters live, a nice vacant house recently moved to his land by Waymond Moore, a collapsed tabernacle used in former years for summer gatherings. Then there are the roofless shells of the tiny stucco structure with U.S. Post Office still legible on the south wall, and the larger shell of the two-teacher school, also roofless and with huge mesquite trees inside.

The well-kept Stacy Cemetery is around a curve. Not a Stacy gravestone is to be found, regardless of the neat name on the arched entranceway. The date of the earliest burial is 1896, though there are probably earlier ones with no markers. John B. Trott, born in 1814, died November 18, 1886, and his wife, Julia, born in 1827, died November 22, 1901. This death, of the widow, Julia, had a sad connotation. On the same lot are the graves of two four-year-old girls with tall matching monuments, who died on the same day. Katie Agnes Trott was four years and ten months old, May Sloan was four years and eight months old; the two families were related by marriage, and half of a poem is on one monument, the other half on the other. On Katie's are the words, "The sweetest flowers alas how soon are gone from earth away", and on May's the verse is completed by, "Yet our darlings will in heaven bloom, where flowers do not decay." One can imagine the distraught grandmother who was laid to rest there five weeks later, after the deaths of the little girls on November 14. Parents of the little girls were also interred there, Robert C. and Jessie M. Sloan and Walter D. and Jessie A. Trott.

One of the most prominent markers says "Chief Henry Brown, Oklahoma Indian Territory 1873-1948." He was the Indian...who loved the outdoors so well that he spent hours every day, [watching] the earth and sky.

As the great dam rises from hill to hill, the floods will come, the water will move upward, filling the river bed bank to bank, over the treetops, over the low pastures, over the houses and the cowpens where little boys learned to ride the calves, over the fences and crossroads. It will reach back into the creeks and the hollows, it will cover the tops of the chimneys and the hollowed ground where the graves of the pioneers have been removed, the school grounds where the teacher's handbell called the barefoot children to "books." The deer and the blue-headed turkeys will retreat from the rising brown water, the wild winds will cause waves to lap where hawks used to soar two hundred feet in the air. The man in the helicopter will point out the approximate spot where the drowned town of Leaday grew and died and was buried in water. There will be heartache, yes, and sadness will color the memories of other days and other years. But in fifty towns clear water will gush from faucets, clean people will sleep in clean beds, and a whole recreation industry will proliferate on the hundred miles on the lake front. There will be bait shops and marinas, motels and campfires and beautiful waterside homes, bright lights and music. And water.

And the name will be Stacy. Who could have thought that among the hundreds who came to Coleman County in 1879, that a hundred and ten years later the name of one of them would be chosen, that the just-grown boy would be the one to go west, to found the little town and community nearest the place where the unimagined dam would be? We do not know where Morgan and Lula Stacy went after leaving his town, since, as we have

The Tri-County Scottish Rite Club met on May 30, 1985 at Aguirre's Restaurant in Ballinger.

A very interesting program was presented by Ron Keister of the Texas Department of Human Resources on child abuse.

Dignitaries present were Cecil Derrick, District Deputy Grand Master of the 77th Masonic District and his wife Hazel and Lonnie Rankin, District Deputy Grand Master of the 105th Masonic District and his wife Oleta.

The next meeting of the club will be at the Brady Lake Pavilion on August 19, 1985. All area Scottish Rite masons are welcome. Further information can be obtained by contacting Secretary, Lonnie Rankin, Miles, Texas or President Elton Goetz, Rowena, Texas.

said, no certain trace can be found. Even the place of their burials is unknown. A careful check of the Stacy graves at Trickham does not provide dates or initials which would give proof. A grandson says they are buried at Santa Anna, but the records say there is no Stacy grave.

Perhaps this mystery will be solved with publication of this article; someone may come forward with place and names. In the meantime, the finger of fate may point to his monument. Morgan Stacy, it is you! And you have a fabulous memorial, hundreds of yards long and three hundred feet high, made of rock and concrete and steel. Who was Ray Hubbard, who was Buchanan? You now take your place with them, on the maps, in the press, in the books of law and the halls of justice. And in our hearts.
