OLTON AREA RECOVERING AFTER VIOLENT TORNADO WROUGHTS HEAVY DESTRUCTION

As the aftermath of the disastrous tornado which terrorized the Olton area last Friday during the noon hour—leaving in its wake damage in excess of $600,000 and 300 homeless persons—cleanup and rehabilitation operations have dominated community activity this week.

Much havoc had been wrought by the vicious, fast-moving twister. Destroyed were 77 houses, 56 within the city and 21 in rural areas. Fifteen homes and a church received major damage and ten minor damage. Loss of farm equipment and household furnishings was heavy.

Splintered, twisted wreckage was scattered for miles, huge trees uprooted, high line poles downed, automobiles and other vehicles smashed and tossed around as if made of tin.

Tornado Strikes

Storm-conscious residents had watched with foreboding the darkened skies that fateful day, until the ominous, swirling clouds and screaming sirens sent them scurrying to storm cellars and other places of safety.

Approaching the Olton area from the southwest, the tornado cut a devastating path of destruction. Wiping out several homes southwest of town, it smashed into the center section of the Ben F. Smith Grain Company and suddenly veered eastward.

It then cut a wide swath across the Latin American and Negro section, resulting in the almost complete destruction of the Negro area. Bypassed was the brick Bohner School, packed with about 65 screaming, crying, praying school children and their teachers. As its walls "quivered and shook," the funnel levelled the frame school building only a few yards away, from which third through eighth grade children had been evacuated only a short time earlier.

Little Remains

The only other structures left standing in the Negro section were Bohner Chapel—the north side caved in and windows smashed—and the school principal's home just east of the brick school building.

One man—Hubert Tinner—had taken refuge in the church during the brunt of the storm. Others had jammed into cellars, thereby avoiding almost certain injury or death.

Destruction Continues

About two miles east of Olton, the tornado bore northward and traveled in a northeasterly direction for an estimated 11 miles before rising from the ground. Over a dozen homes were destroyed along the path of its destructive force.

Casualties Few

Miraculously, there were few injuries and no lives lost in the tornado. An elderly Negro, John Jackson, who failed to get under cover, sustained a broken leg and is a patient in the Lubbock Methodist Hospital. Roovevelt Tennyson, a 30-year-old Negro, received a dislocated shoulder when a cellar door fell on him. He was treated overnight in a Plainview hospital. These patients were transferred out of town because of power failure at the local hospital. Lucille Reed received a head injury and a fractured index finger when struck by a cellar door. She and five others who suffered minor injuries or shock were treated at Olton Memorial Hospital.

Homes Destroyed

Homes destroyed, in addition to those in the Negro and Latin American section, were those of Billy Smith, Ernest Langford, Elbert Hooper, Walter Crandall, Mrs. Cora Wozencraft, Ben Dodson, Vernon Venable, Bob Caviness, J. A. Ragle, Leo Ross Bryant, Lenrel Johnson, George Redinger, Roy Roberts, Silas Breland, L. R. Cruce and his two sons, and Earl George. Several hand houses were demolished.

Among those who suffered lesser damage were Mrs. Lillie McGill who lost a hand house; Lacy Armstrong, whose labor house was severely damaged; Curtis Coleman, who lost a three-room house and had roof damage on his home; Dick Redinger, who had outbuildings destroyed; and A. D. Melton. Others in the area also received minor damage to outbuildings and property.

Disaster Aid Swift

Within an hour after the twister struck the area, the Red Cross disaster headquarters had been set up in the Olton Fire Station. In less than two hours, food was being served in the school cafeteria by lunchroom workers and other volunteers. By four o'clock a truckload of food and clothing had been brought in from Dimmitt, followed by other loads from Silverton, Hereford, and Morton. These were supplemented by large amounts of clothing brought in locally and throughout the county.

Red Cross volunteer workers operated a shelter in the local school gymnasium which continued through Saturday night. Meals were served through Sunday noon, with an average of 125 persons being served for the seven meals.

In charge of the disaster relief headquarters were Truitt Sides, Lamb County Red Cross chairman, and J. E. Chisholm, national volunteer worker from Littlefield. In addition to local volunteers, those from the Amarillo and Littlefield chapters came to assist.

Following the emergency period, during which disaster victims were given immediate food, clothing, shelter, and medical care, Red Cross professional workers came in to get underway the rehabilitation program. Arriving Sunday were Miss Ruth Flynn, case work supervisor from the St. Louis office, and Mrs. Helen Foehner, case worker from Harlingen. They expect to remain in Olton for two or three weeks, during which time they will investigate each of the 43 applications that have been made for rehabilitation assistance, making recommendations on each case to a local advisory board for approval or disapproval.

Shelter, groceries, and cooking and sleeping facilities had been arranged for all the homeless by Sunday night. Many Negroes are housed in barracks donated by the Smith Gin Company for emergency use.

Clothing headquarters have been set up in the Legion Hall.

"Everything is going along splendidly," stated Mr. Sides, county chairman. "Rehabilitation aid, including housing, will be furnished as the need requires. This expense will be borne by the national Red Cross fund and will entail far more than is being locally donated."

BEN F. SMITH GRAIN COMPANY suffered the primary effects of the tornado. The big elevator is credited some with the saving of the main part of town. Observers said the funnel was rapidly moving north up Main Street when it hit the big metal building and veered east. Damage was estimated at $75,000 to the frame warehouse and about 15 percent damage to the new steel warehouse. (Enterprise Photo)

"Even A Fruit Jar Looks Good Now" Declares Grateful Tornado Victim

Shining out above the murk and debris was the common sentiment, "We're glad to be alive."

Untold destruction and heartbreaking loss was the lot dished out to about 85 families by the recent tornado, which in the space of a few fierce seconds wiped out earthly possessions that had required years to accumulate and build. But their most precious possession was retained—their lives.

Everyone was poignantly conscious of the casualties that might have resulted had the twister struck at night. Even with the daylight, siren warnings, radio and TV reports, several families narrowly escaped the fury of the storm.

Cellar Gives Way

Homeless Negro families found refuge at the disaster headquarters. Still stunned by the fate that had befallen them, women and children sat in stoical calm while the men huddled in groups outside the fire station.

In recounting their experiences, they told how 35 adults and children had crammed into a small cellar belonging to Mazzie Beath, a widow. The cellar door was wrenched off by the twisting wind and the cellar started caving in. Fearful that another blow was coming, they ran pell-mell toward the church, some kicking off their shoes as they ran down the muddy road. Finding the church in unsafe condition, they took refuge in the brick school building where Booker T. Graves, principal, stood guard over 65 school children.

Mr. Graves described the tornado as one-half to three-quarters of a mile wide, acting as a gigantic magnet drawing in clouds from both directions. "It looked like it was rolling along the ground with clouds rushing to it," he stated.

Tales Of Loss

Mrs. Lorene Tinner had taken her five children to a neighboring cellar, leaving her husband, Hubert, watching television. As the twister bore down on the area, he barely had time to run across to the church which was nearby. The church withstood the attack but their home was blown into the road and smashed to the ground.

The Tinner family, though, were considered the lucky ones, for at least their clothes were salvaged.

Richard Lee Porch ("no one believes that's my name"), a Negro woman with four young children whose husband, also named Richard, was killed on the outskirts of town last year, found only a shoe remaining of her possessions. No sign of the two-room house which she rented could be found—not even the foundation.

"All I found was a straightening comb and two diapers, and I don't know whether they were my diapers," declared Mrs. Frances Lockett. The four-room house where she and her husband, Leonard, and their three children had lived was in splinters. Their two-room rent house and cafe were destroyed, the juke box from the cafe blown over in the city dump grounds. Their car was found smashed and perched upright on Mrs. Porch's crushed refrigerator.

"I had on ragged blue jeans and Leonard had gotten covered with mud trying to help get Mr. Jackson to the doctor. We had to come to town and buy some clothes on credit," Mrs. Lockett continued. "Before we left, Leonard had found a piece of my wedding ring quilt that my mother had bought for me. I didn't even want to look at it."

On and on the tales of individual disaster went. Most of them had no place to go and no plans for the future. A cafeteria worker asked a little girl if they'd lost everything. She looked up and said, "Everything blew away—but we didn't have much."

Total Destruction

The J. A. Ragle home east of town was demolished, a home that had stood for almost a quarter of a century. Besides their home, the elderly couple lost a car, pickup, 8 trailers, 2 hand houses, and a 60 x 100 foot barn completed in January . . . everything was gone.

Monday they went back to the cellar that had protected them during the storm. "We want to see what we have down there . . . even a fruit jar looks good to us now," said Mrs. Ragle.

The Lenrel Johnsons suffered total loss of their home and possessions, their loss estimated to reach $55,000. Blown completely away were their three-bedroom home, large tile barn, well house, and chicken house. A pickup,

Efficient Action Restores Normalcy To Stricken Area

Well-organized action of local and neighboring police and sheriff departments, the Highway Patrol, volunteer firemen, and city officials, resulted in the swift restoration of peace and order to a stricken city.

Immediately following the tornado Friday, these units rushed to the ravaged area to assist with the evacuation of residents, to direct traffic, to forestall sightseers who might hamper rescue operations, and to protect property from looting.

Electrical power in the city was restored within an hour and a half and area service by Sunday noon, according to Ralph Glover of Southwestern Public Service Company.

"This was accomplished by the splendid job in blocking off disaster areas so that construction crews could work," stated Mr. Glover.

The tornado knocked out 12 structures of the 115,000 volt lines and 21 structures of the 66,000 volt lines. Forty to fifty distribution poles were destroyed in the area.

Mr. Glover said that 80 to 90 men were in the area to help restore electrical service. These included nine crews coming from Amarillo, Plainview, Clovis, and Littlefield.

Mayor D. Y. Ray stated that 5,000 to 6,000 automobiles, mainly sightseers, went through the area Sunday without mishap, due to the excellently controlled traffic.

Heavy Spraying Is Done In City

In an all-out effort to combat the onslaught of mosquitoes resulting from the heavy rains in the area, Mayor D. Y. Ray announced that an intensive spraying campaign was launched this week.

Lake areas in the city have been sprayed by plane and spraying and fogging machines have covered city streets and alleys.

Applicants To Be Interviewed For Olton School Post

At a called meeting Monday evening, trustees of the Olton Independent School District voted to interview applicants for the post of school superintendent on the night of June 5 at the Olton High School. This vacancy was created by the death of Supt. Carl Macon on May 20.

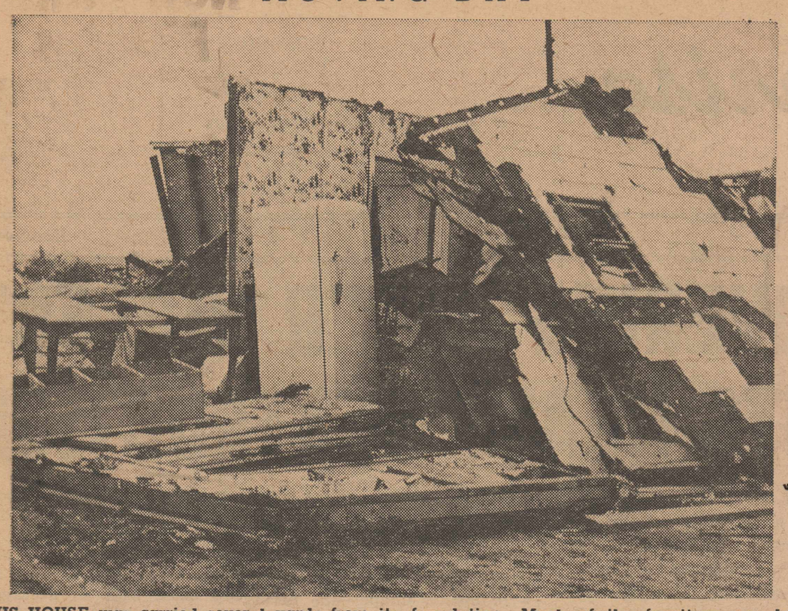

J. A. Williams, high school principal, was named as acting superintendent of the Olton Public Schools, to serve in that capacity until the position is filled.

Other matters taken up by the board was the scheduling of the Citizen's Committee meeting on June 7 at 8 o'clock at the high school. This meeting had been postponed from May 30.

The resignation of Mrs. Fred Mulkey, fourth grade teacher, was accepted.

Regular meeting of the board will be held next Tuesday night.

Local Farmer Uses Well To Drain Lake

Art Nafzger who lives just south of Olton has a very unique irrigation well in reverse.

Mr. Nafzger, tired of a lake from recent rains and overflow from nearby irrigation well occupying so much of his land, and too, a lot of very valuable water was going to waste. He decided to experiment a little by digging a regular 20-inch irrigation hole, filling it with about 10 yards of 2-inch rock, on top of which he placed five yards of one-inch rocks. This was topped off with 18-inches of gravel to act as a filter to remove silt and trash from the water before it went into the irrigation hole.

Mr. Nafzger reports that after the two-inch rain Easter, the lake drained in 12 days, and he has reclaimed for crops about five acres of land that normally would be under water. He also feels that he has eliminated a mosquito breeding place and has also conserved lots of water by putting it back into the underground reservoir for future use.

IN STUDIES OVER A PERIOD OF 15 YEARS, Dr. Weston A. Price analyzed 20,000 samples of dairy products obtained from all over the world. For the U. He also found evidence that the mortality from heart disease and pneumonia was lowest where the vitamin content of the dairy products was highest.

Former Resident Joins Hi-Plains Research Staff

On May 1, the High Plains Station at Halfway increased its research staff with the addition of Delbert Langford, former Olton resident, as Research Assistant in Soils.

The addition of Mr. Langford was made possible with the establishment of a fellowship grant by International Minerals and Chemical Corporation of Chicago, manufacturers of International and Rainbow fertilizers. W. O. "Bill" Burns, Internationals' Area Manager from Texarkana visited the High Plains Station on May 18 to discuss the fertilizer research that will be conducted under this $3,000 annual fellowship.

"We are very glad to see the High Plains Station get established and are equally glad to assist in its fertilizer research," Mr. Burns said. "All the High Plains farmers and the entire fertilizer industry will benefit from the research information on fertilizers obtained at the High Plains Station," Mr. Burns continued.

Mr. Langford will also enroll as a graduate student at Texas Technological College and will use a part of his fertilizer research studies for a Masters Degree Thesis.

Mr. Langford was awarded his Bachelor of Science Degree in Agriculture by Abilene Christian College in 1954. He attended high school in Olon and Tulia.

In addition to farm experience with his father, Mr. Langford has worked with the Soil Conservation Service in Swisher County and with the Power Feed Mills, Abilene, in poultry and disease control. He served 18 months in the US Army, being assigned during this service to an Air Force Weather Squadron in Germany.

truck, automobile, tractor, and four trailers were destroyed.

Damage was tremendous on the George Redinger farm northwest of town. Only a few walls were left standing of their home. The grounds were littered with the twisted wreckage of farm equipment, automobile, pickup and other property. Outbuildings were wrecked and swept away, and no trace of a deep freeze, washer and drier housed in a wash house has been found.

Lying on the Redinger property is a part of an old school bus, supposedly from the Negro section of Olton. Letters addressed to Mrs. Redinger have been found near Tulia, all giving evidence to the almost fantastic scattering of which the tornadic winds are capable.

Narrow Escapes

Among many others, the Roy Roberts' Austin stone home was so heavily damaged that complete rebuilding is necessitated. Their concrete block fence was pushed over like a pile of dominoes.

The Roberts' had taken to their car just as the storm hit, barely escaping the path of the funnel.

Another undergoing a nerve-racking experience was Mrs. Redinger who was returning from Lubbock as the storm approached the area. Thinking her two children might be alone at the home, she drove desperately trying to reach them. Just as she turned off the highway toward her home, the tornado struck and she took refuge in a bar ditch. As she drove on after the twister passed over, her station wagon got tangled up in the fallen high lines. In the meantime, a friend, A. J. Givens from Halfway, who tried earlier to flag her down, took her on home where she discovered that her husband and children had been safely sheltered in the basement.

One couple who are especially thankful that "God took care of us" are Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Melton, whose home is southwest of Olton. Unaware that storm warnings were out, Mrs. Melton was sewing and her husband was reading when she suddenly realized that an eerie darkness had descended. She walked out her north door and saw the tornado, rushed back in and called, "Pa, it's here and it's bad." Swiftly opening north and east windows, they rushed to the southwest corner of the house just as uprooted cottonwoods and huge elm trees crashed against the house.

"When it was over, I praised the Lord for taking care of us and wanted to start cleaning house. It suddenly looked so good to me, mud-plastered windows and all," declared Mrs. Melton.

Endless are the tales of destruction and human experiences. But a glimpse of the L. R. Cruce farm gives a true picture of a tornado giving vent to its full power of crushing destruction. The three homes which housed Mr. Cruce and his two sons were wiped completely out of existence. Nothing remains.

Officers and Directors Named As Recreation Center Is Organized

As the first step in the permanent organization of the Olton Municipal Recreation Center, officers and a board of directors were elected at a meeting Monday evening in the high school auditorium.

Carroll Cox, who had successfully guided the community effort to establish a recreational center, was elected as president of the Center. Other officers elected were Elmer Moore, vice-president; Mrs. Robert Duncan, secretary; and Owen Norfleet, treasurer.

Directors were elected as follows: Melvin Hines and Fred Thompson, to serve two-year terms, and J. B. James of Springlake and Martin Phillips, to serve one-year terms.

Selected earlier by the Olton City Council as a director was Dr. Lynn Fite. Center officers will comprise the remainder of the nine-member board. These officers will remain in office until March 1, 1958.

The proposed constitution and by-laws which had been drawn up by members of the temporary steering committee were adopted by the membership.

Mr. Cox announced that the A. D. Meltons, who donated the 90-acre tract for the Center, had also offered a 60-foot right-of-way from the highway up to the property.

Stressing the fact that the main purpose of the Center is to make its facilities available to as many as possible, Mr. Cox stated that Mr. Norfleet has set up a card index system whereby individuals can pay for the $200 membership fee in installments. When the entire amount is paid out, a membership card will be issued.

Committees to carry out the necessary duties entailed with the starting of the Center were named as follows: Plot plan committee, Ed Thompson, chairman, Elmer Moore, and Basil Sherman; fencing plot, Eldon Franks, chairman, Roy Roberts, and L. L. LaDuke; landscaping, Mrs. Lauis Hair, chairman, Mrs. Melvin Hines, and Mrs. Herman Meyer; irrigation well and underground tile, Howard Buchenau, chairman, Marshall Stone, and Bill Yates; right-of-way road, Ralph Glover, chairman, Frank Cornelius and Delmer Givens.

Special gifts committee, Mrs. H. E. Owens, Jr., chairman, Mrs. Jim Fite, and Mrs. Martin Phillips; publicity and membership cards, Troy Martin, chairman, G. H. Bley and Morris Gene Brown.

Another meeting of Center members and those interested in membership was set for next Monday night at 8 o'clock in the auditorium.

Mr. D. Y. Ray, Mayor
Olton, Texas

Dear Mr. Ray:

I was in Olton shortly after the tornado last week and in talking to the 50 or 60 Southwestern Public Service people, they were very complimentary of the city departments of Olton in handling the traffic situation for our crews in their efforts to restore service to the damaged area in Olton.

Our people wanted to be sure that you received a work of personal thanks for your personal attention to the handling of the traffic situation and other cooperation to Southwestern Public Service people.

They were also in high praise of Tom Smith, fire chief. I am also writing him a letter of thanks.

Very truly yours,
J. M. Collins

An Open Letter To The Public

To All Concerned,

We wish to thank the people of Olton and surrounding area for their cooperation and generosity in our time of need. Following the disaster which struck our city, our task was made easier by the tremendous help coming in from everywhere.

Our special thanks and appreciation go to our own Olton Volunteer Fire Department. These men worked tirelessly and faithfully as long as their help was needed.

Coming to our aid immediately were the Police and Sheriff Departments from Lamb, Hale, Bailey, Hockley and Lubbock Counties, as well as the Highway Patrol. Southwestern Public Service, and General Telephone Co., all were doing their jobs in an exceedingly able manner. The help by the Hale Center Fire Department was indeed appreciated.

We would also like to publicly thank Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Smith, owners of Easy Way Laundry and those plants in surrounding communities who kept their laundries open all Friday night, donating the use of their machines and soap.

Sincerely,
D. Y. Ray, Mayor
City of Olton
