BJ — that's 'Big Jackpot' for 19 employees

Locals pool funds, to split $17 million

By Wade Warren
Staff Writer

"Our bosses are worried," joked Leon Crenshaw, after revealing that some 19 employees of Snyder's BJ Services had won half of Wednesday night's estimated $35 million Texas Lottery jackpot on a quick-pick ticket.

"We're all still pretty numb," said Crenshaw, adding that a large number of the employees who had pooled their money had been out for several hours on different service jobs last night.

Crenwshaw said the employees were going to meet this morning to decide what to do. There are 22 "shares" to be divided among the 19 employees who participated in the pool.

"I know one of the first things we are going to do is call the Lottery Commission in Austin and see what our options are," said Crenshaw.

Crenshaw said the employees normally pool their money in the lottery "when the jackpot gets on up there."

The winning ticket was bought at Wes-T-Go at 4201 College.

"Leon came in early this morning and he asked me if I had won last night," said store manager Vicky Renshaw.

"I told him no, and I asked him if he had won the Pick 3," said Renshaw.

"He said he hadn't but said he knew that someone in Snyder had won the lotto," Renshaw said.

"I asked him how he knew and then he pulled the ticket out of his pocket and showed it to me," Renshaw said.

"And I knew he had bought the winning ticket here," she said.

The store will receive 1 percent of the winning ticket, according to Texas Lottery officials.

The other half of the estimated $35 million jackpot was sold in San Antonio.

Oh yes, the winning numbers last night were 8, 13, 17, 28, 47 and 48.

Izzard 'cookout' scheduled Friday

A West Texas cookout will be held in honor of Rudy Izzard, Republican candidate for U.S. Congress, at 7 p.m. Friday, at the Jack Greene residence.

Cost is $10 per person. RSVP by calling 1-800 460-0474.

The Greene residence is located on County Road 466, five miles from Snyder off Highway 208.

The event is being hosted by the Scurry County Republican Party.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A tightwad is a man who stays home and lets his mind do the wandering."

—Rain...Thanks!—

Weather observers and other experts are not ready to say that the drought is broken, but measurable percipitation on consecutive days and clouds and lightning on the third is a positive indicator.

It may be too late to salvage a crop this year, but everyone is grateful for the moisture. In commercial ag terms, a quarter-inch is just the beginning, but it will turn a thirsty lawn green overnight.

—Rain...Thanks!—

We were some 100 miles to the east earlier in the week, and found that areas around Abilene had considerably more rainfall. It seems that the clouds built around Scurry County and then dumped most of its contents downstate.

In southern Coleman County, there were reports from seven to 12 inches, washing out some unpaved county roads and making them difficult to maneauver.

Commissioners in that county were busy grading roads that led to a rural cemetery.

—Rain...Thanks!—

We got a call from a banker friend in Seminole who said they also got moisture, but some of the bad stuff as well.

Farmers in Gaines County had a pretty good, but costly cotton crop growing with the help of irrigation. Storms early this week, however, were accompanied by hail that destroyed about 75 percent of the acreage.

The ag lender said many of his customers are now looking at switching to milo this year.

About the time we asked him if he wanted to make a cattle loan, we got disconnected. It must have been the weather.

—Rain...Thanks!—

Our ministerial correspondent says he was glad to see the needed rain. Otherwise, he was anticipating some changes on standard theology concerning Baptism.

He claims he had it on good sources. If it hadn't rain, the Baptists were going to start sprinkling and the Methodists were going to resort to a damp cloth.

Rain, Thanks!

Senate rejects balanced-budget amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today again rejected a balanced-budget constitutional amendment, as Republicans and Democrats waged an election-year duel over who could seem most sincere about erasing federal deficits.

In a roll call that Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., knew would fail but hoped would embarrass President Clinton and other Democrats, senators voted 64-35 for the proposal. That was two votes shy of the two-thirds margin required for approval of an amendment to the Constitution.

"The president vetoed a balanced budget. That's another reason we need an amendment," said Dole, referring to last year's veto of a GOP budget-balancing package by the man he hopes to oust from the White House.

The proposal, which came within a single vote of passage in March 1995, would require a balanced federal budget by 2002. But it would leave decisions about how to do it for later — by the very politicians who have been stalemated over the issue for years.

When the Senate rejected the measure 15 months ago, Dole promised to bring the measure up again during this year's political campaign. And so he did today, just five days before he resigns from the Senate to campaign full-time for the presidency.

Dole's strategy was simple. With polls showing 80 percent public support for the amendment, Republicans believe its defeat will strengthen the GOP bid for the White House and continued congressional control by embarrassing Democrats, most of whom voted no.

"It's not whether you win or lose, but whether you've made the statement," Dole said.

Republicans said the amendment would provide the pressure needed to force lawmakers to find the savings needed to end the unrelenting string of shortfalls that have saddled the government since 1969.

But Democrats argued that with Republicans and Clinton having each proposed competing plans for halting deficits by 2002, what is needed is a bipartisan agreement, not a change in the Constitution.

Lab results pending in fatal shooting

HASKELL — Police Chief Tom Bassett is still waiting to hear from a forensics laboratory in Dallas, hoping the findings will pinpoint the suspect who shot and killed a Snyder man here on May 5.

"It could be today, it might be three months. We just don't know," said Bassett. "We feel confident we've done our part. Now, we're just waiting to hear from the lab."

What Bassett hopes laboratory results will tell him is which gun fired the bullet that killed 18-year-old Snyder High School student Marlowe Riggins.

Five people have been arrested in connection with the shooting, which occurred about midday in the front yard of a residence a half-mile west from the center of town.

Two primary suspects are 18-year-old Chris Collins and a 16-year-old boy, both from Haskell, both in custody.

Collins is being held on probation violations; the juvenile is being held on a delinquent conduct charge.

Also arrested was Lucius Lamont Thompson, 18, of Sweetwater. He has been charged with deadly conduct.

Investigators have identified the two Haskell suspects as having fired a .22-caliber pistol and a .22-caliber rifle in Riggins' direction. Thompson, a friend of Riggins, fired a .25-caliber semi-automatic handgun, apparently toward the two individuals from Haskell, investigators said.

According to investigators, Riggins himself had no weapon.

The shooting took place outside a residence at 102 Ave. M, shortly after 2 p.m.

Being held on charges of probation violation are the woman who resided in the house outside of which the shooting occurred, and a woman who drove the two Haskell subjects to the residence at the time of the shooting. While neither were directly involved in the shooting, both violated conditions of their parole by their actions, the police chief said.

Hutchinson turns down Lufkin post

Snyder's economic development director has turned down an offer to become president of the Lufkin/Angelina County Economic Development Partnership.

Doug Hutchinson, executive director of the Development Corporation of Snyder, said he turned down an offer from the Lufkin/Angelina Partnership on Monday. Hutchinson said he has not heard back from representatives of the partnership since he declined the offer.

Hutchinson had been one of three finalists for the position. It was the third time in a four-month span that Hutchinson had been a finalist for another job.

In April, he was a finalist for a similar post in McKinney, and in March he was a finalist to head Market Lubbock Inc. Both of those boards decided to expand or renew their searches, however.

The DCOS board had proposed a performance-based contract for Hutchinson, but he declined to accept it.

Audit: Texas Tech program should return federal funds

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas Tech program to help debt-ridden farmers should return almost $1 million in federal grants because of poor management, according to a federal audit.

After an eight-month investigation, the inspector general's office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture found financial problems and "little or no oversight" from campus officials.

The inspector general's office advised federal officials this spring to remove the Texas Agricultural Mediation Program from the Lubbock university.

The university program mediates loan disputes between farmers and what used to be known as the Farmers Home Administration. It was reorganized into the federal Farm Service Agency.

Texas Tech's vice provost for research, Robert Sweazy, told The Dallas Morning News this week he had not yet read the 63-page report.

However, Sweazy, faulted methods for the audit, completed in March.

"They sent people out here who didn't have any background in how universities operate," said Sweazy. "It's kind of a mess."

But Regional Inspector General John Leavy defended the investigators, saying, "They were all qualified auditors."

Since 1989, the university has received $2.5 million in federal funds to operate the mediation program.

Among practices questioned, one program director in charge of helping troubled farmers deal with creditors owed the government $475,000 for his own delinquent farm loans.

"He had not taken any action in over 10 years to either repay the debt or to otherwise resolve the delinquency," the report said.

Study says toxic dump threatens Athens school

TYLER (AP) — Elementary students at an Athens school could be exposed to some of the most toxic chemicals known because of an abandoned dump, lawyers representing former workers say.

But the Athens Independent School District was not informed earlier about discovery of dioxins near South Athens Elementary, Superintendent Larry Whitehead said Wednesday.

One sample taken from a residential area near the school downwind from the Harvey Industries site showed an extremely high level of dioxins, said attorney Robert Hilliard.

He said his law firm has been conducting soil sampling around the East Texas city to determine the impact the abandoned Harvey site has had on the environment and the health of employees and residents.

Hilliard advised the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to compare the results taken from a site near the elementary and compare them with samples taken from the former plant location.

"... You will see a startling correlation of the constituents, what we call the fingerprint," Hilliard stated.

HAMILTON, Ontario (AP) — Talk about two left feet.

Police in Hamilton found more than 1,000 shoes in a dumpster Tuesday night — all brand new, all Reeboks. And all, except one, for the left foot.

Constable Mark Taylor said the shoes, sizes 9 through 11, include runners, hiking boots and sandals worth about $120,000 retail.

Officials suspect the shoes were stolen and discarded, but they haven't a clue why a thief wouldn't keep pairs.

Perhaps some mischief was afoot.

"We've heard all the jokes," Taylor said with a sigh.

Is gallbladder disease to blame?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 29-year-old son is in the Navy. At least once a month he has severe pain similar to a gallbladder attack. He's been through rigorous testing, and they determined he had crystals in the gallbladder. The attacks continue, and the Navy is talking about discharge. This means he probably won't be able to get a job or medical insurance and we're worried. Do you have any ideas?

DEAR READER: I'm seeing more and more young people with gallbladder disease. I don't know the reason for this. In the past, gallbladder attacks were pretty much confined to the "4 Fs": fat, female, fair, and over forty.

However, I recently had a thin, male adolescent who required removal of his gallbladder.

It's likely that your son's "crystals" may be irritating the lining of his gallbladder, causing spasm and pain, maybe even leading to eventual gallstones or "sludge." I can't be certain of this, of course, but the possibility exists.

I believe that he could solve the problem by seeing a gastroenterologist. After appropriate testing, such as ultrasound, the specialist should be able to discover the cause of your son's attacks of abdominal pain.

If the gallbladder is to blame, it probably should be removed. Unlike the traditional surgery, modern gallbladder operations can be performed laparoscopically (the "Band-Aid" procedure), with minimal risk and practically no convalescence. Such an operation should in no way affect his future prospects for employment or health insurance.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm concerned about a problem I have EVERY morning. After a cup of coffee and a couple of cigarettes, I vomit. I take Fiorinal for headaches and smoke a pack and a half of cigarettes every day. Would this have anything to do with my problem?

DEAR READER: The nicotine from your two morning cigarettes may, in the presence of an empty stomach, cause nausea. So could the Fiorinal (which contains caffeine), unless you take it with food.

The most direct way to test my hypothesis is to give up smoking in the morning.

And if that's successful, consider stopping the cigarettes altogether. This also might improve your headaches, so you could discontinue the Fiorinal. Wouldn't that be a welcome bonus!

PUC to reject SW Bell bid for third Dallas area code

DALLAS (AP) — State utility regulators say that they will reject Southwestern Bell's try to add a third area code to Dallas and its suburbs.

After the Public Utility Commission approved a doughnut-shaped split for assigning the new 972 area code to the Dallas area and a new 281 area code for Houston's region, Southwestern Bell last month petitioned to change the plan.

Southwestern Bell executives had wanted to start assigning the 972 code soon to new phone lines throughout the Dallas area. It wanted to then implement a third code — as yet undetermined — in September in the suburbs.

Bell also sought regulatory approval to use the 281 area code as an overlay, assigning the code to new customers as 713 numbers were depleted.

However, regulators said Wednesday that their decision to split Dallas into two area codes is final. All three commissioners voted to not even discuss Bell's request during the PUC's public meeting.

"The commission has pretty much ruled on the big issue" of how to solve the area-code problem, Commissioner Judy Walsh told The Dallas Morning News. "The policy issues have been decided."

The March PUC order will limit the current 214 area code to most of Dallas and small parts of western Mesquite and Garland. The rest of the city and the suburbs that ring Dallas would be assigned the new 972 area code.

But Bell officials said last month that they were concerned that under the plan approved by the PUC, the supply of new numbers could be depleted before September.

Also, the Dallas region's 911 emergency system might have trouble matching telephone numbers and addresses during the first hours of the new area-code plan, they said.

"The primary concern I have is, 'Don't do anything to jeopardize the 911 system,'" said Bill Deere, Bell's regional manager for planning and engineering. "We're down to the point of those becoming critical items."

Bell officials recently suggested that new numbers throughout Dallas and the suburbs be assigned the 972 code so that two area codes would be intertwined throughout the region. Then a new, as-yet-undetermined area code could be given to the "doughnut" area around the city in September, they proposed.

In Houston, the proposed third area code would have been used outside Beltway 8, instead of 281, to prevent duplication among existing customers.

But Southwestern Bell spokesman Chris Talley acknowledged the proposal for a third area code was killed by the commission's refusal to consider the company's motion for rehearing.

But state regulators said Wednesday that their decision is final. All three commissioners voted to not even discuss Bell's request during the PUC's public meeting.

Remaining issues can be handled through a separate proceeding, Ms. Walsh said.

Bell is unlikely to challenge the decision in court, Deere said.

Charles Messier, the French astronomer, was chiefly interested in discovering comets. While studying the heavens, he repeatedly mistook hazy stellar objects for comets, and out of frustration, he came up with a list of 102 objects for comet hunters to avoid. This list became an enormously important astronomical document which included such discoveries as the Andromeda galaxy. Messier, however, was more interested in comets and continued his search, eventually finding 21 comets — all of which had little or no scientific importance.

Bill Seale
A Bright Spot In Our Hometown!

If you were dusting for fingerprints of progress in Snyder, Scurry County and West Texas, one set would constantly appear.

Bill Seale, a civic workhorse here for more than 30 years, is Snyder National Bank's recipient of the Hometown Spirit Award for June.

Seale, a partner in Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home, has been involved in practically every positive community endeavor since he hit town in 1963.

In his chosen profession, Seale also is recognized for his success and for his contributions. Just last month, the West Texas Funeral Directors Association honored Bill Seale as funeral director of the year. He is now a candidate for statewide honors later this month.

Seale often talks about "teamwork and working together" to accomplish sometimes difficult tasks. Frequently, Seale is the positive and optimistic force that gives a project the needed boost.

Just recently, Seale resigned from the board of the Development Corporation after having served as one of the organization's original directors.

Seale had sought not to be reappointed last October, but Mayor David Holt asked Seale to stay on until negotiations with Lorber Industries were completed.

As the first president of the DCOS, Seale is reponsible for much of the organization's startup success and for bringing several groups together to work on economic development.

A native of Vernon, Seale enlisted in the U.S. Navy shortly after graduation from high school in 1944. He served a majority of his time in Guantanomo Bay as a member of the medical corp.

Following his military service, Seale enrolled in the Dallas Institute of Mortuary Science, graduating as a licensed director in 1947. The following year, he married Finnie Hightower and the couple have two children. Marsha Moore has been a successful drama teacher in Colorado City, and son Kris Seale serves as president of Directors Investment Group Inc. in Abilene. The Seales have four grandchildren.

The Seales have owned funeral homes in Turkey, Matador, Colorado City, Ballinger and Odessa. Seale moved from Matador to Snyder and is currently a principal in Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home with long-time partner, Jack Cypert.

A tireless civic worker, Seale served as mayor in Matador. He was elected to the Snyder City Council in 1970 and after one term, served as mayor of Snyder from 1972 to 1974.

His contributions to the betterment of Snyder were just beginning. He was elected to the Snyder Independent School District board of trustees in 1979 and served until April, 1982, his final year as board president.

Seale, a member of the Snyder Lions Club, is a club past-president. He also served as president of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce in 1966 and has been recipient of the chamber's citizen of the year honor. Seale is also a member and a past-president of the Snyder Country Club.

The Seales are active members of the Colonial Hill Baptist Church. Seale, who knew Miller Robinson in Matador, is credited with suggesting to the Colonial Hill pastor search committee that Rev. Robinson would be "someone to look at." Robinson retired last month after 32 years as Colonial Hill pastor.

Bill is a member of the Masonic Lodge and has served as a past lodge master.

In 1978, Seale and his partners organized Funeral Directors Life Insurance Company, a legal reserve life insurance firm, and Affiliated Funeral Supply, a regional casket distribution center headquartered in Abilene.

Seale serves as chairman of Directors Investment Group Inc., Funeral Directors Life Insurance Company and of Affiliated Funeral Supply. He is also a director of The Loewen Group Inc., a publicly-traded company and the second largest funeral service company in North America.

Seale has been active in legislative affairs that impact his industry and his community. Often, his company's airplane is used to support civic endeavors.

Snyder National Bank is pleased to recognize Bill Seale — a bright spot in our hometown.

Gannaway presents program

GUEST SPEAKER — Jerry Gannaway, commissioner of Precinct 4, was the guest speaker for the May meeting of the Stargazers FCI club. He presented a program on the commissioners court and how it functions. Pictured are President Pauline Broyles and Gannaway. (SDN Staff Photo)

Stargazers FCI club met May 20 at the home of Maggie Barnes in Hermleigh.

President Pauline Broyles presided over the meeting.

Roll call was answered with "The oldest thing I have in my house and where it comes from." Eleven members and seven guests were present.

Following the reading and approving of minutes, Pauline Broyles gave the council report.

Jerry Gannaway, commissioner of Precinct 4, gave an informative program about the commissioners and how they govern.

Commissioners are elected by the voters of each precinct for a four year term, Gannaway said.

Also, the agenda must be posted 72 hours before the commissioners meet. The commissioners court consists of four commissioners and the county judge, and to have a quorum at least three persons must be present.

Gannaway said the biggest job is setting the tax rate and budget.

He gave a breakdown of the revenues collected by the county and how the funds are distributed.

The thought for the day was "Some people are like blisters, they don't show up until the work is done."

The hint for the day was cottage cheese stays good twice as long stored upside down.

Club members and guests attended an outside barbecue at the home of Maggie Barnes. Each member brought a covered dish.

Mary Ann Juarez received the hostess gift.

The next meeting is June 20.

The biggest number

By Phillip Alder

For the fifth day of my teaching tour, I went to the Surfer's Paradise Bridge Club, where almost 200 people came to each of the two sessions: a class, and a duplicate in which I played with Margaret Millar.

This deal from the duplicate contains a few instructive aspects, especially for tournament players.

After East's one-diamond opening bid and South's two-club overcall, West had a perfect hand for a negative double: length in both majors and diamond tolerance. However, playing these doubles only through one spade (misguidedly, I feel), West had to bid two diamonds.

When South continued with four clubs, West made a matchpoint double. He was hoping for plus 300 to outscore 110 in three diamonds. Or as was the actual case, plus 100 to outscore all the East-West pairs getting 50 from four clubs undoubled.

The heart-king lead should make things easy. But on this type of auction, where you think the opponents are sacrificing, it is normally right to lead a trump.

After winning with the club ace, East should switch to a heart, but he selected the diamond king (in case South had a singleton queen). Declarer won with dummy's ace, and could have succeeded by playing a spade to his jack. But he drew the last trump and continued with the ace and jack of spades.

Not seeing the danger, East won with the king and continued with a diamond. Declarer ruffed, played a trump to dummy's 10 and ran the spade 10, discarding a heart. A moment later South's second heart loser disappeared on the spade nine: plus 510.

East never asked himself what West had for his double. He had to have heart values.

Bulls go up 1-0 with Sonics in NBA Finals

CHICAGO (AP) — As usual, the Chicago Bulls did what they had to do exactly when they had to do it. As usual, their opponent left the game with hope, however misguided that might be.

Chicago got just enough production from Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen and Dennis Rodman, got major contributions from role players Toni Kukoc, Ron Harper and Luc Longley and got away with playing at less than its best in taking the opener of the NBA Finals.

"The first game is always the hardest," said Jordan, who scored 28 points, but was quiet for most of the second half when the Bulls pulled away for a 107-90 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics. "I think Game 1, to win it and know you didn't play great offense but played great defensively, it's a plus. Hopefully, we can build on this."

The Sonics go into Game 2 Friday night believing that if they don't commit 18 turnovers, if they get more out of Gary Payton, if they contain the Bulls' role players — if, if, if — they still can win this best-of-7 series against a Chicago team that has lost only 11 of 95 games this season.

"We were in the game all the way into the fourth quarter," said Payton, who scored 13 points, nine below his postseason average. "If we wouldn't have turned the ball over, we would've had a good chance of winning. We can play with this team and we can beat this team."

It's been a familiar refrain this postseason.

Even after New York lost the Eastern Conference semifinals in five games, Patrick Ewing said he felt the Knicks were better than the Bulls. Even after Orlando was swept out of the conference finals by Chicago, the Magic felt they could have won the series.

Opponents always think they can win, but it's Chicago that has a 12-1 playoff record, it's Chicago that is just three victories away from its fourth title in six years, it's Chicago that is on the verge of successfully capping the greatest season in NBA history.

Jordan, constantly double-teamed, had only four second-half points until scoring six late when the game was already decided. Pippen had 21 points, but was only 5-of-15 from the floor. Rodman had 13 rebounds, but missed much of the second half due to foul trouble.

The Bulls' big three got a major boost from Kukoc, Harper and Longley. Kukoc scored 18 points — including 12 in the fourth quarter, when Chicago outscored Seattle 28-13. Harper scored 15 and held Payton to 6-of-17 shooting. Longley had 12 of his 14 points in the first half.

Shawn Kemp scored 32 points for the Sonics. But he also committed seven turnovers before fouling out with 1:43 to go.

"We stayed close, but now we have to realize that we have to play to win instead of trying just to stay (close)," Seattle's Sam Perkins said. "There is no way to play just to look good."

Neither team looked good for most of the game.

Playing for the first time since completing their sweep of Orlando nine days earlier, the Bulls seemed out of sync offensively. They made only 43 percent of their shots and were 7-of-26 from 3-point range.

But they found the range in the fourth quarter, when Kukoc scored 10 straight Chicago points and Harper energized an already-tight defense that turned steals into fast-break baskets.

The Sonics had their moments, like their 13-4 run that made it 75-75 late in the third quarter. But with the Bulls' defense improving as the game went on, Seattle had too many turnovers and shot too poorly (40 percent) to stay in the game. And when Kemp got into foul trouble, the Sonics lost their only effective option.

"We're the kind of team that continually builds up pressure," Pippen said. "Late in the game, our pressure was a big factor. I thought that they felt we were going to be back on our heels, but we stepped up the pressure, got more aggressive and guys started to play the passing lanes."

Rodman played aggressively. But he couldn't prevent the Sonics from outrebounding the Bulls 41-40, only the second time this postseason Chicago hasn't won the board battle.

Aside from his interesting new hairdo — with a kind of multicolored graffiti motif — Rodman's main contribution was keeping his cool when Frank Brickowski tried to goad him into a technical foul in the second quarter. Instead, Brickowski committed a flagrant foul on Rodman and was ejected for talking trash to Bulls bench jockey Jack Haley.

Wall throws five-hitter in Astros victory, 4-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Donne Wall was on and the Colorado Rockies bats were still off.

Wall, called up from Triple-A Tucson on May 14, missed his first major league shutout by one out but got his first complete game with a 5-hitter and nine strikeouts, leading the Houston Astros to a 4-1 victory Wednesday night.

"He threw a lot of strikes but I don't think he left too much out over the plate," said Dante Bichette, whose ninth inning single spoiled the shutout. "He was on. He was in this rhythm and we should have stepped out and broke some of the rhythm."

Wall, facing the Rockies for the first time, gave them more than they could handle, but he didn't impress Rockies manager Don Baylor too much. Baylor credited the loss to his team's hitting slump more than Wall's pitching.

"He was nothing overpowering," Baylor said. "He topped out at about 87 (mph). He just used a split-finger and a changeup. He didn't change. He kept throwing the same way.

"He threw Larry Walker the same pitch four straight times. He had a plan and he stayed with it. He just kept going with his strength. He threw the ball out of the strike zone and we chased it."

Bichette doubled in the first inning and Wall (2-0) didn't allow another runner past first base until the ninth inning.

Walt Eeiss walked, Eric Young singled and Bichette hit a two-out single for the Rockies' only run.

"I had a long wait before going back out there for the ninth so maybe I cooled off a little," Wall said. "But this is really going to help my confidence.

"I know that I can compete at this level and help this team win. Everything was working tonight. I felt good from the start."

Wall scored one run and Craig Biggio drove in two as the Astros won their fifth straight home game.

Rangers drop afternoon decision to Brewers, 6-4

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dave Nilsson might have made his temporary move to the cleanup spot a bit more permanent.

Nilsson, switched to the fourth spot in place of slumping Greg Vaughn, drove in two runs Wednesday to back Ben McDonald's solid six-inning performance as Milwaukee defeated Texas 6-4.

Nilsson batted fourth and started in left field for Vaughn for the second straight game. Nilsson drove in three runs Tuesday night and added a sacrifice fly and RBI triple Wednesday as the Brewers won both games.

"Vaughnie will be back in (Friday) in Boston, but I'll probably just leave Nillie in the 4-hole for a while and put Vaughnie in the 5-hole," Brewers manager Phil Garner said. "He's starting to produce now and Greg's been struggling a little bit."

It was only the third game Vaughn has not started and the first time he has not started consecutive games. Vaughn stranded 16 runners in a recent four-game series with Cleveland.

"He got two days off and we'll get him back in there," Garner said. "Over the long run, we'll be better with Vaughn in the lineup. He'll be back on track."

McDonald (5-3) allowed two runs on five hits and one walk in six innings for his first win in six starts since May 5. Graeme Lloyd, Marshall Boze and Ramon Garcia pitched the seventh and eighth. Mike Fetters finished for his ninth save.

"I thought Ben did a good job working with a different routine and different assortment of pitches that he's shown," Garner said. "He threw his breaking ball over for strikes, some nice change-ups and he moved the ball around nicely."

The Brewers broke a 2-2 tie with two runs in the fifth off Texas starter Ken Hill (7-4). Jeff Cirillo doubled to open, moved to third on Fernando Vina's groundout and scored on Kevin Seitzer's single. Nilsson followed with a triple off the top of the wall in right.

John Jaha's seventh home run, with two outs in the seventh, extended the lead to 5-2. Jaha hit an 0-2 pitch for his first home since May 18.

UIL state baseball tourney begins today

AUSTIN (AP) — Lubbock Monterey is making a record-tying 12th appearance in the state baseball tournament today, and the Plainsmen appear to have strong pitching to go with the highest scoring average of the Class 5A semifinalists.

Monterey (34-3), averaging 10.62 runs per game this season, will send left-handed curveballer Mark Martinez (15-0) against League City Clear Creek (25-7), the 1991 5A champions, tonight.

In the other 5A semifinal, Klein Oak (28-4-1) will meet Eagle Pass (24-8), which knocked off Corpus Christi Moody in the regional finals to reach the state tournament for the first time since 1988.

Monterey, which has four starters batting over .400, will tie South San Antonio for most appearances in the state tournament and is seeking its fourth state title. The Plainsmen won state championships also in 1972, 1974 and 1981.

Martinez, a senior, has been the star for Monterey, going 4-0 in the playoffs, including a perfect game in an 8-0 victory over Abilene Cooper in the regional finals. He had 11 strikeouts as he retired every batter he faced for the second time this season.

Clear Creek is led by Cody Sundbeck (13-1), a right-handed senior who has been the winning pitcher in the Wildcats' four playoff victories, three of which were shutouts.

Clutch-hitting second baseman Justin Syfert is the steadiest offensive threat for Clear Creek, which has made just three errors in four playoff games.

Klein Oak, which lost the 1991 title game to Clear Creek, is led by senior right-handed pitchers Trey Hodges (11-2) and Matt Schmidt (12-1).

Center fielder Matt Pazlich (.358, six home runs and 51 RBIs) and third baseman Matt Colerick (.415, six homers, 26 RBIs) anchor Klein Oak's offense.

Eagle Pass, which kept Moody from its third straight state appearance, is led by pitcher Isaac Rodriguez (11-2), who went the distance in the Eagles' last three playoff games.

In the 4A semifinals, Little Cypress-Mauriceville (31-3) will attempt to solve Southlake Carroll (25-9) and its ace Chance Caple, an eighth-round draft pick of the San Diego Padres.

Carroll was the 1982 Class 2A champion and the 3A runner-up in 1990.

The other 4A bracket has Fort Worth Arlington Heights (28-11) meeting Corpus Christi Calallen (34-1), each making its third state tourney appearance.

In 3A, Mineola (28-4), making its first trip to Austin, will take on Graham (21-9). In the other 3A semifinal, Dripping Springs (25-6) will meet Crockett (25-6).

In 2A, 1990 champion Gilmer Harmony (24-6) faces DeLeon (21-5). In the other bracket, Pilot Point (28-2), which has the highest scoring average in the tournament at 12.8 runs per game, will meet Weimar (23-8).

In 1A, Spurger (27-4) takes on Gorman (21-5), and Thorndale (22-2) meets Maud (20-6).

Little Dribblers are winning at Nationals

GEORGETOWN — After four games in the girl's National Little Dribblers tournament going on here, Snyder is undefeated.

Both the juniors and majors won twice Wednesday and were both scheduled to play at 4:45 today.

The juniors opened up with a 26-16 victory over Pflugerville. Priscilla Ybarra led all scorers for Snyder with 19. Jessica Sollis had 4, Andra Dunham 2 and Kelby Drum 1.

In the second round game, Snyder juniors knocked off Weatherford, 39-17. Ybarra was the only Snyder girl in double figures with 14. Sollis added 6, Erin Burleson 5, Dunham and Misha Wofford 4 and Drum, Ashley Fredrick and April Lollar two 2.

For the majors, they won their opening round game over Georgetown I, 50-27. Two Snyder girls were in double figures. Katie Voss had 17 and Chasity Perales put in 10. Adding to the scoring were Meagan Hatley with 9, Amber Alexander 5, Crystal Atkinson and Taylor Daniell 4 and Cheyenne Walker 1.

In a game that did not start until 9:45 Wednesday night, Snyder defeated Silsbee by a point, 24-23. The majors got a balanced scoring attack from seven players. Voss was high point with 8, Hatley added 6, Alexander 3, Atkinson, Elvia Barrera and Taylor Daniell 2 each and Chaelyn Robinson 1.

The juniors were scheduled to take on Lamesa in a round-three game at 4:45 today. The winner will play at 6 p.m. Friday with the loser to play at 1 p.m. Friday.

The majors faced Athens at 4:45 today and would play at 6 p.m. Friday with a win, while the loser would play at 1 p.m Friday.

Graf, Vicario advance in Paris

PARIS (AP) — Steffi Graf and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario took advantage of their opponents' unforced errors and double faults today to advance to the French Open final.

Graf, the defending champion and four-time French Open winner, won 6-3, 6-1 over third-seeded Conchita Martinez, while the fourth-seeded Sanchez Vicario beat Jana Novotna 6-3, 7-5.

Saturday's final will be a replay of last year's championship match, which Graf won in three sets.

Graf broke the sluggish Martinez in the second game and stayed ahead in the first set. But with five straight breaks between them, the crowd reacted lukewarmly to the unspectacular and error-filled match.

From 3-2 in the first set, Graf won seven out of eight games to go up 4-0 in the second.

Graf committed 23 errors to Martinez' 24 in the match lasting just over one hour. Martinez double-faulted four times.

Presidential candidates promise much but can't always deliver after election

WASHINGTON (AP) — When they campaign, they promise to do. Once they win, they promise to try.

The fact that a president can't pass programs all by himself often gets forgotten in campaigns, only to be remembered after the votes are in and it's safe to deflate public expectations.

All that is ahead. These days the air thickens with bravado.

"Taxes will go down!" exclaims Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole — "not up."

If Congress goes along with me, he might have added. Or if no economic or fiscal calamity occurs requiring the "revenue enhancers" that Ronald Reagan used to take back a chunk of his unprecedented 1981 tax cut.

Campaigning in 1992, Bill Clinton asserted that America was "going to become ... a nation that controls health care costs and provides basic health care to all our people."

If I don't commit strategic blunders, he could have said. Or see my hopes fade from slim to none if Republicans take over Congress.

Fueling the same expectations that Clinton did in 1992, Dole now says about welfare: "I'll end it as we know it."

And he says "child pornography will end in a Dole administration" if his proposals are passed.

Clinton's 1992 victory speech showed a rediscovery of the constitutional checks and balances that can tie presidents and Congress in knots.

In one sentence that election night, his verbs of certitude vanished.

He said he would "seek" to let students pay back college loans through community service, "challenge" the health industry, consumers and government to give America a new health care system, "offer" welfare recipients the opportunity and expectation of working and "ask" U.S. companies to export products, not jobs.

"The day after you win you'd better lower the expectations that you've raised in the campaign, for ours is a system in which no one branch can claim it can run the government," said political scientist Charles O. Jones of the University of Wisconsin.

"All you've got is the power to say, 'These are the things I would like to do.'"

The might-do approach can be less compelling than will-do bluster. But presidents do have the power to persuade, horse trade and deny, so there is room for pledges both realistic and bold.

George Bush's promise, "Read my lips, no new taxes," was ultimately broken but at least made within the confines of presidential power, because presidents can veto legislation and it is hard to override them.

The House Republicans' 1994 Contract with America promised to bring a series of proposals to a vote in the first 100 days. That promise was kept, even though little of the contract has become law.

But surrounding that pledge was the wider expectation of achievement and not just effort.

"The pretension was substantially more," Jones said. "They didn't do anything to reduce the expectations. They got themselves so goosed up."

Even when they distinguish between trying and doing — and both Clinton and Dole often do that — candidates can overreach.

"I want to cure your pain," says Dole, not just feel it, like Clinton.

As both candidate and president, Clinton walks a fine line between hyperbole and reality.

On Wednesday he introduced his "proposal" to give students a tax credit for education after high school.

Later in the speech, the plan sounded as good as done.

"It will open the doors of college opportunity to every American. ... Education at the typical community college will now be free. ... Nobody now needs to be stuck in a dead-end job or in unemployment."

Presidential powers include command of the armed forces, the authority to appoint officials and judges and the ability to grant waivers for social service experimentation in states.

But Congress can circumscribe much of that. It can change the way the administration regulates if it doesn't like how the executive branch is carrying out its laws.

Many of the anti-crime proposals now in play fall under the authority of states, communities or courts.

Dole promises to appoint conservative judges but the Senate would have a say in that, particularly if Democrats gained control. Clinton has only had three federal judicial appointments confirmed by the GOP Senate since January.

Even waivers can be micromanaged. House Republicans are moving this week to embarrass Clinton by voting to give the green light to Wisconsin welfare reforms he has yet to approve in full.

"My pledge to the American public," Dole vows, "is to say what I will do, and to do what I say."

Which is easier said than done.

Candy company to sell 'Worm'

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — For anyone who ever wanted to bite Dennis Rodman's head off, a candy company has a treat for you.

The Worm, a 1¼-ounce lollipop in the shape of a bloated worm with Rodman's face, is going on sale in as many flavors as the Chicago Bulls star has hair colors.

Production begins Friday, said Boise-based Custom Confections Inc., which hopes to sell 15 million by the end of the year. The tattoo-covered, cross-dressing Rodman, nicknamed the Worm, gave final approval to the lollipop last week.

The flavors include strawberry creme, cherry, strawberry-banana, tutti-frutti, root beer and grape. The 99-cent candies will be wrapped in clear plastic carrying Rodman's signature.

Man Likes to Give Reminders Of How Good a Friend He Is

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1996 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have been friends with a certain gentleman for 45 years. I'll call him "Paul." I had been very friendly with his wife, who passed away eight years ago. She was a good-hearted soul and I thanked her for everything she ever did for me — or gave me. There was only one problem. She never stopped reminding me of what she had given me.

Now Paul is doing the same thing! Six years ago, he gave me a basket of artificial flowers for Easter and told me he had paid $35 for it. Every time he saw me after that, he asked me if I was enjoying the flowers that he paid $35 for.

Paul also sent me a Christmas card that played "Silent Night" when you opened it. Abby, would you believe that in July he asked me if the Christmas card he gave me was still playing "Silent Night"?

Abby, what on earth is this man's problem?

HAD IT IN CARLSBAD, N.M.

DEAR HAD IT: It's anybody's guess. Perhaps he doesn't want you to forget the amount of money and effort he's invested in your friendship. At least you'll never have to worry about Paul's memory. He can remind the elephants.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I'm a recovering alcoholic who loves to entertain. The letter from the woman in Tucson who abstains from coffee, tea and alcohol for religious reasons struck a chord with me. Like her, I'm comfortable dining out with people who order drinks, but shopping for liquor or keeping it around the house would present too great a temptation. I've found a couple of solutions.

One is to invite people for brunch instead of dinner. When offered an assortment of herb teas or fruit juices, no one clamors for a Bloody Mary. Another is to let guests bring whatever they want to drink. Here in the Midwest, no one accepts a dinner invitation without asking, "What can I bring?" I reply, "If you'd like wine or beer, bring it along." Then I make sure they take home the leftovers.

In the winter, I've found that hot cider or hot chocolate is always welcomed; freshly squeezed lemonade draws raves in the summer.

If friends can't enjoy a few hours with you without drinking, they need to take a long, hard look at their own alcohol use. I know — I've been there!

I didn't think I could have a social life in sobriety, but I was wrong. Now I enjoy the parties I give much more, and I don't have to face the cleanup while coping with a hangover.

Since I'm in AA, just sign me ...

SUE IN WISCONSIN

DEAR SUE: Congratulations on your sobriety, and thanks for a helpful letter.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Frustrated in New Jersey" that she shouldn't have to "swallow" anything.

Here's how I handled the bridesmaid thing with a bride-to-be who gave the ring back to her fiance three times.

With these bad vibes in mind, I asked the bride to sign an agreement, with a post-dated (the date of the wedding) check so if the wedding didn't take place, I could cash the check (for the dress only — $180) and she would get the dress. She agreed.

Yes, she did marry the groom and I returned her check.

I did this because I already own two dresses, two purses and two pairs of shoes (never worn) costing a grand total of $530.

This time, I covered my bases.

Proposal created to protect patients from bad doctors

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Doctors suspended by the state Health Department for such things as incompetence or abuse would be barred from practicing during their appeals under tough new legislation proposed by Gov. George Pataki.

Decisions by the state to suspend or revoke licenses would also be made public immediately under Pataki's proposal. Currently, those decision are kept confidential if appealed.

"This is the best remedy for the profession and the patients alike," Pataki's health commissioner, Dr. Barbara DeBuono said at a Capitol news conference.

Pataki said the changes are needed to avoid tragedies like the 1993 death of a woman who underwent a 20-week abortion by a doctor who was challenging a state misconduct finding against him at the time.

Authorities say the doctor, David Benjamin, perforated Guadalupe Negron's uterus during the procedure and then allowed her to bleed to death while he performed an abortion on another patient.

Nominee resigns outside job with insurance firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man chosen by President Clinton to lead the troubled Navy sought to avoid some trouble of his own, opting to resign a $33,000 corporate post rather than face questions from senators who must approve the nomination.

Adm. Jay Johnson said Wednesday that Pentagon rules allow him to serve as director for an insurance company that deals largely with military service members. But Johnson wanted no glitches to slow his confirmation.

Hours after President Clinton named Johnson as the Navy's new top officer, and after a senior senator questioned the outside work, the 50-year-old admiral resigned from his corporate position.

Johnson's paid position on the board of directors of USAA, an insurance, banking and financial services firm based in San Antonio, has been reported on the admiral's financial disclosure forms for the past five years. But only under the spotlight of his promotion to chief of naval operations following the suicide of Adm. Jeremy Boorda was it noted by the Senate Armed Services Committee, which must approve his appointment.

"Although my service in a private capacity as a USAA board member was appropriately reported in all financial disclosure statements, reviewed by Navy and Department of Defense ethics counsellors, and determined to be fully in compliance with applicable DoD regulations, I would not want it to remain an issue of concern for the Armed Services Committee," Johnson said. "Therefore, I am resigning from the USAA board and from those of its two affiliate companies."

In nominating Johnson, Clinton said it was a "crucial time" for the Navy, which has been hit by a string of incidents, including Boorda's suicide on May 16, the Tailhook scandal, a rash of F-14 fighter plane crashes and criminal activities at the U.S. Naval Academy.

By late afternoon, Johnson's nomination appeared to have hit a snag. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said he was concerned about Johnson's role as a director of USAA.

"I am going to withhold my opinion of the nomination until I have had the opportunity to review the documentation," Thurmond said. "I have serious concerns about the DoD policy that allowed Admiral Johnson and other flag officers to be paid members of the board of the United Services Automobile Association."

Thurmond added that he had no indication that Johnson had broken any rule.

White House aides said the Navy had known about his position for years and had cleared him of any conflicts. "We were not blindsided by this," one White House aide said.

Fire burning out of control in Alaska, no end is in sight

BIG LAKE, Alaska (AP) — Fed by strong winds and tinder-dry moss on the forest floor, a raging wildfire tripled in size in a day, forcing at least 700 people to evacuate wilderness homes and shutting down part of a major highway.

The fire, which also forced the evacuation of a prison farm Wednesday, has burned across 56 square miles and destroyed at least 150 buildings.

Despite door-to-door warnings from state troopers to get out, many in the Big Lake area 60 miles north of Anchorage stayed behind to beat back the flames.

"We haven't slept in 50 hours," Michael Naumann said Wednesday as he and his teen-age son used a well pump to pour water on his cedar-shingle home as protection. "When the fire got going pretty good, I had my son on the garage roof and I was on top of the house.

"As soon as this is done," Naumann said, "I'm getting rid of every spruce tree around here."

With rain not expected before Sunday, there was no end in sight to the 37,000-acre blaze that investigators suspect was caused by fireworks over the weekend. The fire tripled in size from dawn to afternoon Wednesday.

Pushed by gusts of up to 25 mph, the fire was burning east and south through dense black spruce and birch. Late Wednesday, troopers were forced to close a stretch of the only highway between Anchorage and Fairbanks, the state's largest cities.

Fire Commander Dave Liebersbach conceded more homes could be lost if the fire jumps eastward across the Parks Highway and makes the 10-mile trip to Wasilla, a town of 4,800.

The 500 firefighters on the scene included experienced reinforcements from the Lower 48 states, and some were posted along the highway today to keep the flames from jumping across.

Plumes of flame shot 200 feet high and the forest was shrouded in thick smoke that drifted down to Anchorage and prompted officials to issue an air quality alert.

Airplanes and helicopters dropped water and fire retardant, but officials say the chemical hasn't been effective on the burning moss on the forest floor.

As many as a third of the homes in the Big Lake area were damaged or destroyed, but the fire was spotty. Some houses were intact even though scorched ground extended right up to their doors.

The community, popular with dog mushers, is a mixture of more than 2,000 permanent homes, weekend cabins and trailers set back from dirt roads.

It's Alaska's fastest growing area, attracting homesteaders and refugees from Anchorage.

"These are the folks people in the Lower 48 think of when they think of Alaskans," said state Rep. Vic Kohring, a local contractor. "They've carved out their own niche in the wilderness."

Martin Buser, two-time winner of the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race, ferried as many as 80 dogs to the safety of an island in the middle of Big Lake, then returned to his home to beat back flames.

On the Alaska Railroad, popular with tourists, southbound trains out of Fairbanks were halted because the fire burned right up to the tracks.

Clinton's chief accuser headed to Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's chief accuser in the Whitewater affair has been ordered to appear for questioning by a Senate committee and the panel is headed to court for a decision on whether he can be forced to testify without a grant of immunity.

The Senate Whitewater Committee voted Wednesday to seek a court ruling on whether former Arkansas banker and municipal Judge David Hale, now imprisoned for fraud, can legally refuse to answer the panel's questions by invoking the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

In the meantime, Hale was ordered to appear Friday for questioning in a closed session. Hale previously has said he would invoke the Fifth Amendment and has asked for immunity so his Senate testimony could not be used against him in other cases.

The voice vote came after a raucous partisan debate over whether Hale should be granted limited immunity, for which committee Republicans have been pushing. Special Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr last week gave his approval for such a grant.

Committee Democrats assailed the character and credibility of Hale, who is serving a 28-month prison term for defrauding the federal government through his lending company.

Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., repeatedly called Hale a "convicted felon" and said he has "a past that I'm sure his mother would be ashamed of."

Democrats maintained they, too, want Hale to testify but argued that giving him immunity would allow him to manipulate the committee and escape further prosecutions. They said the problem could be solved by compelling Hale to appear, but avoiding questioning him about a separate Arkansas case in which he is expected to be charged.

"It is an absolute certainty that the course of justice will be affected" by Hale's testimony, because "no lawyer worth his salt" would miss the chance to appeal Hale's conviction as a result, said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass.

The Republicans were adamant, accusing the Democrats of trying to shield Clinton from Hale's testimony.

"There's a cloud over this administration caused by Whitewater," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a panel member who also is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "It's a big cloud and it's never going to go away" unless Hale testifies, he said.

Led by Committee Chairman Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., the Republicans insisted that they would not be able to hear from Hale, whose allegations triggered the Whitewater investigation, without granting him immunity.

D'Amato, unable to line up at least two Democratic votes needed to secure two-thirds approval for immunity, then proposed that the panel go to federal court for a ruling on Hale's constitutional right against self-incrimination.

Investigation is launched into how White House received file

WASHINGTON (AP) — With presidential aides saying they made a bureaucratic mistake, the FBI is launching an inquiry into how the background file of travel office chief Billy Dale was given to the White House seven months after he was fired.

The travel office controversy flared anew Wednesday as Rep. William Clinger produced a White House request form stating that Bernard Nussbaum, then the White House counsel, was asking for Dale's FBI file.

Clinger said he assumes the White House wanted the material "to see if there was anything to Billy Dale's past that could be exploited for political advantage."

Nussbaum denied seeking or reviewing Dale's FBI file, and White House lawyer Jane Sherburne said "we believe" Dale's FBI file "may have mistakenly been sought" by "White House record-keepers" in a routine gathering of FBI background files on current employees.

Sherburne said the Whitewater prosecutor's office has contacted the White House about the matter. FBI Director Louis Freeh said his general counsel is launching an inquiry and that the results will be furnished to Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr.

The FBI said it released the records solely in response to receiving the White House's written request and "not in response to any personal request from any official of the White House to any executive in the FBI."

Dale's FBI background file turned up in 1,000 pages of documents that the White House reluctantly supplied to Clinger's Government Reform and Oversight Committee last week. The president had tried to withhold the documents, contending they were subject to executive privilege, and 2,000 other pages are still being withheld.

Clinger contended that "the president and his current counsel invoked executive privilege to cover up the fact that the White House was digging through the FBI background files of a private citizen."

Dale said Wednesday that he had never sought access to the White House after he was fired and that he had been "red-flagged" — meaning barred — when he and the rest of the White House travel office workers were dismissed.

The request for Dale's file was made on a White House form that states: "The person named above is being considered for:" followed by the typed-in word "access (s)."

The file on Dale consisted of 11 letters and 11 memos. It apparently arrived at the White House on Jan. 6, 1994. FBI background material typically includes interviews about a prospective government employee with neighbors and acquaintances.

Dale was acquitted of criminal charges last year in regard to the travel office, and Republicans say he was the victim of a political squeeze aimed at bringing in a Little Rock travel agency and giving business to a company co-owned by a friend of the Clintons, Hollywood producer Harry Thomason.

Communist candidate pledges he will not confiscate property

MOSCOW (AP) — Lagging in the polls, Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov tried to reassure voters today with his strongest statement to date on private property: he would not confiscate any if he wins Russia's presidential elections.

However, he did insist that some state controls must be restored.

Zyuganov has been struggling to increase support as President Boris Yeltsin's re-election campaign floods the country with warnings that the Communists would reimpose authoritarian rule if they win the June 16 vote.

"Nobody is going to divide or take away anything from anybody. We are talking about a wise state policy that would ensure existence of all forms of property and management," Zyuganov said in one of the free radio campaign spots allowed candidates.

Opinion polls show Yeltsin overtaking Zyuganov in recent weeks. Yeltsin is dominating the campaign, setting the agenda with warnings that the Communists would end personal freedoms and plunge the country into war.

Both candidates are fighting for the support of moderate and undecided voters who are likely to decide the outcome of the election, which is widely expected to go to a second round between Yeltsin and Zyuganov.

Campaigning in Siberia, Zyuganov said 35 million or 40 million people may vote Communist, and if they think the returns are rigged "they may just take to the streets" to "demand that our will be respected," the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

But, he added, "There'll be no civil war."

Reformist candidate Grigory Yavlinsky today accused Yeltsin of authoritarianism, saying the election campaign is unfair. He cited Yeltsin's lavish spending promises and domination of media coverage.

"The candidates don't have equal chances — it's not a free election," Yavlinsky told a news conference.

Zyuganov, dogged by Russians' memories of authoritarian rule during the Soviet era and its ban on private enterprise, told voters today he favored a mixed economy with the state and private business working together.

But he still insisted the state must control such economic sectors as transportation, power generation and military production to protect national interests. He was also vague about how he would handle private businesses if elected, saying that "honest" companies did not have to worry.
