Boulder Dam Project Comes In From Comment From President Coolidge; To Amend Old Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Congress was given an actual start on its work today with the receipt of President Coolidge's annual recommendations for legislation and immediately many of the old fighting issues of the last session and of the last campaign were rushed headlong into foremost positions.

A new farm bill, without the McNary-Haugen equalization fee principle was introduced by Senator McNary, republican, of Oregon, who said it dove-tailed with the president's recommendations. It would create a farm board to aid in handling the crop surplus.

Kellogg Pact Submitted
The Kellogg peace treaty, calling upon the world to renounce war as a part of national policy, was submitted to the senate with a plea by the president that it be ratified before he retires from office next March 4. A place has been made for it on the foreign relations committee's calendar for early action.

Boulder Dam Came In for comment by the president, and no sooner had his message been read than Senator Phillips started a move to amend the swing-Johnson bill in such a way as he believed would meet expert and presidential requirements.

The house ways and means committee hastened away soon after the house had listened to the president's message and voted to hold hearings beginning January 1 on tariff revision. It asked that its

State Closes Case In Trial of Luman

Luman Testifies of Advances Alleged to Have Been Made Upon His Wife; Reach Jury Today

LAMAR, Dec. 4.—The state closed its case in the trial of Luman, 40, Garza county ranchman, charged with murder in the death of Marvin Breeding, 23, this afternoon and the defense had presented more than half its testimony when court adjourned tonight. The case was expected to reach the jury late tomorrow.

Breeding was shot to death in a theatre at Post, the night of August 5, 1927. Luman surrendered to officers, claiming self defense and charging that Breeding had made improper advances to his wife. The case was transferred to Dawson county on a change of venue.

Wife Tells of Advances
Luman testified that when he went home the night of the shooting his wife told him of improper advances Breeding was alleged to have made. He related that he went to the theatre and called Breeding from his seat. As Breeding came up the aisle, the defendant said, he made a motion which Luman construed as the act of drawing a pistol. The shooting followed and Breeding died two days later in a Lubbock hospital.

White Likely To Replace Negro As Customs Official

Hoover Recommends White For Inspector In New Orleans Customs Office; Suarez Is Named

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 4.—The prospective replacement of the negro controller of customs at New Orleans with a white man is interpreted by white leaders as heralding an era of white leadership in southern republican politics.

The power of Walter Cohen, negro customs controller and for a long time a favorite with republican administrations, is being challenged by his white fellow republicans. Word came from Washington today that both the republican state committee and the Hoover committee of Louisiana had recommended John C. Suarez, a Hoover supporter.

Don't Expect Successor
Cohen said tonight he had not been apprised of these developments and that while he was not a candidate in the full sense to succeed himself, he did not expect a successor to be appointed without being consulted.

O. A. Cotton, Louisiana campaign manager for Herbert Hoover, professed to have information from Washington assuring appointment of Suarez by President Coolidge.

Oil Play Excites Oklahoma Capital

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 4.—The first large oil well in the immediate vicinity of Oklahoma City blew in with a roar late today. Its black plume, waving 100 feet over the top of the derrick announced a new pool and sent a wave of intense excitement over the capital of Oklahoma.

The well was drilled six and one-half miles south of Oklahoma City. Its initial flow, estimated at 3,000 barrels a day, while the gusher was flowing wild, had settled down approximately to 1,000 to 2,000 barrels a day and it was turned into storage tanks.

Much Court Drama Promised In Trial Of Bartlett Man

Defense Counsel Promises To Bare "Lot Of Things" In Trial Of Man Charged In Election Bet Case

DALLAS, Dec. 4.—Conscientious scruples against infliction of the supreme penalty and fixed opinions in the case were so much in evidence that only seven of more than 100 veniremen questioned by counsel for service in the murder trial of V. Ray Adams, Bartlett Farmster, had been accepted for service tonight after two days of questioning by attorneys.

Three men survived the barrage of interrogations leveled at them yesterday. Four today were found suitable to pass on the issues surrounding the purported shooting by Adams of Orville L. Mathews, Dallas bank employee, on the downtown streets, Sept. 1. The state had exhausted six and the defense eight of its 15 peremptory challenges.

Hope for Completion Today
All but eight of a special panel of 300 talesmen had been quizzed and court attaches were ordered to bring all members of the regular jury panel who could be spared into the court room tomorrow for the purpose of selecting the 12 men who are destined to hear details of a murder trial that promised to be packed with all the elements of court room drama.

The four jurors accepted for service today were M. E. Alley, Dallas, field clerk for a light and power company; J. S. Vaughn, Mesquite farmer; R. A. Garrison, employed by a telephone company; and R. W. Norwood, who lives on a farm near this city.

As each prospective juror took his place and faced the searching eyes of the group of attorneys, he was subjected to exhaustive questioning by the defense on the laws of self defense and his belief in the suspended sentence law of Texas. More Hopeful View Is Given for King

England's Leader Said To Be Stronger Than Since Falling Ill; Appoints The Commission To Act

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Somehow more hopeful view of the condition of King George was taken late tonight after fear during the hope that he had lost ground in his fifteen day fight against congestion of the lungs and pleurisy.

It was understood that as the result of the natural sleep which he obtained last night and early today the king's higher temperature may be part of the anticipated fluctuating symptoms in the illness.

Temperature Rises
Although his temperature rose to 100.2 during the day, and persisted tonight, it was thought possible that the increased discomfort of the day and the higher temperature may be part of the anticipated fluctuating symptoms in the illness.

Unable for the time being to give due attention to the affairs of the realm—as the royal order expressed—King George appointed Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor and prime minister Stanley Baldwin to carry on his stead, their positions being that of counselors of state.

Judge Sends Wood And Dumas to Jail

AUSTIN, Dec. 4.—(P)—District Judge J. R. Hamilton decreed today that J. H. Dumas and Cal. F. Woods must remain in the county jail here unless they make bond before April 1, in the cases against them involving charges of murder and conspiracy to murder in connection with the killing of two supposed bank robbers at Rankin, Upson county.

Defense attorneys wanted the men kept here as a measure of safe keeping. It is understood here that the Upson district court's next session will be in April.

New Farm Relief Bill Is Given To Senate Tuesday

Equalization Fee Is Discarded In New Proposal

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—A farm relief bill without the controversial equalization fee was given to the senate today, but republican leaders still were pondering whether to attempt to obtain its passage in the closing days of the Coolidge administration or to await the extra session promised by Herbert Hoover for this problem if it is necessary.

Chairman McNary of the senate agriculture committee, co-author of the twice vetoed McNary-Haugen bill, sponsored the new farm relief measure which, except for being shorn of the provisions, resembles the old proposal.

To Establish Farm Board
Establishment of a federal farm board of six members, to be appointed by the president with the advice and consent of the senate would be provided by the new measure.

A revolving fund of $300,000,000 would be given the board with which to finance, through loan stabilization corporations composed of cooperative marketing associations and producers. The corporations would be used for the purchase of surplus crops in order to prevent a glutting of the market and of prices.

Whether the bill, which Senator McNary indicated has the approval of the Coolidge administration, is to be pressed for action at this session appears to hinge on a fight between republicans who want to leave the question to the Hoover administration which will come in to power with increased republican strength in Congress.

Prefer to Leave for Hoover
Back of the new among party leaders is a rumor from farm organizations who fought President Coolidge in his opposition to the McNary-Haugen bill that these groups would prefer to leave the inauguration of a new farm relief measure entirely in the hands of the incoming president. This view apparently is being taken by some of the Hoover leaders. Although no division between Coolidge and Hoover republicans may be said to have been drawn.

Meanwhile, Senator McNary hopes to call his committee together at an early date to sound out sentiment of the members who first must pass upon the measure.

President Names Chairman
Under the new bill, the president would name the chairman of the board at a salary to be fixed by him, while the other members would be paid $12,000 annually. The board would have power to select advisory councils for each commodity from nominations made by the cooperative marketing associations.

There is the cry of all stricken humanity. Mercy is that which every child cries for, when it falls, to bruise itself.

What mother is it that fails to heed that wail for help? With loving arms encircled around her babe, the mother cares and cuddles and croons and caresses, until the hurt is forgotten.

Mercy, too, is an attribute of Love.

The Greatest Mother in the World often has answered an oft-stricken world's plea for mercy in similar manner.

Coolidge Delivers His Final Message Of Administration

President Reaffirms Position On Big Problems In Annual Communication To Congress

Asks For Economy

Farm Relief, Peace Pact, Dam Legislation, Tariff And Other Questions Are Asked For Consideration

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—A reaffirmation of his position on the big problem of the day and a host of lesser questions were sent to congress today by President Coolidge in a message which will be his valedictory so far as annual communications on the state of the union are concerned.

With the end of his administration only three months away and with many members of the house and senate already turning their eyes to what the incoming chief executive may have to say, the president detailed his views on various subjects and on one, the Kellogg peace treaty, expressed the hope it would be ratified before his retirement from office.

Must Maintain Prosperity
Beside this proposal, he dealt specifically with farm relief, taxation, and economy, naval construction, waterways, commerce, Boulder canyon, Muscle Shoals and other problems. He wound up the message with an admonition to the country to bear in mind that "the era of prosperity" he ascribed to the United States "easily could be lost without unremitting toil" to maintain it.

The message no sooner had been read in both houses of congress before many members issued statements, some praising and others taking exception to his views.

Those to praise were Republicans. In most instances, and those who found fault were of the opposition party.

Regarding one of the outstanding questions which is agitating leaders at the capital—tariff revision—the president was silent, while on another leading question—farm relief—his recommendations were in line with those of previous years.

The president's communication was transmitted by special messenger to the two houses of congress. In the senate it was read by John C. Crockett, reading clerk, while in DENVER, Colo., Dec. 4.—(P)—A large portion of the west glistered in the frost of a cold wave that centered in Montana tonight.

Zero and sub-zero temperatures were the rule in many mountain states, the cold extended eastward into Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri, although temperatures there remained above the zero mark.

The weather bureau reported Havre, Mont., with 22 degrees below zero shortly before 6 o'clock this morning, one of the coldest places in the United States. Chicago, Minn., however, reported 46 below. There is no weather station there.

Construction On Subways To Start By First Of Year

Mayor Woods Says Work Is Likely To Begin Soon; To Make Contract With Railroad This Week

Construction on building one of the two subways at the intersection of Broadway and the Santa Fe railroad tracks, and at Avenue H and the Santa Fe tracks, will more than likely start by January 1, it was intimated late Tuesday, from communications received by city and railway officials, according to Mayor H. D. Woods.

First construction will likely be on the Broadway side. While this work is going on, traffic will probably be diverted around by the Avenue H route east of town and when that is completed Avenue H traffic will be diverted by way of Broadway.

Bond Provide For Work
The underpans were authorized at a bond issue for $350,000, voted on September 24. Detailed plans for them were received Tuesday by city officials from the Santa Fe.

"The specifications, so we are informed by the division superintendent's office at Station," said Mayor Woods, "will be received here not later than Saturday. Information has been received from the Amarillo Santa Fe office that the contract to be entered into between the city and the railway company will be brought here by one of the company's attorneys some time this week."

Three Are Released On Bail Of $10,500; Wurzbach Asks Court For Recanvass Of Ballots

(By Associated Press)
SAN ANTONIO, Dec. 4.—A battle in the 14th Texas congressional district because of the officially declared election of County Judge Augustus McCloskey, democrat, over Representative Harry M. Wurzbach, republican, climaxed today with the indictment of McCloskey and two other persons for reputed election irregularities.

The indictments charged McCloskey, his secretary, Charles Ramirez, and a former city health department employee, Elmer Wernette, with altering election returns.

Released On Bonds
Following their arrest Judge McCloskey, Ramirez, and Wernette, were released on bonds totaling $10,500 set in habeas corpus proceedings. McCloskey's bail was set at $1,500 on each of five counts. Ramirez was allowed bond of $500 on each of four counts, and Wernette $1,000 on one charge.

Unofficial returns in the election gave Wurzbach a small majority, but when the votes were canvassed by the county commissioners court, McCloskey was declared elected by 399 ballots. Wurzbach asked the congressional campaign committee, then in McAllen, Texas, quizzing witnesses over purported irregularities in the 15th district, to hold an investigation in San Antonio.

The committee agreed, and McCloskey and Wurzbach, among others, testified. Wurzbach charged ballots had been tampered with before they reached the commission.

Considerable agitation is prevalent over the entire state, Mr. Field said, about the R. S. SUMMARY

Market up about 15 points net from last night's close. Liverpool was slightly better than due and the American markets opened relatively unchanged. With the assurance of two more private crop estimates that were construed as bearish, prices sagged to new low levels March New York, dropping to 20.08 and March New Orleans going to 19.57. Here strong support was met and the rally put the market through yesterday's high. Norman Mayer & Co. wired today, "some early liquidation on bearish private crop estimates and ginning figures but market shows resistance to declines at this level. Favor buying on dips now."

The Fairchild Bureau estimates the cotton crop at 14,114,000 bales against 13,833,000 a month ago and ginning to December 1 at 12,407,000.

It is rumored that the Postek Bureau estimates that cotton crop at 14,388,000 bales against 14,410,000 a month ago and the ginning to December 1, at 12,500,000.

The average of five private estimates received to date is 14,078,000 bales for the 1929 crop.

The Fairchild Bureau estimates the Texas cotton crop at 5,020,000 bales and the Oklahoma crop at 1,190,000 bales.

Liverpool cabled "London bought cotton and shorts covered."

Manchester cabled, "Cotton mills in this section doing best business since 1922. Some of them are working at night."

According to the New Orleans Cotton News Bureau, President

Coolidge's message to Congress delivered Tuesday was regarded as constructive and caused some steadiness in the cotton market. The President said that business conditions were satisfactory and that he favored creating a federal agency to aid in the disposal of farm products.

New Orleans: Cotton goods markets of this country report steady prices and fair trading.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Dec. 4. (AP)—The "Bull" forces rallied in the last hour of trading on the stock market today after a jump in the call money rate to 10 percent for the third consecutive full session had demoralized their ranks around noon.

More than two dozen issues were elevated to record prices in gains running to an extreme of 36 1/2 points in radio. A wide assortment of losses running from 1 to 8 points remained at the close, however. Call money renewed at 8 percent and was stepped up a point at a time to 10 as banks called $40,000,000 in loans. Although the market had opened in a buoyant manner, without evidence of uneasiness over the record-breaking increase of $511,000,000 in stock exchange member loans, the persistent firmness of call money seemed to cause some misgivings.

It was said in banking circles that it would not be unreasonable to suppose that the heavy year-end money requirements may result in an increase in the federal reserve rate. One commission house stated in a letter to customers that they may see 20 or even 30 percent call money before the month is over. The days' news was particularly pleasing to Wall Street, particularly President Coolidge's message to Congress. A number of companies declared extra dividends, and the Missouri Pacific railroad instituted dividends on its preferred stock and started to pay up back dividends. The pace of trading was somewhat faster than yesterday, total sales

Radio crossed the 400-mark for the first time, touching 410 1-2, and closing at 407 1-2, up 44 1-2.

Chrysler was a strong point of the market, making an immense gain of about 10 points. General Motors recovered from early heaviness and closed a point higher.

In the commodity markets, the decline in cotton was checked and under good trade buying prices rallied around 50 cents a bale. Favorable harvest reports from the southern hemisphere depressed wheat slightly.

KANSAS CITY LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 4. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Liberal receipts and curtailed shipping orders resulted in another uneven decline of 10 to 35c in hog prices around the 11-market circuit; the days extreme top of 2.80 was paid at Chicago, St. Louis had a top of 3.75, while at Kansas City both packers and buyers bought choice butchers at 2.45; total offerings were around 155,000 as compared with 97,097 last Tuesday and 136,305 the same day a year ago.

Steady prices were maintained on the better grades of fed steers and yearlings but at several markets an additional decline was enforced on short feds; demand at most points centered on the better kinds of light yearlings; other killing classes of cattle were little changed; bullocks and calves moved freely at firm to slightly higher figures; stocker and feeder classes have been in limited supply this week with values firm; there has been a decided decrease this week in stockers from Colorado; choice to prime 1-185 pound steers in Chicago scored 17.50; bulk of short fed steers are selling from 10.50 to 12.50; the latter price securing good heavy buyers at Kansas City; aggregate receipts were estimated at 46,300 against 32,179 a week ago and 56,652 a year ago.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Dec. 4. (AP)—Short receipts of cattle and a small supply of calves arrived for today's trade. Plain and common grades of the stock formed the main section of receipts, but offerings included about seven cars of slaughter steers and four or five cars of slaughter yearlings. The few loads of slaughter steers exhibited moved rather slowly at prices that appeared steady. Onload of good cake-feds sold with a small sort at $12 and the plain grades of straight grassers on down to $9.00 and less. She stock and low cutters active and demand good at steady to strong rates. Good fat cows $3.50 to $3.75; bulk butcher grades around and under the $7.00 level.

Hog trade ruled dull at declines of about fifteen cents to a quarter, in line with a lower trend to values elsewhere. Good hogs in both the carlot and truck sections brought $3.50.

Hardly enough sheep or lambs on hand to test the market. The few sales made appeared fully steady. Good to choice short fat lambs in the truck lots sold up to $12.00 and a few choice short fat wethers up to $8.00.

Discipline Move On Democrats In South Is Opposed

Senator Harris Presents Formal Statement Asking For Harmony In Future Years In Party

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—An echo of the presidential campaign in the South came today in a formal statement of Senator Harris of Georgia in which he opposed any move to discipline Southern democratic senators who bolted the Smith-Robinson ticket.

Senators Heflin of Alabama, and Simmons of North Carolina, were outstanding opponents of Governor Smith but their names were not mentioned in the Harris statement.

"Instead of punishing the democrats who have differed with the party, I believe they should harmonize their differences so as to present a solid front four years from now," Harris said.

He expressed his opinion that Governor Smith "has eliminated himself from consideration" as a candidate four years from now and that entirely new issues would be made.

HONESTY SCHEME STAGED
Students attending the library last night who chanced to go to the lobby of the administration building found a sign which was the cause of much speculation. There was a box of large, juicy apples placed on a table in the corner of the hall and a sign: "Put a nickel in the box and take out an apple" stood near.

Whether it is the scheme of some one to test the honesty of the students, or some one trying to make some money on the fruit is the question. As far as is known no other scheme similar to this one has been staged at Tech.

Kills Daughter With Hammer

After beating his 12-year-old daughter to death with a hammer as she lay asleep, while his wife and 14-year-old son fought vainly in an effort to save the girl, Theodore Oakvid, of Bell, Cal., then slashed his throat, according to the story the mother told police. Oakvid is expected to recover. Hatred of the father for female children, sudden derangement from a case of influenza, and fear of the father that his child was mentally deficient are among the theories advanced for the attack. Photo shows Sophy, the victim, upper left; Oakvid, the father, upper right; Mrs. Oakvid and their son, Algrid, below.

Work of Society

Church Work of Women
In First Methodist Congregation Shown

Yearly reports which have been made in the First Methodist Women's Missionary society show the numerous activities of these women who have spent more than $1,200 on local and foreign work during the last 12 months and have more than $30 left in the treasury.

Sales and various other projects were employed to raise the necessary money in the four districts of the society.

A local report made by Mrs. Harry Hall included 1,743 visits made to the sick and strangers, the distribution of 717 garments to needy, 253 trays sent to the sick and shut-ins, 211 bouquets sent to sick people and $144.90 spent in buying supplies for people.

Buy New Carpet

Flowers amounting to six dollars were bought for the church and for funerals and $10 was spent in buying a paring gift for Rev. and Mrs. E. E. White. A new carpet was bought for the church rostrum and this cost $140.42 while the choir loft carpet was cleaned at a cost of $20. The society contributed $100 to the building fund for the new educational building and bought some church furniture.

In addition to these, the society served lunch to 85 Epworth Leaguers in the spring and served a banquet to the Tech Methodist students. Flowers were kept in the church for Sunday services throughout the year and District 4 sponsored a meeting in honor of charter and pioneer members of the W. M. S. celebrating the twenty-sixth anniversary of the organization here.

In addition to this local work, money was sent to the headquarters of the society in the Southern Methodist church, to Lubbock and for other foreign activities of the church. Several boxes were packed and sent to orphans and others.

ANNUAL PARTY

T. E. L. Class Announces
Date for Xmas Party

T. E. L. class members of the First Baptist church are to have an annual Christmas party on next Tuesday afternoon at some place to be announced. This announcement followed an executive meeting of the class Monday evening with Mrs. Dan Couch.

The Morning Avalanche
Menu for the Day

BREAKFAST — Chilled prune and lemon juice, cereal, cream, poached eggs on graham toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON — Cream of celery soup, croquettes, open salmon sandwiches, dried apricot jelly, tea.

DINNER — Broiled codfish steaks with lemon butter, rice, potatoes, kale in cream sauce, tomato and pineapple salad, cherry puff pudding, milk, coffee.

To make the lemon butter, which is spread over the fish before serving, cream 4 tablespoons butter, add 1-4 teaspoon salt and 1-4 teaspoon pepper and 1 tablespoon minced parsley. Then add very slowly 1 scant tablespoon lemon juice and spread immediately over fish. The heat of the fish melts the butter and absorbs the mixture.

Dried Apricot Jelly

Two cups stewed dried apricots rubbed through a sieve, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 2 tablespoons cold water, 1 orange, 1-2 cup boiling water, 3-4 cup sugar, 2 bananas.

It will take about 1-4 pound of apricots before soaking and stewing to make two cups of fruit with its juice, when sifted. Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Add sugar and boiling water to soften gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add orange juice and apricot puree. Let stand until beginning to thicken and then arrange alternate layers of sliced bananas and jelly in a mold first dipped in cold water. Let stand several hours to chill and become firm. Unmold and serve with or without a garnish of whipped cream.

Dried peaches could be used in place of apricots.

Spanish Moss and Mistletoe, With Fall Leaves and Christmas Candles,
Attractive Appointments for PartyMessdames J. H. Hankins, R.
A. Mills and J. T. Hutchinson Entertain Tuesday
With Xmas Luncheon

Spanish moss and mistletoe were effective decorations for one of the loveliest luncheons of the season yesterday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hankins, 2401 Broadway. Mrs. Hankins, Mrs. R. A. Mills and Mrs. J. T. Hutchinson were hostesses.

The Christmas menu was used in unusually attractive table appointments. Tiny red, green and clear crystal flower pots held place cards at each cover and a red candle burned in the center of each table. Throughout the house, red tapers burned, a Christmas tree glistened on the buffet, the moss and mistletoe hung from chandeliers, the mantel and at other points while wreaths hung in each window of the house. Combined with the moss and mistletoe were oak leaves and sumac.

Mrs. Mills, gowned in black velvet and lace, greeted guests upon their arrival and directed them up stairs where they were met by Mrs. Albert Taylor. Mrs. Hankins wore a dress of velvet and lace and Mrs. Hutchinson's gown was of black georgette and lace.

The three course turkey luncheon had the holiday colors of red and green predominant.

Covers were placed for Messdames O. L. Slaton, A. V. Weaver, Claude Hurlbut, John Sutton of Houston, Robert Strong, Herbert Maxwell, J. H. Stiles, Veltos Spikes, Frank Jones, G. G. Johnson, S. C. How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

One of the most frequent criticisms one hears of Americans in the continental capitals is that they do not know how to dress. And never yet have I heard this comment without wishing that the critical observer could step into any one of the thousands of American cities.

Small service such as running errands, drying dishes, running a carpet sweeper over the dining-room floor after meals, putting his playthings away—such things are good for a child. He should accept their performance as a matter of course.

But there is a good and sure way of turning him against all work, and that is by making his duties consistently disagreeable.

One little girl comes home from school at four o'clock, and goes straight to the kitchen where a pile of garbage from breakfast and dinner and supper the night before stands under the sink.

It is her duty to take it out to the big can at the end of the yard. Empty it, take it into the laundry and rinse it, and return it to its place in the kitchen.

Often there is a note from her mother, "I won't be back until after five, so pare the potatoes and put them on, or, 'take that pound of figs the grocer sent straight to the kitchen where a pile of garbage from breakfast and dinner and supper the night before stands under the sink."

I haven't a doubt that many people will be delighted to know that Lord James Heath will no longer be responsible for debts contracted by his wife, Lady Heath. Lady Heath is to English aviation what Amelia Earhart is to ours. She has broken the national altitude record and wields a mean control stick.

The people who will be delighted are that goodly number who, even in this supposedly enlightened day "get a mad on" whenever a woman seems to be getting a kick out of life utterly unconnected with dirty dishes and frayed socks.

And even those of us who are willing to grant the girls some intangibles and thrills apart from the dubious ones of a sole dose of domesticity, can't waste a lot of tears over an outside-the-home woman who expects her husband to support her. Still Lady Heath's aviation may have been the pleasurable rather than remunerative kind.

HARD ON HUSBAND

Wives may be interested in knowing, especially wives in the state of Ohio, that the law decrees in that state that it is utterly impossible for a wife to steal from her husband—what's his being hers. One Allen Schrock of that state, had his wife, Sophia, hauled into court charging that she had stolen $1,600 worth of certificates. The court ruled she could not steal what was hers.

This will be good news to the sisterhood that filches pants pockets. One wonders, though, law or no law, just what sort of a female cutsey would be made if husbands started stealing the wife's board from the cracked sugar bowl on the top shelf.

They're demanding a woman in the Hoover cabinet—"they" being various women's organizations and some wild-eyed feminists who clamor on the slightest provocation for recognition of their sex.

It's to be hoped, however, that the majority of women will resist the siren song of any woman in the cabinet merely because she is a woman as much as they would resent the appointment of a similarly disqualified man. If, however, there is a woman whose background justifies her appointment as much as that of any male competitor, let's hope she gets it.

CAREERS FOR WOMEN

Forty-three so-called "distinguished women" have just written another of those many "An Outline of Careers for Women" books, the assumption being that even as they have done so may the least of these who graduate from grammar or high school business school.

Among the contributors are Gertrude Atherton, Judge Jean Norris, Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, Norma Talmadge, Jessica Cosgrave, and specialists as buyers, dietitians, interior decorators, merchandisers, social workers—in fact, every occupation seems included.

And here's the warning that not the most painstaking follower of the advice given and formula laid down by these lady exponents of success will reap their same success. So many things enter into this thing called success, and one person's pattern never works again.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Fate introduces JERRY RAY, a girl, to ALESTER CARSTAIRS when he crashes his airplane into the camp she is sharing with her roommate, MYRTLE. She likes his pilot, DAN HARVEY, but Alester admires her beauty and shows her attention.

Unable to buy a gown for a party he has invited her to, Jerry yields to the temptation to slip one from the store for the evening. When they taut her for being "dry" at the party, Jerry drinks too much. A rowdy dancing partner throws her into the pool to revive her. Dan appears to help her, but Alester takes her home.

She is discharged from the store when she confesses about the dress. Jerry seeks another job and is surprised one evening when Dan calls. He proposes and she tells him she does not believe in love, but hopes to marry for money. He leaves her after a warning.

Alester makes advances which Jerry repulses. But when he learns that she has lost her job on his account, he becomes contrite and uses his influence to get her a place in a chorus.

Rehearsals are hard, but she is befriended by EVELYN STARR who is in love with JAIL THANE. Evelyn gives a party at which Jail takes exception to Jerry's presence. A scene ensues and Dan forces an apology from Jail.

Dan realizes that Alester is jealous and tells Jerry that she is bringing him to her feet, but to be careful of her reputation. Alester insists on driving Jerry to Atlantic City for the opening of their show, but she refuses to attend a midnight party he wants to give in honor of the opening event.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIV
Evelyn, standing beside Jerry, saw her start as Mr. Hule's words, "Well, what of it?" the girl answered the director. "I'm here when you want me. That's all that concerns you."

Mr. Hule glowered at her. "You'll be out of the show if you develop a cold," he said. "I won't have you sneezing around here."

"What do you expect?" the girl retorted. "Standing around this barn for hours half dressed would make anybody sneeze."

"Don't try to sulk. I heard about that affair," Hule told her. "It's a wonder you didn't get run in."

"Too bad we didn't," the girl came back at him. "That would have been a good publicity for the show."

"Nice girl," said Mr. Hule. "I'll have to pass it on to Alester."

Evelyn reached out for Jerry's hand. "She's lying," she whispered.

Jerry nodded. She didn't believe the girl was telling the truth, but it could not be denied that Alester had given a party at which she was present. Jerry tried to tell her that it was none of her business, but she could not put down a feeling of resentment.

Before she had refused to attend the party he planned to give on the opening night, Alester had asked her to have dinner with him. Just because he had not liked her refusal did not justify his breaking the dinner engagement, she felt. But she wouldn't have minded if he hadn't consorted himself with a beautiful girl.

And this girl calling him Alester... several of the girls were looking at her. Jerry saw. She made an effort to hide her agitation.

The chorus worked for half an hour, then gave way to other members of the company.

Jerry saw the two men who had written the scores and lyrics for summertime down front with Mr. Weinert, engaged in heated conversation. They came up on the stage, presently, and Mr. Hule addressed them.

Then some of the principals were assembled and given directions for a rehearsal of the contemplated changes.

Jerry groaned. "If I could only keep myself somewhere for five minutes," she said to Evelyn. "I might survive."

"This is the hardest part of working on the stage," Evelyn answered; "this 'ghostly' waiting around with nothing to do."

At five o'clock, when Jerry felt that she would collapse in another minute, the entire company was dismissed.

"Get something to eat and then rest," Mr. Hule advised the chorus for the benefit of the new girls. "Take a bath and go to bed—no nightgowns," he added sternly.

"Nightgowns," one girl said sotto voce; "why bother? After this afternoon that would be too much."

Jerry glanced at the costume the girl was wearing. She had to agree that in comparison to it a nightgown was a full-grown wardrobe. When first she had seen it she had been glad she wasn't cast with the girls who had to wear it. Fortunately she came into the show too late for that.

There was a scramble outside the theater for rolling chairs and Jerry and Evelyn missed getting one. They were just turning away to go down to one of the side aisles in search of a cab when they saw Alester coming toward them.

Jerry regarded him with cold silence, but Evelyn greeted him pleasantly.

She did not know what he and Jerry had quarreled about, but she guessed they ought to make up. Nothing short of tragedy seemed important to Evelyn. Her own life, she felt, was a tragedy—a tragedy of folly.

"May I drive you to your hotel?" Alester asked, looking at Evelyn. "We'll be glad to have you," she answered cordially. "Come."

Jerry: we haven't much time."

Jerry did not wish to create a scene. She went along as Alester led the way to the black roadster and sat between him and Evelyn without protest when the latter stepped aside to allow her to get into the car first.

"Shall we stop at the Ambassador for a bite to eat?" Alester asked, turning to Jerry.

She saw that his eyes were rimmed with shadows and that he looked haggard beneath his fresh grooming.

She shook her head. "There's a little place across the street from the Everett," she said. "You can drop us there."

Alester understood that she didn't want to have tea, or supper, or dinner, or whatever it was with him. He set his lips in hard lines.

He guessed she'd heard about last night's party. Well, she'd have to learn that he was accustomed to do as he pleased about such things.

He brought his car to a stop in front of the small restaurant with a suddenness that revealed his state of mind. Evelyn began to think she had made a mistake in letting him come along.

Jerry offered no objections to having him go in with them. She was not settled in any definite conviction about him. She had no right to be angry with him, she told herself—and yet she was. But she didn't feel as if she never wanted to see him again. Her inclination was to fight it out with him. But she couldn't do that with Evelyn present, and she didn't want to send him away until he knew what she thought of him.

Their simple meal of clear soup, a poached egg and milk was soon finished. Alester drank a cup of coffee in an effort to quiet his shaking nerves.

"What time are you going back to the theater?" he asked when they walked across the street to the hotel.

Jerry did not reply, though Evelyn waited for her to do so. The silence became awkward, at least to her.

"We can't say," she said finally. "But don't bother; we can telephone for a cab."

"I'll be back in half an hour," Alester said. "You won't leave before?" he added, appealing to Jerry.

"I don't think we could," she said dryly.

Alester left them at the street door. Up in their room Evelyn said: "Don't be too hard on him, Jerry. He's been brought up to be a playboy. You will have to lead him out of it and not try to drive him."

Jerry stood at the window watching Alester drive off. He had stopped to light a cigarette. He looked very handsome in his snappy car. There was an assurance about his movements that attracted her. Obviously he was used to having things his way, and Jerry was not immune to the charm of a personality that had developed from conditions utterly foreign to her.

That it was a personality that could not endure being shorn of power and glamorous background she did not realize. Perhaps Evelyn was right, she thought, and her prudery was silly when used as a standard for Alester's conduct.

But at least she could set a standard for herself. He should not make her break them.

When Alester returned in evening clothes to take them to the theater her anger had left her, but in its place there was a cold determination not even to be tempted to attend his party. She supposed he hadn't cancelled it.

Jerry had been thinking so intently of her own affairs that she had escaped the general excitement of the occasion. Even as she applied her makeup and got into her costume for the first act she did not feel nervous. Evelyn guessed at this and refrained from speaking about her own stage fright.

"Fifteen minutes. Fifteen minutes. Fifteen minutes!" Jerry knew the voice of the assistant stage director. It did not disturb her.

Evelyn put an arm on her shoulder. "It's always a friendly audience on the first night," she said soothingly. "but you must try to forget them, Jerry. Can't you think of something very, very important to you? How pleased your family will be..."

Her voice was drowned in the clamor that broke out among the girls with whom they were hurrying toward the wings. Jerry felt as though she were moved by some motion over which she had no control. She remembered that horrible moment when she had attempted to dance for Mr. Weinert at her first tryout. Would she be like that tonight on the stage before everyone?

"I'm freezing," she tried to say to Evelyn, but even her voice had dropped to a croaking whisper, she closed her eyes and clenched her hands, seeking self-control with all the power of will that she possessed.

A thing she used to say when she was a child returned to her. "Well, if you can do it I can." She opened her eyes and looked at the girls about her. They would go on and dance. She'd never heard of a whole company becoming paralyzed with stage fright. "If they can, I can," she told herself hopefully.

She turned her face to the stage. Two people were out there speaking their lines. Jerry thought their voices sounded unnatural and she saw a bit of business go wrong. But it did not seem to matter. The audience hadn't caught on. Perhaps they didn't watch so closely after all.

The rest for the chorus. "Well," Jerry thought, "I guess Atlantic City isn't going to pay so much attention to me—but Alester is going to see that he hasn't wished a flat tire onto Mr. Weinert."

League Officials Will Decide Lubbock Protest Today

Georgia Tech And Florida In Dead Heat For Championship Of Southland

Duncan and Frnka to Represent Lubbock In Meeting With League Committeemen In Quanah, 11 A. M.

Protest Based On Record of Bob Walker Alleged To Have Played Football In Sherman In 1924

Having filed a protest with C. E. Davis, chairman of the District One Intercollegiate League committee, concerning the eligibility of Bob Walker, Amarillo halfback, M. H. Duncan, superintendent of the Lubbock public schools, and Coach Henry Frnka will leave this morning for Quanah where the protest will be heard at 11 o'clock.

Basing the protest on the claim that Walker participated in a game with the Sherman second team in 1924, Superintendent Duncan filed the protest with the league officials yesterday.

On the heels of the formal protest came a dispatch from Sherman denying the claim that Walker played with either the first or second team at Sherman High in 1924.

The Sherman officials stated that the present Amarillo star was a member of the Bear Kitten team, a separate and distinct unit with no connection with the team belonging to the league.

Played In 1924
The game in which Walker was alleged to have participated in was a contest between a team from the Presbyterian school at Denison, also a non-league unit, and the Bear Kitten team, and not the Bearcat second stringers.

Superintendent W. A. McIntosh of Amarillo said last night that since being notified of the protest, every measure had been taken to find out about Walker's participation in the game back in 1924.

"After talking with Walker himself, his mother, Superintendent Pyle of Sherman, J. R. Moody, Sherman coach, in 1924 and various Sherman newspaper men, I feel sure that Bob is eligible. So far as I can learn, the game in which he participated had no connection with the Intercollegiate League. I have been informed that Walker accompanied the team to Oklahoma during the season of 1924, but that he did not play.

"Perhaps we have neglected our investigation concerning some of the Amarillo players' participation in games with second teams," McIntosh went on to say, "but we see no reason why this protest should go through.

League Confident
M. H. Duncan, Lubbock superintendent, appeared confident last night that Amarillo will be thrown out. Complete evidence has been gathered on the eligibility of various Amarillo players, and in case Walker comes through unscathed, other data will likely be brought up before the committee.

Superintendent McIntosh, Coach Dutton Smith and Wes Izard of the Amarillo News-Globe will represent Amarillo in the meeting this morning.

Although apparently confident that the Lubbock protest will be upheld by the league officials, Coach Frnka said last night that there would be no sour grapes if the committee rule that Amarillo should go ahead with their game at Abilene Saturday.

"I felt, all along that Amarillo shouldn't represent District One in the state semi-finals if there are ineligible players on their team. But if the Sandies do play Saturday, I'll be there on the sidelines rooting for Amarillo with everything I have.

Messrs. Duncan and Frnka will return from Quanah tonight.

EZRA MEEKER DIES
Picturesque and Kindly Old Pioneer Passes Away
SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 4. (AP)—That picturesque and kindly pioneer, Ezra Meeker, who had the heart of a youth despite his 97 years, laid aside his burden here today for his final rest. He died in Monday for his final rest. He died several months.

Unique Record Cards Had Seven Bosses In 1896

The St. Louis Cardinals' record of five managers in five seasons is unique enough but doesn't compare to the record the club set in 1896.

That season the St. Louis outfit had no less than seven managers. Between them the seven bosses managed to get the Cardinals out of last place, the club finishing eleventh in a 12-team league.

The season opened with Harry Diddlebeck on the job but he was soon shelved in favor of Joseph Quinn. Quinn fell in the bad graces of the bosses and was succeeded by Roger Connor.

Next came Arlie Latham. By this time the players were disgruntled to keep up with the new managers, but the end was not yet in sight, for P. J. Phelan soon took Latham's place. Lou soon went "south" in favor of Thomas Dowd, who was succeeded by Hugh Nicol.

There is no telling what might have happened to Nicol but by that time the season was over. The next three years, St. Louis had brand new managers each spring and in the two seasons preceding 1896 had had three.

That makes 13 managers in six years. All told, since the club was founded, in 1876, St. Louis Nationals have had 29 managers in 42 seasons of baseball. The managers have averaged something like a bit better than a season and a half each at the helm of the club.

Compare that with the New York Nationals record. The Giants have had the same manager in the last 26 seasons—John J. McGraw, and in that time won 10 pennants as compared to the two flags in 42 years for 29 managers.

Honorary Letter Awarded Nolte McElroy, Victim of Fraternity Initiation Early In Season

AUSTIN, Dec. 4. (AP)—Twenty-five members of the 1928 Longhorn football squad were awarded their letters by the University of Texas athletic council Tuesday night in recognition of their season's work in bringing the first Southwest conference championship to Texas in eight years.

An honorary letter was awarded to Nolte McElroy, Houston, 19, year old member of the squad who met a tragic death during a fraternity initiation soon after the football season opened.

Letters were awarded to Captain Rufus Kline, Austin; Ike Sewell, Willis Point; Tom Hughes, Texas; Bill Ford, Dallas; Orval Rhodes, Dallas; Herbert Tigner, Houston; Leo Baldwin, Austin; Steve Wray, Downs; Harry Phillips, Dallas; Condy Brown, Dallas; Nona Rees, San Antonio; Eddie Beular, Beaumont; Curtis Besty, Wichita Falls; Jack Cowley, Paris; Marion Mobley, Houston; Alfred Rose, Dallas; Mac Burnett, San Antonio; Baxter Shelley, Austin; Claude Meadows, Waco; Frank Eggen, Dallas; Milton Perkins, Austin; Rutledge Vinins, Little Rock; Henry Mills, Palestine; Theron Williams, Greenville; and Bill Kargrove, Houston.

Plays Fullback

Although he is only 120 pounds, Dudley Hornel is the regular fullback for Chick Meacham's New York University eleven. Hornel's showing in early games convinced Meacham that he was able to stand the gaff and, as a result, he was made regular fullback late in November. He is, needless to say, the lightest fullback on any major team in this country.

Minnesota's "Thundering Horde" Places Three Stars On Mythical All-Conference Big Ten Eleven

Indiana Is Second With Two On Team; All Others Except Purdue and Chicago Place One Man

CHICAGO, Dec. 4. (AP)—Minnesota's "Thundering Horde" which landed in a tie for third place in the freakish Big Ten football championship race because of a pair of one-point defeats, placed three of its stars on the all-conference officials for the Associated Press today.

The Gopher stars chosen for the first eleven were Freddy Horne, quarterback; Captain George Olson, right guard; and Kenneth Haycraft, right end.

Indiana was second in placing men, getting offensive Captain Chuck Bennett at left half and Claire Randolph, center, on the team. All other teams in the conference except Purdue and Chicago placed one man.

The selections were close in many cases, except those of Feiler of Ohio State at left end, Walter Holmer of Northwestern at fullback, Otto Pommerening of Michigan at left tackle, and Horne and Gibson. Those selections were almost unanimous.

Saints Play Final With Hill Billies

AUSTIN, Dec. 4. (AP)—Coach Jack Meagher took his St. Edwards university football team to Brownwood today, to wind up the season Wednesday with the Daniel Baker Hill Billies, champions of the T. I. A. A. The game was originally scheduled for Thursday.

With the exception of James, regular quarterback, the Saints are all in good condition, and they are expected to put up the sort of fight that has enabled them to outplay Trinity, Simmons, and St. Mary's in their last three games.

Tech Tornado Will Not Be Able To Claim More Than Half of Honors In Dixie If Alligators Remain The Same

Florida Meets Powerful Tennessee Eleven This Saturday And Tech Meets California New Year's

By ALAN J. GOULD, Asst. Press Sports Editor
NEW YORK, Dec. 4. (AP)—Georgia Tech's Tornado, sweeping along through the South but also in the general direction of Pasadena, California will not be able to claim more than a half interest in the Dixie championship if the Florida Hurricanes does as much destruction to Tennessee as it has to other teams in its path thus far.

So far it's a dead heat in the South. Tech doesn't figure to have much difficulty overcoming its old rival, Georgia, Saturday, especially since the Bulldogs have had an epidemic of influenza to top off a rather disastrous campaign.

Tennessee Powerful
Florida's hoped for clean sweep at the expense of Tennessee may be something else. The Volunteers have been checked only by Kentucky. They upset Alabama early in the season at a time when the Crimson Tide was looked upon as potential conference champion.

They have a fast, young array that will be making its last home stand of the year against a hard-hitting array that has scored more points than any other big team in the country.

Florida has been clamoring for national recognition all season. There will be no disposition to deny it if the Alligators beat the Volunteers decisively this Saturday at Knoxville.

So far as actual performances to no football machine in the country, including Stanford and Georgia Tech, has exhibited a harder charge, more or faster set of backs than Florida, directed by "Cannon Ball Clyde" Crabtree, 154-pound quarter-back, who kicks with either foot and passes with either hand on the run, is a Gas.

Bearg Resigns As Cornhusker Coach

Announcement of Retirement of Nebraska Mentor Writes Finis to 4 Years As Husker Guardian

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 4. (AP)—The Big Six football season will get underway next fall without the coach who directed the champions in the 1928 race.

When Earnest E. Bearg, Nebraska head football coach, announced today he would not consider re-election, he wrote finis to four years as guardian of Cornhuskers football destinies. Nebraska in the past season had a clean slate in the Big Six race, and of its four inter-sectional games won two, tied one and lost only to the Army.

Bearg did not announce his future plans when he notified the Nebraska athletic board he would not return. The athletic board at Nebraska said it did not know who would succeed Bearg.

far west for the New Year's day classic will mark the third time in four years that the South's banner has been carried against the representatives of the Pacific Coast.

They have a high standard of performance to follow, for Alabama, with Pooley Hubert tossing long passes, beat Washington in 1926, 20 to 19, and went back the next year to tie Stanford, 7 to 7.

While the southern delegation has never met defeat in this annual fixture, the same thing is true of the University of California, which will furnish the opposition for the Georgia.

The Golden Bears trounced Ohio State at Pasadena in 1921 but were tied by Washington and Jefferson in 1922.

SUIT ENDS IN DRAW

Plaintiff and Defendant Get Nothing In Verdict

Judge Charles Nordyke, in county court Tuesday, rendered judgement, in the case of Ben Clark versus Lawrence Taylor, suit for damages and counter suit for damages, stating that plaintiff be given nothing, because of his suit and that defendant take nothing by reason of his cross action.

The suit was for damages alleged to have been done to Clark's car by Taylor, when the same was rented from him. The cross action was taken when the plaintiff is said to have attached a 15-acre field of cotton to insure his damages, the defendant suing for $350 damages for seizure of the crop.

LUBBOCK PEOPLE WILL GET TOGETHER

Lubbock people may differ on some of the smaller issues but it can be very safely wagered that they will get together on the main issues of progress.

This was very plainly seen at the meeting held Monday night to take up the matter of paved highways. The proposition of Saturday was very decidedly defeated, but not because the people did not want paved roads and better highways. The program, the speakers said, was too ambitious, and they did not believe was best for the county to adopt, and so the majority of the voters seemed to think, but petitions are being circulated by the people who oppose the other proposition and we understand are being freely signed asking the county commissioners to order another election, asking for a bond issue sufficient to pave the designated state and federal highways through the county. Those favoring the first plan are also entering to the proposition, and it seems very favorable to pass this time with a margin over the necessary two-thirds, which will mean that Lubbock county will have highways paved three ways through the county, and the county roads will necessarily have to be dealt with later and separately.

Lubbock county is one of the important counties of the west, and especially on the Plains, and we are sure that it will be one of the first to put over the program that will make it one of the important links in the long highway chain that will tie the state and the nation together. With the new plan, the people throughout the country will be very well taken care of with paved roads, none of them having to travel a very great distance to reach them, and it will mean a great step forward when these roads are built. Should the state bond issue carry, these roads will be taken care of by the state, and the burden will be placed on the county tax payers, and placed on the users of the highways in the form of a gasoline tax, which is just, and right, and we doubt if much objection will be raised to that part of the proposition. A constitutional amendment, however, will have to be voted, and this may require some time, and Lubbock county cannot afford to wait till the state is ready to build roads in this way. We are sure that it is the proper thing to go ahead with the program as outlined by the petition, and get Lubbock in the list of counties that invites population and enterprise, and tourists through the medium of paved highways.

The Dallas Chamber of Commerce undertook to publish to the world a map telling of the favorable and unfavorable conditions of the various sections of the country, listing a group of counties in the map that were considered good trade risks and another fair and another poor. This organization has been hearing from many of the counties listed in the poor, and the fair group, and the classification, and expressing in no uncertain terms the unappreciated publicity that this map is giving them. We are of the opinion that this is one great mistake the great organization made in Dallas, and will have a tendency to hurt rather than help the city of Dallas as a trading center.

RETIREES WITH HONORS

Down at Mineral Wells on the first day of December a change in management of the Mineral Wells Index occurred, and Clark W. Wilson, founder of the weekly and the Daily Index, laid down the pen, and pushed aside the typewriter to retire from the newspaper business. Mr. Wilson was one of the important men of the state in the development of his section of the country. It was through his efforts that Mineral Wells is known throughout the nation as a great health resort, and his writings have been read and appreciated by many who have grown from infancy up to manhood and womanhood, and by thousands who have enjoyed his ideas and opinions on important matters.

The Mineral Wells Index was recently purchased by a newspaper corporation operating a number of newspapers in Texas, and a new management of the business, and Mr. Wilson retires to take life easy from now on out. We are sure that the rest is a deserved one, for any man who has been under the responsibility that a weekly newspaper and more especially a daily paper places upon them for 23 years without a vacation, for there is no vacation for a newspaper manager—the responsibility rests upon him no matter if a thousand miles from his desk, has had many ups and downs and has had many sleepless nights, and many hard battles to fight financially and otherwise. He has had to smooth out many of the rough places in the community, in a civil way, and his responsibilities of doing the right thing for the community has many times been upon him, and we are just glad to know that Mr. Wilson has reached that point in his life that he can now rest easy, and enjoy the fruits of his labor, and the very best wishes of the newspaper fraternity go out to him.

Happy Recollections.

An old-fashioned woman is one who remembers when a display of knees was "new," when a day was just a holiday when father would be home to lunch, and a man's razor was as sacred as his honor.

Wife—Yes, that's the arrangement.

Hubbard—And baby is going to mother's—so what about a nice, quiet rest at home?—Passing time.

A Washington Bystander

BY MILNE L. SIMPSON
WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—It seems fairly clear by now that twins and career diplomacy don't mix. That is, unless the lad with ambitions for a permanent place in Uncle Sam's diplomatic field force has an income of his own sufficient to piece out his government salary.

In revamping the service, boosting salaries, setting up definite promotion systems and otherwise regularizing that service, neither congress nor anybody else took note of the possibility that families might come two at a time.

Twins Alter Career.

The recent event giving point to these observations is the resignation from the foreign service of Alan Francis Winslow, first secretary of the embassy in Mexico City. It followed on the birth of twins to the Winslow household and despite the fact that Winslow was by way of being a man marked for steady advancement in the service.

He is a son-in-law of William R. Castle, assistant secretary of state, a veteran pilot of both the French and American air services during the war, had diversified experience and rapid advancement after he joined up with the diplomatic arm of government in 1918.

Then came the twins, and Winslow, lacking personal or family fortune, decided to get out into the busy world of private enterprise.

Precedent.

Nor is Winslow the first of the career service men to be forced out in search of more profitable employment by the birth of twins. Exactly the same thing happened to Cord Meyer, then attached to the legation in Stockholm. It was even more serious in his case, however, as he was a diplomatic secretary of the second class with a salary ranging somewhere between $4,000 and $5,000 a year and a considerable time to wait for any great advancement.

Meyer also was a coming man in the career service. That is demonstrated by the fact that he has been continuously in demand in connection with Pan-American congress matters ever since he quit. He has been recalled to active duty several times, to act as assistant secretary or secretary to the Washington government delegations to such conferences, the last occasion being at Havana. He also was slated for secretary of the delegation at the very important special Pan-American conference here in December which grew out of the Havana discussions. That December gathering has been given the somewhat roundabout title of the International Conference of American States on Arbitration and Conciliation, which sufficiently indicates its potential importance in Washington eyes.

It was this conference Ambassador Fletcher was called home from Rome to deal with as secretary general. Because of his special fitness for the task, the decision to assign him as state department representative accompanying President-elect Hoover on his pre-inauguration Latin-American good will tour, was a hard one to make. Without doubt the fact that Cord Meyer was available to take over the task of secretary general had a bearing on the change in Fletcher's orders.

But equally without doubt Meyer has little reason to question the wisdom of his action in barging out of the foreign service. A second pair of twins has been added to his household since he resigned.

HOW THE BODY REACTS TO TEMPERATURE CHANGES

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor Journal of The American Medical Association
And of Hygiene, The Health Magazine

Sometimes when one wakes up in the morning and steps out of bed into a room that is somewhat cool, he will immediately have obstructions of the nose, sneezing, the appearance of tears in the eyes and similar symptoms.

Sometimes if a shoulder or an arm only is exposed during sleep, the person will immediately develop these symptoms. On other occasions passing from a room to the outdoor sunlight will bring on an attack.

Dr. S. E. Roberts calls these reactions thermic allergy, a term which means that the person concerned is sensitive to heat changes.

Among the predisposing causes he mentions superheated apartments or homes with insufficient humidity, the chilled air of theatres and cafes, improper clothing, indigestions, diet, lack of exercise, improper bathing and infections.

Of course, the reactions here described are not the same as the true allergy or sensitization to food substances and plant poisons known as hay-fever or asthma. It is another reaction of the blood vessel system of the body to changes in temperature.

It is possible to accustom the body to cold, and the lighter clothing worn by women today is perhaps doing something in this direction.

The control of the temperature of the body lies in a heat-regulating center in the brain, which governs the supply of blood to various parts. If one sits all day in an extremely warm room, according to Doctor Roberts, it is to be expected that the heat-regulating center will become fatigued and will fail to function.

Many foods which one eats tends to heat the blood in contrast with others which supply different in the diet of the Eskimo, but are not needed in the diet of the American business man.

"Don't worry—he always brings his own bunk."

SO THINK WE

We think that meditation does not mean much to anyone any more, because they fail to meditate. Because solitude is a terror to most people.

We think it might have been true that there were earth tremors felt in Washington, but we would come nearer thinking it was vice-President Daves telling the Senate something.

We think that some one will come along after a while and want to raise a monument to the unknown voter who won the recent political war. We are in favor of it, too.

We think that the near three hundred American citizens who have to pay income tax on more than one million dollars, hate to pay it as bad as we do ours.

We think that things do not always sound like they are. For example, husband and wife are considered the same as one, but we have heard of a few arguments between these relatives that sounded like at least a dozen.

We think since President Coolidge has taken out license to hunt in Virginia that the state is possibly safe for republicans.

We think that just because a politician sticks to his bunk, is no sign that he is asleep.

We think that after all life in this great Panhandle State Plains areas things run mighty smooth an even. We hardly know how thankful to the untill we reach places and see some other sections of the country.

We think these grown ups can talk about there being no Santa Claus all they want to, but there is one thing pretty certain and that is, the picture is made to appear solid to the eyes. It shows different sides of the object, depending on which way one looks at the picture. Fortunately for most of us we can't be seen that way. If we could be seen as a "solid" we might show up empty. If we could be looked at through and through and on all sides, what about the blemishes—mental, physical, moral?

We think people who are not familiar with the various color houses, old land marks and other means of certain places in Lubbock will be very much pleased when it comes to the point that they can go to the corner of any block and find the name of the street and the number of the block, so they will not have to stop some one and do down a lot of different directions and descriptions to ever find the place where they started to go.

We think it will be a great achievement when some one is successful in making Charlie Lindbergh a Benedict. So far this has not been accomplished, but we are of the opinion that it will be accomplished some time in the future, and then we newspaper people will not have to scratch our heads to get something to fill the columns with. We started to say news columns, but did not have the nerve.

We think that "nobody" can enforce the Volstead law, but everybody can.

We think the Volstead act is a good one, and we are of the opinion that it will prohibit, when the law abiding citizens are willing to lend their assistance to the officials in enforcing it.

We think that possibly neither W. C. Geryg Hatcher of George Budd-Terrill will either get very far in running for governor of Texas in two years from now, but both these fellows are certainly anxious for some one to solicit them to throw their hat in the ring. Both possibly state.

The Way Of The World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

GROWTH

Not so many years ago a young man rowed across the Rhine river near the city of Lyons, France. His brother stood on the bank and took his picture with the first camera of its kind that had ever been made. When the picture was shown later in a dark cellar the friends of these two young men were astonished. If they could have looked ahead through the years they would have been more astonished. They had seen the first motion picture film.

Louis Lumiere, father of the movies, still tinkers in his laboratory in Paris. He made little out of the movies. He doesn't know one star performer from another. He rarely goes to the pictures. He has made a mild and uncontrolled growth of cells in the body. Cancer growing, destroys the body. Both mind and body can be destroyed by growth—the continuance and enlargement of a bad habit for example. Uncontrolled growth is dangerous, as fire is dangerous.

GROWTH AGAIN

Writing about a particular growth, one is moved to make observations about all growth. Growth may be a very terrible thing as well as a rich and desirable thing. Cancer is a mild and uncontrolled growth of cells in the body. Cancer growing, destroys the body. Both mind and body can be destroyed by growth—the continuance and enlargement of a bad habit for example. Uncontrolled growth is dangerous, as fire is dangerous.

CAMERAS

This column seems destined today to contain much about cameras. The American Optical Society, meeting in Washington, is shown a "solid" photograph. The picture is made to appear solid to the eyes. It shows different sides of the object, depending on which way one looks at the picture. Fortunately for most of us we can't be seen that way. If we could be seen as a "solid" we might show up empty. If we could be looked at through and through and on all sides, what about the blemishes—mental, physical, moral?

The magazine, Pictorial Review, gives every year $5,000 to the American woman who, in the judgment of a highly competent jury, has made the most distinctive contribution of the year to the world of letters, arts, science, or the social sciences. PRESS COMMENTS

THE SHORT SESSION

The final session of the Seventieth congress, which will open Monday, faces legislative and diplomatic questions of utmost moment. The session will last exactly three months, including the Christmas recess of about ten days, and the program includes appropriation bills totaling $4,000,000,000, and such important measures as the Boulder dam, and farm relief. The advisability of bringing up the latter is still a subject of controversy among party leaders, who assert that in the event the committee reports out a farm relief bill, it will be impossible for the short session to handle any other legislation.

The Kellogg-Briand treaty to outlaw war, considered the most important diplomatic achievement of recent years, will be weighed by the senate foreign relations committee, discussed by the senate, and probably ratified. Senator Borah, who opposes responsibility for failure of the United States to enter the world court, and the remnants of that band of senators who opposed and defeated American participation in the League of Nations, are evincing a more kindly attitude toward the Kellogg-Briand treaty, and leaders predict it will meet no serious opposition.

Despite the repeated requests from agricultural sections, administration leaders have indicated they will not permit the tariff schedules to be opened, asserting that in the event any effort is made at this time to extend the protection given agriculture the entire tariff fabric will be brought under fire and that several months would be required to work out the controversial features. In fact, their attitude toward the cultural tariff is similar to that in connection with farm relief—that the necessity of passing any measure of a pressing nature prevents taking up any controversial measure which might delay action indefinitely.

Political writers are forecasting that the short session will be replete with "plain talk" from both sides of the house. The breaking down of party lines in November election and the fact that four years will elapse before another general election, are factors expected to contribute to this predicted loosening of tongues. Loyalty to the Coolidge administration ceased with the November election, the republican farm bloc leaders assert, and they further declare they will be prepared to air the farmers' plaints with more vigor than formerly. Just what they expect to attain by this "airing" is rather indefinite, party leaders asserting it will be intended for "home consumption" only.

One subject above all others, President Coolidge has emphasized since he entered office. That is economy in expenditures. He is expected to have more to say about it in his annual message. Congress will give the most careful attention to anything the president may have to say along this line, for it knows the sentiment of the country is with the White House in the same program. The preparation and passage of the annual supply bills or appropriation measures will be one of the chief tasks of the short session. The house appropriations committee has had various subcommittees engaged on this task for some days. The preparation of the bills for the various departments is assigned to subcommittees of the appropriations committee, and when congress opens most of these bills will be ready for consideration. Efforts will be made by the leaders of the senate and house to hurry the annual supply bills so that all may be passed by March 4.

VIATION DECLARED TO HAVE MADE GREAT PROGRESS

By MAJ. CLARENCE M. YOUNG

Director of Aeronautics, Department of Commerce

(Clarence Marshall Young was born at Colfax, Ia., July 23, 1889. He attended Drake university and received an I. B. degree from Yale university in 1910. Admitted to the bar that year, he began practice at Des Moines, Ia. He has been director of aeronautics in the federal department of commerce since 1926. He served in the United States air service from 1917 to 1919 and was overseas 18 months, five of which he was a prisoner of war in Austria. He is a major in the U. S. Air Corps Reserve, and his home is in Washington, D. C.)

A phenomenal record of progress in all branches of American aviation was made by the United States during the past year. The growth of air commerce and aircraft industry of this country is due in no small measure to the strict enforcement of federal regulations which has inspired confidence in the safety of air transport.

During 1927 the American factories produced nearly 1,000 aircraft having a total value of $14,250,000, as compared with less than 1,200 valued at $9,870,000 during the preceding year. Exports of aircraft and parts during 1927 amounted to nearly $2,500,000, an increase of approximately $5 per cent over 1926.

Air transportation has now attained a definite place in the economic scheme of transportation. The established airway system is the backbone of our commercial aviation, although operations over this network form only one-tenth of all civil flying. These routes now cover 11,191 miles on which 27,817 miles are flown daily. Of these, 10,386 miles are under mail contract and 200 mail planes fly 23,224 miles daily over these routes. There are now 5,800 miles lighted, 1,500 miles under contract for night flying, and 5,305 additional miles considered for lighting during the fiscal year 1929.

The cities actually connected by the routes at the close of the fiscal year numbered 88, the trading areas served containing 80,000,000 people. By the close of the current fiscal year it is believed that almost all of the larger cities and many of the middle-sized communities will be connected by air routes and that smaller feeder lines will serve many outlying cities.

Among the interesting developments of the past fiscal year was al appropriation bills fail of enactment by March 4, when the life of the Seventieth congress expires, an extra session of the new congress would be inevitable, and this is what the administration leaders desire to avoid, if possible. No definite decision is announced, the short session may be relied upon to hurry through appropriations with all haste possible.—Brownsville Herald.

AD MATHEM

Off in the after days, when thou and I
Have fallen from the scope of human view,
When, both together, under the sweet sky,
We sleep beneath the daisies and the dew,
Men will recall thy gracious presence bland,
Coming the pictured sweetness of thy face;
Will pore o'er paintings by thy plastic hand,

And vaunt thy skill and tell thy deeds of grace,
Oh, may they, then, who crown thee with true bays,
Saying, "what love unto her son she bore!"
Make this addition to thy perfect praise,
"Not ever yet was mother worshipped more!"
So shall I live with Thee, and thy dear fame
Shall link my love unto thine honored name.

Christmas Tree Army Starts Parade From Forest-Clad Hills of Vermont To Five Million Homes of America

LUBBOCK, W. Dec. 4. (AP)—Down from the forest-clad hills the army of Christmas trees is starting on its first and last parade.

The little trees will find their way into 5,000,000 homes in America this Christmas, will look a few days in the glory of tinsel and colored lights, and then pass on. But they will have achieved immortality in the glowing Yuletide memories of millions of youngsters.

Axes Have Been Ringing
Since September the sylvan army of a thousand axes has been ringing through the forests of northern New England. Now the green hosts are being marshalled at railway shipping points. By the second week in December all must be on their way to market.

The green mountains of Vermont, sire, perhaps, the greatest single source of Christmas trees, five million trees are sent yearly to the Christmas market, according to federal forest service estimates. Two million of these, the Vermont forest service reports come from the Green mountain state.

Virtually all conifers or evergreens can be used as Christmas trees, but the most popular are fir and spruce. Fragrant balsam rank next and in some sections are prime favorites. Even pines and cedars are cut in parts of the country where harder trees are not available.

Is Highly Speculative
The Christmas tree business, highly speculative in the hands of a few big shippers in Vermont. They maintain a skeleton force of experienced men, depending upon sub-contractors for labor. Experienced crew managers are financed in the most productive districts but mostly they buy their trees at local logging points.

Cutting crews usually work in groups of four—two choppers, a snaker and a tyer. The snaker is usually a novice who drags the trees from under the choppers' axes to the tying platform where the tyer works in the center. The tyer works in the center and piles his bundles on the open side. He is the artist of the crew and upon his judgment in selecting units for each bundle and his skill in tying them depend the quality and marketability of the harvest.

Are Kept Fresh
The bundle piles are covered with evergreen branches to keep them fresh until the shipping season. Snow enough to keep the trees cool and damp is the wish of every dealer.

Late November brings the trees down from the mountains to the railroad stations. Here every bundle must be rigidly inspected by federal agents to guard against the spread of moths out of the state. This procedure adds almost $1,000 to the price of every carload.

Pumpkin Pie

Because Fall and Winter bring us pumpkin pies we can almost forgive them for their bluster and chill.

The flavor of pumpkin is so delicious that when made into a pie it fully deserves a tender, flaky crust which only a delicate shortening like Crisco can make.

Try the recipe below. See if you don't agree that it's the best ever.

Pastry
1 1/2 cups pastry flour
1/2 cup Crisco

Filling
2 eggs beaten light
1 1/2 cups stewed pumpkin
(sauce strained)
1 1/2 cups milk

1/2 teaspoon salt
Cold water
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon ginger
1/2 teaspoon salt

Sift flour and salt. Cut Crisco in with two knives until the size of small peas. Add water (4 to 6 tablespoons) to make a paste which clears the bowl. Cover deep pie plate and pinch with fingers to make fancy edge.

Mix together sugar, spices and salt. Mix thoroughly with pumpkin. Add eggs, mix well. Last add milk. Put in filling and bake in very hot oven (450° F.) until pie crust begins to brown, about 15 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate (350° F.) and bake until filling has set, about 30 minutes longer.

You taste your milk—
You test your eggs—

Crisco's sweet flavor will delight you!

Big Dough Luring Dempsey Back To Game, Says Writer

Despite Jack's Statement to The Contrary, Manassa Mauler Likely to Respond To Public Demands

By NORMAN B. BROWN
Sports Writer for Central Press and Avalanche

The most recent interview with Jack Dempsey quotes him as saying that he will not fight again, although he is keeping in fairly active training.

And despite this repetition of his stand you can still go on the assumption that Jack will appear in the ring—in ring togs—again. And probably twice.

The first time out he's going up against a "fair" opponent, to test out his punching power and those much discussed legs. But his opponent will be light enough that, barring an upset, Dempsey will drop him.

Then the ex-champ will take on any man Tex Rickard decides the public wants him to meet. Dempsey will be tackling a tough customer then.

Heavy Odds

He may be going into that fight with the odds heavy against him and with a slim chance of winning. But he will go in—for the $400,000 that battle will bring him.

Dempsey can return to the ring and go out of it licked without hurting his popularity. That popularity is so deep rooted that I believe the spectacle of the once great king lying prone on his face in the ring would only increase the idolatry, would only spread the halo about his head.

The advisability of his second fight with Tunney was questioned from the moment it was rumored. And rightfully so. But Dempsey was in a different position. His showing against Tunney in the first battle had been so pitiful that most fans accepted as a fact the belief that he had gone back beyond all hope of returning to good physical condition. The second bout loomed, at best, as but a feeble, "comeback" attempt.

Dempsey, however, came out of the second fray with many more honors than he carried from the first. He had knocked the champion kicking. But he had lost. Talk of a third battle met with little response. While Tunney still held the title he would hold the center of the spotlight. Then Tunney stepped out and left the game flat.

The crown he wore was the only thing that placed Tunney before Dempsey in interest. Tunney's departure left Dempsey supreme again. He is the only heavyweight in existence—and fighting trim—today whom the public in general would pay big money to see in action.

The public admits he is far from the Dempsey of old—he has been, if you will. But the same public feels that, as old, decrepit and slow as he is, he is better than any of the others now in the game—and that he can prove it.

They will not look on his return to the ring as an effort to fight his way back to another scrap with Tunney. That is beyond the end of the rainbow. They will be satisfied to see him come back, without the announced intent of resuming the throne he held before Tunney came along. They will be content simply to see him in the ring, win, lose or draw.

And don't forget this, Dempsey is a fighter, born, raised and cut out to be one. Always will be. He can't stay out—with the big dough calling him.

Vivid Colors, New Designs Feature Sports Togs

By HENRI BENDEL
Written for NEA Service

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Last season sophisticated women became bored with the similarity of all sports clothes. Then they, along with everything in the realm of women's clothing had a renaissance of romantic individuality.

This winter's sports things reveal a tremendous success along that line. Colors combine that never would have looked right a few years ago. Fabrics match up with silks. Woolens grow so fine and beautiful that they are plausible as chiffon.

The result is extremely satisfactory. The impetus given to originality in design is noticeable not only in cut of clothes but in the patterns of materials from which they are made.

Broken stripes, fine little novelty patterns, printed designs, varied polka dots, neatly colored patterns and real, old-fashioned plaids are with us.

New Fabric Combinations
Tweed, hand-woven jerseys, soft kashas, flannels, crepe, and velvets will all go South this winter in chic wardrobes.

Some will have flared skirts, some straight-line. Yokes play an important part. Collar treatments capitalize the high-low, the collar that fastens about the throat or opens, an off-the-shoulder. There is a tendency towards collars instead of plain necks. Kerchiefs or throws are attached in the back or on one shoulder, often.

Since yellow is an excellent sports color this winter a little two-piece model uses a soft tone of it with a flaming gold yellow that is the richest kind of color. The pleated silk skirt is of gold. The hand-knit sweater is modernistically woven into a geometric pattern that combines the colors stunningly. It is a severe model, softened by its quality and design.

To top this, nothing could be more appropriate than a little Agnes turban draped in a sophisticated manner. It is fashioned of one of the new woven silk meshes that are so pliable they make admirable media for hats.

A four-piece sports ensemble uses yellow, black and white in a novel way. Black crepe fashions a gored skirt, with a wide front center seam and silk buttons. A floured wrap, with black and yellow broken stripes makes the cardigan and the slip-over sleeveless sweater. White silk faille makes a charming little shirt-blouse, with a tucked vest and turn down collar and turn back cuffs.

A little Louiseboulanger sports suit, made of Shepherd's check in the over-popular black and white combination, looks more like a frock than a suit, so carefully is it tailored.

The skirt has box pleats on both sides and an elaborate staggered hem treatment, with bands of the fabric forming modernistic set-backs, around the skirt, low in front, high on the sides. The coat has cuff-links of black buttons and a square neck with black buttons fastening it down the side center.

A soft little bathrobe, hand-made, with very fine tucks and a square finished with a rolled edge of black goes with this. It has a soft jabot, with the same rolled edge, and turn back cuffs.

A scarf of black and white and a flower complete it.

Lubbock Farmers Buy Light Plants

As an evidence of the progressiveness and sound condition of South Plains farmers, between 300 and 400 Delco-Light plants have been placed on farms in this section during this year, according to Davis Brothers, district dealers for this plant.

During the past 35 days, farmers of this immediate section have received 40 of these plants, an average of more than one each day.

WATCHES "MAGNETIZED"
PARIS.—(P)—Half the watches in Paris are magnetized and keep poor time, says Georges Biquard, chief of the International Time Bureau. This is due to the growing use of electricity, he says.

A bronze statue, "Lady With A Dove," at Winston, N. C., has been brightened by a house painter's art. The lady now has auburn hair, a gown, and a more life-like complexion.

In 1927 London consumed coal at the rate of 50,000 tons a day; the total for the year was almost 1,000,000 tons more than 1926.

weeks and months and years—after the war had been almost forgotten by many Americans.

But the Red Cross does not forget. Then, just a year ago, when the Mississippi river flood wrought havoc over several states, chasing hundreds of thousands of Americans from their homes, stranding lives of thousands upon thousands of livestock; ruining a million farms; striking poverty to our own people, in time of peace.

Texas Aids in Flood Work
Texans do not think of the Mississippi as being near to it. Yet there were many Texans who joined with the American Red Cross and went into the flooded areas to save human lives.

Picture, if you may, the word by telegraph, telephone or radio, speeding to Texas from Louisiana, "The Flood is Upon Us. Send Help. Mercy."

Picture, if you may, a city of 70,000. Sleeping. Safe. Content.

With the receipt of this cry for mercy, this city, in the middle of night, awoke. Lights flashed from hundreds of windows. Trains were assembled. Merchants and professional men, laborers, and all, joined in the call for mercy. A trainload of automobiles, trucks, motor boats, food, clothing, everything, puffed out of a railroad station in a Texas city—Beaumont. Speeding to Louisiana, to a point at Lafayette, nearly a hundred miles away, this trainload of Mercy went.

Business men left their businesses to others. They joined in the work of driving automobiles into districts while away from Lafayette. Districts in the immediate path of the on-rushing waters of the mighty Mississippi, which had broken banks and walled its waves upon unsuspecting miles of territory. Thousands of people were saved from the jaws of death by the men.

And they did it at the call of the American Red Cross.

They helped to feed and clothe those thousands until the waters had receded. Women, too, were there. At work, also. Feeding nursing, distributing clothing and supplies. Living quarters were set up at Lafayette to care for more people than reside in the city of Lubbock.

At Port Arthur, too, near Beaumont, refugees came. In all more than 1,100. These were fed, clothed, some of them nursed by the Red Cross. By the people of Texas for the people of Louisiana. The call of Mercy again.

These things, when one witnesses them first-hand, can never be forgotten. And the work spoken of was not just for one day. It required weeks. In a few instances, months. Carloads of clothing and food were sent through the Red Cross from the cities to flood-stricken Louisiana Americans.

Red Cross is Essential
Without such an organization as the Red Cross, without the thought of Love in the minds of Americans, it could not have been done. It would not have been done.

But here in Lubbock, similar calls—not so extensive in emergencies, perhaps—are being heard and answered day in and day out throughout the years.

The Lubbock chapter of the Red Cross is more than that. It has the name implies. It acts for our city in the place of the United Charities, or Associated Charities, organizations some larger cities possess.

A drive is on here for $6,000—a small sum for the work to be done. And every Lubbock citizen is asked to remember the cries of mercy that the Red Cross hears and heeds. Every cent of this amount asked for remains in Lubbock to care for local charity work.

Business men have undertaken to carry on Lubbock's annual drive for the Red Cross. George P. Kuykendall is general chairman of the drive. H. L. Allen is chairman of the Lubbock Red Cross chapter.

A meeting of team captains, who will conduct the campaign, was held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms Tuesday afternoon. These captains are: L. C. Ellis, W. H. Rodgers, J. T. Trigg, J. D. Carrett, N. L. Peters, B. C. Dickinson, Claude Burrus, H. C. Ragland, Homer D. Grant, J. F. Rhodes, R. J. Murray, O. W. Ribble and Thomas C. White.

Each captain is to be assigned a territory to work in the city and will have at least six workers, or lieutenants, as assistants. The business district is to be divided into 12 sections, one of the 12 teams to work among faculty members of Texas Technological college and the public schools.

All captains and teams are to meet at 9 o'clock on Thursday morning, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms, for an informational meeting and will then go out to raise the $6,000 during Thursday morning. At noon they will stop and report back at the Chamber of Commerce rooms Friday morning. If details of these reports show that the quota has not been raised, or that the entire city has not been canvassed, the teams will hit the trail again.

NEW SITE SELECTED

Third Attack Air Group Is Moved to Shreveport

Birth Control Winning Favor

As a nurse Margaret Sanger first became interested in birth control, was impressed for furnishing information about the movement but continued efforts to establish clinics and is now so confident that the Birth Control League will continue to grow that she has relinquished her leadership and will go abroad. The founder is pictured above at up per right.

By JULIA BLANSHARD
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Margaret Sanger now proves herself a most modern mother.

For, feeling that the offspring of her life career, the American Birth Control Movement, has grown up to where it can stand on its own feet, she turns it out to shift for itself.

After one farewell tour of America, she will be through with it, she has announced.

It is 20 years now since Margaret Sanger, then a young visiting nurse on New York's lower East Side, came face to face with the horrors of poverty stricken mothers giving birth year after year to unwanted children for whom there was no food.

Started as a Nurse

She had been a private nurse. She had seen wealthy women have their children in luxury, happy in the security of wealth, luxury, position and knowledge of how to space their families. The contrast tore her.

So Margaret Sanger left her nursing. She went abroad and studied the birth control movement in Denmark, where the government ran it, and in other countries where it had official sanction and help.

Back in 1916, she started her lone fight in America. "I thought something would be done. If folks knew the truth," she said. In Brooklyn's congested immigrant quarter, she opened her first birth control clinic. In 10 days, 800 women had applied for help. Her work came under the eyes of the police. She was arrested and sentenced to 30 days in jail for violating the Anthony Comstock law that made it a felony to give any information on birth control.

Relinquishing temporarily the hope of founding clinics, Mrs. Sanger came out of jail to stump the country to influence public opinion on the problem of women's rights to bear only "wanted" children. She herself had had three.

Margaret Sanger's 12-year fight as head of the Birth Control League was one long fight for a change in public opinion. There are 22 clinics and many doctors today who are interested in the movement," she asserted. "I believe women are daring to assert that they are human beings and not biological slaves."

"Now I'm going abroad, probably to Italy. Of course, I can't promise myself complete forgetfulness. The Birth Control League has been my whole interest for so long. But I am, through in America, at least."

But, like the most modern of mothers, she wants to help her offspring get a good start on its independent way in this country.

Received Million Letters

So she has written a book, "Motherhood in Bondage" (Brentano's), giving excerpts from 800 letters she has received, constituting a cross-section of 1,000,000 pleas that have flooded her office from child mothers, from older mothers with large families and no money, from suffering women all over America begging for information on family limitation.

This is the first report Mrs. Sanger ever has published of her work in the Birth Control League. She declares her belief that its evidence will change public opinion on the need of legislation permitting the dissemination of information.

"My book shows women are becoming articulate for the first time," Mrs. Sanger explained. "Relief is bound to come, though it cannot come before America realizes it has child marriages and child motherhood comparable in its devastating effects to the horrors we lament in India."

GUARDS SEEK DUNN

Escaped Mississippi Convict Reported Near Town

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 4.—(AP)—The commercial appeal's correspondent at Nashville, Miss., informed the paper tonight that national guardsmen ordered out by Governor Hildebrand were en route to Nashville, to attempt the capture of Virgil Dunn, escaped convict, charged with the slaying two years ago of the Nashville town marshal. The correspondent said Dunn was barricaded in the hills near the town.

Adams Trial

Richards, supposed Klan leader of Dallas county and other figures of importance formed the basis for a grilling by Adams' counsel. The state confined its examination to the usual questions hinging around the death penalty when found justifiable and church and business affiliations.

Attorney Clash

Verbal clashes between Robert Allen, special prosecutor in the case, and Maury Hughes of the defense tended to enliven an otherwise dull day in which there was little but routine questioning.

At one juncture, when Hughes was asking A. P. Elliot, a fire insurance salesman, regarding a supposed election wager between the defendant and Richards in which Adams was supposed to have been the stakeholder, Allen leaped to his feet with the rejoinder that "there is a sharp issue regarding this Richards bet."

"We are going to present a lot of things that haven't been bared," the defense attorney countered, and a storm of indignant replies from the prosecution table almost drowned out a court order for quietude.

Throughout the tedious day, Adams sat by the side of his legal advisors and rarely moved his gaze from the face of the men who are determining whether he was justified in firing the shots that snuffed out the Dallas banker's life. When ever defense counsel whispered to him to act on the acceptability of a juror, it was Adams who raised his eyebrows at the juror.

During the morning hours his wife, mother and tiny child, a girl, sat beside him, but throughout the afternoon he was alone save his attorneys.

Congress

life be extended after March 4 so that it could continue the task during the summer.

Legislative Activity Ranges
The range of legislative activity covered many other subjects, although neither senate nor house held extended sessions. After the Coolidge message had been ready both adjourned out of respect for members who had died in recent months, but in committee rooms as well as cloak rooms business actually was well under way.

Some new legislative subjects which may appear later on the floor were outlined in the senate and house office buildings. The naval committee of the house placed itself on record as desirous of having the 5-5-3 naval ratio between the United States, Great Britain and Japan extended to ships which were not so specified in the Washington naval arms conference.

The reading of the president's message was punctuated with applause in both the house and senate. Some of the democrats, freshly returned from a disastrous campaign, chuckled a bit at the beginning, but on the whole there was a quiet decorum as the clerks read the document droned away.

There was a variety of comment on the president's utterances, especially from the senate side. Senator Robinson, the unsuccessful democratic vice presidential nominee, found them not to his liking while Senator Norris, republican of Nebraska, who worked for Governor Smith likewise found them distasteful as a whole. Republican stalwarts, such as Smoot of Utah, were high in their praise.

The second day of the session found the legislative priority table with no material change. Senator Johnson of California, with his Swing-Johnson Boulder Canyon Dam construction project, holds the floor, and in the immediate background measures such as the naval construction bill for new cruisers, the Kellogg pact and others are awaiting their turn.

ers court, and McCloskey said if they had been changed the changes had been made without his knowledge or consent. The committee adjourned, intimating that the evidence would be retained for presentation to the event Wurzbach contested McCloskey's election in the house, as the republican congressman had said he would.

A court of inquiry subsequently was held, and the evidence placed before the grand jury, which indicted the three men.

the house this was done by William Tyler park, veteran chief clerk.

Recommend Dam Bill
In the message, Mr. Coolidge, without mentioning any particular bill, recommended that congress pass a bill to construct a dam for irrigation, flood control and water purposes on the Colorado river "which will protect the rights of the states, discharge the necessary government functions and leave the electrical field to private enterprise."

He also suggested the lease of Muscle Shoals for the production of nitrates and declared himself against making this property the "vehicle for putting the United States government indiscriminately into the private and retail field of power distribution and nitrate sales."

Should Continue Economy
Mr. Coolidge told congress a continued economy in government expenditures should be practiced and advised that the present treasury surplus in his opinion would not permit a tax cut at this time.

Even as the man who will succeed him in the White House is traveling in South America with words of good will, President Coolidge devoted a good share of his message to topics of interest to the relations of this country with the republics to the south. At the same time, he described the foreign relations of the United States generally as peaceful, and said that the problems which a short time ago appeared ominous are "yielding to the touch of manifest friendship."

After urging approval of the Kellogg treaty, Mr. Coolidge took up the naval bill calling for construction of fifteen cruisers and one aircraft carrier and asked for its enactment.
