US eases crude oil export ban, allows trading with Mexico

Pemex sought to import about 100,000 barrels of light crude a day from the US

By Josh Lederman
Associated Press

EDGARTOWN, Mass. — The Obama administration approved limited crude oil trading with Mexico on Friday, further easing the longstanding U.S. ban on crude exports that has drawn consternation from Republicans and energy producers.

Mexico's state-run oil company Petroleos Mexicanos, or Pemex, had sought to import about 100,000 barrels of light crude a day and proposed a deal last year in which Mexico would trade its own heavier crude for lighter U.S. crude. A major crude exporter for decades, Mexico has seen its oil production fall in recent years.

The license applications to be approved by the U.S. Commerce Department allow for the exchange of similar amounts of U.S. and Mexican crude, said a senior Obama administration official, who wasn't authorized to comment by name and spoke on condition of anonymity. The official didn't disclose whether all 100,000 barrels requested would be allowed.

While the Commerce Department simultaneously rejected other applications for crude exports that violated the ban, the move to allow trading with Mexico marked a significant shift and an additional sign that the Obama administration may be open to loosening the export ban. Exchanges of oil are one of a handful of exemptions permitted under the export ban put in place by Congress.

The export ban is a relic of the 1970s, after an OPEC oil embargo led to fuel rationing, high prices and iconic images of long lines of cars waiting to fuel up. But Republicans, including House Speaker John Boehner, have said those days are long gone, arguing that lifting the ban could make the U.S. an energy superpower and boost the economy.

Republicans from energy-producing states hailed the decision, as did trade groups representing the oil industry. Sen. Lisa Murkowski of Alaska, who has pushed for lifting the ban, called it a positive step but added that she would still push for full repeal "as quickly as possible."

"Trade with Mexico is a long-overdue step that will benefit our economy and North American energy security, but we shouldn't stop there," said Louis Finkel, executive vice president of the American Petroleum Institute.

But environmental groups have opposed lifting the ban out of concern it would spur further drilling for crude oil in the U.S. Pemex's proposal has also drawn criticism in Mexico, where residents are sensitive about the country's falling oil production despite warnings from officials that Mexico could become a net importer if it doesn't explore new oil reserves.

The move to trade crude with Mexico comes as the Obama administration weighs a long-delayed decision about whether to approve the Keystone XL pipeline. That proposed project would carry crude oil from Canada's tar sands to refineries on the Texas Gulf Coast, so the influx of heavy crude from Mexico could play into a decision about whether the controversial pipeline is necessary.

Last month a Senate panel approved a bill championed by Murkowski that would lift the 40-year-old-ban — plus open more areas of the Arctic, Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean to oil and gas exploration. No Democrats on the committee voted for the bill. The environmental group Oceana called it "a massive give-away to Big Oil."

PEACOCK PETITION

Petition surfaces asking to 'save the peacocks'

From staff reports

A dispute between a Midland property owner and the city of Midland is bound for municipal court next week, and at the center of the dispute is a muster of peacocks.

On Thursday night, a Change.org petition titled "Save the Peacocks in Trinity Estates" started making the rounds on social media. The petition collected more than 1,300 supporters in 24 hours.

The petition specifically states:

"The city is taking the owner of these beautiful birds that have delighted our community for more than 30 years to court on August 18, 2015. These birds have brought joy to thousands of children and families over the years and it is so sad that the city suddenly has a problem with them. Please help us protect the beautiful, neighborhood Peacocks of Trinity Estates. These peacocks are long established residents of the neighborhood. They are part of the community and history of our town. Many of us have grown up alongside them and enjoy the sights and sounds they bring to so many generation after generation. They are a unique part of growing up in Midland, and I know I am not the only one who has left their home for no other reason than

Permian Basin adds one rig this week

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the Permian Basin increased one this week to 155, according to the weekly rotary rig count report released Friday by Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

District 8 added five rigs this week. Midland County's count was 40, up three. Ector County held steady at two rigs.

For rigs operating in the Permian Basin, there was one rig in District 7B, unchanged; 32 in District 7C, down two; and 17 in District 8A, unchanged, for a Texas total of 203, up two. In New Mexico, there were 49 rigs operating in the Permian, down two.

The Permian Basin had 558 rigs at this time last year.

Texas and New Mexico

Texas added six rigs this week, raising its statewide total to 389.

The Eagle Ford re-entered triple digits after the addition of three rigs raised its count to 101. The Haynesville idled one rig, lowering its count to 30. The Granite Wash also idled one rig, bringing its count to 16.

The Barnett added two rigs, giving it 10 rigs. The last time the Barnett had a double-digit rig count was the week ending Feb. 20, when 11 rigs were reported.

New Mexico had 52 rigs statewide, down two.

At this time last year, there were 901 rigs in Texas and 94 rigs in New Mexico.

Susan Newhouse, wife of publishing magnate, dies in NY

By David B. Caruso
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The philanthropist Susan Newhouse, wife of billionaire publishing magnate Donald Newhouse, died Thursday at her home in New York City following a long illness.

She was 80 and had primary progressive aphasia, a disease that disables the part of the brain that processes speech and language, her husband said.

During her life, Newhouse poured money and time into colleges, libraries, theaters and other charitable endeavors. She served as a trustee or board member at Wellesley College; the New York Public Library; the Lincoln Center Theater; the Collegiate School; her Manhattan synagogue, Temple Emanu-el; and the Paper Bag Players, a children's theater group.

In 1976, she helped ballet dancer Jacques d-Amboise found the National Dance Institute, which today offers free programs annually to thousands of public school children. Newhouse was involved with the organization for three decades.

She was also a longtime chairman of The Fresh Air Fund, a nonprofit group that has been sending poor city kids on summer vacations with families in the country since the late 19th century.

"We loved the program. We loved the kids. And we eventually took a child ourselves for two weeks in the summer," Donald Newhouse said, adding that the girl remains close to the family to this day.

Born Susan Marley in 1935, Newhouse grew up in Syracuse, where she excalled academically at a young age. She enrolled at Wellesley at age 16 and graduated in 1955 at age 19, her family said. She married Donald Newhouse in Syracuse shortly after graduation. He said he proposed on their second date.

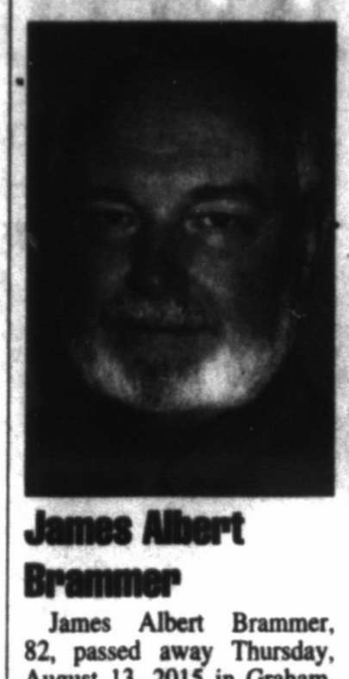

In recent years, Newhouse had been dealing with what her husband called "the horror" of primary progressive aphasia. He pledged to work with a research funding organization, The Association for Frontotemporal Degeneration, to find a cure.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by sister Nanci Bronsteen; her children, Steven Newhouse, Michael Newhouse and Katherine Newhouse Mele; and six grandchildren.

Donald Newhouse, along with his brother Samuel Newhouse, owns Advance Publications, which owns dozens of U.S. newspapers, a cable TV company and Conde Nast, publisher of magazines including Vogue and Vanity Fair. He was the chairman of the board of The Associated Press from 1997 to 2002.

"Sue was a wonderful and kind person who participated with great delight in AP events and trips," AP Chairman and CEO Gary Pruitt said in a letter Friday.

James Albert Brammer

James Albert Brammer, 82, passed away Thursday, August 13, 2015 in Graham.

Funeral services will be held Sunday, August 16, 2015 at 2:00 p.m. in Morrison Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will follow in Pioneer Cemetery under the direction of Morrison Funeral Home.

Jim was born February 9, 1933 in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma to the late Ulysses J. and Jessie (Carlin) Brammer of Odessa. He worked his entire adult life in the "oil patch" and was respected by his peers for his knowledge in gas measurement. He loved to hunt and fish and compete in Bar-B-Que cook-offs. He was known for his quick wit and sense of humor.

Jim was preceded in death by his parents; his brother, Jake Brammer; his sister, Alice Marie Johnson; his son, James Albert Brammer, Jr.; and daughter, Robin Mahan.

He is survived by his wife, Viola of Graham; three sons, Richard and wife, Sharon of Abilene, Jeff and wife, Kelly of Midland, and John Mahan of Graham; and by two daughters, Susan Diane Brammer Wooten and husband, Bill of Odessa and Malinda Mahan of Abilene. He also leaves behind 19 grandchildren and 27 great-grandchildren.

Family visitation will be held Saturday from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. at the funeral home.

Lela Pearl Allen Warwick

Lela Pearl Allen, Warwick, of Midland, Texas, died peacefully in her sleep on August 12, 2015 at the age of 80.

Lela is survived by her daughters, Pamela Jean Baker of Stanton, Texas, and Tamara Lynne Cortimilia of Midland; her five grandchildren, Scott Baker of Odessa, Texas, Penny Baker DeArmond of Keller, Texas, Bryan Cortimilia of Plano, Texas, Kristin Cortimilia Sessoms of Benbrook, Texas, and Michael Cortimilia of Atlanta, Georgia; and by 12 great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Robert Warwick of Lewisville, Texas; and grandson, Matt Baker of Odessa.

Lela was born on March 12, 1935 in Jacksonville, Texas. She grew up in Tyler, Texas and San Diego, California. She worked many years with Southwestern Bell before going into real estate. After closing her real estate brokerage in Dallas, she joined her husband in a business venture, Texas Rose Productions. She sold that business and retired in Odessa in 2003.

Lela was a member of Crossroads Fellowship in Odessa, where she volunteered weekly as a receptionist. She passed away after a long battle with COPD. She enjoyed playing board games with her family or friends at Prime Time. Her all-time favorite hobby was cooking and enjoying what others cooked.

A graveside is scheduled for 10 a.m., Saturday, August 15 at Evergreen Cemetery in Stanton, followed by a memorial service at Crossroads Fellowship in Odessa at 12 noon.

Bishop in Paraguay ousted by Pope Francis dies at 69

By Pedro Servin
Associated Press

ASUNCION, Paraguay — Rogelio Livieres Plano, a former bishop in Paraguay who was revered by some for building a successful seminary but who was ousted by Pope Francis amid several controversies, has died. He was 69.

Livieres Plano died on Friday in a hospital in Buenos Aires, Argentina, from complications related to diabetes, Asuncion Archbishop Edmundo Valenzuela told The Associated Press.

Valenzuela said a group of Paraguayan clergy recently visited Livieres Plano in Buenos Aires.

"Happily we were able to say goodbye to our brother Rogelio" before he died, said Valenzuela.

Livieres Plano was a member of the conservative Opus Dei movement and spent 10 years overseeing the diocese of Ciudad del Este, a sprawling city in eastern Paraguay that borders Brazil.

He was ousted in September by Francis, and the Holy See has never specified why. The bishop asserted he had been "persecuted" for his conservative orthodoxy by liberal parishioners and fellow bishops.

An Associated Press review in June found that the bishop made several questionable spending decisions during his tenure. Those included failing to use a $350,000 donation for its intended purpose of helping poor families, selling diocese properties without Vatican approval and using diocese funds to pay his brother for unspecified services.

Nearly $1 million in debt came to light after Livieres Plano was removed.

Bishop Guillermo Steckling, who took over the diocese last year, acknowledged spending irregularities of his predecessor during in an interview with the AP in May. However, he said the church had no intention of investigating or trying to bring charges against Livieres Plano because the diocese needed to turn the page.

Born in Corrientes, Argentina, Livieres Plano spent much of his life in neighboring Paraguay. He studied law at the Catholic University of Asuncion and in 1978 was ordained a priest.

In 2004, he was named bishop of Ciudad del Este. He founded the successful San Jose seminary, notable for the large number of men it attracted at a time of widespread shortages of priests around the world.

However, he frequently clashed with some parishioners on several issues, from seminary management to his decision to invite the Rev. Carlos Urrutigoity to the diocese. Urrutigoity, originally from Argentina, had been accused of molesting seminarians in Scranton, Pennsylvania. He denied the allegations and the case against Urrutigoity and another priest was eventually settled.

Livieres Plano also had a very public dispute with the Rev. Pastor Cuquejo, at the time the archbishop of Asuncion. At one point, Livieres Plano accused Cuquejo of being gay.

Valenzuela said the former bishop will be buried in a cemetery in the Recoleta neighborhood of Buenos Aires.

Ann McGovern, writer of 'Stone Soup' and other books, dies at 85

By Elaine Woo
Los Angeles Times

Ann McGovern, a globe-trotting, scuba-diving children's book author who delved into biography, nature and folklore during a prolific career that produced a number of perennial favorites, died Saturday in New York. She was 85.

The cause was cancer, said her son, Peter A. McGovern.

With more than 50 children's titles to her credit, McGovern was known to generations of young readers for her bestselling "Stone Soup," based on a fable about strangers tricked into sharing food. First published in 1968, it was reprinted in 1986 with illustrations by Winslow Pinney Pels and has sold millions of copies.

She also wrote "Too Much Noise," about a farmer's search for serenity in an overcrowded house. It has been in print since 1967 and won a Caldecott Medal for illustrator Simms Taback.

Her nonfiction reflected a deep interest in the natural world as well as "exciting children to be curious about the adventure of life and learning," said Dick Robinson, chairman and president of Scholastic Inc., where McGovern was an editor for many years.

Her spirit of adventure led her to ride camels in Mongolia, swim with eels in Egypt and dive in the Red Sea with Eugenie Clark, the renowned underwater scientist who died in February. She wrote books with and about Clark, including "Shark Lady: True Adventures of Eugenie Clark," published in 1978.

Her personal life was also a source of inspiration. For seven years, McGovern lived in a former home of poet Edna St. Vincent Millay. A little more than 8 feet wide, it was thought to be the narrowest house in New York. Her 1980 book "Mr. Skinner's Skinny House" was the product of imagining what kinds of people could not adapt to such cramped quarters, such as an actor who plays Pinocchio.

Ann Weinberger McGovern was born in New York on May 25, 1930. Her father, Arthur, who was a bacteriologist, died when she was 5. Her mother, Kate, was a teacher who sent Ann and her sister Janet to live with their grandparents.

Her mother took them back two years later, but she "never smiled and hardly talked to us," McGovern recalled in an autobiographical sketch for her website. She developed a stutter, which increased her sense of isolation. "My teachers never called on me because they saw how hard it was for me to speak," she wrote.

To ease her loneliness, McGovern read fairy tales and adventure stories. In school, she and a friend started a magazine for which she wrote poems and stories. She continued to develop as a writer in high school but struggled academically. She went on to the University of New Mexico, where her best grade was in horseback riding.

She dropped out of college after one year to marry Hugh McGovern, an English teacher. She was 20 when their son Peter was born and 22 when the marriage ended.

As a divorced single mother, she moved back to New York with her toddler and found work with the publisher of the Little Golden Books children's series. Her job was tedious — stamping the date on manuscript pages before they were sent to the printer.

Her break came when she overheard another employee saying that the company needed a book on Roy Rogers. McGovern stayed up all night to draft a story about the cowboy star. Pronounced "not too terrible" by an editor, "Roy Rogers and the Mountain Lion" became the first of several Little Golden Books she wrote while in her 20s.

McGovern later worked at Random House, where she screened manuscripts in the children's book department.

At Scholastic, where she worked in the 1960s, she created the SeeSaw book club for beginning readers.

She did not lose her stutter until she married Martin Scheiner, an inventor of medical electronics, in 1970. They were married for 22 years, until his death in 1992.

"She said he gave her so much confidence she didn't have to stutter," her son Peter said. Scheiner also taught her to scuba dive.

Environmental activist Wendell Wood dies hiking

By Jeff Barnard
Associated Press

GRANTS PASS, Ore. — Wendell Wood, a longtime environmental advocate and co-founder of the conservation group Oregon Wild, has died. He was 65.

His wife, Kathy, said Wood collapsed Tuesday hiking in the Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park south of Crescent City, California, where they lived since his retirement, and his heart had stopped by the time he was brought to a hospital.

Fellow activist Andy Kerr said Wood was a tenacious champion of ancient forests, and instrumental in Endangered Species Act protection for the short-nosed sucker and the Lost River sucker, two fish at the center of water battles in the Klamath Basin, and the western snowy plover.

After turning down a job with his family's furniture factory outside Los Angeles, Wood taught high school biology in Myrtle Creek, Oregon, for four years before moving to Eugene in 1981 to work for Oregon Natural Resources Council, which became Oregon Wild. It was three years before he could get paid, his wife said.

"He decided he had a higher calling as a warrior for nature," Kerr said. "We were all wanting to save forests and wilderness. We needed an organization and kind of made one."

Kerr recalled that at one point during the battles over the northern spotted owl, which ultimately cut logging by 90 percent on federal lands in Oregon, Washington and northern California in 1994, Wood informed him that they had just filed administrative appeals to stop 228 timber sales on national forests.

"I later was called before a congressional committee to explain that, which I happily did," Kerr said.

Oregon Wild executive director Sean Stevens called Wood "the conscience of the environmental community" who seemed to have eyes and ears everywhere.

Wood's efforts on behalf of fish and wildlife in the Klamath Basin in the midst of intense water battles and attempts to develop a ski area earned him death threats, fellow activist Jim McCarthy recalled.

Kerr thought of Wood as "the forests' best goalie," tenacious in his defense of nature, but with a lovable personality.

"He was tenacious in not letting them score, not letting that timber sale get through, not letting that road project get through," Kerr said.

Relatives upset family wasn't quickly helped before shooting

By Juan A. Lozano
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Relatives of a Houston couple and their six children who were fatally shot in their home can't understand why it took authorities four visits and repeated 911 calls before going inside, a family friend said Friday.

Jesi Greening, a spokeswoman for the family, shared with reporters Facebook messages that one of the victims, Valerie Jackson, had sent to her mother in Minnesota saying she was being held at gunpoint. One of the messages indicated Jackson was alive after deputies' first visit to the home on Aug. 8, Greening said.

"It just doesn't make sense to us that the house was not entered much, much earlier," Greening said from Minnesota during a conference call.

Jackson's ex-domestic partner, David Conley, 48, remains jailed, facing capital murder charges in the deaths of the six children and two adults. Authorities say Conley handcuffed most of the eight family members and eventually shot each of them in the head. His attorney hasn't returned messages seeking comment.

Killed in the shooting were: Jackson, 40; her husband, Dwayne Jackson, 50; and her children, 13-year-old Nathaniel, 11-year-old Honesty, 10-year-old Dwayne, 9-year-old Caleb, 7-year-old Trinity and 6-year-old Jonah. Authorities say Nathaniel was Conley's son from his relationship with Valerie Jackson, while the Jacksons were the parents of the other five children.

The Harris County Sheriff's Office on Thursday released a timeline of events from last weekend's deadly shooting that showed deputies made four separate visits to the house over about a nine-hour period before going inside.

Deputy Thomas Gilliland, a sheriff's office spokesman, didn't immediately return a phone call seeking comment Friday. But investigators have said that they didn't have enough information to go into the home until they saw the body of one of the children through a window during the fourth visit.

Greening said that on the day of the shooting, Valerie Jackson had first made three posts on Facebook, writing that she needed help, for someone to call police and that this wasn't a joke.

At 10:23 a.m., Jackson's mother, Barbara Yanske, got a private message on Facebook from her daughter that read "911 911 911 911."

At 10:27 a.m., Jackson sent another message that said, "He has phone and will ring. DVD has gun."

At 10:45 a.m., Yanske replied, "I called. What's going on?"

According to the sheriff's office, deputies first arrived at the home at 10:49 a.m.

According to Greening, at 11:57 a.m., Jackson sent another message to her mother saying, "Tuhey knck left."

"It's spelled a little bit funny but it's clearly, 'They knock left,'" Greening said. "That was the last contact we had with Valerie."

At 12:15 p.m., Jackson's family is told by the sheriff's office that no one responded when deputies knocked and they didn't have probable cause to enter, Greening said.

"How it wasn't probable cause when they are being told that someone has a gun inside, we don't understand that," she said.

Legal experts say that while police can't typically go into a home unless they have permission or have a search warrant, certain exceptions would be allowed under what's known as exigent circumstances, where there is an emergency situation.

Greening said family members called Conley at 12:40 p.m. and he told them that he was across town and didn't know where Jackson was.

Jackson's family made additional 911 calls to the sheriff's office throughout the rest of the day. They were told at 9:15 p.m. that authorities were going into the home after discovering Conley had a warrant for his arrest, Greening said.

It was at that point that the child's body was seen through the window.

Deputies tried to enter the home but were met by gunfire from Conley, according to the sheriff's office timeline. A standoff ensued between Conley and authorities until Conley surrendered at 11:58 p.m.

A funeral service for the victims is set for Monday in Houston. The family will be buried in La Crosse, Wisconsin. A GoFundMe account has been set up by Valerie Jackson's family to raise money for burial expenses.

Also Friday, the judge handling Conley's case amended a sweeping gag order that had sought to restrict reporting of the case. The amended order still prevents lawyers, law enforcement officials and witnesses from speaking to the media.

On July 7, immigrants from El Salvador and Guatemala who entered the country illegally board a bus after they were released from a family detention center in San Antonio. A group of immigrant rights lawyers in a filing Thursday, said that detention of women and children caught crossing the U.S.-Mexico border illegally is lengthy and unsafe, challenging the government's claims that immigrant families are held only briefly and that their detention doesn't violate a longstanding ban.

Immigrant rights lawyers say that family detention is still lengthy and unsafe

By Seth Robbins
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — A group of immigrant rights lawyers say that detention of women and children caught crossing the U.S.-Mexico border illegally is lengthy and unsafe, challenging the government's claims that immigrant families are held only briefly and that their detention doesn't violate a longstanding ban.

In a filing Thursday to California U.S. District Judge Dolly Gee, the lawyers also said the health and safety of immigrant children is being jeopardized by "hopelessly inadequate" medical and psychological care at the detention facilities where they say the families are routinely kept for more than a month.

The government has said the mothers and children are held for just weeks while their asylum claims are processed. But the lawyers said the families are held for longer because immigration officials delay the screening and processing of asylum claims, routinely hinder access to legal help and because bonds are too high for the women to pay to secure their release.

The immigration lawyers cited extensive complaints about health care at the facilities, including untreated or unrecognized ailments that resulted in children being hospitalized, lack of medicines, erroneous vaccinations and extremely long waits.

"Children are placed at risk every day," the lawyers said in the filing.

The government poured millions of dollars into two large detention centers in Texas for women and children after tens of thousands of immigrant families, mostly mothers with children from Central America, crossed the Rio Grande into the U.S. last summer. A third, smaller facility, is in Pennsylvania.

All are overseen by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement but managed by private prison operators. They currently hold some 1,400 people, down from more than 2,000 earlier this summer.

Homeland Security and ICE officials have said they aim to release families as soon as they pass interviews that are the first hurdle to being granted asylum. In recent weeks, more women have been fitted with ankle monitors when released from detention, sometimes under pressure and after bonds have been set, the lawyers said in the filing.

In late July, Gee ruled that Homeland Security should release all children from the centers "without unnecessary delay," along with any mothers not deemed a flight or national security risk. Many have petitioned for asylum after fleeing gang and domestic violence back home.

Last week, Homeland Security attorneys asked the judge to reconsider her ruling, saying detention times have been shortened and that further limiting family detention could spark another surge in immigrants from Central America.

The lawyers asked the judge to implement her earlier ruling calling for the quick release of detained women and children. Peter Schey, one of the lead attorneys and executive director of the Center for Human Rights and Constitutional Law, called the policy of detaining children inhumane, adding that Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson should be "ashamed of himself" for "detaining young children in adult prisons that are unsafe."

Gee ruled in July that detaining children violates parts of a 1997 settlement covering all children in federal immigration custody, and that the facilities were not properly licensed to care for children.

Between Sept. 2013 and Oct. 2014, some 68,000 members of migrating families were caught at the border, according to U.S. Customs and Border Protection. Between last October and June of this year, less than 27,000 have been apprehended, which authorities say is due to better enforcement in the U.S. and Mexico.

J.C. Penney's 2Q results show turnaround gaining traction

By Anne D'Innocenzio
Associated Press

PLANO — J.C. Penney's turnaround is gaining traction.

The department store chain said Friday that its losses narrowed in the second quarter on better-expected sales, fueled by men's clothing, fine jewelry and the beauty brand Sephora. And a key revenue measure rose for the third straight quarter.

Shares of the company rose nearly 5 percent in afternoon trading.

"Although there is much work to do ... it's clear that when we execute well, we can deliver profitable sales and take market share," said Marvin Ellison, a former Home Depot executive who took over as CEO on Aug. 1 and presided over his first earnings call for Penney.

The results offer encouraging signs for the Plano, Texas-based retailer, which is more than two years into an effort to recover from a disastrous attempt to reinvent itself under former Apple executive Ron Johnson. That led to massive losses and plummeting sales.

Ellison took over the top job from Myron Ullman, who became executive chairman of the board. Ullman, who had previously run the company, came back as CEO in 2013 after Johnson was pushed out. Ullman helped pick Ellison, and the two executives have been running the company together since last November.

But J.C. Penney still has an uphill road to a full recovery.

Ullman stabilized the business by restoring frequent discounts and bringing back basic merchandise and popular store brands that Johnson eliminated. But sales are still well below where they were before he took over, and the retailer continues to rack up losses, though they're shrinking.

In the latest fiscal year ended January 2015, annual sales were $12.25 billion, far below the $17.2 billion level in the fiscal year that ended in January 2012. Johnson became CEO in November 2011.

Now, Ellison is being tasked to pump up sales growth by sprucing up some departments like jewelry and dramatically expanding online sales after falling behind rivals.

He also wants to transform the company into a more efficient operator. Ellison spelled out a litany of problems in an earnings call with investors Friday, such as Penney not using analytics when it comes to pricing. He also said its customer loyalty program "isn't very good." And it needs to get better in replenishment and one-on-one marketing.

On top of its own woes, Penney is facing broader challenges that are tripping up department store peers that cater to middle-income shoppers who haven't been benefiting much from the economic recovery.

Shoppers' spending is also shifting away from department-store specialties such as clothing and more toward restaurants, autos and smartphones. Penney's results follow disappointing financial results from Macy's Inc. and Kohl's Corp. while Nordstrom was a bright spot.

J.C. Penney lost $138 million, or 45 cents per share, for the quarter that ended Aug. 1. That compares with a loss of $172 million, or 56 cents per share, a year earlier.

Losses, adjusted for one-time gains and costs, were 41 cents per share.

Revenue rose 2.7 percent to $2.88 billion.

The average estimate of 10 analysts surveyed by Zacks Investment Research was for a loss of 50 cents per share.

Ex-county judge gets 18 months in prison for selling guns

Disgraced former Williamson County Court-at-Law Judge Timothy Wright was sentenced Friday to 18 months in federal prison for illegally selling guns and lying about the deals, including weapons peddled to criminals.

Wright, 70, of Georgetown, pleaded guilty in May to engaging in the business of dealing firearms without a license and to making false statements to a government agent. He resigned following his guilty pleas.

Wright also was fined $15,000; he had faced a possible penalty of up to five years in prison.

Prosecutors say that since June 2014, Wright sold more than 60 firearms without a federal license, including deals with felons, who by law are barred from possessing guns. Some of his gun sales were sold to two people who were smuggling the firearms across the Texas border into Mexico.

"While sworn to uphold the law, Judge Timothy Wright repeatedly violated federal laws governing the sale of firearms," according to U.S. Attorney Richard Durbin Jr. "... He falsified official firearms records to hide the true identity of the real buyer and then lied to federal investigators about his crimes. These are serious crimes for which he has been held accountable."

Wright apologized in May and said no one was above the law, "especially not judges."

2 get prison for trying to smuggle grenades into Mexico

Two people in South Texas have been sentenced to prison for trying to smuggle three-dozen grenades into Mexico.

Prosecutors in Del Rio said the scheme was exposed last August when 28-year-old Juliette Ramirez was found with a grenade in her backpack at a Texas border crossing.

The arrest of the pedestrian led to an apartment in Del Rio. Officers discovered 35 more grenades and arrested 28-year-old Noe Ramirez. The woman and man are not related.

Juliette Ramirez pleaded guilty in November to exportation of a military-grade sub-munition and was sentenced Thursday to five years in a U.S. prison. Noe Ramirez pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting the exportation of a military-grade sub-munition. He received eight years in prison.

Investigators said the duo plotted to smuggle grenades to Acuna, Mexico.

Group files complaint against judge over marriage sentence

A group that advocates the separation of church and state has filed a complaint about a Texas judge who ordered a man to marry his girlfriend as a condition of probation.

The Freedom From Religion Foundation said Friday it filed the complaint against Smith County Court-at-Law Judge Randall Rogers a day earlier with the Texas State Commission on Judicial Conduct in Austin.

On July 2, Rogers gave 21-year-old Josten Bundy 30 days to marry 19-year-old Elizabeth James or face 15 days in jail for pleading guilty to misdemeanor assault. Bundy admitted punching Jaynes' ex-boyfriend twice in the jaw for "saying disrespectful things" about her. Rogers also ordered Bundy to scrawl a Bible verse 25 times daily.

Rogers didn't return a message seeking comment. Bundy and James have since married.

Assistant Harris County attorney found guilty of assault

An assistant Harris County attorney has been found guilty of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in a road rage incident.

Forty-six year-old Susan Marie Sciacca was found guilty Thursday. According to court records, a driver says Sciacca followed him to a parking lot after being cut off and brandished a gun on Jan. 17, 2014. The punishment phase of her trial is set to begin Friday.

Sciacca, who worked in the Family Protective Services Division at the time of the incident, is currently out on $30,000 bond.

Disney teases 'Finding Dory,' 'Toy Story 4' at fan event

By Lindsey Bahr
Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Beanstalks will grow, animals will walk upright, oceans will part, a forgetful fish will remember her family, and toys will fall in love in Disney and Pixar Animation's upcoming films.

The studio previewed its animation slate and made a number of announcements at the fan convention D23 Expo on Friday, with special appearances from some voice actors including Ellen DeGeneres and Dwayne Johnson.

John Lasseter, the chief creative officer of Pixar and Walt Disney Animation Studios, hosted the presentation, where he announced a Jack and the Beanstalk adaptation, "Gigantic," and the title of their Dia de los Muertos film, "Coco." It was also revealed that Shakira would be both providing an original song for and voicing a character in "Zootopia."

"Gigantic" director Nathan Greno ("Tangled") said his film would be the definitive version of the fairy tale — with a few spins, including the addition of a 60-foot tall, 11-year-old girl who Jack meets when he climbs up the beanstalk. "Frozen" songwriters Robert Lopez and Kristen Anderson-Lopez, who penned the hit "Let It Go," will be writing the songs.

Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson was there as well to preview the South Pacific-set "Moana," out Nov. 23, 2016, which follows a high spirited, 16-year-old princess 2000 years ago. As an act of rebellion, she sets sail to a fabled island with the tattooed demi-god Maui (Johnson).

Directors Ron Clements and John Musker ("The Little Mermaid," "Aladdin") and Johnson teased concept footage and spoke about their extensive consultation with local anthropologists and archaeologists to ensure they accurately represented the area. They also took great pains to characterize what the ocean means to the culture. In the film, it functions as Moana's spiritual companion.

Opetaia Foa'i, Grammy-winner Mark Mancina, and Tony-winner Lin-Manuel Miranda will be handling "Moana's" music.

Johnson said it has been his career dream to be in an animated Disney movie.

"It is my heritage, it is my culture. I am proudly half-Samoan and half-black," said an excited Johnson. "I'm so deeply connected to this movie."

Continuing with the international focus, "Coco," from director Lee Unkrich ("Toy Story 3"), will be about a 12-year-old boy living with his big family in Mexico who inadvertently sets off a life-altering chain of events.

But it wasn't all new properties on the agenda. Pixar also teased information about "Toy Story 4" and "Finding Dory," a sequel to the 2003 film "Finding Nemo." In the film, out June 17, 2016, the forgetful Dory (DeGeneres) endeavors to track down her family.

Director Andrew Stanton said even though he thought that the story ended with "Nemo," he realized that Dory's character needed more development. "I wanted to know that if this charming, forgetful fish ever got lost again, that she would be OK," he said.

Randy Newman closed out the nearly three-hour presentation with a performance of his "You've Got a Friend in Me" on stage in anticipation of "Toy Story 4," which will be a love story between Woody (Tom Hanks) and Bo Peep (Annie Potts). Lasseter, who is co-directing, said it's a very emotional and personal story that's inspired by his own wife.

Not all the films talked about are years down the line, either.

Pixar's long-delayed "The Good Dinosaur" will finally be out on Nov. 25. After previewing the film at the 2013 D23, Pixar removed Bob Peterson as director and pushed its release date back over a year, eventually replacing him with Peter Sohn.

The film puts a new spin on the classic boy and his dog tale. Here, the "boy" is a friendly Apatosaurus named Arlo (Raymond Ochoa) and the "dog" is a feral child who walks on all fours. His name is Spot.

Producer Denise Ream said a main goal was to create "a world that feels visceral and immersive."

They used new technologies to fashion "majestic landscapes," including some strikingly realistic-looking rapids, which sweep Arlo away from his family into unknown territories.

Directors Byron Howard and Rich Moore were likewise there to preview "Zootopia," out March 4, which is set in a human-like city populated by animals who walk upright, wear clothes and hold human jobs. The film centers on bunny cop Judy Hopps ("Once Upon a Time's" Ginnifer Goodwin) who heads to the big city to pursue her law enforcement dreams. There she gets entangled with a mischievous fox, Nick Wilde (Jason Bateman).

The bi-annual convention, now in its fourth year, runs through Sunday.

Camper deaths, presence of plague darken summer at Yosemite

Associated Press

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. — The usually happy height of the summer season at California's bustling and beloved Yosemite National Park took a dark turn when a fallen tree branch killed two young campers and a campground closure was announced because of the presence of plague.

The large limb from a black oak fell on the tent of the two young campers as they slept in the heart of the park Friday, Yosemite spokesman Scott Gediman said.

The campers, described only as under 18, were both dead when rangers arrived at the crowded Upper Pines Campground in response to 911 calls, Gediman said.

What led to the limb falling, and its exact size, were not immediately revealed.

Large fallen limbs are a common occurrence at Yosemite, and they have occasionally led to deaths. The most recent was in 2012, when a park concession employee died when his tent cabin was hit. Two tourists were killed and nine were injured in 1985 when a 25-foot branch fell onto an open-air tram.

Meanwhile on Friday, park officials said they will temporarily close another popular campsite after two squirrels died of plague in the area.

Tuolumne Meadows Campground will close from noon Monday through noon Friday so authorities can treat the area with a flea-killing insecticide. Campers had their reservations canceled at the 304-site campground so the insecticide can be sprayed into rodent "burrow holes," the California Department of Health said Friday.

Plague is carried by rodents and is spread by fleas, but transmission between people is rare.

"Although this is a rare disease, and the current risk to humans is low, eliminating the fleas is the best way to protect the public from the disease," said Dr. Karen Smith, director of the state Health Department.

A child fell ill with the plague after camping with his family at Yosemite's Crane Flat Campground in mid-July. The park reopened Crane Flat on Friday after treating that campground for four days with an insecticide.

The child has been recovering in a hospital. No other family members became sick.

Plague's symptoms can include fever, chills, weakness, abdominal pain, and sometimes shortness of breath and swollen lymph nodes. It can be treated and cured when antibiotics are given soon after infection, but it's deadly when treatment is delayed.

The last three cases of human plague in the state occurred in 2005 and 2006, the Health Department said. All three of those patients survived.

PETITION

to see the peacocks!"

The city's involvement with the property owner from the central Midland neighborhood has to do with alleged complaints that Animal Control Services received from neighbors about the number of peacocks, peacocks straying away from property, eating vegetation and leaving droppings on other Midlanders' properties.

The city code includes language about keeping animals on one's property. It was recently changed to include birds. Violations can result in a class C misdemeanor, which can result in a fine up to $500.

The peacocks have populated the property for decades, even before the current owner purchased the property in 1994, but ownership of the peacocks is likely to be an issue of the municipal court trial. The petition identifies the unknown number of peacocks as being "of Trinity Estates" and as "long established residents of the neighborhood."

The City Attorney's Office and the attorney representing the property owner would not comment on a pending case, as is protocol.

Brandy Hughes of Midland started the petition. The Reporter-Telegram attempted to contact Hughes through a social media account but she has not responded. It is not known how the petition might impact the situation in the neighborhood at this time.

US attorney says no truth to stolen baby claim in St. Louis

By Jim Salter and Holbrook Mohr
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Recently discovered medical files further dispute a St. Louis woman's allegations that her baby was stolen from a hospital here five decades ago and a federal investigation into the case has now been closed.

U.S. Attorney Richard Callahan said during a news conference Friday that the medical records show Melanie Diane Gilmore, who was named Diane Jackson at birth, was born at a different hospital than the one the mother claimed.

Adoption and child welfare records previously obtained by The Associated Press also say Gilmore was born at City Hospital No. 1, and abandoned there.

That contradicts the story of Gilmore's mother, Zella Jackson Price. Gilmore's children tracked down Price earlier this year, saying she may be Gilmore's biological mother.

Price said she had been told her child died soon after she gave birth at Homer G. Phillips hospital.

"We can now say with complete confidence that there is no truth to that allegation and our investigation is now closed," Callahan said.

The reunion of Price, a 76-year-old gospel singer, and her daughter drew international attention. A DNA test confirmed they were mother and daughter.

After other mothers came forward with questions about children born at Homer G. Phillips, a St. Louis attorney, Albert Watkins, alleged a baby theft ring had been operating at the hospital, preying primarily on young, poor black women.

Price's story prompted more than 300 other inquiries about children who were born at Homer G. Phillips. Many of those were mothers who said they were told the children had died at the hospital, but were never allowed to see the bodies or provided death certificates.

The AP found death certificates for nearly two dozen of the cases it researched. But even some of the women who were provided with death certificates were not convinced their children are dead. Sloppy record keeping and a little-known body donation program only added to their suspicions.

Watkins, who is Price's attorney, said Friday that it's possible that Gilmore was born at Homer G. Phillips and transferred to City Hospital No. 1. He said his investigation has found discrepancies in the files related to Price and Gilmore. For example, he said, the adoption file says police were sent to find Price when the baby was ready for release from the hospital, but the police department found no such records.

"The discrepancies that exist are so numerous that we can't discount that there are remaining irreconcilable issues, and we are going to continue efforts to reconcile those issues," Watkins said. "This is simply part of a continuing process."

Nearly all of the death certificates obtained by the AP listed "Anatomical Board" as the cemetery or crematory where the bodies were sent. Missouri's state and regional anatomical boards are made up of faculty from medical schools and oversee programs in which bodies are donated to universities for research.

Most women interviewed by the AP said they never gave permission to donate the bodies to science, and were told only that everything would be taken care of for them. The anatomical board has been able to find little information about the bodies it received at the time.

Brenda Stewart, now 67, is among the many women who have requested their medical records. She gave birth to a girl on June 24, 1964. Soon after birth, Stewart was told the baby died, but said she was never allowed to see her. She said she recently received a death certificate, but believes it is forged.

Officials: Man posed as doctor, treated patients in basement

A New York City man accused of posing as a doctor and treating more than 100 patients without a license has been arrested.

Prosecutors allege 43-year-old Donald Lee-Edwards posed as a clinical psychologist in a makeshift office in the basement of his Staten Island home. They said he prescribed antidepressants, sometimes calling pharmacies himself to avoid the need for a state-issued prescription pad.

Detectives launched an investigation when patients reported their suspicions that he may not be licensed.

Lee-Edwards pleaded not guilty Thursday on criminal impersonation, fraud, drug possession and other charges.

Acting Richmond County District Attorney Daniel Master said Lee-Edwards never had a medical license and previously worked as flight attendant. He called him a "dangerous scam artist."

His attorney said there is no evidence Lee-Edwards harmed anyone. He said he was just trying to help people in the community.

US, Japanese cities mark WWII end with Pearl Harbor ceremony

PEARL HARBOR — Japanese and U.S. cities are holding a memorial service with the U.S. Navy in Pearl Harbor to mark the 70th anniversary of the end of World War II.

Mayors and city council members from Honolulu and Nagaoka came together with the U.S. Pacific Fleet commander for Friday's event.

They laid wreaths and float lanterns. Fireworks in the shape of flowers were launched at the end of the ceremony.

Nagaoka is the hometown of the late Japanese Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, the architect of the attack on Pearl Harbor that launched the U.S. into the war in 1941.

Today, the cities and the Navy will host a public fireworks display to honor the memory of the war's victims and celebrate 70 years of peace and friendship.

Challenge stops confederate statue move at Univ. of Texas

The University of Texas has canceled weekend plans to relocate a statue of Confederate President Jefferson Davis off the main campus after opponents asked a judge to block the move.

University spokesman Gary Susswein said Friday the school remains confident it will ultimately carry out a decision made this week to put the century-old statue in a museum. It had been targeted by vandals and come under increasing criticism as a symbol of racism.

But the university agreed to postpone the move after the Sons of Confederate Veterans filed for a temporary restraining order. It's the same group that that lost at the U.S. Supreme Court earlier this year over Texas rejecting a specialized license plate featuring the Confederate flag.

The move had been scheduled to take place Saturday.

Fraternity suspended after video shows member chanting 'rape'

By Gabrielle Russon
Orlando Sentinel

ORLANDO, Fla. — A University of Central Florida fraternity has been suspended after a video surfaced of at least one member chanting the word "rape" and promoting sexual assault, according to university documents.

"In a video, there's a brother yelling obscenities, like 'Let's rape some (expletives), rape some sluts' and then yelling, 'Rape' over and over again," according to an incident report filed with UCF's Student Conduct Office.

The reported incident occurred June 9 in one of Sigma Nu's off-campus apartments when some of the frat members returned home from a bar, according to the July 9 incident report.

A woman, who is not a UCF student, returned with her boyfriend to the apartment after a date to the movies and filmed the scene, the report said. The woman then gave the videos to a UCF student, according to the report. That woman filed a complaint with UCF.

"She sent me the videos because she felt that they may be able to help me in an open police case ...," the woman said, according to the incident report.

Earlier this year, a UCF student told police she was sexually attacked at the off-campus Sigma Nu fraternity house last October, according to an earlier incident report.

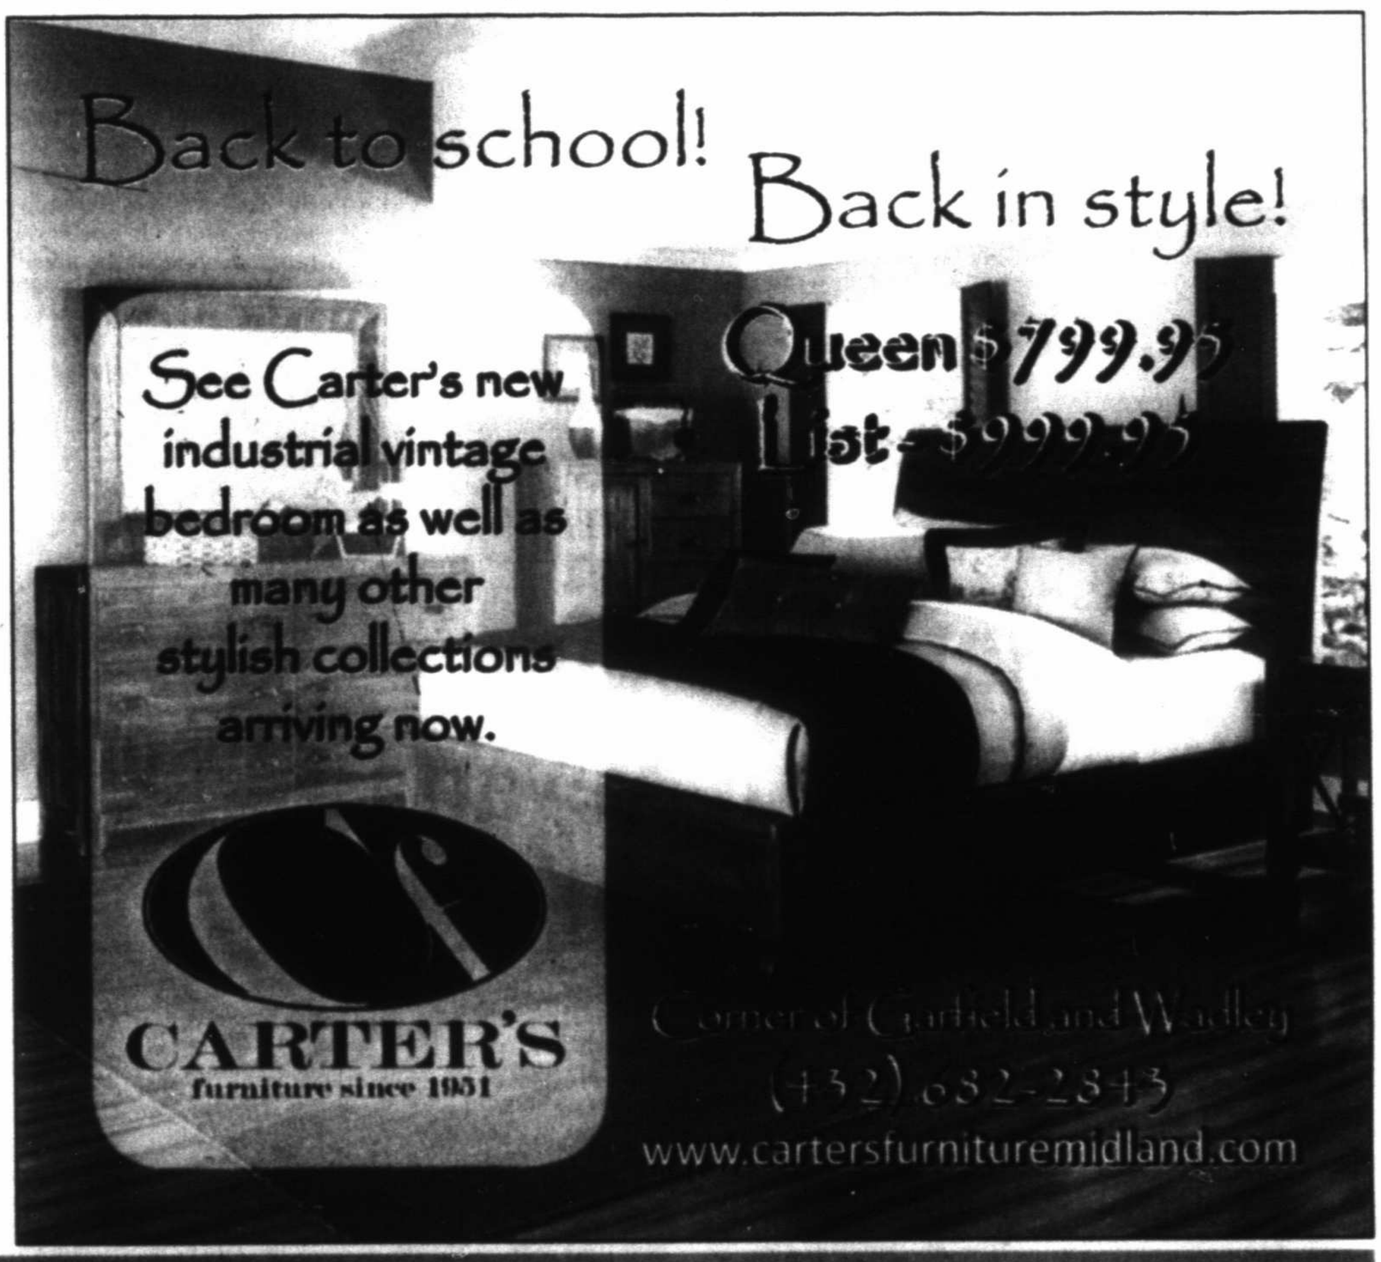

The woman said she woke up naked and in pain in the bathroom at the Sigma Nu fraternity house on Napiers Circle, less than a mile from UCF's main campus, on Oct. 3, according to that incident report. There was an open condom wrapper and a condom on the floor.

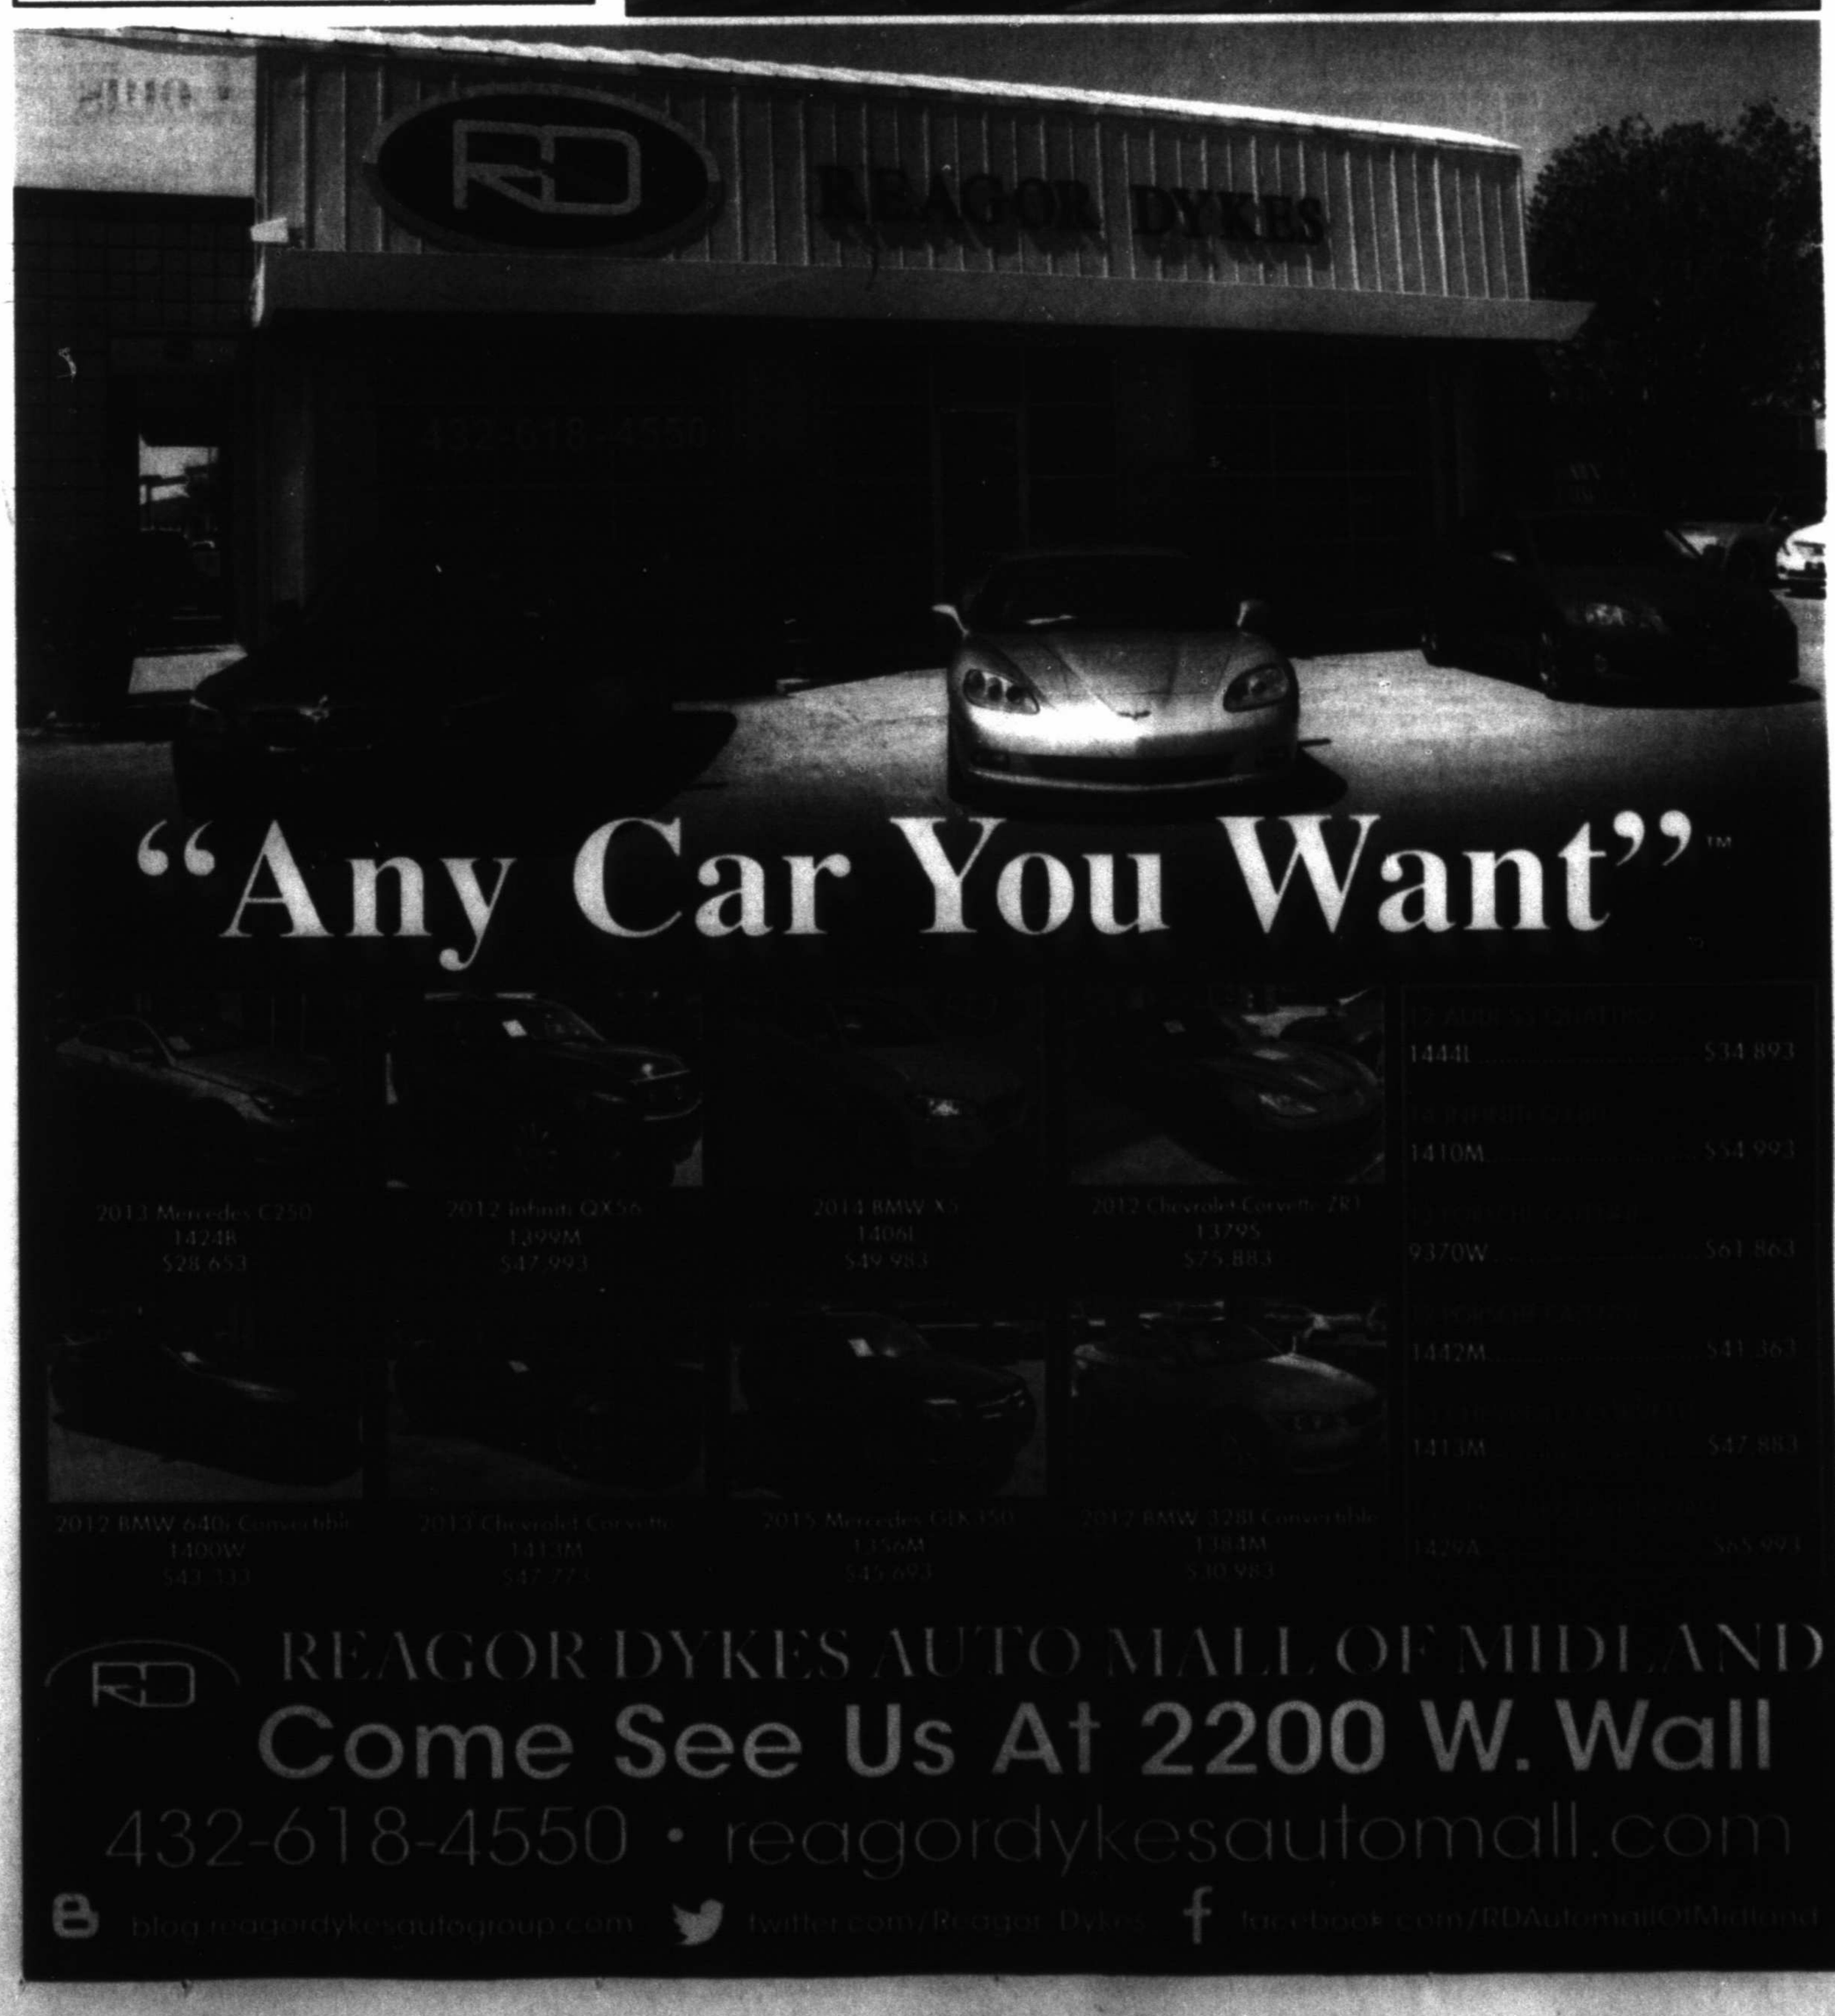

UCF has a suspect and turned the case over to the State Attorney's Office in April, university spokeswoman Courtney Gilmartin said last month. On Friday, Gilmartin said she was not aware of any updates in the criminal matter.

The most recent complaint, about the video, has prompted a Title IX investigation, said a letter from Michael Gilmer, UCF's Student Conduct Office director.

The fraternity's national headquarters condemned the recording, calling it "disrespectful, despicable and vile" in a statement.

Yuan and oil stabilize, giving US stocks a lift

By Bernard Condon
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A rocky week for the stock market ended on a bright note as investors bought stocks across industries.

Stocks wavered in the morning before climbing steadily during the afternoon amid a mix of earnings results. The market also got a lift as China's currency steadied after a slump earlier in the week that shook financial markets around the world. The gains were modest but broad, with nine of the 10 sectors of the Standard and Poor's 500 index ending higher.

The S&P 500 climbed 8.15 points, or 0.4 percent, to 2,091.54. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 69.15 points, or 0.4 percent, to end at 17,477.40. The Nasdaq composite rose 14.68 points, or 0.3 percent, to 5,048.24.

At the close of stock trading, the dollar was buying 6.391 Chinese yuan, little changed from the previous day. Reassuring comments from a Chinese central bank official on Thursday seemed to ease concerns that China's government would seek to devalue its currency further. Investors were worried that the devaluation suggested the world's second-largest economy could be more fragile than they previously thought.

"We were in a sell-first-ask-questions-later mode, but we've rallied back," said Piers Cornelius, a managing director at J.P. Morgan Private Bank. He says he expects stocks to stabilize over the next few weeks as companies, flush with record cash, continue to buy back their own shares.

Stocks of retailers rallied after some solid earnings reports.

Nordstrom rose $3.21, or 4.3 percent, $78.13 after beating analysts' expectations in results announced late Thursday. J.C. Penney rose 45 cents, or 5.6 percent, to $8.52 after a narrower loss on stronger-than-expected sales as the retail chain continues to turn its business around.

On Monday, July 6, 2015, a man uses a mobile phone while walking by a building in the Financial District in New York. Slightly disappointing European growth figures, notably out of France and Italy, weighed on stock markets Friday, Aug. 14, 2015, while oil prices sank to their lowest level since early 2009.

Investors are hoping for good news in the current quarter, too. On Thursday, the Commerce Department reported U.S. retail sales climbed last month, suggesting that strong hiring and lower gas prices are encouraging consumers to spend more.

Sean Lynch, co-head of global equity strategy at Wells Fargo Investment Institute, said investors have been remarkably calm in the face of several potentially unnerving events, including a slowing Chinese economy, Greece's debt troubles, plunging oil prices and the Federal Reserve possibly raising interest rates next month.

"You've got recurrent issues worrying the market ... yet it's been pretty lethargic," he said. "It's been trading at a narrow range despite all the noise."

The S&P 500 is basically unchanged in the last six months. For the week, it rose 0.7 percent.

Europe had a tougher week. Germany's DAX fell 4.4 percent, the CAC-40 in France dropped 3.9 percent and Britain's FTSE 100 was down 2.5 percent. All three indexes were down Friday.

In addition to worries about China, European economic growth is weak. Figures from the European Union's statistics agency on Friday showed that growth across the region was 0.3 percent, down slightly from 0.4 percent growth in the first three months of the year.

Among other U.S. stocks making big moves:

— Applied Materials fell 41 cents, or 2.4 percent, to $16.64 after the chip-making equipment company said that revenue for its most recent reporting period fell short of analysts' expectations. The company also said sales for the current quarter could fall as much as 7 percent.

— Sysco rose $2.86, or 7.4 percent, to $41.38 after an investment firm run by activist investor Nelson Peltz said it had acquired a 7.1 percent stake, making it the food distributor's largest shareholder.

The price of U.S oil rose slightly, but still ended the week sharply lower as rising supplies continue to outpace global demand growth. U.S. crude rose 27 cents Friday to close at $42.50. For the week, it was down 3 percent after hitting a six-year low on Thursday. Brent crude, a benchmark for international oils used by many U.S. refineries, fell 19 cents to close at $49.03 in London.

In other futures trading on the NYMEX:

■ Wholesale gasoline fell 2.7 cents to close at $1.687 a gallon.

■ Heating oil fell 1.1 cents to close at $1.558 a gallon.

■ Natural gas rose 1.4 cents to close at $2.801 per 1,000 cubic feet.

In metals trading, gold fell $2.90 to $1,112.70 an ounce and silver dropped 18.6 cents to $15.21 an ounce. Copper was little changed at $2.35 per pound.

Prices of U.S. government bonds barely moved, keeping the 10-year Treasury yield at 2.19 percent.

Regulators issuing draft report on Nevada nuclear dump plan

By Ken Ritter
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — A key study in a series leading to licensing hearings for the long-stalled Yucca Mountain national nuclear waste dump in Nevada finds what the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is calling a small chance that radioactive contamination could get into the environment.

A Nevada state official said Friday he'll challenge the NRC findings about the proposed Yucca Mountain project on technical and legal grounds.

"They're saying that the impacts are small," Nevada Agency for Nuclear Projects chief Bob Halstead said. "From my review of the document, I'm skeptical that they have complied with the requirement that they imposed on the Energy Department in 2008" to update an initial 2002 environmental impact report.

The commission announced Thursday that it'll post its draft supplement to the document, called the Yucca Mountain Environmental Impact Statement, on Aug. 21 in the Federal Register. It plans meetings next month in Maryland, Las Vegas and Nye County before issuing a final document early next year.

Commission spokeswoman Maureen Conley said the Sept. 3 meeting will be at the NRC office in Rockville, Maryland. A venue for a Sept. 15 meeting in Las Vegas and a date and place for the Nye County session weren't immediately disclosed.

Halstead is the top state official working against the Yucca Mountain project. He acknowledged the latest NRC draft report is the last needed to move the Yucca Mountain licensing process into administrative hearings and a resolution.

The report focuses on potential contamination of an underground aquifer sloping west from the Yucca Mountain site, about 90 miles northwest of Las Vegas, toward farms in the Amargosa Valley and the scenic Death Valley National Park in California.

It concludes that peak radiation values would remain far below commission standards and a fraction of normal background radiation.

Approval of the document is expected early next year.

Barring court challenges, administrative hearings could then begin on a license to build and operate the repository. Officials have said a full slate of hearings could take at least three years.

Nevada elected officials fought for years against the Yucca Mountain project — before and after the site was approved by Congress as a nuclear dump in 2002.

But the united front has begun to erode, with the state's newest Congress member, Republican Rep. Cresent Hardy, saying he's willing to listen to offers of economic benefits in return for accepting the nation's nuclear waste.

U.S. Sen. Harry Reid has been a staunch opponent. He responded Thursday to the release of the NRC environmental study with another prediction that the repository will never be built.

Reid and Halstead noted that the new report didn't say how the federal government would obtain the water and land it would need to proceed.

Estimates are that $15 billion was spent drilling a 5-mile U-shaped tunnel and studying whether 77,000 tons of some of the most lethal material known to humans could remain safe and dry in casks wheeled on rails into a honeycomb of vaults 1,000 feet underground. Some estimates put the final cost at $100 billion.

Congress cut off funding after Reid became majority leader in 2007. Under President Barack Obama, the Energy Department shuttered the project and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission halted the licensing process.

2016 Louisiana budget slashed; oil prices fall below forecast

By Melinda Deslatte
Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Only two months after a difficult budget-balancing session, Louisiana lawmakers Friday got their first official glimpse of the shortfall they already face for next year: $713 million.

News of a horizon filled with future budget gaps wasn't unexpected for the Joint Legislative Committee on the Budget.

The $25 billion budget for the fiscal year that began July 1 contains $542 million in patchwork financing that isn't expected to be available a year later, accounting for much of the projected gap forecast for the 2016-17 budget year.

The shortfall also assumes inflationary increases in health care, retirement and salary costs that lawmakers don't always choose to fund.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Jack Donahue said use of the piecemeal financing from a tax amnesty program, state surplus and agency reserve accounts helps keep the state from having to make deep cuts to public health care services and colleges.

"I think using one-time money under those circumstances is the right way to go," said Donahue, R-Mandeville.

Though the shortfall projection was steep, legislative leaders noted it was smaller than the $1.6 billion gap they closed this year. Lawmakers were more immediately worried that this year's budget will have to be slashed, to account for oil prices falling below state forecast.

Only one month into the budget year, lawmakers Friday already had to trim $4.6 million in planned spending because a package of recently-approved tax and fee bills aren't expected to generate all the money used in the budget. Nearly $3.8 million of the cut will fall on public colleges, despite efforts from lawmakers to shield campuses from reductions.

Commissioner of Administration Kristy Nichols, Gov. Bobby Jindal's chief budget adviser, said the dollars will be restored if income forecasts improve, rather than drop.

While oil price declines are good for drivers at the gas pump, large dips in per-barrel price can wreak havoc on Louisiana's budget, which gets money from severance taxes and mineral royalties tied to energy production. Every dollar drop in the annual oil price for income projections represents an estimated $11 million hit to the state general fund.

"The price of oil is a whole lot less than that," said Sen. Ed Murray, D-New Orleans. "That puts the budget significantly out of balance."

Oil prices have recently hovered around the low-$40 range per barrel. Decisions on adjusting oil and gas revenue projections, however, aren't expected to be made until economists gather more data.

Top secret Clinton emails include drone talk

By Bradley Klapper and Ken Dilanian
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Neither of the two emails sent to Hillary Rodham Clinton now labeled by intelligence agencies as "top secret" contained information that would jump out to experts as particularly sensitive, according to several government officials.

One included a discussion of a U.S. drone strike, part of a covert program that is widely known and discussed. A second conversation could have improperly referred to highly classified material, but it also could have reflected information collected independently, U.S. officials who have reviewed the correspondence told The Associated Press.

Still, it's looking increasingly likely the issue of whether Clinton mishandled classified information on her home-brew email server will have significant political implications in the 2016 presidential campaign.

Clinton, who has been seen from the outset as the front-runner for the Democratic nomination, agreed this week to turn over to the FBI the private server she used as secretary of state. And Republicans in Congress have seized on the involvement of federal law enforcement in the matter as a sign she was negligent in handling the nation's secrets.

On Monday, the inspector general for the 17 spy agencies that make up what is known as the intelligence community told Congress that two of 40 emails, in a random sample of 30,000 messages that Clinton gave the State Department for review, contained information deemed "Top Secret," one of the government's highest levels of classification.

While neither of the emails was marked classified at the time they were sent, they have since been slapped with a "TK" marking, for "Talent Keyhole," suggesting material obtained by spy satellites. And they also were marked "NOFORN," meaning information that can only be shared with Americans with security clearances.

The two emails got those markings after consultations with the CIA and other agencies where the material originated, officials said. Some officials said they believed the designations were a stretch — a knee-jerk move in a bureaucracy rife with over-classification.

The officials who spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity work in intelligence and other agencies. They wouldn't detail the full contents of the emails because of ongoing questions about classification level.

Clinton didn't transmit the sensitive information herself, they said, and nothing in the emails she received makes direct reference to communications intercepts, confidential intelligence methods or any other form of sensitive sourcing.

The one exchange, the officials said, began with a copy of a news article about the CIA drone program that targets terrorists in Pakistan and elsewhere. While that program is technically top secret, it is well-known and often reported on. Former CIA director Leon Panetta and Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California, the top Democrat on the Senate Intelligence Committee, have openly discussed it.

The copy makes reference to classified information, and a Clinton adviser follows up by dancing around a top secret in a way that could possibly be inferred as confirmation, the officials said. Several people, however, described this claim as tenuous.

But a second email reviewed by Charles McCullough, the intelligence community inspector general, appears more problematic, officials said. Nothing in the message is "lifted" from classified documents, they said, though they differed on where the information in it was sourced. Some said it improperly points back to highly classified material, while others countered that it was a classic case of what the government calls "parallel reporting" — receiving information the government considers secret through "open source" channels.

The issue came to light Tuesday after Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, said McCullough found four "highly classified" emails on the unusual private server that Clinton used while she was secretary of state. Two were sent back to the State Department for review, but Grassley said the other two were, in fact, classified at the closely guarded "Top Secret/SCI level." SCI stands for "sensitive compartmented information," which can only be examined under strict security protocols.

In a four-page fact sheet that accompanied a letter to Clinton supporters, Clinton spokeswoman Jennifer Palmieri stressed that Clinton was permitted to use her own email account as a government employee and that the same process concerning classification reviews would still be taking place had she used the standard "state.gov" email account used by most department employees. The State Department, meanwhile, stressed that it wasn't clear if the material at issue ought to be considered classified at all.

"None of the emails alleged to contain classified information include any markings that indicate classified content," Sen. Dianne Feinstein a California Democrat who is the ranking member on the intelligence committee, said in a statement.

But even if the emails highlighted by the intelligence community prove innocuous, Clinton will still face questions about whether she set up the private server with the aim of avoiding scrutiny, whether emails she deleted because she said they were personal were actually work-related, and whether she appropriately shielded such emails from possible foreign spies and hackers.

Former intelligence officials say it's a certainty that her server was compromised by foreign intelligence services.

Unless they were encrypted to U.S. government standards, "In my opinion there is a 100 percent chance that all emails sent and received by her, including all the electronic correspondence stored on her server in her Chappaqua residence, were targeted and collected by the Russian equivalent of NSA," said former CIA case officer Jason Matthews, an expert in Russian intelligence.

Then again, Clinton defenders point out, the State Department's unclassified email system also has been penetrated by Russian hackers, so it's unclear her use of home server made a difference.

Clinton says she exchanged about 60,000 emails in her four years as secretary of state. She turned over all but what she said were personal emails late last year. The department has been making those public after scrubbing sensitive material.

The State Department advised employees not to use personal email accounts for work, but it wasn't prohibited.

Pro-Republican ads funded by group with untraceable donors

By Julie Bykowicz
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Opportunity News Media wants you to know it's OK to be a Republican, and it is spending $3 million to say so in the presidential battleground states of Ohio and Colorado.

Where that money comes from is anybody's guess.

The television ads serve as coming attractions of a sort for the 2016 campaign, for which politically minded donors have already given half a billion dollars to candidates and outside groups eager to back them. All that money ensures television viewers will be inundated by commercials good, bad and confusing.

Add in campaign finance regulations that are still evolving in the wake of the landmark Supreme Court decision known as Citizens United, and it's easier than ever for all kinds of groups to wade into politics and do so in ways that keep from the public the identities of who is paying for it all.

The commercials by Opportunity News Media have already aired some 3,000 times on stations that broadcast into Ohio and Colorado, according to data from political ad tracker Kantar Media CMAG. They're scheduled to continue through the first week of September at an estimated cost of $3 million. There is also a smaller cable- and radio-based campaign running in Pennsylvania.

Filled with children, workers and people of different ethnicities, the ads promote Republicans as interested in creating jobs, improving access to education and caring for the middle class. Many of the 30-second spots end with rays of sunlight peeking out from clouds as an upbeat female narrator says, "There are people who still believe opportunity lives in America, and we call ourselves Republicans."

That's the sort of theme the GOP should take to voters, the Republican National Committee found in its assessment of why Mitt Romney lost to Barack Obama in 2012.

"Very powerful, uplifting and unifying," Ari Fleischer, one of the GOP report's authors and a longtime party strategist, said of the ads.

"I've never heard of the group running it," he added.

He's not alone.

Representatives of the Republican National Committee, the Republican Governors Association, the Ohio Republican Party and six well-known Republican outside groups all said they were not familiar with Opportunity News Media, even though the group is doing more to promote the GOP on television right now than anyone else.

So who are they?

Opportunity News Media LLC is identified as the sponsor at the end of the ads, in accordance with federal regulations. That company incorporated last year in Delaware, a state that requires very little information for such registration. As a private company without any direct connection to politics, it isn't required to disclose the source of its money.

The ads point viewers to a news website, opportunitylives.com. Its editor is John Hart, who used to work for recently retired Oklahoma Sen. Tom Coburn. He describes the site's news content as "unapologetically conservative."

Hart said about a dozen people work for or regularly contribute articles to the site. Several writers also have bylines in right-leaning publications such as the National Review and the Federalist.

But while Hart compares the ads to MSNBC's "Lean Forward" campaign, which cheers progressive and left-leaning ideas while aiming to build brand identification for the cable news network, the Opportunity News Media commercials do not promote the news site. Instead, they're focused broadly on Republicans.

Hart declined to identify any of the news site's backers or provide information about who paid for the ad campaign. But there are some clues on the site.

Its "terms of use" page calls it a project of the Center for American Opportunity, a nonprofit based in Arlington, Virginia. Bill Kristol, founder of the conservative political magazine The Weekly Standard, was one four board members of that group as of 2013, according to its most recent tax documents available online. Kristol said he is no longer on the board.

Those tax records show the center spent about $3.6 million in 2013 to underwrite the Washington Free Beacon, a brash conservative website that announced its new business model last year with a short video of bikini-clad model Kate Upton.

Hart said Opportunity Lives separated from the Center for American Opportunity a few months ago. He declined to say how much money the center had invested to that point — a total that won't likely be known until late next year, when the center files its 2015 tax forms.

Pete Snyder, a Virginia businessman whose investment firm Disruptor Capital advises media and technology startups, said he served on the center's board to guide the formation of Opportunity Lives — although he said he did not invest in the project.

Snyder said he believes there's a market for a right-of-center news service that floats above the fray and emphasizes feel-good stories.

"Sure, people want to see a train wreck, but plenty of other people want to see the Disney movie," Snyder said. Indeed, in his editor's note, Hart emphasizes, "We don't believe our role is to settle intra-movement debates."

The portrayal of Republicans in the commercials comes as several of the GOP presidential candidates are trying to rally the party's most conservative voters in ways that don't fit with the recommendations of the party's 2012 post-mortem. On the debate stage last week, for example, several candidates emphasized their staunch opposition to abortion and to an overhaul of the nation's immigration system that isn't focused on border security.

Those aren't subjects that come up in the Opportunity News Media ads.

In one, a woman shown playing with young children says, "A government that doesn't spend more than it has — I really don't think that's too controversial. If that makes you more Republican, I'm OK with that."

Otter declines to order investigation of Planned Parenthood

By Kimberlee Kruesi
Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter said he will not launch an investigation into Planned Parenthood facilities in Idaho despite receiving a request from nearly 30 Republican state lawmakers.

In an Aug. 6 letter, Otter, also a Republican, said there are no grounds for a legal investigation because there is no evidence Planned Parenthood has violated any state or federal laws in Idaho.

Planned Parenthood has come under scrutiny after anti-abortion activists released undercover videos that raised questions about whether the national organization was profiting from the sale of fetal tissue—an accusation the group denies.

"I have been in contact with Planned Parenthood officials here in Idaho and they assured me that these practices do not occur in Idaho or within the states that make up Planned Parenthood of the Great Northwest," Otter wrote.

However, his letter also challenged Planned Parenthood to reassure Idahoans that such activities do not occur in the state.

The videos have sparked calls for investigations in a handful of states. Authorities in Massachusetts, Georgia, Indiana and South Dakota found no evidence of wrongdoing.

Otter is not the first governor to turn down a call for a Planned Parenthood investigation, but he is one of the few Republican state leaders to push back against such requests from fellow GOP lawmakers.

Democratic governors in Virginia, New Hampshire, Minnesota, New York and Washington have expressed support for Planned Parenthood while refusing to investigate the health centers

In Idaho, Planned Parenthood has health clinics in Boise, Meridian and Twin Falls.

"This is a thinly veiled political attack against us," said Hannah Brass Greer, spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood of the Great Northwest, which includes Idaho, Washington, Alaska and Hawaii. "There was no reason to do an investigation. None of the lawmakers contacted us first to see if we had a tissue donation program."

Three members of Idaho House GOP leadership signed the investigation request sent to Otter, including House Majority Leader Mike Moyle of Star and House Assistant Majority Leader Brent Crane of Nampa.

NEW AUTO DEALER

Rogers Ford

Gold Award — New Auto Dealer
Gold Award — Dealer Service Center
Gold Award — Pre-owned Auto Dealer

From the days of Henry Ford to the modern Ford Motor Company of today, this brand and those associated with it have been winners.

Rogers Ford has for more than half a century delivered the best in sales and service to residents of the Permian Basin and those who drive (or fly in) from miles away to sample both.

"We'd like to say thank you to voters for their support for the last 51 years," said Beau Moore, general sales manager.

Earning the top spot is a combination of products, service and respect for buyers, he said.

"We offer a fantastic product at a fair price and go above and beyond to take of the customer after the sale. Our whole goal is to provide an experience for the customer from the time they walk in the door until they leave," he said.

Rogers Ford sells a complete line of Ford cars, sport utility vehicles, trucks and vans, plus Lincoln cars and SUVs supplying everything from family transportation to oilfield workhorses.

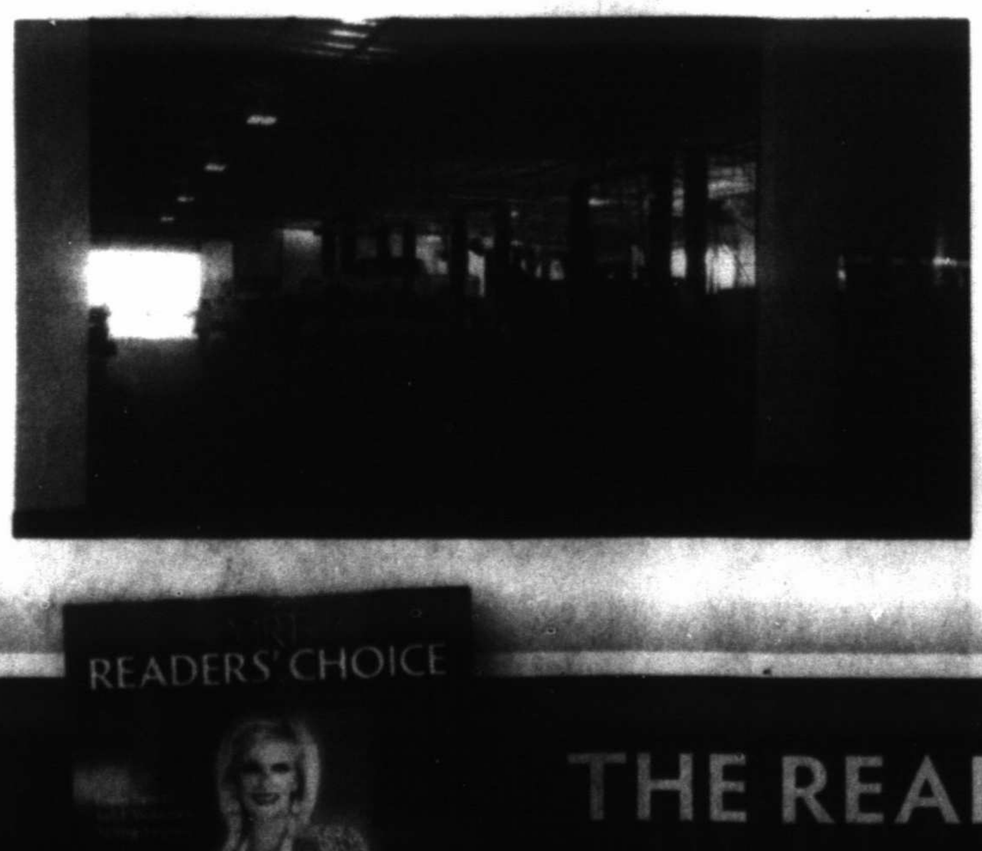

The company is a locally owned full-service family business started by the late Bill Rogers in 1964. Doss Rogers is the majority owner of Rogers Ford and his oldest son,Todd Rogers, is vice president and partner. Scott Rogers, his younger son, works at the dealership as well.

Since its debut, the dealership has been remodeled three times to ensure the best shopping and service environment for customers.

About 125 people work at Rogers Ford doing everything from answering telephones to replacing engines.

"We believe in our people and we take pride in our people and invest in them. Without our people, we are nothing," Moore said. "We are where we are because of our employees. That all ties to being a family owned dealership. Without customers we are nothing and without great employees we can't take care of customers."

Every car or truck needs service sometime. From an oil change to complex repair, Rogers Ford's well trained and highly skilled technicians are confidence inspiring caretakers for prized vehicles.

"My staff with the experience and training they have -- and I have techs who have over 20 years experience -- repair the vehicle right the first time," said Jacob Klein, parts and service director.

To streamline routine maintenance, customers may schedule oil and filter changes through the Rogers Web site (www.rogersford.com) and then jet through the fast lube line for efficient service.

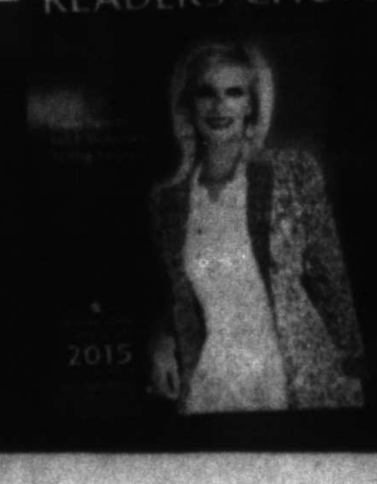

Voters also selected Rogers Ford as the Gold Award winner for pre-owned cars, SUVs and trucks of all makes. Fords are examined, cleaned and put in top-notch mechanical shape to become certified pre-owned vehicles, while cars and trucks of other makes undergo a similarly rigorous inspection and make ready process.

"We spend on average $2,500 in our service department per vehicle for every car we sell," Moore said.

Rogers Ford invites shoppers to not only kick the tires, but also take a peek at what they might expect by checking the user friendly Web site. They can search for sales and lease incentives, value a trade-in, complete a finance application, make a service request and finally spot just the right vehicle for their needs.

"We love for people to go to our website to check us out and follow us on Facebook," Moore said.

Home run king Bonds glad obstruction pursuit is over

By Janie McCauley
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Legally cleared at last, Barry Bonds is unconcerned with everybody else's thoughts on his career or credentials: He's a Hall of Famer. Hands down.

Bonds

"I don't even justify that. There's no need," he said Thursday night at AT&T Park. "That's without saying."

The 51-year-old home run king said he has felt a huge sense of relief since federal prosecutors dropped what was left of their criminal case against him last month after a nearly decade-long steroids prosecution.

"I can say yes, there's a lot. Because it'd be not true if I said there wasn't some weight lifted off my shoulders," Bonds said in an interview with The Associated Press, his first since the government announcement.

"I've never been much of a talker. That's never been my game. I don't have time to put people down, I don't have time to do all that stuff. I don't care to. If people want to say negative things, that's their opinion," the former San Francisco Giants star said.

The government's pursuit of Bonds ended July 21 with a one-paragraph motion by the U.S. Department of Justice announcing Solicitor General Donald B. Verrilli Jr. would not ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review the appellate decision that overturned Bonds' obstruction of justice conviction.

"That's why I say God is good. Every player who's ever played against me knows my ability, and that's something I will never, ever have to explain," Bonds said. "I'm not insulted by anything. I don't hold grudges. I'm not going to hold a grudge. I know what I brought to the game. I'm proud of that. That's all, I'm proud of that."

Bonds, the seven-time NL MVP, broke Hank Aaron's career home record of 755 on Aug. 7, 2007, in the last of the slugger's 22 big league seasons. Bonds hit 762 homers in all.

In his third year on the Hall ballot in 2015, Bonds received 202 votes for 36.8 percent from the Baseball Writers' Association of America. A player must garner at least 75 percent of the vote to be elected.

Bonds realizes there are plenty of people who still won't like him or ever consider him a Hall of Famer, those who will always assume he cheated by using performance-enhancing drugs.

He knows his legal victory doesn't assure him a spot in Cooperstown, either. Or change his legacy, whatever that winds up being.

"I don't mind if people get on me at times, I don't mind that stuff," Bonds said. "That's part of the game; that's part of the

WACKY DAY AT PGA

Jordan Spieth hits to the 18th hole during the second round of the PGA Championship golf tournament Friday at Whistling Straits in Sheboygan, Wis.

A 63, a Spieth rally and a storm delay

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. — Hiroshi Iwata tied a major championship record with a 63. Jordan Spieth put himself into the mix for another major. John Daly lost his cool and a golf club when he heaved it into Lake Michigan.

The second round of the PGA Championship had just about everything Friday. Except a conclusion.

Jason Day ran off three straight birdies and was tied for the lead with Matt Jones at 9-under par when a vicious thunderstorm packing 40 mph wind caused the second round to be suspended until this morning.

The storm toppled the main scoreboard at the entrance and flags atop some grandstands were ripped off their poles.

Justin Rose pulled within one shot of the lead with back-to-back birdies and was headed to the 18th tee, relieved to finish his round.

"I opened my big mouth to the boys playing with us," Rose said. "I said, 'The end is in sight.' And 30 seconds later, they blew the horn. So my name is mud all over here."

Tiger Woods, for all his struggles in the majors this year, can at least say he made it to the weekend in three of them. He made the cut at the Masters. He missed the cut today at the wind-delayed British Open. There was still hope at the PGA Championship, though he was 4 over with five holes to play, two shots away from the projected cut.

The leaderboard was as clouded as the sky over Whistling Straits.

Seven players had at least a share of the lead at some point Friday, when a strong breeze in the morning gave way to steamy sunshine and virtually no wind until the storms moved in. When players were evacuated from the course, 11 players were separated by three shots.

David Lingmerth of Sweden made only four pars in his wild round of 70 and was the clubhouse leader at 7-under 137. One shot behind was a group that included Spieth, the Masters and U.S. Open champion who is very much in the picture to join Woods and Ben Hogan as the only players to win three majors in one year.

Scott Piercy (70) and Brendan Steele (69) joined Spieth at 6-under 138.

The star of the day was Iwata, a 34-year-old from Japan who had every reason to think his first appearance in the PGA Championship would be a short one. He opened with a 77 and still was 3 over when he reached the back nine. Iwata reeled off five birdies and an eagle, and he saved par on the 18th for a 63.

It was the 27th time that a player shot 63 in a major, 13 of those in the PGA Championship and most recently Jason Dufner at Oak Hill two years ago.

"When I came here, I was thinking just to make my game better and better and on Sunday, I can be in the top 10," Iwata said through a translator.

Even with a record-tying score, he still has plenty of work ahead of him to do that. Iwata was at 4-under 140 and losing ground as one player after another took aim at Whistling Straits in good scoring conditions.

Day was through 14 holes while Jones, his fellow Australian, was through 12 holes and on the front nine.

Day shared the 54-hole lead at the U.S. Open while coping with vertigo symptoms. He missed by one turn of the golf ball a birdie on the 18th hole at St. Andrews that would have put him in a playoff at the British Open. Now it looks like he gets yet another chance. He was thrilled to stop play, especially as the storm clouds turned dark and he had trouble with depth perception on some

Red Sox manager says he has 'highly curable' cancer

By Ken Powtak
Associated Press

BOSTON — Fighting back tears, Boston Red Sox manager John Farrell said Friday that he had a "highly curable" form of cancer and has taken a medical leave for the rest of the season to deal with lymphoma.

The 53-year-old Farrell said bench coach Torey Lovullo will run the team in his absence. Farrell said he planned on being back with the team for spring training.

Farrell

Farrell said the cancer of the lymphatic system was discovered when he had hernia surgery in Detroit earlier this week.

"I know we usually start out with the injury report. I'll start out with myself on this one. Monday's surgery for the hernia revealed that I have lymphoma," he said before Friday night's game at Fenway Park against Seattle.

"Thankfully, it was detected in the hernia surgery. I can honestly tell you I'm extremely fortunate that it was found. Treatment will begin in the coming days," he said.

Farrell said a mass was completely removed during the procedure and no additional surgery was necessary. He said chemotherapy would start early next week.

Red Sox stars David Ortiz and Dustin Pedroia stood along a wall to Farrell's left when he made the announcement. Vice President Sam Kennedy, general manager Ben Cherington and Lovullo also were in the room.

"A little bit of a shocker to be told later that afternoon that this was going on. Like I said, I'm fortunate," Farrell said. "Stage 1. It's localized. It's highly curable. I'm extremely fortunate to not only be with people with the Red Sox, but access to MGH (Massachusetts General Hospital) and world class talent that can handle this."

The Red Sox are in last place in the AL East with a 50-64 record. In February, Farrell's contract was extended through 2017 with a club option for 2018.

"When they mentioned the word 'cancer,' it's something that it doesn't matter where it comes from, it kind of impacts you," Ortiz said.

Farrell guided Boston to the World Series championship in his first season in 2013. He previously managed the Toronto Blue Jays for two years.

Hamilton's clutch hitting twice puts Rangers ahead in win

ARLINGTON — Josh Hamilton started the day getting an MRI on the sore left knee that forced him to miss the previous two games.

Once the exam revealed no structural damage, Hamilton told manager Jeff Banister he could play through some pain and wanted back in the Texas Rangers' lineup. And then the slugger showed he still has some big pop in his bat.

Hamilton had a tiebreaking sacrifice fly ball to center in the eighth inning, after an earlier 437-foot homer, and the Rangers beat Tampa Bay 5-3 in a series opener Friday night to snap the Rays' four-game winning streak.

"It's been a while since I hit one like that. That felt good," Hamilton said of his sixth homer of the season, a deep drive to right-center.

The big relief came earlier in the day when he found out that he could keep playing through the pain without concern of doing any significant damage to his knee. He described his issue as thin cartilage and like a bone bruise.

"Definitely positive, and helped me understand that I can go there and run around and play," Hamilton said.

Texas tied the game at 3-3 in the seventh when Delino DeShields hit his first career homer, a towering shot that was just fair and landed several rows deep into the left-field seats.

"It was a good time to get my first one," said DeShields, echoing Banister's feelings.

Adrian Beltre's one-out single in the eight started the go-ahead rally off Jake McGee (1-2). Beltre went to third on a single by Mitch Moreland, who moved to second on the throw. Hamilton followed that before Elvis Andrus had an RBI single.

Sam Dyson (1-1) worked two scoreless innings in relief of starter Martin Perez. Shawn Tolleson worked the ninth for his 22nd

'Boys fall to Bolts in preseason contest

By Bernie Wilson
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — It didn't take long for Danny Woodhead to remind the San Diego Chargers and their fans of what they missed most of the 2014 season.

Woodhead scored on an 8-yard run in his first game since September and the Chargers, whose owner has angered fans by exploring a move to Los Angeles, beat the Dallas Cowboys 17-7 on Thursday night in an exhibition opener.

Woodhead scampered through a big hole provided by the rebuilt line to cap San Diego's first drive and give the Chargers a 7-0 lead midway through the first quarter. He suffered a season-ending broken right ankle in the third game last year.

"It felt great," he said. "It's been a long process. I feel really good. The line blocked great. It was great to get out there and get in the end zone."

Said quarterback Philip Rivers: "It was awesome. He knows how I feel about him and how the team feels about him after last year."

The game was played two days after Carmen Policy, who is spearheading stadium efforts in Carson, told NFL owners that "the Chargers and Raiders are committed to Los Angeles." The Chargers, owned by the Spanos family, walked away from negotiations for a new stadium in San Diego in mid-June and are focusing on trying to move to Carson along with the archrival Oakland Raiders.

The Cowboys had two fumbles in the first half, including one by backup quarterback Brandon Weeden that was recovered by Patrick Robinson to set up Woodhead's score.

"I think the stuff we need to work on is obvious," Cowboys coach Jason Garrett said. "It's about the ball, the ball, the ball. We didn't take care of it there."

The Cowboys tied it at 7 when undrafted rookie Gus Johnson scored on a 5-yard run early in the second quarter. Johnson, looking to prove he can make it after the top three candidates to replace NFL rushing champion DeMarco Murray were hurt, left with a shoulder injury in the third quarter.

Coach Jason Garrett said he thinks it's a separated shoulder.

"He was taking advantage of his reps," Garrett said. "That was a good opportunity for him with three other backs not playing in the ballgame."

San Diego went ahead 14-7 when Branden Oliver scored on a 10-yard run just before halftime.

San Diego's Nick Novak kicked a 52-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

Rookie watch

Chargers: RB Melvin Gordon, the 15th pick overall in the draft, carried six times for 11 yards. LB Denzel Perryman, the second-round pick, was flagged 15 yards for unnecessary roughness for a hit on QB Dustin Vaughan.

QB comparison

Cowboys: Backup Branden Weeden was 4 of 5 for 42 yards. Dustin Vaughan was 12 of 18 for 106 yards and Jameill Showers was 5 of 11 for 40 yards.

Chargers: Philip Rivers was 2 for 2 for 20 yards. Backup Kellen Clemens was 5 of 10 for 31 yards. Brad Sorensen was 4 of 8 for 24 yards.

Fantasy watch

Cowboys: TE Gavin Escobar was targeted a game-high seven times and had five catches for 47 yards with a long of 21.

Chargers: TE Ladarius Green played but wasn't targeted once. He is expected to replace Antonio Gates, but will be suspended without pay for the first four games after testing positive for PEDs.

Injury update

Chargers: G Johnnie Troutman (right arm) and LB Tourek Williams (right foot) were hurt and didn't return. CB Chris Davis left with an undisclosed injury.

Where's Spanos?

Chargers chairman Dean Spanos, son of owner Alex Spanos, wasn't on the sideline watching pregame warmups as he usually is. Spanos has been kept under wraps during the contentious stadium push while others speak on his behalf.

NFL issues memo reminding players to not fight

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — The NFL warned teams about fighting during games in response to inter- and intra-team altercations that have erupted in training camp, including the one that left New York Jets quarterback Geno Smith with a broken jaw.

In a memo obtained by The Associated Press, executive vice president Troy Vincent reminded all 32 teams on Friday that "fighting will not be tolerated." Vincent asked coaches, general managers and club executives to remind players of the rules, and noted that the prohibition of fighting will be a point of emphasis for officials.

"These rules are in place for the protection and safety of our players and to keep them on the field," Vincent wrote. "As professionals, no matter how emotional the game becomes, there is nothing that should resort to fighting."

The memo cited Article 12 of the NFL rules, which prohibits "striking, kicking or kneeing opponents." The penalty for a violation is 15 yards, with the official given the discretion whether to also eject the player from the game in the case of a flagrant violation.

The memo also cited the 2015 League Policy for Players, which says: "Don't fight, and if a fight breaks out involving other players, stay away."

Training camp fights are a long tradition, with young players or others trying to make the roster attempting to impress coaches with their intensity but sometimes taking it too far.

Washington and Houston had several fights during a joint practice, one of them devolving into a bench-clearing brawl that caused no injuries but forced the coaches to separate the teams for the rest of the day. Cowboys receiver Dez Bryant and cornerback Tyler Patmon threw fists at each other in practice; Chiefs receiver Jeremy Maclin exchanged words and punches; the Titans had three scuffles in a night practice; and Carolina quarterback Cam Newton scuffled with cornerback Josh Norman.

Smith is out 6-10 weeks after he was punched by Jets linebacker Ikemefuna Enemkpali, who was immediately released and soon signed by the Buffalo Bills.

Andre Johnson has big hopes as he catches on with Colts

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

ANDERSON, Ind. — Andre Johnson is starting over.

After thriving for 12 seasons in Houston, he's working with a new quarterback and learning a new playbook. And now he's ready to head home today after finishing his first training camp on a college campus.

On Sunday at Philadelphia, Johnson's transformation will be complete when he dons a Colts jersey for his first game.

"I don't really bring much attention to that," he said. "I just try to treat it as football — with a different team."

To Johnson, it's just business.

The seven-time Pro Bowler joined Indianapolis as the replacement for an old college friend, Reggie Wayne.

All Johnson wanted was the right contract and a shot at winning a Super Bowl. It didn't take him long to figure out Indy was the best fit.

Despite helping Houston go from fledgling franchise to division champ in less than a decade, Johnson never reached a conference championship game and never played with a true franchise quarterback. Instead he caught passes from the likes of David Carr, Tony Banks, Sage Rosenfels, T.J. Yates, Case Keenum, Ryan Fitzpatrick and Ryan Mallett. Matt Schaub proved the best of the bunch.

In Indy, things are very different.

"I wanted to be at a place that had a stable quarterback," Johnson said after signing his three-year, $21 million deal in March. "I feel like Andrew (Luck) is arguably the best quarterback in the game."

Why he picked LeTourneau University: "Earlier this summer, they saw me play in Dallas. They just started talking to me after the games. It's excellent academics wise and the baseball program has done well the past couple of years. They put a huge emphasis on glorifying God in everything that they do and that really hit home for me."
MCA coach Clete Seyle on Raies: "He's a hard worker, first and foremost. He's very versatile and he can contribute to teams in a number of ways. He's going to bring a great attitude and a strong work ethic to any team he's on. We're excited for him."
Notes: Raies will become the first player in the Knights' program history to play at the collegiate level. ... Raies, who mostly played catcher and pitched in his senior year at MCA, said he'll most likely play second base at LeTourneau. "I caught a lot at MCA but that's because that was where I was needed. I feel that my skill set is naturally suited for second base." ... Raies said he plans on majoring in kinesiology with an emphasis on exercise science. ... Raies added that another reason he chose LeTourneau was that the head baseball coach, Robin Harriss, teaches a couple of courses which Raies plans to take for his degree.

business. I know now that I'm retired, more so than when I was playing."

"I think when you're playing and you're giving all you can, you want people to praise you more than being negative toward you. After being away for a while, some people just say you mature a little bit later. Got it after the fact," he said.

Bonds also acknowledged how he wasn't always the nicest guy to be around during his playing days, but, "I was preparing for my job. I thought at that time it was in my way in what I needed to do to go to work. So I was a little more standoffish or whatever you want to call it."

A jury found Bonds guilty in 2011 for giving a meandering answer to a federal grand jury in 2003 when asked whether his personal trainer gave him anything that required a syringe for self-injection. An 11-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned that conviction this past April.

Bonds was charged in 2007, four years after his testimony before the grand jury after receiving a grant of immunity. He didn't dispute that he took steroids, but testified to the grand jury that his former trainer, Greg Anderson, told him they were flaxseed oil and arthritic balm.

After a three-week trial, Bonds was convicted for his response to the question: "Did Greg ever give you anything that required a syringe to inject yourself with?"

A three-judge panel of the 9th Circuit unanimously upheld the conviction in 2013, but the larger group of judges ruled in April that there was insufficient evidence Bonds' answer was material to the federal investigation into sports doping.

His new passion of bicycling helped him cope with the stresses of his legal issues.

"I can say yes. Cycling has. I see the world differently. I always saw it in the car," he said. "I've had knee surgeries, back surgeries, hip surgeries, cycling kind of ... I'm an athlete, that's what I am. That's what I do. I like to train, that's what I enjoy to do."

Now, with things behind him, Bonds certainly appears relaxed and at ease. He walked across the field to the visitors' dugout on Thursday afternoon and walked through the tunnel straight to the Washington clubhouse, where he spent nearly 40 minutes inside with Nationals manager Matt Williams, a former teammate.

Bonds emerged, smiling, then posed for a photo with Williams and a Nationals employee before their game against the Giants.

"So, I'm thankful that it's over. I'm appreciative of things, and it's time to just move forward. For me, it's just move forward," Bonds said of the legal case. "Every day is a good day."

recovery. Stay Strong and look forward to seeing you at the ballpark soon," the Blue Jays tweeted.

On Tuesday, Minnesota Timberwolves coach Flip Saunders said he is being treated for Hodgkin lymphoma, and his doctors consider it "very treatable and curable." His plans were to remain coach and team president while being treated.

Cherington said Farrell told him Thursday when the GM was traveling between flights en route to Greenville, South Carolina, to visit one of the team's Single-A affiliates.

"He called me on a quick layover," Cherington said. "I was sort of in shock. A few minutes to sink in and I figured I had to get back to Boston last night. I've been talking to him yesterday and this morning."

"There's a lot of respect for him, not just in the Red Sox organization, but throughout baseball," he said. "There's a lot of people already reaching out. He's someone that spent his whole life in baseball. He's played, he's coached, worked in the front office and, obviously, he's managed now."

Red Sox chairman Tom Werner spoke about Farrell during the pregame TV telecast.

"We all love John," he said. "We said the most important thing is get back soon."

Cleveland manager Terry Francona is one of Farrell's closest friends. Farrell was the pitching coach under Francona when the Red Sox won the 2007 World Series.

"He's such a tough guy and he has so many people that care about him that I just honestly feel like he will come through this with flying colors," he said before the Indians played at Minnesota.

save in 23 chances — all since May 20.

Evan Longoria's two-run double in the third put the Rays up 3-2, and came after the first of three umpire calls overturned on replay review.

One of the runners to score on Longoria's liner into the left-center gap was Rays leadoff hitter Brandon Guyer, who initially was called out on what appeared to be a double play. A 1-minute, 22-second review determined first baseman Mcreland's foot had just slipped off the base.

"I could see that his foot was off the bag a little, so I figured if we did challenge it, we'd probably win," said Guyer, who two innings later was initially called safe trying to stretch a hit into a double before being out on the overturn.

The other overturned call also came with Tampa Bay batting, and was an safe call that became an out.

It was the 13th time since MLB started replay last season that there have been three overturned calls in the same game. There have never been four.

Tulsa tops 'Hounds in shortened game

From staff reports

The Tulsa Drillers defeated the Midland RockHounds 2-1 in a rain-shortened, six-inning game Friday night at Security Bank Ballpark.

Tulsa got a run in the first and added another in the sixth for the difference.

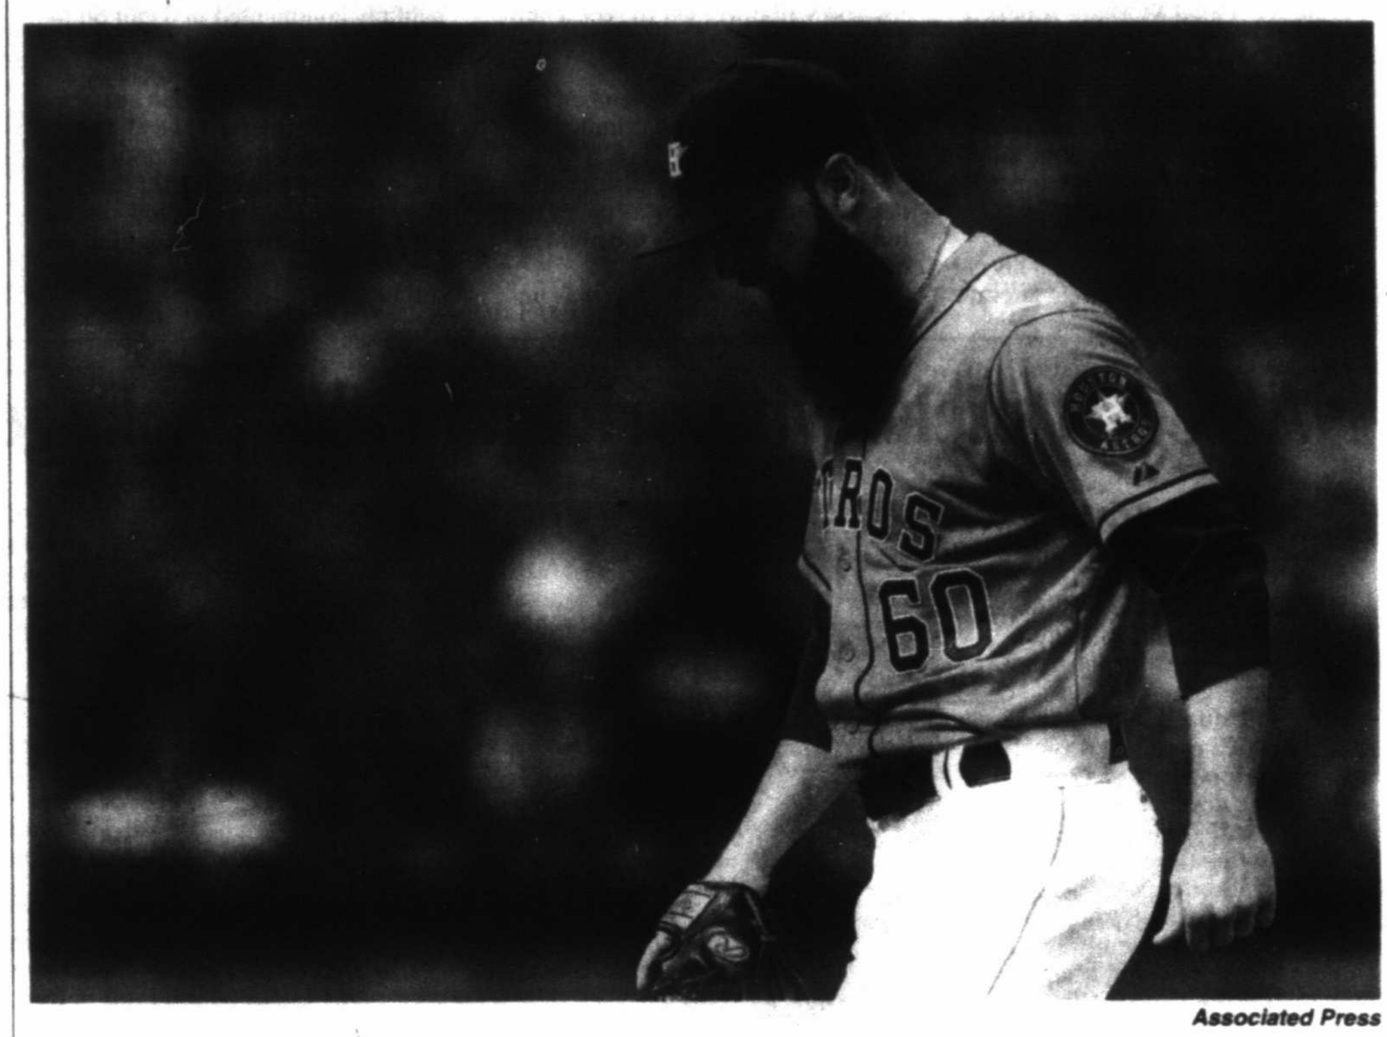

Midland got its lone run in the bottom of the sixth on a Ryon Healy RBI single.

Josh Whitaker was 2-for-2 for Midland.

Ross Stripling (3-3) got the win for Tulsa, while Jake Sanchez (10-8) took the loss for Midland.

Attendance was 3,780 at Friday's game.

The teams play the second game of a three-game series at 7 p.m. today.

Houston Astros starting pitcher Dallas Keuchel screams on his way back to the dugout after getting the third out against the Detroit Tigers in the fifth inning Friday in Houston.

MLBROUNDUP

FROM WIRE REPORTS

American League

ASTROS 5
TIGERS 1

HOUSTON — Dallas Keuchel struck out eight in seven solid innings and Jed Lowrie powered the offense with a two-RBI double to lead Houston to a win over Detroit.

The Astros trailed entering the fifth inning before scoring three runs, capped by the double by Lowrie to take a 3-1 lead.

It was the opener of a 10-game homestand for Houston, which remains in first place in the American League-West despite going 2-7 on a recent road trip.

Keuchel (14-6) yielded six hits and one run to improve to 11-0 at home this season. His 14 wins overall are tied for most in the AL.

Alfredo Simon (10-7) allowed six hits and four runs in five-plus innings for the loss.

Detroit slugger Miguel Cabrera returned from a six-week stint on the disabled list.

INDIANS 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Corey Kluber flirted with a no-hitter for the second consecutive outing against Minnesota before finishing with a one-hitter in his second straight complete game as Cleveland cruised to a win.

Kluber (8-12) gave up just a solo home run to Joe Mauer and struck out seven in his fourth complete game of the season.

Giovanny Urshela had two hits, including a two-run homer for Cleveland. Francisco Lindor, Lonnie Chisenhall and Mike Aviles each had three hits to help the Indians win for the fifth time in six games.

Trevor May (8-8) gave up two runs on five hits in three innings in his first start for Minnesota since moving to the bullpen in early June.

Kluber took a no-hitter into the seventh inning in his last start, also against Minnesota, before Mauer singled with two outs. This time, the only blemish on Kluber's line before Mauer's home run with two outs in the fourth was a walk to rookie Miguel Sano in the second inning.

YANKEES 4
BLUE JAYS 3

TORONTO — Carlos Beltran hit a huge home run in the eighth inning, Andrew Miller escaped a big jam in the ninth and the New York Yankees stopped Toronto's 11-game winning streak, beating the Blue Jays 4-3 on Friday night.

Miller struck out Ben Revere and Troy Tulowitzki with runners on second and third to close out the victory. The win moved the Yankees a half-game ahead of Toronto and back into first place in the AL East.

David Price took a 3-0 lead into the eighth before New York rallied. He left after Chase Headley's RBI double and Beltran then greeted reliever Aaron Sanchez (6-5) with a pinch-hit, three-run homer.

Ivan Nova (5-4) wound up with the win. Dellin Betances pitched the eighth and Miller finished for his 26th save, fanning Tulowitzki to end a 12-pitch sequence.

RED SOX 15
MARINERS 1

BOSTON — Travis Shaw hit two home runs and Rusney Castillo hit one to carry Boston to a 15-1 win over Seattle, just hours after Red Sox manager John Farrell announced he's taking a medical leave to treat lymphoma.

Fighting back tears, the 53-year-old Farrell said that he had a "highly curable" form of cancer and has taken leave for the rest of the season.

Shaw had a two-run and solo shot, and Castillo's was a two-run homer in Boston's highest run total of the season. The Red Sox finished with a season-high 21 hits and scored in six of the eight innings they batted.

Joe Kelly (5-6) limited the Mariners to one run and four in six innings. He struck out six and walked two.

Mike Montgomery (4-5) gave up nine runs on 10 hits in just 2 1/3 innings.

ROYALS 4
ANGELS 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Eric Hosmer hit a go-ahead two-run homer, Danny Duffy settled down after a wild start and Kansas City rallied for a victory over Los Angeles.

Duffy (6-6) allowed five hits without a walk while matching a franchise record with three hit batters in just six innings. But the left-hander only allowed one run, wiggling out of a few jams by leaving six Angels on base — three in scoring position.

The Royals mustered just one hit off Jered Weaver (4-9) until the sixth, when Ben Zobrist led off with a double to right. He tied the game moments later when first baseman Albert Pujols let a sharply hit grounder by Lorenzo Cain through his legs for an error.

Hosmer followed with his 406-foot shot over the bullpen in right field.

Greg Holland got the last three outs for his 26th save.

GIANTS 8
NATIONALS 5

SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Duffy homered among his three hits and drove in three runs. Hunter Pence also had a homer and San Francisco beat Washington.

Gregor Blanco added three hits and drove in two runs for the Giants, who have won three of four since being swept in a four-game series by the Cubs in Chicago.

Bryce Harper homered and drove in four runs and Danny Espinosa also went deep for the Nationals, who lost their fourth straight and fifth in the last six.

Max Scherzer (11-9) gave up a season-high six runs on seven hits over three innings.

Giants starter Matt Cain failed to finish the fifth inning for a second straight start, allowing five runs on six hits in 4 2/3 innings.

Jeremy Affeldt (2-2) took over for Cain in the fifth and pitched an inning to get the win.

ORIOLES 8
ATHLETICS 6, 13 INNINGS

BALTIMORE — Manny Machado hit a two-run homer in the 13th inning, and Baltimore also got home runs from Adam Jones and Chris Davis in a victory over Oakland.

Caleb Joseph doubled with one out in the 13th against Drew Pomeranz (4-5), who left after being visited on the mound by the team trainer. Aaron Brooks entered, and Machado sent the right-hander's second pitch into the seats in left field.

That enabled the Orioles to avoid a third straight defeat, which would have dropped them to .500 for the first time since July 27. The defending AL East champions are in third place in the division and 1 1/2 games off the pace in the wild-card hunt.

Rookie Jason Garcia (1-0) got three straight outs in the 13th to earn his first major league win.

National League

PADRES 9
ROCKIES 5

DENVER — Matt Kemp hit a triple in the ninth for the first cycle in San Diego Padres history and they went on to beat Colorado.

Kemp also had a two-run homer in the first, single in the third and an RBI double in the seventh. His triple in the ninth went off the fence in center and he easily scampered into third.

The Padres retrieved the historic baseball. One streak down, one to go. They're the only team in the majors without a no-hitter.

Kemp ignited a four-run rally in the seventh with a two-out, RBI double and Jedd Gyorko later followed with a three-run homer.

Recently signed Bud Norris (1-0) pitched the sixth to pick up the win.

Reliever Ken Roberts (0-1), called up from Triple-A Albuquerque earlier in the day, took the loss.

DODGERS 5
REDS 3

LOS ANGELES — Adrian Gonzalez hit a three-run homer to highlight a four-run fifth inning and Los Angeles beat Cincinnati.

John Lamb (1-0) gave up four consecutive two-out hits, capped by Gonzalez's 23rd homer of the season into the lower right-field seats that put the Dodgers ahead 5-1.

Alex Wood (8-7) earned his first victory in three tries with the Dodgers, allowing three runs and five hits in 6 1/3 innings. The left-hander struck out three and walked three in his home debut since being acquired from Atlanta.

Kenley Jansen retired the side in the ninth for his 23rd save in 24 chances. He earned his 129th career save, tying Jeff Shaw for second all-time in franchise history.

Joey Votto drove in all three of Cincinnati's runs, including a two-run homer that left the Reds trailing 5-3 in the sixth.

PIRATES 3
METS 2, 10 INNINGS

NEW YORK — Gregory Polanco singled home the go-ahead run in the 10th inning and Pittsburgh ended New York's seven-game home winning streak.

The teams went into extra innings at 1-all. Polanco singled off Bobby Parnell (1-2) and Aramis Ramirez hit a sacrifice fly against Carlos Torres.

The NL East-leading Mets scored in the bottom half on Curtis Granderson's sacrifice fly before Mark Melancon finished for his 36th save.

Arquimedes Caminero (3-1) pitched a scoreless ninth for the win.

CARDINALS 3
MARLINS 1

ST. LOUIS — Jaime Garcia pitched shutout ball into the ninth inning and Matt Carpenter homered, leading St. Louis over Miami.

Garcia (5-4) came within two outs of throwing the first complete game of the season for the NL Central leaders. He gave up six singles, walked one and struck out six.

Trevor Rosenthal got his 36th save in 38 chances.

Carpenter's bunt single broke a scoreless tie in the fifth. He hit a solo home run in the eighth.

Tom Koehler (8-10) took the loss and Miami's three-game winning streak ended.

Ichiro Suzuki singled in the Miami fifth for his 2,913th hit in the major leagues. Combined with 1,278 hits in Japan, he equaled Ty Cobb's total of 4,191. Cobb held the big league mark that Pete Rose eventually passed on his way to a record 4,256 hits.

BRAVES 3
DIAMONDBACKS 2

ATLANTA — Julio Teheran pitched six strong innings, Cameron Maybin drove in two runs and Atlanta beat Arizona.

Atlanta got a solid outing from Teheran after their starters had gone 2-8 with a 6.02 ERA in the last 15 games.

The victory improved the Braves to 31-23 at home. They've won 12 of 19 at Turner Field. But they are last in the majors with 40 road losses.

Teheran (8-6) allowed three hits, one run and two walks with seven strikeouts.

Diamondbacks starter Robbie Ray (3-8) allowed six hits, three runs and four walks in 4 1/3 innings.

Arodys Vizcaino earned his third save in three chances with a perfect ninth.

BREWERS 3
PHILLIES 1

MILWAUKEE — Wily Peralta pitched seven scoreless innings and Jean Segura dashed home on a rare two-base sacrifice fly to lift Milwaukee to a victory over Philadelphia.

Segura's scramble came after center fielder Odubel Herrera and right fielder Domonic Brown collided in the third inning. According to STATS, it was the first time a player had scored from second this season on a sacrifice fly.

Peralta (3-7) had his best start this year, and Francisco Rodriguez picked up his 27th save in 27 tries this season despite Chase Utley's RBI single.

Utley had four hits for the Phillies, who squandered a solid start by Adam Morgan (3-4) by stranding 10 runners.

Khris Davis added a solo home run for the Brewers in the second.

Interleague

CUBS 6
WHITE SOX 5

CHICAGO — Chris Coghlan hit two home runs, Anthony Rizzo also went deep, and Chicago made it eight straight wins and 14 in 15 games.

The Cubs, coming off a 7-0 homestand, extended their longest win streak since a nine-game run during the 2008 NL Central championship season.

Coghlan hit a three-run homer in the top of the third, and then he and Rizzo added back-to-back solo drives off the struggling Jeff Samardzija (8-8) in the fifth to give the North Siders a 6-5 lead.

Family believes Tony Stewart lost his temper in fatal crash

Associated Press

The parents of a sprint car driver struck and killed last year by Tony Stewart believe a wrongful death lawsuit is the only way to hold the NASCAR star accountable.

Pamela and Kevin Ward Sr. said Friday on "Good Morning America" they want "justice" for their 20-year-old son.

"That's what we want," Pamela Ward said. "I don't feel Tony meant to kill my son. But his actions killed my son. I think he lost his temper."

Kevin Ward Jr. was killed last August at Canandaigua (N.Y.) Motorsports Park when he exited his car under caution in an apparent attempt to confront Stewart. As Ward Jr. walked down the track, he was struck by Stewart's car.

The Wards believe Stewart revved his engine and swerved toward Ward Jr.

"Tony races every weekend," Kevin Ward Sr. said. "Well I know my son will never get to race again. He took a very, very big part of my family's life."

A grand jury last September cleared Stewart of any criminal wrongdoing.

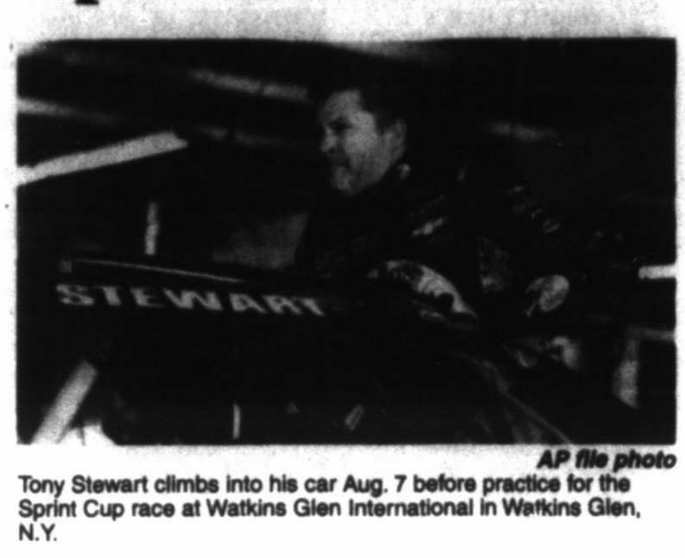

The Ontario County district attorney also added Ward was under the influence of marijuana the night of the incident.

"I do not believe my son was impaired," Pamela Ward said.

The wrongful death suit filed Aug. 7 seeks unspecified damages stemming from Ward Jr.'s potential future earnings and suffering at the time of the accident.

Stewart has maintained the incident was an accident. He's never publicly commented in detail on the sequence of events that evening, and has declined to discuss the lawsuit.

"I wish he hadn't gotten out of the car, more than anybody," Pamela Ward said of her son's actions. "But I also acknowledge the fact that if Tony would have stayed low on the track and not gunned his engine and headed for my son, my son would still be here."

NASCAR sticks with original rules package for Chase

By Noah Trister
Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — NASCAR is sticking with its original 2015 rules package for the Chase for the Sprint Cup.

Steve O'Donnell, NASCAR's executive vice president and chief racing development officer, announced the decision Friday after a meeting with drivers at Michigan International Speedway. This choice comes after NASCAR put track-specific packages in place for a handful of races recently — including this weekend at Michigan.

But when the 10-race Chase begins Sept. 20 at Chicagoland, the original rules will be used.

"We've seen some good things with that package," O'Donnell said. "A lot of work has been done by the race teams already, leading up to the final 10 races. Feel like that's the best decision for the sport."

A special high-drag aerodynamic package was used at Indianapolis Motor Speedway last month and will be in place again this weekend at Michigan, and it received some criticism from drivers.

But a low-downforce package put in place at Kentucky was more popular, and it will be used again at Darlington next month.

"A ton of positives we saw from Kentucky, but we've got to take the time to dial those things in and make sure that everybody's on the same page, we've got the best package to put forth, especially as we look to '16," O'Donnell said. "That does have a lot of momentum and a lot of positives that we can apply to Darlington, and then make some calls post-Darlington as well."

Associated Press

Matt Kenseth holds the pole position flag after qualifying Friday for the Sprint Cup race at Michigan International Speedway in Brooklyn, Mich.

Friday's announcement came shortly after Matt Kenseth won the pole at MIS. Joe Gibbs racing swept the top three spots in qualifying, with Denny Hamlin and Carl Edwards finishing second and third.

JGR recently won four consecutive races — three by Kyle Busch and one by Kenseth. Busch's wins came at Kentucky, New Hampshire and Indianapolis, meaning he won under three sets of rules.

That left Kenseth understandably confident about his team's ability to adapt.

"Our cars have been really fast in all three configurations," Kenseth said. "We've been up front in all three of them, on speed and in the races and in qualifying, so from that aspect, I feel OK about no matter what they bring."

Kenseth did say his personal preference was for the low downforce.

NASCAR will have another chance to observe the high-drag package this weekend, and there's plenty of uncertainty surrounding Sunday's race at MIS. Drivers complained it was too hot with the high-drag rules package, which reduces airflow under the car, trapping heat in the cockpit.

This week, NASCAR mandated a dual outlet duct be used on the right-side window to help with ventilation.

"There were some drivers that got real hot and were very vocal, so now we all have to run with the ducts open to cool the cars, which has always been an option. The guys that were hot wanted to make everybody have it, so it wouldn't just slow their cars," said Matt Kenseth, who won the pole Friday. "I don't really foresee any problems cooling the car for everybody. It's definitely warmer than the normal package."

Jeff Gordon has won three Cup races at Michigan, including a victory last August, but that may not mean much this time.

"Obviously, this weekend a lot has changed that is going to change the aspect of the race and how you win it. That is going to be a challenge that we can't quite predict," Gordon said. "I think it's going to make for some pretty intense and exciting racing and yet there are still a lot of unknowns that we are all going to be challenged with all weekend."

Michigan is wider and faster than Indianapolis — qualifying speeds have surpassed 200 miles per hour at MIS in recent years, although that didn't happen Friday.

Washington Generals take final defeat, and it's loss for us all

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

Say it ain't so.

The Harlem Globetrotters will no longer be beating the Washington Generals game after glorious fake game. A "rivalry" that dates to the Eisenhower administration is coming to an end now that the Trotters have decided to dump their longtime punching bag of an opponent, presumably for business reasons.

Farewell to the team that stoically took buckets of water to the face, allowed pants to be pulled to their ankles and always made sure to score at least one less point than the team everyone paid to see.

Well, except for the single game the Generals won in 1971, when team founder Louis "Red" Klotz threw up the winning shot at the buzzer after Globetrotters star Meadowlark Lemon, losing track of the score, turned over the ball to do one last comic skit.

"Red said, 'Guys, we just won the game. We better get to the locker room before the Trotters find out,'" recalled John Ferrari, Klotz's son-in-law who took over running the Generals in 1987. "Then they announced that the Generals had won. The only thing they had in the locker room was orange soda. So they poured orange soda on their heads. They didn't have any champagne."

Too bad, because the Generals were a team worth celebrating, even if their record over the last 63 years was one win and "something more than 16,000" losses, in Ferrari's estimation.

"I think the audience saw that these guys were trying every night," he said. "They want to win. They're getting close. Isn't that how most of us live? That's why people gravitated to the Generals."

This got us to thinking about other sporting traditions that have gone away over the years.

Some of the favorites:

WHEN STARS WERE STARS: Joe Frazier nearly drowning while trying to swim? Johnny Unitas laboring to pedal a bike? Those were some of the highlights when the world's greatest athletes competed on the made-for-TV "Superstars," the 1970s competition that showed these guys weren't any better than the rest of us when they got out of their comfort zone. Honorable mention goes to "Battle of the Network Stars," which gave us Arte Johnson in a dunking tank.

MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL: It was much more than a prime-time football game when Frank Gifford, Howard Cosell and "Dandy" Don Meredith came into our homes; it was a cultural phenomenon. We cursed the acerbic Cosell (especially when he left our favorite team off his much-anticipated halftime highlights), cheered Meredith's folksy comebacks and marveled at Gifford holding it all together. They still call it Monday Night Football, but now it's just a game or two they play on Mondays.

ABC'S WIDE WORLD OF SPORTS: There was nothing like watching barrel jumping, lumberjack contests, and cliff diving from the comfort of your den on a Saturday afternoon. Not to mention that poor guy crashing off the ski-jumping hill in perpetuity during the opening credits, experiencing what we all came to know as "the agony of defeat."

HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE FIGHTS: They still have these, apparently, but there hasn't been anyone worth watching since Mike Tyson. Ahh, to return to an era when "Heavyweight Champion" made you one of the most recognized people on the planet.

RIVALRIES BURIED: Conference realignment has cost us such great matchups as Oklahoma-Nebraska, Texas-Texas A&M and Penn State-Pittsburgh. What a pity. We also wish the Iron Bowl was still played in Birmingham, before an evenly divided crowd, not on the campuses of Alabama and Auburn. Then again, at least they still play every year.

PENNANT RACES: They no longer exist in baseball, not when there are six divisions and four teams that get into the playoffs without winning their division. The last great pennant race came in 1993, when the San Francisco Giants went 103-59 and didn't even make the playoffs. They lost the NL West to the Atlanta Braves, who were 104-58.

U.S.-SOVIET RIVALRY: The Olympics haven't been quite the same since the Soviet Union went out of business. Every four years, we all got pumped for the good-vs.-evil matchup between our pure, amateur Americans and those hated athletes with the "CCCP" across their chests. (Or, as they viewed it from the other side of the Iron Curtain: the glorious proletariat against the money-grubbing capitalists.) Never again will see epics such as the disputed Soviet gold medal in basketball at the Munich Games, or the U.S. hockey team pulling off the "Miracle on Ice" in Lake Placid.

And now, we've lost the ultimate losers, the Washington Generals.

That's a loss for us all.

David Lingmerth of Sweden hits on the sixth hole during the second round of the PGA Championship golf tournament Friday at Whistling Straits in Haven, Wis.

of his wedges.

"We'll see how it goes tomorrow," Day said. "We've got some scoring holes and some tough ones to finish on. But I'm real happy to be done."

Dustin Johnson, the 18-hole leader, took a brief lead at 8 under until he ran into trouble on the par-5 11th with a wicked lie in the bunker that led to bogey. He added two more bogeys and was four shots out of the lead at 5 under.

"Hopefully, I can come back in the morning and make a couple birdies coming in, and then we'll get the day started on Saturday," he said.

Rory McIlroy had hopes of being a little closer to the lead. Coming off an ankle injury that has kept him out since the U.S. Open, he world's No. 1 player went cold with the putter and had to settle for another round of 71 that put him at 2-under 142.

McIlroy was keeping pace with Spieth until a big turnaround on the 18th hole at the halfway point of their round. Spieth holed out from a bunker for birdie, while McIlroy went well left into knee-high hay, took two chips to reach the green and made double bogey.

"You're going to have to have more of a short game to be able to salvage par sometimes," he said. "I wasn't quite able to do that today at points. But there's still enough good stuff to give me encouragement and make me feel that I can shoot a low one tomorrow and get myself back into it."

Woods had his work cut out for him. He opened with two quick birdies, only to give them back with a double bogey from the bunkers on the fourth hole.

Daly's tournament effectively ended on the seventh hole when he hit 4-iron into the lake, and then followed with two more tee shots with his 6-iron into the lake. After a fourth attempt found the green, Daly heaved his 6-iron into the lake and made 10. He shot 82 and missed the cut.

Woods commits to at least one more week of season

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. — Tiger Woods isn't ready to give up on the season just yet.

Even after another disappointing day at the PGA Championship — where his sand wedge replaced his putter as the main player in his nightmare — Woods committed to playing next week in the Wyndham Championship, giving him one more chance to squeak into the FedEx Cup playoffs.

That almost certainly won't happen at Whistling Straits, where Woods was at 4 over, tied for 89th, with five holes to play when a storm hit Friday afternoon and suspended the second round.

When he returns Saturday morning, he'll face a chip shot from the deep rough on No. 14. He would need to get up and down from there, then probably make two birdies over the last four holes to make the cut, which is projected at 2 over.

He entered the week ranked 186th in the FedEx standings, and only the top 125 make the playoffs. If things don't change drastically over the last five holes here, Woods would have to finish at least second alone next week in the regular-season finale in Greensboro, North Carolina, to reach the top 125.

The day actually looked somewhat promising at the beginning for Woods. He made back-to-back birdies on Nos. 2 and 3 to briefly get to 1 over.

Then, he started flailing in the sand.

Standing well below the ball in a greenside bunker on No. 4, Woods took a huge chunk of sand, but instead of flying out, the ball popped up and dribbled into the next bunker down. That led to a double bogey. On No. 8, he did a good job to save bogey after his approach shot came to rest at the back of a greenside bunker and the shot out of the sand traveled only a few feet, into the deep rough.

Woods shot 37 on the front, then made four straight pars on the back and was facing the tough up and down on 14 when the sirens blew to halt play.

His driving was still a mess. He hit only four of 11 fairways. His putting got a little bit better. He needed 20 putts to get through the first 13 greens — a better rate than Thursday, when he putted a total of 33 times and was asking, to no one in particular, "How bad am I putting?" with an expletive thrown in there, too.

He didn't stop to talk after his rain-shortened stay Friday, though everything he has said up to this point this week has spoken of a player who knows things are broken.

But, he said he enjoys the process of trying to fix his game.

David Lingmerth of Sweden hits on the sixth hole during the second round of the PGA Championship golf tournament Friday at Whistling Straits in Haven, Wis.

of his wedges.

"We'll see how it goes tomorrow," Day said. "We've got some scoring holes and some tough ones to finish on. But I'm real happy to be done."

Dustin Johnson, the 18-hole leader, took a brief lead at 8 under until he ran into trouble on the par-5 11th with a wicked lie in the bunker that led to bogey. He added two more bogeys and was four shots out of the lead at 5 under.

"Hopefully, I can come back in the morning and make a couple birdies coming in, and then we'll get the day started on Saturday," he said.

Rory McIlroy had hopes of being a little closer to the lead. Coming off an ankle injury that has kept him out since the U.S. Open, he world's No. 1 player went cold with the putter and had to settle for another round of 71 that put him at 2-under 142.

McIlroy was keeping pace with Spieth until a big turnaround on the 18th hole at the halfway point of their round. Spieth holed out from a bunker for birdie, while McIlroy went well left into knee-high hay, took two chips to reach the green and made double bogey.

"You're going to have to have more of a short game to be able to salvage par sometimes," he said. "I wasn't quite able to do that today at points. But there's still enough good stuff to give me encouragement and make me feel that I can shoot a low one tomorrow and get myself back into it."

Woods had his work cut out for him. He opened with two quick birdies, only to give them back with a double bogey from the bunkers on the fourth hole.

Daly's tournament effectively ended on the seventh hole when he hit 4-iron into the lake, and then followed with two more tee shots with his 6-iron into the lake. After a fourth attempt found the green, Daly heaved his 6-iron into the lake and made 10. He shot 82 and missed the cut.

Woods commits to at least one more week of season

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. — Tiger Woods isn't ready to give up on the season just yet.

Even after another disappointing day at the PGA Championship — where his sand wedge replaced his putter as the main player in his nightmare — Woods committed to playing next week in the Wyndham Championship, giving him one more chance to squeak into the FedEx Cup playoffs.

That almost certainly won't happen at Whistling Straits, where Woods was at 4 over, tied for 89th, with five holes to play when a storm hit Friday afternoon and suspended the second round.

When he returns Saturday morning, he'll face a chip shot from the deep rough on No. 14. He would need to get up and down from there, then probably make two birdies over the last four holes to make the cut, which is projected at 2 over.

He entered the week ranked 186th in the FedEx standings, and only the top 125 make the playoffs. If things don't change drastically over the last five holes here, Woods would have to finish at least second alone next week in the regular-season finale in Greensboro, North Carolina, to reach the top 125.

The day actually looked somewhat promising at the beginning for Woods. He made back-to-back birdies on Nos. 2 and 3 to briefly get to 1 over.

Then, he started flailing in the sand.

Standing well below the ball in a greenside bunker on No. 4, Woods took a huge chunk of sand, but instead of flying out, the ball popped up and dribbled into the next bunker down. That led to a double bogey. On No. 8, he did a good job to save bogey after his approach shot came to rest at the back of a greenside bunker and the shot out of the sand traveled only a few feet, into the deep rough.

Woods shot 37 on the front, then made four straight pars on the back and was facing the tough up and down on 14 when the sirens blew to halt play.

His driving was still a mess. He hit only four of 11 fairways. His putting got a little bit better. He needed 20 putts to get through the first 13 greens — a better rate than Thursday, when he putted a total of 33 times and was asking, to no one in particular, "How bad am I putting?" with an expletive thrown in there, too.

He didn't stop to talk after his rain-shortened stay Friday, though everything he has said up to this point this week has spoken of a player who knows things are broken.

But, he said he enjoys the process of trying to fix his game.

Fairy Tales and DRAGONS

Fairy Tales and Dragons, a day camp presented by the Midland office of the Girl Scouts of the Desert Southwest, was Tuesday through Thursday. Campers were called on to save "Girlstonia" — land of all Girl Scouts — from a fire-breathing dragon.

Friend drafted as photographer gets harsh review from bride

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: Recently, my husband was asked to be the best man at his friend's wedding. The happy couple did not have the financial means to hire a photographer, so I was asked to take pictures of the ceremony and reception.

I'm not a professional photographer, and the bride knows that. I gladly photographed the nuptials on the couple's big day. Of course, I charged them nothing for doing it.

I am now on the receiving end of insulting comments regarding the photos I took. When the bride rudely voiced her displeasure, I was taken aback. I did nothing less than my very best to accommodate her, and I have received nothing but ingratitude and disrespect for my efforts.

I believe in keeping commitments I have made. I intend to complete the edits of the original photos and create a wedding album as I promised. However, how do I tactfully address the situation with the bride if she "reminds" me again of my lack of professional photography skills? — SAD NEWBIE PHOTOGRAPHER

DEAR PHOTOGRAPHER: Alas, it seems that no good deed goes unpunished. The next time the bride "reminds" you, all you have to do is "suggest" that for the next happy occasion she spend some money and hire a professional instead of hitting up a friend for a freebie and then complaining about the result.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend, "Riley," who is the sweetest woman I know. She's in her mid-20s and has a stable job, but I'm afraid she is setting herself up. She rescues animals that are terminal or nearly so. She's great with them and should become a veterinarian. A few she has brought back to health, but others just can't be saved.

My concern is that when Riley loses one, she breaks down. She cries for hours on end, but the minute she gets a call, she willingly takes in another one.

She's like a sister to me, and I respect and admire her determination to care for these creatures and give them love when no one else will. How can I nicely say to her that I think she shouldn't accept any more rescues because she will only continue to get more depressed? — CONCERNED FRIEND IN GEORGIA

DEAR CONCERNED: There is no nice way to say that to your friend. What you CAN say is that you are concerned about her because of the depression she experiences when she can't save one of her animals. For an animal lover, the loss of a pet is painful and personal, and her reaction isn't unusual.

DEAR ABBY: I am hoping you can clear this up. A few weeks ago, my boyfriend and I had some of his family members over for a visit. It was very casual, as usual, more like a Sunday afternoon drop-in. I came out of our room barefoot, because I usually walk around that way in the house. I was scolded by his grandmother and told I was rude to walk around barefoot when there is company. Was she right? — BAREFOOT CONTESSA

DEAR BAREFOOT: No. She was out of line to criticize you. If people choose to go shoeless in their own home, it's really nobody else's business.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 15, 2015:

This year you add to your financial stability. You will be concerned with increasing your status, especially at work or within your community. Others express a new sense of respect for your abilities. If you are single, you attract many wannabe suitors. Wait until you find Mr. or Ms. Right before making a commitment. If you are attached, the two of you work great together as a couple. You might want to make a major investment, but make sure you both are comfortable with it. VIRGO is lucky with money, so you would do well to listen to his or her advice more often.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You might find yourself in a situation where you have the ability to end a problem and move forward. How you deal with a personal problem could be more important than you realize. Stay upbeat in your dealings. Tonight: Time for some good old-fashioned fun.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You might want to hear more from a loved one whom you care about. Make plans to spend plenty of quality time with this person. You might be surprised by what comes up for you if you just relax and hang out together. Tonight: Let someone else choose.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You could be at the end of a problematic situation if you are willing to discuss it completely. You'll see a personal matter open up as a result. You might feel uncomfortable at first, but the results will justify the discomfort. Ease up. Tonight: Stay close to home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Join in on a project involving a neighbor or a close relative. You are likely to get an earful, some of which might be important to hear. Otherwise, stay centered and enjoy the camaraderie of the moment. Confusion surrounds a conversation. Tonight: Visit with friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You might want to understand what it takes to continue on the present path. How you handle a personal matter could change after you see what someone else wants and expects. You have the right to say "no" if need be. Tonight: Treat a loved one to a night out on the town.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ You will be on top of a problem. Honor a fast change of pace, and know what you want. Others respond to you and your ideas. Understand that a loved one could distort your words. Clarify, if you see this possibility occurring. Tonight: Understand what needs to happen.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Listen to news and remain censored. Don't assume that you have all the answers. Understand what can occur if you choose not to interfere. Realize what needs to happen, but move to that goal slowly. You don't need to jump immediately in a new direction. Tonight: Calm down.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Zero in on what you feel is important. Your sense of direction comes out when dealing with friends. You know how to make others feel special. Draw out the best in those around you by encouraging them to help you with a somewhat silly project. Tonight: Where the gang is.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Deal with an older relative directly. Understand what this person wants, and then open up a discussion. Whether you can follow through won't be important in the long run. This person often makes unreasonable demands. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Decide to hop in the car and take off for a favorite place. You seem to need a change of scenery. Others who are with you will benefit as well. You will be able to detach from an issue and approach it later with a promising solution. Tonight: Reach for the stars.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Defer to others. A suggestion from a loved one will delight you. You can't seem to imagine what could be better. Your ability to understand what is going in between you and someone else will encourage you to say little. Time heals. Tonight: A cozy dinner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Visualize more of what is going on with others. Demonstrate your sensitivity and ability to understand. You'll see a matter in a new light, which will take you to a new level of understanding. Stay open to changes and new possibilities. Tonight: All smiles.

OPEN HOUSE SATURDAY 1:00-3:00

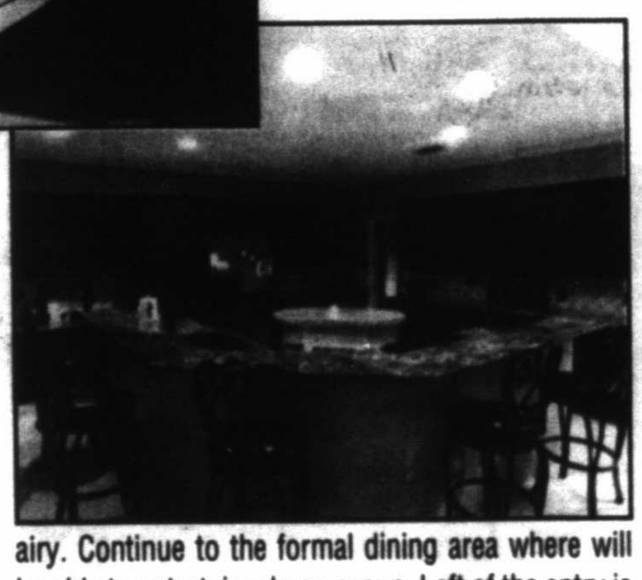

3901 Arroyo

Located on a corner lot in Trinity West Sub Division, 3901 Arroyo offers an open floor plan, elegance, spacious rooms and great curb appeal. Constructed in 1989 with 4,073 square feet (per MCAD), there are four bedrooms, three full baths, one half bath, three living areas, two dining areas, two fireplaces and a pool in a very low maintenance back yard. Schools here include Parker Elementary, Alamo Jr. High and Lee High.*

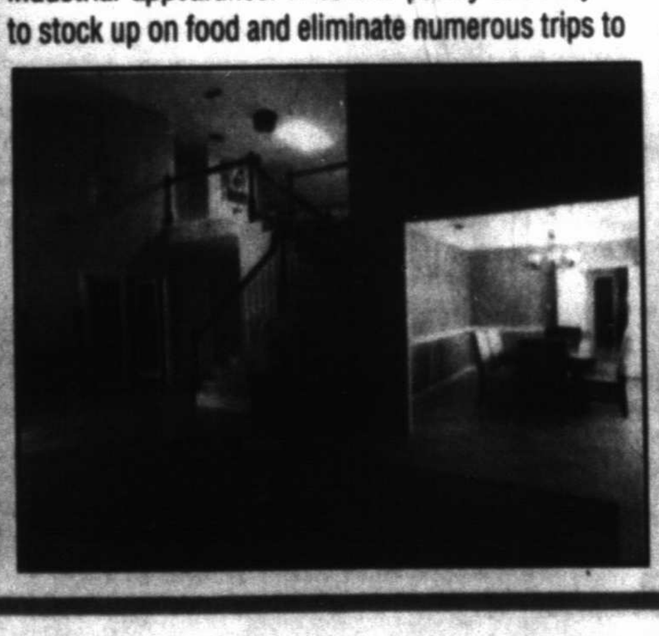

A circular drive leads to the front door of this two story home. Impressive details include two-story ceilings in the formal living area and den, oversized floor moldings, crown molding, tile flooring, Plantation shutters and a stairway leading to a landing overlooking the den, kitchen and formal areas.

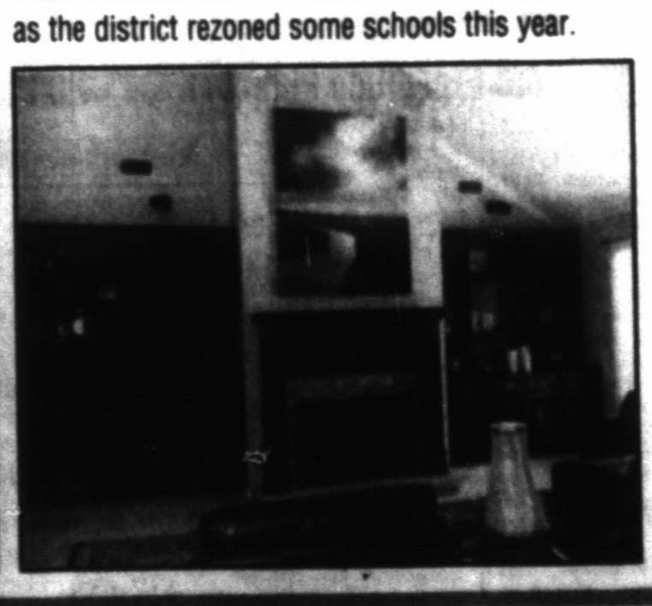

On the right is the formal living area where an abundance of windows makes the room bright and airy. Continue to the formal dining area where will be able to entertain a large group. Left of the entry is an office that will amaze you with the unique ceiling of license plates, a floor consisting of pennies used for tiles and windows surrounded by built-in bookcases. A decorator's creative touch has been used to distress the black woodwork in the office, den and kitchen. A full bathroom is here as well and is open to the hallway on the other side.

This home has massive amounts of storage! Three closets in the entry hallway are just the beginning! A half bathroom is conveniently located in the hall on the way to the den/family room. A wall of windows looks out to a refreshing pool and covered porch. The focal point of the room is the brick fireplace surrounded by black built-in cabinets and shelves.

The den is open to the gorgeous kitchen! Two walls of cabinets and an island with a wine rack and storage will keep dishes and small appliances organized. Granite covers every countertop and black appliances are waiting for your commands. Serve meals at the wrap around bar or in the breakfast area. The lighting over the table has an industrial appearance. A corner pantry allows you to stock up on food and eliminate numerous trips to the grocery. The laundry room is nearby with more cabinets, a sink and space for hanging clothing.

A hallway off the den leads to the sequestered master suite! This room has it all! In addition to space for bedroom furniture, there is a sitting area. You will love the two-sided fireplace that opens to the bedroom as well as the bathroom! Imagine enjoying the corner Jacuzzi with a fire! Dual sinks and dressing areas, linen closet and double walk-in closets with more built-ins will reduce clutter. An exterior door leads to the back porch and pool. Also, on this hall is another closet, access to the three car garage and a bedroom that faces the front yard.

Upstairs, there are two more bedrooms and one full bathroom with skylight. Each room has a ceiling fan and walk-in closet. Additional amenities to this home include: reverse osmosis, security system, automatic sprinkler system, skylights and sequestered master.

Listed at $570,000 you may obtain more information at the open house from 1:00-3:00 today or contact Sandy J. Hanson at (432) 638-3819. MLS#105822. *MISD schools need to be confirmed as the district rezoned some schools this year.
