Culver judges 'integrity' campaign's main issue

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

A homecoming campaign stop for Texas Supreme Court Justice Barbara Culver Wednesday served as a reminder that more is at stake in the November court election than West Texas representation.

"We are not going to be bought — that's what we're saying," Culver told about 150 Midland Republicans gathered at a Ranchland Hills Country Club fund-raising luncheon.

"One of the things we try to adhere to is that a judge ought to be above the appearance of impropriety," she said. The comment was an allusion to justices that accepted campaign contributions as large as $100,000 from Texas law firms and corporations.

"And when that law firm or company has a case before the Supreme Court, you wonder," she said.

"This judge cannot be compromised," she said. "My integrity is not for sale. Period."

Culver after the appearance pronounced her chances for victory "good," if voters "understand what's at stake."

Gov. Bill Clements in January appointed Culver — a former Midland County judge and 318th Judicial District judge — to the state's high bench to fill a slot vacated by Robert Campbell, who resigned.

Upon her appointment, she became the only West Texan serving on the court, she said. "It does help when a case comes in where I can say, 'I know the area. I know what the complexities of wide open spaces are,'" she said.

She also noted that she is the only woman ever to run for a seat on the court.

In line with her stance on impropriety, her campaign is not accepting contributions over $5,000, and has gathered about $200,000 so far, she said.

According to figures published in The Texas Lawyer, a weekly publication for attorneys, her opponent, former U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower has gathered about $92,000 so far.

Wednesday's appearance harvested a little more than $300 for Culver. Two dollars of the $10 luncheon fee that each attendee paid will go toward Culver coffers.

Baseball buddies hurt when lightning strikes

By DAVID ELIZONDO

SAN ANTONIO — Ten youths were struck by lightning — with force enough to melt the shoes off one boy — as a line of heavy thunderstorms pounded Bexar County Wednesday.

Eight boys and two girls ranging in age from 8 to 15 were playing baseball about 6 p.m. in a Northeast Bexar County makeshift baseball diamond and soccer field when the storm started.

Lightning hit one boy and spread to the others, shocking them, said one of the players while another held a baseball nervously in the waiting room of Brooke Army Medical Center.

Hugo "Ricky" Arauz, 13, who suffered the direct strike while standing near second base, was in critical condition at BAMC late Wednesday.

"His tennis shoe was disintegrated," Montgomery Drive Volunteer Fire Chief John Logan said of Arauz.

Kevin Epps, 15, who suffered flash burns on his eyes, was admitted for observation at BAMC. "He's going to be OK," said Willie Ruth Harris, Epps' mother. "He was still complaining of pain. He was having a hard time seeing." She said, "My little son (Edward Harris, 11) was out there, too. He called from a neighbor's house."

The eight other youths were treated at the scene or the hospital and released.

"The bad thing about it was they said it was sunny. No rain, no clouds, no nothing," Thomas Brooks Sr., 33, said his two sons, Thomas Jr., 10, and Brandon, 8, told him before being joining the other children in the hospital.

"They said they were trying to get a kid out on second base when it (the lightning) hit," the elder Brooks said outside the hospital while bolts of electricity lighted up the darkened skies.

"All of them hit the ground," Brooks said. "They looked at Ricky and said he was out. They went to Kevin and his eyes were rolled back and his leg was burned."

Witnesses said the youngsters play baseball at the field every afternoon.

The storm also caused scattered power outages, and lightning reportedly struck a Northwest Side home. High winds ripped the shingles off a roof of a Universal City business.

Residents fight liquor license effort

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

About 65 rural homeowners remain at odds with a south Midland County restauranteur, whose application for a liquor license goes before the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission next month in Austin.

Harold Embry, owner Kelly Joe's Restaurant and Corral, 4107 S. Highway 349, wants the TABC regulation so he can control alochol consumption by "BYOB" patrons.

Embry applied for a beer and wine permit with the commission on April 6. County Judge Bill Ahders, sitting as administrator for the commission, approved the application following an April 20 hearing.

However, Ahders withdrew his prior approval two weeks later after meeting with residents who were opposed to Embry serving liquor at the establishment.

"The place and manner in which the applicants may conduct their business warrants a refusal of the permit and license," wrote Ahders in his ruling, citing that the atmosphere is contrary to "general welfare, health, peace, morals, safety and sense of decency of the people."

The judge said Wednesday: "It would be unfair to taxpayers who have homes in that area."

Undeterred, Embry has requested a hearing before the state commission at 9 a.m. Aug. 10 in Austin to consider his application for a mixed beverage permit.

"Without a full liquor license I can't control the liquor out there," he said. "If I have a liquor license, I have to shut down at 2 o'clock. Without it who knows how long people are going to stay out there."

Millionaire takes hands-on approach, 'adopts' family

MIAMI (AP) — A millionaire who felt compelled to take direct action in the fight against poverty has offered a welfare mother a job, an education and a home for her five children.

"I kept driving by and seeing the homeless," businessman James Gisclair said Wednesday night. "It started to really bother me.... I honestly became consumed by the urge to do something about it."

For 28-year-old Anita Hunter, struggling to raise her children, including a month-old son, in a drug-ridden inner-city Miami neighborhood dubbed "The Hole," his offer is a "fairy tale" come true.

"I can't believe this is happening to me," she said. "It's just a miracle from God. I've struggled and hoped for so long to get my children out of this neighborhood and into a safe environment."

Gisclair, a 43-year-old New Orleans native and principal owner of six Boca Raton enterprises, including a real estate management company and a restaurant, found the family through Livia Garcia of Miami's Community Development Department. He told her he wanted to help real people he could see and talk to.

"My idea is to see exactly where my money is going and be able to measure its success," said Gisclair, who has four children. "The idea is to get Anita to become self-sufficient to the point where she can pay her own rent on the house, pay her own bills and do everything on her own someday. I plan to pay for everything until she reaches that point."

Hispanic chamber welcomes guests

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Members of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce have flung open the doors to the Tall City and begun welcoming delegates, corporate sponsors and special guests to the 13th annual state Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce convention.

Registration began at 8 a.m. today and continues through 8 p.m. this evening. Nearly 300 had pre-registered by early this week, according to Elvia Hernandez, executive director of the MHCC.

Between 450 and 500 delegates are expected. Including spouses and other guests, more than 800 visitors are expected for the convention, held at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center.

The convention begins this evening with a Hawaiian luau from 6 to 10 p.m. at the ClayDesta National Bank atrium, sponsored by ClayDesta Communications. Following the luau will be a dance at Midland Center, featuring Little Joe y La Familia. Tickets are $12 at the door, and the public is welcomed.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. Friday morning, followed by the opening breakfast at 8:30. Guest speaker at the breakfast, "A Salute to Corporate America," is Gerry Rogers of AT&T. He is also chairman of the board of TAMACC Corporate Partners. All events will be held at the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

Following the breakfast, six free seminars will be held from 10 a.m. to noon.

At noon, a luncheon saluting Hispanic businesswomen will be held, featuring Angela Cabrera, deputy commissioner of economic development for the state of New York. Special guest at the luncheon will be Texas' State Treasurer Ann Richards.

Yellowstone crews fighting fire with fire

AP

Associated Press

Crews using flame throwers fought fire with fire as a blaze burned within six miles of Old Faithful, and authorities said arson caused a South Dakota wildfire that destroyed 22 buildings and forced 2,000 people to flee.

Wildfires also chased hundreds of people from their homes in Idaho, while in Alaska 1,200 firefighters battled wind-fanned blazes that consumed 1.3 million acres, an area larger than Delaware.

Large fires, many of them kindled in drought conditions aggravated during a hot, dry summer, also blackened regions in Arizona, Oregon, Utah, Washington state and Montana.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel took a helicopter tour Wednesday through thick smoke to view 10,000 charred acres in the southern areas of Yellowstone National Park, which is suffering its worst forest fire of the century. The blaze has scorched 109,000 of the park's 2.2 million acres.

Firefighters with flame throwers and some in helicopters lit backfires in about 1,000 acres of meadow to burn fuel ahead of the fire and direct it away from Old Faithful, the park's most famous attraction, and nearby structures.

Even so, the usual hundreds of summer visitors gathered every 75 minutes or so Wednesday to watch the famous geyser erupt into the smoky sky.

"Fantastic," said Alain Dukan of France. "We're not afraid of the fires and we're not worried about it. They say fire is part of the forest."

In South Dakota, firefighters worked all day digging a fire line around a 2,000-acre blaze that burned out of control as it drew within two miles of Rapid City. The fire has destroyed 22 buildings, including seven houses, and forced the evacuation of 2,000 people.

Don Kopp, a fire commander, said Wednesday the blaze was the work of an arsonist.

"Whoever's doing it, they could burn down half of the Black Hills if they want," said Kopp, adding that authorities have been investigating a string of about 50 fires dating to May which they suspect were set by the same person.

He said a cigarette with a match inside was used to start the fire that was spotted Tuesday. Such a device would smolder for a time before bursting into flame.

"I'm not sure what we need to do to catch them, but we need to catch them," Kopp said. The suspected arsonist has set as many as to eight fires in one day, he said.

In Idaho, a temperature inversion kept winds mercifully light as crews worked to keep a 1,700-acre fire away from about 50 homes in the Boise National Forest, 35 miles north of Boise.

"The fire is pretty active and moving to the southeast," said Karen Palmer, Forest Service fire information officer. "We don't have a big handle on how much it's burned because there's so much smoke."

Winds helped Alaska's largest fire grow to 409,000 acres, said Sue Mitchell, a Bureau of Land Management spokeswoman. Most Alaska fires were in remote areas and were let alone because they don't threaten people or property.

In Washington, more than 350 firefighters battled a fire fanned by 20 mph winds and temperatures near 90, which raced across the ridge of the Cascade Mountains on Wednesday, tripling its size to 3,600 acres within a few hours. Firefighters in northeastern Utah, meanwhile, used a rainstorm to contain a 5-day-old, fireworks-caused blaze that charred 1,955 acres in the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area.

Firefighters also contained a lightning-sparked wildfire that burned an estimated 3,400 acres of remote terrain in northwestern Arizona. About 50 people evacuated because of a 650-acre blaze in Montana expected to go home today.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Slight chance for rain continues

A very slight chance of rain continues to be in the forecast. Midlanders can expect partly cloudy skies with a less than 20 percent chance of thundershowers tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the lower 60s and winds will be out of the southeast 5-10 mph.

Friday skies are expected to be partly cloudy with conditions for a less than 20 percent chance of rain developing in the late afternoon. The high will be in the middle 90s and winds will be southeasterly 5-15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 91 was 15 degrees cooler than the record high of 106 set for that date in 1954. The overnight low of 65 was four degrees warmer than the record low of 61 set for this date in 1933.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are possible over most of Texas through tonight in the wake of violent storms that caused extensive property damage in Houston and a lightning strike at San Antonio that left several youngsters injured.

Forecasters say the showers and thunderstorms will be mostly late afternoon and evening type and some may linger until early Friday.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies and continued warm to hot temperatures statewide through Friday.

Lows tonight will be in the mid 60s in the Panhandle and in the 70s over the rest of the state.

Isolated thunderstorms were reported early today along the coast in Southeast Texas.

The weather was calm over most of the state as southerly winds moved plentiful moisture into the state from the Gulf of Mexico due to the combination of a an area of weak low pressure over West Texas and an area of weak high pressure over Lousiana.

Violent thunderstorms were reported Wednesday night at Houston and at San Antonio where several youths were injured, one critically, when lightning struck from a cloudless sky as they played softball in northeast Bexar County.

At Houston, extremely heavy rainfall caused the roof of a warehouse to collapse, flooded some streets and high winds and lightning combined to leave about 60,000 residents to be without electricity for a time.

"It was enough to collapse a 60 by 60 (foot) piece of roof," said N.J. Morzynski, production manager.

The thunderstorms dumped nearly three inches of rain across some portions of the Houston area, causing some street flooding and resulted in dozens of minor accidents.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s, ranging from the 60s over the higher elevations of West Texas to the low 80s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 60 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to 82 at McAllen.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 65 at Amarillo, 79 at Wichita Falls, 78 at Fort Worth and Waco, 75 at Austin, 77 at San Antonio, 71 at Houston, 79 at Corpus Christi and Brownsville, 72 at San Angelo, 74 at Lubbock, 67 at Midland and 70 at El Paso.

NATION

Scattered showers and thunderstorms fell from Georgia to New York state today after spitting out large nuggets of hail and generating winds up to 63 mph that downed trees and power lines.

A lightning bolt from a cloudless sky Wednesday afternoon hit two boys playing softball just northeast of San Antonio, Texas, melting one boy's tennis shoes and sending both to the hospital, officials said. Several other boys suffered minor injuries.

"It was just one bolt, but it was so strong and so fierce that it hit those two boys and all the others got the aftershock," said Bexar County Sheriff's patrolman Rick Talamentez.

The boy whose tennis shoes melted, a 13-year-old, was in critical condition today at Brooke Army Medical Center. A 15-year-old boy was in good condition there.

Thunderstorms in southeast Texas Wednesday afternoon produced hail as big as golf balls and winds which downed trees and power lines.

The storms dissipated in the evening, but showers and thunderstorms continued today in central and eastern Oklahoma.

Heavy rains in the Boston area Wednesday caused floods up to 4 feet high that closed a highway south of the city, backing up traffic for hours, authorities said.

"We've had massive tie-ups," said Metropolitan District Commission spokesman Larry Gillis.

In the Deep South, thunderstorms Wednesday afternoon and evening generated winds that downed trees in Zion, S.C., and toppled trees and flipped posts in Rex, Ga. Gusts up to 63 mph were recorded in Florence, S.C.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms fell across the Southwest. In central Arizona, thunderstorm winds blew the roof off a trailer north of Casa Grande. A few showers and thunderstorms lingered over the Southwest today.

U.N. leader 'sober' on truce prospects

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The secretary-general said he was "very sober" on prospects for securing a truce in the Iran-Iraq war after the first day of peace talks. Javier Perez de Cuellar also pressed Iran on the issue of Western hostages held in Lebanon.

Iran said its soldiers today crushed a force of Iraqis and Iraqi-backed Iranian rebels in two days of fighting. It said 4,000 enemy soldiers were killed or wounded.

The Islamic Republic News Agency said the fighting around the western city of Eslamabad, 60 miles from the Iraqi border, continued against "remnants of the enemy troops" who were "surrounded by Iranian combatants."

In his first full day of separate truce talks with the belligerents' foreign ministers, Perez de Cuellar met for two hours Wednesday with both Tariq Aziz of Iraq and Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran.

Aziz said Iraq, which has continued attacks on Iran despite Tehran's acceptance last week of a year-old U.N. cease-fire resolution, still wants face-to-face talks with Iran and will not be "stampeded" into a settlement.

Iraq announced that it would honor Resolution 598 almost immediately after the Security Council passed it last summer.

Perez de Cuellar said he raised with Velayati on Wednesday the issue of the 18 foreign hostages, half of them American, believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem militants in Lebanon.

"This is a question on which one has to be very discreet," he told reporters afterwards. "I raised it very, very specifically."

He did not disclose the Iranian envoy's response, and Velayati did not answer questions about the hostages.

Earlier Wednesday, the U.N. chief told reporters he thought the Iranians "might assert their possible influence in order to have this problem out of the way" for "humanitarian and political" reasons.

The Peruvian said he presented to both sides Wednesday the same ideas for implementing a cease-fire in the 8-year-old war and was "very sober" in his assessment of progress. No formal meetings were scheduled for today.

Perez de Cuellar said he could not require direct talks if Iran objects. Iran has refused face-to-face negotiations but has left the door open to a request by the secretary-general.

Aziz said that if Iran does not accept direct talks "that means that they are not sincere about peace."

Some diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Iraq's stubbornness, its continuing military offensive and its alleged use of outlawed chemical warfare were hampering negotiations.

They noted that Aziz described his official visit with the secretary-general as a "courtesy call," while U.N. officials said it was "substantive."

Iranian Ambassador Mohammad Ja'afar Mahallati charged that Iraq was procrastinating and sabotaging U.N. peace efforts. He said Iraq was using chemical warfare, and he lodged a protest with the Security Council.

"How can we take the Iraqis seriously when...they are using chemical weapons?" Mahallati told reporters.

The Iranians frequently accuse Iraq of using chemical weapons, which are banned under the 1925 Geneva Convention. Iraq has acknowledged their use, but contends Iran introduced chemical weapons.

Hashemi Rafsanjani, Iran's parliament speaker and military commander, offered on Tuesday to help get the nine American hostages freed if the United States releases Iranian assets frozen since 1979.

She noted that Hightower had accepted at least one $10,000 contribution from a political action committee. Hightower has told voters he will not accept contributions above $5,000 "from any one individual," she noted.

"You have to listen carefully to what people are saying," she said.

An additional hurdle to overcome is that her Democratic opponent's name "has a nice ring to it," she said. Voters may confuse him with Texas Agricultural Commissioner Jim Hightower, also a Democrat.

Jack Hightower has no experience as a judge, she said. He served as Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox's first assistant after a defeat at the hands of Republican Beau Boulter — now a senatorial candidate — for a Panhandle seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Culver also presented an additional wrinkle to the November election. Six of the nine justices are up for election, she said, thus presenting an opportunity for Republicans to capture a majority.

She implored voters to cast ballots in all races listed on the November ballot, not just for presidential candidates at the top. She said that 38 percent of the Republican's casting ballots in the May primary failed to vote in Supreme Court races.

"If you have a drop off of 38 percent, there's no coattails that reach that far," she said.

The justice said her life since appointment has been hectic. Campaign appearances take up much of her time, but "Obviously, everybody who's warm and friendly and hospitable — that doesn't mean they're going to vote for me."

And as to her new home: "Austin: It's green and it's got some hills, but all I ever see of it is the office, the apartment and the airport," she said.

Embry claims to have invested about $200,000 toward converting the metal structure into a restaurant, complete with pool tables, shuffle board, video games and an outdoor rodeo arena.

"I want to make it a nice place and these people are pushing me into making it into something that I really don't want," he said.

Spearheading the opposition to Embry's efforts is former Precinct 2 County Commissioner Charlie Welch, who claims to have gathered 65 signatures on a petition protesting the application for the mixed beverage permit.

Welch has received support from County Commissioners, who passed a unanimous resolution Monday requesting a denial of the application from the state commission. Among those voting in favor of the resolution was the former commissioner's son, Precinct 3 County Commissioner Scott Welch.

When asked if his vote could be construed as a conflict of interest, the younger Welch said, "It's just a resolution...it doesn't mean anything."

Although the resolution has no weight of law, County Attorney Mark Dettman said the Alcoholic Beverage Commission will give the document due consideration before rendering a decision.

The elder Welch, who was out of town and could not be reached for comment Wednesday and today, resides about a half-mile from the restaurant and corral. In the petition, Welch claims the noise from the dance hall and the public address system in the rodeo arena creates a public nuisance.

In addition, Welch charges that wild rodeo livestock brought on location presents a safety hazard in the neighborhood, known as Ridge Heights, and that the opening of the business in such close proximity to the residences will have an adverse effect on the county tax base.

Embry's attorney, Matthew Blair, said the concerns listed in Welch's petition are purely speculative.

"There are no deed restrictions on the property. It fronts on a major commercial highway, and it's been used as a mud yard and a truck stop. It could be used as a feed lot, a trailer park or any number of less desireable land uses.

"So, there's nothing to prevent Mr. Embry from conducting business with or without a liquor license," Blair said.

Friday concludes with a Mex-Tex fiesta catered by Odessa's Chuck Wagon Gang and featuring music by "Los Keyes" and "Mariachi Ramirez."

Saturday, Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez will speak at the Legislator's breakfast, beginning at 8:30 a.m. Following the breakfast, TAMACC members will hold its annual business meeting.

The trade show will re-open at 1 p.m., with entertainment by local artists and a visit by Tom Flores, former head coach of the Los Angeles Raiders football team. He will be signing autographs at the Coors booth all afternoon. The public is welcome to come by.

Flores will also be the keynote speaker at the chairman's dinner and dance, beginning at 7 p.m. Saturday, emceed by Clayton Williams Jr. The State Hispanic Businessman and Businesswoman, Member and Corporate Member of the Year will be announced at the dinner. A dance will follow, featuring music by "Fandango."

The convention concludes Sunday morning with a farewell menudo breakfast at 8 a.m.

He said he would find a home for the family in Boca Raton, Delray Beach or Deerfield Beach, about 100 miles north of Miami. Ms. Hunter would work during the day and attend Florida Atlantic University at night so she could pursue her goal of becoming an accountant.

It's not the first time Gisclair has tried the idea.

An earlier effort to help a welfare mother with four children failed because "she was totally unwilling to participate," Gisclair said.

"And then one day she asked me to pay half of her rent because her ex-husband didn't come through with the money. I volunteered to pay it directly to her landlord, but she said, 'No, send it to me.' That was enough for me to realize I was being connned."

That's why Gisclair's has attached some conditions.

"I just want Anita to be honest with me," he said. "I want her to become self-sufficient, and she has promised to have no more children. I will see to it that she gets medical care as well to take care of that."

Ms. Hunter said Gisclair's conditions are "tiny" compared to the chance he's giving her family. She said the neighborhood she lives in now is so dangerous she doesn't let her children — Kentrail, 10, Krystal, 4, Grady, 3, Alex, 1, and Antjon, 1 month — play outside.

"It's like a fairy tale," she said. "These things don't happen every day and they never happen to me."

Gisclair said he was shocked by the family's poverty when he met Ms. Hunter on a visit to her cramped, one-bedroom apartment Friday.

"There was one bed and a hot plate," he said. "But the place is immaculate and so are the children.

Park service opts to fight new wildfire outbreaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel, just back from touring fire-scorched Yellowstone National Park, said today firefighters are now fighting all new outbreaks. But one official said it's still possible that some new fires might be left to burn.

"Yellowstone is not in danger.... We're not going to let Yellowstone be damaged by this," Hodel said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program.

Fighting all new outbreaks has always been a possibility in the usual "let it burn" policy of the National Park Service, Chief Ranger Walt Dabney said afterward.

Peace convoy finally arrives in Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — U.S. war veterans driving 20 vehicles loaded with food, clothing and medical supplies have arrived in Nicaragua on the final leg of a journey their government resisted.

The Veterans' Peace Convoy, comprised of 44 people, crossed the border from Honduras late Wednesday, Don Reasoner, a leading member of the Committee of U.S. Citizens Living In Nicaragua, said in a telephone interview.

The U.S. government blocked the convoy from leaving the United States at least three times, saying plans to leave the trucks in Nicaragua violated a 3-year-old trade embargo against the leftist Sandinista government.

Washington has backed the Contra rebels, who have been fighting the Sandinistas.

Eight of the veterans group's members were arrested July 9 when they refused to leave the road leading to a toll booth at a Rio Grande bridge crossing in Laredo, Texas.

The group finally crossed the Mexican border at Nuevo Laredo on July 14.

The presentation of the food and medical supplies carried by the veterans is to take place Friday in the capital.

The U.S. Treasury Department accepted that the food and medical supplies carried by the group qualified as humanitarian aid, exempt from the 1985 embargo. But it said the vehicles were barred from remaining in Nicaragua.

Sweetener approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is allowing use of a no-calorie sweetener as a table sugar substitute and ingredient in some food products.

The substance, acesulfame potassium, was developed in West Germany and is used in 20 other countries as an additive in various pharmaceutical products, some baked goods and candies, the Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday.

Regulations permitting use of the sweetener, to be marketed in the United States as "Sunette," take effect upon publication in the Federal Register today.

The FDA is allowing its use in chewing gum, dry beverage mixes, instant coffee, instant tea, gelatins, puddings and non-dairy creamers.

Mattox thinks he can raise funds for gubernatorial race

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox, while not yet ready to formally enter the 1990 gubernatorial race, says he has a plan to raise the necessary funds and convince the Democratic Party he can win.

"I intend to be able to show the Democratic Party that I can carry the burden — not just for a Democratic primary but for a general election should I choose to get in there," Mattox said.

"I'm definitely testing the waters. I'm definitely trying to determine whether or not I can pay for a race for governor, because it's very expensive," he said.

Many Democrats expect a primary battle between Mattox and state Treasurer Ann Richards, but Mattox said Wednesday that challenging him is a tough proposition.

"A lot of people have said that (they can win) in the past. As a matter of fact, graveyards are full of their bones. That is politically, figuratively," Mattox said.

The attorney general also declined to respond directly to a report that Treasurer Ms. Richards called him crazy and unscrupulous.

The Dallas Times Herald, in a story from last week's Democratic National Convention, reported on a conversation Ms. Richards had in which she said she hoped to defeat Mattox.

The newspaper said that while Ms. Richards was greeting well-wishers

STATE

Thursday night, former North Carolina Attorney General Rufus Edmisten offered congratulations and said he'd lost the 1984 governor's race in President Reagan's re-election landslide.

"Well, our attorney general's going to run for governor in 1990, and I hope I get him," the newspaper quoted Ms. Richards as saying.

The newspaper went on to report that Edmisten said he thought Mattox was "crazy," and it said Ms. Richards replied by calling Mattox "certifiable" and "unscrupulous."

Ms. Richards' office said she wouldn't be back to the state until Friday. Her press secretary, Bill Cryer, also was out of the office Wednesday.

Asked about the report, Mattox replied: "I suspect that was said without using much thoughtful consideration at the time. I've said things in haste and under pressure that I sometimes later regretted. So I don't really need to get into a big harangue about that."

The two-term attorney general said he considered Ms. Richards "an articulate friend of mine," noting that she hasn't formally announced her 1990 election plans either.

"I don't know that I benefit the political process right now by getting into a harangue with her over that issue. She's not an opponent of mine. If and when she becomes an opponent of mine, then I'd be willing to respond and deal with the issues. But I don't relish reading about such things in the paper," he said.

"It kind of reminds me of going to a Baptist revival. You know, when you're on the mountaintop you say and do a lot of things that you might not do when you get back to the valley," he said.

"And she was on the mountaintop. Sooner or later, you've got to come back to the valley. When you come back to the valley, you often reflect on what you've done or said..."

Lawmakers urge DPS hire more narcotics officers

AUSTIN (AP) — Drug enforcement efforts would be beefed up and 10 state agencies would be merged into two superagencies — the departments of Criminal Justice and Law Enforcement — under recommendations by a legislative subcommittee.

The subcommittee headed by state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, suggested that the Texas Department of Public Safety hire 750 additional narcotics officers to help fight drugs.

"The incontrovertible evidence presented to this subcommittee is that the drug problem is at the root of most problems we face in criminal justice and law enforcement," the subcommittee said in a report.

The group concluded, "If we have any hope of getting a handle on the problems we face in our criminal justice system, more emphasis must be placed on, and more resources must be allocated for, drug eradication."

Records show that 70 percent of all crimes committed in Texas are drug-related or drug-influenced, the Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday.

DPS has 191 narcotics officers and 1,554 highway patrol officers. The subcommittee recommended the agency hire, at a minimum, 500 new DPS narcotics officers and 250 additional Texas Rangers for drug enforcement. The Rangers are a branch of the DPS.

DPS figures show it would cost about $44.5 million to add the recommended number of narcotics officers to the payroll in 1990, the newspaper reported. This does not include support services, such as secretaries, office space and utilities.

Montford said the subcommittee is not trying to belittle DPS traffic enforcement operations, but members believe drug enforcement must become the agency's top priority. The committee does not recommend a reduction in patrol officers.

The subcommittee's recommendations about the proposed staff increases and agency mergers have been forwarded to its parent committee, the Special Committee on the Organization of State Agencies. The special committee — which is examining ways state agencies can be merged, reorganized or eliminated — will issue recommendations to the Legislature in January.

Col. Joe Milner, assistant director of DPS said the DPS was "delighted" with the recommendation calling for more narcotics officers.

A dramatic increase in drug enforcement officers "would have a major impact on the crime rate," Milner said.

The subcommittee called for the creation of the Department of Law Enforcement, a superagency including the DPS, Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission's enforcement division, Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education, Commission on Fire Protection Personnel Standards and Education, and Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies Board.

The Department of Criminal Justice would include the Department of Corrections, Board of Pardons and Paroles, Adult Probation Commission, Commission on Jail Standards and Criminal Justice Policy Council.

Ranch purchase vital for future

Environmentalists and other nature-lovers are praising the state's decision to purchase a large ranch in far West Texas that nearly doubles the size of the state parks system.

No doubt acquisition of the 215,000-acre Big Bend Ranch, located near Big Bend National Park, constitutes an environmental coup for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission and will further ensure the environmental security of the Big Bend region.

The ranchland contains a number of intriguing features for outdoor enthusiasts in Brewster and Presidio counties, including an extinct volcano called the Solitario, habitats for at least 11 endangered species of plants and animals and others. Those familiar with the quiet beauty and harsh ruggedness of the Trans-Pecos region — and the diversity of plant and animal life there — will appreciate the purchase simply for the recognition that the area features a unique and environmentally fragile balance that should be preserved. Of itself, that would be reason enough to support the $8.8 million purchase of Big Bend Ranch.

But that isn't the only reason by far. For too long, environmental concerns such as protection of natural resources and wild and scenic areas have taken a back seat in Texas and a number of other states. In recent years, however, there has been an increasing interest in protecting our surroundings in the interest of leaving at least a portion of the "wilderness" as it is for future generations. With the purchase of Big Bend Ranch and the pending designation of it as a state natural area, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission appears to have embarked on an important new course.

That new course is important to Texans of today and it will be vitally important to Texans of tomorrow.

McCarthy's challenge

The beleaguered International Brotherhood of Teamsters defied conventional wisdom and the wishes of its recently deceased president Jackie Presser recently by selecting William McCarthy as its new leader. Most labor analysts expected secretary-treasurer Weldon Mathis to win the succession because he has been acting president since Presser took a medical leave of absence in May.

Then again, the Teamsters have a track record of going against the grain. The volatile union broke ranks with Big Labor in 1960, 1968 and 1972 to endorse Richard Nixon for president. It also supported Ronald Reagan for the White House in 1980 and 1984.

Numerous political pundits predicted the Teamsters would return to the Democratic fold this year because the Reagan Justice Department, investigating corruption in the union's leadership, has moved to place the union under temporary control of a federal trustee. McCarthy is no friend of Michael Dukakis, however. Indeed, the Massachusetts native and top Teamsters leader in New England during the last two decades backed Republican Edward King in his two contests against Dukakis for governor. King is now a supporter of Vice President George Bush.

The conservative McCarthy is also skeptical of the union's moving back into the mainstream of organized labor. He is reported to be one of the few Teamsters officials who objected to the union's reaffiliation with the AFL-CIO last November. And he vigorously opposed the recent three-year national freight contract covering 200,000 drivers and warehouse workers. Although McCarthy is expected to honor the agreement, he can be counted upon to be more militant in future contract negotiations.

As an old-school labor leader, McCarthy has been unusually protective of his rank-and-file members. Although he was appointed to the union's executive board in 1969 by Jimmy Hoffa, he has no known connections with organized crime and the corruption that has plagued the Teamsters during the last three decades. Nor has this crusty labor chieftain any illusions about the daunting problems confronting him. He is asking his friends for "condolences, not congratulations."

His cynical assessment is clearly warranted. Three of the last five Teamsters presidents have been convicted of federal charges and have received prison sentences, while a fourth avoided incarceration by plea bargaining. Presser himself had been charged with skimming $700,000 from his Cleveland local in a payroll-padding scheme.

William McCarthy, who contends that the Teamsters have been victimized by a slanted press and overzealous federal prosecutors, now has three years to improve the union's tarnished image and to disprove his own self-serving biases. We wish him luck. He'll certainly need it.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

Four hundred years ago, on July 28, 1588, the Spanish Armada, which had sailed to England in hopes of overthrowing Queen Elizabeth I but found itself besieged by the defending English navy, came under attack off Calais by fireships under the command of Lord Charles Howard of Effingham. The next day, off Gravelines, the English devastated the armada.

On this date:

In 1540, King Henry VIII's chief minister, Thomas Cromwell, was executed.

In 1655, French dramatist and novelist Cyrano de Bergerac, the inspiration for a play by Edmond Rostand, died in Paris.

In 1750, composer Johann Sebastian Bach died in Leipzig, Germany.

In 1868, the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, guaranteeing due process of law, was declared in effect.

In 1896, the city of Miami was incorporated.

In 1932, federal troops dispersed the so-called Bonus Army of World War I veterans who had camped in Washington since May demanding money they were scheduled to receive in 1945.

In 1976, one of the worst earthquakes on record devastated northern China, killing at least 242,000 people, according to an official estimate.

In 1977, Roy Wilkins turned over the leadership of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to Benjamin L. Hooks.

In 1984, the Los Angeles Summer Olympics opened, minus 15 nations which had stayed away in a Soviet-led withdrawal.

Today's birthdays: Jacqueline Onassis is 59. Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., is 45. Actress Linda Kelsey is 42. Actress Sally Struthers is 40.

Man pays price for threatening letters

WASHINGTON — Lewis C. Thornton picked the wrong pen pal when he chose Ronald Reagan and is now serving a 25-year prison sentence for writing 10 threatening letters to the president. For a 62-year-old man, 25 years amounts to a life sentence.

Jack Anderson

It is particularly harsh considering the fact that Thornton was locked in a mental hospital and taking medication when he wrote the letters threatening to kill Reagan. He was being treated for severe depression and had been involuntarily committed for 10 months. Today, more than seven years after Thornton's ill-advised letters, he is in a federal prison and wondering why. By contrast, the man who carried out his fantasy to shoot the president, John W. Hinckley, Jr., is in a mental hospital.

Thornton claims he was "mentally incompetent." His letters, some rambling and senseless, laid out an assassination plan which that Thornton said would resemble the murder of John F. Kennedy, except be "more precise — better planned — aim low and aim high..." Thornton specified he would shoot Reagan in the "head, and/or below the waist."

Family and friends of the now-penitent Thornton say the letters were Thornton's attempt to call attention to his desperate plight — his wife was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, his brother committed suicide, his father died and Thornton lost his house, all within one year before he was confined in a mental institution.

Thornton, who calls Florida home, now sits in a cell at the Federal Corrections Institution in Butner, N.C. He says that after six and a half years of treatment, he is mentally and emotionally stable and ready for life on the outside.

His story doesn't read like a blueprint for an assassin. Thornton is a former Marine Corps officer who served in World War II and Korea. He graduated from college, has a teaching certificate and was a Methodist minister.

But in 1981, Thornton heard voices telling him to kill the president. He wrote his letters between Dec. 5, 1981, and Jan. 5, 1982, not only to the White House, but to the FBI and the Secret Service. He gave his name and address in each letter. In court, he pleaded guilty to 10 counts of sending threatening communications through the mail.

At Thornton's sentencing hearing, the judge acknowledged that Thornton needed help, but he said, "I'm not going to take a chance of giving some short period of incarceration."

Thornton told our reporter, Dawn Larsen, that he was disoriented and confused at his sentencing and he doesn't recall considering any option except a guilty plea. He thinks his chances would have been good using an insanity defense in a trial. Only brief references were made at Thornton's sentencing to his mental state. The judge asked Thornton's lawyer, Steven J. Baker, of Florida, whether he had anything to say in Thornton's behalf. "No sir," Baker said, according to the court records. "I think that I've made my position clear to the court before." He also referred the judge to a pre-sentencing report.

Baker said it would be "inappropriate" for him to comment on the case now, even though Thornton signed a privacy waiver giving Baker permission to discuss the case with us.

Baker isn't the only one who doesn't want to talk about Thornton. The prison warden, Kathleen Hawk, intercepted a letter to us from prison psychiatrist, Peter Holden. The letter detailed Thornton's medical history, which Thornton had given Holden permission to discuss it with us, but that letter is still in the hands of the warden.

THE CHECK IS IN THE MAIL — Federal agencies are required by law to pay their bills on time, or pay late charges. Investigators for the Commerce Department checked on their own agency and found that at least two departments weren't very quick to get the checks in the mail. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration made more than $30 million in late payments in 1986. The investigators checked just 81 bills paid by the Patent and Trademark Office last year and nearly half of them were late. Many of the late payments included no penalty charges. Federal contractors take heat for playing fast and loose with taxpayers' money. Now it looks like they deserve some sympathy. Collecting from the federal government is no easy task.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Reagan Administration has boasted about its ability to keep taxes in check, but the cities and counties of America are paying the bills. Reagan has cut many social programs that local governments were forced to pick up, including help for the homeless and mentally ill. At the same time, the feds have eliminated some grant programs to local governments including revenue sharing and Urban Development Action Grants. Cities and counties have responded by raising local property and sales taxes. This method of doing business eventually will catch up with the inheritors of the Reagan legacy. And it may catch up with the Republicans in November.

Political pros say Kemp should be VP choice

WASHINGTON — Three days after the political landscape was transformed by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's selection for the Democratic ticket, Bush campaign manager Lee Atwater assembled an all-star team of Republican political operatives and heard nearly unanimous support for Rep. Jack Kemp as vice president.

If the immediate conventional response to Bentsen was to match an insider with an insider by picking Sen. Robert J. Dole, the pros thought otherwise. They told Atwater the urbane, austere Texas millionaire meant Vice President Bush must pick a running mate who could add an image of youth and vigor to the ticket. Their verdict: Kemp is the only available Republican who even comes close to that description.

Since this meeting, Kemp has soared past Dole as consensus choice of Republican politicians. But the prince of supply-side poses a special problem for George Bush, put this way by a veteran, influential member of Congress: "I think George knows that Jack could really help him in the campaign but would drive him nuts as vice president."

There was no such concern among 10 political operatives secretly summoned July 15 by Atwater for their response to the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket. They represented a who's who of GOP practitioners — conservative but not doctrinaire, main line rather than New Right: Gerald Carmen, Rick Shelby, Ed Rollins, Charlie Black, David Keene, Don Devine, Rich Williamson, Vic Gold, Lyn Nofziger and Rick Holdt.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Only Rollins and Black had supported Kemp's bid for the presidential nomination. Just a few weeks earlier, a solid majority of the invited 10 would have opted for Dole. Yet, when Atwater went around the table to ask who would help Bush the most, the count was eight for Kemp and two for Dole.

What's more, those present felt that the only two Dole backers — Keene and Devine — said so because they had worked in his presidential campaign (only to be fired in its final stages). Both volunteered Kemp was their second choice and, they felt, a good choice.

One operative said that three days earlier he was backing Dole. But he added that if the 67-year-old Bentsen was twinned with Dukakis, 54 but born mature, the Republican answer was not the 65-year-old Senate minority leader. He contended that Kemp at 53 is only a year younger than Dukakis but seems to come from a younger generation.

Remarkably, not one of the pros mentioned Gov. George Deukmejian to bring home California's badly needed electoral vote harvest. When they met, he had not yet pulled himself almost out of contention by declaring lack of interest.

Deukmejian surely could be talked on to the ticket by the presidential nominee, and one of his closest advisers believes his interview with George Skelton of the Los Angeles Times all but rules himself out at a personal low point in his morale. But nobody is really sure the governor could carry the state for Bush. Furthermore, the personal choice of this Deukmejian confidant is Kemp. A few weeks ago, it was Dole.

But if Bush dislikes Dole and worries about him running out of control at the climax of the campaign, life with Kemp would be no bowl of cherries. Friends of the congressman say he was not happy with Bush's performance Sunday, when in proposing a conservative version of child care, he did so before a hostile women's group and gave the impression of pandering and trying, in vain, to outbid the Democrats.

Bush may not be comfortable with either Dole or Kemp, and comfort is a factor the vice president has given high priority in his personal staff appointments. That means Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming, who has little support for the job beyond Bush himself, is on the short list for vice president.

But the Bentsen selection followed by the Atlanta convention has ended talk of a GOP electoral vote lock allowing Bush a comfort factor in picking a vice president. Conversely, although he is in deep political trouble, innate caution is unlikely to lead him to name a woman or a political neophyte.

Thus, the verdict of Atwater's political pros is important. They don't think Kemp guarantees a single identifiable electoral vote, but doubt anybody else would either. They are telling Bush that the congressman promises neither salvation nor a happy partnership but possibly might help more than anybody else in what promises to be a hard, come-from-behind effort for the Republicans.

ART BUCHWALD

Vacations were invented for — working!

At last — the vacation is about to begin. The summer homes have been reopened, the tennis courts swept, the fish are jumping, and the voice of the turtle can be heard in the land.

Art Buchwald

Zeigfrass entered the kitchen at 8.

"Shall we jog through the woods and sing with the birds?" I asked him.

"We can't," he replied. "I just stopped by to take you to a meeting to 'Save the Bluefish.'"

"I didn't know they were endangered."

"They're not," he said. "But somebody has to save them anyway. People are pulling them out of the sound as if there were no tomorrow."

"When will the meeting be over?"

"About 10."

"Good, then we'll play some tennis."

"We can't at 10. There's a demonstration in front of the town hall to protest the zoning commission's decision to allow 30 townhouses to be built on the waterfront. We expect you to be there."

"Lunch," I said, "I'm free to go to lunch at the Black Dog Tavern with my children, aren't I?"

Zeigfrass looked at his list. "No. We're having a strategy meeting with our lawyer to see how we can limit the rate of growth in East Chop. He's going to tell us how to tie the developers up in knots."

"I know I shouldn't ask this, but how am I fixed for the afternoon?"

Zeigfrass said, "At 2 o'clock I've got you down for an anti-apartheid demonstration in front of a South African guy's summer home."

"What a coincidence. That's exactly when I was going to the beach. What happens at 3?"

"We're raising money for a boy's club at the Old Whaler's Episcopal Church. Then we go over to the sewage disposal plant and block the entrance gate with our bodies."

"Will I be home for dinner?"

"If you don't get arrested you will. You know there is a potluck dinner at the American Legion for the Order of the Sisters of Massachusetts tonight?"

"No one told me," I said. "Hey look, I only have a couple of weeks, and while I am sympathetic to all your causes, you've got me doing just what I do at home, only more so."

"You can go sailing or play golf if you want to," Zeigfrass said, "but that isn't what vacations are all about. If you can't be counted when we're trying to save the environment, then why don't you just go snorkeling and forget about the world you inhabit."

"I'm all for the environment, but if I spend my whole time protecting it, when do I get to enjoy it?"

"I never thought I would hear you say that you would rather ride the waves than save an osprey from extinction."

"I didn't say that," I protested.

"You said something almost like it," Zeigfrass retorted. "Look, if you want to have a good time on your vacation, that's your business, but you're the one who will have to answer to your grandchildren 40 years from today."

"You're right. Why would I want to have a good time when there is so much work left to do? I'm willing to help out. The ocean will always be there, if not during my time here — then somebody else's."

Zeigfrass handed me a bridge table.

"What am I supposed to do with this?"

"We're going down to Main Street to collect signatures."

"What for?"

"I haven't decided yet."

Did administration ignore drug smuggling for political goals?

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel is opening hearings on whether the Reagan administration condoned drug smuggling and other criminal activities to further its Central American policy.

Chairman William J. Hughes said his House Judiciary subcommittee on crime will examine "allegations of drug smuggling, gun running and money laundering between Central American and the U.S. — and the role our government played in ignoring or even encouraging the criminal activities."

Hughes said the series of hearings will "demonstrate there were other motives driving drug law enforcement, like votes on Contra aid."

President Reagan has been a strong opponent of Nicaragua's Sandinista government and steady supporter of the Central American nation's Contra rebels. At various times, both sides in the Nicaraguan conflict have been accused of aiding or taking part in drug smuggling.

Hughes said the first hearing today would examine allegations that members of the Sandinista regime cooperated with the Colombian drug cartel to import cocaine into the United States in 1984.

The committee is to hear testimony on flights to Nicaragua and other locations in South and Central America by convicted drug pilot Barry Seal, who became a government informant in a federal sting operation.

The Seal operation, designed to trap cocaine smugglers, was compromised and ended early because of leaks to the news media from sources familiar with the plan.

Hughes said a CIA witness was invited to testify on the agency's role in the operation, but he notified the committee he would refuse to cooperate on Fifth Amendment grounds of self-incrimination.

More than 100 subpoenas have been issued for witness testimony and the production of documents, Hughes said. Judicial grants of immunity have been obtained to compel testimony of six persons who refused to cooperate, invoking their Fifth Amendment privilege.

No immunity grant has been issued for the CIA witness, and Hughes said there has been no decision on pursuing the agency's testimony.

Seal in February 1986 was assassinated in a Baton Rouge, La. machine gun attack, as he pulled up in his Cadillac at a Salvation Army halfway house.

In an interview Wednesday, Hughes said, "We're looking at whether...an obstruction of justice" caused the end of the Seal operation. "The whole operation was aborted because of leaks to the media."

Pakistani says Soviets are withdrawing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pakistan's foreign minister today allayed concerns that the Soviet Union was reneging on its pledge to withdraw the Red Army from Afghanistan.

"This impression has just been dispelled," Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said after a meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz. "Our position and that of the United States in regard to the withdrawal is no longer divergent."

The pace of the pullout and U.S. hopes for fair elections in Pakistan were topics for discussion during the foreign minister's visit.

There are an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan. Half are supposed to be withdrawn by Aug. 15. Pakistani President Mohamnad Zia al-Haq raised concerns last week that the Soviets were replenishing them with new troops.

Through Pakistan, the United States armed Afghan rebels fighting the Red Army and the pro-Soviet government in Kabul.

U.S. officials said this week Moscow had sent new assurances that the Soviets would fulfill their commitment in the Geneva accords of last May to withdraw half the troops by Aug. 15.

The report that they would be replaced was traced to the Soviet military commander in Kabul, who apparently did not have the backing of his superiors in Moscow.

Shultz, Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci and Yaqub Khan are comparing notes on how to monitor the Soviet withdrawal — and on Afghanistan's future after the troops are gone. One question is whether the rebels then would be able to bring down President Najibullah. Another is the kind of government that would follow.

Several of the rebel leaders would like to install a fundamentalist Moslem regime akin to the government in neighboring Iran.

"It is extremely important we look beyond Afghanistan and continue close cooperation with the United States in the interest of peace and security in the region," Yaqub Khan said.

The United States has close ties to Pakistan, which gave refuge to millions of Afghan refugees besides funneling covert U.S. support to the rebels.

U.S. officials are hoping the elections Zia has set for Nov. 16 will be fair, but there is a question how much pressure Shultz might try to apply.

"We will stress that elections should be free and fair, but it is not up to the U.S. government to prescribe how they should be held," said an official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Zia dismissed his civilian government in May, but did not call for elections within the 90 days prescribed by the Pakistani constitution.

He also barred candidates from running with party labels. Zia took the position that party-based elections could mislead the voters.

Stolen documents found in FBI files prompt probe

MIAMI (AP) — FBI files have turned up documents stolen from a television reporter who has accused U.S. officials in a Nicaraguan political bombing, but the agency denies knowing the material was taken illegally.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the FBI oversight committee in Congress, said he will look promptly into how the agency obtained the stolen documents from Tony Avirgan, a free-lance cameraman who worked for CBS-TV.

"We've been looking into over 100 break-ins over a period of several years," Edwards said Wednesday. "They all have a Central American angle, all relating to Salvador, in some cases Nicaragua."

The FBI confirmed a report in The Boston Globe Wednesday that the agency received memos and notes taken in Costa Rica in 1985 and 1986 from Avirgan, who was investigating a political bombing in Nicaragua that killed eight people and left him slightly injured.

Avirgan and his wife, Martha Honey, later filed a $24 million damage suit in Miami federal court accusing U.S. and Nicaraguan Contra officials of responsibility for the bombing. The suit was dismissed last month for insufficient evidence.

The FBI obtained Avirgan's files from someone reporting on people who allegedly supported "terrorist operations in Central America," according to a statement released through Washington FBI spokeswoman Sue Schnitzer.

"This individual gave no indication that the documents were obtained through illegal means," the statement said.

Schnitzer said the FBI routinely inquires if such material is stolen, but refused to say if that was done in the Avirgan case. She also refused to identify the source.

The FBI will cooperate with an investigation by appropriate oversight committees, Ms. Schnitzer said.

The 39 pages stolen from Avirgan included memos to CBS and Avirgan's handwritten notes about the bombing, said Lanny Sinkin, an attorney for the liberal, Washington-based Christic Institute, which represents Avirgan in the Miami lawsuit.

"It suggests that the break-in was targeted to find out what he knew," said Sinkin.

The subject of many of the stolen memos, and later Avirgan's damage lawsuit, was the May 1984 bombing of a news conference held by maverick Contra commander Eden Pastora in La Penca, Nicaragua, just across the Costa Rican border.

Three journalists and five Pastora supporters died in the explosion, although Pastora was only slightly injured. Avirgan and later the Christic Institute blamed it on U.S. and Contra leaders who objected to Pastora's independent stance in the fight against Nicaragua's leftist government.

Edwards said the documents indicate the FBI "could have been getting the fruits of political burglaries and break-ins."

Also Wednesday, Chris Wood, a Montpelier, Vt., political activist who has been involved in the Vermont Central America Non-Intervention Network, said he has been the target of three break-ins in three weeks that he suspects involved the FBI.

Ray McElhaney, another FBI spokesman in Washington, said, "I don't think there have been any break-ins involving the FBI...I have no statement regarding the allegations of this person in Montpelier, Vermont."

Last month, the Globe reported the FBI has conducted at least four investigations of opponents of the Reagan administration's Central American policies, including CISPES, the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador.

Couple 'blinded by love' turns up after 3 ½ months

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A newlywed says she and her husband were "blinded by love" 3½ months ago when they disappeared from Chicago, sparking a manhunt after their deserted car was found ransacked with its engine running.

Scott Swanson, 23, and his wife, Carolyn, 22, said they dashed off to San Diego shortly after they eloped because some relatives apparently disapproved of their skipping a traditional marriage ceremony. They also said they just wanted to spend time together.

"Call it shortsighted or call it what you want to, but love is blind and I know that sounds trite," Ms. Swanson said at a news conference after being reunited with her parents, Jim and Kathy MacLean of Haddonfield, N.J.

"So much has come out of it that has been great, but then to see the look on my mother's face...and my dad's face...I mean, I can't stand the hurt that I've caused," she said tearfully.

The newlyweds vanished April 2 without telling relatives or classmates at a suburban Evangelical college.

During a resulting three-state police investigation, friends at Wheaton College held prayer vigils, put up posters and questioned people at roadside restaurants and gas stations.

"We are tremendously sorry for the hurt and the pain we've caused to our families, to our friends and loved ones and relatives," Swanson said. "We never realized that the story would have the ramifications it has."

The couple left their car near a police station with the keys under the mat and their identification cards, Swanson said. "We didn't want to be traced."

The BMW was found ransacked in an alley, its motor running.

Police eventually determined that the couple had planned to vanish, but families and friends feared foul play.

The MacLeans said they followed the uproar over their disappearance through front-page stories in Chicago newspapers at a university library. Meanwhile, they both got jobs at a suburban La Jolla delicatessen.

They were not seen or heard from until they sent letters to their parents and contacted the MacLeans by telephone Tuesday.

"We hoped to let things die down a bit, to let the investigation settle. Then we could slip in unnoticed," Swanson said.

"We were afraid to come back and we felt we had done the right thing to begin with. We needed to wait on our decision until the right time within ourselves to come back," he said.

Swanson said his family's reaction to the wedding was in part responsible for their decision. He said they eloped "simply for the spiritualness of it and not for the wedding...the large production of it.

His wife said, "We're so in love and we wanted to get away from the adornment and the material world and develop our relationship together apart from that. And we did that and we're so much stronger as a result of it."

House banking panel OKs deregulation bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Banking Committee early today ended a grueling 16½-hour session by approving a far-reaching bill described as the most significant change in banking law since the Depression.

The bill, if adopted by the full Congress and signed into law by President Reagan, would allow bank holding companies to underwrite virtually every type of security except corporate stock.

However, the legislation includes a laundry list of other provisions banks strongly oppose, including new obligations to serve poor people.

And, because of the election-shortened legislative calendar and the jurisdictional rules of the House, the bill faces an uncertain future.

The committee voted for the final measure 30-20, with all but three Democrats in favor and all but three Republicans opposed.

From the banking committee, it goes to the Energy and Commerce Committee, chaired by Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., who has expressed skepticism of banks entering the securities business.

Depending on what kind of deadline House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, sets, Dingell could kill the bill through delay or exact concessions by threatening delay.

After Aug. 12, Congress plans to be in session only from Sept. 6 to Oct. 5, leaving little time for a banking bill to pass the full House and be reconciled with legislation that passed the Senate, 94-2, on March 30.

Banks long have sought to re-enter the securities business, from which they have been barred by the Depression-era Glass-Steagall Act for more than 50 years.

As originally drafted by the committee chairman, Rep. Fernand J. St Germain, D-R.I., the bill would not have permitted bank holding companies to underwrite mutual funds or corporate bonds later convertible to stock.

However, those provisions were added by 35-14 and 27-23 votes, respectively.

Other securities activities permitted by the bill include the underwriting of corporate bonds, commercial paper, municipal revenue bonds and securities backed by mortgages and other consumer debt such as auto loans.

Rep. Chalmers Wylie of Ohio, the ranking Republican on the committee, failed in an attempt to persuade the committee to move more slowly.

"This bill will have a greater impact than any other piece of legislation since the reforms passed nearly 60 years ago," Wylie said. "I believe the changes should be made cautiously and not all at once."

He also sought to kill provisions — described as pro-consumer — that banks would be required to accept in exchange for the new powers. He argued the requirements would hurt the soundness of the banking system and ultimately cost consumers.

Republican opposition to the consumer sections threatened committee passage of the bill until an hour-long negotiating session behind closed doors after midnight.

Democrats agreed to accept some watering down of the consumer provisions and, in exchange, three Republicans — Steve Bartlett of Texas, John Hiler of Indiana and Thomas Ridge of Pennsylvania — voted in favor of the bill.

It requires banks to serve poor people by providing low-cost lifeline checking services for accounts between $25 and $1,000. And, it requires banks to open special accounts for the cashing of government checks such as Social Security and welfare checks, with a cashing charge of no more than $2.

It also requires ba to show a good record of serving or communities in their lendin ea before getting permission fro e Federal Reserve Board to exercise new powers.

However, in an exemption sought by the Republicans, agricultural banks with less than $50 million in assets — about 2,600 of the nation's 14,000 commercial banks — would be exempted from the last requirement.

Also, the limit on the size of government checks that banks would be required to cash was lowered from $3,000 to $1,500.

Other provisions opposed by banking interests include a two-year moratorium on further bank expansion into the real estate business, a ban on banks moving into insurance underwriting and severe limits on the number of banks that can sell insurance underwritten by other companies.

MISD board may discuss closed campuses

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Though a police detective confirms a small number of high school students smoke pot during their lunch hour, at least two school district officials believe closing campuses at that time of day will again not be a priority item this fall.

The president of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, however, believes in the concept and will address the idea at the board retreat in mid-August.

In the spring of 1985, the trustees went on record saying they favored closing the campuses and would do so when the budget allowed, explained Maridell Fryar, MISD director of secondary education.

Closing campuses, proponents argued, would decrease the instances of teen drinking and smoking pot during lunch and the number of traffic accidents that occur as students drive quickly off campus for lunch.

The undertaking would be an expensive one, Mrs. Fryar said. Included in the move would be building fenced parking lots to house the estimated 1,100 Lee High School student cars and the estimated 900 Midland High School student cars, the director said.

In addition, security personnel would have to be hired and posted during the school day at the gates of the parking lot fences, Mrs. Fryar said.

A situation similar to what MISD would require is already in existence at the Abilene Independent School District's high schools, said Midland Police Detective Dan Walkenshaw.

Walkenshaw, who serves as the liaison between the police and the school district, said AISD has virtually eliminated its noontime accident problem by closing its campuses, but added, "if Midland wants to do it, it's going to cost them."

The police detective did admit, however, high school students do smoke pot on the periphery of the campuses, while in their parked cars, at elementary school bus stops and off campus at select hang-outs.

In addition, non-student drug dealers routinely cruise the fringes of high school campuses looking for buyers, Walkenshaw said.

Last December, Midland police arrested an 18-year-old non-student and two students after a month-long investigation revealed high school students were smoking and buying pot at a convenience store near MHS, Walkenshaw said.

About 25 students were arrested last year for possession of marijuana and a number less than that was arrested for drinking alcohol, the police detective said.

"It will open your eyes. There's more going on than a lot of people would want to think," Walkenshaw said.

Seventh case of rabies discovered

Health officials urge residents to vaccinate pets

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

A seventh case of rabies was detected by the city health department officials last week — this time involving a skunk.

The animal, which was killed by two dogs when it entered a Cuthbert Avenue backyard, is one reason why area veterinarians are pooling their talent to vaccinate as many household pets as they can get their hands on.

According to Greg Adkins, chairman of the Animal Advisory Committee, both county and city officials have agreed to waive their respective licensing fees for residents who get their pets vaccinated.

The one-day moratorium — which will be held from 8:30 a.m. through 12:20 p.m. Saturday — was declared Monday by Midland County Commissioners and Tuesday by Midland City Council.

Because of the serious nature of the problem, Adkins said area veterinarians agreed on a unified vaccination charge of just $7 per pet. Their decision to do that was based on the current rabies threat.

Since January 1, health officials have captured more than 200 skunks within the city limits. "We have a potential problem out there," remarked veterinarian Robert Boyd. "Skunks are a reservoir for the virus."

Domestic pets acquire rabies from wild animals, such as skunks and raccoons. In Public Health Region 3, there have been 68 confirmed cases of rabies this year.

The City of Midland registers between 17,000 and 21,000 pets annually. However, officials estimate that total at just half the population. "Right now we need to vaccinate between 75 to 80 percent of the (animal) population if we're to reduce the risk," said Adkins.

Boyd blames part of the problem on public apathy. "We have a lot of pets out there that need to be vaccinated. We don't know if it's the economy or people just plain forget...I think a lot of it has to do with apathy."

While all veterinary offices will be open, Adkins requested that residents still attempt to make an appointment. "So far, a lot of people are calling and asking us about it," he said.

In addition to the vaccination drive, officials said four locations also will serve as pet dip centers. Adkins said area 4-H clubs will dip pets at a cost of $5 each.

The locations are Green's Animal Clinic, North Midland Drive Animal Hospital, Chaparral Veterinary Clinic and Tall City Veterinary Hospital.

Also, a site is slated for Greenwood School during the same times.

Locations for all licensing and shots include the latter four as well as the Animal Clinic and Hospital, Betton Veterinary Hospital and Clinic, Midland Animal Hospital, Shannon Animal Hospital, Tillett Veterinary Clinic and Mills Veterinary Hospital.

Adkins said that while all veterinarians have agreed to participate, not all were listed in time.

The United States flag is flown at half-staff Wednesday in Midland to commemorate the 35th anniversary of the 1953 cease-fire agreement which ended the Korean War.

Police ask for help in hunt for burglar

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland police are asking for the public's help in the search for a masked, screwdriver-wielding burglar who has entered at least 14 eastside homes and attacked three women since April 1.

The man, who has raped at least two women, struck again early Wednesday, when a 33-year-old woman was assaulted in her east side home after she was awakened by the man, who covered his face with a white cloth during the episode, police Cpl. Jim White said.

Police have no suspects in the case, and Wednesday the detective assigned to the case said he needs help to make an arrest.

"Public help will speed it (an arrest) up," Det. Sgt. John Ingram said. "Because we don't have anyone now."

The man has committed from 12 to 15 burglaries or attempted burglaries on the east side since the first incident was recorded April 1. So far, his activities have been confined to an area bordered by A Street on the West, Wadley on the north, Louisiana Avenue on the south and Fairgrounds Road on the east, Ingram said.

Two women have been sexually assaulted, and a third attempt failed after the intended victim suddenly pulled a .25-caliber pistol and shot at the man. He was not injured, but was scared away.

According to Ingram, the man breaks into homes between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m., and if he happens to discover a woman in the house alone — as has happened on the three occasions — he assaults them. He always carries a screwdriver, always tells the victims to cover their heads with a pillow, and has always worn a mask or cloth on or over his face, Ingram said.

"This is not normal burglar-type stuff," the officer said. "Every house he has entered, there have been people in the house. He does not have a set way to get in, but has used back doors, front doors, and windows."

In the latest attack, the man tried unsuccessfully to pry open a deadbolt on the front door, then tried to get through a deadbolt on the back door, then found a window he could enter, Ingram said.

"He'll go right through the locks," he said.

The man likely lives in the area of the attacks, and is likely out almost every night looking for houses, Ingram reasoned.

Police are checking files of known sex offenders, and checking the names of felons paroled from the Texas Department of Corrections just before the attacks started. Uniformed patrols in the area have also been increased, Ingram said.

"We have some names, but we have zero to connect them with this," he said.

The man is described as black, in his 20s, 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall, with a slender build, probably about 170 pounds, police said.

Sgt. Milton O'Bryant of Midland Crime Stoppers said his office has been notified of the case and is familiar with it. He said anyone who has information that leads to the indictment of the man could get a reward up to $1,000 cash.

Ingram said persons who live on the east side should be wary, and he urged anyone with information to call him or Crime Stoppers.

"We need some help on this one," he said.

Astronauts practice landing at White Sands

By HOLDEN LEWIS

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — Astronauts flying a specially modified jet make a steep 19-degree dive to the desert floor Mondays through Fridays, swooshing at 230 mph 20 feet above the packed gypsum runway.

And every time, they have to deal with a malfunctioning computer, a broken landing gear, a non-working radio or some other problem generated by a sophisticated computer aboard the Grumman Gulfstream II jet.

That's the life of an astronaut training to land a space shuttle.

"It would be terrible if you had a good mission and messed it up with a bad landing," said Alex Paczynski, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's project manager at White Sands Space Harbor.

So week after week, space shuttle commanders like Fred Hauck and shuttle pilots like Dick Covey practice their shuttle landing skills at White Sands.

Although the primary space orbiter landing site is Edwards Air Force Base in California, Hauck and Covey might end up touching down on one of the two dazzling white runways at the space harbor if weather conditions prevent a landing at Edwards. Hauck and Covey are scheduled to go up on the next shuttle flight in September or October.

If they land at White Sands, they will use a runway that has been leveled out a little better than the one Jack R. Lousma used when he flew space shuttle Columbia to a landing there on March 30, 1982.

Engineers used lasers to check whether they had smoothed out the minor undulations that were present six years ago, Paczynski said Wednesday as he led reporters on a tour of the 100-square-mile complex in the middle of White Sands Missile Range.

The landing strips are on a dry lake bed between the San Andreas Mountains and White Sands National Monument.

The next series of four shuttle missions is scheduled to begin in September or October. The timing excites Ben Mendoza, project engineer for shuttle support at White Sands Missile Range.

"I'm sure one of the four launches will land here," he said, explaining that the shots scheduled for late this year and early next year will coincide with the winter rainy season at Edwards.

July, August and September are the rainy months at White Sands, when half of the annual 12 inches of rain falls. The "dry" lake bed was decidedly wet Wednesday because three-quarters of an inch of rain had fallen the night before.

The gypsum lake bed is several thousand feet thick in some places. When the shuttle lands on the gypsum flats, it's as if it were landing on a mile-thick, 7-mile-long piece of Sheetrock.

Most veterans want to forget Korean conflict

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Old Glory's flying at half-staff Wednesday at the United States Courthouse in Midland was in tribute to America's Korean War veterans and commemorated the 35th anniversary of the cease-fire that "marked the end of active combat" in that war.

The 3-year-old war between United Nations forces and Communist-ruled troops ended on June 27, 1953.

President Reagan this week signed a proclamation to salute this country's Korean War veterans, who made up about 90 percent of the U.N. fighting forces in Korea.

"Our nation's beginning was signed with the blood of patriots," the president's proclamation says, according to his press secretary's spokesman, "and in the more than 212 years that have followed our founding, we have never forgotten to pause in honor of the gallant Americans who have suffered and died in the cause of freedom."

In that war, often called the "Korean Conflict," more than 54,000 American troops were killed and more than 103,000 were wounded.

The president's proclamation said that it is "appropriate that we take time to remember and express our gratitude to those who served in that fierce conflict. We do so proudly, knowing that their spirit will define forever the words 'courage' and 'liberty.'"

Few Americans, including veterans, apparently were aware of the president's proclamation. The General Services Administration, which manages federal buildings, ordered flags at half-staff across the nation in honor of those Korean War veterans.

"I never even heard about it," he said Wednesday.

Rickey, 53, served in the U.S. Army's Combat Engineers. He was a teen-ager when he was shipped to Korean.

"I made it. I'm lucky," he said. "It was my job to keep the mountain passes open in case something happened, so tanks, trucks and troops could roll. That's very mountainous country."

Today, the Korean War is mostly a faded memory to Rickey.

"I don't think much about it anymore," he said. "It's forgotten until a politician remembers it."

The United States was drawn into war on Korean soil after Communist forces from North Korea invaded South Korean. The U.N. protested, and President Harry S. Truman in June 1950 ordered American troops to join U.N. forces in defending South Korea.

Sixteen U.N. nations had dispatched troops to defend South Korean and to preserve its freedom, and 41 countries sent military equipment, supplies and food to South Korea. About a million South Korean civilians were killed in the war.

The 1953 truce was between the U.N. and North Koreans.

Rickey said that the other day he "signed up" to the VFW post a couple of veterans "who said they had been through it (the Korean War), and they didn't say much about it."

Rickey said that the Korean War observance is "O.K., but I wonder what it means and to whom. This thing (the war) has come and gone. It's like talking to World War II veterans now."

Rickey said that as a child during the 1939-1945 World War II era, he was a "patriotic little rascal." And when the Korean War broke out, he volunteered at age 17 to serve his country. But the progression of the no-win war brought weariness to him and to other warriors.

"We were really happy when we got word of the armistice being signed," Rickey said.

Todd

Nowadays, the byword among many of those who are trying to "better" their lives by "living in the 'now'" is "take life a day at a time."

Well, that's the only way to fly.

And there are those of us who routinely crash but manage to survive and recoup for another fling at life.

Now, it is quite obvious that we folks are "in the now" within the physical realm. But conditioning the mind to "stay put" is quite another matter.

You know, the elusive "they" say that "the yesterdays shape the tomorrows," which seems to be akin to the reap-what-you-sow axiom.

I'll admit, there has been some haphazard sowing on this side of the street. But I shan't indulge in my iniquities and feed by vanity and expose my sometimes unbridled appetites, which I occasionally tend to exaggerate. I ignore others.

Live in the present. Enjoy today. Savor this moment. Wait not 'til tomorrow to seek your quest, but strike out now with all the force of your might to realize your dream if it is on a higher plane — something worthwhile and noble. That sounds so good to me. I should like to be the flawless and dauntless knight, Mr. Perfect, of course. But reality quickly and quietly strikes me down every time.

It seems that the best way to live in "the now" is to "do in the now." Don't tarry. Don't idle. Don't daydream. But ponder and do — act — for "the good," but, of course. Or as the insightful say, "the perceived good."

But since I, like all of God's humanly creatures, have recall, I cannot help but reflect on the past, particularly the "unresolved" past. Even the "good times" move before me like vignettes on the silver screen.

I see pursuit airplanes flying overhead prior to heading for "over there" to win freedom. I hear the victory bell ringing at war's end.

I see Dad, the consummate teacher and principal, in the classroom and on stage.

I see Mother in her faithfulness to the family.

I see joy and happiness.

I see pain, fear, death and tears.

I see faded romances and broken dreams.

I see friends and kin from my childhood and manhood preparing for the Grand Encounter, holding their tickets to the Glory Train to take them on the other side of life.

I see fellow travelers struggling to make "the best" of this "now" life and praying that they will make the "right choices."

I see life in all of its wonder and hope that "all is well" in the daily exchange of life and death.

Gramm will address Republican Convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas said today he and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole will give a "major address" to the Republican National Convention next month.

The two will speak Wednesday, Aug. 17, during prime-time on the differences between the GOP and the Democratic Party on such issues as defense and agriculture.

"The primary focus will be on the differences between the two parties and the two candidates. We will draw those distinctions," Gramm said.

Gramm, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he would speak on the economy and defense issues, while Dole would talk about agriculture, foreign policy and domestic matters.

"It's a good opportunity to present my vision and George Bush's vision for America's future, for the future of the country," Gramm said.

Dole, whose name has been mentioned as a possible running mate for Bush, the all-but-certain Republican nominee, joked that while Gramm would be checking out the White House, he was now looking over another residence.

"It's not the one I had in mind," said Dole, who dropped out of the race for the Republican nomination after early victories in Iowa and South Dakota.

Dole said he and his wife, former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, have been "waiting for the phone to ring at home. I can't get Elizabeth to leave the house."

Dole said Texas would be a key state in the campaign for president as Bush, who calls a Houston hotel suite home, faces a Democratic ticket of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and running mate Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Texan with legendary fund-raising abilities.

Dole and Gramm pledged to support Phillips' campaign to be elected to his first term as the high court's chief justice. He was appointed to the post by Republican Gov. Bill Clements and was sworn in Jan. 4. He replaced John L. Hill, who quit in mid-term to campaign for an appointed rather than an elected court.

But he said he "hated to see" Truman fire Gen. Douglas MacArthur as commander of U.N. forces in Korea following disputes between MacArthur and U.S. defense leaders on how the Allies should conduct the war.

MacArthur, who had sought total victory for the Allies, wanted to bomb Communist military bases in Manchuria in China. But Truman and his military advisers thought such action might result in a third world war. Truces were negotiated during Truman's administration, but the 1953 truce was signed when Dwight Eisenhower was president.

"He (MacArthur) was kind of my hero, like John Wayne," Rickey said.

Today, 35 years after the cease-fire, the Korean War is "just history," said Rickey. That's about all you can say."

Korean War veteran Roland "Spud" Blocker, 54, of Midland served in the U.S. Marine Corps.

"It's been so long, I just about forgot about it," he said of the war. "I'm kind of like a goose," he said. "I wake up to a new world every morning."

However, Blocker, past commander of VFW Tall City Post 7208, said the Korean War was "all political" and was fought with a "no-win" philosophy.

"There was no way we could win," Blocker said. "That's what the politicians wanted." He feared that "all the people" who were killed in the war died in vain.

Blocker said that "Truman might have known something I didn't know" when he fired MacArthur in 1951. "I think it was a mistake. He wanted to cross the Yalu River" into China.

Blocker lost friends in the war.

"When there's somebody beside you one minute and the next second they're gone, you wonder, 'Why not me.'"

The military leaders told the troops, "You don't have any buddies; you have 'military acquaintances,'" Blocker recalled.

"I did my best," Blocker said. But, "of course, you get close" to your comrades.

Currently there are two security guards at each high school, the detective said; a statistic that translates into a guard-student ratio of about 1-to-700 or 1-850 students.

Not only would closing campuses be expensive, it would also be virtually impossible to enforce, Mrs. Fryar said.

There are more student vehicles than there is room to house them inside a fenced area and some students legally leave campus for the day at lunch time, Mrs. Fryar said.

The education director noted that the district had closed campuses in the late 1960s and early 1970s, but found it "capricious and arbitrary" enforcement.

"I personally feel like it would cost too much money," said Ken Marks, MISD school board vice president. "I can see the problem, but if those youngsters are going to do that when they're off campus, we can handle it when they get back.

"If they persist, then we are going to give the administration the authority to take care of those problems as they come up," said Marks, the District 7 trustee.

But Bob Rich, MISD board president, said closing campuses is an idea that needs to be considered.

"It is so important to have everything in the school system conducive to good study habits," said Rich, the District 6 trustee. "We need to study this at the retreat."

From the legal aspect, closing campuses would eliminate traffic problems, but from the financial aspect, the move would cost the taxpayers more money, said Walkenshaw, who remains neutral on the issue.

He added, however, that it is a small number of students using drugs and drinking liquor at lunchtime.

Police Roundup

Midland police are investigating two residential burglaries which netted burglars property valued at almost $3,000.

According to reports, auto parts valued at $900 and a gold and diamond ring valued at $750 were stolen from a residence in the 1700 block of Maple Avenue. The burglary occurred between 9 p.m. Tuesday and 7:55 a.m. Wednesday, after someone entered a side door of the house, reports said.

Police are also investigating the burglary of a residence in the 4500 block of Lanham Street. An AM-FM cassette deck valued at $400, a stereo equalizer valued at $475, an amplifier valued at $250, and a set of stereo speakers valued at $180 were stolen from the residence between 11 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

NASA

The prevailing southwesterly winds carry the gypsum crystals from the dry lake bed to the famous dunes shimmering in the distance.

Those winds and the sharp-edged gypsum crystals it blew created havoc the one time the shuttled landed at White Sands. One of the century's worst sandstorms at White Sands happened the day before the landing. The wind was still blowing hard when the orbiter touched down.

The de-service and mating area, where the astronauts disembark and where the orbiter is cleaned up and hoisted aboard a Boeing 747, was so dusty that officials feared for the vessel's safety. So now they've moved the area to the southwestern edge of the lake bed, adjacent to the rocky terrain leading up to the mountains. The new area has much less of a dust problem than the other had, Paczynski said.

Since the Challenger exploded Jan. 28, 1986, NASA has rigorously tested the criss-crossing landing strips at White Sands.

Lawman suspended as result of inmate's escape

From Staff Reports

The night patrol supervisor of the Howard County Sheriff's Department has been suspended and reduced in rank following the escape of a man suspected of two capital murders, Sheriff A.N. Standard said today.

Carl Thurman, who was a sergeant on-duty at the time of the escape of 21-year-old Antonio Aguilar, was ordered suspended for a month without pay after an internal investigation, Standard said.

Aguilar walked away from an inmate trash detail a week ago near the Howard County Courthouse, where he was dumping trash with two other inmates and a sheriff's deputy, according to the sheriff.

The inmate is still at large, and the search for him was described as "high-priority." He was described as 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 165 pounds with black hair and brown eyes. He was last seen wearing a white, surgeon-type shirt, white pants, and black and white high-top tennis shoes, according to reports.

Standard said Aguilar may use back roads, and could appear as a migrant worker seeking employment.

Aguilar was arrested last October and charged with the robbery and killing of two Mexican nationals in the Howard County community of Luther, 15 miles north of Big Spring.

According to Standard, he was a few days away from completing a plea agreement which likely would have reduced the murder charges.

Two victims of accident remained hospitalized

From Staff Reports

Two of the three survivors of a two-vehicle accident which killed five persons last weekend remained in Midland Memorial Hospital today, a spokeswoman said.

A survivor of a one-car rollover which killed an Odessa youth late Tuesday also remained hospitalized, spokeswoman Sue Ristom said.

Dustin Ray Sanchez, 4, of Pasadena, suffered head injuries in the July 24 crash which occurred on U.S. Highway 80 west of Midland. He remained in critical condition today, but Ms. Ristom said his condition was improving.

Yolanda Sanchez Ramirez, 35, the driver of the car struck by a pickup truck, suffered a broken foot and remained in satisfactory condition today, she said. Her husband, 38-year-old Ascenscion Ramirez Sr., and daughters Amy Michelle Ramirez, 16, and Amanda Rose Ramirez, 11, died from injuries suffered in the crash, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Two other persons, Derek Ryan Sanchez, 7, of Pasadena, and 16-month-old Amanda Kaye Hiarker of Sugar Land, were also killed in the crash.

Troy Dal Richburg, 23, of Odessa, was driving the pickup truck that struck the Ramirez car, DPS reports said. He was treated and released at MMH for injuries suffered in the accident, and faces criminal charges in connection with the incident, according to Midland County records.

The condition of Gloria Miranda, 17, 414 Snyder St. in Odessa, has been upgraded to serious from critical, Ms. Ristom said. She was a passenger in a car which rolled over late Tuesday on Loop 250 in west Midland, killing 17-year-old Melvin Fred Sherman of Odessa, Midland police said.

Another person in the car at the time of the accident was treated and released for minor injuries, and a fourth was uninjured, police said.

Health officials report shigella cases up by possibly 300 percent

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A possible 300 percent increase in reported cases of the vicious intestinal bacteria shigella has prompted health officials in Bexar County to warn people to be careful about food preparation and storage.

Officials said Wednesday that the debilitating intestinal bug has officially been reported to have sickened at least 31 Bexar County residents since Memorial Day, a possible 300 percent increase in reported cases over last year.

Officials also suspect hundreds of other cases of the illness that have not been reported to authorities or could not be correctly diagnosed accurately because of difficulties in detection.

Metropolitan Health District officials say the bacteria causes intestinal cramps, diarrhea and fever in most people, although children can suffer convulsions.

Dr. Maurine Porto, coordinator of communicable diseases, cautioned that without treatment babies could suffer possibly fatal dehydration, although no deaths have been reported locally this year.

"There are more serious infections in the elderly and children," Porto said.

Officials say the 31 reports of shigella infections received by the health district since Memorial Day have been divided approximately equally among children and adults.

During the same period last year, only eight cases were reported. Porto said some of the increase could be the result of a better monitoring system, which unlike last year now picks up cases treated at the Brady Green Community Health Center.

For each reported case, health officials explained, there could be five to 10 other cases that were not reported.

So far for 1988, 100 cases of shigella bacteria illness have been reported compared with 38 for the same period in 1987.

Panel convicts drill instructor

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A U.S. Air Force court-martial panel has convicted a training instructor on a charge of mistreating recruits and sentenced him to four months confinement.

The panel convicted Staff Sgt. David O'Neal, 27, Wednesday at Lackland Air Force Base. The four officers deliberated two hours before announcing the sentence. It also reduced him in rank two pay grades and fined him $200 a month for six months.

He will begin serving the sentence Friday.

"It was fair," O'Neal, who faced a maximum of sixth months confinement, said. "I have no hard feelings about this."

Other training instructors who attended the proceedings had privately expressed support for O'Neal, a seven-year Air Force veteran with a clean record.

During the sentencing phase, O'Neal told the officers he was sorry and loved the Air Force. He also said instructors face a lot of pressure and often work from 4 a.m. to 10 p.m., rarely seeing their families.

"One man's definition of maltreatment could be another man's good, hard training tactics," Middleton said in closing arguments.

The prosecutor, Maj. Mary Boone, said O'Neal knew the regulations and stepped over the line.

"Yes, we tear them down and build them up," Boone said, referring to the process of turning civilians into airmen, "but we don't physically abuse them..."

Witnesses also testified that O'Neal cut two recruits by rubbing the brim of his campaign hat against the bridge of their noses while he screamed in their faces.

State, US Sprint reach agreement

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said the state of Texas has obtained an agreed court order requiring US Sprint Communications Co. to improve its billing and accounting procedures.

A lawsuit and agreed order settling the suit were filed simultaneously Wednesday in state district court in Dallas, Mattox said in a release. The company also agreed to pay the state $25,000 in investigative costs, he said.

Mattox said in the suit that his Consumer Protection Office received approximately 149 complaints from consumers regarding US Sprint's accuracy, completeness and timeliness in customer billing, and problems with the collection of past-due accounts.

STATE IN BRIEF

Ex-Fair Park official sentenced for stealing

DALLAS (AP) — A judge has sentenced former Fair Park general manager William McLaughlin to three years in prison on a charge accusing him of stealing Dallas city funds.

District Judge Gary Stephens Wednesday also ordered McLaughlin, 52,to pay more than $42,000 in fines and restitution and instructed him to donate 2,000 hours of community service to the city.

Stephens also sentenced McLaughlin to 10 years probation on a fraud conviction.

The charges alleged McLaughlin misappropriated more than $36,650 in city park contributions, depositing the money into his personal bank accounts and using a $2,900 check from a private foundation, intended for park benches, to buy furniture for his personal use.

"Based on what I've heard and what I've observed, I have compassion for you," Stephens told McLaughlin. "But I have nothing but contempt for your acts."

Worker electrocuted

DALLAS (AP) — A 23-year-old man killed Wednesday at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant construction site must not have realized metal ductwork he was trying to move had sliced through a live electric cable, officials said.

Roger Lee Keith, 23, of Waurika, Okla., died after coming into contact with 480 volts of electricity, said Texas Utilities spokesman Dick Ramsey.

Keith, an employee of Fluor Daniel, was helping install air conditioning and ventilation at the plant located near Glen Rose about 70 miles southwest of Dallas.

Ramsey said Keith apparently dropped a piece of ductwork onto a tray containing live electrical cables.

"Apparently he did not know that a piece of the ductwork had cut through the wire insulation, and when he grabbed hold of it to pull it back up, he was electrocuted," Ramsey said.

Keith is the first to die at the construction site since two workmen were killed last September when a crane collapsed during a thunderstorm, Ramsey said. Several were killed during earlier construction phases.

Rangers to admit first black

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Rangers will admit the first black into the 165-year-old agency in September, a television station reported Wednesday night.

Lee Roy Young Jr. will be assigned to Co. B, headquartered in Garland, KDFW-TV said.

Young, 40, currently an investigator assigned to Department of Public Safety intelligence in San Antonio, confirmed that announcement of his appointment would be made today.

"It will be the high point of my career," Young told KDFW. "It's been a goal of mine, an aspiration of mine for many, many years to become a Ranger," Young said.

Most of the 14 years Young has worked for the DPS were spent as a highway patrolman around his hometown of Del Rio.

Young, married and the father of two children, speaks fluent Spanish and has earned degrees from Southwest Junior College in Uvalde and the University of Texas at Austin.

FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Surround yourself with people who are positive in their actions as well as their thinking. Job opportunities abound! A love relationship gets one more chance. The money flows in steadily. Build savings to give yourself security in your later years. Taking some time off will recharge your batteries. Be on the lookout for a chance to advance your education and career.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: dictator Benito Mussolini, author Booth Tarkington, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, actor Richard Egan, naturalist Charles William Beebe, actor Robert Fuller, UN leader Dag Hammarskjold, anchorman Peter Jennings, actor William Powell.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Watch what you say or you could give ammunition to someone who hopes to unseat you. You have higher-up's attention. Give this person an earful. Legal matters need to be finalized today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be less forceful in the workplace. Stay on top of financial matters and do not fall behind with the paperwork. Your loyalty is admirable but could harm your career if carried to extremes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Handling minor details right is very important for success. Check with a doctor if feeling under the weather. A weekend of rest and relaxation could fix up whatever is ailing you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are not getting enough sleep, but you are happy and that is what counts. Tell guests who overstay their welcome to hit the road. You need your privacy. Home cooking lifts your spirits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take whatever steps are necessary to improve your finances. Travel is a stimulus for romance. Time spent with children may be one of the best investments you ever make. Be a good listener.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Some of you are ready to give up your single status. Take partner's ideas seriously or you could miss a golden financial opportunity. Make a special effort to look good. Travel is favored.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have been obsessed with work lately. Find new interests and meet new people. You can solve a money problem, but it will take work and total honesty. Clear up a misunderstanding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will become a top achiever if you take on projects that require use of your hands as well as your mind. Be honest about a relationship that could be improved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is time to change your freewheeling ways. Pay off overdue bills and rid yourself of old loves. You need to get both your personal and business life better organized. Show dependability.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your love of children brings you real satisfaction, but it also increases your work burden. Look after your own interests for a while. Build up resistance to colds by getting more rest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your future is in your own hands. It is time to bite the bullet and decide just how important a relationship is to you. Take charge of a volatile situation and settle it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do whatever is necessary to protect your financial security. Save someone from his indulgences. You will do just great in a job that puts you in the public eye. Pour on the charm.

PENNY WISE, POUND FOOLISH

North–South vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ K 6 3 ♡ K 7 ◇ K J 10 5 ♣ 8 6 4 3
WEST ♠ Q J 10 9 5 ♡ 3 ◇ 9 7 4 2 ♣ A Q 2		EAST ♠ A 8 4 2 ♡ 9 6 5 ◇ 8 6 3 ♣ J 10 9
	SOUTH ♠ 7 ♡ A Q J 10 8 4 2 ◇ A Q ♣ K 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	1 NT	2 ♠
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

East followed a perfectly sound dictum in the defense of this hand, only to discover that he had handed declarer his vulnerable game. South ignored another and landed his contract.

Note that North was quite content to bid one no trump over the spade overcall. Normally, this is a forward-going response, showing 8–10 points, although on this specific auction it could be somewhat lighter since North is bidding under space pressure.

West led the queen of spades, and had South blindly obeyed the tenet of covering an honor with an honor, he would probably have been defeated. East would have won the trick, and the shift to the jack of clubs would have been automatic. That would have netted the first four tricks for the defenders.

However, declarer realized that the contract was threatened only if East were to gain the lead. To prevent that, he played low from dummy. East remembered the proverb: "Waste not, want not," and signalled encouragement with the eight. Declarer ruffed the spade continuation, drew trumps and discarded two clubs on dummy's diamonds, making an overtrick.

Had East thought of "penny wise, pound foolish," he might have beaten the hand. Since West surely had a five-card suit for his overcall, the defenders were never going to collect more than one trick in the suit. To defeat the game, they had to get three tricks in the minor suits, and only one was possible in diamonds. Therefore, at least two had to come from clubs. The only hope for the defenders was for East to rise with the ace of spades at trick one, even though that would set up the king for a discard. The jack of clubs through would then have forced South to bow the knee.

She's so physical.

Television Academy announces 40th annual Emmy nominations

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — "It's Garry Shandling's Show," the comedy series some critics call the best on television, is among 450 cable TV entries competing for Emmys for the first time with the broadcast networks.

Emmy nominations were being announced today.

The Television Academy of Arts & Sciences decided to allow cable programming to compete with regular broadcast television in this year's 40th annual Emmy awards because cable shows are now available to a wide national audience.

Ten cable TV networks hope to be on the list when the nominations are announced from more than 4,500 entries.

Showtime has two miniseries: "Home Fires," a four hour examination of four days in the life of a family, and "Codename: Kyril," an espionage thriller starring Denholm Elliott. They could compete against such network miniseries as NBC's "Gore Vidal's Lincoln" and "Poor Little Rich Girl: The Barbara Hutton Story," CBS' "Echoes in the Darkness" and ABC's "Bourne Identity."

HBO entries include: "Dear America," a feature documentary on the Vietnam War; "Mandela," the story of South African rights leader Nelson Mandela, starring Alfre Woodard and Danny Glover; "Baja Oklahoma," a movie based on the book by Dan Jenkins; and the musical special "Roy Orbison and Friends: A Black and White Night."

Disney possibilities included the animated feature "The Brave Little Toaster," the movie "Save the Dog" and the special "Rick Nelson: A Brother Remembers."

Comedy series — ABC's "Slap Maxwell," "Hooperman," "Growing Pains," "Who's the Boss," CBS' "Frank's Place" and "Designing Women," NBC's "Cheers" and "Golden Girls."

Movies — CBS' "Foxfire" and "April Morning," NBC's "The Ann Jillian Story," "Inherit the Wind" and "To Heal a Nation."

Miniseries — ABC's "Bourne Identity" and "Baby M," CBS' "Echoes in the Darkness," NBC's "The Murder of Mary Phagan."

The Emmy Awards telecast will be presented live on Fox Broadcasting at 8 p.m. EDT, Sunday, Aug. 28, from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium. Lorne Michaels, executive producer of NBC's "Saturday Night Live," will produce the special 40th anniversary show. Presentation of the crafts awards will be at a special banquet Aug. 27.

The Governors Award this year will go to William Hanna and Joseph Barbera, of Hanna-Barbera, for their many animated shows, including "The Flintstones," "The Jetsons," and "The Smurfs."

"The cable industry is pleased with the number of entries this first time," said Jim Boyle, a spokesman for the National Academy of Cable Programming. "Our hopes are very high for nominations and winners. We think talent will be recognized."

Emmy entries represent shows that were on such cable and pay systems as Arts & Entertainment, CBN, Disney Channel, Home Box Office, Cinemax, MTV, Nickelodeon, Showtime, Turner Broadcasting System and USA Network.

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Olympic superflop Eddie "The Eagle" Edwards says it'll take $1.3 million to get him to pose nude for a Playgirl magazine spread, and not a penny less.

"That's what it will cost them if they want all of me," the 24-year-old plasterer from Cheltenham in southwest England said Wednesday.

"I won't do it for a penny less."

The British ski jumper soared to fame and failure in the Winter Olympics. Edwards finished last in two events in Calgary, Canada, but fans fell in love with his thick glasses, jutting chin and unflappable humor.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A photographer says Cher's boyfriend tried to run him down as the Oscar-winning actress' companion was driving a Ferarri sportscar outside the couple's home.

Cher

Robert Camilletti, 24, was arrested and booked for investigation of felony assault with a deadly weapon shortly after Wednesday's incident, said police spokesman Lt. Fred Nixon.

"He tried to kill me. He tried to run me over at a high rate of speed," said free-lance photographer Peter Brandt, 35. He would not elaborate, citing advice from his lawyer.

Camilletti's attorney posted the $2,000 bail and Cher picked him up a few hours later at the police station.

"I have no privacy," she said.

The 42-year-old Cher and Camilletti have been companions since meeting at a New York nightclub two years ago. Camilletti, a former bagel maker, pizza chef and bartender, is pursuing an acting career.

MOSCOW (AP) — Conductor Leonard Bernstein delighted a packed audience at Gorky Park with a diplomatic choice of musical selections, one composed by a Soviet and the other by an American — himself.

Bernstein

About 4,000 Muscovites squeezed together at the outdoor Green Theater near the banks of the Moscow River and gave the American musician a 10-minute standing ovation at the end of Wednesday night's program.

Bernstein, whose 70th birthday is next month and whose father was born in Russia, led the 120-member Schleswig-Holstein Music Festival Orchestra in Soviet composer Dmitri Shostakovich's Symphony No. 1, and in his own work titled "Songfest."

This week's tour marks the first time Bernstein has performed in the Soviet Union in 29 years. His first visit was in 1959, during a cultural "thaw" promoted by Nikita S. Khrushchev.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer David L. Wolper, who staged the dazzling closing ceremonies at the 1984 Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles, has signed an exclusive contract with Warner Bros. Inc.

Wolper's contract runs until 1995 and extends the association he's had with the studio since selling his production company to Warner in 1976. The financial terms weren't disclosed.

During his 12 years at Warner, Wolper has produced 80 hours of miniseries, among them 26 hours of "Roots," 24 hours of "North and South," and 10 hours of "The Thorn Birds."

FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Surround yourself with people who are positive in their actions as well as their thinking. Job opportunities abound! A love relationship gets one more chance. The money flows in steadily. Build savings to give yourself security in your later years. Taking some time off will recharge your batteries. Be on the lookout for a chance to advance your education and career.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: dictator Benito Mussolini, author Booth Tarkington, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, actor Richard Egan, naturalist Charles William Beebe, actor Robert Fuller, UN leader Dag Hammarskjold, anchorman Peter Jennings, actor William Powell.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Watch what you say or you could give ammunition to someone who hopes to unseat you. You have higher-up's attention. Give this person an earful. Legal matters need to be finalized today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be less forceful in the workplace. Stay on top of financial matters and do not fall behind with the paperwork. Your loyalty is admirable but could harm your career if carried to extremes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Handling minor details right is very important for success. Check with a doctor if feeling under the weather. A weekend of rest and relaxation could fix up whatever is ailing you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are not getting enough sleep, but you are happy and that is what counts. Tell guests who overstay their welcome to hit the road. You need your privacy. Home cooking lifts your spirits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take whatever steps are necessary to improve your finances. Travel is a stimulus for romance. Time spent with children may be one of the best investments you ever make. Be a good listener.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Some of you are ready to give up your single status. Take partner's ideas seriously or you could miss a golden financial opportunity. Make a special effort to look good. Travel is favored.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have been obsessed with work lately. Find new interests and meet new people. You can solve a money problem, but it will take work and total honesty. Clear up a misunderstanding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will become a top achiever if you take on projects that require use of your hands as well as your mind. Be honest about a relationship that could be improved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is time to change your freewheeling ways. Pay off overdue bills and rid yourself of old loves. You need to get both your personal and business life better organized. Show dependability.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your love of children brings you real satisfaction, but it also increases your work burden. Look after your own interests for a while. Build up resistance to colds by getting more rest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your future is in your own hands. It is time to bite the bullet and decide just how important a relationship is to you. Take charge of a volatile situation and settle it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do whatever is necessary to protect your financial security. Save someone from his indulgences. You will do just great in a job that puts you in the public eye. Pour on the charm.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	1 NT	2 ♠
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

East followed a perfectly sound dictum in the defense of this hand, only to discover that he had handed declarer his vulnerable game. South ignored another and landed his contract.

Note that North was quite content to bid one no trump over the spade overcall. Normally, this is a forward-going response, showing 8–10 points, although on this specific auction it could be somewhat lighter since North is bidding under space pressure.

West led the queen of spades, and had South blindly obeyed the tenet of covering an honor with an honor, he would probably have been defeated. East would have won the trick, and the shift to the jack of clubs would have been automatic. That would have netted the first four tricks for the defenders.

However, declarer realized that the contract was threatened only if East were to gain the lead. To prevent that, he played low from dummy. East remembered the proverb: "Waste not, want not," and signalled encouragement with the eight. Declarer ruffed the spade continuation, drew trumps and discarded two clubs on dummy's diamonds, making an overtrick.

Had East thought of "penny wise, pound foolish," he might have beaten the hand. Since West surely had a five-card suit for his overcall, the defenders were never going to collect more than one trick in the suit. To defeat the game, they had to get three tricks in the minor suits, and only one was possible in diamonds. Therefore, at least two had to come from clubs. The only hope for the defenders was for East to rise with the ace of spades at trick one, even though that would set up the king for a discard. The jack of clubs through would then have forced South to bow the knee.

She's so physical.

Television Academy announces 40th annual Emmy nominations

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — "It's Garry Shandling's Show," the comedy series some critics call the best on television, is among 450 cable TV entries competing for Emmys for the first time with the broadcast networks.

Emmy nominations were being announced today.

The Television Academy of Arts & Sciences decided to allow cable programming to compete with regular broadcast television in this year's 40th annual Emmy awards because cable shows are now available to a wide national audience.

Ten cable TV networks hope to be on the list when the nominations are announced from more than 4,500 entries.

Showtime has two miniseries: "Home Fires," a four-hour examination of four days in the life of a family, and "Codename: Kyril," an espionage thriller starring Denholm Elliott. They could compete against such network miniseries as NBC's "Gore Vidal's Lincoln" and "Poor Little Rich Girl: The Barbara Hutton Story," CBS' "Echoes in the Darkness" and ABC's "Bourne Identity."

HBO entries include: "Dear America," a feature documentary on the Vietnam War; "Mandela," the story of South African rights leader Nelson Mandela, starring Alfre Woodard and Danny Glover; "Baja Oklahoma," a movie based on the book by Dan Jenkins; and the musical special "Roy Orbison and Friends: A Black and White Night."

Disney possibilities included the animated feature "The Brave Little Toaster," the movie "Save the Dog" and the special "Rick Nelson: A Brother Remembers."

Comedy series — ABC's "Slap Maxwell," "Hooperman," "Growing Pains," "Who's the Boss," CBS' "Frank's Place" and "Designing Women," NBC's "Cheers" and "Golden Girls."

Movies — CBS' "Foxfire" and "April Morning," NBC's "The Ann Jillian Story," "Inherit the Wind" and "To Heal a Nation."

Miniseries — ABC's "Bourne Identity" and "Baby M," CBS' "Echoes in the Darkness," NBC's "The Murder of Mary Phagan."

The Emmy Awards telecast will be presented live on Fox Broadcasting at 8 p.m. EDT, Sunday, Aug. 28, from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium. Lorne Michaels, executive producer of NBC's "Saturday Night Live," will produce the special 40th anniversary show. Presentation of the crafts awards will be at a special banquet Aug. 27.

The Governors Award this year will go to William Hanna and Joseph Barbera, of Hanna-Barbera, for their many animated shows, including "The Flintstones," "The Jetsons," and "The Smurfs."

"The cable industry is pleased with the number of entries this first time," said Jim Boyle, a spokesman for the National Academy of Cable Programming. "Our hopes are very high for nominations and winners. We think talent will be recognized."

Emmy entries represent shows that were on such cable and pay systems as Arts & Entertainment, CBN, Disney Channel, Home Box Office, Cinemax, MTV, Nickelodeon, Showtime, Turner Broadcasting System and USA Network.

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Olympic superflop Eddie "The Eagle" Edwards says it'll take $1.3 million to get him to pose nude for a Playgirl magazine spread, and not a penny less.

"That's what it will cost them if they want all of me," the 24-year-old plasterer from Cheltenham in southwest England said Wednesday.

The British ski jumper soared to fame and failure in the Winter Olympics. Edwards finished last in two events in Calgary, Canada, but fans fell in love with his thick glasses, jutting chin and unflappable humor.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A photographer says Cher's boyfriend tried to run him down as the Oscar-winning actress' companion was driving a Ferarri sportscar outside the couple's home.

Cher

Robert Camilletti, 24, was arrested and booked for investigation of felony assault with a deadly weapon shortly after Wednesday's incident, said police spokesman Lt. Fred Nixon.

"He tried to kill me. He tried to run me over at a high rate of speed," said free-lance photographer Peter Brandt, 35. He would not elaborate, citing advice from his lawyer.

Camilletti's attorney posted the $2,000 bail and Cher picked him up a few hours later at the police station.

"I have no privacy," she said.

The 42-year-old Cher and Camilletti have been companions since meeting at a New York nightclub two years ago. Camilletti, a former bagel maker, pizza chef and bartender, is pursuing an acting career.

MOSCOW (AP) — Conductor Leonard Bernstein delighted a packed audience at Gorky Park with a diplomatic choice of musical selections, one composed by a Soviet and the other by an American — himself.

Bernstein

About 4,000 Muscovites squeezed together at the outdoor Green Theater near the banks of the Moscow River and gave the American musician a 10-minute standing ovation at the end of Wednesday night's program.

Bernstein, whose 70th birthday is next month and whose father was born in Russia, led the 120-member Schleswig-Holstein Music Festival Orchestra in Soviet composer Dmitri Shostakovich's Symphony No. 1, and in his own work titled "Songfest."

This week's tour marks the first time Bernstein has performed in the Soviet Union in 29 years. His first visit was in 1959, during a cultural "thaw" promoted by Nikita S. Khrushchev.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer David L. Wolper, who staged the dazzling closing ceremonies at the 1984 Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles, has signed an exclusive contract with Warner Bros. Inc.

Wolper's contract runs until 1995 and extends the association he's had with the studio since selling his production company to Warner in 1976. The financial terms weren't disclosed.

During his 12 years at Warner, Wolper has produced 80 hours of miniseries, among them 26 hours of "Roots," 24 hours of "North and South," and 10 hours of "The Thorn Birds."

LET'S DO LUNCH

Restaurant has nice decor, slow service

The OFFICE GOURMET

Venezia is an interesting Italian restuarant. The floor plan features three distinct levels. The entrance section is quite spacious with small, well-separated tables covered with green and white checkered "oil cloth" tablecloths. Unique abstract pastel paintings decorate the walls and are a pleasant contrast to the brick floor.

The atmosphere is further enhanced by the small wrought-iron-framed balcony that is a cozy upstairs dining area. Here, the tables are draped with the same "oil cloth" but in red and white, which are reminiscent of romantic cafes in the "old country." However, no gondolas (from River Wadley!) or singing troubadors ever passed by.

The third section is a relaxing tree-shrouded patio area for patrons to dine outside where the chirping birds provide a serenade. The white "ice cream" tables and chairs complete the scene.

In such a lovely setting, it was appalling that food and service was so inconsistent.

After a 15-minute wait during one visit — with only two tables occupied — the waiter had to be located so as to order lunch. (The menus are at each place before the guests are seated).

After an extended period of time, the warm pasta salad was served — cold and not particularly flavorful to me. The remainder of my dining experience continued in this fashion — begging for bread (cold toasted split halves of Italian garlic bread), water, the check. The non-existant "service" consumed one hour, which was quite a disappointment because the luncheon menu is nicely varied with salads, pastas and other complete entrees. The usual beverages plus wine and beer, and a few desserts also are available.

The cannelloni, a specialty of the house, stuffed with an unusual splendid combination of pork, veal and spinach floating in an exquisite sauce was served supremely fresh and hot. The Venezia chicken sauteed in butter with mushrooms, onions and tomatoes also was superior.

The bus persons attended to re-filling beverage glasses promptly, but again, the waiter ignored the table once the entree was served.

An hour again would have passed had not the beverage girl been asked for the check, which the waiter then hustled to the table. On this occasion, he did graciously take the payment to the cashier for change.

Several patrons have been overheard saying they hoped that this time a restaurant would survive at this perfectly delightful spot. But without some very efficient consistency established soon, I fear that even the usually patient, forgiving Midland clientele will cease their tolerance and lunch elsewhere.

Luncheon prices range from $4.50-6.95. American Express and personal checks are accepted. Venezia is open from 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. and 5-10:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 5-10:30 p.m. Saturday.

Frozen yogurts offer alternative to ice cream

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

Friends and acquaintances are forever suggesting products for the taste-testers and me to check out, and I have to tell you that some of these products are more appealing than others.

Take, for example, the suggestion that I check out some of the new ice cream-style frozen yogurt desserts that keep appearing in the supermarket freezer section.

Since I have a terrible weakness for frozen desserts (especially if they have pieces or ribbons of chocolate in them), and I've also taught my children to have the same weakness, we had no trouble at all following through with that suggestion.

Fortunately, frozen yogurt even has the reputation of being more healthy than many other frozen desserts (I don't know if it's true or not, but who am I to quibble when it comes to sweets?), so we could even conduct a taste-test with the assumption that it was good for us. Not a bad concept.

We checked out two frozen yogurts — Yoplait Soft Frozen Yogurt (chocolate) and Brice's Frozen Yogurt (chocolate chip) — for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Yes, they are two different flavors, but we figured we'd get to try the best of both worlds.

Both are marketed in one-pint containers. Both carry nutrition information on their labels — Brice's is advertised as having "⅓ the calories and 80 percent less fat than ice cream." According to the nutrition labels, Yoplait contains 100 calories per 3 fl. ounce serving, and Brice's has 130 calories per 4 fl. ounce serving — which amounts to almost the same thing. (Brice's label also claims that ice cream has 290 calories per same sized serving, but I have my doubts about that — maybe they mean the premium ice creams.)

"And 94 percent fat free.

"Made with wholesome, all natural ingredients and active Yoplait yogurt cultures."

Both cost about $1.99 per pint at a local supermarket. (Prices at other locations may vary.)

In the all-important taste-test, both proved to be smooth and creamy — but not as soft as expected. (We're used to frozen yogurt from frozen yogurt stores, after all, which is to frozen yogurt from the supermarket what soft ice cream from a hamburger joint is to supermarket ice cream — one is really soft and one just claims it is.)

However, both types of frozen yogurt were tasty and delicious, and a big hit with the taste-testers — especially the younger ones. They can't wait to try all the other flavors.

Telemarketing law aimed to eliminate phone-fraud

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

The state of Nevada passed a telemarketing law aimed to eliminate fraud via telephones from Nevada. The law became effective March 1, 1988.

Besides registration, licensing and bonding, the highlights of the legislation are:

- The company selling must fully identify the company, the name of the salesperson and the true nature of the contact.
- They cannot offer a prize, etc., as an inducement to purchase, nor may a redemption fee or any consideration whatsoever be charged to acquire a prize.
- Each buyer has the right to return purchased goods within 30 days of receipt with a written explanation of the reason for the return, with proof of return to company (customers must pay postage) with a request for a refund.

Salad bars: Nutrition depends on selections

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Today, on-the-go consumers are interested in healthy foods, which has created a boom in salad bars at restaurants, fast food chains and even supermarkets. A 1988 national survey conducted for The Packer, a fruit and vegetable industry publication, found that 45 percent of supermarkets now have salad bars and 51 percent of produce consumers use them at least once a month.

However, patronizing a salad bar doesn't automatically result in healthy eating. What people get nutritionally from a salad bar depends entirely upon the choices they make. A salad of iceberg lettuce with dressing, for example, will be high in fiber and low in calories if you don't over-do it on the dressing.

But you can do better nutritionally by adding vegetables that are high in vitamins A and C, such as romaine lettuce, spinach, broccoli, carrots, cauliflower or green pepper.

If your salad is supposed to be an entire meal, you should also include some protein foods such as bacon bits, shredded cheese or chopped egg.

Some nutrients, such as iron, thiamin and niacin, are supplied primarily by foods you don't often see at salad bars — such as meats and whole grain products — so you may want to balance out your diet by eating these at another meal during the day.

A salad bar is often not the best place to find a low-calorie meal, unless you can show some restraint, both in serving size and what you select. By choosing potato and macaroni salads, gelatin, fruit salad with whipped dressings and cole slaw in addition to your vegetables, you can wind up with more calories than a regular meal.

To keep the calorie count down, try sticking with plain raw vegetables and diet dressings, avoiding pickled foods and the prepared salads that use high calorie dressings.

DEAR ABBY

Man's time-worn tale wearing thin on his wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am about to burst. I have been married for almost a year now, and if I hear my husband tell one more person how "good" he was to his wife while she was dying, I will scream!

Yes, he was good to his wife. Yes, he did take her to every specialist in the country. Yes, he did spend lots of money trying to "save" her, but he talks about it endlessly to anyone who will listen.

Today he told me that no one ever had a loss like his. (Of course, I lost my husband, but that doesn't count.)

He doesn't talk about his wife — only the way he took care of her. He keeps saying that he has no regrets; he will never have to say he didn't do everything humanly possible for her. Why does he talk about it all the time?

If he meets anyone whose spouse is sick, as soon as it is mentioned, he takes over the conversation and does a monologue on what he went through with his wife and how he took care of her. I am tired of hearing about it. Some people have asked me to please tell him to lay off the subject. They know what he went through, and they are tired of hearing about it.

He's a good husband, but it's time that he put his tragedy behind him and got on with his life. He acts as if nobody ever lost a spouse but him. What should I do? Ignore it? Let him talk about it, or what? — UP TO HERE

DEAR UP: Your husband desperately needs to talk about his loss, but he should spare you and his friends the repetitious tales in which he is the "hero." (Some people talk more to convince themselves than others.)

The poor man could still be hurting. He needs to unload on a professional who will listen patiently, then guide him through the healing process and put this self-serving need to rest. Do your husband, his friends and yourself an enormous favor and get him into therapy.

DEAR ABBY: Our neighbor's child is only 14 years old. He's 5 foot 11 and weighs about 250 pounds. His mother and I were talking and feel that he needs help. I told her I would write and ask you if there is a group to help young people who are compulsive eaters. He is such a sweet and good young man, but people make fun of him and he gets very hurt.

Although his folks have tried everything, he often eats until his stomach hurts! How can we help? I used to go to AA meetings with a friend, and if there were something like that for eaters, maybe he would go. — CONCERNED NEIGHBOR IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR CONCERNED NEIGHBOR: There is an organization like AA for compulsive eaters of all ages. It's Overeaters Anonymous. It is listed in the telephone directory, and there are chapters in almost every major city. I have attended some of the meetings, and a more compassionate group of people you will rarely encounter.

There is no shaming — no weighing, no embarrassment. Just a loving fellowship of people with a common problem — being overweight and wanting to do something about it. Contact them and put the boy in touch. There's no charge. Please let me hear from you again. I care.

Energy-efficiency labels explain energy costs

Copley News Service

Those energy-efficiency labels you're accustomed to seeing on refrigerators and dishwashers must now also be displayed on central air conditioners, heat pumps and pulse-combustion furnaces. If you are considering buying a new appliance, read these labels carefully — they will tell you how much you can expect to save in energy costs by replacing your current appliance.

Savings can be considerable. A new central air conditioner costs half what older models cost to operate (the average annual operating costs drop from $300 to $150); a new frost-free refrigerator costs about $70 a year to run — 40 percent less than energy costs for older refrigerators, which come to about $120 a year.

PLO leader calls for talks with Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — A prominent pro-PLO leader from the occupied territories called for direct talks with Israeli representatives and said he would even speak with hard-line Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

In a rare dialogue with Israeli peace activists, Faisal Husseini said the Palestinians' "dream" is to have Israel as well as the occupied lands, but they are willing to compromise and split the land to end the "nightmares."

"As a Palestinian, my problem is with the Israelis — so I must speak with them," Husseini said Wednesday. "So we're willing to speak with Shamir, not because he is a a man of peace...but because we know this man was chosen by Israel to represent them."

As he spoke, dozens of anti-Arab demonstrators stood outside and protested against the forum, sponsored by the broad-based Israeli peace movement, Peace Now. The Palestine Liberation Organization is banned in Israel, and the protesters held signs saying, "Peace Now is a knife in the back."

The PLO refuses to recognize Israel, but a recent document drawn up by PLO spokesman Bassam Abu Sharif called for direct talks with Israel under the auspices of an international conference.

Husseini is a popular figure among residents of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, and Israel! Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin once called him the leading PLO representative in the areas. He seemed to back Abu Sharif's policy.

Israeli listeners asked him whether Palestinians will be satisfied with a state alongside Israel and not try to conquer the Jewish state itself.

"Indeed, I do have a dream," he said.

"But I am not willing to impose my dreams upon my fellow men," he said. "We will have to give up a lot of dreams — but also a lot of nightmares."

The statements were greeted with loud applause.

Husseini, director of the East Jerusalem-based Arab Studies Institute, was released in July from an Israeli jail, where he had been held without trial for nine months.

Before the anti-occupation uprising began Dec. 8, he was involved in clandestine talks with Moshe Amirav, a former member of the right-wing Likud Party. Likud, which is fiercely opposed to the PLO, kicked Amirav out of the party over the meetings.

Amirav, leftist parliamentarian Yair Tzaban and Palestinian journalist Redwan Abu Ayash, who was also released from jail without trial recently, addressed the unusual gathering with Husseini.

It was the first public dialogue between Israelis and Palestinians in Israel since the uprising started.

CAMBODIA

Talks began Monday, July 25 for a peaceful solution in Cambodia, bringing together Prime Minister Hun Sen, resistance leader Sihanouk's son, and leaders from the Communist Khmer Rouge and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

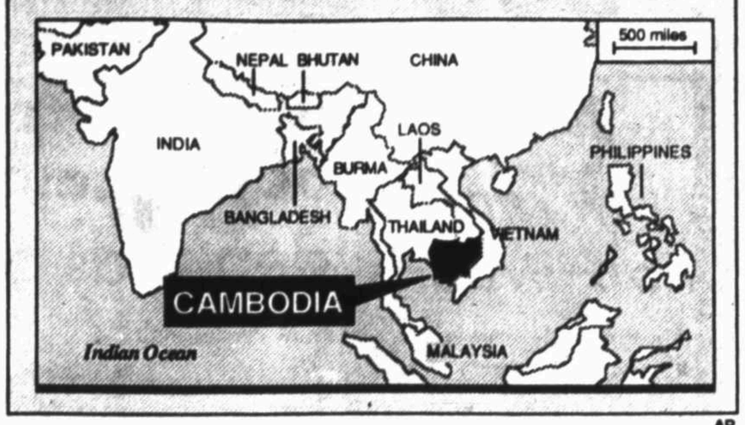

Land:

Population:
6.98 million (1982)

People:
93% are Khmer, 4% are Vietnamese and 3% are Chinese. Khmer is the main language.

Religion:
About 88% practice Buddhism, with minorities adhering to Islam and Christianity.

Politics:
Before 1953, Cambodia was under French control. It became a Communist republic in April 1975, when the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge took control. About two million Cambodians died from Khmer executions, famine and unrest before the U.S.S.R.-backed Vietnamese invaded in 1978, taking control in 1979. Groups such as the Khmer Rouge have been fighting guerilla warfare to oust the Vietnamese ever since then.

Prime minister says guerrillas blocking Cambodia agreements

BOGOR, Indonesia (AP) — Delegates of the Khmer Rouge guerrillas are blocking agreements in talks aimed at ending Cambodia's 9-year-old civil war, the head of Cambodia's Vietnam-installed government was quoted today as saying.

The Jakarta Post also quoted Prime Minister Hun Sen as saying he would hold a third round of separate peace talks with resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk in Paris in October.

Sihanouk's forces are allied with the communist Khmer Rouge and Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front in a nominal coalition fighting Vietnamese troops that invaded Cambodia in late 1978.

Today, Hun Sen, the guerrilla groups, Vietnam, Laos and the six-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations began a fourth day of informal peace talks.

Sihanouk, a former Cambodian monarch and head of state, resigned as resistance coalition president July 10, but reclaimed center stage in the peace effort Wednesday by holding talks in Jakarta with his guerrilla partners and Hun Sen.

Sihanouk presented yet another peace plan, but like that issued by Hun Sen on Monday, it contained no dramatic new elements.

Khmer Rouge dissension at the talks had been anticipated. Participants said they were nearing agreement that the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops must be linked to steps to ensure the Khmer Rouge does not return to power.

The fanatical group killed at least a million people in its attempt to impose agrarian communism after it took over in 1975. Vietnam invaded in 1978 to put a stop to bloody Khmer Rouge attacks on its western border.

Hanoi has said it will withdraw all its troops from Cambodia by early 1990.

The Jakarta Post said Hun Sen "was not displeased to note that Khieu Samphan, the Khmer Rouge representative, was not forthcoming to the point of acting obstructive when it came to nailing down some specific points of agreement."

Palace confirms Marcos' $5 billion offer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino's executive secretary confirmed today that Ferdinand Marcos offered to pay $5 billion to return home, but said her staff recommended that the offer be rejected.

Executive Secretary Catalino Macaraig told reporters he believed the offer was a ploy by the deposed president to avoid criminal indictment in the United States.

"We saw it for what it was," Macaraig said. "It was just a ploy to get his U.S. indictment against him suspended...I recommended the rejection of the five billion dollar offer."

Macaraig did not say whether Mrs. Aquino accepted the advice. On Wednesday, she told reporters Marcos should send the money first "and then we'll talk."

Mrs. Aquino has refused to allow Marcos and his family to return from Hawaii, where they fled after a February 1986 popular uprising toppled his 20-year administration.

Her government alleges that he stole about $10 billion from the Philipines' treasury.

In New York, The Village Voice reported this month that U.S. attorney Rudolph Giuliani had recommended that Marcos and his wife Imelda be indicted on fraud and conspiracy charges in connection with acquisition of real estate in New York.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater confirmed later that the White House had asked to be consulted before the Justice Department sought any indictment against Marcos.

In a statement Tuesday from Hawaii, Marcos said "negotiations" about his return were taking place, but denied he had offered to pay the money in exchange for permission to return to the Philippines with immunity from prosecution.

But Macaraig said the offer by the ousted president was relayed earlier this month by Emmanuel Pelaez, Philippine ambassador to Washington.

Macaraig said Pelaez told him he had been approached by two Americans about the Marcos offer and relayed it to Manila. Macaraig identified one of them as James McGregor, a political science professor at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Macaraig said he could not remember the other American's name.

On Wednesday, Boston University professor Allen Weinstein said the $5 billion offer was in a proposal brought to him by a Marcos representative and was part of the "substance" of a letter to him from Marcos.

Tamil rebels stab to death 14 Sinhalese

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Militant Tamil separatists today stabbed to death 14 Sinhalese villagers gathering cinnamon in the jungles of the North Central Province, a military official said.

Meanwhile, Sinhalese extremists killed two supporters of the governing United National Party in the south, the Sinhalese heartland, the military official said.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the 14 were killed around the village of Padaviya about 100 miles northeast of Colombo, the capital.

"We do not know the motive for the killings. Maybe the cinnamon gatherers stumbled onto a Tiger camp in the jungles and were silenced," he said.

The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam are the largest Tamil group fighting for a separate homeland in the Northern and Eastern Provinces for the past six years.

Tamils, who are mostly Hindus, make up 18 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million people. Sinhalese Buddhists are about 75 percent.

Tamils say they are discriminated against by the Sinhalese, who control the government and the military.

An increase in violence by Tamil and Sinhalese militants was feared on the first anniversary of the India-Sri Lanka peace accord signed last July 29. The accord is aimed at ending the Tamil conflict by granting minority Tamils some autonomy.

The Tigers reject the peace accord and refuse to surrender their arms. More than 50,000 Indian troops are in Sri Lanka to disarm the rebels.

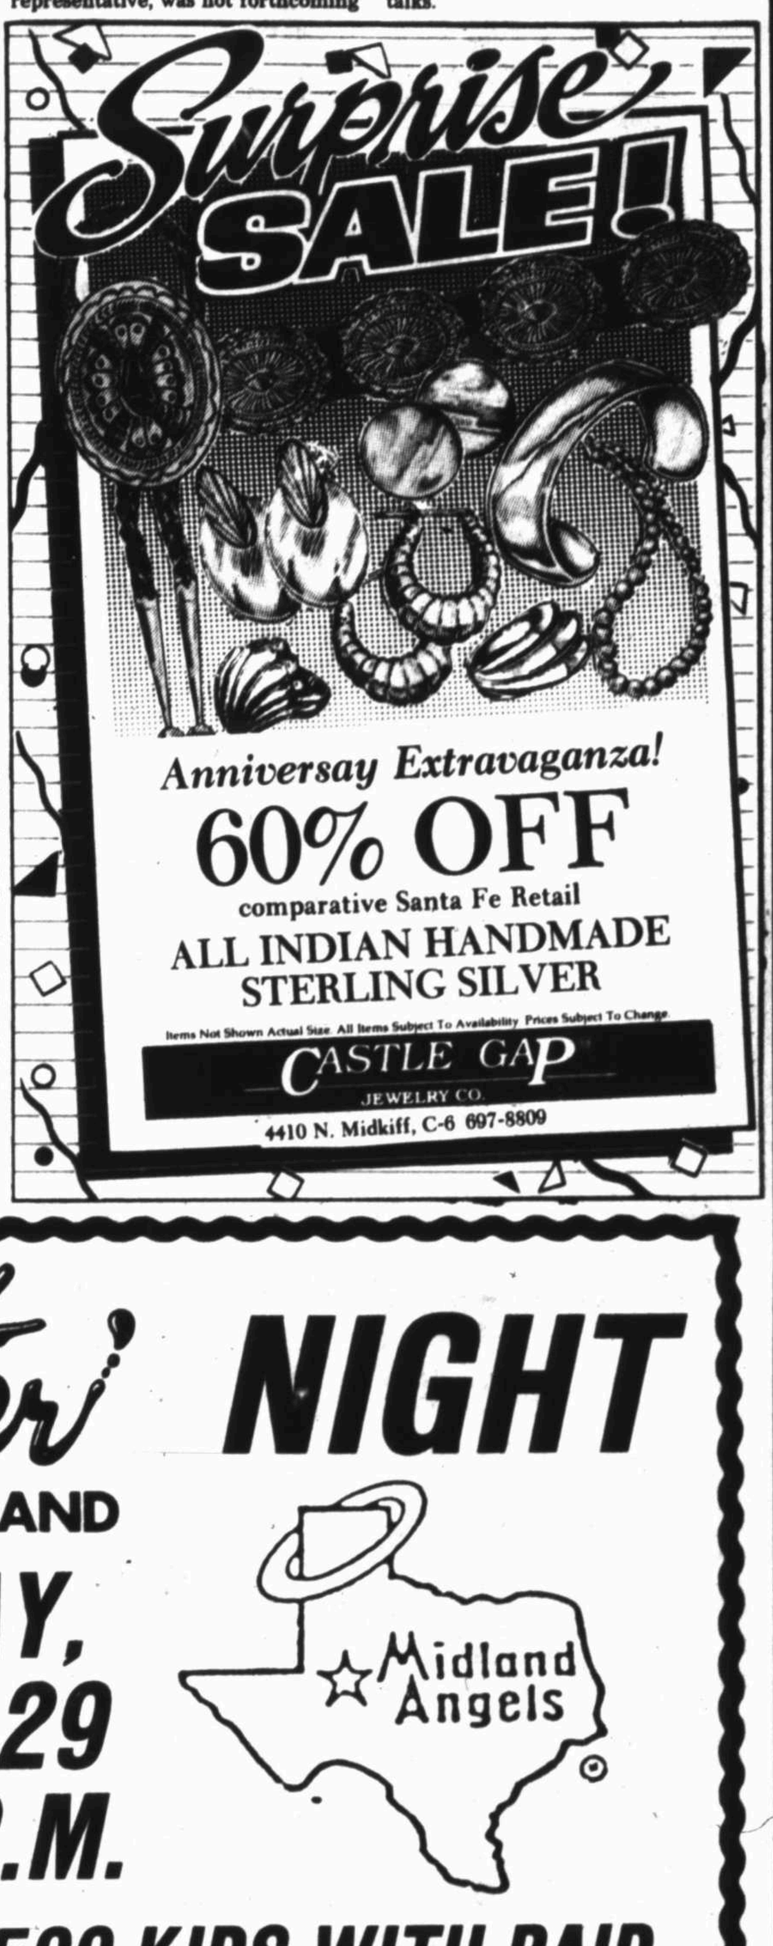

The military official said Sinhalese extremists shot and killed W.S. Premaratne, 40, and Lal Perera, 43, in their homes late Wednesday.

The killings were blamed on the People's Liberation Front, which opposes the peace accord on the ground that it gives too many concessions to Tamils.

It has vowed to kill anyone who supports the accord. The government says the front has killed more than 400 people since the accord was signed.

The extremist group has called for a nationwide strike and two days of mourning beginning Friday to mark the anniversary of the accord.

Police and security forces were put on full alert. Roadblocks were set up outside major towns and cities to check vehicles for arms and Sinhalese extremists, the military official said.

EXMOUTH, Australia (AP) — A U.S. Navy sailor killed his wife by throwing her into shark-infested waters off the Indian Ocean, a military prosecutor told an American court-martial.

Petty Officer Charles Wayne Elmore, 26, of Texas, is charged with premeditated murder in the the March 1988 death of his Philippines-born wife, Bella Fe. Elmore, who is stationed in Exmouth, has pleaded innocent.

Military officials refused to release Elmore's hometown.

A judge and jury, all U.S. military officers, flew in for the trial, the first court-martial for an American in Australia since World War II.

In her opening statement Wednesday, government prosecutor Lt. Cmdr. Philemina Jones acknowledged the case was circumstantial because no trace of the body was recovered.

Ms. Jones said Elmore's statements changed as investigators questioned him about the March 16 disappearance.

Three fatally stabbed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Rioters fatally stabbed three people in the western state of Gujarat, where a police strike entered its fourth day today and prompted officials to call out the army, the Press Trust of India reported.

The stabbings occurred Wednesday night in Godhra, 465 miles southwest of New Delhi, the news agency said. The identities of the victims and the motive behind their slayings were not immediately known.

The strike by state police was called after the government on Sunday ordered the arrest of union leaders who were demanding higher wages and better benefits. Officials accused the leaders of inciting a police rebellion.

The policemen walked off the job Monday in Ahmedabad, an industrial city 18 miles south of Gandhinagar, the state capital. The strike later spread all over the state and units of the federal reserve police and other paramilitary forces were ordered to take up routine police duties.

Policemen in 138 out of the state's 426 police stations joined in the strike, the sixth by Gujarat police in nine years, the government said.

Burma curfew imposed

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — A town north of Rangoon was under curfew today after mobs destroyed Moslem-owned tea shops and attacked police with stones and catapults, leaving one person dead and five wounded, sources said.

It was not certain whether the violence was related to this week's national leadership changes in which hard-line former army general Sein Lwin assumed the positions of president and head of the only political party.

The government news agency said Wednesday that the curfew was imposed and all demonstrations banned Tuesday in Myede, 220 miles north of Rangoon, after rioters attacked police with catapults and stones.

The official News Agency Burma said police had to shoot to disperse the crowd and order was restored after several hundred rioters destroyed two teashops and a third building.

The mob first set upon the Moslem-owned tea shops and then went on a looting spree, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity. The sources believed the incident was a spillover of riots in nearby Prome.

Blackout covers Peru

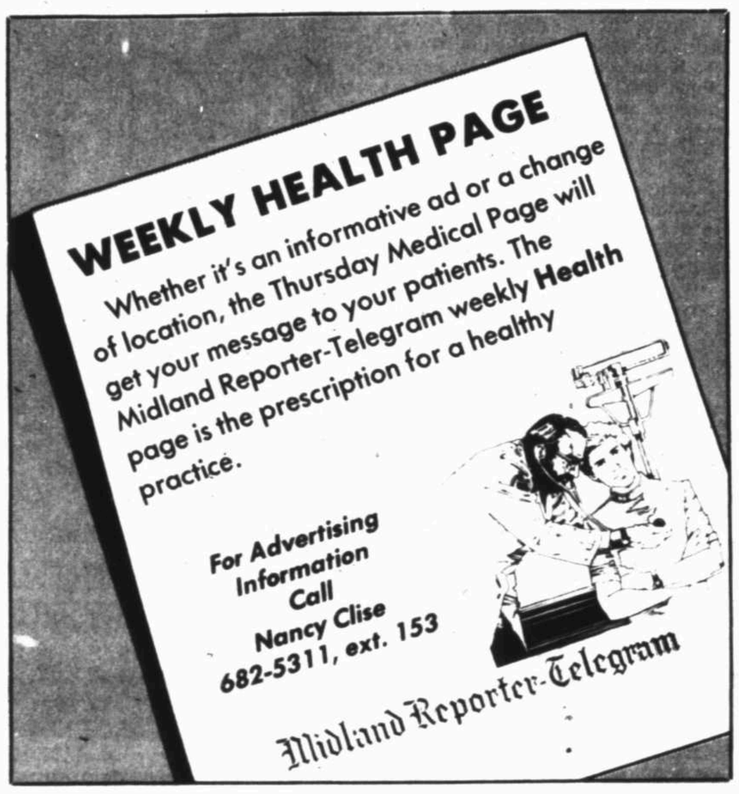

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A blackout hit the capital and most of coastal Peru Wednesday night, hours before President Alan Garcia was to give his state-of-the-union address.

Leftist guerrillas may have sabotaged power lines and caused the blackout, said Jose Acevedo, spokesman for the state power company Electro-Peru.

Shining Path guerrillas and a smaller rebel group, the pro-Cuban Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement, have caused dozens of blackouts in Peru and used the cover of darkness to launch attacks.

"Strength, stability, service and trust . . . what people want in a bank."

Herb Cartwright, Senio. Vice President and Trust Officer, Texas Commerce Bank – Midland

Does it make a difference which bank manages your personal or corporate trust account? You bet!

Many Midland banks are feeling the pinch of the current statewide economic decline. Texas Commerce, on the other hand, has been moving from strength to strength.

People today expect a lot from a bank. They don't want to take chances, especially with trust assets. They want the confidence of knowing their bank is ready to provide the kind of personal service and investments designed to fit their individual needs. They want bankers who understand their needs, who can respond quickly to requests.

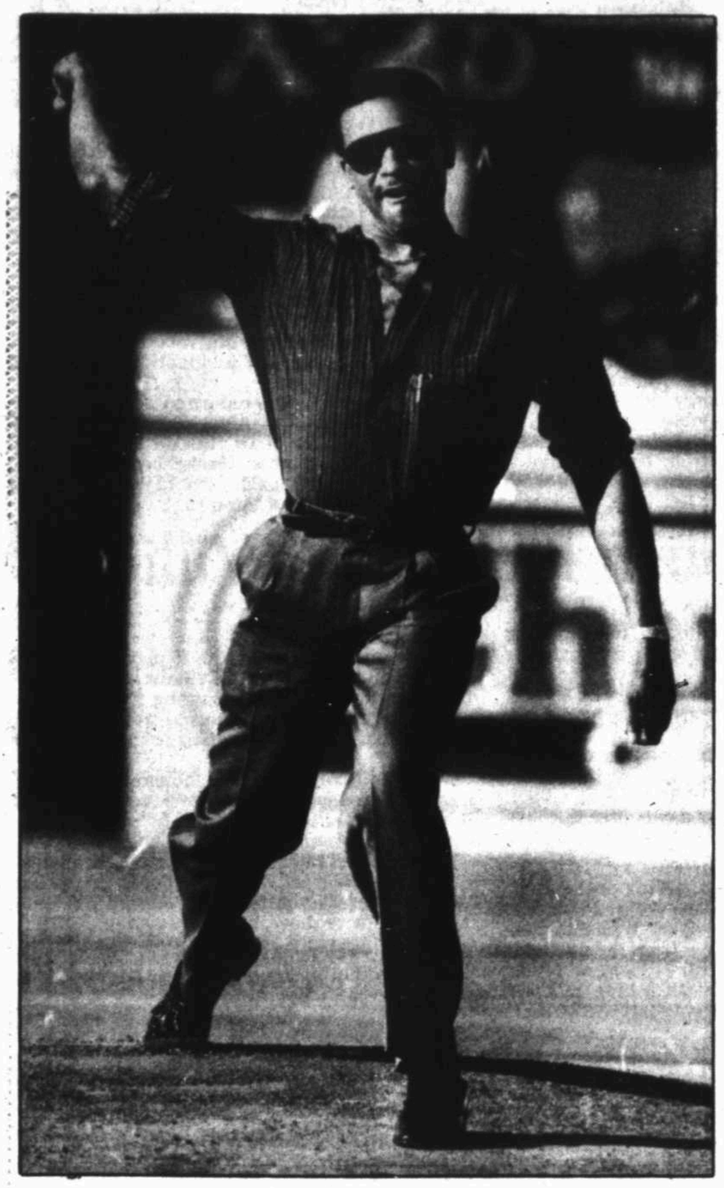

It all comes down to four key words. Strength, stability, service and trust. That's what people want. And that's what they get when they move to Texas Commerce. The strength and stability of one of the oldest banking organizations in Texas. The service of a team of bankers who really care. And Trust Professionals dedicated to the conservation of wealth and service tailored to their clients' needs.

I think Texas Commerce represents something important for Midland people. It's a reflection of the city's attitude. One that says no matter how tough times get, Midland will succeed. It's all about hard work and a commitment to the community and its future. That attitude is paying off because Texans are moving to Texas Commerce every day.

If you're looking for more in a bank or trust relationship, please call me at Texas Commerce today. Phone 687-0691.

Max, umps at odds again

Oliveras suspension imminent as Angels drop fourth straight

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland Manager Max Oliveras expects some kind of disciplinary action from the Texas League office, although he still isn't sure why he got the thumb from plate umpire Todd Reese in the eighth inning of Wednesday's 10-6 loss to the Shreveport Captains.

Oliveras feels the umpires "have a chip on their shoulder," and he might have a point. Max was in the dugout when he got the thumb in the eighth inning.

What prompted the ejection?

"What Max yelled is something you hear every night in every ball game in every dugout," defended pitching coach Tim Kelly.

OF COURSE, what transpired after the thumbing will require some sort of ruling from Texas League President Carl Sawatski, who will have to determine, sight unseen, on who bumped whom.

Oliveras admits he lost control "after he bumped me. Then I made my mistake."

As many as eight Midland players inserted themselves between their manager and the plate umpire in a long distance version of ring-around-the-rosey, sometimes known as "let me at the bounder," or something like that.

"I hope I don't get suspended. I think the president is a fair man. Once it's over, I forget these things in 10 or 15 minutes," which Oliveras doesn't feel is necessarily true with the umpires. Billy Martin probably would agree.

This was the fourth ejection for Max this year. "I'm really trying to improve. One year in the Western Carolina League I was thrown out 14 times, but now I'm an Angel." Well, at least in comparison.

IF OLIVERAS was touchy, he couldn't be blamed. After opening the current homestand with four straight wins, Wednesday's loss marked the fourth straight loss and it was a loss that would try the patience of a Ghandi.

Midland committed five errors, all costly, and made a base-running booboo when Jim McCollum missed second, turning a Jesus Alfaro double into a fielders choice. That took the Angels out of a rally, a rally when they trailed only 3-1.

Starter Tim Burcham had beaten Shreveport 3-2 over in Louisiana, and beat Tulsa 4-2 in his last start ... a pitcher on a roll. But Burcham, now 6-5, from the University of Virginia, couldn't have been blamed if he suspected this was ACC basketball and the Wolfpack behind him included Heels and Devils out to get him.

In the second, Jose Pena tripled home an error and then scored on what should have been a third out fly. In the third, Greg Litton reached first on an error and scored on an error. There was also an error in the seven-run fifth in which Burcham didn't get anybody out.

WHEN Jack Mull brought the Captains to Midland, the team was last in the Texas League in team batting and runs scored. After three games, 29 runs and 42 hits, they may be contending for the lead.

"We are not as bad as the figures indicate," assured Shreveport Manager Jack Mull, "and we've finally begun to hit like we were capable of....but I've had to wait 100 games for it to happen."

Second baseman Jeff Carter had three hits Wednesday, same as Tuesday, first baseman Romy Cucjen knocked in two runs with a triple and two singles, giving him 7-for-11 in the series, and Harry Davis kept his hit streak alive, being hit by a pitch for the third straight game.

Two run homers by Alfaro and Manto narrowed the gap to 10-5 and Mull went to Randy McCament for the final three innings.

"Olker stopped mixing his pitches," said Mull, "and kept pumping his fastball and he wasn't getting very many by them."

Walker a winner in Cowboy script

By JERRY MAGEE
Copley News Service

Tony Dorsett and Herschel Walker together.

Minds raced. Walker, with his speed and his 225-pounder's thrust, coupled with Dorsett, a knifer, a prober, able to cut back, to locate the soft spots in a defense. Surely, these two, united by the Dallas Cowboys in 1986, would form a backfield for the ages.

But it didn't happen. In the two seasons of the Walker-Dorsett association, the Dallas club was 7-9, then 7-8. Now, Dorsett is in Denver, dealt away in a trade in which his performance is to determine how Dallas will be compensated. And to the Cowboys, less has become more.

The Cowboys are saying they will be a better club without Dorsett. "Tony was a great player for us," said President/General Manager Tex Schramm, "but with both Tony and Herschel here, too many of the players felt uneasy. They didn't want to step on Tony's toes. Herschel couldn't be Herschel."

With Dorsett eliminated, the Cowboys, whose name long has been equated in the NFL with finesse, are taking a new, more forceful approach. The team has assigned Walker a role in which he is to be handed the football about 25 times a game and have it thrown to him 10 to 12 times.

"Herschel," Schramm noted, "is a very unusual person."

"We miss Tony," said Coach Tom Landry. "For many years, he was a part of our success. But if he were here, we couldn't be doing what we are."

Which is preparing to have Walker operate behind an offensive front so big that it would appear peopled by sumo wrestlers.

"With Herschel, we can look like the Washington Redskins, or we can look like somebody else," Landry said. One team they might not look like is the Cowboys.

"But it depends on how you define finesse," Landry said. "Some define it as not hitting anybody. That's not what finesse really is. You can be a finesse team with big people in there by using schemes. We're going to be a much tougher team, a much more aggressive team.

Bosox keep on rolling

ARLINGTON — Boston Red Sox centerfielder Ellis Burks demonstrated Wednesday to family and friends why he's one of the most exciting young players in the American League.

Burks blasted a sixth-inning grand slam and started a three-run rally that eventually capped a Boston comeback to lead the Red Sox to their 13th victory in their last 14 starts in a 10-7 win over the Texas Rangers.

"It's nice being in the right place at the right time," Burks said. "We're hitting the ball, we've been getting great starting pitching and great relief pitching. That's what you have to do to win."

Burks had a small but vocal group of supporters Wednesday night. He lives in nearby Fort Worth during the off-season and went to high school in Everman, Texas.

"All of my family was here and all my friends from high school," he said. "I had about 15 on the pass list and 20 to 25 in the stands to see me. It was a great feeling to do well and win."

"Burks is a terrific player," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "He can do everything you have to do in this game."

Kevin Romine, a seventh-inning defensive replacement, drove in the go-head run with an eighth-inning single. Romine has four RBIs this season, three game-winners.

Boston got to Texas bullpen ace Mitch Williams, 1-4, for two consecutive run-scoring hits during a three-run eighth as the Red Sox took the deciding game of the three-game series.

North Central downs Pecos to even series

Little League

PECOS — Alex Hale scored the go-ahead run in extra innings as Midland North Central downed Pecos, 4-3, in Little League bi-district tournament action in Pecos Wednesday night.

Hale, attempting to steal third base, came home on an overthrow in the seventh inning. The win for North Central sets up tonight's final game with the winner of the best-of-three series advancing to the state tournament next week in Waco.

Hale also had the only RBI of the game as the other runs scored were a result of three Pecos errors.

North Central's Brian Quinones finished 2-for-3 for the night with a double and Jeff Pursley also collected two hits in three trips to the plate.

Dykes predicts unpredictable year

Williamson

Tech is an up-and-down team that can beat Southwest Conference champion Texas A&M one week and throw rubber against league doormat Rice the next. It's a fact that Dykes doesn't deny and a fact he would like to correct.

"There is no question that we are a mysterious team. We've had two winning seasons in a row now, but we really haven't had the consistency we need to be really competitive," Dykes told media members here this week at the Texas High School Coaches meeting.

"We feel like we have a pretty good team, not a national champion, but a competitive team. Still, we're going to have to work like dogs to win every game we're in."

Tech, one of the most productive offensive units in the SWC a year ago returns some celebrated skill people at quarterback, running back and wide receiver, but Dykes still thinks his Raiders suffer from heavy losses in the offensive line.

"We kind of lost our mainspring. There is an old joke that says that Patty Hearst was missing for two years and turned up playing offensive guard for the Los Angeles Rams. Nobody knows who plays in the offensive line, but without them, you don't do too much."

Dykes also lost seven linebackers to graduation last year, including former Midland Lee star Michael Johnson. So Dykes is hoping an experiment with another former Lee grad turns to linebacker gold.

Tech has moved fullback Isaac Garnett, who has over 1,000 yards rushing for Tech in three previous seasons, to linebacker, and Dykes hopes "that the vacination takes.

"Isaac has taken to the move really well. He just wants to play and he told me that it might be fun for a change to hit people instead of getting hit."

"Kittle has nightmares every night," Dykes quips. "I coached him at Midland Lee and at Tech for the past nine years and that would give anyone nightmares. I bet he graduates just to get away from me.

"In fact, Garnett and Tyrone Thurman are in the same boat. Michael Johnson graduated in four years to get away from me. These kids are going to get an education to get rid of me."

Among non-conference opponents, Tech will meet national powers Arizona in Tucson and Oklahoma State in a special game in Tokyo on Dec. 4.

"When you meet teams of that calibre, the further away you play them the better. No one sees what happens and you can then come back and tell your own story," said Dykes.

One of the major media concerns for the SWC this week seems to be the loss of highly regarded Texas athletes to out-of-state schools. Dykes admits you don't always get the best player, but he feels there are enough players around to make Tech a contender.

"Recruiting is a lot like the Saturday night dance. You see that good looking girl over there and you invite her to dance and she says, 'No.' You ask her again and the answer is the same. So, you either end up dancing with the ugly girl or you go home. We're going to dance. That's better than nothing.

"There are 25,000 people at Tech who chose to pay their way to go to school there. Surely, we can find 25 who want us to pay their way to play football. It may not be the most attractive prospect, but it can be one you can dance with."

Dykes also dislikes part of Proposition 48 that requires a certain test score to be recruited.

"I'll be in trouble for this, but that stinks," said Dykes. "This is America isn't it? The good Lord put us here to do with what we've got. It's just not fair to be judged before we can prove what we can do. I've seen kids who don't test well but make good grades in college and I've seen kids with good test scores who didn't make it until the pot boils."

"I'm not exactly ready for the season, but I am anxious to get started. There is a big difference in the two. Let's pull the trigger and see what happens."

Dodgers, Giants split, settle little

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The San Francisco Giants wanted more than a split with Los Angeles, but wound up happy to get that much before the Dodgers split town.

Robby Thompson's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning enabled the Giants to beat Los Angeles 2-1 Wednesday night and stay within striking distance in the National League West.

The Dodgers won twice in San Francisco and finished the longest road trip in the majors this season with an 11-5 record. That put them six games ahead of Houston and seven in front of San Francisco. At the All-Star break, the Giants were within 2½ games.

"I feel good now. We had to have that game," said Giants manager Roger Craig, who was downcast after Los Angeles swept a doubleheader Tuesday at Candlestick Park.

Starters Atlee Hammaker of the Giants and Tim Leary of the Dodgers were brilliant. Hammaker, who got no decision, allowed only an unearned run on four hits in eight innings.

Leary, 10-7, left the game after Jose Uribe's leadoff single in the 10th.

"He battled some good pitches and hit a fastball," Leary said. "I still felt strong and had good arm speed when they took me out."

Leary allowed just five hits, including Kevin Mitchell's home run. He tied a career-high with 10 strikeouts.

Astros 4, Padres 1

Kevin Bass hit a pair of two-run homers as Houston stopped its 11-game losing streak at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium.

Bass connected both times against Ed Whitson, 9-6, whose career-high six-game winning streak was snapped. Bass started the game just 3-for-17 lifetime against Whitson.

It was the second time this season Bass has homered twice in a game and the fifth time in his career. He has 10 home runs this year.

Mets 10, Phillies 2

Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds drove in five runs apiece as New York beat Philadelphia on another rainy night.

The start at Veterans Stadium was held up for 57 minutes by rain. There also was a delay of 1 hour, 22 minutes with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Rain caused 3½ hours of delays Tuesday night in the Mets' victory.

McReynolds went 4-for-4 with a three-run homer and double. Strawberry hit a three-run triple and double.

Dwight Gooden, 13-5, gave up six hits in 8 1-3 innings. He left after slipping on the mound. David Palmer, 5-8, took the loss.

Pirates 3, Cardinals 2

Jose Lind doubled home Barry Bonds from first base in the 10th inning and Pittsburgh won at St. Louis.

Expos 5, Cubs 4

Mike Fitzgerald, who hit a grand slam in the 11th inning to win Tuesday night's game, got a game-winning single with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to again lift Montreal over Chicago.

Reds 3, Braves 2

Nick Esasky, who lives in an Atlanta suburb during the off-season, hit a home run with two outs in the ninth inning as Cincinnati beat the host Braves.

Esasky connected on an 0-2 pitch from Jose Alvarez, 3-4, for his ninth homer of the season and second in two nights. Esasky began the night batting .383 with 12 homers in his career at Atlanta.

Viola proves even he is mortal

Associated Press

Sil Campusano, Jesse Barfield and Fred McGriff hit solo home runs Wednesday as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Minnesota Twins 4-1 and ended Viola's 19-game home winning streak. Viola, 16-3, had not lost in the Metrodome in 25 starts since May 22, 1987, when Jack Morris and the Detroit Tigers beat him 3-2.

"I made three real bad pitches today," Viola said. "All good things come to an end. Now I can think back on it, and it was a heck of a lot of fun while it lasted. I'm not perfect all the time."

In addition to the 19 victories during the streak, Viola won two World Series games in the Metrodome.

"He doesn't have an 'S' on his shirt," Minnesota manager Tom Kelly said. "A lot of people around here think he's Superman and is strong as an ox every three or four games. There's just no way."

"He's tough, and his record indicates that," Toronto manager Jimy Williams said. "We knocked a few out when we had to."

Toronto's John Cerutti, 5-6, allowed seven hits over eight innings in his first start since June 27. He was a late replacement for Dave Stieb, who had a blister on his pitching hand. Tom Henke got the final three outs for his 18th save.

George Bell, who argued with Williams after making an error Tuesday night — Bell's sixth in seven games — was benched in favor of Campusano.

Gary Gaetti hit his 23rd homer in the second to put the Twins ahead. Toronto scored twice in the fifth on Campusano's second homer of the season and Manny Lee's RBI double.

Barfield and McGriff hit consecutive home runs with two outs in the sixth, Barfield's eighth and McGriff's 22nd. It was Barfield's first homer in 16 games and the first back-to-back homers for the Blue Jays since June 2 against Boston.

Yankees 16, Brewers 3

Dave Winfield drove in five runs with two home runs and Tommy John gained his 285th career victory after becoming the first pitcher to make three errors in an inning since J. Bentley Seymour of the New York Giants on May 21, 1898.

Winfield hit a three-run homer in the Yankees' four-run first and hit a two-run homer in the sixth as New York had 18 hits off three Milwaukee pitchers.

John, 8-3, allowed six hits in eight innings. Chris Bosio, 6-12, lost his ninth consecutive decision.

Tigers 3, Royals 1

Pat Sheridan singled home the go-ahead run and made a key defensive play, catching Frank White's sinking liner with runners on second and third in the sixth inning.

Doyle Alexander, 10-5, allowed nine hits and struck out three in 7 2-3 innings. Mike Henneman got the final four outs for his 15th save. Mark Gubicza, 12-6, allowed seven hits, walked four and struck out three in 7 2-3 innings.

Angels 9, Athletics 8

Brian Downing hit a game-winning triple in the 12th inning and Wally Joyner drove in six runs with two homers and a single.

Joyner hit a two-run homer in the first inning off Todd Burns and a three-run homer in the third, his seventh.

Donnie Moore, 4-2, pitched two innings for the victory. Jim Corsi, 0-1, was the loser.

Indians 12, Orioles 2

Julio Franco doubled three times in the first three innings, drove in five runs and extended his hitting streak to 22 games, the longest in the AL this season.

Joe Carter hit a three-run homer for the Indians, who won their 11th consecutive game against Baltimore since last Aug. 10.

Tom Candiotti, 8-8, pitched an eight-hitter for his first victory in seven starts since June 19. Jose Bautista, 5-8, allowed six runs and six hits in 1 1-3 innings for the Orioles, who have lost nine of their last 11 games.

White Sox 6, Mariners 1

Daryl Boston's two-run single highlighted a three-run first inning as the Mariners, who replaced general manager Dick Balderson with Woody Woodward during the game, lost their fifth straight.

Melido Perez, 10-5, won his fourth straight start, becoming the first White Sox rookie to win 10 games since 1980. Bill Swift, 6-8, lost his fourth consecutive decision, giving up seven hits and walking five in 5 1-3 innings.

Feisty Bell continues to push luck with Williams

Associated Press

TORONTO — If George Bell has another confrontation with manager Jimy Williams, it might be his last act as a Toronto Blue Jay.

Blue Jays executive vice-president Pat Gillick has supported Williams after the latest episode between Bell, last year's American League Most Valuable Player, and the manager. Gillick said if he ever had to choose between the two in the future, the tempestuous slugger would be the one to go.

However, Gillick said Wednesday he had no plans to do anything right now, including trade Bell, after Williams indefinitely removed Bell as the starting left fielder.

"I absolutely back up the manager," Gillick said. "It wouldn't bother me if George went home.

"I couldn't care what he did. What happens is all up to the manager (and) I think the manager can handle it."

Gillick added that Williams is secure in his job, at least for now. The Jays are sixth in the AL East.

"We don't make decisions on the manager in July," he said.

A meeting among Bell, Williams and Gillick was expected today — an off-day before the Jays begin a three-game series Friday with the New York Yankees.

The latest flareup of a simmering season-long fued between Bell and Williams erupted Tuesday night in a shouting match when Williams confronted Bell after a bad throw from the outfield. The ball sailed over the head of catcher Ernie Whitt, keying a three-run sixth inning in a 6-3 Minnesota Twins' victory.

"He'll play when I want him to play, and I don't know when that will be," Williams said Wednesday after the Blue Jays beat the Twins 4-1.

Williams added that he would not hesitate to use Bell in a pinch-hit situation "if he could win the game."

When Bell, who hurt his shoulder in batting practice Tuesday, was asked Wednesday if he'd like to tell his side of the story, he said: "I don't even care anymore."

Whitt expressed his frustration with the latest saga in the Bell affair, which began in spring training when the outfielder protested the Blue Jays' attempt to move him to designated hitter.

"It takes away from doing the job," Whitt said. "It's a sore that hasn't gone away. It's no fun at all."

John ties mark for errors

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy John became the first pitcher in 90 years to make three errors in one inning during the New York Yankees' game with the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday night.

John, the 45-year-old left-hander, joined J. Bentley Seymour of the New York Giants, who set the record for pitchers when he made three errors in the sixth inning on May 21, 1898.

"I've made errors before but these seemed like a lifetime in one play," John said.

John fielded a ground ball by Jeffrey Leonard in the fourth inning with Jim Gantner on first.

The the oldest player in the major leagues then bobbled Leonard's grounder for the first error and threw wildly past first for a second error as Gantner rounded second and headed to third and Leonard turned for second.

Right fielder Dave Winfield retrieved the ball and threw toward the plate as Gantner attempted to score. John cut off the throw midway between first base and home plate and threw wildly into the Milwaukee dugout for his third error as both runners scored, pulling Milwaukee to within 4-2.

"My instinct was to go after the ball with two hands but I didn't think I had a lot of time," John said. "So I figured I'd have to pick it up and throw it. After that, I should have eaten it but then I looked up and thought 'if I make a good throw, I get him.'

BOSTON

Burks started the two-out rally with a single and Todd Benzinger followed with a run-scoring double off Ed Vande Berg. Williams relieved, yielding an RBI double to Jim Rice and Romine's game-winner.

"We came here to win two out of three and we did it," said Red Sox manager Joe Morgan. "We had a chance to show them how good we were, something we haven't been able to do in this place." Bob Stanley, 4-0, allowed two earned runs in the seventh but qualified for the victory.

Lee Smith, who suffered a slightly strained back while jogging in the outfield before the game, worked out of a two-on, two-out jam in the eighth and pitched a perfect ninth to pick up his 16th save.

Texas had rallied for four runs in the seventh inning, helped by Burks' fielding error in center.

"Our offensive is going well," said Rangers left-fielder Pete Incaviglia. "We keep scoring seven, eight, nine runs a game and we'll win a lot more than we lose."

"That's a lot of runs for two games," Valentine said. "Good games to watch for most people. I enjoyed last night a little more than tonight."

Rangers starter Jeff Russell allowed only one hit over the first five innings and took a 3-1 lead into the sixth before getting into trouble. Russell yielded two walks and a single then Burks crushed a fastball 410 feet into the right-center field stands.

HERSCHEL—

Everything, clearly, is predicated on Walker. People are saying the Cowboys offense is going to be Herschel-left, Herschel-right, and throw-deep-to-Irvin, a reference to Michael Irvin, a gifted and extremely confident rookie receiver from Miami whom they drafted in the first round this year.

Irvin isn't likely to be involved to the degree he would prefer, but he does figure importantly on Landry's clipboard. He is the athlete on whom the Cowboys are depending to stretch the defense, thus making it difficult to gang up on Walker.

Walker, meantime, says the expected things about his relationship with Dorsett. That he misses him. That he enjoyed playing with him. That, in Dorsett's absence, his life is going to go on.

"Football is football," Walker said.

They got along well enough, Walker and Dorsett. After Dorsett was traded, Walker organized a going-away party for him. Later, the two attended the Mike Tyson-Michael Spinks fight together.

On the Broncos, according to Denver sources, Dorsett has been careful not to comment on his relationship with Walker, preferring instead to address his future in Colorado.

Although Dorsett could accept Walker as a person, he apparently was unable to reconcile himself to being paid a good deal less than his less-seasoned associate. When the Cowboys signed Walker, they awarded him a $1 million bonus that the player could accept either in a lump sum or spread over his five-year contract, plus salaries graduating to $800,000 this season and $900,000 in 1989.

Dorsett, meantime, was to earn $500,000 both this and next season under his Dallas contract.

Nelson receives bad marks; Manley gets 30 days

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

As if Karl Nelson hasn't had enough problems, he's now got his coach on his case.

Nelson, a starting tackle for the New York Giants in the team's Super Bowl year, missed last season while battling Hodgkin's Disease. The disease was diagnosed when Nelson was sidelined by shoulder problems that required surgery.

The 28-year-old Nelson has fought his way back from those troubles. But he hasn't impressed Giants coach Bill Parcells during training camp. Parcells has criticized Nelson's performances all week.

"I told him this morning," Parcells said Wednesday, "'I'm tired of coaching you. I got this whole team to coach. I'm spending too much time with you.'"

"I can't make him do it," Parcells said. "He has to want to do it. But right now he's only doing it half the time. You don't get gold medals for trying hard.

"I've got to find out this week if he can do it," Parcells said of Nelson, whom he called his best offensive lineman when the Giants won the 1987 NFL title. "I've got to find out before he gets in a game, because if he doesn't do it in a game his confidence will be shot."

Nelson's absence and inconsistent play by other offensive linemen contributed mightily to the Giants' fall to 6-9 last season.

"It's easy to say, 'Stick your shoulder in there,'" Nelson said. "But it's easier said than done. I'm consciously trying to use it. I took some good pops on it. But there are times I favored it."

As for the rough treatment from Parcells, Nelson said it wasn't unexpected.

"He feels he has to ride me and he's the head man," Nelson said. It's Bill Parcells' show out there and he's telling everybody to go after me."

NFL Camps

SUSPENSION

Dexter Manley of the Washington Redskins was suspended for 30 days by Commissioner Pete Rozelle for violating the NFL's substance abuse act.

NFL spokesman Joe Browne said that Manley had involuntarily been placed on the team's non-football injury list for 30 days by the league.

"I have instructed Dexter Manley to remain out of the Redskins' training camp until Aug. 26," Rozelle said in a statement. Manley will be ineligible until the final exhibition game, against Atlanta on Aug. 27.

The Super Bowl champions open the season at the New York Giants on Sept. 5.

"I'll be ready for the Monday night game. There's no question about it," said Manley, who in 1987 underwent treatment for alcohol abuse.

Manley met with Rozelle last Friday after reports that an illegal substance turned up in a drug test. The substance has never specifically been identified for the public.

"People are going to make rumors, and that's OK with me," Manley said. "But I know what the situation was, and I know that everything is behind me. And to this day, it has been behind me. Things are just now coming to the forefront. I'm just going to comply with what the commissioner wants me to do."

SIGNINGS

Randall Cunningham became the richest player in Eagles history when he signed a three-year contract. Wide receiver Mike Quick two years ago signed for the previous high, $750,000. Cunningham, the man who throws the ball to Quick in one of the most dangerous pass-catch combinations in the game, had sought $1 million-plus per year.

Irvin involved in skirmish

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas wide receiver Michael Irvin and San Diego defensive back Elvis Patterson got into a fight during a scrimmage on Wednesday that had them rolling on the dirt track in a swirl of dust at California Lutheran College.

It was Irvin's second fight in as many scrimmages. Last Thursday he was involved in a brawl with a Los Angeles Raiders' defensive back.

"Irvin's a marked guy," club president Tex Schramm said. "They all want to take a shot at him. He's got to learn not to retaliate."

Irvin, the Cowboys' first round draft pick, was tackled out of bounds by Patterson, who got the short end of the ensuing fisticuffs. Dallas running back Herschel Walker finally broke it up.

"Mike was justified because it wasn't his fault, but he still must learn not to react — because he could break a hand." Schramm said.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said: "The guy (Patterson) caused it, and I can't blame Mike for it. It was quite a fight going over onto the track like that. Irvin has to be careful. If he breaks a hand, it's the whole season."

Irvin didn't want to comment.

"We were just playing football," Irvin said.

Patterson said, "It was just guys competing."

Abdul-Jabbar faces assault rap

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar faces two misdemeanor charges stemming from an alleged shoving incident at a Phoenix shopping mall, a city prosecutor said Wednesday.

Abdul-Jabbar was charged with one count each of misdemeanor assault and misdemeanor criminal damage as a result of the April 21 incident, Tyler Rich, an assistant Phoenix city attorney, said.

FDIC may split First Republic

By THOMAS C. HAYES
New York Times News Service

DALLAS — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. is considering steps to take control of several of the First RepublicBank Corp.'s largest banks, an individual close to the situation said Wednesday.

Analysts said that such a move, if it occurs, could clear the way for a speedy decision by the regulators to accept one of several competing bids to recapitalize the banks, including offers from Citicorp, the NCNB Corp. and the Wells Fargo Bank, as well as from First RepublicBank's management.

The individual, who is familiar with the FDIC's operations, said that the action could come as early as Friday afternoon. The person asked not to be named.

Alan J. Whitney, a spokesman for the FDIC in Washington, said the agency was studying "a number of options." But he declined to say whether a "bridge bank" alternative, under which the agency would operate the banks until a new buyer is found, was among them.

Congress last year gave the FDIC the power to seize the assets of insolvent banks with the choice of managing the banks for two years while it found buyers. Such action, in effect, eliminates the voting power of stockholders or bondholders, giving the regulators virtual control in finding the buyers.

First RepublicBank is one of the most complex, troubled banking organizations that the FDIC has dealt with. The company, the largest in Texas, with $26.8 billion in assets, owns 40 banks with 130 banking sites in the state.

It lost $2.2 billion in the first half of the year, mainly from writing off bad real estate loans. In March, the insurance agency gave the bank $1 billion in emergency assistance and guaranteed deposits to halt a run by depositors.

A First RepublicBank spokesman, Joseph C. Bowles, said today that executives at the holding company believed that the FDIC would decide, "possibly this weekend," which of the competing bids for the banking company would be accepted.

He declined to comment on whether the FDIC was planning to take control of all or most of First RepublicBank's assets through the bridge-bank option. He noted that all of First RepublicBank's deposits remained under guarantee by the FDIC.

First RepublicBank's shares have already lost most of their market value. After trading above $26 a share a year ago after the merger of the RepublicBank Corp. and the Interfirst Corp., its stock closed unchanged at $1.25 a share in trading Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Tandy shows off new line of computers

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A short concert of "New Age" music gave industry representatives a hint of Tandy Corp.'s erasable compact disc technology and helped introduce new computers with advanced sound capabilities.

The 1000 SL and 1000 TL home computers share features that allow users to generate and record speech and music and downlink with an electronic mail and information service, said John Patterson, senior vice president of Tandy.

Tandy, parent company of about 7,000 Radio Shack stores, in a meeting at its headquarters Wednesday also introduced new software, including an educational supplement to its popular DeskMate package, and a facsimile machine.

The DeskMate software package will be marketed to third parties outside the Radio Shack distribution network, helping distinguish Tandy from "simple clone" manufacturers, said Howard Elias, a Tandy executive.

Still in development is a machine that records onto compact discs.

The playback capability of THOR, a revolutionary new erasable compact disc announced in April, was demonstrated during a break in the meeting. Patterson said Tandy is trying to find more durable plastics for manufacturing the discs, which will be compatible with all standard CD players.

But officials touted the IBM-compatible computers out this fall as the cutting edge of electronic sound.

The 1000 SL shares with its higher-priced cousin, the 1000 TL, "a technological leap forward in user-friendliness," Patterson said.

The two new computers share high-resolution screens that can display 16 colors as well as music and sound generation capabilities.

Analysts say the 1000 SL and 1000 TL computers will have many business applications, including "voice mail," where users can store, send and reply to messages in their own voices.

The recording capability will most likely be achieved using audiotape players since a 20-second message can use up to half the capacity of a single computer diskette.

They will sell for $899 and $1,299, respectively, and share a new Tandy keyboard that is to become standard for all computers the company manufactures.

The 1000 TL performs three times faster than the 1000 SL, the IBM Model 25 and the IBM Model 30, Patterson said.

The 1000 TL, with 512k built-in memory, has a state-of-the-art 80286 Intel microchip, six times faster than the original IBM PC, said Ed Juge, director of Radio Shack market planning.

The 1000 SL, like the IBM Model 25s and Model 30s, uses the 8086 Intel microchip. The SL has 384k built-in memory.

Weather dampens commodity markets

CHICAGO (AP) — Investors who jumped into the agricultural commodity markets when the Midwestern drought became apparent last spring have been scrambling for the exit doors since the weather changed for the wetter, analysts say.

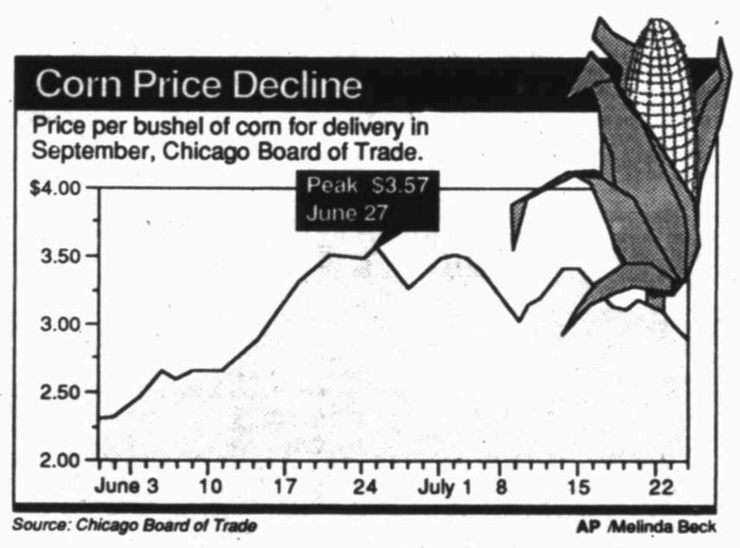

With crop conditions either static or improving, prices for future delivery of grains and soybeans have dropped off sharply.

"This is not a good market for speculators anymore," said Katharina Zimmer, grain market analyst for Merrill Lynch Capital Markets Inc.

The drop in crop futures prices has spilled over into the livestock and sugar futures markets, prompting some economists to lower their month-old projections for 1989 food inflation from about 7 percent to 6 percent or less.

That may be good news for consumers but it's not much consolation for the speculators who bet on rising crop prices and failed to collect when the markets peaked late last month and early this month.

The ensuing decline accelerated last week into a tailspin that ended Tuesday with soybeans for August delivery at $7.55½ a bushel, a 31 percent drop from the contract's high of $10.93½, reached June 23. The value of a 5,000-bushel soybean contract plunged nearly $17,000 during the period.

Source: Chicago Board of Trade — AP Melinda Beck

The reason for the collapse: rain.

After 2½ months of unseasonable heat and little water in the Corn Belt, the Midwestern weather suddenly turned friendly to the struggling crops about two weeks ago. Five days of scattered showers were followed by cool temperatures, more rain and more cool weather.

The change "turned this market on a dime," said Rich Feltes, chief grain market analyst for Refco Inc., a large, Chicago-based speculative trading firm.

Howland

"That's what we're up against since deregulation," I overheard the lady say.

It could have been at the phone company, in a gas producer's office or at a bank or savings and loan. I just happened to be visiting my travel agent.

The young woman at the next desk was patiently trying to explain where there seems to be so little logical connection between distance flown and fares charged.

Since market forces have been allowed to take control of air travel, competition at any given airport has more to do with the fares charged on those flights than the location of the airport.

The cost of flying to Atlanta, the air hub of the South, can be less than half as much as flying to other smaller cities within a couple hundred miles. Because more airlines are anxious to maintain a foothold in a major market there are more, and therefore cheaper, flight options available.

In addition to being more costly to fly in to a smaller city — like Chattanooga, Tenn. or Asheville, N.C. — the connections on the more expensive flight are twice as convoluted with longer lay-overs and more plane changes.

Last vacation, as I was comparing fares to South Florida, I discovered that a round-trip flight to West Palm Beach, the northernmost — and least busy — of the Gold Coast airports cost about $300 with adequate advance notice, staying over the proper nights of the week, etc. etc.

But, for $20 less, I could fly 40 miles further down the coast to Fort Lauderdale. Another $20 cheaper was a round-trip to Miami International, which is another 40 miles south of Fort Lauderdale's airport.

One particularly troublesome possibility is the "AOS" — alternate operator service — which was spawned by the break-up of Ma Bell. AOSs, as the name implies, provide operator services such as long distance dialing, credit card assistance and collect calls.

However, these services often charge up to three times more than traditional phone services and do so with little warning. Many "non-Bell" pay telephones — like those at convenience stores, hotels and other locations — are connected to these higher priced AOS services and unless you are a very alert consumer, you may dial your long distance call as usual, but get an unwelcome surprise in you next phone bill.

An AOS long-distance directory assistance call showed up on a recent bill of mine for $4.11. I thought almost seven times the AT&T cost was a little extreme, so I called to check.

Yes, there was a mistake, and a $3 credit issued; but more than $1 for directory assistance still seems exorbitant.

I compared a couple of other calls billed by this convenience store AOS, with what my usual long distance service would have charged. From 60 to nearly 75 percent less, the figures showed.

Two national telecommunication consumer groups are among the hundreds who have complained to the Federal Communications Commission about AOS rates, and the regulatory body has decided it's time to give the problem some serious examination, according to a Hearst News Service report.

"Consumers are being gouged by a new industry that has developed since the breakup of AT&T," David Wagenhauser, the attorney who is representing the groups, Consumer Action and the Telecommunications Research and Action Center, told the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner .

"There is some reasonableness to charging a higher rate in a hotel," said Greg Casey, executive vice president of Telesphere, an Illinois-based AOS provider. "Someone in a hotel normally pays more for room service, or deodorant or a bar of soap or anything else they would normally get in a supermarket."

On a couple of calls during a vacation, it's not that big a deal, but for people who travel extensively and rely on phones, it certainly pays to watch who you're doing business with before you dial.

From Staff and Wire Reports

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate crude opened 18 cents higher after settling up 20 cents at $16.16 per barrel Wednesday. The two gains have nearly wiped out the 42-cent loss on near-term crude contracts from Monday and Tuesday.

James R. Steele, an energy analyst with Refco Inc., said some traders were optimistic that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will work toward cutting production at a price-monitoring committee meeting set for Aug. 3.

He said technical factors also were partly responsible for boosting prices on Wednesday, with much of the attention focused on heating oil.

Technical reaction erases some loss

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was slightly stronger today against most European currencies in what dealers said was a technical reaction to earlier falls. Gold was weaker.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.7360, compared with $1.7265 Wednesday.

— 6.2555 French francs, up from 6.2375

— 2.0892 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0820

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.40 yen to a closing 132.10. Later, in London, it was quoted at 132.17 yen.

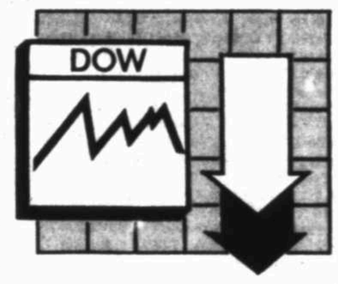

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $432.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $433.00. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $428.75.

Later, silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.74 a troy ounce, down from Wednesday's $7.00.

GNP report dampens traders' spirits

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined broadly in quiet trading Wednesday as traders found little encouragement in the latest statistics on economic growth.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 20.27 to 2,053.70, its lowest close since it stood at 2,052.45 on June 2.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 480 up, 936 down and 525 unchanged.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $22.36 billion, or 0.84 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 1.29 to 148.74.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Baker Hughes turns around 3rd quarter loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Baker Hughes Inc. earned $13.5 million in the 1988 third quarter, a sharp turnaround from the $41.2 million loss it posted for the same period last year.

The company's earnings, announced Wednesday, amounted to 10 cents per common share, compared with a loss of 36 cents per share for the 1987 period. Revenues were $564.1 million this quarter and $468.4 million for the same period last year.

Houston-based Hughes Tool Co. merged with Baker International Corp. of Orange, Calif., last year creating Baker Hughes Inc.

"Although oil and gas price concerns have tended to curtail drilling activity in the United States this summer, the mix of drilling rigs working has been favorable," said J. D. Woods, Baker Hughes' president and chief executive officer.

Prudential wants say in hospital choice

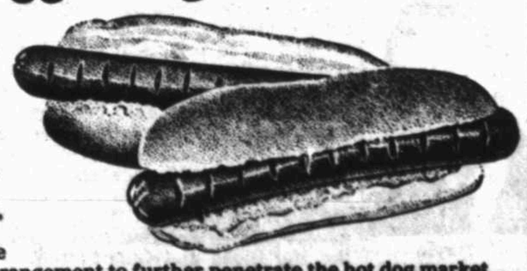

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Prudential Insurance Co. of America has launched what health industry officials deem a revolutionary program requiring policyholders to undergo heart, kidney or liver transplants at hospitals it considers to have the best survivability rates.

The nation's largest health insurer said Wednesday it will negotiate contracts with hospitals to perform the surgery in a plan that health and insurance industry officials hope will stem spiraling medical costs.

It may mark the first time a major health insurer has broken with the tradition that the patient and physician choose the hospital.

BUSINESS TRENDS

A doggone good deal

This year in the United States, 14 billion hot dogs will be consumed — an average of 65 for every man, woman and child.

Two of the business' top dogs, Oscar Mayer and 7-Eleven, have linked in a new arrangement to further penetrate the hot dog market.

Under the arrangement, Oscar Mayer — the nation's leading hot dog manufacturer — will supply a new all-beef hot dog to 7-Eleven's 4,000 company-operated stores. In addition, 7-Eleven is recommending that its more than 3,000 franchisees sell Oscar Mayer hot dogs.

The convenience store group will begin featuring the Oscar Mayer program nationally Aug. 1 with a television advertising and in-store point of sale campaign. The advertising introduces "Big Bite" and "Super Big Bite," sandwiches with names consistent with 7-Eleven's fountain soft drinks "Big Gulp" and "Super Big Gulp."

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

From Staff Reports

On potential test, the No. 1 Shoe Bar Ranch "B" flowed 394 barrels of 43.2 gravity crude, 267 Mcfd and no water on a 10/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 350 psi. The well flowed from open hole 10,782 to 10,818 ft., which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid. Gas-oil ratio was 677:1.

Permitted as an 11,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,818 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,782 ft.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 3,007 ft. include the San Andres at 3,908 ft., Pennsylvanian at 7,763, Devonian at 8,538, Fusselman at 9,558, Simpson at 9,898, and Ellenburger at 10,790 ft. Pay was topped at 10,790 ft.

★Field offset

King County yields 183 barrel discovery

GUNN MANAGEMENT CO., Wichita Falls, tested the No. 34-GG S.B. Burnett Estate to pump 183 barrels of 35 gravity crude and 79 barrels of water from perforations 5,232 to 5,240 ft., which had been acidized with 750 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 350:1.

Permitted as a 6,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 5,920 ft. and plugged back to 5,405 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,448 ft.

The well topped the Cisco Reeds at 3,570 ft., Twin Peaks at 5,238, and Conglomerate at 5,824 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 1,743 ft. Pay was topped at 5,232 ft.

Mobil tests Spraberry find in Howard County

MOBIL PRODUCING TX & NM, INC., Midland, has completed a Spraberry discovery in Howard County, northeast of the Brittany-Noel field.

The No. 1 Fleeman was finaled to pump 33 barrels of crude, 12 Mcfd and six barrels of water from perforations 5,000 to 5,184 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL. Gas-oil ratio is 364:1.

Permitted as a 9,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,975 ft. and plugged back to 5,227 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,402 ft.

On kelly bushing elevation of 2,359 ft., formation tops include the Lower Spraberry at 5,305 ft., Wichita Albany at 6,135, Canyon at 8,040, and Ellenburger at 8,815 ft. Pay was topped at 5,000 ft.

Location is 1,800 ft. from east and 2,500 ft. from south lines of Section 36, Block 27, H&TC survey. Abst. 33, 12 miles northeast of Big Spring.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. During World War II, I was one of the first women taxi drivers in Philadelphia. In 1943, a sailor returning from the Pacific gave me a dollar bill as a tip and told me to keep it as a good luck piece. I have had it in my wallet ever since.

The dollar has "HAWAII" printed in very large letters on the back. The sailor said this money was used to pay the military there. Is this dollar bill worth anything?

Doyle

A. It's worth one dollar, for sure. You might get more than that from some coin shops and currency dealers. A catalog lists the "average buying price" dealers will pay for such a bill as $3.50. If it was uncirculated or in "very fine" condition, it would fetch a higher price.

During the global conflict, that kind of currency was printed so that it could be "demonetized" — declared worthless — if the Japanese mounted a successful invasion of Hawaii and other U.S. islands in the Pacific.

In my time as a deck ape and our ship pulled into North African ports, we were paid in U.S. money with distinctive yellow U.S. Treasury seals, which also would have been demonetized if the Afrika Corps had beaten Ike and Blood and Guts Patton.

The Hawaii and North Africa notes are not rare items. After being in your wallet all these years, it's doubtful your dollar bill is in prime condition to command a premium price. You can check around at various dealers, but you'll probably find its greatest value is as a personal keepsake and memory of your contribution to the war effort.

Q. I have three Federal Reserve Notes, 1928 series, which state, "Redeemable in gold on demand at the United States Treasury, or in gold or lawful money at any Federal Reserve Bank."

Since it now is legal for U.S. citizens to own gold and our government is minting gold coins, can I redeem these $5 notes for $5 gold coins? I can almost predict the answer, but thought I would ask anyway.

A. Then you won't be disappointed with the reply — a resounding NO. Gold certificates have not been redeemable in gold since 1934.

That wasn't changed by subsequent laws, allowing Americans to buy and sell gold in 1974 and authorizing the U.S. Mint to produce and sell American Eagle gold coins in 1986.

The $5 Gold Eagle contains one-tenth troy ounce of gold, making it worth about $45 plus production and distribution costs — and dealers' markup. Congress finds enough ways to deplete our nation's wealth, without permitting old gold certificates to be redeemed for gold.

Q. I would like to sell my one-ounce gold Krugerrands. Can you tell me where I can do this?

A. At many coin dealers. Even though the U.S. banned imports of those South African gold coins in 1986, as a protest to that country's apartheid policy, Krugerrands already here can be bought and sold.

Shop around at a number of coin dealers. Prices can vary. And be aware that the selling price of a Krugerrand usually is lower than that of other one-ounce gold coins.

Q. Do you recommend gold coins as an investment for someone who does not have big bucks but who has plenty of time?

A. I don't consider gold and other precious metals to be investments. They are speculations, a polite word for gambles. If taken by a speculating urge, I'd much prefer Atlantic City or Las Vegas.

Since 1974, the market price of one ounce of gold has roller coastered from $197 — to $850 in 1980, to $297 in 1982 to around $450 now.

It's true that gold has retained it purchasing power as a hedge against inflation — over the long haul. "Gold bugs" are fond of pointing out that one ounce of the yellow metal bought a man's suit in the 16th century, as it does today. But that's a long time between buying a new set of threads.

Kimco buys properties in Illinois

ARLINGTON (SWN) — Kimco Energy Corp. has announced the purchase of oil and gas properties in White, Wabash and Lawrence Counties, Illinois for $500,000 cash from an undisclosed seller in a transaction which with further development could more than double the company's oil and gas reserve base.

Gary Cook, president of Kimco, stated, "We believe these properties may contain potential primary reserves of 200,000 to 500,000 barrels of oil and an equal or greater amount of potential secondary reserves."

The company plans to workover a number of existing wells over the next 90 to 120 days and anticipates some additional development drilling.

Sematech names first chief executive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Longtime semiconductor industry leader Robert N. Noyce has been named chief executive officer of Sematech, the nation's first research consortium of semiconductor manufacturers in partnership with the federal government.

Charles E. Sporck, chairman of the Sematech board of directors, also announced Wednesday the appointment of Paul P. Castrucci, a top technical executive at International Business Machines Corp. with 32 years' experience, as Sematech's chief operating officer.

The two promised Sematech would remain on schedule to complete building renovations in Austin by November with the first semiconductor wafers being processed in the first quarter of 1989.

Noyce, once called "the Mayor of Silicon Valley," is a co-inventor of the integrated circuit, a critical element in computers and other electronics. He is also the co-founder of Intel Corp. and its vice chairman.

Noyce said he at first took himself out of consideration because of other commitments, but "it finally dawned on me it was far too important for someone else to do. I had to do it myself."

With the chief executive and operating officers now in place, Noyce said he was "confident we're going to be able to make a quick transition into full blown operations."

Sematech will sponsor and conduct research into advanced semiconductor manufacturing processes, materials and equipment.

Results of the research will be available to the 14 member companies and the Department of Defense license-royalty free, and one to two years later will be available to non-members.

Congress appropriated $100 million to Sematech in this year's budget and the consortium said it is confident next fiscal year's budget will also contain $100 million. The total budget is $250 million annually.

Semiconductors are vital parts in almost every modern electronics system — from microwave ovens to communications satellites. The electronics industry in the United States accounts for $230 billion in annual sales and 2.5 million jobs, Sematech officials said.

Sematech's goal is world leadership in semiconductor technology by 1993. Part of its strategy is also to work with universities around the country, and five were named last month to receive grants of up to $1.5 million a year for manufacturing research.

Sematech's staff in Austin is now at 135 and when it is in full operation will employ 600 to 800.

Sematech conducts its research at a 300,000-square foot facility at the University of Texas' Montopolis Research Center in Austin.

The member companies are Advanced Micro Devices, American Telephone and Telegraph, Digital Equipment Corp., Harris Corp., Hewlett-Packard Co., Intel Corp., IBM, LSI Logic Corp., Micron Technology Inc., Motorola, National Semiconductor Corp., NCR Corp., Rockwell International Corp., and Texas Instruments Inc.

Ford reports record earnings

By JOHN HOLUSHA
New York Times News Service

DEARBORN, Mich. — Bolstered by record overseas earnings that more than offset a slight decline at home, the Ford Motor Co. reported Wednesday that it earned a record $1.66 billion, or $3.43 a share, in the second quarter.

The profit was the largest ever earned by an American-based auto company in a quarter and represented an increase of 11 percent over Ford's earnings of $1.5 billion, or $2.90 a share, in the second quarter of 1987.

With the Chrysler Corp. expected to report earnings of about $300 million on Thursday, the Big Three will have posted a collective profit of about $3.4 billion for the period, also a record.

Analysts attributed the industry's prosperity to car and truck sales that have remained unexpectedly strong, a shrinking market for imports, profits from overseas operations and increased consumer demand for larger, more profitable cars.

BANK

The banking corporation's bonds have recently traded between 18 cents and 20 cents on the dollar. None of First RepublicBank's bonds are secured by the holding company's banks.

Frank W. Anderson, an analyst with D. Latin & Co. in Dallas, said that by establishing a bridge bank, the FDIC would give the bidders more time to analyze First RepublicBank's loan portfolio.

But he cautioned that the move could prompt lawsuits from First RepublicBank's bondholders when banks in general are under pressure from the Federal Reserve Board to raise capital. "These bondholders are not going to just take it on the chin," Anderson said.

It was unclear how many of First RepublicBank's 40 banks are insolvent. They were consolidated from 107 banking sites that existed immediately after the merger last year. Texas bank laws were eased last year to allow banks to have several branches within the same county.

The bridge-bank law permits the FDIC to seize only insolvent banks from bank holding companies. At the end of June, First RepublicBank's five largest banks — in Dallas, Houston, Fort Worth, Austin and San Antonio — held $24.3 billion in assets and $13.6 billion in deposits.

Over all, First RepublicBank had $20.2 billion in deposits at the end of June and $26.8 billion in assets. Its flagship bank, in Dallas, reported deposits of $7.7 billion at the end of June, compared with assets of $17.1 billion.

"It suggests to me that they've got a liquidity problem, a tremendous liquidity problem," said Anthony Montelaro, a managing director in the Dallas office of the Secura Group, a consulting company. "For that amount of assets, the deposits are way down." The holding company lost $6.7 billion in deposits in the first half of 1988.

MARKETS

Soybean futures best illustrate the rise and fall of the agricultural commodities because the nation's relatively small soybean stockpile has made that market extremely sensitive to changing weather patterns during the growing season.

Speculative interest in soybeans began mounting in April after the Agriculture Department predicted U.S. soybean inventories would total about 290 million bushels when the new marketing year begins Sept. 1, down from 436 million bushels a year earlier.

On April 4, August soybean futures settled at $6.80 a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade. Speculators who bought in at that price and sold just before the market peaked realized enormous profits. They could sell today and still come out ahead.

Analysts say the biggest losers were speculators who bought into the soybean market at about $9 a bushel in mid-June and were determined not to sell until prices topped $11.

Soybeans never went that high and by the second week in July, those investors were losing money on paper. Many have been forced to sell at a loss.

"People bought on emotion rather than on supply and demand and, lo and behold, those speculators are out now," said Steve Bruce, an analyst with Gelderman Inc., a Chicago trading firm that caters to commercial processors of grain.

TANDY

Also built-into the models are sound and video hookups and capability to interface with the DeskMate software program, which has been enhanced with a new telecommunications service called PC-Link.

The subscription service for $9.95 a month allows users to shop at home, talk with Tandy service representatives and connect with various informational services.

Both machines will call up menus onto their screens the moment they are turned on, thus eliminating extra steps that discourage many novice users, Patterson said.

Bernard Appel, president of Radio Shack, said the company's new facsimile machine, dubbed Tandyfax 1000, is a Japanese-manufactured machine aimed at the home office market that is estimated to include 24 million households and is expected to grow 10 percent a year. It will sell for $1,299, officials said.

The market for "fax" machines, which send and receive documents over telehone lines, has soared in recent years as prices of the machines have fallen. About 910,000 of the machines will be sold this year, almost twice the number sold in 1987, according to CAP Inernational, a Norwell, Mass., research firm.

Rare eye cancer gene linked to other cancers

BAR HARBOR, Maine (AP) — A gene found to be defective in a rare eye cancer has been linked to breast cancer and a common form of lung cancer, researchers say.

The gene was the first of a new group of anti-cancer genes that normally protect against cancer but allow cancer to appear when defective, said Ray White of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City.

Similar anti-cancer genes now have also been linked to colon cancer, another common and lethal form of cancer.

The findings that the gene is linked to breast cancer and so-called small-cell lung cancer suggest that it and other anti-cancer genes could play a major role in many types of human cancer, White told genetics students at the Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor on Monday.

Identifying those genes and determining how they go wrong does not mean cancer will then be eliminated, White said. But the understanding of these genetic abnormalities is crucial to ultimately being able to wipe out cancer, he said.

Over the shorter term, he said, understanding the genetics of cancer might allow doctors to diagnose subtypes of common cancers.

The gene was identified in children with a rare eye cancer known as retinoblastoma. White and Webster Cavenee at the Ludwig Institute for Cancer Research in Montreal were among the scientists who made that initial discovery and learned how the gene worked.

Later, those retinoblastoma children were found to develop osteosarcoma, a bone cancer, also as a result of defects in the retinoblastoma gene.

More recently, researchers at the University of California, San Francisco, led by Wen-Hwa Lee and Eva Lee, have found that the gene is defective in certain breast cancer cells grown in the laboratory.

About the same time, Frederic Kaye and colleagues at the National Cancer Institute-Navy Medical Oncology Branch reported seeing retinoblastoma gene defects in small-cell lung cancer cells in the laboratory.

"It may well be that the majority of small-cell lung cancers involve a lesion in the retinoblastoma gene as well as several others," said White.

Retinoblastoma affects perhaps 1,000 Americans annually, but small-cell lung cancer strikes 30,000 people in the United States every year, and breast cancer strikes 130,000.

Suddenly, a gene that was important only in a rare disease is now seen to be significant in two of the most important and most devastating human cancers.

He said Monday he has now shown that this anti-cancer gene plays a role in the much more common noninherited form of colon cancer that is another one of the country's leading cancer killers.

Bert Vogelstein of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore also has identified several other genetic defects associated with colon cancer.

He estimated that perhaps as many as seven genetic defects must occur for colon cancer to develop. He said he and White have now identified five of those defects.

"You can look at these genetic alterations as the causes of cancer — just as you can look at bacteria as the causes of infection," Vogelstein said in a telephone interview. "Except it's more complicated in cancer."

Fitness for Kids

Fit Youth Today, FYT, is a school athlethic program that encourages the student to attain his or her own fitness goals. The emphasis is on aerobic fitness, strength and weight loss, rather than on competition among students.

Cardiorespiratory endurance evaluated by a steady state jog.

Muscular strength and endurance evaluated by a two-minute bent-knee curl-up.

Body composition

Flexibility
evaluated with sit-and-reach, a test of low back, hamstring, joint and muscle function.

New school exercise program aims toward individuals' goals

NEW YORK (AP) — A new school exercise program that replaces competition with individual tests and health education could reverse the decline in fitness among American children while helping them avoid injury, experts say.

The American College of Sports Medicine is just starting to promote the program, called Fit Youth Today, or FYT, which was developed with the support of the American Health and Fitness Foundation in Austin, Texas.

"It is state-of-the-art exercise science put into a workable form for educators," said Wiliam Squires, professor of health fitness and nutrition at Texas Lutheran College and chairman of the task force that developed FYT.

Unlike conventional school athletic programs, FYT does not favor naturally gifted athletes. It rewards each student for attaining his or her own fitness goals, whatever the level of athletic ability, said Squires.

"The FYT program represents a real departure from traditional fitness testing in this country," he said at a recent symposium here. It includes an educational curriculum intended to teach students about the importance of maintaining physical activity throughout life.

Less than 50 percent of American children have adequate heart-lung endurance, and 40 percent of those 5-8 years old have signs of elevated blood pressure, obesity or elevated cholesterol — all of which increase the risk of heart disease, Squires said. "The decline in youth fitness is real and is overwhelmingly supported by study after study."

The consequences could be disastrous, he said, citing a study reported by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control last year that concluded lack of exercise was as strongly linked to heart disease as smoking, high blood pressure and high cholesterol.

In conventional programs, students are often measured against norms set by their peers. FYT conditions them not to run faster or jump higher than others but to be able to jog a set distance in 20 minutes, perform certain exercises demonstrating strength and flexibility, and reduce body fat specified levels.

The key point is that the goals emphasize aerobic fitness, strength and weight loss — not maximum performance, Squires said.

Carl Caspersen, an exercise physiologist and epidemiologist at the CDC in Atlanta, said FYT's success will be measured by "how well it motivates changes in behavior and guarantees an active lifestyle.

"It is the physical activity we're interest in, and if the testing encourages activity, that's what we're trying to achieve."

FYT also is designed to avoid athletic injuries that can have more serious consequences in children than they do in adults.

Children are unusually susceptible "overuse injuries," said Dr. Lyle Micheli, an orthopedist and director of the Division of Sports Medicine at Children's Hospital in Boston.

Women testing positive for AIDS virus on increase

HOUSTON (AP) — A startling increase in the number of women testing positive for the AIDS virus at a Houston clinic is an indication that women aren't taking the AIDS threat seriously, experts say.

Officials said Tuesday evidence of the AIDS virus has been detected in a sharply higher proportion of women tested at the Montrose Clinic this year.

In the first five months of 1988, AIDS virus antibodies were found in 3.4 percent of women tested at the clinic, a startling increase over the 1.3 percent who tested positive there in 1987.

The figures indicate a need for women to exercise greater care in their sexual practices and choice of partners, health officials said.

"If someone looks good enough for you to take to bed, he looks good enough for any of a number of others to have done so, male or female," Dr. Richard Grimes, chairman of the board of the Montrose Clinic, told the Houston Chronicle.

Thirteen of the 25 women who tested positive in 1988 probably acquired the virus from sexual partners who were either bisexual or used drugs, said Grimes, who is also a member of the faculty at the University of Texas School of Public Health.

"Young women who are still going to swinging singles bars have got to start thinking twice about that," said Dr. Robert Awe, director of the AIDS clinic at Jefferson Davis Hospital.

The risk to middle-aged people in a long-term monogamous relationship is virtually nil, Awe said. The only threat is to their financial health as the AIDS problem strains the health care and social service systems, he said.

The increase in infection among women is not yet reflected in the cases reported by the city of Houston Health Department. Only 2 percent of the city's 2,210 adult AIDS cases are in women.

But Robert Falletti, acting director of the bureau of epidemiology, said that does not mean the infections are not increasing because the progression from AIDS virus infection to the actual disease can take many years.

Falletti said tests begun recently of women in the city's prenatal care and family planning clinics will help determine the extent of the problem.

People who seek testing at the Montrose Clinic may suspect they have become infected through sexual contact or drug use and thus may be more likely to test positive than do people in the general population, both Falletti and Grimes said.

Seven of the 25 women who tested positive in 1988 were drug users. Five said they considered themselves at low risk for the disease.

Poland's health care in critical condition

By DEBORAH SEWARD

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Room 890 in the intensive care unit of the Banacha Street hospital is spacious and clean. Its neurological unit has four new heart-monitors and state-of-the-art respirators.

But it has not had a patient in the last two years.

"We have equipment worth tens of thousands of dollars, but we don't have the zlotys to pay the nurses so the equipment goes unused," said Dr. Andrzej Friedman, a neurologist at the hospital.

Around the corner, other rooms in the hospital are so crowded that critically ill stroke patients are kept on beds in the corridor, a sight typical in many Polish hospitals.

Forty years after the communist government promised its citizens free and adequate health care, the system itself is in critical condition.

At the same time, Poles in general aren't careful about their own personal health. They are among the world's heaviest smokers and drinkers and their diet is high in animal fat.

The state-run health service, however, puts a low priority on preventive medicine.

"The main difficulty now is the organization of the system and the enormous bureaucracy. We are short of everything but we could do better with what we have if the system were better organized," said Dr. Zofia Kuratowska, a health adviser to the banned Solidarity trade union.

The problems start with hospital buildings. Three-fourths are more than 50 years old, according to a 1987 World Bank study, which concluded that half of the oldest hospitals should be replaced because they cannot be modernized.

One government solution has been to invest in such huge, modern showcases as the Health Center for the Polish Mother in Lodz, a polluted industrial city in central Poland whose residents are among the country's least healthy.

The center's attractive working conditions have drained doctors and nurses from other facilities.

"They (the government) are making these monument buildings that are a real idiocy because they will serve only a few people," said Friedman.

Diagnosis appears to be one of the weak links of the health system. CAT-scans to assess brain damage can take two weeks to process and X-ray film is often faulty.

"In our hospitals the machines only work a few hours a day," said Kuratowski, the Solidarity adviser. "People wait weeks for simple procedures, blocking beds in the hospital, and sometimes it's very dangerous."

She heads the Social Foundation for Workers' Solidarity established by the union to help administer a $1 million grant it received last year from the U.S. Congress. The foundation hopes to establish three diagnostic clinics in Warsaw, Gdansk and Krakow, but plans have been delayed because the government has yet to officially register the foundation.

Being a doctor or nurse is not financially rewarding. At mid-career a doctor earns about 30,000 zlotys ($69) a month and nurses 18,000 zlotys ($41), less than the national average of 42,000 ($97).

"Because of the salary a lot of doctors are trying to emigrate or thinking about it," said Kuratowska. "A young doctor does not make enough money to create a stable life for his family."

As a result, some take money on the side, she added.

GROWTH INDUSTRY

The relatively new science of genetic engineering has produced a growth hormone. It is available for children who are more than just a little "short for their age". They suffer from a growth-hormone deficiency which may restrict their height to the four-foot range. Prior to 1985, this condition was ony correctable by weekly shots of human growth hormone taken from the pituitary glands of cadavers. Needless to say, this was a very expensive proposition due to the severly limited supply of the protein. It was later discovered that the treatments carried the unacceptable risk of death due to an extremely rare virus within the cadaver-derived hormone. However, pessimism gave way to optimism with the productive of unlimited amounts of growth hormone in the laboratory. The FDA-approved pharmaceutical is available for children with this growth deficiency.

A wide selection of prescription drugs are available at ALLEN'S PHARMACY, 2101 Midland, 689-9999. Services include home delivery, 24 hour emergency prescriptions, and a drive up window. Modern Plastic Surgery

by Sylvan Bartlett, M.D., ASPRS

AFTER A MASTECTOMY

Thanks to greater public awareness and improved radiology techniques, more cases of breast cancer than ever before are being detected early. This means that more than ninety percent of women who detect this form of cancer early on will survive five years after treatment without a detectable trace of cancer. Unfortunately, treatment often involves the procedure known as a modified radical mastectomy which necessitates the removal of the breast. Yet, post-mastectomy reconstruction offers women the chance to return their bodies and self-esteem to more desirable levels. Reconstruction usually involves the insertion of a silicone implant in a pocket created beneath chest muscle. The procedure may be performed within days or years after the mastectomy. Breast reconstruction is the most natural remedy available to counter the loss of a breast.

For a woman who has just been told she has breast cancer and will need to undergo a mastectomy, making a decision in regards to reconstructive surgery can be quite upsetting. It would be better for her to find out everything she can about her alternatives and select a plastic surgeon with whom she feels comfortable. PERMIAN PLASTIC SURGICAL CENTER, 848 Central in Odessa, performs post mastectomy breast reconstruction in addition to cosmetic and plastic surgery. For further inquiries on today's column, please contact us at 335-8711 or 563-3110. Office hours M-F 8-5.

FITFUL SLEEP

The older person will tell you that he requires less sleep. However, research indicates that sleep among older people is due to decreased ability. When the Stanford University Sleep Research Center conducted studies among older people, they found a pattern of frequent awakenings during the course of a night. Fully one-third of the sleep subjects awoke several times in a single hour because they experienced difficulty in breathing. All went back to normal breathing, unaware that they had awakened. The name given to this nighttime momentary cessation of breathing is called sleep apnea. Because elderly sleepers are not aware of their fitful sleep, they wake up unrefreshed without any apparent cause for their lethargy.

There are a large number of causes of sleep disorders. These include medical or psychiatric problems and medications that may disrupt sleep as a side effect. If you feel you are not getting enough sleep or if you are sleeping too much, contact your physician for a complete physical exam. The CLINIC FOR MANAGEMENT OF CHRONIC PAIN, 805 W. Wadley @ A, offers professional and caring health services for all ages. Preventive medicine is emphasized. Please call the office for further inquiries or consultation: 687-2704

Bush plans to 'open up' about family life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush said in an interview published today that he plans to "open up and share" his personal side in the presidential campaign to counter his image as an "Ivy League elitist."

Bush, the certain Republican nominee, told the editorial board of USA Today that his family life has been "something so private and so special that I haven't felt like sharing it."

"At this level of American politics, I have to open up a little and share, so at our convention, you will see five Bush children, their five spouses and our 10 grandchildren," Bush said in the interview, which took place Wednesday.

Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis "speaks Spanish. I wish I did," Bush said, "But I have three grandchildren, my blood coursing through their veins, who are half Mexican. I've never shared this."

He said the thoughts about his family's public role were raised by the recent Democratic National Convention, where Dukakis, former contender Jesse Jackson and others spoke of family values and appeared publicly with relatives.

"We saw a good show there in terms of family. Very good, from the heart, genuine," Bush said. "I haven't felt too comfortable talking about my family."

Bush said the public perceives him as an Ivy League elitist, but he resists that mold. "For example, I like pork rinds, but that doesn't fit the mold. I play horseshoes."

Asked about Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's refrain at the Democratic convention of "Where was George," Bush said he was on the job.

"I was up at the United Nations, laying in perspective what ought to happen: The Iranians doing that which they had been unwilling to do, recognize the U.N. resolution and talk peace."

Bush represented the United States government last week at a United Nations Security Council meeting on the U.S. downing of an Iranian commercial airliner carrying 290 people. Iran has since said it will recognize a U.N. resolution calling for a cease fire in the Iran-Iraq war.

"Remember the ridicule about 'moderates' in Iran? Now others are talking about the moderates in Iran," Bush told the newspaper.

Forms sent to possible Bush running mates

Associated Press

Republican George Bush said today the guessing game about his vice presidential running mate is inevitable and he hopes it won't demean anyone involved. Democrats Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen, meanwhile, were out campaigning on opposite coasts.

He said, "The process is going along in an orderly fashion...Hopefully, it won't be demeaning to anyone."

As for the growing list of Republicans believed to be among potential candidates, Bush said, "You can't avoid speculation."

Dukakis arrived in Newark, N.J., at mid-morning and was to visit a day care center in Seacaucus later in the day before heading for Cleveland. He will return to Boston Saturday night after visiting seven states.

Before leaving the Statehouse Wednesday, Dukakis continued his duties as Massachusetts governor by signing a number of bills, including crime legislation and the final piece of a plan to balance the 1988 budget.

Dukakis dismissed Bush's repeated criticism of a Massachusetts furlough program that allowed passes to first-degree murderers. The program was later amended, but not until after one of the prisoners escaped from a furlough and raped a Maryland woman.

"I've got a record," Dukakis said, referring to statistics showing his state's crime rate had dropped 13 percent in the past four years. "I don't know what the vice president's record is."

He was riding a post-convention wave of enthusiasm, with the latest NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll giving him an 18-point lead over Bush.

Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis participates in a Greek line dance Wednesday night with members of the Pancretan Association during a convention in Boston.

Running mate Lloyd Bentsen was in San Francisco after telling a business women's group in Albuquerque, N.M., that "the gender gap...wasn't created by accident."

He told the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, which Bush had addressed Sunday, that the GOP record on the Equal Rights Amendment, equal pay and other issues pushed women into the Democratic camp.

Bush, the certain nominee at the Republican National Convention in New Orleans Aug. 15, remained in Washington while more feelers went out for prospective running mates.

Kemp, the New York congressman, and Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico were among those receiving requests for background information, Republican sources said.

Kemp aide Marci Robinson said the congressman met with Robert Kimmitt, a Washington attorney who is helping screen possible running mates, and would provide the material to the Bush campaign within a week.

New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu has said he received a questionnaire from Bush campaign officials.

Bush is under pressure from the Republican right to pick a strong conservative running mate. That effort was formalized when Sen. Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire announced Wednesday the formation of the Coalition for a Winning Ticket.

In addition to Kemp, the names mentioned most frequently in the speculation include Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole and California Gov. George Deukmejian. Several women's names also crop up, including Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas and Dole's wife, Elizabeth, a former secretary of transportation.

Aides to Sen. Dole, Deukmejian, former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, Rep. Lynn Martin of Illinois, Sens. Richard Lugar of Indiana and Alan Simpson of Wyoming and Illinois Gov. James Thompson all said they had not received questionnaires.

Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, met briefly with Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul Kirk in Chicago to discuss Jackson's role in campaigning for the party's presidential and local candidates. Neither side would give details on what was discussed.

Jackson has said he will campaign for Dukakis, but details have not yet been worked out.

Surveys have been suggesting Dukakis got a boost following last week's convention. In the latest poll — a telephone survey of 1,770 registered voters conducted Saturday through Monday — Dukakis received 50 percent support to 32 percent for Bush. Dukakis had led by 10 points, 46-36, in a pre-convention NBC-Journal poll.

Jackson seeks talks with Iran on hostages

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson says he has been trying to negotiate with Iran's foreign minister to free the U.S. hostages held by Iranian sympathizers in Lebanon.

Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati is in New York for discussions at the United Nations on ending Iran's 8-year-old war with Iraq.

"No meetings have been set, but I have been making appeals, through diplomats, to set up a meeting," Jackson said from his Chicago home in a telephone interview.

"I did talk to the U.N. secretary-general earlier this week on the same subject."

Tuesday, Iran's parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, offered to help get the nine Americans freed if the United States would release Iranian assets frozen since 1979. The Reagan administration responded that it will make no deals for the hostages' release.

Jackson said he is using several Middle Eastern diplomats as intermediaries in his attempts to negotiate the hostages' release.

Jackson spokesman Frank Watkins said the feelers toward Velayati are part of a continuing effort the civil rights leader has been making toward winning the hostages' freedom.

Jackson's efforts have included appeals to political leaders, newspaper advertisements and radio and television spots in several Middle Eastern countries, Watkins said Wednesday night.

The former candidate said he feels prospects for their release have improved considerably because of the cease-fire talks between Iran and Iraq.

"Those who are held over there had nothing to do with starting the war, but to release them would be a good sign that the war was ending," he said.

In January 1984, Jackson met directly with President Hafez Assad of Syria and arranged the release of Navy Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr., whose plane was shot down over Lebanon Dec. 4, 1983, during an American air strike against a Syrian anti-aircraft position.

In an interview published today in USA Today, Bush, the certain GOP presidential noiminee, called Jackson a "loose cannon" when asked whether Jackson should have a role as an envoy to free the hostages.

"It shouldn't happen. We're talking about very sensitive foreign policy. The administration is empowered to conduct those negotiations at the United Nations. We don't need any loose cannons rolling around the deck," Bush said.

Bentsen cites 'diversity' in Democratic ticket

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen is fending off questions about differences with running mate Michael Dukakis and working to point up his differences with Republican standard-bearer George Bush.

"You're going to see diversity in both parties," he told reporters pressing him to answer Bush's charge that he and Bentsen had more in common than Bentsen and Dukakis. He also brushed aside GOP statements that the Democrats had effectively created a three-man ticket that includes Jesse Jackson.

"I don't think there's anything to it," he said.

Bentsen said he still might vote for new aid to the Nicaraguan Contras, despite Dukakis' opposition.

As for Dukakis opposing Bentsen's plan to impose an import oil fee, he joked, "I haven't been able to convince George Bush, either."

Bentsen's comments came following a speech in Albuquerque to a businesswomen's convention, in which he tied Bush to Reagan administration policies opposed by feminists. Bentsen supports the Equal Rights Amendment and several other initiatives supported by the women's group.

The campaign stop in Albuquerque was at the start of a four-day cross-country campaign swing, which continues with speeches today in San Francisco and Reno, Nev. The campaign will then travel to Los Angeles; Amarillo, Texas; and a finale in either Louisiana or Mississippi.

Events will be designed to highlight some of Bentsen's differences with the GOP and not with Dukakis, such as the senator's work on the trade and plant-closing notification bills, and of energy independence programs.

Bentsen's speech to the National Federation of Business and Professional Women came just three days after Bush unveiled a $2.2 billion child care plan before the same group.

"It's interesting to me that it's taken eight years (for the Republicans) to discover day care," said Bentsen. Just last year, he said, the White House fought "every step of the way" against just $50 million proposed for child care for poor women.

Bentsen himself has not endorsed a $2.5 billion Democratic day care proposal, which won the approval Wednesday of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

But Bentsen told the group that the "gender gap" — the pattern of women supporting Democrats in greater proportions than men — was a direct result of the GOP record on issues including the equal rights amendment, equal pay and the law banning discrimination by institutions receiving federal money.

"The Reagan-Bush administration opposes the ERA...they ripped it out of the (Republican) platform," he said. "They oppose the study that will provide the legal foundation for women who are discriminated against to bring their case to court and win."

Bentsen said Reagan's veto of the bill overriding the Grove City ruling of the Supreme Court, which weakened federal anti-bias rules, showed "this administration tried to compromise equality...But we overrode that veto. And we scored a major victory for equality and opportunity in America.

"By the end of the Dukakis-Bentsen administration," he promised, "this purse will be black." He received a standing ovation from the 2,000 women in the convention hall, several of whom held up Dukakis-Bentsen campaign signs.

Bentsen supports pay equity legislation in Congress but not the more ambitious comparable worth legislation. He told reporters after his speech that he wanted to go one step at a time. He also said he had not yet endorsed maternal leave legislation and has not had time to study it.

The businesswomen's group, founded in 1919, has 125,000 members nationwide, of which 51 percent list themselves as Republicans, 47 percent Democrats and the rest independent, according to executive director Linda Dorian.

"There was a lot of enthusiasm for Sen. Bentsen and what he had to say," said Ms. Dorian. The group was conducting a straw poll and planned to release the results today.

3 out of 4 Americans can't locate Persian Gulf, survey reveals

By CRISPIN Y. CAMPBELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three out of four Americans who took a geographic literacy test couldn't locate the Persian Gulf, most had no idea of the U.S. population and the majority were lost when it came to finding Britain, France or Japan.

The test, conducted this spring by the Gallup Organization, ranked Americans sixth in geographic literacy compared with their counterparts in eight other countries. Of young adults in all nine countries, Americans scored last.

"What was most alarming was not only that young Americans did worse than all other 18- to 24-year-olds, but that they were the only ones in that age group, among nine countries, who did worse than the oldest group tested," National Geographic Society president Gilbert M. Grosvenor said today.

A separate Gallup survey of a larger sample of Americans found comparable ignorance of geography, but high awareness of environmental issues. Almost all were aware of the global ozone problem and more than two-thirds knew of the acid rain problem in North America.

The international survey, commissioned by the geographic society, tested 10,820 adults in Canada, France, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Sweden, the United Kingdom, the United States and West Germany. Those surveyed were asked to locate 13 selected countries, Central America, the Pacific Ocean and the Persian Gulf on an unmarked world map.

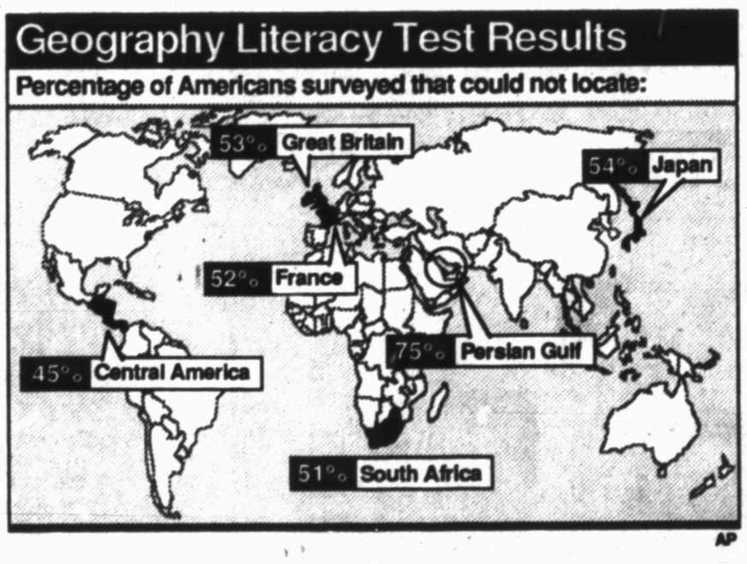

Out of a possible score of 16, the Americans ranked sixth with an average of 8.6, on par with the British (8.5) but significantly better than only the Italians (7.6) and Mexicans (7.4). Top honors went to the Swedes (11.6) and West Germans (11.2), followed by the Japanese (9.7), French (9.3) and Canadians (9.2).

American youth received a score of 6.9, the lowest mark of all youth tested and all other U.S. age groups.

Overall, 75 percent of Americans placed the Persian Gulf in the Red Sea, the Mediterranean, the Black Sea or the Indian Ocean.

Forty-five percent did not know where Central America is located. One third identified Vietnam and less than half the Americans were able to identify the United Kingdom, France, South Africa and Japan.

In a multiple-choice question, 57 percent of Americans tested did not know the current U.S. population. Most participants in Sweden, Japan and Canada chose the correct range from a field of four: 150 to 300 million.

In addition to the international quiz, a more comprehensive battery of 81 questions, including a world map test, was administered to 1,611 Americans.

The results, which Gallup senior study director Jeffrey S. Friedman says can be projected to the U.S. population at large, include:

■ Not more than half of adult Americans know that the Sandinistas and Contras are fighting in Nicaragua. Some put the warring groups in Iran, Lebanon or Afghanistan.

■ Only 15 per cent could identify Mexico City as the world's largest city.

■ About one-third could name four of the 16 NATO member countries, another third failed to name any and 16 percent of those questioned conferred membership on the Soviet Union.

■ Fifty percent failed to name any members of the Warsaw Pact, 20 percent could name four and more than one in 10 made the U.S. a member.

■ Fifty-five percent identified South Africa as the nation where apartheid is an official policy.

Americans generally did better on environmental questions, with nearly 95 percent knowing that damage to the ozone layer would have worldwide effect; 73 percent knowing wind patterns were responsible for spreading the nuclear fallout from Chernobyl; and 68 percent identifying acid rain as a particular problem in North America.

While nearly 70 per cent of Americans tested agreed that the ability to read a map was a necessity in today's world, more than one third could not pick out the westernmost city on a simple map, the survey indicated.

Comparing results with those from U.S. adults 41 years ago, today's Americans scored about the same when asked to locate 12 countries in Europe, eight in South America, and 10 U.S. states on a map. Both groups did better on the U.S. map, with only Brazil being recognized on the South American map.

Again, today's 18- to 24-year-olds scored lower than their post-World War II counterparts.

Survey results cited the level of education as one indicator of geographic literacy, noting that people with some college scored considerably higher. Travel experience, geography courses and exposure to maps and globes were also related to geographic knowledge, the poll results indicated.

"Given the generally higher level of education today, the lack of overall improvement suggests that the situation is actually worse," Friedman said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Colonel defends drug use

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Air Force medical official today defended the use of drugs to help fighter pilots deal with fatigue on long flights, saying it has been done for more than 25 years.

The issue was raised in Europe when a West German television network reported that U.S. Air Force pilots assigned to the country take the drug dextroamphetamine Dexedrine to increase their alertness while in flight and then take the sedative Seconal at night to counteract the effects of Dexedrine.

Col. Russell B. Raymond, chief of the Aerospace Medical Consultants Division of the Air Force surgeon general's office, said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" that fighter pilots on lengthy missions use three types of drugs: two sedatives and an amphetamine.

Consumer advocate Sidney Wolfe of Public Citizen, appearing on the same program, said the group is concerned about "a military that has to depend upon using uppers and downers to perform well."

Father kills child actress

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A child actress who played a daughter of killer Jeffrey McDonald in the television movie "Fatal Vision" was shot to death with her mother and burned in an apparent murder-suicide by the girl's father, police said.

Three bodies were found Wednesday in the fire-damaged home of Jozsef and Maria Barsi, whose only child, Judith, 11, also starred in the movie "Jaws IV: The Revenge" as well as numerous television shows and about 50 commercials.

Coroner's officials identified the dead man as Jozsef Barsi, 55, but withheld the names of the woman and child pending notification of relatives. However, neighbors said the girl was Judith.

Ex-KKK leader seeks honor

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) — A former imperial wizard of the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has changed his mind and wants a baseball park, built on land he donated, named for him.

When the City Council decided July 12 to name the park for James R. Venable, it sparked protests from civil rights groups. Venable, 83, declined the honor, saying he didn't want to cause trouble for the city of which he once was mayor.

He sent Mayor Jane Rhodes a letter Wednesday saying he'd changed his mind.

The council "got all scared around the time of the (Democratic National) Convention and worried about hurting feelings," Venable said. "Like many white people, they want the black vote. White people are my worst enemy."

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Some cynics might call it a Mickey Mouse operation, but drought-beleaguered Iowans say they're honored to help the world's most famous rodent celebrate his 60th birthday with a cornfield seeded in his image.

The "birthday card" devised by Walt Disney Productions is a 520-acre field in north central Iowa, planted in corn and oats in a profile of the cartoon legend that's visible from 30,000 feet in the air.

The presentation is scheduled for Aug. 6-7, and the celebration is the latest in a series of events surrounding the farm field art that has brought cheer to some Iowa communities struggling under the farm crisis of the 1980s and, lately, the drought.

This time, it also may bring in some cash for economic development and community groups.

Walt Disney Productions characters Mickey and Minnie Mouse, as well as Donald Duck and Goofy, all are scheduled to appear at the fair in Sheffield along with "Ear Force One," a 12-story-high hot air balloon in the shape of Mickey's head and featuring a birthday hat.

Organizers say the celebration could attract more than 40,000 people, providing an economic lift to the seven small communities, known as the Area Community Commonwealth, that surround the field.

With the help of Iowa State University, searchers found a farm that fit the bill, property rented by Richard Pitzenberger and his sons Joe, Ted and Rick.

Using a design developed with the help of a surveyor, Joe Pitzenberger planted corn in the shape of Mickey's head surrounded by oats in a day and a half last spring. He said it took just three hours longer than usual to plant the field, which has been kept alive by rain that has eluded some other areas of the state.

The design consists of 6.5 million corn plants surrounded by 300 acres of oats, and it's 1.1 miles from the tip of Mickey's nose to the end of his ear, said Disneyland spokeswoman LouAnne Cappiello.

"It's been great," said Joe Pitzenberger of the attention his work has achieved, although he admits that the famous field mouse also is making the Pitzenbergers' the butt of some good-natured jokes around town.

"Mickey Mouse operation is the one we hear the most," said Pitzenberger. "I tell 'em I've heard it before."

Lazar said the fair will have the usual food booths, games and concessions and will also feature a parade, a chance to have pictures taken with Disney characters and helicopter rides to view the fields.

Request for Proposal
Fire/EMS System
Section VI
Notice To Bidders

SEALED Proposals addressed to the Mayor and City Council Members of the City of Midland, Texas will be received in the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas until 3:00 o'clock P.M., on the 2nd day of September, 1988, and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:30 o'clock P.M., on the same day.

Any bid received after 3:00 o'clock P.M., the day of the bid opening, shall be returned to bidder unopened.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Fire/EMS System". The furnishing of all labor, tools, materials and equipment required to perform requirements described in the request for proposal dated July 15, 1988, titled "Proposal for Fire/EMS System", and all work incidental and necessary thereto, to be located within the geographical boundaries of the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas, as per the plans and specifications for such improvements. Copies of specifications, plans and other documents may be examined and/or obtained at the City Secretary's Office, located at Illinois and Loraine, Midland, Texas.

All proposals must be submitted in accordance with the requirements of the RFP dated July 15, 1988, titled "Proposal for Fire/EMS System". Any bid submitted in any other form will be considered irregular and will be returned to the bidder without receiving consideration by the Mayor and City Council Members.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract, and execute bind and guarantee in the form provided within fifteen (15) days after notice of award of contract to bidder.

The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid (on an annual basis) and must be in the form of certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland. Bids without required check or bid bond will Request for Proposal Fire/EMS System, Section VI not be considered. Bid checks or bid bonds will be returned to unsuccessful bidders promptly after award of contract.

The City of Midland, Texas reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, to make an investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what, in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council, is the most advantageous bid.
