Braniff begins bankruptcy proceedings

Competitors honoring most tickets

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Braniff International airlines officials initiated bankruptcy proceedings early today at the home of a federal bankruptcy judge.

Judge John Flowers said Braniff president Howard Putnam and two attorneys appeared at his house shortly after midnight Wednesday to file the papers under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law. The filing protects the airline from its creditors and gives it the right to continue operating.

The Braniff failure is the first by a major airline since the industry emerged in the 1930s from the barnstorming era.

Related stories, Page 12A

The filing came as thousands of Braniff passengers scrambled for standby seats on other flights following the airline's suspension of service Wednesday.

THE AIRLINE urged people holding Braniff reservations to make other arrangements. The company's 8,500 employees, down from 11,500 before layoffs began last summer, were told not to report to work today without specific instructions.

"I just can't believe this," said Jim Skyles, one of the passengers ordered off Flight 494 before it left Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport for Houston on Wednesday. "It's terrible. And I feel sorry for the people, the employees. One of the stewardesses was crying. It's a shame."

Other carriers prepared to honor Braniff tickets under a default protection plan aimed at guaranteeing standby seats. Eastern Airlines moved to take over some of Braniff's foreign routes and the Civil Aeronautics Board scheduled a meeting today.

Flying standby means there are no reservations. A passenger shows up at the airport and flies as space is available.

BRANIFF, BURDENED with a $732 million debt, began to suffer after new competition from deregulation in 1978 and soaring fuel costs combined to erode profits. Losses totaled $336.4 million the past three years, including $160.1 million in 1981 and $41.4 million in the first three months of this year.

The airline, once noted for its brightly painted planes, has laid off 3,000 employees since last summer. Employees also agreed in 1980 to a 10 percent, six-month pay cut.

Braniff's 39 major creditors — 26 banks, 11 insurance companies and two aircraft suppliers — agreed earlier this year to defer all payments on the airline's $591 million long-term debt until Oct. 1.

Braniff Vice President Sam Coats announced the suspension of all foreign and domestic flights fter a directors meeting that convened at 4:05 p.m. EDT, five minutes after the New York Stock Exchange closed. Braniff stock fell ⅛ Wednesday to 2⅛.

"We don't know anything," said a Braniff flight attendant who lives in San Antonio but was stranded in Dallas by the shutdown.

"We still don't know if we have jobs," said the attendant, requesting anonymity. "We just don't know. We're not supposed to be talking to you (reporters), but what are they going to do, fire us?"

LONG TICKET LINES were reported at airports at Dallas-Fort Worth, which is Braniff's home base, Kansas City and Minneapolis-St. Paul as passengers sought alternate flights.

"Why me?" said Mary Neuhaus, 19, a passenger in Kansas City who was trying to get home to Chicago. "I have no money. I'm stuck."

Competitors said they probably could handle the extra load.

A default protection plan approved earlier this year means about 130 airlines will honor tickets for Braniff flights. The agreement only covers tickets bought from travel agents but industry officials said many airlines probably would honor tickets sold by Braniff.

"We are sure there will be some confusion and congestion initially, but we will do our best to keep it to a minimum," said American Airlines President Robert Crandall. "... We hope the public will be patient."

DESPITE THE TWO airlines' fierce competition, American spokesman Mike Robb said Braniff's problems caused no joy.

"We don't like to see any airline in trouble. We would not be happy if Braniff folded," he said.

Midland sorry to lose air carrier

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With confusion spreading through Midland and the rest of the country last night and early this morning, airline telephone numbers were busy as many customers of Braniff Airlines frantically tried to reschedule flights.

At Midland Regional Airport, the confusion centered around the legal and financial situation of Braniff Airlines.

"I don't know if they'll continue paying rent...or what," Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation at Midland Regional Airport, said early this morning. "I really don't know what will happen."

Braniff Airlines, servicing Midland-Odessa for the past couple of years, was paying $10,117 per month for rent and $4,320 per month for landing fees, Banks said.

When asked if Braniff's bankruptcy would have an effect on planned expansion at the terminal using revenues, Banks replied, "I don't think so.

"I believe we'll fill the gap some way by some other airline coming in. It might make it a little more difficult," he added.

Mayor Thane Akins agreed. "We're disappointed. Braniff is a good airline and we hate to lose them.

"But there are other airlines that can take their place."

Akins cited Muse Airlines and Air West, which provides a commuter-type service, as two possibilities.

"Some of these other airlines can take up the slack," Akins continued. "I don't see that (Braniff's bankruptcy) as having a major effect (on Midland's economy.)"

With Braniff's departure, Muse Airlines may succeed in its attempts to service the Midland-Odessa area, Banks said. Muse previously was denied the opportunity to service Midland-Odessa by the Federal Aviation Administration due to limited slots out of Dallas/Fort Worth.

"I think it should help Muse to get their slots now," Banks said.

"This (Braniff's bankruptcy) wasn't unexpected as far as I was concerned," he continued. "I've been wondering how long they could continue like they have been. But there was no advance warning."

Action ruled public information

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

State Attorney General Mark White has ruled that disciplinary action taken against a Midland police officer last fall is public information.

White issued the opinion Tuesday in response to a Dec. 10 request by the city's legal department, which had contended that disclosure of such information "would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy."

But White ruled that although the Open Records Act precludes disclosure of "intimate details of a highly personal nature," the "basic factual information relevant to this disciplinary action constitutes public information, including the fact that disciplinary action has been taken, the dates of such action, the punishment assessed, all factual details about the incident which gave rise to the disciplinary action, and any written findings regarding the reasons for the action."

The city sought the opinion after refusing a request by The Reporter-Telegram to confirm reports that a police officer was suspended for three days after allegedly abusing a black motorist he had stopped last fall. The motorist filed a complaint with Chief of Police Wayne Gideon, who then suspended the officer.

Although Gideon and City Personnel Director David Hunter earlier last fall had freely divulged information on the 12-day suspension of former officer Terry Lowe, they declined to provide particulars on the other officer's unrelated suspension and referred questions to the city attorney's office.

Assistant City Attorney Brian Martin, who has since gone into private practice, contended at the time that disclosure of the information in the Lowe case had been "a mistake," and sought the attorney general's opinion.

In a letter to the attorney general, The Reporter-Telegram said: "It is our position that fairness isn't served by (Lowe's name) being published in the newspaper and carried by other media while other officers who may be involved in similar situations are protected by city hall."

City Attorney Joe Nuessle said this morning he had not yet received official word of White's opinion, but would be meeting today with police and city officials, along with the officer involved, to apprise them of the legal avenues still available to them — primarily, a court challenge of the opinion.

While attorney general rulings in such matters do not carry the force of law, they usually do stand up in court, according to a spokswoman for White's office, and Nuessle indicated he would advise against a court challenge.

If the officer goes along with Nuessle's advice, his name and the details of his suspension will be made public, Nuessle said.

Planes, helicopter down in Falklands

By The Associated Press

Britain's Falklands task force shot down two more Argentine planes and lost a helicopter, but the chopper crew was rescued.

British and Argentine reports of the action Wednesday agreed on the loss of the three aircraft but differed on the circumstances.

The British said one of their destroyers brought the two U.S.-built Skyhawk fighter-bombers down with Sea Wolf missiles when they attacked it between 20 and 30 miles west of the Falklands.

A British spokesman said another Skyhawk escaped, and "further Argentine sorties were made" against the British fleet blockading the islands. But he said reports from the fleet made no mention of damage to the British ships or casualties.

The spokesman also announced that a British Sea King helicopter ditched in the sea near the Falklands, and two other helicopters rescued the four crewmen. He said there was no evidence the chopper was lost through enemy action.

Argentina's account said two British frigates shelled Stanley, the Falklands capital, late Wednesday morning. Argentine planes attacked the frigates three hours later, causing "considerable damage to them," and Argentine shore personnel shot down the helicopter.

"As a result of these actions, two Argentine airplanes were downed," the communique said.

Neither the British nor the Argentines said anything about the Skyhawk pilots, and it was assumed they were lost.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said he did not think the continuing clashes would have any effect on his efforts to negotiate a framework for peace negotiations.

"I still feel that perhaps at the end of the week we might have some really positive results," he said. More talks were scheduled at U.N. headquarters in New York today.

Argentine President Leopoldo Galtieri said "there's always the possibility of an honorable solution for both sides." But he said if the British keep attacking, "Argentina is spiritually and militarily prepared to respond."

Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez told reporters the negotiations "are advancing very slowly. They have not broken down. They are not stalemated."

British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym said new developments "hold out some promise of progress.... But many difficult problems still remain. We've had our hopes raised several times before, only to have them dashed and we must remember that."

Costa Mendez reiterated that any negotiations to end the Falklands crisis "must lead to recognition of Argentine sovereignty over the islands." They "have been, are, and will be Argentine, no matter what Margaret Thatcher says," he declared.

The British House of Commons scheduled another emergency debate on the Falklands crisis today, and informed parliamentary sources said up to 60 of Mrs. Thatcher's 334 Conservatives were ready to vote against the government if it agreed to a settlement that amounted to a sellout.

The London Daily Mail, a leading Conservative paper, commented: "As our troops stiffen their sinews for war, fears grow of a diplomatic sellout.... Britain's government has bombarded Buenos Aires with concessions.... Britain has offered all the concessions, Argentina none."

In other developments, the Argentine government expelled two Norwegian newsmen and an American correspondent for Newsweek magazine, Holger Jensen. Three British television crewmen were kidnapped, robbed and released naked in an attack the Interior Ministry said "appears inspired by spurious forces of uncertain origin ... trying to smudge Argentina's clean image before the world."

Galtieri held a surprise meeting with the three Britons early today and apologized on behalf of his government.

It was the second such attack in two days. American TV newsman Christopher Jones of New York was grabbed Tuesday, robbed, threatened with death and dumped naked in a field outside Buenos Aires.

Pontiff's would-be assassin charged

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Police today filed charges of attempted murder against a Spaniard in clerical garb who rushed at Pope John Paul II with a bayonet during a religious service at the Shrine of Fatima in central Portugal, authorities said.

Police said the assailant identified himself as a priest and a disciple of traditionalist Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, leader of a fundamentalist group opposed to Roman Catholic Church reforms imposed by the Vatican II conference.

Police Inspector Daniel Polonia identified the assailant as Juan Fernandez Krohn, 33, a native of Madrid who had been living near Paris.

Polonia told reporters Krohn's passport identified him as a "religious," a term generally used to describe clerics as well as seminarians.

Krohn was being interrogated by anti-terrorism investigators at police headquarters in Lisbon, 110 miles southwest of Fatima, and would be arraigned Friday morning, Polonia said. If convicted, he could be imprisoned for 15 to 20 years.

The inspector said Krohn, dressed in a clerical collar and robe, attacked the pontiff "with a small bayonet produced to go with a German Mauser rifle."

Security guards overpowered the attacker when he lunged at the pope Wednesday night from about six yards away as the pontiff was approaching an altar erected on the steps of the basilica at the shrine to the Virgin Mary.

The pope escaped unhurt from the second attempt on his life, blessed his assailant, and went ahead with rites for a million pilgrims at the Shrine of Fatima.

Camilo Cibin, the head of Vatican security and one of the men who overpowered the assailant, called Krohn "a mad man," but said the pontiff was not disturbed by the incident.

The pope appearly slightly pale today when he met with Portugal's bishops and urged them to fight against the rising tide of divorce and agnosticism in this predominantly Roman Catholic country.

The attack Wednesday was on the eve of the first anniversary of the assassination attempt in St. Peter's Square in which the pope was critically wounded by shots fired by a Turkish terrorist.

Democrats' budget plan trims deficits

By CLIFF HAAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats are placing themselves at odds with President Reagan as they move toward approval of a 1983 budget outline that trims deficits by raising $147 billion in new taxes over three years and reducing defense spending.

The House Budget Committee, controlled by a Democratic majority, halted deliberations on the spending plan early today after meeting virtually non-stop for 15 hours. The meeting was called off until later today when some snags developed over technical issues.

Under the plan, Social Security, which has become a key issue in the Capitol Hill budget battle, would be left intact. There also would be more spending on domestic and benefit programs than under a blueprint drafted last week by the Republican-controlled Senate Budget Committee and embraced by Reagan.

The House committee's proposal calls for a $780.5 billion spending blueprint that projects a deficit of $103.8 billion.

Even as House Democrats, led by Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla., were putting the finishing touches on the budget plan, conservative members of the party were expressing their dissatisfaction.

The so-called "Boll Weevils" said Wednesday they will try to forge a coalition with House Republicans — as they did last year — to win approval for a budget more to their liking when the full House considers the issue.

Reagan's budget director, David A. Stockman, told reporters Wednesday that the administration is "working to find 218 people to support a plan that's reasonably close" to the budget drafted by Senate Republicans. It takes 218 votes to assure passage of legislation in the 435-member House.

Meanwhile, White House spokesman Larry Speakes conceded that Reagan probably would wind up supporting two budgets — the one that cleared the Senate Budget Committee and a different House bill "that will have the consensus of the majority of Republicans and Democrats."

The House plan is expected to be considered by the full House the week of May 23. The Senate will consider its version of the budget next week. House-Senate negotiators then would have to work out the differences between the measures that each house passes.

Overall, the House Budget Committee plan reflects the Democratic leadership's view that budget deficits should be pared with tax increases rather than further cuts in domestic spending, as Republicans argue.

Among the items agreed to in the House outline are:

—Deficits projected at $103.8 billion in 1983, $72.7 billion in 1984 and $34.6 billion in 1985. The Senate proposal calls for deficits of $106 billion in 1983, $69 billion in 1984 and $39 billion in 1985. White House and most congressional officials say the deficit will reach $182 billion next year and rise to $233 billion in 1985 without action by Congress.

—Unspecified tax increases of $30.7 billion for 1983, $50.6 billion for 1984 and $65.5 billion in 1985, compared to the Senate Budget Committee's call for hikes of $20 billion in 1983, $35 billion in 1984 and $40 billion in 1985.

—A reduction of $46 billion in the administration's planned defense buildup over the next three years, more than double the $22 billion reduction in the budget endorsed by Reagan and approved by the Senate Budget Committee.

—Restoration of an additional 13 weeks in unemployment compensation benefits that Congress cut last year at the president's request. Money to pay for those benefits would come from lowering the threshold for income taxes on all unemployment benefits.

—An additional $6 billion, compared to the Senate plan, over three years for domestic programs such as education, health and jobs training, and an additional $19 billion for benefit programs such as Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps and guaranteed student loans.

—A 4 percent pay and pension increase for each of the next three years for federal employees and retirees. The Reagan-Republican Senate plan calls for a one-year freeze, to be followed by 4 percent increases in the two following years.

Democrats used their majority strength on the House panel to blunt all Republican moves to bring the outline more in line with the figures Reagan has backed.

The Senate Republican plan calls for $40 billion in Social Security spending cuts or tax increases over three years, a provision that House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois has said must be taken "off the table."

Snelson: Legislation consistent with stand

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Sen. Pete Snelson says his legislation to repeal the state property tax is consistent with his previous stand on the issue despite his opponent's claim that he 'flip-flopped.'

Snelson, who is chairman of the Senate Education Committee, told a Capitol news conference Wednesday he had previously introduced legislation to replace a 10-cent ad valorem state property tax with general revenue funding.

The constitutionally mandated 10-cent levy funds construction at colleges other than the University of Texas and Texas A&M University, which receive funds from the Permanent University Fund.

Snelson said reduction of the levy to a 3-cent tax was an alternative measure to eliminating it.

The Midland Democrat faces Austin lawyer Garry Mauro in a June 5 runoff for land commissioner. Mauro has said Snelson took up the standard of tax repeal for purposes of "political expediency."

The Legislature voted to eliminate the 10-cent tax during the 1979 session, but Midwestern University challenged that action, saying the Legislature could not eliminate a constitutional provision with a statute.

To short-circuit Midwestern's suit, Gov. Bill Clements called a special legislative session for May 24 to repeal the tax and appropriate funds for construction at the affected colleges.

"I agreed to a request by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby to carry this legislation," Snelson said. "I agreed to do this because it is in my area of responsibility as chairman of the Senate Education Committee and as a responsible member of the Senate who has long been involved in efforts on behalf of higher education."

Snelson said he would work in the special session for a permanent solution to the non-PUF colleges' funding problems "provided the governor includes it in the session call."

He said he expects a dedicated fund from general revenues will be the only solution for the 17 who had received money from the property tax, but added, "I firmly believe that the colleges that do not participate in the PUF must reach a mutual agreement on an alternate source of funding and come together to address the Legislature."

His proposal to reduce the ad valorem tax and establish a fund last session won support from only two college boards of regents, Snelson said.

Turning to his campaign for land commissioner, Snelson referred to his opponent as "a self-proclaimed 33-year-old kid."

Mauro was executive director of the state Democratic party and previously served as deputy comptroller for tax administration.

Chiles going after TDC

Like Eddie Chiles but for different reasons, Texas Gov. Bill Clements is mad and is going after the Texas Department of Corrections with "guns blazing," said Midland's Win Brown, a member of the Governor's Advisory Committee.

"He's going to go after the TDC...with guns blazing" to get the state prison to admit prisoners, said Brown, who is in Austin today in an emergency meeting of the advisory committee, which is chaired by Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay of Houston.

The TDC director, James Estelle Jr., this week put a halt to prison admissions in an effort to conform to a 10-year-old federal court order to bring the TDC up to federal standards and to eliminate overcrowding in the system's 19 units of more than 33,000 inmates.

But Brown, a Midland County commissioner, speculated Wednesday that the TDC freeze was politically motivated by Texas Attorney General Mark White, a Democrat who is challenging Clements for the governorship in the Nov. 2 general election.

"It appears that Mark White is the one who started it and is putting pressure on the TDC in an effort to embarrass the governor," Brown said. "The governor's office feels that Mark White is behind" the freeze.

The non-partisan advisory board of liberals and conservatives in the Democratic Party and the Republican Party, said Brown, was to meet at 2 p.m. today in the Texas State Bar Building. The advisory board probably will be "supporting the governor's" efforts to get the TDC re-opened by Monday, Brown said.

"Someone must have really leaned on Estelle to make him do this thing," Brown said.

The nine-member TDC board last Monday voted to close the state penitentiary units to any more prisoners until the prison's population is reduced to conform with federal court orders. The TDC has planned to take prisoners again in two weeks when many prisoners, convicted of non-violent crimes, are to be released early.

"(But) this is uncalled for," said Brown.

Chiles' "mad" campaign was aimed at the federal bureaucracy in an effort to get oil and gas deregulated and to cut back on the government's meddling in the free-enterprise system.

Lightning streaks out of the ominous rolling clouds near Midland Wednesday evening as another spate of thunderstorms hit the Permian Basin area, dropping various amounts of rain. A tornado was reported near Big Spring, causing little damage.

Tornadoes touch down in Seminole, near Big Spring

An apparent tornado touched down in Sand Springs, east of Big Spring, Wednesday evening, ripping a shed from above a trailer house and slinging it across a street, according to Howard County Sheriff's Department.

No injuries were reported.

The National Weather Service indicated late Wednesday afternoon that a tornado was on the ground north of Stanton and heading toward Big Spring at 35 miles per hour, though it apparently lifted back up into the clouds without causing damage.

A tornado also was reported along the Glasscock County-Sterling County Line.

Monetary damage from the tornado that ripped through Seminole at 3:39 a.m. Wednesday was estimated at almost $1 million. Seventeen persons sustained injuries, 10 of them serious enough to warrant hospitalization.

The twister left 12 persons homeless, while several businesses also suffered damages.

Relief aid may be sought by the city, according to city administrator Mike MacGregor.

Some .6 inch of rain was reported in Big Spring Wednesday, while showers also fell on Garden City.

The rainy weather, which brought blessings to farmers, ranchers and lawnkeepers, again may reign over the Midland area if the weatherman's 20 percent chance-of-rain forecast comes true.

The rain, if any, may come in the form of thunderstorms today and tonight.

So far, the year's late-coming rains have brought 3.26 inches of moisture to the National Weather Service's gauge at Midland Regional Airport, and 1.59 inches of that have fallen this month. The normal rainfall through April is 2.59 inches; the normal through May is 4.75 inches.

"We're pretty much on schedule now," said the weatherman.

Tonight's low is to be near 50 degrees, and the high Friday should be in the mid-80s. Winds tonight are to be westerly at 15 to 20 mph and gusty and are to be northwesterly at 15 to 20 mph on Friday.

Wednesday's high temperature was 89 degrees; the overnight low was 53.

PBRPC approves four grant applications

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission gave favorable comment Wednesday to four separate grant applications involving drug and/or alcohol abuse and a grant application for a head start program in Big Spring.

The board favored a $31,875 grant from the Texas Commission on Alcohol for the expansion of the Permian Basin Mental Health/Mental Retardation's detoxification center in Odessa. The grant will be matched with $60,568, which will make the total project cost $92,443.

The Mullins Center recently changed its status from a 14 to a seven-bed detox center, utilizing the remaining beds for supervised transitional living services. The 45-day services and the five-day per week care program will be offered to men and women.

The Permian Basin MH/MR also was granted approval from the board for an outpatient drug free program to continue counseling services in Midland, Ector and Pecos counties. The $101,614 grant will be matched with $67,743 to make total project cost $169,357. In addition, the board favored another matching grant for the Permian Basin MH/MR's casefinding services for special populations. The total $46,163 grant will be matched with $2,198.

The application to the Texas Commission on Alcohol will be prioritized statewide for the project.

In another substance abuse program, the board favored an application to the Texas Commission on Alcohol from the Clover House Inc., in Odessa. The Clover House is a 19-bed facility which provides intermediate care (a halfway house) services to adult male alcohol abusers in the region.

The $14,001 grant will be matched with $30,879 to provide room, board, supervision, counseling, vocational assessment and placement and group therapy for the clients.

In a final approval, the board favored a $314,271 grant to be matched with $76,705 for the Big Spring Independent School District's application to the Department of Health and Human Services for the Head Start program.

16-month-old child run over by car

ODESSA — A young Odessa girl died early Wednesday night when she was run over in the driveway of a neighbor's house.

Justice of the Peace Jimmy Harris pronounced 16-month-old Tamra Kaye Rose of 401 Douglas dead at the scene shortly after 6 p.m. Wednesday. According to police, the little girl had knocked on the door of a neighbor's house at 402 Douglas and was told the family was leaving.

The neighbor, 35-year-old Laquita Wood Clark, told officers she and her 14-year-old son thought the little girl had left and were backing out of their dirveway when they felt a bump and discovered the car had run over her head.

Police speculate that the child, whose mother was home but whose father was out of town, had fallen under the wheel of the car. Services are pending at Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Massachusetts trooper pulls woman from river

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) — A state trooper riding on a helicopter's skid plucked a woman from the Merrimack River on Wednesday in what a witness called "the most amazing act of bravery I have ever seen."

Lowell police identified the rescued woman as Carol Ann Farihna, 40, of Dracut, and said she had jumped from the Textile Bridge over the river.

The rescue came minutes after firefighter Mark Baldrighani was lowered to a rock outcropping under the bridge in an effort to get close to the stranded woman, who had been in the water about 40 minutes.

A State Police helicopter flew over the bridge and swooped down close enough for Lt. David Brosnan to pull the woman aboard.

Four die in plane that crashed in thunderstorm

IDALOU, Texas (AP) — A plane that crashed in a thunderstorm killing four people may have flown into a tornado, officials say.

Wreckage of the Piper Cherokee was found before dawn Wednesday scattered in a cotton field three miles east of Idalou, a community 11 miles east of Lubbock.

"We don't feel the impact (of the crash) was enough to send the bodies as far away as they got sent," said Don Stapleton, chief administrator of the Lubbock County sheriff's office.

Stapleton said three bodies were found 250 feet from the point of impact and the fourth was found 400 feet away. Parts of the plane were as far as 400 feet away, he said.

The victims were pilot Guy Govan, 28, of Wichita, Kan., and passengers Billy Raymond Boice, 38, of Duncan, Okla., Leslie Pshigoda, 34, of Waurika, Okla., and Lola Pshigoda, 31, also of Waurika.

Red Cross sends volunteers to flood area

The Midland County Chapter of the American Red Cross this morning sent a disaster vehicle with two volunteers to assist needy victims of last night's flooding in Wichita Falls, according to Elvis Curb, Midland Chapter representative.

The Midland County vehicle, equipped to serve food to people, was dispatched because chapters closer to the disaster area are servicing tornado victims in Seminole.

Three Red Cross shelters were opened in Wichita Falls late last night, Curb said.

Although no donated merchandise is being accepted, Curb said that persons wishing to make financial contributions may send donations to the Midland County Chapter of the American Red Cross, P.O. Box 1706, Midland 79701.

Persons wishing to contribute to a specific disaster area should indicate their wish and the Midland County Chapter will forward the donation to that area.

Court decision leaves Hinckley fate uncertain

By RICHARD CARELLI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confusion over a key federal appeals court decision means no one is sure whether John W. Hinckley Jr. would go free or be sent to a mental hospital if a jury finds he was insane when he shot President Reagan.

Hinckley, 26, has admitted shooting Reagan and three other men on March 30, 1981. But he has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

If Hinckley is convicted of the crimes, he will go to prison — perhaps for the rest of his life.

But questions about a federal appeals court decision, announced in an unrelated case last March 5, leave Hinckley's fate uncertain if the jury hearing the case against him find he is innocent because he was insane at the time of the assault.

If Hinckley is judged innocent, that confusion could lead to a second legal round in the already-protracted case.

In its March 5 ruling, a three-judge federal appellate panel here ruled that criminal defendants found innocent by reason of insanity in the District of Columbia cannot automatically be confined in a mental hospital.

The decision said the automatic confinement requirement, imposed by Congress and applicable only to the nation's capital city, was unconstitutional.

The ruling said such criminal defendants must be freed unless government lawyers can offer extra-strong proof that the defendants are mentally ill and dangerous.

If applied to Hinckley, that could mean freedom soon after being found innocent by reason of insanity.

But the March 5 ruling involved a man charged with federal crimes only, and did not affect the automatic commitment law in cases in which violations of only local, District of Columbia crimes were charged.

Thus, the decision did not say whether automatic confinement is proper for someone like Hinckley, charged with federal and District of Columbia crimes.

To add to the confusion, all 11 judges of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington recently said they will review the March 5 ruling. That move makes the three-judge panel's ruling ineffective until the full appeals court studies and decides the issue.

A time-consuming appeal to the Supreme Court, adding further uncertainty to Hinckley's fate, is also a possibility.

Some legal experts also have suggested that even if Hinckley is found innocent by reason of insanity, presiding U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker might be swayed by the infamy of the crime to accept some legal rationale for not releasing the defendant.

The Hinckley case has renewed public attention on the long-standing debate over the insanity defense.

Even though the insanity plea is rarely used and rarely successful, it historically has been a target of criticism and a subject of political debate.

For example, the state of Idaho will ban insanity as a defense in criminal trials starting July 1.

Legislation calling for abolition or severe limitation of the insanity defense in federal criminal cases has been proposed in Congress, and is pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Air Force C-130 transport plane explodes in mid-air

JUDSONIA, Ark. (AP) — An Air Force C-130 transport plane carrying seven crew members exploded in flight and crashed in a blinding fireball, and authorities reported no signs of survivors.

Sgt. Deb Cooper, a public affairs officer at Little Rock Air Force Base, said early today that the likelihood of survivors was remote.

White County Deputy Coroner Ray Johnson said bodies had been found in the wreckage, but he did not know how many.

The Air Force said it wouldn't release the crew members' names until it knew if they were alive or dead and notified their relatives.

Witnesses said the plane, on a training flight from the 314th Tactical Airlift Wing at Little Rock Air Force Base, exploded at about 3,500 feet at 8:35 p.m. CDT Wednesday. The plane was carrying seven crewmembers at the time, said Staff Sgt. Joseph Cotton, a base spokesman.

"There is just wreckage there at the site," said state police Cpl. Leroy Davis. "Everything is practically burned up," he said.

The Air Force said the plane was with four other aircraft when the accident occurred about 60 miles northeast of Little Rock.

David Blackney, a private pilot flying abouts four miles away, said he saw the C-130 apparently start to turn when it exploded.

"It appeared to me that the whole plane exploded," he said. "I tell you that thing was like a bomb going off... The flash was so bright it did blind us there, temporarily. Even after the flash died down, I guarantee you could see for 15 miles."

Man hospitalized after Reagan threat

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP) — A Rock Island man was hospitalized to undergo a mental examination Wednesday night after he threatened President Reagan's life, city police said.

Lewis A. Dillworth, 56, was picked up by police after they were tipped off by a long-distance operator, Lt. Dennis Baraks said.

He said a man called the operator and asked for the White House. The man started complaining about the president's proposed Social Security cuts and then threatened to kill Reagan, the operator told police.

Baraks would not reveal the name of the telephone operator.

Instead of putting the call through to Washington, the operator connected the call to the county's emergency police dispatch system. City police were sent to the address that corresponded with the phone number, a public phone on the city's West Side.

The Secret Service was notified of the incident, Baraks said.

Shuttle readied for next launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia is expected to be ready for transfer from its hangar to the huge Vehicle Assembly Building in five days, and onto the launch pad by May 22, NASA says.

The shuttle should be ready for its fourth mission by June 27, said National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Rocky Raab.

"However, that's not the same as a launch date," he said.

Researchers say volcano clouds always around — they think

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

First there was the "mystery" cloud. Then came the "monster" cloud, at least 100 times denser. All of a sudden, clouds are being found encircling the globe in the upper atmosphere, volcanic in origin and potentially able to affect the world's weather.

But, it turns out, the clouds have always been there. Only recently, however, as sophisticated instruments began scanning the skies, have they been getting much attention.

Along with the new technology, a subdiscipline of cloud watchers and theorists has begun to emerge at government agencies and universities around the United States.

ARMED WITH THEIR new and sensitive instruments and spurred by increased awareness of the phenomena, these scientists are trying to synthesize vast amounts of data into hypotheses about how volcanoes might affect the weather.

As in any new area (and some old ones), there is much disagreement. Resolving the arguments is made harder by the fact that the processes involved are global in nature and experiments await the whim of remote volcanoes.

In this century there have been 1,700 volcanic eruptions, and even some small ones put material into the atmosphere. The material degrades eventually, losing between one-third and one-half of its mass each year.

But since 1963, when Mount Agung in Bali erupted, the stratosphere has never been completely clear of volcanic residue.

Scientists do not have much of a handle on volcanoes; almost everything connected with them is a matter of dispute. For example, it appears that there has been an increase in recent years in worldwide volcanic activity, but there is no agreement about that.

"In the last 30 years the amount of volcanic activity has just about doubled," said Reid Bryson, director of the Institute for Environmental Studies at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

Not so, says Thomas E. Simkin of the Smithsonian Institution's Scientific Event Alert Network, which tracks the world's volcanoes.

"YOU SEEM TO SEE an apparent high in volcanic activity that lingers for five years or so after particularly newsworthy eruptions," Simkin said. "It's certainly reasonable to suspect that when the editors of the world are sensitized to volcanoes and grant-givers and people like that have their appetities whetted by a major eruption, you get better reporting in years following."

Simken noted that the reported level of volcanic activity in the Pacific and Western Pacific Basins dropped significantly during World War II, a time when intense military activity occured in both areas. Was the drop, then, because the level of activity was down or because people were paying more attention to the war than to the volcanoes?

"Eruptions may have been witnessed," Simkin said, "but they didn't make it into the scientific literature."

Volcanoes appear to erupt randomly. But a random distribution is not the same as an even distribution. In a random distribution there would be concentrations here and there, which it seems that there are.

Since the mid-1970s, the upper atmosphere has been under observation from Earth-based lidar stations, of which three now operate fairly continuously, one in Japan, one on Mauna Loa in Hawaii and one in southern Germany.

LIDAR IS SIMILAR TO radar, but instead of using radio waves to detect distant objects, it uses lasers. It is therefore very precise and able to pick up tiny objects.

"I don't think it's a matter of volcanoes popping off a lot more than they used to," said Mitchell of the atmospheric agency. "It's just that we are very quickly aware of these things when they happen."

The monster cloud now in the stratosphere comes from the eruption of the Mexican volcano El Chicon on April 4. The cloud — sulfur dioxide gas that eventually becomes sulfuric acid droplets — covers the Earth between 5 and 30 degrees north latitude. It is between 9 and 17 miles up.

"It's a whopper," said Brian Toon of NASA's Ames Research Laboratory south of San Francisco.

Toon said the cloud at least would provide "some striking sunsets for the next year or two," replete with reds and purples. He predicted that meteorologists might also be able to detect a slight cooling in the northern hemisphere, "but nobody else would know it."

Or, he said, there was a one-in-four chance that the cooling would be sizable enough for everyone to sit up and take notice.

Under this scenario, Toon said, "It won't be a dramatic thing that causes great anguish, but there will be some regions that experience cold summers and falls. The growing season will be slightly shorter."

This view is not universally held, however. Murray Mitchell of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration called potential weather effects of the cloud "very diffuse and hard to recognize."

HE AGREED THAT THE most obvious effect would be spectacular sunrises and sunsets caused by ozone in the stratosphere changing color. "You'd get gorgeous brick-red afterglows of the sunset that last up to an hour longer than the normal sunset," he said.

But, he hastened to add, "Clouds that are big enough to produce fiery red sunsets may not be big enough to have any significant weather effects."

So far, there has not been any direct sampling of the latest cloud because it has been out of range of NASA's high-altitude U-2 planes.

But NASA expects to send the planes up in the next few days to gather samples when the position of the cloud puts it within range.

Even if the volcanic cloud lowers temperatures, the reduction might be discernible only as a statistical glitch and only then after several more years' of data had accumulated.

"We'd have to be able to look at the statistics in hindsight," Mitchell said.

In the past, he said, large volcanoes have been followed by a characteristic temperature pattern, which climatologists now will look for again. The pattern consists of a drop of a few tenths of a degree after the volcano, followed by a slow recovery for about two years and then a more rapid recovery.

This pattern was observed after Agung in 1963, Mount Katmai in Alaska in 1912 and Krakatoa in Bali in 1883. If there was any effect from Mount St. Helens in 1980, it was minuscule.

IT IS "TOO SOONEto say" whether last month's Mexican volcano will have much impact, Mitchell said.

"So much depends on what this cloud is going to look like after several more weeks," said John DeLuisi, a staff scientist at the atmospheric agency's office in Boulder, Colo.

Not everyone agrees on the meteorological effect to be expected from a volcanic cloud, however.

Bryson of the University of Wisconsin says that although the overall effect of volcanic dust in the air is to reduce the average annual temperature "a little bit," the temperature actually increases in the summer, which is more than offset by a greater decrease in the winter.

"We are not totally convinced that we know the answer to why it should be that way," Bryson said, "why it makes it warmer in the summer. The only thing that I can figure is that volcanic dust acts the way carbon doxide does — sort of as a green house in the summer."

Headquarters for the Mauna Loa lidar station is at the atmospheric administration's office in Boulder, where DeLuisi said the present cloud was similar to the one Agung sent up in 1963.

"There seemed to be a slight drop in temperature following Agung," DeLuisi said, noting that it was probably a few tenths of a degree, which is about the same as would result from natural variations of the atmosphere.

"If it so happens that there is a natural fluctuation in one direction and the effect from the volcanic cloud is in the other direction, it may obscure some of the signal," he said.

The mystery cloud of several months ago, which is presumed to have been caused by a volcano in the Marianas, is thought to have been too small to have any weather effect whatever.

Its major scientific significance was to make people aware that many volcanoes are erupting all the time (there have been 19 so far this year), most of which go unnoticed by the world at large.

PART OF THE REASON that work in this field is so uncertain is that hypotheses have to be advanced for global phenomena amid substantial gaps in experimental data. Experiments cannot be conducted at will but must await sizable volcanic activity and the proper cloud.

Large winter wheat crop expected this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the way conditions shape up now farmers are on their way to another bumper harvest of winter wheat in 1982.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said earlier this week that, based on indications as of May 1, the winter wheat crop could produce 2.06 billon bushels, the second-largest U.S. output in history and only 2 percent smaller than last year's record 2.1 billion bushels.

Officials said the average yield, based on indications as of May 1, was estimated at 35.7 bushels per acre, compared to 35.8 bushels in 1981.

The May estimate over the past 10 years was below the final production figures in seven years and above in three, the report said.

Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following spring and summer. It makes up about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production.

Agriculture Department says Soviet 1982 grain yield up

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Agriculture Department analysis says the Soviet Union's 1982 grain harvest is estimated at 200 million metric tons, up sharply from last year but still far short of Moscow's target.

Officials said Monday the world grain output in 1982-83 may set a record, reflecting improved prospects in the Soviet Union, Europe and India. Smaller harvests are likely in the United States and Canada.

In its first forecast of this year's Soviet production, the department said that based on current indications, the final outcome could vary by 10 percent either way, placing the grain harvest in a range of 180 million to 220 million metric tons.

The production goal announced by Moscow for 1982 is 237 million tons. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Not since the record 237.4 million tons of grain produced in 1978 has the Soviet Union been able to produce a bumper harvest. Output dropped to 179.2 million in 1979 and recovered slightly to 189.1 million in 1980.

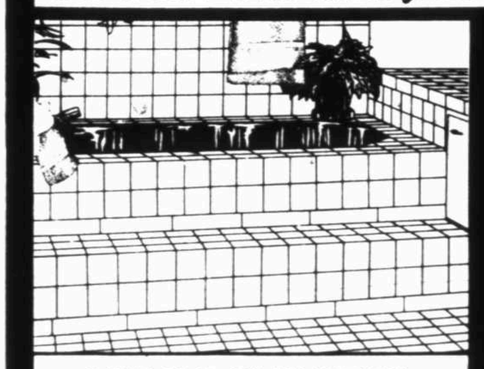

Last year's harvest was a near-disaster, and Moscow has not officially announced the total production.

Ethics of Smith's investments questioned

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's ethics chief questions whether Attorney General William French Smith is setting a good example by investing in two oil and gas tax shelters at a time the Internal Revenue Service is trying to get tough on such deals.

It was disclosed Wednesday by the Justice Department that Smith invested in an Oklahoma gas drilling venture little more than a month before he took office and in an Oklahoma oil drilling venture after he became attorney general.

Neither investment has been placed in the blind trust created by Smith for his multimillion-dollar stock holdings. The trust was formed to shield him from possible conflicts of interest in office.

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said Smith inadvertently failed to list the gas drilling venture, Blackhawk Energy Partners, Ltd., as required on his financial disclosure form for 1980. Both Blackhawk and the more recent oil drilling venture, Yale-Quay Energy Partners, were listed on his disclosure form for 1981, which was released Wednesday.

Smith put $33,000 cash into Yale-Quay in two equal installments Nov. 27, 1981 and March 30, 1982. This investment, plus his assumption of some of the partnership's liabilities, gained him $66,000 in federal income tax deductions in 1981 and $33,000 in deductions in 1982, DeCair said.

BECAUSE PARTNERS in the investment have guaranteed a minimum amount in royalties to the owner of the land where the well is located, they are risking more than their initial investment. That "at risk" amount — $66,000 for 1981 and $33,000 this year for each partner — is deductible.

Smith's investment in Blackhawk was valued at between $15,000 and $50,000, but DeCair said he could not determine Wednesday the exact amount or the total tax deductions which the investment gained for Smith. DeCair said Smith made his initial investment in Blackhawk Dec. 17, 1980 and another investment in 1981.

In an interview, Bernhardt K. Wruble, the Carter administration's ethics chief, said, "You wonder whether Smith ought to do that, because the attorney general is in a position to set an example."

Wruble, now a private attorney, was among several lawyers who noted Wednesday that the IRS during both the Carter and Reagan administrations has been trying to tighten up on tax shelters.

Bob Martin, head of the tax department for the Los Angeles law firm of Meserve, Mumper and Hughes, which prepared tax opinions on both ventures, said in a telephone interview that, based on existing tax policy, the IRS might challenge the timing of the Yale-Quay deductions.

However, Martin said he believed tax rulings in 1980 and 1981 by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals would prevail over the existing IRS policy on when such deductions could be claimed.

Martin said that even if the IRS prevailed, Smith still could claim the same amount of deductions but would have to move some of them from 1981 to 1982.

WRUBLE SAID he thought the most serious ethics question raised by Smith's action was "whether a federal officer of his rank should take what is euphemistically called an aggressive tax position, where you go to the limits of or beyond prior tax rulings and hope your lawyers beat the IRS in court, at a time when the IRS is trying to stop that."

Wruble said a lesser question was raised by Smith's keeping the investments outside his blind trust. "That's not improper if he disclosed the investments and takes no action with a direct and substantial impact on the investment," Wruble said.

DeCair said Smith would take no part in the case if the Justice Department was called upon to defend the existing IRS policy on deductions.

He said Smith joined the two ventures "to make money." And he said they were kept out of the blind trust, because "the blind trust is to remove potential conflicts of interest, which generally involve corporations, so the blind trust is largely stocks and bonds. There's very little potential for a conflict with a limited partnership."

At the time he organized his blind trust, Smith said he and his wife had securities worth at least $2.3 million and possibly more than $5.2 million, including holdings in Houston Natural Gas Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co. and Standard Oil of California.

J. Jackson Walter, current head of the Office of Government Ethics, said in an interview that there is no absolute prohibition on Smith's making investments outside his blind trust. Still, Walter said he would be discussing the matter with Justice officials to be sure there was no conflict.

Discussing the Yale-Quay deal, DeCair said Smith "understands this to be a proper oil and gas investment" but he added that Smith "wants to be sure that it is proper and he plans to look into it to reassure himself."

YALE-QUAY ENERGY Partners, was set up by former Montgomery Ward executives Donovan M. Essex and Norman Trenton of Los Angeles, to drill up to seven oil wells on 198 acres in Oklahoma leased from Bowmor Petroleum Ltd., according to DeCair and documents filed with the Los Angeles County recorder's office in California. It has drilled one well without striking oil.

The Blackhawk venture has found two gas deposits, according to John Deacon, another attorney at Meserve, Mumper and Hughes.

Laid-off steelworkers protest economic plight

By GARY MIHOCES

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Laid-off steelworkers drawing the last of their unemployment checks marched 2,000-strong through the streets and rallied in front of the U.S. Steel corporate skyscraper calling for help.

The rally and march Wednesday were organized by a rank-and-file group called the Monoganela Valley Unemployed Steelworkers Committee to publicize the plight of out-of-work steelworkers.

The rally organizers said the jobless — estimated at 300,000 nationwide — need legislative action to extend unemployment benefits from the current maximum of 39 weeks to 65 weeks, plus freezes on mortgage foreclosures, utility shutoffs and rent increases.

"The main thing I'm worried about is feeding my family," said Bill McHenry, 32, a father of two who was laid off in January from U.S. Steel's Clairton coke works.

"But the only choices they're offering now are to leave the state or rob a bank," added McHenry, whose unemployment benefits will expire in a couple of weeks.

"Blast furnaces are unbelievable. They're a test of endurance. But I'd love to be back," said Charles Vogel, 37, a father of two from Irwin. He was laid off at the first of this year from the Edgar Thomson Works of U.S. Steel Corp. in Braddock. His unemployment benefits will expire before the summer is through.

"I'm barely making it right now," said Vogel.

The American Iron and Steel Institute, an industry trade group, says industry employment is at its lowest point in nearly 50 years.

Steelworkers also want stricter controls on imports of foreign steel, plus more spending by steel corporations to modernize existing plants and assure jobs.

Clements uncertain prison situation has to be considered in special legislative session

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he's not sure Texas' prison problems need to be added to the narrow agenda of a special legislative session even though the prisons have hung out a "no vacancy" sign because of overcrowding.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby met with Clements Wednesday and asked him to open up the May 24 session, which now is scheduled only to consider repeal of the state's ad valorem tax.

Among other things, Hobby wants the state to fund contracts with county jails to house surplus prisoners.

The Texas Department of Corrections is under a federal court order to end overcrowding. On Monday, the 19-unit system's inmate population reached 33,917 and the TDC board closed the system to any more inmates.

The Huntsville unit accepted 14 inmates but sent 54 inmates back to Harris County when county officials tried to deposit them at the prison.

"I'm not sure we need any emergency action at this point," Clements told reporters Wednesday.

Clements said the state Parole Board planned to release 450 prisoners by Monday, bringing the prison into compliance with U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's order.

"On Monday, we will be in balance, and I think we can handle the situation," Clements said.

Hobby said he asked Clements to expand the call for the session to include consideration of:

— Appropriating $48 million to speed up by six months construction of a new 2,000-inmate unit to be located near the prison's Ellis unit. The unit currently is scheduled for completion in about two years.

— Appropriating $7 million a year to allow TDC to hire an extra 400 correctional officers.

— Appropriating about $500,000 to allow TDC to contract with county jails now below capacity. Hobby said he had figures showing that on Feb. 1 county jails had room for about 3,500 inmates, but called those figures "suspect."

Agriculture students hold director, insects hostage

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Agriculture students holding their school director and 15 million valuable insects hostage say they are prepared to hold out until the Mexican government gives the school nearly $5 million in promised funds.

About 2,000 students at the Hermanos Escobar agriculture school in this town just across the border from El Paso, Texas, seized school director Rigoberto Delgado Perez in his office Wednesday in a protest against Mexico's Secretary of Agriculture.

The students say the Department of Agriculture has not kept an agreement signed in March to give the private school 220 million pesos — almost $5 million — and make it a state university. The department now provides about $900,000 of the school's budget.

The unarmed students also took control of an insect laboratory, where the larvae for 15 million predator insects that protect cotton crops live in a special artificial life-support system. They are released full-grown during cotton planting season to eat other insects that harm the crop.

Student leader Hector Reyes said that if the students' demands were not met, they would shut down the insects' life support systems — an action Delgado said could cost area farmers millions of dollars.

The students allowed Delgado to make telephone calls, provided meals for him and allowed relatives to visit. Delgado said he had not been threatened with violence, and had no plans to try to escape.

"It's part of the price I have to pay in this job," he said. "But I don't think anybody has the right to deny a person their freedom, no matter how nicely they do it."

The students at first took about 15 people hostage at the school, two agricultufe offices in downtown Juarez and an insect laboratory in nearby Zaragosa. They freed all the hostages except Delgado.

The students also used buses to block busy downtown streets around the agriculture offices. Office workers were allowed to come and go.

"We're only asking for the treatment the secretary of agriculture promised," Reyes said through an interpreter. "He signed the agreement with the school and he's got to stick to it. We'll stop this only if the authorities from Mexico (City) give a good resolution to the problem."

After the takeover of the school, telephone negotiations began between students and agriculture department officials in Mexico City. Delgado said the government offered about $600,000, but couldn't afford the full amount.

Reagan sees 'serious challenge'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in toasting a president backing the other side in the Falkland Islands dispute, said the conflict between Britain and Argentina is "one of the most serious challenges to peace this hemisphere has known."

"We all hope and pray that peace efforts now under way in New York will yield fruit," Reagan said in a toast to Brazilian President Joao Figueiredo, who was guest of honor Wednesday evening at a state dinner at the White House.

Reagan was referring to the peace efforts of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who stepped in after U.S. mediation efforts failed.

Figueiredo, who curtailed the usual social activities of a state visit because of the dispute, didn't specifically mention the conflict in his public remarks. But an American official said the Brazilian president told Reagan privately that he, too, hoped for a negotiated settlement.

Figueiredo plans to return to the White House today for breakfast in Reagan's quarters and further talks with the U.S. president on the final day of his three-day visit to Washington.

Both men, the official said, "hope for a very early solution to the problem in which there would be neither victors nor defeated on either side but the honorable and just requirements of both sides could be met."

The Figueiredo regime has openly sided with Argentina, which claims sovereignty over the islands just off its coast that were colonized by Britain more than a century ago. The United States, following the collapse of its diplomatic efforts to head off open conflict, backed Britain.

Reagan, however, told Figueriredo in his toast that the United States is "linked by friendship to both countries involved in the South Atlantic conflict."

"For our part," he added, "the friendship of all countries in the hemisphere is precious to us, just as Brazil's is, and we will work to make sure that the inter-American system, on which the peace and justice of the hemisphere rests, emerges from this time of trial, not weakened but reinforced."

Although preparations for the visit had envisioned discussions on matters of trade and Third World development, the senior administration official, who briefed reporters on the condition that he not be named, said the presidential talks in the Oval Office focused largely on the Falkland Islands crisis.

"I think there was general agreement that there must be a resolution of this crisis acceptable to both sides and with which both can live," the official said. But he refused to go into detail, except to say the two leaders didn't discuss their support of opposite sides in the dispute.

"The two presidents recognize that they had different positions on the underlying situation, that is to say on the validity of the claims made both sides, but the overriding concern was the re-establishment of peace," the official said.

He added that several other matters were discussed, including Brazil's opposition to the recent U.S. imposition of sugar quotas and the South American nation's efforts to achieve rapprochement with Angola, a fellow Portuguese-speaking country now governed by a Marxist regime with the aid of Cuban troops.

"I don't think that either president would wish to put this visit under the framework of an immediate crisis situation," the official said, "although clearly they have to discuss this in detail."

Negotiations to begin in Guatemalan siege

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — About 20 leftists held the Brazilian ambassador and six others hostages today in the Brazilian embassy here after the Guatemalan government rejected their demands.

A team of Brazilian diplomats was due here later today to try to negotiate a solution.

No violence was reported in the takeover Wednesday afternoon and later accounts indicated Ambassador Antonio Carlos de Abreu e Silva and the other hostages were being treated well.

One embassy employee, identified as Vera Lucia Faria Texeria, was released after she suffered an attack of nerves and was taken by ambulance to the ambassador's residence, officials said.

The embassy is located on the fourth floor of a commercial building in southern Guatemala City. The building has been ringed by police and troops since shortly after seizure.

This Central American nation's three-man military junta met in emergency session and rejected the protesters' demands, which included publication of their grievances against the regime and the appointment of a joint negotiating commission of diplomats and Guatemalan civilians.

A statement dropped from an embassy window said the group wanted to detail allegations of "massacres, torture, rape, and burning of crops and ranches" by government security forces engaged in a war against leftist guerrillas.

The statement said repression continued despite the new regime's promises to restore respect for human rights.

The protesters demanded that their complaints be published in local newspapers.

The government's response accused the protesters of trying to tarnish Guatemala's human rights image abroad, which it claimed had improved since the junta came to power in a March 23 coup.

The government communique also said Guatemala recognized the "inviolability" of the Brazilian Embassy.

The group of about 20 protesters arrived at noon Wednesday and entered the embassy, which reporters at the scene said was ill-protected despite similar attacks on other missions here in recent years.

Later, a young man wearing a handkerchief mask appeared at the window, pointed to policemen and shouted, "If they come in, we are ready to die."

Other protesters said they were armed, but no weapons were displayed.

The ambassador, speaking through a megaphone, appealed to authorities to restore electricity and water to the embassy. It was not known whether this was done.

The protesters were said to be members of three groups — the January 31 Popular Front, the Committee of Peasant Unity and the Robin Garcia Student Front.

The popular front takes its name from the date two years ago when guerrillas seized the Spanish Embassy in Guatemala City and provoked an attack by soldiers in which 37 people died, including Spanish diplomats.

The peasant group has been linked to the four leftist guerrilla movements fighting since the late 1970s to overthrow the government. The other organization is named for a student leader who died after joining the insurgents.

Evangelist's trip gets varied response

MOSCOW (AP) — Billy Graham ended a controversial six-day visit to Moscow today, declaring he hoped to return for a crusade of Christian preaching "from Siberia to the Black Sea."

The 63-year-old Baptist evangelist antagonized some church leaders back home by asserting he had found no religious persecution in the Soviet Union. Some American clergymen accused him of soft-pedaling the issue, while others applauded Graham's efforts in trying circumstances.

Graham seemed annoyed as reporters at the airport asked him repeatedly why he did not speak out against religious oppression in the Soviet Union.

"I'm a clergyman, you know. Would you ask (the) pope the questions you asked me? I mean, I'm not the pope, but I'm a public religious figure. I sometimes am treated as if I am a politician," he replied.

"I'm a guest here and this is not the time nor the place to discuss it (religious freedom). And secondly, I think there is a lot more freedom here than has been given the impression in the United States, because there are hundreds, thousands, of churches open.

"Here, the church is not a state church, it is a free church, in the sense that it is not headed officially as the church in England is headed by the queen."

All religious activity in the Soviet Union is closely controlled by the State Council on Religious Affairs, which dissidents claim is an arm of the KGB security apparatus. It is illegal to worship in any church that is not registered with the state.

Costa Rica explains its failure to extradite Vesco

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Costa Rica's new government broke a campaign promise to extradite fugitive financier Robert Vesco to the United States for "humanitarian reasons," a presidential minister says.

Medical sources said Vesco, 46, was suffering from a kidney ailment that requires prompt surgery.

Presidential Minister Fernando Berrocal Soto said Vesco arrived from Nicaragua at an airstrip near the Nicaraguan border Wednesday, seeking treatment by his Costa Rican doctors, but was not allowed off his private plane while the Cabinet considered his request for entry.

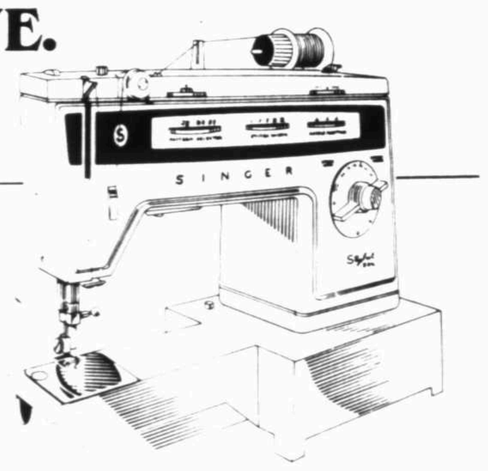

Berrocal Soto said two doctors certified that Vesco needs medical attention, but the Cabinet felt it would be "inconvenient" to have him in the country while the new government fights a grave economic crisis. It is hoping for substantial U.S. aid.

DRAMA IN REAL LIFE

Quick-thinking crew prevents hijacking

By ROY ECCLESTON and STEPHEN JOHNSON
Special from Reader's Digest

The Trans-Australia Airlines DC-9 had just been cleared for landing at Brisbane Airport when a gunman burst through the cockpit door. From beneath his bulky cardigan, he pulled out a sawed-off shotgun, demanding, "Take this plane up to 20,000 feet."

It was 8:50 p.m., Friday, June 8, 1979. Forty-one passengers and six crew members were aboard TAA Flight 552, call-sign Tango Juliet Juliet. At the controls were First Officer John Pyman and Capt. Grahame Mackelmann, both veteran pilots.

Mackelmann swung around in his seat. "We don't have enough fuel to do that," he snapped. Then, following the hijacker's instructions, he got on the intercom: "Ladies and gentlemen, please remain seated."

In the passenger section, a few people exchanged puzzled looks, but there was no alarm. As a precaution, hostess Marlene Chadwick moved Jamie Van Herk, 8, and his sister Tina, 6, who were flying unaccompanied, from their front-row seats to some several rows behind.

Meantime, the hijacker — 36-year-old Philip Sillery — was repeating his demand that the pilots take the plane higher. "If we climb," Captain Mackelmann argued, "we'll run out of fuel and crash."

"I don't care," Sillery spat. "We'll put it in Moreton Bay."

Sillery was unaware that Pyman had activated a secret warning system advising the control tower that Tango Juliet Juliet had been taken. Meanwhile, the gunman's mood was volatile. When Pyman reached to cancel an altitude indicator light, Sillery struck the officer's left arm with the gun. He ordered Pyman to place his hands atop the instrument panel, leaving the plane pilotless.

Mackelmann, ignoring the gun at his head, grabbed the controls. "I must fly the aircraft!" he shouted. As he leveled the plane and executed a sharp turn, the cockpit door swung open.

"Shut the door!" Sillery yelled. "I don't want to upset the children!"

A weakness, the pilots realized, and instantly pounced on it.

"Upset the kids?" asked Pyman. "You'll do more than upset them — you'll kill them!"

"Do you have a family?" asked Mackelmann.

"A wife and two kids. That's what this is all about," admitted Sillery.

A week earlier, his wife had disappeared with their children after his heavy drinking had become intolerable to her. Now he was determined to make the world listen to his grievances.

Mackelmann lowered the landing gear and pointed the nose of the DC-9 at the runway, 500 feet below. Sillery jabbed the muzzle of the shotgun hard into the captain's skull.

Two hundred feet from the ground, Sillery again warned, "Don't land!"

"I must land," Mackelmann said.

The hijacker fell silent, and Tango Juliet Juliet made a near-perfect touchdown, coming to rest at the end of the runway. Pyman switched on the cabin lights and once again the cockpit door swung open.

"Cut the lights!" Sillery ordered.

The two pilots ignored him. They would do nothing until the passengers were released.

Outside, Deputy Police Commissioner Vern MacDonald and 60 police waited in the darkness. If the hijacker fired a single shot, his men would storm aboard. For the moment, they, like the hostage passengers, were powerless spectators.

Inside the DC-9, little Tina Van Herk was crying. Gun in hand, Sillery walked down the aisle and gently told the child he was sorry to upset her.

Suddenly he rushed to the front of the plane and shouted to the crew, "Anyone moves — I'll blow his head off!"

The bright lights in the craft agitated him. He ordered the pilots to switch them off. Not until the passengers were released, they answered.

Sillery relented. He told hostess Irene St. John to open the rear cabin door. The passengers filed out quietly.

This was St. John's moment to make a run for it. But what would the gunman do to the rest of the crew? With all passengers safely on the tarmac, St. John returned to the cockpit.

Sillery ordered Mackelmann to have a tanker refuel the plane. But when the tanker arrived, he panicked and jammed his gun against the throat of hostess Chadwick. "That's the police!" he shouted. "Take off now!"

Mackelmann started one engine and headed straight for the approaching vehicle. Getting the message, its driver swerved off into the dark.

Mackelmann shut down the engine and looked back. Sillery was sitting dejectedly in the passenger section. Suddenly he ordered hostess Esme Qazim to crawl down the aisle. Misunderstanding, she stood up and Sillery grabbed the woman's hand to stop her.

Exploding with fatigue and rage, Qazim swiped at Sillery's right arm and the gun fell to the floor. They both dove for it, but she managed to push it out of his reach. The other hostesses piled on top of the hijacker.

Hearing the commotion, the two pilots came charging back. Pyman jumped on the stack of struggling bodies. Mackelmann snatched up the weapon and hurled it out the cabin door. Racing to the cockpit he shouted over the radio, "Get here quickly! We've got him!"

On Jan. 9, 1980, Philip Sillery was sentenced to life imprisonment. His sentence was later reduced to 10 years.

Computer scientist breaks secret code

By LEE DEMBART
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — A new secret code, previously thought to be unbreakable, has been broken in a stunning mathematical accomplishment that underlines the difficulty of maintaining security for computer networks and electronic communications.

The feat was achieved in the last few weeks by Adi Shamir, a computer scientist at the Weizmann Institute in Rehovot, Israel, who privately communicated his results to several colleagues in the United States, including the inventors of the system he broke.

One of them, Ralph C. Merkle, formerly of Stanford and now with a Sunnyvale,Calif.-based computer firm, Elxsi, in 1976 had offered a $100 prize to anyone who could break the code. A few days ago, Shamir received a $100 check from Merkle.

"I am quite impressed," Merkle said. "It is undeniably a great breakthrough."

The need to develop unbreakable codes has grown enormously in recent years as society has become increasingly dependent on computers, which are hopelessly insecure. It is well known that a determined criminal or prankster can gain access to private records in virtually any computer.

One scheme for thwarting such attacks is to encode the data in computer memories so that even if someone gets in, he can not read or manipulate it.

The projected growth of electronic mail highlights the need for a similar encoding system to keep private communications private.

IN 1976, in a paper entitled "New Directions in Cryptography," Whitfield Diffie and Martin E. Hellman of Stanford University proposed a revolutionary system of codes based on difficult mathematical problems and which — even by the most sophisticated cryptanalysts — would take millions of years to break.

"The breakthrough bids fair to revolutionize the entire field of secret communication," Martin Gardner wrote in Scientific American.

The Diffie-Hellman paper gave a theoretical framework for the codes and two competing systems were proposed to make use of the idea, which is based on the fact that some mathematical processes are easy to perform but difficult to undo. As a result, they are called trapdoor functions — because it is easy to fall through a trapdoor but hard to climb out.

Unlike traditional codes, the method of encoding and the method of decoding are different, so knowing how to encode does not help in knowing how to decode. Because the encoding method can be publicly known, these are called public key cryptosystems.

One of the systems, proposed by Shamir, Ronald L. Rivest and Leonard M. Adleman, who were all then at the Massachusetts Institute of Technolgy, was based on the virtual impossibility of factoring very large numbers into their constituent primes.

For example, it is easy to determine that 55 can be factored into 5 times 11, but it is very, very hard to figure out the factors of a 100-digit number.

Rivest, Shamir and Adleman have a standing offer of $100 to anyone who can crack a code written in their RSA scheme.

ADLEMAN, WHO is now at University of Southern California, said of his group's $100 prize and the $100 that Shamir has just collected:

"It's not the money; it's like getting the ear of a bull."

He insisted that it is unlikely that anyone would be able to break an RSA code. "While there have been incremental improvements in factoring," he said, "it is recognized that no breakthroughs have occurred and none are expected."

The other coding system, developed by Merkle and Hellman, is based on a different problem, called the knapsack problem. This is the one that Shamir successfully broke.

Suppose there is a knapsack that can hold a given amount of material and a collection of objects all of the different sizes and weights that you would like to take with you on a trip. What is the optimum number that can be carried in the knapsack?

A similar problem: Suppose there is a long line of known length and a collection of sticks of different lengths. Can some number of sticks be placed end to end so that they exactly equal the length of the line?

A similar problem: Suppose there is some large number, called the target number, and a series of, say, 100 numbers that go with it. Can numbers be selected from the series so that their sum is exactly equal to the target number?

IT TURNS out that if the numbers are large, these are very difficult problems.

However, if the series of numbers in the final example are chosen in a certain way, the answer can be arrived at easily.

In the Merkle-Hellman scheme, the series is chosen to enable the answer to be arrived at easily, but then the numbers themselves are disguised. An eavesdropper can know what the disguised numbers are, but, because he cannot work back to the original series, he cannot crack the code.

Shamir, however, showed that if the numbers are disguised only once (so-called single iteration), he can always work back to some series that will enable him to figure out the message being sent.

Merkle and Hellman insist that, despite Shamir's breakthrough, their scheme was still very strong for practical purposes because the numbers could be disguised repeatedly (multiple iteration) — as many times as necessary until the code maker felt secure.

"After the end of the 16th round," Merkle said, "the information is totally confused and totally buried and totally hidden."

He said Shamir's work "shows that a single-iteration trapdoor knapsack is too weak. It certainly does not indicate that if you iterate 5, 10 or 15 times that you can break that system as well."

SHAMIR DID not disagree. In a telephone interview from Israel, he said, "The basic scheme is breakable. This result shakes the confidence in the rest. But it is always possible to enhance a system."

Shaken confidence is the most reverberating effect of Shamir's work. It implies that the eternal cat-and-mouse game between code makers and code breakers is not over yet.

"Cryptography is a never-ending game between guys who try to devise codes and guys who try to break codes," Shamir said. "It is just a game that can go on indefinitely."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Self-test for gonorrhea may soon be available

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there any way I can find out if I have gonorrhea without going to a doctor? I don't think I have it but I'm not sure, and I don't like to go to a doctor who has known my family for about 30 years. Do you have any suggestions? — Bill, Madison, Wisc.

Dear Bill: There is nothing presently available, but a panel of scientists has recommended to the Food and Drug Administration that it approve what amounts to a do-it-yourself testing kit for men. If the kit is approved, a man would be able to send a specimen to a laboratory for analysis. The kit would have a code number so that the user would be able to obtain the results over the phone without having to reveal his identity. Some physicians have questioned the value of such a kit on the grounds that it might provide false reassurance and thus prevent a person who needed medical care from obtaining it.

Solomon

In any event since a do-it-yourself test for gonorrhea is not now available, I suggest you see a physician. If you are not comfortable with your present doctor because of your family's association with him over the years, contact someone else. I can assure you that any physician you see will not be shocked by a request to check for gonorrhea.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Six months ago I came to Baltimore for a one day treatment of your new anti-smoking injection in my arm. I have not smoked since and must have sent a dozen people to you to get the injection. What I don't understand is how the shot in the arm helped me stop smoking. When I told my friends, they thought that I was nuts until they recently saw your successful patient on ABC's television program — "Nightline." — B.R., New York

Dear B.R.: It is postulated that the injection which I gave you in the arm released a substance in the brain called beta-endorphins. This is what I spoke about on "Nightline." It is further postulated that the beta-endorphins released by the shot, substitute for the beta-endorphins that are released when you smoke. It is known that beta-endorphins make you "feel good" and some call it the "feel good hormone." The other parts of my treatment that you received on your one-day trip to Baltimore were also important in helping you to stop smoking. They included the diet, which cleanses your body of nicotine; and the instruction that I gave you in behavioral modification to help you with the psychological aspects. You could suggest to your friends that if they are interested they could read more about the shots in my book, "Stop Smoking — Lose Weight."

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am now pregnant and am planning to breast feed my baby. My husband and I have decided to wait two years before adding to our family. Would it be safe for me not to use contraception until I begin getting my period again? — Mrs. A.O., Santa Fe, N.N.

Dear Mrs. O.: Ovulation does not usually occur before the tenth week in non-menstruating mothers who are breast feeding exclusively. However, if you want to be certain that you will not conceive, I would suggest that you use some form of contraception within four or five weeks after birth; about 5 to 10 percent of non-menstruating, breast-feeding mothers do conceive after that time.

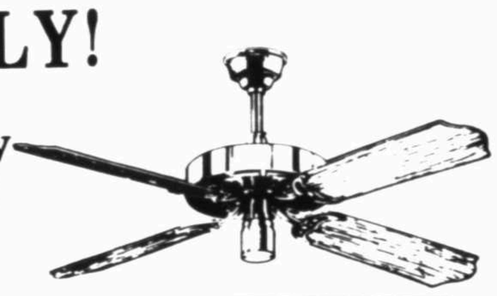

Nursing women who have begun to menstruate again have an even greater chance of becoming pregnant.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

The critical point

As if Texans didn't have enough to worry about with a rapidly increasing crime rate, the state now says it will release 450 felons by Monday and 1,200 others soon to ease overcrowding in prisons. To say the least, this fact illustrates the urgency of the situation already upon the state and the nation.

The coming release was necessitated to meet a sweeping prison reform order by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice which contains a ruling that each Texas Department of Corrections inmate must be given 40 square feet of space. While the state has construction projects now in progress, to meet that federal requirement, inmates must be released to bring the prison system into compliance now.

Furthermore, prison officials say they will no longer accept new inmates until the overcrowding situation can be remedied. What that means is that as the judicial system continues to function, more and more county and city jails will become crowded and in the near future the system of justice virtually will collapse.

The long-range solution to the problem of prison overcrowding, of course, is to reduce the prison population by reducing the profitability of crime — issuing harsher sentences, granting less parole and, in general, making the criminal an outcast of society. There will always be criminals, of course, but the way in which society addresses crime can to a large degree control crime's prevalence.

But the eventual solution will take years and, frankly, Texas doesn't have years to wait. Already there are 33,900 TDC inmates and it's almost a foregone conclusion that in the next few years there will be many thousands more.

Judge Justice's ruling did Texas no favor. But putting aside the debate surrounding the merits of his action, the proverbial monkey is now on the Texas Legislature's collective back. Finding a solution — hopefully one that will not financially overburden the state's taxpayers — should be a priority item in the next session.

Gov. Bill Clements chose not to include the prison considerations on the agenda for the May 24 special session at which legislators will be debating the value of state property taxation and college construction funding. But it's a simple fact of modern-day life in Texas that with each passing day the situation in the state's prisons draws closer to the critical point.

It's time to address that need before we all wake up one day soon to the realization that our corrections system is beyond hope and with it our society is becoming nothing more than the prey of criminals.

Is the rebellion over?

It is not easy for a wage-earner to translate Uncle Sam's spending of some $725 billion in fiscal 1982 into terms that have much meaning to him or her.

But Tax Foundation Inc., the non-profit research organization, has done a pretty good job of it for the worker who is the sole source of support for a wife and two children and who earns $25,000 a year, close to the median U.S. family's income.

His-her share of federal taxes amounts to $6,916. That is more than 27 percent of his-her earnings.

But it is far from all of his-her taxes. These also include federal and state excise taxes, state income taxes, state sales taxes and local property taxes, and in some states and localities, various other taxes.

For a great many families near the median the total bite is close to 40 percent. Moreover, "bracket creep" has been making the bite bigger as pay has been raised in attempts to keep pace with inflation.

No wonder the 1970s was a decade in which tax rebellions had a powerful and growing role in state and national politics. The tax cut program of President Reagan was one major response to the mounting demand for tax relief.

Now special-interest groups and political factions largely responsible for chronic heavy spending and ever-higher taxes are urging new tax increases. They are right in character.

Few Americans are old enough to recall that federal graduated tax of individual income began in 1913 with a maximum rate of 7 percent. A generation later the maximum had risen to 90 percent.

The worst was yet to come. During the fiscal years 1976-81, the federal tax burden on the U.S. economy rose 109 percent. Federal taxes went up 65 percent more than personal income.

If the political factions and special-interest groups that favor nonstop increases in spending for their favored programs have their way, the trend of constantly escalating taxes will resume.

Politicians who are want to push off the tax lid seem to think the U.S. tax rebellion is over.

Is it?

Another View:

A private matter

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." Those are the first words to the First Amendment, in the Bill of Rights, to the U.S. Constitution. Why does President Reagan want to change the basic charter of the rights and liberties of Americans with a constitutional amendment allowing "voluntary" prayer in the public schools? This is 'conservative'?

Why does Mr. Reagan say the amendment he intends to propose "will restore the right to pray"? That right has never been taken away. It cannot, under the First Amendment as written, be taken away. The U.S. Supreme Court, in its rulings on the subject, did not and could not take away any child's right to pray in the classroom or anywhere else.

What the Supreme Court has ruled is that government cannot compose official prayers for children to recite or, in the words of the majority in a 1962 case, put "indirect coercive pressure upon religious minorities to conform to the prevailing officially approved religion."

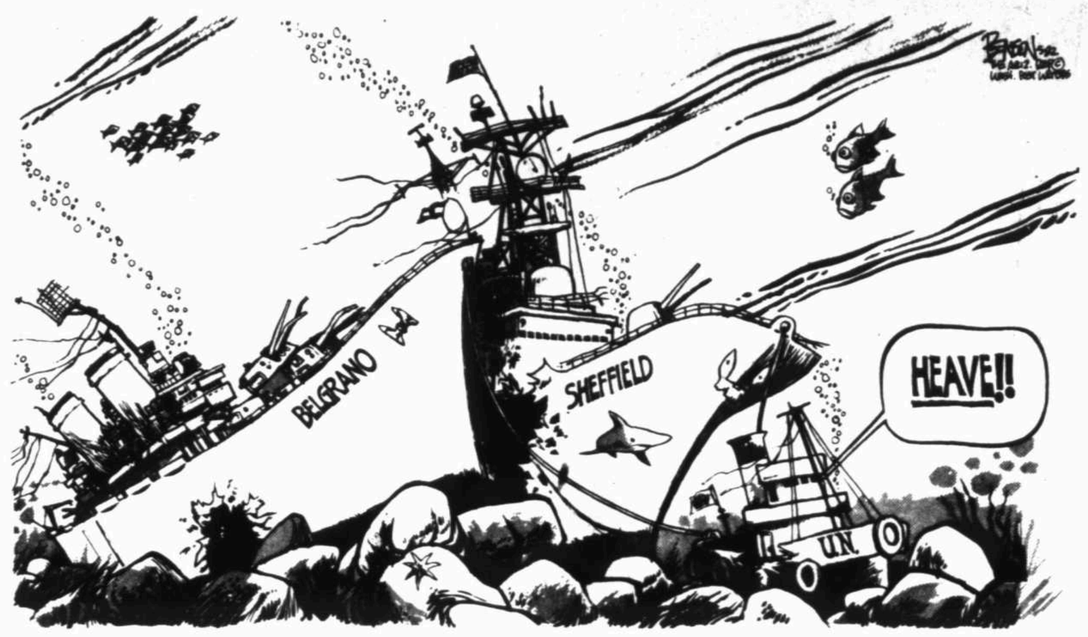

That last is exactly what "voluntary" means. Anyone who thinks otherwise should imagine being in the shoes of, say, a six-year old child, who may not want to pray in school or whose parents may not want him to pray, when the teacher announces, "Now children, it's time for our 'voluntary' prayer," and all his classmates rise and begin to mumble words most likely composed by the teacher or the school board.

In his Rose Garden remarks to some 120 religious and conservative political leaders, Mr. Reagan referred to Thomas Jefferson. One of the achievements of which Jefferson was most proud was his authorship of the Virginia Act for Religious Freedom declaring that "no man shall be compelled to frequent or support any religious worship, place, or ministry whatsoever."

The men who wrote the charter of our rights and liberties were, for the most, religious men (although some of them were atheists). In the First Amendment, they were not trying to squelch religion. Rather, they sought to keep religion free of the intrusions of government and to keep Americans free of the sectarian controversies that had wracked Europe for centuries.

They considered religion to be a private matter between the citizen and his God, if any. They wanted government to be neutral. It is, to say the least, inconsistent for a president who proclaims his desire to get government off people's backs to propose that government invade their souls.

— The Philadelphia Inquirer

ART BUCHWALD

Compromise would keep 'em praying!

It is to the president's credit that with all the things on his plate, including unemployment, a tough budget fight, the Falkland crisis and his efforts to try to close the "Window of Vulnerability," he would take time to propose a constitutional amendment to permit prayers in school.

Art Buchwald

Critics have accused Mr. Reagan of raising the issue at this moment as a sop to his right-wing supporters, who feel the president has been spending too much time on the country's financial problems and not enough energy on the real issues facing the nation, of which school prayer is one with the highest priority.

Whether a constitutional amendment is a solution is up for debate. I believe we should try some other remedies first to satisfy everybody.

The administration has come down strongly on the side of giving tax credits to parents who send their children to parochial schools. It seems to me if this law is passed, a compromise solution to the problem would be to permit children attending public schools to be bused to a religious school of their choosing in the morning, say their prayers, and then get back on the bus and go to their public school to do their work. In this way you would give American children an opportunity to pray, but you would also keep religion off state property. Those on the bus who didn't want to pray could remain in their seats and hit each other over the heads with books.

The pro-prayer people say that the constitutional amendment is voluntary and a child will not have to pray if he doesn't want to. The anti-prayer people maintain that peer pressure as well as teacher pressure will force a kid to pray whether he has the choice or not.

The latter group sees this kind of scenario:

"All right, children, we will now open with a morning prayer. Those sinners who don't believe in God can either stand in the back of the room with their faces to the wall, or hide in the clothes closet.

"Come, you little Bolsheviks, hurry it up so the rest of us can get on with seeking divine guidance. Where are you going, Tony?"

"I'm going to the back of the room. I already prayed at home this morning."

"And you think that's enough?"

"It's enough for me."

"Look at Tony, children. He is a perfect example of a secular humanist. He'd rather stand in the back of the room than pray to God. Does anyone know where Tony is going to wind up with his attitude?"

"In Hell."

"Very good, Charles. And who will he find in Hell?"

"Satan."

"And what will Satan make him do?"

"He'll make him feed the flames of a fiery furnace, and Tony will have to wear a tail, and he'll be screaming all the time and fighting off snakes, but it won't do him any good."

"That's absolutely right, Enid. Who knows what else will happen to him?"

"Blackbirds will peck his eyes out, and he'll have a stomachache all the time and his toes will drop off."

"Very good, Everett. Well, what do you have to say to that, Tony?"

"I'd still rather stand in the back of the room."

"Are there any other communists in the class who would like to join him? All right, Tony, you seem to be the only one. Go to the back and I don't want to see your ugly face until I tell you to take your seat. Now, class, let us bow our heads and pray for Tony's soul! Heavenly Father, there is always one rotten apple in the barrel....."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Analysts say Polish regime has problems

WASHINGTON — Intelligence analysts believe the threadbare military regime of Poland's Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski may be coming apart at the seams. Secret intelligence assessments suggest that the Polish Army itself is showing signs of serious strain.

Jack Anderson

Here is some of the evidence on which the analysts base their conclusions:

— In the violent suppression of recent demonstrations, security police have done the dirty work, while the army stayed on the sidelines. As in other communist countries, security forces are likely to be more ruthless and dedicated to the regime, whether from self-interest or ideology. But the anti-government riptides in Poland make it doubtful if security police can control the population; sooner or later, the communists will have to call on the army.

— The army, however, may be unreliable. In fact, a number of military men were spotted in the ranks of the Solidarity union demonstrators, protesting the martial law they are supposed to be enforcing.

— The Polish army appears to be suffering a shortage of officers. Winning a military commission used to be highly competitive, and entrance examinations were tough. But in recent weeks, the armed services have virtually dropped their entrance examinations, taking just about anybody they can lure off the street. Intelligence analysts interpret this as a direct result of the widespread bitterness against the military since the imposition of martial law.

— In the lower ranks, which have none of the prestige and perks of commissioned officers, the situation may be even more ominous for the Polish regime. The customary two-year term for conscripts was extended last fall, according to intelligence sources. When martial law was actually decreed in December, the length of service was extended once again.

The new recruits may be a different story, though. They are young men who were impressionable teenagers during the Solidarity ferment of the last couple of years. Drafted from factories, shipyards and universities, many of them were members of Solidarity; ordering them to crush their friends and co-workers could be a risky proposition.

— Once held in high esteem by their fellow countrymen, members of the armed forces are increasingly viewed with suspicion. This has created a serious morale problem among both officers and men, and a corresponding resentment of a regime that transformed them from heroes into oppressors, intelligence sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado.

It is a tragic irony of the Polish situation that the cracks in Poland's military machine may lead to disaster, not just for Jaruzelski and his fellow generals, but for the entire nation.

The sad reality remains basically what it was when the democratic "excesses" of the Solidarity movement led to declaration of martial law five months ago today. Indeed, the reality is the same as it has been for the last 38 years: The Russians are ready, willing and able to descend on Poland in overwhelming force if the military loses control of the situation.

The Kremlin may have mellowed a bit since Joseph Stalin's bloody era, but postwar Soviet leaders have never shown any compunctions about striking ruthlessly when their communist empire's vital interests are threatened. It's no secret that they consider Poland a key part of that empire.

Throughout history, the Poles have shown a hunger for freedom that often bordered on the suicidal. Polish lancers charged Nazi tanks and machineguns with incredible courage — and little else. Whether their descendants will decide to settle for the grim but survivable oppression of martial law is not at all clear.

KICKING THE HANDICAPPED: Last month I reported that the Reagan administration was trying to shirk federal responsibility for the education of handicapped children — and was hoping to trick Congress into agreeing, by sneaking legislation up to Capitol Hill a piece at a time.

Apparently there is no limit to the Education Department's bureaucratic pettifoggery as it tries to wriggle out of its legal duty to see that the handicapped are given "free, appropriate, public education." In a mean-minded attempt to keep parents from finding out how well — or how badly — their handicapped kids are being educated, the department issued only 200 copies of its required annual report on the law's application in each of the states. After a storm of protest, the department grudgingly agreed to print some more.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Even in the devastation of a nuclear war, bureaucratic red tape will survive, impervious to blast or radiation. The Agriculture Department's Food and Nutrition Service is charged with providing rations to survivors once a refugee family's recommended week's supply is gone. But according to a USDA instruction sheet, only those foodstuffs available under price-support and surplus-storage legislation will be distributed. And state agencies must send written requests to the nearest intact Food Distribution Division office within 30 days to qualify for replacement of food given out.

GEORGE F. WILL

Political churches increase skepticism

WASHINGTON — When Vladimir Bukovsky, a Russian dissident, was being sent into exile, a KGB agent noted that the handcuffs on Bukovsky's wrists were made in America. But handcuffs are not America's most embarrassing export.

George F. Will

Billy Graham's sojourn as guest of the masters of the Gulag coincided with the anniversary of the Nazi surrender, so he said (according to the New York Times): "I want to remind you that the United States and the Soviet Union were allies at the time against a common enemy. Now we have another common enemy — the possibility of a nuclear war."

Graham did not remind anyone that the Soviet Union and the Nazis began the war as allies, and their falling out was not a Soviet idea. But Graham's delicacy is less interesting than his "common enemy" formulation.

Is it his notion that the threat of nuclear war is a mysterious "third force"? Or the result of some odd misunderstanding, some mutual mistake? Whatever, his language suggests a moral symmetry between his country and the Soviet Union. Evidently they are equally innocent victims — but of what? Physics?

The Kremlin is sponsoring the — take a deep breath — World Conference of Religious Workers for Saving the Sacred Gift of Life from Nuclear Catastrophe. The Kremlin's audacious cynicism is wondrous. A "gift" — from whom? Marx? And when did the Kremlin begin speaking of "the sacred"?

This travesty, this exploitation of clergymen's vanities and naivete, is designed to strengthen the "peace movement" — but only in the West. In East Germany, a new law makes it a crime to wear a button saying "Swords into Plowshares." In Moscow, "Ground Zero Week" lasted the minutes it took the police to pounce on the handful of people who unfurled a banner.

The Washington Post reports that when Graham spoke in two churches, both "were heavily guarded with police sealing off all roads leading to them. Hundreds of KGB security agents...were in the congregation.' Graham told one congregation that God "gives you the power to be a better worker, a more loyal citizen because in Romans 13 we are told to obey the authorities." How is that for a message from America?

According to the Post, Graham is "a star attraction" at the conference and "is being driven around Moscow in a Chaika limousine while others are shepherded around in a fleet of buses." He has conferred with Georgy Arbatov, the Kremlin's foremost stroker of Americans. Graham calls Arbatov "wonderful."

Graham is America's most famous Christian. Solzhenitsyn is Russia's. The contrast is instructive.

When advocates of a "nuclear freeze" recently showed their movie (the one that says war would be terrible) to some Senate wives, Jane Denton, the wife of the Alabama senator, noted that there would be no showing for the wives of Politburo members. Not to worry, Jane. The Baltimore Sun recently reported on two local "peace" activists:

"When the Rev. Hope Harle-Mould and his wife, the Rev. Linda Harle-Mould, returned nearly a year ago from a trip to the Soviet Union, they were struck by the strength of a 'grass roots' movement there against the nuclear arms race."

The Washington Cathedral (Episcopal) has Gothic architecture but trendy politics. One service last Sunday was a prayerful rally for ERA. And here is Bishop John Walker preaching at the cathedral last November: "We must know that all we did between 1900 and the independence of Cuba was designed to make Cuba turn away from us. Perhaps if we had the strength and security of who we are, we might say we were wrong. We might reach out a hand of brotherhood and forgiveness to the Cuban people even as we seek their forgiveness of us."

Forgive Walker's mussy language. (Surely he does not mean "designed.") Forgive the hyperbole ("all" that we did?) in the service of facile guilt-mongering. But don't forgive the intellectual vacuum at the core of his thought — the idea that dealings would be with "the people" of Cuba, rather than with the regime that is their jailer.

People pray for different things. There was a London church where, between performances, an actress prayed to be delivered from the attentions of Edward VII. I pray that some of today's clergy, on the left and the right, will stop acting as though pious intentions are substitutes for intelligence, and excuses for irresponsibility. A crusty 19th century Briton, A.W. Kinglake, wanted skeptical words inscribed on all churches: "Important If True." Skepticism becomes more necessary as churches become more political.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, May 13, the 133rd day of 1982. There are 232 days left in the year.

Today's highlights in history:

On May 13, 1981, Pope John Paul II was shot and seriously wounded at St. Peter's Square in Rome; a 23-year-old Turk, Mehmet Ali Agca, was arrested in the assassination attempt.

On May 13, 1968, peace negotiations officially opened in Paris between the United States and North Vietnam.

On this date:

In 1809, the French army under Napoleon Bonaparte captured Vienna.

In 1888, serfdom was abolished in Brazil.

In 1962, Indonesian President Sukarno escaped injury in an assassination attempt.

And in 1969, more than 100 people were reported killed in race riots in the Malaysian city of Kuala Lumpur.

Ten years ago: Flames raced through a department store in Osaka, Japan, killing 116 people in a top-floor cabaret.

One year ago: The United States announced that Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. would visit China in June, the first high-level contact with that nation by the Reagan administration.

Somalia still guessing whether it'll get U.S. aid

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Since expelling thousands of Soviet advisers in November 1977, President Mohamed Siad Barre of Somalia has sought a close military relationship with the United States. He is being politely rebuffed.

In the final months of the Carter administration, the Pentagon signed a military agreement with Somalia as it sought military bases in the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean regions to deal more effectively with emergencies such as the hostage crisis in Iran.

UNDER THE AUGUST 1980 agreement, the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force would have access to Somali airfields and the strategic port of Berbera, commanding the southern entrance to the Red Sea.

In exchange, the Pentagon said, the United States would sell Somalia 12 Vulcan air defense guns and three long-range air defense radar sets, along with spare parts, training and support, for some $45 million.

So far none of the equipment has arrived in the country on the Horn of Africa, despite repeated Somali requests for delivery, and the Reagan administration seems to be having second thoughts about a military arrangement with Somalia.

U.S. diplomats in East Africa say the deal is on the back burner, perhaps indefinitely, because of doubts about the stability of Siad Barre's government and apprehension that he might use the arms to pursue territorial claims in the neighboring countries of Kenya and Ethiopia.

Siad Barre, a major general who seized power in a coup in October 1969, visited Washington in March to press his case with President Reagan, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

"I don't think they gave him much encouragement," said one envoy who asked not to be named.

The Somalis argue that their 60,000-man army is up against a hostile, Soviet-backed neighbor — Ethiopia — which has an army of some 250,000 men, supported by about 15,000 Cuban military personnel and 3,000 Soviet and East German advisers.

SOMALIA CONTENDS IT is also threatened by an alliance signed last Aug. 19 by Ethiopia, Libya and South Yemen, another Soviet client state directly across the Gulf of Aden from Somalia's northern coast. The signatories said the tripartite agreement was aimed at countering what they called "U.S. expansionism" in the region.

"I think it is quite understandable that the Somali government is questioning why the United States government is dragging its feet," Hashi Abdallah Farah, director-general of the Somali Foreign Ministry, said of the delayed arms deal in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

"At first, we thought the machinery in the United States was slow, but then we began to think perhaps the government has different priorities. Still, we are hopeful," Farah said in the interview in Mogadishu, the Somali capital.

Somalia was a victim of a superpower realignment in the Horn of Africa when the Soviet Union shifted its backing to Ethiopia in the prolonged war over the arid Ogaden region claimed by both countries.

An estimated $1 billion worth of Soviet weapons and the Cuban troops helped Ethiopia win the Ogaden war in 1978.

It was that shift which prompted Siad Barre to expel the Soviet advisers and sever his ties with Moscow. But the expected embrace by the United States was not as warm as Siad Barre had hoped.

After the U.S.-Somalia military agreement was signed, two U.S. congressional committees entered strong reservations about supplying arms to Somalia on grounds they might be used in the Ogaden, which is populated by ethnic Somalis.

Arguing that these ethnic Somalis must be given the right of self-determination, Somalia still backs the Western Somalia Liberation Front which is fighting in the area. But diplomats in Mogadishu say the government now has no regular troops in the Ogaden.

THERE IS ALSO SOME suspicion among U.S. officials that Somalia might press its claim to portions of northeastern Kenya, also populated by ethnic Somalis, and thus cause problems with this Western-leaning nation which has also provided access facilities for the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force.

The United States has access to Kenya's Indian Ocean port of Mombasa and airfields under a June 1980 agreement. The Americans are spending nearly $60 million on a dredging operation to allow access to the port by U.S. aircraft carriers and on improvements to Mombasa's international airport.

The future stability of the Siad Barre government is said to be another factor in U.S. thinking.

When he took power 13 years ago, the former herd boy who rose to army commander in chief promised elections which have yet to be held. His mostly desert country has a wealth of camels but few other resources.

Siad Barre's tribal coalition government has been facing internal dissension and opposition from exile groups, including a Libyan-backed guerrilla movement based in Ethiopia.

Some Somalis and diplomats believe the Americans are biding their time in Somalia, hoping that Ethiopia might break with the Soviet Union and restore the long-time friendship with the United States forged under the late Emperor Haile Selassie.

These observers say the Americans would prefer Ethiopia, black Africa's second most populous nation, to Somalia, an impoverished country of some four million people.

Meanwhile, U.S. diplomats say work is going ahead on refurbishing runways and installing fueling equipment at Berbera airfield in Somalia, and building a cargo terminal and prefabricated storage depot and laying mooring and fueling buoys in the port — even though it is doubtful the facilities will ever be used by the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force.

Casinos not sure 'pac man fever' to their liking

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Video games are moving out of the penny arcades and into casinos, where one day beeping, flashing television screens will be as common as the clanking slot machines of today.

The prospects worry state gaming authorities, who wonder how they can keep sufficiently aware of the high-tech gambling to control it.

Already, the gambling industry is in the front lines of the computer revolution, with video poker and video blackjack challenging the popularity of flesh and blood dealers.

"I would say it's coming into its own now, but it hasn't reached its peak," said Mando Rueda, director of gaming for Harrah's casinos in Reno, Lake Tahoe and Atlantic City. "We see the trend. The new generation...has grown up with a television set. They're tuned in to that."

At Harrah's Reno casino, 234 out of 2,050 gambling machines use video screens, and a greater number use computerized "microprocessors" in traditional-looking slot machines.

Rueda said the casino plans to bring all its machines "on line" within one year, meaning all gambling devices — even 30-year-old slot machines — will report their gains and losses to a central computer.

Casinos favor the new computerized machines because they require less maintenance than the old-style slot machines, with their gears and springs and levers. The new machines are thought to be virtually "cheat-proof."

Probably the biggest winner in the video gambling explosion has been International Game Technology, a Reno-based company which has grown from one man's idea to a publicly traded corporation with more than 500 employees.

William "Si" Redd left the Bally Distributing Co. six years ago to found the corporation, and has seen sales rise from $500,000 his first year to $62 million in 1981.

Redd is now challenging Bally for leadership of the international slot machine market.

Other carriers honoring tickets

By The Associated Press

Passengers holding Braniff International tickets may be in for some delays because of the airline's suspension of all domestic and foreign flights, although other carriers say they'll honor Braniff tickets.

Braniff Vice President Sam Coats said Wednesday that travelers should make reservations with other airlines through the airlines themselves or through travel agents.

Competitors, such as American Airlines, have said they would honor Braniff tickets, with several restrictions.

In Washington, the Air Transport Association that represents the airlines, activated a default protection plan aimed at assuring that travelers who hold Braniff tickets will get standby seats with other carriers.

Flying standby means there are no reservations. A passenger shows up at the airport and flies as space is available.

Under the plan developed earlier this year after the bankruptcy of Laker Airways, about 130 airlines agreed to carry passengers holding tickets to any carrier that goes bankrupt. It was adopted when it became apparent that struggling airlines, including Braniff, were losing precious business from travelers fearing they would be stuck with worthless tickets.

The agreement covers only tickets purchased through travel agents, but industry officials said many airlines are expected to honor tickets sold by Braniff.

Robert L. Crandall, president of American Airlines, said Wednesday night that the carrier expects to be able to accommodate most of the additional travelers.

"We are sure there will be some confusion and congestion initially, but we will do our best to keep it to a minimum. Reservations and airport ticket office waiting time may be somewhat longer than usual. We hope the public will be patient."

American said tickets for Braniff flights, issued by or on behalf of Braniff, would be accepted on American's flights standby. It said tickets calling for transportation on American issued on or before May 12 by Braniff or by a travel agency using a Braniff validation plate would be honored as written.

Airlines newest 'endangered species'

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY
AP Business Writer

Braniff International's decision to suspend flights is the most dramatic result so far of the current slump among U.S. airlines, but the industry has other major carriers on its endangered list.

Airlines are reeling from soaring fuel costs, cutthroat competition from low-cost upstarts, and slumping revenue as the recession discourages travel. The industry as a whole is expected to post a $1 billion loss for the 12 months ending in June.

Airlines are wallowing in a "bloodbath," says Trans World Airlines President C.E. Meyer Jr., who recently told employees that the airline lost money in 1981 for the third straight year. "We're in bad trouble," he said.

Pan American World Airways lost $360 million in 1981. In recent years it has sold its Manhattan headquarters building and a chain of luxury hotels to help pay back lenders.

So far this year, only USAir of the major airlines showed a net profit in the first quarter — $10.8 million.

Independent auditors have recently questioned the ability of Continental, Western, Republic and World airlines to survive.

The 1978 deregulation of the airline industry gave carriers freedom to explore new markets, but those who reached too far are now falling the hardest.

Braniff had been content to spend most of its 52 years serving the Southwest and Latin America. But it began a massive expansion, primarily after 1978, on routes all over the country and to Europe and the Orient.

Braniff Chairman Howard D. Putman conceded earlier this year that the struggling airline was overextended. For months, the company has been trying to cut back to its old status as a regional carrier.

Rising fuel costs have added to the red ink. As recently as three years ago, a gallon of jet fuel averaged 57.8 cents. Last year it hit $1.04 a gallon, and was expected to drop only a penny this year.

Airlines have also blamed fare wars for much of their problems, but can't resist the battle when competitors attack. Discounting broke out repeatedly last year and 70 percent of the industry's tickets were sold at discount rates, some far below the cost of service.

Despite deregulation, fuel costs and fare wars, the recession is still blamed for most of the industry's troubles.

"The critical issue will be the economic recovery — and therefore traffic growth," analyst Julius Maldutis said recently. Maldutis, who observes the industry for Salomon Brothers Inc., sees "significant improvement" in the second quarter of the year.

A failure of one airline could help some competitors but also hurt others in the long run, analysts say, because lenders may be less willing to tolerate continued losses and deferrals of debt payment.

As recently as 1978, industry profits hit $1 billion for the first time as the airlines capped a three-year recovery from the first oil shock and a deep recession, says analyst Charles Hanneman, with the Wall Street firm Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc.

But in 1979, traffic growth slowed, oil prices soared again and the airlines went downhill. In 1980 they lost a record $225 million, then did worse in 1981 with losses of $300 million.

A Braniff collapse would be the first major airline failure since the industry was reorganized in the mid-1930s, after an initial decade marked by barnstorming pilots, daylight mail runs and a horrible safety record.

Analysts see blue skies ahead for some airlines, particularly if they can resist suicidal price wars. But this week, most major carriers quickly matched Pan Am's offer of free youth fares on selected routes.

Delta Air Lines and Eastern Airlines both expressed regret at the Pan Am promotion, but said they had no choice but to match it.

Since '20s, Braniff known for its flashy operation

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY
AP Business Writer

Like most airlines, Braniff International traces its roots to the 1920s, the pioneering days of commercial aviation when air travel was risky business.

When it suspended operations Wednesday it was mired in debt.

In between, it enjoyed a reputation for flashy operations with boldly colored aircraft, turned to fare-slashing promotions and was reduced to parsimony.

Braniff began in earnest in the 1930s, a decade that saw the Air Mail Act of 1935, the British installation of radar along its coast in 1935 and creation of the Civil Aeronautics Board in 1938. In the 1929-1933 period, the fatality rate in commercial airplanes was 1,500 times greater than for railroads and 900 times higher than buses, according to Flying magazine.

The company was founded by Tom Braniff, a Dallas businessman whose brother Paul was one of its first pilots.

Throughout the early years, Braniff stayed in the Southwest although it forged numerous routes into Latin America.

In the 1970s, Braniff began a transition from a regional airline into one whose brightly colored planes served most U.S. cities and briefly such points as Paris and Hong Kong, under the lavish chairmanship of Harding Lawrence.

The recession of 1980 was the beginning of the industry's current problems and it forced a reorganization of Braniff into a more consolidated, single-class discount carrier.

Lawrence was fired and John J. Casey became chairman in 1981, leaving in early 1982 to join Pam American World Airways in New York.

All winter and early spring, Braniff, at the top of every industry analyst's endangered airlines list, had been saying if it could make it to the peak summer travel season, it possibly could pull through.

To generate day-to-day cash, it has heavily discounted tickets, advertised widely, once withheld half of the pay of its employees for seven days, and leased its unprofitable routes to South America to Eastern Airlines.

In March, the latest chairman, Howard D. Putnam, said he was not certain if the airline would be in business a month later.

"If we can get to the summer, the percentage of success rises immeasurably" Putnam said.

Braniff lost $160 million in 1981, bringing its losses for the past three years to $336.4 million. In the first three months of this year it lost another $41.4 million.

But worse, it is heavily mortgaged with outstanding debt totalling $733 million.

Braniff's lenders have forgiven any payments on the debt until Oct. 1. And Putnam has admitted the airline cannot even pay the $150 million annual interest on the debt.

If it fails, it would be the first modern airline to collapse and not be rescued in a merger acquisition by another airline.

The prospects of a takeover are unlikely. Since airlines were deregulated in 1978, one carrier need not acquire another to gain access to its routes.

Braniff's principal value to other carriers is its fleet of jets, some of them aging and inefficient.

Braniff is not alone. The list of carriers whose auditors have put them on the may-not-be-able-to-remain-in-business status, includes Continental, Western and Republic airlines, and World Airways.

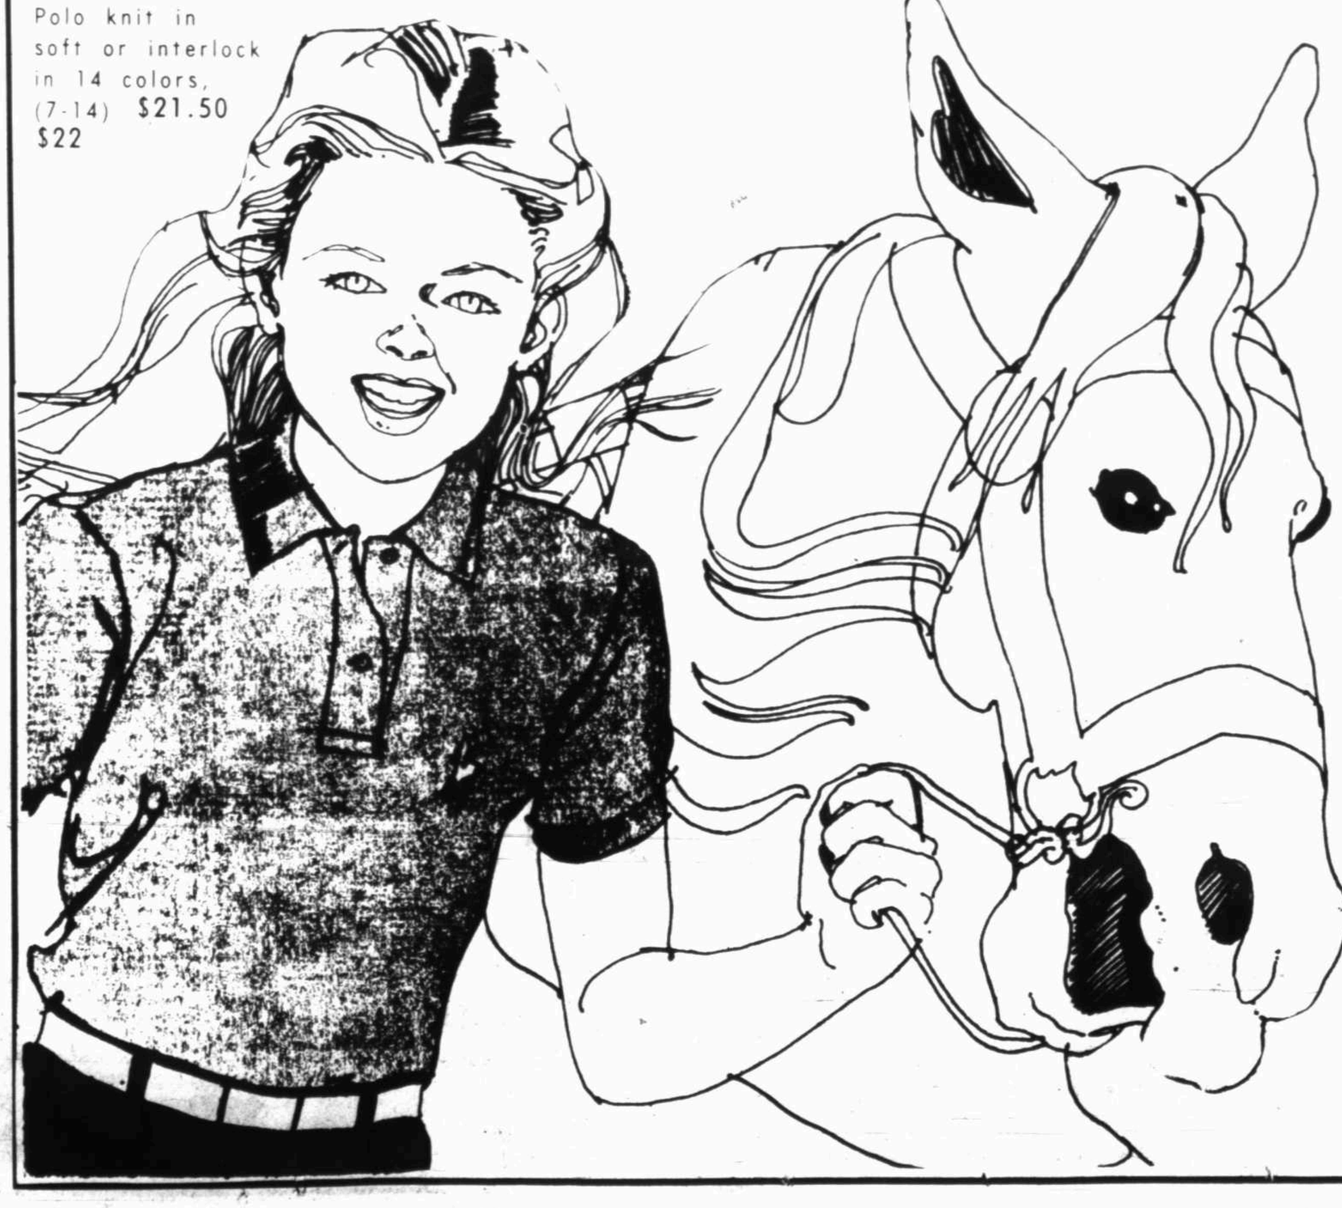

Analysts have said if one airline collapses, it might be that much easier for lenders to foreclose on other airlines, many of which are heavily in debt, with modern jets costing $40 million and up.

...NEW PTA PRESIDENTS for 1982-83 will meet at 8 p.m. today inthe school board room of the Midland Independent School District Administration Building, 702 N. "A" St.

Jim Purcell of Austin, representative from the state PTA office, will speak on how Midland PTAs can be involved in fighting drug abuse, and how other PTAs statewide are involved.

Myra Lynn Thurman, chairman of the Midland County Families in Action group, will introduce Purcell.

Lynn Mashburn, PTA City Council president, will preside.

The Midland County Families in Action group's purpose is to support the family in helping youth make the best possible life decisions. R.E.S.T. for stress

By TRISHA YEAGER
Copley News Service

Stress isn't necessarily bad. In fact, it can be very good, particularly when it stimulates us to seek, explore, create and adapt.

But when stress becomes excessive (I call this "exstress") it can be harmful. "Extress" can lead to exhaustion, headaches, insomnia and ulcers, to name but a few disorders.

So the trick is to convert "exstress" to regular stress; to bring it within manageable limits.

One way is to REST.

Relate with others. Sharing your concerns with a supportive listener releases pressure. Receiving positive feedback about yourself diminishes excessive stress. So does feeling appreciated. A good way to get appreciation is to first give it.

Exercise your power of choice. Choose foods rich in nutrients, especially the B vitamins, and choose to exercise regularly. A brisk walk, a game of tennis or a bicycle ride through the park will make a big difference in the way you feel.

Seek diversion. Anything that takes your mind off your problems (including a good laugh) will reduce stress. However, don't seek diversion through alcohol or drugs; they create even greater stress in the long run.

Try letting go. Here's a valuable lesson I learned as a private pilot: When in trouble, let go of the controls. The plane will automatically resume straight and level flight. This technique is equally effective in combatting stress.

Specific antidotes for stress

1. Go see a funny movie or play, or read a humorous book.

2. Enthusiasm is a fast-acting antidote for stress. Call or visit your most enthusiastic friend. It's contagious.

3. Music soothes the distressed person as well as the savage beast. A friend of mind who's a music therapist recommends that you start with music that matches your mood, then gradually work your way to music that is soothing and peaceful.

Engage in your favorite sport, preferably one that imparts aerobic benefits. Try jogging, brisk walking, roller skating, dancing or swimming.

5. Pamper yourelf. This helps relieve any aspect of stress that comes from feeling uncared for.

6. Pamper someone else. This is even more effective than the previous suggestion. One of my happiest memories is of taking a wheelchair-bound, 82-year-old man to the fanciest restaurant in town for a champagne brunch on Valentine's Day.

7 Do something outrageous. Try dressing up in a costume, interviewing strangers on a street corner or fingerpainting in the park.

8. Do something requiring intense concentration. Practicing your tennis serve, learning to wind surf, and studying a foreign language all fit the bill.

9. Commune with nature. If you can't leave the city, spend some time with your plants or pets. It's relaxing.

10. Read something inspirational. Seeing ourselves within the framework of a larger perspective somehow shrinks our personal concerns.

Checks are a fashion trend

By GWEN JONES
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Check this out. Bill Blass opened his show with windowpanes, so did Geoffrey Beene. Michaele Vollbracht even gave us gingham eveningwear.

Without a doubt, checks in all sizes and shapes are one of the strongest trends to emerge in top-designer fall fashions. These square-shaped patterns, according to designers, are a logical progression from stripes — the current sizzler.

The checkered theme that covers all the newest styles — from straight skirts and slinky dresses to boxy tops and man-tailored jackets — includes blanket checks, checkerboard, gingham, tartans and gun club — a tri-color double-check design.

Other checks you'll encounter are houndstooth, overcheck (a design combining a large-scale cross bar with a regular-size plaid), pinchecks, shepherd's checks (uniform in size and in one color plus white), tablecloth checks, tattersall (colored lines intersecting on a light background) and windowpanes — easy to spot because of the dark horizontal and vertical bars that cross over each other on a soft background.

Oscar de la Renta may be known for opulent eveningwear, but it was his emerald district check and a straight ebony skirt that provided the freshest look in black-tie dressing. Tattersall and Prince of Wales check suits were right on the mark, too.

Although his extravagant, jewel-encrusted ballgowns drew the usual oohs and ahhs, they were rather hohum compared to his elegant body-contoured velvet gowns and a lovely collection of re-embroidered silk tunics and matching pants in purple, beige and bordeaux.

Pearl Nipon, who designs the Albert Nipon collection, used a variation of the overcheck pattern in box-pleated tunics worn over knife-pleated skirts in claret, teal and burgundy silk. Those dainty pleated tucks Nipon is noted for looked sophisticated in dropwaist dresses and blouses featuring shawl and tie collars and scalloped yoke and rounded necklines. Nipon's best eveningwear was the simplest. A black velvet dress with an elongated bodice and slightly flared skirt was stunning, as were silk jacquard dresses in three lengths — long, intermission and cocktail.

A windowpane check was what Blass favored in his daywear collection. Checks cropped up on his long jackets and lean skirts in ivory and olive wool. The jacket to a "Brideshead Revisited" influenced walking suit had a rich-looking tattersall check.

Regulars like first lady Nancy Reagan will be happy to learn that Blass has revived his rose-print dresses for evening. The large floral motif on both white and black silk backgrounds appears in a variety of styles. The effect was totally feminine.

Beene offered some easy-fitting slacks that featured big white windowpane checks on camel, lapis and hunter-green wool. Examples of the best in Beene's bag include a three-piece dinner suit with a berry wool jacket, matching wool challis, lace blouse and taffeta skirt with a floral print and lace-embroidered metallic dresses and a ruby silk birdseye check skirt embellished with lace. The show-stopper was a strapless, nude-color chiffon grown with a lace applique. This gown was enveloped in a floor-length, fox-trimmed mohair coat with quilted and appliqued gold-edged roses.

If that wasn't dramatic enough, Vollbracht's theatrical designs certainly were. His black and white apron check pinafore dresses were among the high points of his graphics-oriented collection.

Vollbracht featured wonderful angora sweaters and matching skirts. Nevertheless, his more exclusive line of beaded gowns and quilted, whimsical evening dresses and matching scarves are the looks that put him in a class by himself.

Like Vollbracht, Giorgio Sant' Angelo dresses the glamorous. Among Sant' Angelo's sparklers were tunics with colorful harlequin checks, double-faced velvet jackets over gold lace dresses and cashmere and silk angora sweaters coordinated with foulard skirts and sashes that wrapped and tied in numerous ways.

The fashion message for fall is loud and clear. After seasons of solid colors and stripes, checks are set to square off.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Care for equipment

HELLO, AGAIN!

The vacuum cleaner has most certainly become a way of life in the 20th century. But, like all electric appliances, if we want to get full service from it, we have to maintain it.

Keep a good eye on that cord and plug. How many of us get literally carried away and stretch that cord to it's limit, eventually pulling it out by force (and usually at an odd angle). That's a no-no but, as I said, we get carried away!

Do that a few times and we end up with a broken cord that can cause a whale of a shock, not to mention a fire hazard. Get it fixed now if it's split. Once you have a safe, intact cord, it's a good idea to use a heavy duty extension cord to extend that cord enough to be able to do two or three rooms without having to unplug it. That's a chore in itself. — Heloise

FIRST BED

Dear Heloise: When my son outgrew his crib, we put him into a half bed that had no headboard.

Not wanting to invest in one at the time, I scouted around the house until I came across the little folding gate we used to keep him out of forbidden places.

My husband spray-painted the gate a bright color to match his bedspread and curtains, then attached the gate to the bed (it could also be attached to the wall with the bed pushed up against it).

It made a very cute headboard. The expense? Just the cost of the paint. — Jane McPherson

UTILITY DRAWERS

Dear Heloise: My silverware drawer always seemed to runneth over and, with just the two of us now, it seemed so senseless to constantly have to wrestle with that drawer.

Solution: I keep only four sets of silverware in the drawer and store the rest in an out-of-the-way place for company.

Plenty of room and plenty of silverware. — Kelly De

SECURE ZIPPER

Dear Heloise: When I bought my husband a new pair of jeans, the zipper didn't have a lock on it.

So he came up with the idea of taking a piece of nylon thread, putting it through the zipper pull and tying it in a loop.

When he zipped up his pants, he slipped the loop over the button on his jeans, then buttoned the button.

The zipper stayed up and I didn't have to return the jeans. — R.C. Bivens

COFFEE BREAK

Dear Heloise: To make a fast drip cup of coffee, simply take a square of sturdy white paper towel and cut it into fourths.

Fill a section of the toweling with enough coffee grounds for a cup of coffee, twist the top and secure it with a twist-tie.

Put this little coffee bag into a cup of steaming water for a few minutes and you'll have a delicious cup of brewed coffee.

I've even gone so far as to make several little bags by sewing up squares of sterilized cloth and filling with coffee, then closing and storing in a jar. — Mary Mulford

+ + +

That would sure come in handy while on a trip.

No lugging a coffee pot, yet enjoying freshly brewed coffee. Anything to make life a little easier, huh? — Heloise

A brief guide to men's toiletries

By JAMES R. GRAY
Hearst Feature Service

You're in front of the men's toiletries counters in a department store or drugstore, confronted by literally hundreds of bottles of dozens of brands. Here's a brief guide:

COLOGNE: The longest-lasting, most concentrated form of men'sfragrance, combines natural essential oils (which provide most of the scent), artificial aroma chemicals, fixatives (providing amplification, blending and staying power) and denatured ethyl alcohol (which carries the scent and rapidly evaporates on the skin). Perfect for all-day wear at the office or for a night on the town.

AFTERSHAVE: These have a lower percentage of oils and alcohol and more distilled water. As a result, they don't burn as much when applied to just-shaved skin. But the scents don't last as long, either. Many so-called "after-sports splashes" are actually aftershaves with a dash more staying power.

AFTER-SHAVE BALMS: Thicker lotion-like emulsions, these have moisturizers to protect the skin and make them more comfortable to apply. They, too, have little fragrance staying-power.

SOAPS, DEODORANTS, Etc.: While many products carry the scent of one's favorite cologne, few actually leave much fragrance on the body. Their primary intent is to do the job intended; fragrance is merely a pleasantry.

Now that you know what you're buying, how do you choose the right fragrance? Colognes fall into several categories based on their dominant ingredients. But since the chemical makeup of a cologne is a closely guarded secret, perhaps the best tester is the nose.

When buying, remember the same cologne will smell differently on different men, depending on body chemistry, the shade of one's skin and how oily it is.

How long one retains the scent also may depend on skin makeup, temperature, the strength of the cologne and how much one perspires. In general, the drier one's skin and the stronger the cologne's essential oils, the longer it will last.

When testing a cologne, try it on a warm accessible patch of skin, such as the wrist. And don't judge by first smell -- wait until the alcohol evaporates and the oils intermingle with body oils.

Beyond that, there are several general categories that may help you choose. Here is a brief summary, based on the Fragrance and Olfactory Dictionary and Directory:

CITRUS: Oils of lemon, lime, bitter orange blossoms, tangerine and the like make these light scents especially good for warm weather use. Examples: Eau Sauvage Pour Homme by Christian Dior, Eau de Gerlaine, Chaps by Ralph Lauren, English Leather and Aqua Velva.

CHYPRE: Oakwood, patchouli, sandalwood, sage, tarragon, jasmine, rose and citrus oils go into producing these rich, heavy fragrances with flowery overtones.

Examples: Aramis, Braggi by Revlon, Givenchy Gentlemen, Halston 1-12, Kanon, Royal Copenhagen and Paco Rabanne.

FOUGERE: Lavender and citrus oils often add an herbal scent, woodsy and fern-like. Examples: Canoe, Jade East, British Sterling, Brut.

GREEN: Mossy, grassy smells with a natural oil base, generally. Examples: Grey Flannel by Geoffrey Beene, Devin by Aramis.

LEATHERY: Birch tar and tobacco often go into these fragrances, which offer an aroma similar to leather, smokey yet sweet. Examples: Gucci Pour Homme, Ted by Ted Lapidus.

ORIENTALS: Oils of exotic flowers, herbs, possibly musk, and fixatives in strong, often spicy, mixtures. Examples: Pierre Cardin, Lagerfeld for Men, Musk for Men by Jovan, Old Spice, Mennen Skin Bracer.

WOODY: Sandalwood and vetiver grass often go into these scents, which remind one of freshly cut wood. Examples: Polo by Ralph Lauren, Aramis 900, Bill Blass, Halston Z-14, Yves Saint Laurent.

Accessories are an adventure

By MARY ROURKE
Los Angeles Times
Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — In the mind of Roberto Devorik, if clothes are an investment, accesories are an adventure. "Approach them as though you're Christopher Columbus," he says.

Devorik owns Regine's in London, where Princess Diana likes to shop. This summer, he's opening a second store, in Los Angeles.

Devorik's London shop, known for its designer fashions, is always stocked with more belts, bags, scarves and costume jewelry than any average boutique. That, says Devorik, is because he equates accessories with cold soda pop on a hot day. "They're what I think of whenever I thirst for a fashion solution," he says.

Devorik's not alone. This spring, fashion experts are advising women to spend more of their clothing budget on accessories than ever before. Some, such as Devorik, say to set aside a full 50 percent of your funds for fashion's fine tunings. They say that a few new finishing touches in a wardrobe can give the illusion of a whole new collection of clothes for a fraction of the cost.

Belts and bags are the basics. And the best-looking among them this spring are oversized but soft-edged. Wide-striped fanny wrappers and pleated-peplum belts such as those pictured here are to tie around a billowy blouse or to accent sleek, fitted clothes. Big, big bags are making a comeback this season.

Sorority for teachers convenes

Kappa Kappa Iota, national teachers' sorority, held its annual state convention at Midland's Holiday Inn Country Villa recently. Approximately 160 members attended.

Activities included a hospital buffet hosted by the Midland Chamber of Commerce Convention Bureau; several business sessions; and a culminating banquet.

Officials greetings were extended to the visitors by Mayor Thane Akins and MISD Deputy Superintendent Joseph Baressi.

Elected president of the state group was Pat Southerland of Pampa, formerly of Midland. She is currently first vice president of Pampa's Gamma Conclave and has been elected president-elect of that group for 1982-83. At the state level, she has served as chairman of several committees, as well as holding the officesof president-elect, first and second vice president and secretary.

Mrs. Southerland is also a member of Delta Kappa Gamma, international honorary society for women educators, and other professional organizations.

Jean Alvey has been appointed state parliamentarian. She was general convention chairman and has served Beta Pi Conclave in various offices, including president. She was also president of the Southwest Regional Council for Texas of Kappa Kappa Iota. She is a teacher at Bonham Elementary in the Gifted Education of Midland.

Another highlight was a luncheon and fashion show presented by A. Blackford's. Entertainment for the Saturday night banquet was presented by The Sundowners. Following the banquet, a reception was held honoring Mrs. Southerland.

Presiding at the convention was Virginia Stone of San Antonio, state president. Special guests were Jacoba Hamrick, national president; Mary Reynolds, New Mexico state president; Phyllis Selders of New Mexico, national board member; and Ouida Biggers of Odessa, national board member.

Members of Midland's Theta, Upsilon and Beta Pi Conclaves were hostesses for the convention.

Games reflect society's cherished values

By ROBERT GARRETT
Hearst Feature Service

Try to imagine a pharaoh of ancient Egypt hunkering down to a game of Monopoly.

Even if you could explain to an ancient Egyptian the rules of our own era's game, the ultimate goal would doubtless leave him cold — if not mummified. Why get hotels on Boardwalk and Park Place, only to lose Eternal Life?

The board games of every society reflect its cherished values, and one of history's most revealing pastimes was the game of Senet. A forerunner of modern backgammon, its popularity in Egypt lasted from about 2500 B.C. to the dawn of the Christian epoch. The object of Senet, whose name means "passing," was for a player to move pieces along a board representing life, before passing ultimately into the after-life — lasting forever.

"The game shows how much they loved life," said Timothy Kendall, a curator of Egyptian art at Boston's Museum of Fine Arts. "The ancient Egyptians went to great length to live forever; in their most popular game they played out those fantasies."

Fifty original Senet boards survive in museums and private collections.

Kendall is a scholar who takes fun and games seriously. He spent several years in the mid-1970s researching Senet.

Four years ago, the museum came out with a modern replica of the game, called "Passing through the Netherworld." Priced at $15, the game has sold only modestly well and has an inventory which is moving at the pace of a slow boat through the underworld.

But as demonstrated in a tournament at the museum, the game itself proved lively and competitive — a blend of luck and skill, not to mention the encouraging murmurs of the gods Osiris and the Sun God, whose spirits guard the final three squares leading to Eternal Life.

Instead of dice, the player uses replica ancient throwsticks to indicate the number of squares he can move his pieces. Each player begins with seven pieces and can block or knock backward his competitor's pieces. The idea is to ferry over the underworld's House of Waters. For a player to avoid falling into the river takes an exact count of the throwsticks and the smile of Fate.

The ancient Egyptians were obsessed with fate and were optimistic it was on their side — so optimistic that they took the game with them into their graves. King Tut's tomb contained three ebony and ivory boards for amusement during his regal journey through the netherworld.

"I always thought that Boris Karloff should have been shown playing Senet in 'The Mummy.' It would have made the movie that much more exciting," said Mona Wheeler, an enthusiast. "I've been hooked on the game since my husbnd gave it to me four years ago. The real value is intellectual and philosophical, because in many ways you and the other player are not really working against each other so much as trying to make it through life."

DEAR ABBY

Attendant steps down when bride stands her up

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Gloria (made-up name) and I were best friends in college. Gloria announced her engagement at graduation and asked me to be her maid of honor. I accepted on the spot, although no date was set for the wedding.

After graduation, Gloria stayed in that college town to be near her fiance, who had another year of graduate school, and I returned to my hometown in the Midwest.

Gloria wrote in April saying she's getting married "in a few months" and she'd "understand" if I had changed my mind about being her maid of honor. I wrote back saying if she was trying to let me off the hook because of the expense of plane fare and the gown, I had already saved the money and even arranged the time off from work for the occasion. (The wedding will be in Gloria's hometown in New Jersey.)

She called last night asking if I'd changed my mind because there was another girl she could ask, but she'd have to ask her before it gets too late. Then she added, "But you are welcome to attend the wedding anyway."

I got the message. I'm crushed, but I didn't let on how hurt I was. I told her to go ahead and ask the other girl.

Abby, I don't think I could bear to attend the wedding and see some other girl take my place as Gloria's maid of honor. Should I try to be "big" and go to the wedding feeling so hurt and rejected? Or should I stay home? — LUMP IN MY THROAT

DEAR LUMP: Feeling as you do, the wedding would be a bummer. Skip it. And use the money to treat yourself to a fun vacation when you're in the mood.

DEAR ABBY: Not long ago, "Exhausted in Plattsmouth, Neb." claimed a record for individual single births.

That's a record I certainly didn't set out to beat, and someone may be able to top mine, but so far I haven't seen anything that will beat these statistics:

Three single births in 20 months and one day. The dates are: March 21, 1959; Jan. 31, 1960; Nov. 22, 1960. — BETTY L. KILBRIDE, CAPE ELIZABETH, MAINE

DEAR BETTY: You TIED "Positively Pooped in St. Petersburg, Fla." but you've both been topped by Mrs. Marilyn Ingram of Portland, Ore., who gave birth to three babies in 18 months and 18 days! Oct. 25, 1957 — a boy; Aug. 24, 1958 — a girl; May 7, 1959 — a boy.

And she signed herself ... "Pooped in Portland."

DEAR ABBY: We've been good friends with another couple for 20 years. We've vacationed together, and our children are friendly.

My husband is a professional photographer. He does weddings, etc. Well, our friends' eldest daughter is being married soon. Her engagement picture appeared in our local newspaper recently and it was obviously taken by another photographer. Nothing has been said to my husband about taking pictures of this girl's wedding, so I imagine the photographer who took the engagement picture has already been contracted for the wedding pictures.

I don't know how to handle this. We're still as friendly as ever and see each other at least once a week. Should I say something to her? Or just ignore it? — BAFFLED

DEAR BAFFLED: Ignore it. You won't be in the dark long. Something will develop.

Queen-size cases from sheets

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

For some reason that escapes me, there are plenty of queen-size pillows available, but not many queen-size pillow cases. Sure makes a problem for those of us who have gone to the plumper, longer pillow.

To solve the problem, I bought a regular-size flat sheet. From this I cut two pair of queen-size pillow cases plus one pair regular-size. They are beautiful and cost me much less than ready-made cases would have — if I could have found them.

Measure 35 inches down from hemmed edges of sheet. Cut along this line. Divide the cut-off section in half. Cut again. You now have two hemmed portions. For each case, fold one portion right sides together, stitch long edge and across bottom in three-eighths-inch seam. Stitch again close to first stitching. Turn right side out. It takes less than 15 minutes.

Cut another pair of cases from the opposite hemmed edge (try to find a sheet with two wide hems rather than one wide and one narrow). The section you have left from the middle of the sheet will be just a few inches shy of the length needed for regular pillow cases. I added a row of 1.5-inch flat, lace trim, then a row of 1.5-inch ruffled trim. I like the results so much, I even added the same trim to my sheets.

You can go one step further — and prettier — by adding trim to towels (just be sure the trim is durable and washable).

Next time you are invited to a bridal shower, why not put this idea to work for you — buy color-co-ordinated sheets, towels and pillow cases and trim them with pretty lace and ruffling. Gives a lot of pizazz to an otherwise ordinary gift.

One more trimmed sheet idea: a tablecloth! That's right. Just cut the sheet to the right size, trim and there you have it. No one will ever know it belongs on a bed.

Bumper stickers

By ERMA BOMBECK

If bumper stickers are any indication of the mood of this country, I think we can expect a revolution before next weekend.

Bumpers used to be reserved for messages promoting causes, sexual innuendos and cute little one-liners to make you smile. Just from reading them at a stop light, you got some idea of the person driving the car. "TAKE A CELLO PLAYER TO LUNCH." "HAVE YOU HUGGED YOUR MISTRESS TODAY?" "HONK IF YOU BELIEVE IN SEX." "COWBOYS HAVE MORE FUN."

Just within the past year or so, they've begun to turn quite ugly and antagonistic. We seem to have lost patience with one another.

"GOD BLESS AMERICA" has given way to "LOVE IT OR LEAVE IT!"

"SAVE THE WHALES" and "PROTEST NUCLEAR POWER" now comes out "NUKE THE WHALES."

"SURGICAL NURSES DO IT BETTER" is countered by "NAVY CHIEFS HAVE FUN TOO!"

Even religious stickers seem sharp and unyielding.

"HONK IF YOU LOVE JESUS" has opponents who retaliate, "BLOW IT OUT YOUR EAR."

"I FOUND IT" has a counterpart, "I NEVER LOST IT!"

"GOD LOVES YOU" is out and "GOD FORGIVES YOU AND I'M TRYING" is in.

I saw one the other day from a driver who obviously took exception to the American flag with the "I AM A NATIVE AMERICAN" sticker. He came back with "I'M NOT A NATIVE" and had a German sticker on it.

"BUY AMERICAN," which admonished buyers who bought foreign products, gave birth to a sticker I saw the other day on a Toyota which said, "I AM DRIVING A JAPANESE CADILLAC."

Right now, the unrest and the surliness are confined to little stickers on bumpers and in rear windows, but I don't know how long the American people can control their anger. When are they going to ram you from the rear?

My bumper has always been arch-conservative. No stands on anything. No cutesies. No spiritual message. Just your basic naked bumper. The other day I pasted on one of those little smiles that said, "HAVE A GOOD DAY."

At the traffic light, a guy leaned out and shouted, "Easy for you to say!"

See what I mean?

Airborne frogs can't see a lick

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — When you see children close their eyes while jumping into the water this summer, they will only be imitating frogs, who must really look before they leap.

When airborne, frogs can't see, as their eyes have been pulled into their sockets. Lower lids close over the eyes to protect the delicate surfaces.

Simplicity decorating key

Copley News Service

Q. I have moved into a large apartment and am planning to spend some time and money on decorating the rooms. I like both modern designs and Oriental things. I would like to combine my tastes in my decorating scheme, particularly in my living room, dining room and bedroom. Please suggest some ideas for combining these different styles. — S.C.

A. Actually, modern and Oriental decoration themes can be extremely complementary. Simplicity is the key to both.

Try combining, for example, Chinese Chippendale dining chairs in a high-gloss lacquer finish with a glass-topped modern dining table. This could visually expand the dining room and provide balance to the heavier pieces of furniture. You could lend a touch of the Orient to the wall through a carefully chosen wall covering — perhaps a light and airy print, compatible with both modern and Oriental furnishings.

Don't overaccessorize a room, expert designers suggest. Often a simple collection of fine pieces against the printed wall covering is all that is needed. Try, in all three rooms, to combine interesting textures, soft colors and classic examples of modern Oriental furnishings. Your results should be stunning.

Q. We have converted our garage into a family room. One wall overlooking an enclosed courtyard is entirely glass. The interior of the room — ceilings and walls other than the glass ones — is covered in redwood paneling. We have casual furnishings in neutral colors in the room — ranging from oatmeal to black leather. We do not need privacy at the glass wall but we do need to cut the very bright light during the winter when the sun is at an angle. What would be a good window covering for this tailored, rustic room — R.R.

A. I would think that matchstick blinds in a natural honey tone might be just right to filter the light and yet let you enjoy the outdoor courtyard. The natural matchstick will give you interesting texture and would be in keeping with the informality of your room.

Q. I have olive green carpeting in my bedroom that I would like to change but cannot because it is too new. I formerly have had a blue and green color scheme in this room with Indian madras spreads on the beds and plain draperies that match the white walls at the windows. I want to change the room as much as I can. What color scheme might I create with the green carpeting, that is different from green and blue? — P.F.C.

A. There are numerous very fresh designs in pinks, lilacs and shrimp tones combined with ivory and pale greens. Perhaps one of these prints would be a welcome change from your present scheme. Consider comforters, shams and dust ruffles for your beds in one of these luxurious new prints. Consider window shades created by laminating additional fabric onto the basic off-white shades. Or fashion tie-back curtains or lined draperies for your windows from the same print. This will allow you to move in the direction of pinks, light orange and lilac and away from green as you can.

Q. My apartment has a huge window that goes from above the radiator to the ceiling — a distance of 10 feet. I love the window and the view and only very seldom want to cover the window. This is my first home and I don't have a lot of money to spend on expensive draperies that I might have to leave if I move. Do you have any suggestions? — R.P.T.

A. If you are a do-it-yourselfer or could become one, why not consider a pair of screens that stand on the floor and are covered in a good looking fabric that blends with other patterns in your room. Fashion the screens in enough panels to cover the windows when necessary. When you want the window completely exposed, arrange the folded screens at the sides of the window.

Fund raisers up in arms over postal rate changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even as federal officials look to private charities to take up more of the nation's social burden, fund-raising by those groups has suffered a sharp blow in postage costs.

Budget cuts have reduced government payments to the postal service, and that resulted in rate hikes Jan. 10 affecting a variety of subsidized second-, third- and fourth-class mail.

"It's killing us," complained Joan Holmes, executive director of the San Francisco-based Hunger Project.

The higher rates have killed Sign magazine, a Roman Catholic monthly that folded this month after 61 years of publication.

AND OFFICIALS OF THE American Kidney Fund say the higher rates may have been associated with the death of a Virginia woman because every dollar paid in additional non-profit postage is taken from those waiting for financial help to obtain treatment.

"The relationship between non-profit postal rates and deaths from kidney disease is direct and real. In January, after the abrupt and staggering increase in postal rates, a woman on our waiting list died," Ellen Kay Hatch, executive director of the Fund, told a House subcommittee.

While she did not name the patient involved, Ms. Hatch noted that her organization raises 99 percent of its funds via mail, and the rate increase meant that in January it had $16,000 less to spend assisting individuals.

The woman, she said, had died that month while awaiting assistance from the foundation. It was the first fatality on the group's waiting list, which grew to about 500 people last fall, Ms. Hatch said.

Subsidies holding down the rates for certain classes of mail had been scheduled to be phased out gradually by 1987, but the Reagan Administration convinced Congress to end the subsidized rate early.

Known as "revenue foregone," the subsidy for 1983 was proposed at $500 million by the administration. However, the House postal operations subcommittee has recommended a subsidy of $913.2 million, which would roll back the rates to the original schedule. The question is now before the House Budget Committee.

Under the administration cuts, non-profit organizations soliciting money now have to pay 27 cents a pound for bulk mail, up from 15.8 cents. And those using second-class mail to distribute publications that contain little advertising saw the per item charge jump from 0.9 cents to 4.5 cents.

The rates for first-class mail and most for-profit magazines and newspapers were not affected, having gone up last November. The January hike did involve an increase for some newspapers, those circulated within one county. That rate went from 3.4 cents to 3.9 cents per pound, or 1.3 cents to 1.9 cents per item.

"People are going to have to cut back on the amount of mail they send out. That's going to affect their returns," observed Clyde Shorey of the March of Dimes.

A 2.1 CENT INCREASE means an extra cost of $2.5 million in mailing 120 million solicitations, he said.

Charles E. Taylor, president of Wilberforce University in Dayton, Ohio, complained that the rate hikes will mean less income for the United Negro College Fund and thus less money for assisting students at his and other schools.

"Without any doubt, fewer young Americans will be able to break the cycle of poverty as a direct result of the sudden and steep increase in non-profit third-class postal rates," he said.

Jane Biral of United Negro College Fund told a congressional subcommittee that the January rate hike forced her organization to cut back mailing by 60 percent, resulting in a decline in income of $500,000.

That, explained Taylor, results in an average of $12,000 less for each member college, and "assuming institutional aid of $500 per student, it would mean that Wilberforce's freshman class next year would be at least 5 percent smaller than the freshman class on our campus today."

Carolyn A. Emigh of the Non-profit Mailers Federation noted that these subsidy cuts come at the same time the government wants private groups or charities to take over more of the nation's social service needs.

Her concern was echoed by the Rev. Gerald Orlando of the Passionist Fathers, publishers of Sign.

"We're asked as a religious group to pick up the slack because of the social programs that are being dropped by the administration and we say 'OK, we'll do the best we can,'" Orlando said. "But then we're clobbered on the other side by higher postal rates. It just doesn't make any sense to us."

The family-oriented magazine, founded in 1921, was closed down with its May issue, despite a circulation of about 100,000.

"I think the postal rates were sort of the death blow of the magazine," said Orlando. "You could probably come up with less expensive paper in the magazine, less expensive color and things, but you can't do anything about the postal rates."

SUSAN DUNLOP OF THE International Labor Press Association said many members of her organization are considering changes to save money, with cutbacks in frequency and combination of publications most common plans.

Kent Rhodes of the Magazine Publishers Association has complained that magazines paying regular second-class rates currently pay 146 percent of the actual costs of delivery, at an average of 13.3 cents per piece.

This means they are subsidizing other postal operations, such as thousands of small rural post offices, he told a House subcommittee hearing.

Because Congress is eliminating subsidies to the Postal Service, the people who benefit from local post offices are not contributing via appropriated funds.

"We believe it is unfair to impose the full financial burden upon postal rate payers to fulfill political aims — and that is exactly what maintenance of expensive small post offices is," he said.

Soviets launch aircraft carrier

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has launched its fourth 38,000-ton Kiev Class aircraft carrier and the head of U.S. naval intelligence believes the next step for the Red Fleet could be a nuclear-powered flattop in the 60,000-ton range.

Rear Adm. Sumner Shapiro told Copley News Service Tuesday that the Soviets put their new carrier into the water recently at the Nikolayev shipyard on the Black Sea.

The 900-foot-long Kiev ships carry a dozen vertical-hort takeoff and landing (VTOL) aircraft and 30 helicopters.

Heavily armed, they boast four twin anti-ship missile launchers for the 250-mile-range SS-N-12 weapon; four twin surface-to-air missile launchers; two anti-submarine rocket launchers, and 10 torpedo tubes.

Shapiro, the director of naval intelligence, recently told Congress what the Soviet Union's next new major combatant ship is likely to be after the fourth Kiev is commissioned, probably late next year.

"There are continuing indications the Soviets intend to build a modern conventional takeoff and landing aircraft carrier," he said.

"Some evidence leads us to believe that work has already begun on such a program. A 50,000- to 70,000-ton carrier, probably nuclear-powered, is expected to be operational by the end of decade."

It has been known for some time that the Soviets have been practicing simulated carrier takeoffs and landings, complete with catapults and arresting gear, at a naval airfield in the Crimea.

U.S. Navy officials estimate it would take the Soviets five years to build a nuclear carrier and get it ready for fleet operations.

All four Kiev ships were built at Nikolayev, which is known as the carrier yard. Shapiro believes the fourth Kiev will be the final one, thus leaving the yard open for the prospective nuclear carrier.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:00 P.M. June 10, 1982, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at the Midland Regional Airport, Midland, Texas.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

This project consists principally of: the construction of an airport lighting control system for the new control tower, including underground control cable from the existing transformer vault to the new control tower, manholes, electrical equipment and wiring in the vault and in the new control tower, beacon control, and other related items of work; and the installation of taxiway holding position signs, including signs, bases, wiring, and other related items of work.

Additive Alternate Number One to the project includes the construction of a remote lighting control system to the Flight Service Station (FSS), including cable from the new control tower to the FSS, manholes, electrical equipment and wiring in the control tower and in the FSS, and other related items of work.

Additive Alternate Number Two to the project includes the installation of taxiway intersection signs, including signs, bases, wiring and other related items of work.

A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid.

Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

This project is an ADAP Project. The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, and to the equal opportunity clause, and the Bidder must supply all the information required by the proposal form.

The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certification of Nonsegregated Facilities prior to award of the contract, and to notify prospective subcontractors of the requirement of such a Certification where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Samples of the Certification and the Notice to Subcontractors appear in the specifications.

In all areas of employment, women and men will be afforded equal opportunity for employment. The employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.

Minimum wages and labor rates for the construction of the proposed work have been established by the Secretary of Labor. A schedule of labor classifications and wage rates to be paid are included in the specifications and will be made a part of the contract. The bid form shall contain a statement that the prices bid are based on such wage rates.

This project is subject to Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action paragraphs as well as all other requirements stated in the Instructions to Bidders in the project specifications and contract documents.

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Aviation, Midland Regional Airport, Midland Texas, at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5414 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703.

Copies of the Plans and Specifications may be secured from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, or from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5414 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, upon a deposit of FIFTY DOLLARS ($50.00) as a guarantee of the safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the Contractor on submission of a bona fide bid on the work, with such plans and specifications; or upon returning the plans and specifications immediately after examination of same, and advising the engineer that bid will not be submitted; otherwise, the deposit shall be forfeited.

Mrs. America 1982 hopes to inspire divorced women

McGeeney

NEW YORK (AP) — The new Mrs. America 1982, a veteran of three marriages in 11 years, says she hopes to inspire women who have been touched by divorce.

"When you consider the statistics that one of every two marriages fail, divorce is a problem millions of women have faced or will face," said Rhonda McGeeney, a twice-divorced, 29-year-old mother of two from Houston. "It is difficult for any man or woman. I hope to inspire women to know that when times seem darkest, one will grow and can determine one's own future."

Mrs. McGeeney was married at age 18 and again at 22. She appeared Wednesday was with her husband of three months, Pat McGeeney, 32, at a Manhattan news conference, wearing a black fur coat over a scarlet bathing suit.

Mrs. McGeeney, the owner of a recruiting firm, was named Mrs. America in Las Vegas on Friday night, topping 449 other contestants. She said it was her first beauty contest.

Gregory

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Comedian and political activist Dick Gregory has a financial problem, but hasn't lost his sense of humor.

He is in arrears on a $96,700 mortgage, foreclosure proceedings have begun, and the house is due to be sold at auction June 9, a legal notice says.

Reached for comment Wednesday, Gregory joked that he "was surprised to see a story about somebody losing his house, when I thought the news nowadays was when somebody can afford to buy a house."

He said he plans to come up with the money before the auction date. He said he got behind on his mortgage payments because of a New Orleans hospital stay last summer.

The Patriot Ledger newspaper of Quincy said the mortgage was taken by Gregory and his wife, Lillian, in 1976 for property on Little Long Pond, where the family moved in 1973.

The property includes two parcels totaling four acres on a pond in the Plymouth Estates subdivision, according to the legal notice.

Horowitz

LONDON (AP) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz is prepa ing for his first European concert in 31 years with a co stant American companion — a personal Steinway.

"I can't play European pianos," the 77-year-old virtuo explained Wednesday. "They're too placid. I like man colors. The piano is like a human being, you have to tak care of it yourself." A piano tuner also accompanies him.

Horowitz, who "retired" from 1953 to 1965 and agai from 1969 to 1974, said he'll keep playing as long as h feels "the devil and the angel" within him.

The Kiev-born musician and his wife, Wanda, who daughter of the late conductor Arturo Toscanini, are sta ing in a penthouse suite at the Connaught Hotel. He will perform on May 22 and 29 at London's Royal Festival Hall.

Horowitz, who lives in New York City, last performed in Europe on Oct. 19, 1951.

The pianist — who calls himself a "Czarist Russian, not a communist Russian" — made his debut in his native land at age 17. After a successful European career, he made his U.S. debut in 1928 in a concert with the New York Philharmonic.

MONROE, La. (AP) — Six members of the rock group Badfinger had their concert tour interrupted by a stay in jail before they paid $250 fines for possession of marijuana found in their tour bus.

The musicians, arrested after a Friday night performance, were first charged with possession with intent to distribute the drug and held on $5,000 bond. All were freed from the Quachita Parish jail by Wednesday after pleading guilty to a reduced charge and paying $250 fines plus court costs, said their lawyer, Steven Hansen.

Arrested were Andre L. McDougall of Rancho Mirage, Calif.; Robert G. Hewlett, 24, of San Diego; Robert D. Wickland, 23, of Los Angeles; David Turner, 31, of Van Nuys, Calif., the band's road manager, Sheldon Safran of Studio City, Calif., and Joseph Molland, 24, of Conoga Park, Calif.

Police said seven ounces of marijuana were found in their tour bus.

Molland is the only remaining original member of the band that was founded in 1968, broke up in 1974 and regrouped in 1978. The original band's hits included "Baby Blue," "Day After Day" and "If You Want It, Here It Is."

The performance in this northeast Louisiana city preceded a tour of the western United States, said concert promoter Chris Roberts.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A junior high student with an interest in noxious plants has won nomination to the county weed control board after a cam paign that included a national TV appearance.

Eric B. Salem, 14, who appeared March 26 on Johnny Carson's "Tonight" show on NBC, finished second Tuesday in a non-partisan primary race that was held to pick four candidates for two openings on the Lancaster County Weed Control Board. The primary was a formality, since there were only four people running, and all will advance to the general election.

Salem received 11,106 votes. He said he wanted to serve on the boarc because of his interest in noxious plants and a news story last year in which authorities said tall weeds may have been a contributing factor in a fata accident, because they created a blind spot at an intersection.

Members of the board are paid $20 per monthly meeting.

MC to graduate about 130 students

More than 130 graduation candidates are scheduled to receive associate degrees during Midland College's ninth annual commencement ceremony at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center.

Speaker for the occasion will be Dick N. Klassen of Nickerson, Kan., an attorney, banker and community college leader in Kansas and throughout the United States.

The Midland College Community Band, conducted by Dan Green, and the Midland College Chorale, conducted by Dr. Michael Jordan, will be featured during the program.

Diplomas will be presented by Fred Wright Jr., president of the Midland College Board of Trustees, and Dr. Jess H. Parrish, MC president.

During the ceremony, Teachers of the Semester will be announced by Lisa Jewell, MC student senate president.

Klassen

Klassen has served as a member of the board of trustees of Hutchinson Community Junior College in Hutchinson, Kan., since 1968 and currently is chairman of the board. He was a member of the board of directors of the Association of Community College Trustees from 1972-1980 and was president of ACCT in 1979.

He also is a past member of the board of directors of the Council of Community College Boards and a current member of the board of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges.

A graduate of Nickerson High School, Klassen earned his bachelor of science degree in finance and his law degree from the University of Kansas.

He is a partner in the firm of Klassen and Wesley, attorneys at law; president and chief executive officer of the Nickerson State Bank; and a broker in Nickerson Real Estate Agency.

He is a deacon, board member and past chairman of the board of the First Christian Church of Nickerson; past president of the Nickerson Lions Club and past Zone Chairman of Lions International; and past president of the Nickerson Chamber of Commerce. He also is active in American Red Cross, Boy Scouts of America, Kansas Bankers Association and Kansas Bar Association.

Candidates for Associate of Arts degrees are Julio Castillo with honors, Mary Ann Cathey with honors, Lynette Gay Hardin, Bonnie Brown Marrs, Kim Quinn, Carolina Salazar and Paula M. Terrier.

Wesleyan students continue sit-in MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — A group of Wesleyan College students who had vowed to occupy administration offices for a 150-hour sit-in to protest admission policies moved to a hallway overnight to avoid a confrontation.

The students moved out of the offices of the Wesleyan treasurer and associate treasurer in the adminstration building Wednesday evening after occupying them most of the business day.

"Our continued presence inside (the private offices) risked obscuring the issue of aid-blind admissions by focusing the attention on our right to protest in this manner," the protesting students said in a statement.

They followed a directive from the college's Student Judiciary Board that they leave.

About 20 students took part in the demonstration. As many as 14 students occupied the treasurers' offices during the day Wednesday.

The administration responded by limiting access to the protest area — locking doors and not allowing anyone to enter the office.

The students said they are seeking reinstatement of an admissions policy that applicants be given equal consideration whether or not they need financial aid.

The students contend the policy invites a broader spectrum of stuents to the private school on 2,600 students in central Connecticut.

Wesleyan spokesman Bobby Wayne Clark called the demonstration "inapprotriate...unfortunate and unnecessary. The university will evaluate events as they occur and respond as appropriate within our customs and codes."

The school's code of conduct permits sit-ins and similar protests as long as they are not obstructive.

The trustees revoked the "aid-blind" admissions policy Feb. 6 after a committee of students, faculty and administrators recommended that financial aid expenditures be controlled because of cutbacks in federal student assistance programs.

It costs $11,450 on average to attend Wesleyan for the 1982-83 school year.

Cash give-away wins him friends

LAFRANCE, S.C. (AP) — A 10-year-old boy became the most popular student at an elementary school when he handed out $5,000 in cash that he found in an envelope at his home, officials said.

The incident began Tuesday morning when the youngster, whose name was not released, began passing out $50 and $100 bills to classmates at the LaFrance Elementary School, according to Lt. David Crenshaw, a spokesman for the Anderson County Sheriff's Department.

The giveaway came to a grinding halt when a teacher — who realized that several youngsters had suddenly become very rich — telephoned the sheriff's department.

"It appears that the boy's grandfather came to visit," Crenshaw said. "This weekend, the boy apparently took an envelope full of cash from the grandfather, and Tuesday, he started giving it away."

Deputies recovered about $3,500 of the money and returned it to the owner, who was also not identified, Crenshaw said.

"There were no charges filed," he added, "but there will probably be a 10-year-old boy taking his meals on the mantle for a while."

Films with 'no X, lot of sex' kept off Odessa cable service

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — The Odessa City Council has approved a new cable franchise after obtaining assurances that shows with "no X, but a lot of sex" will not be aired.

The council Tuesday approved a franchise for Cable TV of West Odessa, but insisted that company owners agree not to show Escapade programs, which had been opposed by an anti-pornography group called Odessans for Decency.

Jack Braziel, owner of the West Odessa cable firm, said Escapade is the kind of program that is "no X, but a lot of sex."

Group members provided taped segments of Escapade programs, including "Naughty Girls on the Loose," for the council members' viewing at City Hall. The group members said if Escapade were allowed on cable TV in Odessa, it might be viewed by unsuspecting children.

"I found it to be nothing but garbage and trash," Councilman Keith Weddell said Tuesday after council members watched a private showing of excerpts from "Escapade" programming.

"If you've seen one naked hooker, you've seen 'em all," he said.

Councilman Houston Seabolt questioned whether the council should be involved in deciding what was appropriate for people to watch.

"There's been a question in my mind all through this thing as to whether or not we as local legislators can tell people what they can watch and what they cannot watch on TV," he said.

Lawrence Butler, an attorney representing the cable company, said Escapade was no more X-rated than some Home Box Office shows. He said X-rated programs are those which "show the actual sex act on screen," unlike Escapade.

San Jacinto awards academic honors

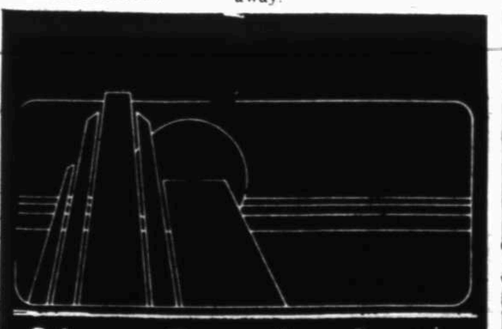

Thirteen San Jacinto Junior High School students were recognized for academic excellence in an awards program Monday at San Jacinto.

Carlos Pina was the recipient of the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizenship Medal. The award is given to the most outstanding citizen in the class based on the qualities of honor, service, courage, leadership and patriotism.

Janna Pilgreen and Noel McCarthy, eighth graders, received the American Legion School Award from J.R. Hudson, American Legion representative. The students were judged on honor, courage, scholarship, leadership and service.

Fricke: Her voice is known even if her face isn't

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Security is tight during an Alabama concert, with no one allowed backstage except for the guards, the performers and those limited few with backstage passes.

The man had none of the above credentials. No one knew where he came from, he just seemed to appear onstage out of nowhere. Walking over to Janie Fricke while she was singing, he tapped her on the shoulder and said, "I want to sing a song with you."

Not knowing quite what to say, Miss Fricke responded, "How about later on?"

While she was trying to decide who he was, where he came from and what to do about him, Miss Fricke's manager Randy Jackson "came up and escorted him off stage," Miss Fricke said in a recent telephone interview prior to Sunday's sold-out Chaparral Center Alabama concert. Miss Fricke will lead off the 7 p.m. performance.

She laughed about the episode while admitting it was a most "unusual moment.

"I didn't know how to handle it, so I just went right on to the next song," she added.

Miss Fricke was calling last week from Nashville, Tenn., where she was doing a taping session for television's "That Nashville Music." From there, she was to perform two concerts with Alabama, returning to her Dallas home Sunday and a benefit concert with Mo Bandy and Razzy Bailey at Billy Bob's in Fort Worth. She returns to the road Friday for three days of Texas concerts with Alabama.

Of the Alabama concerts she said, "They're selling out everywhere. The group is hot right now. To be a part of the tour is good for my career. The exposure is great."

Exposure is something Miss Fricke's many distinct singing voices have had an abundance of for the last 10 years. Miss Fricke has not.

A number of her voices are heard by Americans in commercial jingles, such as, "Fly the friendly skies of United," "A Coke and a smile," "Me and my RC," "Red Lobster, for the seafood lover in you," "Head for Busch beer," and many more. It is also the backup voice on more than 5,000 recordings with, among others, Elvis Presley, Loretta Lynn, Eddie Rabbitt, Crystal Gayle, Tanya Tucker, Charlie Pride and Johnny Duncan.

In 1977, Columbia Records approached Miss Fricke with an offer to record as a solo artist. She didn't turn it down.

In 1978, she was voted by both Billboard and Cashbox music trade publications as the "Top New Female Vocalist." In 1978 and 1979, she was nominated by the Country Music Association for "Female Vocalist of the Year." She also was awarded the "Best New Female Vocalist of the Year" award by Music City News, a fan-oriented country publication. She has been nominated again this year and will be a part of television's June 7 Music City News Award Show.

Today, she is known by her country fans for her hits "Down to My Last Broken Heart," "Pride," "I'll Need Someone to Hold Me (When I Cry)" and "Do Me With Love."

Her face is still not well known.

In January of this year, two hours before she was to open an Alabama concert in Mississippi, she was asked by a security guard to leave the coliseum. He didn't know her face. When she told him who she was, he didn't know the name. His request remained the same.

She has been referred to by some as the "reluctant star" because of the slow climb of her solo career. Actually, she was torn between leaving the security of commercial studio work behind for the decidedly more uncertain world of performing as a solo artist.

"I like all of it — studio work, working on albums, commercials, road work, touring, TV tapings and dealing with the press," Miss Fricke said.

Although she still does some commercial work "as a safety thing," Miss Fricke said she now has made a commitment to her solo career.

"It's a very exciting business to be in," she said.

Love helped her make the choice.

I'm engaged to my manager and booking agent — Randy Jackson — he's a Texan. That's why I moved to Dallas from Nashville. Now I can be a Texan, too," she said. The two plan to be married "sometime in 1982."

When asked about how she feels about leaving behind the studio career she developed, Miss Fricke said, "When I used to sing commercials, I had to change my voice a lot for the clients. I don't have to do that any more."

Producer adapts theater to television screen

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — The pay-cable TV networks are in a mad rush for rights to the best of Broadway, and that means plenty of business for Bill Siegler, a master at adapting theater to the small screen.

"Television, I think, shouldn't be treated as a recording apparatus when it comes to theater," says Siegler, suggesting a personal philosophy. "What I do should be treated as a re-interpretive process.

"Certain kinds of plays," he says, "need to be taken out of the proscenium theater and treated in television terms. A play like 'Piaf,' for example, used very little space. In one sense, it was perfect for the proscenium stage, and we shot a performance of the play.

"But that afternoon," he says, "we had Jane Lapotaire, who played the lead, do her songs on the stage, with spotlights and different camera angles, to give that aspect of the play more of a contemporary, concert-like appearance.

"So for us, there were two elements to the play — the basic drama and her performance," Siegler says of the production that The Entertainment Channel, RCA's new pay-TV service scheduled to premiere in June, will offer subscribers later this year.

In Siegler's practiced eye, good theater doesn't necessarily make good television, but bad theater can be good TV. Consider two of his most recent productions, "The Country Girl" and "Murder Among Friends":

CLIFFORD ODETS' "The Country Girl," which premieres on Showtime tonight, is a Broadway classic, first performed in 1950 at the Lyceum Theater, with Uta Hagen. "Murder Among Friends," starring Sally Kellerman and Leslie Nielsen, was a flop on Broadway not long ago that, Siegler says, "we turned into a great teleplay" for Showtime last April.

Broadway has been a direct source of material for the exploding pay-TV industry for only a year or two, and Siegler has emerged as the foremost producer of the hybrid art form.

His credits include recent productions as well as revivals — "Eubie," "Little Johnny Jones," "Hold Me," "Mornings at Seven," all for Showtime, "Emlyn Williams as Charles Dickens Growing Up," "Piaf," "A Christmas Carol," all for The Entertainment Channel catalogue.

"In deciding what to do, I'm going back to my own beginnings, in a way," Siegler says, "and asking myself, 'What turns me on about the theater?'

"The literature of the play was what really got me interested in the theater," he says, "the relationships that someone cleverer than me was able to put together.

"I might disagree with what some of my competition is doing, but the audience is accepting them, and I hope they'll accept me. 'Country Girl' has been met with some derision by the critics, but it's mine, and I wanted to do it."

Siegler, with background in both TV and the theater, spent two years producing shows like "David Brenner Returns" and "Redd Foxx" for HBO before leaving the pay-cable giant in 1979 to set up Bill Siegler Productions.

Chief of Disney's sound effects has bagful of sonic illusions

James McDonald is modest about the little voice that played such a big part in the childhood of millions of people. "Mickey is really quite easy if you get into falsetto," said the normally baritonal McDonald. "The other trick is an embarrassed little giggle."

Suddenly, there was Mickey Mouse — "Heh, heh, hello folks."

McDonald, chief of sound effects at the Disney studio for 48 years, has a suitcase full of fool-the-ear tricks. Unlike other magicians, he explained how he accomplished the sonic illusions in films from "Snow White" to "The Fox and the Hounds."

Abracadabra! He blew into the glass chimney of an alcohol lamp and suddenly you heard the fiercesome growls of a bear. Presto! A piece of rubber tubing and a large wire spool covered with thin rubber produced the annoying buzz of a fly. Bibbidy-bobbidy-boo! He tapped two coconut halves on a drum-head to simulate the sound of a horse's hooves.

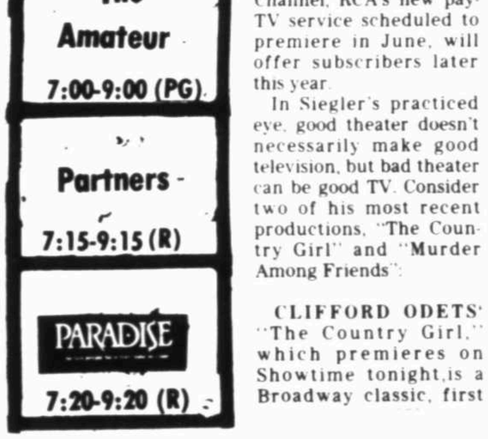

And, mind you, this horse has the requisite four feet — not three — the way most sound effects people do it.

Then McDonald obliged with his voices: a husky, stuttering, not-very-bright little voice took one back to the scullery in "Cinderella" as one recognized Gus, one of Cinderella's mice friends. Allergic wheezing recalled Sneezy and a swallow brought back to life the otherwise mute Dopey — both from "Snow White."

Odessan violinist guests with West Texas Youth Orchestra

Violinist Denise Couch of Odessa will perform a solo for the first concert of the West Texas Youth Orchestra being held at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium at Midland College. The concert is free and open to the public.

Miss Couch, a former student of Dorothy Croft of Odessa, is a former member of the Midland-Odessa Symphony. She is now completing her first year at The University of Houston, where she is studying violin with Fredell Lack. Miss Couch will play the first and fourth movements of Edouard Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole for Violin and Orchestra.

The Youth Orchestra also will perform Haydn's Symphony No. 28 in A Major.

The Youth Orchestra was formed in December of 1981, with auditions held in February of this year. Purpose of the orchestra is to give young musicians from the Permian Basin an opportunity to work together. The orchestra is conducted by Brian Groner, a graduate of Michigan State University's School of Music and a former member of the Oklahoma Symphony Orchestra and the Grand Rapids Symphony Orchestra.

A reception will follow the performance.

Lee relay team treks to state

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Friday and Saturday at Austin's Memorial Stadium the state's best track athletes will gather for their final performance of the year in the all-important state meet for classes A through 5A, but one wonders if Midland Lee's 1600 meter relay can find more joy in Austin than they found in Lubbock last weekend in the Region I meet.

The Lee foursome of Darren Polk, Carlton Johnson, Troy Barber and Darren Williams posted a 3:17.34 to place second behind Killeen Ellison, who flashed to a 3:16.86, in Lubbock last weekend, but the performance of Williams at the finish to nail down the state berth was one on which memories hang.

WILLIAMS RAN a split time of 47.34 to nip Killeen's Thomas Bethay at the tape when Bethay quit two steps before the finish. It was enough to open the door for Williams, who had been shutout of the state 100 meters earlier in the day with a career best of 10.36. Williams' 10.36 was good for only fourth place, but it bettered the old Region I record.

Lee will again be the underdog in Saturday's 1600 meter relay with Ellison already proving twice this year that they can beat the Rebels, and Dallas South Oak Cliff, who say they can beat anyone after posting one time in the 3:11 range.

But the four Lee runners will always hang onto how they got to Austin. They had never broken 3:19 going into the Region I meet, but in the qualifying race, they posted a 3:18.5 to turn that trick. Then in the finals, Lee posted the 3:17.34 to lower their best by another full second. Amazing is the only apt word to describe the feat.

Polk came onto the relay scene in the 5-5A meet after Sam Morney was lost with a foot fracture. He leads off the race and last Saturday posted a 51.48 split time. Not a great time for the state meet, but he has worked little on the relay, making most of his presence felt in the hurdles this year. He should be able to improve on that at Austin.

JOHNSON RUNS second and posted a 50.20 last Saturday, and he is also expected to improve in the heat of the state meet. He has been a steady member of the team.

But the heart of the squad lies in Barber and Williams, who have learned the art of coming from behind. Barber pulled Lee from fifth to third with a split of 48.34 and Williams' 47.34 was the best split of the year by a Lee relay member. If they can equal that performance, the Rebels should be in the 3:16s here Saturday if conditions are favorable. That still probably won't be enough to win, but they have shown a lot of pride this season.

The Lee relay squad is the only Midland entry in the state meet this year, but several other 5-5A and area athletes will also be trying to leave their final marks.

Odessa Permian will have good representation with a sprint relay team, Billy Howell in the 200 meters and Carl Chancellor in the discus. The Permian relay team posted their best of the season last weekend with a 41.84 and Howell had his best time in the 200 with a 21.38. Chancellor is over 160 feet in the discus.

San Angelo's Steve Yarbrough will also be in the high hurdles after a second place 14.12 last week.

THE WEEKEND will also be big for Greenwood's Stuart Burleson, who will not only be going for the state Class A high jump record, but also a singles championship in tennis.

NOT SAME OLD SOX

New miracle at Fenway

By THOMAS BOSWELL
Washington Post News Service

MINNEAPOLIS — During batting practice Tuesday evening at the Metrodome, Carl Yastrzemski, once upon a time the symbol of all Boston Red Sox prima donnas, noticed that nobody was hitting grounders to the scrub infielders. Yaz jumped to grab a bat and began swatting fungoes as though this were proper work for a 42-year-old man with 3,221 career hits.

Minutes later, Jim Rice, once the symbol of the imperious Bosox star who barely knows bench warmers' names, noticed a bunch of irregulars around the cage. Rice began an impromptu game of putt-putting, using a bat, ball and a batting doughnut as the golf-style cup.

Could these cheerful chaps, full of fellow feeling and modesty, be the mighty Boston Red Sox, winners of 19 of their last 24 games and possessors of the best record in their sport?

THE FIRST month of baseball's season of rejuvenation needs no better symbol than these Red Sox. After 30 games, this franchise, which was thought moldering in disrepair just one spring ago, has the best mark in the sport — 21-10 — thanks to 19 wins in its last 24 games.

More pertinent than that, these Red Hots of Manager Ralph Houk love to talk about a most un-Bosoxlike set of victorious virtues: pitching, defense, hitting to all fields, interest in "inside" baseball, team harmony and the ability to play as well outside Fenway Park as in it.

The Red Sox are typical of the blessed fresh air that has, presumably by pure dumb luck, wafted into the game in the first spring after the strike of '81. In all four divisions, a fine historic franchise, suddenly looking rebuilt and reborn, finds itself in first place: the Red Sox, White Sox, Cardinals and Braves.

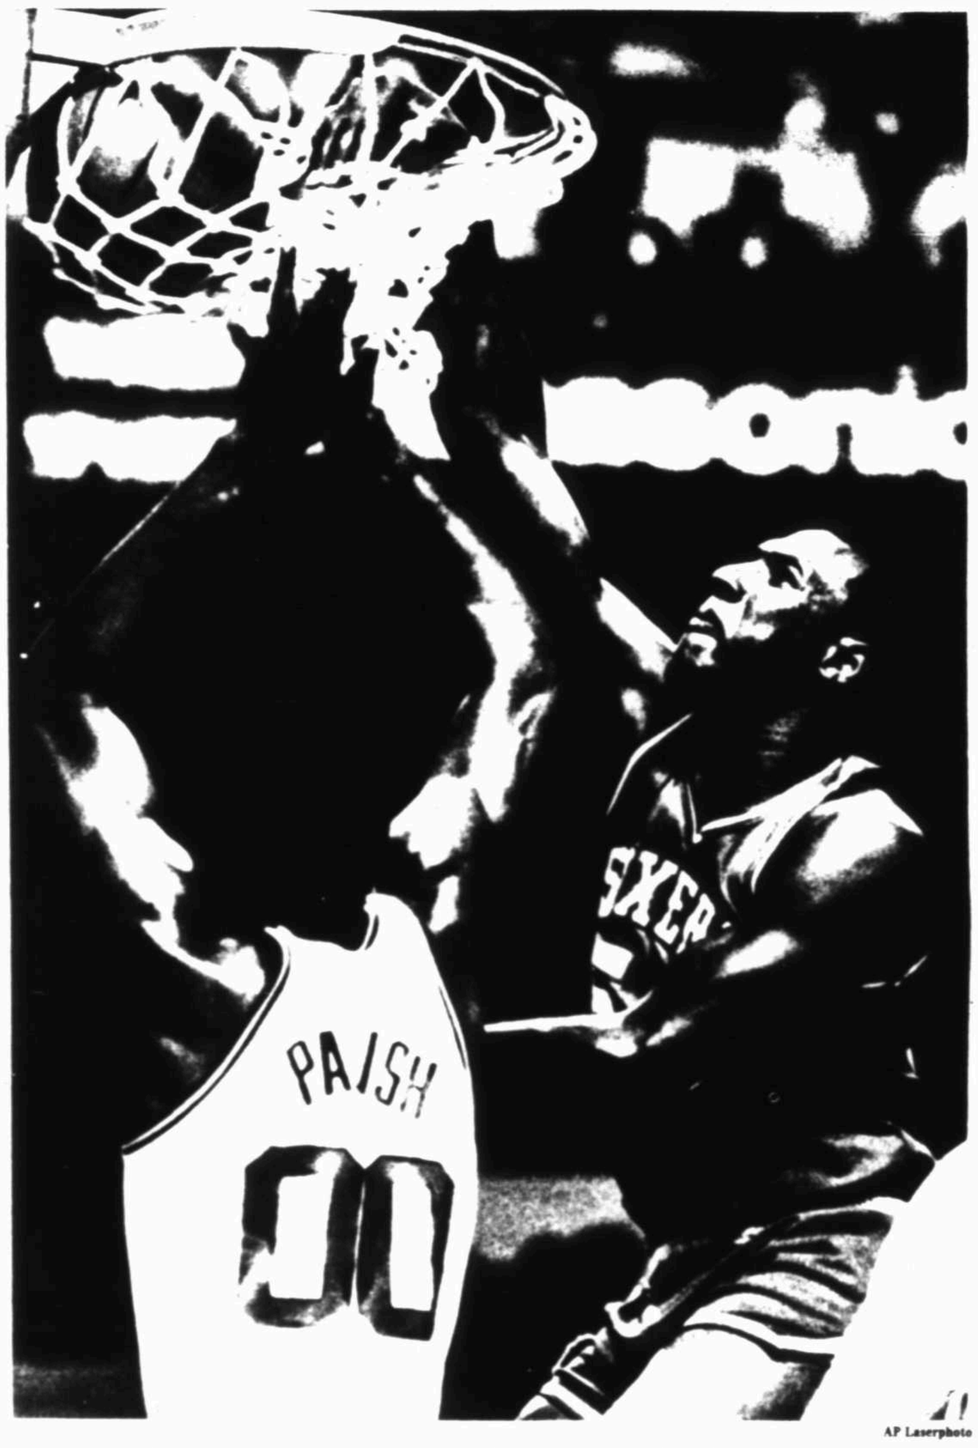

All have batteries of young, little-known new stars. None is a disproportionately wild-spending, free-agent-grabbing immitation of the Yankees.

And, refreshingly, none suffers from the stagflation — inflated salaries and stagnant morale — that seems to have infected several of the fine teams of the recent past, including, perhaps, the Yanks, Orioles, Phillies, Royals and Reds.

Of all the emerging contenders, none tells a more charming and unlikely tale than these Red Sox, who are in the midst of one of those illuminating bursts when a team suddenly finds its confidence and its particular style of victory.

AS HOUK said before the Twins beat the Sox, 10-6: "Last year, these guys had doubts about themselves. I

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

BOSTON (AP) — If there was a single player who symbolized the Philadelphia 76ers' turnaround from a 40-point loss to an eight-point victory over the Boston Celtics, it was Caldwell Jones.

The 7-foot center was scoreless in a 12-minute stint on Sunday as the 76ers looked nothing like the team that had the second-best record in the National Basketball Association this season. Boston won that opener of their best-of-7 semifinal playoff series 121-81.

On Wednesday night, Philadelphia won 121-113 as Jones scored 10 of his season-high 22 points in the fourth quarter, when he displayed a jump-shooting ability that belied his 7.9-point season scoring average.

The third game is Saturday in Philadelphia.

"I felt I earned my pay tonight, unlike the other day," said Jones, who settled for No. 2 scoring honors on the 76ers behind Andrew Toney's 30 points. "I only shot when I was open. I didn't try to create anything."

Jones moved outside in the fourth quarter to avoid the intimidating presence of Boston center Robert Parish. The 7-foot Parish was scoreless in the first half, when he played only 12 minutes because of foul trouble, but he scored 19 in the second half.

Boston Coach Bill Fitch said, however, that it wasn't Parish's job to follow Jones away from the basket.

"It looked like it was Robert's fault, but three straight times there was supposed to be a switch," said Fitch. "The man didn't switch who was supposed to, and Caldwell shot very well. Robert stayed in to clog the lane like he should have, he just didn't get the help."

"I dream of days when I can stand out there and take uncontested shots," said Jones. "They were leaving me open to concentrate on Andrew."

Somerville, two Chap doubles teams stay alive

OCALA, Fla.—With one singles and two doubles entrants still alive, Midland College found itself tied for fourth place in the National Junior College Athletic Association Women's Team Tennis tournament with 12 points after the second day of competition.

Kim Somerville defeated Tammy Richter, Sinclair, N.C., 7-5, 6-1 and Tauna Candle, sixth seed from Roanoke, Va., 6-0, 6-3, in the No. 4 singles Wednesday in surviving as MC's only singles representative.

In doubles, Liz Alvarado and Karen Mannheimer defeated Petersen and Brackens of Roanoke 6-1, 1-6, 6-2 while Jodi Wertenberger and Somerville won over Nayland and Carroll, Grand Rapids, Mich., 6-0, 6-0 in No. 2 to advance to today's play.

Indian River, Fla., and Tyler, Texas, the pretourney favorites were locked in a tie for first with 17 points. Miami-Dade South was second with 14 while MC, Cooke and Pease, N.C., had 12 each. Gainesville, Ga., and Roanoke had eight each while Sinclair, N.C., was next with seven and Central Florida had six.

Alvarado defeated Sue Mize, Gainesville, Ga., in No. 1 singles 1-6, 7-6, 6-2, but then lost 6-1, 6-1 to No. 1 seeded Meriam DeGroot, Indian River. Wertenberger lost to Tamara Brackins, Roanoke, 6-2, 6-2 in No. 2. Karen Mannheimer defeated Julie Klein, Normandale, 6-1, 6-1, but then lost to Anna Mendoza, Miami-Dade South, 7-5, 6-1 in No. 3.

Retiring advice from one with insight

Washington Post News Service

Memo to Sugar Ray Leonard, the champ:

Dear Sugar Ray:

I would not for one moment presume to tell you how to fight Roberto Duran or Thomas Hearns or Wilfredo Benitez. I wouldn't even try to tell you how to do a soft-drink commercial or how to eat or dress or vote.

But I am a big expert on detached retinas. I have had three of them. I lost one eye to them, and I don't recommend the one that's left to anybody.

If I were you, Sugar Ray, as soon as I got out of the hospital, I would go to the wall of my den. There, I would take a hammer and a large three-penny nail and hammer it in that wall. Then I would take my boxing gloves by the laces and hang them over that nail, and leave them there forever.

YOU'RE TOO young to remember fighters like Jack McVey, Speedy Dado. You only heard about Sam Langford, who may have been the greatest fighter who ever lived.

They all ended up selling pencils out of a cup. Or hawking programs. Or feeling their way downstairs in a rooming house.

It used to be the most common sight in the world on boxing night at the local arena to see a pathetic cast of characters, wearing dark glasses and white canes, pushing pencils for a living among the fight mob. They all had 20/20 vision or better when they started out. They could spot a flea on a dog 20 feet away. Now, they had to be helped off curbs.

You don't need the money, Ray. But even if you did, the price is too great. You want to be able to see your kid grow up? Hang 'em up, then.

THE HUMAN eye wasn't made to get punched. Neither, as a matter of fact, was the human brain. I don't think it's a good idea for even a healthy retina to take a right-hand punch. Or even a left jab. I know for sure it's not a good idea for a detachable retina. It's not too good an idea to bump into a firm pillow. I spent half my life avoiding those guys who like to clap you on the back of the neck when they meet you.

Let me tell you what happens if you persist in exposing your retina to subsequent damage. First of all, you may stop seeing out of that eye altogether. That's quite a shock for your nervous system. You walk into a one-dimensional world. For the first time in your life, your senses lie to you. Oh, you adjust. But the sightless eye is subject to all kinds of diseases and atrophy and may have to be surgically removed to alleviate pain. Fun?

They say they have a 90 percent success rate with reattachment of retinas. But, watch out for that other 10 percent, Ray. It's a bitch. Just ask me.

EVEN IF THE reattachment is successful, Ray, you're going to see a world you thought existed only under a microscope. Parts of the musical notes to "Alexander's Ragtime Band" will probably float through your eye because 2020 restoration is highly improbable. The great writer James Thurber once theorized that a lot of people who thought they were having divine visitations were really having retinal disturbances. Thurber explained his own visions (he was almost totally blind most of his life) were sufficient to have him rush out and build a grotto, but that others were more mundane and included, in his words, "a blue Hoover, golden sparks, melting purple blobs, a

Penske Team rookie blazes to one-lap qualifying record

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - It hasn't taken Kevin Cogan long to make his presence felt on the Penske Racing Team, an organization accustomed to being up front.

Cogan, a handsome 26-year-old, in his first full season of Indy car racing, outdid teammate Rick Mears Wednesday, establishing an unofficial Indianapolis Motor Speedway one-lap record of 206.3 mph in practice for the May 30 Indianapolis 500.

Mears raised his own unofficial Indy record of 205, established Monday, to 205.8 mph earlier Wednesday.

Then Cogan, whose main claim to fame is a fourth-place finish in his rookie appearance at Indy a year ago, went out and stole Mears' thunder.

"Nobody was in front of me and I was able to just put my foot into it," said Cogan, adding that he was moving at 210 mph in the straightaways of the 2½-mile oval.

Last year Cogan, from Redondo Beach, Calif., drove a Cosworth-powered Phoenix entered by Jerry O'Connell and started in the No.12 position. His move to fourth place led to his ride with Roger Penske's team when three-time Indy winner Bobby Unser decided to leave.

"This is such a change from last year when I never knew from one race to another if we'd have a car," said Cogan, who launched his racing career in go-karts 10 years ago. "Jerry would say 'This is our last race' every time. I couldn't blame him for that. We were very good friends and he put out a lot of money. He was looking for a sponsor all the time and at the same time paying for a very expensive racing team."

Cogan has no financial problems with his ride in 1982 and he appears a rising star with a bright future on a team which spares no expense and has won more than 60 percent of the Indy-car races since 1979.

"I'm as optimistic as can be about our car," said Cogan, who has had at least a half dozen laps in excess of 200 since the Speedway opened for practice Saturday. "I'd like to run all day long but it wouldn't be smart to do that."

Asked how it feels to be going faster than he's ever gone before in a race car, Cogan smiled and replied: "It's kind of frightening out there. You don't ever feel comfortable moving at that type of speed. You've always got to be looking for something that could be dangerous."

A bachelor who might easily be mistaken for a movie star with his blond hair, blue eyes and big smile, Cogan has appeared in television commercials and magazine ads. He also says he is aware of the impact victory here could produce.

"Sure, there are a lot of things like movies that could go with winning this race. But it's such a long month and I can't anticipate that now. I try not to think about it," he said.

Cogan is one of six drivers to top 200 mph in the first five days of practice leading to Saturday's start of qualificiations for the 66th Indy race.

Don Whittington joined his younger brother, Bill, in the elite group Wednesday with a lap at 201.5 in a March. The other drivers who have hit 200 this week are three-time Indy winner Al Unser and 1969 winner Mario Andretti.

Andretti had his Wildcat at 203.4 Tuesday and had several laps in excess of 200 on Wednesday. Bill Whittington's 201.4 Tuesday was slightly slower than his brother's quick lap. Unser's top lap was 200.9. Geoff Brabham, who was fifth last year as a rookie here, and rookie Bobby Rahal just missed joining the select group Wednesday.

Rahal had a lap at 199.4 and Brabham had a clocking of 199.2. Both were in Marches.

The drivers will be aiming at Tom Sneva's one and four-lap records when qualifying begins. Sneva set the official standards in 1978 with a quick lap of 203.620 and a four-lap average speed of 202.156 in a 10-mile qualifying run. Official records can be set only during qualifying or during the race.

Horns rank No.1 in Poll

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The University of Texas has replaced Arizona State University as the nation's top-ranked college baseball team, according to the lastest bi-weekly poll released Wednesday by Collegiate Baseball.

The Texas Longhorns, 46-6 as of Monday, nipped Arizona State, 51-12, for the No.1 spot after the Sun Devils lost two of three games at Wichita State last weekend.

The Sun Devils are ranked second — the first time this season that they have not held down the top ranking among the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I schools rated by the Tucson publication.

California State-Fullerton, 44-17 after winning 21 of its last 22 games, is No.3 with Wichita State, 62-11, holding down the fourth spot. Fresno State, 40-11, is ranked fifth.

Rounding out the top 10 are sixth-ranked Oklahoma State, 48-14, followed by Nebraska, 42-11; Hawaii, 51-15; Florida State, 51-13-1, and New Orleans, 47-14.

Canucks trail 0-2, still talk big

VANCOUVER (AP) — The way the Vancouver Canucks are talking, you'd never know they're trailing 2-0 in the Stanley Cup finals.

The two-time defending National Hockey League champion New York Islanders won the first two games of the best-of-seven series 6-5 in overtime and 6-4 at Nassau Coliseum. The third game will be played here tonight, with Game 4 slated for Sunday night.

The Islanders have had trouble with Vancouver's rough slowdown tactics so far, which has encouraged many of the Vancouver players.

"Who cares what happened in their building?" said Vancouver's Dave "Tiger" Williams, the most aggressive of the Canucks. "Now we have our crowd and our referee."

Williams apparently likes the fact the Andy Van Hellemond will work tonight's contest. He likes the aggressiveness the Canucks have shown in their first finals even more.

"We proved we belong here in New York and now we're going to even the series," he said. "If it wasn't for a couple of bad calls and breaks they got, we'd be winning.

"We've got a tough road to hoe because we came to New York to win one and didn't. Anyone who doesn't believe that is a fool.

"But anyone who doesn't believe we'll come back doesn't know what he's talking about."

Thomas Gradin, the Canucks' smooth center from Sweden who has performed marvelously in the playoffs, was certain his team would be ready for the next two games.

"We couldn't get prepared right away after the Chicago series and one day off before starting the finals," he said. "But we only lost the first game in overtime. To us, getting here was more important than winning those first two games in New York.

"But we must win here. This is the most important game and we've won all of our important games in the playoffs."

Phillies Ron Reed baffles LA Dodgers

National League

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Ron Reed was making his first pitching start in five years, so Philadelphia Phillies Manager Pat Corrales asked him to give him just "five or six good innings" against he Los Angeles Dodgers.

He got more than that from the right-hander, and some offense to boot, as the Phillies routed the Dodgers 11-3 Wednesday night.

The 39-year-old Reed, a relief pitcher since 1977, allowed just six hits in seven innings to record his first victory of the season. In addition, Reed knocked in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a single.

"I FELT MY arm tighten up between the sixth and seventh inning," said Reed, who survived rain delays of 45 minutes and one hour and 33 minutes.

Corrales turned to Reed as a starter to formulate a five-man rotation, and Corrales said Reed would start again Monday against the Houston Astros.

"He was the most likely guy I had, especially against Los Angeles with its righthand power," said Corrales of Reed. "I couldn't see starting a left-hander against those guys."

The start was Reed's first since he pitched three innings in a 6-5 loss to the Montreal Expos on Oct. 1, 1977.

The Phillies took a 2-0 lead in the first off loser Bob Welch, 4-2, on George Vukovich's bases-loaded single. The Dodgers got a run in the second on Mike Sciocia's sacrifice fly.

The Phillies boosted their lead to 4-1 in the bottom of the inning on a sacrifice fly by Reed and an RBI single by Gary Matthews, then made it 5-1 in the fourth on Pete Rose's run-scoring single.

Braves 6, Cubs 3

Ken Smith drove home the tie-breaking run with a pinch single and Dale Murphy knocked in three runs, two of them with a ninth-inning homer, to lead Atlanta over Chicago.

Bob Walk, 4-2, picked up the victory for Atlanta with relief help from Gene Garber, who gained his seventh save. Randy Martz, 3-3, took the loss for the Cubs, ending a four-game Chicago winning streak.

Murphy's ninth home run of the year cushioned the Braves' lead in the ninth after Smith's pinch hit had snapped a 3-3 tie in the sixth.

Garber worked the last 1 1-3 innings and allowed only one base runner. Steve Bedrosian also was close to perfect, giving up one harmless walk in 2 1-3 innings.

Torre called Murphy's home run "a breathe-easy job," but the Braves' outfielder said he wasn't aiming at the walls of wind-buffeted Wrigley Field.

"I didn't think it was a home run when I was swinging," Murphy said. "I was just trying to get a run in."

Giants 3, Expos 2

Bill Laskey combined with two relievers on an eight-hitter and San Francisco capitalized on three Montreal errors for a pair of unearned runs in the third inning to defeat the Expos.

The Giants took a 2-0 lead in the third without collecting a hit off Expos starter Steve Rogers, 4-3, who had a no-hitter until Darrell Evans doubled with two out in the sixth.

Montreal third baseman Tim Wallach committed a throwing error on Jim Wohlford's grounder and then bobbled Johnnie LeMaster's bouncer. Two outs later, Joe Morgan walked to load the bases and Tom O'Malley hit a grounder that handcuffed Montreal first baseman Al Oliver for an error, enabling two runs to score.

The Expos cut the margin to 2-1 in the sixth on Gary Carter's seventh home run. A two-out RBI double by Chili Davis in the seventh gave the Giants a 3-1 margin and their eventual winning run.

Amarillo, El Paso post wins

By The Associated Press

Randy Kaczmeiski and Dave Purpura provided the hitting and the Shreveport pitching staff provided the walks as the Amarillo Gold Sox whipped the Shreveport Captains, 14-9, in Texas League baseball.

In the other Texas League game Wednesday night, El Paso defeated Arkansas, 7-4. Jackson's scheduled game at San Antonio and Midland's game at Tulsa were postponed because of rain.

Kaczmeiski had three hits in four trips to the plate and drove in three runs and Purpura had four hits in five plate appearance and drove in two runs for Amarillo.

Avalanche snowed under

DENVER (AP) — Although the Denver Avalanche of the Major Indoor Soccer League says it has no cash to continue full-time operations, all eight of its front-office employees worked in the team's office on Wednesday.

One of them was Ron Maierhofer, who is president and managing general partner of the team.

"Payday is next Thursday (May 20)," Maierhofer said. "We haven't missed a paycheck, but I told them (the employees) it might be a possibility yet."

GTCC wins; Jones aces

Green Tree Country Club defeated Ranchland Hills, 36-17, in an interclub match but RHCC derived some consolation when A.A. Jones scored a hole-in-one on the 145-yard No. 6 hole, using a five-iron. Playing in the group with Jones were Tom Newman, Tom Hill, Tom Gibson, Frank Mullins.

Deipraam triumphs in 40s tennis

Keith Deipraam, the former tennis pro at Midland Country Club, won the National 40's tennis tournament in Kansas City over the weekend.

In semifinal play, he defeated Dick Landenbuger and then outlasted Gus Villanueva, the No. 1 seeded 40's player from Canada, 6-7, 7-6, 6-3 to win the title.

Summer cage league planned

Registration is now going on for the Midland Summer Basketball League sponsored by St. Ann's for teams and individuals.

Play will begin on June 1 on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Entry fee $200 per team plus $5 per individual to Midland Summer Basketball League, 1506 Club Drive, Midland. For futher information, contact Moose Armendariz at 684-4647.

Carlsbad slates tournament

CARLSBAD, N.M.—The Carlsbad Slow Pitch Men's Invitational tournament is scheduled June 4-6. Entry fee is $100 and deadlin is May 22. Tournament directors are Mike Dordova and Danny Cordova.

Houston bowlers take charge

LUBBOCK—Houston bowlers took first place in three doubles events in the Texas Women's Bowling Association here after seven weeks of competition. Carolyn Arbor and Annie Lee Jackson rolled 1,151 to lead the Open class; Marie Berry-Jackie Stone posted 1,138 in A; Carolyn Madeksho-Kay Ramsey seized the lead in B with a 1,134.

Burleson seeks track, net titles

He will have to run back and forth to compete. Burleson won the Region I title with a 6-6, but had a 7-0 in the 7-A district meet. The state mark is 6-8¾, and the junior would like to pin that record on his lapel.

No one has ever won a tennis title and a track title on the same weekend in the state meets and Burleson would like that honor too.

Rankin's Red Devils, who won the Region I Class A title in Levelland last weekend will have a strong unit for the state meet. Rankin has both relays in the field and Dennis Black in the 400 meters. Rankin owns a 44.14 in the 400 relay and a 3:24.69 in the 1600 relay. Black qualified for state with a winning time of 50.25.

IN THE 4A division, Andrews qualified five individuals, but has no relay power to go with it. Leo Ruiz won the Region I title in Odessa last weekend with a 14-0 and the four other Mustangs qualified for state with second place finishes.

Keith Brooks, all everything in football and basketball, had a 6-6 in the high jump while Kirk Pearcy had a 4:26.50 in the 1600 meters. Henry Farris had a 10:07 in the 3200 meter run and Archie Williams dashed to a 21.84 in the 200 meters.

The 3A and 4A meet will be held Friday night at Memorial Stadium with some field event finals in all divisions set for Friday afternoon. Action resumes Saturday morning for the remainder of the A, 2A and 5A competition.

Spurs' Albeck remains confident

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Coach Stan Albeck maintains that his San Antonio Spurs can beat the Los Angeles Lakers when the National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series shifts to HemisFair Arena Friday night.

But Albeck admits the Spurs have had they hands full so far trying to contain the Lakers' stellar lineup while falling behind 2-0 in back-to-back losses at Los Angeles.

"LA has a tremendous team," Albeck said. "Four All-Stars and Superman. Who could ask for more?"

Albeck referred to the Lakers' bespectacled forward, Kurt Rambis, who snared 15 rebounds — most of them at the right time — as the Lakers won the second game Tuesday night 110-101 after taking the series opener 128-117.

The all-stars are Kareem Abdul-Jabbar who had 16 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots; Jamaal Wilkes, 22 points; Norm Nixon, 22 points and nine assists; and Earvin "Magic" Johnson, 19 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists in the latest Laker win.

"The Lakers don't scare us," Albeck said after the second loss. "Why should they scare us? We missed some shots at the end that we usually make. That was the difference."

Albeck contends San Antonio can even the series with back-to-back victories before expected capacity crowds here Friday and Saturday nights. But only four times in NBA history has a team come from two games down to win a best-of-seven series.

"The last two games we've been missing the little things. People that we don't expect to hurt us have killed us," San Antonio forward Mike Mitchell said.

Mitchell was speaking of Bob McAdoo, who came off the bench to hit 21 points in the first loss, and then Rambis, who dominated the backboards in the second game.

"We came out and concentrated on McAdoo, and Rambis got loose on us," Mitchell said.

Braves attendance takes giant leap

(Compiled from R-T wires)

BASEBALL—Buoyed by a record 13-game winning streak which has kept the Atlanta Braves firmly entrenched in first place in the National League West, attendance at Atlanta Stadium continues to soar. More than 110,000 fans are expected for a four-game series with St. Louis beginning tonight. Andre DeLorenzo, director of ticket sales. "I'm still short of breath... There's no two ways about it, winning makes the difference, although it may be a trite thing to say." Through 15 home games, the Braves attracted 298,799 fans, nearly 30,000 per game and an increase of 103,475 from a year ago...

Tony Solaita hit two doubles to power the Nippon Ham Fighters, 4-2, in Japan over the Kintetsu Buffaloes while Wayne Cage slammed a two-run homer as the Hankyu Braves edged the Nankai Hawks 4-3...

FOOTBALL—Paul Hornung may take the NCAA to court because of its refusal to permit him to appear on college football telecasts this fall as a commentator and analyst. "I'd rather for it not to go that way, but I've talked to a couple of lawyers, and they think I've got a helluva case. ..Sure, I've had a carefree type of image, but they (the NCAA) are trying to make me out as a perpetual criminal."...

GOLF— Lopez Melton has filed for divorce from her husband of three years, Houston sportscaster Tim Melton. Melton said, "I did not want the divorce. I love Nancy more now than the day I married her."...

BASKETBALL—Rob Williams will pass up his senior year at Houston to join the NBA. Williams led the Cougars in scoring but was criticized during a mid-season slump and again when he failed to score a basket against North Carolina in the NCAA semifinals. "Next year, if I stayed at UH and had another injury, I might not be able to fullfill my expectations, so I think I will forego my senior year and go to the NBA."...

Baylor named Larry Hargett, UNC-Greensboro, assistant basketball coach under Jim Haller, replacing Tommy Newman, who resigned...

Ex-NBA cagers Doug Collins and Henry Bibby are new assistants at Arizona State...North Carolina and St. John's will meet in the opening game of the Tipoff Classic at Springfield, Mass., Nov. 20. Georgetown turned down a bid to the tourney...

AUTO RACING—Niki Lauda says Jochem Mass is not "totally clear of fault" in Saturday's death of Ferrari driver Gilles Villeneuve. Blick, a Swiss tabloid, quoted Lauda as saying: "That was not a normal accident (but) a deadly error. After seeing the Canadian in his rear-view mirror, Mass should have stayed where he was — namely in the middle of the track. Just like on the autobahn, you can't change lanes at the last moment when you see a much faster driver coming up right behind... Why did Mass start on Sunday? He didn't qualify (for Sunday's race) and only got a starting position thanks to this accident. Personally I would have felt very shabby."...

TROTTING—Beatcha, the American horse who paced the fastest mile of the year earlier this month, is the 5-2 morning line favorite for today's second leg of the World Cup Pacing Series at the New Jersey's Meadowlands. The 4-year-old son of Armbro Nesbitt, who won the 1⅛-mile first heat last week by 3¼ lengths, will start from post two in the field of 12 with John Campbell in the sulky. Campbell drove Beatcha to a victory in 1:54 2-5 two weeks ago, the fastest mile of the season at any track...

NOT CRICKET—Ten members of Stirling A Grade criket team were suspended after it was discovered they used a ball doctored with floor polish in a Grand Final match in Adelaide, Aus. The polish was discovered in scientific tests on the ball after the umpires became suspicious when it did not become damp in wet conditions. The 11th player already is under a one-year suspension for striking an umpire during the same match against Happy Valley on March 27...

Advice for Ray Ray from expert

skein of spittle, brown spots, snowflakes, saffron and light blue waves and two eight-balls."

My own visions run more to blue-black amoebas, Ray, and the score and chorus to "Aida." At least, if I hum what I see, I figure that's what will come out. You have to watch them carefully, too. When they start to explode, the retina may be coming off again.

I'VE HAD detached retinas in both eyes but, in your case, the disorder may be due to trauma. If so, that may mean it's non-recurring. A one-time accident. On the other hand, if you're predisposed to detachments, wow, are you in the wrong profession! I used to think that reading for a living was not all that great a way for a retinal patient to make it, but getting thumbs in the eyes is too sick to contemplate. There is no way I can watch Earnie Shavers on TV fighting since he had his detachment. Anybody who could watch that could watch them pound nails in his hands.

Ray, what you're dealing with is not scar tissue on the brows. It's not cauliflower where the ears used to be. Leave the money there, Babe. Because you're going to miss sunsets over the Pacific, kids' faces on Christmas morning, moonlight on fresh snow and the joys of a good book.

Guys have gotten away with detached retinas in the ring before, but guys have not gotten away with it, too. And I don't even want to have to buy a pencil from you.

Housecleaning revived Bosox

could visualize what this team might turn into. But they had to learn that winning just wasn't as hard as they thought it was."

Six consecutive singles with two outs in the sixth inning, including Randy Bush's first major league RBI, broke a 4-4 tie. Bobby Castillo, 1-1, pitched 3 1-3 innings for the victory in relief of Brad Havens while Bob Ojeda, 1-3, took the loss.

Perhaps the proper analogy to this Boston club is the Orioles of 1977-80, which, just when they were pronounced dead by many, became most pleasing.

Those O's lost free agents Reggie Jackson, Bobby Grich and 20-game-winner Wayne Garland in the winter of '76; consequently, they had to turn to nine rookies in '77. That new blood transformed morale and gave the new stars a chance; the Birds won 97 games that season, and were in the Series two years later.

These Red Sox lost free agents Fred Lynn and Carlton Fisk and had to trade Rick Burleson and Butch Hobson, at what they considered 70 cents on the dollar discounts, before the '81 season.

Instead of destroying the club, those losses seem now to have revitalized them. "I think we've got 18 home-grown players who came up through the minors together. That helps," said Houk.

"The Clear-Lansford-Miller trade (for Burleson and Hobson) really set the stage for this team," said Houk.

THAT DEAL, then thought to be a Boston disaster, now looks like a Boston coup. Carney Lansford is batting champ. Rick Miller, hitting .286, is the center fielder. Burleson's replacement at shortstop — Glenn Hoffman — currently has more homers (three) and RBI (20) this season than Lynn, Fisk, Burleson and Hobson combined (one and 15).

Lasorda won't fine Bill Russell

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda says he doesn't plan to fine Bill Russell over the shortstop's running blunder Tuesday night.

Lasorda and Russell had a closed door shouting session after the Dodgers lost, 9-8, to the Philadelphia Phillies.

The manager threatened to fine Russell, who said he would refuse to pay.

The incident occurred in the seventh inning with the Phillies leading 9-6. Los Angeles had the bases loaded and two out.

Ken Landreaux struck out, but the ball ticked off Phillies catcher Bo Diaz' glove and rolled about four feet from the plate.

Boston College to lose leading scorer to draft

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — John Bagley, Boston College's leading basketball scorer, will leave school and declare his eligibility in June's National Basketball Associatione draft, BC announced Wednesday night.

Bagley, 22, a junior, informed Coach Gary Williams that he had written a letter to the NBA saying he was making himself available for the draft, said Reid Oslin, BC sports publicity director.

Williams could not be reached for comment.

The 6-foot Bridgeport, Conn., forward led the Eagles to the NCAA quarterfinals with 675 points in 32 games for a 21.1 point average.

Lamp six-hits Jays for White Sox

A's bullpen silences O's

By Associated Press

Yes, the Oakland A's do have a bullpen. Not only that, they have some effective pitchers in it.

The Oakland quartet of Dennis Kinney, Bo McLaughlin, Bob Owchinko and Dave Beard outpitched Baltimore's Jim Palmer, Tim Stoddard and Tippy Martinez Wednesday as the A's rallied for four runs in the eighth inning and a 5-4 victory over the Orioles.

"Their bullpen shut us down," Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver said. "I was expecting one of those guys from our bullpen to come in and close it down for us, but no one did."

Palmer, making his second relief appearance of the year for the Orioles and trying for his first save since 1975, came on in the seventh after starter Mike Flanagan held the A's to one run and two hits before a groin pull flared up. Palmer got through his first inning easily enough, but ran into problems in the eighth when a single by Tony Phillips and a pair of walks loaded the bases.

Weaver summoned Stoddard, who was greeted by Cliff Johnson's two-run single and gave way to Martinez. A walk to Wayne Gross loaded the bases again and, after a double play via the plate left runners at second and third, Dan Meyer singled them home with a grounder through the right side.

Meanwhile, Kinney replaced Oakland starter Mike Norris with one out in the fourth and pitched one scoreless inning. McLaughlin followed with two shutout innings. Owchincko contributed one and Beard worked the last 12-3 — scoreless, of course — to boost his record to 4-0. The four Oakland relievers allowed a total of three hits.

Weaver, whose relievers are 3-8 this season, said the Orioles may make a deal to help their arson squad.

White Sox 9, Blue Jays 2

Greg Luzinski and Bill Almon drove in three runs apiece to back the six-hit pitching of former Midland Cub Dennis Lamp. RBI singles by Luzinski and Harold Baines gave the White Sox a 2-0 lead in the first inning against Mark Bomback. Luzinski drove in another run with a third-inning grounder and Almon hit a solo home run in the fourth.

Chicago got its runs in the seventh on a sacrifice fly by Carlton Fisk, a single by Jim Morrison and doubles by Luzinski and Almon. Lamp had a shutout until the ninth when Dave Revering hit a two-run, two-out homer.

Yankees 6, Angels 5

Dave Collins keyed a four-run New York rally in the fourth inning with a two-run single as the Yankees wiped out a 2-1 California lead on Reggie Jackson's two-run first-inning homer. Lou Piniella began the comeback by drawing a one-out walk off Angel Moreno. Roy Smalley and Butch Hobson singled to tie the score and Barry Foote doubled to give New York a 3-2 lead.

Royals 9, Brewers 7

Hal McRae and Greg Pryor drove in three runs apiece for Kansas City, offsetting three solo home runs by Milwaukee's Paul Molitor and leading the Royals to a sweep of their three-game series. Pryor tagged Randy Lerch for a two-run double in the fourth inning that put the Royals on top 4-2 and he scored on John Wathan's single. McRae's two-run double in the sixth gave the Royals an 8-4 lead.

Molitor, who had only one previous home run, hit solo shots in the first and fifth off Dennis Leonard and in the ninth off Dan Quisenberry. He also singled home a run in the seventh.

Red Sox 4, Twins 1

Jim Rice drove in three runs with a pair of homers and Dennis Eckersley struck out 11 batters in eight innings before needing help from Mark Clear in the ninth. Eckersley was scored on when Kent Hrbek homered in the fourth inning and extended his hitting streak to 22 games, five short of the major league record for a rookie.

The Red Sox broke a 1-1 tie against reliever Ron Davis when Carney Lansford singled with one out in the eighth, stole second, moved to third on Dave Stapleton's fly ball and scored on a single by Glenn Hoffman. With two out in the ninth, Dwight Evans singled and Rice, who hit a solo homer in the fourth, homered again.

Indians 8, Mariners 5

Joe Charboneau collected three hits and drove in three runs for Cleveland. Charboneau delivered RBI singles in the first and second innings when Cleveland built a 5-0 lead against Floyd Bannister. He added his second homer of the season — both in the three games in Seattle — in the fifth to put the Indians ahead 6-4.

KENNY REDIN'S Fin & Feather

Due to an illness in my immediate family, I was unable to attend last weekend's High Sky Bass Club's Invitational bass tournament held on Amistad. But, I did some homework and politely talked one of my good fishing buddies into reporting to me what happened at the tournament.

Jack Lewis of San Antonio, who religiously fished the Midland club's tournament, reported that the High Sky event was one of the finest ever sponsored by this livewire fishing organization.

If we didn't get the correct winners, from one hand to the next, it's because sometimes things don't turn out the way they are supposed to. But anyway, Jack's report was like this:

Men's Division: 1.Regan Henry-13-11; 2.Britten Gambrel-16-15; 3.Rex Bradford-16-03; 4.David Triesch-16-03; 5.Larry Hurd-16-01. Women's Division: 1.Penn Black-13-12; 2.Joyce Haas, 11-12; 3.Marcie Shiveley-11-4; 4.Karen Anderson-10-0; 5.Marilyn Green-9-8.

According to Jack's report, the tourney's largest bass was taken by George Watels, four pounds, 11 ounces.

A total of 417 entries made this High Sky fishing event one of the largest in its history and Lewis reported that the giant fish fry held on Saturday evening still has people talking. As a speculated guesstimate by Lewis, he said that approximately 1,300 pounds were caught.

B.A.S.S. RESULTS — If you want to win a major bass fishing tournament, Randy Behringer is a good example to follow—"play dirty."

No, we don't bend the rules; don't step on your fellow fishing pro's favorite rod; don't even cheat; but do fish dirty. Find those off-colored, stained waters – the conditions that mask your human errors and mistakes; places where the hard pounded and leery largemouth bass won't spook as easily at the sight of a bass boat or the splat of a lure shattering apart the window – like surface.

"The most important thing to consider in finding bass is water clarity," said the 36-year-old Waco angler and the winner of the $75,000 Missouri Invitational B.A.S.S. Tournament held April 21-23 on Lake of the Ozarks. "You have to consider how much light is penetrating the water and how much it is affecting the fish."

The dingy water is also an ally to Behringer's brand of bassin'. He works close. He is a member of the perfect presentation plot. There's no PLOP when his lure is arched to the target. Even a heavy one/half leadhead jig knotted on 30-pound test line doesn't disturb his finny foes.

"The Flippin technique (the long rod, pendulum lure presentation) was made for me," said Behringer who resorts to the method made famous by California angler Dee Thomas, "at least 70 percent of the time.

BACK 20 years ago when Behringer got his bassin' baptism they didn't call it "flippin." "I grew up doodle sockin' in lakes in Texas," he said.

And fishing those man-made reservoirs around Waco in the Brazos River area of the Texas vastlands is an excellent training ground for bass fishermen. "Those old lakes learn you to be patient," says Behringer. "If you get a strike every hour, you're ahead of the game."

An insurance agent in Waco, Behriner joined the Bass Anglers Sportsmen Society' Tournament Trail three years ago. He qualified for the year-end BASS Masters Classic last season by "doin' my best when the fishing was the toughest." And that's another pattern that hasn't changed.

His 11 largemouth bass weighing 41 pounds, 9 ounces earned him the $12,000 top prize, including $5,000 cash and a $7,000 Ranger bass boat.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, May 14, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Singer Patrice Munsel and one-time teen idol Bobby Darin share this birthday with you. Also born on this date: the late great conductor Otto Klemperer. You will be able to travel for pleasure as well as business in the months ahead. Count on your finances improving to the point where you can vacation without having to worry about every penny. The business outlook improves and you enjoy a greater sense of independence in your job. Singles find themselves moving closer to the altar. If you are already married, you find your relationship maturing and becoming more fulfilling. Be more open with mate.

ARIES (March 31-April 19): Business travel enjoys highly favorable influences, but your opportunities to pursue personal pleasures are curtailed. Channel your frustration into sports or exercise. A self-improvement course will boost your ego.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your job security seems assured. Form new partnerships. Postpone asking for a loan. A letter that you receive today sheds a different light on a personal relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your attention shifts to career concerns. Make the best possible use of your organizational skills. Travel offers unexpected opportunities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Rely on your own efforts to get ahead. Streamline business methods. Family members may be overly sensitive. Treat them with greater understanding and tact.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your outgoing personality is a definite plus in business. Whenever possible, deal with people face-to-face. Romance blossoms when you act less aggressive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Turn your attention to projects you can handle by yourself. Influential people will be inaccessible. Use your ingenuity, not your savings, in times of emergency.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are able to cover up your inner turmoil beautifully. Review your priorities. You may be putting your career before your mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An old friend needlessly involves you in a private family matter. Voice your objections. Handle your money with special caution and postpone financial discussions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An old romance may be resurrected today. Be sure of your emotions. Get better organized and tensions will disappear at place of work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Circumstances suddenly change in your favor. Pursue those projects that will be good for your family's financial security. Be patient with a friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A gift or financial windfall could inspire you to do something special for your loved ones this weekend. Get your work responsibilities out of the way first.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A positive attitude will make things go better for everyone. Check into an opportunity that you heard about last night. Let others help you solve a financial dilemma.

Bridge experts are not by nature philanthropists at the table. Thus, if one of them presents you with the gift of a trick, examine it carefully — it could be tainted!

Sitting South was one of the world's great players, George Rapee of New York. Although he did not hold much in the way of high cards, he did have distributional values, so he refused to let West buy the hand with his preempt.

Against four spades, West led the king of hearts and continued with the jack, ruffed by declarer. West's preempt made it likely that at least one of the black suits would break badly. When declarer led the ace of spades and West produced the nine, a 4-1 trump distribution became likely.

It was tempting to enter dummy with a club to take the trump finesse, but Rapee realized that, even if the finesse won, the contract would be defeated, for there would be no way to draw the fourth trump and then run clubs. So Rapee decided that his best shot was to give East the opportunity to go wrong. He continued with the eight of spades from hand!

East could not resist grabbing the queen, and contract was safe. Declarer ruffed the heart return with his king, crossed to dummy with a high club to draw the remaining trumps with the jack-ten, and now declarer had nothing left but good clubs; making five-odd!

The contract would have failed if East had refused to take his queen of spades. East simply ruffs the third club and returns a heart. If declarer still holds the king of spades, he cannot afford to ruff this trick, so the defenders eventually emerge with two heart tricks, the ace of diamonds and a club ruff — down one.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks closed slightly lower Wednesday after first surrendering an early advance and then paring an afternoon decline.

Aerospace, electronic and oil issues were numerous among the losers, while some auto and oil-service stocks moved higher.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 3.90 early in the session, then off 4 points with 30 minutes of trading left. But a late rally trimmed the decline to 0.10 point, to 865.77.

The transportation and utility measures also fell.

Losers led gainers about 7 to 6 on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index declined 0.11 to 68.69.

Big Board volume grew to 59.21 million shares from 54.68 million in the previous session.

Prices had gained some support from the oil sector and indications that weakness in the economy would allow interest rates to decline. But analysts noted that oil stocks fell and said uncertainty over the form of the fiscal 1983 federal budget tempered market enthusiasm.

Late in the session the government said retail sales rose 1.4 percent in April following a revised decline of 0.6 percent in March. Some economists had looked a decline last month as well.

Among the NYSE's most active issues, General Motors rose 1⅜ to 45 after a Wall Street firm was said to have posted a strong buy signal for GM. Ford Motor climbed ¾ to 24½.

Datapoint, whose stock price has fallen sharply in recent weeks because of negative earnings forecasts, tumbled another 1⅜ to 12¼.

Republic Steel, off ⅜ to 19¾, cut its quarterly dividend in half and named a new chairman.

Among the oils turning lower were Atlantic Richfield ⅜ to 42⅛, Getty ½ to 54 and Superior Oil ¼ to 34½.

On the American Stock Exchange, International Banknote fell 1 to 5. A group including Associated Madison Cos. said it lowered its stake in the company by 244,200 shares, to 5.2 percent.

The Amex's market value index fell 0.76 to 280.18.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 188.06, down 0.13.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Cheap to sell through discount broker

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have a total of 750 shares of preferred stocks in several electric utility companies, which I now wish to sell. My broker says the commission fee would be about $350. I understand that is the standard charge for a commission of this size at "full service brokerage firms."

Another broker, who is with a "discount brokerage firm," says he will handle the transaction for 12½ cents a share. Are these discount brokerages reliable?

Doyle

A. On a simple sale or purchase of stock, discount brokers have to be counted as just as reliable as full service brokers. So, since you have already made up your mind to sell, you'll save commission dollars by doing so through a discounter.

The basic difference between the two types of brokerage firms is summed up in the words "full service" and "discount." A full service brokerage firm provides its customers with research, recommendations on what and when to buy and sell, as well as other services. A straight discount brokerage firm provides none of those "extras" and does nothing except handle buy and sell orders.

Think of it as the difference between a Fifth Avenue store and a pipe rack outlet. Some discount brokerages, however, do provide some extra services. Just as there is a wide difference in service at various clothing stores, so there is at various brokerage houses.

There is no longer any "standard" commission in the brokerage business. Fixed commission schedules — formally set by the stock exchanges — were abolished by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, back on May 1, 1975. Every brokerage firm now sets its own commission rates. And, in theory, customers can try to "negotiate" those charges lower.

Q. I just inherited stocks worth about $50,000. I want to sell all of them and put the money in municipal bonds. That way, I would have tax-free income and could sell the bonds later, if I need the money.

A broker wants me to keep about half the stocks, sell the rest and put the money in growth stocks. My husband and I are both 52. We are in the 50 percent income tax bracket. Taxes would take half of the dividends we get from stocks. Would I be better off with municipals?

A. You would be, for straight income, because the interest from municipal bonds is not subject to federal income tax. For "keeping money" purposes, that makes municipals a good deal for people in high tax brackets.

For the future, however, you could very well do better with stocks. If the stocks you own rise in value, your family wealth would increase.

It comes down to the choice of whether you want more spending money now from your inheritance through municipals or whether you are willing to take on some risk for higher values later through stocks.

For a married couple filing a joint return for 1982, the 50 percent federal income tax bite starts on taxable income — after all deductions and exemptions — of $85,600. With that kind of income, you shouldn't need extra spending money now.

So, unless you're ultraconservative in your financial affairs, I'd say you're in good shape to go the growth stock route.

Q. My husband died several months ago. Among his papers, I discovered a certificate for 500 shares of a stock registered in my name. I can't find the stock listed in any newspaper tables.

I do not have a broker. Is it possible to determine if this stock is worth anything, without paying a brokerage fee?

A. Certainly. Brokers charge commissions when they buy or sell stocks, not when they tell you the values of stocks. Since your stock doesn't appear in any newspaper stock table, it must be an inactive stock — seldom traded.

Try calling brokerage firms and getting a price quotation. If that doesn't work, because brokers are reluctant to give out quotes to non-customers, ask your bank to get the information from a broker with which it does business.

Country entering era of stable prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Savers and investors who spent the last several years calculating how to cope with rapid inflation are finding that the equation has suddenly been changed.

In the last six months, the consumer price index has been rising at less than a 5 percent annual rate. In March, it actually declined by 0.3 percent, for its first drop in 17 years.

The impact of this turn of events on the classic "inflation hedges" — gold, real estate, collectibles, and so forth — has already been widely publicized. They have suffered, in some cases severely.

Case in point: After a five-year boom, reports Investment Search Inc. of Annapolis, Md., sales of public oil and gas programs dropped 30 percent in first three months of this year.

Conversely, if the unwinding of inflation continues, some other types of financial investments that have long been out of favor could stand to benefit.

Many experts are far from ready to declare that the country is entering a new era of stable prices.

But if it hasn't been permanently whipped, inflation is at least in remission for the moment. What follows is a capsule look at how several major types of investments might fare in a prolonged period of "disinflation":

—Bonds. Few investments have suffered more as a result of inflation. Bonds have a fixed face value and fixed payout, both stated in dollars, and when the buying power of the dollar drops, so does the appeal of a bond.

Disinflation, then, would seem to be good news indeed for bond investors. In fact, bond prices have risen somewhat in recent months, but the market hasn't exactly been euphoric.

Bond investors' inflationary expectations have been slow to recede largely because of the prospect of big federal budget deficits. As a result, bonds today offer yields of 13 percent and up — more than double the recent inflation rate.

The risk of a new surge in inflation, and interest rates, persists. But buyers of bonds today can secure very high "real" returns by historic standards.

—Municipal bonds. In this market too — considered as a special case because interest on municipals is exempt from federal taxes — yields have remained at double-digit levels.

United Business Service of Boston recently cited what it called "the usual caveats about municipals. They tend to trade in large blocks, say $25,000 and up, and on smaller transactions price concessions may have to be made.

Efforts to transfer funds from producing states increase

By DORY DEVLIN
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — As congressional attention turns more and more toward the growing, prosperous sunbelt states, the task of the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition is becoming more difficult as it increases its efforts to ensure that federal policies protect the interests of its regions.

Set up in the mid 1970s by representatives concerned about the decline of the nation's industrial heartland, the coalition includes 213 House members and 36 senators from 18 states in the New England, Mid-Atlantic and Great Lakes regions.

Its latest effort is the introduction and support of legislation which would shift revenues from oil, gas and coal-producing states to other states which lack those resources. The legislation is based on the contention of coalition members that energy resources in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and other states are "national and not state resources."

The primary purpose of the bipartisan Northeast-Midwest coalition is to provide information for its members concerning proposed federal policies which will impact the 18 states within the region, according to Larry Zaber, executive director of the coalition. He added that a second objective of the coalition is to make sure that the "executive branch understands that public policies affect different regions differently, that it's wrong to assume that one policy option affects Houston and Newark (N.J.) the same way."

Diana Hamilton, executive director of the Senate coalition, echoed Zaber, saying that the coalition is "another resource tool" for members, providing information they cannot get in their committees or elsewhere. Hamilton described the coalition as a "formal structure for what had been going on for years informally, somewhat like the old boys network of southern members."

The coalition was founded in the House in 1976 when representatives such as Henry Reuss, D.-Wis., Michael Harrington, D.-Mass, and James Oberstar, D-Minn., decided that federal policies were neglecting their income and job deficient regions. They found that "federal funds were going into new projects in the southern and western states, failing to recognize old, existing projects," such as water projects, roads, and housing in northeastern and midwestern states, Hamilton said.

A spokesman for Rep. Oberstar, who now serves on the coalition's executive committee as a regional co-chair, said the coalition is simply "looking for equity" in how the federal government treats the nation's different regions.

"The coalition's objective is to try and get a fair share of the federal dollar for the Northeast and Midwest to revitalize these regions," said a spokeswowan for Rep. Howard Wolpe, D.-Mich., who this week introduced the bill to transfer revenues from energy producing states to states that lack similar resources.

An aide to Sen. David Durenberger, R.-Minn., said he believes the coalition had "more impact last year than in previous years." He cited a letter signed by a long list of bipartisan representatives in the coalition sent to Budget Director David Stockman advising him that the administration's budget proposals greatly slighted the Northeast and Midwest regions. The letter had an impact on the budget, he said.

Future impact on the legislative process by the Northeast-Midwest coalition depends on the success of its Republican members to influence the administration, according to Wolpe's office. Last year, the coalition's Republican members, labeled the "gypsy moths," were indeed a strong force which the administration had to deal with.

The coalition is divided into three parts: the House coalition, the Senate coalition, and the Northeast-Midwest Institute, the research arm. The institute, with a staff of 15, provides the members with a steady flow of information concerning policies which affect their regions. It is a non-profit organization which is funded through public and private funds. The congressional coalition and the Senate coalition combined have seven staff members, including the two executive directors. Staff members are paid through the clerk hire fund, which means that congressmen and senators contribute a portion of their staff allowances to the coalition.

All congressmen and senators representing the 18 states are members of the Northeast-Midwest coalition, with the exception of one, Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R.-Mich., who is chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee. Some members are more active than others, however, depending on the issues the coalition is involved in, according to Zaber.

The coalition has been involved in many issues since its inception, primarily energy policies and opposing severance taxes imposed on energy deficient states by energy rich states such as Texas, Montana and Wyoming. Other issues it has concerned itself with are transportation, job training programs, defense spending.

The Northeast-Midwest coalition is headed by Rep. Robert W. Edgar, D-Pa. Representatives Silvio Conte, R-Mass., Frank Horton, R-N.Y., and Oberstar serve on the coalition's executive committee with Edgar. In addition, 36 members of the coalition comprise a bipartisan steering committee which aids in organizing the coalition into an effective voting bloc on certain issues.

The Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition is not the only one of its type. In fact, another regional coalition, the Congressional Sunbelt Council, was formed to counter the Northwest-Midwest coalition in 1980.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who recently opposed the coalition-supported energy revenues transfer bill, called the coalition's efforts "divisive." He said its members threaten to "split this country into quarreling fragments," adding that they make a "serious mistake in every proposal made for carving out a bigger chunk of the federal pie at the expense of other areas of the country."

Drilling rig activity to pick up soon

HOUSTON (SWN) — The current slowdown in drilling is a short term problem that should adjust itself within the next 30 days, according to Roman E. Boruta, president of Reed Rock Bit Co.

"Our forecasts indicate that rig activity for 1982 will average 3715 and that we will soon be working our way toward the second best year in the history of the drilling industry," Boruta said in a keynote address at the U.S. Energy Bureau's recent Onshore Conference in Houston. "By year's end, 4,120 rigs will be active and we will have drilled about 77,500 wells, almost as many as were drilled in 1981."

Rig activity in 1982 has declined for 20 weeks, except for the last week in April. But, according to Boruta, this decline is a result of necessary market adjustments to last year's excessive growth. High interest rates and uncertainty about crude prices due to the oil glut caused major oil companies and independents to reassess exploration plans. Bad winter weather was also a factor in the slowdown as well as general economic conditions, Boruta said.

Although fewer rigs are drilling this year, the rigs are showing a significant rebound in rig efficiency operating with better trained crews, and drilling more footage per rig.

"We are anticipating about 360 million feet of hole in 1982 compared to 366 million in 1981," Boruta said.

Speaking in terms of the next five years, Reed Rock Bit Co. is forecasting a compound growth rate for the industry of 8.8 percent. By 1982, the industry will have an active rig count of 5200. Average feet per rig per year will reach 98,000 feet at an average depth of 4,725 feet and 108,000 wells will be drilled.

The industry could experience a boom period if the administration decides to place an import duty on imported oil or crude prices rise about $34 per barrel. Gas decontrol, currently set for 1984-85, will also trigger a new burst of drilling activity, Boruta said.

Crude prices will stabilize between $32 and $34 per barrel, Boruta said. "The cartel is real and I believe the Saudi philosophy will prevail."

Energy conservation has affected demand but demand should pick up as the economy recovers, Boruta said. The oil glut shows signs of drying up and gasoline prices are again rising, he pointed out.

"Obviously our forecasts reflect a confidence in growth for the domestic market as the general economy improves," Boruta concluded.

Superior, Texaco plan joint exploration venture

HOUSTON (SWN) — Superior Oil Company and Texaco Inc. have signed a letter of intent to enter into a joint exploration venture covering approximately 137,000 acres most of which are State of Louisiana leases. This exploration acreage underlies and adjoins seven producing fields in Iberia, Jefferson, La Fourche, Plaquemines and St. Mary parishes.

The purpose of the joint program is to further explore and develop potential hydrocarbon accumulations from new reservoirs on the state leases. The existing fields are Bay De Chene, Queen Bess Island, Delta Duck Club, Rabbit Island, Vermilion Bay Field, Bayou Sale/Horseshoe Bayou, and West Cote Blanche Fields.

In the initial phase, Superior will obtain and develop seismic data over the entire area covered by the agreement. In addition, Superior will drill a minimum of ten exploratory wells within a two-year period to evaluate prospects developed in the seismic program. Five or more wells will be drilled below 15,000 feet.

LEGAL NOTICES

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:00 P.M. June 10, 1982, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at the Midland Regional Airport and Midland, Airport, Midland, Texas.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The project consists of applying a seal coat to approximately 9,500 square yards of street paving and reconstructing approximately 2,400 square yards of street paving at Midland Regional Airport; and constructing approximately 10,100 square yards of aircraft parking apron paving at Midland Airpark.

Bidders must submit a Cashier's Check or Certified Check issued by a bank satisfactory to the Owner, or a Proposal Bond from a reliable Surety Company, payable without recourse to the order of THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS, in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the largest possible bid submitted as a guaranty that the Bidder will enter into a contract and execute bonds and guaranty in the forms provided within ten (10) days after notice of award of contract to him. Bids without the required Check or Proposal Bond will not be considered.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S, as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.

The City of Midland, Texas reserves the right to hold all proposals for a period not to exceed 30 days after the date of receiving bids, to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. No bids may be withdrawn, after having been opened, within the 30 day period set out herein.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids, to waive formalities, and to accept the bid which seems most advantageous to the City's interest.

Bidders are expected to inspect the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions under which the work is to be done.

Attention is called to the fact that there must be paid on the project not less than the general prevailing rates of wages as set out in the SPECIAL PROVISIONS. However, the inclusion of such minimum schedule of wages does not release the Contractor from compliance with any State Wage Law that may be applicable. The Contractor must abide by the Wage and Hour Laws of the State of Texas and must pay not less than the rates legally prescribed or as set forth in the SPECIAL PROVISIONS, whichever is higher.

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Aviation, City Hall, Midland, Texas, at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703.

Copies of the Plans and Specifications may be secured from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, or from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703 upon a payment of $50.00 deposit for each set of documents. Refund of the deposit will be made as provided in the INSTRUCTIONS TO BIDDERS.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:00 P.M. June 10, 1982, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at the Midland Regional Airport, Midland, Texas.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The project consists principally of the constructin of approximately 130,000 square yards of porous friction course overlay on Runway 10-28. The project also includes marking, and other related items of work.

Additive Alternate Number 1 to the project includes the construction of an additional 158,400 square yards of porous friction course overlay on Runway 16R-34L, including marking, and other related items of work.

A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S, as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid.

Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

This project is an ADAP Project. The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, and to the equal opportunity clause, and the Bidder must supply all the information required by the proposal form.

The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certification of Nonsegregated Facilities prior to award of the contract, and to notify prospective subcontractors of the requirement of such a Certification where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Samples of the Certification and the Notice to Subcontractors appear in the specifications.

In all areas of employment women and men will be afforded equal opportunity for employment. The employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.

Minimum wages and labor rates for the construction of the proposed work have been established by the Secretary of Labor. A schedule of labor classifications and wage rates to be paid are included in the specifications and will be made a part of the contract. The bid form shall contain a statement that the prices bid are based on such wage rates.

This project is subject to Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action paragraphs as well as all other requirements stated in the Instructions to Bidders in the project specifications and contract documents.

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Aviation, Midland Regional Airport, Midland Texas, at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5414 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703.

Copies of the Plans and Specifications may be secured from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, or from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5414 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, upon a deposit of FIFTY DOLLARS ($50.00) as a guarantee of the safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the Contractor on submission of a bona fide bid on the work, with such plans and specifications; or upon returning the plans and specifications immediately after examination of same, and advising the engineer that bid will not be submitted; otherwise, the deposit shall be forfeited.

If today's not your day to buy a car, that's OK!

It probably comes as no surprise to you, but we really don't sell a car to every single person who visits our dealership.

We don't expect to.

We try, though, in every case, to be very helpful. We'll appraise your present car for you, show you what cars we have available for immediate delivery, explain the details of ordering a specific car from the factory, take you on a tour of our parts and service departments, go for a test drive if you like, and, of course, we'll present you with a very competitive and attractive cost proposal. Here are some examples:

1981 DATSUN 210
See this economical 2 door sedan. Stock no. 7457A has a gas saving 4 cylinder engine, 5 speed transmission, AM/FM/Cassette radio, and front bucket seats. $4545

1979 FORD THUNDERBIRD
Lots of leg room in this T-bird coupe. Stock no. 6028A has a V8 engine, automatic transmission, factory air conditioning front bucket seats, vinyl top and wire wheel covers. $4444

1980 FORD MUSTANG
Sporty hatchback coupe comes equipped with an economical 6 cylinder engine, automatic transmission, factory air-conditioning, front bucket seats, gauges. stock no. 6171A $4747

1978 CADILLAC EL DORADO BARRITZ
Full luxury in this full power, full comfort automobile. Leather seats, AM-FM 8 track stereo with CB, tilt steering, cruise control, vinyl top. Stock no. 8007 $6969

1980 CHEVROLET CHEVETTE
A super gas saver at a super price! Stock no. 6028 has a roof carrier, 4 speed transmission, AM radio, rear window defogger, and even more on this 4 door sedan. Stock no. 6160. $4444

1977 PONTIAC LEMANS
Family size 4 door hardtop. Stock no. 508A is equipped with factory air conditioning, cruise control, durable vinyl interior, power steering and power brakes. $3030

But if today's not the day, or this isn't the week, or the month, or even the year to buy... that's OK!

We just want to leave you with the impression that when it is time to buy a car... well, then we'd like to have that chance to serve you.
