Marines die in shelling; Car bomb explodes

Families get the news

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Lt. Mark Lange

Cmdr. E.Andrews

"Ever lost a kid?" Walter Lange asked Sunday afternoon, shortly after the television set in his home in the Detroit suburb of Fraser told him his son, U.S. Navy Lt. Mark A. Lange, 26, was dead.

Lange, a pilot, and his fellow crew member, bombadier Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr., 27, of Portsmouth, N.H., were flying their A-6E light fighter bomber on a retaliatory bombing raid over Syrian targets in the central Lebanese mountains Sunday when a surface-to-air missile crippled their plane, according to reports from the Pentagon.

At 5 p.m. Sunday, Walter Lange had no official confirmation of the message delivered with spare electronic grimness by a local Detroit television station. Four hours ear-

Goodman was shot down while on a bombing mission over Syrian positions. According to the Syrian foreign minister, Goodman is in "good health."

Two U.S. jets downed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A powerful car bomb exploded today in an apartment building garage, killing at least 10 people and injuring 84, and U.S. forces tried to determine the source of shelling that killed eight Marines hours earlier.

■ Reaction of U.S. leaders, Page 2A

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the explosion, which partially collapsed the nine-story building in a residential neighborhood of predominantly Moslem west Beirut. Beirut radio said rescuers identified 10 victims as they pulled blood-soaked bodies from the rubble.

U.S. jets flew sorties over the Beirut area at daybreak today, the state radio said, apparently trying to pinpoint the sources of a 4½-hour artillery assault Sunday night on the Marines' airport base.

A Western diplomatic source said the eight Marines apparently were killed by a single artillery shell.

Earlier Sunday, 28 U.S. warplanes staged a retaliatory attack against Syrian anti-aircraft positions that had fired Saturday on two unarmed U.S. Navy reconnaissance planes flying over Lebanon. No bombing raids were reported today.

Two of the U.S. planes were downed and one pilot was rescued after Sunday's raid, while another flier was captured by Syrian forces. Syria's defense minister said today a third airman died of injuries.

Engineer adapts conventional toys for handicapped

HASTINGS-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Bernadette Carroll had nearly despaired of finding toys for her handicapped 3-year-old daughter — even the simplest Jack-in-the-box was beyond the child's scope.

But then she discovered Dr. Steven Kanor, the special Santa who makes special kids' Christmas dreams come true.

In his basement workshop crammed with toys, wires, batteries and switches, Kanor devises means by which even the most severely handicapped child can play.

"No matter what handicap a kid has, I can design a toy he can operate," said the 47-year-old Kanor, a biomedical engineer by training. "I can make a switch that operates on an eye blink, a touch, a sip, a puff."

Kanor hadn't set out to become Kris Kringle to the nation's 200,000 to 300,000 handicapped children, but now that he does it regularly, he shows an almost religious zeal.

"There are almost no toys for these kids, but they want toys as much as other kids," he said recently.

Once a child learns how to use a switch to make a top spin or a train run, he "can operate a computer, he can communicate and can be educated. He can answer phones. He can do anything in his environment that can be controlled by a switch, and this makes them a useful human being and have a profession," Kanor said.

He got the idea for special toys about 15 years ago while working for the Nassau County branch of United Cerebral Palsy.

He was helping children who couldn't keep their heads up learn to sit up.

"Then I thought, what if they got something out of making the movement? If I attached a switch to their head or chest and something happened when the child moved, it was worth it," he said.

So Kanor began adapting conventional toys, from trucks to mechanical bears, so they could be operated by the smallest gesture of hand, head or eye. He sells his creations at cost, most between $30 and $100.

Some toys he gets wholesale by buying in bulk, but mostly he relies on the kindness of seven or eight part-time "elves" and donations from strangers. He supports himself by working as a consultant to United Cerebral Palsy of Westchester and other groups.

"There's little money in this," Kanor said. "So I know why the major toymakers are reluctant to go into the market for only a couple of hundred thousand kids while there are 30 million others to appeal to."

For children like Bernadette Carroll's daughter, Ruthie, the special toys can mean all the difference in the world.

Ruthie has an undiagnosed condition that wreaked havoc with the development of her fine motor control. She can hardly use her hands.

Kremlin: U.S.S.R. won't rejoin talks

MOSCOW (AP) — High-ranking Kremlin officials today made clear the Soviet Union had no intention of rejoining talks on medium-range nuclear arms in Europe while NATO's new missiles are deployed.

In an unusual news conference for Soviet and foreign reporters, they blamed the United States for the negotiations' breakdown and accused the Reagan administration of seeking to disrupt the parallel talks on long-range missiles.

Chief Kremlin spokesman Leonid M. Zamyatin also said President Yuri V. Andropov is "recovering well" from an illness that has kept him out of public view for 109 days. Andropov "is getting better and is tackling in full measure party affairs, affairs of state and affairs of the Council of Defense," Zamyatin said.

He did not elaborate on the illness other than to cite Andropov's Oct. 29 letter to physicians visiting Moscow. In the letter, Andropov said he could not keep an appointment with the the doctors because he had a cold.

On the dais for the news conference at the Foreign Ministry press center were Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov, the first deputy defense minister and chief of general staff; Georgi M. Kornienko, the first deputy foreign minister; and Zamyatin.

In an opening statement, Ogarkov vowed never to allow the United States to gain military superiority and restated Soviet plans to retaliate for the start of NATO deployment of new U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe.

"The United States will not have a superiority," Ogarkov said.

He said the arrival of cruise missiles in Britain and Pershing 2 components in West Germany had "changed the military balance."

Since the Soviet Union views those weapons as first-strike missiles, he said, the Soviet military was being forced to put new nuclear rockets on submarines cruising off U.S. shores.

Andropov announced the Kremlin's retaliatory plans in a statement Nov. 24 that was quoted repeatedly in today's 1¾-hour news conference.

Ogarkov and his fellow officials restated the Soviet contention that it was the United States that undermined the Geneva medium-range missile talks because it started the NATO deployment.

The Soviets discontinued the talks Nov. 23, after the first NATO missile parts started arriving in Britain and West Germany — fulfilling a vow Andropov made Oct. 27 in an interview with the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

Kornienko charged that the United States, from the start of the Geneva talks more than two years ago, sought to torpedo them so it could deploy its new medium-range missiles in Europe. He said the Soviets would not go back to the talks until the situation was returned to what it was before the NATO deployment started. Any other thought, he said, was "wishful thinking."

"The Soviet Union, naturally, would not like to think the obtaining situation is irreversible," Kornienko said. "If on the part of the NATO countries, readiness is shown to go back to the situation that existed before the beginning of the deployment...then the Soviet Union will be also prepared to do that."

Ogarkov said "The U. S. administration did not want a mutually acceptable accord on nuclear arms in Europe and did all it can to avoid such an accord. It seems that it is now seeking the same objective at the negotiations on the reduction and limitation of strategic arms."

Ogarkov later pointed out that the medium-range talks had broken down — blaming the United States once again, then said the strategic talks were "moving in the same direction."

Kornienko criticized Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany for statements indicating the Soviets might return to the talks even with the new NATO missiles in place. Kornienko said "one should, indeed, have a very very rich gift of fantasy to believe this."

He said Kohl distorted a statement by Andropov, interpreting only the part that said the Soviets hoped the present situation was not irreversible and ignoring the rest — which conditioned renewed talks on a return to the pre-deployment status.

Vice President George Bush greets Houstonians Kay and Al Ebert Jr.at a GOP fundraiser in Houston Sunday night. The $150-a-plate dinner drew 700 people.

Bush predicts Reagan victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Republicans have restored Americans' faith in their government by putting money in their pockets, Vice President George Bush said, predicting President Regan would win the 1984 election for that reason.

Bush, speaking to a crowd of about 700 at a GOP fund-raiser Sunday night, said the Reagan administration had put 3 million Americans back to work this year.

Bush was in Houston for a two-day visit. He was to attend a ceremony at an Army Reserve center today.

Bush said the unemployment rate "is falling faster than in any recovery period in the last 30 years."

"Economic growth has been putting over 300,000 people a month back to work," he said.

Reagan has not made an official announcement that he will be a candidate.

Bush accused Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale of proposing policies that would bring back a high inflation rate.

"John Glenn said that if Mondale kept all the promises he's made so far in his campaign, it would add $90 billion to the deficit," Bush said. "And that's just so far — he still has almost a year of promises to go."

The country's approval of Reagan's policies can be seen in the "groundswell of patriotism" which followed the U.S. invasion of Grenada.

He credited Reagan with beginning "a real revolution in this country — we turned around the tide of ever-increasing government encroachment on our lives and we began to rebuild our nation's defenses."

Bush and retiring U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, appeared at a fundraiser for the Harris County Republican party.

Supporters paid $150 apiece to hear the vice president's remarks.

Bush also praised the Reagan administration's action in dealing with crime.

He noted the administration has set up a "nationwide interdiction system to stop smugglers at our borders before those insidious drugs even get inside our country."

He also praised Reagan's Committee on Violent Crime, which is designed to investigate organized crime.

Bush said he is anxious for the campaign to begin because he wants to ask Americans the same question that Reagan asked former President Jimmy Carter in the fall of 1980 "Are you better off?" now than when Democrats ran the country.

Reagan: U.S. will keep hitting back

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, escalating the U.S. role in Lebanon with the first air strikes against Syrian gunners, says the United States will keep hitting back in retaliation for any attack on American forces in Beirut.

Even before Reagan could sound his warning Sunday, the U.S. Marine base at the Beirut airport was being shelled by Druse militiamen with mortars, rockets and artillery that killed eight Americans and wounded two others.

In response, American warships stationed offshore turned their heavy guns on the Druse positions.

"We don't seek hostilities there," Reagan said. "But we are going to defend our forces there.

"Yes, if our forces are attacked, we will respond," he promised. "We're going to defend our personnel that is there."

As he made his statement, Reagan was not yet aware of the attack on the Marines and the eight deaths. Asked later at a black-tie reception whether the United States would retaliate for the deaths, Reagan said, "As I understand it we are right now returning fire from naval artillery."

White House officials said Reagan's declaration of retaliation grew out of a policy developed in meetings last Thursday and Friday with foreign policy advisers on the problem of attacks against Americans in Lebanon. In those sessions, Reagan approved a "framework of response for any attacks" against the peacekeeping forces in Lebanon, according to one official, who declined to be identified.

■Soviets reaction to U.S. air strike, Page 8A

"I don't think the policy of defending ourselves has changed," the official said, "but we may do it with more vigor."

Reagan said the air strike was in retaliation for an attack by Syrian gunners against two unarmed U.S. surveillance planes a day earlier.

"Our mission remains what it was: to help stabilize the situation in Beirut until all the foreign forces can be withdrawn and until the government of Lebanon can take over the authority of its own territory," Reagan said. "But we are going to defend our forces there. And this was the reason or the purpose of the mission earlier today."

The Druse gunners opened fire on Marines at the airport about 12 hours after the U.S. air strike. One White House official said "it would be logical to assume" that the Druse attack was in response to the American air strike.

The air strikes, carried out by planes from the carriers John F. Kennedy and Independence, were the biggest punch thrown by the United States in Lebanon and represented a sharp increase in what had been a largely passive role for American peacekeeping forces there.

Until Sunday, American air power poised offshore had been withheld from punitive action against those firing on Marines. U.S. troops had responded to attacks with fire from artillery, mortars and helicopter gunships. U.S. Navy ships fired some rounds into the hills overlooking Beirut in September.

Reagan's policy drew sharp criticism from some contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Former Sen. George McGovern said the "(U.S. Marine) fatality list will grow as strikes and counter-strikes escalate. Step by step, the United States is approaching war with Syria."

Sen. Alan Cranston of California characterized Reagan's approach to foreign policy as "trigger happy and reckless" following the air strikes.

Cranston said that "when we are fired upon, it may be necessary to strike back, but we should not be in places where we invite attack."

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio said the U.S. government "should exercise the utmost caution and measure our response to this extremely dangerous situation very carefully," adding that he does not favor withdrawing U.S. Marines "at this time or under these circumstances."

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, said that "it's almost inevitable that there will be an escalation of the conflict the longer we remain on Lebanese soil."

Jesse Jackson said the American presence "is not neutral enough to be a peacekeeping factor." He called for a United Nations peacekeeping force or a non-aligned force to replace the Marines.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker Jr., attending the White House reception given by Reagan for singer Frank Sinatra, actor Jimmy Stewart and three other artists, said that as long as Marines are in Lebanon, "you can't leave them as sitting ducks."

Baker said the deaths underscored "that it's a turbulent situation and the sooner we can find a way to stabilize it and get our people out of there, the better off we're going to be. But we're not going to turn tail and run and we're not going to leave those people unprotected, and we're not going to deprive them of the right to protect themselves," said Baker.

Marines die in shelling; Two planes downed

The two pilots who fell in Syrian-held territory were identified as Lt. Mark A. Lange, 26, of Frasier, Mich., and Lt. Robert O. Goodman, 27, of Portsmouth, N.H.

They were classified by the Navy as missing but Syria's defense minister, Lt. Gen. Mustafa Tlass, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that Lange had died and said the body would be turned over to the U.S. Embassy in Damascus "in the course of the day."

Regarding Goodman, who was captured, Tlass said: "He is in excellent condition, in good health, suffering no injury of any kind."

He said interviews with Goodman would be allowed "as soon as the investigation is finished."

Asked when Goodman would be freed, Tlass said: "Like in all wars, when war is over. That is when the Americans will leave Lebanon."

Two former Israeli air force commanders, in interviews with the Tel Aviv newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth, criticized the performance of the U.S. pilots during Sunday's bombing raid.

"The American pilots yesterday paid for their lack of operational experience," Maj. Gen. Benny Peled. Added Maj. Gen. Mordechai Hod, "On a purely military level, the American operation cannot be called a success."

The car bombing occurred early this morning, and Lebanon's state radio said at least 10 people were killed and 84 injured in a blast that set huge fires in several blocks of the residential district.

Police said a 330-pound bomb was believed to have been in a Renault 12 car and that an undetermined number of people were believed trapped in the building.

The blast, which occurred about 200 yards from the Mokassed hospital, shattered windows and sent up huge billows of black smoke that hampered rescue efforts, police said.

The Marine base shelling claimed the heaviest U.S. death toll since the Oct. 23 suicide truck bomb attack that killed 239 servicemen at the base. By unofficial counts, a total of 254 U.S. servicemen have died in hostile action in Lebanon this year.

The Marines fired back with 155mm artillery, M-60 tanks, heavy machine guns and small arms while U.S. warships also pounded the sources of fire in the hills overlooking the base.

"It got quiet around 11 p.m. and has been quiet since," Marine spokesman Capt. Wayne Jones, said today. He said the 1,600 Marines, who are serving with the multinational peacekeeping force, remained on their highest state of alert. In Washington, a White House official said "it was logical to assume" the artillery attack was in response to the American air strike.

Asked who was firing at the Marine base, the Western diplomatic source said "apparently everybody," indicating the attacks were mounted by both Druse militiamen in the hills and their Shiite Moslem allies in Beirut's southern suburbs.

Although the hills above the base are mostly controlled by Druse anti-government militiamen, Jones said the Marines were unable to determine who fired on them.

The Druse rebels led by Walid Jumblatt are allied with Syria, as are Shiite Moslems who control Beirut's southern neighborhoods facing Marine positions.

Both groups fought the Lebanese army and rightist Christian irregulars of the Phalange Party in lebanon's latest civil war in September.

President Amin Gemayel returned today from the United States where he had talks with President Reagan on peacemaking efforts in Lebanon, the state radio said.

The U.S. air strike apparently angered Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, who said in a statement, "It is a dangerous indicator. We reject everything that makes our territory a battleground."

Wazzan called in Robert Pugh, U.S. charge d'affaires, and "requested an explanation about the raid," an official statement said, indicating the Lebanese government was not informed of the air attack in advance.

In Washington, Reagan, who approved the air raid, said Sunday, "We don't seek hostilities there. But we are going to defend our forces there."

The Pentagon said 28 jets staged the attack and a two-man A-6 jet and a single pilot A-7 aircraft were downed and one flier was rescued.

Crewmen's families get news of downed planes lier, a military messenger had told him "only that Mark was shot down and his status was unknown," Lange said in a telephone interview.

Marilyn Goodman was suspended in the same information vacuum at 8 p.m. Sunday, long after her daughter-in-law, Terry Ann Goodman, called her in tears to tell her the news.

"She didn't say anything at first," Mrs. Goodman said in a telephone interview from her New York home. "When I heard her crying, I assumed the worst. But it was not the worst...The plane was shot down. There was no news about whether he was missing or killed."

There were pictures, still photos an Associated Press photographer had taken of two downed American fliers. But Lange had seen no picture of his son when he spoke on the phone. He had heard about the attacks on U.S. reconnaissance planes that had prompted the retaliatory strike, about 28 planes going out on the bombing mission, about the downing of two of the planes and the rescue of one pilot. But nothing more about his son.

Mrs. Goodman was more fortunate. While watching television, she had seen a still picture of her son, showing him with his eyes open and his head back, leaning against another man. Her daughter-in-law had seen film of him on Cable News Network, Mrs. Goodman said.

The rescued pilot, Cmdr. Edward T. Andrews, 41, of Virginia Beach, Va., had managed to guide his crippled A-7 Corsair until he could parachute over the Mediterranean Sea, where he was picked up by a Lebanese gunboat. He was returned to the aircraft carrier USS Independence with minor bruises and sprains, according to a defense official.

Goodman, son of retired Lt. Col. Robert O. Goodman Sr. — one of the first wave of black officers to attain high rank in the Air Force — graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1978 and went into fighter pilot training shortly thereafter, his mother said. He is the father of two daughters, ages 5 and 2.

"His father was an Air Force flier, he grew up under that aura," his mother said. "Robert's quite a fighter; he's a little toughie, a tough nut."

Lange's father also was in the military, as an enlisted man in the Navy at the end of World War II.

Asked about his son, Walter Lange said simply, "He was doing what he was trained to do." Mark, one of five Lange children, is divorced and the father of a 1-year-old son.

Marilyn Goodman and Walter Lange had been under the impression that their sons' ship, the USS Kennedy, had left the danger zone of the eastern Mediterranean.

"As I understand it, he wasn't supposed to be there very long," said Mrs. Goodman. "I thought he would be gone by the end of the month... as soon as the Independence arrived to replace them."

In a taped message that Lange sent to his parents a few days ago, "he said he thought he was headed for the Indian Ocean," Walter Lange said.

Then he said calmly, "I do need to keep this (telephone) line clear."

Great Plains gets another dose of snow

By The Associated Press

As the Great Plains swallowed another snowy dose of winter today, more rain and cresting rivers threatened cleanup efforts in the South, where tornadoes and flooding left three people dead, one missing and caused millions of dollars in damage.

A one-day respite from the weekend's storms was expected to end tonight as severe thunderstorms move into the lower Mississippi Valley, and the same weather system was already dropping snow and freezing rain from the Rocky Mountains to the Great Lakes early today, the National Weather Service said.

The latest in a series of snowstorms in the West forced the closing of a major highway in Idaho, caused scores of minor accidents in Utah and left up to 11 inches of new snow in Colorado, officials said Sunday.

"Since Thanksgiving, everyone's saying enough's enough," said Ed Honodel of the National Weather Service in Denver.

In the South, flood warnings remained in effect today for streams in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana despite Sunday's partly sunny skies. While hundreds returned home after fleeing over the weekend as fierce twister-spawning thunderstorms dumped several inches of rain in a few hours, the worst flooding was yet to come in some places.

A boat carrying two men dropped more than 100 feet off a dam on the rain-swollen Broad River in Gaffney, S.C., on Sunday, authorities said. One man was reported missing while the other was rescued.

A Utah police dispatcher said Sunday that about 60 or 70 accidents, most of them minor, occurred in Weber and Davis counties, where roads were slick and visibility low from blowing snow.

Interstate 84 was closed from Tremonton, Utah, to Burley, Idaho.

Midkiff Street, railroad intersection to be closed

The intersection of Midkiff Street with the railroad will be closed for two weeks, according to Mike Butler with the city of Midland.

Missouri and Pacific Railroad and the city are working to repair that intersection. They are redoing the ties, the base and the rails, said Butler.

The railroad's intersection with Garfield now is open. It had been closed for two weeks for the same repairs.

Spacelab hosts electronic news conference

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Spacelab's astronauts probed mysteries of stars and sun and relayed TV pictures of Europe today before a talk with the president of the United States, the chancellor of West Germany and journalists in six nations.

The electronic conference was to start at 8:40 a.m. CST with President Reagan at the White House and Chancellor Helmut Kohl, visiting in Athens, Greece, speaking with the six astronauts aboard the shuttle Columbia and its Spacelab workshop.

Set to follow was a 20-minute news conference, with journalists asking questions from London, The Hague, Brussels, Bonn-Cologne, Geneva and Rome. U.S. correspondents talked with the space travelers on Thursday.

The European Space Agency built the billion-dollar Spacelab, which is riding in Columbia's cargo bay. Ulf Merbold, a West German physicist, is a member of the crew. The other members of the largest crew ever sent into space are Americans.

Working with Merbold in Spacelab on two round-the-clock shifts are Bob Parker, Owen Garriott and Byron Lichtenberg. Commander John Young and pilot Brewster Shaw alternate at Columbia's controls.

MERBOLD WARMED up for the Reagan-Kohl talk with a radio discussion early today with West Germany's science minister, Heinz Riesenhuber, who was in Cologne. The minister congratulated him on his role and hailed the American-European cooperation on the mission.

Then Merbold aimed a television camera out Columbia's window and relayed live to Mission Control pictures of the European continent, about half covered by clouds. But they clearly showed Britain, the Netherlands and Germany.

"It's very beautiful from up here; it's a very bright and shiny planet," he said.

Until today, the astronauts had been spending about half of each 90-minute orbit in sunlight and half in darkness as Columbia moves swiftly at 17,400 miles an hour from sunrise to sunset. But the ship is flying over a larger area of the world than any previous manned spacecraft, reaching as far north as northern Canada and to the tip of South America in the south.

By flying on this course, with high sun angles this late in the year, the astronauts will see nothing but sunlight until the end of the mission on Thursday.

THEY TOOK advantage of the unique lighting and their platform above the obscuring veil of Earth's atmosphere to start a non-stop survey of the sun, adjusting instruments to measure radiation, energy and ultraviolet light emission from the solar surface. The information when analyzed on Earth may help scientists understand more about how the sun affects our weather, climate and radio transmissions.

Merbold and Parker, Spacelab's Red Team, also directed telescope-cameras deep into space, gathering information they hope will lead to a better understanding of stars and galaxies throughout the universe. In one experiment, a French-made camera was used to make a wide-scale study of Earth's Milky Way Galaxy.

As the astronauts began their second week in orbit, they also continued the extensive medical and materials processing experiments that have absorbed much of their time on the flight.

Two materials furnaces, an Earth-mapping camera and some other equipment broke down over the weekend, but the space travelers, using screwdrivers, pliers and ideas generated by ground control, fixed most of them.

Things were going so well, that Mission Control told the astronauts on Saturday they were being kept in orbit an extra day to obtain more science data. "That's good news," pilot Shaw responded.

The crew is to land after 10 days in space at 8:01 a.m. Pacific time Thursday at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

COLUMBIA and Spacelab were performing so well that one of the flight directors coming off shift, John Cox, said: "This is the first shift I think that nobody put up a failure summary message."

"They're a very happy bunch up there," reported Rick Chappell, a mission scientist at the control center.

Garriott, an amateur radio operator, continued in his off-duty hours to beam his call letters, W5LFL, and hams around the world reported hearing it loud and clear.

On Sunday, Garriott reached fellow ham buff King Hussein of Jordan, who told him, "We're very, very proud of you, and we share this pride with all the people of America, all the people of the world."

Cold front moves into Panhandle

By The Associated Press

Another cold front moved into the Texas Panhandle early today, bringing the threat of showers and thunderstorms to Southeast Texas and the coast tonight.

A weak Pacific cool front extended before dawn from the Red River in North Central Texas southward through the Hill Country. Mostly clear skies were noted behind the front, while low clouds, fog and scattered drizzle developed ahead of the line.

The cold front was expected to overtake the weaker front later in the day and produce scattered thunderstorms, mostly in Southeast Texas and along the coast.

Volunteer paid with smiles

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — Lawson Peugh is a square-shouldered man with the strong square hands of a laborer and the ruddy and roughened skin of a man who has spent 40 or more years in hay fields. He is the kind of man who would look in place on a construction site, or in a dairy barn or on a tractor.

Now, he looks in place in a Northeast Texas center for children with multiple disabilities.

One morning about nine years ago, the retired grandfather brought his wife, Lou Jane, to her job as a teacher at the Hopkins County Opportunity Center and stopped to look in. "I saw things that needed to be done, so I offered to help," said the soft-voiced Peugh.

The center, a part of the Denton State School's Mental Health-Mental Retardation outreach program, provides therapy, educational services and day care for children with multiple handicaps. It opened in its present location on Church Street 12 years ago.

Doris Rawls, director of the center, said a number of people volunteer to help at the center "but they come and go. Lawson has been here so long that I don't think that any of us can really remember when he wasn't here for us whenever we needed him."

Over the years, Peugh, in addition to doing a lengthy list of handyman chores of painting, carpentry, yard work and all manner of things that it takes to keep an old, large frame house habitable and functional, also keeps the center's bus running, fills in as substitute bus driver and rescues stranded center personnel when their own transportation fails.

Most of all, Mrs. Rawls said, he is a warm, loving grandfather to all of the children, and someone who can get a smile from a child.

Peugh, who spent most of his adult life doing farm work and running a dairy, said an early retirement, forced on him by a medical problem, suddenly left him with a lot of vacant hours to fill. At that time, he was worried about what he could do to occupy himself. "But now I find that I don't have enough hours in the day," he said.

Mrs. Rawls added that Peugh is modest to the point of being shy, "and I guess that makes it easy for us just to take him for granted. He just comes in and does whatever we need done. We've become so used to it that we don't even stop to say thank you, and that's the only pay he gets."

Peugh said firmly, "I get paid with every smile I get — with the eyes that light up when they see me."

Blood test proves man innocent

ODESSA (AP) — An Oklahoma man says he is "very disappointed" in a police investigation that almost put him on trial for aggravated sexual abuse before a blood test showed he was not the assailant.

The charge against Joe Robert McDonald was dropped last week after the test showed he had a different blood type than the man who allegedly raped a 19-year-old woman on Oct. 19, 1982.

The woman was assaulted in the same Odessa hotel where McDonald was staying during the Permian Basin Oil Show. A laundry ticket with his name on it was found in the room where the rape allegedly took place, the victim identified him, and he failed a polygraph test.

But the 44-year-old oilfield equipment salesman told the Odessa American from his home in Crescent, Okla., that he is bitter that his case almost went to trial.

"I think the whole thing was investigated very shabbily, by both the police department and the DA (district attorney)," said McDonald, a former police officer. "I've been around law enforcement all my life. I'm very disappointed with the judicial process down there."

McDonald said investigators should have determined from the blood test months ago that he was not the assailant. He said instead, he had to mortgage his house to help pay for his defense.

According to testimony in a July 27 pretrial hearing, the victim and a companion were offered a room at the Holiday Inn by a stranger who wanted to help, citing the typical room shortage during oil shows.

The stranger, the woman and her companion then went to the room, where the woman was left alone with the man.

The woman testified she was dragged from the room, down a hall and into another room, where she was raped. Her assailant released her several hours later, according to pretrial testimony.

Police began looking for McDonald after finding his laundry ticket.

Schoolteacher slain during robbery, kidnapping

IRVING (AP) — A schoolteacher was shot twice in the head after she and her husband were abducted in their car by a masked robber, police said.

The body of Bessie Ghavam, 45, a teacher in the Dallas suburb, was found about 7:30 a.m. Sunday in a ditch, said police Sgt. Richard Langton. The victim had been shot with a .22-caliber pistol, Langton said.

Mehdi Seyed Ghavam, 28, said he and his wife were abducted and robbed as they drove to a grocery store near their home late Saturday.

Ghavam said he lost consciousness when he was beaten after being pushed from the car on a deserted road. He said he woke up in an ambulance early Sunday. He was later released from the hospital.

Ghavam said a pickup swerved in front of his car about 10:20 p.m. Saturday. He said a man with a ski hat pulled down over his face emerged from the truck, pulled a gun and climbed into the back seat of the couple's car.

The gunman ordered Ghavam to keep driving and tied Mrs. Ghavam's hands behind her.

Gilbert doesn't do role justice

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — So many stories have no business showing up on television that it's a shame when one story, so compelling it cried out for dramatization, becomes less than the grabber it should have been.

Tonight's NBC film, "Choices of the Heart," will move viewers, but not far enough. Instead of justifiable tears, the bottom-line feeling, sad to say, will be emotional distance.

"Choices of the Heart" is a fact-based profile of Jean Donovan, one of four American churchwomen murdered in El Salvador three years ago. Five former Salvadoran national guardsmen have been charged with homicide but have yet to stand trial.

NBC deserves praise for treating this tragedy sensitively, but poor pacing and the wrong choice of Melissa Gilbert as the lead character turn a poignant concept into a second-rate film.

Miss Gilbert was so taken by the script that her production company bought a piece of the action.

Miss Gilbert, 19, grew up in America's living rooms. The alumnus from "Little House on the Prairie," who gave creditable performances in "Splendor in the Grass" and "The Diary of Anne Frank," displayed a perky personality here, but the heavier parts of this role seem beyond her dramatic reach.

Notice that whenever Miss Gilbert is required to register and hold on to any intensity, the camera quickly flees, or she turns away. Jean should be lighting up the screen, but Miss Gilbert doesn't have the presence to make it happen. Her blank stare doesn't do justice to this remarkable woman.

Jean's metamorphosis from a carousing, materialistic, self-interested girl into a caring, committed woman of the world is the film's focus. It was her lay missionary work, tending to the hungry and the hurt in El Salvador, that saved her from herself.

After a well-to-do childhood in Cleveland, she became an aggressive man-chaser and boozer in college. In Ireland, where she studied for a year, she's visited by a priest, Father Phelan, played by Martin Sheen. She offers him liquor and cornflakes. "Sin comes so easy for me," she says. "Being good is the hard part."

Through church volunteer work, her consciousness is raised a little. But she still holds back. "I want to change the world, but I don't want to give up anything to do it," she tells the priest.

She certainly won't relinquish her boyfriends, the first one played by Patrick Cassidy of "Bay City Blues" and then Peter Horton. She's not the typical missionary, arriving for her training in an MG, and toting her golf clubs.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠983 ♡AKJ76 ♢A10754 ♣A10754
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A. — If you follow point count slavishly, you will probably come to the conclusion that your hand is worth a raise to three clubs. We feel that this jump would be an underbid. There are many minimum hands your partner could hold that would offer excellent play for slam. To investigate the possibilities properly, we suggest that you start with a jump shift of two diamonds. Naturally, you will support clubs at your next turn, vigorously if necessary.

Q.2 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ6 ♡A10982 ♢7 ♣KJ65
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♠ 2 ♣ ?
What action do you take?
A. — It is seldom a good idea to make a low-level penalty double when your side has game-going values and you have a fit for your partner's suit. Therefore, we would eschew the double of two clubs in favor of getting to game. We would start by responding two hearts. Since a new suit by responder is forcing on opener, nothing more is required of us now.

Q.3 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ10962 ♡Q84 ♢954 ♣8
Partner opens the bidding with three no trump. What do you respond?
A. — If you and your partner have a way of asking for aces over a three no trump opening bid, by all means go ahead and use your methods. If you do not, we suggest that you make the value bid of six spades. Partner rates to have three aces but even if he does not, you might get away with the bid if the opponents fail to cash their two aces right away.

Q.4 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ ♡Q983 ♢AQ10952
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♠ Dble 2 ♠ Pass
Pass Dble Pass 2 ♠
Pass ?
What action do you take?
A. — You have forced partner to bid, and he has obliged with what could be a worthless hand with only four spades. Therefore, to either raise spades or pass is risky — in a spade contract partner might lose control of the hand if he is forced to ruff clubs with your high trumps. Bid three diamonds to see how partner reacts. If he passes, you are undoubtedly in the best spot. If he rebids spades, showing a long suit, gamble on game.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠6 ♡K1087 ♢QJ853 ♣J52
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ 4 ♠ Pass Pass
Dble Pass ?
What action do you take?
A. — Had your partner wanted you to bid unconditionally, he could have bid four no trump instead of doubling. His decision to double is primarily for penalties. Since you have some useful defensive assets, you should be quite content to pass.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♡84 ♢65 ♣AKQ10876
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♠ 2 ♣ Pass 2 NT
Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A. — We are going to suggest a course of action that might, at first, seem rather bold. Raise to three no trump. You are bringing partner seven sure tricks so, unless your opponents can take five fast tricks, partner should be a shoo-in for nine tricks at no trump.

Help for children

Throughout the nation, there is growing awareness about the ramifications of divorced parents and the children they all too frequently fail to support. In denying their children the support they deserve, those individuals are refusing not only to meet their social responsibility as parents but also they are increasing the welfare burden on other taxpayers.

In Texas, voters acknowledged the problem less than a month ago when they voted to amend the state constitution to allow for garnishment of wages of individuals guilty of non-compliance with court orders to provide that support. Prior to that time, Texas historically had repelled moves toward garnishment, but the state's residents paid the price in higher welfare bills.

The statistics in Texas alone are staggering. According to the Texas Department of Community Affairs, U.S. Census Bureau statistics revealed that among female headed households with children under 18 in the state, 58.6 percent were living in poverty during 1975.

Nationally, the figures are even more sobering. U.S. Census Bureau statistics show that during 1981, 8.4 million women were raising children in homes without fathers. Thirty percent of those families were living within the government-recognized definition of poverty, less than half of the women had been awarded child support in a court, and two million of the women received only partial child support or nothing at all.

In all, the Census Bureau noted that defaults on court-ordered child support in 1981 amounted to $4 billion.

Texas has taken a step in the right direction to correct this wrong and to ensure that the state's children are supported, but by those who should support them — their parents. Unfortunately some other states haven't been as progressive.

During recent weeks the Congress has tackled this major problem. Bipartisan legislation has been introduced which would require states to withhold delinquent child support payments from the paychecks of parents. While officials say the legislation has a good chance of passage, it still wouldn't take effect until 1986.

We're proud Texas has already moved in this direction and believe other states should do the same. Our children are deserving of support, but taxpayers aren't the ones who should provide it when the parents are around.

Timely warning

The warning comes every year at this time but it bears repetition and emphasis: Be alert to the possible hazards of the toys you buy for your youngsters.

A 10-year-long campaign for toy safety waged by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, aided by the voluntary efforts of manufacturers, has produced impressive results. Last year, toy-related injuries reported to the commission dropped by 23,000 from the level of 1977.

Nevertheless, 17 American children died last year in mishaps caused by toys and some provably unsafe toys still reach the store shelves. Last year, the Consumer Product Safety Commission averaged one toy recall a week.

The manufacture and sale of toys in the United States is a $6 billion-a-year business and about 60 percent of the sales take place in the weeks preceding Christmas.

The products safety group urges shoppers to take any toys that catch their eye out of the box and feel for sharp edges or points that cut. If these hazards are present or if the toys have long strings and small parts that come loose easily, put them back and look for something else. Parents are further advised to abide strictly by the toy labels which state the appropriate ages of the children for whom the toys are intended.

A little common sense, patience and awareness can assure a household a joyful and tragedy-free holiday season.

Another View:

A merry craze

If you didn't think Christmas brought out the best and worst in people, just look at the "Cabbage Patch Kids" craze.

The homely little dolls with yarn hair and gimmicky adoption certificates have caused riots among Yuletide shoppers panicked over their limited supply and the prospect of disappointed kids.

Several people have been injured in shopper stampedes. Others have been arrested for such Scrooge-like activities as stealing the doll from a lucky purchaser. Scalpers also are selling the 16-inch creation of artist Xavier Roberts for more than double the suggested retail price of $20, and one New Jersey outlet reportedly has set up a clearinghouse to match people desperate for a doll with sellers.

Those wondering why this particular doll is the cause of so much chaos should think back to such past Christmas fads as the pet rock and last year's E.T., which some retailers reportedly can't get rid of now. At least the "Cabbage Patch Kids" are a throwback to bygone Christmases when a child was delighted with something that she or he could cuddle and dress. As anyone subjected to television commercials can attest, this was supposed to be the Christmas to buy one's family a home computer or video game equipment. So it is both refreshing and amusing to see an almost old-fashioned doll top Santa's gift list — even if the result has been a lot of immature adult behavior.

Ironically, those individualized "Cabbage Patch" dolls were designed by a computer company, Coleco Industries, the maker of the popular Adam computer. Regardless of how many children are delighted or disappointed because of this fad, it should be Merry Christmas for Coleco stockholders.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Neglect ended oil's golden age

WASHINGTON — The watchdogs of the press have leaped from Koreagate to Billygate to Debategate in hot pursuit of a scandal equal to Watergate. Yet all the while, it was lying right under their noses — a scandal that, in fact, dwarfs Watergate. I call it Oilgate.

Jack Anderson

The villain of the piece is the same black-jowled Richard Nixon who was caught in the whirlpool of Watergate. Yet he escaped judgment for Oilgate, which was far more disastrous.

He abandoned the oil policies of the past and allowed the OPEC cartel to run the price of oil into the stratosphere. This brought economic distress that staggered the industrial world and devastated the Third World.

In this country, for example, every dollar that was added to the price of crude stunted economic growth by 0.1 percent to 0.2 percent. Translated into human terms, this meant misery for millions.

Yet despite the calamitous consequences, Nixon succeeded in perpetrating the fiction that the oil debacle was caused by inexorable forces: Nature was running low on oil; demand was overtaking supply; the OPEC nations were coalescing into an unassailable force; the historical resurgence of Islam could not be repressed.

None of this was true. Nature was NOT running out of oil. On the contrary, oil was being discovered almost twice as fast as it was being used.

Demand was NOT overtaking supply. Though consumption was rising, there was enough in the cataloged reserves to meet the anticipated demand far into the 21st century.

OPEC was NOT coalescing; Islam was NOT resurging; the Arabs were NOT uniting. They were, in fact, in disarray, having been repeatedly and variously defeated by the Israelis, by the oil companies and by each other.

What happened simply is that Uncle Sam was tied down by Lilliputians. And Richard Nixon helped to tie the knots.

He inherited an almost impregnable structure of oil abundance, oil stability and oil security. Then, step by step, he dismantled the machinery that had supported the golden age of oil.

The United States was the world's greatest oil producer when Nixon was inaugurated. We imported almost no Middle East oil, and we carefully maintained the capacity to export oil temporarily to places where it might be needed in time of emergency.

This made it futile for the Arabs or anyone else even to dream of seizing oil power by breaking their contracts and cutting off supplies. Attempted Arab embargoes in 1956 and 1967 were easily thwarted. The last time was just a year before Nixon was elected.

Visualize the world's oil reserves as a vast, black ocean that was constantly expanding. The crude needed for daily consumption oozed through oilgates that regulated the flow.

The U.S. strategy was to keep this daily stream overflowing. All that was required was a slight but constant surplus, which provided enough leverage to hold prices down.

To maintain the existing oil order in the world was a peaceful process — a commercial process, with an occasional diplomatic gesture. All Nixon had to do was occasionally oil a machine that was already running beautifully and had been running beautifully for decades.

It was the negative things Nixon did, the routine chores he neglected — rather than a failure to take controversial new actions — that caused him to lose control of the oilgates.

The oil companies manned those gates under the watchful eye of the U.S. government. Together, the industry and the government had scheduled various domestic oil projects — in Alaska, offshore and elsewhere — that would have kept the leverage in U.S. hands. Nixon botched these domestic options.

The oil catastrophe could still have been averted if he had merely continued the foreign oil policy of the past. This had meant helping U.S. oil companies gain entry around the world and setting up the machinery for supplying Europe in the event of an oil cutoff in the Middle East.

From Harry Truman through Lyndon Johnson, U.S. presidents had blocked the oil potentates from manipulating the oilgates and had backed the existing oil order — not with force, but with moral support. It was understood in Washington that the oil order was keeping the oil flowing and preventing its price from skyrocketing.

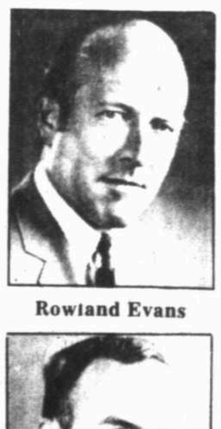

Nixon reversed all this. He actually helped the oil states break up the united front of the oil companies. After that, it was one defeat after another for the Western oil structure, as each puny oil sheikdom demanded and got gains in prices and power.

INSIDE REPORT:

Kissinger: Memories of Nazis

WASHINGTON — The Kissinger Commission on Central America was unified by the shock treatment of its recent visit to Marxist Nicaragua, privately summed up by the commission chairman as reminiscent of his boyhood days in Nazi Germany.

Rowland Evans

Henry A. Kissinger's colleagues were profoundly moved when he told them that the Sandinista totalitarian state evoked unpleasant memories of Germany before World War II. This fortified their own perception of Nicaragua, all but eliminating sympathy within the bipartisan commission for the Managua regime.

Robert Novak

Kissinger is now expected to produce a nearly unanimous commission report, with support from its two most prominent Democratic members: former Democratic national chairman Robert S. Strauss and AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland. The most likely dissenter is Mayor Henry Cisneros of San Antonio.

THE HEART OF ASSAD

The unusual appearance in Damascus of two prominent French heart specialists has heightened speculation that Syrian President Hafez Assad has suffered a heart attack, not appendicitis, as reported by the Syrian government.

The evidence is incomplete, however. Secretary of State George Shultz confides that he knows no more about the ailment that hospitalized Assad last month than what he reads in the newspapers. The Saudi Arabian foreign minister, Prince Saud, never saw Assad when he spent a recent week in Damascus working on the Lebanon crisis.

Reagan administration officials privately say a heart attack could create enough doubts about Assad's future to destabilize his government and promote the new U.S.-Israeli campaign to frighten Syria out of Lebanon.

NO GLENN FOR VP

Although some Democratic Party leaders whisper about a Mondale-Glenn "dream ticket," Walter F. Mondale's brain trust has little interest in Sen. John H. Glenn as their vice presidential candidate.

Former vice president Mondale wants a running mate with whom he feels compatible, and Glenn does not fit that category. Of course, if Mondale defeats Glenn in a bruising struggle going down to the wire at the San Francisco convention, he might put him on the ticket in the interest of party harmony.

But the front-runner on his preferred list is Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas. Mondale strategists believe he might be necessary to carry politically-vital Texas. Beyond that, Bentsen's ties to big business and expertise on economic questions would strengthen Mondale in areas of notable weakness.

DAN RATHER'S STRAW

The straw that broke the camel's back inside the White House and caused presidential aides to go public against economic adviser Martin Feldstein was praise for him by a leading media critic of President Reagan: Dan Rather.

Rather's commendation of Feldstein over CBS for criticizing Reagan fiscal policies closely followed Feldstein praise from The New York Times. "Marty is supplying ammunition for everybody who's out to get the president," one White House aide told us.

Feldstein's fall from grace was preordained weeks earlier when he failed to get the message that chief of staff James Baker did not want a pre-election tax increase. Ever since, Baker's private comments have roasted Feldstein.

HELMS' RESURRECTION

Contradicting gloomy predictions by campaign consultants that opposition to the Martin Luther King national holiday would ruin him, it has facilitated the political resurrection of Sen. Jesse Helms in North Carolina.

His advisers now admit they were wrong in warning the conservative Republican that his assault on King would play into the hands of his Democratic challenger, Gov. Jim Hunt. Instead, telephone surveys in rural areas show a phenomenal leap for Helms.

Trailing Hunt by some 20 percentage points during the summer, Helms was given up for dead by many national Republican strategists. But heavy anti-Hunt advertising closed that gap to six points, according to a non-partisan survey. A later survey in the Democratic 8th Congressional District shows Helms 14 points ahead of Hunt, larger than Ronald Reagan's margin over Jimmy Carter in 1980. The only explanation for this new surge is Helms' filibuster against the King holiday.

CHARLEY REESE

Soviets stressing survival

Most Americans know by now that the Soviets speak with a forked tongue. What they say for our consumption and what they say to their own people are usually opposites.

Charley Reese

No where is this more evident than on the subject of nuclear war. to the West, they play the line that they think nuclear war is unwinnable, unsurvivable and all of the other terrible things our own liberals say. To their own people, beginning in the second grade, they give a quite realistic picture of the possibilities and train them to survive and function in a nuclear war environment.

I have a translation of a Soviet civil defense textbook, first published in 1970, and still used in revised editions in Soviet institutions of higher learning.

It is interesting to note what they were saying in this textbook while they were publicly preaching detente to outsiders. In the introduction, the authors write:

"United States imperialists ... are the major reactionary force at the present time. the alliance between the USA and the Federal Republic of Germany is extremely dangerous to the cause of peace. The imperialist predators are achieving militarization of the economy on a gigantic scale and are preparing for thermonuclear war via the armaments race."

It is interesting to note that while Americans are being told that civil defense is useless, the Soviet view is quite different. Again from the same Soviet textbook:

"Preserving the population, ensuring economic stability, and preserving the material and technical resources are matters of paramount importance during a war. Thus, under modern condition, civil defense has become a factor of strategic importance." The emphasis is theirs, not mine.

This 374-page Soviet text is the most complete book on the effects of nuclear war that I've seen and I can assure you that the Soviets are not planning to sit in a corner and quietly die. They are planning to win a nuclear war and while Carl Sagan, the astronomer-showman, and other American liberals may not think that can be done, the Soviet general staff thinks it can.

The Soviet civil defense program is not merely a paper program. They spend heavily on it. Civil defense training in compulsory. Civil defense is a military responsibility and head of civil defense holds the post of Deputy Minister of Defense, a position equal to the other military service chiefs.

Chapter headings of the textbook will give you an idea of the amount of detailed information provided Soviet citizens. There are chapters on civil defense goals, organizational structure, characteristics of nuclear weapons, dispersal and evacuation, individual means of protection, shelter design and construction, industrial civil defense, urban planning and civil defense, conduct of the population, radiation detectors, conducting a reconnaisance after a nuclear blast, rescue and emergency restoration techniques, and lengthy appendices of technical data.

The Soviet text says in conclusion: "A great deal of work is being done on disseminating civil defense information at national economic facilities to reach the point where each worker, employee, and collective farm worker will learn and be thoroughly informed on the characteristics of weapons of mass destruction and, mainly, individual methods and means of protection from them and practical application of the methods in a center of mass destruction."

In the resolution of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the Council of Ministers of the USSR ... it is stated, 'Increasing the level of mass defense among the population must be considered one of the most important tasks of Party, government, trade union, and Young Communist League organizations."

That is exactly opposite what is happening in our country. We get soap opera versions of Doomsday but virtually no useful information about civil defense. for some reason, many Americans think that preparing to survive the worst will provoke the Soviets. What a laugh.

The Soviets are striving to accomplish three things: first strike capability, a strong air defense system to take out as much of what we have left as possible, and an extrememly strong civil defense system. That combination will give them the capability of winning a nuclear war. That doesn't necessarily mean they want to start one, but it does mean they intend to finish it if it does start.

Greyhound bus drivers asked to OK settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a month-long, violence-marred strike, drivers at Greyhound Lines are being asked to approve a tentative settlement that would cut their wages and force them to accept other financial concessions.

Union leaders said they would urge the more than 12,700 striking Greyhound workers to ratify the tentative settlement announced during the weekend and end the walkout against the country's largest inter-city bus line.

A vote, however, is not expected to be completed for several weeks. Some union workers, still walking the picket line Sunday, predicted the rank and file would reject the pact reached by their leaders.

"We bit the bullet hard on economic issues," conceded a member of the union's bargaining council Sunday. But he said the agreement assures that key work rules would not be changed and that strikers would return to work with their seniority protected.

Neither union nor company officials would publicly discuss details of the proposed settlement.

But sources involved in the talks confirmed that the settlement included major union concessions, including a 7.8 percent wage cut and a commitment by employees to pay an additional 4 percent into the pension plan.

"We thought that we went as far as we could go," said one union leader.

About a week ago, striking union members rejected by a 96 percent margin a company proposal that also had included a 7.8 percent wage cut. That offer was forwarded by the union without a recommendation.

After two days of bargaining with the help of a federal mediator, the 31-member bargaining council of the Amalgamated Transit Union on Saturday approved the tentative contract by a 2-to-1 margin.

Jim Hodges, a member of the council and president of the Kansas City local, acknowledged that the pact included concessions, but he said he intended to work for its ratification "because the alternative is no job at all."

Federal mediator Kay McMurray, who announced the agreement Saturday night, said he expected the pact to be ratified by striking workers, but a vote might not be completed until Dec. 20.

"It's a good settlement, and I don't think there will be any problem in obtaining ratification," McMurray, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, told reporters. He said the union leaders are expected to strongly recommend its approval.

Among the workers, reaction was mixed. Willie [illegible]ller, a 10-year veteran in Miami, said, "Just because the (union) council accepts, it doesn't mean the rank and file will."

But Tom Roach, union committeeman in Dayton, Ohio, said members will take a hard look at the document.

"At this point, if we don't sign it now, it will be March before we go back to work," Roach said.

Meanwhile, the drivers and other employees remained off their jobs and on the picket line while the bus company continued to operate.

Jackson wants to alter Democratic Party rules

Jesse Jackson

WASHINGTON (AP) — With just over two months to go before the 1984 presidential season officially begins, Jesse Jackson wants to change the rules to give him a better chance of becoming the Democratic Party's presidential nominee.

Even as Democratic presidential hopefuls gather today in the name of party unity for a cross-country fund-raising extravaganza, Jackson heated up a debate over Democratic rules by accusing the party of crafting the regulations to "lock out" blacks, women and other minorities.

"My concern is that the party make room for the locked out," the black presidential hopeful said Sunday. "These rules have a restricting impact that makes it more difficult for the majority of the party to get in.

"If the Democratic Party adequately includes black, Hispanics, women and Asians, it cannot lose. If it locks us out, t cannot win," he said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" program.

The civil rights leader did not mention that the rules require half of the 3,933 delegates at the party's 1984 national convention in San Francisco to be women. Nor did he say that the rules require state parties to make certain that blacks, Hispanics, low-income Democrats and other minorities are included as delegates in proportion to their share of the Democratic vote.

The party's rules were adopted by the party on March 26, 1982, on the recommendation of a commission headed by North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, which included blacks, Hispanics and women. Party officials, led by Democratic National Committee Charles T. Manatt, have fought all efforts to modify the rules since then.

Jackson argued Sunday that "We still have time to make an adjustment" before the first event of the 1984 season, the Iowa precinct caucuses on Feb. 20, 1984. But there is no existing mechanism for the Democratic Party to change the rules before the season begins.

Jackson's aides were working on a policy statement on the rules to be presented to Manatt this week, possibly as early as today or Tuesday. That would add more controversy to the two-day, five-city "presidential sweep" featuring the party's 1984 hopefuls that is designed to raise nearly $2 million for the 1984 Democratic Party war chest.

Another spat over rules has already cost the sweep the unified participation of all eight presidential hopefuls. Sen. Alan Cranston of California withdrew, saying he was angered by the national party's refusal to bend the rules to allow New Hampshire and Iowa to start the presidential season a week earlier than the rules allow.

But Jackson's challenge to the rules is much broader than Cranston's and potentially more divisive.

"I challenge these rules because they threaten my quest for the nomination," Jackson said.

Democratic presidential hopefuls want U.S. forces out of Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Democratic presidential candidates, critical of President Reagan for U.S. air strikes against Syrian forces, are renewing earlier calls for withdrawal of U.S. troops from Lebanon.

Their reaction ranged from urging the president to use the "utmost caution" in responding to any provocation, to avoiding "approaching war with Syria."

Syria's ambassador to the United States, Rafic Jouejati, said Sunday that his country would continue to defend itself, its positions, its independence and the sovereignty of Lebanon.

"We are not at war with the United States. But the escalation is imposed on us, and what are we supposed to win by that?" Jouejati said on CBS-TV.

U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick said the Syrians have been informed that "we will take appropriate action" if U.S. planes are fired upon again.

One of the eight Democratic candidates, former Sen. George McGovern, said the remaining Marines in Lebanon should be brought home "before they too fall victim to President Reagan's mishandling of American policy in that region." Eight more Marines died in fighting Sunday in Beirut, raising the U.S. death toll there to more than 250 since summer.

McGovern added that the "(U.S. Marine) fatality list will grow as strikes and counter-strikes escalate. Step by step, the United States is approaching war with Syria."

Sen. Alan Cranston of California characterized Reagan's approach to foreign policy as "trigger happy and reckless" following the air strikes. Cranston said, "When we are fired upon, it may be necessary to strike back, but we should not be in places where we invite attack."

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio said he does not favor withdrawing the Marines from Beirut, but he urged the U.S. government to "exercise the utmost caution and measure our response to this extremely dangerous situation very carefully."

Glenn said the U.S. mission in Lebanon must be more clearly defined to avoid a deterioration into "a direct Syrian-American confrontation."

"If an American war in Lebanon is not the administration's intention, then let's stop stumbling toward it," Glenn said.

Another candidate seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, said the conflict in Lebanon will almost inevitably escalate the longer U.S. troops remain there.

"Our role in that country cannot and must not be a military role," said Hart. "It should be diplomatic and political. I'm deeply concerned that the administration will increases the level of hostilities particularly with the Syrians. I don't think its healthy."

Dropouts regret leaving school

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the 14 percent of the high school sophomores who dropped out of school in 1980 now regret their decision to leave their education behind, a government survey says.

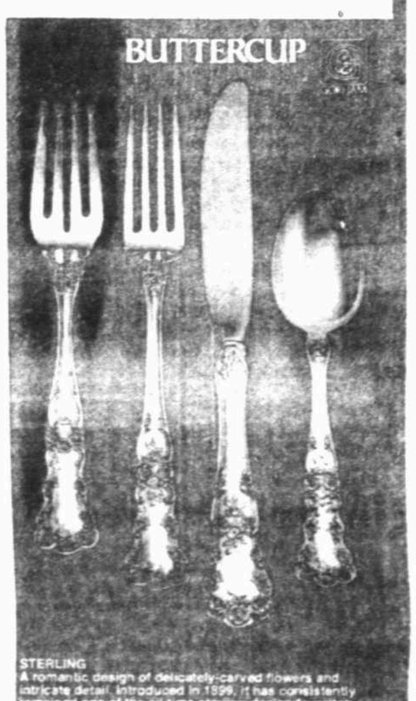

The National Center for Education Statistics said Sunday that more than 27 percent of the dropouts were unemployed or so dissatisfied with their jobs they were looking for other work.

Pediatrician wins landslide in Venezuelan election

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Jaime Lusinchi, a pediatrician who heads the opposition Democratic Action party, won a landslide victory over 11 rivals in Venezuela's presidential elections.

He will take office Feb. 2, ending five years of rule by the Social Christian Party with a 3-to-2 edge over his nearest challenger in Sunday's balloting.

However, his promise to revive the country's economy will be difficult to keep. More than 17 percent of the work force is unemployed and half of Venezuela's $35 billion foreign debt comes due within the next year.

No sweeping changes are expected with the shift of governing parties, which have alternated in power for the past 25 years. Both follow middle-of-the-road policies, and Democratic Action, the equivalent to Social Democratic parties in other countries, is not expected to pursue high-spending populist programs because of the country's economic plight.

The Supreme Electoral Council did not release official results but allowed the unofficial count to be broadcast on the Venevision television network.

With 87 percent of the ballots counted, the network said, Lusinchi had 3,768,807 votes compared to 2,416,081 for former President Rafael Caldera, the Social Christian candidate. Left-wing parties and coalitions trailed well behind the two centrist leaders, gaining about 8 percent of the ballots.

Of the 12 candidates, only Lusinchi and Calderon had been given any chance of victory.

Sandinistas offer amnesty to rebels, exiles

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua said it will welcome back most exiles who fled the country since 1979, including rebels fighting the leftist government. It also promised to announce plans next year for 1985 national elections.

The amnesty decree announced Sunday is the latest in a series of concessions by the government, which says it is trying to clear the way for signing a proposed regional peace treaty Dec. 21.

The treaty is being drafted by the Contadora group — Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama.

Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the ruling Sandinista junta, issued a second decree setting Feb. 21 as the date for announcing the election schedule. It did not say what type of election is planned or what offices would be included.

The amnesty decree, which begins immediately and expires Feb. 21, does offer safety, voting rights and land to most Nicaraguans who fled after the 1979 revolution or who are now fighting with anti-Sanidinista rebels.

Excluded from the offer are leaders directing the rebel forces, either in Nicaragua or from abroad. Also excluded are former National Guard officers who engaged in "repressive acts" while serving under rightist strongman Anastasio Somoza, who was overthrown in the revolution.

Both decrees were announced at the annual closing of the Council of State, an advisory group that acts as a legislature here.

On the battle front, the rebel radio broadcast The Fifteenth of September said Sunday guerrillas skirmished with government forces recently at Rio Negro, near the Honduran border, and 19 government soldiers were killed.

The broadcast said rebel fighters recently took the town of Vado Ancho, about 120 miles east of the capital, and killed 11 soldiers. The broadcast did not say when either battle occurred.

The broadcast followed a Defense Ministry statement Sunday, saying 28 rebels and 17 government soldiers died in fighting that began Nov. 24.The government did not comment on the rebel claims.

Last week, the government freed more than 300 imprisoned Miskito Indians, in an amnesty directed at Nicaraguans fighting the government in isolated Zelaya province.

There were no figures available on how many people would be affected by the amnesty announced Sunday. The decree said Nicaraguan consuls in Honduras, Costa Rica and the United States, where most exiles are living, would extend safe conduct passes to those who want to return.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Minister Jaime Wheelock Roman said the government will begin issuing certificates to "patriotic" food producers, guaranteeing their lands will not be expropriated. In 1981, the government began a program that led to the expropriation of private lands.

In El Salvador, the Roman Catholic archbishop of San Salvador said the U.S.-backed government is battling leftist rebels, but is not trying to stop right-wing death squads.

"If this war is unjustified, much less justified is the death squad violence on the one hand, and the sabotage and executions, much less frequent, by the other side (the left)," Arturo Rivera y Damas said in his weekly homily Sunday.

U.S.S.R. denounces U.S. attack on Syrians

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today denounced the U.S. retaliatory attack on Syrian anti-aircraft positions in Lebanon and said it will give "moral and material" support to Arab forces opposing American and Israeli troops in the Middle East.

The comments were made during a Kremlin news conference that came a day after 28 U.S. warplanes bombed Syrian positions near Beirut and eight Marines were killed in a later artillery attack from areas controlled by Syrian-backed militiamen. The focus of the news conference was nuclear missiles in Europe.

Asked to comment on the latest development in Lebanon, chief Kremlin spokesman Leonid M. Zamyatin said the U.S. bombing represented "a new factor of aggression" in the Middle East.

Moscow "censures and condemns this act of aggression," Zamyatin said. He added "the Arab countries will take the measures necessary" to fight their "difficult" battle against the United States and Israel and that the Soviet Union would give "both moral and material" support to them.

"We will support those who are fighting the Israeli and American aggression in this district," he said.

Vatican document on sex education aimed at West

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican's new sex education guidelines, while designed for use worldwide, reflect Pope John Paul II's particular concern about sexual permissiveness in the United States and Europe.

"The document is weighted towards the more developed countries, such as the United States and Western Europe," said one high-ranking Vatican source familiar with the guidelines.

He cited as examples the document's firm condemnation of sexual relations outside marriage and its silence on polygamy, which presents a problem for the church in parts of Africa.

The source, speaking on the condition that he not be identified by name, added: "The guidelines will have a considerable influence, but they won't revolutionize things."

The document, released Thursday, was drafted by the Sacred Congregation for Catholic Education at the request of the pope, who has made reinforcement of the church's conservative stands on sex a key point in his five-year pontificate.

"We are aware of vast cultural differences. In some parts of the world, there are tribal customs that take care of many aspects of human love," said another Vatican source close to the congregation.

"The Americans are very concerned about homosexuality, but there are certain parts of Africa where homosexuality doesn't appear," he added.

John Paul repeatedly has criticized permissiveness in industrialized countries. For example, last September he sternly told U.S. bishops in a meeting at his summer residence outside Rome to proclaim traditional church teaching on sex and marriage.

On Friday, the pontiff said today's "climate of permissiveness" often is "carried to excessive extremes by the mass media."

The Vatican's sex education document used some colorful language to get its points across, even though it was restating established doctrines on sex for the world's more than 790 million Roman Catholics.

It proclaimed an "urgent need" for proper sex education of young people and urged court-ordered curbs on "permissiveness and pornography."

Sex outside marriage is a "grave disorder," masturbation is a "deviation," while sexual intercourse for "merely genital" pleasure without love is condemned, the congregation said.

Many of those doctrines, especially the ban on artificial birth control, are widely flouted. U.S. bishops have said statistics show nearly 80 percent of Roman Cathlic women in the United States use contraceptives.

The congregation, in releasing the document called "Educational Guidance in Human Love," said local bishops worldwide must adapt the guidelines "to the pastoral necessities of each local church."

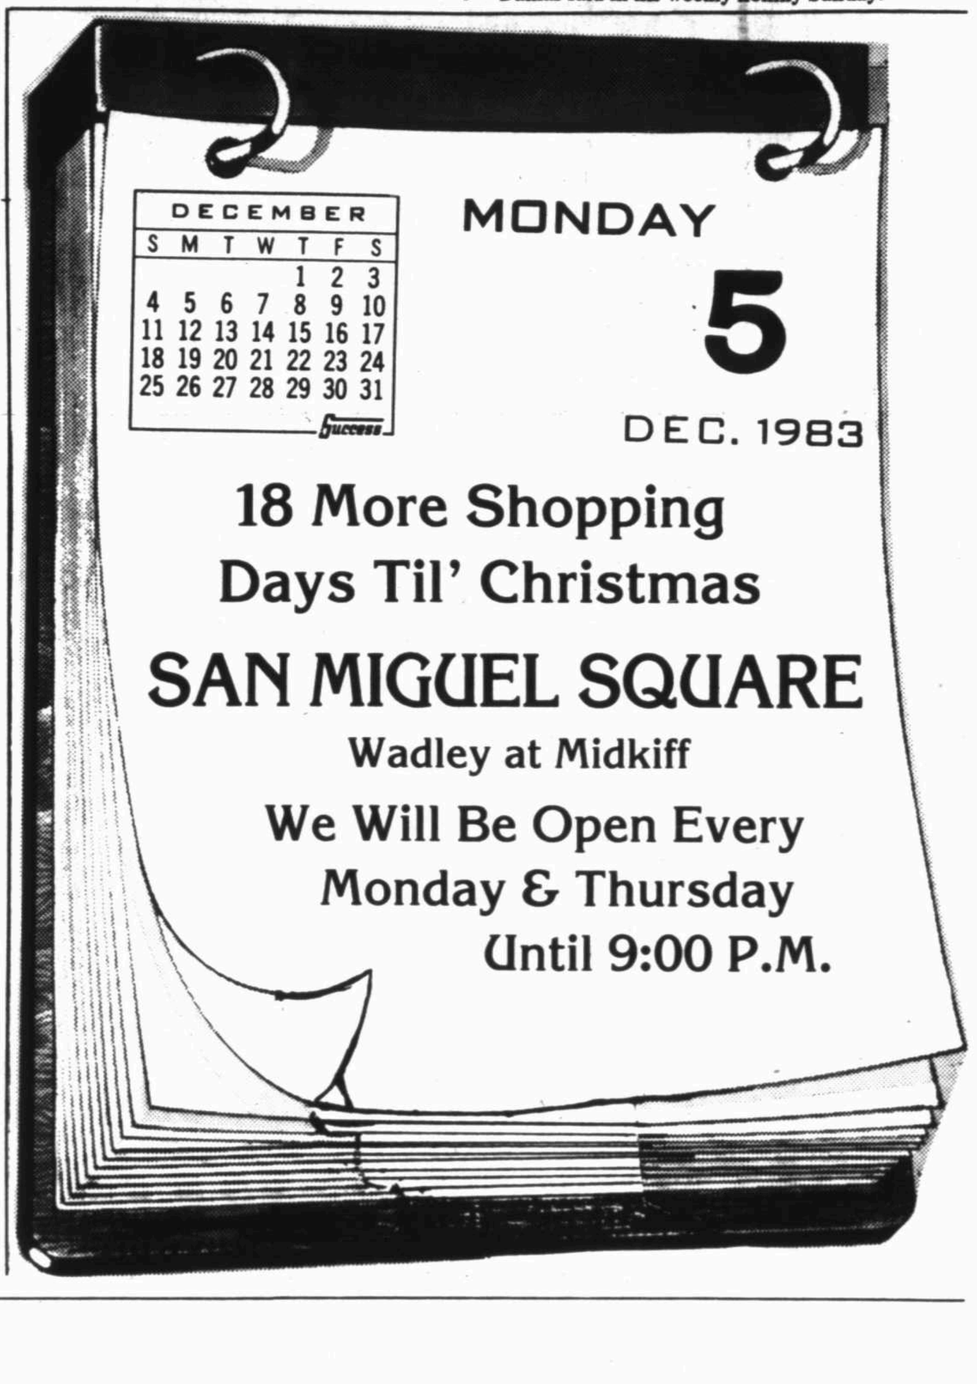

Vatican sources emphasized the importance of that point.

"We're not telling the bishops what to do," said one Vatican source. He said bishops will have to draw up their own curriculum plans and programs to teach young people about sex "in the context of Christian faith and love."

Vatican sources said they do not believe it would be a specific sin for parents to stray from the document's guidelines.

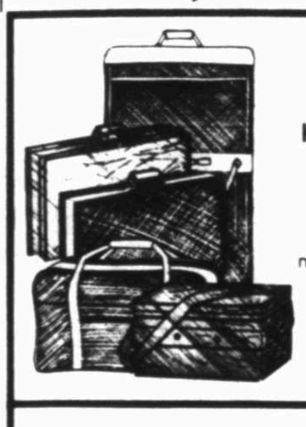

The guidelines are largely theoretical and do not contain a comprehensive curriculum. On specific methods, for example, they are limited to warning against teaching materials that "crudely present sexual realities."

"Christian parents must know that their example represents the most valid contribution in the education of their children," the document said, emphasizing the parents' primary role in supervising their children's sex education in parochial or non-religious schools.

Preps reach Final Fours

By Associated Press

A pair of touchdowns by Midland Lee junior halfback Tyrone Thurman helped propel the Rebels to a 20-0 upset win over Odessa Permian in a Class 5A high school football quarterfinal contest.

Lee, now 12-2, will face Plano, a 21-0 winner over Houston Klein in another Saturday quarterfinal, at 2 p.m. next Saturday in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

Bay City dethroned the Willowridge Eagles as Class 4A champions 42-0 and Lubbock Estacado slapped Cleburne 13-3.

The Panthers, hampered by three turnovers and a bone-crushing, eight-minute drive by the Rebels, suffered their first defeat in nine quarterfinals contests and their second loss to Lee this year.

The Panthers could gain just 12 yards on the ground and 100 overall. The Midland Lee defense held the Mojo running attack to a negative 3 yards in the second half.

"I thought our defense was the difference in the football game," said Lee head coach Spike Dykes. "They played as good a defense as they could have played."

ISAAC GARNETT led runners with 86 yards on 27 carries. Lee traveled a total of only 71 yards on three of its four scoring drives. Mojo was held to just 66 yards in the first half.

Thurman supplied the Rebels' first score, taking a pitch from quarterback Jeff Motley to the right side and, despite fumbling the ball and having it bounce back into his hands, sprinting untouched 24 yards to score.

The TD came two plays after Lee regained possession following a muffed Panthers punt. Craig Kamradt's kick was good for a 7-0 score with 8:17 left in the first quarter.

In the third quarter, the Rebels pounded out 16 running plays to move from their own 22 to the Permian 4. A 22-yard Kamradt field goal increased Lee's lead to 10-0.

The Rebels controlled the ball for five seconds short of eight minutes to stymie the vaunted Panthers' passing attack.

"I'm not good at picking out turning points," said Dykes. "I don't know that there was a turning point in the game. I did think it was important that we took the ball and kept it eight minutes with the wind in our face."

Lee gained 10 more points following Permian's second and third turnovers of the game.

A three-yard TD run by Thurman capped a 35-yard drive set up when Permian quarterback Rex Lamberti was blasted in the backfield and relinquished the ball.

A one-handed interception by 6-4 defensive end Eddie Kittle gave the Rebels the ball at the Mojo 15, and Kamradt completed scoring with a 28-yard field goal.

PLANO RUNNING back Scott Huckaby carried 24 times for 90 yards and two touchdowns against Klein's Bearkats. Huckaby also caught a 53-yard pass that set up Plano's final touchdown.

The Wildcats, now 14-0, attained a 7-0 lead in the first period against District 15-5A champion Klein that it never relinquished.

The Bearkats were hampered in the first half when standout running back Kyle Atkinson suffered a cut on his right hand that required stitches.

Plano drove 71 yards in eight plays from the opening kickoff before Huckaby scored on a 1-yard run.

A 9-yard scoring run by David Thompson with 2:15 left in the half improved the Wildcats' margin to 14-0. The 72-yard, eight-play drive was aided by a 27-yard flea-flicker play.

The drive that preceded Huckaby's final score, a 2-yarder, was sparked by his 53-yard pass to flanker Kevin Ford.

Ross Klein paced the Bearkats in rushing with 100 yards on 21 carries, while halfback Larry LeBeau was held to 36 yards in 11 tries.

Martin Garcia and Ricky Davidson combined for 300 rushing yards and two touchdowns each as Bay City unseated defending Class 4A state champion Willowridge, shattering the Eagles' 27-game winning streak.

The 13-0 Black Cats swept into the semifinals against New Braunfels.

The Bay City defense held all-state running back Thurman Thomas to 79 yards on 15 carries.

LUBBOCK Estacado quarterback B.T. Ross and tight end Tony Sowell collaborated on an 85-yard touchdown to lead the Matadors past previously unbeaten Cleburne.

The Mats, now 12-1 and heading for a semifinal battle with Carthage, compiled a 7-3 halftime lead with just two first downs and minus 27 yards rushing. Estacado trailed 9-2 in first downs behind the Yellow Jackets.

Early in the second quarter, Ross floated a duck downfield and Sowell ran under it, dodging Jacket defender Carlton Liggins for 85 yards and a 7-0 lead.

Cleburne answered with 1:35 left in the half when Kyle Sims booted a 35-yard field goal.

Late in the third quarter, the Matadors produced a clinching, 58-yard drive that featured a fourth-and-one conversion at the Jacket 34. Derrick White raced 30 yards to set up Terry Upshaw's 1-yard sweep with 56 seconds remaining in the period.

Yogi to replace Billy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — If Billy Martin's third term as manager of the New York Yankees is about to end, he says he doesn't know about it.

But as baseball's winter meetings got under way today, Yankee owner George Steinbrenner was set once again to dump Martin.

Steinbrenner was not due in town until Tuesday, but the word here was that he already has decided to fire Martin — again — and replace him with popular first base coach Yogi Berra.

From his home near Oakland, Calif., Martin called the reports of his demise "newspaper propaganda."

"I'd be very surprised," he said. "I'd be amazed. I talked with George one month ago and he never once indicated he was unhappy with the job I was doing. I haven't heard from him since then, and I know that I would be the first one he would talk to if he intended to fire me."

Martin noted he had a contract with Seinbrenner and said, "I regar im as an honorable man ... He has told me his word is his bond, and I believe him."

Berra also indicated the reports were premature.

"I haven't heard anything," Berra told RKO Radio Sports.

Berra said he and Steinbrenner last talked on Thursday, when he the two talked about personnel. "As far as I knew then, Billy was still the manager," Berra said. "I have to be asked before I can say I want to be manager."

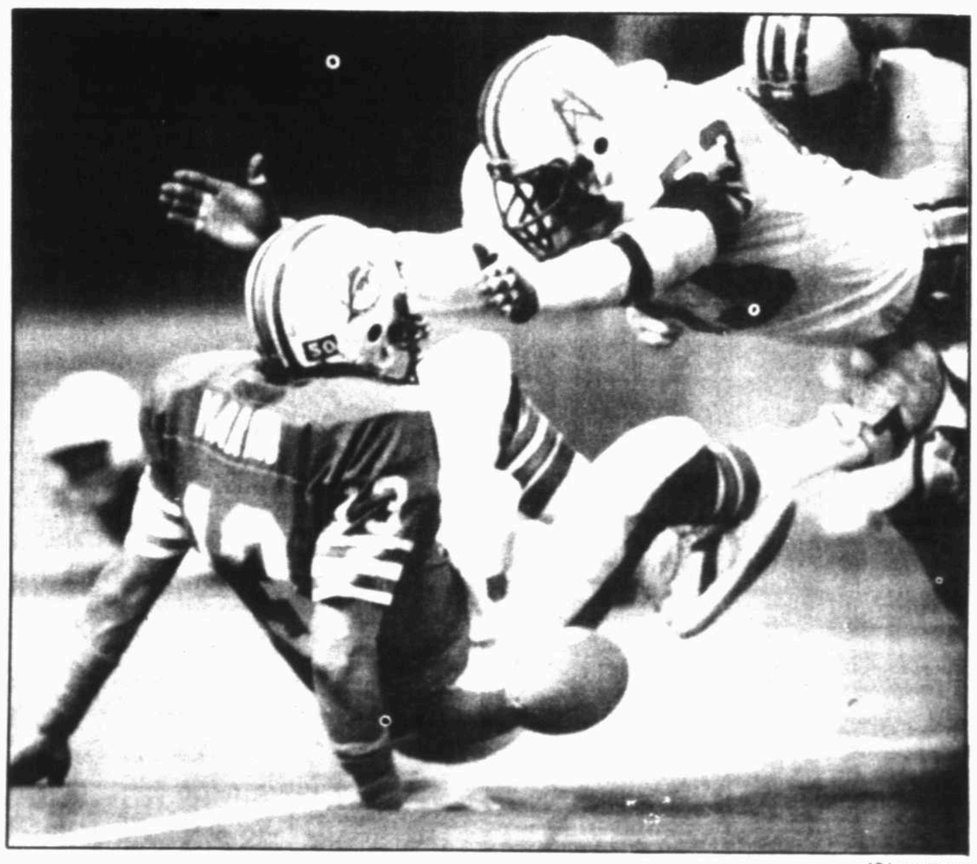

The move would placate a number of Yankee players unhappy with Martin's brusque managerial style and might give Steinbrenner an edge in the high-stakes war to sign ace reliever Rich Gossage.

Gossage publicly bristled under Martin's handling of him last season and has a number of options as a free agent including lucrative offers from Atlanta and the Chicago White Sox. But Steinbrenner is determined to retain the boss of his bullpen and Martin, in his third term as Yankee manager, apparently has become a sacrificial lamb in that battle.

Judge Eddie Sapir, Martin's advisor, told ABC Radio Sports "all the rumors are premature. At this point, it's conjecture along with all the other rumor and rhetoric. Billy's got a very solid contract but we knew when we signed it that George Steinbrenner owns the club."

Martin has four years remaining on the contract he signed last January. If Berra is the replacement, it would be Yogi's second go-round as the Yankees' pilot. He managed the team to the American League pennant in 1964 but was dismissed at the conclusion of the season when the pre-Steinbrenner administration decided he was too easy going with the players.

Berra also directed the New York Mets to the National League pennant in 1973, one of only three managers to win pennants in both leagues.

Chaps host SPC at 8

Midland College, coming off a last gasp road defeat, winds up its 1983 home campaign at 8 p.m. tonight against South Plains College in Langford Chaparral Center.

MC, 9-3, will be meeting one of the preseason picks for Western Junior College Conference honors. The Texans once again will floor a physically strong team.

The pregame highlight will mark the "hatching" of the Chaparrals' new mascot. Coach Jerry Stone is hopeful that the spirit-rouser will inspire the Chaps to new heights after last Thursday's 62-61 loss at Clarendon when a missed shot tipped in at the buzzer decided the contest.

MC WINDS UP its pre-holiday campaign Thursday night at Hobbs, N.M., against New Mexico Junior College, a team which usually leads the league in scoring and considers it a bad night when 100 points isn't surpassed.

Followed the Christmas break, the Chaps will participate in doubleheaders Jan. 13-14 at Howard College and then launch into 14 WJCC contests whtat will lead to the Region V tournament at Chaparral Center March 8-10.

Last week in WJCC, MC defeated Western Texas College, 82-62, with an impressive display of defense after the Westerners hung close for a half. MC broke out of a 31-31 tie to lead 39-31 at half and then widened the gap quickly in the second half.

Against Clarendon, the Chaps again played good defense, but an erratic scoring punch continued to plague the team.

Cowboys hogtie Warner

SEATTLE (AP) — Rookie sensation Curt Warner of the Seattle Seahawks met one of the premier defenses in the National Football League Sunday and came out second best.

"Curt Warner is a great back, just like Tony Dorsett, but he's not going to run very far if we don't give him any room and we didn't give him any today," Dallas Cowboys' Coach Tom Landry said.

Warner, who entered Sunday's game as the American Football Conference's leading rusher and No. 2 in the entire NFL, was held to a prolow of 22 yards on 12 carries in a 35-10 Dallas victory.

Despite the victory, Dallas remained in a tie with Washington for first place in the National Football Conference East. The Cowboys host the Redskins next Sunday. Dallas won in the teams' regular-season opener in Washington 31-30.

"In our flex defense, if we're playing it right, we can control a good running back," said perennial Pro Bowler Randy White. "Any time you can control the running back and put them in passing situations, you can pin your ears back more and go after the quarterback."

That's what the playoff-bound Cowboys did Sunday, sacking Seattle quarterback Dave Krieg eight times for 65 yards. White, a defensive tackle, had 3½ of those sacks.

"That's the way the game goes," Warner said. "Sometimes it just doesn't happen. They have a very unusual defense. They have some big guys up front and they come. They really clog things up and make it hard to get through."

Seattle Coach Chuck Knox added, "They have a good pass rush. That's really the strength of their defense. But when your starting right guard, right tackle and center are out, that compounds the problem."

Dorsett scored two first-half touchdowns and Danny White passed for a pair of scores in the second half for the Cowboys, who tuned up for their big rematch with defending Super Bowl champion Washington.

The Cowboys' defense also came up with four Krieg turnovers, two fumbles and two pass interceptions. One of the fumbles came when the Seahawks were at the Dallas 1-yard line in the first quarter.

Dorsett scored on runs of 8 yards in the first quarter and 7 yards in the second period. White teamed with Doug Donley with a 35-yard touchdown strike in the third quarter and found Butch Johnson in the end zone for a 16-yard TD.

Seattle, which scored a 51-48 overtime victory over Kansas City here last weekend in the third highest scoring game in NFL history, scored nine seconds before halftime when Norm Johnson tied a club record with a 54-yard field goal. The Seahawks scored their touchdown with 4:09 remaining in the game on a 2-yard run by Warner.

Missed Field Goals—None

Wrigley Field doomed

CHICAGO (AP) — Wrigley Field is "like an old house that's deteriorating and needs constant attention," and may not meet the first-class standards the Chicago Cubs are trying to establish, the club's chief executive officer says.

Jim Finks, former general manager of the Chicago Bears who became Cubs' president in September, said despite the popularity of 70-year-old park, it may be time to look for a new home.

"We are playing in a very nice, neat park, a park well-liked by the fans and the media," Finks said. "Here and now, this day, it is a great place for us to play and for fans to watch the game. I love it.

"But in the not-too-distant future, we have to address the issue of where we go facility-wise," Finks added. "Wrigley field is an old structure with limitations and in seating capacity (37,272) and parking."

Finks' comments were not the first to indicate that the Cubs may not be happy with their home since the club was purchased a few years ago by Tribune Co. General Manager Dallas Green steadfastly has maintained that the Cubs can't be contenders without playing night games at home.

But the stadium has no lights, and residents near the park have been vocal against lights being installed.

"People have narrowed the issue down to 'do we put lights in Wrigley Field or not,'" Finks said. "The day-night issue is important, but I feel to leave it at that, as most people do, is missing the significant option for us — a new stadium.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Let's linger just a little longer

It's time to deal with the unbeaten Plano Wildcats — tomorrow.

Today, we just can't let go of Saturday, a sunny afternoon in Lubbock's Jones Stadium where Midland Lee's Rebels produced its proudest moment in the 23-year history of the school.

The final score told one story. The scoreboard read Lee 20, Odessa Permian 0. The result is Plano in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium this Saturday at 2 p.m.

The result was also Permian's first loss ever in the state quarterfinals and Lee's first berth in a semifinal game.

The result was also a lesson in how to dominate a former neighborhood terrorist. It's now thumbs down on black magic and thumbs up for the step children of America.

Not only did Lee have to prove its worth twice this year against Permian, but they did it twice in such convincing fashion that peasants everywhere can hold to hope for a better day.

Some were saying that Lee's first 20-7 victory over Permian back in October was a fluke. It was. Permian shouldn't have scored in the first game.

PERMIAN JUST never loses like this to any team. This was a breath of fresh air. This was Permian's most productive offensive team in the history of the school with 455 points scored this season. In eight quarters against Lee, the Panthers scored just seven of those 455 points. What adjectives then can you place on the Lee defensive team?

I know that Permian fans, players and coaches are disappointed with the way 1983 ended for the Panthers. But Mojo had its moments. After all, history will say they are the District 4-5A champions and they won that title outright. It takes a good team to bounce off the canvass and win a title after what appeared a shoe-in title for Lee.

Irony has it that Lee now advances to the semifinals while the district champion watches from seats in its own stadium. The twist of fate.

But for the Permian Basin, this Lee-Permian contest was more than Lee 20, Permian 0. It may have been the day that Midland finally woke up and jumped in as football fanatics.

The rap on Midland over the past decades has been that Midlanders don't care much about sports. They don't open their mouths and hands are for sitting on during a game.

ANYONE WHO saw the mass of Rebel flags waving at Jones Stadium Saturday knew that Midlanders had gotten into the swing of football. It was the first time I have ever seen a Midland football crowd outdistance a Mojo crowd. They won the battle before the opening kickoff.

I'm not sure Midland knew how to act when Lee first bounded into the playoffs this year. There was excitement, but it was subdued at best. Four games later Midland has discovered a champion in its own backyard and now they are acting like it.

Saturday's crowd has been estimated from 32,000 to 35,000, ranking it as one of the all time top 10 high school football crowds in the state of Texas. For a crowd like that to crop up, there had to be Midlanders who travelled to Lubbock who had never seen a Lee or Midland High football game.

Lee booster Scotty Alcorn put it best, "I was sitting around people who had never seen Lee play. They were asking, 'Which team is ours?'"

LEE COACH Spike Dykes was amazed at what he saw Saturday. "I never expected anything like that. There must have been 12,000 flags waving when we came around the corner. You can't ask for support like that. It's just something that happens when something special is happening. It was a perfect day."

Lee fans will never forget this past Saturday. It was Midland coming of age in football. Permian fans are disappointed, but there will be a time when both schools can say, "I saw that game. There were over 30,000 people there."

Permian can absorb that loss because it doesn't destroy its storied history. Mojo will be back, you can bet on that.

But from now on, things will be different. Midland is now a member of West Texas' football society — and it all doesn't wear black anymore.

Sooners rally to win

HONOLULU (AP)–Quarterback Danny Bradley rolled around the right side for a two-yard touchdown run late in the fourth quarter as Oklahoma rallied to beat Hawaii 21-17 Saturday night in the last regular season college football game of 1983.

Hawaii, with the help of a roughing-the-kicker penalty, had taken a 17-14 lead early in the fourth quarter on a 26-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Raphael Cherry to wide receiver Walter Murray.

But the Sooners came right back with an 11-play, 65-yard march that culminated in Bradley's winning touchdown. Spencer Tillman was the workhorse in the drive, carrying seven times for 36 yards. On the night, he ran the ball 37 times for 178 yards.

Hawaii's last chance for an upset ended on Oklahoma's 39 yard line with 4:17 remaining in the game as a fourth-down pass fell incomplete. Oklahoma was then able to run out the clock.

The heavily-favored Sooners fell behind 10-0 at halftime as the Rainbows' defense was able to keep the Sooners' running game in check.

Hawaii, which saw two excellent scoring chances dashed in the first quarter on interceptions by Keith Stanberry and Sonny Brown at the Oklahoma six and one yard lines, respectively, finally scored midway through the second quarter.

David Aguiar partially blocked Darren Atiya's punt and the Rainbows took over at the Sooner 48 yard line. After a running play netted two yards, Cherry tossed a 46-yard touchdown pass to Murray, and Richard Spellman's conversion made it 7-0.

With two minutes left in the second quarter, the Rainbows started a drive from their own 23. Cherry passed to Murray for 12 yards, and to Aguiar for another 14 before scrambling for 12 himself as the Rainbows marched 52 yards. Kerry Brady's 42-yard field goal made it 10-0 at the half.

Oklahoma wasted two scoring opportunities in the first half when Tim Lashar missed on field goal attempts of 20 and 36 yards.

The third quarter belonged to the Sooners as they scored two quick touchdowns to take a 14-10 lead.

Marino's loss makes Miami victory a costly one

By Associated Press

It was about as unpicturesque as a touchdown drive could be — three fumbles and an injury to the starting quarterback.

But, somehow, the Miami Dolphins managed to land in the end zone, and at the same time land a berth in the National Football League playoffs.

"It was getting to be more and more a situation in which we had to control our own destiny," said running back Tony Nathan, who scored the winning touchdown with 3:51 left Sunday in Miami's 24-17 victory over the Houston Oilers. "Our backs were against the ball but we took control of our destiny."

The Dolphins, who won the American Conference East title for the 11th time, became the fourth team to secure a playoff berth this season, joining the Los Angeles Raiders, Washington Redskins and Dallas Cowboys. But the victory might be costly for the Dolphins, who lost rookie sensation Dan Marino to a knee injury on their winning touchdown drive.

Sunday's results added five more teams — Baltimore, Atlanta, Cincinnati, Kansas City and San Diego — to the ranks of those eliminated from the playoffs. Already out were Philadelphia, the New York Giants, Tampa Bay and Houston.

Minnesota plays Detroit tonight.

Nathan ran five yards for the winning touchdown to rally Miami from a 17-7 third-quarter deficit. The Dolphins, now 10-4, drove 82 yards for the game-winning touchdown. Marino left the game with a knee injury on the play before Nathan's touchdown run.

Marino said later that is knee felt "strained and stiff. We were able to run the ball pretty well in the second half but my passing was awful." He finished the day with 17 completions on 26 attempts for 195 yards.

Bills 14, Chiefs 9

Mike Kennedy returned an interception of a Bill Kenney pass 22 yards for a fourth-period touchdown and Joe Cribbs rushed for a career-high 185 yards to lift Buffalo over Kansas City. With quarterback Joe Ferguson completing only six of 15 passes for 76 yards, Cribbs provided most of the Buffalo offense with 36 rushes as the Bills improved their record to 8-6 in the AFC East.

"He timed the play perfectly," said Kenney, who passed for 306 yards in the losing effort. "They gave me a read and I threw it away from the linebacker. I didn't see him come up from behind."

Packers 31, Bears 28

Jan Stenerud kicked a 19-yard field goal with three seconds left to lift Green Bay over Chicago. The victory gave the Packers a 7-7 record in the National Conference Central Division, one game behind Detroit and Minnesota, tied at 7-6.

Stenerud's field goal brought him within one of tying George Blanda's career field-goal record of 335. During the course of the afternoon, he missed attempts of 37 and 45 yards.

"I have to admit that early in the game it entered my mind that I was closing in on the record," Stenerud said. "It hadn't been on my mind all week. But on that last kick I was just thinking about winning the game."

Eagles 13, Rams 9

Ron Jaworski's 29-yard touchdown pass to Tony Woodruff with 21 seconds left rallied Philadelphia over the Rams and snapped the Eagles' seven-game losing streak. Woodruff fought off cornerback LeRoy Irvin in a corner of the end zone, as the Rams dropped into a first-place tie in the NFC West with San Francisco with an 8-6 record.

"Irvin had his hands on the ball first," said Woodruff, who was relegated to the second string this week after dropping several passes in the previous three games. "He jumped sooner than I did. I just tried to get up higher. We both came down and I just took the ball from him. Everybody on this club needed something like this."

49ers 35, Bucs 21

Wendell Tyler ran for 102 yards and rookie fullback Roger Craig powered his way to three touchdowns, giving San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana support as the 49ers returned to a first-place tie by beating Tampa Bay.

Bengals 23, Steelers 10

Cincinnati turned a pair of first-quarter Pittsburgh turnovers into Pete Johnson touchdown runs and an early 14-0 lead and the Bengals went on to beat the slumping Steelers, who lost for the third straight time after seven consecutive wins.

A victory would have assured the Steelers of at least a wild card playoff berth. As it is, they remained one game in front of Cleveland in the AFC Central.

Broncos 27, Browns 6

Struggling rookie John Elway fired touchdown passes of 39 and 49 yards to rookie wide receiver Clint Sampson, keeping Denver's playoff hopes alive with a rout of the Browns. The victory gave Denver an 8-6 mark and the possibility of a wild card berth.

Redskins 37, Falcons 21

Joe Theismann passed for three touchdowns and kicker Mark Moseley set an NFL scoring record as Washington beat turnover-prone Atlanta.

Moseley kicked three field goals and four conversions for 13 points, giving him 147 points for the year.

Patriots 7, Saints 0

Tony Collins scored on a three-yard run after Ricky Smith returned the opening kickoff 53 yards, and the New England Patriots overcame snow, sleet and heavy rain to beat New Orleans.

"A good part of your game plan is scrapped in weather like this," Meyer said. "You go back to the early 1940s, use a basic game plan and you have to play defense."

Cardinals 10, Giants 6

Neil Lomax fired a 20-yard touchdown pass to Roy Green while rookie Lionel Washington recovered a fumble and intercepted New York quarterback Scott Brunner twice to lead St. Louis over the Giants.

The crowd was the Giants' smallest turnout since Giants Stadium opened in 1976. There were 51,589 no-shows, breaking by 2,759 no-shows the NFL record set at Atlanta between the Falcons and Green Bay Packers in 1974.

Jets 10, Colts 6

New York quarterback Richard Todd, stung by the degrading comments of Baltimore players following a loss four weeks earlier, passed for the game's only touchdown as the Jets edged the Colts and knocked them out of playoff contention.

The Jets, 7-7, kept alive their long-shot playoff hopes with a third straight victory.

ACC officials to get tough

By JOHN FEINSTEIN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Basketball officials in the Atlantic Coast Conference have been instructed by the league office to crack down on violations of the "bench decorum" rules because of a feeling throughout the league that not enough technical fouls were called last season.

In a two-page "special notice" sent to coaches and athletic directors last week, Fred Barakat, the ACC's supervisor of officials, said he was encouraging officials to be tougher on coaches and players who act up.

"One of the most serious problems confronting our great game of collegiate basketball and one that can have serious affects on the ACC is the lack of adherence and enforcement of the bench decorum rule," Barakat wrote. "It is regrettable ... that on several occasions the bench rule has been repeatedly and blatantly violated without penalty from the officials. This situation has caused numerous problems and complaints to the supervisor and this year will not be tolerated without serious penalties to the official(s) not courageous enough to enforce the penalties."

BARAKAT WENT on to emphasize that he wanted enforcement to be consistent from the start of the season. He then excerpted from the rules on bench decorum, emphasizing coaches are not to leave their bench area.

"In addition, an increase has been observed in the violation of the rule whereby a coach, especially assistant coaches and other bench personnel, upon rising to signal or communicate with his team, must immediately return to his seat. Also, players may not stand except for timeout situations (but instantaneous and-or spontaneous reaction by players to an outstanding play is acceptable)."

Barakat wrote that coaches should be warned that they can expect to receive a technical foul if they violate the rules: "Excessive warnings and-or ignoring bench conduct will not be tolerated!! ... After the first warning, any violation merits an immediate technical foul — for all intents and purposes, the head coach 'bought' the technical."

Barakat, in his third year as supervisor, says he believes it is time to make officials understand that they can crack down, and will receive backing from the conference office.

COACHES HAD mixed responses to the crackdown.

"I think it's a good idea," said Maryland's Lefty Driesell. "I'm in favor of a coach's box (restricting the area where a coach is allowed), anyway. Officials have a hard job and we should try to help them. But that doesn't mean there won't be times when I'll complain. But there're ways to do it and ways not to do it."

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski agreed. "I don't think there's any excuse for cursing at an official," he said. "But there are times when you're going to say, 'Hey, you blew that call.' That's part of the game and if you get a technical for that, that's ridiculous. This memo says coaches should kneel in front of their benches. That's silly.

ONE TEAM that might have a problem with strict enforcement of the rules is North Carolina, which is famed for standing en masse during games. One tradition is for the entire bench to stand up with 10 seconds left in a half as a signal to players on the court. Will Coach Dean Smith — who also received a technical in his season opener — be hit with a technical at the end of each half?

Tie Breakers

NEW YORK — The 1983 National Football League procedures to break ties in standings and determine playoff sites:

DIVISION TIES

If, at the end of the regular season, two or more clubs in the same division finish with identical best won-lost-tied percentage, the following steps will be taken until a champion is determined. The same steps are used to determine the sites of postseason games.

Two Clubs

1. Head-to-head (best won-lost-tied percentage in games between the clubs).
2. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the division.
3. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the conference.
4. Best won-lost-tied percentage in common games, if applicable.
5. Best net points in division games.
6. Best net points in all games.
7. Strength of schedule.
8. Best net touchdowns in all games.
9. Coin toss.

Three or More Clubs

1. Head-to-head (best won-lost-tied percentage in games among the clubs).
2. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the division.
3. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the conference.
4. Best won-lost-tied percentage in common games.
5. Best net points in division games.
6. Best net points in all games.
7. Strength of schedule.
8. Best net touchdowns in all games.
9. Coin toss.

NOTE: If two clubs remain tied after a third club is eliminated during any step, the tie-breaker reverts to Step 1 of the two-club format.

WILD CARD TIES

If necessary to break ties to determine the two Wild Card clubs from each conference and the site of their playoff game, the following steps will be taken:

1. If the tied clubs are from the same division, apply the division tie-breaker.
2. If the tied clubs are from different divisions, apply the following steps:

Two Clubs

1. Head-to-head, if applicable.
2. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the conference.
3. Best won-lost-tied percentage in common games, minimum of four.
4. Best average net points in conference games.
5. Best net points in all games.
6. Strength of schedule.
7. Best net touchdowns in all games.
8. Coin toss.

Three or More Clubs

1. Head-to-head sweep (Applicable only if one club has defeated each of the others, or if one club has lost to each of the others).
2. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the conference.
3. Best won-lost-tied percentage in common games, minimum of four.
4. Best average net points in conference games.
5. Best net points in all games.

Americans wealthier; Real net worth up 3.8X since '46

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Just like those of many businesses, the balance sheet of the U.S. economy took a header in 1981 and 1982.

After adjustment for inflation, the nation's real domestic net worth fell 1.4 percent in 1981 and then tumbled another 4.2 percent last year. The latter was by far the worst performance since 1946, a year of a wrenching switch from a war-time to a peace-time economy. The only other postwar year in which real domestic net worth declined was 1975, when it fell 0.9 percent.

Even with the back-to-back declines, American wealth has almost quadrupled since the end of World War II.

Moreover, with a surging economy, a bullish stock market and a resumption of increases in value for many tangible assets, including homes and land, the long-term upward march in the country's net worth is sure to have been resumed this year.

According to figures compiled by the Federal Reserve, the total value of tangible assets in the United States, net claims on foreign assets, and U.S.-owned gold and special drawing rights issued by the International Monetary Fund was nearly 19 1-2 times larger in 1982 than in 1945. Adjusting for inflation using the gross national product implicit price deflator, the value of assets is still nearly 3.8 times larger.

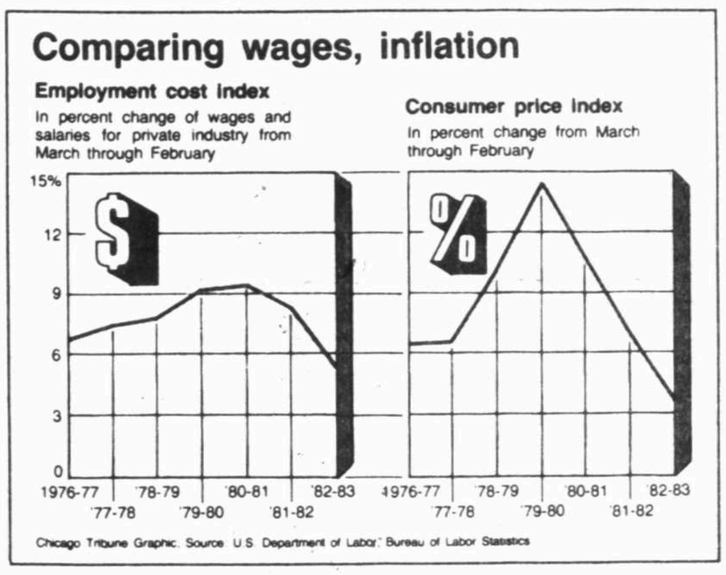

THE FEDERAL RESERVE numbers cover both tangible assets — land, residential structures, the durable goods such as cars, furniture and refrigerators owned by consumers, business' plants, equipment and inventories, and so forth — and financial assets such as stocks, bonds and bank deposits.

However, they do not include any estimate of the value of government-owned assets such as public land, buildings, highways, water and sewerage treatment plants, mineral rights, and the military's tanks, planes and ships. If such assets were given a current market value, as are privately held assets, the total net worth of the country would be substantially higher.

For reproducible assets that wear out — homes, business plants and so forth — the current value is considered to be the cost of replacing the asset less the wear and tear known as depreciation. Depreciation is calculated on a so-called straight-line basis. That means that for a machine expected to last 10 years, one-tenth of its replacement cost is deducted each year.

In the charts, the value of the net outstanding debt owed by federal, state and local governments also is subtracted from the figure for the net worth of the private sector to get an estimate of the nation's net worth. Again, that estimate does not include the value of government-held tangible assets.

During the 37 years since the end of the war, the nation's wealth calculated this way has risen an average of 2.8 percent a year.

AND THIS GROWTH of wealth means, among other things, that the American people are much better housed and that the productive capacity of the American economy is far greater.

The value of all residential structures in 1982 was approaching $2.7 trillion. In real terms, that was 3.6 times greater than in 1945.

Meanwhile, the value of business plant and equipment was climbing much faster. Depressed by the war in 1945, it was less than half the value of the nation's housing. Business investment surged sharply in 1946 and 1947, closing part of the gap. It continued to outpace residential investment but didn't catch up with housing in terms of value of existing assets until 1979. By last year, the value of business plant and equipment was virtually $3 trillion, which is 12 percent higher than that of housing.

The real value of consumer durables rose over the same span somewhat faster than the nation's total net worth, or 4.1 times.

Real land values are up 2.9 times.

The large increase in productive assets — that business plant and equipment — is a major reason, along with growth of the labor force, that the real gross national product last qear was mgre than 2.6 times greater in 1982 than in 1945.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE figures also show that hguse'odds, private trusts and nonprofit organizations last year together held $4.1 trillion worth of tangible assets and $7.2 trillion worth of financial assets.

Among the tangible assets, the largest share was represented by $2.1 trillion worth of owner-occupied housing.

Among financial assets, the largest chunks were about $1.8 billion each in equity in noncorporate businesses and in deposits at financial institutions. The value of corporate equities held by households, private trusts and nonprofit groups totalled $1.3 trillion. They held another $800 billion worth of government and corporate bonds, mortgages and other credit market instruments.

Pension fund and life insurance reserves for this sector were valued at another $1.2 trillion.

The Federal Reserve statistics also provide an interesting perspective on economic developments during the 1970s, a decade widely regarded as a period of stagnation. In that decade, the real income of many American workers fell and per capita real incomes rose only because many persons previously not in the labor force took jobs.

But at the same time, according to the Fed numbers, the nation's net worth was rising sharply as existing assets became eore valuable as t'eir replacement cost climbed with inflation. Between 1975 and 1980, the nation's net worth rose 21.4 percent an read terms, again using the GNP deflator to adjust for inflation. That was the fastest growth of any five-year period since the war.

Worried OPEC ministers to debate price, production

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Worried by the sustained slump in worldwide oil consumption, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will meet in Geneva, Switzerland, this week to debate a strategy for pricing and production quotas.

Industry sources said Saudi Arabia — the world's largest oil exporter — will argue for, and expects to eventually get, an agreement to maintain the current OPEC benchmark price of $29 a barrel and the current daily production rate of 17.5 million barrels.

The Saudis and their conservative allies in the 13-member organization believe that the status quo will help stabilize the oil market and encourage increased consumption in the industrialized West and Japan. Iran, Algeria and Libya are considered likely to challenge the Saudi position.

"I would say that, for the next two or three years, we are going to see prices remain near the $29 benchmark, but beyond that I would be hesitant to predict," said Ali Naimi, executive vice president of Aramco. That company is a joint venture of Petromin, Saudi Arabia's state-owned oil company, and four U.S. oil companies — Exxon Corp., Mobil Corp., Texaco Inc. and Standard Oil Co. of California.

"DESPITE THE REDUCED demand, oil has not lost its importance," said Naimi, who on Jan. 1 will become president of Aramco. "What we are seeing is a shift in its importance, from just a fuel for transportation and industrial bases to a commodity that is needed for food stocks, petrochemical plants and other uses."

Industry sources said tension is again building within OPEC as the cartel's share of the oil market declines. OPEC's exports fell 23 percent last year, and since 1973 its portion of the non-communist world's oil output has tumbled to 40 percent from 67 percent. Industry officials said OPEC now has less than half the oil-export market.

Last March, OPEC ministers meeting in London agreed to cut the benchmark price for a barrel to $29 from $34 and to reduce production by 15 percent, to 17.5 million barrels a day. Saudi Arabia, with foreign reserves of $170 billion — half of which is invested in U.S. Treasury bills — has been able to afford to be the organization's swing partner, adjusting its own output in response to world demand.

In 1981, for instance, when most OPEC members believed that the price of oil would always rise, Saudi Arabia produced more than 10 million barrels a day. Now, its estimated production is less than 5 million a day. Some countries say they have much less safety margin to play with and are unhappy with the arrangement. Iran, which has been assigned a daily quota of 2.4 million barrels, argues that it needs more income for its war with Iraq.

"We cannot live with 2.4 million barrels a day," Iran's deputy petroleum minister, Abbas Hondardoost, told the Wall Street Journal this month. "We need an increase to 3.2 (million). We are a nation of 42 million people. We need 1 million barrels just for internal consumption. The current quota is too small for 42 million people fighting a war."

LAST WEEK, the speaker of Iran's parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said his country would seek an oil price increase of $5 per barrel at this week's meeting. But Iraq's oil minister, Qassem Ahmed Taki, advocated a price freeze "so that the price continues to remain competitive with the other alternative energy sources."

Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, a New York-based industry newsletter, said two weeks ago that OPEC production slipped above the self-imposed 17.5-million-barrel maximum during the summer and saturated the crude market. The publication estimated that production reached 19 million barrels a day in September but has since slipped back to 17.8 million.

The OPEC meeting is also expected to revive discussions on a long-term strategy for pricing and quotas. The idea was born in 1979, when OPEC enjoyed a seller's market and thought that prices could be adjusted in line with currency fluctuations and inflation to keep demand up.

The plan was derailed, however, by the West's recession, the Iran-Iraq war and conservation in the industrialized world.

Economists say 1984 looks good

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy, coming to the end of a surprisingly good year, will likely move through 1984 at a slower but still solid pace, economists say.

Inflation should remain moderate and unemployment no doubt will fall further, they say.

Interest rates, still pinching borrowers, shouldn't go much above their current levels, but won't likely dip sharply either. The dollar should lose some — but not a lot — of its strength, which will give exporting firms a breather.

All in all, says private economist Allen Sinai, "1984 looks like a very good year for the economy."

"It's hard to see anything right now that is likely to jeopardize the recovery for the next 12 months," says Lawrence Chimerine, chairman of the Pennsylvania consulting firm of Chase Econometrics.

MARTIN FELDSTEIN, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, is just as upbeat. "I think it's going to be a very, very positive year."

Still, some private analysts see a few troubling signs that, says private analyst Thomas Thomson, "will take away from the full enjoyment of the second year of recovery."

They worry about the international debt problem of the developing countries, saying defaults by any key countries could send tremors through the economy.

They also say the high interest rates and the strong value of the dollar will prevent the economy's growth from being snappier.

Despite the recent brouhaha over the federal budget deficits, most don't expect the red-ink spending to pose a serious threat to the economy's growth until 1985 or 1986. Their argument is the Treasury's borrowing of money in the credit markets competes with — and eventually will push out — consumers and businesses, also demanding credit. That leads to even higher interest rates and a weakened economy. A serious credit crunch, though, isn't expected until after 1984.

"I think we can get through 1984," says Sinai, chief economist at Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc. in New York City.

FOR NEXT YEAR, the administration has forecast that economic growth, after adjustment for inflation, will be 4.5 percent in 1984, and Feldstein said that prediction is not likely to change dramatically in the fresh projections due out early next year.

If anything, he said in a recent interview, the forecast will "be more positive" for 1984.

Most analysts share the administration's view, forecasting a growth rate in the range of 4 percent to 5 percent, as measured by the gross national product between the fourth quarters of 1983 and 1984.

When 1983's final results are tallied, economists predict the economy will have grown at roughly 6.5 percent, about average for the first year after a recession.

Chimerine notes that the economic rebound got a big boost from consumer spending and the housing sector this year. He sees the thrust in 1984 coming more from spending by businesses to modernize or expand their plants and equipment.

HE ALSO SEES export industries starting to turn in a better performance after a poor showing this year.

Other analysts fear those firms will still be a drag on the economy. They expect high interest rates will help keep the value of the dollar strong, compared with other major currencies. The dollar's strength makes U.S. goods higher priced, and therefore less competitive with foreign merchandise.

Thomson, chief economist at San Francisco's Crocker National Bank, expects a decline in interest rates early in 1984 followed by "modest upward pressure" later in the year.

Sinai looks for a relatively stable pace. The prime rate, the base rate on corporate loans at large U.S. banks, currently stands at 11 percent.

In their New Year's forecasts, analysts predict the inflation rate will remain moderate, although most see prices picking up a bit, from this year's 4 percent to 5-5½ percent in 1984, as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

FOOD PRICES WILL likely rise because grain crops have been damaged by the summer's harsh drought. Breeders already have been liquidating their herds rather than pay higher feedgrain prices. So, meat prices have tumbled this fall but should soar later next year when supplies dwindle.

Analysts were caught off guard by the decline of the civilian unemployment rate to 8.4 percent in November. It is certain to prompt some to refigure their jobless forecasts for later in 1984. Several had been looking for the unemployment rate to be just a bit under the November rate by the end of next year.

Outlook positive

NEW YORK (AP) — The economic outlook for 1984 is all positive — with decreased unemployment, lower inflation and steady growth — but the massive federal deficit and high interest rates threaten the stability in years beyond, the Conference Board said.

The business group's chief economist, Albert T. Sommers, said Sunday that he expects "a broadly distributed expansion, as distinguished from the powerful but not fully coordinated recovery of 1983."

Gasoline prices falling, cuts expected this week

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices have fallen nearly half a cent a gallon in the past two weeks, continuing a five-month trend, and more cuts are expected this week, an oil industry analyst says.

Motorists nationwide were paying an average $1.20.9 on Friday, down 0.49 of a cent from the last survey two weeks ago, and down from $1.23.3 last year at the same time, says Dan Lundberg, publisher of the weekly Lundberg Letter.

Lundberg said Sunday the wholesale price of gasoline had dropped an average 0.63 of a cent in the last two weeks, while the average pump price went down only 0.49 of a cent in his survey of 17,800 stations Friday.

"What this signals is another quarter of a cent (drop) out there already that will show up in the next few days," Lundberg said in a telephone interview.

He explained that dealers hadn't begun selling gas they purchased at the lower wholesale price.

Noting that prices have continued to fall after the 5-cent federal gas tax hike in April, Lundberg credited continuing world overproduction for the lower prices.

At self-service stations, Lundberg said average prices for Dec. 2 were: regular leaded $1.10.2, down 0.59 of a cent; regular unleaded $1.17.7, down 0.53 of a cent; premium leaded $1.34.6, down 0.44 of a cent; and premium unleaded $1.29.7, down 0.47 of a cent.

Economic recovery 'average,' contends bank's economist

JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — You have heard the economic recovery described as many things, as powerful or encouraging or sustainable, for example, but seldom have you heard it described for what it really is.

And what is that? "Average," says Robert Christian, the economist at Philadelphia's Provident National Bank. "What we have experienced in the last 12 months is the most average economic recovery ever."

While that may not please the Reagan administration or some economists who like to use more exciting terms, it is the truth, says Christian. "The numbers speak for themselves," he says.

To demonstrate his contention, Christian averaged out the performance over the first 11 months of six economic recoveries since World War II, as measured by five categories.

He came up with these increases: personal income 8.3 percent, retail sales 10.9, employment 2.4, industrial production 14.9 and housing starts 24.5.

Then he compared them with gains for the first 11 months of the current recovery: personal income 7.1, retail sales 8.3, employment 4.5, industrial production 14.8 and housing starts 18.1.

If that isn't average, says Christian, then try to find another recovery closer to it. Using the same categories you aren't likely to do so, of course, because Christian has carefully reviewed his numbers.

He suggests also that you may search just as hard, and unsuccessfully, to find any large numbers of forecasters who stood up last year on their soapboxes and proclaimed loudly that the recovery in 1983 would be just "average."

Instead, forecasters herded themselves into two broad camps.

One camp, Christian recalls, cited high real interest rates and low capacity utilization, among other measures, and concluded that the recovery would be weak.

The strong recovery camp, made up mainly of supply-siders, saw tax cuts as evidence of a strong future growth. And they were joined by monetary purists who thought strong money growth would do the trick.

But who was in the in-between camp? Relatively few, it seems. Or, perhaps they were there, but who was listening? It is much easier to capture attention at the extremes. Much more exciting.

But that was last year. Now that the recovery is gradually becoming the expansion there seems to be a much more receptive audience for some of those dull descriptions, such as steady or normal or even average.

Maybe so. Judging from the latest batch of forecasts the seers seem to have come in from the extremes and now occupy a big camp in the middle, sharing a view that 1984 will be just more of the same.

There are still some out at the edges, as there always will be. There exists, for example, a dismal camp of forecasters who expect a collapse of just about everything, including the international monetary system.

In another small camp are the agnostics who cannot believe that average is sustainable, and therefore are posing the possibility of an economic burnout before the end of 1984.

But the most popular outlook is enough to bring about yawns. It calls for more of the same thing that occurred this year.

It is probably best summed up by the forecast to be announced Monday by a large non-profit educational and research organization. It includes this assessment of things to come:

"We see no local explosions and no virtuoso performances in any sector of the economy next year. Instead, we expect a broadly distributed expansion, as distinguished from the powerful but not fully coordinated recovery of 1983."

How dull. How average.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Corporation protects investors' accounts

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I own common stock with a present market value of approximately $50,000. I want to sell this stock and put the money in savings certificates of U.S. Treasury securities.

I know I can go to a well-known "full service" stock brokerage firm and feel safe I will receive my money after the sale. To save on commissions, I have considered selling through a "discount" brokerage house. However, I'm somewhat leery about the safety aspect. Are discount brokers covered by any type of government insurance that protects their customers?

A. All brokerage firms doing a general securities business are required to be members of Securities Investor Protection Corp. SIPC, established by act of Congress, insures customers' accounts.

Whether you deal with a full service brokerage or a discounter, you're insured for $500,000, including $100,000 in cash. If the brokerage firm goes bankrupt, SIPC will see to it that you get your securities and-or cash, up to these amounts.

Every time SIPC is mentioned, it has to be stressed that it does not protect against "market risk." If you have stock at a brokerage firm and the market price of that stock goes down, SIPC doesn't cover your loss.

In your situation, however, you can deal with any brokerage firm you choose and be confident. Go to a broker. Place your order to sell your stock. Instruct the broker to send you a check for the proceeds of the sale. In the unlikely event the brokerage goes belly up, SIPC insures that you will get your money.

* * *

Q. My husband and I are going to take our first step in the market by buying about $1,000 worth of stock. When we were asked if we wanted the stock certificates sent to us or held by the brokerage firm, I said let the brokerage hold them.

Later, I began to have second thoughts. If that brokerage firm becomes financially troubled, can it use our stock as collateral in any way?

A. Not unless you have specifically authorized it to do so. When you leave stock with a brokerage firm, that stock usually is in "street name," meaning the shares are registered in the brokerage house's name. If you have signed a "hypothecation agreement," the brokerage has the right to use your stock as collateral for loans.

The form you signed when you set up a street name account might have authorized the brokerage firm to hypothecate your stock. That's no cause for concern.

When your stock is in street name, the brokerage house is the registered owner of the shares, but you are the "beneficial owner" — the real owner.

If the brokerage firm goes bankrupt, the insurance protection of SIPC would come into play and your stock would be just as safe as if it was registered in your name and tucked away in your safe deposit box.

* * *

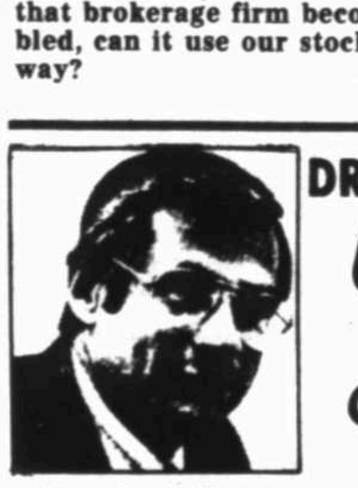

Q. I have left stocks in street name at a large brokerage firm for many years. I intend to leave some of my stocks there, but I wish to sell some others through a discount broker. How can I accomplish this?

A. You'll have to tell both brokerage firms what you plan to do. Instruct your present brokerage to transfer to the discount brokerage house the stocks you want to sell. Then, order the discount brokerage to sell those stocks.

You'll save commission dollars, because discounters usually charge a good deal less than big full service brokerage houses for selling or buying stocks.

However, you'll most likely put your present broker's nose out of joint. He or she might tell you to take all of your stocks out of street name at his or her firm and suggest you do all your business elsewhere.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Use of mothballs can cause various symptoms

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I vist my in-laws, the smell of mothballs is so strong that it makes me feel queasy. They say I'm silly and my husband says it doesn't bother him, so why should it bother me. Am I the only one who is affected in this way? — Mrs. E.L., Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Mrs. L.: The excessive use of mothballs can cause a variety of symptoms including skin and eye irritation, gastrointestinal upset, confusion, and even convulsions. Since individual susceptibility varies, it is not surprising that your husband does not appear to be affected.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What are hemorrhoids and how dangerous are they? My wife keeps telling me I should do something about them, but I don't want an operation and my doctor doesn't make a big deal of them. — Chris, Dover, N.J.

Dear Chris: Dr. James Robinson, of the University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas, says that hemorrhoids are harmless; no more than a nuisance. More specifically, hemorrhoids are not premalignant.

It used to be thought that hemorrhoids resulted from worry or sitting on cold, hard surfaces, but these explanations have been pretty much discounted. Instead a number of physicians now attribute hemorrhoids to the fact that humans have an erect posture, since this tends to increase the dilation of blood vessels in the anal canal. In addition to the pull of gravity, the condition can be aggravated by pregnancy or constipation.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a coronary condition so air pollution bothers me more than it does most other people. I will be retiring in about a year, and I would like to know whether you think I should consider moving to another city when I stop working. — Mr. F.J., Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. J.: Relocation is a serious matter and should not be decided by the flip of a coin. Many cities that previously were considered pollution-free now have problems of their own. In addition, relocation involves significant financial costs and social dislocation. I could not even begin to make a recommendation without knowing a lot more about you and your circumstances. You do not even indicate whether you are married.

Since you have coronary artery disease and are bothered by air pollution, I would advise you to try to avoid heavy traffic. This might be possible if your place of employment permits a flexible work schedule. Individuals with coronary artery disease should particularly try to avoid poorly ventilated tunnels when traffic is heavy and slow moving.

Finally, it should go without saying, but cigarette smoking and even exposure to the smoke of other people's cigarettes greatly increase the harmful effects of air pollution.

For Sallie, Youngstown, Ohio: Computerized tomography is usually not needed to detect most breast leisons. It may be helpful, however, for lesions that cannot be located precisely by mammography.

Handyman has the touch

Armand Baldinelli, who works out at The Midlander spa and performs the technique of acupressure for a fee, applies pressure to the feet of Sally Hernandez.

Baldinelli, a man of many talents, gives relief via acupressure to Ms. Hernandez.

Armand Baldinelli has charisma.

He has a way with people, with things and with himself.

His Italian cuisine is superb. "I cook. I don't do it for money. If someone tried to pay me, I'd probably be insulted."

He has an enduring affection for women of all sizes, shapes and ages. "Oh, I love 'em. God bless 'em...I really don't understand it; women have an attraction...magnetism." A smile — sincere or coquettish — of a passing woman causes his heart to sing. "That was wonderful," he'll say. "She looked back at me and smiled. That was worth its weight in gold."

He sings romantic songs in his sentimental, robust baritone. "I find a lot of joy in singing."

"'Isn't it a shame so many people go to their graves with their songs still in them,'" his music teacher recently told him. "It sure is," replied Baldinelli, "but it ain't gonna to happen to me...Almost anything will bring a song to mind, and when I'm ready to sing, I sing."

He has sailed the seas as a merchant mariner in war and in peace and was a skipper of a shrimp boat in the 1950s.

"At sea, you're one with God — you and God alone. It's so vast."

When not at sea, he emceed nightclub acts in Boston.

He'll do a song-and-dance routine as eagerly as a disc jockey will spin a tune.

He has sold about everything from nickel newspapers to expensive cars and made plenty of dough. "I didn't like the work. I think you have to have special characteristics to be a car salesman; you've got to have something nobody else has got, and if I've got it, I don't want to work there."

He's a handyman who works on appliances. It's a living.

AND HE LIKES to touch people — all over. He does it in the name of acupressure, which is acupuncture without the needles.

"You know," said Baldinelli, "you really appreciate this when you're hurting."

He probes, senses and presses firmly and methodically from toe to pate.

"All it does is relieve tension, stress, anger, fear, resentment, headaches, whatever," he said. "Acupressure is a forerunner of acupuncture; you don't use the needles, but it's the same principle."

"I still do it for nothing — out of love — more than anything else."

Recently, Baldinelli gave 24-year-old Sally Hernandez the once-over at The Midlander, a spa where he works out and applies his acupressure with finesse and for a fee.

"You've got a beautiful head of (blonde) hair, but it gets in the way," he said, as he applied pressure to her head, neck and shoulders. He got down to her dainty socked feet and vigorously worked up.

"OK, Sally," he said, "let me get you on the chair; I'm going to finish you off." He worked her over with a vibrator.

"It's wonderful," sighed Sally.

"If you like what I do, tell yourfriends about it," he said and wished her well.

AT 60, BALDINELLI is an energetic fellow who sports a rugged physique. He's 5-foot-5¾ and weighs in at 160 pounds. He believes in and practices taking good care of his body, mind and, with God's help, his spirit.

"If you're down physically, you're going to be down mentally."

He tries to maintain a natural "high" — euphoria embedded in realism and spirituality.

"The Good Book says as a man thinketh, so he is, and I think I've done pretty good."

In his social swirl, he uses a simple formula to gauge his relationships.

"If I'm comfortable with you 50 percent of the time, I'll go for that. If it's any less, it deteriorates. Normally speaking, it goes up. And I'm relatively happy with my relations."

If not, he moves on.

"The hell with it," he said. "It's not worth it. "Why come out on the short end of the stick?"

"If I wasn't happy down here (in Midland), I'd move so fast that it'd make your head swim. I like people, and it's reciprocal."

"So many people sell themselves short for the material things," said Baldinelli. "They forget the beauty of nature and the free life."

HIS EARLY DAYS were spent in Boston. He was one of seven children and got in far more work, tap dancing and hustling to make a buck than he did formal education. He got through the fifth grade but really delved into school-book learning once he got to sea. ("By the time I was 19 years old, I was reading, writing, and speaking three different languages — Italian, Spanish, English.")

He grew up in an enterprising family. His parents were from the old country — Italy. They were childhood sweethearts who were married in St. Peter's Cathedral in Rome. His father, a road-construction contractor, hotelier and businessman-farmer, became a millionaire at age 30 but lost his fortune and family due to alcoholism in the late 1920s.

The family was left "with nothing" much beyond poverty.

"My mother raised us during the Depression without a father, and I've seen my mother go hungry as much as two or three days," he said, "but she always fed us. A miraculous woman. I don't know how she put up with the likes of us." His mother is 94. "The doctor says my mother has another 20 years."

They "made do" with whatever they had.

"We fixed whatever it was that broke down."

In in his early youth, Baldinelli would hawk newspapers, exercise race horses at the race track and sell passes.

"I was always hustling a buck somehow, shining cars, shining shoes, first one thing, then another."

He didn't just work; he played and entertained as a tap-dancer and acrobat with a vaudeville-style troupe. "I started out in the show business (at age 12) as a tap dancer for a charity." By 13 or 14, he was in an acrobatic troupe of three boys. "I was just a baby then. We had a good little routine, good little show. We did it for the pleasure of doing it."

One of his most memorable moments came just after a tap-dance routine at an orphange in Springfield, Mass. As he was leaving the stage and was walking down the aisle, a young boy "caught my arm, and he reached down and kissed my hand."

"That was beautiful, really beautiful," he said. "I'll go to my grave with that; that's beautiful."

The orphan was blind.

AT AGE 15 IN 1938, he left home after his mother, Angela, gave him an ultimatum: either go to school or work. "I wanted to quit school," he said. He went to work. He quit work, and tried school again. He quit again.

His mother took action.

She put his clothes in a paper-sack outside the house and told him to move on.

"'You're going to make your way somehow, son,'" she lovingly told him.

He left home.

"That's the best thing that happened to me," he reflected. "I worship my mother for that."

Though underage at 15, Baldinelli nevertheless got into the merchant marines by forging his mother's signature. He started out as a fireman on the "black gang" in the engine room. He shoveled coal into the furnaces of the steamships carrying oil, troops, vehicles, rations, tanks, airplanes and other war materiel.

"They (the German submarines) were sinking them (ships) right and left," he recalled of World War II.

"I really didn't know fear," he said. "I just had a job to do, and I did it. I (initially) didn't realize the seriousness of the situation."

Later on, he worked on the deck, turned down a commission and ended up as a cook and a baker. "Somebody's got to do it."

Ex-LBJ aide continues fight to clear name

DALLAS (AP) — Even though it has been 20 years since Bobby Baker burst into the public consciousness to become a lasting symbol of political corruption, the former aide to Lyndon Johnson hopes new legal maneuvers will clear his name.

It has been 13 years since Baker, once called by Johnson "my strong right arm," went to prison for theft and tax evasion, following lengthy press accounts of wheeling and dealing and influence peddling.

"It's really getting exciting now," Baker told the Dallas Times Herald in an interview published Sunday.

In October, a federal appeals court infused new life into Baker's case, ordering his longtime nemesis, U.S. District Judge Oliver Gash, to consider scraps of new evidence, unearthed from cartons of old documents at the Justice Department. Baker insists the evidence will prove his conviction was tainted.

Baker served 16 months in prison after a jury found that he had solicited $99,600 in cash "campaign contributions" from a group of savings and loan executives and then used the money to bail out a financially foundering seaside motel he owned.

HIS UNSUCCESSFUL defense was that he passed the money along to one of his rich and powerful patrons, Sen. Robert Kerr of Oklahoma, as the price for Kerr killing a tax amendment opposed by the savings and loans.

Baker claimed that only in hindsight did it occur to him this was a bribe. Baker said Kerr loaned the money back to back him, and then forgave the matter shortly before his death in 1962.

The newest evidence in Baker's appeal includes two old FBI memos citing confidential informants who suggested Kerr was not the most scrupulous of senators.

Baker's defense lawyer, Michael Tigar, an attorney from his original defense team, said the government either knew, or should have known, of the evidence during the trial, but suppressed it.

"I think that what we've got is good stuff," Tiger said.

Government attorneys now on the case would not talk, the Times Herald reported, but former federal prosecutor William O. Bittman, who handled Baker's case, belittled the new evidence.

"IT'S ALWAYS seemed preposterous to me, in view of Kerr's enormous wealth ... that he is going to go around soliciting bribes, either himself or through Baker," Bittman said.

If the latest flicker of hope dies, Baker, 55, insists he's ready with other moves.

"I got plenty to keep me busy, I'll tell you," Baker said. "Every day I turn around, I got a thousand more papers."

Supported financially by Doris Myers, "a nice young lady who believes in me," Baker divides his time between business deals he prefers not to discuss and settling scores.

"If I lived anyplace else, they'd kill me," Baker said. "This is the only country in the world where you can take on the whole system if you're right."

BAKER ARRIVED in Washington as a Senate page in 1943, the 14-year-old son of a mailman from Pickens, S.C. He eventually became secretary to the Senate Democratic majority.

"He was a Snopes, a driving, ingenious Southerner who knew the needs of limitations of every member, and who wanted not only wealth and power, but a role in liberal achievement," LBJ aide Harry McPherson once wrote.

While still on the Senate payroll, Baker earned a law degree and set up a partnership on the side, offering his services to lobbyists needing help with legislation. In return, he was cut in on many lucrative business deals.

But a lawsuit by a disgruntled business partner leaked Baker's deals into the press and the Senate Rules Committee spent nearly a year investigating. The public heard unsubstantiated reports of white slavery, call girls, and an abortion ring — along with enought credible scandal to trigger a grand jury probe.

Baker contends his legal grief grew out of the animosity between Attorney General Robert Kennedy and Baker's boss, Lyndon Johnson.

"These two guys loathed, hated, despised each other second to no one in the history of the world," Baker said. "And Bobby Kennedy thought by destroying me, he could destroy Lyndon Johnson."

AS BAKER DESCRIBES it in his various court briefs, Kennedy's deputies pursued the case using "Hitlerian tactics," such as wiretaps, bribes, falsified evidence, copious lies and conflicts of interests.

The government admitted using unauthorized phone taps, but a court ruled that was not enough to discredit the case.

Bittman called Baker's theory of a political grudge "sheer nonsense." Robert Kennedy, he pointed out, was no longer attorney general when Baker was indicted.

"If the whole thing was a Bobby Kennedy vendetta, there were two attorneys general after Bobby Kennedy that could have stopped it," said Bittman, now a private attorney.

Earlier this year, still in search of a sort of vindication, Baker submitted to a polygraph test on the TV show, "Lie Detector." Asked about the Kerr money, he flunked badly. The expert who administered the test recalled that Baker talked of a lawsuit.

Baker is distressed that the media has not taken up his quest for justice.

District judge jails woman over letter

MIAMI, Texas (AP) — A state district judge said he sentenced a woman to 30 days in jail for contempt of court because of a passage in a letter that the jurist interpreted as a bribery accusation, the Pampa News reported.

Doris Adams, a Miami waitress, spent almost a month in jail after State District Judge Grainger McIlhany, 65, of Wheeler, took offense to a letter she wrote to the judge complaining about legal treatment of her sons, the newspaper said in a copyright story Sunday.

Mrs. Adams, 51, was found in contempt and sentenced to 30 days in jail on Oct. 7, McIlhany told the newspaper.

"Well, I'll put it this way, if somebody accused you of being a taker of bribes, would you consider that a proper matter?" the judge asked.

The newspaper said the offending passage in the letter said, "The only way you can win with the law anymore is if you can buy your way out, and it's done every day. You know I can't pay, so you stick my boys good."

"You can read that passage. It speaks for itself," said McIlhany. "That particular passage was what the hearing was all about."

Mrs. Adams, a divorcee whose five children, ranging in age from 14 to 26, all live with her, said she was frustrated because her "boys" were frequently arrested on charges ranging from criminal mischief to theft.

"My kids got in trouble. That's why I wrote the letter, because he was their judge," Mrs. Adams said. "It seems like anytime my boys would start doing half-way decent, they'd pick them up."

Mrs. Adams said she was called to the judge's Miami courtroom and put on the witness stand and asked if she could show why she should not be held in contempt because of the letter, postmarked July 14. She said she had no lawyer and was not offered legal counsel before being sentenced.

After reading the letter aloud, McIlhany said, "That's good enough for me," and ordered Adams immediately jailed for 30 days, the newspaper said.

Mrs. Adams served 28 days of the sentence.

"That was a minimum penalty. She could have been put in jail six months and fined $500. She didn't serve the full month for that matter," McIlhany said. He said Mrs. Adams was not entitled to a lawyer because the matter was a civil proceeding.

"It's a civil matter. She's not entitled to counsel under the law," McIlhany said.

A lawyer consulted by the Panhandle chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union said the organization could have interceded on Mrs. Adams' behalf, if she had notified them earlier.

"The barn door's open, and the mule's already gone," said Seldon Hale of Amarillo. "She served her time and has been discharged. Not much can be done now except bring it to the attention of the public."

Claudia Stravato of Amarillo, president of the High Plains Civil Liberties Union, said the jail term seemed "harsh and punitive."

She said she was surprised by the action, because McIlhany, who has been a state district judge since 1966, had "always been considered a real good judge."

Hale said he believed the judge's action did not conform to previous state appeals court rulings.

Socialite faces trial in death of husband

JACKSBORO (AP) — Attorneys for Fort Worth socialite Pamela Loffland, accused of having her estranged husband murdered, have hired psychologists to aid in jury selection and subpoenaed 85 witnesses for a trial moved here on a change of venue that is expected to last several weeks.

Two of Mrs. Loffland's former co-defendants agreed in plea bargains to testify at her trial, which was scheduled to get underway today.

Prosecutors contend Mrs. Loffland paid $500 for the 1982 slaying of her husband, a 35-year-old air conditioning company executive, in hopes of inheriting his $500,000 estate.

John Loffland's body was found last Dec. 14 in Ox Mill Creek, about six miles southwest of Weatherford.

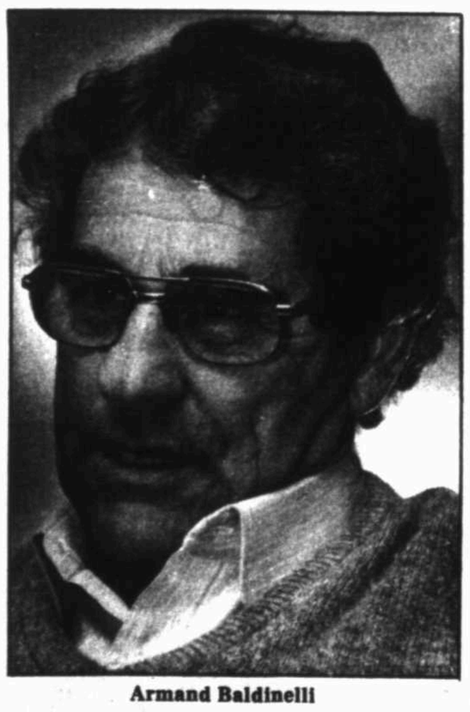

Mrs. Loffland, 34, told Fort Worth police she was kidnapped and held for $10,000 ransom on Dec. 16, the day her divorce was to conclude with a property settlement.

At the time of his death, Loffland and his wife had been separated for nine months. The couple first was divorced in 1980, but reconciled and remarried later that year.

Defense attorneys say they plan to argue that Michael Steven Veara, 36, Ronald Edward Fairey, 29, and Luckey Marshall Wright, 39, were three misfits who acted on their own. Veara and Wright will become state witnesses under their plea-bargain agreements.

Armand Baldinelli

While in Japan in the early 1950s, Baldinelli got into acupressure after he "met a (certain) young lady over there." The woman, an actress, took him to her home, and "She started working me over; it's an art...I just met her by chance; I don't know why, but I seem to meet show people."

In 1955, he left the sea and the merchant marines, went into the furniture business in New Mexico with his brother. Later, he returned to the sea, via the Gulf Coast, and owned and skippered a shrimp boat for a few years.

He returned to land. In 1975, he wound up in Midland, where he got into selling cars, managing a surplus-goods warehouse, repairing appliances, performing acupressure, and continuing his singing and dancing.

WORKING AND singing are among his joys in life. His children are his love. And counseling troubled people on a one-on-one basis is a natural with him.

His son, Darnell, 19, "is different," the father said. "He's very easy going, well-mannered. He never gets excited; he never gets mad."

His daughter, Darnella Angelina, 16, is unlike her brother.

"Angie is like her mother; she gets teed off at anything," he said. "Even when I get angry at her, I say 'Good night, honey; I love you.' "

"One of these days, we are going to walk away from one another," Baldinelli said. "The thing we'll remember is 'I love you.' "

Though he is divorced from his children's mother, he and the ex-wife have a friendly relationship. "She's a beautiful woman; she's got a lot of fine characteristics."

Baldinelli finds comfort and reward in giving to others and in sharing his experiences, strengths and hope with those who are in despair, who are searching for something meaningful in life, and for whom happiness has been elusive.

"You have to work at it; you have to try to be happy," he said. "You have to put forth the effort...I'll pay the price if I do something wrong, and I'll be rewarded if I do something right."

He imparts advice: "Don't do the wrong things. Do the right things, and you'll be happy."

"Working with other people is about the most important thing in life," he said. "You can have anything in life you want if you help enough people get what they want."

"I've been through some pretty rough times," he said. "I've seen some pretty rough times," including the days of "people standing in soup lines."

"It doesn't take much for me to be grateful with what I have."

Dollars won in class

HIGHLAND PARK (AP) — Pauline Stepp's third-grade class is learning that "scholar dollars" don't grow on trees.

Hoping to teach her students about the banking and court systems, Ms. Stepp has created a system under which her youngsters receive a $50 allowance of play money — dubbed "scholar dollars."

When the pupils behave, such as keeping their desks and lockers clean for weekly inspection, they receive bonuses. When they misbehave, they can be hauled before a student court empowered to levy fines for wrongdoers.

Photography tips for athletes' folks

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

As a parent, it's virtually impossible to ignore sports.

With physical fitness achieving the same kind of emphasis as religion did during the Crusades, there's practically no way your kids are not going to be enthusiastic participants.

And when your kids become team members, the only way you can avoid being involved is by going far away and not leaving a forwarding address.

What I'm leading up to is this — since you'll be attending all those games and meets, and since whether you want to or not, you will get to be quite well informed about the sports your kids play, why not spend some of your cheering time taking interesting photos of your warriors in action. With the right type of equipment and a little practice, I can almost guarantee you'll get some shots that will illustrate the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat as well as any of those ABC cameramen.

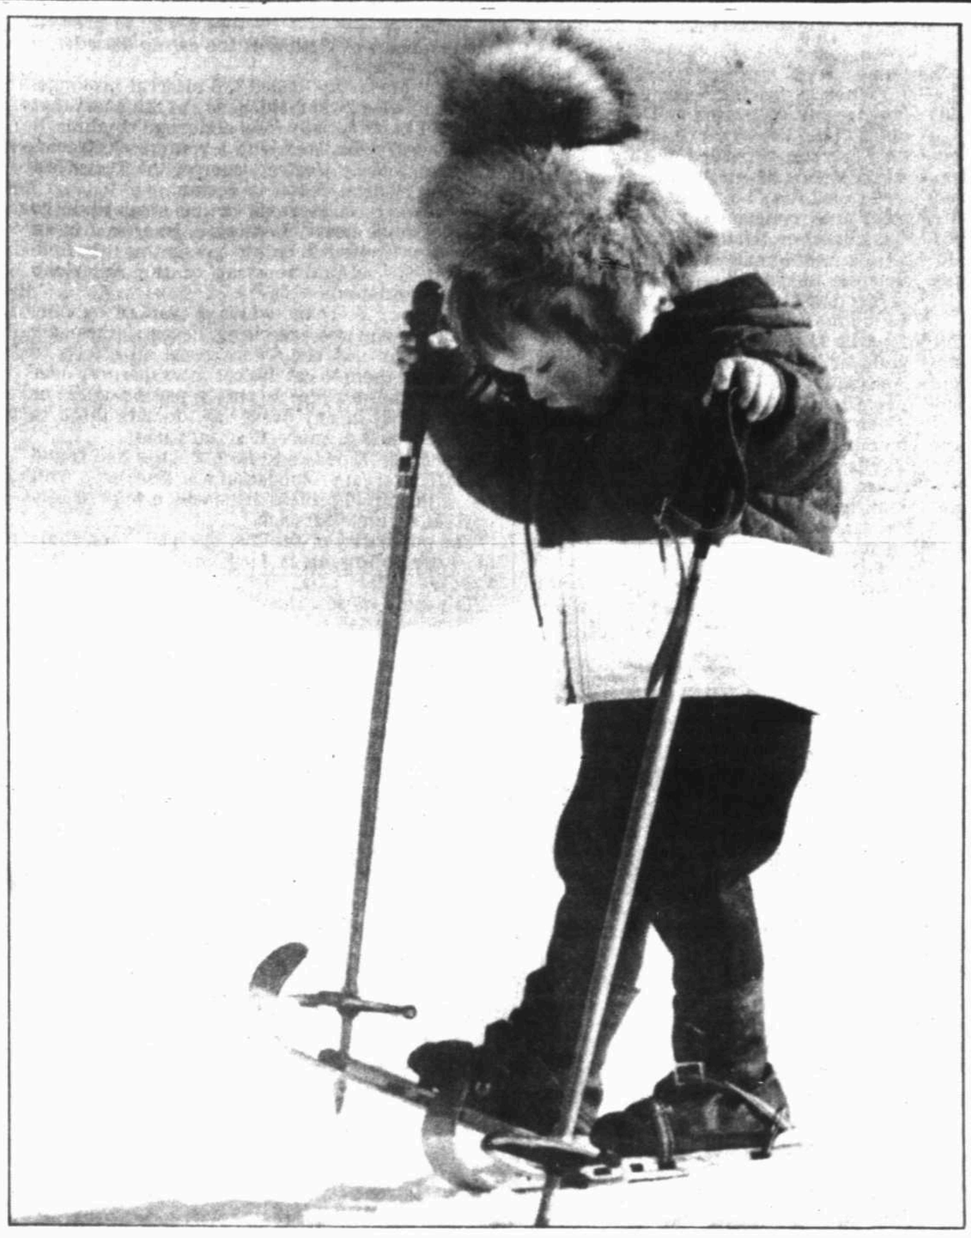

As for a choice of equipment, I'd want to have a 35mm SLR, equipped with a winder so that I could shoot a series of pictures without taking the camera from my eye, and a high quality zoom lens (75-150mm or 80-200mm would work well as long as they weren't too heavy).

My concern for weight has nothing to do with ability to carry the equipment up and down the sidelines — but simply because you're much more likely to get clear pictures if the weight of the equipment doesn't make your arm shake.

I would recommend you choose one of the faster films for your entry into sports photography — tri-X for the black and white; Ektachrome 400 for color.

Since there will be many times you'll be trying to isolate your subject (son or daughter) from confusing backgrounds, you will want to try using wide apertures (F-2, F-4, F-5.6) instead of stopping down your camera for maximum depth of field as you're used to doing. However, you will need some focusing practice to keep moving figures sharp at wide apertures — a person sprinting toward the camera moves at nearly 10 yards a second, so giving the picture at hand your prime attention is quite important.

Baseball is probably one of the easier sports to photograph, simply because there's a slower pace and the action takes place at well defined-places.

CNS Photo

If you begin photographing your own sports stars when they're young, chances are your photographic skills will keep pace with their athletic skills.

Thoughts turn to spring garden

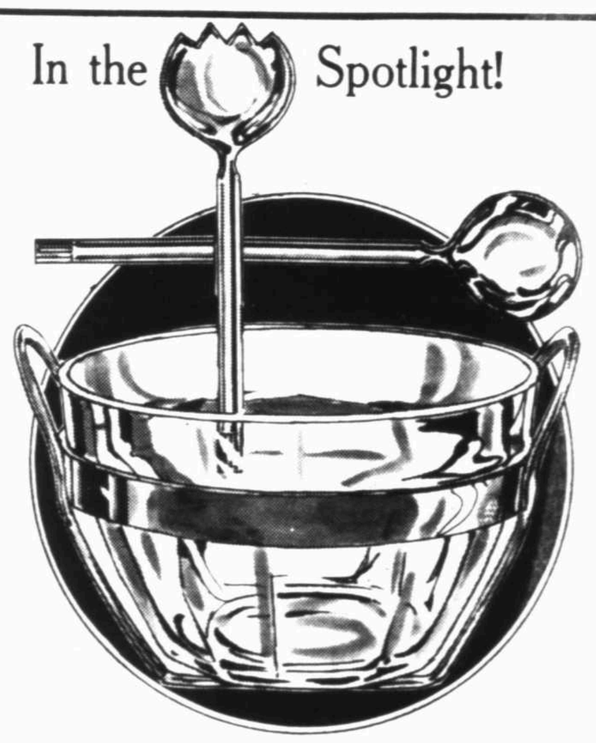

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

Like many backyard gardeners, once the main outdoor growing season is wrapped up, my thoughts turn to planning next year's garden. Already the list of "must" items to be crammed into my gardening space is impossibly long.

Fragrance in the flower garden is important to our family so I plan to add heliotrope and evening stock to the kitchen flower garden. Heliotrope needs to be started indoors early, around March 1, for summer blooms that are quite spectacular, deep purple clusters like huge weeping broccoli heads.

Suitable for container growing, heliotrope would be superb for window boxes where the scent could waft into the apartment or house during the summer.

New Refrigerated Product Turns Novice Cooks Into Bread Bakers

If there is one way guaranteed to jazz up a dull meal or turn every day fare into a special dinner, it is by adding fresh from the oven yeast bread or rolls. For most of us, time or talent or both prevent it that from being a frequent option.

But a new product from the refrigerated food case at the supermarket makes it possible for even a novice cook to serve a freshly baked hot loaf and have it on the table in about 30 minutes from start to finish.

Pipin' Hot" Loaf is the result of three years of intensive research by the Pillsbury Company to develop a refrigerated fresh dough product with flavor and aroma like homemade yeast bread. While the loaf is packaged in cans that resemble the company's successful crescent dinner rolls and biscuits, it uses a completely new dough technology, according to the company.

With just a little hand shaping on the baking sheet, the dough goes from can to oven to table in about 30 minutes. While the baked loaf looks like French bread, the crust is more tender and the texture lighter and less chewy.

After a successful introduction in about three quarters of the country last year, the white Pipin' Hot" Loaf has just moved into the national market. It has been joined by a new wheat loaf expected to be popular with the nearly 30 percent of people who prefer the more flavorful dark breads.

Pillsbury home economists have developed ways to add even more variety to meals with this new product. Italian Herb Loaf is a simple variation which would be good to serve with pasta or a thick, hot soup.

Using the baked loaf for a hero sandwich or a light, hot main dish sandwich is an appealing idea for a quick meal. Chicken Curry Loaf utilizes the last bits of leftover chicken, turning them into a well-seasoned chicken salad mixture. This is spread between lengthwise halves of the baked loaf, which is reassembled, wrapped in foil and returned to the oven just long enough to heat the filling.

Either the white or the wheat Pipin' Hot" Loaf can be used for these recipes.

DEAR ABBY

Widowed son-in-law bound by love

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I lost my wonderful wife to cancer. "Angie" was 23, and we had been married for only a year. The love we shared was beyond description. I can't imagine myself loving another the way I loved Angie.

However, time has a way of changing things, and I know there is a God who sees, understands and perhaps may have plans for my future, so I keep my trust in him.

My problem is my mother-in-law. Angie was Mom's only daughter, and during her struggle with cancer, Mom and I developed a very close mother-son relationship. Now that Angie is gone, Mom considers me "all she has left" of her daughter.

I understand her feelings, Abby, but my life must go on. Unfortunately, Mom has grown so dependent on me that I have no opportunity to get interested in anyone else.

Friends have offered to fix me up with some nice women, but I don't dare to accept because Mom would be devastated if I started to date. And I hate to think of what would happen if I were to marry again.

So how do I get out of this trap? – ALONE AND LONELY

DEAR ALONE: Your mother-in-law needs to learn how to "let go." First she must let go of her grief so she can let go of you. You could help her by recommending Compassionate Friends, a national support group of parents who have learned how to deal with life's cruelest blow -- losing a child. The address is P.O. Box 1347, Oak Brook, Ill. 60521.

You must get on with your life, my friend. Mom may need individual therapy to help her work through her grief, and you need to resume a normal life without feeling trapped or guilty. Good luck and God bless you. The Lord never gives us a heavier load than we can carry.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this for the whole neighborhood. A friendly neighbor of ours just got back from spending a year in a tuberculosis hospital.

She visited my home yesterday, and after she left I sterilized everything she had touched. She hugged my children, and now I'm worried that they might have caught the TB bug from her. Is there any danger? Please hurry your answer. – WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: No TB patient is discharged while he or she is contagious. You are far safer in the company of former TB patients than people who have never been tested for it. A discharged TB patient knows that he is "negative" (free of infectious germs). And unless a person has periodic tests, he can never be positive that he is negative.

DEAR ABBY: Don't change and don't apologize!

The 20th Convention of the National Association of Parliamentarians in San Francisco passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, parliamentary law has a language all of its own; and whereas, in olden times the one presiding was the only person provided with a chair, while others sat on benches, hence he was called the Chairman; and whereas, since time immemorial the term 'Mister Chairman' or 'Madam Chairman' has always been employed to differentiate between sexes; and whereas, further effort toward sex differentiation is redundant and contrived; now therefore be it resolved that organizations and parliamentarians of the National Association of Parliamentarians must use the term Chairman instead of 'Chairperson,' and be it resolved that all members of the National Association of Parliamentarians should habitually stress the principle that the word Chairman belongs to the title of the office the same as the title of President or Secretary."

Abby, a person should not be more concerned with his or her sex than the position held. Besides, it sounds contrived and unprofessional.

Just thought you'd like to know. – MARLISA BANNISTER, WESTERVILLE, OHIO

DEAR MARLISA: I would indeed. The resolution gets my vote.

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Heart abnormality found in anorexics

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The discovery that anorexia nervosa is linked to a dangerous heart abnormality may give doctors a way to prevent sudden death in victims of the eating disorder, a researcher says.

The abnormality, called QT interval prolongation, is an electrical disturbance in the heart that can lead to potentially fatal abnormal rhythms. It can be easily detected with a routine electrocardiogram, said Dr. Jeffrey Isner of the Tufts-New England Medical Center in Boston.

However, most anorexia victims never undergo the electronic heart monitoring, Isner said in an interview Thursday before presenting his findings at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association.

Victims of anorexia, which is marked by compulsive dieting and exercising, become extremely underweight and sometimes resist all efforts to encourage them to eat. Researchers disagree over whether the disorder is purely psychological or physical, but in any event few doctors think to test the hearts of anorectics, Isner said.

Previously, Isner and his colleagues had found that QT interval prolongation was associated with use of the liquid protein diets, which were briefly popular several years ago.

The popularity of the diet plunged when some of those following it died suddenly of heart attacks.

The same cause o death is "not uncommon" in anorectics, Isner said, so it was believed that QT interval prolongation might also occur in them.

But it took five years to identify three anorexia patients who had died suddenly and had electrocardiograms before their deaths, he said. All three had experienced QT interval prolongation.

Karen Carpenter

The recent death of singer Karen Carpenter was due to abnormal heart rhythms resulting from anorexia.

Based on his findings, Isner recommends that victims of anorexia routinely be given electrocardiograms to determine whether heart failure may be imminent.

Study finds women sick more often than men

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although they tend to live longer, "women have more illnesses and disabilities, make more physician visits and are hospitalized at higher rates than men," the Public Health Service reports.

A recently printed study, based on 1979 data, says women are more aware of symptoms than men and that may be why women get their symptoms treated and rest when they're sick.

Because most women get health care during pregnancy they may be more likely to realize they have something wrong, more likely to tell a doctor and get treatment or start changing unhealthy habits to prevent, delay or minimize sickness or death, the report says.

It also says physiological stress during pregnancy may make some symptoms more obvious.

Women, it says, are more likely to have a private doctor and to visit that doctor for care. Men of all ages more than women told the surveyers they thought they didn't need to have a doctor.

What everyone in business should know about changes in telephone service.

As Southwestern Bell Telephone separates from the Bell System, changes are occurring in the ways we do business with you. And it's important that you understand them. Here's a quick look at some of those changes.

TELEPHONE EQUIPMENT

When the Bell System breaks up, the equipment you now lease from Southwestern Bell Telephone will become the property of AT&T. If you want to continue leasing that equipment, you won't notice a big change. You'll simply lease from AT&T. And if you call Southwestern Bell Telephone to inquire about this equipment between now and the end of the year, we'll refer you to AT&T.

Of course, you'll still have the option of purchasing new equipment from a variety of suppliers. In fact, Southwestern Bell Corporation will form a subsidiary which, beginning in January, will market telecommunications equipment and services.

REPAIR SERVICE

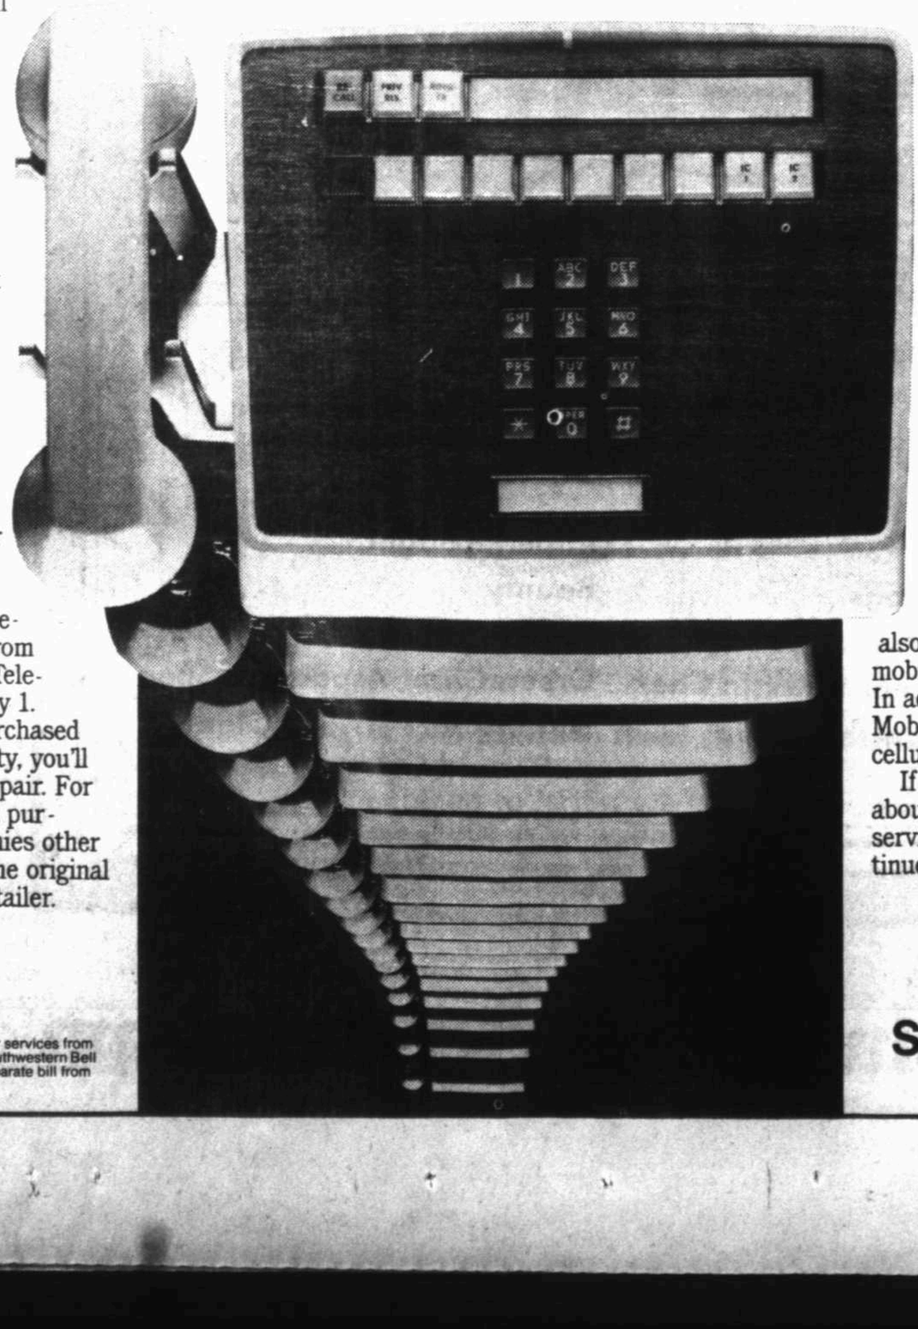

After divestiture, AT&T will be responsible for maintenance of your present equipment.

They also will repair single line telephones purchased from Southwestern Bell Telephone before January 1. However, if your purchased set is out of warranty, you'll be charged for its repair. For repair of equipment purchased from companies other than Bell, contact the original manufacturer or retailer.

Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to repair your telephone line at no charge. However, if you call Southwestern Bell Telephone for repairs and the problem is found to be in the equipment and not the line, there will be a charge if our technicians make a repair visit. And you may still need to contact your equipment supplier to have the problem corrected.

LONG DISTANCE

On January 1, Southwestern Bell Telephone will provide regional long distance service within your surrounding area. But long distance calls outside this area will be handled by the long distance company of your choice.

BILLING

In most cases, you'll still receive one bill from Southwestern Bell Telephone for services previously provided by the Bell System. But each company's charges will be shown separately on your monthly bill. For example, regional long distance calls placed within your surrounding area and handled by Southwestern Bell Telephone will be shown on one page, while long distance provided by other companies will be shown on another*. Special telephone numbers will be on the bill in case you have questions.

YELLOW PAGES

Yellow Pages advertising will soon be handled by Southwestern Bell Publications. Your business will continue to be listed by us in the White Pages. After January 1, a representative of Southwestern Bell Publications will contact you regarding your listings and advertising in the Yellow Pages.

LOCAL SERVICE

Southwestern Bell Telephone will still be your company for local service, so please continue to call us first when you want to establish service. We'll also still be your company for local services like Touch-Tone*, Custom Calling Services, local data networks, ESSX-30 and Centrex.

Southwestern Bell Telephone also will continue to offer the mobile phone service we offer today. In addition, Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems will offer new cellular mobile phone service.

If you have specific questions about your business telephone service or equipment, please continue to call your business office.

Southwestern Bell Telephone

*If you have long distance or other services from companies other than AT&T or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you will receive a separate bill from them.

nation in brief

Reagan administration cracks down on death-squad funding

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsweek magazine says the Reagan administration might try to deport or freeze the bank accounts of Salvadoran exiles in Miami who are suspected of sending money to right-wing death squads in El Salvador.

President Reagan is solidly behind the move, Newsweek said in its Dec. 12 issue. It quoted one unidentified administration official as saying Reagan recently told aides, "This killing must stop."

As part of a "major investigation" in Miami, the magazine said, National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane recently asked Attorney General William French Smith and FBI Director William Webster "to explore legal grounds for deporting exiles long believed to have financed death-squad activities."

The magazine said the federal government is looking for possible violations of "immigration, tax, firearm or currency laws" by the suspects.

City pulls plug on yule lights

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Downtown Kansas City is without Christmas decorations this year, and merchants say the reason is money.

"It's a shame," said Fred C. Rivers, executive vice president of the Merchants Association of Greater Kansas City. "This is the first time downtown has gone without lights in, gee, probably 50 years."

Last year the tradition survived only because of a last-minute drive that raised about $10,000.

This year, it would have cost $100,000 either to refurbish the 10-year-old decorations or purchase new ones, according to Downtown Inc., a nonprofit promotion group which recommended going without decorations this Christmas season.

Polish stowaways begin fast

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Three men who escaped communist Poland as stowaways say they have begun a hunger strike while awaiting a decision on whether they will be granted political asylum in the United States.

The men, who landed in the United States last week aboard a Dart Container Line Inc. cargo ship, were already denied asylum, but immigration officials are reconsidering, said Dart President Conrad Everhard. The ship was returning to Newark,, N.J., briefly today before steaming for England, and the refugees will be forced to leave the country if asylum is not granted.

No charges filed in death

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — No charges are being considered in the death of an Ithaca College sophomore who fell four stories after companions dared him to try to jump into a stalled dormitory elevator, authorities said.

Paul A. Cohodes, 20, of Highland Park, Ill., was trying to jump from a fourth-floor hallway into an elevator stopped between the fourth and fifth floors Saturday night after his companions pried open the doors and dared him, college spokesman John Lippincot said.

Chicken flu comes under control

BALTIMORE (AP) — An outbreak of avian influenza that has forced the slaughter of almost 4 million chickens in southeastern Pennsylvania may be under control by next week because of the excellent cooperation of poultry farmers, health officials say.

Police and government inspectors in the Lancaster, Pa., area are enforcing a strict quarantine at farms where the disease has been reported. They have also killed some 3.9 million infected birds.

Study predicts drug use

BOSTON (AP) — Psychologists can accurately predict which teenagers will take up cigarettes, alcohol and marijuana by administering personality tests when the youngsters are still in junior high school, a study shows.

The researchers found that the most rebellious youngsters are also the most likely to turn to heavy pot use in high school.

They tested the childrens' attitudes toward authority and good behavior and came up with a "socialization" score for each pupil.

"Where you are at an early age on the scale of socialization predicts with significant accuracy where you will be three years later in your use of drugs in high school," said Dr. Gene M. Smith of Massachusetts General Hospital. "This same scale also differentiates those who will become users of the legal drugs — cigarettes and alcohol — from those who will not."

Smith said the test might be used to spot susceptible children early. However, adults must be careful when using these exams, because youngsters may turn to the illicit substances even more quickly if they know they have a drug-prone personality. But he said that proper counseling should be able to stop some of these yourgsters' slide into drug use.

The research, published recently in the journal Contemporary Drug Problems, is one of a series of reports resulting from a major 13-year study.

Women legislators vow to use political strength

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Women legislators and governmental officials vowed Sunday to use their new political strength to "double our numbers" in state assemblies and won an immediate million-dollar pledge from women's political action committees to finance that mission.

The decision emphasized the impatient and aggressive political nature the elected and appointed officials expressed during a four-day Forum for Women State Legislators that began as a series of university-type think tank sessions but hardened into political activism.

"We opened this conference on Thursday with a stress...on the movement from the decade of the 1970s of women entering the work force in very large numbers to the decade in the 1980s and beyond where we are going to see an increase in the numbers and movement into political leadership," said Dr. Ruth Mandel, director of the sponsoring Center for the American Woman and Politics (CAWP). "That pattern is going to gain strength."

Mandel said the closing plenary session of the conference focused on "what next?" for women legislators and reached the conclusion that the prime goal was to "double our numbers" in the state capitals.

The more than 600 women attending the forum at Hotel del Coronado discovered the statistics — which showed they hold an edge at the ballot box — could translate into actual political power. They found strength in their ideas and numbers as women from all corners of the nation discovered they shared sympathy toward mutual goals on issues such as child care, comparable worth and violence in the home.

While partisanship remained important, there was almost unanimous agreement with a new CAWP study which concluded that women need the support of other women to move into governmental office.

Astronaut's family won't buy tree until pilot returns

Shaw

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — It won't be truly the Christmas season for the family of Columbia space shuttle pilot Brewster H. Shaw Jr. until he's home and able to enjoy the holiday, too, says his 8-year-old daughter Jessica.

The family won't even be buying a Christmas tree "til Dad gets back," she said in a telephone conversation from Madison, where her grandparents live.

"I saw him on TV last night," said Brewster Shaw III, 13, elder son of the shuttle pilot. "I think that he must be having a good time up there."

Brandon Shaw, 7, agreed that his father seems to be having a good time in orbit, but he said as for himself, he's had enough of the attention the family has been getting.

"I'm gettin' a little tired of it," said Brandon. "Would you like to speak to my mom?"

The Shaws spend much time listening to a scanner that picks up communications between Columbia and mission control in Houston.

"I can hear in his voice how happy he is," said the astronaut's wife, Kathy.

WOOLTON, England (AP) — So what happens when Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's teddy bear rubs shoulders with Princess Anne's teddy bear at a fund-raising exhibition?

About $1,500 is raised for the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, that's what.

Their two teddies were among the more than 150 on display at what was billed as a "bear necessities" exhibition for charity in nearby Liverpool.

Other teddy bears on display Sunday included the favorites of the Duke of Westminster, the Marquis of Bath, Countess Mountbatten, Social Democratic party leader David Owen and comedian Sir Harry Secombe.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Born just Tuesday, the governor's daughter, Pamela Ashley Brown, has already met the press.

Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. and his wife, Phyllis George Brown, paraded past about 20 photographers and reporters and 50 startled onlookers in the lobby of the University of Kentucky Medical Center as they checked out Sunday.

The governor and Mrs. Brown, a former Miss America and television personality, were all smiles but the newborn, clad in pink and white, kept her eyes squeezed shut in the glare of camera lights.

The Browns plan to spend at least one night at the Governor's Mansion in Frankfort before the governor leaves office Dec. 12.

"I think we're going over Thursday," said Mrs. Brown. "I've got a little crib for her over there."

Pamela left the hospital weighing about the same as she did at birth — 7-pounds, 10½ ounces — and is 19 inches long, her mother said. "She's really been a lady...She hasn't cried much at all," she added.

LONDON (AP) — Miss World, Britain's Sarah-Jane Hutt, is back on stage — the first stage of her prize-winning world tour. The first stop: El Salvador.

The 19-year-old Miss Hutt set out Sunday on a trip to raise money for children in a military hospital.

At Heathrow Airport reporters asked her if there is a man in her life. "No special man," she replied.

She also said as far as deciding what the future will hold, "I am just going to concentrate on my year as Miss World amd then decide on a career."

Flirting actually loneliness antidote

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sidelong glance. A welcoming smile. While it may seem just a social game, flirting in fact is the "antidote to loneliness" that anyone can learn, say two self-certified experts on the sexy subject.

"Flirting is a lost art that can be taught," says Diane Jonasson, and for $45, she and partner Patty Stine will guide even the most timid through their daylong "Learn to Flirt" seminar.

Ms. Jonasson, 40, draws on memories of nights she spent waiting for suitors who never showed and the self-help courses those waits prompted her to take.

Ms. Stine, 36, contributes her experiences with the "gorgeous body-builder jock type" she once favored exclusively — to the point of marrying one — before learning to look at "everything else that makes a good man."

"Flirting should be a way of life," Ms. Jonasson, a public relations professional, said in a recent interview.

"Babies and toddlers are the most flirtatious people of all. They'll do anything to get your attention. We feel the adult can go back to that little kid in all of us and be a little more friendly, a little more open, a little more excited with life."

Ms. Stine, a Los Angeles County employee, concedes that flirting "got a very bad connotation because people do it just to feed their own egos, when actually some people can really use it to meet people and to keep yourself from being alone. Teasing is promising something that you have no intention of giving, and flirting is a way of communicating with people."

To begin, they say, don't regard the opposite sex as the enemy.

"Men and women both want the same thing," Ms. Jonasson said. "The new flirter must overcome often sizable fears of taking risks, of failing and of rejection."

"There are no guarantees that you're not going to get rejected," Ms. Stine added. "You have to take responsibility for the fact that your loneliness is self-inflicted. You can convince yourself there's nobody out there for you, then you don't have to go out and put forth the effort."

The two women based the courses they've offered since summer on similar ones developed by Mollie Meyers and Suzanne Gerber of Florida, whom Ms. Stine contacted after seeing their television interview with Phil Donahue.

Once you decide to take the plunge, they advise, look beyond singles' bars to the park, the laundry, the grocery store — anywhere you see someone interesting.

Take out some insurance against rejection by taking care of yourself — the well-groomed person has an edge. Black and red are sexy on women, while blue and white flatter men, they claim.

Flirts of both sexes should strive to seem calm no matter how nervous they might be.

On their "do" list, the women include: showing enthusiasm, being willing to try something new, being a good listener and using your imagination.

On their list of don'ts: being boring, possessive, insensitive or dishonest, drinking too much on a first date and imposing on a new friend.
