"Whale Swallowed Jonah" Declares W.J.Bryan

Santa Fe Discrimination In Hog Freight Charged

RAIL BATTLE IN PLAINVIEW IS GIVEN ANGLE IN STOCK DAMAGE

Death to Pork 15 Times Greater on Ft. Worth Route, Claim.

HEATED DENIAL MADE

Pioneering Work of Santa Fe Pleaded As Objection to Denver Petition.

PLAINVIEW, July 20.—(AP) — Charges that the Santa Fe railroad had discriminated against Fort Worth hog buyers in favor of California hog buyers made by A. B. Martin, Plainview attorney for the South Plains Railway committee, was met with tremendous opposition by T. J. Norton of the Santa Fe and brought denial from T. B. Gallagher, general freight and passenger agent of the road here today. Martin charged that large numbers of hogs die each year on the way to Fort Worth because of inadequate service and that the road had run a large number of through hog trains to California but had refused to run all-hog trains to Fort Worth.

Damage Greater.

He said that damage suits on hog shipments to Fort Worth from the South Plains was 15 times greater than on shipments to California and that the Santa Fe had frequently sent out circulars advertising through hog trains to California.

On the witness stand Norton asked Martin to prove his statements that the Santa Fe had neglected hog shipments to Fort Worth.

"I'm not on the witness stand," Martin answered.

"Well, I'll give you a chance later to prove your statement," retored Norton.

Attorney Barwise tried repeatedly to get Gallagher to admit the interests of the South Plains would be served as well by the Denver proposal as the Santa Fe but Gallagher invariably replied with a smile, "Im testifying for the Santa Fe."

Splawn Aids.

W. M. V. Splawn, president of the University of Texas, took an active part as counsel for the Plains committee supporting the Denver in cross-examining Santa Fe witnesses. He was granted a leave of absence by the board of regents of the university to appear as an expert witness favoring no particular road.

Santa Fe witnesses today told of pioneering work, surveys made in 1913 for roads proposed in the present hearing, of years when the road failed to earn operating expenses and of how the Santa Fe had kept pace with or had been in the van of developments.

Mr. Gallagher said that in 1913 the road proposed to build, but reluctance of ranchmen to break lands into farms had discouraged extensions to Silverton and Dimmitt. He said the average truck haul to railroads in areas that would be touched by new Santa Fe lines is 30 miles but would be reduced from 10 to 15 miles by extensions.

Tells Pioneer Work.

"For the first five years the extension would not be self-supporting but the lineage is short, capital outlay small and the extensions would have support of the main line at Plainview and is an excellent system proposition," he declared.

Gallagher said the Silverton extension would benefit Floyd, Hale, Hall, Motley and Swisher counties as well as Briscoe and that the Dimmitt extension would benefit Hale, Swisher, Lamb and Palmer counties.

Cecil Smith of Sherman, general attorney for the Quanah, Acme and Pacific in cross examining Gallagher declared it would be impossible for the Santa Fe extensions to benefit Motley and Floyd counties because the northwestern portion of each county, the only part that might be served, are not agricultural sections.

The Quanah, Acme and Pacific has filed application to extend from McBain to Floydada.

Anything for Railroad.

C. F. Kerr of Dimmitt, for 27 years a resident of Castro county, said that any proposal was favored that would bring a railroad. Under cross-examination he said the people preferred a trunk to a branch line. He testified that 95 per cent of the land in his section was tillable.

More than 1,000 persons attended the hearing today. The largest audience ever to have attended a gathering of this nature was here from great distances. Large delegations from Dimmitt, Childress and Silverton, besides a considerable number from New Mexico. Plainview was bedecked with flags and 200-gallon tanks of ice water were placed at convenient places over the town to accommodate the crowds.

All Texas would be benefitted should the Fort Worth and Denvers application for a road from Cary to Silverton and from Silverton to Lubbock be granted, while if denied, the Santa Fe will be given a wrongful monopoly and South Plains development seriously retarded, declares the petition of intervention of the South Plains railway committee.

The counties of Castro, Lamb, Hale Briscoe, Floyd, Lubbock, Hockley, Cochran, Terry, Lynn and Hall are

To Us Folks Who Are Just Average This Yarn's a Heartbreaker, But Don't Drop a Tear Until the End

But We Venture to Guess That If Miss Blank Had Actually Lost Her $60 Wichita Falls Would Have Seen to It She Got Her Vacation.

THE DAY dawned bright for a Wichita Falls school teacher, but evening yesterday was gloomy—and hot.

The teacher—a woman well known and a valued member of the public school teaching staff, had worked hard last winter and lived economically. From her none too bulky pay enevelope each month she laid away a small part that by the end of the school year represented a sum sufficient for vacation's needs.

AND SO SHE HAD A LAUGH ON THE HEAT

She had planned and planned this summer, laughing at the heat and looking ahead to the fun she knew was coming.

Monday was the day of days. All arrangements were made. She went to the depot early in the afternoon, her purse on her arm and her handbag in her hand. A well-filled trunk had been checked and sent ahead in the morning.

In the purse was a round-trip ticket and Pullman reservation to Boulder, Colo., together with more than $60 in cash.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT TOO GOOD FOR SUCH THIEF

She was trying hard to fight back the tears as she came up to the travelers' aid secretary just as the northbound Denver pulled out.

"It's gone," she faltered. "I had it on my arm when I left the station to get on the train, and when I got into the car and looked for it it wasn't there. I hunted all up and down the platform and I can't find it."

Several persons noticed her as she left the depot waiting room to board the train, and they were positive the purse—a gray leather affair, was hanging from the teacher's arm. She believed it was cut from her by some miscreant who was able to ply a knife in the jam around the Pullman steps. Either that or it just slipped off when she handed her baggage to the porter to carry to her seat.

AND SO BLOOEY WENT THAT SUMMER'S REST

At any rate, it disappeared—and with its fading went the Colorado vacation.

"It was all the money I had," she said. "I'll just have to stay home now—" and she slipped out of the station door, cast a wistful glance at the last coach of the train as it gathered speed on its way past the Seventh street crossing.

Then she went home.

SEQUEL

All that actually happened—but there is still another chapter.

Late in the afternoon a telegram came back to the Denver offices from the conductor of the train.

"Found purse. Returning it. Notify Miss Blank."

And its still cool and inviting in Boulder.

TWO-CENT CUT IN COUNTY TAX RATE IS MADE

County Commissioners Decide on Reduction Yesterday.

A two-cent reduction in the Wichita county tax rate was decided on Monday afternoon by the county commissioners when, after a study of the valuation records for the year and an estimate of the financial needs for the next 12 months, it was found that a rate of 73 cents on the $100 valuation would be sufficient. Last year the rate was 75 cents on the $100.

Recommendations of five-cent reduction was made when the court first began consideration of the rate. County Tax Collector Guy Raley told the court he believed the county could safely stand such a cut; and Judge B. D. Sartin also expressed himself as favorable to the slice.

Later, however, it was found that on the county's estimated assessed valuation of $63,000,000 a 70-cent rate might not give a safe working margin of capital.

The decision on the rate will allow the tax office to begin work at once figuring tax bills for the year.

Third Commissioner Favors Whitham Co.

An echo of the meeting a week ago Monday when letting of the contract on the Holliday-Park-Lake road caused considerable dispute was heard yesterday when Commissioner H. H. Haynes of Electra switched his vote from "naye to "aye" on the proposal to award a contract for a concrete paving to the L. E. Whitham company.

Mr. Haynes and Commissioner L. L. Kuntz of Iowa Park voted against the paving last week. Their votes were matched with votes of "aye" from Commissioner Jackson of Wichita Falls and Commissioner Knauth of Burkburnett. With the tie resulting, Judge Sartin voted with Commissioners Jackson and Knauth.

MA SEEKS EXTRADITION

DAIRYMEN ARE TRYING TO GET DOUGLAS BACK

Move Underway to Have Him Put Back As Department Head.

A movement has been started among dairymen of the county to petition the city council for the return of Dr. A. H. Douglas as director of the health department, it was learned here Monday from authoritative sources.

Dr. Douglas, head of the department for five years, was switched a few weeks ago to the general managership of the water department, a position carrying greater responsibility and a larger field of work.

As director of the health department Dr. Douglas was in active supervision of inspection and other regulatory measures for the dairies that supply the city's milk, and in that work he won the confidence and good will of every producer with whom he came in contact.

It is understood a petition is being circulated now or will be circulated in a few days asking that Dr. Douglas be returned to the health department directorship.

Youth Riding Bike Is Run Over by Car

William Naylor, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Naylor, 1407 Monroe street, is recovering from severe bruises and a general shaking-up sustained at 11 o'clock Monday morning when he was run over by an automobile on the Ninth tsreet side of the city hall.

The boy was riding a bicycle west on Ninth and in seeking to cross one of the rails of the traction line one of the wheels of his machine caught in the groove between the rail and paving. He was thrown heavily to the pavement and directly in the path of a car driven by a negro named Kelly.

Quick action by the driver prevented a serious accident. As it was, young Naylor was grazed by the wheel. He was believed to have been badly hurt for a time and was taken to the hospital, but there it was found he was not seriously injured.

TAX RATE FOR STATE PUT UP TO 77 CENTS

Two-Cent Increase Made by Automatic Tax Board.

REDUCTION IMPOSSIBLE

Statement Is Issued by Rate Making Board Sitting at Austin.

AUSTIN, July 20. (AP).—An increase of two cents in the state tax rate was made by the state automatic tax board late today, bringing the tax to 77 cents on the $100 property valuation for 1925-26. The tax was 75 cents in 1924. An amendment to the constitution increasing the Confederate pension tax from five to seven cents caused the hik. State ad valorem tax remained at 35 cents, as well as the school tax.

"Reduction in ad valorem taxes was impossible," a statement issued by the board, composed of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, State Treasurer W. Gregory Hatcher and Comptroller S. H. Terrell.

AND NOW MA'S PA WILL STRAIGHTEN OUT A RIVER

AUSTIN, July 20.—An appeal will go to James E. Ferguson Tuesday to decide where the bank of the Colorado river through Austin lies, as a result of a reported controversy between claimants of lands, and between two boards of the state.

Contract for Paris Bridge Held Invalid

AUSTIN, July 20. (AP).—The contract made with the Austin Bridge company by Texas and Oklahoma for a bridge across Red river between Paris, Texas and Hugo, Okla., is inoperative and invalid, Assistant Attorney General L. C. Sutton, held today in an opinion rendered the state highway commission.

Assistant Attorney General Sutton held that the contract for the bridge will have to be cancelled and a separate contract made by Lamar county, Texas, and an independent contract by Choctaw county, Oklahoma. The contract must specify that part of the bridge to be constructed in Texas, which will be only a small portion as the Texas boundary goes only to the cut bank, he said. The greater part of the bridge will be constructed in Oklahoma territory.

Wichitans Are Back From Camp Mabry

The Headquarters Third Battalion, 142nd Infantry returned Saturday from the annual encampment at Camp Mabry, Austin. Twenty-three men, accompanied by officers, First Lieutenant Joseph W. Marlow and Second Lieutenant A. C. Willbern, were representatives from the Texas National Guard of Wichita Falls. The encampment enrolled 2,200 men for training, and it was reported by Major General Hulen, who was in charge, and he reported that this encampment was the most satisfactory and best trained one in history. While there the men were entertained at the mansion by Governor Ferguson and her husband and reviewed before her. They all report a fine time.

TAX RATE CUT PROBABLE

al Receives Favorable Report From Kansas Senator.

SWAMPROOT, Mass., July 20.—(AP)—Plunging into his first real consideration of the administration's legislative program for next session, President Coolidge today received an encouraging report from Senator Curtis of Kansas, the republican leader, on the prospect for a heavy tax cut.

A reduction of at least $300,000,000 is in prospect on the basis of treasury reports he has just gone over, Senator Curtis told the executive. He emphasized, however, that should the program for reorganization of the government departments be enacted, a cut of a half billion dollars seems possible.

TWO PROJECTS ON STREET

Two Paving Companies Busy Laying Pavement on Speedway.

Two paving companies are at work laying concrete on the Speedway avenue project. The contract for the work was let by the council in two parts, one section of the road to be of concrete and the other Wilhite process asphalt on a concrete base.

The L. E. Whitham company is pouring the concrete section, while the Plains Paving company is putting down concrete base preparatory to topping it with Wilhite.

THE WEATHER

"I could have rode clear down hill without touchin' the handle bars, only for that rock, and it didn't hurt much except when the doctor was sewin' it."

LYRICS OF LIFE
By Douglas Malloch
Our Own Red, White and Blue.

I've sailed on many oceans, I've traveled many strands,
And I have seen a hundred flags, the flags of other lands.
I've wandered many countries, the way the people do,
But I have never seen a flag, a flag that thrilled me through
Like our own red, white and blue.

I've seen a thousand temples, I've walked as many streets,
I've listened to the native tongue that every land repeats,
I've heard the people singing of banners old and new,
But I have never seen a flag, a flag as brave and true,
As our own, red, white and blue.

So maybe you will wander afar across the wave,
And you will find the women fair, will find the fellows brave,
And you will see a hundred flags, all beautiful to view,
But you will say, the same as I, that only one will do—
Your own, red, white and blue!

GOLD LOAN IN FRANCE OFF TO A GOOD START

Government Hopes to Put Finances of Country Back on Feet.

PARIS, July 20.—(AP)—The four per cent gold coupon loan through which the French government hopes to refund its floating debt and pave the way for general financial equilibrium and settlement of the war debts got a good start today. The notices of the new issue hardly had been posted on the walls in public places when lines formed in front of the loan windows of the banks and post-offices.

It was a busy day in all these institutions. While clerks were registering subscriptions for the holders of the national defense bonds, other clerks were selling national defense bonds to those, who, attracted by the guarantee features of the new loan wanted to qualify for subscription thereto, only holders of such bonds being permitted to subscribe.

City Typhoid Fight Commended by State

Commendation of city officials here for the active steps taken in combatting the typhoid fever flurry appearing several weeks ago was voiced in a letter received yesterday from Dr. H. O. Sappington, state health officer.

It was addressed to Mayor R. E. Shepherd, Commissioner J. H. Patton and Dr. J. M. Whitworth and read as follows:

"Dear Sirs:

"We are pleased to learn of your interest and activities in preventing any further spread of typhoid in your city, and desire to commend you in your stand in requiring all premises to connect with the sewer system."

It also made reference to a federal milk ordinance recommended for adoption here.

Officials report the typhoid situation well in hand now. No additional cases have been reported for some time and it is believed all danger of a further spread of the epidemic has been definitely averted.

CITY CANCELS TAX CONTRACT WITH ATTORNEY

Breaks Agreement With E. M. Maun for Back Collections.

"COSTLY AND UNFAIR"

Finance Commissioner Jones Finally Gets Action On Matter.

Acting on recommendation of Finance Commissioner Oral Jones and a written opinion from City Attorney W. E. George that the contract was illegal, the city council Monday night cancelled its contract with E. M. Mann, local attorney, whereby he is given 10 per cent of all collections of taxes delinquent prior to 1922.

Matter of Dispute.

The contract has been a matter of dispute for some time and has had ones' attention practically from the time he has been in office. He has sought at various times to get it before the council for action but until last night had been unable to bring action on it.

He read a letter from Attorney George in which the latter cited an opinion to the effect that the council had no authority to authorize collection of municipal taxes, delinquent or otherwise, by any one other than the regular tax collector. He said the collector could employ an attorney to assist him by filing suits where necessary, but that the services of Mann as provided in the existing contract, were not limited to this.

An Expensive One.

Commissioner Jones said he believed the contract an unfair and expensive one to the city and that he believed Mann would act as a good citizen and offer no objection to termination of the agreement.

The council then without discussion voted to cancel the contract and serve notification of their action on Mr. Mann. The contract has been in force since June, 1922, and was made not long after Mann retired as city attorney.

Express Employe Is Hemorrhage Victim

F. W. Hempstead, 49, cashier of the American Expres company here, died in the general hospital at 11 o'clock Monday morning as a result of hemorrhage.

He was found in his room at the William and Mary hotel about 9 o'clock apparently in a critical condition. A Merkle ambulance was called and he was taken to the hospital where his death occurred two hours later.

Mr. Hempstead had been with the local express company for seven years and was well known in this city.

He was not married and has no relatives in Wichita Falls. The body is being held at the Merkle undertaking parlors pending the arrival of a brother from Little Rock, Ark., today.

COOLER HERE YESTERDAY.

Thermometer Falls to Climb to Dizzy Heights of Sunday.

A temperature evesre in itself but which, after Sunday's record breaking mark of 111 degrees, was a distinct relief, came Monday to Wichita Falls. The official reading taken by the Wichita Falls Electric company was 105 degrees.

The day was cloudy in spots, but for most of the time a brisk, hot wind swept in from the south.

The weather bureau predicted continued warm and cloudy weather for Tuesday.

Joshua Made The Sun Stand Still Also, He Affirms

Scopes Defense, Under Darrow, Gets Commoner on Stand for Questions As to His Belief in Miracles

Agnostism Meets Fundamentalism

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—(AP).—Admitted agnostism met fundamentalism here today as Clarence Darrow, defense attorney in the Scopes evolution case, drew William Jennings Bryan, associate prosecution counsel, upon the witness stand.

Hundreds of men and women, drawn from the peaceful hills and valleys for miles around, pushed close to the rough wooden platform behind the court house as the verbal swords of the two clashed time and again, sending off flashes that drew volleys of hand clapping and mountain fox-calls.

A silence broken only by the rustling of the maple trees settled over the crowd as Arthur Garfield Hays announced the intention of the defense to call Bryan to the witness stand.

Bryan Says He Defends Bible

The purpose was explained later by Mr. Darrow as an effort to "show the people what fundamentalism is." Bryan arose from the witness stand to tell Darrow, the judge and the assembled spectators that its purpose was to cast "slurs upon the Bible."

The nature of the examination brought Attorney General Stewart and other members of the prosecution counsel to their feet time after time to interpose objections. Frequently it even caused Darrow to arise with objections as the witness proceeded to direct the course himself.

Faces grew strained and lips tightened among the spectators at the apparent irreverence of some of the questions and they arose cheer as the witness waved aside the protection of the judge with the declaration:

"These gentlemen have not had much chance. They did not come here to try this case. They came here to try revealed religion. I am here to defend it and they can ask me any questions they please."

As it proceeded insinuations ceased to be insinuations and became either unveiled sarcasm or pointed irony, until, argument succeeding argument a fresh one threatened to arouse more controversial remarks than any of the preceding ones and Judge Raulston adjourned court for the day with several members of both the prosecution and the defense counsel on their feet and hot words on their tongues.

The questioning began with the usual qualifying questions for the expert witness and after Bryan had announced his intention of calling to the stand Darrow, Malone and Hays.

The witness said that he had made considerable study of the Bible, including its interpretation on the particular question involved.

Accept the Bible As It Is Given

"I have studied the Bible for about 50 years," he said, in answer to a question, "or some time more than that, but of course, I have studied more as I have become older than when I was a boy."

"Do you claim that everything in the Bible should be literally interpreted?"

"I believe that everything in the Bible should be accepted as it is given there. Some of the Bible is given illustratively. For instance, 'Ye are the salt of the earth.' I would not insist that man was actually salt or that he had flesh of salt but it is used in the sense of salt as saving God's people."

"But when you read that Jonah swallowed the whale—or the whale swallowed Jonah—excuse me please, how do you literally interpret that?

"When I read that a big fish swallowed Jonah, it doesn't say whale."

Doesn't it. Are you sure?"

"That is my recollection of it. A big fish and I believe it, and I believe in a God who can make a whale and can make a man and can make both do what He pleases."

Other interrogations along the same line followed until the query: "You don't know whether it was the ordinary run of fish or made for that purpose?"

"You may guess, you evolutionists guess," responded the witness.

"But when we do guess, we have a sense to guess right."

"But do not do it often."

"You are prepared to say whether that fish was made specially to swallow a man or not?"

"No, the Bible doesn't say."

"But you believe He made them, that He made such a fish and that it was big enough to swallow Jonah?"

One Miracle Is As Easy As Another

"Yes sir; let me add, one miracle is just as easy to believe as another."

A suggestion from Darrow that one was just as hard for him to believe as another brought an immediate response.

"It is hard to believe for you, but easy for me. A miracle is a thing performed beyond what man can perform. When you get beyond what man can do, you get within the realm of miracles; and it is just as easy to believe the miracle of Jonah as any other miracle in the Bible."

"Perfectly easy to believe that Jonah swallowed the whale?"

"If the Bible said so; the Bible doesn't make extreme statements as evolutionists do."

"That may be a question Mr. Bryan, about some of those you have known?"

"The only thing is, you have a definition of fact that includes imagination."

An objection from the attorney general to the argumentative form of questioning brought the remark from Darrow that the witness must "not argue with me either."

Thence the interrogation turned to the plausibility of Joshua's making the sun stand still, and brought another objection from the attorney general, who declared the questions had gone beyond the pale "of any issue that could possibly be injected into this law suit exception of imagination."

Bryan, however, asserted "it would be too exciting to confine the defense to the facts. If they are not allowed to get away from the facts what have they to deal with?"

The next query from Darrow was:

"Have you an opinion as to whether, who ever wrote the book, I believe it was Joshua, the book of Joshua, thought the sun went around the earth or not?"

"I believe he was inspired."

"Can you answer my question?"

"When you let me finish the statement."

"It is a simple question, but finish."

"You cannot measure the length of my answer by the length of your question."

"No, except that the answer will be longer."

Bible Inspired, Is Bryan's Decision

"I believe that the Bible is inspired and whether the inspired author, one who wrote as he was directed to write, understood the things he was writing about, I do not know."

"Whoever inspired it. Do you think whoever inspired it believed that the sun went around the earth."

"I believe it was inspired by the Almighty, and He may have used language that could be understood at that time instead of using language that could not be understood until Darrow was born."

"So, it might not, it might have been subject to construction, might it not?"

"It might have been used in language that could be understood then."

"That means it is subject to construction?"

"That is your construction. I am answering your question."

"Is it your opinion that passage was subject to construction?"

"Well I think anybody can put his own construction upon it, but I do not mean necessarily that it is a correct construction. I have answered the question."

"Don't you believe that in order to lengthen the day it would have been canstrued that the earth stood still?"

"I would not attempt to say what would have been necessary but I know this: that I can take a glass of water that would fall to the ground without the strength of hand and to the extent of the glass of water I can overcome the law of gravitation and lift it up. Whereas without my hand it would fall to the ground. If my puny hand can overcome the law of gravitation, the most universally understood, to that extent, I would not deny power to the hand of Almighty God that made the universe."

"I read that years ago. Can you answer my question directly? If the day was lengthened by stopping either the earth or the sun, it must have been the earth?"

"Well, I should say so."

"Yes?"

Sun Stood Still As It Was With Earth

"But it was language that was understood at that time, and we now know that the sun stood still as it was with the earth."

"We know also the sun does not stand still?"

"Well it is relatively so, as Mr. Eienstein would say."

"I ask you if it does stand still?"

"You know as well as I know."

"Better. You have not doubt about it?"

"No. And the earth moves around."

"Yes?"

"But I think there is nothing improper if you will protect the Lord against your criticism.

"I suppose he needs it?"

"He was using language at that time the people understood."

"Now, Mr. Bryan, have you ever pondered, what would have happened to the earth if it had stood still?"

"No."

"You have not?"

"No, the God I believe in could have taken care of that, Darrow."

"I see. Have you ever pondered what naturally happens to the earth if it stood still suddenly?"

"No."

"Don't you know it would have been converted into a molten mass of matter."

"You testify to that when you get on the stand. I will give you a chance."

"Don't you believe it?"

"I would want to hear expert testimony on that."

"You have never investigated that subject?"

"I don't think I have ever had the question asked."

"Or even thought of it?"

"I have been too busy on things that I thought were of more importance than that."

Story of Flood Is To Be Taken Literally

"You believe the story of the flood to be a literal interpretation?"

"Yes sir."

"When was that flood?"

"I would not attempt to fix the date. The date is fixed, as suggested this morning."

"About 4004 B. C."

"That has been the estimate of a man that is accepted today. I would not say it is accurate."

"That estimate is printed in the Bible?"

"Everybody knows, at least I think most of the people know that was the estimate given."

Other questions followed along the same line until Attorney General Stewart objected to the cross examination of Darrow of his own witness. Bryan, however, assured the court that he desired the defense attorney to be given latitude "for I am going to have some latitude when he gets through."

Arising, he addressed both the court and the crowd:

"These gentlemen have not had much chance. They did not come here to try this case. They came here to try revealed religion. I am here to defend it and they can ask me any questions they please."

Applause from the spectators brought an interchange of remarks between the attorney and the witness which concluded with a declaration of Darrow that "you insult every man of science and learning in the world because he does not believe in your fool religion."

Another objection came from the attorney general who asserted that Darrow was making an effort to insult the witness. Judge Raulston, however, indicated he did not wish to be purely technical and allowed the examination to continue.

RAIL BATTLE

represented on the committee the petition recites.

8,500 Square Miles.

The South Plains, made up of 8,500 square miles, and 40 per cent of which is tillable, is served only by the Santa Fe, which does not give adequate service; that natural flow of more than 50 per cent of the products is to the north central part of the state, and which would flow that way if the application is granted and the 40 per cent of the state's 5,000,000 inhabitants who live in a 100-mile radius of Dallas and Fort Worth would use a great volume of products, are other claims set fourth in the petition.

It was also asserted that the principal commercial points along the Santa Fe are so situated as to segregate the South Plains region.

Application of Dallas shipping interests and of the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce point out that the plains are the logical trade territories of the two cities and that they, together with the South Plains would be benefitted by the proposed Denver extensions.

An array of legal talent seldom gathered in Texas for a hearing of railroad questions, supported by an equally imposing force of traffic and commercial business experts from many parts of Texas were present today.

That the hearing will be longer than usual was indicated when Examiner Boles of the interstate commerce commission said, "Take off your coats, gentlemen. I'll bet we'll be here several days and we may as well be comfortable."

Texas is represented at the charing by Attorney General Dan Moody and his assistant, Ernest May.

The Gulf, Texas and Western railway made an unexpected entry into the hearing of all the pending applications for extension permission through Ben F. Cain, vice president and general counsel.

But one record in all the protests and applications will be made, Examiner Boles explained, because of the overlapping nature of the cases. Clarence Gilmore, chairman of the Texas state railroad commission, pledged efforts of the commission in co-operating to get the most complete testimony in. He characterized the hearing as "with few exceptions this is as important a case as ever was filed before the interstate commerce commission, as surely as important as any case in Texas rail history and also the most involved."

Among those appearing for various interests are:

A. L Reed, M. J. Norrell, Seth Tates and Charles Saville, for Dallas interests; A. B. Spencer for Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce; State Senator W. H. Bledsoe, Lubbock, A. B. Martin, L. S. Kinder and Walter Splawn, for South Plains Railway association, which is composed of the chambers of commerce in Lubbock, Plainview, Tahoka, Amherst and many other plains towns.

L. C. Abbott of Fort Worth, vice president of the Texas, Panhandle Gulf Finance corporation, and Ireland Hampton, Fort Worth, field director of the same organization, supported the intervening petition of the Texas, Panhandle and Gulf.

For the Santa Fe were T. J. Norton, assistant chief counsel, Chicago; H. C. Lipkin, Amarillo, G. B. Ross, Galveston; A. L. Conrad, assistant general auditor, Chicago; T. J. Anton, Slaton, superintendent Slaton division; T. B. Gallaper, general freight and passenger agent, Amarillo.

For the Fort Worth and Denver were: J. W. Barwise, Jr.; George Wharton, Fort Worth, general attorneys; C. G. Burnham, executive vice president of the Burlington System; F. B. Clarity, vice president and general manager of the Denver road; T. U. Murray, general agent, Dallas; W. F. Steers, general freight and passenger agent Fort Worth; John Hulen, Denton, traffic manager, and R. C. Gowdy, Fort Worth, chief engineer.

Representatives of the Quanah Acme & Pacific included Cecil Smith of Sherman, general attorney; John Miles, attorney; Sam Lazarus, St. Louis, president, and G. E. Hamilton, president of the Motley County railroads. The Texas Panhandle and Gulf was represented by C. R. Young, general counsel, Colonel Clement Powell, president; E. J. Noonan, chief engineer, all of Chicago.

T. N. C. survey and will probably drill in and bail tonight. If a producer the well will make a nice extension to the pool to the south proving up a good deal of territory as yet untouched by the bit. Science Offers "Reconciliations" of Bible and Evolution In Ape Case

WAY DOWN YONDER IN TENNESSEE WITH THE NEWSPAPER SKETCH ARTIST WHERE MEN ARE MEN AND MONKEYS, MONKEYS, B'GOSH!

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—After looking at the queer inhabitants of this quaint town, one can readily see that you could not get a new idea of a scientific fact through their heads with a hammer. Young Scopes—the timid soul—wanders around town, hopeless and hatless, gapping in wonder at all the excitement he has caused and does not seem to realize that he is on trial and has incurred the wrath of the perpetual presidential candi-date—Mr. Bryan. The whole thing is like a side show at the circus—large banners, ballyhoo men, shouting through megaphones and weather beaten men and women fervidly praying that the evolutionists will "see the light." It is all very funny if one could have a sense of humor in this heat and no place to sleep.

Defense Quotes Bible As Proof

Lawyers Cite Passages of Scripture to Show Contentions.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—(AP) An effort to distinguish between science and the Bible and conform the two was the meat of a statement by attorneys for the defense of John T. Scopes, admitted to the record of the case today.

The statement was prefaced with the declaration that although the defense as lawyers, "take no position on the truth of the stories of the Bible, we wish to state that we should be able to prove from learned Biblical scholars that the Bible is both a literal and figurative document, that God speaks his parables, allegories, sometimes literally and sometimes spiritually.

"We should be able to prove that the entire Bible teaches the fact of the fundamental differences between the soul and the body."

Numerous citations showed "the Bible attitude" of the nature of the soul.

"Typical examples of the teaching of the Bible in reference to the body or flesh are given in the following: 'My substance was not side from thee, when I was made in secret and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth. Thine eyes did see my substance yet being unperfect; and in thy book all my members were written, which is continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them.'

(Psalm XXIX 15 and 16th verses.)

"Bible States God Is Father of the Spirit and Not of Flesh," Is Claim

"Here there is a distinct statement that the human body was created by the process of evolution."

The entire Bible teaches that God is a spirit and the father of spirits and not the father of flesh, they said, indicating different sections of the Bible.

"Therefore," the statement continues, "it is man's soul or spirit and not his body that is the son of God and which consequently is in the image of God.

"That the Bible is concerned with the ethical and spiritual side of life, and not with the body.

"That natural science is concerned with the development of history, the structure and the functions of all living bodies and not with any religous or ethical questions.

"That the Bible simply states that God created the human body and the material he used in doing it and not how he did so. There are at least four separate accounts of the creation of the human body in Genesis and they can be harmonized only in accordance with this viewpoint.

"Science has discovered the developmental history—evolution—of that body, the method by which God has brought it into being.

"Another theory of some Biblical scholars is that the Bible interprets itself. In Roman V:17 appears the statement that God 'calleth things that be not as though they were.'

Statements from Eight Scientists Are Offered to Be Placed in Records

"For instance some scholars would say where the Bible states that man was made in the image of God it refers only to Christ and his body and in the Bible are found passages to uphold this. As an instance, in Philippians 3:21 is the statement concerning Christ, 'who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body.'"

Various illustrations were given as instances of passages of the Bible which should be interpreted figuratively, or of words which should be given meanings different from their common usage.

"In other words we should be permitted to prove that the Bible is subject to various interpretations," they continued, "depending upon the learning and understanding of the individual, and that this is true, there is nothing necessarily inconsistent between one's using the Bible and evolution. Many accept these statements in the Bible as legends or parables * * * and thus find them not inconsistent with any scientific theory."

Statements from eight scientists were offered to be placed in the record for submission to a higher court in the event Scopes is convicted of teaching evolution theories in the public schools in violation of the state law.

Statements were submitted from the following:

Winterton C. Curtis, zoologist, University of Missouri.

Moratio Hackett Newman, zoologist, University of Chicago.

Wilbur A. Nelson, Tennessee state geologist.

Jacob G. Lipman, dean college of agriculture, Rutgers-Fay-Cooper Cole anthrophologist, University of Chicago.

Maynard M. Metcalf, zoologist formerly of Oberlin college.

Charles Hubbard Judd, director, school of education, University of Chicago.

Kirtley F. Mather, geologist, Harvard.

Defense Wins Right to Read Statements Before the Court

A mild controvedsy developed between defense and state counsel as to the presentation of statements of scientific witnesses. The question at issue was as to whether the statements should be submitted without readnig or have portions read to the court.

The defense contended that it should be permitted to read these statements to the court in the hope that the court might be convinced of error in having held the law constitutional.

The debate went back and forth for an hour, A. G. Hays, Attorney-General Stewart, W. J. Bryan Dudley Field Malone and Clarence Darrow taking part in the discussion.

Judge Raulston finally ruled that one hour would be given the defense to read portions of the statements. In the midst of the reading the attorney general asked Mr. Hays if he might interrupt him.

"Certainly," said Mr. Hays, "but take time out."

The first statement taken up in the reading was one from the Rev. Walter Whitaker, Knoxville minister, followed by a statement from Dr. Shailer Mathews, Chicago. He then proceeded to read extracts from extended statements from eight scientists who had been previously announced as witnesses.

Mr. Hays was still reading at the luncheon recess, ordered at 11:45 until 1:30 p. m. He was near the end, however, of his time limit of one hour.

"An Evolutionist and Christian Too," Says Episcopal Rector

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—(AP)—The Rev. Father Walter C. Whitaker, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, Knoxville, placed a statement in the record of the Scopes case here today in which he declared:

A Christian, Too.

"A man can be a Christian and an evolutionist at the same time."

"As one who, for thirty years, has preached Jesus Christ as the son of God and as the 'express image' of the father, I am unable to see any contrast between evolution and Christianity.

"And also, a man can be a Christian without taking every word of the Bible literally. Not only so, but the man has never lived who took every word of the Bible literally. When St. Paul said 'I am crucified with Christ' and when David said 'the little hills skipped like rams' neither expected that what he wrote would be taken literally. The sense of the scripture is scripture. That sense is conveyed to us sometimes by a story and sometimes in a poem.

"The higher and truer meaning would often be lost if we held ourselves exclusively to the letter and rejected that which is suggested in figures. The story of Abraham's two

Fossils In Rocks of Tennessee Show That There Is Something To Evolution, Says Scientist Affidavit

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—(AP).—Tennessee is an ideal place in which to study and learn the story of rock layers which have been laid down from the earliest times in which any life existed up to the present, said Wilbur A. Nelson, state geologist of Tennessee, in a statement admitted to the record of the Scopes case here today.

Mr. Nelson, who will become head of the department of geology of the University of Virginia and state geologist of Virginia in September, said that the study of buried animal and plant remains has been taught in Tennessee since 1828.

Taught 97 Years.

"Such teaching," he said, "could not have been carried on through 97 years unless the teaching of evolution had been permitted by our religious ancestors who formed the state.

"We know that originally the mouth of the Mississippi river was near Cairo, Ill., and that all of the Mississippi valley as we know it now was at that time a part of a much larger Gulf of Mexico than the one that now exists. All of west Tennessee during that time was in an extension of the Gulf of Mexico and the fine china clay deposits of that section were laid down in shallow water at the time tropical plants flourished in that section.

"East Tennessee is made up of many layers of rocks, limestone, shale and sandstone and many of these layers contain the remains of animal and plant life. Some of the oldest rocks which contain animal life are found in east Tennessee."

Reveal First Remains.

These rocks, he said, reveal the first remains of sea form of life and are well exposed to the east of Dayton. Some of the first corals in fossil form have been found in the western edge of Dayton, he added, and another series of rocks found in east Tennessee is composed of the red iron ore deposits used by iron furnaces.

"We know that this took many millions of years and yet we know also that the earth existed untold millions of years before.

"In connection with evolution," he concluded, "it is especially of interest to note that the relative ages of the rocks correspond closely to the degrees of complexity of origin shown by the fossils in those rocks, the simpler organisms being found in the more ancient rocks, each type of orangism becoming more and more complex as we come nearer the present day, man and his fossil remains being no exception.

"It therefore appears that it would be impossible to study or teach geology in Tennessee or elsewhere without using the theory of evolution."

MAN AND APE HAVE COMMON ORIGIN-CURTIS

Professor Says Question Not One of Man From the Monkey.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20—(AP)—Evolution, "the doctrine of how the things have changed in the past and how they are changing in the present," was discussed by Dr. Winnerton Curtis, zoologist of the University of Missouri, in a statement admitted to the record of the Scopes case here today.

Dr. Curtis divided his subject into cosmic, geologic and organic evolution as represented by the sciences of astronomy, geology and biology and discussed each breifly, concluding with a consideration of the fact, the course and the causes of organic evolution.

"The historical fact of evolution seems attested by overwhelming evidence. Science has nothing to conceal, it stands strong in the strength of demonstrable facts and invites you to view the evidence. The course pursued by evolution is known broadly in many instances, but in the nature of the case the evidence is limited and many of the steps will remain uncertain, without, however, a calling in question of the historic fact.

Difficult Problem

"The causes of evolution present the most difficult problem of all and the one regarding which we know the least.

"Thence we turn to a discussion of Darwin's work, declaring his accomplishment was two fold.

"In the first place he established organic evolution as the only raesonable explanation of the past history of living things. Secondly, he offered in natural selection what then appeared an adequate explanation for the origin of species and hence for the causes of evolution."

Continuing, he went into a detailed discussion of the two accomplishments of scientists, declaring that although theories of natural selection had suffered a decline within recent years, no other hypothesis of the causes of evolution has completely replaced it.

"It is not strange that the layman," he said, "for whom Darwinism and evolution are synonomous terms, believes that evolution has been rejected when he hears that belief in Darwinism is on the wane. He does not understand that what is thus meant by Darwinism is not the historic fact of evolution, but the proposed cause of evolution—natural selection."

With the evolution of all other living things, both animal and plant, "overwhelmingly attested by the fgnacts," he declared it "not only impossible, but puerile to separate man from the general course of events."

Origin Clearer

"Moreover, the evidence for man's origin is becoming clearer year by year. Comparative anatonomy, embrology, classification physicology, georgraphical distribution, fossils and the existing races of mankind tell the same story for a man as for the rest of the world. * * *

"If creation occurred 'at 9 a. m. on October 23, of the year 4004, B. C.' as a part of the divine plan, it is amazing that such successes should have dogged the students of human skeletal and cultural remains during the last half century.

"The skeletons in part or in whole are known for a number of subhuman races and a vast array of implements and other remains, all show-

Darrow Irks Monkey Judge; Cited For Contempt of Court; Apologizes, And They All Shake Hands Again

Raulston Stresses Fact That He Cites Lawyer to Defend the State and Not Himself.

COURT ROOM, DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—(AP)—As soon as the Scopes case opened this morning Judge John T. Raulston began reading a statement in which he stated one of the responsibilities of a judge is to avoid exciting passion or prejudice among any persons, particularly among the jurors.

He then said that a colloquy occurred last Friday between the judge and Clarence Darrow of defense counsel. The statement included excerpts from the record in which the exchange was reported. Judge Raulston went over a number of remarks by Mr. Darrow to the court during Friday's session.

"The court had withheld any action until passion has had a chance to subside and the jury has been kept separate so that no part of this should reach the ears of the members," said the judge.

Men may become prominent, but they should never feel themselves above the law," he said. "Unwarranted and unjustified criticism of the court shows disrespect for the court and the state.

"Insults State."

"He who would hurl contempt into the records of my court insults and outrages against the people of one of the greatest states in the union.

"In the face of what is considered an unjustified criticism of the court made by Clarence Darrow I feel that I must protect the dignity of my court."

The court then directed that Clarence Darrow be required to appear in court Tuesday morning to answer to a charge of contempt, directing that the "said Darrow" make a bail bond of $5,000.

Mr. Darrow arose and said he did not know whether he could make the bond.

"I guess you can," said Judge Raulston.

Mr. Darrow was smiling.

The judge was not smiling.

After the judge had read his statement the case proceeded, the defense offering a certified copy of the governor's message to the legislature approving the bill. The state objected to the introduction of the document.

Judge Raulston excluded the message. The defense also offered in evidence the textbook of biology adopted by the state book commission. Arthur G. Hays read what this textbook says of Charles Darwin. Mr. Hays said the purpose of the defense was to show the public policy of the state. The state again objected. Judge Raulston ruled that the book might be filed "for the present."

Part of the colloquy read by the judge in citing Mr. Darrow for contempt follows:

The court: Colonel, what is the purpose of cross examination?

Mr. Darrow: The purpose of cross examine is to be used on the trial.

The court: Well, isn't it an effort to ascertain the truth?

Mr. Darrow: No, it is an effort to show prejudice. Nothing else. (Laughter). Has there been any effort to ascertain the truth in this case? Why not bring in the jury and let us prove it?

Courts a Mockery.

The court: Courts are a mockery.

Mr. Darrow: They are often that, your honor.

The court: When they permit cross examination for the purpose of creating prejudice.

Mr. Darrow: I submit, your honor, there is no sort of question that they are not entitled to cross examine, that all this evidence is to show what we expect to prove and nothing else and can be nothing else.

The court: I will say this: If the defense wants to put their proof in the record, in the form of affidavits, of course, they can do that. If they put the witnesses on the stand, the state desires to cross examine them. I shall expect them to do so.

Mr. Darrow: We expected it and take an exception.

The court: Yes, sir; always expect this court to rule correctly.

Mr. Darrow: No sir, we did not. (Laughter).

The court: I suppose you anticipated it?

Mr. Darrow: Otherwise we would not be taking our exceptions here, your honor. We expect to protect our rights in some other court. Now, that is plain enough, isn't it? Then, we will make statements of what we expect to prove. Can we have the rest of the day to draft them?

The court: I would not say—

Mr. Darrow: If your honor takes a half day to write an opinion—

The court: I have not taken—

Mr. Darrow: We want to make statements here of what we expect to prove. I do not understand why every request of the state and every suggestion of the prosecution should meet with an endless grant of time and a bare suggestion of anything that is perfectly competent on our part should be immediately overruled.

The court: I hope you do not mean reflect upon the court?

Mr. Darrow: Well, your honor has the right to hope.

The court: I have a right to do something else, perhaps.

Mr. Darrow: All right, all right.

Darrow Apologizes.

As court opened for the afternoon session, Clarence Darrow was recognized by the court to make a statement. He said at the outset of his remarks that he did not know how hard his words of Friday looked until he had seen them in the minutes. He said that he was sorry. He said that in his stay in Dayton and vicinity he had been treated with great kindness and appreciated this consideration.

"I don't think any such occasion ever arose before in my practice," he said. "So far as intending to insult the court I never meant anything of the kind."

Judge Raulston accepted Mr. Darrow's apology and the incident in which the Chicago lawyer was cited for contempt ended in an exchange of hand clasps.

"If this little incident had been personal between Colonel Darrow and myself," said Judge Raulston, "it would have been passed by unnoticed."

"But," he continued, "I could not pass them by when I represent the great state of Tennessee."

They Shake On It.

After telling of some of the great men of Tennessee, Judge Raulston said:

"My friends and Colonel Darrow the man that I believe came into the world to save man and died for him on the cross, taught that it was right to forgive, pleading with God for the men who crucified him. I believe in these principles; I accept Colonel

"NO CONFLICT WITH BIBLE," SAYS WITNESS

Prominent Zoologist Is Firm In Belief of Evolution.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—(AP).—There is no degree of conflict between evolution and the Bible, Maynard M. Metcalf, zoologist, former head of the zoological department at Oberlin college, declared in a statement admitted to the record in the Scopes evolution case here today.

"There is no conflict, no least degree of conflict between the Bible and the fact of evolution," the statement said, "but the literalist interpretation of the words of the Bible is not only puerile; it is insulting both to God and to human intelligence.

"But the fundamentalist would do much worse than insult God. He is in reality, although he does not realize this, trying to shut man's mind to God's ever-growing revelation of Himself to the human soul.

"He teaches in effect that God's revelations of Himself was completed long ago, that He long ceased to unfold His mind to man in new revelation. This is evil influence, criminal, damnable. Truth is sacred and to hinder men's approach to truth is as evil a thing, as un-Christian a thing, as one can do.

Is Blasphemous.

"The thought that God is at odds with Himself, that His revelation of Himself to men of old is at variance with His works in nature is as blasphemous as it was for the Jewish leaders to say of Jesus that 'He casts out devils through Beelzebub, the Prince of Devils.' Jesus made short work of this attack upon Him."

The thing to do, he said, is not to attempt to guide God's self-revelation into channels "of our own ignorant choosing, but to seek His thought and Himself in nature, history and through His showing us His habit of producing results by gradual growth, by evolution rather than by immediate fiat."

Evolution, he declared, not only has occurred, but evidences of it are visible today in both the plant and the animal world. He cited the development and breeding of the cabbage from a plant of the mustard family as an example.

In the main, evidences of evolution may be arranged in four chief groupes, he said, referring to the phenomena of comparative anatonomy, of comparative embryology, of palentology and geology and of geographical distribution.

"We can arrange plants and animals in a double, parallel series showing increasing complexity of organization," he said.

"In the development of an individual from an egg to adult, this individual passes through a series of stages of neressing complexity and this individual series in one of the higher organisms strangely parallels and agrees with the racial series first mentioned.

Bodily Remains.

Continuing, he discussed the discovery of bodily remains in the fossil folerious rocks which show a series showing increasing complexity.

Evolution is the only key found to the geographical distribution of animals and plants and to the differences noted between them, he asserted. He pointed as evidence of evolution to the vestigial organs of animals and plants.

"There are in man, for example, very many structures of no conceivable present use, but showing resemblances to organisms in other animals which are useful," he said. The ap-

Evolution Means Changing, Claim

University of Chicago Zoologist Professor Testifies at Scopes Trial.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—(AP) The evolutionists stand for and believe in a changing world, Dr. Horatio H. Newman, zoologist of the University of Chicago, asserted in a statement which the defense counsel of John T. Scopes placed in the record of the Rhea county court today.

The statement of Professor Newman, for many years a student, teacher and writer o nthe subject of evolution and heredity, said in part:

"Evolution is merely the philosophy of change as opposed by the philosophy of fixity and unchangeability. One must choose between these alternate philosophies, for there is no intermediate position; once admit a changing world and you admit the essence of evolution. * * *

"We know with certainty some few things about the course of evolution and we believe that we have discovered some important phases of the mechanism of evolution, but there are controversial matters that in no way effect the question of the validity of

Principle Stands in First Rank Among Natural Laws

"The principle of evolution sands in the first rank among natural laws, not only in its range of applicability, but in the degree of validity to such an extent that it may lay claim to rank as an established law. It is the one great law of life. It depends for its validity not on conjecture and philosophy, but on exactly the same sorts of evidence as do other laws of nature.

"Evolution has been tried and tested in every conceivable way for considerably over half a century. Vast numbers of biological facts have been examined in the light of this principle and without a single exception they have been entirely compatible with it. * * *

"A careful study of the situation reveals that the entire fabric of evolutionary evidence is woven about a single broad assumption—that fundamental structural resemblance signifies blood relationship; that, generally speaking, the closeness of structural resemblance runs parallel with closeness of kinship. * * *

"A systematic attempt to apply the special creation concept to all cases of homeologies involves one in the utmost confusion of ideas and leads almost inevitably to irreverence which is abhorrent to evolutionist as well as the special creationist.

"There is no greater difficulty in the classification of man than in any other living species. * * *

A BALANCED POLICY

Final ratification of the Washington conference treaties dealing with Chinese custom duties and extra-territorial rights has made it possible for the interested parties to develop a balanced policy in regard to the recent disorders in the eastern republic. The American government, apparently, has taken the lead in inaugurating proper steps toward a settlement of Chinese difficulties. Following the recent conference between Secretary of State Kellogg and President Coolidge at Swampscott, Mass., Mr. Kellogg made this pertinent announcement:

"The conference in relation to China had reference to matters of policy. The cornerstone of that policy so far as this government is concerned, may be said to be a scrupulous observance of the obligations to China entered into at the Washington conference and the insistence that the government of China take adequate measures for the protection of foreigners and to carry out her responsibilities under the treaties.' "

This statement of the case is sufficiently broad to win acceptance in China. There is full acknowledgement of the duality of interests which is necessary to any kind of transaction or agreement. A bargain can now be struck in the Far East. In return for the maintenance of order and the exaction from her people of respect for foreign rights and interests, China can be given control over her customs and courts. The only way to teach justice to a people who seem insensible to it is to do justice to them. When this is done, compulsion will not be needed, for relations will have been firmly established upon a pacific and reciprocal basis.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

Quitting Time.

A friend of mine once became engaged in a business about which he knew nothing.

The business was not profitable.

Because it was not profitable it was a worry.

He did not depend on it wholly for his livelihood, but the losses it entailed soon began seriously to cut into his income.

His friends advised him to get out of it.

But the fear of being thought a quitter deterred him.

They pointed out that chances were all against its ever making any money, and that even if it did make money it would not be enough to justify the amount of capital and time involved.

But my friend insisted that once he was in it, he would have to stick. That having laid his hand to the plow he must never turn back.

Now that is courage and courage is esteemed admirable. But is is not always good sense.

The man who does not know the time to quit when he sees it, is going to have just as hard a time in this world as the one who quits too soon.

A youth of my acquaintance recently embarked on a business which had been followed successfully by his father.

After six months he saw that conditions had changed since the old gentleman was engaged in this calling, that the chances were not as good for ultimate success, and that the possibility of promotion was much slower.

He hated to give up something which he had looked forward to from boyhood as a career. But he was sufficiently intelligent to see that here was no real opportunity, that the best paid position he could attain was not the sort of position at which an ambitious boy ought to aim.

So he got out, started in on another line, and now is on his way to success.

The fact that he had the good sense to get out when he was still young, when he was still adaptable proved that he was the kind of a boy who will get along.

A great many people stick at the thing they start because it is the only thing they know how to do, and finally become fixtures and failures.

It may be a credit to a general sometimes not to know when he is licked, but we have never heard of a successful general who had that lack of knowledge.

Far better to save an army than to send it to utter destruction in the fate of overwhelming odds.

And far better to save one's best years for the right kind of a job than to waste them on the wrong kind of a job, merely because one is afraid to admit defeat.

As a matter of fact, defeat means little early in life.

A few doors from me lives the vice president of a bank who up to thirty had been an engineer, an accountant, a medical student and a doctor, and had failed in all of them.

The banking business fitted him, and he stuck to it. The fact that he had failed in the other jobs never troubled him nor disheartened him in the least.

The world may hate a quitter. But there are times when it is wise to quit, and the man who recognizes them needn't worry so much about the world's hate. He'll change it to admiration by and by.

Regulating the divorce grist—The best kingdom on earth since the time of Christ—Ape and the man—Ten children for Jay Gould—In Boston it's the masses.

A VENERABLE NEW YORK CLERGYMAN, in a Fourth of July address, called the United States as it was founded by the fathers, the nearest thing to the kingdom of God on earth that this world has seen since Christ, and he said it was one of the first duties of the Christian people to preserve it as such. He has a remedy to prevent the land of the fathers sliding headlong into hell.

He would change the divorce laws of the country. He would have one law for all and that law a federal law. He has been gathering statistics of divorce. In 1870 there were 28,000 divorces in the United States. In 1916 there were 112,000 divorces And, according to his figures, since then there has been a rapid increase. He does not say that he would make marriage a religious rite, exclusively instead of a civil contract. For 130 or 140 years reformers blamed John Barleycorn for all the devilment that afflicted the family of mankind and all the ills that flesh was heir to.

Now John is gone. Like John Brown, he is mouldering in the grave. But he should not be held responsible for anything that has happened since the people drove him to another country. Now the reformers say it is the unholy divorce law that is destroying the sanctity of the home while the center-of-the-stagers, like William Jennings Bryan ,say that the teaching of evolution has severed the pillars of the temple of liberty and righteousness and the finish is in sight unless the legislatures of forty-eight states are called in special session to place the Bible in the public school and to drive out of teaching life all those who believe in the doctrine of evolution and look upon astromony and geology as inventions of the devil.

Man did not come from an ape. Man's first parent was not a monkey swinging from tree to tree with the aid of a long tail. But the teaching as well as the study of science will continue throughout the ages and the world will not land in hell in the near future or the remote future merely because the lawmakers of Tennessee enacted a law which has aroused the indignation of the scientists of the world.

"Away down South" some of the people must have a new issue every few years. Bryan and his followers are hoping to give the people of the south a new issue in 1926 and if it takes like wildfire they hope to make it a national issue in the south in 1928. Why not economic issues? someone will ask. Why, indeed? No man has ever charged W. J. B. with being an economist.

He is of the opinion that the fathers who made this government were dense above their chins. He may concede that Thomas Jefferson had some claims to statesmanship but he has placed Bryan first as a teacher of democracy and discarded to early fathers and their creations which were handed down in the forms of constitutions and laws for the protection of the masses of the people against the encroachments of the cunning who happen to be the rich and powerful.

GEORGE JAY GOULD has seven children by his first wife and three by his second. He was the son of his father to a certain extent. He inherited a vast fortune and was custodian of the vast fortunes willed by Jay Gould to the other sons and daughters. For two years the Goulds have been quarreling in the courts of New York.

Now it is all off. A settlement has been affected. No more washing of dirty linen. The second Mrs. Gould has been given her share and it is a juicy plum. Her three children have been given handsome incomes. All the seven children by the first wife have been given handsome incomes. All the art collections have been given to the children of the first marriage. Thus a disposition of a fortune of eighty million dollars has been made.

The second Mrs. Gould had a long and weary fight before she won. Her step-children alleged that she was not the lawful wife of their father at the time two of her children were born. They did all in their power to keep all the money and deprive the widow of their father and her children sharing in the estate. This trial of the case before a compromise came, lasted for a year and the daily sensation introduced showed that the makers of pitch were very busy on Manhattan Island.

Jay Gould was the founder of this vast fortune. He was the creator of the Gould system of railways. Where are the railways now? Not in the hands of his children. There is not a Gould on earth today who is prominent in the railway world, the financial world or the political world. The third generation of the Gould tribe are spending their money in the gay capitals of Europe. They are the sons and daughters of the idle rich. They belong to the butterfly class. No doubt the fourth generation, or many of them, will get back into the ditch and begin life anew there as producers of wealth and builders of empires.

This is a queer old world. It is a mad old world. It is a serious old world. Money makes the mare go and too much money is a hell raiser for those who inherit it. No man knows the value of a dollar unless he has earned a dollar. Jay Gould knew the value of a dollar. He began his business peddling mouse traps. Just before he died he was a Napoleon of the rail and a multimillionaire. He got a lot out of life in his own way. His children are getting a lot out of life in their way. Now which is the best or safest or the wisest way?

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE.

Cancer—July 21.

The adverse planetary aspects that prevailed late yesterday continue until noon today, and, during this period, it is advisable to refrain, if possible, from any efforts involving radical change, or unwonted endeavor. In the afternoon there is a decided amelioration of conditions, and, although the signs do not counsel the launching of any new enterprise, or the immediate development of any new thought, they do not presage a lack of success for any efforts made in the customary field of labor or work. In other words, they portend good results if the well known and well-tried road is folowed, whereas doubt must exist as to the outcome of any invasion of "fresh fields and pastures new."

Children born today, although much alike in temperament and character, will experience strikingly variable health conditions, as a result of sex difference. A boy will, during his early years, suffer much from frequent illnesses, and, although the signs denote that he will ultimately attain a vigorous manhood, much care—especially with regard to dieting—must be exercised in his youth. A girl, on the other hand, will revel in good health, and just naturally grow into healthy womanhood. Their personalities will be attractive, but they will possess a strong streak of stubbornness, which, toned down later on by experience, will eventually become will-power, and give them the ability to say "no" and mean it.

If today is your birthday, you suffer from "wnaderlust" and although you may not be able to indulge your desires, always long for travel and change of environment. It is difficult for you to "stay put" in any one position for any length of time. You possess a great deal of vigor, and are much addicted to outdoor sports and recreations. You have independence of character, and neither seek nor regard the advice of others. You glory in your self-sufficiency, although experience has often proven to you that "two heads are better than one." You are determined, and never for the sake of amity, willing to yield a point. If the whole loaf cannot be secured, you want no part of it at all, and, figuratively speaking, would rather starve.

With such characteristics you should always "paddle your own canoe" and work without partners or associates, as, individually, you stand a better chance of accomplishment than if you are interested with others.

HOW IT STARTED

The "Milk of Human Kindness."

This expression may be rather oratorical in flavor, yet it is frequently met in modern writing and speech. It is the calming, leavening, beneficient influence that is real human kindheartedness that is referred to as the "milk of human kindness."

The expression had its origin in that mine of human truth and beautiful diction that comprises the work of Shakespeare. It is in Act I, Scene V of "MacBeth" that we find its first recorded use. Lady MacBeth is reading a letter from her husband in which he tells her of the prognostications of the witches and their good import, namely that he would be king.

Lady MacBeth, whose inciting of her husband, led to the bloody trail of killings which winds through the play, is not prepared to take the promises of the witches seriously because of what she thinks of her husband's inability to murder his way to the throne that being the only way in which his ambition to be king can be realized. She says: "——yet do I fear thy nature;

"It is too full 'o the milk of human kindness

To catch the nearest way."

Although it started in this way, as a reproach for what Macbeth's lady considered weakness, the expression has survived in modern language to describe goodness and kindness.

IRRIGATION

POSSIBILITIES OF DAMAGE FROM EXTRA HIGH WATER IN THE RESERVOIRS.

The first part of paragraph one of section two of the contract between the irrigation district board and Mr. Waggoner reads substantially as follows:

"Party of the first part (Mr. Waggoner) in consideration of the matters hereinafter set forth, has bargained, sold, and conveyed—to the party of the second part (the irrigation district board) the exclusive right and privilege to take possession of the lands necessary to be used in the construction of both of said dams substantially as shown in the plans adopted by the party of the second part—and to use and occupy said lands for the maintenance and erection of said dams, and also gives and grants the privilege of submerging with water and storing water on all of the lands belonging to the party of the first part which will be submerged by the waters impounded by the erection of both of said dams when the water in the reservoirs created by said dams stands at the level of the spillway of each of said dams."

You will notice that the right to flood ceases at the level of the top of the spillways.

Obviously if the water ever rises high enough to flow over the spillways then lands will be flooded to which the district has acquired no right.

At first glance this might seem to open the way to future complications with Mr. Waggoner. They have acquired no right to flood his lands above a certain point.

However it is generally the case that to collect damages some damage must be shown. Any water that would be backed up over the lands of Mr. Waggoner would be there only temporarily and would just give the lands a good irrigation thereby improving the grass. Instead of being a damage it would be a benefit.

There is not likely to be any trouble from water flooding lands not covered by the district right of way.

Letters From The People

FINED FOR GATHERING FISH

Editor Record News:

I find an article in the Sunday edition of your paper July 12, 1925, by Mr. John Crawford, caretaker at Lake Kemp, inviting the people to come Sunday evening and get all the fish they needed.

I wish to make this statement myself and some relatives arrived at the lake about 5:00 o'clock Friday, July 10, and was told by several people that was camped there that during that day the gates was shut down for about three hours and during this time there were hundreds of pounds of fish left on the sand bar. Sixteen people, mostly women and children rushed for the fish, and after they had picked up all they could carry and got to their camp the wardens came down and fined each of them seventeen dollars and fifty cents. All amounting to about $300.00. All these people live in Knox county. Now will Mr. Crawford explain himself? If one person has a right to pick up fish on the sand bar below the dam, all should have the right.

This is not the first time that people have been fined by them for picking up fish.

J. W. CROUCH.
Knox City, Texas.

Mr. Crawford could not be reached yesterday for comment on the above.

Ronald Corley jilts Enid Apstin two days before their wedding and elopes with Coralie Brainerd. Three years later Enid marries Lucian Grant without loving him, because she feels she has a right to be married. Of course, Lucien discovers the truth, and Enid finds the thing more difficult than she had expected. They separate and Enid does not tell Lucien that she is to become a mother. In the meantime Ronald is beginning to find flaws in Coralie and to turn back to his first love.

Enid went with him to the door. There was a smile in her eyes as she gave him her fingers, and on impulse Ronald stooped and touched his lips to them.

She drew her hand away lingeringly, but her tone when she spoke was light.

"You must come and see me again, I am always home around teatime."

"Thank you, I will," he said eagerly. "And if there is anything I can do for you at any time—you see, Enid, I want to be your friend, I want you to call on me if I can ever be of service."

"Thank you Ronald, you are very kind."

"You'll promise to do that?"

"Yes, indeed."

When he reached the street his brain was whirling. He could still feel the light pressure of her slim, cool fingers, and her skin smooth as ivory against his lips. That faint perfume that she used was still in his nostrils, and her manner toward him had been cordial, more so than usual. He felt that she had hated to have him go almost as much as he had hated to leave.

Back in the apartment, Enid was sitting before the fire, a faint smile on her lips. She was rather pleased with herself and with the events of the afternoon, and she was more than a little amused at Ronald's boyish leavetaking.

So he wanted to be her friend, he wanted her to call on him if he could ever be of service to her. That was what he thought, or at least wanted her to believe.

As a matter of fact, she knew exactly what had been going on in his thoughts. She knew that already he was half in love with her. She knew that she intrigued him because he only half understood her. She knew that her own mastery, contrasted with Coralie's obviousness, was very alluring.

Yes, she would see him occasionally. It would be interesting to see this thing progress. Besides, she could handle the situation without inconveniencing herself, she was certain of that.

She sat by the fire, lost in a pleasant reverie, until Norah came in to announce dinner.

Norah's face wore a tight-lipped expression of disapproval. She quite obviously did not approve of Enid's caller, nor had she ever forgiven her mistress for her treatment of Lucien. Norah adored Lucien, and would have refused to stay with Enid if Lucien had not put it up to her as a favor to him.

"Mrs. Grant needs you, Norah," he had told her. "I want you to stay with her and look out for her. Will you do that for me?"

Of course Norah had stayed, but there had been no friendliness in her attitude toward Enid. This did not disturb Enid at all, however. As long as Norah was competent — and she certainly was that—it made no difference to Enid whether she was friendly or not. If anything, she preferred hostility to overfriendliness. Norah was, after all, no more than a cog in the domestic machine. Enid did not want the devotion that Norah lavished on Lucien. An emotion like that was utterly absurd in a servant, she thought.

CHAPTER XXV.

Change.

The days drifted by and lengthened into weeks. During this time no one seemed to know anything about Lucien's whereabouts. No one knew where he was staying and to the men who saw him in his business office, he said nothing.

Enid had taken up her life again. She entertained at smart little dinners and accepted invitations when she thought she would be amused. She was living a lazy, drifting existence, not feeling any deep emotions, not caring very much what she did so long as she was not bored. She had made no plans beyond the coming of her child, it was enough to wait for that.

Ronald had taken to calling on her two or three times a week. Each time he saw her he was more and more fascinated. She drew him in a strange manner, and yet she seemed not to exert herself in the slightest. Enid was not a siren, she had no obvious tricks, no subtle wiles. She was simply herself, and her personality was complex enough to make itself felt without any effort on her part. She was charming to Ronald, took his calls as a matter of course and realized as any clever woman would, that he was falling in love with her for the second time.

Ronald did not mention to Coralie that he was seeing Enid with any frequency. It wasn't that he wished to deceive her, he saw no reason why he shouldn't call on Enid if he wished, but there was something about Coralie's childishly wide eyes, something about the simple way in which she faced life, that made him feel that she would not understand his friendship with Enid. She would, like any perfectly normal woman, think the obvious thing. She would believe, of course, that he and Enid were having a love affair, it would not occur to her that a friendship between a man and a woman could be entirely platonic.

As a matter of fact the friendship wasn't platonic. Ronald didn't have to make open love to Enid, it wasn't necessary for him to tell her everything in his heart to make the situation between them other than platonic. The fact that there were undercurrents of emotion was enough, the fact that Enid knew she fascinated him was important. They were both drifting into danger playing with fire, and even if neither of them thought very much about it, these facts were nevertheless quite true.

Sometimes Enid wondered what she would say to Ronald if in any way he overstepped the barrier that existed between them. It wasn't that she had any doubt as to how she would manage the situation, but she liked to imagine the attitude she would take, she liked to think over the words she would say. She adored dramatizing herself, and the drama of Ronald's re-awakened interest was flattering to her vanity. She had an idea that she would laugh at him. With ridicule she could accomplish much more than if she took the situation seriously and became melodramatic.

Now it must be remembered that Coralie and Ronald had been very close to each other during their married life. The passion between them was very real, in some ways they were ideally suited to each other, and they had been very happy. Ronald's growing interest in Enid caused a change in him. He grew moody, introspective. He had been wont to turn at night, boyishly eager. It had been natural for him to sweep Coralie into his arms and cover her face with kisses. He had gone up to the nursery and played with the children until they had gone into squeals of laughter, and afterward he and Coralie had chatted happily through dinner.

He no longer did any of these things. He was silent, almost morose at times. When he did speak it was to find fault with her appearance, or with the management of the children, or the way the house was run.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Gossip.

Coralie was at first puzzled. She could not understand the change in Ronald. She began to wonder if he had any business worries, if things had gone wrong at the office, but inasmuch as he made no attempt to confide in her, she did not ask for information.

Instead, she made an honest effort to improve her untidiness, to have the children in bed when he returned in the evening from the city, to dress herself prettily, and to keep the household running smoothly. But where once Ronald might have noticed these things he no longer seemed to see them. He seemed to be growing away from her, and nothing she could do had any power to hold him.

One morning after he had left for the office with more than his usual brusqueness in his manner, Coralie felt a nagging little pain in her heart. What could be the matter? Ronald acted as if he no longer loved her, the children no longer seemed to interest him. She was terrified at the thought of losing his love, she was dependent upon him for all her happiness. If only she knew what was wrong, she might be able to bear things with more fortitude, but not knowing gave her a frightened sense of loneliness.

She was not the type of woman given to introspection. Her nature was too frank and open for even serious thinking, but it struck her now that perhaps Fate was about to punish her because she had taken Ronald away from Enid. At the time she had not thought much about it. She had been swept off her feet by her love for Ronald, she had let him decide everything for her.

But afterward she had worried about it. It had even interferred with her happiness until she had seen how little Enid seemd to mind. Then like a happy child she had banished the thing from her thoughts and had never thought about it again until now.

She worried about it all morning, but when at 12 o'clock she realized that Alicia Conway was coming for lunch, she tried to put the worry out of her mind.

Coralie and Alicia had been friends for years. They had gone to the same school, and Alicia was the only one of the old crowd who had remained single. No one knew the reason for this, save perhaps that Alicia's tongue was sharp, and men dislike a sharp tongue in a woman. At any rate, Alicia was only 25, tall, and attractive, and dressed beautifully. Coralie was fond of her, and was always amused by her. She loved to hear Alicia's bright quips, her barbed witticisms. A day spent with her was always a stimulus, and Coralie was glad that they had planned to have lunch and spend the afternoon together.

Alicia arrived breezily, kissed Coralie, ran up to see the baby, hugged Junior, and then dropped down before Coralie's dressing table to smooth her short bobbed hair and powder her face. She kept up a running flow of conversation, dropping an edged remark here and there, as though sure of an appreciative audience, and gradually Coralie felt the pain at her heart lessen, and the tension of her nerves ease. After all she had been foolish to worry. Tonight she would speak to Ronald, she would make an effort to find out what was the trouble, she would let him see how glad she was to help him bear any burden. She had been foolish not to come to an understanding before this.

Alicia had finished her primping and, whirling about on the low chair, looked searchingly at Coralie.

"What's the matter with you, Coral, you look pale?"

Coralie laughed gaily. "There's nothing the matter with me, nothing in the world."

"You and Ronald still as much in love as ever?"

"Yes." Coralie's voice always softened when she spoke of Ronald. "Yes indeed we are."

"I saw him having lunch with Enid Grant the other day," Alicia said airily. "They seemed very much absorbed in each other, but then I guess you needn't worry about that. Ronald could have had Enid, and he chose you."

CHAPTER XXVII.

Doubts and Fears.

Coralie felt a wave of apprehension sweep over her at Alicia's careless remark. It wasn't so much that Ronald had been seeing Enid as it was the fact that he had said nothing about it. It wasn't like him to be secretive about anything. Whenever he lunched in town with any one he always mentioned it, and yet he had said nothing to her about Enid.

WICHITA FALLS TO PROTEST ON BUILDING DAM

Proposed Structures Across Holiday Creek Draw City's Fire.

Wichita Falls will lodge a vigorous protest with the state board of water engineers over the construction of several dams across Holiday creek near Holiday and Mankins.

The city council Monday night authorized Utilities Commissioner P. B. Curd to go to Austin July 27 to appear at a public hearing before the board and submit the city's claims. State Senator J. D. Parnell will probably appear in behalf of the city also, it was indicated.

The dams are to be built by J. J. Fenesee, who proposes to create small lakes and sell water to drilling contractors in the Archer county oil fields.

Footprints on Rock In Texas Tell How Dinosaur Lived Here

AUSTIN, July 17. (AP).—Ages ago, an animal, which would be strange to modern eyes, wandered through that part of the plastic world now known as Texas and left in the mud a series of footprints. The mud, baked by the sun, finally turned into rock and the footprints became an almost imperishable record that a dinosaur apparently had reared himself on his hind legs and surveyed the landscape near Glen Rose in Somervell county. There may have been other dinosaurs but if there were, none except that which made footprints, now plainly visible, left for posterity any similar record in the immediate vicinity of Glen Rose.

Photographs of the footprints of this particular prehistoric monster, which was fashioned, scientists say, somewhat after the model of a giant kangaroo, are in possession of the Texas state highway department. It shows four imprints indented in the stone formation. Each of the creature's three toes, projecting from a foot, broad equatorially and short longitudinally, appear sharply outlined. Made perhaps ten million years ago, they furnish food for speculation for the curious and reflection for the scientist.

SUB ROSA BY MIMI

By MIMI.
Weekly Letter.

Dear Girls:

I've just been to the most famous race meeting in the world. It's one of England's chief prides and joys and it's truly well worth seeing—but oh so different than our American races.

In America, when somebody calls you up and asks you to go to a race with him, you probably pull out your tweed suit and your smartest scarf and doggiest sport shoes and mannish felt hat, and off you go to watch the ponies.

However at Ascot, which is the famous English race I've just attended you get all dressed up for a dance, put on more makeup than they wear on the stage and sally forth in broad daylight looking like a mannikin.

It's a most amazing and gorgeous sight.

The grounds surrounding the race track are lovely—velevty green grass and heavenly trees and flowers. But more lovely than these are the English women, who, though they do not usually dress as well as the Americans or the French, always manage to have one really lovely dress for Ascot, and to look quite beautiful at least once a year.

Such strange frocks for races, I though to myself as I watched the tall slim beauties mince around between races.

Imagine going to a race clad in a rock of golden beige lace and georgette over a pleated underslip.

This particular dress had a heavenly cape of golden lace to match the under part, and was fastened at the shoulder with an enormous American beauty rose. The wearer was tall and dark, and looked as if she might be hunting for her box at the opera, instead of wandering around to the paddocks looking at horses.

Then there was another costume which seemed rather an amazing thing to wear at a sport event.

This was a really darling gown of plain and floral chiffon in a heavenly shade of hyacinth blue with fluffy side panels, an uneven hem, and a scarf to match. Such a costume as we'd wear to a very high hat garden party.

Ah, well, it gave me an excellent chance to wear my cream lace dinner dress with a wide sash of gold and an enormous cream colored hat lined with gold, so that I felt quite complacent about it all, and didn't mind so much not having to wear a heavy tweed suit.

The Englishmen were of course most dressed up, what with spats and canes and high silk hats and monocles and all the other paraphernalia which has made the Englishmen famous.

Some of them looked like ministrels, I thought, in their gray silk hats and light colored trousers—still I didn't tell anybody that.

Taking it all in all I should say an English race is a lot more fun as far as clothes go than the more practical everyday races in our own country.

I'm answering all your letters as fast as I get them, and I beg you not to be impatient, because sometimes the boats crossing the old Pond take rather a long time.

Lots of love,
MIMI.

LULLABY

Out of the twilight the breezes come straying,
Crimson and gold are the clouds in the west,
Gently the leaf laden branches are swaying
Rocking the soft little nest;
Far in the forest the shadows are falling,
Out on the road twinkles light after light,
The grosbeak and robin are drowsily calling—
Bidding each other good night.

Time for wee heads to lie still on the pillow
While the cares of the day are dissolved in a dream,
Soothed by the song of the wind in the willow
That croons like a murmuring stream.
Out of the heavens the darkness is shaken,
Slowly the stars blossom out over head,
Rest, till the sun in the east bids you waken
Safe in your little white bed.

What if the bat hurries hither and yonder?
Night is the daytime for creatures like him,
What if the owl is arising to wander
Down where the valley is dim?
Rabbits may dance with abandon and joyace
Out in the bushes that border the park,
But night is the time when they're safe from annoyance—
Rabbits can see in the dark!

Babies must rest till the dawn gives its warning,
And the owls and the bats from the wood disappear,
Babies must rest till the coming of morning,
When sunlight and brightness are here.
Slumber serenely while shadows surround you—
Till the bright evening star has grown pale in the west,
Little eyes closed till a sunbeam has found you
Safe in your cozy white nest.

Morgan Wins Number 14, Quelling Bears Handily In Series Opener

SPUDS GANG ON LINDSEY AND COLLINS

Domestics Clout 17 Safeties for Heavy 10-1 Victory.

By BLONDY CROSS.

Eulas the Great was in exceedingly fine fettle Monday. And being such our Dick Morgan displayed a wilful and quite selfish disposition in regard to the manufacture of base hits. He allowed the opposition but seven while the domestic clan clouted James Lindsey and Michael Collins, San Antonio right handers with southpaw tendencies, to various and, of course, sundry sectors. They socked James giddy in less than four rounds, and then punched Mike on the button with practically all the equipment on the lot barring the water keg and Wray Query's shin guards. Tanner's virile young men broke away early for a running start and were never corraled, so to speak, the remainder of the way, ringing the welkin for 17 wallops to virgin fields, and amassing a 10-1 score. It was number 14 for Morgan.

Danny Clark, the former Spudder, was the only cog in the Bruin attack that fitted into the scheme of affairs. He collected three of the meager portion of safeties allotted the invaders by the sturdy Wichita Falls flinger, and scored the lone Bear tally. The rest of Bob Coleman's cohorts were not present.

Howard Fitzgerald, the erstwhile collegiate diamond prima donna, who when enraged calls umpires names in a language far too aristocratic for them to understand, returned to the monkey suit after a week's absence and swatted a homer and a pair of singles. Fitz showed up with one finger on his starboard mitt taped to such an extent that when swinging at the plate the particular digit was pointing skyward while the other members of the hand were clasping the bludgeon.

All Enjoy Selves.

Everybody enjoyed himself but Bodie, who hit five for nothing. Pingus was off, but the chances are he'll be on again when the rest of the gang are away.

Callaghan and Golvin pinked the pelota with frequency, each connecting for three safe ones. Walt poled a triple, double and single. The fences were not located just right or he would have had a pair of homers. We shall take the matter up with Mr. Harvey when he returns next month from Rochester.

Freddy Dorman slapped a brace of what might be called dueters in that the sphereoid sang very sweetly as it breezed away on a two-base voyage twice times.

The double play mechanism was working well, and as usual Golvin pulled the stretching act around first base on several rather crucial occasions. It was a regular sideshow attraction, enacted especially for the ladies, no doubt, for yesterday was formally declared as "Ladies' Day."

The game was the first of three. Osborn probably will do the shunking for Tanner this afternoon. It's either Bob or Rip. The former has been ailing the past few days with an agitated larnyx.

Clark socked a bad hop single at Turgeon in the opener after Gonzales had aviated to Callaghan in left. Then Danny absconded with second on Nason's third strike. Rosenthal bingled to right, sending over the Bears 'only score. Washburn retired with hoist to Fitzgerald.

Tanner's hired hands broke out in the first with all kinds of paprika for a few fleeting seconds, and then suddenly piped down. Distel and Callaghan singled. But Ping fouled to third, Fitz forced Cal at second, and Turgeon passed away at the plate, leaving Distel stranded on third.

Score in Second.

The second frame was both interesting and productive from a Spudder angle. Morgan started the round by striking out Moke Meyers. Warwick singled past second, and then Khadot hit into a double play, Distel to Turgeon to Golvin. So much for the Bruin attack. Our Walter Golvin, the brunette first base sensation, combed a torrid swat against the upper layer of the starboard battlements, and rapidly scattered himself around the runways to third before he could be headed. Clark attempted to pull the ancient hidden ball trick and Lindsey balked in the runner. Jim became so excited and wrathful over this mental lapse that he walked Dorman and Query. Morgan laid one down first base way. It was a perfect sacrifical effort, advancing the runners each a station. Distel sent Meyers back to the center boards to pull down his wallop. Dorman checked in after the catch. Cal walked, but Meyers went over to the left center fence and satchelled lusty poke by Ping for the third out.

Fitz opened the Spudder third with his circuit smash to right. It was a sweet clout that cleared the boards with neat margin to spare.

They bunched up on the Grizzly again in the fourth for a twin murder, did George, Pete and Walt. Eulas issued a pass to Rosenthal, and Washburn bounded to Turgeon, who tossed to Distel at the keystone, snapping Rosy away. Distel completed the play at first a good two steps ahead of the galloping Washburn. Lindsey took to cover in this chapter. After there was one out, Distel and Callaghan singled. Bodie chased Moke over to the fence again. Then Fitz punched a one-baser between first and second, scoring Distel. Cal took third. Collins succeeded Lindsey on the promontory. On an attempted double steal, Callaghan went home and Fitz was trapped, later tagged out by Washburn. That made accounts stand, 5-1, Spudders.

Golvin rifted a two-cushioner almost to the scoreboard in the fifth, and Dorman shoved him through the turnstile with slam against the port palings also for a brace of sacks.

The sixth saw threats by both clubs quelled via the double play route. Dorman connived with Turgeon and Golvin on Clark, who had singled, and Nason. Khadot to Gonzales to Washburn on bounder by Fitz was the formula by which Santone eradicated base runners for this inning.

The domestic counted three more in the seventh on a quartet of base bingles and a walk. Turgeon, Query, Morgan and Callaghan connected.

Fitzgerald singled and stole second in the ninth. Dorman knocked him in with another double. That wound up the scoring.

Young Takes On White Thursday In Legion Scrap

Snelson Meets Murdock in Six-Rounder—Snyder and Wells.

Sid Young, the Tulsa mauler, will meet Tommy White, conqueror of Duke Trammel, in the legion fistic ten-round feature Thursday night, announced Mrs. Don Wofford, batting for the promoter yesterday, who is in San Antonio with Trammel.

Effort had been made to bring Bobby Green up for White, but connections were missed, so Young, who has been aching for a battle in Wichita Falls over the past several weeks, was signed up.

White, many of the critics believe, will tag it on Sid but they're practically certain that Young will make a far better mill of it than did Trammel with White last week.

Duke, by the way, fights Cowboy Padgett again tonight in San Antonio.

Red Wells tangles with Kid Snyder in a six-rounder. Young Murdock has been substituted for Tabby Levine. Murdock meets Eddie Snelson, said Mrs. Wofford.

HOUSTON 6; SHREVEPORT 5.

SHREVEPORT, July 20.—The Buffaloes copped the opening game of the series with the Sports this afternoon when Del Gainer hit a home run in the seventh inning, breaking a 5 to 5 deadlock. Dixie Walker, speedball pitcher, obtained from Birmingham of the Southern League, started on the mound for the locals but gave way to McCall in the third. Schick and Ostergard hit homers for Shreveport.

BROOKLYN WINS 4-3.

BROOKLYN, July 20.—(AP)—Dazzy Vance fanned 17 batters, and Brooklyn defeated the Cardinals today, 4 to 3, in ten innings. The Dodger pitching ace was the deciding factor in the game, holding the Cards to 9 hits and getting three hits himself, two singles and a home run with DeBerry on base. His single in the tenth scored the winning run. At the end of the ninth inning, Vance was credited with 15 strike outs, one less than the major league record for a nine inning game created by G. E. "Rube" Waddell of the St. Louis club, July 29, 1908. Every member of the visiting club, with the exception of Toporcer who wears glasses, fanned at least once. Hornsby, Bottomley, O'Farrell and Mails expiring three times by this route. Toporcer's triple and Bell's single in the ninth enabled the Cards to tie the score. By virtue of his work today Vance increased his strike outs for the season to 137 and surpassed his own mark for strike outs in a single game, made last season when he struck out fifteen Cubs in a 9 inning game. Champion Jack Still Assures He Has Not Retired

CHICAGO, July 20.—Jack Dempsey tonight is speeding westward to Salt Lake City and thence to Los Angeles instead of pulling up his belt buckles for a meeting tomorrow before the New York boxing commission to sign a fight in 1926 with Harry Wills.

The world's heavyweight champion arrived here unexpectedly today when it was generally supposed that he was in New York for his scheduled meeting tomorrow with the commisison. He declared that the peace he made with the commission was genuine and that he had authorized promoter Tex Rickard to represent him before the commisison tomorrow.

The reason for failing to wait for the New York commission's meeting, Dempsey said, was because he was anxious to meet Jack Kearns, his deposed manager, in Los Angeles, to settle their differences and untangle their numerous partnerships. He declared positively that he and Kearns had split, but that he would live up to the financial end of their contract until it expired in September, 1926.

"If I fight, Kearns will get his share of the purse," Dempsey said, "but I shall do the match making."

Dempsey assured everybody that he had not retired and that he would box for promoter Fitzsimmons in the Sky Blue arena in Michigan City, Ind., late in September, providing Fitzsimmons could obtain a suitable opponent and the terms made satisfactory. Dempsey said this would be one of the "warming up" bouts mentioned in his agreement with Rickard which provided for one or two such contests before the match with Wills.

GRACE OUTFIT NIPS BAPTISTS BY 8-4 SCORE.

Hicks, Andree, Coolidge All Slam Apple for the Circuit.

Bill Andree, Grace Methodist slab artist, was in rare form Monday afternoon and in the five innings played he whiffed 11 of the Baptist batters. Grace Methodists won 8 to 4. Only four hits were gathered off Andree, three of these by Norman Rosser, Baptist pitcher. Bill held the Baptists to only two scratch hits in the first four innings, but gave in in the fifth and the Baptist rallied long enough to count four times.

The hitting was featured by home runs of Red Hicks, Bill Andree and Glenn Coolidge. Rosser collected two scratch hits and a double in three times up.

A double by Whatley, a single by Coolidge and an error netted the first Methodist run in the first inning.

A walk to Haney, Skeen's sacrifice bunt, and Red Hick's home run gave the Methodist their next two. Bill Andree followed Red Hicks with another long smash to right that was good for four bases.

Andree started the fireworks in the fourth with an infield hit to short. Reid doubled to center, scoring Andree. Whatley walked. After dropping a pair of long flies in right only a few feet foul, Glenn Coolidge dropped one within the foul line and rounded the bases, chasing Reid and Whatley over the plate ahead of him.

Dobson started the Baptist rally in the fifth with a walk. Rosser sent him to third with a clean double to right center. Callahan doubled to left scoring Dobson and Rosser. Andree attempted to catch Callahan off second, but Whatley let the ball get through him and Callahan went to third. Ellis whiffed. Morgan walked. Hicks attempted to catch Callahan off third and Glidewell let the throw get by him. Callahan and Morgan scored. Haney made a nice catch of Lovelace's fly to center. Delaney walked and stole second. Covington fanned.

ANOTHER RAY OF HOPE DIES FOR CONVICT

Chair Looms Once More As "Confession" Proves Myth.

CHICAGO, July 20.—(AP)—Another ray of hope that one of the amazing last hour developments that saved him from death on the gallows last Friday would become tangible enough to prove his innocence during a seven-day reprieve, has gone out for Russell Scott.

Admits Story False.

James M. Ball, a Detroit telegraph operator, who last Friday declared that he witnessed the shooting of Joseph Mauer, Chicago drug clerk, and that Russell Scott was innocent of the slaying, has admitted that the story was a romance concocted "for the sake of humanity."

Ball said that he "told a lie to save one whom I believe innocent," but that when he found that his story was not accomplishing anything he decided to admit the fake.

This was the second blow that Scott has received since his dramatic reprieve six hours before he was to hang. The stay of execution was ordered by Governor Len Small when a telegram from Detroit purporting to be from Robert Scott, the condemned man's brother, confessing the murder, was received. According to Russell's story, Robert Scott, also under indictment, did the shooting.

Other Communications.

The sender of the telegram promised to surrender the next day, but nothing developed. Various other communications were received, however, one letter purported also to be from Robert, mailed in Chicago last Thursday night. In this it was stated that he was seriously ill, but would give himself up as soon as he was able.

Scott's attorneys still are pinning hope for a commutation on affidavits they said they had from two unnamed women declared to have been in the drug store at the time of the shooting. So far as known no official action has been taken in the case.

Ball indicated that he may have been the o: who sent the Detroit telegram to the governor. Declaring that Scott's predicament preyed on his mind, the operator said he first decided to concoct a telegram purporting to be from Russell's brother, "but I thought it out a little further and lastly struck the idea of representing myself as a witness."

ing a progressive advancement."

Psychology, he said, is making evident the animal foundation of human intelligence, asserting that man's claim to independence in the universe lies not in the pretense that this planet was made for him, but in the claim that he transcends material universe insofar as be comprehends it.

He suggested the improbability of ten millions of special creations and declared it hardly probable that since all evidence pointed to these species having arisen through evolution, man should have arisen in a different fashion.

He turned from the doctrine of evolution to a discussion of the evidence for special creation as found in Genesis.

"Science and common sense alike inquire regarding the nature and sources of this account,' 'the statement said, "if it be regarded as a true statement of facts. Science faces the matter squarely, desiring only the right to investigate and draw unprejudiced conclusions. The results of such investigations are not in doubt."

Traditions of Origin

"It appears that the races about the Eastern Mediterranean like other primitive peoples had their traditions of the origin of the world. The story in Genieses apparently descended to the early Hebrews and to their neighbors in Mesopotamia from a source far ante. dating the appearance of the Jews as a people and their sacred writings.

"Archeology and enthnology most reasonable indicate that in its origin this Hebrew Babylonian tradition may be compared with the stories of many other primitive peoples. We take the story in Genesis seriously as an account of pre-historical facts because it is our story of creation passed down by tradition from our fathers. * * 6.

"But the past history of events, whether of human or animal origins, is subject for scientific inquiry and the answer of science is evolution. The great autiquity of man, the existence at an earlier period of be'ngs, man-like, but intermediate between mand and the other primates together with the facts of man's anatonomy, his embryology, his physicological reactions, even his mentality, all point to bodily kinship with the rest of living nature.

"It is not that man came from monkeys, but that men, monkeys and apes, all came from a common mammalian ancestry millions of years in the past.

"It is more reasonable to believe that the Bible is a human document representing the history of an advance from the concept of the barbarous and vengful Jehovah of the earlier Old Testament through the God of righteousness and justice of the later prophets and culminating in the concept of a father as preached by Jesus of Nazareth."

DARROW IRKS

Darrow's apology. I am sure the words were not premeditated. He spoke at the moment when perhaps he had suffered one of the greatest disappointments of his life. I speak for the state of Tennessee when I say we forgive and forget," concluded the court.

Mr. Darrow stepped to the judge's stand and the incident was ended with a handshake.

Darrow in Statement.

When court convened after the recess, Attorney General Stewart announced that he had conferred with members of the defense counsel following the citation, and Mr. Darrow desired to make a statement.

"Of course your honor will remember," said Mr. Darrow, "that whatever took place was hurried, one thing following another and the truth is, I did not know just how it looked until I read over the minutes as your honor did and when I read them over I was sorry that I had said it.

"On Friday I determined immediately on reading it over to tell the court just what I thought this morning. In the meantime I had seen one paper which stated that the court thought that I was trying to get in a position where I would be held in contempt and they thought so and the like, and I was at a loss what to do but I knew your honor wanted to be heard first.

"Now, I want to say that what I say is in good faith, regardless of what your honor may think it is right for you to do. But I say it because I ought to say it for myself. I have been practicing law for 47 years and I have been pretty busy most of the time in court, and I have had many a case where I have had to do what I have been doing here, fighting the public opinion of the people, in the community where I was trying the case—even in my own town, and I never yet have in all my time had any criticism by the court for anything I have done in court."

Admits Went Too Far.

He added that he thought he had gone further than he should have gone and "so far as its having been premeditated or made for the purpose of insult to the court, I had not the slightest thought of that."

"Personally I don't think it constitutes a contempt, but I am quite certain the remark should not have been made and the court could not help taking notice of it and I am sorry that I made it, ever since I got time to read it, and I want to apologize to the court for it."

Judge Raulston, in accepting the apology, paid a high tribute to Tennessee and the illustrious men the state has produced.

EVOLUTION

lar.

"Man is many degrees closer anatomically to the great apes than the latter are to the true monkeys, yet the special creationist insists on placing man in biological isolation as a creature without affinities to the animal world.

"If a man is a creature apart from all animals, it is extremely difficult to understand the significance of the fact that he is constructed along lines so closely similar to those of certain animals; that his processes of reproduction are exactly those of other animals; that in his development he shows the closest parallelism, step for step, to the apes; that his modes of nutrition and respiration involve the same chemical processes and that even his fundamental psychological processes are of the same kind, though differing in degree of specialization as are those of lower animals. * * *

"According t othe most recent computations based on the rate of radium emanations, one billion years have elapsed since the earth first attained its present diameter. Various estimates as to the time since the first life appeared on the surface of the globe range from 50,000,000 years to about ten times that figure. * * *

"None of the animals of the past is identical with those of the present. The nearest relationship is between a few species of the past which have been placed in the same genera as those of today. * * *

"There is a gradual progression towards more highly specialized forms as one proceeds from lower to higher strata (in the earth's crust).

"Many groups of animals reached the climax of their specialization long ages ago and have become extinct.

"The outstanding fact brought out by a study of human paleontology is is that of man's antiquity. According to the most expert testimony available, the oldest fossil in the human series is about a million years old; and even this estimate makes man a recent product of evolution as compared with many contemporaneous animals.

"All of the lines of evidence presented point strongly to organic evolution and none is contrary to this principle. Most of the facts, moreover, are utterly incompatible with the only rival explanation, 'special creation."

pendix vermiformix and the wisdom teeth of man, he pointed to as examples.

He also pointed to the similarity of various organs in related animals.

"Probably there is no structure in the human body," he said, "which was not at some time used for a different purpose. As the use of the organ changes in evolution, its structure correspondingly changes and we see most complete series of intergrades between the earlier and later conditions."

He explained that there was no such thing as species in nature, but that the words "species, genus, family, etc." were terms used to describe the fact that the animals and plants differed among themselves and differ to different degrees.

Intelligent teaching of biology or any intelligent approach to biological science is impossible if the estaglished fact of evolution is omitted, he delared.

RECTOR SAYS

ons as contained in Genesis is interesting and valuable, but in his epistle to the Galatians, St. Paul does not hesitate to say that it is an allegory and that its true value is its teaching as to the two covenants or testaments.

No Incompatibility.

"I am thoroughly convinced that God created the heavens and the earth, but I do not know how he proceeded. Since God is not subject to the categories of time and space, a thousand years being in his sight a single day, I am unable to see that there is any incompatibility between evolution and religion. Some evolutionists are irreligious, but so are some who are not evolutionists. I, myself, hold with the writer of the epistle to the Hebrews that 'God, who at sundry times and in diverse manner spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his son by whom he made the world.'"

STOCKS

NEW YORK, July 20.—(AP)—Headjustment of speculative accounts today temporarily retarded, but failed to halt the upward movement of stock prices. Undeterred by professional atempts to depress the market, leaders, speculators for the rise carried on constructive operations with signal success in many other sections of the list, lifting prices of a score of mail order, motor, rubber, merchandise, food, tobacco and specialty issues to new high levels for the year on gains of one to six points.

Unfavorable budget of trade news including a higher average for general com modity prices increased earnings by oil tobacco and automobile accessory companies coupled with an advance in tire prices, encouraged renewed buying of many of these issues.

Sloss-Sheffield steel gave a particular individual performance, spurting 8¾ points to 103, the highest price in 20 years. Improved earnings and reports of buying by interesests familiar with the company's strong position as a pig iron producer, accounted for the sharp upturn in price.

Reports of prosperous conditions in the west and an increase in agricultural buying stimulated trading in the mail order issues. Sears Roebuck soared over six points to 103, the highest price in 20 years. Improved earnings and reports of buying by interests familiar with the company's strong position as a pig iron producer, accounted for the sharp upturn in price.

Reports of prosperous conditions in the west and an increase in agricultural buying stimulated trading in the mail order issues. Sears Roebuck soared six points to a new peak price for the year at 187⅝, closing 5½ points net higher at 186¾. At the same time Montgomery Ward moved up more than two points to a new high level at 56⅛.

Bullish demonstrations were resumed with vigor in such speculative favorites as Mack Truck and Havana Electric, both of which broke into new high ground. At 194¾, Mack established a record high price(but eased off at the close to 193¼, a gain of 4¾ points on the day.

Approach of the heavy freight moving season created more interest in investment railroad shares in the early dealings, but buying later was restricted by indications that the "Nickle Plate" merger would be further delayed through the Van Sweringen's abandonment, however, was registered by Atchison, New York Central, Union Pacific and Baltimore and Ohio although closing prices were considerably below the high levels of the day. Rock Island and Wheeling and Lake Erie preferred responded to a revival of merger rumors. Profit taking and professional efforts to unsettle the market by unloading influential stocks had little effect on the trend of prices, although they caused periods of hesitation throughout the day. American Can closed 1⅛ points lower and U. S. Steel and Baldwin eased off fractionally.

Trading in the foreign exchanges agai was featured by rallies in Danish and Norwegian kroner to the highest levels in several years. Demand sterling held firm slightly below $4.86, while French francs and Italian lire were steady.

No change was noted in the prevailing ease in the money situation call funds holding at 3¾ per cent all day and time money rates were unchanged.

NEW ORLEANS, July 20.—(AP)—The cotton market was rather nervous and erratic in today's trading with the volume of business restricted as is usually the case for a few days in advance of a government report. Owing to good cables the market advanced 20 to 22 points in the early trading, but later lost all of the gain and more besides, owing to the forecast for rather unsettled weather in the west and the reports of new bales turning up. The first new Louisiana bale reached here this morning and was sold a little before noon at auction, for 40 cents a pond. It classed strict middling and was of ⅞ to 1 inch staple. After making the low points of the day, 11 to 12 points under Saturday's close, before mid-session the market rallied moderately and finally closed net unchanged to 3 points up.

Liverpool came in better than due and first trades here showed gains of 11 to 15 points. The market continued to gain until October traded up to 23.53 and December to 23.57. These proved to be the high points and 20 to 22 points above the previous close.

After publication of the forecast predicting cloudy and unsettled weather for the west with showers, and the showing of a low barometer over the Texas Panhandle. The market eased off under liquidation until October traded down to 23.20 and December to 23.35. These were the day's lows and showed losses of 32 to 33 points from the early highs and were 11 to 12 points net lower compared with the previous close.

The market rallied some in the late trading but recovered rather narrowly within the previous range developing no definite trend.

A private report made the condition average 73.4 and indicated a crop of 14,197,000 bales.

Exports today 13,560 bales.

DEATH CHAIR NOT TO CLAIM HOUSTON MAN

Ma Commutes Death Penalty to Life Imprisonment in Pardon List.

AUSTIN, July 20.—(AP).—The death sentence of Joe Brown, sentenced to die in the electric chair tonight shortly past 12 o'clock, was commuted to life imprisonment today by Governor Miriam A. Ferguson.

Brown was convicted in Harris county in 1923 for slaying a negro. Commutation of sentence was recommended by the prosecuting attorney, Earl Adams Jr. and Horace Soule, district attorney.

The board of pardons recommended the commutation.

One full and two conditional pardons were granted today by Governor Ferguson, bringing the July pardon list to 114.

Jasper Coleman, Kerr county, who served four years of a five-year sentence for burglary, was granted a full pardon on recommendation of Lee Wallace, county judge; H. C. Geddie, Kerrville, trial and prosecuting attorney.

Conditional pardons were granted:

Homer Gann, Wise county, liquor, one year; served six months. Pardon recommended by Railroad Commissioner C. V. Terrell, district judge; Attorney S. A. Lillard Jr., Burson, the pardon board and eigh jurors.

Robert Johnson, alias Edgar Richardson, Hardin county, robbery, sentenced to 25 years. Served more than 18. Pardon recommended by pardon borad.

O. C. Emmons, Freestone county, was given a 15-day respite before beginning a three-year sentence for manslaughter, because his mother is critically ill.

A furlough was granted Dixie Harris, Haskell county, under two-year sentence for theft, on account of illness of his child, the furlough being endorsed by District Attorney Tom Davis."

SEEK MISSING FARMER.

Note Left Behind Says He Will Bury Self.

SAN ANGELO, Texas, July 20.—Officers and citizens of three counties, Tom Green, Sterling and Coke, this morning resumed search along the North Concho river for Hugh P. Alexander, 45, farmer near Water Valley, who disappeared from his home late Saturday. A note found in the man's purse, left in the cupboard, bade farewell, said he lacked money for a funeral, would bury himself and urged that no search be made for him.

PRODUCE

AUSTIN, July 20. — Although the market tone for both water melons and peaches was quite steady today, under liberal week-end receipts, there was little or no price cutting, carloads of 32 pound Watson melons bringing as high as $600 a car in Chicago, and bushels of Elberta peaches from $2 to $2.75 in outside markets.

AUSTIN, July 20.—Egg receipts New York 7,630 cases; Chicago 1,968; Boston 5,236; Philadelphia 2,769. Storage movement a net gain of 9,481 cases. Stocks on hand New York 1,493,304 cases; Chicago 1,618,382; Boston 365,658; Philadelphia 365,835.

Dressed poultry receipts New York 169,541 pounds; Chicago 75,786; Boston 71,320; Philadelphia 97,839. Storage loss 19,525 pounds. Stocks on hand New York 14,519,127, pounds; Chicago 15,336,293; Boston 5,717,286; Philadelphia 2,357,045.

Black Kitten Naps In Road While Cars Line Up in Jam

SAN ANTONIO, July 20.—Exhausted, a black kitten decided to stop and rest.

Unmindful of the danger which lay behind the beams from numerous headlights, the young adventurer decided to wash his face. With never a thought of the screeching brakes and horns, the kitten started its bath.

A car stopped but the "little black ball" refused to move. The driver, aware of the ill omen, refused to go around. Other cars stopped. Some of the drivers also were superstitious and didn't care to cross the path. Those who scoffed at the superstition were wedged in and could not get out. Detective Scott Walling and Mrs. Walling were driving to town just before the officer went on duty.

Traffic jammed from Seventh to Third street on Broadway aroused the detective's curiosity. He got out to investigate.

Detective Walling put the kitten in his automobile. The Wallings have not decided what they will name their new pet.

LAY DOWN ON CAR TRACKS

Vienna Police Have Hard Job Combatting Demonstration.

VIENNA, July 19.—(AP)—A new method of demonstrating has been hit upon by the communists of Vienna. Effectually to stop all traffic of a street, several hundred unemployed communists and war invalids lay down on the rails of the street cars in the city's principal street. It took the police more than an hour to clear the tracks so that traffic could be resumed. Whenever 30 or 50 of the weary communists had been induced to get up and seek their repose elsewhere, the same numbr would stretch out on the rails further on. The entire performance was a source of unalloyed pleasure for the humorously inclined Cienese.

Helena Quake Stops Business Store Clock

HELENA, Mont., July 20.—A distinct earth shock was felt here at 10:08 this morning. Beyond the stopping of a clock in a down town business house, no damage was reported.

JAPAN TO STUDY FARMING

An Expert May Be Sent to U. S. For That Purpose.

TOKIO, July 19.—(AP)—The department of agriculture is planning to send an expert to the United States to study and report on the agricultural situation especially with regard to the cultivation of Japanese rice on American farms.

The output of Japanese grain in America is said to have been on the increase up to 1923, when 270,000,000 pounds were producerd. The subsequent decrease is ascribed to the rise in dollar exchange against monies of importing countries.

In addition to studying the rice cultivation situation in America, the agricultural department investigator will also look into the system of selling farm products and the supervision of traffic bearing upon agriculture.

ONE SHOT, ONE SURRENDERS.

Controversy Over Mules in Lot Cause of Firing.

BELTON, Texas, July 20.—Riley Lewellen, 28, was shot and severely wounded unday morning at 8 o'clock at his home one mile north of Little river. G. O. Poole, who lives about half a mile north of Lewellen, later surrendered to officers at Belton.

Mrs. Lewellen, wife of the injured man, was burned on the arm by one of the bullets.

The controversy which led to the shooting ensued when Lewellen told one of the Poole boys that he would turn some of Poole's mules out of the lot when they had finished eating, in order to prevent their stepping on some chickens.

London Tailor Says Clothes Will Make A Small Man Look Tall

LONDON, July 1. (AP).—Good news for shrot men who desire to appear tall was announced recently by a London tailor who says he has conceived a plan to bring about this effect by a new wrinkle in garment cutting and designing. The trick is very simple. The modification is chiefly in the lapels, which are worn very small and rolling short. The roll is so short in fact that it finishes on a line with the top button. This adds length to the front of the coat, says the tailor, with the much desired result among men under height that they appear several inches taller.

Another innovation is that the front of the coat, especially in evening clothes, extending to the hip is cut straight. Sleeves in men's wear have become narrower, this change having been made to correspond with the new "cow heel" stiff cuff of the dress shirt which is the latest thing among the best dressed men about London. While there has been a tendency to wear the coat fuller in front, there are still a great many evening tailed coats made which show plenty of the shirt and waistcoat, this being particularly desirable among the older set of men who remain true to the style of other years.

CANTWELL SEEKS BOND.

School Superintendent Presents Matter Before Attorney General.

AUSTIN, July 20.—Dr. J. W. Cantwell, superintendent of schools at Wichita Falls, was here today seeking approval of a $500,000 school bond issue. Judge E. B. Holman of Galveston also was here in interest of a $500,000 bond issue. Both matters are being considered by the attorney general's department.

Danger Signals Of Indigestion

The Disease That Strikes Like Lightning.

Beware of indigestion—the disease that kills more people and kills them quicker than any other. This warning, by physicians, is particularly applicable this season of the year, when your system "let-down" in tone and vigor on account of warm weather.

What are the warnings that nature gives you of the approach of indigestion? The medical books tell us: 1. Gas, which means that your food is fermenting instead of digesting. 2. A feeling of fullness or oppression in the region of the stomach after eating. This means that the gas has ballooned your stomach and is pressing up against your heart and lungs. 3. A dull lazy feeling, which means that you are not getting nourishment from what you are eating. 4. Restlessness, un-refreshing sleep, which means that the poisons of indigestion are disturbing your brain and nerves. 5. Sometimes, pain and fluttering around the heart, though this symptom may come later.

Don't take chances with indigestion —you are too apt to lose. If you have had any of the symptoms mentioned above get your digestive organs to work at once with Ferraline, Nature's great stomach treatment that has given relief to thousands. Ferraline immediately aids and assists every one of your digestive organs, including your stomach, liver and bowels. Ferraline makes your digestion "perfect and complete." You feel its helpful effect from the very first dose. Get a bottle of Ferraline today at any drug store. Ferraline is so much superior to any other remedy for indigestion that the owners have instructed every druggist to refund the purchase price. One Dollar, if you do not get relief, so it costs you nothing if you are not delighted with results. Delay might be dangerous. Get Ferraline today from your druggist. Girls Advised To Paint Their Knees Or Be Back Number

CHICAGO, July 20.—Painted pictures of feminine knees as may from time to time be exposed by rolled stockings and perverse winds are advocated by beauty specialists who begin a week's convention here today.

"Painted knees are the latest thing," said Mrs. Ruth Maurer, presiding at the opening session today.

"Hand painted pictures on the knees are intrigueing. Some designs are simple, some elaborate. Some girls prefer a flower or a group of blossoms. Others like a portrait or a little landscape."

Women of the United States spend approximately $6,000,000 a day to make themselves beautiful, one report to the convention asserted.

Last year 17,850,000 boxes of rouge were used. Hair dye cost about $7,000,000 for the year.

NOW DOES ALL HER WORK

Has No Backache, No Bad Feelings Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Drove Her Illness Away

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—"I was in a badly run-down condition and I would get weak spells and terrible headaches. I felt so badly last year that I could not do any housecleaning. The minute I would lift or stoop it seemed as if I was going to fall to pieces. I told a neighbor how I felt and she said that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was surely the right thing for me. I took four bottles then and in the fall of the year I took three. I had been treated by a doctor but he gave me an iron tonic and that did not help me. It seemed that the tonic did not have in it what the Vegetable Compound did. That gave me the strength and ambition I needed and I have gained in weight. This year before I started to clean house I got four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and am taking it right along. I tell all my friends about it and how much good it does me. They can notice it because I have gained in weight. I weigh 118 now and do all my work myself again."—Mrs. EMIL O. BRANDENBURG, 651 37th Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

LAST DETAILS OF WHITFIELD MURDER GIVEN

Husband Signs Final Part of Confession Telling of Cause.

Additional details of the slaying July 11 of Mrs. Bess Whitfield were given Monday morning by her husband, Bob, who is now formally charged with the murder of his wife. In a fourth statement taken by city and county officials he made additional admissions of the shooting.

Whitfield reiterated yesterday that the woman was shot on the very spot her body was found and declared he did not touch the corpse. Officers are inclined to doubt this.

In other respects however, the latest admissions bear out almost to an exactness the theory of the murder as constructed by officers in their investigations.

The case will be laid before the grand jury of the 30th district court which convenes Thursday morning on special call from Judge Vincent Stine.

M. G. Catter Reports On Kiwanis Session

The final report on the Kiwanis club international convention at St. Paul early this month, was made before the local club yesterday noon by M. G. Catter, one of the delegates from Wichita Falls.

The convention was international in aspect, club members from Canada and United States being in attendance. A move was started at the meeting to include Mexico in the next convention but this was overridden through advice of leaders who believe that the difference in languages and customs would cause difficulties.

The report concludes all the reports of the club members, District Governor Julian Bobo, Dr. Felix R. Collard and Bob McCullough have made their talks at previous times.

COLLARD ASKS ABOUT HEALTH, SHEP DODGES

Talking to Kiwanis, Mayor Says Improvement Being Made, However.

Jake and the citys affairs were brought before the Kiwanis club Monday noon by Mayor R. E. Shepherd.

The mayor had been asked to speak on the new jamaica ginger ordinance that passed its second reading at the city council Monday night. Mayor Shepherd stated that he had always had an aversion to seeing youths running around town drunk, even when he knew they had become intoxicated through the use of high price liquor, but it was too much when he saw them going on a "toot" through overuse of jake.

Collard.

He estimated that at least 30 per cent of the cases handled in city court each day, outside of traffic violations, were for "jake" cases. The intoxicant, he stated, had the effect of making the drunk a mean one, who usually started out looking for trouble, and winding up in the city bastile. The council had been urged to take action, and the ordinance had been the result. The mayor expressed the belief that the ordinance would hold up in court in spite of the contentions of many lawyers that the law was illegal.

Trouble was seen in the background when Mayor Shepherd announced that he would undertake to answer any question on city business that the members might like to ask.

Asks About Health.

Dr. Felix R. Collard, prominent health worker in the city, and a doctor who has taken a leading part in the campaign for better health conditions, arose and asked the mayor to give an account of the sanitary conditions in Wichita Falls. Shepherd weathered the storm by declining to go deeply into the subject. He replied that the council was working on matters and hoped to accomplish something in the near future.

In answer to other questions asked Mayor Shepherd stated that the city was faced with two $50,000 bond issues in the near future, and then a much bigger one afterwards. The first $50,000 will be used to improve local fire fighting facilities.

Fear Key Rate Raise.

Failure to take such action would result in the city receiving a big increase in her fire key rate from the state underwriters who have given Wichita Falls a short time to improve conditions, Mr. Shepherd said.

The second $50,000 issue will be used to improve sewer mains and to allow needed extensions. In connection with this the mayor stated that engineers report they will be ready for a report on the proposed sewage disposal plant within the next week or so, and the council will then take up the matter of a bond issue for the plant. This issue will run into six figures, it was stated.

Beware the Germs of the Air

ANY doctor will tell you that makeshift "window coolers" are a standing invitation to the flying germs of the dust laden air. He will also tell you that this costly risk is certainly not worth the taking when a well iced refrigerator will earn its keep so many times over.

Don't take chances with food's purity these cooler days. Protect that food with ice and at the same time protect its value in dollars with the investment of only a few cents a day.

The well iced refrigerator bars germs; the makeshift is their happy hunting ground. And never keep food in an uniced refrigerator. Ask the doctor what he thinks of that kind of "economy".

We are here to serve.

BOARD REFUSES TO RECONSIDER WHITE RELEASE

Wichitans Fail in Effort to Have Asylum Head Reinstated.

AUSTIN, July 20.—Although the board of control announced that no action will be taken over the replacement of Dr. F. S. White as superintendent of the Wichita Falls state hospital, a hearing was granted Senator J. D. Parnell and Dr. L. MacKechney late today. The protest was heard but no action was taken, S. B. Cowell, member of the board, said..

AUSTIN, Texas, July 20.—Appeal for the retention of Dr. F. S. White as superintendent of the Wichita Falls insane asylum, "on behalf of the medical profession and all the people of the county," was made to the board of control Monday morning by Senator J. B. Parnell and Dr. L. MacKechney of Wichita Falls. Dr. Whit eswas recently dropped by the board of control and Dr. C. W. Castner of the Rusk asylum transferred to the Wichita institution, effective September 1.

The people of Wichita Falls, including all the doctors, are unanimous in support of Dr. White, because of the work he has accomplished since he has been in charge of the institution there, the board was told.

"I don't see how we can do anything about it," R. B. Walthall, member of the board of control, said. "I consider Dr. Castner just as much elected to the Wichita institution as if it had been by vote of all the people."

Senator Parnell and Dr. MacKechney conferred with Assistant Attorney General L. C. Sutton, but declined to say that any legal steps were being considered in connection with the asylum situation.

Parnell said the Wichita county interstate bridge probably would not be discussed with highway officials during his visit here Monday.

Anything That Helps Our Patrons Is Service

Folks who run banks are hedged about with a good many rules and restrictions, most of which are proper and wise.

Nobody yet has ever devised a set of rules for giving service. Service is a matter of spirit, not of formula.

We of this bank consider service under the broad definition of anything that helps.
