Budget cuts

Area agriculture to suffer most

Staff and bureau reports

Proposed federal budget cuts sent to Congress Monday could result in the loss of thousands of dollars for Big Spring and Howard County programs.

Locally, programs which would be phased out or sharply reduced include revenue sharing funds, federal farm subsidies, agriculture conservation programs and Farmer's Home Administration loans.

The agricultural economy comes under the heaviest fire in the federal budget sent to Congress Monday that would shave away at least several hundred million dollars in federal payments to Texas.

Military spending would rise about 5.9 percent, while funding for programs in Texas would fall about $460 million as a result only of the elimination of certain programs.

Among the proposed cuts:

- Revenue sharing — Last year, Big Spring received $334,857 in revenue sharing checks, according to Mary Annette Teague, accounting supervisor for the City of Big Spring. So far this year, Big Spring has received a total of $77,588.

Howard County received $211,762 during 1984, according to Bonnie Franklin, county treasurer. This year the county has received $62,781.

Mrs. Franklin said the checks are used for city and county improvement programs. But local officials were prepared for the loss of the revenue checks.

"We've been expecting to lose it," Mrs. Franklin said. "We've worked toward the idea of it being phased out."

Among programs receiving money from the revenue sharing program were county fire departments, the ambulance service, the Senior Citizens Center, the county library and county road services. Despite the proposed cuts, Mrs. Franklin said she feels these programs will be incorporated by the county.

Some farm program reductions, primarily related to cuts in price supports, would have to be accompanied by legislation for funding formula changes in the 1985 Farm Bill.

Agricultural reductions in the 1986 budget would include:

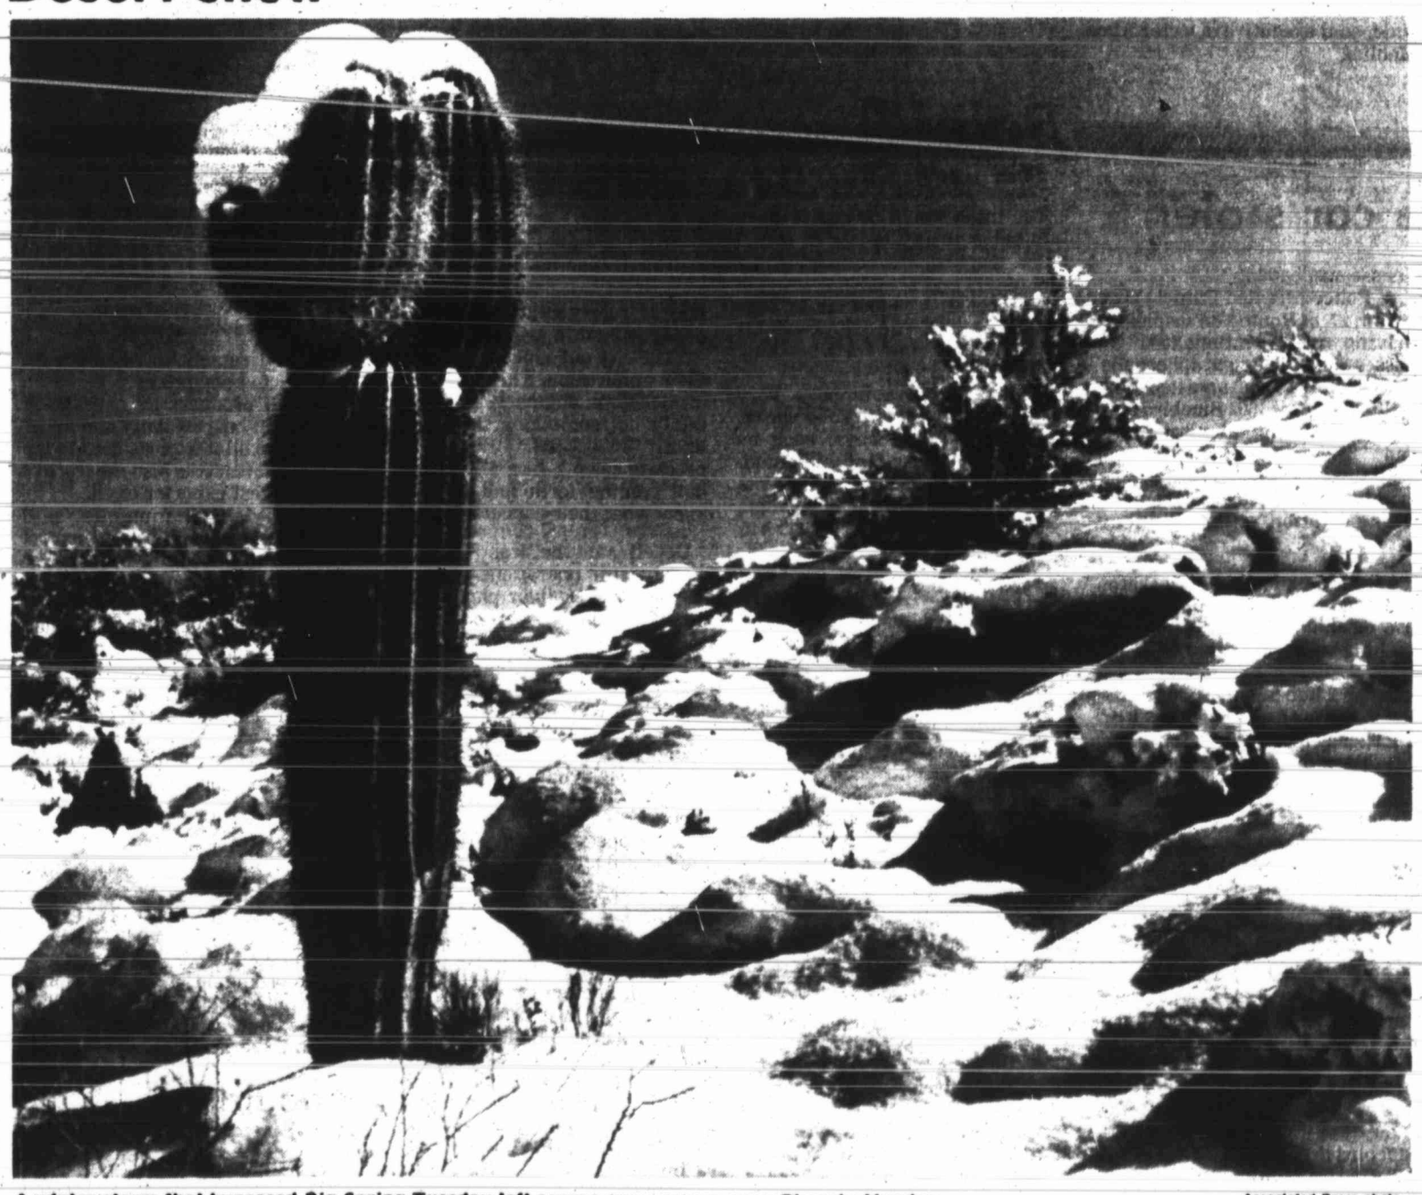

- Crop subsidies — $2 billion shaved from crop subsidies nationally, bringing the national total for price supports to about $11 billion rather than $13 billion for 1986. Texas farmers last year

Mexico cuts oil prices

Staff and wire reports

Mexico today lowered the price of its light crude oil by $1.25 to $27.75 a barrel, but the affect of the cut on prices at the gasoline pump shouldn't be more than a drop in the bucket.

The price per barrel for the Mexican crude is still $2 above West Texas Intermediate Crude, the benchmark price in the American oil industry, said Ed Thompson of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association in Midland.

Mexico "is getting in line so they can be competitive," Thompson said of the price drop.

Thompson added that the price per barrel around the world will be "bouncing back and forth" until the price stablizes.

Mexico is the world's fourth largest oil producer. The country produces 2½ million barrels of oil a day and exports 800,000 barrels a day to Texas, California and the East Coast, Thompson said.

Mexico officials said the price was lowered because of a world oil glut. West Texas oil exploration has slowed in part because of the falling prices, industry analysts say.

A communique from the Department of Energy, Mines and State Industries issued Monday said the new price for the Mexican crude is effective immediately. The communique also said the price of Mexican extra-heavy Maya crude will remain unchanged at $25.50 a barrel.

Isthmus light makes up about 45 percent of Mexico's total oil exports, and Monday's cut will represent an annual loss in revenue of about $300 million, the communique said.

Oil is the country's No. 1 source of foreign exchange earnings and represents about 75 percent of its overall exports.

The communique said the decrease in price was authorized by President Miguel de la Madrid, "taking into consideration the competitiveness of this type of crude in world markets and the price structure that actually prevails internationally."

Mexico's decision follows a $1.41 a barrel reduction in light crude agreed upon by most members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, on Jan. 30.

Mexico is not a member of OPEC but generally follows OPEC pricing and marketing strategies, and last fall it temporarily reduced exports by 100,000 barrels to 1.4 million barrels a day in line with an

Man drops fight against balefill

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

City plans to install a balefill operation at its current landfill site survived an early hitch in the permit process when Bill Kuykendall of 702 Tulane withdrew his opposition to the new operation at a public hearing today.

Kuykendall, the only person to testify against the city's proposal to bale and stack its solid wastes, withdrew his opposition less than 15 minutes after the hearing was closed, saying he did not want to go through "the hassle."

Earlier, Kuykendall had told Texas Department of Health hearing examiner R.V. "Bob" Smith of Austin and Decell that he would be an opposing party to the permit process.

"If it were maintained as such (in the city's proposal), I wouldn't have any objection. But with the heighth, I have to object," Kuykendall said.

> "We're trying to get landmarks, saving the old depot and such for our city. Yet we're going to stack garbage so that you can't see city hall."
> Bill Kuykendall

Kuykendall testified that city plans to stack the trash as high as 43 feet in what will be a grass-covered hill would depreciate his property values. He owns industrial-zoned land bordered by the current landfill on two sides, city property on another and by FM 700.

"We're trying to get landmarks, saving the old depot and such for our city. Yet we're going to stack garbage so that you can't see city hall (from his land)," Kuykendall said.

However, when questioned by a project engineer with the health department's Bureau of Solid Waste Management, Nicholas Classen, Kuykendall said he had not contacted a real estate appraiser to determine what effect the balefill site would have on his property values.

Because Kuykendall withdrew his objection, a final decision on whether the city will be able to go ahead with its baling plans could be reached in 60 days, Smith said.

Classen, who is acting on behalf of Bureau Director Jack Carmichael, must file a brief in the case within 15 days. If the city finds it is adversely affected by the bureau's argument, it has 15 days to respond. Smith then will have 30 days to make a final decision.

Under the city's plans, the baling operation would extend the life of the landfill by 37 years. If it continues the landfill operation without converting to the baling operation, the site could be used for 1½ years, Decell said.

A guide to suicide

Author's manual written for terminally ill

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Derek Humphry was ready with the small bottle of seconal and codeine that a doctor friend had given him.

He mixed the drugs with coffee, went into the bedroom and handed the cup to his cancer-consumed wife, Jean. She gulped it down and quickly fell asleep. About an hour later, she was dead.

"It gave her a comfort, a certainty," explained Humphry. "So many deaths are in the middle of the night in a cancer ward."

Although abetting a suicide is illegal in Britain, where Humphry was living, he was not prosecuted in the 1975 death. His conscience was clear, he says, and the suffering of people like Jean became his cause.

Humphry, 54 and now remarried, is the co-founder of the West Los Angeles-based Hemlock Society and the author of "Let Me Die Before I Wake."

It's the only book sold in this country that tells how to commit suicide, with details on drugs and dosages, Humphry says.

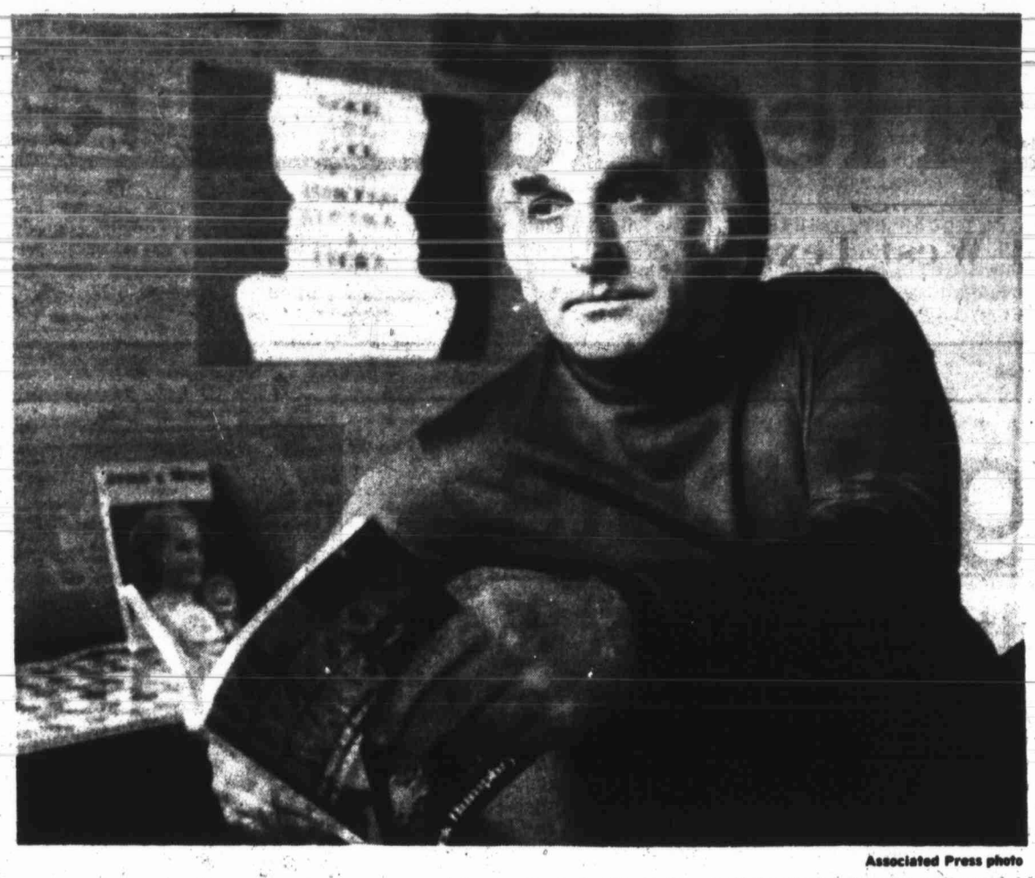

"Let Me Die" has sold more than 36,000 copies since it was first published for members in 1981, he said. An expanded public edition, selling fpr $10, is now on sale at more than 1,200 bookstores nationwide, said Fred Jordan, a spokesman for Grove Press of New York, which distributes the book.

Humphry says the advance of medical techniques for prolonging life created the demand for "Let Me Die."

"We are the first organ in the U.S. to say that many times assisting a suicide is a decent thing and it ought to be lawful," he said in an interview.

The issue of voluntary death was brought to public attention most recently by the case of William F. Bartling, a 70-year-old man who sued to have respirator tubes removed from his dying body. Two months after he died, a California appellate court ruled that refusal of treatment is "a constitutionally guaranteed right."

However, assisting a suicide is against the law in California.

Author Derek Humphry poses with a copy of his work. "Let Me Die Before I Wake," which some call a suicide manual for the terminally ill, in his Santa Monica, Calif., home.

Humphry and his second wife, Ann, founded the non-profit Hemlock Society in 1980 to educate the public on voluntary euthanasia and to seek changes in the law to permit doctor-assisted suicide for the terminally ill. The Hemlock Society now claims about 10,000 members.

Two other organizations, both based in New York, also report burgeoning membership.

The Society for the Right to Die, fomerly the Euthanasia Society of America, was founded in 1938 and has about 130,000 members nationwide, said executive director Alice Mehling.

Concern for Dying, founded in 1967, claims between 80,000 and 100,000 members worldwide, said Executive Director A.J. Levinson.

A journalist in England and later in the United States, Humphry wrote a book in 1978 telling how he helped end his wife's losing battle with breast and bone cancer.

"People began asking, 'Tell me what you used, what about insurance problems, will I still go to heaven?'" Humphry said.

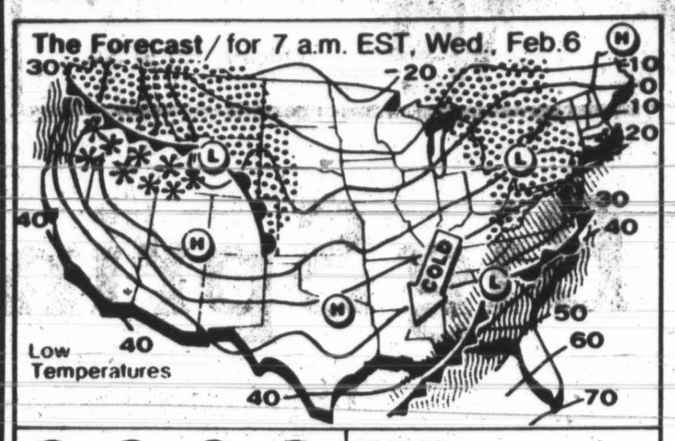

So he bought $200 worth of books on toxicology from a Westwood bookstore, got some help from two physician friends and wrote "Let Me Die."

Humphry, an athiest, devotes all his time to running the Hemlock Society out of a house near his own home on the west side of the city.

"I'm devoting my life to it until such time as we can change the law, until doctors can help people to die," Humphry said. "We shouldn't have to do what I had to do to Jean."

The society publishes a quarterly newsletter and sponsors conferences on death and dying. Dues are $20 a year, $15 for seniors. Last year, sales of "Let Me Die" accounted for $60,000 of the society's $204,000 budget.

For the record

A fire Friday at 2600 Albrook that caused extensive damage to a bedroom was caused by a short in the electrical wiring of a heater, Fire Marshal Jim Ryals said.

Firemen at first thought the fire, which started in a mattress, was ignited by a heater placed too close to the bed, he said.

Balefill

The trash would be compressed into bales about the size of cotton bales, stacked, and covered with 2 feet of dirt and grass, according to the proposal. A 50-foot buffer zone would be between Kuykendall's land and the actual trash-stacking operation.

"Baling appears to be a very good way to deal with solid waste. There are better ways, such as resource recovery," Smith said. "But the baling operation prevents loose blowing paper and prevents the bird population from increasing."

Classen said his first impressions of the city's proposal were favorable. "It's an acceptable way to dispose of solid waste.

"Baling has less ordor, less blowing paper, less insect and rodents because of the way it (trash) is processed," he said. "The city has met all the requirements of the regulations. In the absence of any substantial evidence against it, it is my opinion we should grant the permit.

Although a spokesman for Westar Transmission of Amarillo, which has an easement to the west of the landfill, registered his concern about the pipeline, Classen said he thought the city and Westar could work out any problems. The Westar representative did not oppose the landfill grant.

"The city put a lot of thought into their application. They spent a lot of money on engineering. It's certainly not something they ran at lightly," he said. "But we appreciate people like Mr. Kuykendall coming forth and letting us know what their concerns are."

Decell said he was "pleased" that balefill operations might be started earlier than planned and said it might cut down on problems with neighbors over blowing trash.

"The present landfill permit allows us to operate on a very large working face, which is not conducive to the West Texas environment because of blowing. Consequently our neighbors to the north get a lot of trash blowing (on their property)," Decell said. Kuykendall's property is situated north of the landfill site.

received about $1.4 billion in price support subsidies.

Dottie Sampley, district director for the Federal Crop Insurance program, said the reduction of federal crop subsidies would be hard on West Texas farmers suffering from losses incurred by last year's drought.

The 30 percent reduction in the subsidy program will mean farmers paying an average of $18 an acre for crop insurance will have to pay $5.40 more per acre for the disaster coverage.

- Farm loans — Elimination of farm ownership loans by the Farmers Home Administration and a two-thirds reduction in the FmHA's farm operating loans. Ownership loans, which go to farmers who can't receive credit elsewhere for farm property payments, total about $41.7 million for Texas in 1985. Texas will receive about $147.5 million in direct farm operating loans for this year.

Steve Kelly, county supervisor for the Farmers Home Administration, said, "I'm trying to remember when I made by last farm ownership loan." Elimination of that program would not affect Howard County much, he said.

However, drastic cuts in the operating loans program would be more "dramatic" to the county, he said. During fiscal year 1984, which ended in September of 1984, loans amounting to $750,000 "in operating credit alone" were made through Kelly's office, he said. He expecting a similar figure for 1985.

Operating without the federal aid "would be tough," Kelly said.

- Conservation programs — Elimination of the Agricultural Conservation Program, a $5 million cut in the Soil Conservation Service and a two-thirds reduction in the Great Plains Conservation Program. Both the ACP and the Great Plains program require 50 percent cost sharing by the farmers for conservation projects on individual farms.

Tim Hall, director of the local Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, said his office oversees the ACP program locally. The Great Plains Conservation Program is under the direction of the local Soil Conservation Service.

When asked about the proposed cuts, Hall said, "We've been hearing this for quite a while. This is something they (the government) felt they could do without."

The ACP cuts could amount to $35,000 to $40,000 less per year for the ASCS office, Hall said.

No dollar figure for losses from the Great Plains Conservation program cutbacks was available today, according to a spokeswoman from the local soil conservation field office.

Oil prices

OPEC agreement to reduce sales in order to buoy prices.

Mexico produces an average of 2.5 million barrels daily and about half of the oil it exports goes to the United States. It is also the world's third largest exporter of oil.

Monday's communique said Mexico plans to boost its export volume back to an average of 1.5 million barrels a day in 1985 — a level it sustained during the past three years — but pledged it would not go beyond that.

"Our country's production platform ... will vary only to supply our internal demand. As regards exports this year, we plan to sustain a volume similar to the 1984 annual average of around 1.5 million barreis a day, to be reached gradually as market conditions permit," the communique said.

"Mexico will not compensate its loss of revenue derived by the decrease in the price of Isthmus crude with an increase in export volume, since a surplus in the offer of crude could cause prices to cascade downwards, causing greater problems that benefits," the communique said.

The country is saddled with a huge $96 billion debt — one of the highest among developing countries — which it has had trouble repaying. However, the communique said, "the reduction in the price of Isthmus (oil) ... is not catastrophic" for the Mexican economy.

Six Flags goes to trial

TOMS RIVER, N.J. — The father of one of eight teen-agers who died in a fire at an amusement park here says he's pleased a judge has ruled that Great Adventure Inc. and Six Flags Corp. must stand trial for aggravated manslaughter.

However, Joseph R. Beyroutey Sr. said Monday he would continue working to overturn Superior Court Judge Arthur Blake's December decision allowing two park executives to enter a pretrial intervention program rather than stand trial. Beyroutey's son, Joseph Jr., was among those who died in the May 11 fire in the park's Haunted Castle.

Blake on Monday denied the companies entry into the pretrial program, saying Great Adventure and Six Flags showed no remorse over the deaths. The trial is scheduled to begin March 11.

Man arrested for murder

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A security guard who is a "well-known police buff" was arrested in the murder of a teen-ager and the assault of another girl who were beaten and stabbed many times, a police official says.

David Allen Raley, 23, of San Jose was held without bond after being booked on Monday for investigation of murder and attempted murder in the weekend incident at a vacant mansion in Hillsborough, said Deputy Chief of Police Fred Abram.

Jeanine Grinsell, 16, told police just before she died that she and a friend were tied up, beaten and stabbed, Abram said. Laurie McKenna, 17, was hospitalized in stable condition.

Asbestos case nears end

DENVER — The U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York must apprrove an agreement by three of Manville Corp.'s insurance carriers to pay $112 million in asbestos-related health claims that would end a legal battle of nearly four years.

Most of Manville's disputes with its insurance companies would be ended if the bankruptcy court approves the settlement reached Monday with Insurance Co. of North America, Midland Insurance Co. and Allstate Insurance Co.

Manslaughter not fair

ELLICOTT CITY, Md. — A man charged with vehicular manslaughter in a traffic accident that resulted in the abortion of a 13-week-old fetus says he's being treated unfairly.

"This accident wasn't my fault at all," Ronald D. Hicks, 39, of Sykesville said after a prosecutor announced the charge Monday.

A drunken driving charge filed against Hicks at the time of the Aug. 31 accident will be consolidated with the manslaughter charge during the trial, said William R. Hymes, the state's attorney for Howard County.

The abortion was performed several days after the accident because of fears by doctors that the fetus had been severly damaged.

A guerrillas' welcome

Saboteurs threaten Pope's arrival in Lima, Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Guerrilla saboteurs blacked out Lima's airport shortly before Pope John Paul II's plane landed, and then cut power to the sprawling capital of 5 million, police and airport control tower officials said.

Moments later, a huge hammer and sickle — the symbol of the Maoist Shining Path Movement — was set ablaze on a mountainside north of Lima.

The show of sabotage appeared to be a dramatic rejection of the pope's call for an end to violence in Peru.

In the fourth and final day of his visit to Peru, the pope goes today to the shantytown of Villa El Salvador and the Amazon city of Iquitos. He then travels to Trinidad-Tobago, the last stop on his 12-day, four-nation journey.

Police tightened security after the Monday evening incidents which started, according to police and airport control tower officials, after two explosions occurred northeast and east of the city as the pontiff's twin-engine jet returned from northern Peru.

The officials said the runway lights went out at 8:45 p.m., but the pontiff's plane landed safely in the darkened military section of Lima airport. They said power at the airport was restored almost immediately by a back-up generating system.

Shining Path guerrillas have caused blackouts in the past by blowing up utility poles, and it was believed those might have been the explosions the air controllers saw. But the controllers were unsure if the blasts caused the airport blackout.

The chief Vatican spokesman, Monsignor Pierfranco Pastore, gave a different account of the incidents, saying the pope's plane was on the ground 10 minutes before the runway lights went out.

Officials of Electrolima, the state utility, blamed the power outages in the city on the Shining Path. They said the power was cut when a main line that delivers electricity was downed in Huancayo, 200 miles east of Lima.

It was the tenth blackout in the capital in 2½ years that has been blamed on the guerrilla group. There was a 70-minute blackout in parts of Lima the day the pope arrived.

Power was restored in some parts of Lima within an hour but others remained in darkness.

John Paul spent the night at the papal ambassador's residence.

On Sunday in the guerrilla war zone of Ayacucho, John Paul II appealed for an end to the violence that has claimed at least 4,000 lives in four years.

Earlier, Prime Minister Luis Percovich said he saw little chance the guerrillas would heed the pope's call to lay down their arms and begin a dialogue with the government. He said they hadn't responded to similar suggestions in the past.

Villa El Salvadaor, where the pontiff travels today, sits atop huge sand dunes along the Pacific coast. Some 300,000 people, most unemployed, live there in shacks made out of reed.

During his latest Latin American trip, the pope has spoken to the poor at all his spots. The poor, he has said, have a "preferential option" from the Roman Catholic Church.

After visiting Villa El Salvador, John Paul travels to the sweltering Amazon Jungle city of Iquitos, where, according to the government-run news agency Andina, Indians have been gathering all week.

On Monday, the Polish-born pope traveled to Trujillo, a fishing town 350 miles north of Lima, and called on government officials to provide work "as soon as possible" for the unemployed and underemployed, who make up half the workforce in this nation of 19.5 million people.

ROME — A leading Vatican theologian says Christians should avoid those who claim to perform magic.

The ev. Gino Concetti, also a critic of horoscopes and astrology, wrote in this week's edition of the Vatican weekly l'Osservatore del Domenica that witchcraft, the "evil eye" and all other such beliefs go directly against the teaching of the Gospels.

"Christian morals energetically reject every pretence to believe that the destiny of man or woman can be shown by the natural elements," he wrote in the magazine, which appeared Monday.

"Both those who perform magic arts, and those that take recourse to the previously mentioned performers, whatever the motive, make a choice that is in radical contrast to the Gospels," he said.

Last month Concetti charged that horoscopes are often contradictory to the Gospels and that astrology "crosses into the area of superstition."

Princess gets prison term

LONDON — An Arab princess who pleaded guilty to beating her two maids for such things as sweeping too slowly or looking out the window has received a suspended jail sentence.

According to testimony, Kuwaiti Princess Faria Alsabah, 30, who maintains a luxury home in London, whipped her maids with a riding crop and lengths of electric cord and once held a maid's hand over a hot plate. Both maids had scars over much of their bodies.

"Your conduct was disgraceful, verging on the barbaric," said Crown Court Judge John Hayman on Monday.

He ordered the princess to pay the equivalent of $2,184 in fines, court costs and compensation to the maids. He also sentenced her to six months in jail but suspended the sentence for two years.

"Count yourself fortunate," the judge said. "You have avoided being sent to prison by the skin of your teeth."

Tribesmen abduct climber

NAIROBI, Kenya — A West German climber was abducted by four tribesmen armed with bows and arrows, spent a night with them in a cave and was freed unharmed the next day, police said.

Joachim Schrahn, 27, left his expedition Wednesday because of fatigue, and surprised the four tribesmen as they were stealing parts from his group's vehicle, said deputy police commissioner Harrison Musau.

He was abandoned by the tribesmen on Thursday at the border, and police located him on Sunday, said Musau.

Relic discovery made

BERLIN — The Egyptian Museum in East Berlin has discovered its "most sensational relics" of the last 35 years stored in an old trunk owned by an East German family, the official news agency ADN reported.

The pieces include 66 bronzes, small sculptures, amulets and tools dating from 653 to 525 B.C., and 16 urns and terra cotta vessels from the Classic and Hellenic periods, ADN said Monday.

ADN gave few details about discovery, saying only that an expert on Egyptian art "by chance" uncovered the relics in a trunk kept by a family in the town of Neugattersleben, near Halle.

Eight people killed in plane crash

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A commuter aircraft with nine people on board crashed and burst into flames while making an instrument approach in bad weather, leaving eight people dead and one missing, authorities say.

The twin-engine Beechcraft Queen Air went down at 8:20 p.m. (12:20 a.m. EST) Monday about one mile east of Soldatna International Airport, according to Paul Steucke, Federal Aviation Administration public affairs officer for Alaska.

The plane carried seven passengers and two crew members, according to James Michelangelo, Alaska director of the National Transportation Safety Board. The bodies of eight people were found and another was missing and presumed to be inside the wreckage, he said.

"One they can't find," Michelangelo said. "They think he's under the aircraft."

Alaska State Troopers said a search party on foot reached the crash site, about 60 miles southwest of Anchorage on the Kenai Peninsula, at 10 p.m. A doctor at the scene pronounced eight people dead.

"The aircraft was destroyed. All aboard suffered fatal injuries," Michelangelo said.

Temperatures in the area were hovering around 30 degrees, he said.

Weather conditions near the airport were described as poor with freezing rain, Steucke said.

The plane was owned and operated by North Pacific Airlines of Anchorage. Owner Roy Musgrove said he was unable to comment on the accident when reached by telephone.

State can't afford cut-rate tuition

When a high school graduate goes shopping for a college education, he often finds the best bargain in Texas.

Not too many years ago, a student from the heavily industrialized Northeast could give up his harsh winters for the sunny clime of Texas — and usually get a deal on his college education at the same time. It was cheaper for a Pennsylvania resident, for example, to come to Texas and pay out-of-state tuition than it was to stay home and pay in-state tuition.

The same was true for foreigners. Students from the Middle East flocked to Texas campuses because the cost of education here was ridiculously low compared to other states.

The Texas Legislature has tightened the out-of-state tuition loopholes, raising fees so that snowbird students are encouraged to stay home for their higher education. But the example serves to illustrate the bargain that public higher education traditionally has been, and remains, for Texas residents. The $4 per semester hour cost (less than $50 for fulltime students) is the lowest in the nation.

The state is facing a $1 billion shortfall between the revenue it expects to take in during the 1986-87 budget years and the amount agencies currently spend. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has proposed raising undergraduate resident tuition to $8 per hour in 1986 and to $12 per hour by 1987.

Tuition for other students — including those who still might be inclined to trek here from Pennsylvania — also would be increased, and the hikes would raise about $120 million more for higher education, lawmakers say. There is no question but that Texas tuition rates are negligible, a token of the cost of education. Associated student fees and book costs easily outstrip the tuition costs.

There's nothing wrong with keeping tuition low, as long as the state can afford it. Cheap tuition encourages larger enrollment at public institutions — fattened by out-of-state residents and parttime students taking leisurely coursework. But the state can no longer afford the luxury.

Doubling tuition to $100 per semester will work no hardship on a student who wants a college education.

The real tragedy of clinic bombings

I dropped in on a "Right to Bomb" anti-abortion meeting the other night.

The speaker was holding several sticks of dynamite as he addressed his small but fervent audience.

He said, "Now the purpose in blowing up abortion clinics is to show the country we're serious about saving unborn lives."

There was loud applause.

"Everyone talks about anti-abortion, but nobody does anything about it. The 'Right to Bomb' movement believes that marching and silent vigils are a waste of time, and the only way people will listen is if we make a loud explosion."

The audience laughed.

"Bombing abortion clinics is just another way of saying that we revere human life. We want to make our blasts so loud that every congressman and Supreme Court justice will hear them and know the 'Right to Bomb' people means business."

Loud applause.

"Blowing up bricks and mortar is nothing compared to killing millions of babies," the speaker said. "But if we don't prove the end justifies the means, we have no right to call ourselves pro-lifers."

The speaker continued, "The most important thing in blowing up an abortion clinic is making sure that your bomb works. Every time you set off a dud, you give aid and comfort to the criminals. Now are there any questions so far?"

A teen-ager got up. "I never made a bomb before. How do you do it?"

"After the formal meeting we will break up in study groups and our instructors will show you. It's quite simple once you get the hang of it."

A man raised his hand. "Suppose an innocent person gets killed when the bomb goes off?"

The audience booed the question.

The speaker smiled. "Naturally we hope no one gets hurt, but we have to expect some casualties when we're doing the Lord's work."

"Amen," we all said.

The next question from the floor was, "When we build our bombs where do we place them?"

"Before you leave tonight we will give you a list of the abortion clinics in the neighborhood, and you can choose the one most convenient to your home."

"Suppose two of us want to blow up the same clinic?"

"All the better. Two bombs are better than one."

More laughter.

"If we get caught will the 'Right to Bomb' movement provide legal services?"

"We certainly will. Our lawyers are on 24-hour standby and ready to plead each and every one of you 'not guilty,' no matter what the charge might be. But our goal is to get a law passed legalizing all abortion clinic bombings. If we can't get it through Congress we'll work for a constitutional amendment."

The audience got on its feet and broke into song. "All we are saying is give bombs a chance."

The speaker raised his hand to quiet the crowd and said, "Let us pray for life."

We all bowed our heads.

After the prayer the groups went to their assigned bomb instructors to learn about explosives, fuses and timing devices.

As I left to get my coat a man said to me, "What did you think of the meeting?"

All I could reply was, "Dynamite."

Whodunit?. . . Who cares?

WASHINGTON — The Senate Ethics Committee has sprinkled holy water on a new form of the old Washington game of influence buying — making payments to a politician's spouse.

This is the only interpretation I can make of the committee's decision giving Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., a clean bill of ethical health in the case involving payment of $55,000 to his wife, Antoinette, by a Greek promoter for whom the senator opened doors in official Washington. The Greek, an arms dealer with a certifiably unsavory background, got Hatfield to introduce him to administration officials who might be useful in promoting a bizarre scheme for a trans-Arrican oil pipeline.

According to reliable witnesses interviewed by my associate Corky Johnson, the Greek businessman, Basil Tsakos, boasted of having Sen. Hatfield in his pocket. But even this affront to the storied dignity of the Senate failed to impress the Ethics Committee. It concluded there was "no credible information" that Hatfield had been guilty of any wrongdoing.

To his credit, Hatfield was tougher on himself than the Ethics Committee was. In the midst of a re-election campaign last summer when my stories broke, Hatfield acknowledged that the payments to his wife might look a little fishy, and the Hatfields gave the $55,000 to charity. This was more than enough for the voters of Oregon, who re-elected him by a solid margin.

I believe that the senator was not consciously guilty of any wrongdoing. An honest man is often unaware of the interpretation that will be given to unwitting actions that a crook would have taken care to hide.

But I also think Sen. Hatfield was either naive or careless, or both, when he failed to see any connection between his support of Tsakos' pipeline scheme and the overly generous payments the Greek made to Mrs. Hatfield for some rather vague real estate and interior decorating services.

A reprimand by the Ethics Committee would at least have served notice on other members of the Senate — perhaps less upright than Hatfield — that such conflicts of interest between their personal and public lives are unacceptable.

As things stand now, though, any promoter who comes to Washington will feel free to offer payments to any senator who can help him — as long as he takes the precaution of laundering the cash through the senator's wife, or child, or other relative.

Perhaps the most disturbing feature of the Hatfield-Tsakos case is that the Ethics Committee apparently never intended to conduct a serious investigation of the deadly serious charges against the senator. The investigation was carried out with a big bucket of whitewash.

"I don't see anything to investigate," committee Chairman Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, told reporters after I broke the scandal. Only after several former Tsakos employees filed formal complaints did the "Ethics Club" begin an inquiry. But with the chairman's opinion already on the record, it's hardly surprising that the investigtion was a charade.

I had already reported — and documented — serious allegations against Tsakos, most particularly that he was an international arms dealer with an unsavory record. I also reported solid eyewitness evidence that Mrs. Hatfield's alleged business services to Tsakos were of a kind that ordinarily doesn't call for such generous remuneration.

Long before the Ethics Committee announced its judgment, I offered to supply the committee with the evidence I had amassed on Tsakos. Stevens replied that he would review the material, but made it clear that the investigation was already competed. As for the compensation to Mrs. Hatfield, Stevens said it was "a judgment call" whether she really earned the money Tsakos paid her.

Stevens insisted tht his staff investigators were "professionals." But if they're really pros, they made some surprising errors and oversights. For example:

- Several witnesses complained that the committee staff was antagonistic, sarcastic and belligerent toward them.
- The staff failed to check charges tht Tsakos had bragged of having "bought" Hatfield.
- The apartment building caretaker, who said Mrs. Hatfield was never there during the redecoration of Tsakos' apartment, was never interviewed. Neither was the decorator.
- Witnesses who supported Mrs. Hatfield's claim of giving remodeling advice, gave only lukewarm confirmation of her work to my reporter. One Hatfield friend said Mrs. Hatfield's advice to the Greek was similar to that offered by several of his non-paid friends.
- The committee staff took a junket to Greece, but failed to get any of the documented evidence on Tsakos' past dealings, which were contained in Greek government files. I was able to obtain this information with no trouble.
- The committee never answered the crucial question: Why did Hatfield ignore warnings that he was dealing with a man of questionable background?

Family feuds over weather

By CAROL BALDWIN

The "Siberian Express" convinced me that February is a month I'd rather forget.

I like the name weathermen gave the frigid cold front which just moved through our area, dropping our temperatures to unspeakable lows and freezing the water pipes at my house. The weather outside was surely more like that found in Siberia than the rather decent winter weather usually found in West Texas.

In all fairness, winter is very short in this part of the nation. I try to remind myself of that every February.

I'm not a winter person. My husband grew up in the East, went to college in Washington D.C. and has spent most of his life in colder climes. He's happiest when it's snowing and the temperature's freezing. I'm happiest when the mercury approaches 100 degrees and there's not a cloud in the sky.

What happens, though, is that I want to turn the heater up to illegal highs and my husband wants it down within economically sound levels. In the summer, he wants the air conditioning to keep the house at record low temperatures. I like to turn it off at every chance.

Needless to say we battle over the thermostat. I've been known to stand guard over it on particularly cold days when the living room couch feels as warm as a park bench in December during the middle of the night.

But a record high gas bill, to go with the record low temperatures, convinced me my husband was right. Down goes the thermostat and up go my hopes for a quick end to winter.

February is memorable for two reasons: Valentine's Day and the annual weather forecast of Punxsutawney Phil, the groundhog who thinks he's a weatherman.

This year Phil let us warm-weather lovers down. He's forecasting another six weeks of winter. I don't understand the custom. Legend has it that if Phil sees his shadow, then winter will hang around for six more weeks. The National Weather Service seems to agree, because their long range forecast calls for colder than normal temperatures and more snow.

But I understand Phil lives in a heated burrow inside a Pennsylvania zoo. What does he know? Surely a groundhog's opinion doesn't count for much here in West Texas. I, for one, hope not.

Playing hardball in a man's world

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jeane J. Kirkpatrick said it elegantly. John Riggins gave it the bruising touch of a fullback.

"Loosen up, Sandy, baby," was the football player's advice to Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

Only a few hours earlier, Mrs. Kirkpatrick left a meeting with President Reagan and told reporters she was returning to private life. After four years as ambassador to the United Nations, her dream of being secretary of state or national security adviser had ended.

Later, she would describe her experience in the upper reaches of the Reagan administration this way: "I was a woman in a man's world."

From start to finish, last week brimmed with proof of how much the capital, its government and its politics remain "a man's world." And in some cases, the men came out looking the worse for it.

The Riggins-O'Connor incident was the lightest of the week. The Washington Redskins star made his remark to the justice in the midst of an evening of eating and drinking at a formal dinner. Moments later, he stretched out on the floor and slept through a speech by Vice President George Bush.

'I was a woman in a man's world.'

Jeane Kilpatrick, former UN ambassador.

The world can only guess whether Riggins, under the same circumstances, would have advised, say, Chief Justice Warren Burger, to "loosen up, Warren, baby."

Or take the case at the beginning of the week when Democratic Party chairman Charles T. Manatt commented about the country's readiness for a woman presidential candidate.

Manatt was in his last few days as chairman of the party that nominated Geraldine Ferraro for vice president in 1984.

What about that race, he was asked. Did it create some resistance to a woman on the national ticket?

"Yeah," replied Manatt "I think it has created some resistance."

The point the chairman seemed to be trying to make was that his party needed to exert more effort toward getting women elected governors, mayors, and senators to put them in a better position to run for national office.

"I think that has to go forward first before we would really have the laboratory equipped well enough to know if one necessarily would run well for president," said Manatt.

But in the man's world of national politics, the emphasis was on the assumption that the country just isn't ready to accept a woman as president.

Or maybe even as chairman of the Democratic Party.

When the Democrats got together on Friday to elect a successor to Manatt, the field of candidates included three men and a woman, Nancy Pelosi, a former California Democratic Party chairman from San Francisco.

For a couple of months, Ms. Pelosi had campaigned intensively, traveling around the country seeking the support of party leaders. She got a lot of backing despite some heavy-handed opposition from the AFL-CIO, whose political director referred to her as an "airhead."

But shortly before the vote, Ms. Pelosi threw her support to former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina in a futile attempt to block the election of Paul G. Kirk Jr.

"It was clear to me many of you did not t[illegible]k the right message would go out if a w[illegible]man was elected chairman of this party," sh[illegible] told the Democratic National Committee.

"[illegible]s it possible that the party that made history by nominating Ms. Ferraro for vice president, wasn't ready to have a woman as its chairman?

But maybe too much is made of sexism. Did not Mrs. Kirkpatrick also have to admit that she was "a Democrat in a Republican administration ... an intellectual in a world of bureaucrats. I talked differently."

Tip for a mobile society

Moving for work can create savings

by ROBERT METZ
Fifth of a series

We are a highly mobile people and the government knows moving costs money. So if you moved in 1984 because you were transferred by your employer, found a new job in another community, or are self-employed and moved for business-related reasons, you may have a valuable moving-expense adjustment.

Adjustments to income, such as the one for moving expenses, are subtracted from your total income and so reduce the amount of your income that is taxed.

There are two important qualifiers to the moving-expense adjustment: distance and time.

The distance between your new job and your old residence must be at least 35 miles greater than the distance between your old job and your old residence. So if your old job was 10 miles from your home, your new place of employment must be at least 45 miles from your old home before you can claim a moving-expense adjustment.

The time requirement varies according to your employment status. If you are an employee, you must be employed full time for at least 39 weeks during the 12 months immediately following the move. If you are self-employed, the time period is doubled. You must have been employed for at least 78 weeks in the two years immediately following the move, with at least 39 of those weeks occurring within the first 12 months.

You may deduct your moving expenses if the time test has not been met by the date your 1984 return is due if you expect to meet the time test for an employee by the end of 1985, or the test for the self-employed by the end of 1986.

If for some reason you fail to meet the time test by the appropriate deadline, you must report the amount of your moving-expense deduction as income for the year in which you did not meet the test.

Under extenuating circumstances, the time test can be waived. These include:

- You lost your job, and it was not due to willful misconduct.
- You moved again in a transfer for your employer's benefit.
- Disability or death.

There would be no waiver if you reached mandatory retirement age before the end of the 39 weeks and your retirement had been anticipated.

If the distance and time requirements are met, you use form 3903, Moving Expense Adjustment, to report your various expenses.

Here are the expenses you may claim:

Line 1 — The cost of moving household goods for you and your family. In addition to the actual hauling charge, this includes packing and crating, intransit insurance and storage.

Line 2 — Travel expenses for you and your family from the old location to the new one. This includes meals, lodging and transportation. If you traveled by plane, train or bus, claim actual fares. If you traveled in your own car, you can claim transportaion expenses by totaling all out-of-pocket expenses for gasoline, oil, repairs, parking and tolls; or by claiming 9 cents a mile for each mile driven. If you use the mileage method, you may also charge the actual cost for parking and turnpike tolls.

The expenses entered on Lines 1 and 2 are called direct expenses and are fully deductible. Other moving costs, which are called indirect expenses, are deductible up to a total of $3,000. Of this amount, no more than $1,500 may be claimed for expenses incurred on pre-move house-hunting trips (line 3) and temporary living expenses (line 4).

Line 3 — The cost of pre-move house-hunting trips — made after you obtain your new job, but before you move. Such costs include transportation, meals and lodging for you and members of your family. You need not all travel together, or even at the same time, but only one trip for each person qualifies. And you may deduct the cost of house hunting even if you didn't find a new residence.

Line 4 — The cost of temporary quarters. This is solely for meals and lodging for any period of 30 consecutive days after obtaining work.

Lines 7 and 8 — The costs incurred in selling your old residence and buying a new one. If you rent, you may claim the cost of settling your old lease and obtaining a new one. Typical home-sale costs include the real estate broker's commission, closing costs, attorney fees, points charges on a mortgage if they are not deductible as interest, and your share of the escrow fees. Any loss incurred in the sale of the home is not deductible.

The home-owning taxpayer has an option in determining how the selling expenses on his home can be charged. They can reduce the gain, if any, on the sale of the first residence. The purchase expenses can be added to the purchase price to increase the cost basis of the new home. While the same dollars cannot be used twice, the taxpayer can apportion to his greatest advantage.

For example, because there is a $3,000 limit, it's possible that some expenses incurred in selling the home can't be claimed as moving expenses. Include expenses up to the maximum allowed as a moving expense and use the remainder, if any, to reduce the gain on the home sale.

Robert Metz is managing editor of Financial News Network and a syndicated columnist. He was assisted in the preparation of this series by Sidney Kess, tax partner with the accbunting firm of KMG Main Hurdman.

Dr. Donohue

Tumor may initiate lactation

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have not nursed a baby in three years, yet I have had breast milk continuously since then. And my breasts are tender at times. I am not pregnant, and in fact had a tubal ligation after my last child. Is this breast-milk production something to have a doctor check out? Or is there nothing to worry about? — R.P.

It's something to have your doctor investigate. There are several possibilities he'll want to check out.

Galactorrhea is breast milk production for more than one year after delivery or after cessation of breast feeding. Sometimes there's no reason for it, or it may be caused by your clothes irritating your nipples.

But let me run down a couple of other causes. The one we think of prominently is a small tumor of the pituitary gland. That is where the hormone that triggers lactation, prolactin, is made. The tumor is benign, but it causes overproduction of the hormone and the inappropriate milk secretion.

Now sometimes other symptoms appear with the lactation. Some women may have lessening of their periods. Depending on the findings, treatment, if needed, varies. But you definitely should be seen. In addition to the pituitary-prolactin problem, the thyroid gland can be involved. And kidney ailments sometimes cause constant milk production. As you can see, there are no shortage of avenues to pursue.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have gout and I know from my reading that high levels of uric acid in the body cause this. Does my body just make too much of the acid or do I get too much of it in my food? — D.H.L.

I don't think either is true. In fact, nine out of 10 gout patients are that way because the kidney is not getting rid of the acid with efficiency, and that causes the high levels to stay in the body as a precursor of gout. Only one person in 10 is an overproducer.

As I have mentioned on other occasions, diet really has little to do with the uric acid level. That doesn't mean a person with gout can ignore his doctor's dietary proscriptions — staying away from organ meats and gravies, etc. But diet is not the cornerstone of therapy it was in the days before we had medicines to help the kidneys get rid of the uric acid better or stop production of it by the body. You may want to read "Gout: The Modern Way to Stop It." It is available by writing me care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for printing and handling.

Dear Abby

Divorcee says widows are lucky

DEAR ABBY: Lately your column has been filled with letters from "poor widows" who are having a hard time coping. I, for one, am tired of these whining widows who don't know how lucky they are. They cry that they are alone, but they don't know what "alone" really is. I would rather have my husband dead than know that he left me for a cocktail waitress. That is alone!

Widows don't have to live with the pain of rejection. Widows don't have to lie in their beds alone at night, knowing that their perfectly healthy ex-husband is sleeping with another woman. A widow gets sympathy and invitations from old friends who knew her when she had a husband. Divorcees are avoided like they have leprosy.

A widow has a better chance of remarrying because no man wants a woman who has been publicly dumped. (He also knows that a widow has the whole pie — financially — while a divorcee has just a piece of the pie.)

Widows have no reason to cry about being alone. I see ads for tours and clubs for widows and widowers, but I've never heard of a club for 60-year-old rejects; have you?

I know there's no answer to this, but I feel better just getting it out of my system. Sign me...

SEATTLE DIVORCEE, OR I'D RATHER BE A WIDOW

DEAR RATHER: I know you're hurting, but don't measure every divorce by your own yardstick. Not all divorcees are "rejects" — some divorcees have dumped their husbands.

And yes, I've heard of tour groups and clubs for "singles" of all ages without regard to why they are single.

A word of unsolicited advice: If you don't want to be alone forever, lighten up and get rid of all that anger and bitterness. Group therapy could help you. Please give it a try, and good luck.

DEAR ABBY: While traveling in Europe last summer, I met a girl from New York, and we hit it off so well that we traveled around together for a week.

When she told me her age, I didn't want to scare her away by telling her mine, so I lied about my age to make up the difference. (She's five years older than I am.).

She's planning to visit me in Minnesota soon. Even though it will be embarrassing to tell her the truth regardless of when I tell her, I wonder if I should tell her before she comes to visit me. Or should I wait until she gets here? I'd hate to loose her.

MINNESOTA SWEDE

DEAR SWEDE: Tell her before she makes the trip. If you were sufficiently mature to have passed yourself off as five years older, I doubt that you'll lose her.

Sanctuary movement workers stand trial

Demonstrators carrying flags and signs march in front of the federal courthouse in Brownsville Monday. The group of about 15 want to show their support for the U.S. Border Patrol and their feelings about the Sanctuary Movement.

Two indicted on smuggling charges

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that two sanctuary movement workers charged with transporting Salvadoran aliens must stand trial.

Jack Elder, 41, and Stacey Lynn Merket, 30, were indicted in December on charges of conspiring to smuggle, then smuggling and transporting at least two Salvadorans into the United States.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela on Monday denied several motions to dismiss the case, paving the way for jury selection to begin today.

Vela rejected defense contentions that the pair was being selectively prosecuted, that they were abiding by their religious beliefs and that it is common practice to transport illegal aliens throughout the Rio Grande Valley without fear of arrest or prosecution.

Earlier the judge twice refused to remove from the case and declined to suppress testimony from the Salavdorans that the defense said had been obtained illegally.

Defense attorneys Steve Cooper and Lisa Brodyaga called four witnesses to the stand Monday as part of their motions for change of venue.

Vela said he would not rule on that motion until today if, during jury selection, an impartial jury cannot be seated.

Santuary movement leaders claim that the Central Americans are refugees from their war-torn homelands entitled to political refuge here. The government has contended that the aliens enter the United States illegally for economic, not political, reasons.

Elder is the director of Casa Oscar Romero, a shelter for Centeral Americans in San Benito. Ms. Merkt is a volunteer at the Roman Catholic Church-sponsored shelter.

On Monday, the second day of pretrial hearings, a group called Concerned Citizens for Church and Country carried placards and U.S. flags and marched outside the federal courthouse.

Mike Rodriguez, the organization's president, said the anti-sanctuary protest was not directed against Elder and Ms. Merkt personally.

"But they are no different from commercial operators — they're breaking the law," he said.

Ms. Merkt is on two years' probation on a conviction last May on similar charges before the same federal judge. Elder was acquitted last month on simiar charges in Corpus Christi federal court after a jury agreed with defense attorneys that giving three Salvadorans a ride to a bus station did not significantly further their efforts to enter the interior of the country.

In seeking a change of venue, Cooper argued that this and previous cases have received so much publicity that area residents have strong feelings one way or another.

Vela, partially agreeing with U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. of Corpus Christi, ruled on the defense motion that the pair may indeed be acting on religious beliefs, but that the government still has an overriding need to prosecute.

Vela, in sentencing Ms. Merkt last year, told her if she ever appeared before him again, he would jail her.

Agent held for smuggling aliens

EL PASO (AP) — A federal magistrate set bond today at $20,000 for a nine-year veteran of the U.S. Border Patrol charged with conspiring to smuggle illegal aliens, despite a prosecutor's contentions that the agent poses a risk to witnesses in the case.

Joe Navarrette, however, only will have to post 10 percent or $2,000 of the bail, U.S. Magistrate Philip Cole said in setting the bond.

At a detention hearing Monday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ricardo Gonzalez asked Cole to deny bond for Navarrette, saying the release of the 38-year-old agent would have a "chilling effect" on people who have said they would testify against him.

Navarrette was arrested Friday while on duty at the El Paso International Airport and was charged with conspiring to harbor, conceal and transport three illegal aliens from Colombia.

Murchison-owned corporation seeks bankruptcy protection

DALLAS (AP) — Bankruptcy protection has been sought by a corporation controlled and owned by Clint W. Murchison Jr., former owner of the Dallas Cowboys and named in 1984 by Forbes magazine as one of the nation's richest men, a Murchison lawyer says.

The filing for bankruptcy protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act Monday came only hours after about the land surrounding Murchison's Dallas mansion was deeded to Klimanorm Corp., the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

Murchison attorney Phillip Palmer said the action may be the first step in a voluntary liquidation of much of Murchison's empire to satisfy creditors.

Palmer told the Dallas Times Herald the action was taken to prevent a dissident creditor from foreclosing on the property and disrupting an out-of-court arrangement Murchison is trying to reach with his other creditors.

If the plan proceeds as Murchison interests believe it will, Palmer said, Murchison would be left with several operating companies. The value of the companies remaining would not qualify Murchison "for the Fortune 500, but probably (would) leave him a millionaire many times over," Palmer said.

Estimates that Murchison's creditors number around 30 and his total debt exceeds $175 million are "in the ballpark," Palmer said.

Forbes Magazine in 1984 listed Murchison as one of the nation's richest men and estimated his worth at $250 million, down from $350 million the previous year.

Murchison was sued last year for more than $100 million by creditors hwo claimed he defaulted on loans in connection with real estate and business ventures around the country.

Murchison, who sufferes from a degenerative physical condition, sold the Dallas Cowboys National Football League team and the rights to Texas Stadium last year.

A hearing has been scheduled in state district court here Thursday on whether creditors can force the public auction of the Murchison estate to recoup their debts.

Although the Murchisqn corporation filed for bankruptcy, his creditors still could seek a judgement of involuntary bankruptcy against Murchison. If that happened, his assets would be frozen and a court eventually could determine how his debts would be met.

Palmer said Klimanorm was formed in September for another his clients, but it had not been used. When Palmer was unable to file the corporate name Forest Equities with the secretary of state in time for a bankruptcy filing on Monday, Palmer said, he used the Klimanorm entity instead.

A meeting at Murchison's home last Friday between Murchison and the creditors had yielded encouraging results, Palmer said. He said it had increased the possibility that Murchison would be allowed to reorganize unoffically with the cooperation of the creditors.

"Going out to that meeting Friday morning, I thought there was a 90 percent chance Clint would be flipped into involuntary bankruptcy today (Monday)," Palmer said. "When I left the meeting, I thought there was a 40 percent chance. Now we've gone another day without a filing."

Palmer said creditor cooperation is bieng won because Murchison has offered to liquidate virtually all his assets "in an orderly fashion and invited them to work with us."

The filing of the bankruptcy action Monday was not an attempt to shelter the land, but was taken in view of a threat to the orderly liquidation, Palmer said.

"What we're going to do is proceed to sell the real estate, although in an orderly fashion," he said.

In the papers filed Monday, Palmer said "the attorney for the corporation ... has been unsuccessful in obtaining an adequate assurance from one of the three creditors threatening to foreclose upon the 25.119 acres acquired by the corporation, and that some means would be required to halt the foreclosure or suffer loss of title."

The Dallas Times Herald identified the creditor as Surety Savings of El Paso, one of 16 creditors who have filed abstracts of judgement against Murchison. An abstract of judgement, obtained when a debt is confirmed by a court, automatically puts a lien against any unattached real estate held by the debtor, in this case the Murchison mansion acreage on Forest Lane.

The 16 creditors have claims against Murchison amounting to more than $53 million.

As a result of the action taken Monday, neither an unfavorable state court action nor an involuntary bankruptcy filing by creditors would affect the acreage surrounding Murchison's home, at least until a decision is made on the Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition.

Under Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings, creditors are temporarily enjoined from taking action against protected assets. If the bankruptcy court grants the Chapter 11 petition, the petitioner typically has four months to file a reorganization plan.

HC cruises to wins over Frank Phillips

Aggressive Hawks too rugged for Plainsmen

By STEVE BELVIN
Staff Writer

Howard College coach Ed Sparling issued an ultimatum Monday night.

Before the Hawks' clash with Frank Phillips, Sparling wrote his team a short message on the chalkboard in big, bold letters.

His words were simple, yet strong. "Be Aggressive." The Hawks followed it to a T as they trouced the Plainsmen 85-64 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play.

Howard used a air-tight halfcourt man-to-man defense, hot shooting from freshman guards Bruce Kimble and Joe Burney and the strong board play of Bernard Bell, Martin Jenkins and Walt Reynolds to gain their 10th win in 21 games. The loss was revenge for the 84-71 licking suffered by Howard in an earlier game.

The Hawks defense was tencious, pestering the Plainmen all over the court. Even when South Plains got "easy shots," they missed most of them because they got accustomed to rushing their attempts.

Bell, Jenkins, Reynolds and Kimble pounded the boards throughout the contest, leading Howard to a huge 46-32 rebounding edge. Time and time again Howard would get more than one chance at the offensive end.

Kimble put in a hard night's work with his team-leading 22 points and 10 rebounds. The 6-3 Savannah, Goorgia product connected on 10 of 19 shots from the field while applying constant pressure to FP ballhandlers.

Jenkins snapped out of a three-game slump by hauling down nine rebounds and scoring 18 points with a 6-12 shooting performance. Reynolds added 8 points and rebounds each while Bell pulled down six rebounds and contributed 11 points.

Joe Burney, another one of HC' s talented guards, also played a consistent game. His performace was so smooth it could almost have gone unnoticed. The 6-1 freshman sunk 6-7 field goals while scoring 15 points.

Guards Michael Porter and newly-eligible Al Willis also did a bang-up on defense. Although suffering a miserable shooting night (5-16), Porter registered four steals and caused numerous turnovers. Willis, a 5-11 freshman from Detroit, collected two steals in his first game as a Hawk. He also opened up the Plainsman defense with his darting drives to the basket.

Sparling was especially pleased with his team's performance. "We were aggressive out there tonight," echoed Sparling. "Our inside people got very aggressive on the glass, that's what it takes to win."

"Our defense was good and were patient on offense. We played well during one stretch and then we got impatient and they pulled to within eight. I called time out, told them to be patient and that's just what they did."

Sparling said the arrival of Willis

Queens catch fire in 76-44 slaughter

By STEVE BELVIN
Staff Writer

It took the Howard College Hawk-Queens a while to get started last night in their Western Junior College Athletic Conference battle with the Frank Phillips Lady Plainsmen. But once they did, they romped to a 76-44 victory over the vistors from Borger.

For the first eight minutes of the game the Queens struggled desperately with the winless Lady Plainsmen. Their offense sputtered, thanks to careless turnovers. Defensively they allowed their opponenet easy baskets underneath.

Through all their sloppy play and early game mistakes, the game was tied 15-15 at the 8:25 mark.

Frank Phillips took a early 10-3 lead behind four baskets by forward Lynette Gilbreath, who burned the Queens 1-3-1 zone inside. Howard pulled close as guard Molly Early scored from the corner and on a drive. Lorri French added a three-point- play to tie the contest at 15-all.

That's when the Queens awaked out of their slumber and went to work.

Freshman guard Stacy Eitner got the ball rolling with a three-point play of her own. Alex Provencio then popped a 17-footer and Early followed with a bomb from the top of the key.

The Queens weren't through. Early collected one of her five steals, put a smooth hesitation move on a defender and turned it into a easy layup. She then got her third basket of the spurt and followed it with another steal. She headed downcourt, dished off the assist to Provencio for another easy bucket.

When all the smoke had cleared from the Queens fiery awakening. They had outscored their opponents 15-2 in a five-minute span.

The Queens went on to take a commanding 37-19 halftime lead.

Early scored 11 of her team-high 21 points in the half. She connected on 9-21 shots from the floor. French scored eight points in the half, six on free throws. She finished the night with 11 points while recording a career-high 14 rebounds.

Howard started off with a bang in the second half thanks to baskets by Tammy Winnsman and Provencio and French's second-three-point play of the game. Winnsman and Provencio were the big guns for the Queens in the second half. Provencio hit 4-7 shots in the half and ended the game with 15 points. Winsmann hit her first three shots of the half and finished 6-11 from the field. The 14 points she put in was a season-high for the freshman from Woodlands.

The Howard brigade raged on as the score was 50-27 at the midway point of the half. From then on Howard coach Don Stevens substituted freely with his eight-man squad.

The game turned out to be a defensive gem for the Queens. The 44 points were the lowest they've held an opponent this season.

Rebels hold off furious last quarter Lady Steers rally

By LUIS RIOS
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Lady Steers' tenacious press defense against Midland Lee Friday night wasn't enough as the running Rebels pulled out a 74-61 District 4-5A victory.

Big Spring's Monique Jones who had the hot hand, gunned in 27 points in a game which wasn't decided until the final two minutes. The Lady Steers' junior also had 11 rebounds which kept Big Spring in the game.

The Lady Steers fought back from a 22-9 first-quarter defict to close the gap to 56-55 late in the fourth quarter. The defensive play of Trel Clemons, Tab Green, Dawn Sampley, Jones and Sheri Myrick hurried the quicker and faster Rebel team in the late going causing turnovers and missed shots.

However, Midland Lee also capitalized on Big Spring turnovers and miscues to pull the game out with two minutes left to play. The Lady Steers had 37 turnovers compared to Midland Lee's 16.

The fast-paced contest was a physical battle from the opening tip off as both teams combined for 52 fouls in the game. Midland Lee's Lavett Wallace left the game early with an injury but returned in the second half. Big Spring's Teresa Pruitt was hit with a technical and ejected from the game in the third quarter.

The Rebels' run-and-gun style helped Midland Lee to a commanding 22-9 first-quarter lead before Big Spring could get its press defense set up.

The Lady Steers utilizing a ferocious ¾ and ½-court press closed the gap to 38-28 by halftime. Green hit on a crucial field goal to close the gap to 56-55 with over four minutes left in the game. But the Rebels picked up the pace of its fastbreak to take a 65-61 lead with 2:10 left. The Midland Lee efense went on to shut down Big Spring for the remainder of the game.

Leading the Rebels' run in the first half were Diane White with six points, Becky White with seven and Denise Hatch with six.

Becky White led all Midland Lee scorers with 20 points and Diane White had 15. (Becky) White also hauled down nine rebounds to lead Midland Lee.

The play of substitutes Green and Sampley led the way for the defense. Green had nine rebounds and numerous defensive plays on the press traps.

Lady Steers Coach Carol Niemeyer said she thought the team played well Tuesday night. Midland Lee had beaten Big Spring by over 40 points in the teams' first meeting.

"They (Lady Steers) wanted it and they wanted to play," said Coach Niemeyer. "We got the ball off defense and not off the boards.

"A lot of the key was when the defense began making the turnovers and we got our fastbreak going. Unfortunately, the defense is coming around so late."

Jones was the only player to hit in double figures for the Lady Steers. Clemons, who fouled out in the second half, had seven points, Lisa Hale eight, Myrick four, Sampley three, Pruitt eight and Green with four.

The loss dropped Big Spring to 3-12 in district play. Midland Lee upped its record to 10-3 in loop play and giving it a chance at a playoff berth. Also vying for a state playoff berth are Midland High, who defeated San Angelo Central 58-34 Tuesday night, and Odessa Permian, who dumped Abilene Cooper 56-34.

The Lady Steers will close out season play this Friday in Odessa when they take on the Odessa High Lady Bronchos at 8.

Wrigley Field in spotlight

CHICAGO (AP) — A letter from aseball Commissioner Peter V. Ueberrroth warning the Chicago Cubs to resolve the controversy over lights in Wrigley Field or face "drastic consequences" has been filed in court.

Ueberroth's letter was among papers filed in Circuit Court on Monday by lawyers for the team's owners, Tribune Co.

"Baseball will have no alternative but to resolve the situation (over lights) on its own" unless the Cubs do, the letter dated Dec. 18 said.

The letter said drastic action might "include the requirement that any Cubs' post-season games be played away from Wrigley Field, perhaps not even in Chicago."

Ueberroth made it clear he was concerned about millions of dollars in lost television revenue from post-season games. He emphasized that his concern was only with post-season games, not with regular-season games.

The letter supports the Cubs' position that Ueberroth "in effect" ordered lights at the ballpark, said William Campbell, an attorney for Tribune Co.

Ueberroth has said he did not order the Cubs to install lights.

The Cubs filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court on Dec. 19, the day after the letter was written, seeking to overturn state and city laws which in effect prohibit night games at Wrigley Field.

Tribune Co. has asked Judge Richard L. Curry to rule the laws are improper.

The judge is expected to consider the matter on March 26, when attorneys for the owners, the state, city and a neighborhood group are to appear in court.

Alan Borlack, an attorney for Citizens United for Baseball in Sunshine (CUBS), said the letter is "carefully drafted . . . designed to help the Cubs (get lights) and not to pin down Peter Ueberroth."

Luzinski offically calls it quits

NEW YORK (AP) — Greg Luzinski will be calling the shots rather than hitting them.

One of baseball's most feared sluggers over the last 15 years, Luzinski said Monday that he was retiring and would become freshman baseball coach at a New Jersey high school.

"The realization was nobody wanted me," Luzinski said in an interview with USA Today.

Luzinski, who became a free agent last November after four seasons with the American League's Chicago White Sox, was selected only by the Pittsburgh Pirates in the free-agent draft.

"The Orioles invited me to spring training with the understanding I make the team," said Luzinski.

Luzinski, who has battled a weight problem since breaking in with the Philadelphia Phillies, would have been forced to reduce to have a chance of remaining in the major leagues.

"There was some concern about his weight," said Baltimore General Manager Hank Peters. "He wasn't in playing shape when we talked. He said his best playing weight was 240 to 250 pounds. Had he accepted our invitation, he would have had time to reach that."

"No team offered him a contract," said Jack Sands, Luzinski's agent. "Because of investments we have made, he will receive $200,000 a year for the rest of his life."

Luzinski said he had been appointed freshman baseball coach of Holy Cross High School at Delran, N.J. He resides at Meford, N.J.

The 34-year-old Luzinski finished with a lifetime batting average of .276, hit 307 home runs and drove in 1,128 runs. Last season, he batted .238 with 13 homers and 58 RBI in the role of designated hitter for the White Sox.

Luzinski hit 19 homers and drove in 56 runs in a half-season in 1980 as the Phils won the NL pennant and defeated the Kansas City Royals in the World Series.

He was traded in the off-season to the White Sox, for whom he hit 84 homers in four years. He drove in 102 runs in 1982 and slugged 32 homers in 1983 as the White Sox advanced to the playoffs.

Detroit victory snaps Buck's winning skein

To win in overtime, a team must first get there, said Detroit center Bill Laimbeer in explaining how a third-period resurgence helped the Pistons snap Milwaukee's 11-game National Basketball Association winning streak.

"We weren't hitting the boards in the first half and that was hurting us on offense," said Laimbeer. "But we started getting more aggressive in the third quarter and that turned the game around for us."

The 113-111 overtime defeat of the Bucks on Monday night brought the Pistons within three games of Milwaukee in the Central Division, which made the game doubly important, according to Laimbeer.

"We could have gone five games down. Instead, it was a two-game swing for us," said Laimbeer, who scored 32 points and grabbed 17 rebounds.

Spurs 114, Warriors 109 ...

San Antonio led 63-47 at halftime and enjoyed a 25-point lead in the third period, but needed an overtime before subduing the slumping Warriors.

George Gervin scored 27 points, including five in the extra period, and Artis Gilmore added 25 as San Antonio handed Golden State its 17th loss in 18 games.

Laimbeer scored the first four points in overtime and, after Milwaukee tied it at 111-111, Laimbeer hit the winning basket with 42 seconds to play.

John Long had 22 points and Terry Tyler 17 for the Pistons. Paul Pressey had 27, Cummings 26 and Sidney Moncrief 26 for Milwaukee.

Cavs 121, Bullets 112 ...

John Bagley scored 35 points, his career high, as Cleveland took charge in the first half against the outmanned Bullets. Bagley hit nine of 10 first-half field goal attempts as the Cavaliers built a 22-point lead in the second quarter and Cleveland didn't allow the Bullets to get closer than eight the rest of the way.

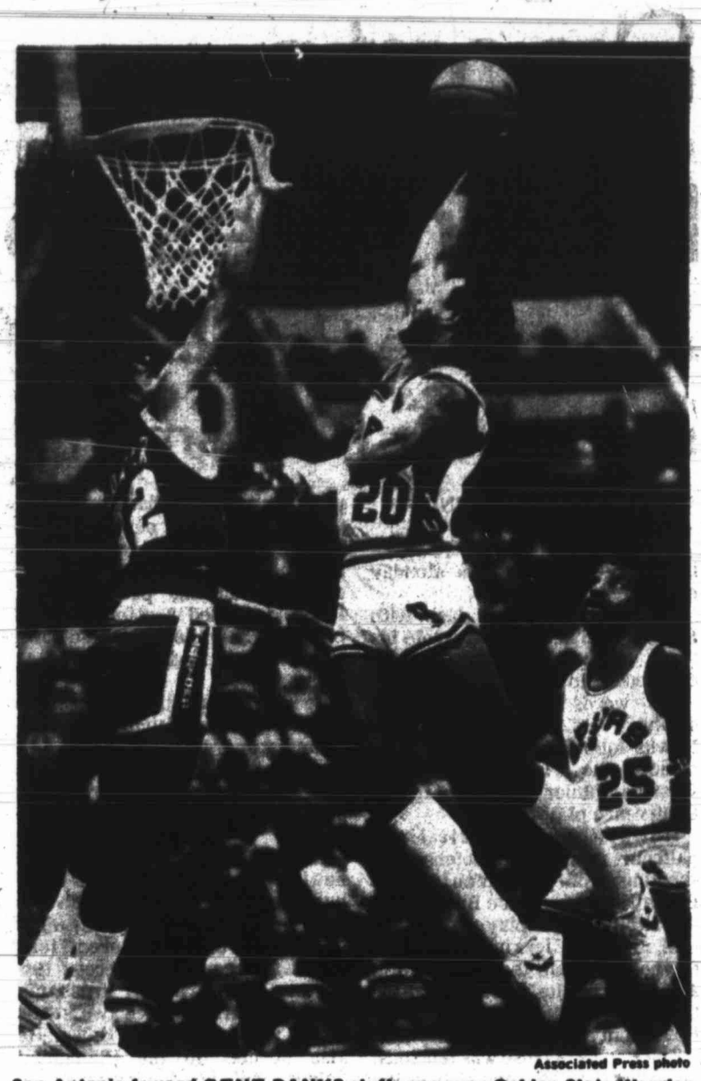

76ers 106, Hawks 92 ...

Julius Erving scored 23 points for Philadelphia to move into fourth place on pro basketball's all-time scoring list. Erving's career total of 27,113 moved him one point ahead of Denver's Dan Issel, who has announced his retirement at the end of the season.

The 76ers scored the first five points of the game and never looked back.

Clippers 115, Pacers 96 ...

Norm Nixon scored 21 points and handed out 10 assists and Derek Smith added 19 to help the Clippers end a seven-game losing streak.The Clippers outscored Indiana 34-19 in the final quarter to break open the game after Indiana had come back from a 17-point deficit late in the first half to tie the game late in the third quarter.

City bank sues family over loan

First National Bank in Big Spring has filed suit against a Big Spring family that borrowed $1,039,051.20 from the bank in 1983.

According to the suit filed in 118th District Court last Thursday, First National says that Mr. and Mrs. R.C. Wegner, still owes the bank a balance of $443,107.35.

First National wishes to recover remaining farm equipment, crops, supplies and products valued at $17,050. The suit says that the Wegners claim the items are not part of a security agreement they established with the bank and have refused permission to let the bank obtain possession of the items.

Stanton entry captures show

Jeff Brandenberger, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Brandenberger of Stanton, also placed second in his breed in the junior heifer competition. Fifty-eight junior Herefords were entered in the heifer contest.

Jeff's entry, V Bar Classy 15302, was an Oct. 4, 1983, daughter of SC Classic ET.

Shauna Richardson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Richardson of Big Spring, won her class in the Hereford steer competition with an 865-pound entry.

In addition, Rene Stewart and Reed Stewart of Sterling City also took honors in the heifer contest. Rene's entry, Tex L1 Adeline 3537, was named senior heifer calf. Reed's entry, H L1 Ms Hawley 308, was named Junior Yearling Heifer.

Stanton ranch takes honors

DENVER, Colo. — One of four head of cattle winning the get-of-sire contest at the 1985 National Western Stock Show came from a Stanton ranch.

The cattle, including one from the V Bar Ranch near Stanton, were bred from the 1984 National Western Stock Show grand champion Hereford Bull, L1 Pacesetter, according to the American Hereford Association.

The V Bar Ranch was represented at the show by Arlan Carter.

Pupil was fit to be tied, said elementary teacher

EL PASO (AP) — A teacher at Glen Cove Elementary School has been reprimanded for tying a 7-year-old pupil to a chair, school officials say.

Principal Richard Gore said Cynthia Goodman, 27, was reprimanded and the pupil was assigned to another classroom.

The teacher told The El Paso Times Monday that she tied the child to the chair last Wednesday and Thursday as a "reminder" to sit up straight. She said she did not tie the girl to be cruel, but the girl's father was furious.

Dwight Jefferson, father of Jardine Jefferson, went to the school Monday for a conference with Gore.

Ms. Goodman said the jump rope was tied around the girl's waist in a "seat belt-type situation."

"There was no hatred. It was not done in cruelty, and not taken (by the children) in cruelty...I twas not that much a disciplinary thing. It was a reminder," she added.

Gore said tying children is not sanctioned by the school, and it was "an unfortunate incident" that will not be repeated.

Jefferson said his daughter pretended to be sick last Friday because she didn't want to go to school.

The child's father said his wife was contacted Sunday by the parents of another child in Jardine's class. That child had told her parents that Goodman had tied Jardine to her chair, Jefferson said.

"I found out from other people instead of from the school," he said. "As far as a little girl being tied in front of everybody, I don't think that's right. I'm awfully upset."

Gore said he didn't have a clear reason why the teacher tied her pupil to the chair.

"It's an unfortunate thing that happened. She (Goodman) didn't stop to think. It shouldn't have happened, but it did," Gore said.

Goodman said Gore had her sign a written account of the incident that will be placed in her file.

"I made a mistake. I should not have done it," she said.

Jefferson described his daughter as "the kind who can't sit still." But he said he should have been contacted by the teacher if she was having problems with Jardine.

The teacher said she had sent four conference notes home to the Jeffersons and has talked with the girl's mother about the problem three times this year.

She said she recently sent home a possible retention form to the Jeffersons, warning that the girl might not be passed on to the third grade this year. She said the little girl was not keeping up with the other children in the class.

City bank sues family over loan

First National Bank in Big Spring has filed suit against a Big Spring family that borrowed $1,039,051.20 from the bank in 1983.

According to the suit filed in 118th District Court last Thursday, First National says that Mr. and Mrs. R.C. Wegner, still owes the bank a balance of $443,107.35.

First National wishes to recover remaining farm equipment, crops, supplies and products valued at $17,050. The suit says that the Wegners claim the items are not part of a security agreement they established with the bank and have refused permission to let the bank obtain possession of the items.

Jeff Brandenberger, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Brandenberger of Stanton, also placed second in his breed in the junior heifer competition. Fifty-eight junior Herefords were entered in the heifer contest.

Jeff's entry, V Bar Classy 15302, was an Oct. 4, 1983, daughter of SC Classic ET.

Shauna Richardson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Richardson of Big Spring, won her class in the Hereford steer competition with an 865-pound entry.

In addition, Rene Stewart and Reed Stewart of Sterling City also took honors in the heifer contest. Rene's entry, Tex L1 Adeline 3537, was named senior heifer calf. Reed's entry, H L1 Ms Hawley 308, was named Junior Yearling Heifer.

Stanton ranch takes honors

DENVER, Colo. — One of four head of cattle winning the get-of-sire contest at the 1985 National Western Stock Show came from a Stanton ranch.

The cattle, including one from the V Bar Ranch near Stanton, were bred from the 1984 National Western Stock Show grand champion Hereford Bull, L1 Pacesetter, according to the American Hereford Association.

The V Bar Ranch was represented at the show by Arlan Carter.

Pupil was fit to be tied, said elementary teacher

EL PASO (AP) — A teacher at Glen Cove Elementary School has been reprimanded for tying a 7-year-old pupil to a chair, school officials say.

Principal Richard Gore said Cynthia Goodman, 27, was reprimanded and the pupil was assigned to another classroom.

The teacher told The El Paso Times Monday that she tied the child to the chair last Wednesday and Thursday as a "reminder" to sit up straight. She said she did not tie the girl to be cruel, but the girl's father was furious.

Dwight Jefferson, father of Jardine Jefferson, went to the school Monday for a conference with Gore.

Ms. Goodman said the jump rope was tied around the girl's waist in a "seat belt-type situation."

"There was no hatred. It was not done in cruelty, and not taken (by the children) in cruelty...I twas not that much a disciplinary thing. It was a reminder," she added.

Gore said tying children is not sanctioned by the school, and it was "an unfortunate incident" that will not be repeated.

Jefferson said his daughter pretended to be sick last Friday because she didn't want to go to school.

The child's father said his wife was contacted Sunday by the parents of another child in Jardine's class. That child had told her parents that Goodman had tied Jardine to her chair, Jefferson said.

"I found out from other people instead of from the school," he said. "As far as a little girl being tied in front of everybody, I don't think that's right. I'm awfully upset."

Gore said he didn't have a clear reason why the teacher tied her pupil to the chair.

"It's an unfortunate thing that happened. She (Goodman) didn't stop to think. It shouldn't have happened, but it did," Gore said.

Goodman said Gore had her sign a written account of the incident that will be placed in her file.

"I made a mistake. I should not have done it," she said.

Jefferson described his daughter as "the kind who can't sit still." But he said he should have been contacted by the teacher if she was having problems with Jardine.

The teacher said she had sent four conference notes home to the Jeffersons and has talked with the girl's mother about the problem three times this year.

She said she recently sent home a possible retention form to the Jeffersons, warning that the girl might not be passed on to the third grade this year. She said the little girl was not keeping up with the other children in the class.

Boy OK after ordeal in freezing weather

Michael Troche overcomes intense cold.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A 2½-year-old boy who froze almost to death after wandering outside his house in 20 below weather wearing only pajamas is back to his playful self, kicking toys and balloons around his room as he makes medical history, doctors say.

"Our son was dead and he is alive," says Judy Troche, the father of Michael Troche.

On Monday, Milwaukee Children's Hospital upgraded Michael's condition from critical to fair.

Michael was found the morning of Jan. 19 after he wandered from his parents' home in the subzero cold. His body temperature was 60 degrees, compared with the normal reading of 98.6, said Dr. Kevin Kelly, associate director of the pediatric intensive care unit at the hospital.

"When he came in, the legs and arms ... felt like blocks of ice, and as you squeezed the tissue, you could feel ice in the blood, as you would crush ice under the skin," Kelly said. He said the blood plasma appeared to have frozen.

At a news conference with the boy's parents Monday, Kelly said there was no known case of an accidental victim of hypothermia surviving a body core temperature that cold.

"Accidental hypothermia has been reported down to 19 degrees Centigrade (66 Fahrenheit), as best we can tell in the world's literature," he said. "No one has any reports less than tha."

Michael faces another three to four weeks in the hospital because of frostbite and skin grafts to his arms and legs, the doctor said.

He said Michael's neurological functions were 100 percent normal. The boy is expected to regain most use of his extremities, although there was an indication of muscle damage to his left hand.

Mrs. Troche had left for her job as a registered nurse before Michael wandered from the home. Her husband, James, was sleeping and their 6-year-old daughter, Chris, was watching television.

Michael may have been outside anywhere from 30 minutes to 3½ hours, Kelly said. His heart stopped.

"When he was brought into the hospital, he had no vital signs," said hospital spokesman Leigh Morris. "If you didn't know better, you would have said he was clinically dead."

Oxygenated blood was forced through Michael's body, he was connected to a heart-lung machine to warm his blood, and drugs were used to prevent swelling of brain tissues.

His arms and legs became swollen with fluid from ice-damaged cells, and cuts were made to allow tissues to expand. Skin grafts were used later to heal the cuts and frostbitten areas.

"Probably one of the happiest moments of my life was when they came and told us his heart was beating again" after about one hour of resuscitation, Mrs. Troche recalled.

It took five hours to warm Michael's body to normal, Kelly said.

Michael gave his first sign of awareness four days later when he nodded his head at the mention of his favorite television show.
