Governor Chides His Foes For Nature Of Campaign Being Conducted Against Him In Early Speeches

"Vital Issue Of Ribbon Cutting" Is Said Something New In Texas Politics; No New Taxes Said Needed

(By The Associated Press)

WAXAHACHIE, June 30.—Weeks behind his stumping opponents, Governor James V. Allred opened his belated campaign for re-election here tonight with a scorching defense of his policies—even to "the vital issue of ribbon cutting."

He chided political foes for the "character of the campaign against me, which would be lamentable if it were not in some respects laughable," and then stood up in serious vein for the old age assistance he fostered.

Brand New Issue

"I don't know but what the people ought to be grateful to my opponents for discovering a brand new issue in Texas politics, an issue so refreshing and so earnestly discussed that it must have afforded a great deal of entertainment for many weary audiences. I refer, of course, to the vital issue of ribbon cutting."

He admitted attending one "ribbon cutting" at a bridge near Wichita Falls and confessed he didn't know what to do, "until I remembered seeing newsreel pictures of the president in a similar position and I reached out and snipped the ribbon."

State Financially Sound

"I am happy to report that Texas is financially and fundamentally sound," said Allred. "It is no only on the way out of the depression, it is already out; and we are going to stay out.

"There is no occasion for the dire predictions of disaster and de-

Tom Hunter Continues Tirade Against Governor; Other Candidates Give Platform Planks In Talks

(By The Associated Press)

BROWNWOOD, June 30.—Tom F. Hunter, candidate for governor, continued his attack on Governor James V. Allred, whom he described as "the ribbon cutting ambassador of Texas," in a speech here.

He charged that the old age pension fund received but $104,000 out of $303,000 collected, while "his 6 men, or 750 electioneers, cost $130,000."

He again challenged the persistent absence of Governor Allred from the executive office and added:

"If the people of Texas, in the Centennial year, wanted a drum major or a show boat pilot, people of Texas got it."

WOULD REDUCE TAXES

SAN ANGELO, June 30. (AP)—Pierce Brooks, candidate for governor, proposed here today to reduce automobile taxes and devote revenue from oil and gasoline taxes exclusively to road work.

He proposed to pay at once, if elected, all pensions due under the old age pension amendment.

AGAINST POLL TAX

COLEMAN, June 30. (AP)—Senator Roy Sanderford, candidate for governor, declared here tonight "no good and worthy citizen should be denied the right to vote because he cannot afford to pay $1.75 for a poll tax."

Hard showers in the southern and southwest portions of Gillespie county brought a total of nine inches of rain since Monday night. Ranches were flooded as creeks went bankfull.

The Fredericksburg and Northern Railway was out near Grapetown, cutting service into Fredericksburg. The Pedernales creek, Barons creek and Grape creek, which had reached flood stages, were reported receding Tuesday night.

Roosevelt, Farley Parley Is Planned

WASHINGTON, June 30. (AP) — President Roosevelt said tonight he would confer with Postmaster General James A. Farley Thursday and indicated they would discuss the question of Farley's resignation from the cabinet.

Asked at his press conference whether Farley would resign to devote his full time to the chairmanship of the national and New York State Democratic committees, Mr. Roosevelt said he would have nothing to say until after the Thursday conference.

Reports long have been current that Farley would retire. However, in Atlantic City last night, he said: "I have not resigned as postmaster general and beyond that I have no comment to make."

Spectacular Scenic Route To Mexico City From Border Is To Be Formally Dedicated At Laredo Today

BY P. D. ELDRED
Associated Press Staff Writer

LAREDO, June 30. — Picturesque old Mexico, on the eve of formally opening her $17,000,000 Pan-American highway, made her bid tonight for closer social and economic relations with the United States.

Hitherto inaccessable to American motorists, Mexico conceives this spectacular scenic route, the first passable automobile road ever built from the American border to Mexico City, as the means of enabling her nothern neighbors to visit and better understand her.

Regards Trade More Important

But even more important to her, Mexico regards the highway as a new industry—destined to bring a flood of American tourist dollars into the southern republic.

Vice President John Nance Garner, Gen. Eduardo Hay, Mexico's secretary of foreign relations and scores of other high American and Mexican officials converged on this border city tonight jointly to dedicate the highway in a ceremony tomorrow on the international bridge spanning the Rio Grande.

Hay Visits Santone

General Hay, President Lazaro Cardenas' righthand man in Mexican administrative affairs, spent part of the day in San Antono and motored back to Laredo by way of Alice for a banquet in his honor. The main San Antonio-Laredo highway was blocked by flood waters near Pearsall.

A train bearing Garner and the American delegation, scheduled to arrive here in time for a banquet tonight, was reported stalled four miles north of Pearsall because of a bridge washout. The train was not

Officers Of Three States On Lookout

Two Half-Starved Fugitives From Retrieve Prison Farm Reported In Oklahoma Area

(By The Associated Press)

MANGUM, Okla., June 30.—Two half-starved fugitive Texas desparadoes were hunted by heavily-armed officers of three states tonight in their mad flight from the Texas prison farm where they killed a guard and escaped 11 days ago.

Seizing 19-year-old Hugh Pogue at Buck Creek, Tex., the fugitives, identified by Sheriff P. D. Anderson of Hollis, Okla., as Luke Trammal and Forrest Gibson, released him unharmed at the Red River then aped into Oklahoma.

Engage In Scuffle

East of Reed, Okla., they engaged in a before-dawn scuffle with Mrs. R. L. Whittiker and her son, Pete Whittiker, at Mrs. Whittiker's home, seized Whittiker's automobile, and fled toward Mangum.

Clovis, N. M., officers scattered out along highways leading from Texas into New Mexico after receiving reports the fugitives held up a bank at Friona, Tex., and escaped with $964.

At Coleman, Tex., officers kept a watch for the fugitives on the theory Trammel might be heading back to his old haunts there.

Ate Ravenously

The two half-starved men who subdued Whittiker and his mother after a battle of chairs and guns, used as clubs, ate ravenously the food Mrs. Whittiker prepared.

"We're fugitives from Retrieve prison farm," Whittiker quoted one of the men as saying. "We've got to have your car. If we're caught it will mean the electric chair."

Whittiker said one of the men boasted he was Gibson and did most of the talking. The other man, he said, was taciturn.

Ready To Shoot It Out

"We're ready to shoot it out with them," said Sheriff E. N. Clabaugh of Mangum. He said officers there were keeping a close lookout for the fugitives.

At Hollis, Sheriff Anderson also kept an alert eye on the highways and other southwestern Oklahoma officers were warned.

"Our reports are that one of the convicts was one-eyed," Anderson said. "That is supposed to tally with the description of one of the fugitives."

The two killers fled out of the

State Pension Checks Mailed Out Tuesday

Large Staff Of Employes At Work Far Into Night Last Night To Get Payment Of First Pensions In Mails

(By The Associated Press)

AUSTIN, June 30. — A large staff of employes of the old age assistance commision worked far into the night to get checks in the mails to 40,099 needy Texans over 65 years old.

The checks, the first old age pension payments ever made in Texas, aggregated $641,645 for an average of $16.

Mailed Directly

Orville S. Carpenter, state pension director, estimated that most of the pensioners would receive their warrants tomorrow and that all of the checks would reach their destinations by Thursday. The checks were mailed directly to the pensioners and the old people may cash them at local banks immediately after they are received.

The state treasury has received a check from the federal government to cover half of the pension payments for July and August. The state will supply the other half out of liquor tax revenues.

Might Hold Up Others

Carpenter said he had not yet decided when additional checks would be mailed. He said they

Governor Lehman Announces He Will Seek Third Term

ALBANY, N. Y., June 30. (AP) — Governor Herbert H. Lehman announced today he would run for a third term and fight for "social security" under the Roosevelt banner.

His 200-word statement at a noon press conference reversed a decision publicly disclosed a month ago to quit politics.

Postmaster General Is Accused Of "False And Defamatory Language" In His Talk To Demos In Philadelphia

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, June 30.—The executive committee of the American Liberty league tonight issued a statement charging Postmaster General James A. Farley with "false and defamatory language" against the league.

The statement was issued after a meeting of the executive committee which was attended by former Governor Alfred E. Smith, Irenee du Pont, Jouett Shouse, president of the league, and Capt. W. H. Stayton, the secretary.

Charged Specifically

Farley was charged specifically in the committee's statement with having said in a speech at the Philadelphia Democratic national convention:

Behind the Republican ticket is the crew of the Du Pont-Liberty league and their allies, which have so far financed every under-cover agency that has disgraced American politics with their appeals to race prejudice, religious intolerance and personalities so gross that they had to be repudiated by the regular Republican organization. They will continue to disown these snaky assaults—and to seek to profit by them."

The committee said the league "challenges Mr. Farley to produce concrete evidence in support of his statement."

U. S. Deficit In Excess Of Four Billions

Fiscal Year Is Closed Last Night With Receipts Nearly In Line With Estimate Of FDR In Budget

Receipts Greater

Total Of $293,000,000 More Is Collected In Year Despite Loss Of Processing Taxes; Debt At $33,913,590,295

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 30 — The government closed its 1936 fiscal year tonight with the latest tabulations—for June 27—showing receipts of $4,086,425,554 and a deficit in excess of $4,732,000,000.

The income compared with President Roosevelt's budget estimate of $4,410,000,000, a calculation which however included $529,000,000 in expected processing taxes subsequently invalidated by the Supreme court.

Greater Than Last Year

The 1936 income records showed was $293,000,000 greater than that

ANSWERS CRITICS

WASHINGTON, June 30. (AP)—Chairman Buchanan (D-Tex.) of the house appropriations committee today answered congressional critics of the recent session's spending with a declaration that the regular 1936 budget would have balanced had it not been for invalidation of AAA and pre-payment of the bonus.

collected a year ago, despite the loss of the processing levy.

As of June 27, the government had spent $8,809,923,537 as the gross public debt stood at $33,913,590,295. The years final totals will be given by Secretary Morgenthau in a radio address tomorrow night.

Receipts Show Big Gains

Current receipts showed big gains in virtually all categories of revenue. The total officials said already was in excess of revenue collected in such years as 1928 and 1929 when the treasury's income aggregated $4,042,000,000 and $4,033,000,000 respectively.

Expenditures through June 27 on the other hand, were greater than in the last fiscal year when they totaled $7,375,000,000. Prepayment of

Wallace Book Issued Today

"Whose Constitution" Calls For Establishment Of A Cooperative Commonwealth; Hits States' Rights

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, June 30.—The administration's sharpest critic of the Supreme court in a book to be published tomorrow groups that body with the Republican party and the Liberty league as upholders — at least part of the time — of the doctrine of states' rights "at any cost."

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace in a book called "Whose Constitution" likewise calls for establishment of a cooperative commonwealth—"a cooperative society."

Permitted Legalized Steal

It was Wallace who publicly asserted some months ago that the court's return to precedents of taxes collected under the defunct AAA permitted a legalized steal.

Balancing a major part of the book's philosophy on the thesis that this was intended to be a "union of people instead of States," the secretary asserted:

"The doctrine of states' rights, now invoked by the Supreme court, was a barrier to progress even in 1787, and was the cause of terrible conflict in 1861. Today, the states

Train Is Wrecked In South Texas

SAN MARCOS, June 30. (AP)—A Missouri-Pacific freight train was reported wrecked near here tonight, burying a fireman under the debris, as a cloudburst washed out a bridge a short distance from Kyle, Texas.

Railroad offices here were notified of the accident but details were not immediately obtainable. The terrific downpour and strong winds in the section disrupted communications lines, it was reported.

Rescuers were enroute to the scene from San Marcos.

The Blanco river, small stream through this section, was reported on a 20-foot rise five miles eastward as torrential rains fell.

Double-Barrelled Blast At Roosevelt Fired By Mills

NEW YORK, June 30. (AP) — A double-barrelled blast was fired in a speech by Ogden L. Mills tonight against President Roosevelt and the platform on which he stands for re-election.

Riotous Scene Follows Talk To Assembly

"You Deserted Us To Italy," Former Emperor Of East African Empire Declares In International Session

Dignity Shattered

Cursing And Fighting Breaks Out In Galleries As Negus Presents His Views Before Geneva Assembly

BY WADE WERNER
Associated Press Foreign Staff

GENEVA, June 30.—Riotous scenes of cursing and fighting in the galleries shattered the dignity of the League of Nations assembly tonight when black-robed little Emperor Haile Selassie told the world's peacemakers, "You deserted us to Italy."

Police were called in to restore order after a chorus of heckling boos and curses greeted the emperor without an empire when he rose to make a final, dramatic plea for aid.

Allowed To Resume

It was almost ten minutes before police restored order and the erstwhile ruler of Africa's last empire was allowed to resume and bitterly tell the league members:

"God and history will remember your judgment!"

Persons alleged to be Fascists started the tumult, shouting curses at the negus in Italian, French and Spanish. Fighting broke out when league attaches tried to restore order. Only when police came and ousted the hecklers was calm restored.

Later the emperor said what he had to say, calmly and fully.

"I could not believe that 52 nations—among them the most powerful in the world—could be defeated by a single aggressor," he said sorrowfully.

The emperor warned smaller members: "In this struggle I have been fighting the cause of all small countries against the greed of a powerful invader."

It was his first appearance be-

Bridges Case Goes To Jury

Monte Bridges Testifies In His Own Behalf In Trial For Murder Of Proprietor Of Hotel At Borger

(By The Associated Press)

STINNETT, June 30.—The defense rested today in the case of Monte Bridges, accused of slaying Fred English, hotel proprietor, in an argument over payment of a bill, after the defendant took the stand.

The case was given to the jury after an hour of argument.

Alexander Fled Room

Bridges testified that following the argument concerning payment for drinks, English started toward J. A. Alexander, friend of Bridges, who was in the room at the time.

The defendant said Alexander fled the room and English turned toward Bridges, saying he would kill him.

Bridges said he asked the man to stop on three or four occasions but that English continued to "crowd" him into a corner.

Thought He Had Gun

"He kept coming and I shot," Bridges said. "I shot him because I thought he was going to shoot me. There was something in his pocket. I knew it was a gun. The reason I fired was to protect myself."

District Attorney McConnell attacked Bridges' past, bringing out he had been charged with murder on three counts prior to the present case. Bridges was acquitted in one case, given a 50-year sentence, a new trial and a 20-year sentence from which he has appealed, in another case, and action on the third case is pending.

Man In Charge Of First Passenger Train Out Of Lubbock Dies In Clovis, N. M., Last Night; Formerly Lived Here

LUTHER MONTFORT, 75, who was in charge of the first passenger train to leave Lubbock for Sweetwater, died a few minutes after 7 o'clock Tuesday night in Santa Fe hospital at Clovis, N. M. He had been treated there four months. A leg was amputated last Friday.

For four years he had lived with a son, Frank W. Montfort of 1816 Fourth street, after retiring from his railroading. Before that he had lived at Amarillo 35 years, during which time he was conducctor on Santa Fe trains to Sweetwater and, before that, to Roswell, N. M.

It was at 11:10 o'clock on Jan. 9, 1910, that old 0245, a two-driver, coal-burning locomotive, pulled out from Lubbock for Sweetwater, drawing a six-car, wooden-axel, link-and pin train, to mark another step in Lubbock's beginning as a railway center.

An old photograph, one of the aged man's most prized possessions in later years, shows the train. Thomas Flynn was brakeman, Mr. Barnes was engineer, and Mr. Tankle was fireman. The "depot" was a two-window shack near which stood a scaffolding which supported two tanks of water. Drawn up near the track were a couple of express wagons, several horse-drawn conveyances and a few persons dressed in the mode of the time.

Relatives were not certain, but said they believed the train section that day was made up at Plainview.

Montfort's years at railroading totaled 39, said relatives. He began as a brakeman in Kansas, and had "runs" in Oklahoma before moving to Amarillo.

He had the unusual experiences

WE'LL PROTECT YOU

THREE pictures of nude dancers in the Centennial Exposition's "Street of Paris" have been in the packages recently. Sorry if you want to see them you'll have to look in some other paper; they aren't going to appear on our pages because the society editor destroyed them before they reached the copy desk.

In the first place the midway dancers do not represent art or beauty. They were placed there merely to get the cash customers, who like strip tease dances, black and tan night clubs and the like. We seem to remember some mention to the effect that the Texas show wouldn't have any nudity. Well it's there. Ask your neighbor who has been to the expbsition.

CONCERNING ABORIGINES

ONE time not so long ago we were questioned about the aborigines in Australia. Tuesday we received information concerning them from the Australian Press Bureau. It it's not too early in the morning for statistics perhaps you'd like to hear that there are 60,000 full-blooded aborigines in Australia at the last census, of whom 24,000 were either in employment or were living in supervised camps. Only 24,446—13,408 men and 11,038 women—were actually recorded at the census taken in that year.

PEPPER RING SALAD

SUMMER salads can be nourishing as well as cooling, and the wise housewife has discovered that the addition of cheese and nuts or hard-cooked eggs magically transforms a side dish into a very acceptable main course. Pepper rings are made by beating enough sweet cream into two packages of cream cheese, to make it perfectly smooth. Mix with chopped walnuts. Stuff raw green peppers with the mixture. Chill. Slice and serve on lettuce leaves which have been stirred in your favorite dressing. Dot each ring with tiny spirals of mayonnaise.

HE WENT TO SEA

PLAINS boys who feel the call of the sea in their blood will envy Zan Burroughs, visiting his mother, Mrs. Ameritus Burroughs, near town. Young Burroughs is an engineer with the Isthmian Steamship company. He is on a leave of absence at present, but plans to return to New York.

Several years ago Mr. Burroughs' brother, John, was in a Little Theater play here. We think it was O'Neill's "Beyond the Horizon." Anyway it told the story of a boy who longed to farm who went to sea and of a man who longed to sail the seven seas whose lot it was to till the land. Perhaps Zan was inspired then. Who knows?

THE SCHUMPERT HOME

THE Melvin Schumperts have moved into a beautiful new home in Portales, N. M., and an article in the Clovis, N. M., paper describes it. The structure is of native rock with a copper roof. A living-dining room with fire place of petrified wood, a sleeping room and large kitchen, a bath room finished in ivory and green and Melvin's den are on the first floor. By the way the latter is a smoked pine finish with cobblestone fireplace and built in book cases.

The other bedrooms are upstairs and there is a roof garden. One upstairs window is enhanced by an iron grille and copper lanterns hang at the front door and at the garden. A rock fence surrounds the place and the couple has started a rock garden. Mrs. Schumpert is the former Miss Elinor Crenshaw.

Informal entertaining honoring visitors to the city features the mid-week social calendar. Mrs. W. H. Ward who is leaving today to make her home in Amarillo has been honored at a series of parties.

McDonald Predicts He Will Carry Beaumont, Port Arthur

BEAUMONT, June 30. (Special) Carrying his fight against the use of convict drilling crews into the twin petroleum industrial centers of Port Arthur and Beaumont, W. H. (Bill) McDonald of Eastland county, candidate for state land commissioner, declared Tuesday in his speeches that he would carry the two cities over his South Texas opponent.

"There are 140,000 persons employed in the oil industry and they are going to vote against any man who favors displacing citizens with convicts," McDonald said. This would be the opening wedge to use convicts to deprive workers of jobs in other industries."

Sentiment ordinarily to be expected on behalf of his opponent in South Texas has not developed because of opposition to his rival's plank in favor of convict labor, McDonald declared.

Mr. Martin, who has had offices in the same building with Mr. Hunter for the past 18 years, said he stopped at a number of towns en route here to confer with Hunter men. He said he found a strong sentiment for the full time aspirant for the gubernatorial honor.

Mr. Hunter was to have spoken last night in Abilene. He is to speak in Big Spring Friday night and in San Angelo Saturday. He will hold conferences with workers in each town.

The local group has arranged for the city park just west of the city hall, Tenth street and Avenue J, for the meeting place. A loud speaker will be used, so that persons at a distance, may hear him.

Fourth Of July Baseball Series Is Slated For Local Park

Four Clubs Of Section Clash In Four Games

College Avenue Park Scene Of Hot 'Grudge' Battles' Among Teams Of South Plains On Saturday And Sunday

Baseball is still the national pastime, a fact echoed in the provinces and villages as well as by the bats of big league sluggers and the resultant applause from the grandstands.

There's no grandstand, for the purpose, here, but there's baseball anyway, and the clamor for a chance to indulge grows louder as the holiday weekends approaches.

So at the College Avenue field Saturday, the Glorious Fourth, and again on Sunday there'll be baseball for South Plains fans.

Four teams have bidden for the right to fight it out among each other in Lubbock and between now and Saturday managers of these teams will be building up fires and cooking up smoke for what they choose to call "grudge game."

Draw For Openers

The clubs due to square off in the Fourth of July series which may be considered a prelude to the annual Lubbock Invitation tournament are Anton Smallowater, Muleshoe and Lubbock Small places three of them but with big teams.

Just who will face who in the first round Saturday will be determined in a draw to be made tonight. Managers of the clubs are to hold a short session for the purpose at the Auditorium, scene of the weekly grappling show, tonight. They will draw for opponents in Saturday's games. On Sunday, the losers of Saturdays games will play first for third and fourth place money—and cash awards will be paid each of the four teams—and the winners will play for first and second place.

Gate receipts, minus expenses will be divided equally between the winners of each game, the losers also to share equally, only in smaller portion. Each day's receipts will be divided separately, putting a premium on Sunday's final victories.

Tournament Is Later

The Fourth of July series is not to be confused with the annual Lubbock tournament, which is to be held the latter part of July, starting either Sunday July 19 or July 26 probably the former date.

Replies from team managers over the section indicate the big majority are in favor of a straight-through, eight-day, eight-team tournament, beginning one Sunday and ending the next, rather than an extended series such as proposed early this week.

Plans for the tournament already are getting under way. The field will be prepared for this week's series and will be improved before the tournament starts. Umpires have been selected, and at least six teams have been chosen. The field will be limited to eight clubs.

The sports department of the Avalanche-Journal, sponsor of the annual tournament, invites all teams of the section to make application for tournament entry. The eight teams to play will be selected on basis of their records and merits.

Old Brother Lowell Was Right!

He Put The Words Right Into Sir Launfel's Vision, And It Must Have Been June Of 1936 The Old Boy Visioned

By PAUL MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, June 30. (AP) — "What is so rare as a day in June?"

Sports leaders and writers, dazzled and groggy after a whirlwind June that rolled down history lane tonight, can truthfully rise up and shout: "Nothing!"

Probably never in all sporting history has any one month produced the startling performances and upsets to equal those of June, 1936. A few highlights:

Baseball — The Cubs ripped off another winning streak, riding from the National League "wilderness" to pennant contention. Lou Gehrig reached a new "iron man" record by playing in his 1700th straight ball game and still is at it. Mickey Cochrane, "Iron Mike" of the world championship Detroit Tigers, was sent to the hospital and then went west to recuperate from a breakdown. The New York Yankees developed another fearsome "murderers row" and made it look like a runaway in the pennant race. The gold plated Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers lost valuable ground. The Reds and Senators continued to throw surprise parties all around the circuits.

Tennis — Australia eliminated the United States and Yugoslavia upset France in the Davis Cup eliminations. Bitsy Grant made his debut at Wimbledon, stood the crowd on its ear, and then lost.

Golf — The United States open scoring record of 286, held by Chick Evans and Gene Sarazen, was smashed by Tony Manero, new champion and Harry Cooper, runner-up. After bearing on the door for years, Alf Padgham finally captured the British Open, shutting out the United States for the third straight year.

Boxing — Old Jack Sharkey galloped along the comeback road, whipping Phil Brubaker, new ring hope from California. Max Schmeling ——

"What is so rare as a day in June?"

Answer, nothing.

Wilson Defeats Slide, 17 To 2

WILSON, June 30. (Special)—The heavy bats of Wilson's ball players resounded over the country side Sunday as Doc Cook's club rang up another victory.

The independent team of the Slide community was victimized, 17 to 2, by the ambitious Wilson sluggers, who collected 22 safe hits off two Slide pitchers.

Eddie Pelton went the route for Wilson, gave up six scattered hits. Pincher was the catcher. Alvin Crews, first baseman, and Walter B. Holland, young shortstop, rapped out home runs for Wilson, while Claude Bullard, second baseman, led the hitting with four safeties in four trips to bat. Wilson batted around to score nine runs in the fifth frame and demoralize the outclassed Slide contingent.

Wilson aims to be a strong contender for first place money in the annual Lubbock Invitation tournament, to be conducted late in July.

California Net Star Defeats Chile's Ace To Advance In All-England Tournament; Doubles Match Divided

BY GALE TALBOT

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 30. — Helen Jacobs chopped her way past Amita Lizana of Chile today into the semi-finals of the all-England tennis championships for the sixth successive year.

Winning at 6-2, 1-6, 6-4 the California star joined Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, Mme. Simone Mathieu of France and Frau Hilde Krahwinkel Sperling of Germany and Denmark in advancing to the penultimate round.

Miss Jedrzejowska beat Kay Stammers, southpaw English star, 6-2, 6-3.

England's other hope and 1934 champion, Dorothy Round, was a stubborn victim of the formidable Frau Sperling, 6-2, 8-6, while Mme. Mathieu vanquished Frau Marie-Louise Horn of Germany at 7-5, 6-3.

Not only were England's two greatest women players eliminated, but Jack Crawford and Adjan Quist of Australia were shorn of their doubles title by the veteran Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon of France, 3-6, 7-5, 2-6, 9-7, 6-2.

The American doubles sideholders, Wilmer Allison had John Van Ryn, divided the first four sets with Von Cramm and Heiner Henkel when darkness halted play. The Germans won the first set, 6-4, and the fourth, 6-3. The American won the second, 10-8, and the third, 6-4.

Dick Trout Determined To Give The Mask A New Outlook On Life After Tonight's Bout

Easy Going Californian Vows To Take Marvel In Main Go At Auditorium; Watkins To Meet Matsura In Special

TONIGHT'S CARD

Curtain raiser—Buck Lipscomb, Indianapolis, vs. Jack Hagen, Shreveport. One fall of 20 minutes.

Semi-windup — Sailor Tex Watkins, Post, vs. Mahuda Matsura, Portland, Ore. One fall or 30 minutes.

Main event — The Masked Marvel vs. Dick Trout, San Pedro, Calif. Two out of three falls or 2-hour time limit.

Time—8:30 o'clock. Admission—10, 40 and 65. Broadcast—Station KFYO.

This Richard Trout, a nice, intelligent, clean sort of person from the western edge of the country, was, until a few weeks ago, hailed as the king of the Southwestern wrestling circuit. He had beaten Dale Haddock, who had claimed the leadership, twice, and was fast becoming one of the most popular guys in the league.

Then Matty Matsura came along and topped Trout. This wasn't as much of a surprise to fans who knew Matsura as it was to Trout, who had no intention of getting whipped.

Now Mr. Trout sees a way of getting back that lost prestige, plus a lot to spare. He asked for and got a match with the Masked Marvel, before a local house. The match is scheduled for tonight, the main event in a balanced card that should pack 'em in with little, if any, less gusto and crowding than last week's over-populated house.

An estimated six or seven hundred would-be cash customers were turned away with their money in their fists last week when the Masked Marvel, most outstanding of the world's middleweights, returned to begin a season of toil. He flipped Matsura rather handily, the Jap's own tricks boomeranging, and The Mask's fists beating a constant roll against the Oriental's physique.

So it's The Mask and Dick Trout tonight, and the Trout boy is in a stubborn mood. He's clean and fair-minded as long as the opponent remains that way, but he's nobody's angel in a rowdy fight. Didn't he lose a main go to Sailor Tex Watkins on a foul? He can do his share of unorthodox scrapping when riled. Trouble is, it takes so long to rile him.

The Mask is favored, but Trout may be the fair-haired boy to knock the unknown loose from his anonymity. Worse upsets have occurred in the sporting world, even in the month just past. Fans can put it down for sure that Trout, knowing more now than he did about the Mask and his way of fighting, will make a battle of it.

Fun In Prelims

Tonight's customers should have received full benefit of their admission tickets some time before the main event goes on. There's a supporting card that leaves little to be desired and nothing to the imagination.

Sailor Watkins and Matty Matsura are at considerable odds, due to Matsura's victory in one of the roughest fights Amarillo ever saw. This happened a couple of weeks ago, and neither gladiator has gotten over it. Watkins was at his worst, or best, that night, doing all manner of illegal things, hurting the Jap with foreign substances and punishing him with fists and feet. The Jap won, but he's still sore at the Sailor.

For 20 minutes or less, they'll be in there going tough, and as long as it lasts the match no doubt will bear all the earmarks of a main event.

So will did the Hagen-Lipscomb scrap go, over two weeks ago that these two youngsters have been invited to renew their hostilities here. They were not hard to sign up, because their last meeting resulted in a draw, each man claiming victory distinction. They're fast and fierce, with Lipscomb coming as close to being another Danny McShain as anybody ever did here.

A Tough Guy

Here's Buck Lipscomb, the rowdy boy from the Hoosier state, known here formerly as Don Kent, who meets Jack Hagen of Shreveport in a repeat performance at the Auditorium tonight.

Walsh-Healey Bill Is Signed

President Gives Approval To Measure Regulating Labor Of Companies Selling Goods To Government

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Legislation requiring firms which sell goods to the government to comply with the 40-hour work week and other labor regulations was signed into law today by President Roosevelt.

Known as the Walsh-Healey bill the measure was pushed through in the closing hours of congress after the American Federation of Labor had made a strong appeal for its passage.

Proponents have estimated that it will affect 75 per cent of the nation's business. They have denied, however, that it constitutes an attempt to revive the NRA.

Under the new law those who sell goods and materials to government agencies in amounts of $10,000 or more not purchasable ordinarily on the open market must conform to labor requirements written into their contracts.

"I WOULDN'T RISK MY LIFE ON ANY OTHER TIRE"
Says Louis Meyer—
Only three time winner Indianapolis Race 28 33 36

EQUIP YOUR CAR WITH Firestone
GUM-DIPPED TIRES
for Greater Safety!

THE MASTERPIECE OF TIRE CONSTRUCTION

THERE is a reason why Louis Meyer won the 500-mile Indianapolis race this year—and why he is the only man ever to win this gruelling race three times. He always used Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires, and never experienced tire trouble of any kind.

Louis Meyer knows tire construction. He also knows that to drive for 500 consecutive miles over this hot brick track, negotiating the dangerous curves 800 times at the record-breaking average speed of 109 miles an hour, requires tires of super strength and greatest blowout protection; as a blowout on any one of the dangerous curves would likely mean instant death. By the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process every cord in the tires on Louis Meyer's car was soaked and coated with liquid rubber, thereby preventing internal friction and heat. This is the secret of the extra strength and reserve safety built into Firestone Tires.

When you make your holiday trip this week-end, you of course will not drive 109 miles per hour, but at today's higher speeds you do need tires that will give you greatest blowout protection and will stop your car up to 25% quicker. Take no chances! Let us equip your car today with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires, the safest tires built. It costs so little to protect lives worth so much!

Drive Carefully

THERE will be a number of Fourth of July celebrations over the South Plains this week-end that should provide enough entertainment and amusement for those who seek thrills and excitement.

Besides the Lubbock affair, sponsored by local Veterans of Foreign Wars, Slaton, Morton, Wilson, Post, Lamesa and Floydada plan affairs also.

Big Spring has one in mind; not to mention Hobbs, N. M., Carlsbad, N. M., and the big one at Stamford.

So, pay your money and take your choice; go where you think you will enjoy it most and have a good time. But remember there will be a lot of other folks on the road also, so drive carefully.

PLAIN MUD ROADS

Most people have the idea that this country is pretty well equipped with good roads. At any rate they would say that most of the roads that are really important have been improved. Anyone who wants to go anywhere has access to an improved highway.

But this is a big country and a lot of people live in it. Some statistics have been issued recently that indicate the nation's road-building program may go on for a good while yet and to a good purpose. One of the national farm organizations has been making special appeal to the government for a larger share of federal funds to be used in improving farm-to-market roads.

And this is the startling statement backing its plea: There are in all 3,065,000 miles of highway in the United States. Of these, 422,582 miles are on federal and state systems. And of the remainder, 564,000 miles have had the benefit of some form of improvement. These are township roads and country roads.

But if the total of all the road mileage at all improved is subtracted from all the miles of road in the country, there remain about 2,000,000 miles of just plain mud roads, and living on these are the country folk on about 4,000,000 farms.

THE PURSUIT OF LUCK

Hope is the bright star of inspiration that keeps us all plugging along through life. But what do we rest our hopes on? Is it on the things we hope to do, the labors of our own hands or brains? Or are we dreaming about some streak of luck?

People are fascinated by tales of lucky chances. They read stories about people on whom fortune has smiled without effort on their part. They are comforted by the thought that perhaps the fickle jade will also turn her favors to them. They hear about someone who has made a lucky haul in gambling or lotteries, and think that if they will take those chances, they too may be favored, and ride on to happiness and abundance.

When people form the habit of dreaming about lucky chances, they lose interest in their own work and their attention is diverted for the means by which people can make substantial progress by their own efforts.

The loss of the money dropped in gambling schemes, is only a part of the loss that takes place. If people have their minds fixed on the hope of luck, they are not cultivating the sentiment of ambition. It is ambition that lifts people up to better things, and enables them to realize their dreams.

Fortune is the reward of those who see farther than others, who make correct estimates of the things that are going to happen, who have more skill in organizing business, and who are so faithful and efficient and useful that they are rewarded by promotion. It is the reward of skill and intelligence, while the favors of luck are few, and most people who pursue that treacherous siren find nothing but emptiness.

MURDER TONIGHT
BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

SYNOPSIS: Inspector Hylton has arrived nowhere in his investigation of the murder of old Arthur Burdett. Hope Enderton's miserly old squire. Sergeant White thinks it was a tramp who did the deed; Hylton does not feel so sure. And now, as Hylton is finishing lunch at the inn, Captain Reeves bursts in and somewhat rudely plunges himself into the affair. He was at Burdett's house on the afternoon of the murder, he declares.

Chapter 12
THE CAPTAIN'S TALE

At what time were you there, Captain?"

"About five, might be ten minutes either way, but thereabouts."

Hylton carefully lit his beloved cigar and nodded. He was rapidly turning over in his mind the conversation he had had that very morning with Doctor Chambers. Chambers had stated that in his opinion death was due partly to the blow on the skull, partly to the shock consequent on the blow, and had taken place certainly two hours before he arrived just after ten, possibly four hours before.

On being closely questioned by the Inspector on this point he had reaffirmed his strong opinion that death had taken place somewhere between six o'clock and eight on the fatal day. And here was somebody professing, indeed pugnaciously professing, to have seen Burdett alive at five or even after.

"Was Burdett all right when you left him?" he asked.

"Sour as a crab apple, but that was his nature."

"You saw nobody else about the house?"

"Not a soul. I chose Monday to go up because I knew that ex-convict looking man of his would be away, and I wanted to see Burdett alone."

"You called on a friendly visit, I suppose?"

Pat Reeves laughed. "I did not," he said, "and mighty few ever did at that house. If ye want to know I called there for the express purpose of telling Arthur Burdett that he was a filthy-minded old roue and that his soul was as rotten as his beggarly body."

"You had a quarrel with him?"

"Ye can call it that if you like; I'll not dignify it with the name."

"What about, Captain Reeves?"

"I'll not tell you."

Kingsley Hylton looked steadily at his man and the tall wiry blue eyed Irishman looked as steadily back. Hylton knew the type, well—pleasant to work with, but beggars to drive.

"You may have to tell us, Captain Reeves," Hylton said quietly, to which Reeves replied grimly and sardonically,

"Make me."

The Inspector let that pass. "You might have told us about this earlier," he said.

"And I might not have told you at all," Reeves pointed out.

"It would have been very foolish not to."

"Maybe. What's between me and old Burdett is my own affair."

"You're wrong," Inspector Kingsley Hylton answered with a sudden new quality in his voice, "what was between you and the dead man is the affair of the Law, and cannot be trifled with. I

"I've no doubt. If you could only tell me all the people who didn't here than we are in Ireland, Inspector," Reeves said. "Arthur Burdett was a dirty, damned old good-for-nothing, and the world's no worse off because he's out of it. Perney House you can find me at, when you want me. Good-day."

Reeves left as abruptly as he had arrived and for a long minute Hylton sat staring at the banged door.

Burdett was seen alive by Reeves at five and he was murdered say between six and seven—it narrowed things down a lot.

He let his mind play with the speculation as to how much of Captain Reeves's aggressive honesty was real, how much make believe. Suppose the Captain's story was true in every particular save one, that just before taking his leave from Enderton Court he had picked a heavy club from its nail on the wall and broken his host's skull with it? "I called on the man; we quarreled, I left him."

"What did ou quarrel about?"

"I shan't tell you. It is too private."

A cunning move because, as any jury would instantly argue, no guilty man would admit the fact of quarrelling, being under no compulsion to do so.

His speculations were interrupted by a tiny sound on the far side of the second door that led from his luncheon room. Hylton had not been through that door yet, indeed he had hardly noticed it, and a double curiosity now led him to examine what lay beyond. The Inspector had acquired a sort of instinct in some matters, and there was something in the nature of the noise which had attracted his attention that made him want to investigate it.

Quietly he tiptoed across the room and pushed the door open. It led into a well-proportioned, old fashioned billiards-room where a tall, goodlooking young man in riding kit stood half way between door and table, ostentatiously chalking a cue.

He looked up when Hylton entered and nodded.

"Having a game?" the Inspector asked.

"I've just been knocking the pills about."

"Lie number one," Hylton thought; the click of ivory is curiously penetrating and unmistakable, and he was prepared to take an oath that no billiard ball had run on that table since he had started his lunch in the next room half in an hour before.

On the other hand, a young man comes into the billiards room to see if there is a game going; he hears a voice raised in the next room; he decides to postpone his solitary game and lays an inquisitive ear against the panel of the door. Hylton wondered. . . .

"I'll give you a game if you like, Mr. Shipley," he said.

"Right-O," Dale answered. "I see you've got my name pat."

"Oh Sergeant White has pointed out everyone in the place to me by now."

"And I suppose we're all suspect?"

"More or less. Spot or plain?"

"I'll take spot. I can tell you a lot of people who didn't do it."

do it the process of elimination would be complete. Shall we string for break?"

"Right-O. You play much of this game?"

"Not enough to keep it good practice, I suppose you do?"

"I play a pretty descent stick as a rule," Dale admitted. He was a young man to whom such admissions came easily. Nature had made him fairly good at most sports, and imagination had turned him into a master, but there was no imagination about Inspector Hylton's proficiency at the game. It is a curious fact in life that ability at chess and at billiards often run together, and for all his talk about playing "a decent stick" Dale Shipley was struggling along in the fifties when Hylton ran out with an unfinished twenty-seven.

Young Shipley did not like being beaten at anything; he was not a god loser and he put his cue away with only a pretense at good grace.

"By the way," Hylton asked casually, "do you agree with Captain Reeves's estimate of Mr Burdett?"

"What about his being a dirty damned old g—" Shipley broke off abruptly, he had walked into the trap before he had noticed it. "I heard him shouting out something in the next room," he concluded awkwardly.

"So it seems," Hylton concurred pleasantly. "I was just wondering whether you thought the same."

The young man's awkwardness increased. "It's nothing to do with me," he said shortly, and rattling his cue into its place he stalked out of the room.

Dale left the Hoops in a bad temper—not an uncommon frame of mind with that rather too good-looking young gentleman. He was annoyed at having walked into the obviously bested at billiards, still more annoyed at having walket into the Inspector's child-like booby trap. Easy enough, of course, to make pretense that he had innocently and unintentionally overheard the conversation in the next room; but impossible, nevertheless, to get rid of the substratum of uncomfortable knowledge. The Inspector knew, and Dale knew that the Inspector knew, that what overhearing there had been was not accidental.

"What the hell does it matter, anyway," he tried to reassure himself crossly as he swung round the corner of Fielden Lane towards his cottage.

"Dale."

He turned sharply and looked into the big meadow on his right. The short winter afternoon was already beginning to end, and in the still grey light which presaged frost he could see a figure walking along the path attended by a red setter in transports of ridiculous excitement.

His first instint was to curse under his breath.

The figure was that of Nancy Featherstone, and although Dale had no particular reason for wanting to avoid Nancy, he on the other hand had no particular reason for wanting to talk with anyone.

The News Behind The News

WASHINGTON
By Ira Bennett

As the echoes of tumult and shouting die down the real work of the campaign begins. Noise may continue to come from New York and Chicago, but the direction of strategy will remain in Washington—particularly New Deal strategy which stays in the hands of President Roosevelt himself.

In the quiet of his White House office the master tactician named the directive personnel of the Philadelphia convention, framed its platform, edited its keynotes, sifted out loyal New Dealers to displace doubtful workers on the national committee, shaped his war speech, and signed the laws that were made at his command.

At least one of these laws is likely to cause an uproar when its full meaning is grasped by the country—the Walsh-Healey act which practically places American industry under domination of the government.

COURT: Labor, represented by William Green, John L. Lewis and others, did not get all it hoped for at the Philadelphia convention. The administration is not ready to commit itself to an amendment proposing to put manufacturing, mining, crop raising, and all other industry under control of the federal government.

Lynx-eyed critics of the Roosevelt administration watched intently the cautious approach of convention speakers and platform committeemen to this crucial question—the extension of government control over the people's activities. They quickly noted Keynoter Barkley's declaration that the interstate commerce power must be extended.

The anti-New Dealers were disappointed by the failure of the Philadelphia convention to "go the whole hog" against the Supreme court. But they will make much of Senator Barkley's criticisms of the court.

PROPHET: The G.O.P. high command is making ready to sharpen the issue between the New Deal and the judiciary. Emphasis is laid on the assertion that the temporary chairman was only the echo of President Roosevelt—that when Barkley implied that the Supreme court had blocked justice to farmers and labor he was speaking for the president.

In every way, by every device, it is the aim of the G.O.P. to show that the executive department is assailing the third arm of the government, seeking to disable or intimidate it so that laws demanded by farm and labor leaders can be enacted and executed in spite of the Supreme court or outcries from the states.

Organized labor presses the New Deal. Farm organizations press it and threaten it. And if Senator Barkley is a true prophet the New Deal will respond by attempting to take over the powers of the states.

FATE: As experienced Washington observers see it, the main question of the campaign will be this: "Do the people wish to enlarge the power of the federal government at the expense of the states?"

Senator Barkley confessed according to some interpretations that the government is powerless to carry the New Deal to its objectives while the Constitution bars its path. Hence, unless the Supreme court should change, the Constitution must, if the new order is to prevail.

Fate sometimes settles tough problems. What if the personnel of the Supreme court should be changed by fate so that rulings will come which will transfer vast powers from the states to the federal government? Current reports are that at least one of the eldest justices a conservative, is on the verge of retirement. If his successor should hold with the recent minorities the course of the United States might be altered.

FOOTBALL: The Walsh-Healey act is bound to become the subject of passionate debate during the campaign. It will go into effect three months hence. It represents organized labor's last hope of forcing industry to yield to labor's demands for a shorter week and better laboring conditions. The manner in which these aims are to be achieved furnishes the fighting point of the pros and cons.

The new law does not clearly state whether or not sub-contractors serving government contractors shall observe the rules laid down by the Secretary of Labor, but it is believed that sub-contractors will be held to be bound. In that case practically every industry in the country will be controlled.

This is the new NRA. Is it valid? Can the government, by picking and choosing its purveyors of materials, supplies and equipment, dictate wages and working conditions in factories? Already plans are being laid to force this question into the courts. Before the final judgment can be made the Walsh-Healey act will be the football of campaign politics.

NEW YORK
By James McMullin

THE Union party combine and the right wing Democratic protest headed by Al Smith have another point in common besides their hostility to Roosevelt and their backstage connections with Hearst. Neither of them did so well in the matter of lining up outstanding personnel, as their promoters had hoped.

Father Coughlin personally selected William Lemke and Thomas Charles O'Brien as the standard bearers of the Union party (besides writing its platform). The fact that he has so far run the show all by himself is the main reason the Townsend leaders and Gerald Smith are still a trifle skittish about joining forces with him. They want to be sure they are safeguarded against playing Josh to Coughlin's whale before they make any irrevocable commitments.

New York sources close to the radio priest say his choice of Lemke wasn't due to any overwhelming enthusiasm for the congressman. On the contrary, the North Dakotan was so honored merely because Coughlin couldn't find anyone else with the remotest claim to eligibility who would play with him. A well posted observer remarks rather brutally that Lemke has in effect become a presidential candidate by default.

REFUSED: As for Al Smith and his fellow pedestrians, informed New Yorkers reveal that the list of five is by no means as strong as originally planned.

Several other distinguished Democrats who are out of sympathy with the New Deal were cordially and earnestly invited to join the parade. Their names would have been considerably more impressive than those of Deed or Cohalan or Colby. But they flatly refused to have anything to do with it, so the show either had to be staged with a cast which even conservative leaders admit is comparatively weak—or not at all.

WARNING: Most anti-New Deal chiefs naturally welcome the Union party as useful to the Republican cause. It will certainly get enough sub rosa financial aid to enable it to make plenty of noise. But some of the shrewdest New York right wingers call it short-sighted to encourage the "coalition of discontent."

A top rank financier puts it: "Of course it's important to beat Roosevelt, but it's just as important to elect a conservative house. The Coughlin-Townsend-Share-the-Wealth crowd are likely to put too many radicals in congress for our comfort as it is. If we help them out with money and publicity, there's no telling how far they will go.

"There would be no percentage whatever in electing Landon if at the same time we enable a gang of crackpots to gain a balance of power position in the House. The Republican primaries in Maine—where the coalition won two out of three contests and lost the third only by a split in their own ranks—were a clear warning that we had better be careful about feeding stray pups that might grow up to be wolves."

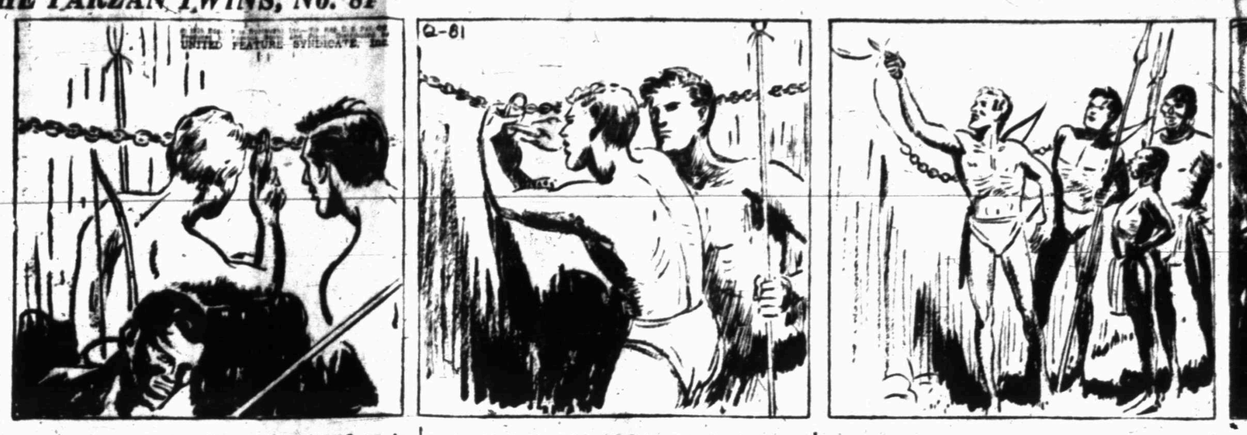
THE TARZAN TWINS, No. 81

By Edgar Rice Burroughs



The padlock on the village gates seemed an invincible obstacle. The nerves of the Tarzan Twins were on edge now. At any moment they might be spied by the wandering eye of one of the cannibal warriors. If they were captured again, they would surely be killed at once.

In frantic haste Dick tried to pick the lock with his pocket knife, but his efforts were futile. Then suddenly Doc almost gave vent to a cry of relief. He discovered that the shiftless tribesmen had fastened the end of the chain to a post with a bit of grass rope.

Since a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, this proved a very weak link indeed. A single stroke of the knife severed the rope. But that very move toward freedom was also a step toward recapture, for the stout chain clattered noisily to the ground!

Instantly the warriors halted their dance. "The gates!" cried the chief. Shrieking hideously and brandishing their spears, the savages swarmed forward. The four fugitives flung themselves frantically against the gates, but the massive wooden portals refused to budge!

Drive Carefully

THERE will be a number of Fourth of July celebrations over the South Plains this week-end that should provide enough entertainment and amusement for those who seek thrills and excitement.

Besides the Lubbock affair, sponsored by local Veterans of Foreign Wars, Slaton, Morton, Wilson, Post, Lamesa and Floydada plan affairs also.

Big Spring has one in mind; not to mention Hobbs, N. M., Carlsbad, N. M., and the big one at Stamford.

So, pay your money and take your choice; go where you think you will enjoy it most and have a good time. But remember there will be a lot of other folks on the road also, so drive carefully.

PLAIN MUD ROADS

Most people have the idea that this country is pretty well equipped with good roads. At any rate they would say that most of the roads that are really important have been improved. Anyone who wants to go anywhere has access to an improved highway.

But this is a big country and a lot of people live in it. Some statistics have been issued recently that indicate the nation's road-building program may go on for a good while yet and to a good purpose. One of the national farm organizations has been making special appeal to the government for a larger share of federal funds to be used in improving farm-to-market roads.

And this is the startling statement backing its plea: There are in all 3,065,000 miles of highway in the United States. Of these, 422,582 miles are on federal and state systems. And of the remainder, 564,000 miles have had the benefit of some form of improvement. These are township roads and country roads.

But if the total of all the road mileage at all improved is subtracted from all the miles of road in the country, there remain about 2,000,000 miles of just plain mud roads, and living on these are the country folk on about 4,000,000 farms.

THE PURSUIT OF LUCK

Hope is the bright star of inspiration that keeps us all plugging along through life. But what do we rest our hopes on? Is it on the things we hope to do, the labors of our own hands or brains? Or are we dreaming about some streak of luck?

People are fascinated by tales of lucky chances. They read stories about people on whom fortune has smiled without effort on their part. They are comforted by the thought that perhaps the fickle jade will also turn her favors to them. They hear about someone who has made a lucky haul in gambling or lotteries, and think that if they will take those chances, they too may be favored, and ride on to happiness and abundance.

When people form the habit of dreaming about lucky chances, they lose interest in their own work and their attention is diverted for the means by which people can make substantial progress by their own efforts.

The loss of the money dropped in gambling schemes, is only a part of the loss that takes place. If people have their minds fixed on the hope of luck, they are not cultivating the sentiment of ambition. It is ambition that lifts people up to better things, and enables them to realize their dreams.

Fortune is the reward of those who see farther than others, who make correct estimates of the things that are going to happen, who have more skill in organizing business, and who are so faithful and efficient and useful that they are rewarded by promotion. It is the reward of skill and intelligence, while the favors of luck are few, and most people who pursue that treacherous siren find nothing but emptiness.

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

SYNOPSIS: Inspector Hylton has arrived nowhere in his investigation of the murder of old Arthur Burdett. Hope Enderton's miserly old squire. Sergeant White thinks it was a tramp who did the deed; Hylton does not feel so sure. And now, as Hylton is finishing lunch at the inn, Captain Reeves bursts in and somewhat rudely plunges himself into the affair. He was at Burdett's house on the afternoon of the murder, he declares.

Chapter II

THE CAPTAIN'S TALE

"At what time were you there, Captain?"

"About five might be ten minutes either way, but thereabouts."

Hylton carefully lit his beloved cigar and nodded. He was rapidly turning over in his mind the conversation he had had that very morning with Doctor Chambers. Chambers had stated that in his opinion death was due partly to the blow on the skull, partly to the shock consequent on the blow, and had taken place certainly two hours before he arrived just after ten, possibly four hours before.

On being closely questioned by the Inspector on this point he had reaffirmed his strong opinion that death had taken place somewhere between six o'clock and eight on the fatal day. And here was somebody professing, indeed pugnaciously professing, to have seen Burdett alive at five, or even after.

"Was Burdett all right when you left him?" he asked.

"Sour as a crab apple, but that was his nature."

"You saw nobody else about the house?"

"Not a soul. I chose Monday to go up because I knew that ex-convict looking man of his would be away, and I wanted to see Burdett alone."

"You called on a friendly visit I suppose?"

Pat Reeves laughed. "I did not," he said, "and mighty few ever did at that house. If ye want to know I called there for the express purpose of telling Arthur Burdett that he was a filthy-minded old roue and that his soul was as rotten as his beggarly body."

"You had a quarrel with him?"

"Ye can call it that if you like; I'll not dignify it with the name."

"What about, Captain Reeves?"

"I'll not tell you."

Kingsley Hylton looked steadily at his man and the tall wiry blue eyed Irishman looked as steadily back. Hylton knew the type well—pleasant to work with, but beggars to drive.

"You may have to tell us, Captain Reeves," Hylton said quietly; to which Reeves replied grimly and sardonically,

"Make me."

The Inspector let that pass. "You might have told us about this earlier," he said.

"And I might not have told you at all," Reeves pointed out.

"It would have been very foolish not to."

"Maybe. What's between me and old Burdett is my own affair."

"You're wrong," Inspector Kingsley Hylton answered with a sudden new quality in his voice, "what was between you and the dead man is the affair of the Law, and cannot be trifled with."

"I've no doubt. If you could only tell me all the people who might do it the process of elimination would be complete. Shall we string for break?"

"Right-O. You play much of this game?"

"Not enough to keep in good practice I suppose you do?"

"I play a pretty descent stick as a rule." Dale admitted. He was a young man to whom such admissions came easily. Nature had made him fairly good at most sports, and imagination had turned him into a master, but there was no imagination about Inspector Hylton's proficiency at the game. It is a curious fact in life that ability at chess and at billiards often run together, and for all his talk about playing "a decent stick" Dale Shipley was struggling along in the fifties when Hylton ran out with an unfinished twenty-seven.

Young Shipley did not like being beaten at anything; he was not a good loser and he put his cue away with only a pretense at good grace.

"By the way," Hylton asked casually, "do you agree with Captain Reeves's estimate of Mr Burdett?"

"What about his being a dirty damned old g—" Shipley broke off abruptly, he had walked into the trap before he had noticed it. "I heard him shouting out something in the next room," he concluded awkwardly.

"So it seems," Hylton concurred pleasantly. "I was just wondering whether you thought the same."

The young man's awkwardness increased. "It's nothing to do with me," he said shortly, and rattling his cue into its place he stalked out of the room.

Dale left the Hoops in a bad temper—not an uncommon frame of mind with that rather too good-looking young gentleman. He was annoyed at having walked into the obviously bested at billiards, still more annoyed at having walked into the Inspector's child-like booby trap. Easy enough, of course, to make pretense that he had innocently and unintentionally overheard the conversation in the next room; but impossible, nevertheless, to get rid of the substratum of uncomfortable knowledge. The Inspector knew, and Dale knew that the Inspector knew, that what overhearing there had been was not accidental.

"What the hell does it matter, anyway," he tried to reassure himself crossly as he swung round the corner of Fielden Lane towards his cottage.

"Dale."

He turned sharply and looked into the big meadow on his right. The short winter afternoon was already beginning to end, and in the still grey light which presaged frost he could see a figure walking along the path attended by a red setter in transports of ridiculous excitement.

His first instint was to curse under his breath.

The figure was that of Nancy Featherstone, and although Dale had no particular reason for wanting to avoid Nancy, he on the other hand had no particular reason for wanting to talk with anyone.

The National Whirligig

The News Behind The News

WASHINGTON
By Ira Bennett

AS the echoes of tumult and shouting die down the real work of the campaign begins. Noise may continue to come from New York and Chicago, but the direction of strategy will remain in Washington—particularly New Deal strategy which stays in the hands of President Roosevelt himself.

In the quiet of his White House office the master tactician named the directive personnel of the Philadelphia convention, framed its platform, edited its keynotes, sifted out loyal New Dealers to displace doubtful workers on the national committee, shaped his war speech, and signed the laws that were made at his command.

At least one of these laws is likely to cause an uproar when its full meaning is grasped by the country—the Walsh-Healey act which practically places American industry under domination of the government.

COURT: Labor, represented by William Green, John L. Lewis and others, did not get all it hoped for at the Philadelphia convention. The administration is not ready to commit itself to an amendment proposing to put manufacturing, mining, crop raising, and all other industry under control of the federal government.

Lynx-eyed critics of the Roosevelt administration watched intently the cautious approach of convention speakers and platform committeemen to this crucial question—the extension of government control over the people's activities. They quickly noted Keynoter Barkley's declaration that the interstate commerce power must be extended.

The anti-New Dealers were disappointed by the failure of the Philadelphia convention to "go the whole hog" against the Supreme court. But they will make much of Senator Barkley's criticisms of the court.

PROPHET: The G.O.P. high command is making ready to sharpen the issue between the New Deal and the judiciary. Emphasis is laid on the assertion that the temporary chairman was only the echo of President Roosevelt—that when Barkley implied that the Supreme court had blocked justice to farmers and labor he was speaking for the president.

In every way, by every device, it is the aim of the G.O.P. to show that the executive department is assailing the third arm of the government, seeking to disable or intimidate it so that laws demanded by farm and labor leaders can be enacted and executed in spite of the Supreme court or outcries from the states.

Organized labor presses the New Deal. Farm organizations press it and threaten it. And if Senator Barkley is a true prophet the New Deal will respond by attempting to take over the powers of the states.

FATE: As experienced Washington observers see it, the main question of the campaign will be this: "Do the people wish to enlarge the power of the federal government at the expense of the states?"

Senator Barkley confessed, according to some interpretations, that the government is powerless to carry the New Deal to its objectives while the Constitution bars its path. Hence, unless the Supreme court should change, the Constitution must, if the new order is to prevail.

Fate sometimes settles tough problems. What if the personnel of the Supreme court should be changed by fate so that rulings will come which will transfer vast powers from the states to the federal government? Current reports are that at least one of the eldest justices, a conservative, is on the verge of retirement. If his successor should hold with the recent minorities the course of the United States might be altered.

FOOTBALL: The Walsh-Healey act is bound to become the subject of passionate debate during the campaign. It will go into effect three months hence. It represents organized labor's last hope of forcing industry to yield to labor's demands for a shorter week and better laboring conditions. The manner in which these aims are to be achieved furnishes the fighting point of the pros and cons.

The new law does not clearly state whether or not sub-contractors serving government contractors shall observe the rules laid down by the Secretary of Labor, but it is believed that sub-contractors will be held to be bound. In that case practically every industry in the country will be controlled.

This is the new NRA. Is it valid? Can the government, by "picking and choosing its purveyors of materials, supplies and equipment, dictate wages and working conditions in factories? Already plans are being laid to force this question into the courts. Before the final judgment can be made the Walsh-Healey act will be the football of campaign politics.

NEW YORK
By James McMullin

THE Union party combine and the right wing Democratic protest headed by Al Smith have another point in common besides their hostility to Roosevelt and their backstage connections with Hearst. Neither of them did so well in the matter of lining up outstanding personnel, as their promoters had hoped.

Father Coughlin personally selected William Lemke and Thomas Charles O'Brien as the standard bearers of the Union party (besides writing its platform). The fact that he has so far run the show all by himself is the main reason the Townsend leaders and Gerald Smith are still a trifle skittish about joining forces with him. They want to be sure they are safeguarded against playing Jonah to Coughlin's whale before they make any irrevocable commitments.

New York sources close to the radio priest say his choice of Lemke wasn't due to any overwhelming enthusiasm for the congressman. On the contrary, the North Dakotan was so honored merely because Coughlin couldn't find anyone else with the remotest claim to eligibility who would play with him. A well posted observer remarks rather brutally that Lemke has in effect become a presidential candidate by default.

REFUSED: As for Al Smith and his fellow pedestrians, informed New Yorkers reveal that the list of five is by no means as strong as originally planned.

Several other distinguished Democrats who are out of sympathy with the New Deal were cordially and earnestly invited to join the parade. Their names would have been considerably more impressive than those of Deed or Cohalan or Colby. But they flatly refused to have anything to do with it, so the show either had to be staged with a cast which even conservative leaders admit is comparatively weak—or not at all.

WARNING: Most anti-New Deal chiefs naturally welcome the Union party as useful to the Republican cause. It will certainly get enough sub rosa financial aid to enable it to make plenty of noise. But some of the shrewdest New York right wingers call it short-sighted to encourage the "coalition of discontent."

A top rank financier puts it: "Of course it's important to beat Roosevelt, but it's just as important to elect a conservative house. The Coughlin-Townsend-Share-the-Wealth crowd are likely to put too many radicals in congress for our comfort as it is. If we help them out with money and publicity, there's no telling how far they will go.

"There would be no percentage whatever in electing Landon if at the same time we enable a gang of crackpots to gain a balance of power position in the house. The Republican primaries in Maine—where the coalition won two out of three contests and lost the third only by a split in their own ranks—were a clear warning that we had better be careful about feeding stray pups that might grow up to be wolves."

"You called on a friendly visit I suppose?"

Pat Reeves laughed. "I did not," he said, "and mighty few ever did at that house. If ye want to know I called there for the express purpose of telling Arthur Burdett that he was a filthy-minded old roue and that his soul was as rotten as his beggarly body."

"You had a quarrel with him?"

"Ye can call it that if you like; I'll not dignify it with the name."

"What about, Captain Reeves?"

"I'll not tell you."

Kingsley Hylton looked steadily at his man and the tall wiry blue eyed Irishman looked as steadily back. Hylton knew the type well—pleasant to work with, but beggars to drive.

"You may have to tell us, Captain Reeves," Hylton said quietly; to which Reeves replied grimly and sardonically,

"Make me."

The Inspector let that pass. "You might have told us about this earlier," he said.

"And I might not have told you at all," Reeves pointed out.

"It would have been very foolish not to."

"Maybe. What's between me and old Burdett is my own affair."

"You're wrong," Inspector Kingsley Hylton answered with a sudden new quality in his voice, "what was between you and the dead man is the affair of the Law, and must not be trifled with."

"I've no doubt. If you could only tell me all the people who didn't do it the process of elimination would be complete. Shall we string for break?"

"Right-O. You play much of this game?"

"Not enough to keep in good practice, I suppose you do?"

"I play a pretty descent stick as a rule." Dale admitted. He was a young man to whom such admissions came easily. Nature had made him fairly good at most sports, and imagination had turned him into a master, but there was no imagination about Inspector Hylton's proficiency at the game. It is a curious fact in life that ability at chess and at billiards often run together, and for all his talk about playing "a decent stick" Dale Shipley was struggling along in the fifties when Hylton ran out with an unfinished twenty-seven.

Young Shipley did not like being beaten at anything; he was not a good loser and he put his cue away with only a pretense at good grace.

"By the way," Hylton asked casually, "do you agree with Captain Reeves's estimate of Mr Burdett?"

"What about his being a dirty damned old g—." Shipley broke off abruptly, he had walked into the trap before he had noticed it. "I heard him shouting out something in the next room," he concluded awkwardly.

"So it seems," Hylton concurred pleasantly. "I was just wondering whether you thought the same."

The young man's awkwardness increased. "It's nothing to do with me," he said shortly, and rattling his cue into its place he stalked out of the room.

Dale left the Hoops in a bad temper—not an uncommon frame of mind with that rather too good-looking young gentleman. He was annoyed at having walked into the obviously bested at billiards, still more annoyed at having walked into the Inspector's child-like booby trap. Easy enough, of course, to make pretense that he had innocently and unintentionally overheard the conversation in the next room; but impossible, nevertheless, to get rid of the substratum of uncomfortable knowledge. The Inspector knew, and Dale knew that the Inspector knew, that what overhearing there had been was not accidental.

"What the hell does it matter, anyway," he tried to reassure himself crossly as he swung round the corner of Fielden Lane towards his cottage.

"Dale."

He turned sharply, and looked into the big meadow on his right. The short winter afternoon was already beginning to end, and in the still grey light which presaged frost he could see a figure walking along the path attended by a red setter in transports of ridiculous excitement.

His first instint was to curse under his breath.

The figure was that of Nancy Featherstone, and although Dale had no particular reason for wanting to avoid Nancy, he on the other hand had no particular reason for wanting to talk with anyone.

The News Behind The News

WASHINGTON
By Ira Bennett

AS the echoes of tumult and shouting die down the real work of the campaign begins. Noise may continue to come from New York and Chicago, but the direction of strategy will remain in Washington—particularly New Deal strategy which stays in the hands of President Roosevelt himself.

In the quiet of his White House office the master tactician named the directive personnel of the Philadelphia convention, framed its platform, edited its keynotes, sifted out loyal New Dealers to displace doubtful workers on the national committee, shaped his war speech, and signed the laws that were made at his command.

At least one of these laws is likely to cause an uproar when its full meaning is grasped by the country—the Walsh-Healey act which practically places American industry under domination of the government.

COURT: Labor, represented by William Green, John L. Lewis and others, did not get all it hoped for at the Philadelphia convention. The administration is not ready to commit itself to an amendment proposing to put manufacturing, mining, crop raising, and all other industry under control of the federal government.

Lynx-eyed critics of the Roosevelt administration watched intently the cautious approach of convention speakers and platform committeemen to this crucial question—the extension of government control over the people's activities. They quickly noted Keynoter Barkley's declaration that the interstate commerce power must be extended.

The anti-New Dealers were disappointed by the failure of the Philadelphia convention to "go the whole hog" against the Supreme court. But they will make much of Senator Barkley's criticisms of the court.

PROPHET: The G.O.P. high command is making ready to sharpen the issue between the New Deal and the judiciary. Emphasis is laid on the assertion that the temporary chairman was only the echo of President Roosevelt—that when Barkley implied that the Supreme court had blocked justice to farmers and labor he was speaking for the president.

In every way, by every device, it is the aim of the G.O.P. to show that the executive department is assailing the third arm of the government, seeking to disable or intimidate it so that laws demanded by farm and labor leaders can be enacted and executed in spite of the Supreme court or outcries from the states.

Organized labor presses the New Deal. Farm organizations press it and threaten it. And if Senator Barkley is a true prophet the New Deal will respond by attempting to take over the powers of the states.

FATE: As experienced Washington observers see it, the main question of the campaign will be this: "Do the people wish to enlarge the power of the federal government at the expense of the states?"

Senator Barkley confessed, according to some interpretations, that the government is powerless to carry the New Deal to its objectives while the Constitution bars its path. Hence, unless the Supreme court should change, the Constitution must, if the new order is to prevail.

Fate sometimes settles tough problems. What if the personnel of the Supreme court should be changed by fate so that rulings will come which will transfer vast powers from the states to the federal government? Current reports are that at least one of the eldest justices, a conservative, is on the verge of retirement. If his successor should hold with the recent minorities the course of the United States might be altered.

FOOTBALL. The Walsh-Healey act is bound to become the subject of passionate debate during the campaign. It will go into effect three months hence. It represents organized labor's last hope of forcing industry to yield to labor's demands for a shorter week and better laboring conditions. The manner in which these aims are to be achieved furnishes the fighting point of the pros and cons.

The new law does not clearly state whether or not sub-contractors serving government contractors shall observe the rules laid down by the Secretary of Labor but it is believed that sub-contractors will be held to be bound. In that case practically every industry in the country will be controlled.

This is the new NRA. Is it valid? Can the government, by picking and choosing its purveyors of materials, supplies and equipment, dictate wages and working conditions in factories? Already plans are being laid to force this question into the courts. Before the final judgment can be made the Walsh-Healey act will be the football of campaign politics.

NEW YORK
By James McMillin

THE Union party combine and the right wing Democratic protest headed by Al Smith have another point in common besides their hostility to Roosevelt and their backstage connections with Hearst. Neither of them did so well in the matter of lining up outstanding personnel, as their promoters had hoped.

Father Coughlin personally selected William Lemke and Thomas Charles O'Brien as the standard bearers of the Union party (besides writing its platform). The fact that he has so far run the show all by himself is the main reason the Townsend leaders and Gerald Smith are still a trifle skittish about joining forces with him. They want to be sure they are safeguarded against playing Jonah to Coughlin's whale before they make any irrevocable commitments.

New York sources close to the radio priest say his choice of Lemke wasn't due to any overwhelming enthusiasm for the congressman. On the contrary, the North Dakotan was so honored merely because Coughlin couldn't find anyone else with the remotest claim to eligibility who would play with him. A well posted observer remarks rather brutally that Lemke has in effect become a presidential candidate by default.

REFUSED: As for Al Smith and his fellow pedestrians, informed New Yorkers reveal that the list of five is by no means as strong as originally planned. Several other distinguished Democrats who are out of sympathy with the New Deal were cordially and earnestly invited to join the parade. Their names would have been considerably more impressive than those of Deed or Cohalan or Colby. But they flatly refused to have anything to do with it, so the show either had to be staged with a cast which even conservative leaders admit is comparatively weak—or not at all.

WARNING: Most anti-New Deal chiefs naturally welcome the Union party as useful to the Republican cause. It will certainly get enough sub rosa financial aid to enable it to make plenty of noise. But some of the shrewdest New York right wingers call it short-sighted to encourage the "coalition of discontent."

A top rank financier puts it: "Of course it's important to beat Roosevelt, but it's just as important to elect a conservative house. The Coughlin-Townsend-Share-the-Wealth group are likely to put too many radicals in congress for our comfort as it is. If we help them out with money and publicity, there's no telling how far they will go.

"There would be no percentage whatever in electing Landon if at the same time we enable a gang of crackpots to gain a balance of power position in the house. The Republican primaries in Maine—where the coalition won two out of three contests and lost the third only by a split in their own ranks—were a clear warning that we had better be careful about feeding stray pups that might grow up to be wolves."

THE TARZAN TWINS, No. 81

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The padlock on the village gates seemed an invincible obstacle. The nerves of the Tarzan Twins were on edge now. At any moment they might be spied by the wandering eye of one of the cannibal warriors. If they were captured again, they would surely be killed at once.

In frantic haste Dick tried to pick the lock with his pocket knife, but his efforts were futile. Then suddenly Doc almost gave vent to a cry of relief. He discovered that the shiftless tribesmen had fastened the end of the chain to a post with a bit of grass rope.

Since a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, this proved a very weak link indeed. A single stroke of the knife severed the rope. But that very move toward freedom was also a step toward recapture, for the stout chain clattered noisily to the ground!

Instantly the warriors halted their dance. "The gates!" cried the chief. Shrieking hideously and brandishing their spears, the savages swarmed forward. The four fugitives flung themselves frantically against the gates, but the massive wooden portals refused to budge!

WALL STREET REPORT

NEW YORK, June 30. (AP)—The stock market stumbled out of the first half of 1936 today and gave no definite indication of where it was headed in the second period.

Specialties furnished support for the list during the grater part of the session. Profit taking in the leaders was evident from the start, however, and late selling tended to unsettle the list.

Chrysler was subjected to considerable realizing, although in the final hour it was given another brisk forward push to a new 6-year peak. Up nearly 4 points at one time, it finished with a net gain of 1¾ at 113. Rumors of a split-up and a generous disbursement to shareholders were still being heard in brokerage quarters.

Steels were unable to advance, fears of a major strike proving a handicap. It was noted, though, these issues were steadier than in yesterday's sell-off.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .1 of a point at 61.6. Transfers totalled 822,285 shares against 776,-710 the declaration of a $2 dividend. Norfolk and Western, on 6 few transfers, was up 5 at 255, new top.

NEW ORLEANS REPORT

NEW ORLEANS, June 30. (AP)—Cotton prices gave way in the last hour today after holding steady for the major part of the session, losing from 6 to 13 points on the day.

Liquidation appeared in volume, reportedly for Wall Street account and prices dropped more than a dollar a bale from their early highs.

The market started off firm, gaining from 5 to 8 points on better cables and no overnight rain in the belt. Offerings were limited and a good trade demand held prices up.

But in the afternoon pressure converged on new crop months and offerings more than outweighed the narrow trade demand July dipped to 12.34, Oct. lost 10 points to 11.48 while March finished 12 points lower at 11.46.

NEW YORK REPORT

NEW YORK, June 30. (AP)—Cotton weakened under liquidation, believed to be chiefly from Wall Street sources, late today after early advanced.

October sold off from 11.73@11.48 and closed at 11.51 with the general market 6 to 19 points net lower.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3 to 7 points in response to Liverpool cables and a more constructive view of the proposed release of government loan cotton. Prices recovered just about all yesterday's losses selling 10 to 12 points net higher during the morning, but the demand tapered off and the market broke under the late afternoon selling. Closing quotations were within 2 to 3 points of the lowest on most positions.

of other comparatively old-time railroad men. Once the locomotive of his train plowed into deep snow five miles from Canyon in a cut. The engine, tender and two baggage coaches left the track and passengers were in discomfort for want of food. Montfort trudged the blizzard into Canyon, bought tubs of supplies with his own money and fought his way back to his train. The wind that day blew with such vehemence that a brakeman's raincoat was shredded.

Records Well Kept

Montfort's service was described by officials as well nigh incomparable. Especially were his records well kept.

Montfort was born Oct. 1, 1861, at Springfield, Ill., where he obtained his education. He moved at the age of 10 with his parents to Branson, Mo., where the parents homesteaded land. He was married there to Martha Ksuffman, who became the mother of three sons, one of which died in infancy.

Arrangements for funeral rites had not been completed, but it was expected the service would be read at Central Presbyterian church at Amarillo Thursday afternoon by Rev. R. Thomsen, pastor. Burial will be there. The Order of Railroad Conductors likely will have a part in the service. Montfort also was a Mason.

Another son survives, Herbert Montfort of Sacramento, Calif. Mrs. Ida Call of Springfield, Mo., is a foster daughter. There are three grandchildren, Mrs. Homer Brumley of Hereford, and Frank Montfort, jr., and Marthales Montfort, both of Lubbock.

might be sent out as additional applications are approved or might be held up until the next monthly payment.

The investigation of applications still was far from complete, Carpenter estimated that a total of more than 65,000 Texans would be found eligible for aid when the work was finished. He said investigations were proceeding much more rapidly and probably would be completed by the middle of August. All those placed on the rolls will receive payments retroactive to July 1.

The treasury department announced that on account of the old age pension warrants being issued on the first of each month, the call days for general revenue and Confederate pension warrants would be changed from the first and fifteenth of the month to the fifth and twentieth.

In Chicago, light and weighty steers realized 9.35 and fed heifers cashed up to 8.75. Kansas grazed Texas steers in Kansas City and St. Joseph averaging 1,277-1,228 lbs. scored 7.25 and medium grade Brahmas at Kansas City made 6.25@6.75. Common grass arrivals were noted down to 5.00.

Unevenness prevailed in the hog division. Chicago realized 10.95 for the day's extreme top.

CHICAGO REPORT

CHICAGO, June 30. (AP)—With domestic receipts of wheat at leading terminal markets nearly three times greater than a year ago, wheat prices today developed a notable downward trend.

Enlarged rural offerings of wheat to arrive in Chicago acted in particular as a weight on values. Canadian advices of beneficial rains were also a bearish influence.

Wheat closed unstable at virtually the day's bottom figures, 1 cent to 1¾ cents a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. July 92⅝@92¾. Sept. 93⅜@93¾. Dec. 95¼@95⅝; corn unchanged to 1⅜ down, July 66@66⅛, Sept. 65⅝@65⅞, Dec 62; oats ⅛ to 1⅜ off, Sept. 30⅝@30¾, and rye at 1 cent to 1½ cents down, Sept. 63½. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 37 cents decline.

Corn displayed stubborn relative strength as compared with wheat. July corn climbed to 67⅛ cents, within ⅛ of the season's previous peak.

Oats and rye weakened owing to notices of large deliveries here tomorrow on July contracts.

Provisions sagged because of July liquidating sales of lard.

FORT WORTH REPORT

FORT WORTH, June 30. (AP)—Demand for grain here continued very good today. Estimated receipts were: Wheat 75 cars, corn 4, oats 4, and sorghums 2.

Wheat: No. 1 hard, according to protein and milling 2.10¾@1.11¾. Barley No. 2 nom. 57@58; sorghums No. 2 yellow milo nom. 1.05@1.07; corn unchanged to 1¾ down, nom. 1.15@1.17. No. 2 white kafir 1.17 nom.; shelled No. 2 white 88@90; oats No. 2 red 40½@41½.

A. Castro of the Mexican army drowned. His body was found as flood waters receded from the residential district of Piedras Negras, Mex.

He had been stationed to watch for marooned families as the army went to the aid of peons whose adobe homes crumbled under the driving 16-inch rains.

Expected To Reach Crest

Downstream at Laredo, the rains had ceased. The Rio Grande was expected to go to its 20-foot reached a stage of 18.6 feet and was expected to go to its 20-foot crest. The Laredo-San Antonio highway was blocked near Pearsall and a railroad underpass was flooded, routing traffic via Alice.

One-fourth of an inch fell at Austin bringing the total for the last two days to about one inch. More precipitation was forecast.

Showers ranging from a trace to .59 of an inch fell over Navarro county (Corsicana). It was the first rains since May 29.

Intermittent sprinkles dropped in Dallas.

An unprecedented rain of seven and one-half inches fell at Seguin in an hour and 25 minutes sending creeks from banks. The water ran over curbs into some store buildings.

fore the league, which set out last fall in a futile effort to save his country from a nation it branded as an "aggressor."

Demonstrators in the galleries were hustled away to jail in taxicabs. They will be held, pending investigation of the startling manifestation.

Il Duce Sends Views

Premier Mussolini also communicated his views to the assembly through a memorandum describing Italy's action as "a sacred mission of civilization," in "the spirit of the league covenant."

Haile Selassie's voice was rather flat as he spoke in ambaric. His words were translated for the assembled diplomats.

"The representatives of 52 nations assured me the aggressor would not triumph," he said, after asserting "I did not wish the war that was imposed upon me . . .

"I never expected the people of foreign countries to have their sons shed blood for us, but I did expect the league powers to grant me financial assistance so I might purchase badly needed arms . . .

"Outside the Kingdom of the Lord, there is no nation which is greater than another. God and history will remember your judgment!"

Officials of the League of Nations announced late tonight they would cancel press cards of Italians as a result of the demonstration against the emperor.

The standing committee of the international association of newspapermen accredited to the league adopted a resolution, "deploring and condemning the conduct of a group of Italian journalists."

mand for new and oppressive taxes. It is an old political trick in Texas to throw up a smoke screen of talk about 'deficits' as a basis for new and enormous tax burdens. No new taxes at all will be necessary for general purposes of government, for schools, or for highways.

"I do not hesitate to predict that the state deficit will be entirely wiped out within the next two years, without any additional taxes."

In defense of the old age assistance plan, target of opposition jibes from the stump, Governor Allred said:

"May I remind you, in all humility, that I am the only candidate for governor who publicly advocated adoption of the old age assistance amendment?

"I did this on my visits over the state, about which my opponents are now complaining.

Free To Make Changes

"No law is ever satisfactory when it is first passed. All of them have to be amended from time to time, and the legislature is free to make changes in the old age assistance bill as its defects become obvious. The law isn't perfect, of course, but unquestionably it is one which will help to close the road that leads over the hill to the poor house.

"I issued a public statement that if it became necessary to call another special session when we are in possession of sufficient information to fully advise the legislature to our need (for financing old age assistance), I would call another special session. That statement still stands and the needy old people of Texas have nothing to worry about."

Strange Political Criticism

The governor said he had been criticized for not calling another "costly session of the legislature to raise additional taxes."

This is a strange political criticism in Texas," he said. "Heretofore the complaint has frequently been made that we have had too many special sessions, but never before that we have not had enough."

"Reckless statements have been made that it was my plan to finance old age assistance from liquor taxes alone. I will be perfectly frank with you." Allred said. "Since the people have voted to legalize liquor I think it ought to be taxed. I am wondering if these gentlemen who are trying to make political capital of such demagoguery advocate abolishing taxes on liquor."

He dismissed the thought of additional taxes with the assertion that "unless the legislature changes the Texas law so as to authorize payments of outright pensions to everybody over 65 years of age (which it can do, of course, but which would endanger our chances for federal money) then, based upon the percentage qualifying under the laws of other states, I tell you frankly we are not going to need many more taxes."

He said he wanted the state highway department to continue free from executive or political interference, asserted more laws sponsored by organized labor in "the interest of those who toil" had been passed by his administration than any other in the history of the state and said 24 of the 31 platform planks adopted by the state Democratic party after his nomination, had been carried out at least in part.

FOR RESOURCES TAX

ALVIN, June 30. (AP)—Millions of dollars will be added annually to the purchasing power of Texas citizens if a "fair and reasonable tax" is imposed upon natural resources, F. W. Fischer, Tyler gubernatorial candidate, said here today.

"The prosperity of our citizens that will follow the inauguration of this policy is obvious," said Fischer. "Our old people will receive $50,000,000 per year, who in turn will spend it with our merchants. Several million dollars additional will be paid to our school teachers in salaries and they, in turn, will spend it on civic improvements."

DEFER REMOVAL

SAN ANTONIO, June 30. (AP)—Instructions to defer removal of George B. Parr, former county judge of Duval county, to El Reno, Okla., to begin serving a two-year sentence for income tax evasion, were received Monday afternoon by United States Marshal Guy McNarmara from Attorney General Homer Cummings.

McNarmara was directed to defer removal of Parr until further notice, pending consideration of his application for executive clemency.

FDR Approves Subsidy Bill

Expansion Of American Merchant Marine Through Direct Government Subsidies Given Presidential Approval

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Legislation to expand the American merchant marine through direct government subsidies was signed into law today by President Roosevelt.

Pushed through by a determined group of senators on the last outright federal subsidies for ship construction and operation in place of the present payments made through ocean mail contract.

A United States maritime commission of five members will be set up to administer the program, which is intended to increase the amount of commerce handled by American ships and to provide additional vessels for use in the event of war.

The act provides that the government shall pay up to 50 per cent of the cost of ships. Operators are to be required ordinarily to put up 25 per cent of the cost. The government is authorized to lend the remaining 25 per cent at 3 1-2 per cent interest, the loans to be repaid in 20 years.

Under the law the government also can build a vessel itself and charter it to repudiate operators.

Coxey Withdraws His Candidacy

MASSILLON, O., June 30. (AP)—"General" Jacob S. Coxey, 82-year-old campaigner for non-interest government and municipal bonds, has withdrawn as the Farmer-Labor party's presidential candidate.

Coxey announced the withdrawal in a letter to Roy M. Harrop, chairman of the national committee of the Farmer-Labor party at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

He said he would lend his efforts to promote the candidacy of Representative William Lemke of North Dakota, the presidential nominee of the new Union party.

The Farmer-Labor party selected Coxey last summer at its convention in Omaha.

Ten miles east of Wellington, Tex., at the Red river bridge, the two gunmen forced Pogue from his automobile and drove into Oklahoma. Pogue walked back to Wellington. His automobile was found near Reed.

No trace of the fugitives had been found, however, since they were seen driving at high speed through the main street of Reed, shortly after they drove off in Whittiker's car.

Call Is Sent For GOP Meet

State Convention Is To Be Held In San Antonio, Aug. 11 This Year; Candidates To Be Named In Meeting

(By The Associated Press)

DALLAS, June 30.—The formal call for the Republican state convention at San Antonio Aug. 11, when a state ticket for the party will be selected, was issued today from state headquarters here.

John W. Philp, director of organization, said a candidate for United States senator would also be named, as well as an executive committee for 31 members.

Philp said all Republican candidates would be nominated in convention this year because their presidential candidate failed to poll as many as 100,000 votes in 1932 and the party was not compelled to conduct a primary.

Annual Affair At Canadian Is Set

CANADIAN, June 30. (AP)—Canadian's portion of the Texas Centennial celebration will be the 14th annual edition of the Anvil Park Rodeo here July 2-4.

July 3rd has been designated "old timers day" and persons who came to this area previous to 1892 will be given special consideration. Entertainment will include an old fiddlers contest and square dances.

The rodeo committee has received a car load of three-year-old, Longhorns bulldogging steers from the Mexican state of Chihuahua. The association owns all livestock used and bucking horses and riding steers have been placed in pastures near the rodeo grounds. New lots of bucking horses are being tried out daily and only those that come up to the rigid specifications of the committee will be selected.

Large Brahma steers, four and five years old, will be used in the riding contest. The Brahma is said to be the wildest breed of cattle and frequently when it bucks off a cowboy will turn and attempt to trample the rider.

The Anvil Park rodeo is a contest show in which the contestants pay an entrance fee and complete for cash prizes and merchandise awards. The bronc riding contest purse is $300, the calf roping contest purse $225 plus one half the entrance fee, and the bulldogging contest pays a purse of $225.

WASHINGTON, June 30. (AP)—The United States patent office has granted Verne S. Hillock of Arlington, Texas, another patent on a new type rose bush.

Hillock claimed his rose appeared red when opening but turned to a deep rose pink.

Gooch's Girl Friend Charged In Two-Year-Old Holdup Case

HOLDENVILLE, Okla., June 30. (AP)—Maudie Lawson, girl friend of the Lindbergh kidnaping law's first victim, Arthur Gooch, faced an armed robbery charge here today in a two-year-old holdup in which Gooch himself once was implicated.

Sheriff Harve Ball arrested her and a companion, Ona Dalton, at Allen yesterday as he investigated an attempted robbery of an Atwood drug store the night before.

Deputy Sheriff Bill Gaddy said Miss Lawson and Gooch broke from the Holdenville jail in 1934 while she and Gooch, hanged June 19 for the kidnaping of two Paris, Tex., officers, were awaiting trial on armed robbery charges.

Gaddy said she never had been tried, either on the armed robbery or the jail breaking charge.
