Explosion rocks Big Spring, kills woman

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A home explosion that left one woman dead and was heard more than 8 miles away rocked Big Spring in the pre-dawn hours of Monday morning, as two homes were destroyed and 20 others damaged in the blast's wake.

At the time of the accident, Big Spring fire inspectors still did not know what caused the home of June Carothers, 75, of Big Spring, to blow up. Ms. Carothers was killed when her home at 1404 Stadium Ave. exploded and burst into flames around 3 a.m.

Most of Big Spring awoke to the sound of the blast that sent splintered debris flying down the block. Shane Mayhall, 37, was one of the neighbors aroused from bed.

"I heard the boom. I saw it (the home) on fire. To me it looked like a gas fire," Mayhall said.

In the rear of the home, Mayhall said he saw a stream of gas or fuel shooting 20 to 25 feet into the black night.

Another neighbor John Lyons, 47, said he thought the worst had happened.

"The first thing I thought was that a jet crashed. I looked out my front door and saw a big fireball. It scared you to look outside," Lyons said.

'It scared the hell outta me. I thought my own house blew up. It was the loudest noise I've ever heard in my life. All I know is, it was massive.'

— Craig Norman
Big Spring resident

Neighbor Craig Norman awoke to the boom and saw an unknown passer-by enter the home of Ms. Carother's neighbor, F. Fleckenstein, pulling her from the home to safety shortly after the explosion.

Norman said, "By the time I was dragging my hose across the street, some man carried her (Fleckenstein) out of the house."

Ms. Fleckenstein's home suffered devastating damage catching on fire from the flames coming from Ms. Carothers' burning home.

"It scared the hell outta me. I thought my own house blew up. It was the loudest noise I've ever heard in my life. All I know is, it was massive," Norman said.

Norman described the explosion's shockwaves by showing the damage in his own home with lights crashed on the floor in the kitchen, various ceiling damage and blown out windows. Norman's home was not the only one to suffer damages.

City of Big Spring Fire Marshal Carl Condray said, "This is not confined just to this corner. Basically, we had debris scattered 60 or 70 yards."

Rubble projected from Ms. Carothers' house all around the neighborhood. Lumber, unscathed and unburnt, was scattered around the home's circumference. Ms. Carothers' bathroom medicine chest and bathroom mirror were blasted across the street to Norman's front yard.

Aside from the debris, the damage from the explosion's force resonated in a single circular wave from the explosion's center. Neighbors spent the day assessing the damage with insurance inspectors.

Mayhall's home directly across the street also suffered severe damage from the blast. The roar proved so strong it pushed his garage door off its rails and scattered materials in his garage.

Neighbors north of Ms. Carothers' home came out of bed with glass shattered on top of them. Alma Perez, 19, said she had just given her baby a bottle when the explosion jolted her out of bed.

Founder of Odessa's Globe Theatre dies

By Georgia Temple
Entertainment Editor

ODESSA — A student inspired a teacher who inspired a community to build an uncommon theater. The grand opening was held in 1968, a decade after the construction began.

On Sunday, the dreamer inspired by her student's words, longtime Odessan Marjorie Rogers Morris, 93, died.

But the dream survives and has reached around the world. In 2001, those visiting the new Globe Theatre in London will find listed in the museum there the Globe of the Great Southwest — in Odessa, Texas.

"They have a mock-up of Shakespearean theaters around the world, and there is the Globe Theatre of Odessa," said Midlander Marilyn Allen, a member of the Globe of the Great Southwest of Odessa board of trustees, who recently attended a production at the London theater. "I was surprised and delighted. I think that the whole area is indebted to Marjorie for her foresightedness in instigating the establishment of a Shakespearean facility in this area."

Born Aug. 23, 1907, in Pilot Point, Mrs. Morris died Sunday at an Odessa hospital. She was the youngest of nine children born to the Rev. and Mrs.

Midland College to consider bids, tuition increase

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

Area community college students may be finding themselves shelling out a little more money come this fall as Midland College officials are considering a raise in tuition for classes starting in August.

Current total tuition fees for in-district students are $76 per credit hour and $248 for out-of-state students. The proposed raise will increase the total tuition about $36 for all students who are taking 12 credit hours or more.

"If it is approved, it is not going to be a huge increase," said Elise Coombes, director of Public Relations for Midland College. "It's not going to be a huge imposition on most students."

Ms. Coombes said while preliminary discussion of the proposal specified no specific dollar amount, the reasons for considering an increase were presented to the board.

"They were just asked to consider the reasons why," she said. "There has been a huge growth in enrollment. In 1996, enrollment was at 4,000 and last semester it was 5,300. This puts a strain on building use, on faculty, on computers. It's wonderful to have more students, but in order to provide for them, we need more money."

Midland College President David Daniel agrees.

"Our enrollment has grown substantially over the past couple of years," he said. "And the state's part in providing funds has not kept pace with our growth. There is a formula that the state uses to determine what should go to a community college based on each contact hour, and that fund's at about 72 percent. Our long-term goal is to have funding at 100 percent."

Daniel also said community support in the form of scholarships and grants to area students makes the current tuition a lot more accessible for most students.

ROCK: Investigators look for answers

(From 1A)

"I started to doze off, we heard a boom and the house started to shake. The glass was bad," Ms. Perez said.

The Perez home normally would be blocked from view standing in front of Carothers' home, but now, with investigators rummaging through the former kitchen area, the Perez family home can be seen clearly. Long strips of orange lumber were still stuck in the trees above their home. Earlier in the morning they had to remove similar strips of wood from one of the windows of the house.

Neighbors and officials said relatives of Ms. Carothers came early in the day to see the damage for themselves.

"She (Ms. Carothers) has a daughter that came in from Dallas and a grandson that lives here in Big Spring. She turned 75 the 13th of June," neighbor Lucia Perez, 51, said.

Left behind now are a few cats, but nothing else is salvageable, which might include Ms. Carothers' car in the home's driveway. Mayhall said Ms. Carothers was nice and kept to herself.

"She was sort of an eccentric pack-rat. She probably had about 20 cats," Mayhall said.

Marshal Condray, in conjunction with Energas employees and the Texas Railroad Commission, were searching for the cause.

"We're still trying to find the source," Condray said. "We still haven't gotten an exact cause yet."

MC: Trustees to revisit TIRZ program

(From 1A)

"As we grow and increase services to students, it's necessary to increase tuition to cover the actual expenses. We've tried to keep them very modest and in line with other institutions.

"We've also had a very generous scholarship program here, courtesy of the Abell-Hanger Foundation," Daniel said. "Their program provides tuition scholarships for all high school graduates in Midland County, so we have extraordinary support for students and will continue to have it, but we need to cover the expense of having quality education for our students."

In addition to the tuition-raise consideration this afternoon, the Midland College Board of Trustees also will be considering construction and renovation bids.

Bids for equipment, furniture, carpet, a depository bank and other supplies will be discussed by the board.

The board also will revisit a plan to include Midland College funds in the Tax Increment Reinvestment Zone, a program that reroutes unused funds to civic improvements. Ms. Coombes said the board already has voted to participate in the project, but additional details need to be voted on.

Doctor finds evidence of neglect, sexual abuse in case of young girl

HUTCHINS (AP) — A child abuse specialist who examined an 8-year-old girl rescued from a mobile home last week says the girl had been malnourished for years and was sexually abused, according to a search warrant affidavit.

On Friday, police searched the mobile home where they say Lauren Calhoun was imprisoned in a urine- and feces-contaminated closet for at least four months. They were looking for items that could have caused the abuse as well as evidence of neglect.

Hutchins Police Chief Gregory Griffin said the department sought the search warrant after receiving "credible" allegations of sexual abuse.

The affidavit by the lead investigator said Dr. Donna Persaud, who examined Lauren, found injuries to the child's genital area. Persaud told police the injuries could have occurred in several ways, including with a blunt or sharp object, the affidavit said.

A copy of the affidavit says police searched the Dallas County home for a paddle and blunt or sharp objects that could have been used on the child, cuttings from the closet where the girl was kept and bedding items to test for blood and semen.

Sheriff's deputies removed bags, a laundry basket, a small mattress, a blue plastic bin and a door. Authorities photographed the inside and outside of the home and diagramed its contents.

Lauren's mother, Barbara Atkinson, and her stepfather, Kenneth Atkinson, told police they left her alone, locked in the closet on some occasions while the rest of the family went on trips out of town, according to the affidavit.

Persaud also told police that Lauren, who is extremely malnourished, has been in that condition for years, causing her to be below her normal developmental stage. According to the affidavit, her five siblings told police they and the family's pets received adequate food.

GLOBE: Morris traveled to original theater

(From 1A)

W.L. Rogers. Services are scheduled for 2 p.m. today in a church where she taught Sunday School for more than 30 years — the First Baptist Church, Odessa, with the Rev. Melvin Warren officiating. Internment will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens.

Mrs. Morris, whose husband preceded her in death some years ago, had no children. Relatives have asked that memorial contributions be made, not surprisingly, to the Globe of the Great Southwest.

"She was ahead of her time in wanting achievement for women not only in education but in business and economics and in all directions," said Globe Theatre board of trustees member Priscilla Hyson, who has known Mrs. Morris since the early 1960s. "I thought she was a very strong individual, very persevering, very responsible. I liked her very much."

Mrs. Morris, who taught English literature at Odessa High School, was a tireless worker for her cause — building the Globe Theatre and keeping it going. The relationship between Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Hyson first formed over the telephone when Mrs. Morris would call the English, drama and music teachers in the Ector County Independent School District to encourage them to bring their classes to productions, recalled Mrs. Hyson. In 1985, Ms. Hyson, became a member of the Juliet Society, an auxiliary organization that raises money for the Globe Theatre and in 1990, joined the board of trustees.

"She was undauntable, not dissuaded well from anything that she was doing," Mrs. Hyson said. "She was one of these people that was a survivor. She kept on at whatever her goal was. If people didn't want to contribute, that was fine. She went on to the next person.

"It took her 10 years to raise the funds for the Globe Theatre with the help of the community. It took her a year to raise the funds for the Anne Hathaway Cottage (which opened in 1986) after people had seen what had been achieved through the erection of the Globe."

Another friend of Mrs. Morris, Frances Dunn, remembered how the architect, the late J. Ellsworth Powell of Midland, worked with Mrs. Morris on the construction of the theater.

"She told him, 'I cannot get all of the money that you will need to build this theater at one time. I can get it in pieces,'" recalled Mrs. Dunn, who also serves on the Globe's board of trustees and is a member of the Juliet Society. "He would tell her how much he needed for the first section. He built it so it was protected and didn't weather. He worked with her this way, and I thought that was very fortunate that she could find someone who would do that."

The site of the Globe on the Odessa College campus also represented a tradeoff. Both Mrs. Hyson and Mrs. Dunn recalled how the then-superintendent of schools in Odessa wanted Mrs. Morris to teach English at the college, which had been newly built and was, in the beginning, a part of ECISD.

"He knew that she was looking for land to build the Globe," Mrs. Hyson said. "He told her one day — 'If I can get the board of directors to give this piece of property on the center edge of Odessa College to you to build the Globe Theatre, will you come and teach English literature at Odessa College?' And she said, 'Yes.'"

The Globe Theatre was not the only non-profit that Mrs. Morris, who was a graduate of North Texas State University, founded in the Permian Basin.

"She was the founder of our chapter of the poetry society," said Pat Peek of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Poetry Society of Texas, originally the Odessa chapter. "On June 5, 1967, she held the first meeting in her classroom at Odessa College. ...

"She wasn't active that much in the society after I joined. She would come, and we had a 90th birthday party for her. So I knew her in her later years, but she was still quite a dynamic person."

"She was very strong physically," Mrs. Hyson said of Mrs. Morris. "She had run track at North Texas State University and she also played basketball."

"She was a very astute business woman," said Mrs. Dunn, noting that Mrs. Morris made several trips to England to research building the Globe Theatre. "This was her favorite thing in life, to get the Globe built and get it going and have Shakespearean plays produced there."

Mrs. Morris wanted young people to see Shakespeare and other master playwrights produced locally. And she wanted the material to be clean.

"She felt very strong about that," Mrs. Dunn said. "She wanted to feel free to bring children or young adults in to the theater to see Shakespeare and not have profanity and various things that you get to see on TV quite frequently. That was very important to her."

The lack of profanity was part of a contract she had made with God, one she describes in her own words.

"From the first day that I received the inspiration for a Globe Theatre, I promised our maker there would be no sex-oriented speeches or actions on its stage, no cursing or foul language and God's name would not be taken in vain — this applies also to those who rent the theater," Mrs. Morris wrote some years ago. "We produce literature that teaches and that will lift the spirits to the 'good, the true, the beautiful.'"

"She was certainly a highly religious person," said Anthony Ridley, the director of the Globe Theatre. "I know that the phrase 'the good, the true and the beautiful' was something that she coined and was very much a believer in.

"She was so concerned about getting students in to see the shows that she did not want anything to be produced that would offend those students or teach them a set of values that was inappropriate.

"She says in this handwritten note, she promised if God would help, she would build it as a shrine and not allow anything obscene to be presented here. I don't think the spirit of it will ever change."

Half of world's 6,800 languages face extinction

By Darlene Superville
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ever hear someone speak Udihe, Eyak or Arikapu?

Odds are you never will. Among the world's 6,800 languages, half to 90 percent could be extinct by the end of the century.

Half of all languages are spoken by fewer than 2,500 people each, according to the Worldwatch Institute, a private organization that monitors global trends.

Languages need at least 100,000 speakers to pass from generation to generation, says UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

War, genocide, fatal natural disasters, government bans and the adoption of more dominant languages, such as Chinese and Russian, also contribute to their demise.

"In some ways it's similar to what threatens species," said Payal Sampat, a Worldwatch researcher who wrote about the topic for the institute's May-June magazine.

The outlook for Udihe, Eyak and Arikapu — spoken in Siberia, Alaska and the Amazon jungle, respectively — is particularly bleak. About 100 people speak Udihe, six speak Arikapu, and Eyak is down to one, Worldwatch says. Marie Smith, 83, of Anchorage, Alaska, says she's the last speaker of Eyak, a claim verified by linguists. She doesn't like the distinction.

"It's horrible to be alone," Smith, who grew up in nearby Prince William Sound speaking Eyak, told The Associated Press in an interview Monday. "I am the last person that talks in our language."

It's becoming a struggle, too, to find many who can say "thank you" in the Navajo language of the American Indian tribe (ahehee), say "hello" in the Maori language of New Zealand (kia ora) or rattle off the proud Cornish saying: "Me na vyn cows Sawsnak!" (I will not speak English!).

The losses ripple far beyond the affected communities. When a language dies, linguists, anthropologists and others lose rich sources of material for their work documenting a people's history, finding out what they knew and tracking their movements from region to region.

And the world, linguistically speaking, becomes less diverse.

In January, a catastrophic earthquake in western India killed an estimated 30,000 speakers of Kutchi, leaving about 770,000.

Manx, from the Isle of Man in the Irish Sea, disappeared in 1974 with the death of its last speaker. In 1992, a Turkish farmer's passing marked the end of Ubykh, a language from the Caucasus region with the most consonants on record, 81.

Eight countries account for more than half of all languages. They are, in order, Papua New Guinea, Indonesia, Nigeria, India, Mexico, Cameroon, Australia and Brazil.

That languages die isn't new; thousands are believed to have disappeared already.

"The distinguishing thing is it's happening at such an alarming rate right now," said Megan Crowhurst, chairwoman of the Linguistic Society of America's endangered languages committee.

Linguists believe 3,400 to 6,120 languages could become extinct by 2100, a statistic grimmer than the widely used estimate of about one language death every two weeks.

While a few languages, including Chinese, Greek and Hebrew, are more than 2,000 years old, others are coming back from the dead, so to speak.

In 1983, Hawaiians created the 'Aha Punana Leo organization to reintroduce their native language throughout the state, including its public schools. The language nearly became extinct when the United States banned schools from teaching students in Hawaiian after annexing the then-independent country in 1898.

'Aha Punana Leo, which means "language nest," opened Hawaiian-language immersion preschools in 1984, followed by secondary schools that produced their first graduates, taught entirely in Hawaiian, in 1999.

Some 7,000 to 10,000 Hawaiians currently speak their native tongue, up from fewer than 1,000 in 1983, said Luahiwa Namahoe, the organization's spokeswoman.

"We just want Hawaiian back where she belongs," Namahoe explained.

Governments can help by removing bans on languages, and children should be encouraged to speak other languages in addition to their native tongues, said Worldwatch's Sampat, who is fluent in French and Spanish and grew up speaking the Indian languages of Hindi, Marathi, Gujarati and Kutchi.

Is the SIMPLE IRA right for you?

As a small business owner, you should be both interested and concerned about two prevailing workplace trends: the job growth created by small businesses and the responsibility of individuals for their own retirement planning. In fact, small employers (defined as firms with fewer than 100 employees) represent over 99 percent of all employers and employ 52 percent of all private workers.

Daniel Watts

Yet, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, small employers are not a big source of retirement plan coverage. Only 46 percent of employees in small, private businesses with fewer than 100 employees participated in employer-sponsored retirement plans, compared to almost 80 percent of employees in large private companies. Small employers without plans report being familiar with 401(k) and profit-sharing plans, but little else. Close to one-third report never having heard of the savings incentive match plan for employees (SIMPLE), a relatively new retirement plan option for small employers.

Is the SIMPLE IRA right for your business? First, look at how much you would like to save for your own retirement. Then determine how generous you want to be with retirement benefits for employees. As a business owner, the maximum you will be allowed to defer from your own compensation into a SIMPLE IRA is $6,500. Coupled with the maximum employer match, your total annual savings in a SIMPLE IRA would be no more than $13,000.

If saving as much as you can for retirement is a prime concern, a SIMPLE IRA would probably be an appropriate choice if your salary is below $50,000. If you earn above that amount, you should look into a SEP retirement plan where your savings for retirement could be as much as 15 percent of compensation, up to a maximum of $25,500 in the year 2001.

Because employer contributions to a SIMPLE IRA are mandatory and vest immediately, you have to determine the type of employee your business attracts in order to make an intelligent choice as to which contribution option is right for your company. One employer contribution choice matches only the contributions of those employees who elect to defer part of their own salary into a SIMPLE IRA. This dollar-for-dollar match cannot exceed three percent of employee compensation. However, you may elect a lower matching contribution of not less than one percent in any of two out of five years. The dollar-for-dollar match may be the appropriate choice if you have a business with a high turnover, such as in the restaurant or small retail store businesses. In many cases, these employees are making near minimum wages, are young, or are seasonal workers. They would be unlikely to contribute to a retirement plan and, thus, would not be eligible for this match.

The other employer option is to make contributions of two percent of compensation across the board for all eligible employees, regardless of their participation in the plan. This may be a good choice if you would like to attract and keep a skilled work force and are competing with larger companies for the same type of employee. A generous retirement plan benefit would make your company more attractive.

If you have been disappointed with traditional pension plans, the SIMPLE IRA may be worth a closer look. However, since the SIMPLE IRA can be your only qualified plan, consider all available pension plan alternatives to determine which plan best meets your current and future retirement needs and those of your employees.

American Home Improvement makes dreams come true

Whether you're dreaming of a roomy enclosure (pictured) to add space to your home or other improvements, call American Home Improvement at 520-5318.

Their name really should be "American Dream Fulfillment," because that's really their business, and has been for many years. American Home Improvement does so many things—windows, siding, cabinets, sun rooms, awnings, shutters, window coverings, tubular skylights—that they should be able to help you make just about any dream come true for your home.

If your dreams begin in the kitchen, let American Home Improvement show you the beautifully functional cabinets for the kitchen (or bedroom or bath). These all-wood cabinets come in warm wood tones or sparkling whites. Need to fit an oddly-shaped area? No problem. Other options include moveable shelves, task lights, apothecary drawers, tilt-front trays and appliance garages.

Maybe you're ready to re-do those windows. Windows are not only a key part of your décor, they are a major factor in keeping your home comfortable all year round.

Vinyl replacement windows cut energy loss with double pane glass and snug frames that limit airflow. That feature allows them also to keep dust and dirt out when the wind blows. These windows will actually open and close easily—so you can let in that cool morning breeze when you want to. They are also very attractive and will keep their good looks for a long, long time.

Soften the light a little more by having American Home Improvement place awnings over your windows. The company installs fabric or aluminum awnings in European and American styles. Aluminum awnings can fit over anything from small to large windows to a whole patio.

Another attractive window option includes shutters. Shutters let you change the amount of light you let in as the sun moves across the sky. They help reduce heat and the damage done by the sun's UV rays. Shutters are easy to clean and they come in a variety of colors to complement your décor.

For a more elegant look, consider Hunter Douglas window treatments. Softfold shadings, privacy sheers, honeycomb shades and other fine choices can help you get the look you really want. For extra convenience, the Duette honeycomb shades have a remote control option, so you don't have to leave your easy chair to open or close them.

Your biggest dream may be to drive up to your home without being embarrassed by flaking paint and warped boards on the siding or trim. Maybe you're just tired of painting every few years. If so, ask American Home Improvement about durable, beautiful, energy-saving siding. With siding, you'll never have to worry about painting again. Siding can actually add value to your home by improving its drive-up appeal.

You can simply add some soft shade over porch or patio with Pergola Overhead Systems. These all-aluminum systems have a baked-on UV-resistant finish and a 10-year warranty. They're available in a number of attractive colors.

Now you can stop just dreaming and start realizing your dream.

American Home Improvement has been locally owned and operated for 17 years. Call them at 520-5318 in Midland or 550-7224 in Odessa for a free estimate and home demonstration. Their Midland location is 4410 North Midkiff, next to Sugarbaker's.

Get your car cool again at Midland Muffler

You first noticed that, when stopped at a traffic light, your air conditioner just didn't seem to be doing as well as it used to. Or maybe you're hearing a noise when the compressor comes on. Or, worst case, your vehicle's air conditioner just quit working one day when the temperature was over 100 degrees.

Stay as cool as you can this summer by letting Midland Muffler repair your vehicle's air conditioning.

For almost two years now, Midland Muffler and Brake has also been the place for air conditioning repair. Their air conditioning expert is Dale Warden, who has almost 30 years of repair experience.

Midland Muffler repairs systems on both new vehicles, using R-134a refrigerant, and older models still running R-12. The truth is, however, that R-12 is getting more expensive and more difficult to obtain. Dale suggests, if your system needs major repair such as a new compressor, that could be the time to have him change it over to the plentiful R-134a. The changeover costs a little extra, but it will save you money immediately because your system would be refilled with R-134a, which costs much less than R-12.

Properly done, that conversion involves replacing the dryer and orifice, some tweaking of the electronic controls and flushing the old oil out of the compressor. "If you don't flush the compressor, you run the risk of it burning up within about a year of converting," Dale warns. "Then you're really out some money." Flushing is necessary because the lubricant for R-12 is very different from that for R-134a, and failure to flush the compressor will keep it from getting the lubrication it needs.

If you haven't had your system checked in several years, Dale recommends you bring it by for a checkup, even if it's working okay. "All mobile air conditioning systems leak tiny amounts of refrigerant from rubber hoses and other seals," Dale explains. While vehicles store some extra refrigerant, over time, even that can leak out. When your a/c system is low, it can cause expensive damage to the compressor and other components. "It's just like anything else—your a/c will last longer with regular maintenance," Dale states.

Maintenance includes checking and cleaning the air conditioning fins in front of the radiator, which you can do yourself. With the fins on the front, they catch bugs (you've probably seen butterflies stuck there), dirt, leaves and other things that can reduce the airflow and keep your inside air from getting as cold as you need it.

Of course, Midland Muffler and Brake, as the name implies, also carries a complete line of exhaust products including mufflers, tail pipes, catalytic converters and performance products such as Flo Master and Dyno-Max. They sell, install and warranty brake parts for a wide range of cars, trucks, recreational vehicles and delivery trucks. Midland Muffler also performs alignments using state-of-the-art equipment.

Midland Muffler and Brake has been locally owned since 1983. They are located at 3200 W. Front. Hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 7:30 a.m. to noon on Saturday. The phone number is 699-7924. Their Odessa location, ProTech Undercar, is located at 1621 North Grant.

Drescher's pencil, watercolor portraits capture life

Instead of a photo, have you ever considered having a portrait painted? The artist's brush can breathe life into a likeness in ways no photograph ever could.

Professional artist Sara Drescher uniquely captures the subjects' spark of life in her pencil and watercolor portraits. "I really try to show the essence, the emotion of the person," she says. "I've had people cry when they saw their portrait."

Sara gets started after taking several photos. This is especially helpful when she's doing children, who find sitting still a challenge.

She delivers a completed work with one subject in an 11 x 14 format (high quality paper if a drawing, watercolor paper if watercolor). Your portrait will usually be finished in about two weeks.

This is surprisingly affordable. A one-person pencil drawing costs $100, while a watercolor is $200.

A portrait is a perfect gift for a birthday or a wedding. It satisfies even that person who has everything. It's a wonderful surprise for grandparents.

Sara Drescher, a native Midlander, has a Bachelor of Arts from The University of North Texas. She took first place for water color at the 1999 Spring Juried Show at The Museum of the Southwest. Call her at 687-7049 to make an appointment.

A pencil or watercolor portrait like this one by artist Sara Drescher is surprisingly affordable.

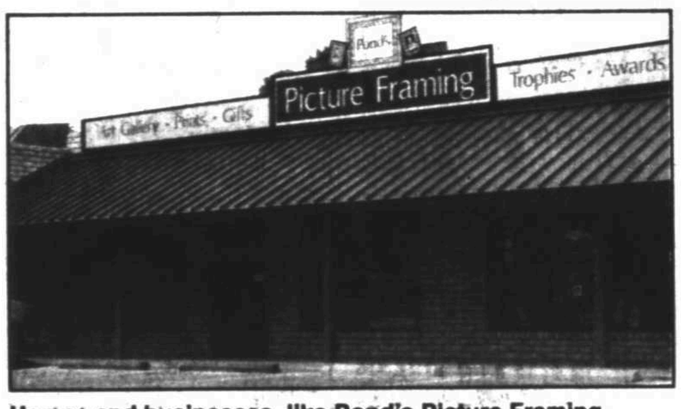
Window film saves, beautifies, protects

The eyes may be windows to the soul, but windows are your eyes to the world. Like closing your eyes against bright light, you want to protect your home against the sun's heat and ultraviolet rays. Window film from Mid West Glass lets you keep out the harmful elements without plunging your home into darkness.

Mid West installs a variety of types of window film, some of which blocks out up to 80 percent of the sun's heat and 100 percent of its damaging UV rays. UV rays, over time, can fade carpet and other furnishings and can 'dry rot' curtains that are exposed to the most sunlight.

Without some type of protection, west-facing windows can let in heat much of the year. Curtains or shutters darken the room. Window film cuts heat and UV rays while giving you a choice of how much light to let in.

Highly reflective film reduces glare and improves security by making it hard for others to see in. Security films are very hard to break with a hammer or cut with a knife. These films also hold glass together if it breaks, reducing the danger of being cut by sharp fragments.



Homes and businesses, like Pond's Picture Framing, enjoy the beauty and protection of window film from Mid West Glass. Call 682-7373.

A variety of attractive architectural tones are available to add beauty both inside and out, for years to come. Residential films include a lifetime warranty on the color and against peeling, bubbling or cracking.

Another beauty of window film is that it is much less expensive than installing new windows and may even pay for itself in reduced air conditioning costs. Installation usually goes quickly, with minimal interruption of your life.

Window film goes on anything with glass—bay windows, French doors, sliding patio doors—and any shape glass—square, round, oval, or other decorative patterns.

This is an attractive and simple way to fight back against the harsh elements of the sun, while letting in the light and the view you enjoy. Call Mid West today for a free estimate.

Mid-West Glass offers glass and windows for any use, as well as patio enclosures. Located at 906 W. Front, the phone number for a free estimate is 682-7373.

Juneteenth celebration for all Americans

In this country, there is nothing we cherish more than our hard-won freedom. Most of us concentrate our celebration of independence around the Fourth of July, the day we declared independence from the English crown.

But for African-Americans, Juneteenth is just as, if not more, important a day for celebrating freedom.

It was on June 19, 1865 that Union soldiers under the command of Major General Gordon Granger, landed at Galveston with news the Civil War had ended and all slaves were now free.

President Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation of Jan. 1, 1863 had had little impact on slaves in the south. It was Juneteenth of 1865 that the slaves enjoyed their first taste of freedom.

In Galveston on the original Juneteenth, the former slaves are said to have broken out into song and festivities when they learned they were indeed free.

In the following years, the custom of celebrating Juneteenth spread to neighboring cities and states.

Here in Midland, African-Americans have endeavored to keep the spirit of Juneteenth alive. There were at least two individual public Juneteenth celebrations this past weekend in which members of the community came together to share food, conversation and the spirit of the day.

But Juneteenth need not be viewed as an exclusively African-American day. We should all take pride in the celebration of important days in American history.

As Americans, we have struggled together through wars and economic hard times. We have celebrated the triumphs of scientific discovery, military victory, space exploration and economic gain. Our great talents have been drawn from every walk of life.

As Americans, we should always bear in mind that the things we have in common are more important than the differences that might pull us apart.

Although the joy and festivities of this past weekend's Juneteenth celebration may already be a fond, fading memory, today's historical date should be honored by Americans of all ethnic backgrounds.

History teaches us we ought to look back on those determined souls who kept the Juneteenth celebratory spirit alive even when it was frowned upon or discouraged.

We Americans enjoy unprecedented freedom. Whether the roots of an individual's freedom can be traced to European immigration, slavery or the Revolutionary War, we all ought to appreciate and honor the freedom each of us enjoys.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, June 19, the 170th day of 2001. There are 195 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 19, 1934, the Federal Communications Commission was created.

On this date:

In 1586, English colonists sailed from Roanoke Island, N.C., after failing to establish England's first permanent settlement in America.

In 1862, slavery was outlawed in U.S. territories.

In 1910, Father's Day was celebrated for the first time, in Spokane, Wash.

Survey: More parents want to care for children

WASHINGTON — For years, child care has been the rallying call of working women. If America could have a universal system, like many European nations do, children would get the early education they deserve while their mothers earn a living. But the notion has lost its luster. First came reports that infants left in day care grow withdrawn, refusing to respond to their parents when they return. Professionals feared these children would grow up unable to relate to anybody and become serious social problems.

Anderson

Now mothers and fathers are turning against child-care centers, strongly preferring that their children have a parent at home with them most of the day, every day. In a survey conducted by Public Agenda of New York and fortified by seven focus groups, the overwhelming majority took this view, while some added that they could manage with both parents working different shifts. Other possibilities included care by close relatives, another mom in the neighborhood, or a babysitter at home.

As for day-care centers, 63 percent of those surveyed are convinced that even those centers of high quality are not able to give their children the love and attention they would receive at home. No one, they feel, can do as good a job with their babies as they themselves can, not only in conveying affection, but also in inculcating moral values and standards of conduct. They believe dads are just as effective in this respect as moms.

Moreover, large numbers of young parents in America are arranging their lives to give their children the care they want for them. Many are living in smaller houses, forgoing luxuries and travel, and putting their careers on hold. Others are moving closer to grandparents in order to assure that their offspring have proper supervision.

Day-care centers are not well regarded. Parents worry about neglect and abuse, either physical or sexual. This concern is especially acute in low-income families. Even though reports confirm that a child is far more likely to be badly treated at home than at a day-care center, worries persist, no doubt fueled by media coverage of the few problems that have occurred. And while it is generally conceded that children learn to get along with each other at day-care centers, parents nonetheless fear they might pick up troublesome manners and behavior there.

For all that, child advocates continue to press for better trained and better compensated professionals in day-care centers. They call for stricter licensing standards and more generous funding by Congress. However, parents see it differently. They insist caring for their children is their own responsibility, not the government's, though they would welcome tax credits that would help them keep one parent at home. As for day-care centers set up by companies, most employers say operating expenses and liability coverage would be too costly. They point out that they're doing all they can to give their people health insurance and pensions, the first of which means more to most workers than day care. Child advocates want companies to offer six months' paid parental leave, but that hardly seems likely to happen.

Most of the respondents in this survey recognize that day care is necessary for some families, especially those on welfare. In fact, there are times when some women resent that they have to work while mothers on welfare get to stay at home with their children. All that has changed with welfare reform, of course. Now 63 percent of African-Americans and 52 percent of white parents call for expanding preschool programs to help prepare low-income kids for first grade.

The overriding concern of parents is finding someone trustworthy to look after their children. It's not convenience or cost. What would mean the most to them is tax breaks that help one parent stay at home full time.

A simple case of the haves and have-nots

The ones who have seen it are in a very elite group, more elite even than those who are in the 1 percent of richest Americans.

Those who have seen "The Producers" have an air of security about them that the ones who have not seen the show will never know.

I don't want to brag, but I'm in the "have" class. I can't tell you how I got to see the show because we "haves" are sworn to secrecy on how we got our seats. Let's just say an angel gave them to me for doing good deeds while I was on earth.

Buchwald

Those who have been to see the show, and may have paid more than $500 per ticket, have a secret handshake. The "haves" hang out together because they want to be with their own kind. Our group is small but we're tight. We go to each other's homes and sing songs from the show, and we role-play the Nathan Lane and Matthew Broderick parts to let people know we were there.

Now it has happened that the real Nathan Lane and Matthew Broderick have missed performances and understudies have taken their places. For the "haves" who saw those performances it's not the same thing, but it's still better than not seeing "The Producers" at all.

The "have-nots" — and there are millions of them — have no idea how to get tickets. The "haves" do know and it was suggested that we honk horns at one another when we pass on the highway. But there are so few of us that the plan was abandoned.

I have been lucky because there is another couple in the neighborhood who have also seen "The Producers." Their kids go to the same school as ours do and they always brag that their parents have seen the show.

When we talk, it's usually about the show. I always tell them my favorite song was "Springtime for Hitler." Our friends say theirs was "Prisoner of Love."

What makes the show so special for the "haves" is that there is a lot of raunchiness in it and you laugh at all of it. The "have-nots" will never know that raunchy feeling.

The worst thing a "have-not" ean do is pretend he is a "have." When that happens, we give him a test. If he isn't able to sing the words to "I Wanna Be a Producer," he is thrown out of the fraternity.

It is estimated that the "haves" will lord it over the "have-nots" for a year. They will be accepted at the best schools and will get the best tables in restaurants. Life will be good for them — but then again they deserve it.

Plan to privatize Social Security must stop

WASHINGTON — Wake up America — before Wall Street gets its mitts on the Social Security payroll tax dollars.

Believe me, the brokerage houses are gearing up to do just that. The National Association of Manufacturers and a covey of investment companies are primed to spend $20 million in ads to drum up public support for President Bush's effort to privatize Social Security.

Why not? They figure on reaping $86 billion in security investments if Social Security recipients are allowed to voluntarily set aside 2 percent of their payroll tax for private accounts in 2002.

Thomas

Opposition groups hoping to block the administration's so-called "reform" steamroller say they fear it would fiscally drain the system. Bush has stacked the deck by creating a Commission to Strengthen Social Security and packing it with members who all favor privatizing the system. He has left nothing to chance.

Former Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., a co-chairman of the panel, gives it an aura of bipartisanship. The other co-chairman is Richard Parsons, a major executive of AOL-TIME Warner.

Moynihan, a strong advocate of privatizing, has to know the stock market has never been a security blanket. He used to have a more realistic view of pies in the sky. I remember when the former senator, then in the Nixon White House, briefed reporters in California where President Richard Nixon was vacationing.

In his remarks Moynihan airily dismissed talk of an expected big surplus in the aftermath of the Vietnam War. He told us that the much-touted postwar bonus was as "evanescent as the clouds of San Clemente." He was right about that.

So what convinces him now that the Social Security money people would use to invest in stocks and bonds will be there when they become seniors? Who knows what the markets will be doing that far into the future?

The question before the Social Security panel is not whether to approve a plan to privatize the 66-year-old system but how to go about implementing one.

Sure, the Social Security system needs help. If nothing is done, by 2016 it will start paying out more than it takes in through payroll taxes and by 2038 it will not be able to pay full benefits.

Still, there is a pretty good lead time for the nation to figure out how to fix it. Yet Bush is not allowing the Social Security panel to consider all options. He is ordering it not only to approve privatizing the system but to tell him how to go about implementing it.

The Institute for America's Future, which opposes the idea, says the president's plan would reduce benefits substantially or would make the Social Security trust fund insolvent by 2023.

Another opposition group called the Campaign for America's Future predicts the president's plan would lose $1 trillion over 10 years if payroll taxes were diverted to private accounts, and it says benefits would be cut in half.

The Bush road map for the panel says that the "modernization" must not change current benefits for the system's 35 million recipients. That's good, since most of them count on their monthly checks to put food on the table and keep a roof over their heads.

Other guidelines say the entire Social Security surplus must be devoted to the system, payroll taxes must not be increased, disability and survivors benefits must be preserved and individuals must be able to control their own accounts.

But critics say there is no guarantee that the disability and survivor benefits, now available for 14 million Americans, including 3 million children, would be there in the future. The blueprint also does not guarantee the level of future benefits for the elderly or insure that the age of eligibility for full Social Security benefits will not be raised as high as 70. In fact, under the current system the age is gradually being raised from 65 to 67.

I grew up in the Great Depression and will never forget the grinding poverty, joblessness and Wall Street suicides in that crushing period.

In his wonderful autobiography, "Stay Tuned," National Public Radio commentator Daniel Schorr remembers that during the Depression a local Bronx deli had a sign: "Eat here or we'll both starve."

As a whole, the younger generation has never known the hard times of the Depression. After the recent gyrations of the stock market and the dot-com debacle, I'd like to say to those young folks willing to gamble with their payroll taxes: Get real. What goes up must come down.

Threat prompts removal of USS Cole investigators

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI agents investigating the October bombing of the warship USS Cole in Yemen were pulled out of the country because of a security threat, FBI and State Department officials said Monday.

"There was a specific and credible threat that called for removal from the country," FBI spokesman Bill Carter said. The team left Sunday.

The investigators were relocated to a neighboring country, Carter said. He would not disclose the nature of the threats in Yemen, how many agents were removed or where the team was taken.

President Bush, speaking to reporters before meeting with Secretary of State Colin Powell, refused to talk about the incident. "Once we finish our investigation, our government would be willing to discuss that," he said.

The move follows a June 9 State Department warning of an increased threat of terrorism against Americans and U.S. interests in Yemen. The department authorized non-emergency embassy staff and their families to leave the country and urged Americans to postpone trips to Yemen.

"This increased threat in Yemen is, obviously, of concern to us in terms of our official personnel, but also in terms of traveling Americans and others," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said.

The U.S. embassy in Yemen is closed to the public, but diplomats there continue to do their jobs, Boucher said. An administration official said there was "no specific credible threat against the embassy," only against FBI investigators in the country.

"The FBI made a decision to leave Yemen, based on what they saw as a credible threat to their employees," Boucher said.

Yemen Interior Minister Rashad al-Eleimi met with U.S. Ambassador Barbara Bodine on Monday and discussed security cooperation between the two countries, security officials said.

Security has been tightened in the area of the U.S. embassy in San'a and patrols and checkpoints were seen Monday in streets close to the embassy.

The USS Cole was refueling in the Yemeni port of Aden last October when a small harbor skiff pulled alongside it and detonated explosives, killing 17 sailors, injuring 39 others and nearly sinking the ship.

Boucher and Carter both declined to comment on reports that members of a group planning an attack on the embassy had been arrested.

Meanwhile, security measures in Yemen have been beefed up, Boucher said.

"In light of the heightened threat, the government of Yemen has taken extraordinary measures to ensure the safety of our personnel," Boucher said. "The department has sent additional diplomatic security personnel to help the embassy and to ensure that all personnel receive appropriate protection."

An office set up in Aden to investigate the bombing was shut recently and its U.S. investigators moved to the U.S. embassy in San'a. An embassy official has said the closure was not related to new security concerns.

Over 30 people have been detained in connection with the bombing attack.

High court lets Alabama student prayer ruling stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court let stand a lower court ruling that allowed students to participate in group prayers at school functions such as football games or graduations.

The court's action, taken without comment or explanation Monday, is a defeat for civil liberties groups, and appears to be at direct odds with another ruling on student prayer last year.

Despite the confusion, the court's action likely represents its last word on a court ruling that said Alabama students may lead prayers at school activities, including sporting events, student assemblies and graduations.

After the court's action, Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor said, "While the U.S. Constitution calls for neutrality toward religion, it does not require, and in fact does not permit, public schools to suppress student-initiated religious speech."

The Supreme Court has already considered the Alabama case once, sending it back to a lower court for reconsideration in light of last year's major decision that bars students from leading stadium crowds in prayer.

In the appeal acted on Monday, a high school vice principal in DeKalb County and his son, student Jesse Chandler, argued that the lower court misinterpreted last year's high court ruling.

The American Civil Liberties Union and other opponents of the Alabama policy said it represented a threat to the constitutional principle of separation of church and state. Critics particularly objected to the broadcast of prayer on school intercoms and from microphones at sporting events or ceremonies — just the activity at issue in last year's case.

The First Amendment protects free speech and the free exercise of religion, but it also forbids government promotion or "establishment" of religion.

By choosing not to hear the case, the Supreme Court put off deciding what the rule of law will be, an ACLU lawyer said.

"The court is saying, 'We don't have time to hear it,' or 'We're not ready to hear it,'" said Liz Hubertz, who represented the Chandlers.

In a landmark 1962 decision, the Supreme Court outlawed organized, officially sponsored prayers in public schools. In 1992, the justices barred clergy-led prayers at public school graduation ceremonies.

U.S. Navy resumes bombing exercises on Vieques island

By Marcelo Ballve
Associated Press

Protesters said they would continue with the "civil disobedience" campaign that began ... after two bombs dropped off-target on the range killed a civilian security guard in April 1999.

VIEQUES, Puerto Rico — U.S. fighter jets roared over Vieques island Monday and dropped dummy bombs on its firing range, ignoring protesters claims that about 30 activists were hiding on what the Navy calls its "crown jewel."

The wife of the Rev. Jesse Jackson and at least 13 others were arrested for trespassing as protesters ignored President Bush's announcement last week that the Navy would withdraw from Vieques in two years.

The bombing posed "a threat to human life," said protest leader Ismael Guadalupe, who said his 25-year-old son was among those on the range.

But Navy spokesman Bob Nelson denied any protester was on the bombing range, which has been used by the military for six decades.

"For the people of Vieques!" Jacqueline Jackson yelled as she was handcuffed by Navy security officers after her group of six cut through the fence and broke into Navy property. Jackson and her husband are co-presidents of the Rainbow/Push Coalition civil rights group.

Protesters said they would continue with the "civil disobedience" campaign that began after years of simmering resentment over the Navy exercises on Vieques exploded in anger after two bombs dropped off-target on the range killed a civilian security guard in April 1999.

On Monday, protesters claimed victory in delaying the bombing for several hours, but the Navy said there was no delay.

"The people of Vieques and Puerto Rico have been able to fool all the security forces," said another protest leader, Nilda Medina.

But Nelson said the bombing did not start in the morning because the Navy still was planning and coordinating the exercise.

The Navy had said fighter jets from the USS Theodore Roosevelt aircraft carrier and Roosevelt Roads Naval Station, on the main island of Puerto Rico, could begin dropping inert 25-pound bombs as early as 8 a.m. Monday.

Then they said it would be as soon as noon, then 1 p.m.

It was not until 2 p.m. that the distant roar of F-18 Hornets, F-14 Tomcats and EA-6B Prowlers swooping over the range could be heard outside the gates of the Navy's Camp Garcia, where dozens of protesters gathered.

During the last exercise, in late April and early May this year, more than 180 people were arrested for trespassing in attempts to prevent the bombing. They included environmental lawyer Robert Kennedy Jr., actor Edward James Olmos and the Rev. Al Sharpton of New York, who has been on a hunger strike in a Brooklyn jail since May 29.

Bush's announcement appeared to pre-empt a planned referendum Nov. 6, when most of the island's 9,100 residents were expected to vote for the Navy to leave in 2003.

On Monday, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said that though there now is no need for the referendum, it likely will be held since Congress passed a law to that effect.

Puerto Rican officials, meanwhile, are planning their own nonbinding referendum on July 29 asking Vieques residents whether the Navy should stay, leave in 2003 or leave immediately.

Gov. Sila Calderon has demanded an immediate end to the exercises, saying the bombing harms the environment and islanders' health — charges the Navy strenuously denies.

The Navy says Vieques' terrain and location make it ideal for life-saving combat training. The island also is strategically located southeast of the U.S. mainland and off the 22,600-acre Roosevelt Roads Naval Station, which is the largest in the world in land area and administers the Vieques exercises.

Putin says summit a success

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian President Vladimir Putin said Monday he and President Bush do not agree on the security threats their countries face, but reached "a very high level of trust" during their weekend summit.

In a 2 1/2-hour interview in the Kremlin library with American reporters, Putin said the U.S. president was a "very attentive listener" during the Saturday meeting in Slovenia and that Bush was interested in discussing the big picture of global problems.

"It seemed to me the words that we said during the press conference were not just formal statements," Putin said. "They indeed reflected a very high level of trust between the two of us. I must say that the president is a nice person to talk to."

It was the first time the Russian president had invited a group of U.S. journalists for a sit-down in the Kremlin since his election as president in March 2000, and the self-assured Putin was clearly at home in the library paneled in black walnut.

Putin said he and Bush agreed to work together to identify security threats. The United States has cited so-called rogue states such as North Korea as the reason for wanting to change the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty to allow for a missile shield that Russia opposes.

Specialists, Putin said, had been assigned to analyze possible threats and how the treaty might affect efforts to counter them. But he was clear that Russia didn't see the same threats the U.S. does. "Here we do not have a common position," he said.

Specialists, Putin said, had been assigned to analyze possible threats and how the treaty might affect efforts to counter them. But he was clear that Russia didn't see the same threats the U.S. does. "Here we do not have a common position," he said.

Putin then repeated Russia's position that America should not abandon the ABM treaty, saying that would undermine the START I and START II treaties limiting the numbers of nuclear weapons.

"If one would imagine that we would throw away the ABM treaty, it would mean that automatically START I and START II are thrown in the trash immediately," he said.

Putin said he remained concerned about possible unilateral action such as U.S. abrogation of nuclear treaty commitments, but added that Russia was prepared and would strengthen its nuclear arsenal if necessary.

The Russian leader dismissed U.S. concerns that countries like North Korea could pose a security threat, saying its missile technology was based on antiquated German and Soviet technology. Putin cited religious extremists as a real threat, including the Taliban, who have imposed harsh Islamic rule in Afghanistan.

He also insisted that Bush's proposed missile defense shield would never work.

"It's like a bullet hitting a bullet. Is it possible today or not? Today experts say that it is impossible to achieve this," Putin said.

Speaking in the Kremlin presidential library where former President Boris Yeltsin once met President Clinton, Putin said he had been told Bush was not a good listener and had a tendency to be nervous and impatient.

"But he turned out completely different. The president turned out to be a very attentive listener and a very interested one as well," Putin said.

"He is very critical and analytical. He is very frank and from the very first moment a very good amicable atmosphere developed."

Putin said Bush put up with his efforts to speak English, a language he is learning.

"I attempted to say a few words to President Bush in English," he said. "He was extremely nice about it. He pretended to understand what I was talking about."

Some of the books in the library that dates to the 18th century are in English, including the Encyclopedia Britannica. Most of the books are Russian: fat tomes of pre-revolutionary law; hand-painted books on hunting; and a collection of constitutions from around the wall.

Putin and other Kremlin officials have said they achieved their goals at the summit by renewing a dialogue with the United States that had diminished in recent months amid spy scandals, the ABM disagreement, and talk in the United States that Russia no longer matters much.

"We are satisfied with the kind of partner we have in President Bush," Putin said over coffee and traditional Russian pastries. "I think the level of trust is the most important thing we achieved at our meeting."

Task force meets to plan area partnership

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Midland city leaders aren't letting the lack of an economic development sales tax prevent them from taking steps toward creating a more productive Metropolitan Statistical Area.

Despite not being "on the same playing field" with their neighbor to the west, city and chamber leaders from Midland met again with their counterparts from Odessa to continue building an economic development partnership.

"We might not be on the same playing field, but maybe we can attempt something rather than sit and complain that we don't have the funds," Midland City Manager Rick Menchaca said.

Monday, the Midland-Odessa Joint Economic Development Task Force sat down and discussed the findings from the Midland Assessment and Action Plan report and talked about potential branding and marketing opportunities and how the two cities will further their relationship with each other and make the Midland-Odessa MSA a stronger player in the recruitment of businesses.

The task force is made up of the city managers, city attorneys, economic development coordinators, mayors and one council member from each city.

"To better position ourselves to recruit companies we need certain things in place," Menchaca said. "Those committees (at the airport and chamber) don't have the (legislative) authority. That is something the councils can do."

Monday's was not the first meeting. Menchaca said there were at least four meetings from November to March. The next meeting will take place next month and will involve county representatives.

The focal point of the cities' economic development union should be the area at and around Midland International Airport. Future trade corridors, proximity to the interstate and rail and international trade status make the airport more than the "umbilical cord to the world," but also a potential ED revenue machine.

It also allows Midland to provide something to the ED cause. In 1997, Midland voters turned down an ED sales tax for the second time. That same year, Odessa voters passed one. The result is Odessa brings in between $2.5 and $3 million a year thanks to the sales tax. Midland is left looking for alternatives.

"We aren't at the same level they are," Menchaca said. "We believe we have assets. We have infrastructure — water lines, sewer lines and roads out there (at the airport) — and that has got some value to it. But are you at exactly the same level? Unfortunately not necessarily. That has been a barrier to overcome. You have to show we will be partners and show equal value.

"With time we will figure if we can still proceed even though we don't have these dollars."

Menchaca says the need for the task force is obvious, and it only starts with the need for ED. The last census revealed another reason.

"Midland only grew at the fourth of the rate it did previous 10 years," Menchaca said. "We didn't lose population, but we didn't grow as fast as we did the previous 10 years. That should send alarms that we need to do something, or our population, our economic base and our tax base will shrink. That is not good long term wise for anybody down the road."

Midland-Odessa Note: Menchaca also said Grant Billingsley has been sent by the Chamber to Austin Monday to speak before the legislative redistricting board, which was holding public hearings.

"He went up there to make sure that the board was aware we want one representative out this area when it comes to state senators," Menchaca said.

Currently, the Midland-Odessa area is represented by two state senators.

More kids equal more excitement at MC's Kid's College

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

With more than 750 kids between the first and sixth grades, the Midland College's Kid's College summer program started Monday afternoon.

The program will continue until June 28 and another session will be held from July 16 through July 26. Organizers are expecting between 1,200-1,500 for the entire summer and are pleased to see they will probably have more than they expected.

"We've got over 750 today, and we expect it to be at least 750 in July, too," said Donna Hewitt, one of the program's organizers. "We've been very successful."

Cooking Kids was one of the 74 classes that began Monday, and as the kids got acquainted with the ingredients of "Nature's Munch," (a dish comprised of nuts, granola and raisins) 12-year-old Elizabeth Stice discussed why she believes Kid's College is now so popular.

"It's just something fun to do in the summer," said Miss Stice, who will enter the seventh grade at Abell Junior High this fall. "Kids will say that they like doing nothing when school's out, but that gets boring."

Miss Stice also believes her experience this summer will help her in the future. In addition to Cooking Kids, she is also enrolled in a baby-sitting class.

"Cooking is something that will always come in handy," she said. "And I already like to baby-sit, but now parents will trust me more if I've taken a class."

In addition to the hundreds of children in classes and activities at MC, the campus is also populated with dozens of "runners," (teen-agers who car pool and escort the students to and from classes); and teachers, many of whom teach during the school year as well.

"This is such a good job for teen-agers," said Renee Cowles, who teaches art at Fannin Elementary during the school year, but coordinates the runners during Kid's College. "And we hire them before many other places will hire teens. It gives them money, lets them have fun and provides them with a good work ethic for their futures."

The runners are paid minimum wage for their work, and every year they return, their wages are increased by 50 cents an hour.

Three Midland High students to attend top medical forum

By Kristine Aleman
MRT Correspondent

Three Midland High students will travel to San Francisco this month after years of hard work and demonstrating leadership.

The top students have earned their spot in the National Youth Leadership Forum on Medicine (NYLF/MED). The NYLF is a career development program for high school students who demonstrate academic excellence, leadership potential and an interest in medicine. This year, the three Midlanders will join 350 other students from around the country to participate in the forum.

"The National Youth Leadership Forum provides an invaluable perspective for students who participate in our medical forum," said Donna Weldin, executive director of NYLF. "The relationships we forge with health care facilities throughout the country provide these young people with an eye-opening experience, introducing them to the broad spectrum of medical careers."

The NYLF is a non-profit educational organization that holds forums for not only medicine, but for law and national security as well. More than 50,000 students have benefited from the program since its beginning in 1991.

"I want to get an idea of what medical field I want to go in and get a good perspective of what I can do for a career," said Erin Wellen, a senior at Midland High.

Miss Wellen, along with Ryan Brown and Elizabeth Douglas, both seniors at Midland High, heard about the forum through their honors biology class. They were selected for having maintained the high academic standards required to attend the forum after applying in February. Selection was also influenced by recommendations from the students' teachers. However, it hasn't come easy. Brown said "school's pretty hard," but the work has paid off.

"I've had to study really hard and put a lot of work and hours into my schoolwork," Miss Wellen said.

Throughout the forum, NYLF/MED will introduce to the students a variety of concepts in public health, medical ethics, research and general practice, as well as take students on visits to medical facilities and clinics. Students will be faced with Problem-Solving Learning, an educational method where students are presented with a set of patient symptoms and must come to a diagnosis and prognosis for the symptoms. The method is familiar to most medical students.

In addition to medical school and clinical facility site visits, the students will have the opportunity to interact with leaders in the medical field, including physicians, surgeons, researchers, scientists and medical educators.

The three Midlanders will depart for San Francisco on June 24 for the 10-day forum.

Midland Adult Day Care gives options to the elderly

By Michele Kennerly
MRT Correspondent

As the population age continues to shift, the demand for adult day care shifts with it. Families with seniors are constantly challenged to juggle numerous demands on their time and attention while caring for their loved one.

The newly expanded Mission Center Adult Day Service, which held an open house in May, is helping to alleviate some of those demands.

"Being the only state licensed center for seniors in 17 counties, many are referred to our services," said Center Director Pat Sloan. "We had to move out of our location at Manor Park to accommodate the ever-growing numbers."

The center is not tied to any one nursing facility and offers transportation, meals, activities and attention to seniors from families in the mid- to lower-income range during the weekdays.

"This center helps families caring for senior members in many ways. First, it allows the normal caretaker to continue with his or her job while continuing to take care of his or her loved one at home," Ms. Sloan said. "It also helps them financially-because day care costs thousands less than nursing home care — and emotionally — because the caregiver gets a helping hand without having to decide whether to place their loved one in a nursing home."

But the caregivers are not the only ones who benefit from the center.

Those who frequent the center enjoy entertainment, games, meals and quality medical care from the Registered Nurse and Licensed Vocational Nurse on staff.

Arthur Othterson, a native of Trinidad, is a big fan of dominoes, among other things.

"I enjoy performing. Singing, dancing, I like it all. Except calypso," Othterson said.

Christine "Chris" Freeman, who enjoys baseball and bowling, likes the community feel of the center.

"I like the help, the other residents, and the nurses who are very sweet," said Ms. Freeman.

Ms. Sloan believes the Center helps the seniors, 75-80 percent of whom suffer from some kind of dementia because it encourages a kind of "socialization that would most likely not occur with in-home care.

"This Center is a different thing to everyone," Ms. Sloan said. "To some seniors it's a club, to some it's a school, to some it's work. To the normal caregiver, it may be a window for a much needed nap."

Ms. Sloan believes the following saying from Rosalynn Carter's "Helping Yourself Help Others" is one everyone at the center well understands: "There are four kinds of people in this world, those who have been caregivers, those who currently are caregivers, those who will be caregivers and those who will need caregivers."

Be sure to thank 'Miami Vice' for 'Casual Friday'

More rambling thoughts ...

— Franklin Delano Roosevelt once said. "There is no indispensable man."

— It is not terribly good for the ego, of course, but it is true, you know.

Ott

— One man's opinion: Commercials that make you laugh are the most effective ones on TV.

— Since the death penalty has been in the news so much of late, it is somewhat appropriate that it was on this date back in 1953 that Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted of conspiring to pass U.S. atomic secrets to the Soviet Union, were executed at Sing Sing Prison in Ossining, N.Y.

— Has there ever been a child star who wasn't totally screwed up by the time he, or she, reached early adulthood?

— Here's a little-known fact: The TV show "Miami Vice" and the "cool" clothes worn by the two male actors, is considered by many to be what started the idea of "Casual Friday" in the corporate workplace.

— I never cared much for the show, but being able to shed a tie on Fridays gives me a renewed appreciation for Don Johnson and the gang.

— Speaking of Miami, Florida is quickly becoming the place to be for exciting politics, and it is only going to get better if Janet Reno decides to challenge Jeb Bush in his upcoming re-election bid.

— Overheard: "Life is a tragedy full of joy."

— It is always a bit embarrassing when a person calls on the telephone and says "Guess who this is" and you guess wrong.

— But why should we be embarrassed? It is the other person who had the gall to make such an arrogant statement.

— If you don't like golf, it must REALLY be boring to watch on television.

— Overly hyper people should remember these words from Samuel Johnson, "As peace is the end of war, so to be idle is the ultimate purpose of the busy."

— Just a hunch: Every kid who grew up in the late 1950s and early 1960s had a friend like Eddie Haskell.

— And he probably grew up and became a respectable member of society, often entering the teaching profession or even becoming a police officer.

— You know you are getting old if you remember when summer school was just for the dumb kids who couldn't pass all of their classes during the regular school year.

— Lemonade and 100 degree temperatures go together like Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

— I love this definition of time: "Time, that which man is always trying to kill, but which ends up killing him."

— Procrastinating is an ugly habit, but so is making rash decisions.

— I hate to admit it, but sometimes reporters ask really stupid questions, especially sports guys who, when interviewing an athlete who has just blown his chance to win a major championship, asks, "So, how do you feel right now?"

— "Oh, just terrific, you idiot. And how about yourself?"

— When was the last time you gave someone the peace sign?

— Hopefully, it was many, many years ago, like maybe 1972.

— No, make that 1967.

— Was there ever a dumber TV show than "Love Boat"?

— OK, maybe "My Mother the Car," but come up with another one.

— Microwave popcorn is a wonderful invention.

— See, I'm not against EVERYTHING that has come about in the last two decades.

— Americans may distrust politicians, but it seems to me that we find them terribly intriguing nonetheless.

— And today's final quote comes from Robert Schuman, who was honest enough to once say, "When I was a young man I vowed never to marry until I found the ideal woman. Well, I found her — but, alas, she was waiting for the perfect man."

"I just wanted something to do in the summer, it gets so boring," she said. "Now, I'm in classes all day long."

Man charged with killing parents also suspect in wife's 1978 death

WACO (AP) — A man charged with gunning down his elderly parents on their Kaufman County farm is now being investigated concerning the death of his wife 23 years ago.

Waco police Sgt. J.R. Price reopened the investigation in the wake of Andrew Gordon's arrest last month for killing his parents.

Former Waco police officer Clark McMurtray, who investigated the 1978 shooting death of Gordon's wife, says he has been troubled for years by the way the incident was handled.

"The case is going to stay open until we get those answers," Price said. "There are definitely some things there that concern me."

Sabrina Gordon's death in 1978 was ruled a suicide by Judge Joe N. Johnson, who was a justice of the peace at the time.

However, the judge did not order an autopsy in the case, and the woman's family and police investigators have suspected that Gordon was involved in her death, police said.

After Gordon's arrest in the May 8 shooting deaths of his parents Harrell and Dorothy Gordon at their family farm east of Terrell, Sabrina Gordon's family members contacted Price with renewed suspicions about her death. Gordon, 46, lived with his parents at the time of their death.

Waco police interviews with Sabrina Gordon's friends after her death showed that her husband was "very distrustful" of his wife and treated her badly, McMurtray said.

"The girl apparently was having an affair because we found her bra and panties in her purse along with a matchbook from a hotel," McMurtray said. "We went back to that hotel and the owner recognized her but did not know who she was with."

Gordon told officers after his wife's death that he never went home for lunch because that was a busy time at his family's jewelry store, where he was working at the time. On the day his wife died, he told police that he went home for lunch and found her dead.

"It just happens that on the one day ever that he came home for lunch, he came home to find his wife dead and her bra, panties and a hotel matchbook were in her purse. The whole scenario was just very odd," McMurtray said.

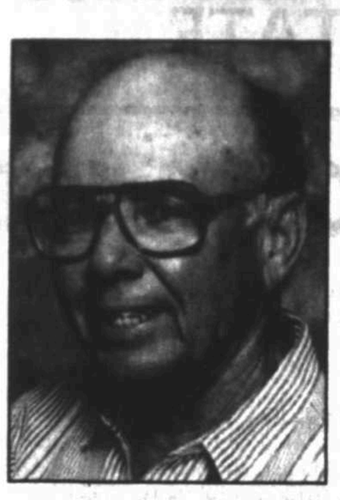
McMurtray said he encourages Sabrina Gordon's family members to exhume her body, if possible, for autopsy now.

"We never traced the angle of the bullet," he said. "That was critical because if it was traced at a downward angle, it would almost prove that (someone) was standing over her when she was shot."

Also, evidence revealed that Sabrina Gordon had a cigarette in her mouth when she was shot. The cigarette dropped from her mouth and burned her leg, he said.

"That is something very odd," McMurtray said. "Not many people, I don't think, would be smoking a cigarette at the same time you are about to shoot yourself in the head with a gun."

OBITUARIES



Donald Crockett

Donald E. Crockett Sr., died on Monday, June 18, 2001, at Midland Memorial Hospital after a five month illness.

He was born on May 12, 1929 in Amarillo to W.B. and Katie Richardson Crockett. He grew up and attended public school in Colorado City. On September 11, 1948, he married Norma Jean Boyle in Denver, Colorado. They recently celebrated their 52nd Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. Crockett served in the United States Army Air Corps from 1946 to 1948. In 1952, he received a Bachelor of Arts degree from McMurry College in Abilene. He and his family moved to Big Spring in 1952, where he was employed by the Big Spring Independent School District. After 35 years of service with the school district, he retired in 1987 as assistant superintendent for business. He was a lifelong member of the Methodist Church and served his church faithfully in many positions, including member of the board of directors and treasurer of the First United Methodist Church of Big Spring.

He and Norma moved to the Meadowlakes Community of Marble Falls in 1992. He was an active member of that community serving as an officer in the City of Meadowlakes, election judge and officer in the Men's Golf Association. In retirement he enjoyed RV travel throughout the United States. He was an avid and dedicated golfer until the time of his illness. He moved to Midland in 2001.

Survivors include his wife, Norma Crockett of Midland; one daughter, Caren Greathouse and her husband, Kenneth, of Big Spring; two sons, Dr. Don Crockett Jr. and wife, Sandra, of Midland and Randal Crockett of Big Spring; his grandchildren, Lee Marshall and Norma Jean Crockett of Midland, Matthew Yeats and wife, Jennifer, of Fort Worth, Jeremy Yeats and wife, Tiffany, of Big Spring, Brandon Greathouse of Big Spring and Katie and Benjamin Crockett of Big Spring; and one great grandson, Kristian Yeats of Big Spring.

He was preceded in death by his parents and his brother, W.B. Crockett Jr.

He was a dedicated and faithful Christian, a devoted husband and a loving father and grandfather.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday, June 20, 2001, at the Nalley-Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel with Dr. Randy Cotton, pastor of Trinity Baptist Church, officiating. Interment will follow at Colorado City Cemetery.

The family suggests memorials to: National Kidney Foundation of West Texas, 3801 19th St. Ste. 402, Lubbock, Texas 79410 or Methodist's Children's Home, P.O. Box 5010, Waco, Texas 76708-9989.

The family will receive friends from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday at the funeral home. Arrangements under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 3:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

Lucile C. Boykin

Lucile Clark (Mrs. Robert) Boykin, 88, died Thursday, June 14, 2001 at a local care facility. Lucile Clark Boykin was born in Beaumont, Texas December 27, 1912 to Charles Henry and Mary Blazek Clark. She married Robert Boykin June 15, 1972. She was reared in Beaumont, Tx. and graduated from the University of Texas, Austin and received her Master's Degree in Library Science from Louisiana State University.

Lucile began her library career in her hometown at South Park High School. She was the Librarian at the Midland County Library from 1945 to 1953, then for several years she was at the Decater, Illinois Public Library. Returning to Midland in 1956, she was the Librarian at Midland High School until her retirement in 1976.

She was preceded in death by her parents, her first husband, James W. Carroll, and her brother Charles "Judge" Clark.

She is survived by her husband, Robert Boykin; her stepson, Clark Boykin of Austin; her stepdaughter, Rosemary Magee of Corvallis, Oregon; her sister-in-law, Thelma S. Clark; and her niece, Ann Clark-Heiner of Beaumont; Susan Clark Cain of Houston; her nephews, Charles H. Clark of Massachusetts and Chester Clark of Snyder.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday, June 20, 2001, in Saint Nicholas' Episcopal Church. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

DEATH NOTICES

Marjorie Morris

ODESSA — Marjorie Rogers Morris, 93, died, Sunday, 17, in a local hospital.

Funeral services are scheduled for 2 p.m. today, June 19, in the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Melvin Warren officiating. Interment will follow in Sunset Memorial Gardens under the direction of Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Mrs. Morris was born Aug. 23, 1907 in Pilot Point. She had been a long time resident of Odessa and was a founder of the Globe of the Great Southwest Theatre and also founded the Anne Hathaway (Cottage) Library, part of the Globe Complex.

The Odessa Cultural Council awarded her its Founders Award, and she was honored as the Lady of Odessa while she was teaching at Odessa College.

As a former professor at Odessa College, she received the Minnie Stevens Piper Professor Award in 1953 and was the State Piper Professor winner in 1955. She was a member of the Bible Class of First Baptist Church, taught a Sunday School class for more than 31 years and was a former member of the choir.

The family suggests that memorial contributions be made in her memory to the Globe of the Great Southwest Theatre.

Mattie Currie, 85, of Carlsbad died Sunday, June 17, at her residence.

Services are pending with Gilbreath Funeral Home in Stanton.

Aubrey Small

Aubrey Small died at a local hospital Thursday, June 14.

Services are pending at Thomas Funeral Home.

DEAR ABBY

Peeping Tom's wife must be told to see the light

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In your reply to "Worried Neighbor," you asked that the couple who found the neighbor peeping not tell his wife. As the wife of a Peeping Tom, let me tell you the kindest thing they could do would be to tell her. This behavior becomes riskier and riskier in order to achieve the same thrill. With therapy, the couple may be able to salvage their marriage and his self-respect. But, like all addictions, only when he reaches bottom will he get the help he needs. Please reconsider and suggest that they tell the wife.

Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

Please do not reveal my name or location. It has been 15 years since my husband acted out, and our children are unaware of his past. — BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: I advised the neighbor to inform the woman who was being victimized as well as the police — but not the wife — out of concern that the wife would go into denial if she heard it from a neighbor. I felt she would have more difficulty denying it if she heard it from the police. Please read on:

DEAR ABBY: My letter is in response to the one in your column about the Peeping Tom. Your advice was 100 percent correct. My first husband was a Peeping Tom. If someone had told me about my husband, I wouldn't have believed him or her and probably would have gotten angry with that person.

My husband was well thought of, and you can't imagine that someone you love and admire would be capable of doing something like that. He lied so convincingly about why he was late — and even when he was eventually arrested — I not only believed him, but most people other than the police did too.

Abby, Peeping Toms do not get over it. They just get worse. They think there is nothing wrong with them.

We were trying to have another baby when he was arrested the first time. Naturally we put it off until the trial was over. Can you believe he was only fined for trespassing? The witnesses were a policeman and a minister, but the jury believed my husband. He explained it away.

My husband was arrested three times in our 12-year marriage for peeping. I finally had to face facts. When I did, I had a nervous breakdown.

He married again, molested his stepdaughters and was sent to prison. He could have gotten out on probation after he served a couple of years if he had agreed to have therapy. He chose to stay in prison rather than seek help because he insisted there wasn't anything wrong with him.

If you print this, please do not use my name. It has been 25 years since I left him, but I remember the shame and disbelief as if it were yesterday. Even today some people think it was all a mistake. — TRUSTING WIFE IN TEXAS

DEAR TRUSTING WIFE: Thank you for relating your personal experience. Others can learn from it. The problem with getting hooked on danger — and this can apply to things other than peeping — is that increasingly stronger doses are required to satisfy the addict.

P.S. I was curious about where the term "Peeping Tom" originated. According to the Webster's Deluxe Encyclopedic Edition of the English Language, it originated in the 11th century. When Lady Godiva rode naked through the streets of Coventry on a dare from her husband, Leofric, Earl of Mercia, to obtain a reduction in taxes, everyone averted their eyes from the lady except for one man named Tom, who became the first "Peeping Tom."

Dear Abby is written by Pauline Phillips, aka Abigail Van Buren, and daughter Jeanne Phillips. Their column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Fund established to help families with cancer treatment expenses

Staff Reports

An anonymous donor has created a charitable fund with the Permian Basin Area Foundation to assist cancer patients with the catastrophic costs of treatment and medication expenses.

Mom's Cancer Care Assistance Fund is a permanent fund of the Permian Basin Area Foundation. In addition to the original contribution to establish the fund, additional donations and memorial gifts will be accepted from others on an ongoing basis to help build the resource.

The fund is intended to help patients who are ineligible for Medicaid by virtue of employment income and those who are not yet old enough to be eligible for Medicare.

"Cancer can be a devastating illness not only physically but financially as well," said Jack Swallow, president and CEO of the Foundation while speaking on behalf of the anonymous donor, "This very generous donor has had personal experience with the disease and felt compelled to provide resources to assist families, who fall between the cracks of our health care system, with the financial burdens of cancer. The Foundation is pleased to assist with fulfilling these noble wishes."

The Midland Memorial Hospital Foundation will administer the disbursement of resources from the fund based on financial guidelines established for the Midland County Hospital District Indigent Care program.

Drug kingpin set to die amid questions about federal death penalty

By Rex W. Huppke
Associated Press

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — Juan Raul Garza, a murderous Texas drug kingpin, lost two Supreme Court bids to stave off injection today in what would be the second execution by the U.S. government in eight days.

Garza, 44, was convicted of killing one man and ordering the deaths of two others as part of a marijuana smuggling ring he operated from Brownsville, Texas.

The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday refused to delay Garza's execution, rejecting Garza's claims that the jury should have been told that the alternative to a death sentence was life in prison without the possibility of release, and that his death sentence would violate two international treaties.

Garza has also asked the White House to commute his sentence to life in prison without parole. President Bush, who supports the death penalty, was governor of Texas during much of the appeal process in Garza's case.

Garza was moved to the isolation cell in the death house at the U.S. Penitentiary, where Timothy McVeigh died by chemical injection last week in the first federal execution since 1963.

The fields outside the prison where hundreds of journalists gathered last week for McVeigh's execution were empty Monday afternoon. Dan Dunne, a U.S. Bureau of Prisons spokesman, said only about 75 reporters had registered for credentials to cover Garza's death. More than 1,000 reporters had credentials for the McVeigh execution.

Fencing, razor wire and three guard towers form the northern boundary of the U.S. Penitentiary in Terre Haute, Ind. Jaun Raul Garza is scheduled to be executed by lethal injection at 7 a.m. (CDT) today, at the facility. Garza, 44, was condemned to death for his role in three drug-ring related killings in Brownsville and would be the second federal inmate put to death in just eight days.

Death penalty opponents and some former Justice Department officials questioned whether Garza, a Mexican-American born in the United States, would have been sentenced to death if he were white or had committed his crimes elsewhere.

Six of the 19 men now on federal death row were sentenced in Texas. All are minorities.

"There is a question of whether the way the system is set up produces arbitrary and discriminatory results," said Robert Litt, a former deputy assistant attorney general in the Clinton Justice Department. "I think somebody ought to get some answers and understand what's going on."

A Justice Department study released last year that found wide racial and geographical disparities in the use of the federal death penalty. Because of that study, then-President Clinton delayed Garza's December execution date, saying, "In this area, there is no room for error."

A Justice Department review released earlier this month found no evidence of bias in federal death penalty sentences. Attorney General John Ashcroft ordered further study but also said in a statement Monday that there was no evidence of racial bias in Garza's death sentence and no reason to delay his execution any further.

"Juan Raul Garza's guilt is not in doubt," Ashcroft said.

Garza was convicted of murdering a man by shooting him five times in the head and neck. Ashcroft said Garza also ordered the murders of two other men, paying the killers $10,000 each for one of the slayings and money and a car for the other.

"The facts of Garza's case are important," Ashcroft said. "Seven of Garza's eight victims were Hispanic; the prosecutor in the case is Hispanic; the presiding judge is Hispanic; at least six of the jurors are Hispanic; and all of the jurors individually certified that race, color, religious beliefs, national origin and sex were not involved in reaching their respective decisions."

The original Justice Department study showed that 80 percent of defendants charged with capital offenses over a five-year period were minorities. The study also found that just nine of the 94 U.S. attorney districts accounted for about 43 percent of all cases in which prosecutors sought the death penalty.

Garza's attorneys cited 26 cases involving crimes similar to Garza's where prosecutors did not seek the federal death penalty.

Victim's family says Perry veto a victory

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Rick Perry's veto of a bill to ban the execution of the mentally retarded could be a short victory for crime victims, but it was sweet nonetheless.

"I wanted to throw my arms up in the air and say 'Thank you, Lord,' but that was obviously not appropriate," said Ellen Moseley May, who's aunt, Pamela Moseley Carpenter, was raped and killed in 1979 by John Paul Penry.

The Supreme Court this month threw out the death sentence for Penry, who has been classified as mentally retarded, saying the jury did not have clear instructions on how to weigh his mental condition when they decided Penry should be executed.

May fears that Texas lawmakers will come back in two years and try to pass another bill to ban the execution of the mentally retarded, but said for "this very small moment now, we can take it as a victory."

Senate sponsor Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said Perry's veto is embarrassing for Texas. Ellis' office said Monday he is likely to bring the bill up again if necessary.

Before Texas lawmakers get a chance to take up the issue again, the U.S. Supreme Court is set to rule this fall on a North Carolina case that could outlaw executions of retarded killers.

During his news conference Sunday, Perry said he believed Texas statute will stand even if the Supreme Court bans the execution of the mentally retarded.

A Death Penalty Information Center claims Texas has executed six mentally retarded inmates since 1982.

Maurie Levin, an attorney with the non-profit Texas Defender Service, which represents death row inmates, said Texas law would be impacted. A Supreme Court ruling banning such executions would be a "constitional mandate that we don't currently comply with, because we permit the execution of the mentally retarded," Levin said.

Current Texas law takes into account whether a defendant is competent to stand trial, including whether the defendant can aid his own defense, and whether a defendant was insane, unable to distinguish right from wrong, at the time the crime was committed. Plus, a jury can consider retardation as a mitigating circumstance during sentencing.

"The fact that the jury is permitted to considered this issue of mental retardation ... does not come close to the absolute prohibition of people who are mentally retarded," Levin said.

However, Dianne Clements of the Houston-based victims' rights group Justice for All called Texas' law "superior" and said it has withstood numerous court challenges. She said she is not fearful of a possible Supreme Court ruling banning the execution of the mentally retarded.

"The Supreme Court might just use Texas as a model," Clements said.

Under the vetoed bill, if a jury found a person was not mentally retarded, a defense attorney could petition the judge to consider the issue. Two experts would be assigned to make a determination.

If the evidence showed the person to be mentally retarded, the judge would be required to issue a sentence of life in prison.

Perry said the bill took too much power away from the jury and gave it to the judge.

Regis' co-host calls show to announce birth of baby girl

Ripa

NEW YORK — Kelly Ripa is a mother for the second time.

The co-host of "Live with Regis & Kelly" called the talk show Monday morning to announce that she'd given birth to a girl named Lola Grace. The baby arrived at a New York hospital at 6:30 a.m. Saturday, weighing 8 pounds, 3 ounces.

The co-star of the ABC soap opera "All My Children" went on maternity leave on June 8 from the talk show, which she shares with Regis Philbin. She'd planned to be gone for four weeks, but said Monday she may take a little more time.

The 30-year-old actress and her husband, "All My Children" co-star Mark Consuelos, already have a 3-year-old son, Michael Joseph. She replaced Kathie Lee Gifford as Philbin's co-host in February.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Ashley Judd and "Entertainment Tonight" have settled a lawsuit brought against them by a freelance journalist from Louisville who writes about entertainment.

According to papers filed in Jefferson Circuit Court, Larry Birkhead claimed that Judd made libelous statements on the TV show "Entertainment Tonight" about a USA Today article he wrote.

Birkhead, 28, had sought punitive and compensatory damages.

The three parties settled out of court last week, Birkhead said on Friday. The settlement terms are undisclosed.

"I'm happy with the settlement, and it's a relief that it's over," he said.

A spokeswoman for Judd on Friday confirmed the lawsuit had been settled.

LAS VEGAS — Wherever the boy band O-Town is, teen girls usually aren't far away. They cried, painted their bodies and clothes with names of the group's members and seemed to enjoy hearing themselves scream more than the concert itself.

Their self-titled debut CD cracked the Billboard top five earlier this year, and they've become popular through the ABC series "Making the Band," which brought them together. But they say swooning teen girls still surprise them.

"That's always weird," Trevor Penick told The Associated Press before the group's performance at the Cox Pavilion near the Las Vegas Strip on Sunday night. "You can never get used to that."

Girls decorated their clothes with pictures of the group, made signs for their idols and did what teen girls do best — scream. Then there were the ones who wrote the word O-Town on their foreheads in paint, only to have it sweat off during the concert.

"I feel bad when that happens," group member Dan Miller said.

So what's the strangest act of dedication from a fan? Penick said a fan once showed the group her new O-Town tattoo.

Don't tell that to the girls with paint.

LONDON — Jon Bon Jovi told students at the prestigious Oxford Union debating society that the secrets of his success were "passion, perseverance and possibility."

Bon Jovi gave a 20-minute speech extolling the virtues of hard work and self belief to students of the elite 800-year-old university.

"Nothing is more important than passion," he said Friday.

"Whatever you decide to do in life, just be passionate about it. Don't be intimidated by competition, as success is sweeter and failure less bitter when you have given everything.

"You have to be true to yourself — it's your life. You are the masters of your destiny and passion, not pedigree, will win the end," he said.

The New Jersey rocker, on a British tour that coincides with the release of his band's live album, "One Wild Night," also advised students to "be humble and stay humble."

"I spent years playing in bar bands, watching and learning my craft — that was my university," he said.

The 178-year-old debating society has played host to world leaders and Nobel Prize winners, but has not shied away from more marketable guests, including O.J. Simpson, Jerry Springer and Michael Jackson.

HONOLULU — Miss America Angela Perez Baraquio received an on-stage marriage proposal during the 2001 Miss Hawaii Pageant in Waikiki.

Baraquio, 24, accepted the televised proposal made by her boyfriend, Tinifuloa Grey, a member of the group Reign, during a hula and serenade performance. She won the Hawaii pageant last year before going on to claim the Miss America title.

Baraquio, 24, is a physical education teacher and coach at a Roman Catholic school.

Miss West Oahu Denby Dung was crowned the winner of Friday night's pageant. Dung, a 23-year-old music teacher and choir director, will represent Hawaii in the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City, N.J., in September.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, June 19, 2001:

Opportunities drop on you left and right, and you will be able to seize the moment to make them real. Your life direction changes substantially because of how you view others and because of the choices you make. You combine creativity and determination, making you a sure winner. Unexpected developments mark your year. If you are single, in the next month you might very well meet someone special. You might move on this relationship quickly. If you are attached, plan more getaways together, and enhance the tie between the two of you. GEMINI is a soul mate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Others might accuse you of putting out too much information to absorb. Learn to shuttle facts piece by piece so that others can draw the same conclusions you do. A serious discussion illuminates the horizon with possibilities. Enjoy the many shades of life's rainbow. Tonight: Follow the music.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Let go of a need to control, and you'll still discover that you are in the driver's seat. Imagine that! Others trust you with their financial concerns, as your integrity speaks through your dealings. No wonder a boss will drop a new project on you. Tonight: Treat yourself well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Your unusually winning style brings you friends and allows you to head in new directions. Though your flair works, follow through with a diligent approach. Your ability to do just that allows you more freedom than many will get. Explore potential vacation ideas. Tonight: Whatever makes the Twin smile.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ Step back some and allow a partner to show off his good side. You don't always have to carry the world's burdens on your back. An associate delights you in the long run, if just given the chance. Kiss away negativity. Tonight: Make someone happy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Friends fill your day with surprises. As a result, you gain new perspectives. Understand what motivates a partner: What is it you have? A serious meeting will lead to better understanding. Tonight: Where the crowds are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Assume responsibility when dealing with co-workers in general. Unpredictability and creativity race through your environment. You might feel as if others drop their burdens on you. Use your creativity to work through a problem. You'll solve it. Tonight: Easy does it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Let your mind lead, and your heart and body will follow. You'll make strong decisions as a result. A jolt points you in another direction. Listen to the obvious, and follow through. Information comes forward, though you might have to struggle to get facts. Tonight: Allow your love of music to come forward.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Deal with others on a one-on-one level, and success will greet you. Don't hide a problem, because it will come out anyway. You might be uncomfortable with your partner's idea of your options. Creative brainstorming on your part with family puts smiles on others' faces. Tonight: Opt for some cuddling.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Let others roll with the ball. You aren't going to be able to stop them, anyway. A laissez-faire attitude helps others realize their limits and their potential. Your instincts guide you later in the day. Screen calls, and you'll get your work done. Tonight: Say yes to an invite.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Listen to someone who has many good ideas. Be diligent with a co-worker or with a friend who might be blue. That extra push or smile can make all the difference. Be generous with others, giving them the benefit of the doubt. Follow your instincts. Tonight: Exercise to music.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ You might be stunned by someone's serious tone and actions. Options open up because of your spunkiness. Relax more, and you'll contact your innate sense of balance and intuition. You cannot keep pushing a loved one. Stop this pattern, for your sake and his. Tonight: Fun and games.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Family captures your attention. Your instincts about what would make someone happy hit the mark. Listen carefully to someone who cares a lot about you. Feedback might not be what you want to hear, but it proves helpful if you listen. Tonight: Order in.

Beware of deals that look routine. There are shoals lurking to wreck the careless sailor.

A word about the auction. North's one no-trump was forcing, and South was a whit short of a jump to three clubs. North's leap to three hearts showed a limit raise with precisely three trumps, and South had ample to continue to game, but no more.

West led the king of spades, and declarer was delighted with the contract. Dummy's ace of spades won the first trick, the ace and king of hearts were cashed, and storm clouds appeared on the horizon when West discarded a spade.

Declarer displayed good technique by cashing the king and ace of clubs, then leading a club toward the closed hand. But East ruffed the club, led a spade to West's queen and ruffed the club return. Declarer still had to concede a diamond for down one.

The contract can be made by a simple maneuver or two to sever the defenders' communications. Declarer should hold up the ace of spades at trick one, and the entry to the West hand is removed. If West continues with a spade, declarer wins and proceeds as above. Should East refuse to ruff the third club, declarer's queen wins, and a club is ruffed on the table. East can enjoy the long heart at any time, but the defense can get only three tricks.

What if West shifts to a low diamond at trick two? Declarer must hold up that ace as well, to prevent West's king of diamonds from becoming the entry for a second club ruff.

Aggressive behavior isn't normal

By T. Berry Brazelton, M.D.
By N.Y. Times Service

QUESTION: Our nephew, an only child, is at the center of a family feud. He has ADD (Attention Deficit Disorder) and has always had behavioral problems. His mother divorced his father when he was 3 months old and moved in with her parents — my in-laws — and raised him for the past 12 1/2 years.

The problem lies in the way this child is allowed to treat our three sons, who are all younger than him. He constantly physically hurts them and often must be restrained in order to stop. (He tried to suffocate one child and drown another.) He bullies them emotionally when we don't allow the physical abuse. Although my in-laws and sister-in-law acknowledge he has a problem, they don't hold him accountable for his behavior and never try to stop him.

Brazelton

Because our children are afraid of this child, we began to limit their exposure to him and eventually had to address the situation with my sister-in-law and in-laws. Though we were polite and tried to be positive, the conversation turned into an attack on us and our children.

I realize this is a bitter pill to ask them to swallow, but our kids' safety comes first. My in-laws say this is normal behavior and we are overreacting. What do you think? — T.W., Double Oak, Texas

DR. BRAZELTON: Your sister-in-law sounds overwhelmed by her inability to understand and help this child. He does sound as if he has serious problems in controlling his aggressive behavior. Is there any way to persuade her to seek help for him before he gets into real trouble?

I would certainly urge you to stay away from him. There's no reason for you to permit your children to be browbeaten — or worse. Maybe your refusal to let your children play with him will cause his mother or your in-laws to seek help. If your description is accurate, his behavior is not normal.

QUESTION: I have a 7-year-old daughter, and my inquiry relates to accessibility to today's modern conveniences, such as a television, computer, etc.

Are there any statistical numbers related to the placement of such items in the bedrooms of children according to age or some other identifying category? Assuming reasonable parental guidance, at what age do you feel such conveniences are permissible/advisable? — L.A.W., Grantville, Pa.

DR. BRAZELTON: The American Academy of Pediatrics has issued a recommendation to parents to move all media (such as television sets, computers) out of their children's rooms and into a family room. Presumably, that would allow parents to share viewing of their children's programs (a practice with which I certainly agree) and to monitor their use of the Internet. I'd certainly be inclined to listen to the warnings of the AAP. If unmonitored, the Internet has many perils for children and teens.

The AAP also recommends that parents:

- Limit children's total media time to no more than one to two hours of quality programming per day.
- Discourage television viewing for children younger than 2 years, and encourage more interactive activities that will promote proper brain development, such as talking, playing, singing and reading together.
- Monitor the shows children and adolescents are viewing. Most programs should be informational, educational and nonviolent.
- View television programs along with children, and discuss the content.
- Use controversial programming as a stepping-off point to initiate discussions about family values, violence, sex and sexuality, and drugs.
- Avoid using media as an electronic baby sitter.

Questions or comments should be addressed to Dr. T. Berry Brazelton at families@nytsyn.com or care of The New York Times Syndication Sales Corp., 122 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10168. Brazelton heads the Brazelton Foundation, which encourages and supports education and training programs for children and families.

Youth will be encouraged to have 'birds and bees' talk with parents

By Michele Kennerly
MRT Correspondent

ODESSA — If you're a parent preparing for the all-important "birds and the bees" talk with your child, "Straight Talk," to be presented by Odessa College and Planned Parenthood, may be just the thing to jump-start the conversation.

"Straight Talk" will be 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday at Odessa College in the Electronics and Technology Building. The fee is $5, which includes a T-shirt and snacks. Scholarships are available for those who cannot afford the entrance fee.

"Something we at Planned Parenthood definitely recognize is the need for honest information," said Carla Holeva, vice president of Community Affairs for Planned Parenthood. "There is no comprehensive sexual education in Midland or Odessa and we feel strongly that the fifth- to eighth-grade segment is a good place to start, because kids that age have lots of questions that their parents might feel daunted by.

"The goal is to provide honest education for young people about how their bodies work, how to make responsible choices, and how to understand puberty," added Ms. Holeva.

The fifth- and sixth-grade group will primarily learn about how the body works, puberty, hygiene, and HIV-AIDS, while the seventh- and eighth-grade group will learn about STDs abstinence, and birth control, she said.

The groups will be encouraged to ask questions of their speakers, who are all from the Permian Basin area and experienced in working with children and teen-agers.

"Parents should be the primary sex educators of their children, but oftentimes as parents it's difficult to come in and answer those questions, especially if the parents themselves were raised in households where sex talks were taboo," said Ms. Holeva. "But hopefully, after attending this program, parents and kids will have a place to start. Parents can encourage their kids to discuss with them what they learned and can decide how it fits with the families' beliefs and morals."

Ms. Holeva also believes the timing of "Straight Talk" couldn't be better.

"Recent statistics about teen-age pregnancy rates indicate they are down," she said. "With this program we are hitting all the subjects that affect pregnancy rates and help lower them."

For more information about "Straight Talk," call Planned Parenthood at 580-9855.

'After attending this program, parents and kids will have a place to start. Parents can encourage their kids to discuss with them what they learned and can decide how it fits with the families' beliefs and morals.'

'Rookie Dads'

Therapist urges father-child bonding

By Samantha Critchell
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Forget all the chaos that surrounds a newborn baby. There may not be a more peaceful feeling in the world than holding that baby close and just listening to him breathe.

This technique even works on "rookie dads," the new fathers who, on the surface, seem to have it all together but still are afraid of "breaking" the baby.

"Dads approach babies differently than moms, they handle it differently and their interests are different," says pediatric neurodevelopmental therapist Susan Fox. "They're not initially hands-on because men are worried about breaking or dropping the baby, but they also are interested in challenging the baby from a very young age."

And, she adds, nowadays, fathers play an important role in the daily life of children. Dads are not weekend playmates, they are full-time parents, said Ms. Fox of Seattle.

BELOW: There is more to reading the sports section than stats. Brian Thurber of Seattle encourages his son Luke to point out different items in newspaper photos. It's a family-fun activity included in "Rookie Dads," published by Pocket Books. LEFT: Making the "daddy connection," like Seattle-area resident Darren Kawatata has done with daughter Tatum, requires a little effort but it isn' work, pediatric therapist Susan Fox explains in her book "Rookie Dads."

AP Photos

While the new chores do take up time from already busy schedules, men also reap the rewards of lower blood pressure and a lower heart rate when they relax with their babies, Ms. Fox notes.

In the moment when a father enjoys the light breathing of a sleeping baby nestled into his chest, he realizes that parenting isn't work, it's just worth it.

It's important for fathers to make "the daddy connection" when the children are very young because they don't have the innate bond shared by mothers and babies, she explains. Fathers need to develop a neurological bond so the babies recognize their smell, appearance and even the way they touch.

Ms. Fox nudges fathers toward establishing this bond in her new book "Rookie Dads" (Pocket Books Trade Paperback), a play-by-play guide to nurturing, caring for and interacting with a baby throughout his first year.

Fathers often don't want to have to ask for help, said Ms. Fox, they'd rather look it up in a book on their own, sort of like most men prefer to consult a map instead of asking for directions.

She uses sports analogies throughout the book — even urging dads to read the sports pages of the newspaper with their tykes. The activity might spark a new tradition and prepare children to sit still for long ball games later in life.

Steve Benton of Woodinville, Wash., said he and son Cole, 2, enjoy reading stories, taking walks and throwing rocks in the pond. The duo is featured in Ms. Fox's book.

"I want to be his buddy and I want to be his mentor," said Benton, whose wife is expecting twins.

The 46-year-old dad says he shares all parenting duties — including providing affection.

"I almost feel like I hug him too much."

Andrew Borrevik also said he has no qualms about showering 13-month-old Spencer with hugs, kisses and words that express a father's love for his son.

"I have a good relationship with my own dad but when I hang up the phone with my mother I say, 'I love you,' but I don't say it to my dad. I want to be able to do that with Spencer."

Fathers of yesteryear — and even some 21st-century dads — worry that showing physical love and emotional vulnerability, particularly to boys, will either lessen their own masculinity or make their infant sons less masculine when they grow up, said Ms. Fox.

Borrevik said he can see how those issues might arise in other families, but it's not an issue with him.

"I want him (Spencer) to know that showing his feelings is OK and we'll work through things together. And if it means some ridicule — who cares?"

And, he adds, with more mothers working full-time and fathers taking on household duties, society is allowing fathers and their children to develop this closer bond.

When Spencer's mother went back to work after a five-month maternity leave, Borrevik then took five months off from his job at an automobile wholesale company to do his tour of duty.

The time spent with each parent has already taught Spencer that he has two "go-to parents," observes Borrevik, 34, of Snoqualmie, Wash.

In fact,said Ms. Fox, it's better for each parent to do a little bonding privately with their child — especially if the mom might criticize how a new dad is handling something.

"Men connect through activity, not talking. ... They're just wired differently. They don't sit and talk for two hours to forge a bond like women do."

Neither way is better, Ms. Fox said, they're just different. And kids benefit from both approaches.

While mothers typically are the nurturers offering unconditional love, fathers encourage autonomy, persistence and peak performance, she explains. Research shows that most successful adults — from Tiger Woods to top Microsoft executives — have close relationships with both parents, Ms. Fox said.

Benton's advice for soon-to-be dads: "Jump in."

He had no time to hem and haw about his role when, in the delivery room at the hospital, the doctor just told him to put on gloves and then help pull the baby out from the birth canal.

"From then on, it was 'hands-on' right away."

PARENT'S PERSPECTIVE

Fast-food restaurant is no place to take prom date

By Lana Cunningham

Cunningham

When we walked into the family restaurant a few weeks ago, I saw the man holding his son, about Christopher's age. The boy was stretched across his dad's lap, upper torso leaning down and fingers touching the floor. I thought, "That's my kind of boy."

Restaurants and Christopher mix about as well as oil and water. Even as an infant, he wasn't quiet in a restaurant and it didn't matter how many toys or how much food we took to entertain him. Today, he's quite vocal about it. "I hate restaurants. I want to stay home!"

We've persisted through the years, thinking and hoping that at some point Christopher will calm down and learn to enjoy eating out. His fun idea of eating out, though, is a fast food place with a playground attached. Even then, he's not interested in the food. I can just see him going to his senior prom and whipping through a fast-food restaurant with his date, instead of taking her to dinner at a nice restaura

Since Christopher's b... n, my husband and I have purposely selected noisy family restaurants to cover our son's loud cries. Even then, there are times he's had to be taken outside for a talk.

The worst times had to be when he was 2. My husband liked a booth, thinking it would be easier if Christopher didn't have a chair to knock over. But Christopher would find ways to entertain himself in a booth. The backs made perfect slides. A padded side against the wall translated into a place to kick feet or butt his head.

It never failed that as soon we were seated, Christopher would kick off his shoes. And since sitting up straight in the booth was never much fun (still isn't), that meant we often looked at feet propped against the wall.

(My husband wondered where Christopher got the idea to always take his shoes off at the table. Then, one day he looked underneath and saw two pairs of shoes — Christopher's and mine. Shortly after we started dating, my husband took me to a cocktail party. After standing in heels all day, I saw nothing wrong with taking them off while talking to people. Besides, how often do you look at people's feet at a cocktail party?)

There have been times we see a glimmer of hope for the future. Christopher gets interested in the restaurant's children's coloring menu or one of the magazines we take and actually sits up in his chair and keeps his shoes on.

And then there are times we can't win. A couple of years ago, Christopher actually was behaving at one family restaurant. Another couple with a boy about 18 months old was seated behind my husband and son. The boy played hide-and-seek with Christopher before being placed on the other side of the table. Christopher went back to his magazine. A few minutes later, the mother poked my husband and asked him to make our son behave. He was kicking the bench and it was bothering her.

My husband and I looked at each other and I mouthed a word that can't be repeated in a family newspaper. My only hope is that woman's son would turn into a perfect 2-year-old — a sheer terror.

But there are still moments that try our patience. Recently, my husband and I tied Christopher to his back seat and hauled him downtown to a casual eatery. He screamed all the way that he didn't want to go. When we arrived, my husband kept Christopher outside for an "attitude readustment" talk while I went inside to get a table. I waited and waited. Apparently, Christopher didn't want to change his attitude quickly. I finally told the waitress to bring milk for the kid and two glasses of wine for the parents. "I'll probably wish I'd ordered a bottle of wine," I said jokingly.

During the evening, she observed our son whining and squirming. When she left the check, the waitress leaned over and murmured, "Next time, I'll just bring you the bottle."

Landry leads league in homers at break

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

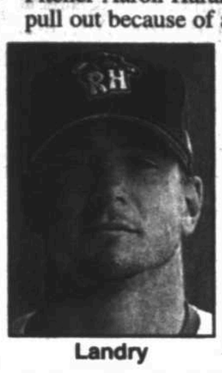
Midland RockHounds' outfielder Jacques Landry wanted to put up big numbers this year. He just didn't expect his biggest number of the 2001 season to be in the home run category.

At the end of the first half of Texas League play, Landry has belted 27 home runs, two more than Round Rock's Jason Lane. Landry is also one ahead of Adam Piatt's record pace of 39 home runs set during the 1999 season.

"It's definitely more than I expected but now I have to take advantage of it and come close to repeating it in the second half," said Landry, who is in his second year with the RockHounds. "Now that I'm doing it, I've got to keep it up. I can't be satisfied."

Landry will be leading a group of six RockHounds in today's Texas League All-Star game at San Antonio's Nelson Wolff Stadium. Game time is set for 7:05 p.m.

Joining Landry will be pitchers Mario Ramos, Tyler Yates and Claudio Galva, outfielder Ryan Ludwick and shortstop Oscar Salazar. Pitcher Aaron Harang was selected to the all-star game but had to pull out because of an injury.



Landry

Galva took Harang's place on the all-star roster. Midland's six selections equals Round Rock's in the West Division and Arkansas in the East.

Landry, who will be the designated hitter for the West, is having his best season since 1999, when he played for Modesto in the California League in Advanced-A ball. In 1999, Landry hit .311 with 27 home runs, 111 RBIs and 18 stolen bases. That season, Landry was named to the California League All-Star team and to Baseball America magazine's Class-A All-Star team.

This season, to go along with his 27 homers, Landry is hitting .264, is third in the league with 63 RBIs, leads the league with 66 runs scored, second in the league in extra base hits (38), second in slugging percentage (.628) and fourth in stolen bases (17).

"I had a great season in '99, but if I put up the big numbers this year, hopefully it'll make '99 pale in comparison," Landry said.

Tonight, Landry can forget about all the numbers and about the race for the second half pennant in the West Division. He just wants to go out and have fun in his first all-star game appearance since 1999.

"I'm just looking forward to playing with different guys in the league and just getting out and enjoying the atmosphere of the game," Landry said.

Here's a look at the other RockHounds who will be joining Landry in tonight's all-star game:

■ Pitcher Mario Ramos: Ramos is third in the league with a 2.74 ERA and tied for fourth in the TL with a 7-1 record. Ramos has 62 strikeouts and just 28 walks in 88 2/3 innings of work.

■ Pitcher Tyler Yates: Yates is fourth in the league with 11 saves and is the team's closer. He also has a 3.94 ERA with a 3-2 record. Yates has 31 strikeouts and just 13 walks in 32 innings.

Magazine recognizes Basin stars

Staff Report

The preseason prognostications of Dave Campbell's Texas Football Magazine have again predicted big things for the Permian Basin this next fall.

One year after Midland Lee running back Cedric Benson became the first-ever high school player to appear on the cover of the magazine, the three-time defending Class 5A state champion Rebels are again earning plaudits. And although he didn't make the cover, tight end Eric Winston stands as tall as anybody.

Winston, a senior, was named the Outstanding Offensive Player on this season's Super Team, which selects the best players from every classification to fill one squad. Also making the Super Team was senior Jeff Lebby of Andrews in the offensive line.

Making the third team was Midland Christian senior quarterback Jamie Beeghley.

At 6-foot-7, 285 pounds, Winston makes for one of the bigger targets of any receiver in the state. On an offense which was dominated by the running of Benson, one of the most prolific running backs in Texas history, Winston led the Rebels last season with 14 receptions for 305 yards and two touchdowns.

Winston, who has been clocked at 4.7 seconds in the 40-yard dash, also was an All-District 4-5A pick at tight end last year and was also an all-district pick in basketball. For good measure, he also played baseball for Lee in the spring.

With Lebby's selection this year, this marks the second straight season an Andrews player has been named to the Super Team, as defensive end Jayme Jackson was named last year. Lebby, the son of Andrews coach Mike Lebby, is also a large specimen like Winston, measuring 6-5, 275.

As a junior last season, Lebby was named an

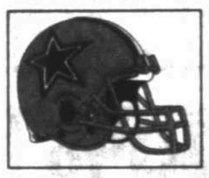
IRVING — As Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones searches for a place to build a new stadium, officials in Irving are vying to keep the team but are bracing for the possibility of life after the Cowboys.



Beacons of Irving's pride in the Cowboys are evident throughout the community — the team's home since Texas Stadium opened in 1971.

Streets are tagged with names such as Dorsett Court, Touchdown Drive and Avenue of Champions. Children attend classes at Tom Landry Elementary School. At Cowboys Sports Cafe, diners can opt for Emmitt's cheese quesadillas.

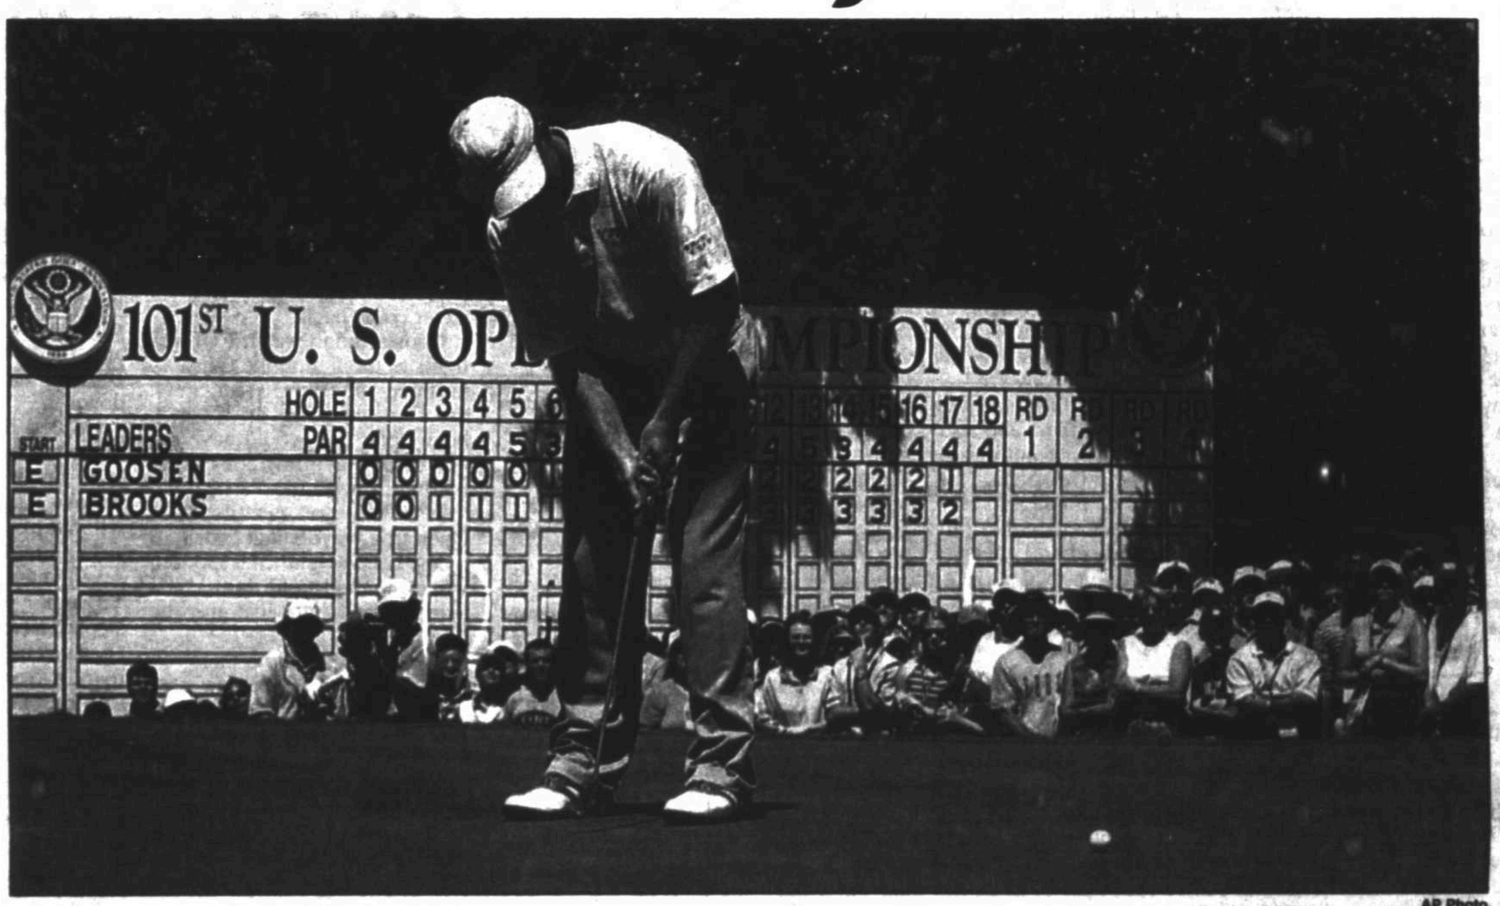
Goosen Really Can Putt



AP Photo

Retief Goosen putts to finish off the U.S. Open championship Monday on the 18th green at Southern Hills Country Club in Tulsa, Okla. Goosen defeated Mark Brooks, showing his frustration (below) in an 18-hole playoff for the title.

Goosen's putter proves golden as he defeats Brooks in U.S. Open playoff

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

TULSA, Okla. — No longer the laughingstock of golf, Retief Goosen redeemed himself Monday and became a U.S. Open champion.

All but forgotten is that shocking three-putt from a mere 12 feet on the 72nd hole at Southern Hills, one of the greatest gaffes in golf history.

The lasting image is the soft-spoken South African rolling in a 6-foot bogey putt on the same hole to claim a two-stroke victory over Mark Brooks of Fort Worth in the 18-hole playoff that should never have been necessary.

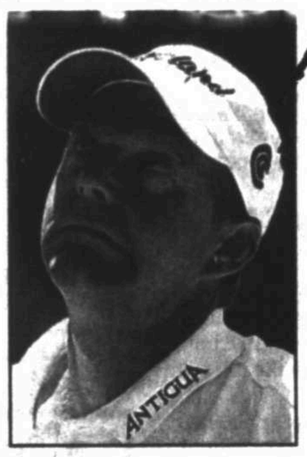
"I knew this time I had it in the bag," Goosen said. "When that putt went in, it was just a great relief."

Goosen easily could have joined the ranks of Jean Van de Velde, Scott Hoch and Doug Sanders, all authors of unspeakable collapses to let majors slip away.

"I felt like I needed to win this today because of what happened yesterday," Goosen said. "Today, I showed myself something."

He did it with rock-solid play through 16 holes to take a five-stroke lead over Brooks, a big enough cushion that he could allow for a few nervous moments.

With a three-stroke lead going into the last hole, Goosen came up short of the green and the ball rolled back some 30 yards down the fairway. Taking the safe route, he used a putter to belt it up the hill and onto the green, 25 feet short.



His par putt was well short, leaving Goosen in the same predicament he was Sunday, only with half the distance between him and the hole — 6 feet away, two putts to win.

There was never a doubt.

The putt fell in the center of the cup, giving him an even-par 70 and his first major.

"I kept my nerves together, and I've finally done it," Goosen said.

Brooks, whose only major victory came in a sudden-death playoff at the 1996 PGA Championship, led by one stroke after five holes until he came unglued by missing fairways. Five times he had lies in the rough so nasty that he couldn't reach the green.

The turning point came when Brooks bogeyed the ninth and 10th holes, and Goosen birdied both for two-shot swings that gave him a five-stroke lead — a margin so comfortable that ultimately he could afford to three-putt the 18th and still win.

"It's just a golf tournament," Brooks said. "It would have been nice to win, and I'll try to win again."

His only consolation? He was lucky to be in a playoff at all.

"He hit two great shots yesterday on 18 and should have won," Brooks said. "It was just one of those weird days. I got punished severely in the rough today. That was the difference."

Goosen earned $900,000, nearly as much as his best season on the European tour, and became only the second international player in the past 20 years to win the U.S. Open. The other was fellow South African and good friend Ernie Els, who won in 1994 and 1997.

The U.S. Open is the only major that waits until Monday to stage an 18-hole playoff, which clearly was a big boost for Goosen.

Wimbledon chooses Sampras as top seed

By Robert Millward
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Pete Sampras may have slipped to fifth in the world rankings, but he's still No. 1 at Wimbledon.

Organizers of the grass court Grand Slam championship ignored the ATP rankings on Monday and gave the seven-time champion the top seeding for the tournament, which starts next week.

Andre Agassi, who is second in the rankings, was seeded No. 2, meaning he and Sampras cannot meet until the final.

Australia's Patrick Rafter, last year's runner-up, is No. 3 despite a ranking of 10, with U.S. Open champion Marat Safin of Russia at No. 4. Lleyton Hewitt, the Australian who on Sunday won the grass-court tournament at Queen's Club, is No. 5.

Martina Hingis was seeded No. 1 in the women's field, the same as her world ranking, followed by defending champion Venus Williams.

For the first time in its 124-year history, Wimbledon will have 32 seeds instead of the usual 16 in each singles draw.

The organizers decided to double the number of seeds to try and pacify the clay-court players who claim the seeding system is biased toward grass-court players.

Orioles' Ripken plans to retire at end of year

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Cal Ripken, who shattered a baseball record considered unbreakable, told The Washington Post on Monday he intends to retire at the end of the season.

"It's inevitable that you can't play forever," Ripken told the Post. "I've maximized my window of opportunity as well as anyone. (Baseball) has given me a lot of joy and happiness and satisfaction. I'm proud of what I've been able to do."

Ripken broke Lou Gehrig's record of 2,130 consecutive games played on Sept. 6, 1995, and played 2,632 straight games before voluntarily ending the streak on Sept. 20, 1998.

"I'm ready to do other things," Ripken told the Post. "I'm ready to be home and be available to my kids and family. ... I'm sure I'll miss certain parts of (playing). But when you put your heart and soul into it at the level I have every single day, you can minimize some of your regrets."

Ripken, who turns 41 in August, is hitting just .210 this year with four homers and 25 RBIs. He is one of seven players in major league history with 3,000 hits (3,107) and 400 home runs (421).

His final chance to play at home would be Sept. 23 against the New York Yankees. The Orioles finish the season Sept. 30 at Yankee Stadium.

Ripken said he made his decision two or three weeks ago, but waited "just to

TENNIS: Hingis tops field

(From 1C)

Wimbledon over the issue, pulled out of the tournament hours before the draw, citing a leg injury.

French Open champion Gustavo Kuerten, ranked No. 1 in the world and another Wimbledon critic, withdrew last week with a groin problem.

Spain's Juan Carlos Ferrero is the only big-name clay-courter in the men's draw. He is seeded eighth, four places below his ranking.

Despite Wimbledon's policy of not sticking to the rankings, the ATP Players Council backed its decision to have 32 seedings.

"I think all the players are really, really pleased with the way things have worked out," council chairman Jonas Bjorkman said. "I think its the fairest way we can have it. Mandatory events like the Grand Slams really need to have 32 seeds."

Bjorkman, who missed a seeding by one place, said the majority of players "would have preferred to have it straight off the rankings. But this is the best we can get it at the moment."

Only the top 32 ranked players in the field are eligible for seedings, and one who benefited from the withdrawals was Todd Martin. Ranked 33rd, he moved into the top pool when Corretja withdrew, and — having reached Wimbledon semifinals in '1994 and '96 — was seeded 23rd.

Among the players outside the list of 32 seeds who could cause major upsets in the early rounds are Greg Rusedski of Britain, Wayne Arthurs of Australia and 18-year-old American Andy Roddick.

They could be the players to avoid in the draw, which is made at the All England Club on Tuesday.

In the women's field, 1999 champion Lindsay Davenport was seeded No. 3. Jennifer Capriati, halfway to a Grand Slam sweep after winning the Australian and French Opens, is No. 4.

But Anna Kournikova became the latest women's withdrawal Monday, the victim of a stress fracture of the foot which has kept her out of action since the end of February.

All four Grand Slam tournaments announced last week that they were doubling the number of seeded players to 32, with the order in the men's field determined by a formula that assesses past performance on each event's playing surface.

The new system ensures that the top 32 players in the ATP and WTA women's rankings will be seeded. In the past, the Wimbledon committee adjusted seedings subjectively based on past performances on grass.

Sampras hasn't won a tournament since winning Wimbledon last summer for the seventh time in eight years. He lost to Hewitt in the semifinals at Queen's Club on Sunday.

Hewitt beat Britain's Tim Henman in the Queen's final, and they are likely to be two of Sampras' main rivals this year. Two other top grass-courters, 1996 champion Richard Krajicek and three-time quarterfinalist Mark Philippoussis, have withdrawn with injuries.

Action wins tournament

PRESCOTT, Ariz. — The Midland Action baseball team won the second division of the Prescott Invitational Tournament this past weekend, winning four of its five games.

Action opened the tournament by losing to Horizon, Ariz. 8-2, but came back to beat Foothills, Ariz. 13-3 and Green Valley 12-1 to reach the semfinals. In the semis, Action edged Yuma, Ariz. 7-6 to reach the finals, where it routed the Arizona Rustlers 11-1.

Nick Kincaid led Action's pitching, giving up only two earned runs in nine innings. At the plate, Justin Stevens hit .600 with a home run and eight RBIs; Jason South hit .500 and drove in five runs; Josh Haney hit .500 and Patrick Smart hit .470 with three homers and 7 RBIs.

Hardin-Baylor signs two locals

Two players with Midland connections have committed to play softball next season for the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor.

Sarah Lemons, a pitcher and outfielder who graduated from Midland Christian, has committed to play for the Crusaders. Also committing is Misty Baker, a Coahoma High graduate who played one season at Midland College. Lemons will enter school as a freshman while Baker will have three years of eligibility remaining.

Blair aces at Nueva Vista

Jerry Blair scored a hole-in-one Monday at Nueva Vista Golf Club. Blair aced the 150-yard No. 15 hole with a 7-iron. The ace was witnessed by Larry Sutton, Carl Tucker, Vance Scott and Raymond Nicholas.

Luttrell places 10th in tourney

Jeremiah Luttrell of Midland Country Club finished tied for 10th at the NTPGSA Assistants Stroke Play Championship Monday. Luttrell shot 73-74—147 and earned $328.75. There were 64 golfers in the field.

Corrections

In Sunday's edition, a story ran listing four players from the Midland High baseball team who were named to the the Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association Class 5A all-state team. The name of senior Matt Bose was inadvertently left out.

Bose was named District 4-5A co-most valuable player along with MHS teammate Jayson Nix and was a major factor in helping the Bulldogs to a 5A state title. Playing third base, Bose hit .434 during the regular season and also stood out on the pitching mound, posting an 11-2 record. Bose was the winning pitcher in Midland High's 8-6 win over Klein in the state semifinal.

In Monday's edition, a story about the ASA softball tournament at the MUGS Complex said that Ashton Spence pitched a perfect game for the Odessa Sting. Spence actually threw the perfect game for the Abilene Blue Sox.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the errors.

DALLAS: Jones wants stadium

(From 1C)

But, Jones wants to use taxpayer money to create a new complex that would include a hall of fame, a theme park and a hotel. Irving leaders are preparing a package of incentives to keep the Cowboys, but Arlington, Grand Prairie, Grapevine and Denton County also are in the running.

"I'm 100 percent confident we will be able to do this," said Irving City Council member Herbert Gears, the mayor pro tem.

Others, however, say they may be content to watch from the sidelines if the price becomes too steep.

That possibility disappoints some residents.

"Irving and the Dallas Cowboys are interchangeable all over the world," community activist Anthony Bond said. "America is a country built on symbolism. A tremendous amount of worth is assigned to the mantra of America's Team.

"I believe if the city of Irving loses the Dallas Cowboys, they're going to lose a ton of corporate dollars," Bond said. "We ought to do what we can to keep them."

Jim Clark, executive director of Irving Convention & Visitors Bureau, said he is optimistic that an agreement can be worked out.

But not everyone in Irving is shedding tears over the possible loss of the Cowboys.

"People who live out here and work out here and spend money out here are not out here just to see the Cowboys," said Jerome Perry, manager of Cowboys Sports Cafe in the Valley Ranch neighborhood near Cowboys headquarters. "They set up base here and live here. That's what they're doing out here."

"I think that as far as Valley Ranch goes, the thing that's going to keep our property values high is if we maintain the community," said Councilman Rick Stopfer, an Irving resident since 1988. "By the location, we're certainly guaranteed a high level of visibility and occupancy."

Meanwhile, the concrete continues to crack at Texas Stadium, known for its trademark hole in the roof.

"We've had a good relationship with Irving, and it's important to show Irving respect at every opportunity," Jones said. "But at the same time, there comes a point in your lease where you have to start thinking about certain things."

OPEN: Goosen rebounds well after Sunday's collapse

(From 1C)

His psychologist, Jos Vanstiphout, told him, "What happened today is gone and will never come back."

Goosen didn't watch TV highlights of the fictionlike finish — his three-putt from 12 feet, Stewart Cink missing an 18-inch bogey putt that would have put him in the playoff, Brooks three-putting from 40 feet earlier.

Els, who won his first U.S. Open in a playoff that lasted 20 holes, called right after Goosen woke up and told him, "It's going to be tough. Just play the game."

Goosen took it from there.

He is among the best in such situations, having once taken Tiger Woods to the 18th hole in the Match Play Championship, and tying a record in the Dunhill Cup by winning 10 consecutive stroke-play matches to lead South Africa to victory.

He never faced these circumstances, though — having to play 18 holes for a title that should already have been his.

"I know now what Jean Van de Velde went through at Carnoustie," Goosen said, referring to the Frenchman's triple bogey in the 1999 British Open, which still ranks as golf's most memorable debacle.

"But I was just trying to put that behind me."

Brooks led only once after a 5-foot birdie putt on No. 3 and was spurred on by a large gallery, some of them waving American flags. Goosen had to make great par saves on the first three holes, and then settled into a rhythm as Brooks' swing began to break down.

He tied Brooks with a 6-foot birdie putt on No. 6, then took the lead on the next hole when Brooks hit into the right rough with an iron off the tee.

The first U.S. Open playoff in seven years ended quickly.

Brooks' tee shot on No. 9 stopped a foot away from the base of an oak tree. Hearing the gallery roar for Goosen's approach to 15 feet, Brooks planted his right foot against the tree and tried to punch it out. He barely caught the top of the ball, and it dribbled into the heavy rough.

Goosen made his birdie and Brooks two-putted for bogey, a two-stroke swing that gave Goosen command going into the back nine.

Then came the final blow.

Goosen hit his iron into the left rough, and Brooks tried to cut off too much of the left-to-right dogleg and was blocked by trees, forcing him to lay up short of the green. He two-putted from 20 feet for another bogey, while Goosen's 12-footer down the slope trickled into the cup for another birdie, another two-stroke swing.

"Knockout!" someone cried out from the gallery.

Indeed, it was.

All that was lacking was any drama, although that was just fine with Goosen. He had enough Sunday to last a lifetime.

Unlike some players who stumbled so badly and were never heard from again, at least Goosen was able to hoist the trophy when the championship ended.

At least now he can laugh.

"Yesterday was quite funny, actually," he said.

Goosen, a four-time winner in Europe, had been considered an underachiever in South Africa because he lacked the kind of championships won by Els, Gary Player and Bobby Locke.

"He's just coming into his own," Els said Sunday. "Maybe this is his time."

Els wished him well in a note written in Afrikaans on a pink piece of paper, and offered three reasons why Goosen would win the U.S. Open.

"His mind, his ability to hang in there, and he's not afraid," Els said. "Those are the main things you need to win this."

He left out one thing.

Goosen needed a second chance, and he made the most of it.

All-District 4-4A offensive tackle. Like Winston, he is also being heavily recruited by several four-year schools.

Heading into his fourth year as the team's starting quarterback, Beeghley is the first Midland Christian player named to a Super Team since the team started playing 11-man football five years ago. Beeghley led the Mustangs to the TAPPS 4A title last season and was also a first team all-state TAPPS pick, throwing for 1,482 yards.

Beeghley's coach is Greg McClendon, who is a former assistant to Lee's John Parchman. McClendon and Parchman were honored as Reebok Team Uniforms 2000 Coaches of the year for TAPPS and 5A respectively.

Two local players were listed among the state's best returning juniors at their respective positions, with Lee's Jacoby Hartley being recognized at defensive back and Stanton's Lance Kargl being named as an offensive lineman.

In the magazine's preseason polls, local teams fared quite well. Lee is ranked No. 4 in 5A, Andrews No. 25 in 4A, Greenwood No. 13 in 3A, Stanton No. 8 in 2A and Rankin No. 6 in Class A.

RIPKEN: Baltimore star will retire

(From 1C)

make sure" it was not a fleeting feeling.

"I'm not doing this to have a farewell tour or to have people look at it as their last chance to see me," he said. "What I really want to see happen for the rest of the year is to thoroughly enjoy the game, what I've been doing my whole life, for what it is."

Ripken has said he wants to run a major league organization, similar to the way Michael Jordan has become the president and part-owner of the NBA's Washington Wizards.

"I want to be able to test my philosophies about a whole organization," he told the Post. "I've gathered a lot of information. ... I've kept my eyes open and watched the evolution of baseball. And I would love at some point to have the opportunity to test those philosophies."

Ripken was the American League rookie of the year in 1982 and was selected league MVP in 1983 and 1991. He won a World Series championship with the Orioles in 1983.

In 1990, Ripken set a record for shortstops with a .996 fielding percentage, making just three errors in 161 games. He moved to third base in 1997.

In 1999, Ripken and Ernie Banks of the Chicago Cubs were selected as the shortstops for baseball's "All-Century" team.

'HOUNDS: Team sends 6

(From 1C)

■ Pitcher Claudio Galva: Galva has emerged as a reliable pitcher out of the bullpen with six saves and a team low 2.30 ERA and has allowed just eight earned runs. At one stretch during the first half, Galva allowed just one earned run in 23 mound appearances.

■ Outfielder Ryan Ludwick: Ludwick is hitting .272 and is third in the league with 18 home runs and second in the TL with 67 RBIs.

■ Shortstop Oscar Salazar: Salazar is hitting .279 with 15 home runs and 63 RBIs, tied with Landry for third best in the Texas League.

Tim Claire and David Rydell's names may be familiar to many area residents from their association with a previous company they ran and operated for over ten years. That company was sold to a consolidator after four years in corporate America. " We came to realize that we prefer a more personalized contact with our customer base "stated Claire. Rydell added " As the owners of ComfortZone 500, we once again have that opportunity. We also have the freedom to hand pick and train all of our employees. We are dedicated to providing the highest customer service possible".
Claire continued, "Previous experience has taught us that building a customer base takes time, energy and dedication. And we have to offer the highest quality service

Oil futures sink

NEW YORK — Crude oil futures sank Monday as Gulf Coast waterways and refineries recovered from storm and flood damage in the wake of Tropical Storm Allison, analysts said.

July crude oil futures skidded 96 cents to $27.55 a barrel at the New York Mercantile Exchange, as ample physical supplies of crude appeared and jitters faded over a prolonged Iraqi output halt in the storm's aftermath and refinery production revved up again.

"We're losing all of that fear right now," said Laura Anello, analyst at FCStone, a commission house. "Refineries, some of those that admitted problems, are coming back on line."

These include ExxonMobil's Baytown, Texas, and BP's Carson, Calif., refineries.

Moreover, the Louisiana Offshore Oil Port reported that crude deliveries delayed by the storm had been "all caught up."

"Overall storm damage being squared away, combined with technicals for a one-two punch," said John Kilduff, senior vice president Fimat USA Inc. "It augurs another leg down to $27, or lower."

Adding to the pressure are growing numbers of market players who now say they expect Iraq to resume its more than 2 million barrels a day in exports soon.

Conflicting news reports Friday and over the weekend helped fuel speculation on Iraq, which stopped its oil exports June 4 to protest a sanctions overhaul proposed by the United Nations Security Council.

July gasoline futures slumped 2.14 cents to 85.15 cents a gallon at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Other energy futures also finished lower. July heating oil fell 3.35 cents to 77.10 cents a gallon, and July natural gas fell 4 cents to $3.939 per 1,000 cubic feet.

In other commodity markets, Arabica coffee futures rose on the Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange on forecasts of cooler weather in Brazil later this week, which stirred worries about the possibility of frost damage.

The July contract added 1.55 cents to 60.95 cents a pound. Speculators covered short positions, buying back futures they previously sold, having added aggressively to their overall short position.

Dollar rises

LONDON — The U.S. dollar rose Monday against the other major currencies in European trading.

The euro was quoted at 85.99 cents in late European trading, down from 86.22 cents on Friday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 86.12 cents.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Friday, included: 123.21 Japanese yen, up from 122.40; 1.7781 Swiss francs, up from 1.7724, and 1.5300 Canadian dollars, up from 1.5218.

The British pound was quoted at $1.4022, down from $1.4042.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 123.23 yen, and the pound was worth $1.4028.

Based on euro rates in Europe, the dollar was worth 2.2732 German marks, up from 2.2674; 7.6239 French francs, up from 7.6044; 2.5592 Dutch guilders, up from 2.5547, and 2,250.43 Italian lire, up from 2,244.69.

Gold up

Gold closed in London at $272.10 bid per troy ounce, up from $271,50 on Friday. In Zurich the bid price was $272.45, up from $271.35. Gold rose 30 cents in Hong Kong to close at $271.55.

Silver closed in London at $4.39 bid per troy ounce, down from $4.41.

FERC votes for electricity price caps

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators ordered price restraints Monday on electricity sales across the West but not the stringent cost-based controls sought by California.

The 5-0 vote by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission followed intense pressure not only from California Gov. Gray Davis and Democrats newly in charge of the Senate but also from House Republicans worried that spiraling power prices in the West could affect the 2002 election.

FERC Chairman Curtis Hebert said the order, effective through September 2002, will benefit consumers but also will "provide every incentive for suppliers to reduce costs."

The order expands price restrictions the agency imposed in April on wholesale electricity sales in California during peak demand periods when blackouts were threatened.

The restrictions will now cover power transactions 24 hours a day, seven days a week throughout 10 Western states in addition to California. It also closes several loopholes that allowed power generators to circumvent the April order.

The price cap will be pegged to the cost of production at the least efficient electricity generating plant in the region.

The order came at the same time California officials were issuing warnings of possible rolling blackouts Monday and Tuesday as a heat wave threatened to send temperatures to 100 degrees or above in some areas of the state.

The 10 states other than California covered by the order are all participants in the Western power grid: Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

All five commissioners expressed their support for the plan, including two recent appointees of President Bush who took office just last month, and both Democrats on the panel.

"This order moves sharply in a direction that I have advocated for eight months," said Commissioner William Massey, a Democrat. "It eliminates any opportunity for megawatt laundering" through transactions allowed by loopholes cited by California officials in the April order, he said.

Massey said he would have preferred tougher caps based on power generators' cost of service, but a majority of the panel did not support that approach.

Linda Breathitt, the other Democrat, said the order should "provide breathing room for the markets to correct themselves."

"The blame game should end today," said Nora Brownell, one of Bush's new appointees to the commission.

Hours before the commission meeting, Bush hinted he might support some price restraints, although he reiterated his opposition to "firm price controls."

"They know full well my administration's belief that price controls will not solve the problem," he told reporters at the White House. In advance of the FERC vote, Bush described the prospective action as a "mechanism ... to mitigate any severe price spike that may occur, which is completely different from price controls."

Massey, however, insisted that the order "is a form of price control."

Hebert said the order pegs the top price that can be charged in non-emergency hours in California to 85 percent of the last price negotiated during a peak demand emergency when blackouts threatened.

Price caps for the other 10 states would be linked to California prices, which have been the highest in the country.

The order was advocated by several Republicans as a way to stem growing pressure from Democrats for broader price controls on electricity.

Democrats have demonstrated they intend to make energy costs a key issue. They already have launched a series of hearings on the California power problems and called for price caps on Western electricity sales.

The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, now chaired by Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., has scheduled a hearing Tuesday with the five FERC commissioners. Connecticut Sen. Joseph Lieberman, last year's Democratic vice presidential nominee, also planned hearings on FERC and the California power problems later this week before the Governmental Affairs Committee that he chairs.

The April order had confined the caps only to California and only when power reserves in the state fell to below 7.5 percent of total demand, triggering an emergency.

Hebert insisted the April order was effective in sharply reducing wholesale power costs in California in the past two months, but Davis complained it had done little to ease the problem.

Four companies charged in $175 million scheme

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has charged four companies with using the Internet to con consumers around the globe out of about $175 million in a massive pyramid scheme.

SkyBiz.com, based in Tulsa, Okla., and three partner companies promoted a work-at-home business, charging $125 for an educational software package and the opportunity to earn money by recruiting others to buy the packages, the Federal Trade Commission said Monday.

The recruits would have to buy one or more packages and then could recruit still more people and so on, earning commissions for those above them in the recruiting chain, the agency said, announcing the details of sealed civil charges filed on May 30.

"This is one of the biggest pyramid schemes we've seen," said Howard Beales, director of the FTC's consumer protection bureau. He said the Internet is a "quick, cheap way to reach consumers around the world with whatever the latest con is, and here it has provided a forum to resurrect one of the oldest scams around."

The agency said in court papers that only people at the very top of the pyramid were successful and most investors lost money. On June 6, U.S. District Judge Terry C. Kern froze the operation's assets and ordered the companies to halt any illegal activities until a hearing June 26, FTC attorney Jim Elliot said.

Elliot said the government is seeking to disband SkyBiz and return money to consumers.

The FTC charged that the SkyBiz companies and their officers violated federal laws by creating a pyramid scheme, making false claims that consumers would earn large incomes and failing to mention that most people in such schemes lose money.

The four Oklahoma companies named in the lawsuit are SkyBiz.com Inc.; World Service Corporation; Nanci Corporation International; and WorldWide Service Corporation.

Joel Wohlgemuth, lawyer for most of the SkyBiz defendants, said the FTC's announcement of the charges was improper because the case is still in the courts.

"We certainly deny that there is any illegal scheme," he said.

The government said SkyBiz since 1998 has used in-person sales presentations, seminars, teleconferences, Web site presentations and other marketing material to tout the opportunity to earn thousands of dollars a week by recruiting for the program.

Nasdaq closes below 2,000 for first time in two months

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street punished technology stocks for a seventh straight session Monday on fears the sector's worst days are still ahead. The selloff sent the Nasdaq composite index to its first close below 2,000 since April.

The pessimism spread to the broader market, limiting the modest gains achieved by a handful of manufacturing and retail stocks. Even better-than-expected results from Oracle after the close of regular trading weren't expected to cheer weary investors.

"This is a complete abdication of anything having to do with technology and the overlapping market can't deal with this unrelenting selling," said Larry Wachtel, market analyst at Prudential Securities. "Nortel, JDS Uniphase ... all the heroes of yesteryear are being decimated because people are worried about when their earnings are going to improve."

The Nasdaq composite index closed down 39.80 at 1,988.63, according to preliminary calculations, its worst finish since April 16, when the index closed at 1,909.57.

The Dow Jones industrial average managed a small advance, thanks to gains in a handful of non-tech issues, rising 21.74 to 10,645.38, its first advance since last Tuesday.

The broader Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 5.93 to 1,208.43.

Technology was again a focus of investors, who have shied away from the sector on concerns that its performance won't recover until 2002.

Although second-quarter earnings were expected to be horrible, Wall Street has had a hard time adjusting to the spate of corporate earnings warnings that have been appearing recently.

Specifically, investors have been unnerved by reports of excess inventory and continued sluggish orders — both of which suggest the economy and business climate remain weak. The resulting selloff has eroded much of the huge rally that sent the market soaring this spring.

Oracle fell 16 cents to $14.84 in regular trading before rebounding to $15.60 in the extended session on fiscal fourth quarter results that beat expectations by a penny. Still, analysts were doubtful that the report would do much to improve the market's mood since Wall Street had previously reduced its estimates citing the economy.

Indeed, investors were not in the mood to take chances all Monday. Nortel Networks fell $1.34 to $8.52 in the regular session on selling related to its earnings warning last week.

Other big tech losers included Microsoft, down $1.14 at $66.88. JDS Uniphase was down $1.84 at $10.60, while Lucent dropped 62 cents to $5.69.

Blue chips fared better, getting boosts from Wal-Mart, up 37 cents at $48.52, and General Motors, which rose $2.16 to $61.51.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

When indexing, use broad index funds such as U.S. total stock market

By Eric Tyson

Q: We have most of our retirement funds in stock funds, much of it in an S&P 500 index fund. I am retired, age 65, and my wife is still working and is 56 years old. We have few debts, but I know I need to be in some more conservative investments. I will soon be inheriting $100,000 and another $75,000 in a year or so. I do not know where to put this money. I will put some of it in a money market fund that I use to spend from, but I don't know where to put the rest. Bond funds seem high now, so I am lost as to where to invest the money. What is your advice?

Tyson

A: Given your ages and presuming you want to be reasonably aggressive, I would advise that you have about 60 percent in stocks with the remainder in bonds. The money in stocks should be well-diversified among large-, medium- and small-company stocks worldwide.

As you already seem to know, you've got too much in stocks and too much in large-company U.S. stocks (the S&P 500 index). Regular readers of my columns know that when indexing, I recommend broad index funds such as the U.S. total stock market index funds which encompass small-, medium- and large-company stocks.

I don't think your personal opinion about where particular security prices are currently should affect your asset allocation. Full-time investment managers have a difficult enough time trying to figure where markets are heading, so part-time amateurs are surely at a disadvantage in the prediction business.

As I've said before, index funds do wonderfully over the long-term because for a low fee, such funds simply buy and hold a diversified portfolio of securities and don't attempt to time the markets.

I recommend you invest the inherited money in the same diversified mix of funds that you come up with for the money you already have on hand. If the inherited money represents a substantial portion of your financial assets, you might invest it gradually over time — such as once per quarter over a one- to two-year period — to minimize the chances of buying much at a peak.

Q: I am concerned about impending changes in Vanguard's Star Fund. This fund has been my primary pension vehicle for the past 10 years, and I have been very satisfied with the results to date. However, they have proposed a change in their investing policy to include international funds in this portfolio. Eventually the Star fund could have 12 percent of its holdings in two international funds — the Value Fund and the Growth Fund. What is your opinion of this change coupled with a prior policy change of allowing the different funds to borrow from each other? I have $500,000 invested in this fund and use it as my primary pension draw of approximately $30,000 per year. I have been drawing from this fund for the past two years. I realize this is a considerable sum to have at risk, but I have considered the Star Fund a reasonably safe way to go.

A: The proposed change to allow the Vanguard Star fund, which is a fund of funds, to invest in international funds was recently approved by the fund's shareholders. I think this modification is a good one, as it will better diversify the holdings of the Star fund to include international stocks in the fund's mix, complementing its current holdings of domestic stocks and bonds.

Several years ago, Vanguard shareholders did approve an "interfund lending program" for all of its funds. From time to time various Vanguard funds might have very short-term needs to borrow or lend money. A Vanguard fund with excess cash reserves may lend money to another Vanguard fund that has sold some securities (which take three business days to settle) to meet shareholder redemption requests. This is a completely safe process that benefits all shareholders of the involved funds.
