Former policeman surrenders after three-hour suicide threat

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A heavily armed former Odessa policeman was holed up inside his Midland home nearly three hours late Wednesday after he fired at least two shots and threatened to commit suicide, apparently despondent over the loss of his job, according to police.

Milton Fletcher, 57, finally surrendered without resistance to police at 9:24 p.m. in the backyard of the house at 3202 W. Shell. He appeared shaky as he was led to a waiting ambulance near the alley that abuts Grafa Park.

He was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital where he was listed early today in satisfactory condition.

The incident began about 6:35 p.m. when police received a call that a man with a gun had threatened to commit suicide.

Midland Police Lt. Earl Luckey said police evacuated without incident the man's wife and mother from the house. Neighbors immediately around the house were also evacuated.

The police Special Response Team (SRT) was called to the scene, and took positions armed with rifles and tear gas. A command post was set up a few houses east of the scene at 3112 Shell.

Sgt. Ed Nicks of the SRT requested a hostage phone shortly before 8 p.m. One officer remarked a few minutes later that the man was not answering his phone, and "we're going to have to go face-to-face." But police did establish contact with the man.

"We want to keep him talking on the phone — just talking," said Police Chief Sid Corley at the scene. "About the weather, about anything — the problems usually start when they stop talking."

Police said Fletcher was a member of the Houston, and later Odessa police departments. His former partner in the Odessa police, Sgt. Kevin Begley, was called and was one of the officers who spoke with Fletcher on the phone.

Reports circulated that Fletcher was a former deputy with the Midland County Sheriff's Department, but Sheriff Gary Painter and Lt. Clayton McKinney said he was never an employee.

South African group won't talk with Howe

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's largest trade federation today refused to meet with British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe, saying he was the wrong man to negotiate an end to apartheid.

"But this is the kind of insensitivity we have come to expect from the British government," the Congress of South African Trade Unions said in a statement.

"The British government, typically arrogant, have not appointed a negotiator who appears committed in the main to staving off intensified international pressure on South Africa," it said.

The British foreign secretary, who arrived Wednesday, has been mandated by the 12-nation Common Market to press for an end to apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation under which 5 million whites dominate 24 million voteless blacks.

Britain, South Africa's biggest trading partner, and the United States oppose economic sanctions, saying such measures would lead to widespead suffering among blacks. Opponents say they would promote race reforms.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions, which is allied with the anti-apartheid United Democratic Front, accused the two Western nations of having become "the strongest allies of this intransigent government."

More than 2,000 people have been killed since September 1984 when the anti-apartheid struggle intensified. At least 172 people have died since the government imposed a nationwide state of emergency on June 12.

The government says most recent victims were killed by other blacks, not by security forces.

Under the emergency decree, journalists cannot report actions of security forces without permission, publish what the government considers subversive statements or report the names of people detained. The emergency decree bans "most public gatherings and gives police the power to detain people without charge."

Howe met with President P.W. Botha on Wednesday, and later described the meeting as "candid, courteous and substantive."

The British foreign secretary said change was inevitable in South Africa.

But he added, "We don't give anyone a blank check to write U.S. policy."

Appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Wednesday, Shultz was told by Democrats and Republicans alike that the GOP-controlled Senate will likely pass some type of sanctions.

At one point during the hearing, Shultz and Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., got into a heated exchange with Biden first referring to the patriotic criticism of Reagan's speech by South African Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, then questioning the U.S. policy himself.

"I hate to hear an administration and a secretary of state refusing to act on a morally abhorrent point. I'm ashamed of this country that puts out a policy like this that says nothing, nothing. We put no timetable on, we make no specific demands. I'm ashamed of our policy. That's what I'm ashamed of. I'm ashamed of the lack of moral backbone to this policy."

Shultz, interrupting him, replied, "I resent that. I resent that deeply because there is tremendous moral backbone in that policy on a bipartisan basis and has been for many, many years."

The House bill was introduced in the Senate on Wednesday by Cranston and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Outsiders can perhaps see things that those closer to the scene may miss. What all outsiders can see clearly is that after 25 years, the wind of change in Africa is shaking its southern part to the roots," he said.

Shultz: Sanctions should be coordinated effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Senate moves ahead with plans to impose sanctions on South Africa — despite strong Reagan administration objections — Secretary of State George Shultz said today that such measures would need to be coordinated with other nations for them to be effective.

Shultz, a day after he was told by senators of both parties that the chamber will likely approve sanctions in some form, held a satellite news conference with reporters in South Africa, Europe and Canada.

"If any measures of this sort are to be really effective, they must be done on a coordinated basis."

Nations, he added, should see to it if any actions are needed they are taken in a coordinated way. If U.S. businesses are required to leave South Africa, he said, companies from countries not participating in sanctions could pick up assets at a "firesale" and laugh all the way to the bank.

At the same time, Shultz reiterated the administration's strenuous objections to further sanctions.

Asked if restrictions imposed by allied nations would stir the Reagan administration to act with new measures of its own, Shultz said, "Obviously, the views of our friends weigh heavily."

FDIC announces sale of trust department

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. officials closing out Permian Bank & Trust Wednesday announced the sale of the defunct bank's trust department to the First National Bank of Andrews.

At a news conference Wednesday afternoon, Jesse W. Craddock, FDIC liquidation specialist, said bid forms had been sent to several area banks but only the Andrews bank responded.

F. William Hoermann, president and chief executive of the First National Bank of Andrews, said the Permian Bank trust department was purchased for $25,001. Hoermann said the trust department consisted of about 60 accounts with funds in trust totalling around $6 million.

Hoermann said the bank had been "in the course of developing an integrated financial services department in addition to providing traditional banking services."

Noting that First National Bank of Andrews is healthy, strong and independently owned and is not a branch of any holding company, Hoermann said, "We are delighted to have this opportunity to acquire the trust department of Permian Bank and we expect it to make an important contribution to our efforts to meet competitive challenges which all banks now face." The Andrews bank, he said, expects to offer a complete and full financial services department, not only to citizens of Andrews, but also to the entire Permian Basin."

Hoermann said the bank will shortly name an Odessa agent to work with participants in the trust who resides in Odessa. In the mean time, he said, all questions concerning the trust or its acquisition should be directed to the First National Bank in Andrews.

The FDIC's Craddock said he expects the job of paying off depositors and closing up the bank will be finished by about Aug. 2. During that time, he said, the bank will be open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Agencies consider terrorist accounts

Kent Porter-Reporter-Telegram

A masked terrorist holds a hostage at gunpoint in the old Gibson's Department Store on Cuthbert St. as part of a recent SWAT team exercise. The joint police-sheriff exercise took place July 18, the day Sheriff Gary Painter said he had information proving the existence of terrorist training camps in Mexico.

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The chief counsel for Vice President George Bush said Wednesday he has forwarded information about terrorist camps in Mexico from Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter to the CIA and the FBI.

Representatives of the two federal agencies and the State Department declined to comment specifically on the information when contacted Wednesday.

Boyden Gray said he met with Painter last month in his Washington office and put him in contact with the FBI.

Gray said Painter was irritated that the intelligence gathered by his office was not being taken seriously.

"He did indicate at the time the information was not being processed rapidly enough in his view," Gray said. "I do wonder whether they (the FBI) would have seen him if I wouldn't have made several phone calls.

"But I have no reason to doubt the information is being handled properly now. The problem was the agencies just weren't receiving the information."

Painter told reporters last week that he had evidence which proved there were at least five terrorist camps in Mexico.

He also said the Permian Basin was a possible target area for such terrorists.

John Savercool, legislative aide to Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, said he also met with Painter when he was in Washington.

"He submitted to me a lot of data from his office," Savercool said. "I told him we were very concerned about the information. I told him the information he had I thought deserved closer scrutiny. I put him in touch with CIA and Customs."

Crowd cheers Reagan, contributes for Clements

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

DALLAS — President Reagan spent little more than two hours here Wednesday, just enough time to raise about $1 million for Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements.

The partisan crowd, estimated at 7,000 to 8,000, at the Dallas Apparal Mart waved signs and constantly applauded the president. Clements' campaign aides said the rally marked the largest Texas turnout for Reagan since his 1984 renomination at the Republican National Convention in Dallas, the GOP's most solid stronghold in the state.

The Clements campaign distributed free tickets to the late-morning rally. But Reagan then went acroos the street to the Leows Anatole Hotel for a private, $5,000-a-plate, fundraiser for Clements.

Reggie Bashur, Clements' spokesman, said the campaign had sold 200 tickets as of Tuesday afternoon, bringing in $1 million for the former governor's race against incumbent Democratic Gov. Mark White.

The president spoke last and was well received, except by fewer than 20 men and women protesting his policies toward South Africa.

As Reagan began his address, protesters held up cards that spelled out, "SANCTIONS NOW." The president said Tuesday he opposed sanctions against South Africa's racist government.

Several Republican loyalists knocked down the protesters' signs, and several protesters retaliated by trying to tear down some Reagan and Clements signs.

Fistfights nearly broke out several times, but onlookers stopped the scuffles before they turned into bouts.

While protesters heckled the president, one woman carrying a Clements poster turned to another woman and said, "Isn't that pathetic? It's sick."

The small comotion didn't affect the president, who ignored the protesters and continued with his speech.

"One of the most important steps Texans can take toward full economic recovery is to say, 'No' to any more years of tax and tax, spend and spend in Austin," Reagan said. "The best way to restore a favorable climate for business and economic expansion is to put my good friend and your good friend back in the Austin Statehouse."

The president called Clements "a tough man for tough times," "a great Republican governor during the great Texas prosperity," and "a man who doesn't break his promises."

Reagan said his administration is working to help the sagging energy industry and pushed for the complete decontrol of natural gas. But the president didn't mention an oil import fee, which Clements and White support.

White welcomed the president to Texas through a letter in which he repeated his claim that every day without an import tarrif further jeopardizes the state's economy and the nation's security.

Reagan also pushed for federal tax reform and received great applause when he said the United States would not back down in Nicaragua.

Clements introduced Reagan and pointed out that a recent statewide poll showed the president with a 75-percent approval rating, the highest, he said, of any president in history.

Bashur said Clements expects the president to stump for him several more times before the Nov. 4 elections.

The Clements campaign picked up the roughly $20,000 cost of Reagan's flight aboard Air Force One. Mrs. Reagan did not accompany her husband to Dallas, as she is attending the royal wedding in London.

Clements picked up Reagan at the airport "and mainly just told him how popular he is down here," Bashur said. "President Reagan and Governor Clements are close friends and go back a long way."

Parched South gets rain; Farmers get hay donations

Associated Press

Storms poured more precious rain on the parched South, but too late to quench dusty cornfields or help farmers ease more than $1.5 billion in losses from a drought that has sparked emergency hay donations.

Shipments of hay for starving livestock continued pouring in today from across the North and Midwest, where farmers already have donated tons.

"My cows are eating Illinois hay for breakfast, Iowa hay for lunch, and they'll be having Indiana hay for Sunday dinner," said Tom Trantham, a South Carolina dairy farmer.

The drought has been compounded by a 2½-week heat wave, which eased this week after killing 42 people.

The Drought Management Committee, composed of representatives of Georgia, Alabama, Florida and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, planned to meet today in Atlanta to discuss ways to ease drought conditions.

Corps spokesman Sam Green said a decision would be announced today on whether to release more water from Lake Lanier in northeast Georgia to replenish Lakes West Point and Walter F. George downstream on the Chattahoochee River.

Storms dumped 3 inches of rain on Richmond, Va., within two hours Wednesday, about 2½ inches on Mobile, Ala., and Berea, S.C., and 1.3 inches on Atlanta in less than an hour.

Scattered thunderstorms stretched from Maryland to Florida on Tuesday, keeping temperatures below 100 degrees.

"The few bands of thunderstorms, of course — where they hit certainly didn't hurt. But basically it's still a bad situation," said Homer Rowley, assistant statistician in Virginia's Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services. "A lot of fields are beyond help."

In addition to the drought, the heat is killing poultry. About 610,000 broilers have died in Georgia in the last 13 days, said Abit Massey, executive director of the Georgia Poultry Federation. Georgia's $6 billion-a-year poultry industry is losing about $5 million a week, he said.

"It's horrible," Val Johnson, an Ohio woman traveling in South Carolina, said about the heat. "You see these skinny cattle standing in pastures that are all brown instead of green. The creeks are all dry and even weeds are brown."

The effects of the drought and heat already are being felt outside the region, according to Massachusetts Agriculture Department spokesman Christopher Phillips. New England produce prices have jumped 15 percent to 25 percent since mid-June, he said, while beef and pork prices have fallen 5 percent since last year, partly because farmers are selling starving animals as hay supplies drop.

A 100-car train was to be loaded today in Indianapolis with 1,800 tons of hay donated by more than 120 Indiana farms. CSX Transportation Inc. donated use of the train, and it should be ready for the trip to South Carolina on Monday.

Indiana Bell and American Telephone & Telegraph Co. are donating services to coordinators of the program, said AT&T spokesman Greg Allen.

Lee Webster of Webster Trucking Co. in Donovan, Ill. said he would offer the services of some of his drivers to deliver donated hay.

"We never go as far as Georgia except once in a blue moon," said Webster. "We've been farmers most of our lives and the situation down there is really desperate. Somebody has to do something."

A 43-truck Ohio National Guard convoy loaded with donated hay will set out Aug. 2 for Fort Bragg, N.C., Gov. Richard Celeste said.

Ohio farmers have donated more than 4,000 tons; Wisconsin farmers about 45,000 bales, or about 1,125 tons; New York farmers have donated some 13,000 bales, and Kentucky organized a shipment of 50,000 bales, officials said.

Ice company donates ice to thirsty town

PIEDMONT, S.C. (AP) — Residents of this parched South Carolina town are awaiting a mountain of ice from Indiana, a gift that at least temporarily will turn Piedmont into the coolest haven in dehydrated Dixie.

Kit Kowski, owner of the 4K Ice Co. of South Bend, Ind., promised that 3,200 eight-pound bags of ice would arrive by refrigerated truck today.

Kowski said he decided to send the ice to this town of 600 people just southwest of Greenville in South Carolina's northwest corner after seeing an Associated Press photograph in the South Bend Tribune.

"It showed a group of thirsty people filling up their water jugs at the Piedmont Fire Department and I thought how terrible it must be to be caught in a drought and not have a cold drink of water," he said from South Bend.

Kowski refused to say how much operation was costing him. "That doesn't matter. What does matter is that people are suffering and need help."

Fire Chief Doug Cowart said the ice would be transferred to another refrigerated truck and distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Piedmont, which is in one of the most severely drought-stricken areas in the South, finally got some rain Tuesday.

"Boy, did we need this," Cowart shouted as he held out his hands and let himself be pelted by huge rain drops.

"This is the first good rain we've had in more than two months," Faye Beam said as the thunderstorm sent cascades of water down. "I thank God for every drop of it."

Mrs. Beam and her husband, Jim, have been without water since their well went dry more than six weeks ago. They and about 19 other families lined up at the fire station's outdoor spigot Wednesday to fill five-gallon jugs donated by a local chemical company.

"We're on the Greenville water system here in Piedmont but a lot of wells in the outlying areas have gone dry and a lot of people around here are hurting bad," said Cowart, who has asked Gov. Dick Riley to declare Piedmont a disaster area.

"We've had triple-digit temperatures for most of the past three weeks," he said. "We've got several dozen families whose wells have either gone dry or become contaminated and, believe me, these people are suffering."

"You can't imagine what it's like not to have water in this heat," said Mrs. Beam, whose husband is in ill health.

Heat wave keeps water well-drilling companies busy

TIFTON, Ga. (AP) — A record heat wave and Georgia's worst drought in a century have been a boon for the well-drilling companies that farmers and rural households rely on for water.

"It's the busiest we've been," said Grady Thompson, owner of the Bishop Well and Pump Service in this south Georgia town. "I just wish it was over."

Thompson said his eight crews are working 12 hours a day, digging new wells and repairing pumps that supply water for drinking and irrigation.

Throughout south Georgia, falling groundwater levels have caused many shallow wells to dry up, forcing rural families to dig deeper for their water. And increased demand, along with lightning triggered by the heat, have contributed to more pump failures.

"A lot of people are without water," said Frankie Madray, an employee of Bailey Well Drilling Co. near Jesup. "It's the hottest and driest...that I can remember."

A spokesman for Miller Pump & Electric Service in Douglas said the company's service and drilling crews are working to 9 or 10 each night, mainly repairing pumps knocked out by lightning or overuse.

"People use so much more water when it's hot like this and it's bad on their pumps," said the spokesman, who declined to give his name. "Everybody we know is just covered with work, as much as they can do."

The drillers said this week that shallow wells 40 to 100 feet deep are causing the most problems because they are recharged by rainwater. When the shallow wells run dry, about the only alternative is to dig a deeper well, ranging from 300 to 600 feet in depth.

Thompson's crews are drilling about 40 deep wells a month as a result of the drought.

Soviets to cruise down Mississippi

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of prominent Soviets, symbolically "in the same boat" with American peace activists, will take a week-long cruise down the Mississippi River beginning Saturday to highlight opposition to nuclear war.

The Soviets, including a cosmonaut, scientists and journalists, will be able to sample American life and viewpoints while Americans get a better-than-usual look at Soviets and their views, organizers said Wednesday.

"We come to see you, to see what Americans want," Vyacheslav Sluzhivov of the Soviet Peace Committee told a news conference. "To save our Earth from nuclear madness we need to act together."

The "Mississippi Peace Cruise" will be aboard the steamboat Delta Queen, said Anatoly Belyayev, editor in chief of Twentieth Century and Peace magazine in Moscow, symbolizing that "all of us, Soviets, Americans and Europeans, are all in the same boat."

At the news conference, Soviet cosmonaut Gregory Grechko held up a photograph taken from space showing the thin layer of atmosphere covering the Earth.

"You don't have to be a scientist," he said, to see that nuclear explosions could so damage the atmosphere "that there will be deadness everyplace."

The cruise is privately sponsored. However, one American organizer, Howard Frazier of Promoting Enduring Peace, said the U.S. government has been cooperative in processing visas for the visiting Soviets and that State Department officials have indicated they were "delighted this was being done."

It is to begin Saturday in St. Paul, Minn., and finish the following Saturday in St. Louis, with stops in LaCrosse and Prairie du Chien, Wis.; Dubuque, Davenport and Burlington, Iowa, and Hannibal, Mo.

Local officials will turn out for stops at their cities, and Minneapolis Mayor Don Fraser and Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, will be on board part of the way, Frazier said. Many other Americans on the trip are identified only as "peace activists."

By the end of the trip, the group plans to announce agreement on a draft world peace statement, which would be circulated for endorsements for a year and then presented to President Reagan, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and the secretary-general of the United Nations, Frazier said.

Nancy's trip billed as private affair

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan's trip to London for the wedding of Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson was planned as a low-profile affair compared to her visit five years ago to attend Charles' and Diana's nuptials.

Some critics complained the royal extravaganza in 1981 was nearly upstaged by all the attention paid to the American first lady's comings and goings in one new designer dress after another on her first official trip abroad without her husband.

The hoopla contributed to the "Queen Nancy" image Mrs. Reagan acquired that first year in Washington, and it took her a long time to live it down.

This time, Mrs. Reagan was on what was described by her office as a private visit, inasmuch as she was the guest of Queen Elizabeth II for a family celebration of the marriage of the queen's younger son, rather than a state ceremony for the crown prince, as the event was billed five years ago.

That doesn't mean, however, that Mrs. Reagan slipped in and out of town unnoticed.

"Because she is a public figure, she doesn't travel strictly privately," explained Betsy Koons, a spokeswoman who was left behind.

Accompanying Mrs. Reagan aboard an Air Force Boeing 707 intercontinental jet were her chief of staff, her press secretary, a deputy press secretary, an administrative assistant, director of scheduling and events, an official photographer, a medic, Mrs. Reagan's hairdresser and a personal maid, plus an undisclosed number of Secret Service agents to protect the first lady around the clock.

AP Laserphoto

First lady Nancy Reagan was saluted by British sailors as she arrived at Westminster Abbey for Wednesday's wedding between Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson.

Ms. Koons said only Mrs. Reagan and her obligatory bodyguards attended the wedding ceremony itself.

The only public event on the first lady's schedule was tea on Tuesday with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Mrs. Reagan arrived for the brief meeting at 10 Downing St. in a five-car motorcade.

The remainder of her schedule was private, including a dinner given by U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Charles Price, a banquet in honor of the royal couple and a private wedding luncheon at Buckingham Palace after the wedding.

Asked how much the trip would cost U.S. taxpayers, Ms. Koons said such details were handled by the State Department, where a spokesman, Pete Martinez, said, "I don't know." He said he would try to find out but warned getting even an estimate could take some time.

The government also paid for the Reagans' wedding gift to the royal couple, which was presented by the first lady on behalf of the people of the United States. But Chief of Protocol Selwa Roosevelt refused to disclose its pricetag, saying, "We don't discuss that — ever. It wouldn't be polite."

She added, however, that the government gets special good-customer prices from firms such as Tiffany and Steuben which supply many official gifts. Steuben made the engraved "Andrew" and "Sarah" crystal marriage goblets the Reagans gave the couple as a wedding present.

With Larry Speakes, President Reagan's chief spokesman, away on vacation last week, two of Speakes' deputies took turns handling his daily briefing chores. Deputy press secretary Edward Djerejian, who specializes in foreign affairs, fielded reporters' questions one day, and Albert R. Brashear, the domestic policy deputy, would handle them the next.

One day, Djerejian's briefing focused on arms control policy and nuclear testing, and the old State Department hand demonstrated his familiarity with the subject and his fluency in bureaucratese by rattling off the initials of the 14 year-old Threshold Test Ban Treaty (TTBT), its companion Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty (PNET) and the yet to be negotiated Comprehensive Test Ban (CTB) — all in a single sentence without pausing to catch his breath.

There were no follow-up questions on the subject the next day when Brashear was on the podium, but the droll Tennessean let it be known he hadn't forgotten the lesson.

"I wanted to thank Ed," Brashear told reporters who had shared his confusion the previous day. "He cleared up for me that TTBT did not stand for two tamales and a beef taco, which is what I had always assumed that it stood for."

Marine instructor killed when grenade blows up

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — An infantry instructor was killed and two other Marines injured when a 40-millimeter grenade blew up in a launcher during live-fire exercises, a Camp Pendleton spokesman says.

The Infantry Training School instructor, a 26-year-old sergeant, died a few hours after the explosion Wednesday of massive head and chest injuries, said Gunnery Sgt. John Farrell of the base public affairs office.

A second victim, a private who had to have his left hand amputated above the wrist and was treated for other cuts, was in serious condition at Palomar Memorial Hospital, Farrell said.

The third victim, Sgt. Robert L. Hodges of Marion, N.C., was treated at a base clinic for shrapnel wounds in the back and released, he said.

All M-203 rifle-mounted grenade launchers have been "grounded" pending the outcome of an investigation, Farrell said.

Jail inmate slips away

POINTE A LA HACHE, La. (AP) — An 18-year-old jail inmate shaved his head, creamed his body with lotion and squirmed naked through a thin feeding slot on his cell to literally slip away from Plaquemines Parish Jail, authorities say.

After squeezing through the 14½-by-6½-inch slot, Mark Gordy took an air conditioner from a window on the third floor, jumped to an air conditioner on the second floor and then dropped to the ground, said Warden Ralph Ferranto.

Gordy, a suspected burglar who is 5-foot-5 and weighs 120 pounds, was found hiding in his underwear behind a coal pile about five miles away and about 2½ hours after his Sunday night escape, Ferranto said Wednesday.

Gordy, who bruised his tailbone in the breakout, was booked with an additional charge of simple escape and an extra steel bar was welded across the top of the feeding slots in all of the jail's cells, Ferranto said.

"If he can get his head through that," he said, pointing to the freshly welded anti-escape bar, "I'm willing to let him go."

Voters repeal blue law

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Heeding the voice of local voters, Shreveport lawmakers did in one try what state lawmakers couldn't do in three — pass a resolution suspending enforcement of Louisiana's Sunday closing laws.

City officials decided to proceed with their suspension resolution after voters decided to repeal the city's law by nearly 3-1.

Tuesday's action means that Shreveport stores can open their doors for Sunday business effective Aug. 31, the Sunday before Labor Day.

The council decision comes after state lawmakers passed a bill in the recent session repealing the state's blue law Dec. 1. That date was set to give cities the chance to pass their own Sunday closing laws.

However, when lawmakers attempted to suspend enforcement of the blue law statewide three times in June, they failed to get enough votes in the House to pass the resolution.

Teens allegedly given guns

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A court clerk has been arrested for allegedly giving teen-age employees guns from the court's evidence room, police said.

Leona Watson, 37, of New Orleans was arrested Tuesday and booked for the theft of eight guns valued at more than $500, two counts of contributing to the delinquency of minors and malfeasance in office.

In addition, police said they have determined that a ninth gun, seized by Kenner police during the arrest of Watson's 18-year-old son on armed robbery charges, also came from the Municipal Court evidence room.

Police said two 16-year-old summer employees of the clerk's office told them Watson gave them the guns. Police said they believe the guns are probably from old cases. One gun has been traced to a 1977 case.

Spy's sentencing postponed

BALTIMORE (AP) — Sentencing has been delayed for Ronald W. Pelton, who was convicted of spying for the Soviet Union, so he can be interviewed by government officials, lawyers announced Wednesday.

Pelton, convicted of selling secrets he learned while a communications specialist for the National Security Agency, has agreed to tell the government what he divulged about U.S. intelligence projects aimed at the Soviet Union, The Washington Post reported in Thursday editions.

Pelton, 44, was to be sentenced on July 28, but the hearing has been indefinitely postponed, according to a Wednesday statement by attorneys for Pelton and the U.S. Attorney's office.

Peres, Hassan issue statements on their peace talks

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres and King Hassan II of Morocco today issued a joint statement saying they talked frankly about Middle East peace prospects during their Morocco summit and focused on a 1982 peace plan rejected by Israel.

In a separate statement upon returning to Tel Aviv, Peres acknowledged he and Hassan remain far apart, but said they agreed to stay in contact.

He did not elaborate on how, and neither leader indicated any future meetings were planned.

The joint statement said discussions "were characterized by frankness" and centered on the Fez Plan, adopted at a 1982 Arab League summit in Fez, Morocco.

Hassan defended the plan as the "sole document which is objectively valid...as a basis for just and durable peace," the statement said.

The plan for the first time offered mutual recognition between Israel and the Arab states on condition Israel recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization and withdraw from all occupied Arab territories, including East Jerusalem.

Israel, then governed by the right-wing Likud bloc, rejected the plan.

The joint statement said Peres responded by "putting forth propositions pertaining to conditions he deemed necessary for the installation of peace."

"The meeting was of a purely exploratory nature, aiming at no moment at engaging in negotiations," the statement said of the 10 hours of talks Hassan and Peres held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Moroccan summer resort of Ifrane, 150 miles east of Rabat.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz sent a message to Peres calling the summit "an important step forward in creating an atmosphere in the region that will foster a broader peace." The message was released by the Israeli government.

The joint Hassan-Peres statement was issued first in Tel Aviv and five hours later by the official Morocco news agency. It avoided any criticism of either side's position, but the leaders addressed their differences in separate statements.

Hassan told his nation in a televised speech Wednesday night that he invited Peres to Morocco to get his response to the Fez Plan.

Hassan said in his 45-minute speech that Peres told him he would not recognize the PLO. The king's report did not contain any optimistic statements.

Peres, the first Israeli prime minister to visit an Arab nation other than Egypt, told reporters at a pre-dawn news conference at Ben Gurion International Airport that a "wide and demanding gap" still existed between the Arab and Israeli positions.

Peres said he thought Hassan shared his concern about the dangers of another Middle East war.

"I think the king sees very clearly and profoundly the dangers hanging over the ... Middle East," Peres said. "He feels very strongly that we don't have much time, and there is no real alternative for peace if we want to prevent another catastrophe in the future."

The newspaper Ha'aretz quoted unnamed Israeli officials as saying the talks focused on the make-up of a Palestinian-Jordanian delegation to an international peace conference, in which Hassan wants a central role.

Peres said he hoped next to draw Egypt into the talks.

Egypt signed a peace treaty with Israel in 1979 and has said it will not get involved in more peace efforts until a border dispute is resolved with Israel over Taba, a 250-acre beach on the northern tip of the Red Sea.

Both Hassan andees said no other countries were involved in the talks, which followed several months of preparation.

Sri Lankan bus bombing takes 28 lives

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A bomb exploded aboard an intercity bus in north-central Sri Lanka today, killing 28 passengers and wounding 40, a military spokesman said.

The spokesman, who cannot be identified under military briefing rules, said the bus was en route from the town of Vavuniya to the sacred Buddhist city of Anuradhapura about 33 miles away when the bomb exploded.

The blast occurred about nine miles outside Vavuniya, said the spokesman for the Joint Operations Military Command.

The identities of the victims were not immediately known, he said, and no additional details of the bombing were immediately available.

On Tuesday, at least 29 people were killed in a bus explosion in the same Vavuniya district, 155 miles north of Colombo. Officials said the attackers buried explosives on a remote highway and set them off by remote control.

There was no claim of responsibility for either attack, but authorities blamed Tamil separatists for both.

The Tamils, most of whom are Hindus, make up 18 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million people. They say they are being discriminated against by the island's majority Sinhalese, most of whom are Buddhists.

Five major Tamil groups are waging a guerrilla campaign for an independent state on the northern end of the island, and more than 4,000 people have been killed in the 3-year-old guerrilla war.

The bus attacks coincide with the third anniversary of anti-Tamil riots in which more than 450 people were killed.

The recent series of attacks and counter-attacks began June 6 when security forces reportedly killed 53 Tamils outside the northwestern coastal town of Mannar, 185 miles from Colombo.

Moderate Tamil leaders have been holding negotiations with President Junius R. Jayewardene since July 13 on the government's latest peace proposal seeking to grant limited regional autonomy to the Tamils.

Former football players charged in cocaine probe

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Former University of Virginia tailback Barry Word, the Atlantic Coast Conference's player of the year last season, and two other school football stars were among 24 people charged in a federal grand jury probe of cocaine trafficking, prosecutors said today.

Two of Word's teammates on the 1985 squad, running back Howard C. Petty Jr. and placekicker Kenny Stadlin, also were charged in the probe that was launched last fall, U.S. Attorney John Perry Alderman said at a news conference held to announce the results of the grand jury's investigation.

Word, of Halifax County, Va., was drafted by the New Orleans Saints in the third round of this year's National Football League draft. He holds the team single-season rushing record at Virginia with 1,224 yards but missed the end of the 1985 season after being suspended for academic reasons. He later dropped out of school.

Petty, of Annapolis, Md., was the Cavaliers' leading rusher in 1983 and 1984, his sophomore and junior years. Stadlin, from Hampton, Va., graduated this spring.

The three were charged with conspiring to distribute less than one kilogram of cocaine. They face a maximum penalty of a $125,000 fine and up to 15 years imprisonment.

The grand jury was convened last November after local, state and federal authorities raided a Fluvanna County farmhouse July 4, 1985, and seized 3½ pounds of cocaine.

A lawyer representing Trevis Lynch Poole of Fluvanna County, who lived in the house that was raided, said the method of announcing the grand jury indictments was designed to create a press ballyhoo.

"They are making a big deal out of this because of the Bias thing," Marvin D. Miller said. His reference was to former University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias, whose cocaine-related death in June has led to a Maryland grand jury investigation.

"This case is nothing but making a mountain out of a molehill," said Miller, who added that publicity about the indictments could taint potential trial jurors.

Poole already has pleaded guilty in Fluvanna County Circuit Court to a cocaine charge stemming from the raid. He was charged by the grand jury on 17 drug-related and other counts that could result, if convicted, in a sentence of life imprisonment without parole plus 374 years and fines of $3.8 million.

Houston resident Reid Millard cuddles Jake, the 12-week-old chow puppy he saved from drowning with CPR and mouth-to-nose resuscitation.

Owner's CPR saves unusual victim — his chow puppy

HOUSTON (AP) — Reid Millard used to work for an ambulance service so he's had experience saving drowning victims, but his saving attempts weren't the same earlier this week when he succeeded in saving another victim.

That's because Millard's victim was Jake — his 12-week-old chow puppy.

"I didn't know what to do," Millard said when he discovered Jake at the bottom of the pool Monday. "I've given CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) to some people before, but never to a dog. I worked on him for about 30 minutes, I guess, before I got him back to where he was halfway breathing right."

A veterinarian gave Jake a clean bill of health and sent him home to rest, saying it was a doggone miracle.

"I had let him out at about 7:20 Monday morning and when I looked out at about 7:35, I didn't see him," Millard said.

"I looked in the pool, and he had gotten tangled up in a line (holding up a volleyball net). He fell in the pool and couldn't swim."

Millard, a 27-year-old real estate manager, said Jake seems to be taking it all in stride and he's giving him preferentail treatment for the time being.

"I told him I wouldn't whup him for the next month — 'do whatever you want' — so he's been chewing everything up," Millard said.

"He's just like a little kid — he'll get into anything. But he's not getting too close to the pool right now."

Experiment led to nuclear fire

MOSCOW (AP) — Badly prepared experiments conducted to see if turbine generators could provide enough electricity to run an atomic power plant in case of an accident caused the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, a Soviet offical said today.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov, responding to questions at a news conference, said he could not provide full technical details of the experiments.

He said specifics would be published in a report "hundreds of pages" long, to be presented to the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency by September.

In a later telephone interview, Gerasimov said the experiment was intended to test how long the turbine generators that produce electricity at the Chernobyl plant would keep operating after a reactor shut down and before a backup power supply took over.

"When you shut the station, the generator is still working," Gerasimov told the news conference, according to an official English translation of his comments.

Craddock said the trust department was sold because the FDIC does not involve itself in the operation of trusts.

The bank was closed about 3 p.m. July 18 after Texas Banking Commissioner James Sexton declared the bank insolvent. According to FDIC liquidators, Permian Bank had 5,700 depositors who had a total of 7,000 accounts totalling about $34 million at the time the bank closed.

An FDIC spokesman said the directly deposited Social Security checks of Permian Bank customers were being transferred to MBank in Odessa.

PAINTER

"In fact he met with the CIA here in this office."

Savercool said he also forwarded the information to the Senate Intelligence Committee for review.

He said he was in contact with the various agencies that received the information, and said he expects to hear something within two weeks.

"I think the information is credible enough that the agencies here in Washington need to take a very serious look at it," Savercool said.

Sharon Foster, spokeswoman for the CIA in Washington D.C., said State Department policy on terrorism prohibits public comment on agency activity.

Painter said he met with a member of the State Department's anti-terrorist squad in Washington D.C.

He said that agency later verified part of his information, identifying a former Midland resident as a known terrorist traveling with a Lebanese passport.

The State Department official Painter said he talked to in Washington was on leave and could not be reached.

A senior official in the State Department said he was not familiar with the information on the camps, but added:

"Even if I was, I would not be at liberty to discuss it."

Painter, who also met with Ron Butler, special agent in charge of the Midland FBI office, also criticized that office.

The sheriff said the FBI was being slow and unresponsive on acting on his information.

Butler disagreed.

"The information (from the sheriff's office) does not track with that available information to us as far as a terrorist threat is concerned," Butler said.

"We don't have any indications that the threat of terrorism in the Permian Basin is as great a threat as we have been led to believe."

Painter said he expected the FBI's response.

"I expected this," Painter said. "I expected them to play it down. My concern was that the potential was there. I wasn't talking about an actual threat."

Butler declined to comment on specific information Painter revealed about the camps.

Painter earlier said the FBI and the CIA for ignored his intelligence information — even though the sheriff said the State Department referred to it as "most accurate and up-to-date."

He also said it was regrettable he had to contact the media to relay his concerns, but said he could not get any federal agencies interested.

Butler disagreed with Painter's assessment that his information was ignored.

"There is simply too much to do to deal in superfluous communication that is for information only," he said.

"We're not abdicating any responsibility, we're just looking at it in more global terms - terrorism is a priority with the FBI, and I think we've had a very good record as far as terrorism is concerned."

In the interview with reporters Friday, Painter also displayed a map which he said shows the location of the camps.

"When I left Washington all activity about the information we had provided just stopped," he said. "It seemed that nobody there knew how to handle it. It is a very frustrating thing - to go up there with the information we had, and the assistance we've received is nil."

U.N. secretary has heart surgery

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar was undergoing heart surgery this morning at Mount Sinai Hospital, his spokesman announced.

The secretary-general's spokesman, Francois Giuliani, said at midmorning that a coronary bypass operation was being performed.

Perez de Cuellar, a 66-year-old Peruvian, has been secretary-general for nearly five years.

He was admitted to the hospital Wednesday for a cardiovascular test.

Perez de Cuellar had complained of fatigue after returning last week from an 18-day trip to five European countries and Morocco.

Besides Reagan, master of ceremonies Roger Staubach, former Dallas Cowboys quarterback, was the favorite with the crowd, as was Roy Barrera Jr., GOP candidate for Texas attorney general.

Barrera warmed up the crowds by cutting on incumbent Democratic Attorney General Jim Mattox. Barrera, a San Antonio district judge, said the GOP has two goals this fall: "One, we want to pin the donkey's tail, and two, we want to kick his butt out of Texas once and for all."

He thanked Republicans for nominating him and predicted, "You're going to see Mr. Mattox packing up and working for a change" after November.

High school bands, drill teams, and country and patriotic music punctuated the two-and-one-half-hour rally.

Correction

In a chart about Midland bank conditions, the second quarter 1985 totals for Western State Bank were inadvertently switched. 1985 second quarter deposits at Western were $90,551,027, while loans for the same period were $74,960,168.

Reagan says Manion survives 'lynch mob' in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says his judicial nominee, Daniel Manion, survived a "lynch mob" when the Senate reaffirmed its narrow confirmation of the conservative Indiana lawyer by a razor-thin margin.

Reagan, who was campaigning for Republican candidates in the South during Wednesday's Senate voting, telephoned Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., from Air Force One to congratulate him on the "great engineering job," Walk Riker, Dole's press secretary, said following the 50-49 vote.

Later, at a Miami rally for Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., Reagan said, "A little lynch mob had organized resistance to his appointment. We won by one vote."

Manion opponents, who included the deans of more than 40 law schools, had argued that the South Bend, Ind., attorney was professionally unqualified to sit on the 7th Circuit bench, which is based in Chicago and hears cases from Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

They remained unconvinced even in defeat.

"I think the message is clear. This man is marginally qualified," said Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., who led the attack on Manion.

But Sen. Orrin Hatch, a Manion supporter, said the intense assault on Manion had had nothing to do with the candidate's alleged lack of qualifications.

"This business about competence has been knocked into a cocked hat," Hatch, R-Utah, said. "This is an ideological attack, pure and simple."

The Senate has rejected only one of Reagan's judicial nominations. The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 10-5 last month to kill the nomination of Jefferson B. Sessions III to a federal judgeship in Alabama.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III said in a statement: "The Senate deserves credit for resisting extremist attempts to politicize the judicial confirmation process. I have particular admiration for Mr. Manion, who courageously withstood vicious and unfounded ideological assaults against his professional reputation."

The 50-49 vote defeated a motion to reopen the nomination of Manion, who was confirmed last month to a seat on the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals by a 48-46 vote.

Daniel Manion

Vice President George Bush, making an unusual appearance in the chair as president of the Senate, cast a tie-breaking vote. But Bush's vote was unnecessary because the motion to reconsider Manion's confirmation would have failed on a 49-49 tie.

The second vote on Manion was engineered by Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., who joined the 48-46 majority during the June 26 vote to give himself the right under Senate rules to move to reconsider the tally.

Illinois Democratic Sens. Paul Simon and Alan J. Dixon said the extremely close fight over Manion's nomination would cause the administration to be more selective henceforth.

Simon, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee and one of Manion's leading opponents on Capitol Hill, said, "It was a close enough vote and a big enough fight that we got the message through to Ed Meese that from now on they have to come up with candidates that meet a higher standard than this one has met."

Anthony T. Podesta, president of People for the American Way, a liberal group that had campaigned against the nomination, said: "The administration has paid a very high price for the Manion confirmation. A clear majority of senators acknowledged, by vote or by statement, that Manion is unfit."

Both Simon and Dixon attributed Manion's victory to arm-twisting and horse-trading by the White House.

"I think it was just plain, old, simple political muscle," Simon said. "If we had had a secret vote, he would have been defeated 90 to 10."

Democrats had argued that the June 26 vote was tainted by confusion over vote pairs for absent senators. They also noted that at least one senator, Slade Gorton, R-Wash., had agreed to vote for Manion in exchange for a pledge that Reagan would nominate a Seattle lawyer he was supporting for a federal judgeship.

Gorton acknowledged in a statement last month he voted for Manion even though he found his qualifications "no more than marginal" after receiving assurances that the administration would nominate Seattle lawyer William L. Dwyer to a federal judgeship.

But Gorton, who has come under heavy attack by home-state newspapers for his earlier vote, denied Wednesday that he ever intended to vote against Manion.

"I've never opposed Mr. Manion on the merits," he said. "Had there been no Washington state problem, I would have voted for him without qualifications. I told the White House I would withhold (a vote for Manion) until my nomination was processed."

A similar judgeship stalemate had existed in Minnesota, but a spokesman for Republican Sen. David Durenberger has denied a link between the resolution of that case and Durenberger's vote for Manion. But an adminstration official said that Durenberger's vote was assured after he was told that a judicial candidate would be cleared for appointment.

Daniel Evans, R-Wash., one of four Republicans who opposed Manion last month, denied his vote Wednesday against reconsidering the nomination was the result of political pressure.

Evans said he voted against reconsideration because "I don't believe, except for unusual or extraordinary circumstances, we should be reconsidering votes."

I hope my original vote was wrong and he will be adequate to the job," Evans said.

Gramm-Rudman would cut in half military aid, lawmaker says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law will cut in half the military aid available for key countries such as the Philippines, the chairman of the House foreign operations subcommittee says.

Only four countries — Israel, Egypt, Pakistan and Northern Ireland — would be protected from cuts and receive the full amounts requested by President Reagan, Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., said Wednesday.

Obey was briefing reporters on the eve of a closed-door session of his appropriation subcommittee that will draw up its version of the 1987 foreign aid bill.

He said that under the Gramm-Rudman law, the budget resolution passed last month means a cut of nearly $3 billion from the administration's proposed package totaling $15.5 billion.

The administration has proposed $3 billion for Israel, $2.1 billion for Egypt, $669 million for Pakistan and $50 million for Northern Ireland.

Obey said Israel and Egypt, which receive the largest amounts of U.S. aid, would be protected because of widespread support for the Camp David peace process as well as the desire to support Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres in the new Middle East initiative with Moroccan King Hassan II.

Aid for Pakistan has strong support because of the Soviet occupation of neighboring Afghanistan, and Irish aid proved popular when it was proposed by the administration earlier this year to support the new Anglo-Irish accord to bring peace to the troubled British province.

Obey said most of the cuts he proposes are for general funds shared by a number of countries. Since four countries are protected, the cuts borne by other countries sharing their funds will be even more drastic.

In two key general funds, his version would mean 51 percent less in loans for arms sales and 32 percent less for economic aid, he said.

The administration originally proposed $95 million in economic aid and $50 million in arms loans for the Philippines and has already sought more to support the government of President Corazon Aquino.

Some 120 nations receive aid from the United States.

"I have been absolutely even handed," said Obey, adding that he was recommending military loans 16 percent lower than when he took over the subcommittee two years ago, economic aid 16 percent lower and development assistance 15 percent lower.

"My main job as chairman is an educative job," he said, trying to explain how the Gramm-Rudman law passed last December forces the administration to make cuts in areas that it wants to increase. The law is designed to reduce the federal budget deficit to zero by 1991 by imposing across-the-board spending cuts if Congress and the president can't hold the line voluntarily.

Obey said he opposed the legislation at the time, but that he was going to adhere to its provisions in bringing the foreign-aid bill to the floor of the House.

He said that although he proposed giving the administration flexibility for most cuts, he was moving to keep officials from using Gramm-Rudman to eliminate items such as the Peace Corps and support for UNICEF that are popular with Congress but not with the administration.

Jell-O back on shelves after cyanide-tampering scare

CHICAGO (AP) — Jell-O brand dry desserts, pulled from stores after threats of cyanide tampering earlier this month, will be back on grocery shelves soon, their manufacturer said Wednesday.

"We have tested all the targeted products, and we have found nothing in any of it," said General Foods Corp. spokesman Ken Defren. "There was no contamination. We are restocking the stores as soon as possible with fresh products."

Supermarket chains in Illinois, Detroit, the Atlanta area and a store in Wayne County, Pa., pulled the products from the shelves after anonymous threats that some had been contaminated intentionally with deadly cyanide.

Consumers were told to turn in unopened boxes of Jell-O products for refunds.

No illnesses were reported during the scare, nor was there any evidence of tampering, said Illinois Public Health Department spokesman Dean Schott.

General Foods will restock all of the stores that pulled one or more of the Jell-O products with completely new stock, Defren said, and all that was pulled or returned will be destroyed.

Friday, July 25, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your financial situation should begin to turn around. Launch new enterprises late this fall and chances for success will be excellent. Good work done over the past 12 months will pay off handsomely over the next 12. You will find more time to play and enjoy exciting romantic interludes. Love triumphs!

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Longtime character actor Walter Brennan, contralto Maureen Forrester, Toronto Blue Jays pitcher Matt Williams, football's Walter Payton, the feisty scene-stealer on "Golden Girls," Estelle Getty.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are filled with innovative, new ideas, but you better save some for next week. Being too candid can cause friction for you in the marketplace. Your motivation disappears when you become comfortable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You set the standard for the rest of the field in your profession. A long-distance move would add to your personal happiness. Talking with your mate or children is your emotional safety valve.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make the most of a unique opportunity headed your way. It is OK to risk failure; those who do not make mistakes are probably not trying. Superiors set new standards. Seek out romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will be able to charm your landlord into settling a rent dispute. Stand your ground with a friend or roommate. A personal relationship with someone overseas could be worth its weight in gold.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your emotions will be charged up today, but to succeed, you may have to shift to a lower gear. Travel opens your eyes to new adventures and the wonders of natural history this summer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Diet and exercise, and you will soon feel more comfortable with your body. Your preoccupation with fitness and health fades somewhat as you begin to feel better. Romance is in bloom.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Let go of the negative vibrations in your life and win a fresh start. Your personal energy and magnetism rise sharply. Shift the emphasis in your personal life from heavy romance to warm friendship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Today is a good time for selling or buying real estate; just do not sign papers without having a third party look at them. Spend time near the sea or sailing down a river.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is time to get really aggressive about your job, or your career could lag. You deserve more recognition, but you will have to make some noise to be noticed. Give romance a chance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): This is an excellent time for you to make moves in the job market. A leadership role will be offered to you. Your ambitions may differ from those of your mate or parents.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A social event or business meeting gives you an opportunity to make a favorable impression. Let a romantic partner know where you stand emotionally. Take off early for the weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The future looks brighter as a long, hard week winds down. Put your papers away and go home empty-handed for a totally relaxing weekend with someone who shares your hobbies and special interests.

Counting is the secret on more bridge hands than you might imagine. On some, you have to count the points to determine the location of a particular card. On others, you need to count out the distribution to discover which defender has length or shortness in a specific suit.

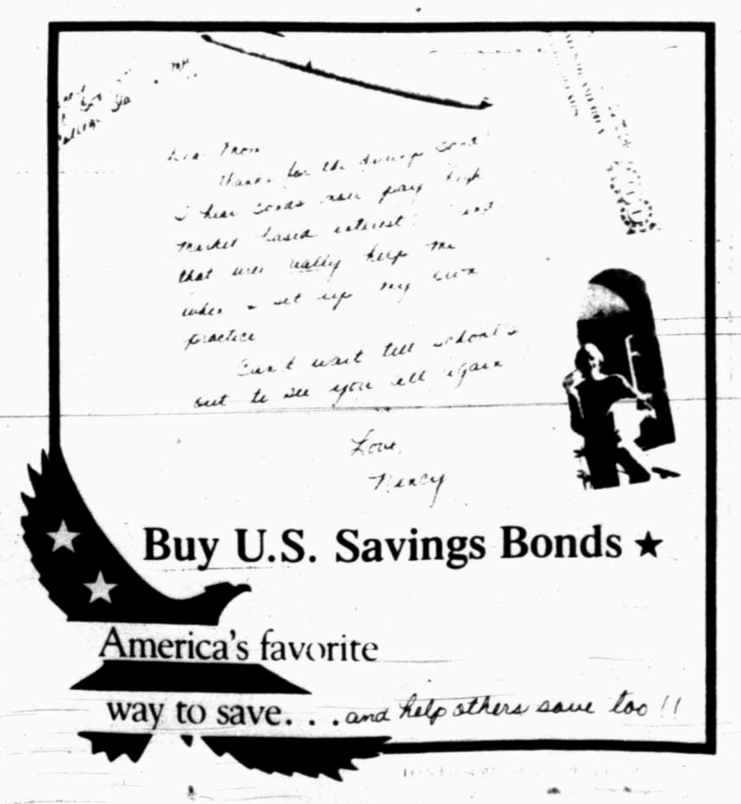

A third aspect of counting came up in the auction. North added his 21 points to his partner's announced 16 minimum and realized there was enough strength present for a grand slam even if South had opened a dead minimum no trump. So he got there by the direct method.

West led a diamond and, at first glance, you might wonder what this column is all about — there seem to be 13 tricks on top. That is so, unless clubs break 4-1. Therefore, correct technique is not to touch the key suit until you have learned as much as possible about the hand.

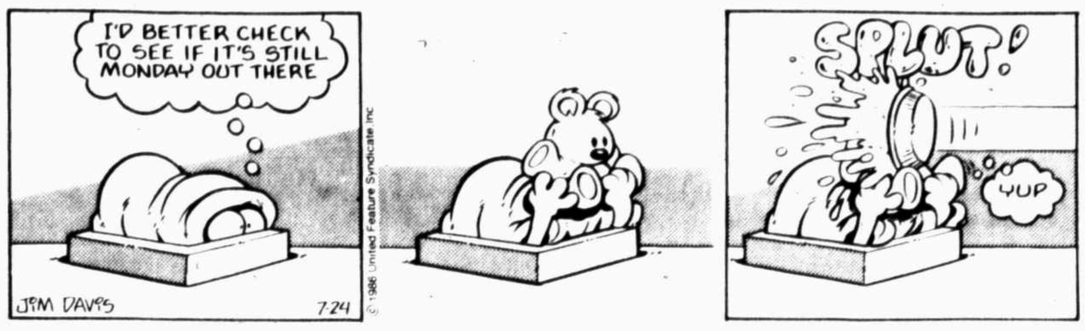

Therefore, you cash your three spades and three hearts, and you find out that West started with only two cards in each suit. Next, you clear your last two diamonds, and East discards on the last of these. Thus East held only two diamonds and West five. Ergo, you have a complete count of the hand.

West started with a 2-2-5-4 distribution, and East 5-5-2-1. You can now claim your grand slam. Cash the king of clubs in case East's singleton is the jack. If that knave fails to appear, continue with a club to the 10. You know the finesse is going to win, and the grand slam rolls home.

Katharine Hepburn: Formula for her full life is staying busy

Hepburn

NEW YORK (AP) — Katharine Hepburn says her formula for a full life is staying busy, and if illness ever stopped her from being productive, she would consider death as a way out.

"I never had any problem finding something to do, and I'm never bored," the 77-year-old actress said in an interview in the Aug. 18 issue of Family Circle.

Ms. Hepburn, who has recovered from an auto accident three years ago in which she nearly lost a foot, added: "I don't become down, even when I'm sick. I do feel disgusted when I have to crawl up three flights of stairs ... it's not as much fun as running up. But I'm not depressed."

She also said: "I don't believe in hocking people, but if I got sick and was no longer of any use to myself or anyone else, I would find a way of ending it."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran comedian Red Skelton has been voted the prestigious Governor's Award by the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences.

Academy president Richard Frank, calling Skelton a "national treasure," said Wednesday the award would be presented during the primetime Emmy telecast on Sept. 21.

The Governor's Award is the academy's highest honor for outstanding achievement beyond the scope of an Emmy, and requires a majority vote of the board of governors.

Skelton, 73, appeared on radio from 1951 to 1971, bringing with him his repertoire of characters developed on radio. Among them were The Mean Widdle Kid, Clem Kadiddlehopper, sheriff Deadeye, Cauliflower McPugg, Boiled Shirt, Sheepish Sam, Ferdinando Red and Willie Lump-Lump. His shows were also noted for his pantomimed "Seat Spot."

Previous recipients of the award include Johnny Carson, Alistair Cooke, Walter Cronkite and Bob Hope.

PARSIPPANY, N.J. (AP) — Howard Cosell says athletes should not be considered role models for the nation's youth just because of their physical prowess.

It is not right to hold up the sports world as Camelot, Cosell said Wednesday. "Professional athletes are not going to be my role model or the role model for my children. Role models must come from inside the family, from educators."

Cosell told the eastern regional conference of the Council on State Governments that he favored mandatory, random drug testing for all professional athletes.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Motorcycle stuntman Evel Knievel has pleaded guilty to an amended charge of disorderly conduct stemming from his arrest last month on a charge of soliciting for immoral purposes.

Knievel, 47, was fined $200 after entering the plea Wednesday. He said after his arrest that he would seek a jury trial to exonerate himself of the charge he solicited an undercover policewoman.

Sal Capra, Knievel's lawyer, said he did not know why Knievel changed his mind and pleaded guilty to the amended charge. "I think this is the best solution to the problem," Capra said.

City Prosecutor George Sharp confirmed the plea agreement but would not comment further.

Goldwater

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, is in a hospital after suffering abdominal pains that his aide says were probably caused by indigestion.

The 77-year-old Goldwater was at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where hospital spokesman Ben Smith would not disclose his condition Wednesday evening. He was admitted at 6:30 a.m. Wednesday.

He is here, he is under 24-hour observation," hospital spokesman Jim Stuesse said earlier in the day. He came in suffering atypical abdominal pains."

The hospital spokesman said Goldwater, a veteran of 36 years in the Senate and the Republican nominee for president in 1964, was having routine blood tests and would remain in the hospital until at least today.

James Ferguson, a spokesman for Goldwater, said he had spoken with the senator's doctor, who told us he had seafood late last night and had just had a really bad flare-up of indigestion. I don't think it's anything serious."

FORT BRAGG, Calif. (AP) — Two men have been sentenced to the maximum three years in prison for stealing a pair of 14-karat gold championship belts worn by boxer Joe Louis and valued at $[illegible].

William K. Kreutz, 29, and Mark A. Estes, 25, were sentenced Wednesday. Both pleaded guilty three weeks ago to a count each of second-degree burglary.

The belts and a Congressional gold coin bearing Louis' image were stolen in June from the office of Rolling Hills Estates management consultant Ronald T. Schaefer, who is trying to create a boxing hall of fame in Las Vegas, Nev.

The belts were on loan from Louis' widow. The boxer won them for capturing the U.S. heavyweight championship in 1937 and that of Great Britain in 1939.

Kreutz and Estes had been charged with burglary and receipt of stolen property, but pleaded guilty under an agreement with prosecutors, who said the jail time would have been about the same in either case.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Motorcycle stuntman Evel Knievel has pleaded guilty to an amended charge of disorderly conduct stemming from his arrest last month on a charge of soliciting for immoral purposes.

Knievel, 47, was fined $200 after entering the plea Wednesday. He said after his arrest that he would seek a jury trial to exonerate himself of the charge he solicited an undercover policewoman.

Sal Capra, Knievel's lawyer, said he did not know why Knievel changed his mind and pleaded guilty to the amended charge. "I think this is the best solution to the problem," Capra said.

City Prosecutor George Sharp confirmed the plea agreement but would not comment further.

Goldwater

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, is in a hospital after suffering abdominal pains that his aide says were probably caused by indigestion.

The 77-year-old Goldwater was at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where hospital spokesman Ben Smith would not disclose his condition Wednesday evening. He was admitted at 6:30 a.m. Wednesday.

He is here, he is under 24-hour observation," hospital spokesman Jim Stueve said earlier in the day. He came in suffering atypical abdominal pains."

The hospital spokesman said Goldwater, a veteran of 30 years in the Senate and the Republican nominee for president in 1964, was having "routine blood tests" and would remain in the hospital until at least today.

James Ferguson, a spokesman for Goldwater, said he had spoken with the senator's doctor, who "told us he had seafood late last night and had just had a really bad flare-up of indigestion. I don't think it's anything serious."

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — Two men have been sentenced to the maximum three years in prison for stealing a pair of 14-karat gold championship belts worn by boxer Joe Louis and valued at $500,000.

William K. Kreutz, 29, and Mark A. Estes, 25, were sentenced Wednesday. Both pleaded guilty three weeks ago to a count each of second-degree burglary.

The belts and a Congressional gold coin bearing Louis' image were stolen in June from the office of Rolling Hills Estates management consultant Ronald T. Schaefer, who is trying to create a boxing hall of fame in Las Vegas, Nev.

The belts were on loan from Louis' widow. The boxer won them for capturing the U.S. heavyweight championship in 1937 and that of Great Britain in 1939.

Kreutz and Estes had been charged with burglary and receipt of stolen property, but pleaded guilty under an agreement with prosecutors, who said the jail time would have been about the same in either case.

Nicaragua's 'fate'

Even though for seven years a Marxist government has been operating in Nicaragua and, after numerous and diverse accounts of the atrocities carried out by the Sandinista regime, there remains a large segment of the American population opposed to any form of involvement in that nation's conflict. Why?

The obvious answer is that the American people are afraid of this government either backing or stumbling into another divisive and tragic "Vietnam." Nobody in this country wants that — not even Ronald Reagan or the supporters of his aid package for the anti-Sandinista forces.

Despite that fact, there is an overwhelming need for those who believe in freedom and human rights to do what they can to fight in whatever ways possible the subjugation of Central America by communism.

An awareness of the danger posed by the Nicaraguan dictatorship is growing. What an opponent of Reagan administration policies once refered to as a "local problem" is now more widely viewed realistically for what it is, a threat to the security not only of Central America, but of the hemisphere.

The vote in the House of Representatives approving $100 million in aid for the freedom fighters was a good sign. More than a few skeptical observers have visited Nicaragua, returning minus their skepticism and with a realization that President Reagan wasn't just trying to scare people when he talked of the possibility of a Russian beachhead on the United States' southern doorstep.

The International League for Human Rights performed a distinct public service by issuing its report on human rights. It said in effect that those rights simply do not exist anymore, which is the saddest possible commentary on seven years of Sandinista rule.

The League's report is not pleasant reading, for it tells of torture and detention and arrests and all conceivable methods of oppression. But it tells free people what they need to know about the inhumane government in Nicaragua.

It makes supporting the freedom fighters in Nicaragua a more acceptable decision. It's support for the basic human rights destroyed by the Sandinistas.

Another View: Reagan reassessment

President Reagan's month-long "reassessment" of his attitude toward South Africa ended Tuesday without an iota of change or regret.

With faint damns he lavished new sympathy, if not praise, on the white authorities in Pretoria, offering a tired restatement of the failed strategy of "constructive engagement." Yes, he acknowledged, some bad things are happening under a repressive state of emergency. But the regime has been provoked and means well, and sanctions to punish its racism would be "immoral." Patient blacks will in time gain a voice in their own country; impatient blacks help the Soviet cause and undermine America's strategic interests.

To South African moderates of every color who strive to avert a terrible conflict, Reagan offered a counsel of patience but no help. At times he seemed puzzled that they fail to appreciate a relative (to Africa) prosperity and the doling out of reforms (to the dismay of "extreme" white supremacists). To an American Congress wrestling with the real condundrums of applying more pressure with sanctions, the president tried to have it both ways. He claimed credit for punitive steps already taken but then meekly followed British Prime Minister Thatcher in denouncing sanctions as "utterly repugnant."

Thatcher, at least, is consistent. She also opposes sanctions against Libya and Communists. Reagan proposed calibrated steps that might encourage black-white negotiations about power-sharing but refused to invoke the threat of even eventual penalties if the repression continues.

Even in strategic terms, Reagan's thumb landed clumsily on the white side of the scales. He stressed the West's stake in South Africa's important minerals and sea lanes and cited Soviet designs on the region. But nowhere in his reckoning was there any recognition of America's enormous stake in befriending black Africans generally and the increasingly alienated blacks who are destined to prevail in South Africa.

Reagan's suggested agenda for action was not only timid but out of date. He called for a "timetable" for the elimination of apartheid and the release of all political prisoners, including Nelson Mandela, the jailed leader of the African National Congress. He took no account of Pretoria's recent rejection of the same proposals when advanced by a Commonwealth mediating team. The rejection was so brusque that these far-from-radical mediators came away agitating for sanctions by all Commonwealth nations. Indeed, by saying that Mandela should be freed "to participate in the political process," Reagan appeared to be endorsing Pretoria's demand that he first accept its process for consultation with blacks.

The crisis in South Africa is everything that Reagan said. Time is running out for those who abhor violence. There are conflicts within each racial group as well as between the races. To the extent they can, the Western governments should act in concert to bolster the forces of decency to head off a catastrophe. They should have channels to all contending parties.

But having accurately described the maelstrom, Reagan promises aimlessly to remain "engaged." He came up deaf not only to one of the great moral issues of his time but even to the importunings of the Congress down the street. He would have been wiser to say nothing at all.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On July 24, 1959, during a visit to the Soviet Union, Vice President Richard M. Nixon got into a well-publicized debate with Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev over the merits of Communism versus capitalism. The confrontation became known as the Kitchen Debate because it took place in a model kitchen at a U.S. exhibition.

On this date:

In 1783, Latin American revolutionary Simon Bolivar was born.

In 1847, Mormon leader Brigham Young and his followers arrived at Great Salt Lake in Utah.

In 1862, the eighth president of the United States, Martin Van Buren, died.

In 1866, Tennessee became the first state to be readmitted to the Union after seceding during the Civil War.

In 1929, President Herbert Hoover proclaimed the Kellogg-Briand Pact, which renounced war as an instrument of foreign policy.

In 1937, the state of Alabama dropped charges against five black men accused of raping two white women in the Scottsboro Case.

In 1946, the United States detonated an atomic bomb at Bikini Atoll in the Pacific in the first underwater test of the device.

In 1969, the Apollo XI astronauts, two of whom had been the first men to set foot on the moon, splashed down safely in the Pacific.

In 1975, an Apollo spacecraft carrying three Americans splashed down safely in the Pacific, ending a mission that included an orbital rendezvous with a Soviet Soyuz spaceship.

Ten years ago: Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan said in Pacific Palisades, Calif., that there was "no way" he would agree to become President Gerald R. Ford's running mate.

Congress bailed out billboard owner

WASHINGTON — Special interests with the right connections can thumb their noses at government agencies, the courts and the law of the land. All they need is a little help from their friends in Congress.

Jack Anderson

Consider the mighty billboard industry, one of the biggest contributors of campaign funds and speaking fees to members of Congress, particularly those on such key committees as House Public Works. The industry's demand is simple, if outrageous: compensation for destruction of their billboards, even though the owners agreed not to ask for compensation when they got permission to erect the signs.

Harold Newman may be the most persistent billboard owner around. He owns 119 billboards in North Dakota, one of the states that allowed the outdoor-advertising industry to continue putting up its eyesores between 1965, when the Highway Beautification Act was passed, and 1972, when it took effect.

Newman took advantage of this grace period. But stamped on each of his 119 billboard permits was this condition: that he would not be compensated when the state ordered his signs torn down. In 1972, the state did just that — and Newman launched a legal battle.

Since then, Newman has been rebuffed by the state courts, the governor of North Dakota, the state and federal departments of transportation and the U.S. Supreme Court. Was he discouraged? Not at all. He went to Congress for help — and got it.

During the Public Works Committee's markup of the latest federal highway bill on June 25, Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., offered an amendment that will pay Newman for removal of his signs. The amendment sailed through with the blessing of Rep. Jim Howard, D-N.J., the silver-haired water boy for the billboard industry, who is chairman of the committee. The outdoor-advertising moguls pamper Howard with campaign donations, speaking honoraria and junkets to vacation spots like Palm Springs.

The Newman amendment and 17 others had been secretly discussed and agreed to beforehand by the committee's Big Four: Howard, Shuster and Reps. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., and Gene Snyder, R-Ky. This is Standard Operating Procedure for the Public Works Committee.

Ordinarily, the Cadillac-driving Howard is careful not to be directly linked to billboard legislation, leaving it to Shuster or others to take responsibility for the special-interest legislation.

On the Newman amendment, however, Howard intervened personally, and in writing. Last Sept. 9 he tipped his hand in a letter to North Dakota's attorney general, saying that "inequities do remain" in the state's decision not to compensate Newman and other billboard owners holding the interim permits.

"I am, therefore, considering the need to clarify the compensable status of these signs," Howard wrote.

His letter drew protests from state and federal transportation officials, who mistakenly believed they had convinced Howard of the error of his ways. Nine months later, they were astonished to see the Newman amendment attached to the highway bill — along with five paragraphs of attempted justification.

"Mr. Newman is just persistent," a federal highway official explained to our associate Stewart Harris. "He wants money for those signs and he will do anything on the books to get it. ... We are against it, totally."

"The issue has been in the courts since 1973 and the question of compensability has been ruled in favor of the state," North Dakota highway commissioner Walter Hjelle complained in a letter to Shuster asking him to butt out.

Footnote: Newman's 119 billboards are still standing.

FUDDLE FACTORY: It takes the State Department 10 months on average to declassify and release documents that have been requested under the Freedom of Information Act, according to a recent study by the inspector general. It's not a deliberate cover-up, though, he concluded — merely incompetence. Specifically, the delays were blamed on lack of coordination, too much time wasted finding the documents and unduly voluminous requests by two or three individuals. The inspector general's proposed solution is weird: Limit the number of pages and the number of requests per person, and charge higher fees. This is freedom of information?

EASIER EAVESDROPPING: Without hearings or debate, the House pushed through a "Communications Privacy Act" that will supposedly make life more difficult for electronic eavesdroppers. But experts tell us the law is toothless and riddled with loopholes. In fact, it doesn't even address the fact that with a new Sony TV, the FBI (or anyone else) can listen in on cellular phone conversations simply by tuning in Channels 80 to 83 — and federal law requires new TV sets to have those channels.

GEORGE F. WILL

Tobacco industry on another losing cause

WASHINGTON — If applause is indeed the echo of a platitude, applause probably greeted the legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union when he denounced "government-imposed ignorance." But before applauding, understand that Burt Neuborne's worry is "ignorance" imposed by a ban on tobacco advertising.

George F. Will

He thinks such a ban would be unconstitutional and immoral. It would be neither.

In a recent decision upholding the constitutionality of Puerto Rico's ban on the advertising of casino gambling, which is legal there, the Supreme Court reiterated the principle that commercial speech is more subject than other speech for regulation when the regulation directly advances a substantial government interest, such as public health. That principle flows from this one: The First Amendment is, after all, an amendment to a political document. Its primary protection is for speech related to the process by which we govern ourselves — the working of representative government and the cultural activities that nourish a free society.

In the Puerto Rico case, Justice Rehnquist, writing for the majority, argued that regulation of the advertising of a product is less intrusive than regulating the sale of the product. (There are only a few products, such as contraceptives, the sale of which enjoy constitutional protection.) Smoking, like gambling, is not a constitutional right. It would be perverse to argue that a legislature can ban a product or activity but can not regulate commercial speech that stimulates demand for the product or activity.

It is odd to suggest that banning tobacco advertisements would constitute "enforced ignorance." Ignorance of what? The availability of cigarettes? Neuborne considers a ban on tobacco advertisements a form of "censorship" and says all censorship arises from "paternalistic zeal to shield others, presumably less enlightened, Americans from speech that one or another pressure group thinks isn't particularly good for them."

But no one thinks tobacco advertising is "good for" someone who reads it. Perhaps because he knows that reasonable people can not differ about tobacco advertising's potential for good, Neuborne leaps, as the ACLU is wont to do, to the notion that any regulation of any expression puts society on the slippery slope to totalitarianism. "The hallmark of a totalitarian state," he says, "is a government-managed information flow."

But examine the average cigarette advertisement — toothsome young people frolicking in surf, a picture of a mountain meadow, slogans such as "Get a taste of it" or "Come to where the flavor is." Try to measure the information content. Cigarette advertisements are not seminars; they are inducements.

Neuborne says it is incipiently totalitarian for government to use "manipulation" of information as a "behavior-modification tool." By "manipulation" he seems to mean any government use of selected information for government purposes. By his logic, he must oppose government requiring health warnings on cigarette advertisements — the only real information in most such advertisements.

Much modern illness is voluntary, meaning behaviorally based: People eat and drink foolishly, exercise too little, smoke, drive recklessly. The only substantial improvements of public health immediately available can come not from new medical technologies but from modifications of behavior. The most successful, cost-effective government programs of the last several decades have involved government-directed flows of information — about smoking, high blood pressure, automobile safety, etc.

And the behavior-modification capacity of advertisements? Without ascribing to advertising more manipulative power than can be measured, one fact is telling. Last year $2 billion was spent advertising tobacco products.

It is, to say no more, counter-intuitive to suggest, as some industry sources do, that the principal purpose of such advertising is to influence the choices of confirmed smokers who change brands. Only 10 percent of smokers change each year. Anyway, many competing brands are manufactured by the same parent companies that are buying the advertising.

Given that 350,000 persons die each year from smoking-related illnesses and one million quit, the industry must find 1.35 million new customers a year just to maintain its market. Advertising is designed to manufacture new demand, not just redirect existing demand.

Furthermore, cigarette advertisements, which are low on information and high on appeals to social aspirations, are apt to be especially effective with young people. Sixty percent of today's smokers started by age 13 or 14. The evidence from the nations with the severest limits on cigarette advertising is that after such advertising is limited, adult smokers continue but fewer young people start.

Sen. Bill Bradley (D-N.J) notes that the tobacco industry, having tried the patience of reasonable people by arguing that smoking does not cause illness, now suggests that advertising does not cause smoking. Two billion dollars says they do not believe that.

ART BUCHWALD

Support for South African sanctions depends

Donald Regan, the President's chief of staff, gave the only sensible answer to the question of economic sanctions against South Africa.

When asked by reporters about using tough measures against Pretoria Regan replied, "Are the women of America prepared to give up all their jewelry?"

Art Buchwald

Though not the key question about South Africa, it certainly ranks up there with the important one. I hadn't realized this until Regan raised the issue as to how American women felt about their jewelry.

As soon as the news article appeared I took it down to the beach and read it to some very attractive women. Then I asked, "Who among you is prepared to give up your jewelry to stop apartheid?"

"Are we talking about the jewelry we already have, or the jewelry we're going to get?"

"It doesn't say," I replied. "But I would assume Regan was talking about jewelry futures. My understanding is that if we lay sanctions on the South Africans it means that we will not be able to buy diamonds and gold for a very long time. Women in this country will suffer like they have never suffered before."

You could smell the fear on the beach.

"Why is the White House picking on us?" the lady asked.

"They're not picking on you, but Regan is trying to say that you can't make an omelette without cracking some eggs."

"I don't care about omelettes. I worry about my gold bracelets. My arms will be naked without them. Why can't we go along with sanctions for South Africa except for diamonds, gold and platinum."

"It's all or nothing. This is not my decision but Donald Regan's. It's one that the women of America must decide."

A man who wasn't in our party said, "Does it include men's gold chains as well?"

"Regan said nothing about them as far as I could see. But I would suspect eventually it would include men's jewelry as well. How do you feel about South African sanctions?"

The man put his head in the sand and said, "I don't want to talk about it."

One of the women asked, "Would the embargo include emeralds and rubies and sapphires?"

"No, but what good are emeralds, rubies and sapphires without diamonds to make them look good? I know this is a very hard choice for every woman in America to make. At the same time who else is going to decide it? Politically the administration can't afford to cut off women's jewels just to show South Africa how tough we can be."

One of the women had a question. "Would there be a safety net for those of us who don't have too many jewels to start with?"

I referred to the newspaper story. "There is nothing about a safety net in Regan's statement. If you want the truth, I think the administration is against sanctions and Regan wants to use the American woman to get the White House off the hook. When the administration starts feeling all the pressure in Congress to do something about South Africa, Regan will say I wanted to but the American woman wouldn't let me. She was afraid that with sanctions she'd have nothing to put on her neck."

"Go away," one of the women said.

"There is more," I told her. "If we have sanctions against South Africa we won't get any chrome for our bathroom fixtures."

For the first time everyone looked up in horror. "That does it," the lady said. "Tell Regan we'll support Ronnie's South Africa no-sanction policy all the way."

No rain expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport once again said no rain is expected for tonight or Friday.

Tonight will be fair with a low near 70. Winds will breeze through from the south at 5-15 mph.

Friday will be sunny and hot as a high near 100 is expected. Winds will be from the southwest at 5-15 mph.

The record high for the day occurred in 1981 and it was a steamy 103. The record low occurred 39 years ago in 1947 when it only reached 62.

STATE

Skies across the state were mostly clear early today with all showers dissipated, the National Weather Service reported.

Winds were southerly throughout the state at 5 to 10 mph. Early morning temperatures were mainly in the 70s and 80s. The extremes at 4 a.m. were 62 degrees at Marfa and 81 degrees at Waco.

The weather service forecast mostly sunny skies with some scattered thunderstorms over North Texas. Highs should be in the 90s to 104 with lows in the 70s.

South Texas should see clear to partly skies with some isolated thunderstorms and highs ranging from near 90 along the coast to 105 inland and lows in the 70s to 80.

The forecast for West Texas called for fair skies with highs near 100 except near 90 in the mountains and 104 along the Big Bend. Lows were predicted to be in the upper 60s in the mountains to lower 70s.

NATION

Tropical storm Estelle continued to weaken as it moved away from the Hawaiian Islands today, while the drought-plagued South received isolated showers today after a rash of thunderstorms broke up.

Rain also dampened broad sections of the West after drenching thunderstorms hit South Dakota, causing flash floods.

Estelle was downgraded from a hurricane to a tropical storm Wednesday, and advisories for the islands were cancelled. The storm was 300 miles south of Honolulu and moving west early today, with 50 mph winds, the National Weather Service said.

Thunderstorms ranged from central Minnesota across South Dakota and western Nebraska into eastern Colorado.

Sections of north central and eastern South Dakota suffered flash floods Wednesday evening, including foot-deep water in the streets of Sisseton, the weather service said.

Dallas tight end Junior Miller (90) has the ball knocked away by linebacker Russ Swan during Wednesday's workout.

Dallas offers second chance

Junior Miller finds relief through Lord

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Former Midland Lee Rebel Junior Miller was tired of waking up tired of Junior Miller.

"I'd go out drinking beer and be miserable the next day," Miller said. "People fool themselves. They get drunk, do stupid things and blow their money. I wasn't happy and I didn't feel life was worth living."

That was when Miller was an All-Pro tight end with the Atlanta Falcons.

"I had it all, big money, my family, a big house, a big car, and at the top of my profession," he said.

Miller's drunken world came crashing down on him in 1985 when no professional football team wanted his services. He thought about suicide.

"I considered driving my car off into a lake," he said.

Instead, Miller said he found the Lord.

"I was crying and found a Bible next to me and started reading it because nothing was bringing me the happiness I needed," he said.

Prayer helped when the bill collectors came calling.

"To be honest, I owed everyone money but I was happy, I had peace, I had my faith," Miller said. "I had been kicked in the teeth but I felt good."

Then the Dallas Cowboys rang. They signed the 6-foot-4, 240-pounder as a free agent. He's now in training camp trying to recapture the magic that made him an All-American at Nebraska and an All-Pro for the Falcons.

TRYING TO knock the rust off a year away from football, Miller is struggling but still rates a chance to be one of the three tight ends Coach Tom Landry keeps.

"I have good days and bad but I know I can catch the ball and I know I can block," Miller said. "I'm going to make this club then I'm going to tell kids at churches and schools how they can ruin their lives with alchohol."

In his rookie year, Miller, the seventh player chosen in the 1980 NFL draft, caught eight passes for 117 yards and two touchdowns in a game.

The Cowboys hope he has some games like that left in him.

"He could really be something," said offensive coordinator Paul Hackett. "But he's got to get back his confidence in himself. It's tough coming back after missing a year of professional football."

Miller patiently signs autographs as he talks, letting a boy carry his helmet and jersey from the practice field.

"I want to be someone they (the kids) can look up to," Miller said. "I had run into a dead end. But I have a second chance. I was lucky. Len Bias made a mistake and it cost him his life."

Third blowout lifts Mustangs to state berth

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Midland Mustangs coach Rick Candalaria expects the competition to improve in the Hi-Junior state tournament in Waco next week.

But right now, he and the 'Stangs are too busy celebrating a district title to worry about next week. And why not, after an 18-6 drubbing of Odessa American Legion Wednesday night at Angels Stadium, the Mustangs deserve a few days to savor their victory.

The Mustangs were never headed in this tournament, winning three games by a combined score of 45-16 to steamroll the four-team field. The lopsided margins send the Mustangs into a field of six at the state tourney, beginning July 29 in Waco, and Candalaria is hoping the Mustangs can repeat what the Midland Cowboys did last season and keep the Hi-Junior state crown in the Tall City.

With the hitting and pitching they got in the three-day district tournament, the Mustangs just might do it.

In the district championship game, the Mustangs took command in the first inning, scoring eight runs before Odessa ever came to the plate. But they didn't quit there.

THE MUSTANGS poured it on for one more in the second, then punched in four in the third and two in each the fourth and fifth. It wasn't until the seventh and final inning that Odessa could shut down the Mustang offense.

"That's the way this team has been doing it all year, during the regular season," said Candalaria. "We've been hitting the ball good all tournament."

Leading the way were second baseman Dudley Jordan with two hits and four runs batted in and center fielder Blaine McAnally with three hits and three RBI. But nearly everyone contributed in this one. Every starter but one collected at least one hit as Midland piled up 18 safeties off a parade of four Odessa pitchers.

On the mound for the Mustangs, Kevin Wallum went the distance, allowing six hits and just two earned runs. About the only thing the Mustangs could be faulted for was their fielding. Five Midland errors contributed four unearned runs to Odessa's total.

"That's the worst we've fielded all year, five errors, I don't know what happened," said Candalaria.

Whatever it was it didn't affect the outcome of the game — that was never in doubt.

NOW THE Mustangs can turn their attention to bigger and better things. And Candalaria can see his team continuing its winning ways at the state tournament, though he knows 18-6 blowouts are an unlikely occurrence at that level.

Spurs ink Dawkins to four-year pact

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Duke University star Johnny Dawkins donned a San Antonio Spurs' cap and called his new home a "great town" as the team announced its first round draft pick had signed a four-year contract.

Dawkins was introduced by Head Coach Bobby Weiss at a news conference Wednesday night.

"This is a great town and the fans seem to be very enthusiastic," Dawkins said. "So far, I've found that it's a lot more competitive," he said of workouts at the NBA team's rookie camp.

"I am playing against top of the line college players and some NBA veterans. It's more difficult, but I can play."

Donald Dell, chairman of the board of ProServ, Dawkins' agents, and Spurs President Angelo Drossos came to formal agreement Wednesday afternoon, but terms of the contract were not disclosed.

"Angelo and Donald Dell spent a lot of hours talking and we finally made it official this afternoon," General Manager Bob Bass said at the news conference at Blossom Athletic Center, where Dawkins has been working out at rookie free-agent camp.

"They did a lot of negotiating in New York last week and finished it off here," Bass said.

The 6-foot-2 guard led Duke to the NCAA championship game and averaged 25.2 points during the tournament. He finished his college career with a 19.2 average and was Duke's all-time leading scorer and a two-time All-America player.

Spurs' Johnny Dawkins dons new cap Wednesday

Dawkins said he, his agents and parents discussed the matter and all decided it would be best for him to come to the rookie free-agent camp.

"This signing is a big load off our minds," Weiss said. "It's always a problem worrying about whether an important rookie is going to come to the regular preseason camp. The fact that he's here this early means that we can teach him a few of the basic plays that he can work on over the summer."

Lack of offense costs Angels, 2-1

From Staff and Wire Reports

SHREVEPORT, La. — For the second straight game, the Midland Angel offensive attack has disappeared here in Texas League action.

After winning the first game of a doubleheader 5-1 Tuesday, the Angels followed with a pair of low-scoring, one-run losses to the Shreveport Captains, 1-0 in the second game Tuesday and 2-1 Wednesday.

Shreveport's Charlie Corbell, 7-5, pitched a three-hitter at the Angels, outdueling Mike Romanovsky, who toyed with a no-hitter for 5⅔ innings, for the decision.

Deron McCue singled to end Romanovsky's no-hitter in the sixth inning and Everett Graham tripled and Alan Cockrell singled to provide the only Captains runs.

The two tallies were enough to offset the unearned run the Angels recorded in the top of the first inning.

The loss dropped Romanovsky's record to 1-2.

IN OTHER TL action, San Antonio posted an 8-7 win over Tulsa, El Paso beat Jackson 6-0 and 12-2 in a doubleheader and Beaumont trounced Arkansas 6-1.

Lenny Faedo's game-winning two-run homer off Tulsa reliever Paul Kilgus with one out in the bottom of the eighth helped San Antonio swoop to a come-from-behind 8-7 win over the Tulsa Drillers.

Rookie's homer leads Mets past Reds, 3-2

Associated Press

When the New York Mets signed free agent George Foster in 1982, they hoped his home-run hitting could turn them into a contender.

Now, with the Mets enjoying a runaway year, it does not appear Foster will be a major figure in their plans for rest of their season.

Kevin Mitchell, a hot-hitting rookie making his first start in place of Foster in left field, lined a two-run homer Wednesday night that gave the Mets a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"George has not been swinging the bat well, so I'm going to put him (Mitchell) in George's spot," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "I'm going to play Mitchell more and see what he can do."

Foster, 36, is batting .236 with 13 home runs and 37 RBI. He has only two hits in his last 25 at-bats, and had been platooned with left-handed Danny Heep.

Mitchell, 24, raised his average to .331 with his seventh homer of the season. He has driven in 24 runs while playing seven positions this season, everything but pitcher and catcher.

Mitchell steered away from questions about replacing Foster — "I don't have any comment about that" — and instead talked about the Mets' 14½-game lead in the NL East, their biggest of the year.

"I'm just glad Davey is playing me as much as he is," Mitchell said. "I like my role on the team."

Mitchell, one of four players ejected during a bench-clearing fight Tuesday night in New York's 14-inning victory over the Reds, admitted he got some extra satisfaction with his homer. The blow sailed into the second deck in center field beyond the 404-foot mark and overcame a 2-1 deficit.

"I had a little bit of an idea to stand and watch it," Mitchell said. "But I'm not the type who can do that. I'm just a rookie. I didn't even look at it. I don't like to show up the pitcher."

Ron Robinson, 7-1, yielded Mitchell's home run.

Ron Darling, 10-3, became the fourth Mets pitcher to win 10 games this season. Darling went eight innings and yielded five hits, including consecutive homers by Eddie Milner and Dave Parker in the third.

Roger McDowell worked the ninth for his ninth save as the Mets completed their second three-game sweep in Cincinnati this season.

"They outhit us, they outpitched us and they outscored us," Milner said. "That's the bottom line."

The Mets are 11-1 at Riverfront Stadium during the past two years.

National League

Astros 4, Expos 3

Davey Lopes, playing his first game for Houston, lined a run-scoring single with two outs in the 11th inning and lifted the Astros over Montreal.

Houston won its sixth straight game, including five straight in its final at bat, while the visiting Expos lost their fourth in a row.

Reliever Tim Burke, 7-3, who walked the bases loaded in the 10th before escaping the jam, walked Dickie Thon to start the Houston 11th. Thon was sacrificed to second and scored on Lopes's single.

Astros starter Bob Knepper took a two-hitter and 3-0 lead into the eighth, but the Expos tied the score on Jim Wohlford's RBI grounder, a run-scoring single by Tim Raines and Andre Dawson's sacrifice fly.

Cardinals 4, Giants 3

Danny Cox won his first game at Busch Stadium this season and Ozzie Smith's tie-breaking single keyed a three-run sixth inning as St. Louis completed a three-game sweep of San Francisco.

Cox, 4-8, had not won in 11 starts at home since Game 3 of last year's NL playoffs. He allowed six hits in eight-plus innings and Todd Worrell gained his 18th save.

Mike LaCoss, 9-5, took the loss, his first in four decisions against the Cardinals this season.

With the score 1-1, Vince Coleman led off the St. Louis sixth with a walk and later scored on Smith's single. Andy Van Slyke added an RBI triple and scored on Terry Pendleton's sacrifice fly.

There were no altercations, one day after a full-scale fight between the teams. Tommy Herr of the Cardinals suffered a lacerated cheekbone in the brawl and did not play.

Wade Boggs of the Boston Red Sox led the major leagues with a .466 on-base percentage through Tuesday.

Here's something different, Indians still in title hunt

Associated Press

The Cleveland Indians, 10 games over .500 for the first time since 1974, are beginning to consider their chances in the American League East — a rarity at this point of the season for a team that last won a pennant in 1954.

"I looked at the paper this morning and then when I saw on the scoreboard that Boston had gotten beat, everybody was saying, hey let's go," said Ken Schrom, whose five-hitter in Wednesday's 7-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox pulled the third-place Indians within five games of the struggling Red Sox.

"I really can't put my finger on it," Schrom, 9-12 last season with Minnesota, said when asked about his own eight-game winning streak. "I feel like I'm throwing the same as I did last year. I've got the same pitches and I got my breaking ball over just as much last year, but last year my fastball just got hit more."

Schrom, 11-2, hasn't lost a game since May 25, the longest streak by a Cleveland pitcher since Fritz Peterson won 10 in a row in 1975.

Schrom, who struck out four and walked none in his third complete game, was concerned about relaxing with a 6-0 lead in the second inning.

"Sometimes, when you get a big lead early, you can get a little complacent," said Schrom, who retired the last 13 batters and 18 of the last 19.

Brook Jacoby's two-run single keyed a four-run second inning after Cleveland had taken a 2-0 lead in the first against Floyd Bannister, 5-7. Errors by Chicago outfielders Ivan Calderon and Steve Lyons keyed that inning.

Cleveland's Andre Thornton hit a solo homer in the fourth, the 250th of his career and his 14th this year as the Indians swept the three-game series.

Manager Pat Corrales, sitting out the third game of a four-game suspension imposed for a fight July 1 with Oakland's Dave Stewart, is hoping the Indians don't lose their perspective.

"They've gotten a taste of losing a lot the last two years, then they got a taste of winning early this year," Corrales said. "Then they got deflated. Now they realize you've got to keep an even keel. It seems like now they'll carry one win over to the next day but they won't carry a loss into the next day."

American League

Yankees 3, Rangers 2

New York's Ron Hassey did the unorthodox thing, sliding into first base, but it gave him a game-winning infield single on ball hit to Texas first baseman Pete O'Brien. Ranger pitcher Mitch Williams was slow getting over.

"I figured it was going to be close," Hassey said. "I figured I was close enough to do it (slide), too."

The Yankees won for the ninth time in 12 games to move within three games of Boston in the East.

Charlie Hough, 9-5, allowed only four hits in 9 1-3 innings, and at one point retired 18 consecutive batters for the Rangers, losers of seven straight games.

New York's Don Mattingly hit his 18th homer, a two-run shot in the third inning.

The Rangers' Scott Fletcher extended his hitting streak to 19 games, the longest in the league.

Tigers 12, Twins 2

Detroit's Jack Morris saw his scoreless streak snapped at 32 innings and his shutout streak ended at three. But he was more upset because Manager Sparky Anderson removed him after eight innings when he was shooting for his seventh straight complete game.

"As much as I wanted to finish, he was looking out for me, said Morris, 11-6 after allowing four hits in eight innings. "Sometimes, I think he looks out for me more than I do for myself."

"Jack had to wait through two long innings while we were scoring and, after the second (in the eighth), I didn't want him to go back out," Anderson said.

Johnny Grubb backed Morris with a grand slam, his third homer in two games. Kirk Gibson added a three-run homer in the eighth.

A's 9, Red Sox 2

Oakland's Carney Lansford is living proof that winning is fun.

"This was a job a few weeks ago. Now it's starting to be fun," said Lansford, who hit two two-run homers for Oakland, which has won eight of its last nine games to climb from 16½ games behind in the West to 11½.

Boston, losing its fourth straight, was held to six runs and 15 hits in the three-game series.

"We'll just have to show character, string a few good innings together with some hits and get some good pitching," said Red Sox Manager John McNamara.

Dave Stewart won his third straight start for Oakland with ninth-inning relief help from Jay Howell.

Don Baylor hit his 17th homer for Boston.

Blue Jays 6, Mariners 2

Toronto's Dave Stieb recorded the first save of his career by pitching the final 1 1-3 innings in relief of Jim Clancy. He struck out Seattle's Jim Presley with the bases loaded in the eighth inning, but wasn't happy about working out of the bullpen.

"I am not a reliever," stated Stieb, pressed into action because the Toronto bullpen had been extended in a 12-inning loss Tuesday night.

Jesse Barfield hit a two-run homer in the eighth, his major-league-leading 25th of the season and fourth in three games.

"I just happen to be hitting the ball well right now, and this is a great place when you're hitting well," Barfield said of the Kingdome.

The Blue Jays trailed 2-1 until the seventh when Presley's error led to two unearned runs in a three-run inning.

Royals 7, Orioles 3

Kansas City starter Charlie Leibrandt, who pitched 4 1-3 innings, escaped jam after jam bacause Baltimore hit into three double plays in the first four innings. That was enough for interim Manager Mike Ferraro — he called on Mark Gubicza, 4-5, who held the Orioles hitless the rest of the way.

"Gubicza is a heck of a competitor," Ferraro said. "He is trying like hell to get back into the starting rotation and he gave us an excellent effort tonight."

Steve Balboni and Willie Wilson drove in two runs each in a four-run Kansas City second ininng. Balboni's RBI came on his 20th homer as the Royals chased Baltimore starter Scott McGregor, 6-10, who has failed to go past two innings in his last three starts.

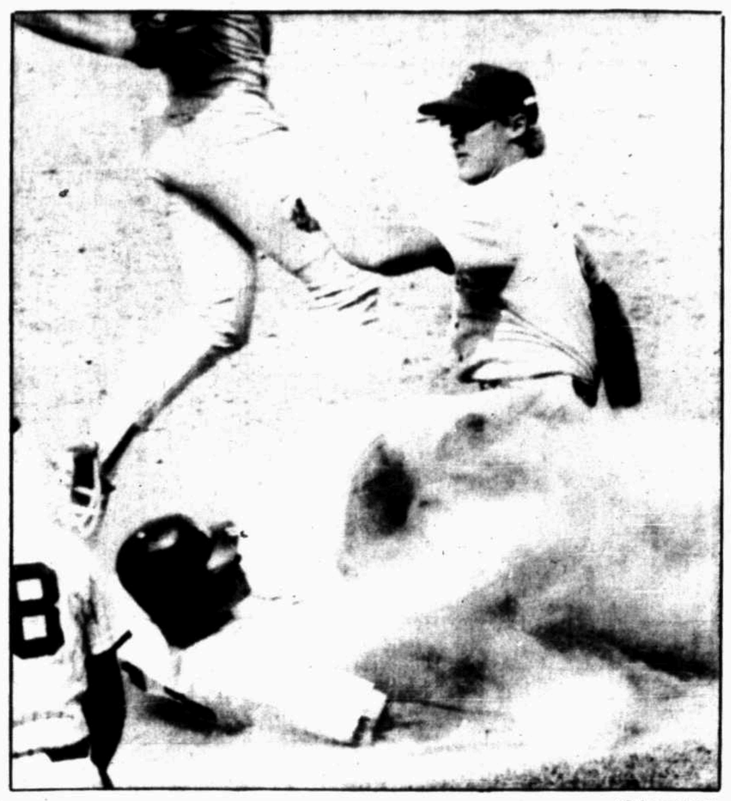

The Orioles have hit into a league-leading 98 double plays.

Angels 3, Brewers 2

It had been a long July for California's Brian Downing, at least until he led off the bottom of the 10th inning with his 11th home run.

Downing, with only one previous extra base this month, hit a 2-1 pitch from Danny Darwin, 5-6, who limited the Angels to just five hits.

Kirk McCaskill, 11-6, pitched a six-hitter for his eighth complete game while matching his career high with 12 strikeouts. He walked four.

St. Louis' Willie McGee pulled his right hamstring muscle while running out a fourth-inning triple. He left the game and it was not definite when he would be back in the lineup.

Phillies 4, Braves 2

Philadelphia's Juan Samuel and Von Hayes hit solo home runs and rookie Bruce Ruffin continued to beat Atlanta.

Philadelphia won its fourth straight game while the Braves have lost three in a row and 14 of their last 16.

Ruffin, 3-1, pitched a six-hitter in his sixth major-league starts. He has two complete games, both victories over Atlanta.

Samuel's eighth homer gave the visiting Phillies a 2-0 lead in the third. Hayes led off the fourth with his seventh homer, his second in two games.

Dodgers 6, Pirates 5

Ken Landreaux broke out of an 0-for-14 slump with a two-run homer and Mike Scioscia also drove in two Los Angeles runs at Pittsburgh.

Landreaux snapped a 2-2 tie in the third inning with his fourth homer. The Dodgers added another run in the inning when Len Matuszek doubled and scored on first baseman Sid Bream's error.

Orel Hershiser, 9-7, pitched five innings for the victory. Ken Howell got his ninth save.

Padres 7, Cubs 5

Marvell Wynne's RBI double broke an eighth-inning tie in Chicago and helped San Diego break its five-game losing streak.

Steve Garvey led off the eighth with a single against Ray Fontenot, 3-5. Pinch-runner Leon Roberts was sacrificed to second and scored on Wynne's hit off Dave Gumpert. Wynne later came home on a wild pitch.

Tony Gwynn and John Kruk each rapped three hits and drove in two runs for the Padres. Ryne Sandberg and Jody Davis both homered for the Cubs.

The win over Tulsa Wednesday was San Antonio's sixth straight and kept the Dodgers near the top of the Texas League's Western Conference standings. The victory went to San Antonio reliever Phil Torres, who came into the game in the eighth and improved to 4-4.

In San Antonio, Tulsa scored in the top of the first inning, but was down 2-1 in the second before taking off with five runs to gain a 6-2 lead. San Antonio picked up two runs in the second off Tulsa starter Steve Wilson, but the Drillers added another run in the fifth.

By the sixth inning, San Antonio had pulled to within one run to set the stage for Faedo, who was 5-for-5.

IN JACKSON El Paso centerfielder Lavell Freeman cracked a one-out double in the second inning with the bases loaded, driving in three runs to lead Diablos to a 12-2 win over the Jackson Mets and sweep a doubleheader.

In the first game, Pete Kendrick pitched a three-hit shutout as El Paso won 6-0. Kendrick, 9-6, struck out five and walked three.

HI-JUNIOR—

"I think we've got a good chance, I really do," said Candalaria, who is in his sixth year of coaching in Midland. "With the three players we are allowed to add, it helps us a lot. It gives us additional pitching and gave us a catcher, too."

Wallum was one of the players Candalaria chose, as was his batterymate catcher Geoff Rich. Pitcher Jamie Suratt is the third.

"I've got four regular starters I can use. It's a good thing, too. You never know when you're going to drop into the loser's bracket and need to play all those games," Candalaria said.

State tournaments are not new to Candalaria, who has been coaching for 15 years. When coaching in El Paso he took two 15-16 year old teams to national tournaments — he's hoping this season can be just as successful.

Today in Baseball

1949 — Cleveland pitcher Bob Lemon hit two home runs to lead the Indians to a 7-5 victory over the Washington Senators in the opening game of a doubleheader.

1973 — Bobby Bonds of the San Francisco Giants homered and doubled to lead the National League to a 7-1 rout of the American League in the All-Star Game at Kansas City.

1979 — Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox hit his 400th home run in a 7-3 victory over Mike Morgan and the Oakland A's.

1983 — The "Pine Tar" home run was hit by Kansas City's George Brett off New York pitcher Rich Gossage at Yankee Stadium. Brett's blast came with two out in the top of the ninth to give the Royals a 5-4 lead. Umpire Tim McClelland called Brett out for having pine tar higher than the allowable limit on his bat. That ruling was subsequently overturned by American League President Lee MacPhail, who allowed the home run to stand. The final out and the Yankees half of the ninth were completed on Aug. 18.

Judge resets date for Mets' examining trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge reset an examining trial regarding the arrests of the New York Mets' pitcher Ron Darling and second baseman Tim Teufel during a weekend scuffle with Houston police, a court official said.

State District Judge Joe Kegans gave no reason for changing the date of the hearing from Thursday to Friday, the court's coordinator David Alsworth said.

The trial will determine whether there is enough evidence to send the case to a grand jury, Alsworth said.

Troubles continue: Boyd arrested for old speeding ticket

BOSTON (AP) — Suspended Boston Red Sox pitcher Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, already undergoing hospital tests after a run-in with Chelsea police last week, was arrested Wednesday for an old unpaid motor vehicle violation after his wife was stopped for speeding, a State Police spokesman said.

"He was arrested and brought to (the state police) Foxboro barracks, bailed out and will appear tomorrow in Wrentham District Court," State Police Sgt. Ronald Ward said.

"I think it was an old motor vehicle violation, a typical, everyday forget-to-pay-it violation. Happens every day," Ward said. "He'll have to go in and have his say with the judge."

Boyd, 25, was on his way to dine with his wife, Karen, when the car was stopped. Boyd had obtained a pass from the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester, said a hospital spokeswoman who declined to be identified.

Boyd did not return immediately to the hospital and could not be reached for comment.

Ward said Boyd's wife was stopped for speeding about 5:40 p.m. in the Foxboro area south of Boston. The trooper who halted the car checked its registration and discovered the old violation still pending against Boyd.

Ward said he didn't know the nature of the old violation, or whether Mrs. Boyd was cited.

Boyd, at 11-6 the second winningest pitcher on the Red Sox, was suspended July 11 for three games when he stormed out of the clubhouse after being left off the American League All-Star team.

The right-hander was suspended indefinitely July 16.

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell against most major currencies in thin European trading early today. Gold bullion fell in Hong Kong, but edged up in Europe.

The dollar had risen in late European and New York trading Wednesday after the release of reports indicating better-than-expected U.S. economic performance.

The main surprise was the U.S. Commerce Department's report of a 2.1 percent rise in June durable goods orders.

"It's true the market was looking for a decline, but I don't see the gain in durable goods orders as very significant," a trader commented. "Compared to four months of declines, one month's improvement doesn't indicate a change in trend."

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

-2.1275 West German marks, down from 2.1405

--1.7195 Swiss francs, down from 1.7320

-6.8695 French francs, down from 6.9225

-2.3962 Dutch guilders, down from 2.4100

--1,462.50 Italian lire, down from 1,474.50

-1.3905 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3895

The British pound rose to $1.4935 from $1.4873.

The dollar closed at 156.55 Japanese yen in Tokyo, up from 155.95 yen late Wednesday.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $348.50 a troy ounce, up $1 from late Wednesday.

In Zurich, gold was bid at $348.25, up from $347.75.

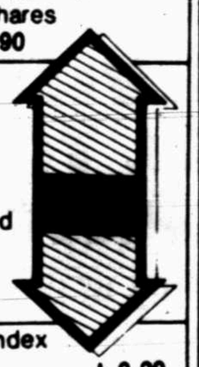

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell to a closing bid of $347.76, compared with Wednesday's $351.20.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at $5.01 an ounce, down from $5.04 late Wednesday.

Crude prices continue to fall

Higher gasoline stocks surprise analysts

United Press International

Britain's North Sea oil plummeted to an all-time low of $8.50 a barrel Wednesday amid concern over an unexpected rise in U.S. gasoline supplies during the summer driving season when motorist demand should be at its peak in the largest oil-consuming nation.

Analysts said traders were reluctant to buy crude before OPEC's 13 oil ministers meet July 28 in Geneva in the cartel's fourth attempt this year to reach agreement on production curbs to reduce the global oil surplus and halt the price collapse.

On the European spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, Britain's Brent crude fell by 75 cents to a record low of $8.50 a barrel. The previous historic low for the benchmark North Sea crude was $8.65 a barrel, hit July 15. Britain began selling oil in 1976 at an official price of $12.60 a barrel.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas intermediate — the key U.S. crude for September delivery — dropped 41 cents and slipped below the $11 mark to $10.85 a barrel.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, West Texas intermediate plunged by $1 to $10.50 a barrel.

Joseph Tovey, president of Tovey & Co. investment bankers in New York, warned oil prices could sink to $5 a barrel unless the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries moves swiftly to rein in production that is running at a 4 ½-year high of nearly 20 million barrels a day.

"The cost of production does not exceed $5 a barrel in the Middle East, where the bulk of OPEC's reserves are located," Tovey said. "Oil at $5 a barrel horrifies me but would not surprise me."

Oil prices plunged by as much as $2 a barrel Tuesday and ended a five-day technical rally on world markets before the American Petroleum Institute reported late in the day that U.S. gasoline supplies rose by 600,000 barrels and demand showed no increase last week.

Analysts said the report dashed hopes — at least temporarily — that a steady increase in U.S. gasoline demand would help reduce the world oil glut and sop up some of OPEC's excess production.

Gasoline demand in the United States inched up only 1.3 percent in the first six months of the year despite falling pump prices — far short of the double-digit growth some specialists had predicted for the year.

The oil industry trade group also said U.S. crude oil stocks swelled by 7 million barrels and refineries revved up operations to 84.4 percent of capacity, which could create even larger supplies of gasoline.

Hughes Tool has $445.8 million loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Hughes Tool Co. Wednesday reported a loss of $445.8 million in the second quarter, which company officials blamed on the decline of oil drilling operations.

It was the largest quarterly loss in the company's 77-year history, officials said.

The oil drilling equipment maker announced the loss of $7.97 per share for the quarter ending June 30, compared with net income of $1 million, or 2 cents a share, during the same period last year.

For the first six months, the company had a loss of $466.1 million ($8.33 per share) compared with net income of $1.6 million (3 cents per share) for the same period last year, according to the statement.

The steep decline was prompted by a sharp drop in sales of oil equipment as energy companies cut back operations in response to falling prices, spokesman Don King said.

Net sales for the three months were $184.6 million, down 46 percent from the period year ago, officials said.

"During the second quarter, U.S. drilling activity has dropped to the lowest level ever recorded by the company," said W.A. Kistler Jr., president and chief executive officer.

The average oil and gas rig count in the nation during the second quarter was 790, down 58 percent from the average of 1,876 a year ago, officials said. Foreign rig activity averaged 1,124, a 24 percent drop from 1,477 in the period last year.

As of Monday, 692 rigs were operating in the nation, according to company records.

The second quarter loss was the largest since the company began operating in 1909, another company spokesman Wayne Bryant said.

Inflation stays low, personal income inches up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices took their biggest leap of the year in June, but the 0.5 percent surge did little to offset the lowest half-year inflation rate in 31 years, the government said Wednesday.

While merchandise and services cost more in June, Americans' personal income also rose, but by a tiny 0.1 percent, according to a separate report by the Commerce Department.

That report also said consumer spending in the same period rose by a more robust 0.6 percent. And, to help make up the difference between income and spending increases, Americans digged deeper into their savings. Personal savings declined from a total of $151.6 billion in May to $133.2 billion in June.

The June increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index followed a 0.2 percent rise in May. It was the largest monthly rise since a 0.6 percent increase last November.

Higher energy, housing and food costs accounted for most of the June gain — which would be equivalent to a 5.7 percent annual inflation rate if maintained for 12 consecutive months.

"Inflation's coming back, but not quite as bad as the June figures appear," said Sandra Shaber, a senior economist with Chase Econometrics. "The price of oil is still pretty soft. We could still see some price relief at the gasoline pump."

Largely due to oil-related decreases in February, March and April, prices at the retail level have declined at an annual seasonally adjusted rate of 0.2 percent for the first half of 1986 — the lowest six-month rate of inflation since a 0.4 percent fall from January-June 1955.

Analysts generally predicted that inflation soon would return to the 3.5-to-4 percent range that existed before the collapse of world oil prices, suggesting an average for the year of close to 2 percent.

Inflation has to be at least 3 percent to trigger cost-of-living increases next year for the nation's 37 million Social Security recipients. However, congressional leaders and Reagan administration officials recently have said they support waiving that law if necessary to allow for a cost-of-living boost of about 2 percent next January.

Gasoline prices, after falling sharply earlier in the year, rose 3.1 percent in June on the heels of a 2.5 percent increase in May. However, by the end of June, prices at the pump appeared to be heading down again slightly, a decrease expected to be reflected in the next report.

Food prices also were up 0.1 percent in June, compared to a 0.4 percent rise in May. Housing costs climbed 0.5 percent in June, mostly reflecting higher costs for electricity and other utilities.

Despite the June gasoline price increase, overall energy costs so far this year have fallen at an annual rate of 40.2 percent.

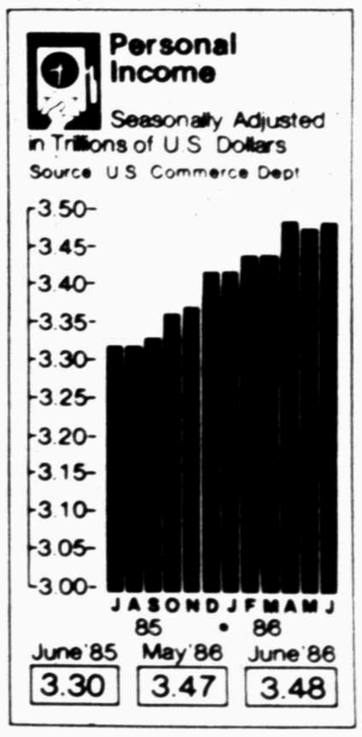

"I don't think that oil prices are going to immediately bounce back. OPEC has had a hard time doing arithmetic. But eventually, they will learn," said Roger Brinner, an economist with Data Resources Inc., in a reference to this year's sharp disagreements on oil prices and production levels within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"I think there's an underlying rate of inflation of about 4 percent that's been maintained for the past few years. So, we should brace outselves for numbers that come back to that," Brinner added. "If it weren't for the fact that consumers got a windfall gain from lower oil prices, Americans would be pretty disatisfied today with their earnings."

In the third of Friday's mixed bag of economic reports, the Commerce Department reported that orders to U.S. factories for "big ticket" durable goods rose 2.1 percent in June, the first increase in four months and the biggest advance since December.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige called the increase in durable goods "a welcome rebound," particularly in light of Tuesday's report that the gross national product from April to June grew only at an annual rate of only 1.1 percent.

Legislator hopes to pass benefit bill

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Legislation extending benefits for jobless oil industry workers faces a stiff battle in the U.S. House, but Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, who guided the measure through the Senate, is optimistic — despite two past failures.

"I am very hopeful because we have some real support now on the House side," Johnston, D-La., said Tuesday in a release from his Washington office.

"The unemployment problems we have in Louisiana and other oil producing states are extremely severe and this is exactly the kind of aid we need."

Johnston't amendment, attached this time to a banking measure and passed by a voice vote, would change the Trade Adjustment Assistance Act to include petroleum workers.

That trade act provides financial help and job training to workers who lose their jobs because of increased foreign imports. The benefits continue 26 weeks after state unemployment compensation expires.

The measure has been passed twice previously by the Senate. Each time, the House deleted it from legislation.

Southwestern Bell to eliminate 1,700 jobs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. of St. Louis will cut 1,700 more jobs from its payroll in the next six months, company officials said.

John E. Hayes Jr., executive vice president and chief financial advisor of Southwestern Bell Corp., said the cuts will help the telephone subsidiary meet its goal of reducing employment by 3,300 this year.

Hayes told the New York Society of Financial Analysts Wednesday that the 3,300 jobs being eliminated are spread across the company's five-state territory. The company employs about 65,000 people in Missouri, Texas, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

Mobil Oil signs agreement with China plant

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mobil Oil Corp. announced Wednesday it signed an agreement for the supply, blending and packaging of lube oil at a Shanghai manufacturing plant in China.

The finished products will be sold on an export basis.

Mobil Oil Hong Kong Ltd., a Mobil affiliate, and two Chinese companies, Sinopec International and Shanghai Gao-Qiao Petro Chemical International Trade Co., are involved in the pact.

Mobil currently sells imported products within China through several retail and wholesale outlets and industrial lubricants markets. Mobil also supplies products to the China Civil Aviation Administration Corp. and the China Ocean Shipping Co.

Audi recalls 132,000 1984-86 Audi 5000s

TROY, Mich. (AP) — Audi of America has announced a recall of 132,000 1984-86-model Audi 5000 cars with automatic transmissions to make an adjustment designed to avoid sudden acceleration.

The private Center for Auto Safety in Washington asked the federal government in May to issue a public alert about the cars after a pedestrian in Buffalo Grove, Ill., was struck by an Audi that reportedly accelerated unintentionally.

Audi spokesman Ed Triolo said Wednesday the company believes there is no defect in the cars that accounts for any occurrences of sudden acceleration.

ALLEN E. HOWLAND

Heard the one about the traveling poll taker?

Surveying consumer opinion is a valuable marketing tool for businesses that thrive by keeping up with the ever-changing tastes of the American people. But as with most good ideas, there is a natural tendency toward too much of a good thing.

"A new poll shows that 80 percent of Americans are sick to death of reading survey and poll results," joked David Letterman in a recent monologue opening his late-night Late Night show. If it weren't so true, it would have been funnier.

Surveying public opinion is rapidly encroaching on door-to-door religious conversion as the most annoying pastime being foisted on American people as being good for them.

Although it is possible to learn some important and/or interesting things about our fellow humans; specialization and sub-categorization of survey findings has gotten to a point which renders the results unreliable, misleading, or just plain goofy.

Any time one is faced with survey results, it is worthwhile to check a few details before putting much stock in the answers:

— WHO is sponsoring the fact-finding mission and whom are they asking? For some reason, the National Organization of Women and the National Right-to-Life Committee can each ask questions regarding abortion to a chosen audience and come out with startlingly different views of the "will of the American people".

— HOW is the survey structured and conducted? Even subtle changes in wording or couching questions to elicit yes/positive responses in line with predisposed biases of the survey can skew results. Some direct mail surveys I've been asked to take part in require a donation to the sponsoring organization "to cover processing costs". If only those who care strongly enough about the issues addressed by the survey to send money respond, the overall results will not be representative of all those receiving the questionnaire.

— WHAT generalizations and conclusions are the presenters of the data attempting to draw from their results. In some cases, pollsters will sample only one segment of the population and erroneously attempt to generalize their findings across a broader swath of the American public. In other cases, results are seemingly self-contradictory but are still of use in proving a point.

A CASE IN point is a recent Time magazine poll conducted by Yankelovich Clancy Shulman regarding American views on pornography and the Meese Commission. More people agree than disagree (47 vs. 44 percent) that sexually explicit materials "can be healthy as a marital aid."

At the same time, 65 percent of respondents believe that those materials lead people to be more sexually promiscuous.

Does that mean that there is a sizeable segment of the population who think that promiscuity is a marital aid? I hope not!

Of those polled, 43 percent said they had viewed male or female nudity in magazines at least once in the past year and 84 percent admitted to having ever seen such pictures. But 59 percent say that sales of magazines carrying nudity should be outlawed.

I guess that means that at least 2 percent of the respondents were either shown such pictures against their will or think it is up to the government to legislate the self-control they are unable to muster in ignoring nude magazines by banning their sale.

AN EXAMPLE OF a valuable, useful poll is a recent survey of Texas Certified Public Accountants on tax reform proposals and business conditions in the state. It's interesting to hear what those most knowledgeable and closest to a particular issue think.

Overwhelmingly, 85 percent of CPAs and their clients are frustrated by constantly changing tax laws, and by a 2 to 1 margin think that 'tax reform' will do nothing to simplify the tax system.

In assessing current Texas business conditions, 73 percent of those polled statewide rate today's environment as bad — and only 15 percent expect general conditions to improve in the second half of the year.

West Texas CPAs are harsher in their current assessment, but are more optimistic than their colleagues around the state. Examining West Texans' responses shows that nearly 90 percent rate present circumstances as bad; however, one in five looks for improvement in the next six months.

Another interesting finding is confirmation of something I have long suspected: Uncertainty regarding tax legislation hurts business more than the latest tax proposal would. Seventy-three percent of all Texas CPAs and 83 percent of those in West Texas agreed with that statement.

MY PROFOUND APOLOGIES to the memory of Henry David Thoreau. I truly do know that he, not Ralph Waldo Emerson as I erroneously noted last week, was the author of "Self-Reliance" and "Walden Pond". Another victim of 'Teflon Brain Syndrome' — some days nothing seems to stick.

Mobil earnings up due to Angolan sale

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mobil Corp., the second-largest U.S. oil company, reported its second-quarter earnings rose 42 percent on the sale of its interest in Angolan oil operations and other special items.

Excluding the special items, Mobil said its operating profits were down "only marginally" from last year's second quarter as stronger results in refining and marketing and chemical operations offset the impact of lower oil and gas prices.

In the second quarter Mobil earned $582 million, or $1.42 a share, up from $411 million, or $1.01 a share, in the same period last year. Revenues slipped by 14 percent to $12.2 billion from $14.3 billion.

Buffton sells o&g operations to Graham firm

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Robert H. McLean, CEO of Buffton Corp., announced that the company has completed the sale of its oil and gas operations to Talus, Inc. and Twin Montana, Inc., headquartered in Graham, Texas. Although final terms of the transaction were not disclosed, Buffton will receive 92,602 shares of its common stock in exchange for the oil and gas operations. These shares will be held as treasury stock.

In making the announcement, McLean stated that, "We believe that being completely out of the oil and gas industry will allow us to more fully concentrate on our plastics and electronics businesses."

McLean added that Buffton's plastic pipe operations were still hampered by weak pricing, although demand for its products remains high. Sales in Buffton's plastic fittings operations have risen significantly in recent months, and have been accompanied by increased profitability. The company's electronics businesses are continuing to improve, and operating profits should rise through the remainder of 1986.

LONDON (UPI) — British Gas, the state-run gas utility targeted for a stock market flotation soon, made an operating profit of the equivalent of $1.032 billion in the fiscal year ending March 31.

This represented an increase of 6 percent from last year's $976.5 million, said British Gas Chairman Sir Denis Rooke.

During the year, British Gas, gained 270,000 customers, paid the government $787.5 million in gas levies and $393 million in taxes, and it invested $856.5 million in capital projects.

British Gas is expected to be floated on the stock market around the end of the year in line with the government's policy of selling state-owned industries to the public.

Panhandle Eastern resolves Algerian LNG import dispute

HOUSTON (AP) — Panhandle Eastern Corp. announced agreements with three companies to settle all claims pending in arbitration proceedings involving a project to import liquefied natural gas from Algeria.

The Houston-based company agreed to pay $335 million to an Algerian-owned national oil and gas company as well as General Dynamics Corp. and Moore McCormack Resources Inc., in connection with a dispute over the gas purchase and transportation, Panhandle Eastern officials said.

"We are gratified that this difficult and complex problem has now been satisfactorily resolved," said Robert D. Hunsucker, Panhandle Eastern president and chief executive officer.

However, the agreement with Sonatrach, the Algerian company, is pending government approval, the company statement said.

The agreements calls for Panhandle Eastern to pay $200 million in cash and issue six million shares of company common stock to the Algerian company.

Panhandle Eastern will also renew negotiations with Sonatrach for the joint markets of the regasified Algerian liquefied natural gas in the United States, officials said.

The Houston-based company also settled with General Dynamics and Moore McCormack by agreeing to pay $135 million in cash for their interests in Lachmar, a tanker partnership owned by the three companies.

The settlements will result in a net after-tax charge to Panhandle Eastern earnings in the second quarter of about $460 million or $8.95 per share, according to the statement.

The abitration proceedings stemmed from an alleged breach of agreements for the purchase and transportation of the Algerian liquefied natural gas.

LTV, Ameropan to solve oil dispute

NEW YORK (AP) — Ameropan Oil Corp. will seek its money from LTV Corp. as a reclamation creditor, meaning the company will not have to wait in line with other creditors in LTV's Chapter 11 filing, attorneys say.

Barry Dichter, an attorney for Ameropan, a small independent company in Syossett, N.Y., had claimed that when Dallas-based LTV realized it would seek bankruptcy protection, it stockpiled oil and created a fuel bill it knew could only be collected in court.

"What LTV did is an outrage," said Dichter. "Without any consideration whatsoever for the business of the creditors, LTV went on a wild buying spree."

LTV officials, who filed a Chapter 11 petition under federal bankruptcy laws last Thursday, refused comment. Ameropan filed an adversary suit Friday. The two side agreed on the reclamation method Tuesday.

Reclamation creditors can claim that they delivered their products within only a few days fo the filing and should get their money back more quickly than other creditors.

More than 100 creditors have filed to reclaim their assets, Dichter said.

Ameropan provided LTV Steel operations in east Chicago with more than half the No. 6 oil used by the steel company, said Peter Wittich, son of the company's founder and a company official.

In the weeks before its Chapter 11, LTV increased its orders of oil from the company, Wittich said. Ameropan delivered oil worth more than $350,000 just before the filing.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Some banks, agents need bond buyers' SS numbers

By BILL DOYLE

Q. On at least two occasions, you wrote, "There is no legitimate way to transfer the federal income tax liability on accrued U.S. Savings Bond interest from one living person to another living person." That was in reply to parents and grandparents who wanted to give old savings bonds to youngsters.

The idea, of course, was to have the children cash the bonds and, because they have no other income, pay little or no income tax. You explained such a change in ownership is a "taxable event" and the person making a gift of old bonds is required to pay federal income tax on the interest accrued on the bonds up to that time.

Your use of the word "legitimate" intrigues me. Is there some illegitimate way to do this?

Doyle

A. Surely, you don't expect me to endorse tax evasion. Nonetheless, here's how some foxy folks have accomplished that with savings bonds issued before Oct. 1, 1973.

Until that date, savings bond buyers were not required to provide their Social Security numbers. Some banks and other savings bond issuing agents requested buyers' SS numbers, but it was not a requirement.

Savings bonds in single-ownership form can be reissued in co-ownership form, with the original owner and someone else as co-owners. That's not a taxable event. If there were no SS numbers on the old bonds, either co-owner's SS number can be put on the reissued bonds.

When the bonds are redeemed after that change to co-ownership, Internal Revenue Service computers will trace the tax liability on the accrued interest to the co-owner whose SS number was put on those bonds.

If that co-owner is a child or someone else with little or no other taxable income, he or she will be hit with a small tax — or none at all.

This ploy is illegitimate as all get out. I'm sure all readers of this column are simon-pure taxpayers and would never even consider using it.

Q. I have more than $8,000 of Series E U.S. Savings Bonds dating back to the 1940s. I bought them while I was in the Navy and later at a job I got. How can I cash them, without sitting around the bank all day, while the value of bonds is figured out?

A. You'll have only a short stay at the bank, while the teller or other person looks through the a table of redemption values and cashes your bonds. No problem.

But you do have a problem if your Navy service was in World War II, meaning that some of your bonds are more than 40 years old. The oldest E bonds reach "final maturity" and stop accumulating interest 40 years after their issue dates.

More important, you are required to report accrued E bond interest on the federal income tax return you file for the year in which E bonds reach final maturity — even if you don't redeem them.

For example, if some of your bonds were issued in 1943, you were supposed to report the accrued interest on those bonds on your 1983 return. Assuming you didn't, you should file an amended return — Form 1040X — to stay square with the Internal Revenue Service.

Q. Some of my Series E bonds are more than 40 years old, meaning they have passed their final maturity. Rather than redeem them and pay federal income tax on their accumulated interest, can't I exchange them for Series HH bonds?

A. You can, if those bonds are less than 41 years old. The oldest E bonds can be exchanged for HH bonds for one year after their 40-year final maturity.

By making the exchange, you will postpone paying federal income tax on the old E bond interest until you redeem the HH bonds you receive, or until those HHs mature. The HHs currently being issued have 10-year maturities.

The HHs pay 7.5 percent annual interest, by check twice a year. That interest is subject to federal income tax.

Cruisers bid farewell to hub as shopping mall moves in

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hundreds of cruisers descended on Kevin's restaurant for one last burger and a spin through the big parking lot before the hub of the San Fernando Valley cruising scene makes way for a shopping mall.

Classic-car owner Bill Beelow and others got nostalgic in 1982 and decided the burger stand had just the right feel for a hangout.

"We asked the owner if we could meet there," said Dave Prey of the Happy Daze Car Club. "He said OK. We got together and one of our members hooked up a sound system and started playing the old stuff, like 'shoo-bop, shoo-bop' music."

"I think the town really needs something like this for people to show their cars," he said.

Kevin's owner Shou Wei may have come up with a solution. He opened another Kevin's in the nearby suburb of Canoga Park.

Coming for to carry me home

The Trailways Corp. has carried more than 10,000 runaway youths back to their homes and families, free of charge, since in inaugurated its social service program, Operation: Home Free, in June, 1984.

The program, initiated in cooperation with the International Association of Chiefs of Police, is designed to give runaways a means by which they can escape life on the streets after having run away from home.

Any child, 18 years of age or younger, who wishes to return home under Operation: Home Free and who is confirmed as a missing person by any officer of the court, is issued a free ticket to their home town aboard Trailways. Since announcing the program two years ago, an average of 15 youngsters take advantage of the program daily.

Annually, between 730,000 and 1.8 million children are listed as missing, the IACP says. Many are runaways who find life on the streets difficult and dangerous. Police say these youngsters eventually turn to illegal activities to obtain the funds necessary to survive.

Heartening breakthrough

About 700,000 victims of heart attacks reach the emergency rooms of U.S. hospitals each year. Many of those victims are being chosen at random to be part of a clinical study of a new anticlot treatment with a drug called Activase.

If Activase is approved by the Food and Drug Administration early next year, as some predict, it could be the launch-pad for a great leap forward by its manufacturer, Genetech, Inc. of South San Francisco, CA., from a largely scientific research company to a major manufacturer of pharmaceuticals.

Two New York men, experiencing chest pains and having difficulty breathing, were admitted and after four hours of Activase therapy, each man, who had a heart artery closing, had the artery rapidly opened and threatening blood clots were dissolved. Each man's heart attack was "stopped in its tracks," leaving the patients with only minor damage to the heart muscles, according to Dr. Hiltrud Mueller, a cardiologist who heads up the test team.

Skinny pills

No more fat! Painless and easy removal of fat? Impossible? Not according to Brad Wallum of the University of Washington in Seattle. Research by Wallum and his colleagues has developed a pill that uses a synthetic insulin to fool the brain into believing the stomach is full that could prove to be a real diet aid for overweight people.

The research has shown that insulin, a protein hormone that helps regulate the amount of sugar in the blood, plays a critical role in tripping the body's 'satiety signal' and dampens the hunger pangs that can wreak havoc on the best of dietary intentions.

Consumers look forward to low heating bills

By VIVIAN MARINO
AP Business Writer

The drop in oil prices may mean American consumers will see some of the lowest heating bills in recent years when it comes time to put away their air conditioners in favor of sweaters and blankets, energy experts predict.

"We will see some of the lowest prices, not only from oil but from natural gas, too," Michael Smolinski, director of world oil service for Data Resouces Inc. of Lexington, Mass., said Tuesday.

A Department of Energy information specialist, who refused to be identified, said the agency forecasts that the average price of heating oil would be 79 cents per gallon in the fourth quarter of this year and 85 cents in the first quarter of 1987, the peak of the heating season.

Prices in 1985 averaged $1.05 per gallon. As recently as 1981, the price was $1.19 per gallon, up from a low 70-cent-per-gallon average in 1979.

Crude oil prices, which were nearly $32 per barrel in November, are now hovering between $10 and $12 a barrel, and some analysts predict they could go even lower in a volatile market where frequent price swings often occur.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, wholesale contracts for August delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the best-known U.S. crude, dropped $2 a barrel Tuesday to $11.07 per gallon. Home heating oil closed at 33.63 cents per gallon from the 35.56-cent closing Monday.

The 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will meet again July 28 to try to devise a system to limit production, estimated at between 19 million and 19.5 million barrels a day, to prop up prices.

Several industry experts were split as to whether the cartel would reach an agreement and how it would affect prices on the retail level.

"Even if they make an agreement, there's no certainty it will be tight enough to affect the price level," said John Lichtblau, president of Petroleum Industry Research Foundation Inc. in New York.

"The oil war could continue and crude oil prices could go lower than they are now," said Smokinski.

But Dan Lundberg, who tracks the oil and gas industry in his weekly Lundberg Letter, predicted prices wouldn't drop much lower than they are now and that eventually they would rise.

Some analysts say the DOE's latest projections for heating oil prices during the coming heating season appeared to be on the conservative side, and that prices most of the winter could hover between 70 and 80 cents per gallon.

And "if it's a warm winter, it'll be a disaster for the oil industry," said Carol Epstein, managing editor of the industry publication International Petroleum Finance.

Smokinski said natural gas prices could decline 15 percent to 20 percent from a year ago to keep competitive with the oil market.

Although oil prices have dropped sharply this year over last, few U.S. consumers have filled up tanks in preparation for colder months, according to Lundberg. "People do not seem to buy because the price goes down. When prices go up they're very sensitive. When they go down they're complacent."

Distributors also aren't rushing to buy in any great numbers, he said. "The cost of storing, the cost to maintain high inventories has now become so serious that there's almost sort of a load-to-load attitude among many distbutors.

"When they think prices are going to go up in the next few days or few weeks it will start to build their inventories."

But in Europe it has been a different story, said Lichtblau. Consumers and distributors in Germany and Switzerland, in particular, have stockpiled oil because a lower dollar made prices there even lower than they were here.

New car sales drop 7.8 percent

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — American-built new car sales slipped 7.8 percent in mid-July despite continuation of consumer-incentive programs by the major domestic manufacturers, the industry reported Wednesday.

The seven U.S. auto makers sold 177,659 cars, a daily average of 22,207, from July 11 through July 20, down from 216,696, or 24,077 cars a day, sold in the comparable 1985 period. The year-to-year comparison is based on a daily selling rate because there were eight selling days in the mid-July period this year compared to nine in 1985.

Analysts said they had expected stronger sales but warned against reading too much into a single 10-day sales report. "It could be a 10-day period that just fell between the cracks of the incentive programs," said Harvey Heinbach of Merrill Lynch.

Detroit's Big Three manufacturers, which have propped up sales by sporadically offering incentives all year, announced earlier this month that they would expand their current programs and extend them through September, when the 1987 model-year cars are introduced. The programs were scheduled to end in early July.

"It would be a problem for the manufacturers if this period were more than an aberration," Heinbach said, "but it's too early to draw drastic conclusions."

Of the major domestic auto makers, only No. 3 Chrysler fared well, with sales up 4.1 percent over the year-ago period, an increase it attributed to aggressive marketing. General Motors reported a 9.9 percent sales decline while Ford sales slipped 5.4 percent.

Chrysler alone among the Big Three has not followed the lead of Japanese manufacturers in raising prices.

Of the smaller manufacturers, only American Honda reported an increase for the period, up 15.8 percent. American Motors said its sales were off 54.6 percent, and Volkswagen U.S. reported a 38.9 percent decline (Nissan U.S. is reporting sales monthly until it completes re-tooling and resumes domestic production).

Seasonally adjusted, domestic new cars sold at an annual rate of 7.5 million in mid-July. That is down substantially from 8.1 million for the 1985 period, not to mention the 8.8 million posted earlier this month.

(The annual rate is a reflection of the number of cars that would be sold if a given period's sales pace were to continue for a full year.)

Ford earnings pass $1 billion

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. Thursday reported record second-quarter earnings of nearly $1.08 billion, breaking the billion-dollar barrier for the first time and making Ford alone among the Big Three automakers to post an increase in profits from year-ago levels.

The No. 2 carmaker's net income rose 54 percent from $698.7 million in the 1985 second quarter. Net income per share soared 61 percent to $4.02 a share from $2.50 a share a year ago, with the latest per share adjusted to reflect a 3-for-2 stock split declared last April.

Worldwide sales rose 25 percent to $17.3 billion from $13.8 billion a year ago.

Lone Star employees obtain federal order

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — Former employees of Lone Star Steel Co. and its subsidiaries obtained a federal court order that temporarily bars their former employers from obtaining control of pension funds.

The order, which was issued Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Robert Parker in federal court in Marshall, resulted from two class action lawsuits initiated earlier this month.

The suits were filed July 11 against the companies by more than 2,000 terminated salaried employees of the Lone Star-affiliated companies. The workers seek company retirement benefits they say they never received.

Parker's order is effective until a Sept. 22 hearing to examine the workers' claims for retirement benefits from Lone Star, T&N Industries and other subsidiaries.

As a result of the order, the companies cannot proceed with a reported plan to liquidate the pension programs, which have an estimated value of $12 million. The companies also cannot appropriate the funds for other uses.

Franklin Jones of Marshall, an attorney for the workers, said no disruption of pension benefits being paid to retirees of Lone Star companies will occur.

Parker indicated Wednesday that he issued the order to give attorneys for both sides more time to prepare their arguments.

David Noteware of Dallas, an attorney representing Lone Star companies, said the company feels the workers are in error.

The first suit was filed by E.B. Goolsby and Coy L. Payne, both former Lone Star Steel workers, on behalf of more than 1,500 former Lone Star Steel employees.

The defendants named in that lawsuit include Lone Star Steel; the pension committee which administers the Lone Star Steel pension plan; and the Northern Trust Co. of Illinois — a trustee of the Lone Star Steel Master Retirement Trust which funds the Lone Star Steel pension plan for salaried personnel.

The second lawsuit was filed by Jerry L. Hatten and Nathan L. Pilcher, both former employees of T&N-affiliated commpanies on behalf of more than 650 former employees of T&N Industries or its susidiaries.

Orders to U.S. manufacturers have been weak for most of this year as American factories have continued to face heavy foreign competition. Last month, however, orders were up for both civilian and defense goods.

On consumer prices, the Labor Department offered these other statistics for June:

—Natural gas and electricity prices increased 2.6 percent after a 0.6 percent decline in May. Heating oil, coal and bottled gas prices fell 1.8 percent after a 4.4 percent drop in May.

—Fruit and vegetable prices fell 2.8 percent after a 1.9 percent rise in May, while meats, fish and egg prices gained 1 percent after a 0.3 percent May increase.

—New car prices, which have been climbing throughout the year, rose 0.6 percent while used car prices were down 0.4 percent.

The Consumer Price Index had fallen a seasonally adjusted 0.3 percent in April, 0.4 percent in March and 0.4 percent in February. In January, it rose 0.3 percent.

'Perpetual motion' machine may be most famous yet

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — "Joseph Newman's device," as government scientists gingerly refer to the contraption, may be the most successful perpetual-motion machine ever invented.

Not that scientists are convinced it really works. It's just that it has succeeded in getting more attention, much of it exasperated, from the Commerce Department's Patent and Trademark Office, from scientists at the National Bureau of Standards, from the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia and from the news media than any such device in recent memory.

Newman, a self-taught inventor from Lucedale, Miss., has been battling for nearly seven years to obtain a patent on his machine, which he claims produces more electrical energy than it consumes from a battery pack.

The patent office, without testing the device, rejected his application on the grounds that the invention's claimed ability contradicts accepted laws of nature, specifically the Second Law of Thermodynamics.

Newman, arguing that his invention does not contradict scientific law but instead taps a previously unknown source of energy, has sued the patent office. The trial is scheduled for December.

Patent office officials will not comment on the Newman affair but do say that lawsuits from disgruntled inventors are rare. Of 120,000 patent applications received in a typical year, about 40,000 are rejected, but the office is sued only about 100 times a year. Newman's suit is the only one patent officials can remember in which the invention was judged impossible because it would violate a law of nature.

The court ordered Newman to submit his machine for testing by the National Bureau of Standards, also a Commerce Department agency, which has long experience in evaluating electrical equipment.

After spending more than $75,000 to test the device, the bureau last week submitted a 36-page report to the court that concluded, "At all conditions tested, the input power exceeded the output power. That is, the device did not deliver more energy than it used." The machine's efficiency varied according to the test conditions, with output ranging between 27 percent and 67 percent of the energy consumed.

Newman alleges that the bureau rigged its test to obscure the machine's true performance and vows that if the District Court rules against him, he will carry his fight for a patent to the Supreme Court. He asserts that the science establishment is so beholden to its own interpretation of the Second Law that it cannot accept his "revolutionary" discovery.

In colloquial terms, the Second Law of Thermodynamics says that you can't get something for nothing. More formally, it says that in every process some of the energy consumed is lost forever, most commonly as heat. The amount of energy put out by any machine, therefore, is equal to the amount put in minus certain unavoidable losses within the system.

Although the greatest minds in physics have repeatedly affirmed the Second Law, this has not stopped some inventors from thinking that, if they are clever enough, they can find a design that eliminates all internal power losses.

Newman claims to have gone one better by making a machine that creates additional energy. Newman says that in his own lab, his devices are 400 to 500 percent efficient, putting out four to five times as much energy as they take in.

The key, Newman says, is that his machine, like an atomic reactor or a hydrogen bomb, converts matter into energy. The matter in this case is something Newman discovered and named "gyroscopic particles." These, according to Newman's theory of atomic physics, are building blocks of the usual subatomic particles — protons, neutrons and electrons.

Newman's discovery has not been embraced by the scientific community. However, he says his experiments have convinced him that gyroscopic particles exist in all forms of matter and that his machine simply captures their energy and channels it into wires as electricity.

Dam project has problem if U.S. Fish and Wildlife list snake as endangered

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

BALLINGER — As the country song, "Cool Water" poured from a speaker system, about 600 West Texans packed into the Ballinger High School auditorium to denounce an environmental impact statement on the Stacy Dam.

Judges and mayors mingled with farmers and oilmen Wednesday night while waiting to comment on the dam's draft Environmental Impact Statement by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

In its draft, the corps says the habitat of a proposed endangered species — the Concho water snake — may be threatened by the $68 million reservoir.

The dam will supply West Texas with water that is predicted to run out by 1990, according to the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The project, scheduled to begin in May 1987, may be delayed if the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service lists the snake as an endangered species.

Odessa Mayor Don Carter was among more than 50 speakers who vented their anger at the snake during the public hearing.

"The rights and privileges of the sorriest individual of our city is more important than a train load of these snakes," Carter said, as he tossed a pair of plastic snakes to Lt. Col. Robert Keenan, corps deputy district engineer.

Denying the Stacy Dam permit, Carter said, "Would have the same effect of us turning off the valves of the West Texas oil fields."

"The rights and privileges of the sorriest individual of our city is more important than a train load of these snakes," Carter said, as he tossed a pair of plastic snakes to Lt. Col. Robert Keenan, corps deputy district engineer.

Odessa is a member of the water district, which owns the dam.

City officials from Midland, which are paying $11.1 million for a 16.5 percent share of the dam's water, also delivered a City Council resolution in support of the project.

District General Manager Owen Ivie said West Texas would lose more than $80 billion by 2040 if the permit is denied.

"Those preparing this document have entirely failed to recognize the catastrophic consequences to West Texas if approval of the Stacy Dam is denied," he said.

The draft proposes six alternative sites for a reservoir, but Ivie said the district has no water rights at these sites.

Stacy Dam also would yield 25 percent more water than any of the alternatives, he said.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is unwilling to work with the district on solving the snake problem, Ivie said.

"We have repeatedly offered to join with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in working out a plan to minimize impacts on the preferred habitat of the Concho water snake.

"But the Fish and Wildlife Service is unwilling to discuss this issue at all," Ivie said.

Concho County Judge Charles Dankworth told the corps their document was "full of mistakes."

"Everything in this little book is wrong. It's either us or the snake.

"We've been looking 30 to 35 years for the Stacy Dam. Right on the verge of having everything come true, here comes a wiggly animal," Dankworth said.

Even the National Audubon Society was critical of the draft.

Murray Walton, Southwest regional representative of the society, said the draft did not propose four logical alternatives to the reservoir.

Water conservation, use of effluent to irrigate, and use of existing dam water, surface and groundwater were not mentioned in the draft, Walton said.

Letters and comments at the hearing will be included in the final draft statement scheduled to be completed in October, Hathorn said.

The corps will accept comments on its draft statement until Sept. 2, and then make a final decision on issuing the dam permit by December, he said.

Strategy would give airport global status

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

Disappointed last year when the federal government rejected a bid to make Midland Regional Airport an international port of entry, officials have regrouped and devised a new strategy.

The strategy, being fine-tuned by the Midland Chamber of Commerce and other city officials, would enable the airport to literally buy its international status.

If successful, Midland Regional Airport — a name which some say lacks prestige — would become an international airport.

The Midland chamber is scheduled to meet with Odessa representatives later this month.

Such a move, backers of the plan say, would enhance the airport's image and help boost a sagging Permian Basin economy.

But a major drawback may be the price tag.

It would cost some $73,000 the first year and $50,000 annually thereafter.

Currently, no one knows who would foot the bill.

"We're looking into it," said Steve Hardin, who oversees the chamber's economic development program. "It's something we are hoping to take advantage of."

The idea surfaced last year after the Department of Treasury told Midland airport officials they did not meet requirements for becoming an international port of entry.

"It was a major disappointment," said Victor White, chief of the regional airport. "But we just started too late. With the federal government cutting back on its budget, it (being an international port of entry) was difficult to obtain.

"The U.S. Customs just could not afford to open up and staff the airport."

So White said Wednesday officials were forced to switch to what they called "Plan B".

The plan centered around a 1984 law which could give airports a port of entry when they otherwise would not qualify.

"It is called the airport designated user fee," said Dick Coleman, a program analyst with U.S. Customs in Washington D.C. "The government is watching its wasteline, and we must justify taxpayer service.

"This law is to permit service to airports which are willing to reimburse the federal government."

Coleman said five U.S. airports are now operating under the law including cities such as Fargo, N.D., and Fort Myers, Fla.

A sixth city, Santa Teresa, N.M., also has been approved but is not operating.

Coleman said his department can only approve 14 more slots under the law.

If Midland was approved, the airport would pay $73,350 the first year for the cost of full-time customs inspector salary and other expenses.

In addition, the airport would agree to pay $50,112 annually beginning the second year. That would cover the inspectors' salary and his office's overhead.

A customs' inspector is needed for cargo and other commerce shipped into and out of the United States.

Board trustee head says he has not quit

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

William "Hoyle" McCright Jr. Wednesday said he has not resigned his seat on the Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees after being indicted by a Midland federal grand jury.

McCright, retired executive vice president and former director of the defunct First National Bank of Midland and president of the college board of trustees, was indicted Tuesday for embezzlement, fraudulent participation in a loan and making false bank reports and entries.

"I have not done that (resigned)," McCright told the Reporter-Telegram during a telephone conversation Wednesay.

The 61-year-old McCright was elected to the nine-member board in 1973 when the Midland Junior College District was created.

He became the sixth former Midland-Odessa banker to be indicted as the result of Federal Bureau of Investigation probes into banking procedures in the area since 1985.

Reports circulated Wednesday that McCright had submitted his resignation, but college trustees rejected it.

Defense coalition director says we're 'nuclear nudists'

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

The United States appears impotent in the U.S.-U.S.S.R. arms race because it's a victim of Soviet thermo-nuclear blackmail, said Colleen Parro, national field director for the Dallas-based Coalition for the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Ms. Parro said the State Department feels threatened by the Soviet's nuclear advantage and makes policy decisions based on that intimidation.

Ms. Parro spoke at the Midland Downtown Lions Club meeting Wednesday on the need to advance President Reagan's SDI program, more commonly known as "Star Wars."

"When I became involved in the SDI movement, I was floored to discover that the U.S. has no defense against the might of the Soviet nuclear arsenal — we are nuclear nudists."

Ms. Parro said Soviets have been working on a space-based nuclear defense system for the past 17 years, while the U.S. only began studying its feasibility in 1976.

Ms. Parro also claimed the U.S. did not acquire any new nuclear weapons between 1972 and 1982.

"President Reagan felt the U.S. couldn't defend itself against a Soviet nuclear attack and in 1980 commissioned the 'High Frontier' study.

"The study's findings — that America did possess the technology to develop a space-based defense and render nuclear weapons obsolete — were announced during Reagan's televised speech on March 23, 1983," Ms. Parro said.

Parro claimed two-thirds of the world is Communist and run by the "evil empire" of the Soviet Union.

Likening Mikhail Gorbachev to Adolph Hitler, Ms. Parro said of Soviet leadership, "They rule by force, murder, intimidation and fear.

"Their relentless pursuit of world domination won't stop until they've surrounded the U.S. and forced our ultimate surrender."

Misadventures will lack 'glitter and remorse'

The misadventures of Edwardo Toddlinsky are soon to ripen again. I'm going to "hit the road" and grace Midland with my absence and curse some other parts of the country with my misguided intentions.

In that regard, I've done well by my vacations in the past. They wouldn't make exciting travelogues, but they were not totally drab. I was no Huckleberry Finn.

In the 1940s, my older brother and I propped tin cans on the highway near Wingo, Ky., and surreptitiously watched from an embankment, as cars barreled down the highway and flattened them. That was our vacation's highlight — outside of riding in Uncle Jim's buggy, eating green apples and getting lost at night in Dad's 1936 or 1941 Chevy.

We got a thrill out of the sight and sound of cars running over the tins. Dad never caught us; we never told. Once, though, we got caught throwing mud balls at passing cars in East Delta. An unhumored driver, whose car we scored some direct hits on, stopped in the middle of the muddy road and spewed angry words at us. We didn't understand. His car already was bogged down in mud and was mud-splattered before we got ahold of it.

Another time, we caught a ferry across the Mississippi River, and my younger brother got his wish by adding a tidbit — trickle by trickle — to the river's water level. That was memorable.

On a holiday in Europe in the late 1950s, I lost count of my intake of beer and brandy and ended up embarrassed on the bus. But I made it to church that night — quite oblivious to the stench and to what the clergyman said. At least I had the sense to sit in the backsliders' pew at back.

In London, I recall getting propositioned near Hyde Park, was flattered at her offer, and declined before I priced the merchandise.

In remember getting so drunk in Barcelona that I drank myself sober, or so I thought, inhaled foul-smelling strong cigarettes, was fascinated by the saw-dust covered bar-room floors, and smoked seafood on the bars. I recall looking into the eyes of the carcass of a fish, while I ate his whole body and washed the morsels down with red wine. It must have been cheap but effective. The meal and room were $2 a day.

I didn't then know that anything was kosher. I ate it all — cooked, or not so well done. Anything in bottles and well fermented, I drank.

In Lisbon, I slept on a straw mattress.

My next vacation came years later, in the 1960s, when I picked up a shackled-to-me female companion, namely my wife. This time, the trip was to gay old New Orleans and the French Quarter. The most exciting feature of the trip was watching the fog and mist settle over the gothic cemetery, getting highly soused in bars full of atmosphere (defined as darkness, music and loud talk), and getting our cat locked in the veterinarian's shop. Our common interest was the cat, seeing who could be the most civil, and seeing who could not fall down first from having such a good time by imbibing hearty drink from the tap and bottle.

Another time, my younger brother and I and our Dad and spouses holed up in the Excelsior Hotel in historic old Jefferson in East Texas. We had a good time thinking about Jay Gould's adventures and ambitions, looking over the river boat and antebellum houses, and mostly behaving ourselves while entertaining an attitude of misbehaving.

Some years later, while indeed misbehaving with a woman not my spouse, I took a meandering trip — an extended holiday from the piney wood of East Texas to the mountains Alpine to the hills of San Francisco and northward and eastward from there. I was approaching euphoria or so I thought. (I must explain — to retain a tinge of honor — that my original spouse by then was an ex. Others were to follow down Rogue's Row.) The holiday ended up in Chicago, which at that time was the antithesis of delight and but was not without excitement. The most memorial thing on that outing were disasters: a marriage and a burglary. I, the rascal, wedded this gal, the could-have-been fashion model. But before my heart turned to the coldness which singer Hank Williams wrote about, some other jerk made off with my beloved Scout and goods attached to the four-wheel-drive vehicle. That really upset me and the bride, who by then was weeping over a lost and fading love and romance. That vacation really turned into a misadventure which still is reverberating in my healing soul.

Since then, I've returned to New Orleans without spouse, really behaved, ate ice cream, passed up the booze, and steamed up and down Mark Twain's Mississippi. I've not yet returned to Europe to see if behaving is as much fun as misbehaving. I have no desire to return to California. But this October, I'm going to join other Midland runners in Chicago for a marathon there on a mini-vacation. There will be no sentiment there from bygone years.

Today, my vacations are without the glitter and remorse of bars and booze. Still, I try to put the romance of adventure and excitement in them without disturbing the peace and without evoking the wails of another woman in distress over an errant, cold-hearted lover.

This year, my split vacation is going to be full of running in Fort Davis and Chicago, checking out a life-expanding seminar in Wichita Falls, revisiting New Orleans and my brothers and their spouses. I'll not entertain any of my ex-wives, who surely are full of gratitude that this rascal is out of their lives. On another road trip, I'll speed up to Oklahoma to revel with an old drinking buddy but without imbibing a dram.

Dancer's skin transforms him into full-fledged cosmetic entrepreneur

By BOB DARDEN

WACO (AP) — Jerry MacLauchlin is a Waco dancer-choreographer with a list of credits as long as the stage in Radio City Music Hall. He's danced and produced shows from Los Angeles to New York and had the same problem everywhere: his skin. Stage makeup just brutalized it.

The difference between MacLauchlin and all of the hoofers and gypsies before him is that he did something about it.

MacLauchlin left Waco in 1982 afer establishing a summer dinner theater and working on what would become the Waco Hippodrome. He continued dancing and producing, but took a job with an Austin chemical company where he met a number of chemists.

"Over the years of touring, I'd been trying everything to repair what makeup does to our skin," he said. "Little bottles of lanolin, rose oil, whatever. Anyway, I met this semi-retired chemist who had perfected this new process. He'd tried to take it to some of the big chemical companies but found that most chemists there just can't afford to rock the boat.

"Well, I tried this stuff out, and it worked! First time ever. So I turned into an investigative cosmetic reporter."

In 1983, MacLauchlin said it looked like there was a market for men's skin treatments, so he began talking to other chemists, dermatologists, physicians, the FDA and various "maverick entrepreneurs."

"I've filled an entire filing cabinet full of various claims and counterclaims about skin treatments," he said. "The whole process just intrigued me to no end, and I ended up bugging all of those people with questions for years. When a new product would come out, I turned into some kind of cosmetic reporter, comparing what they say to what they actually did and what they were composed of.

"Finally, I was convinced that this guy's formula was something special. He made up small batches for doctors and dermatologists in Dallas and California in the past, and they all swore by it. But it was packaged weird and the chemist wasn't really interested in doing anything with it. That's when I thought marketing!"

All of MacLauchlin's research led him to believe that his fledgling company would have to have more than just one application of the product, so he continued working with various chemists.

"We'd work something up, send it off to various friends with different problems and check the results," he said. "Whether it was repairing skin damage or just maintenance, they all agreed: It worked.

"It was just trial and error after that. The buyers of the big department stores convinced me we need creams and shaving creams and sprays and aloes and the works, so I had to adapt the product for all of those applications and the whole thing took four years of my life going back and forth to laboratories, checking out batches, checking things with the FDA. I feel like I ought to be given a doctorate in cosmetic chemistry now."

During all of this, MacLauchlin continued dancing in shows and teaching dancing, as well as coming down one day a week to choreograph the Baylor Showtime troupe with Leta Horan.

"When we were all finished, we called what we had DermaTech Systems and started with an entire line of men's facial products," he said. A women's line also was being readied for the market this summer.

"We did the men first because there's been sort of a tradition of men abusing their faces — then looking up one day and their wives looking 20 years younger.

MacLauchlin said DermaTech products are made from a number of organic chemicals that have been buffered down, as well as some plant extracts. One of the main ingredients is what MacLauchlin calls a "semi-discovery," a moisturizer with the chemical name of NaPCA.

"NaPCA occurs naturally in the skin, but most people lose it by the time they are 23," he said. "It grabs moisture. You can put just a little in the desert and at the end of the day you've get a small puddle of water.

"Some of the ingredients to make the other products in the line are pretty expensive. We pay something like $8,000 a kilo for one in particular."

MacLauchlin sank his savings into DermaTech and found a number of friends who were interested in investing in the company — along with "a couple maverick entrepreneur types."

To save money, he designed the plexi-glass-lucite packaging and logo and has spent the last four years putting together brochures, working with chemists and the silk screen company that is producing the containers and designs, and promoting and selling the line to stores. He says it has been like producing 12 plays in succession.

DermaTech is sold at several Texas department stores and has been offered to major stores in New York.

MacLauchlin, president of DermaTech, attributes what success the company's already enjoyed to "that good old American entrepreneurial spirit."

City budget to list salary reductions

From Staff Reports

The 1986-87 proposed city budget was officially submitted Wednesday to City Secretary Bill Clanton.

The budget included an overall 8 percent reduction from this year's budget and a salary reduction for city employees.

Also, the city did not raise its property tax rate of 39.88 cents per $100 valuation.

The budget is for the fiscal year which begins Oct. 1.

City officials said there will be no reduction in essential services, but added that the budget allows for no expansion.

The salary reduction includes a 2 percent cut for those making less than $35,000 annually. Those earning $35,000 or more must take a 5 percent reduction.

The proposal will be considered again Aug. 26 during the City Council's budget hearings.

Industrial tour of Mexican state has been postponed

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An industrial tour of the Mexican state of Chihuahua July 28 through 31, by representatives of the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce and members of the Permian Basin International Trade Forum, has been postponed.

According to Chuck Bernhard, several of the people scheduled to go on the trip were apprehensive about political unrest in Mexico and reports concerning the possible existence of terrorist training camps south of the U.S. border.

The group had been scheduled to leave Odessa Monday morning and fly to Parral where they were to be guests of Parral government and business officials at a reception and dinner Monday evening.

Tuesday's activities were to include a tour of Parral, its industrial facilities and industrial park.

Following a working luncheon session with area businessmen, including exhibitions by local industries, the group was to travel to Chihuahua City.

Wednesday's activities were to include meetings with officials of the Chihuahuanese industrial promotion organization and a morning working session with local business people.

The group was also to tour the Chihuahuanese industrial park and Ford Motor Co. plant.

Bernhard said he had been in contact with Mexican officials who he said informed him they understood the concern of some of those who had planned to make the trip. He said he expected the trip to be rescheduled at a later date.

Public opinion poll shows Smith in lead

From Staff Reports

A public opinion poll shows Republican Lamar Smith leading Pete Snelson in the 21st Congressional District.

The poll, released by the Lamar Smith For Congress committee, was taken from a random sample of 400 voters.

The margin of error was plus or minus 5 percent.

When asked who they would vote for if the election was held today, the poll showed 50 percent selecting Smith and 25 percent for Snelson.

The remaining 25 percent of the people said they were undecided.

"We don't think the numbers are believable," said Snelson, a Midland resident.

"We are very happy with the status of our campaign, and we feel very good about our position."

Two youths remain in detention over fatal shooting of Midlander, Police say

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two teen-agers remained in the Ector County Youth Center in connection with the fatal shooting of a 23-year-old Midland man.

Police spokesman John McAhon said the two youths, ages 15 and 16, were taken into custody Wednesday afternoon by officers and turned over to juvenile authorities.

Rodney Terril Sims, 927 E. Monahans St., and Victor Charles Perkins, 406 E. Odessa St., both 20-years-old, were arraigned Tuesday before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly on charges of murder in the death of Blaise A. Nesser. Weatherly set bond at $25,000 each. Sims and Perkins remained in the Ector County jail in lieu of bond today.

Nesser, 5101 N. Ave. A, was shot once in the face with a small caliber gun when he reportedly refused to turn over whatever money he had to four men he and three companions had met earlier.

McAhon said Nesser and his three friends had left a bowling alley shortly after midnight Sunday and met the four other men at the intersection of East 42nd Street and Dawn Avenue.

After stopping briefly on the parking lot of Permian High School, Nesser and his friends followed the other four to the Rondavoo Club at the intersection of Fitch Avenue and Lubbock Street, where one of the men went into the club for a few minutes.

When the man returned Nesser and his companions followed the other car to the 1100-block of Blackshear Street, near the old Blackshear Stadium field house and parked the two cars about 1:20 a.m. Sunday.

According to police reports, the four men men got out of their car, approached Nesser and his friends and demanded money. Nesser apparently was shot when he refused to comply, police said.

He was taken to Medical Center Hospital where he was pronounced dead about 8:10 a.m.

NUCLEAR

Ms. Parro said the "threat of mutual assured destruction," (neither country will strike first because both fear annihalation), is not an adequate deterrent to Soviets.

"The Soviet SS-18 missiles alone, which can hit 10 to 12 targets each and are twice as big as MX missiles, could wipe out 90 percent of the U.S. missile bases, rendering it unable to strike back," Ms. Parro said.

"This would leave the president in a position of retaliation using what little defense we had left at sea or surrendering to the Soviets."

Ms. Parro said the proposed SDI program would have satellites orbiting on two levels in outer space as well as an on-ground network.

She said the space-based satellites would be equipped with non-nuclear rockets and laser beams capable of knocking out missiles during the boost phase.

The ground base would consist of jet rockets that shoot projectiles at missiles, shattering them before they hit the earth, Ms. Parro said.

"We believe this is a concept of assured survival — it wouldn't harm the hair on one Russian's head.

"The program could be partially in business in six years," Ms. Parro said.

She said space shuttles would deploy spaced-based satellites, but added if shuttle flights are postponed, work could begin on ground base operations.

"The destiny of man lies in space.

"The SDI would also assure the U.S. the ability to conquer the commercialization of outer space in the future," Ms. Parro said.

An article published in Wednesday's Dallas Morning News, stated the "Star Wars" shield could cost up to $770 billion.

Ms. Parro said the study, headed by Harold Brown, defense secretary in Carter's administration, was done by "apostles of the mutual assured destruction theory — left-wing liberals who want to hurt the progress of SDI and think all can be solved by negotiations with the Soviets."

She said a more reasonable starting figure would be about $40 million.

"No amount of money is too great to spend on the defense of our country — everything else is secondary."

"I believe it is a God-given privilege to be an American citizen protected by constitutional freedom. It is our obligation to guarantee to our children and grandchildren that same freedom.

"Freedom will not be ours if we surrender outer space to the Soviet Union," Ms. Parro said.

AIRPORT

One big advantage to such a move would allow international cargo to be brought directly into the airport.

White said planes now must check in international cargo with agents in Lubbock or El Paso.

"Someone will be flying a plane from Mexico to Midland with cargo, and it will have to go all the way to Lubbock and back again," White said.

Also, Hardin said there has been recent cases where companies have not seriously considered moving to the Permian Basin because there was no international port of entry.

"It has happened," said Hardin, declining to name the specific companies involved. "Many large industrial prospects have a critical need for it.

"It would also make our area more competitive with other communities."

Another advantage to achieving the status is it may help in getting the area designated as a Foreign Trade Zone.

If an area is a Foreign Trade Zone, it offers businesses the opportunity to avoid, reduce or defer U.S. Customs duty or excise tax.

"It's an economic advantage for businesses," White said.

Hardin said Midland chamber officials are collecting information and drafting a survey to determine the feasibility of the plan.

Paperwork would then have to be compiled. Also, under the law, Gov. Mark White would have to approve the move.

If officials decide to seek the entry status, it is uncertain where the money would come from.

White said it is doubtful the money could come from his budget.

Other possibilities, officials said, is that the funding may come from the city of Midland, the chamber, the private sector or the city of Odessa.

But, meanwhile, White said he hopes the change will be made.

"When I go to a convention with other airport officials and they see 'Midland Regional Airport' on my name badge, they think Midland is some little podunk town."

"International Airport just sounds better."

"To my knowledge nothing has been discussed," said Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish. "He didn't submit it, therefore it wasn't rejected."

Defense attorney Ted Kerr said "He (McCright) is still on the board of trustees. I am certain that they (the board) have not asked him to step down."

Board member Fred Wright refused comment on whether the board would seek McCright's resignation.

"I haven't heard anything about it. The board hasn't met and we don't have a meeting until August," Wright said.

If convicted, McCright could be sentenced up to 20 years in prison — five years on each of the four charges.

McCright was charged by grand jurors with embezzling and misapplying $1.925 million in the form of a 1981 loan to Midland West Corp.

The indictment, alleging McCright was an owner of the corporation, charged that he also received $330,000 through the loan.

The indictment also accused McCright of failing to note that he held 6.25 percent working interest in the Atkins Prospect oilfield investment; failing to include his reversionary interests in oil field properties managed by Wood and Locker Inc., of Midland; and failing to list his one-sixth right to collateral — ranch land — which secured an FNB loan of $2.444-million to Pen-Dee Corp.

McCright, a graduate of Southern Methodist University's Southwestern Graduate School of Banking, retired from FNB in 1982. The 93-year-old bank failed in 1983.

That same year, McCright was elected to Security National Bank's Board of Director but resigned that position last year.

Insurance hike needed due to weather

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Damage caused by too much bad weather the past three years is the primary reason a personal property insurance rate increase is needed, according to two recommendations to the State Board of Insurance.

The Texas Insurance Advisory Association, representing the industry, recommended a statewide increase of 16.9 percent.

The board's staff recommended a statewide average increase for all classes of 5.3 percent, including the widely sold homeowners policy.

The board was to consider today the recommendations from both its staff and the industry that Texas homeowners pay more for personal property insurance the next year.

However, the staff recommendations would give apartment dwellers a reduction on personal property insurance.

In 1985, the statewide average was increased 2.2 percent, while the 1984 average, which did not become effective until March 15, 1985, was a 5.3 percent increase.

The staff recommendation called for a statewide increase in homeowners insurance of 8.6 percent. The standard homeowners policy covers insurance for fire and lightning, windstorm, hurricane and hail, explosion, vandalism and malacious mischief, freezing and theft, plus liability insurance for accidents that happen on the property.

The staff recommended a 10.8 percent decrease in tenant homeowners insurance.

The industry proposed an increase of 19.9 percent in homeowners rates, and a 1.1 percenet increase for tenant homeowners.

The association said the difference between the two recommendations was "attributable to the industry's traditional inclusion of a 5 percent provision for profit and contingencies and differences over the trending of losses and other technical matters."

The industry statement said the primary factory in the rate increase was the catastrophe loss in Texas the last three years.

"Specifically, the effect of Hurricane Alicia in August 1983, the severe winter weather of December in 1983 and the record number of weather related catastrophes that Texas suffered in 1985.

The largest 1985 weather loss in Texas was at Lubbock where wind, hail and tornadoes caused $57.3 million in damages on May 6 through 8.

Officials approve plan to widen expressway

DALLAS (AP) — Texas highway officials ended a decade of debate and approved a plan to widen the city's most clogged freeway, North Central Expressway, to eight lanes between downtown Dallas and LBJ Freeway.

The final vote on the $505 million project Wednesday included not a hint of the controversy that has marked the future of the highway, one of the most heavily traveled in the state.

The Texas Highways and Public Transportation Commission took less than two minutes to give its final approval and order its Dallas district to proceed with the project.

First construction could begin in less than three years between LBJ Freeway and Walnut Hill Lane. That section could open as early as 1991, said John Kelly, the North Central project director in the highway department's Dallas district.

"What an anticlimactic deal after 32 years," said Walt Humann, chairman of the North Central Task Force, after the vote.

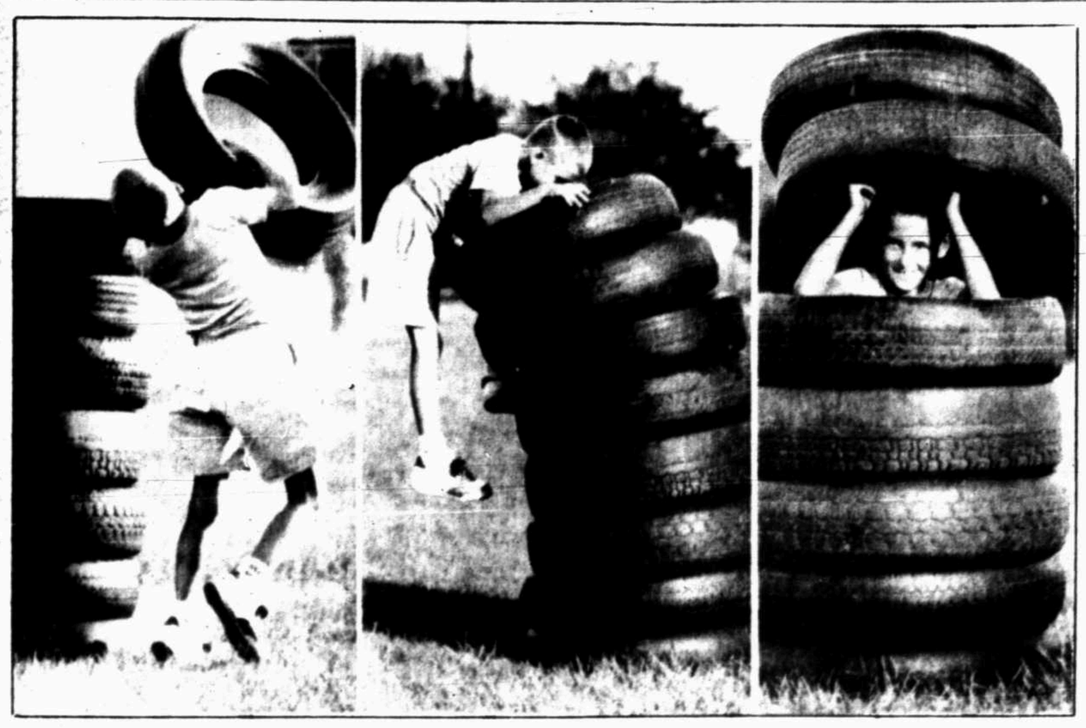

The expansion design includes widening the highway and accommodating underground rail lines, a plan developed in 1984 and 1985 by the task force of the Dallas Area Rapid Transit authority and the city of Dallas.

Kelly estimated the project will take 10 years to complete.

But highway commission Chairman Robert Lanier said the project could be delayed by the state's budget problems. If the highway department looses $527 million a year in funding over the next 10 years — as proposed by some state officials — the Dallas area could lose as much as $500 million during the decade.

The highway commission had endorsed a proposal ~~to double~~ deck the freeway with elevated lanes, but withdrew its support in the early 1980s after neighborhood and city groups opposed the accompanying noise and pollution.

The road will now be in a trench for most of its length and on an embankment as it nears LBJ Freeway.

White to decide fate of suspected rapist

HOUSTON (AP) — A 26-year-old Minnesota man is awaiting a decision by Gov. Mark White that could release him from prison and clear him for a rape prosecutors now say he didn't commit.

The state Board of Pardons and Paroles voted unanimously Tuesday to recommend a full pardon for Steven Lynn Fossum of Mabel, Minn., who has been in prison since April 1984.

"We hope to have a decision in the next 24 hours or so. We're hoping he (White) will go ahead and act on the recommendation," Mike Roach, spokesman for the parole board, said Wednesday.

For the victim's mother, the board's decision is an answer to her prayers.

"I never thought that he was guilty at all," Delone Fossum said. "He is a well mannered young man, quiet and shy and would never do the things they say he did."

Ms. Fossum, who arrived in Houston Wednesday evening with her oldest son, Roger, said Steven Fossum had moved to Texas from Minnesota six years ago to get a job. He worked for a water well drilling company before he was convicted, she said.

The two are anxious to take Fossum home, she said. Neither, however, know when the younger Fossum will be released from the Texas Department of Corrections Coffield Unit in Tennesee Colony.

"If we get the call, there's a car load of us ready to go get him," she said. Ms. Fossum has not seen her son since July 1, 1985, and he does not know she is in Texas, she said.

The parole board's action Wednesday came after Minnesota television station WCCO of Minneapolis uncovered new evidence that raised questions about Fossum's conviction.

Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes last week wrote the parole board and recommended that Fossum be freed. The board's recommendation was sent to the governor's general counsel on Wednesday.

Teri Greenwood, who works in the counsel's office, said lawyers were studying the case and preparing a memo on it for White.

"There's no definite time frame for a decision by the governor," she said.

Ann Arnold, the governor's press secretary, said White had made no decision.

According to Holmes, part of the new evidence included a detailed analysis of semen samples that concluded Fossum couldn't have raped the victim.

Semen tests done at the time of the trial were "inconclusive," trial defense attorney Xavier Grenas said. Attorneys said testing at the time wasn't sophisticated enough to yield the results now found.

John Ackerman, Fossum's lawyer, said the new tests "provided sufficient information that there were two different people involved, contrary to her (the victim's) testimony. And secondly, neither could have been Fossum."

Ackerman blamed the state for not questioning the story of the 23-year-old complainant.

"They relied too heavily on the word of the woman without doing any checking on the things she told them," Ackerman said.

Ms. Fossum says he doesn't have much faith in the Texas justice system.

"I feel that they don't have much justice to do this," she said. "We feel like they called us liars and the lying part was on the other end."

Authorities said that if Fossum is released from prison, he would still be on probation for a 1982 rape.

Police search for killer of 16-year-old youth

UNIVERSITY PARK (AP) — Police searched Wednesday for a man who fatally stabbed an honor student after confronting him during a house burglary.

Conrad Lynn Harris was pronounced dead at Parkland Memorial Hospital at 7:31 a.m. Tuesday, about an hour after his stepmother, Holly Christine Kuper, called police in this Dallas suburb to report an intruder in her home.

Harris turned 16 Tuesday.

Police said the intruder apparently entered the house by tearing a large hole in a rear screen door leading to the kitchen. He then was confronted by the teen-ager, who had been sleeping in a small study at the front of the house, investigators said.

Hugh K. Harris, 48, was awakened by his son's screams and rushed toward the teen-ager's room, where he spotted a long-haired man in a straw hat wielding a butcher knife taken from the kitchen, police said.

The assailant made a threatening gesture toward the elder Harris with the knife and then fled through a rear kitchen door, dropping the knife on the steps, police Capt. Tom Van Doren said.

The younger Harris had been stabbed repeatedly in the chest and back, police said.

Nothing was taken in the burglary, police said.

Van Doren said the same intruder had tried to break into the Harris home Monday morning after coming to the front door to ask for directions. That effort failed when Ms. Kuper reported the incident to police, he said.

White names commissioner

AUSTIN (AP) — Danny "Butch" Choate of Orange has been named to the Texas Sabine River Compact Commission.

Gov. Mark White said Choate, 42, would replace David Cardner of Orange, whose term expired.

White also reappointed Johnnie Glen Jennings of Baytown to the board of directors of the Coastal Industrial Water Authority.

HOUSTON (AP) — Garbage left uncollected in some residential areas because many city employees facing layoffs failed to appear for their final days of work may have to picked up by temporary workers, city officials said.

"The people out there are getting fed up with the problem of not knowing when garbage is going to be picked up," City Councilman Frank Mancuso said Tuesday. "You can see the sacks of garbage people have thrown in the street."

Mancuso compared the pileup to the recent 20-day garbage workers strike in Philadelphia, and said he was considering asking the Texas Department of Health to investigate possible health hazards.

Houston officials said they have a problem but added it is not as extreme as Philadelphia's.

The Houston Solid Waste Department is plagued with absenteeism because many of the 161 employees who have received layoff notices are using their earned sick leave before their jobs end Aug. 1, according to Mayor Kathy Whitmire and department director Charles Ware.

Both said they may have to hire temporary workers to help catch up with the garbage problem.

Ware said the situation, affecting 310,000 residential customers, really is an "un-problem" that soon will be settled soon.

Mrs. Whitmire agreed, but Mancuso warned the layoffs may worsen the problem.

Police search for hitchhiker

BELLVILLE (AP) — Law enforcement officers were searching for a hitchhiker who shot a man who gave him a lift, then fled on foot when the man's wife escaped in the vehicle, authorities said.

James Carl Milam, 45, of Burleigh, was fatally shot in the head by a man he picked up along a farm-to-market road near Bellville northwest of Houston Wednesday, said Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

Milam's wife, Julie Milam, told officers the suspect tried to sexually assault her, but she escaped in the vehicle.

Ms. Milam told authorities the hitchhiker pulled a pistol after they picked him up about 10:30 a.m. and forced the couple to drive along back roads near the Brazos River bridge, where the shooting occurred.

The gunman was last seen on foot while Milam's wife drove to Burleigh for help, Wells said.

Austin County and Waller County sheriff's deputies, DPS troopers and the Texas Rangers were focusing their search on the Austin-Waller county line near another farm-to-market road near the Brazos River late Wednesday night.

Jury decides fate of man

ANAHUAC (AP) — A jury must decide between life in prison or the death sentence for a 31-year-old Winnie man convicted of kidnapping and murdering a High Island tavern owner.

Testimony in the punishment phase for Johnny James resumes today.

The jury took only 45 minutes Wednesday to convict James of the Oct. 22, 1985, kidnapping and shooting death of 47-year-old Barbara Harrington Mayfield, assistant court clerk Dorothy McCulley said.

James also is charged with robbing, kidnapping, raping and shooting a 24-year-old Winnie convenience store clerk in connection with the multi-county crime spree.

The defense rested its case without calling any witnesses. Testimony ended Tuesday with the rape victim telling the jury about her four-hour ordeal on Oct. 22 when she was sexually assaulted at gunpoint.

The rape victim identified James as the man who raped her, then shot her after she was kidnapped during an armed robbery at the convenience store where she worked.

Same size containers may have different weights

By SONJA HEINZE

Heinze

Q. I have two unopened boxes of ice cream in my freezer and just noticed while rearranging things that one of the boxes seems to weigh quite a bit more than the other. They are both half-gallons but different brands. Shouldn't all half gallons of ice cream weigh the same?

A. All half gallons of ice cream would weigh the same if they had identical contents. One of the boxes is probably a cheaper brand of ice cream and contains more air. A half gallon of good ice cream will weigh about three pounds and consist of one-third air. A cheaper ice cream will be whipped up more to the point where it is 50 percent air and will weigh as little as two and a quarter pounds.

Q. Please tell me if the following quote from Harvey and Marilyn Diamond's best-selling book, "Fit for Life," is true: "Enzymes are sensitive to all heat above 130 degrees F. At 130 degrees F. they are dead. Any food that has been cooked at a temperature higher than 130 degrees F. has been subjected to a death sentence of its enzymes, and is nothing but dead food." If this is true, then it's crucial information. Lona Vining, Port Ewen, N.Y.

A. Dr. Frederick Stare, chairman of Harvard University's Department of Nutrition, responds, "This is true but it is not crucial information! We do not get any of the thousands of enzymes our body cells need from foods. We make them in many body tissues, particularly in our pancreas. This organ is a veritable enzyme factory.

"Enzymes present in fresh uncooked foods are all destroyed by the acid naturally present in gastric juice. We do not get any of our enzymes from food — cooked or uncooked. If some of our foods were not cooked, we would be dead from bacterial contamination!"

I asked Dr. Stare what he thought of this book, and he said, "It's terrible. Just awful unadulterated nutritional nonsense. Unfortunately, it sells very well because the authors write what lots of people like to read. The Diamonds have no professional qualifications in nutrition. Absolutely none."

Q. I've tried to no avail to purchase Gorton's dry codfish. It was originally packed in boxes in the '40s. My mother used to mix the dried codfish with mashed potatoes and one egg, making delicious fish cakes. Edith Verna, Mays Landing, N.J.

A. Gorton stopped packing dry codfish years ago because of a lack of demand. A representative of Gorton's suggests you contact Gleason's Bait and Tackle Co., 42 Eastern Ave., Gloucester, Mass. 01930. They air freight small specialty orders (prepaid) of salt cod; smoked bluefish, shad, mackerel and finnan haddie (in season); live lobsters; and fresh fish and shellfish (in season).

The fishcakes sound delicious.

READER RESPONSE: When Mrs. G. Martin of Ontario, Calif., asked for help through this column in finding an address for Guardian Service cookware, which appeared to have gone out of business, response was terrific.

Arlene Veix, a reader from Burlington, N.C., wrote to explain what happened to this company: "Century Metalcraft stopped manufacturing the aluminum Guardian Service in 1956 and switched to stainless steel Presto Pride cookware. It is my understanding that the aluminum cookware was used in the armed forces at that time, and food staying in the aluminum hour after hour became contaminated. This prompted the change to stainless steel. Households are not exposed to this problem."

Tips for summer travel

By LINDA ANDERSON

Summer is halfway over (already!), but prospective vacationers still have plenty of time to plan trips. For those whose vacations are yet to be, this information might be of service:

■ Bed and breakfast accommodations are a popular alternative to hotel/motel lodging — and also can be a money-saver in some cases. Bed and Breakfast Reservation Services World-Wide is a recently-formed trade association designed to give vacation planners information on lodgings in the area they wish to visit.

For a free copy of their brochure, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Bed and Breakfast Reservation Services World-Wide, P.O. Box 14797, Dept. 174, Baton Rough, La. 70898.

■ The 1986 Travel Guide for the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and West Virginia, a service of the Shenandoah Valley Travel Association, contains information about chambers of commerce, attractions, lodging accommodations, restaurants and campgrounds in the area, including current 1986 rates.

The guide, a color descriptive folder and a calendar of events can be ordered by sending 50 cents for postage and handling to Shenandoah Valley Travel Association, P.O. Box 1040, Dept. TG86, New Market, Va. 22844. The telephone number there is (703) 740-3132.

■ Last Minute Cruise Club, from Village Travel Service in San Pedro, Calif., is designed for those who can travel on short notice — usually two weeks to three months notice.

Members must respond immediately when they receive notices of availability. The company claims that "single and guaranteed shares are often available," and that savings can be as much as 50 percent.

For more information write Last Minute Cruise Club, 870 Ninth Street, Dept. P, San Pedro, Calif., 90731.

■ For vacationers who are staying a little closer to home, the National Frozen Pizza Institute, in cooperation with the National Safety Council, has a free "Safe Cyclist" kit available for bicycle enthusiasts. (I haven't figured out the connection between frozen pizzas and bicycles either.)

The kit includes a National Safety Council Bike Book, a "driver's test" for parents and children to take together and a brochure on good nutrition. (That's where the pizza comes in!)

Send 50 cents — again, for postage and handling — to "FPP* Safe Cyclist," Box 17017, Milwaukee, Wisc. 53217. Offer ends July 30. FPP means Frozen Pizza Powered — cute, huh.

Cancellation insurance for travel plans offered

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — For those intrepid travelers who decided months ago that, terrorism or no terrorism, they were going abroad this summer, a travel insurance company now offers a policy that covers second thoughts.

Access America Inc., a subsidiary of Blue Cross and Blue Shield, sells trip cancellation insurance that will reimburse travelers for the nonrefundable portion of their travel expenses if they are headed to a city where there has been a terrorist attack within 30 days of their scheduled arrival.

If a traveler had planned a trip to Madrid, for example, but decided not to go after terrorist bombings killed 9 civil guards and wounded 43 civilians, the traveler could cancel the trip and collect the costs of hotel room deposits, airline tickets and tour fees depending on how much coverage he or she bought.

Access America added the terrorism clause in April to its trip interruption or cancellation coverage. The insurance is one of a variety of travel insurance coverage plans that travelers should consider if they are taking summer trips, whether to foreign countries or within the United States.

Such travel insurance can pay for lost luggage, the emergency purchases needed when luggage is delayed and medical bills if the traveler has an accident or becomes ill. Some plans can save a traveler money by paying the usual $7.95 daily fee that rental car companies charge for accident coverage, called "collision damage waiver."

A report released June 23 by the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan New York cautions consumers to consider first whether they are already covered, to look at the myriad limitations travel insurance companies put on policies and the cost of the coverage. Health insurance, for example, often covers accidents and illnesses when traveling. Personal possessions are often covered by homeowner's insurance.

To receive a copy of the Better Business Bureau report, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Better Business Bureau, 257 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10010.

Hotel 'vamps' tourists

SCARBOROUGH, England (UPI) — The Crown Hotel is trying to lure American tourists back to Britain by offering "Hunt-A-Vampire" weekends. You get a dank room with cobwebs and hanging bats.

Wendy Trindall, Crown sales manager, said 60 people already have paid $134 each for fright nights and a chance to meet Count Dracula — Robert Leake, who is the 7-foot-tall secretary of the Dracula Society in Britain.

"There's a lot of interest in Count Dracula" in the United States, Trindall said. What the Transylvania vampire has to do with Britain was not immediately clear.

Each guest gets an "anti-vampire" kit that includes cloves of garlic, a crucifix and, if things threaten to get really bad, a wooden stake.

BETTER BUSINESS

'Assuming' often costly

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

Falsely assuming a telephone caller from a photocopier supply company is your manufacturer's representative can cost you. This is an old but active scam that continues to find new victims.

Based on the information a "supplier" gains from a phone call, the so-called copier supply firms ship unwanted and unauthorized supplies with substantial invoices which they pursue vigorously to collection.

Often they gain the pertinent information about the make and model of your equipment from an unsuspecting clerk.

This type of caller may casually drop the name of the chairman of your board, or owner or other officers as having suggested you be contacted. The names of corporate officers are easily obtained from directories, etc.

If you can't identify the caller as legitimate, do not give out any pertinent data about your machine and don't give your name. If you get a call — give us a call!

Yogurt-coated treats tricky

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Consumers may be buying yogurt coated raisins and nuts under the misconception that they are "health" snacks. The yogurt coating used in these snacks usually has sugar as its major ingredient.

The other ingredients include partially hydrogenated vegetable oil which may contain saturated coconut or palm oil, non-fat milk solids, non-fat yogurt solids, whey and artificial color and flavor.

Many people believe that they'll get the benefit of yogurt's protein, calcium and riboflavin from these snack foods, but a 0.9-ounce serving of yogurt raisins provides only 2 percent of the recommended dietary allowance (RDA) for calcium, less than 2 percent of the RDA for riboflavin and one gram of protein. These products should be considered in the same category as candy-coated nuts or raisins.

For a real high-nutrition snack, try raisins in a cup of plain yogurt with non-nutritive sweetener added.

Hotels find amenities costly but necessary

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The first in-room amenity in a hotel was probably a miniature bar of soap, and that was the standard until shampoo, shower caps, shoe mitts and sewing kits began appearing regularly.

In the 1980s, these basics were followed by lotions, bath gels, mouthwashes, shaving cream, razors, chocolates, shoe-horns, shoe polish, suntan lotions and even pre-pasted toothbrushes and vitamin pills.

"It's like a gas war," said Patrick J. Barry, director of public relations for the Hilton Hotels Corp. in Beverly Hills, Calif.

"It's become a giant monster taking over the world," said Darryl Hartley-Leonard, president of the Hyatt Hotels Corp. in Chicago.

"When you get all the way down to giving suntan lotion in Minneapolis, you know you've gone too far."

Today there are about 40 amenity packagers, two of them publicly owned, doing more than $60 million a year in sales, not counting soap, according to Jay H. Freedman, an analyst at Kidder Peabody & Co.

The largest, Guest Supply in North Brunswick, N.J., which started in a garage in 1979 and now produces more than 150 million units a year, has just "scratched the surface" of the potential $300 million annual industry.

"The majority of hotels don't have a standardized program yet and they will," he said. Even the hotel chains which have been in the forefront are continuing to upgrade and refine their programs.

COMPANIES SUCH as Procter & Gamble have divisions devoted to making miniature versions of their products, and cosmetic companies are licensing their lines for the lodging industry.

There are now amenity supplements that enable a guest to arrive with no toiletries and receive a pouch containing disposable razor, shaving cream and other essentials.

Terri Unsworth, vice president of market development for Guest Supply, says the company is going to sell the travel-size items to the public.

The cost of the amenities to the hotel can vary from 50 cents or less for a bar of soap, a shower cap and shampoo to as much as $9 for 13 items going into a first-class big-city hotel, and as much as $25 for a casino hotel providing a keepsake jewelry box.

Most hotel chains vary their packages. Marriott Hotels and Resorts has a $2.75 basic package, $5.85 at the Marquis in Times Square and $7 at some of its resorts.

Now, "presentation vehicles" in the jargon of the industry are becoming popular, too. These might include a basket or tray or cabinet and can cost an additional $1 to $10.

Freedman said the hotel industry regards the in-room amenities as a means of enhancing the perceived value of the room and as a form of advertising, since guests often take the products home.

"It is also one of the few ways you can try to standardize the consistency of a room stay throughout an entire hotel system," said Freedman. "It's one modest way to control the image of the whole chain."

Stephen W. Brener, a hotel consultant, broker and manager in New York, said that he believed luxury hotels cannot cut back on amenity packages, but that first-class hotels are cutting back or considering it.

"They've become somewhat of a joke as far as guests are concerned," he said. "They are too ostentatious."

BARRY SAID Hilton's new amenity package includes one more item, mouthwash, than the old one.

The package is being introduced for the sake of change, but also in the hope of stopping the amenity escalation by individual managers, who were adding more items to the basic package at hotels such as the Waldorf Astoria.

The Waldorf management, he said, felt it had to keep up with other New York hotels, particularly the Helmsley Palace.

From January to April of this year, Hilton test marketed the new amenity package at six hotels, including the New York Hilton. In a $3 package guests got two bars of soap, one deodorant, one facial, a shower cap, Scope mouthwash, a sewing kit, and Vidal Sassoon extra gentle shampoo, displayed on a clear plexiglass tray.

Guests in suites or towers got a $4.50 package that included those items plus a larger sewing kit, shoe shine sponge, hair conditioner and hand and body lotion, all on a longer tray.

In Hilton's market test, half the rooms got the old amenities, packaged in blue and beige. The other half got the new package.

A questionnaire indicated 13 percent higher guest satisfaction with the new amenities. "We found consumers wanted mouthwash more than anything," Barry said.

As the supply of the blue and beige packages are consumed, the new amenities will be required in all 100,000 rooms in the 270 Hilton Hotels in the United States.

"We are hoping the pendulum will be swinging back to more basic and useful items away from irrelevant extras," he said. "More wasn't necessarily better."

Money often used as scapegoat for other problems in marriage

Associated Press

That couples fight over money is certainly not news. But, do you know why there are so many squabbles over the pocketbook?

According to Better Homes and Gardens, the reason couples clash over money is that husbands' and wives' attitudes aren't always shared. Combine different attitudes about spending with a lack of compromise and you have the formula for financial strife.

"Even couples who are quite compatible may have conflicting ideas about money they're not even aware of," says New York psychologist Michele Berdy. "But if couples talk about money, they will determine where the differences are."

Joseph Margolin, formerly an economist and now a psychologist in Washington, says, "Money has always been a substitute for the real thing — whatever that might be — in our lives and in our arguments."

MONEY CAN represent power, freedom, independence, affection, self-respect, sex, anxiety, security, love and any number of idiosyncratic needs. One of Margolin's patients, for example, was a man who argued endlessly with his wife about the gas she wasted in circuitous drives home from work. With Margolin's help, the man came to see his worry wasn't the gas bill, which was only a small part of the family budget. What nagged him were concerns about where his wife spent her time. He was insecure about her love, and rather than face that frightening notion, he tried to control her in other ways.

The danger in using money as a scapegoat is twofold. The issues behind the money feuds aren't faced, and the money matters aren't resolved. Both problems fester and eventually erode the relationship. Ending financial battles begins with learning to recognize when money is a mask for something else.

YOU CAN tell that some other issue is behind a money squabble when:

You keep having the same argument over and over with a predictable script. One or two discussions are all it should take to come to some plan for solving a real money issue such as, "Can you afford to fully fund our IRAs this year and take a family vacation?" If you get that "Uh, oh, here we go again" feeling when you talk about money, stop, listen and try to figure out what's really going on.

Other fights — about in-laws, sex, housekeeping, the children — veer quickly to money topics. If that happens, it may mean you find money a safer topic than other, perhaps more troubling, ones.

A discussion about how money will be spent — can we afford a new floor for the kitchen — should not bring on powerful emotions. If anger, fear or even outrage well up in money arguments, money may be masquerading for some other issue. And whenever a disagreement summons a thought such as, "I'm not going to let you get the best of me on this one," you can be sure money isn't the primary issue.

Veiled — or obvious — comments about the other person's skill as a money manager or money earner keep coming into the fight. In that case, the fight may be more about the marriage than about money. An honest disagreement about how money will be spent (he wants high-yield bonds, she wants overseas stock) won't degenerate into personal attacks.

TRY THESE tactics if money fights are plaguing your family:

Decide what the focus of the discussion should be. Whenever a conversation flares into an argument, says out loud — and often, if need be — "What are we fighting about?" That helps both of you see arguments for what they really are.

Talk, talk, talk. "Even couples who are intimate tend not deal with the issue of money until it erupts into an argument," says psychologist Berdy. The surest way to keep conflicting attitudes about money from triggering fights is to figure out what your attitudes are, what those of your spouse are, and to come to a consensus. You don't have to agree completely, of course.

"You can agree to disagree on some points, but the advantage to talking is that the differences are discussed, not submerged where they can do more damage," says George E. L. Barbee, executive director of the Consumer Financial Institute in Massachusetts.

Listen. Margolin videotapes his patients to help them literally take a look at themselves. Patients often gain fresh insights into their own behavior that way. He says couples can try it at home with a tape recorder. "When you play it back, you might hear yourself differently." Granted, but even thinking about someone recording your conversation might help you view it in a different way.

PLAN CAREFULLY and often. If you and your spouse agree on goals and priorities, you won't need to argue about them — you can, instead, set about achieving them.

Barbee recommends that everyone make a wish list. Husbands and wives should make them separately and then, through discussion, come up with a list that represents the dreams and goals of the family.

Share financial decision-making. Sociologists Philip Blumstein and Pepper Schwartz interviewed thousands of people about their relationships and found that when couples take time to share control over money managements, they have happier, calmer relationships. It takes effort to create budgets, to set spending priorities, and to plan for the future, but the results can be well worthwhile: a more secure financial future and a happier marriage.

Planning ahead key to retirement

Associated Press

Planning ahead is the key to retirement, according to two Rhode Island bankers who specialize in personal finance management.

"Perhaps it's time to travel, to start a second career, or to pursue a hobby," says Judy F. Newcomb, trust officer of 100 Westminster Street, the personal financial management center of Fleet National Bank of Providence, R.I. "It is important to set your personal retirement goals in advance so you can assess their impact on your finances."

She and Frederick H. Sandstrom, senior vice president, recommend a pre-retirement checklist:

- Prepare a retirement balance sheet, detailing assets and liabilities.
- Prepare an annual cash flow statement, a month-by-month picture of one year's cash receipts and expenses.
- Prepare a worksheet for taxes for your year of retirement.
- Evaluate current investment strategies in light of developing retirement needs.
- Review long-term protection, including preparation of an estate plan, provisions for sufficient income for a surviving spouse, and adequate medical and property insurance.

DEAR ABBY

Neighbors' actions appall woman

by ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We live in a highly desirable section of town. A few years ago when our neighbor's little boy was 3, I observed his father teaching him to relieve himself off the side of their house! He's 7 now, and he's still urinating outside whenever he feels like it. (In the winter it's freezing cold here, but that doesn't seem to matter.)

We have a daughter (now 8) who has been taught to come into the house to use the bathroom. She knows that urinating outside in public is nasty, unsanitary and ill-mannered.

These same neighbors have a 4-year-old girl who is following in her big brother's footsteps. Our son, just turned 3, sees these kids pottying in the yard, and now he's doing it.

I realize that the neighbors have a right to do whatever they want on their own property, but it's setting a terrible example for our children. The neighbors across the street are also upset about this because their children play over here. What can we do? Please don't mention our town or name, as this family is pretty good at throwing eggs, too. — APPALLED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR APPALLED: First, speak to the offending neighbors and explain the unhygienic aspects of using the yard as a toilet. Advise them that the department of public health disapproves of this practice, and you will report them to the authorities if they do not clean up their act. Then have no hesitation to make an official complain' if necessary.

DEAR ABBY: Remember me? I'm "Katherine in Georgetown, Texas." I wrote to you last September saying that I wanted to donate my organs after death but couldn't get any witnesses to sign the consent form. Members of my family refused to sign it, fearing some doctor might get "scalpel happy" and remove the organs they need before I'm dead. I took the form to church five Sundays in a row but couldn't get anybody to sign it. (They said I might need all my parts at the Resurrection.) Even my own husband wouldn't sign it!

Well, Abby, you printed my letter, explaining that my husband needed to understand that willing one's organs after death in order to improve the quality of life for the living is one of the most generous acts a person can perform. And the possibility that some "scalpel-happy" surgeon might remove one of my organs before I was dead was impossible because a patient must be pronounced dead by two doctors before a death certificate is signed. And as for "needing" all my organs for the Resurrection, should a person return to live again in the body of his previous life, the good Lord could be trusted to miraculously replace the missing parts.

To make a long story short, when my family saw your explanation in the paper, they not only offered to witness my donor form, they became donors themselves!

And listen to this, Abby. Last week I had major surgery, and when I gave my doctor my donor card to clip to my chart, he asked me what it was. He said he had never seen one before! So please print this and tell everybody who has a donor card to inform their doctors now, in case one day they'll need emergency surgery and are in no condition to let the doctor know. Thank you. — KATHERINE IN GEORGETOWN, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: May I suggest a more appropriate reply to the question, "I'll bet you don't remember me, do you?" How about, "You win!" — STAN HAUXHURST, CORONA DEL MAR, CALIF.

DEAR STAN: Beautiful. You win!

DEAR ABBY: I've been living with a man for nine years. We have a 7-year-old son together, and I now feel as though it is important for us to get married and become a real family.

Whenever I bring this up, my boyfriend gives me a lot of excuses why he can't marry me. None are legitimate. This does not leave me feeling very good about myself. How can I get him to marry me? — DEAD END

DEAR DEAD END: You can't force a man to marry you if he doesn't want to. If you are concerned about your "rights," see a lawyer and find out if you are living in a state that recognizes common-law marriages. You may have all the legal rights of a wife, although what you really want is a ring on your finger, a certificate of marriage and a "Mrs." in front of your name.

(Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Middle-income couples share financial duties

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Middle-income couples are more likely to share control of the family purse strings than lower- or upper-income spouses, the University of Kentucky said in a survey released Tuesday.

The university's College of Home Economics conducted a three-year study, questioning about 750 men and women in Kentucky regarding family money management practices.

The survey showed that in one-earner, married households with annual income of less than $15,000 or more than $50,000, husbands make most financial decisions and are generally responsible for record-keeping.

The finding was true without regard to education levels, family size or respective knowledge in financial subjects.

The survey also showed that husbands made most financial decisions in families with annual incomes of $15,000 to $50,000 but their wives had some input on such matters.

"Wives at this middle-income level also participate more in such activities as balancing the checkbook and seeking loans on their own," researcher Karen Perch said in releasing the poll.

According to Perch, "It's likely that middle-income families are using convenience as a criterion for allocating family financial management tasks. Families at lower and higher incomes tend to rely on their beliefs about who 'should' do the various tasks."

Perch theorized that lower-income men may direct family finances to protect their self images while upper-income men may earn most of the family income and may therefore feel they should direct the spending.

The survey also checked relative knowledge by spouses of insurance, income taxes, estate planning and consumer credit and found little differences among men and women.

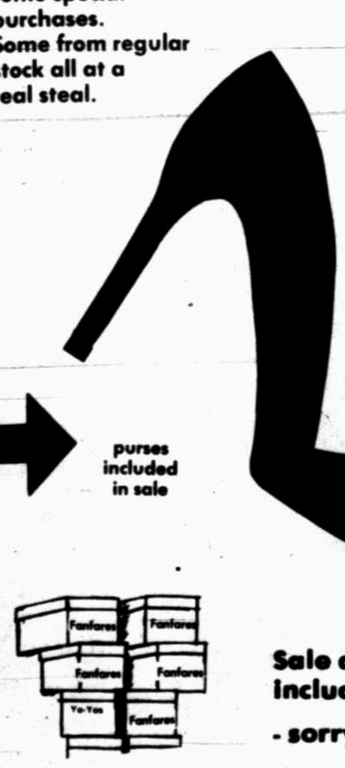

The survey found that fewer than half those questioned knew the meaning of an insurance "deductible" — the portion paid by the insured person before the carrier begins payments.

Prince and Princess Andrew, the Duke and Duchess of York, pose for official wedding photos Wednesday in the throne room at Buckingham Palace. Posing with Sarah, center, and Andrew, right, are members of the wedding party. At the back is best man Prince Edward; beside the bride are, from left, Alice Ferguson and Lady Rosanagh Innes-Ker; in the center, seated from left, are Andrew Ferguson, Seamus Makim, Peter Phillips, Prince William of Wales and Laura Fellowes; in front is Zara Phillips.

TERCEIRA, Azores Islands (AP) — Complete with videotapes of their wedding, Prince Andrew and his princess boarded the royal yacht Britannia to embark on a five-day honeymoon cruise through this verdant mid-Atlantic island chain.

Breaking free of the strict prenuptial timetable that culminated with their marriage Wednesday at London's Westminster Abbey, the 26-year-old newlyweds apparently decided to forgo any schedule during their tour of the nine-island Portuguese archipelago.

"They're going to decide what they're going to do," said the Britannia's Surgeon Cmdr. Timothy Douglas-Riley. "We've got no fixed plans at all."

The world watched Andrew and Sarah Ferguson marry on Wednesday morning in London's Westminster Abbey, that venerable symbol of England, and grant the wish of a cheering throng by kissing tenderly on the balcony of Buckingham Palace.

Andrew's mother, Queen Elizabeth II, gave them a good-luck dusting of confetti as they left the palace in an open carriage to be brought to the Azores by a jet of the Queen's Flight.

Two videotapes of the wedding were rushed to Heathrow Airport just before the royal jetliner took off so Andrew and Sarah could enjoy them on their cruise.

As the four-engine red, white and blue aircraft taxied out to the runway, the two large air brake flaps opened to reveal two black and red signs that read "Just Married."

The queen and 500 guests, including other royals and first lady Nancy Reagan, then retired to London's fashionable Claridge's hotel for a gala wedding party thrown by the queen's cousin, Lady Elizabeth Anson.

Guests at the party, which continued into the earlier hours today, said afterward that they had rarely seen such a relaxed royal gathering. "The queen danced constantly and except for curtsying, there was no royal protocol at all," said one.

Sarah's father, Maj. Ronald Ferguson, did not attend, opting instead to return to his home village of Dummer southwest of London, where he donned a sweater and corduroy pants and celebrated with villagers at a party held inside a barn.

"If they are going to have a party to celebrate my daughter's wedding, this is the place to be," the retired army officer said.

Britain's newest royal couple landed Wednesday evening at the joint Portuguese-U.S. Lajes air base two hours after the blue-hulled Britannia dropped anchor at the nearby port of Praia da Vitoria.

After a brief welcoming ceremony at Lajes by regional and base officials, Andrew and Sarah, made the Duke and Duchess of York by the queen, were sped by motorcade the three miles down to Praia da Vitoria's dock, where they boarded a launch for the sleek royal yacht.

Hundreds of local residents lined the small bay and the route leading up to the port's gates to catch a glimpse of the couple just hours after their lavish wedding.

Forty minutes after touching down in the Azores, Andrew and his bride were aboard the Britannia, preparing to weigh anchor for a five-day meander through the Atlantic island chain 740 miles off Portugal.

Azores officials said the Britannia had requested permission to call at the islands of Pico, Sao Jorge, Faial and Sao Miguel where Andrew and Sarah are to attend a farewell reception given by the regional government before flying home on Monday.

Britannia's Cmdr. David Smith went ashore at Praia da Vitoria to formally accept wedding gifts from the Azores semi-autonomous regional government, including local basketwork, carved whale's teeth, embroidery and sweet cakes.

He was also presented with a written note of welcome from Joao Bosco de Mota Amaral, president of the regional government, wishing the newlyweds "the greatest personal happiness" and offering them "our islands' traditional hospitality with open arms."

Wedding party lasts into early hours

LONDON (AP) — As Prince Andrew and his bride began their honeymoon in the Azores, Queen Elizabeth II and 500 guests including other royals and first lady Nancy Reagan celebrated at a wedding party that continued into the early hours today.

The party was given at Claridge's by Lady Elizabeth Anson, a cousin of the queen, and included a videotaped replay of the Westminster Abbey nuptials of Andrew and his red-haired bride, Sarah Ferguson, on Wednesday morning.

Guests who attended the party at the venerable hotel said afterwards they had rarely know such a relaxed royal gathering.

"The queen danced constantly and except for curtsying, there was no royal protocol at all," one guest said.

Princess Diana, arriving for the party with Prince Charles, wore a shimmering emerald green evening dress with matching silver-heeled shoes.

The queen, wearing an elegant yellow silk gown, arrived a few minutes later with Prince Edward, the youngest and now the only unmarried one of her four children.

Mrs. Reagan, wearing a black and white gown, arrived with eight security men surrounding her Chevrolet.

Other British royals present included the queen's sister Princess Margaret, Margaret's ex-husband Lord Snowdon, the queen's daughter Princess Anne, Anne's husband Mark Phillips and their son Lord Linley, and the queen's cousins Princess Alexandra and Prince Michael of Kent and his wife Princess Michael.

Guests included King Carl Gustav of Sweden; Prince Hiro, the grandson of Emperor Hirohito of Japan; Prince Albert, the son of Prince Rainier of Monaco; the Prince of Saxe-Coburg; and the Prince of Saxony.

The queen's husband, Prince Philip, missed the party to go to Edinburgh, Scotland, for today's opening of the Commonwealth Games.

The bride's father, Maj. Ronald Ferguson, also did not attend. The retired army officer returned to his home village of Dummer southwest of London and changed from tails into a sweater and corduroy pants to celebrate with villagers at a party inside a barn.

"If they are going to have a party to celebrate my daughter's wedding, this is the place to be," he said.

The bride's family was represented at Claridge's by her divorced mother Susan and her husband Argentine polo player and farmer Hector Barrantes.

Photographers, reporters and TV crews were barred from the party but guests told of a glittering occasion.

"Almost everyone there was a royal relation and the atmosphere was completely relaxed with everyone chatting and dancing until the early hours," said Harold Brooks-Baker, publishing director of Burkes Peerage a weighty who's who of the British aristocracy.

Other guests said the queen did not leave the party until well after midnight, followed shortly afterward by Mrs. Reagan, who left in the company of U.S. Ambassador Charles H. Price II and his wife.

The buffet meal of scrambled eggs, smoked salmon, sausages, kidneys, mushrooms, raspberries, strawberries and champagne included kedgeree, a British dish consisting of a mixture of fish, rice and hard boiled eggs that is reported to be the queen's favorite food.

Huge bouquets of lilies and white and pink roses decorated the hotel ballroom.

Andrew and Sarah landed in the Azores aboard a jet of the Queen's Flight on Wednesday evening. The 26-year-old newlyweds, made the Duke and Duchess of York by the queen, will cruise through the mid-Atlantic Portuguese archipelago for five days.

Brazilian president adds taxes on cars, fuel, travel

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — President Jose Sarney has decreed a series of drastic economic measures, including taxes on cars, fuel and foreign travel, to try to brake a spending boom in the Third World's most indebted nation.

In a nationwide television and radio address late Wednesday, Sarney said the radical three-year plan was required to combat poverty and strengthen the anti-inflation program he began implementing last February.

Sarney predicted that if successful, the plan would "change the face of the nation" and give Brazilians "a level of life equal to that of Mediterranean Europe."

The new measures include:

— A 28 percent increase on the price of gasoline and fuel alcohol.

— A 30 percent hike on the price of new cars, a 20 percent increase in the price of a 2-year-old car and a 10 percent rise in the price of 3- or 4-year-old car.

— A 25 percent tax on the purchase of dollars and 25 percent increase on ticket fares for international travel.

— A change in regulations to allow foreign investors to invest in Brazilian markets.

— The creation of a national development fund to finance public projects and investments.

— Reduced taxes for long-term securities and increased tax rates for short-term investments.

The new economic moves were taken less than five months after Sarney imposed measures to curb a skyrocketing annual inflation rate of almost 500 percent.

At the time, he introduced a new currency, the cruzado, to replace the old currency, the cruzeiro. Wages and prices were also frozen and cost-of-living adjustments eliminated.

But the so-called Cruzado Plan became a victim of its own success. Since the plan was announced, inflation has totaled just 3.38 percent, but with the freeze on prices and an increase in spending money, the middle class has basically been on a shopping spree.

"Nobody wants the inflationary horror we had before the Cruzado Plan," Sarney said. "This is the time to expand our investments ... to modernize industry and agriculture, to build an advanced scientific system, to dominate technology and liquidate misery and poverty."

There are waiting lists of up to four months to buy new and used cars because manufacturers can't keep up with demand. Home appliances are also in short supply and foreign travel has hit record highs.

Finance Minister Dilson Funaro said the middle class will have to make the sacrifices under the new economic measures because "it is better to know where Brazil is going than to leave it where it is. We have to think of the next generation."

He said the economic measures were required in order to cut Brazil's burdensome $103 billion foreign debt, more than $5 billion higher than Mexico's.

Sarney, who last year became Brazil's first civilian president in 21 years, introduced the latest measures under provisions still in effect under the 1967 constitution drawn up by the generals who ruled Latin America's largest country following a right-wing military coup in 1964.

Congress theoretically can veto the measures, but it overwhelmingly approved the Cruzado Plan.

Sarney, whose popularity soared after the anti-inflation package, again called for popular support to implement the new measures.

"You be the president," he said. "Put yourself in my place."

Wednesday's actions were widely anticipated and most of the plan had already been leaked to the media.

Cars lined up to fill up on gasoline or fuel alcohol, and travel agents reported booming business.

"It's crazy. I can't book all these people before the day is over," said Robert Bassous, who runs a travel agency in the capital of Brasilia.

Processing complex, jungle lab taken in Bolivia's cocaine war

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivian police raided a cocaine processing complex south of La Paz, while a week-old joint U.S.-Bolivian campaign to crush the nation's illicit drug industry found a lab in the northern jungle, a government official said.

Information Minister Herman Antelo said U.S.-piloted military helicopters carrying Bolivian police raided a cocaine processing center along the sparsely populated border between Beni and La Paz provinces, about 160 miles north of La Paz city.

He gave no other details.

The operation began Friday and until Wednesday had resulted in the seizure of one other cocaine laboratory, which officials estimated could produce up to 3,300 pounds of processed coca leaves a week.

Antelo also said Bolivian police, in operations independent of the U.S.-supported mission, found a huge complex containing 16 cocaine laboratories in the Chapare region southeast of La Paz. No further details were provided.

At a news conference earlier Wednesday, Antelo disclosed the names of 15 suspected cocaine traffickers arrested during a weekend police raid in Santa Cruz, 360 miles southeast of La Paz, that also was independent of the U.S.-backed operation.

He said one of the suspects, Jorge Flores Moises, is reputed to be a more important cocaine trafficker than Roberto Suarez Gomez, who is wanted on drug smuggling charges in the United States.

Antelo said two others who were arrested, Victor Toro Baspineiro and Saul Cuellar Vaca, also are "important figures" in narcotics trafficking. But he gave no additional background on them or the other suspects.

The 15 suspects are being detained in the Santa Cruz jail and can be held for 20 days without being charged while authorities seek evidence against them, Antelo said.

The U.S.-Bolivian operation, in which 170 members of the Panama-based U.S. 193rd Infantry Brigade are providing transport and communications support to Bolivian anti-drug police, is expected to continue into September.

The police, known as Leopards, are trained and financed by the United States.

Raids have centered in the Beni, a vast northeastern region of grasslands and jungle that is the suspected manufacturing heartland of Bolivia's huge illicit cocaine industry.

In neighboring Chile police have been put on maximum alert to prevent cocaine producers fleeing the operations in Bolivia from crossing the border, the head of Chile's anti-narcotics police division said.

Police Chief Leonel Jimenez said patrols had been reinforced over a 500-mile stretch of border.

"We are also working in close contact with the Peruvian police," Jimenez said Wednesday, referring to Chile's other northern neighbor.

"We must have in mind that there are a number of isolated, almost unknown, valleys in the area which may be used by the drug people," he said.

Work stops on Auschwitz convent

PARIS (AP) — Work on converting a building into a Roman Catholic convent at the site of the Auschwitz Nazi death camp in Poland has been halted, at least temporarily, according to a Jewish organization's spokeswoman.

The Paris newspaper Le Monde on Wednesday quoted Cardinal Franciszek Marcharski, the Catholic archbishop of Cracow whose diocese includes Auschwitz, as saying that he now longer favors building the convent.

European Jews protested recently after learning that a group of Carmelite nuns had established the convent in a building used by the Nazis to store death gas and victims' possessions.

The nuns want to pray for the souls of those killed in the camps, many of whom were Jews.

Jewish communities complained that Polish authorities had always refused to allow Jewish memorials at the camp. The official Polish position is that many non-Jews also died there.

Sabine Roitman of the Representative Committee of Jewish Institutions in France said Wednesday the Catholic representatives agreed to stop work on the convent in the building alongside one of the death camp's walls.

Mrs. Roitman said that although the warehouse is outside the camp wall, it is included in the camp site as defined by the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization's World Heritage sites.

She said European Jewish communities had no objection to the construction of a convent in the nearby town of Auschwitz, clearly distinct from the camp.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Grenade injures cyclists

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A grenade was hurled from a rooftop today at Israeli youths in the occupied West Bank town of Jericho, and 13 bicycle riders were injured in the explosion, military sources said.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the grenade was thrown by terrorists.

They said nine of the Israelis were slightly wounded, three suffered moderate injuries and one was wounded seriously.

Troops imposed a curfew on the immediate area and were searching for suspects, the sources said.

The sources said military helicopters evacuated the wounded to a Jerusalem hospital, 22 miles west of Jericho.

Israel Radio reported that the youths were on a bicycle trip organized by a nature society in the Jericho area.

Israel seized the West Bank from Jordan in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Voter protests continue

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — Widespread protests continued Wednesday against allegations of vote fraud as diverse sectors of society in the northern border state of Chihuahua united against the country's longtime ruling party.

The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, won the governor's race, all 14 state legislative elections and 65 of 67 mayoral races in the July 6 elections. The PRI never has lost a major election in its 57-year history.

Cries of vote rigging, however, have united diverse sectors of Chihuahua society, including the traditionally silent Roman Catholic Church and the business community.

"Fraud is never the way to a legitimate triumph," said Archbishop Adalberto Almeida of the Chihuahua archdiocese, who canceled Mass for last Sunday to protest the "magnitude of this social sin."

He called off the protest at the last minute on orders from Pope John Paul II.

Italian police kill man

ROME (AP) — Police today shot and killed a man who threw a package in front of the summer residence where Pope John Paul II was staying and then threatened pursuing agents with a hatchet, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

The man, identified as Roberto Porfiri, 45, drove to the papal palace, Castel Gandolfo, and shouted at police guarding the building that "this present is for you and the pope," the news agency said.

The package contained garbage, ANSA said.

The man drove off toward Rome, the news agency said. A police motorcycle patrol reportedly gave chase and caught up with the him about 13 miles from Castel Gandolfo.

ANSA said the man got out of the car shouting and waving a hatchet at police officers, who then shot and killed him.

The pontiff was at the residence, 15 miles south of Rome, but deputy Vatican spokesman Monsignor Giulio Nicolini said the pope knew nothing about the incident, which occurred around 4 a.m.

The Associated Press made three telephone calls to police, but no official was available for comment.

Coffee consumption falls

LONDON (AP) — Just over half of all Americans now drink coffee, compared with three-fourths in 1962, a study by the International Coffee Organization indicates.

Last winter U.S. coffee consumption averaged 1.74 cups a person daily, compared with 1.83 cups in 1985 and a peak of 3.12 cups in 1962, the study released Wednesday said.

The proportion of Americans drinking coffee decreased to 52.4 percent from 54.9 percent the year before and 74.7 percent in 1962, according to the study.

But, although fewer Americans are drinking coffee, those who still favor the beverage are drinking almost as many cups a day as in 1985, the study indicates.

Each drinker on average consumed 3.32 cups a day this winter, against 3.33 a year before. But this was a drop from the 1962 figure of 4.36 cups, the coffee group study said.

Zaire names ambassador

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Nguza Karl-i-Bond, a former prime minister who resigned in 1981 to join the exile opposition to President Mobutu Sese Seko, has been named Zaire's ambassador to the United States, the government announced.

The appointment announced Wednesday came as part of a major reshuffle of Zaire's diplomatic posts.

Karl-i-Bond returned to Zaire in June 1985 under a presidential amnesty, and has since not engaged in political activity.

New coalition possible

ROME (AP) — Italian politicians have reached an understanding that would enable Socialist Bettino Craxi to form another coalition government and end Italy's current political crisis, Craxi indicated late Wednesday.

"During consultations today with parties of the coalition and of the opposition I gathered many useful elements," Craxi said in a statement. "I believe that one can forsee a positive solution to the crisis."

Craxi, on the second day of his attempt to form a new government, spoke a few hours after meeting with Ciriaco De Mita, leader of the dominant Christian Democrat Party, which has been seeking a limit on how long Craxi can hold the premiership.
