Haig Favors Tough Talk With Russia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Alexander M. Haig, the former supreme allied commander in Europe, said today the Senate should link ratification of the SALT II treaty with an attempt to halt Soviet military "adventurism" around the world.

"It's time for us to pull up our socks and put the Soviet Union on notice that the kinds of activities we've been witnessing are no longer acceptable," Haig told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

He said the United States should tell the Soviets that arms control negotiations and even normal East-West relations are not consistent with such activities as the Soviet sponsorship of Cuban "proxy" combat troops in Africa and elsewhere.

"I would like clarifications from the executive branch that at long last there is recognition that these illegal Soviet interventions" will no longer be tolerated, Haig said.

Haig echoed testimony earlier this week by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who accused the Soviet Union of launching "a geopolitical offensive" over the past two years.

Haig said it is "mindless" for the United States to go ahead with SALT while ignoring Soviet activities that endanger vital U.S. security interests.

He renewed his appeal to the Senate to set the SALT II treaty aside pending clarification of American strategic policy and a commitment for greater defense spending to modernize U.S. strategic and conventional forces.

Haig and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., joined a growing number of officials calling on President Carter to submit his defense budget before the SALT vote as evidence of his commitment to more military spending to modernize strategic forces.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the Senate's No. 2 Democratic leader, predicted Wednesday that the treaty will be ratified after a compromise involving increased military spending and a commitment to seek far deeper reductions in nuclear weapons in future SALT III negotiations.

"The president going on television and saying that we will have an increase in spending will not be a sufficient answer," Goldwater said in a statement. "He must send down in written form his request for next year's budget, so that the members of the Senate will know what they are voting for when the time comes to vote for SALT II."

Goldwater is considered likely to vote against the treaty in any case.

"I believe that the treaty was loosely and somewhat poorly conceived and written," he said. "I believe we made concessions in the protocol we will live to regret if we ever ratify it, namely the exclusion of the Backfire bomber, which is one of the most lethal weapons the Soviets have developed...."

But Goldwater, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, also said the matter of verifying Soviet compliance with the treaty's terms is not the problem some have feared.

"With almost a lifetime background in electronics, radio and the use of frequencies, I say that while I'm not satisfied with the extent of verification that we can achieve, we can do an acceptable job with the certain knowlege that we can improve this as time goes on," he said.

Typhoon Rips Hong Kong

HONG KONG (UPI) — Typhoon Hope smashed into Hong Kong with ferocious 150 mph winds today and marine police searched for a boat carrying 408 Vietnamese refugees feared lost at sea.

"I don't hold out much hope for them," a marine police spokesman said. "If they are out to sea in that kind of a boat, it aill be a miracle if they've survived."

Macao authorities pushed the refugee-crammed junk back out to sea Wednesday after accepting only a family of five, which included a pregnant mother. The boat, sail powered, was last seen headed toward Hong Kong.

Officals said at least three people were killed and 123 injured in Hong Kong.

The typhoon struck with incredible fury, tossing ocean-going freighters onto piers, crashing uprooted light poles through car windows and wreaking widespread destruction on the tiny colony.

The Hong Kong fatalities included a 3-year-old girl who drowned when swept off her family's fishing junk, an electrician electrocuted by a cable knocked down in the storm and a 66-year-old man whose house collapsed on him.

The typhoon collapsed dozens of squatter shacks, flooded many low-lying areas, toppled cranes and knocked oat electricity, water and communication services across hong kong.

Hope passed over Hong Kong and slammed into the China mainland, but was reported losing strength quickly.

Officials said they had no way to determine how many refugees could have been on the open seas, although 478 slipped into Hong Kong Wednesday before the storm struck.

Marine police said 17 ships were tossed about in the harbor, eight of them colliding in four separate incidents.

Tree limbs, metal roofing, awnings, potted plants and other debris flew throagh Hong Kong streets and richocheted off buildings. Parked cars were crushed by falling trees.

The typhoon sucked windows out of buildings and flooded many homes. Officials said many of the flimsy shacks that serve as homes for immigrants from China were blown away. But the residents, evacuated as a precaution, were reported safe.

A Greek-registered container ship, the Argonaut, crashed into the famed Star Ferry pier, inflictng major damage and wedging itself into the sea wall. The 6,300-ton Panamanian-registerd Lamma Island ran aground at a cargo handling pier. There were no reports of injuries in either incident.

C.R. Conner To Leave Bank Post

Coffee R. Conner, for almost a quarter century a prominent area banker, has announced his resignation as an executive vice president of Lubbock National Bank, effective Sept. 1.

Conner, who began with LNB in its real estate division upon return from Army service in Germany in May of 1956, will pursue private business interests, including some he already has, and in expanding additional undertakings.

A vice president of Lubbock National since 1958 and an executive vice president since 1974, Conner is a director of both LNB and Southwest National Bank, and the West Central Investment Corp., an LNB subsidiary. He also is a past president and currently a member of the Lubbock Economic Council and a member of the Texas Mortgage Bankers Association.

In announcing his resignation to his LNB associates, Conner had high praise for fellow officers, directors and staff members.

"It has been a great privilege to be a member of such an outstanding and progressive organization," he said, "and to have contact and friendships not only with my co-workers but, also, with members of the general public. My family and I are very grateful to all concerned and for the advancement which fortunately has been mine down through the years."

El Paso Times Target Of Suit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A federal prosecutor who survived an assassination attempt last Nov. 21 claims in a $20 million lawsuit against the El Paso Times that articles in the paper "created a climate of hatred, distrust and hostility" that contributed to the attack.

Times officials said they would not comment on the suit until they had studied the allegations.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, 38, a central figure in a federal grand jury investigation into international drug trafficking centered in El Paso, filed the suit Wednesday in state court.

Panel Criticizes BCD's Methods

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Human Relations Commission Wednesday night attacked the Board of City Development's methods of appointing members, saying the board and its counterpart, the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, prohibit the appointment of minority members.

In a 2½-hour monthly meeting sparked with raised voices accusing HRC members of not accomplishing anything, the commission voted to recommend that city council members change the 1965 ordinance to "assure a proportionate number of minorities on the board."

Members said that the Chamber of Commerce and the Board of City Development actually are one and the same, and that appointments to each board are made at the same time.

Five of the Chamber-BCD's 15 outgoing members serve as a nominating committee, while another five nominees for the vacancies are submitted by the city council.

The nominating ballots are then sent to the Chamber of Commerce, where they are voted on by the general membership. Those who get the most votes are approved by the city council.

John Logan, executive vice president and general manager of the Chamber, today confirmed the method of naming members to the BCD, but said that a Mexican-American and a black are now serving on the board.

In saying that the city resolution needs to be changed, HRC members said they would ask the present city council (none of whom were in office in 1965), if this ordinance "reflects their intent."

The issue will be brought before council members at the next city council meeting, according to Vaughn Hendrie, the city's director of community relations.

Doctors Warned Stress Test Inaccurate

BOSTON (AP) — The exercise electrocardiogram, a common part of routine physical exams, is so inaccurate it has little value in predicting whether people have heart disease, a study says.

The report concludes that doctors can judge almost as well whether patients have heart disease simply by noting their age and sex and whether they have chest pain.

With this exam, often called a stress test, doctors use an electrocardiograph to record the electrical currents of the patient's heart while he is walking on a treadmill. By analyzing the waves produced, doctors thought they could tell whether the patient had coronary artery disease, a narrowing of the blood vessels that feed the heart. This disease can lead to heart attack and crippling heart pain.

In their study, the researchers found that test results indicating heart trouble turned out to be false alarms 54 percent of the time among women and 12 percent among men.

The study was conducted at University Hospital in Boston and published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The report was based on a review of 2,045 people who participated in a nationwide study sponsored by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute. The patients were first given exercise electrocardiograms. Then the results of those tests were checked by a more detailed method involving the injection of dye into the heart.

Based on statistics, doctors know that a man who complains of chest pain has an 89 percent chance of having heart disease. Dr. Thomas J. Ryan, one of the researchers, said for those suffering chest pain, a poor showing on the stress test adds little to what a doctor already knows about the patient's chances for heart disease.

On the other hand, if the patient passes the stress test, doctors should ignore it because there is a large chance the test is inaccurate.

Among people who statistically have a low chance of developing this disease, the doctors said, a poor showing on the stress test is apt to be false, while a good result only confirms what the physician already suspects.

Until now, Ryan said, "the stress test has been a glamour item" among doctors.

"This is a message mostly for practicing doctors to be mindful that the original enthusiasm for the exercise stress test as being diagnostic of coronary artery disease has limitations," Ryan said in an interview.

Ryan said doctors should not give up using the stress test, since it is still useful for checking other coronary problems, such as irregular heartbeat.

He said patients should not be totally reassured or greatly alarmed by the results of their stress tests.

Increased Use Of Skylights Seen

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The growing energy problem could bring about a renaissance of the Roman-style atrium principle in American homes and commercial buildings.

The atrium itself — the court in the center of the building open to the sun — is basic to Spanish and much other Mediterranean architecture and still is found all over America.

But the modern return to the atrium principle generally will involve increasing use of the skylight to cut down on window surface and to save energy used in lighting as well as for heating, says the Architectural Aluminum Manufacturers Association.

This burgeoning trend is a curious reversal of thinking, the association said. "As recently as the early 1970s, government regulatory agencies and government-endorsed industry regulatory bodies were contending that the skylight was an energy waster."

Perhaps it was when it was used mainly to cap an air shaft and let in a little dim light for inside windows in a factory or tenement building.

But the electronic computer has been used in the last few years by building groups and architects to test the potential of the skylight with some surprising results.

For example, the computer projected that a typical one-story factory in Jacksonville, Fla., could save $35,000 a year in electric power cost by having 3.6 percent of its roof area devoted to skylights.

This projection was for a building 850 feet long, 316 feet wide and 55 feet in height. Each square foot of skylight, the computer said, would save $4 worth of energy a year compared with the surrounding insulated opaque roof. This saving is from combined heating and air conditioning costs.

The computer said a comparable skylight in a similar building in the latitude of Boston would save $13,500 a year. The big difference, of course, is that Jacksonville gets a lot more sunshine.

John Wolf, president of the Architectural Aluminum Manufacturers Association, said, "The potential energy savings by judicious use of skylights could be astronomic."

Putting big skylights in modern, wide-span, one-floor factories is easy from the standpoint of architectural design but how do you go about putting them in homes?

"Actually, skylights already have begun to make a significant impact in home construction," Wolf said. "One of our building contractor members predicts that within a few years all newly built homes will have two to three skylights for every 10 windows."

While the energy savings of skylights are not nearly so dramatic in homes as in factories, Wolf said, architects and homeowners also are attracted by the pleasing lighting effects that can be created by the judicious placing of skylights.

However, he predicted, architects increasingly will target on skylight use in the home to save on the cost of heating and air conditioning as well as to provide a light, airy environment.

"Skylights always have been retrofitted into old houses and store and office buildings to some extent," Wolf said, "and our members say orders for such installations have doubled in the past two years."

Judge Sends Man To Institution

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — A mildly retarded young man who grew up believing it was normal to engage in homosexual relations with young boys will likely spend the rest of his life in a mental institution because there is no place else for him to go.

Superior Court Judge Richard Guy Tuesday placed Norman Nason, 20, on probation for the rest of his life and had the young man voluntary commit himself to Eastern State Hospital.

Nason had pleaded guilty to a chage of statutory rape in connection with an incident involving two boys, aged 5 and 7.

The court was told that Nason, the son of a mentally retarded woman, was diagnosed at an early age as suffering from borderline mental retardation and spent the first 18 years of his life in a state institution.

During this time, Nason was sexually victimized, and, in turn, victimized other residents — all the time believing that homosexual activities with young boys were normal.

Psychiatrists who recently examined Nason concluded that the young man would continue to commit sexual offenses with young boys if allowed to remain free because of his "limited ability" to learn from his environment.

But the same psychiatrists said Nason was not a sexual psychopath and did not fit into any existing state programs designed for such offenders.

Texan Warned Johnson Of Coming Energy Crisis

AUSTIN (AP) — President Carter's emergency energy program may surprise some, but a group of Texas officials and industry leaders have warned of a coming energy crunch for almost three decades.

"I wrote President Johnson a letter in 1967 saying that unless we faced up to excessive imports of oil it could drive the nation into bankruptcy," says Jim Langdon, former Texas Railroad Commission member and now an Austin attorney.

Even earlier, in the 1950s, the late former commission member Ernest O. Thompson urged that domestic oil supplies be developed instead of relying on cheap Middle East oil.

Dr. John McKetta of the University of Texas was an early crusader for more domestic production.

The Texas pleadings for a workable national energy policy was taken up by Govs. John Connally and Dolph Briscoe and is carried on today by Gov. Bill Clements.

Members of the Texas Railroad Commission have become a traveling lobby for increased oil production, making numerous trips to Washington to talk with congressmen and appear before committees.

"The general public has been fed such a fantistic amount of misinformation, wishful thinking, misplaced hopes and plain demagoguery, that Americans have yet to really look their energy future in the eye," said D.K. Davis, staff vice president of Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, in a recent speech.

Langdon told President Johnson in 1967, "Quite frankly our nation may be heading for serious trouble if there is not a change in oil policy. ... It seems clear to me that unless the downward trend is reversed, this nation can soon find itself in a position in which it can fill neither the gap left by the next Mideast crisis nor even its own growing requirements in an emergency."

Langdon, Davis and the others stress that maybe 98 percent of the nation's potential oil and gas supplies never have been tested.

"Production has been developed on only 50,000 square miles, less than 2 percent, most of that was relatively shallow," Davis said. "The bureaucrats are determined that we should walk away from the potential of the other 98 percent."

Geologists have said for years that only about one-third of discovered oil is recovered without expensive special techniques and hugh quantities of new natural gas exist in geological areas deeper than 15,000 feet.

New prices for oil and gas and new techniques make these supplies available, the Texans say.

Another idea Texas leaders are trying to sell right now is the fact the Texas has plenty of natural gas for sale, particularly for industries that want to switch from heating oil and diesel.

Gas is still cheaper and cleaner than coal, which is not available in sufficient quantity.

Encouraged by higher prices in unregulated areas, such as Texas, enough new gas wells were drilled the past two years to ease the gas shortage.

Davis and other spokesmen for TIPRO have been carrying the messages to Eastern distributors from New England to Florida that Texas has natural gas to sell, if the government keeps hands off.

Potential deep gas fields onshore and offshore of Texas and Louisiana contain more gatural gas than the 50-year supply believed to be left elsewhere in the country, they say.

"It's calculated to contain up to 105,000 trillion cubic feet of gas," says Davis. "This means that if we used only this one source of energy — no coal, no oil, no nuclear, no solar, no anything — and if we use energy at three times our present consumption, it would still provide all our energy needs in this country for 500 years. We could export gas to Mexico."

Davis admits the estimate is optimistic. "But if we more than doubled U.S consumption of natural gas to 50 trillion cubic feet a year, then only 10 percent of this possible reserve (in Texas and Louisiana) could still provide the needs of the entire country for 200 years."

Insurance Man Prints 'Travelog'

By JOHN VIRTUE

MCALLEN (UPI) — Dan Sanborn travels to Mexico with more than a quarter of a million American tourists each year.

Sanborn, a short, jovial man of 75, doesn't personally accompany all those tourists. But his yellow "Travelog" with the bullfighter on the cover does.

A one-time newsman, Sanborn is an insurance agent who turns out the most popular travel guide for motorists heading south to Mexico.

And it's free. But you have to buy short term Mexican insurance (U.S. policies won't cover you south of the Rio Grande) from one of Sanborn's 22 border agencies in order to obtain the "Travelog," the complete volume being a loose leaf binder the thickness of the New York City telephone directory.

Laced with good humor, Sanborn's "Travelog" is a detailed guide covering every single mile of asphalt highway over which a tourist might travel.

For instance, a typical note on Highway 57 to Mexico City reads:

"Mile 2½ — careful for natives alongside the rad ahead selling live things — birds, iguanas, foxes, hamsters, etc. Give 'em a wide berth."

Or:

"Mile 3¼ — note forbidding mountain range ahead — how to get over it? Under it? Through it? Fear not — Dauntless Dan will manage it for you."

Sanborn, who started the guide in 1952, knows of what he writes.

"At one time or another I've traveled every mile in the log," he said in an interview in his McAllen headquarters.

"As soon as we hear of a new road, we tackle it — as soon as it's ready for tourists," he said. "There's no part of Mexico we haven't covered."

Sanborn and his team are constantly updating the log, traveling an average of 50,000 miles a year.

Sometimes, in vast uninhabited stretches of Mexico, it's not easy to find material for the log.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Roadblock Of Regulation

PRESIDENT CARTER and Congress are debating how to use scarce energy resources once again. And once again they are ignoring a sure-fire way to deal with the problem, i.e., make some sense of the way the federal government sets transportation policy.

Bureaucrats have provided few incentives to increase use of the most efficient vehicle for inter-city transportation—the bus.

To his credit, Mr. Carter has recognized that excessive regulation has burdened the transportation industry. With his support, Congress passed a law eliminating some of the most senseless restrictions on the airlines, for example.

Now the President is backing similar bills for the trucking and railroad industries.

THE PROBLEM is that federal regulators and their friends in Congress have demonstrated a persistent proclivity in keeping some control over who should be allowed to provide transportation and at what rate.

The White House has been unable to resolve the organizational nightmare that characterizes the government's involvement in transportation.

Ex-Secretary Brock Adams' Transportation Department deals neither with all forms of transportation nor with the various facets of the federal role in each type of service.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, the Maritime Administration and the Civil Aeronautics Board have major voices on transportation policy but are outside DOT's control.

Richard E. Cohen, reporter for the National Journal weekly on politics and government, writes: "The (transportation) department itself is the site of major bureaucratic battles between interests that should be cooperating in the national interest rather than protecting narrow self-interests."

ALTHOUGH DOT has nominal control of both the Federal Highway Administration and the Urban Mass Transit Administration, it has, for example, failed to coordinate the building of highways and public transit in a complementary fashion.

Proposals to extend or expand Interstate Highways through Texas are sacrificed to massively expensive public transportation experiments in the northeast.

A federal study commission recently concluded that current spending plans can finance little more than maintenance of the "world's best transportation system," despite a predicted doubling of total passenger miles between 1975 and the end of this century.

If President Carter's latest energy plan is anything more than an attempt to boost sagging political prospects, he and his aides must come to grips with the expanding role of public transportation in a constantly changing nation.

Windfall profits? Texaco reports an average profit of 1.8 cents per gallon. THE TROUBLE with the House's refusal to expel Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr. is that some may misinterpret the action to mean that being black or being a Congressman is a license to play fast and loose with public funds.

A Michigan Democrat, Diggs has been convicted of mail fraud and of making false statements.

Despite the charges of payroll padding and kickbacks, Diggs was re-elected last fall after a campaign during which his defenders said he hadn't done anything white Congressmen hadn't done and he was being discriminated against.

"I think most of the American people believe you shouldn't steal $40,000 and keep your job," Rep. William E. Danmeyer, R-Calif., said, however, during debate over whether the House should expel Diggs.

By a 205-197 vote, the House tabled the expulsion motion. Instead, it accepted the House Ethics Committee's recommendation that Diggs be censured, whatever that means.

As part of the deal, Diggs agreed to repay $40,031.66 to the U.S. Treasury and to apologize, becoming the first House member to be so chastised in more than 50 years.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock favored expulsion, going against the Democratic party line.

THERE'S SOMETHING un-American in the mentality that would require service station owners to post their "profit" margins for public inspection.

Energy Department bureaucrats, challenged by angry retailers, said well, uh, maybe it'd suffice if stations just certified they're not exceeding the legal limit of 15.4 cents per gallon mark-up.

Ye gods. Next thing you know, every one of us will have to wear a sign around our neck certifying we haven't spit on the sidewalk or robbed a bank today.

If Congress, the White House and the bureaucrats would quit waging war against Americans—from the big oil companies to the corner service station—and stand up to the OPEC governments instead, we'd be getting somewhere.

Free Americans and competition and ample supply soon would end the price spiral.

Holmes Alexander:

Stonewall Jackson Of The Deep

WASHINGTON—America's Merchant Marine, apart from the U.S. Navy, has an up and down history as billowy as the ocean waves it rides.

Its lowest sea trough—from which the Merchant Marine never really emerged—occurred more than 100 years ago and was largely the doing of a gentleman of the Old South, Confederate Adm. Raphael Semmes.

This astonishing sea dog virtually drove Yankee shipping off the sea. This is what Semmes' best biographer says about it.

"By his torch and the fear he generated, Semmes did more than any single man to drive the American fleet from the high seas. Besides all this, he nearly brought about a third war between the U.S. and Great Britain."

IN PART, MY research relates to a fan letter from Frank Kerr that shipbuilders are all like. Kerr is indignant and alarmed that America wants to be "gem of the ocean" but is entirely without luster as a sea trader.

Kerr writes me: "With the plight of the American Merchant Marine becoming a national disgrace, thought you might be interested in the blunt assessment of the problem by leading U.S. shipbuilders."

Yes, every American has a stake in our ocean trade. We have become dependent on foreigners to carry 90 percent of our trade. If this is awkward and expensive in peacetime, it would be catastrophic in war, since we import 68 of the 71 raw materials that are indispensable for defense.

All our armed services would grind to a halt if the oil tankers from OPEC could not move freely.

WE NEED TO be reminded how this sorry predicament came about. Sea shipping is the only activity where the U.S. suffered heavily and never fully recovered. This takes us back to April 1861 and the first shot of the war between the states at Fort Sumter, Charleston, S.C.

The North was dependent for revenue on its world trade in which it stood very close to Great Britain. The South was dependent on the soutn for its big money crop—cotton—to Europe.

Merchant ships then and now are helpless at sea without navy support. President Lincoln had a war fleet of 90 ships though not all were serviceable enough to lay a tight blockade of the Southern ports from Norfolk to New Orleans.

The Southern states, not being a nation at the start of the war, had to build a navy by capture. There was no naval academy at that time. Midshipmen were trained before the mast to become officers.

But there was Raphael Semmes, Marylander by birth, Alabaman by residence. Lean, soft-spoken, scholarly, a peacetime lawyer and secretary of lighthouses, Semmes left his desk job, applied to the Confederate Navy for sea duty and became the Stonewall Jackson of the deep.

Since there was no Southern fleet, Semmes sailed as a lone raider in the seapaths of the world. His first ship, renamed the Sumter was a made-over revenue cutter, but he ran past Yankee warships out of the Mississippi, ranged the Atlantic and took 18 prizes.

He then obtained a British built-to-order cruiser, the Alabama and accounted for 69 other Northern merchantmen.

Effectively, it was the end of America as a major shipping power. Many other factors were evident in the century that followed, but it is a solemn fact that the U.S. never recovered from Raphael Semmes, the Rebel Raider.

Sylvia Porter:

Where To Find Work As Medical Assistant

(Third of four columns)

WASHINGTON—The field of medical assisting offers virtually unlimited opportunities for jobs today—and the opportunities will expand far into the future.

It is open to you, no matter what your age, and it welcomes you whether you are entering the job market for the first time, returning after years of absence or are now employed elsewhere.

There are an estimated 400,000 medical assistants at work today, making it the No. 2 profession in the health service field, second only to nursing.

As a medical assistant, your duties will range from running a doctor's office, to scheduling appointments, keeping records, taking temperatures, even assisting at minor surgery.

LET'S SAY, THEN, that you are intrigued. How do you get a job as a medical assistant?

(1) Go to school. Many junior and community colleges offer an Associate of Arts degree in medical assisting after two years of study. One-year courses are also available in vocational, technical, or privately-owned schools.

As of today, no legal licensing, mandatory certification or continuing education requirements apply to medical assistants. However, certification and registration are offered by two organizations: the American Association of Medical Assistants (AAMA) and American Medical Technologists.

Most medical assistants enter the field directly from high school or come from some other job. The fundamental requirements are: basic office skills, such as typing and perhaps shorthand, and an interest in medicine.

(2) IN LOOKING FOR a job you might want to decide in advance which type of medical institution would interest you most: hospitals, health maintenance organizations (HMOs), nursing homes, pharmaceutical companies, etc.

You also might want to choose a medical specialty in advance of looking, too: for instance, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, allergy, immunology, dentistry. The key point is underlined once again: the field is wide open.

(3) Your three main sources of employment information, according to Webster's Medical Office Handbook, (G. & C. Merriam Co., $10.95) are: (a) county medical societies; (b) medical and general employment agencies; and (c) ads placed by physicians.

You will find the addresses for the county medical societies and employment agencies in your area in the phone book. Job agencies also may advertise in the book's Yellow Pages. A simple phone call will give you some idea of the jobs available.

(4) ANSWERING ADS IS an excellent way to obtain a job as a medical assistant. You'll find these ads in the "employment opportunities" section of your local newspapers.

The openings will be listed under: "medical typist"; "medical assistant"; "medical assistant/admin."; "medical secretary"; or "medical receptionist."

Usually the ad will indicate the kind of work involved—use of dictating machine, typing, filing, etc. Some will indicate the medical specialty, such as podiatry, OB/GYN, orthopedics or surgery.

Before answering the ad, check whether the skills you have match those listed as required and also consider whether this is the medical specialty in which you truly want to develop your career.

(5) Keep in mind that it is illegal for any prospective employer to discriminate against you on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin or age.

Federal laws also prohibit an employer from refusing to hire a handicapped individual as long as the handicap does not prevent you from appropriate performance on the job.

(6) Take special care with your resume and your letter of application in this job hunt for your prospective employer well may have the barest minimum of time to look over your qualifications.

IF YOU ARE writing an unsolicited letter, explain briefly why you are interested in working for a particular physician or in a particular practice.

Include a statement of your skills and if you have had no previous job, supplement your resume with the business and secretarial courses you have completed, any free-lance work you have done.

(7) If the doctor indicates he will call you, set up a time you will be at home to receive his message.

Different physicians have different requirements so if this interview does not result in a job, look forward to the next, which might.

Tomorrow: What's New In the Medical Office?

John D. Lofton:

A 'PUSH' In Wrong Direction

WASHINGTON—The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has announced that it is giving $700,000 of your hard-earned tax dollars and mine to PUSH for Excellence, an outfit headed by black civil rights leader Rev. Jesse Jackson.

The purpose of this grant, says an HEW press release, is to "encourage the nation's urban students in attaining academic excellence" by strengthening three current PUSH (People United to Save Humanity) programs in Chicago, Los Angeles and Kansas City, Mo., and by initiating three new projects in Denver, Chattanooga and Memphis.

All totaled, over the next three years, the department has asked Congress to give PUSH for Excellence $3 million more.

ACCORDING TO HEW, "an estimated 90,000 students in 60 high schools in six urban communities will benefit from the PUSH for Excellence projects" as a result of this $700,000 handout.

The program seeks to encourage positive changes in students, particularly the disadvantaged, to enable them to acquire basic skills and achieve academic excellence.

The PUSH project emphasizes opportunity, motivation, responsibility and accountability for student learning provided through home, school and community cooperation.

What I wonder about is the performance record of the PUSH program as it has operated in 10 Chicago senior high schools, nine Los Angeles senior highs, and one Kansas City, Mo., senior high.

When I asked HEW to send me a copy of the department's evaluation which formed the basis of its decision to fund the PUSH programs, here is what I received:

— A 14-PAGE PAMPHLET published by the National Institute of Education, titled "Violent Schools—Safe Schools," which details the rising tide of crime and violence engulfing our public schools.

— A 2½-page-brief position paper, published by PUSH itself, which outlines the goals of the PUSH for Excellence program but says nothing whatsoever about what it has actually accomplished.

— A copy of a 1976 article by Washington Post columnist William Raspberry, which outlines the PUSH plan for improving education but is silent on the program's achievements.

— FINALLY, A 47-PAGE proposal submitted to HEW by the PUSH organization making the case why it should get its most recent $700,000 federal grant.

Once again, nowhere in this document are the achievements of the PUSH program pointed out. In fact, a section headed "Evaluation" notes: "A formative evaluation of PUSH for Excellence programs focused on the initial three program sites is now taking place funded by the Ford Foundation.

"The primary purpose of this evaluation is to assist the PUSH for Excellence program staff in developing the program...In addition, the National Institute of Education will be funding an evaluation of a summative nature to extend over a 36-month period.

"Its basic purpose is to determine the effectiveness and impact of PUSH for Excellence demonstration projects."

AN ANALYSIS FOR The New York Times by Edward Fiske reports that the PUSH program has, during the last three years, received $1.1 million from the federal government and private donors, but the organization's general counsel, John Busante, "did not provide data on how this money was spent."

Another Times story about the PUSH program reports the principal of a participating Chicago school, the Chicago Vocational School, as saying that the PUSH program had outlived its usefulness at his school and it would probably be phased out.

It seems to me that when the federal government decides to dole out millions of tax dollars to fund a private project, it ought to be on the basis of that project's performance, not its goals.

Researcher Says Agaves Neglected

PHOENIX (AP) — Botanist Howard Scott Gentry is putting the final touches on the monumental work of his 75 years, a book entitled "Agaves of North America."

It doesn't bother him that probably no more than 2,000 copies will be sold, even though he's a world authority on Agaves — desert neighbors of the cactus — and his work was sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

"The agaves needed doing since they were so poorly known," he explains. "They had to be classified scientifically. It was a branch of science too long neglected."

Wiry, sprightly in walk and mental agility, Gentry concedes his endeavor is similar to the man who climbs a mountain because it's there.

Most residents of this country, if they've ever heard of an agave, recognize only the so-called century plant (Agave Americana). And that because of the plant's reputation of blooming only once in 100 years — with a 40-foot flower stalk — and then dying.

Most species of agaves are like that. Usually gigantic plants, they boom only once in 10 years, 20 years, or even longer, and then die. Which is not something to endear them to botanists, who make their living and reputations from classifying plants by their flowers.

For example, Gentry, now research botanist at the famed Desert Botanical Garden here, transplanted his first agave specimen on Oct. 7, 1935. He was pretty certain of its botanical name, but couldn't confirm it scientifically until it flowered — in 1979.

Gentry believes he has collected and catalogued more agaves than everyone else combined, living and dead.

"He's the acknowledged authority, very thorough, very conservative, very well thought of," says Dr. Frank Crosswhite, the agave expert at the University of Arizona's Boyce Thompson Arboretum in Superior.

Gentry concedes the agave never has had any economic value in this country, and isn't likely to ever have any — aside from limited use as a landscape plant in frost-free regions.

In Mexico, certain species of agave are used to produce pulque, a beer-like drink. Tequila, the backbone of Margarita cocktails, is distilled from agave tequilana. Mescal is distilled from various species of agave. Sisal fiber and henequen fiber comes from other species. But the U.S. climate is too harsh to grow the valuable species on a commercial basis.

Gentry says other agave are potential sources for drugs like Cortisone, sex hormones and even the birth control pill for women.

Gentry retired from the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1971 and joined the Desert Botanical Garden. The garden has probably the best living collection of agave — most of them gathered by Gentry — and its herbarium, built for him, has 20,000 or more specimens of desert plants he's collected. Gentry feels only the U.S. National Herbarium in Washington can top his agave collection — and that because he's given them a duplicate of everything he has.

Fossil Fuels Necessary For Farmers

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — No matter what the price of fuel, farmers are stuck using fossil fuels to produce the nation's food and fiber, says an Ohio State University agricultural economist.

There's not much chance for Ohio farms to return to the romantic pre-World War I agriculture in which animals powered the farm.

Sam Huber, of Ohio State University, says there isn't enough land to grow feed for the horses, nor are there enough people living in the country to operate the number of teams needed to grow food for 200 million Americans.

"You're talking about 50 teams of horses to replace one 100-horsepower tractor. It would take 50 men to run the teams so you just wouldn't have the manpower," Huber said.

"Since agricultural labor has been absorbed into new industries, the labor would not be available unless you took everyone in the auto industry and farm tractor industry and shifted them back into agriculture. Of course, they'd probably be making buggies."

Huber said the Civil War and the two world wars hastened the mechanization of American agriculture. Before World War II, he said, there were slightly fewer than 100,000 tractors in the state, while after the war there were more than 150,000 tractors.

He said the increase was necessary to compensate for the loss of manpower to the military. However, when the shooting stopped, many farm jobs no longer existed.

Accident Reduces Demand For Nuclear Plants

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Three Mile Island accident has slowed the growth of the nuclear industry, but business should improve in the early 1980s, a Westinghouse Electric Corp. official says.

Gordon C. Hurlbert, president of the Westinghouse Power Systems Co., in an interview, said that prior to the March 28th incident, the industry would have sold six to 10 nuclear plants in the United States this year and next.

"Now we will be lucky to sell four to six," he said.

The reduced demand for reactors, which Hurlbert attributed directly to the accident near Harrisburg, Pa., may last until 1982, he said.

In the meantime, Westinghouse will be working off a worldwide $4 billion nuclear backlog, about 50 percent of that in reactors and 50 percent in the rapidly growing nuclear fuel business.

One of the largest nuclear reactor manufacturers in the world, Westinghouse has been receiving about two out of every five nuclear orders in the United States.

Hurlbert said there may have to be some some layoffs at Westinghouse nuclear components plants, which employ about 2,200 hourly workers. As for the nuclear operations' financial health, he said, "we don't expect to lose money in the foreseeable future."

Hurlbert said nuclear business is much healthier overseas. With the exception of current trouble with a Phillippine contract, reactor orders appear strong in South Korea, France, Japan and Spain, he said.

To help the industry in the United States, Hurlbert said, changes are needed in nuclear insurance policies. He feels those could come in six months to a year, with the result being a boost in nuclear interest.

Hurlbert, who was giving Westinghouse's first in-depth comments on nuclear power after Three Mile Island, said things have been changing since the accident. As for safety, he said Westinghouse reactors are different from those built by J. Ray McDermott & Co. Inc.'s Babcock & Wilcox Co. subsidiary, which supplied the TMI plant.

Even though the Westinghouse reactor "is inherently more tolerant of human error," Hurlbert said "there is no way to make something perfect."

Still, he said, Westinghouse is trying to make things safer. The company is making what Hurlbert called "exhaustive reviews of design" to insure safety.

He said the industry also is taking the initiative to review nuclear power because of Three Mile Island. He stressed that no one in the industry would compromise safety, a charge made by anti-nuclear forces.

"The anti-nuclear people are the same people who want no growth and want to change the system," Hurlbert said.

When the accident first occurred, Westinghouse and others in the industry were reluctant to discuss what happened. "We wanted to be careful about taking a stand on TMI when we didn't have the facts," Hurlbert said.

He said Westinghouse feels it has a social responsibility and wants to talk about nuclear power.

Any employee who questions the safety of reactors is free to bring his concern to top Westinghouse officials, Hurlbert said.

Despite what may have seemed to be much negative publicity resulting from Three Mile Island, Hurlbert believes the accident served one very useful purpose.

"It helped inform and educate people about alternate fuels and more education will help nuclear power."

Arms Ban Urged At Conference

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A world conference of science and religion scholars unanimously appealed to governments today for "reduction and eventual abolition" of nuclear weapons.

The weapons pose a "grave peril to humankind," declared the World Conference on Science, Faith and Future.

"Sharp changes by the superpowers towards a counterforce strategy are so destabilizing that sober scientists estimate a nuclear holocaust is probable before the end of the century," a conference resolution warned.

Drafted by a committee chaired by Anglican Bishop J.S. Habgood of Durham, England, the resolution also said: "We grieve that so many of the most able scientists ... are seduced away from the nobler aspirations of science into the unwitting service of mutual destruction."

The resolution urged full implementation of SALT II accords to limit nuclear arms followed by immediate steps to reduce them, a comprehensive ban for nuclear testing and a halt to developing new nuclear weapons.

Earlier, a report about biological manipulation condemned forms of genetic engineering that seek to modify the human line to produce "desired" types of people.

This type of manipulation is ethically objectionable because it presumes the "power to decide what kind of human beings are desired and what are not," declares a report for the international conference.

Terming genetic engineering "one of the most powerful tools of biological research ever developed" and a potential "determinant of what life may be," the report says the hazards of recombining genetic codes must be recognized "before it is too late."

"Otherwise, we may be confronted with a genetic holocaust."

The report, compiled by a 40-member group chaired by biologist Charles Birch of Sydney, Australia, and Christian theologian J. Robert Nelson of Boston, Mass., was received Sunday by the full conference without opposition. But by a show of hands, 27 of the 315 official delegates abstained from voting.

Meanwhile, at the 12-day conference sponsored by the World Council of Churches, action was deferred after stormy debate about a resolution proposed by Third World delegates condemning effects of science and technology on poor regions of Earth.

The two-hour discussion included bristling exchanges after a black Trinidad scientist described Third World people as "lazy." Others retorted that white corporate owners were the lazy ones who moved their industries into the Third World to obtain cheap labor from the underfed poor.

Earlier, the report about genetic manipulation opposed cloning of cells to produce identical replicas, while accepting genetic engineering to correct defects in fertilized ova and to improve plant and animal breeds.

The report says gene replacement in test-tube fertilized ova puts the "primary emphasis on the instrumental value of human life rather than its intrinsic value."

There are "limits on the extent to which we may legitimately manipulate the human person," the report says, without jeopardizing the special "consciousness and sensitivity that makes possible" relationships with God and others.

"Humans are more than collections of genes" the report continues. "The human is not only conscious, it knows what it knows ... the Christian derives a special evaluation of human life" from seeing it as "made in the image of God."

Government Workforce Continues To Increase

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter seems to have promised more than he can deliver with his pledge to "cut the total size of the federal workforce."

He made that statment in an address to the nation Oct. 24 in which he outlined several steps he would take to combat inflation.

But at last count the total federal workforce has actually grown since then. As of May it had increased by about 27,000 people, bringing the total to 2.9 million civilian workers.

Even discounting normal summer and Postal Service hirings, Congress, and other areas beyond direct presidential control, federal employment is still creeping up.

In fact, the president may soon be forced to throw 1,000 to 2,000 federal workers off the payroll next Oct. 1 to meet a new legal ceiling on federal employment. He had hoped to cut employment through attrition and, in the process, emerge well beneath the ceiling.

True, Carter's actions have slowed hiring of full-time federal workers in the sector he directly controls. But this has been offset to a large degree by increased hiring of part-time and temporary help, which Carter did not attempt to cut.

Carter's proposed budget for the fiscal year which begins Oct. 1 also calls for reductions in the workforce. If he sticks to it, some of the promised cuts will eventually take place.

But so far Carter hasn't delivered what he promised, much as he failed to deliver on his campaign pledge to cut the number of federal agencies from an alleged 1,900 to 200.

Carter now has no hope whatsoever of getting the total number of governmental units anywhere close to 200, and in fact has abandoned or watered down several of his major reorganization plans because of congressional opposition.

What Carter promised Oct. 24 was this: "We will slash federal hiring and cut the federal workforce. ... I'm ordering tonight a cut in federal hiring (which) will cut the total size of the federal workforce."

Though he promised to cut "total" employment, he ordered only a semi-freeze for hiring, only in the segment he controls directly, and only of full-time, permanent employees. He left a loophole for part-time and temporary help.

But it sounded stronger to promise a "total" cut than to promise a cut in "full-time permanent employment in the executive branch, excluding the Postal Service," which is what he actually attempted.

Carter let agencies fill only half their full-time vacancies as they were vacated. The order lasted only a few months and in January was quietly replaced by specific personnel ceilings.

These actions have had their effect. As of May, the latest period for which the federal Office of Personnel Management has statistics, there were 28,212 fewer full-time federal workers by Carter's direct control than there were when he spoke.

But bureaucrats have endured hiring freezes off and on for decades, and know how to get the government's work done in spite of them. This time they seem to have hired more than 40,000 part-time and and temporary workers to take up the slack. While full-time, permanent employment has decreased in Carter's segment of the government, total employment in that segment — including part-time and temporary workers — has actually increased by about 14,000 since his speech.

All this leaves Carter with nearly 27,000 more federal workers drawing pay than will legally be allowed on the payroll Oct. 1 by a ceiling imposed by Congress even before Carter promised his cut.

While thousands of seasonal workers will routinely go back to college or other jobs before fall, there is a strong possibility Carter will have to take positive action to squeeze the workforce down to size and comply with the congressional ceiling.

Prospects For Gold Disputed

NEW YORK (AP) — If past performance were any guarantee of future results, finding a way to protect your savings from inflation would be simple.

A quick one-word answer would be "gold." Its price has doubled in the past two years and tripled in the past three, reaching record levels of over $300 an ounce in July before slipping back into the $290s early this week.

"Anyone who has ever followed our advice to buy gold and just hold it now holds gold at a profit," declared James Dines, an investment advisor long known as a leading "gold bug," as the price hit record levels.

Of course, past performance is no guarantee whatsoever of what will happen in the future, and even among gold's most ardent followers there is widespread disagreement over where it might go from here.

Regardless of its future prospects, any hope of getting in on the ground floor is gone. And even assuming that gold could double again in the next few years, to around $600 an ounce, there's little joy in contemplating what political, energy or economic upheavals might have to occur to send it that high.

If an individual with money to manage concludes, after taking all this into account, that he wants to put at least a small chunk of his assets into gold, he faces still another decision: Choosing among the many different vehicles for investing in the metal.

Gold bullion itself, though popular with a good many investors, has some inherent problems. If the individual takes possession of it, there are the costs of safeguarding it and probably having it assayed when he sells. If he leaves it with a dealer or other intermediary, there are storage costs.

One alternative approach is to buy stocks of companies that mine gold or silver, which has also doubled in price in the last two years. "With the prices of gold and silver in runaway uptrends, the mining companies are bound to report huge earnings and dividend increases," Dines said.

But some of the leading gold stocks lately have failed to match the rise in the price of gold itself, for reasons ranging from South African political uncertainties to the fact that some gold-mining concerns also deal in a variety of other metals.

ASA Ltd., an investment company concentrating on South Africa gold issues, traded recently at just above $26 a share — only about half of its peak price five years ago.

Lawrence Heim, a Portland, Ore., investment advisor, recommends that those who want some "gold insurance" among their investments opt for gold coins — South African krugerrands, Austrian 100 kroner, or Mexican 50 pesos.

Heim, who is predicting a decline in the gold price, recommended that his subscribers keep a relatively modest 10 percent of their assets in such coins.

"Many new gold 'deals' are now being offered to the public," he added. "We see where several firms are selling special gold medallions, and then there are those special gold 'passbook' accounts at certain big banks."

DR. LAMB

Working For Weight Loss

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My wife weighs 350 pounds. How can a problem like that be solved? I'm in a state of absolute desperation.

When we were married more than 30 years ago, she was a beautiful person. About seven months later, she became pregnant and three months into her pregnancy, she decided to go home and visit her relatives. The visit lasted two months and when she came back, I was shocked. It must have been a continual feast. I never imagined anyone could gain so much weight.

About 15 years ago she was having pains and did see a doctor who specialized in weight reduction. She lost 100 pounds. After that she had an operation for gallstones. But she didn't keep her weight off and like so many people, she continued to eat and grew and grew. This continued until the lining of her abdomen ruptured causing a hernia.

She's had several operations for a loop of her intestine protruding through the rupture. The operations haven't worked because she eats so much the rupture recurs.

You wouldn't believe how she's ruined her health. Her legs are swollen and she takes Dyazide capsules to get rid of the water. The lower six or eight inches of her legs are colored dark red to purple. All she ever does is sit and doze and eat. So what can be done? I'm so tired of the problem that I'm actually looking forward to the end of this life.

One of the greatest obstacles, I think, is my wife's lack of motivation and who can blame her? You've often recommended a weight loss of not more than about a pound a week. My wife is 200 pounds overweight so that would take about four years. A prolonged ordeal like that requires a lot of determination. If you can think of anything that might be helpful, I will be forever grateful. If my wife continues as she is, she will either be dead or a bedridden invalid.

DEAR READER — There is not very much that I can do. And I doubt your wife is going to be able to solve this problem herself.

Anyone who has such severe problems with obseity should certainly be under medical supervision. It is definitely a life-threatening disease at that stage. Your wife probably needs psychiatric help. She needs to understand why she has such binges of eating and why she is a compulsive eater. This could be just part of the total program that she needs to rehabilitate herself.

Yes, I know that losing a pound a week would represent a four-year stretch but the four years will pass anyway. The best approach is to establish small goals in between. If your wife just stops gaining and starts losing weight for a change, this might encourage her.

You could insist that she see a psychiatrist and offer to see a psychiatrist with her. I'm sure a doctor who specializes in weight control and a competent psychiatrist would agree that both would have something to contribute to the problem. Your challenge will be to get your wife to go along with the idea.

I am also sending you The Health Letter number 10-10, Depression: The Ups And Downs Of Life. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents by check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Real Estate Time-Sharing Plans Help Vacationers Beat Inflation

PITTSBURGH (ULI) — Small businessman Ray Yelley of Oakmont, Pa., just bought two weeks at a resort condominium in Hilton Head, S.C., To enjoy with his family and use as a bonus for his company's sales personnel and executives.

Stanley Farnsworth, an auto dealer in Plainwell, Mich., owns eight weeks at Island Club, Hilton Head. He too bought it for personal use and as an incentive for his sales people and mechanics.

Under a plan known as real estate time-sharing, Yelley purchased a specific two weeks each year at a specific resort condominium. Because he actually has a deed and title to the property, those two weeks are his to keep, or rent, or sell, or hand down to his heirs.

A variation, known as "right-to-use," provides a long-term lease instead of a deed and title.

"You are buying a vacation for the rest of your life at today's prices," said a spokesman for Resort-Investment, Ltd., of Pittsburgh, a company that markets time-share properties.

As in a conventional condominium situation, however, the owner pays a proportionate share of repairs, taxes, insurance and maintenance, which are not inflation proof.

The apartment or townhouse is purchased already furnished for anywhere from $1,100 to $15,500 per lifetime week, depending on size, location and season. For example, Christmas week in the West Indies would be more expensive than a week during the summer at the same resort.

To forestall the boredom of spending the same week at the same place year after year, or if employment doesn't permit a vacation at the same time each year, a swap service enables an owner to tie in with other time-sharing condominium owners throughout the western world.

A study undertaken by Dr. Richard L. Ragatz, a professor of urban and regional planning at the University of Oregon, indicated most time-share owners made their purchase because of the opportunity to exchange, and 90 percent were satisfied with the trade.

The second most frequent reason for purchase was the hedge against inflation, according to Ragatz' study.

Through exchange services such as Resort Condominiums International and Interval International, vacation exchanges are available in Canada, Mexico, Latin America, the Caribbean, Europe, and throughout the United States.

It's possible with the purchase of one week at Hilton Head to spend the next vacation skiing in Vermont, Colorado or Switzerland, snorkeling in the Caribbean, or touring museums in London.

Priority, however, is given to comparable units in the same season, generally on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Common Market Gets Political Presence

Commentary

STRASBOURG, France (UPI) — It is sometimes said that the European Economic Community is a commercial giant and a political pygmy.

The nine-nation Common Market — scheduled to expand to 12 members in the next few years — already is the world's second largest economic force after the United States.

But only last week in Strasbourg has the Community started to acquire a political presence independent of its member governments.

That presence now is provided by the new European Parliament, the first in history to be democratically elected across national frontiers.

Its 410 members, ranging from former prime ministers to bluff Yorkshire coal-miners, hardly have had time to adapt to the plush building the French government insists must remain the seat of their assembly.

So it is too early to judge whether the parliament will emerge as the voice of the European people and a major political force in its own right, or whether power will continue to reside with the national governments and parliaments.

Still, the potential for a political flowering exists. Visiting Congressman Sam Gibbons, a Florida Democrat, believes the European Parliament is similar in nature to the Continental Congress that preceeded the present U.S. Legislature.

The assembly did elect a president, Simone Veil, a 52year-old French grandmother and survivor of the Nazi's Auschwitz death camp. But it has spent much of its first days bogged down in maddening points of procedure, made worse by an antiquated and time-wasting system of voting.

The ideas have not yet begun to flow. Debate has yet to take over from inaugural rhetoric.

Many of the parliamentarians believe the assembly will become an effective force, and will manage to escape from the constraints to its power imposed by the national governments.

"You can't mobilize 180 million voters and then have such a parliament do nothing, achieve nothing or prove that nothing has changed," said former Belgian Premier Leo Tindemans.

Mrs. Louise Weiss, the oldest member at 86 and president of honor on the first day, said the parliament has the task of inspiring a new breed of international men and women like those who made Europe great during the Middle Ages, the Renaissance and the Age of Enlightenment.

"Our institutions have succeeded in producing European beets, butter, cheese, wine, calves — even European pigs. What they have not succeeded in doing is making Europeans," Mrs. Weiss said.

To be truthful, the parliament has not been very inspiring so far. To be fair, it is too soon to judge whether it will be.

American Workers' Productivity Drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Productivity among American workers dropped 3.8 percent during the second quarter of the year, the government reports. That is the sharpest decrease since a 6.9 percent drop in the first quarter of 1974.

The statistic announced Monday follows a 2.8 percent decline in the first quarter of this year. The last time productivity fell in two consecutive quarters was in 1974, when the economy went into a recession. Productivity is a measure of goods and services produced per hour. Economists say declining productivity tends to fuel inflation because businesses must charge more per unit of product or service to cover wage costs.

WORLD NEWS

Price Of Oil Shakes Thai Government

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Oil prices are shaking governments everywhere, and the two-month-old Thai government is particularly vulnerable.

Dependent on trucks to keep its economy moving, Thailand has for years kept prices for petroleum products among the lowest of any non-oil producing country in the world.

But the latest OPEC increases forced the government of Prime Minister Kriangsak Chamanand to boost controlled oil prices by 40 to 60 percent, sparking immediate increases in the cost of commodities. Large increases in water and electricity costs also are expected.

Labor unions are demanding the minimum wage be raised to meet higher prices and a recent workers' protest rally drew thousands of demonstrators despite a monsoon downpour.

Refugee Strategy

HONG KONG (UPI) — Many Asian leaders fear Hanoi has called only a temporary halt to the refugee flow and will once again unleash the human flood when international furor subsides.

"Vietnam can turn the tap off if it wants," Hong Kong Gov. Murray MacLehose said upon his return from the Geneva refugee conference. "But it also means it can turn it on again."

Asian analysts were intrigued that Vietnam issued a bitter propaganda blast against American and Italian warships operating rescue missions in the region. The verbal attack may have been a justification for renewing the refugee exodus.

Manila-Peking Deal

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — One of the unpublicized objectives of Philippine First Lady Imelda Marcos in visiting Peking earlier this month was to get assurance from the new Chinese leaders that they will keep out of Philippine communist affairs.

That pledge was given by the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Prime Minister Chou En-lai when diplomatic relations were established in 1975. Senior officials said it was renewed by Chairman Hua Guofeng (Hua Kuo-feng) this month.

Although the Philippines maintains friendly ties with communist countries such as China and the Soviet Union, it outlaws membership in the Communist Party of the Philippines.

Nearly all the top Communist Party leaders are in jail, but the recent resurgence of rebel activities in depressed rural areas has worried Philippine authorities.

Rescue Center

SINGAPORE (UPI) — The island nation of Singapore does not accept Vietnamese refugees, but it has become a center of international rescue efforts.

The rescue fleet ranges from the little 1,500-ton Seasweep operated by the Monrovia, Calif.-based church group known as World Vision to units of the U.S. 7th Fleet.

Three Italian ships also are operating from Singapore, the Norwegians have chartered a small vessel and a French hospital ship is in the area, along with the usual movement of commercial ships.

All captains insist their mission is only to resupply and help repair boats in distress, but most concede they probably will end up with refugees aboard for resettlement in their respective countries.

None of the Vietnamese will remain in Singapore. Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew said Singaporeans must develop "callouses on their hearts" and turn away all boat people.

Name-Calling Stops

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — After more than 30 years, ranking government officials in Taiwan have stopped calling the Chinese communists names.

President Chiang Ching-kuo and Premier Sun Yun-suan did not use the word "bandits" when referrring to the Chinese communists in recent public speeches. Instead, they used "the Chinese communists" and "the Peiping regime," using the old name for Peking.

The Chinese communists 10 years ago stopped referring to the late President Chiang Kai-shek a "bandit."

The late Chinese Communist Chairman Mao Tse-tung was reported to have told his lieutenants that Chiang "will have a place in history and it is not appropriate to call him bandit, which he is not."

FARMERS FIGHT BACK

BUENA VISTA, Ga. (AP) — Two barnyard mechanics have developed a weapon for farmers to use against the Arabs. Called the "OPEC Killer," it is a still on wheels that can produce about 300 gallons of pure alcohol a week. The alcohol mixed with gasoline becomes a partially home-grown fuel for farm vehicles, said Paul Harbuck, a farmer for 15 years who teamed with Joe Christopher to design and build device.

Developer To Refit Liner

By ROBERT C. MILLER

HONOLULU (UPI) — Dick Hadley didn't like his view overlooking Honolulu harbor; not enough American ships.

Dick Hadley plans to improve the view. He has bought the biggest American luxury liner ever built, the mothballed SS United States.

The change of scenery will cost the Seattle developer about $40 million — $5 million for the 990-foot ship and $35 million to renovate her.

He hopes to get it all back, plus a nice profit, by operating the 1,200-passenger ship as a no-tipping, time-sharing passenger liner between Hawaii and the mainland plus "sprinkles of cruises in the Atlantic, Caribbean and Pacific."

"This will be the greatest love boat ever home ported in Honolulu," exclaimed the enthusiastic 58-year-old millionaire.

"It will return the SS United States to her rightful place as the world's premier luxury liner where she will be a source of pride to all Americans."

One of the fringe benefits Hadley received for his part in the building of the big Amfac Center building in downtown Honolulu was a harbor-view office.

"It would gall me to look at the harbor and see British, Dutch, Japanese, Russian and Greek ships, but no American ships. At one time America had the world's greatest merchant marine, but we scuttled it and are now exporting seafaring jobs.

"I wondered what had happened to the United States," Hadley said. "After months of negotiations I bought her from the U.S. Commerce Department for $5 million through our newly formed United States Cruises, Inc."

To offset the increased fuel costs of operating the big ship, Hadley said one boiler will be converted for use of a revolutionary new coal-based fuel perfected by Sweden called Carbogel. To finance the renovation he is selling memberships in the United States Cruising Society for prices ranging from $11,500 to $39,550 which entitles the society members to a 60 percent discount of the full fares for two weeks aboard every year for 20 years.

"We expect to raise more than $25 million through the time-share cruising society memberships and thus avoid bank financing," Hadley said.

Two of the United States' four propellors will be removed and two of her eight boilers eliminated during the conversion at the Newport News shipyard.

"She will still make nearly 30 knots with only two props," Hadley said, "and the removal of the boilers will give us additional space which we'll need for the half acre of shops, the five dining facilities — plus the original main dining salon — the swimming pools, tennis court and sports areas.

"We are converting the world's greatest ship into the country club of the sea."

The 53,329-ton liner still holds the Atlantic speed record for both the east and west crossings. The New York-to-Europe record of 3 days, 10 hours and 40 minutes was made on her maiden voyage out of New York on July 3, 1952. It only took her 92 minutes longer for the homeward bound voyage of 2,906 nutical miles.

The red, white and blue funnelled liner has been in mothballs since November 1969 when the government bought the $79 million vessel from United States Lines for $12 million under the Passenger Ship Sales Act. She has been maintained by the U.S. Maritime Administration at Norfolk ever since.

Hadley said the United States would probably begin operations late next year. "When people go on a cruise they want to be free from hassles," he said. "They want to be free from tipping. There will be a 10 percent service charge in lieu of tipping and it will be enforced. Any passenger trying to tip will be put off at the next port, and any crew member accepting a tip will also be put off. We want the crew to feel like hosts, not servants."

55 Limit Declared Insurers' Choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Insurance firms that handle nearly all the nation's automobile policies support the national 55 mile-per-hour speed limit, Joan Claybrook, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Monday.

"Some 700 insurance companies, large and small, believe in 55 and have pledged their active support of this speed limit," she said.

Miss Claybrook spoke at a Transportation Department ceremony honoring 25 insurance companies and their associations for promotional campaigns urging compliance with the speed limit.

"Insurance companies have two coinciding objectives — to save lives and reduce insurance costs," she said. "Therefore, 55 is important to them."

She said government studies show that life expectancy among Americans improved by 1.7 years between 1972 and 1976 and that insurance companies credit the 55 mph limit as a leading cause of that extension.

Shari Gives Tips On Job Charges

By SHARI LEWIS

Have you thought of a job or something to make that can earn you some money over the summer?

If you want to figure out what to charge, first find out what the baby-sitters get on your block. You can probably charge a little more than that for a dog-walking or delivery service, or for doing those odd jobs around people's back yards or homes.

If you are making something to sell (like stuffed pillows or newspaper logs), see how long it takes you to make the product. Then figure out that amount of time in baby-sitting dollars. Finally, add the costs of your materials. (Did you have to buy a box of detergent to use in the making of the newspaper log? If you just took one from the family kitchen, remember that your family paid for it, and you should get that cost back when you sell the product!)

One good way to face the "how-much-shall-I-charge" decision is to ask an older friend to come over and take a look at your product, and help you to price things.

And, one word of warning — don't expect the job or the thing you sell to turn you into a green giant. It's not likely that you'll make a killing.

But a kid can perform a service that's worth paying for. And some things that kids make are useful, or petty, or unusual, and are worth having — so go to it!

Yesterday's Brain Twister: Somewhere, hidden in this square, you'll find the shape with the jagged edge. Eyeball the square and see if you can pinpoint that spot. Then cut out the little jagged shape and see if you were right!

Answer: (See illustration.)

Today's Brain Twister: Why is the letter "G" like a hot day? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Englishman Conducts Anti-Ticket Protest

LEYLAND, England (AP) — Barry Pamplin collects parking tickets the way some people collect postage stamps, calling it a protest against an unfair law. So far it hasn't cost him a penny.

Pamplin had his car registered in the name of his 6-year-old son Jonathan. Under British law the person named in the registration is responsible for parking fines, no matter who was driving. And, under another law, nobody under 10 can be convicted of anything.

Pamplin's crusade began after a friend was forced to pay $14 in fines when his car was stolen and the thief abandoned it illegally parked.

So far Pamplin has collected 64 tickets from around Britain and successfully ignored 3,843 pounds ($883) in fines.

County Officials Delay Approval Of Contract

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Introductions but no decisions were made this morning when county commissioners voted to wait until Friday to approve Health Sciences Center Hospital's management contract with Brookwood Health Services.

County hospital district board members and Brookwood representatives made a presentation to the commissioners, who have final authority to accept or reject the 90-day contract. Though several of the commissioners already have indicated they probably will vote to approve the contract, the group decided to study the actual document a day before making a decision.

The hospital district board voted last week to negotiate a contract with the Birmingham, Ala., management firm to help put the hospital back on its feet. The board is scheduled to meet Friday afternoon to approve the contract, then give it to the commissioners.

Charles A. Speir, president and chairman of the board for Brookwood, introduced members of the Brookwood team who will be working with the hospital staff to institute necessary changes to remove the teaching hospital's billing and related financial problems.

Robert Berryman, director of hospital development for Brookwood and the firm's choice for interim administrator at the hospital, was available to the commissioners for questioning.

Speir explained that when his firm's representatives first met with the board, it was stressed that the needs of the hospital are serious and pressured by an imminent loss of cash if the problems are not solved. Speir said the nature of the problems and the lack of time prompted Brookwood to send 11 specialists with than Berryman to organize the hospital's management.

Brookwood will give an immediate action plan to the board in about two weeks, Speir said, and will have a long-term plan ready at the end of the 90-day contract period. The firm hopes to negotiate a longer contract if the board is satisfied with its work.

"We're confident you will be able to see some immediate results," Speir told the commissioners. "Our strong point is in working with physicians."

Berryman spoke optimistically of the management firm's successes with other hospitals, saying he was looking forward to the challenge at Health Sciences. He said that although the actual contract proposed by Brookwood is very specific, the hospital district probably would receive more service from the firm than stated in the contract.

County Judge Rod Shaw said the financial advisory (blue ribbon) committee chaired by Dr. Jim Granberry is concerned about its role in hospital affairs now that a management firm has been contracted. Shaw asked Berryman his view about the committee's function.

"The committee was wondering if they should continue to be concerned or if they had been supplanted," Shaw said.

Berryman said the committee's function had not been clearly defined or explained to him, but that he wants to consider all local resources for solving the problems. Shaw asked Berryman if he would be willing to work with the committee and Berryman agreed the group would be important for community awareness purposes.

The district's administrative committee chairman, Don McInturff, represented the board and said that because the hospital is a taxpayers' institution, any input is welcome.

The board of managers will convene at 1:30 p.m. Friday.

Pilots Not Trained For Complex Crisis

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — American Airlines teaches its pilots how to recover from failures in all DC-10 systems, but they are not trained for multiple problems such as those encountered in the nation's worst air disaster, an airline official testified today.

In the May 25 accident, a DC-10 lost its left engine, part of its electrical system and much of its hydraulic pressure during takeoff from O'Hare International Airport before nosing into the ground and killing 273 persons.

Walter W. Estridge, head of American's DC-10 taining program, told National Transportation Safety Board investigators that "if it is natural for it to happen, we train for those secondary events."

But, Estridge said, the likelihood of a crash can be increased geometrically by failures in unrelated jet systems such as the electrical and stall-warning devices.

"You can combine unrelated systems (in computer simulators) and come up with an innumerable number of emergency situations," Estridge said. "But we don't do that."

In earlier investigations, the NTSB determined that pilot error was not responsible the DC-10 crash. Investigators said it was impossible for Capt. Walter Lux to right the plane without knowing exactly what was wrong with it.

On Wednesday, William Hannan, an American vice president for engineering, told investigators that a small metal filler in the pylon support structure of the ill-fated DC-10 could have caused a 10-inch crack in the attachment, possibly causing the engine to fall away.

Hannan said the metal piece — called a shim — was not included in design drawings by the manufacturer of the DC-10, the McDonnell Douglas Corp. He said he believes the shim was installed in the jet while it was being built.

He added that the wafer-thin shim made the pylon attachment more susceptible to deep cracking. Investigators think the 10-inch crack was formed when the attachment units accidently struck each other.

"I believe the presence of the shim allowed the crack to ... reach a critical length," said Hannan. He added lab tests without the metal strip could not produce cracks longer than 6 inches.

McDonnell Douglas spokesman Harry Calkins of Long Beach, Calif., declined comment on Hannan's contentions. "Any comment we have will be made at the National Transportation Safety Board hearings," he said.

Investigator Rudolf Kapustin said the testimony "was something different" from what had already been discovered about the crash.

Patricia Harris Vows To Watch Politics Of Civil Rights Rulings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The incoming secretary of health, education and welfare indicates she will pay more attention to the political consequences of civil rights decisions the agency makes than her predecessor did, a government source said today.

Secretary-designate Patricia Roberts Harris met with David Tatel, who heads HEW's Office of Civil Rights, and the top members of his staff on Wednesday, said the source, who declined to be named. During the session, Mrs. Harris criticized the office for failing to consider the political fallout its actions can cause.

She suggested that some of the more controversial lawsuits in the civil rights area be undertaken by individuals rather than by the government to shield the government from some of the controversy, the source said.

Mrs. Harris also reportedly criticized the staff work performed by the office. She specifically found fault with the briefing papers assembled for her, claiming that they were incomplete and sloppy. One source said the complaints about omissions from the briefing materials were unfounded.

Mrs. Harris, who has been secretary of housing and urban development, will be sworn in Friday to succeed HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., who was fired in President Carter's Cabinet shake-up.

Mrs. Harris' spokesman, Bill Wise, said she "expressed concern about the format of the materials presented to her."

"Basically, her standard was the same sort of standard of brief that would be required for a senior partner of a law firm."

As to the manner of handling civil rights cases, Wise said Mrs. Harris "wants to make decisions in a considered, rational manner. If there is a way to reach that objective without exacerbating controversy, without creating it, that is a preferable way to do it."

"There is nothing in that conversation that would in any way indicate any lessening of commitment to the civil rights problem," he added.

In discussing the civil rights actions that will require her immediate attention, Mrs. Harris, who is black, dwelled on the political implications rather than the substance of the cases, according to the source.

Those cases include one involving Chicago schools where federal funds might be cut off and challenges to the racial makeup of Baltimore's schools, the public colleges of Maryland and Pennsylvania and New York City hospital staffs.

Mrs. Harris wanted to know where key political figures in these and other cases — members of Congress and mayors of the cities involved — stood, indicating that their positions should be considered in deciding how to proceed.

Tatel, like all other top officials at HEW, has been asked to remain with the agency at least through Sept. 30.

Carter's Schedule Less Than 'Tight'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Marine One, the presidential helicopter, lifted off Samuels Field in Bardstown, Ky., its blade blowing the waters left by a recent rain. It was 6:50 p.m., and President Carter was 10 minutes behind schedule.

The "bible" — a term used for the minute-by-minute presidential schedule given to reporters and staff members — showed that Carter was supposed to fly to Standiford Airport in Louisville, 35 miles away, and fly back to Washington.

He didn't. Instead, Marine One flew 90 miles to the floodswept hamlet of English, Ind., and touched down on a muddy meadow alongside Little Blue Creek. Carter got out, spoke to a few townsfolk about last week's 10-inch rain, and asked if federal agencies were helping. Then he took off again.

Carter got back to Andrews Air Force Base at 9:30 p.m. EDT, one hour and 10 minutes late.

It was uncharacteristic for Jimmy Carter, Naval Academy graduate, who conducted his 1976 campaign and his presidency with split-second punctuality.

In the aftermath of the Camp David "domestic summit," Carter is showing changes in life-long patterns of style which reflect the way he is aiming at 1980.

Carter is a reserved person, whose favorite sport is fishing with his wife. He has gone with her to the solitude of Camp David 53 weekends during his 130 weeks in office.

Since Camp David, he has plunged into a style of campaigning and flesh pressing reminiscent of the gregarious Lyndon B. Johnson.

"The duties of my job tend to erect enormous barriers between the people and your president," he told a "town hall" audience of 2,100 in Bardstown. "I am determined to keep those barriers down."

A few moments earlier, in the motorcade around the town circle which contains the courthouse, Carter got out of the long black limousine. The crowd of hundreds of people who had gathered burst into applause. They swarmed around him, shaking hands, and he seemed almost to be gobbled.

Then, suit coat off, Carter stepped on the front bumper of the limousine, crawled on the hood, and sat down on the roof. The motorcade began again, with a Secret Service agent hooking his finger inside the president's belt to keep him secure.

Some aspects of Carter's style will not change, but, in fact, probably will be heightened — especially his practice of interacting with small groups.

It is what Carter does best — Carter and his adult Sunday School class; Carter and small groups of people at Camp David; Carter and a handful of citizens in Carnegie, Pa., and Martinsburg, W.Va.; Carter and the town meetings.

The content of Carter's post-Camp David speeches also contrasts markedly with those of earlier ones.

During springtime trips to Oklahoma, Texas and Wisconsin, Carter ticked off again and again what he believes are the achievements of his administration:

Peace. The restoration of trust in the post-Watergate era. An unemployment drop. A decrease in the size of the federal deficit. An increase in farm income.

Since Camp David, Carter's emphasis has been about America's "crisis of confidence," and the energy crisis which must be solved by cutting oil consumption.

Police Seek Youths In Vandalism Probe

Juvenile Division officers late this morning were reportedly seeking several juvenile suspects in connection with the destruction of about $20,000 in property at the Pleasant Ridge Baptist Church.

Police detectives turned the case over to the juvenile division today after police received several calls from persons who described juveniles they had seen near the church Monday night when the vandalism occurred.

Vandals broke into the church sometime between 5 p.m. Monday and 1 a.m. Tuesday, splashing paint on the walls and ransacking nine rooms in the church's educational building.

Department Issues Advice On Rabies

AUSTIN (AP) — Persons exposed to animal rabies should begin anti-rabies treatment during the first 24 hours after exposure, the State Health Department said Thursday.

For high-risk exposures, the department said, anti-rabies treatment "should be initiated immediately, without waiting laboratory results or waiting for the animal to be placed under confined observation."

Examples of high-risk exposure, the department said, are bites by bats, skunks, foxes, raccoons, coyotes or "other wild carnivores."

Also high risks, the department said, are bites by any domestic carnivore with "signs of illness suggestive or rabies" and bites by "any unimmunized domestic carnivore" where rabies cases have been reported.

Israelis Accuse U.S. Of Appeasing Arabs

A-J News Services

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel reacted sharply today to an apparent change in the U.S. attitude toward the Palestinians, which a top aide to Prime Minister Menachem Begin called appeasement of Arab oil producers.

Government sources said the cabinet, at its regular meeting Sunday, would discuss "the change in the U.S. policy toward the Palestine Liberation Organization which contradicts American commitments made to Israel."

Israel was also concerned about proposals raised this week in Alexandria, Egypt, at a low-level meeting of the talks on autonomy for the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"The Americans are taking a more extreme stand than the Egyptians," said one Israeli participant in the talks.

The American proposals were certain to be raised Sunday at the fifth plenary session of the talks in the northern port city of Haifa to be attended by Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil.

Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin criticized U.S. attempts to "build upon" U.N. Middle East resolution 242 to encourage the PLO to recognize Israel's right to exist in order to pave the way for U.S.-Palestinian talks.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III described the U.S. efforts to reporters Wednesday in Washington. The United States insists it will not talk with the PLO until it recognizes Israel's right of existence.

"Any attempt to change resolution 242 explicitly or by implication in order to soften the PLO stand will result in a serious obstacle to further progress in the peace negotiations," Yadin said in a statement released from his office.

"We exist," said one of Begin's top aides, Yehiel Kadishi. "We don't expect anybody to recognize our existence. It's an insult to the intelligence."

Begin was still in the hospital receiving treatment for a blood clot in a brain artery. Doctors expected to release him Friday and to allow him to return to work after a week of rest at home.

Begin's aide called the reaction of the average Israeli to the apparent change in the American position "sharp and harsh. The credibility of the United States has been shattered," he said. "Coomitments given are not being adhered to."

Kadishai said, "Nowadays, when oil is the main commmodity, the whole world is yielding to the Arabs. There's no doubt about it."

Meanwhile, U.N. peacekeeping troops are packing their souvenirs of duty in the dusty Sinai wilderness — scorpions frozen in plastic, spent shell casings and pinup calendars — as they disband and head for home.

UNEF, the 4,015-man United Nations Emergency Force, ceased to exist on July 25, more than 5½ years after the U.N. Security Council sent it out to monitor the truce that ended the October 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

The death of the seven-nation peacekeeping force was an indirect result of the peace treaty signed by Israel and Egypt March 26, even though the treaty envisioned its continuance as a buffer force.

Expert Links Bullet Found In Missouri To Jesse James

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A Jesse James expert says a bullet unearthed during an excavation at the James farm last year is the slug that wounded the outlaw after an aborted bank holdup in Minnesota 103 years ago.

"Jesse was carrying this bullet in his leg the day he was murdered — five years after the holdup," said Milton Perry, superintendent of historic sites for Clay County in Missouri.

The slug was uncovered by archaeologists digging into Jesse's original grave nearly a year ago and has been a point of controversy since. Some said it could be the bullet that killed Jesse in 1881; others said it could not.

Perry spent nine months studying the slug and historical documents before releasing his conclusions in an interview this week.

The James-Younger gang ventured out of its usual territory in 1876 to rob a bank in Northfield, Minn. But the citizens there organized quickly when the strangers arrived in town.

A hail of gunfire greeted gang members when they stepped out of the bank. Three were shot to death in the street and five others surrendered or were captured a short time later. Only Jesse and his brother Frank escaped.

Perry says historical accounts indicate the James brothers tried to steal a horse from a Minnesota farmer a short time after the holdup. But the farmer fired at the brothers. The bullet passed through Frank's leg and struck Jesse's leg.

"It remained in his body, but that's not unusual," Perry said. "The evidence indicates Jesse was walking with a limp five years later, shortly before he was killed."

Until the .38-caliber slug was found last year, it was generally accepted that the Old West's infamous bank and train robber was killed by a .44-caliber bullet.

But John Cayton, chief forensic firearms examiner at the Regional Criminalistics Laboratory in Independence, studied the bullet and he found that it was "consistent with other bullets which have penetrated a victim's skull." He said it could have been the fatal bullet, a statement that was challenged by historians in northwest Missouri.

Perry says the coroner's report at the time of Jesse's death indicated the fatal slug was removed during the autopsy. Its precise whereabouts is not known, although a descendant of the coroner has said he remembers the slug once held a place of honor on the family mantle.

The slug uncovered last year was found near bone fragments from Jesse's right foot that had fallen back into the ground when the outlaw's body was moved at the turn of the century. Perry says the bullet was fired from a Smith & Wesson pistol that first went on the market a year before the Northfield holdup.

Demo Solons Rush Bill For Standby Rationing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic congressional leaders are making one last bid to rush a standby gasoline rationing bill to President Carter's desk, but they say their chances are slim.

Asked about the prospects for completing action before Congress begins its month-long August recess Friday, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said today, "I suppose it's possible."

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill was slightly more optimistic. He said he felt there was a 50-50 chance Congress would finish work on the rationing bill today.

But O'Neill said that would happen only if the Senate accepted most of the House-passed bill and returned it immediately to the House. If the bill has to go to a House-Senate conference to negotiate a compromise, he said, it could not possibly see final action until after the recess in September.

Byrd said a House-Senate conference on the rationing bill "could very well be the kind of conference that could last several days or weeks."

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said he was certain a majority of the Senate still favors giving the president standby rationing authority, but there was no great pressure from constituents for fast action on the legislation.

"We're hearing confused voices," he said. "And a special confusion on things like standby rationing. People are not sure that's what they want."

There was no likelihood the Senate would accept the rationing bill the House passed late Wednesday. Byrd referred to it as "emasculated" but said it would be up to Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, to recommend what action to take.

The House passed its bill by a 263-159 vote, but loaded it with so many amendments Senate leaders immediately pronounced it unacceptable.

Finding a compromise that can be enacted before the recess "would be very difficult," concluded Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the main House sponsor of the rationing bill.

However, he said the attempt will be made. "It won't be easy," he said.

House leaders had hoped to give the president at least this piece of his new energy plan before beginning their recess.

Many of the amendments tacked on in the House did not concern rationing. One would weaken the new federal order requiring thermostats in non-residential buildings to be set at an energy-saving 78 degrees. Others would set aside special reserves of tractor fuel for farmers and heating oil for homes in cold-weather regions.

"It looks like we're going to have an impasse," said Jackson.

He said the amendment exempting businesses from the 78-degree thermostat law if they save an equivalent amount of energy through other means was especially objectionable to senators, one the Senate would "absolutely not" accept.

White House officials also indicated the president has serious reservations about the bill as it emerged from the House.

House Democratic leaders blamed partisan politics for the hodge-podge bill that finally emerged from the chamber.

The bill that passed the House would allow the president to invoke gas rationing if fuel supplies dropped by 20 percent during a 30-day period. Then Congress would have 15 days to review the rationing plan, during which either chamber could veto the measure.

Under the plan, the president could also set energy-conservation targets for each state and enforce them in shortages of at least 10 percent.

The president has said repeatedly he does not plan to use gas rationing, but wants the power in case the nation is beset by a major disruption in oil supplies.

Storms Forecast In Area Tonight

A-J News Services

Dense fog blanketed much of Northwest Texas early today, forcing a temporary shutdown of Lubbock International Airport. But the mist dissipated during the morning hours and forecasters said the area would enjoy fair skies this afternoon and Friday.

The National Weather Service said another upper level disturbance located over Colorado this morning is expected to move across West Texas tonight, precipitating more thunderstorms. The probability of rain in the Lubbock area tonight is listed at 20 percent.

A control tower spokesman at the Lubbock airport said planes were unable to arrive or depart for about 1½ hours this morning due to the fog. He said that by 9 a.m. normal air traffic had been resumed, although visibility at that time was only one mile.

"Early this morning, it (visibility) was down to zero," the spokesman said.

Despite the poor visibility, Lubbock area motorists fared well on the roads to work this morning. The Lubbock Police Department reported the number of accidents less than usual this morning, while a Department of Public Safety official said "not even one" traffic mishap had been reported by 9 a.m. in the county.

Elsewhere in the state, however, conditions were wetter and potentially more dangerous.

Flash flood warnings were in effect until 10 a.m. today in Lampasas, Mills and San Saba counties in Central Texas, where rains up to 5 inches were reported Wednesday evening and additional rains of 3 to 5 inches were received this morning.

Shortly before dawn today, minor flooding of streets and low lying areas in the city of Lampasas was reported as thunderstorms moved across the region, headed in an easterly direction.

Near midmorning, a flash flood warning was issued for northern McCulloch County east of San Angelo.

Flash flood watches were issued this morning for four counties immediately south of the Lampasas region and also for Mason, Menard and Kimble counties in the San Angelo region.

Early today thunderstorms were reported widespread east of a line from Childress to Laredo and north of a line from Laredo to Lufkin. During the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. today, the state's leading recipients of rain were Dallas, with 2.23 inches; Lufkin, with 1.70 inches; and Junction, with 1.43 inches.

On the South Plains, Paducah reported .60 of an inch of rain, but elsewhere precipitation measured less than .10 of an inch. Lubbock reported no rainfall.

Hub City temperatures were forecast to near 90 degrees this afternoon and then climb to the low 90s Friday.

The weekend South Plains forecast shows partly cloudy skies, with high temperatures remaining in the 90s and lows near 70 degrees.

Meanwhile, sheets of driving rain sent streams in Indiana over their banks as the latest in a series of savage summer storms ripped across the state. Four persons reportedly were swept to their deaths in the floodwaters.

A Posey County levee burst this morning, unleashing the swollen Wabash River over 25,000 acres of farmland and forcing sandbagging workers to flee.

In Indianapolis, 2.21 inches of rain was recorded Wednesday. Normal rainfall in the city for the entire month of August is only 2.08 inches. Six inches of rain also fell in Mitchell Wednesday.

Derailment Blocking Wyoming Highway

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Crews worked slowly today to extract nearly three dozen cars from a derailed freight train that was twisted into a steel wedge beneath two overpasses on Interstate 80, forcing the closure of part of the major east-west artery.

Officials had hoped to have the wreckage of the 80-car Union Pacific train cleared from Interstate 80 by early today. But railroad spokesman Barry Combs said the work was proceeding more slowly than anticipated.

"The cars are wedged very, very tightly together. We have to take them out a piece at a time," Combs said. He said there were about 30-35 cars jammed under the bridges and it would take most of today to remove them.

Union Pacific and state construction crews worked to link up an old bridge on U.S. Highway 30 a half mile away to bypass the blocked part of Interstate 80, a principal route across southern Wyoming.

Dave Hall of the Wyoming Highway Department estimated the detour should be completed sometime this afternoon. "At least that's what we're hoping for," he added.

The Wyoming Highway Patrol was rerouting tourists and truckers on Interstate 25 to near Fort Collins, Colo., and then on U.S. 287 to Laramie.

The highway west of Cheyenne was blocked late Wednesday night when the freight train and two of three engines piled up beneath overpasses of Union Pacific's two main east-west tracks.

The derailment knocked out several highway bridge supports and halted traffic between Cheyenne and Laramie on the interstate, a principal east-west route in southern Wyoming.

Contorted pieces of steel covered with white soda ash stretched from the ground to the underbelly of the two bridges 24½ feet from the tracks. Soda ash, a mineral product produced in western Wyoming and used to make bicarbonate of soda and other soda products, was being hauled by the train.

Combs, of the Union Pacific office in Omaha, Neb., said there was evidence the train had been going too fast along the stretch, where the speed limit for trains is 45 mph.

"We're quite certain the train was moving too fast," he said. "The important question that still needs to be answered is why it was moving too fast." Combs said earlier the engineer had reported brake trouble prior to the accident.

Stan Warne, a highway patrol spokesman, said few complaints had been received by people inconvenienced by the detour. "The public has been very understanding."

Once the wreckage is removed, engineers can study the interstate bridges themselves to determine if either can be propped up with additional supports to allow traffic to resume, officials said.

Human Relations Panel Blasts BCD, Chamber Of Commerce

phlet which would outline means for residents to get help with housing problems met with good response, but a visitor to the meeting told HRC members that this was an area which was discussed in prior years but which the commission did nothing about.

Gilbert Herrera lashed out at the HRC members for never achieving any results and told them it was time to "get off your knees and on your feet."

"Nothing ever gets done by this commission," he said. "You all waste time each month just talking about issues."

Herrera aid he has been coming to HRC meetings for a long time and has seen three directors and many members quit the commission after losing interest.

"We need a board that really does something," he said.

The HRC decided to gather information for the pamphlet and to include ways to combat such problems as landlord troubles, rodent problems and housing information for the elderly.

Included in the list, which members would like to see passed out in community meetings and weekly publications, would be information on available funding to improve living conditions.

HRC members also decided to recommend to city council that the Public Accommodations Ordinace be amended to require that existing city buildings provide "total accommodations" to handicapped persons who need assistance in entering and public buildings.

Members would like to see architectural as well as physical barriers which prohibit easy access for handicapped individuals removed, and all buildings made accessible.

In other business the HRC voted to co-sponsor the 1979 Fiestas, scheduled for Sept. 16.

The annual event also will be sponsored by the Parks and Recreation board and will be co-ordinated by COMA. A committee of 19 organizations will decide the location for this year's fiesta, which possibly will be in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Discussion of the possible site brought negative reactions from some members and visitors at the meeting, with those objecting saying the participants would be restricted in their activities.

HRC member Gilbert Flores said he wondered if stands would be allowed for the purpose of cooking and selling ethnic foods.

"That won't really be our place," Herrera said, adding he would "hate to see how many people could get hurt."

The fiestas took place in city parks in previous years, and normally no more than one was held.

Vaughn Hendrie pointed out that if the organization Civic Lubbock also co-sponsored the event, it would "provide a rent-free situation."

HRC members also decided to recommend to city council that Quirt Avenue be renamed in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King, in a move to have more city streets honoring prominent blacks and Mexican-Americans.

Gas Station Owner To Be Arraigned

BOSTON (AP) — The Beacon Hill service station owner who gained national notoriety for selling unleaded gasoline at $1.56 a gallon faces arraignment on 28 counts of overcharging his customers.

Glenn Heller, 30, was indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury on charges of selling gasoline above federal guidelines, U.S. Attorney Edward Harrington said. He said the arraignment would be within 10 days.

Union Chief's Son Indicted

DETROIT (UPI) — A federal grand jury today indicted Francis R. Fitzsimmons, son of Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons, on charges of illegally accepting more than $83,000 from two officials of a Detroit trucking firm.

The indictment said Fitzsimmons, 49, a Teamsters general organizer, allegedly accepted the money in several installments over a four-year period in violation of federal racketeering laws while he was an officer of Teamsters Local 299.

Also indicted were J. Richard Wolfe, 44, chairman and chief executive officer of F.C.S. Industries Inc. and Norman E. Klein, 43, the firm's vice president.

U.S. Attorney James K. Robinson said the indictment was the result of a two-year investigation by the Detroit FBI Office.

The indictment alleged that Fitzsimmons received eight monthly payments of $750 each from a consultant of Kubach Trucking Co., an F.C.S. subsidiary operating in the Detroit area, between March 2 and Dec. 2, 1975.

It also alleges Fitzsimmons accepted 37 monthly payments of $2,100 each between January 1976 and March 1979 from Klein and Wolffe on behalf of the Kubach firm "with the intent to influence Fitzsimmons in the exercise of his Teamster duties."

OPEC May Call Special Meeting To Raise Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil prices, already up 42 percent this year, may rise again soon because foreign producers are unhappy with the dollar's slide and the price they set at the June meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Although many analysts say it's too early to tell whether OPEC will decide to call a special meeting in September, as the cartel is reported to be considering, they say such a meeting would probably lead to a price rise.

The increase probably would not be as large as previous jumps this year but could be expected to add a penny or two to the price of a gallon of gasoline or heating oil, analysts say. The base price of oil was increased from $14.55 a barrel to $18 a barrel in June, with a ceiling of $23.50.

The next regular OPEC meeting is scheduled for December in Caracas, Venezuela. But a Kuwaiti newspaper, Al-Siyassah, reported earlier this week that the OPEC nations are thinking about meeting in September.

"Contacts between several members of OPEC have taken place recently about the necessity of holding an emergency meeting of the organization owing to the new decrease in the value of the dollar and its reflection on oil prices," the newspaper said.

OPEC is worried about the dollar because it does its business in dollars, and as it falls, the real value of the cartel's oil declines. The dollar's slide in recent years has been cited by OPEC members as a reason for raising the base price of oil this year by a total of 42 percent.

OPEC warned at its June meeting that it would hold an emergency meeting to discuss prices and its reliance on the dollar if the currency fell another 5 percent or more. "If the dollar devalues, then (the price of oil) is going to increase," Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah, Kuwait's oil minister, said at that meeting.

The dollar has fallen as much as 3.5 percent against other currencies since then, according to Bank of England trade-weighted statistics. Although it has recovered much of that ground in recent days, some analysts fear it soon will resume its fall.

Unsettled conditions in world oil markets could also force a meeting even if the dollar stabilizes. Although Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest member, is increasing its daily oil production from 8.5 million barrels to 9.5 million, the increase has been virtually offset by production cuts made or planned by several OPEC members.

That will keep oil supplies tight and prevent a possible "glut" that could erode prices, analysts say. And experts say that tight supplies will support higher prices in the spot market, where the small amount of oil not sold under contract is traded. OPEC's pricing actions have been heavily influenced recently by actions on the spot market.

While spot prices have retreated to about $33 a barrel since OPEC's last meeting from a pre-meeting high of $40 a barrel, analysts say supply cuts could push the price up again.

"If the spot market goes very high again, consistently high, it will put pressure on OPEC," said Walter J. Levy, an international oil analyst. "If nations are cutting supply, putting pressure on spot markets and leading to higher OPEC prices...it could be a very dangerous game."

Since even the current depressed spot prices are well above the OPEC ceiling price of $23.50, several of the cartel's nations have evaded the ceiling by diverting oil to the spot market, because the ceiling does not apply there.

DOE Credit Surcharge Called Unlawful

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department is allowing service stations to charge extra if motorists pay by credit card, but a House subcommittee chairman says that's against the law.

"It is unfair to put the service station operator in the middle on this issue," Illinois Democrat Frank Annunzio, chairman of the House Consumer Affairs Subcommittee, said Wednesday.

"On one hand, the Department of Energy leads the operator to believe that there is nothing wrong with surcharging a credit card, when such an action could land the service station operator in jail," he said.

Under federal law, Annunzio said, anyone adding a surcharge to a credit card purchase can be sentenced to up to a year in jail or fined $5,000, or both.

The Energy Department said its lawyers were studying Annunzio's claim.

Even before the congressman's warning, independent dealers were lambasting Energy Department rules that let them charge extra for such services as washing windshields, checking oil and filling tires, as well as honoring credit cards.

Charging extra will only alienate customers, station owners claimed.

About 700 dealers who own their own stations invaded Washington on foot and in horn-tooting tow trucks Wednesday to protest the rules.

They marched in front of the White House, disrupting lunchtime traffic, and then rallied on the Capitol's steps.

The independent dealers were angriest over Energy Department rules that set a uniform gross profit margin of 15.4 cents per gallon. Many dealers say they must cut back current margins under the rule, even as skyrocketing inflation worsens rent, wages and the price of electricity and other services.

The independent dealers want profit margins equal to 30 percent of the wholesale price of gasoline. This would raise margins immediately to between 16 cents and 18.6 cents per gallon.

Jerry Ferrara, executive director of the New Jersey Gasoline Retailers Association, said refiners are increasing gasoline prices 5 cents a month. "Under the new rule, we'll have to absorb that cost," he said.

The Energy Department also ruled that stations owned by wholesalers and refiners must claim their current profit margin, or 15.4 cents per gallon, whichever is less.

The rule, department officials said, is aimed at preventing those stations from charging higher prices during a gasoline shortage. But now that the shortages of recent months have eased, independents say refiners and wholesalers can undersell them and steal their customers.

Weekend Gas Available For Texans

HOUSTON (AP)— If you have the money to pay for it, there should be plenty of gasoline available for Texas motorists this weekend.

The American Automobile Association reports 33 percent of the stations checked will be pumping fuel Sunday, with 39 percent open after 6 p.m. Saturday.

These are the brighest figures since the Memorial Day weekend.

Prices continue to climb, about half a cent over the previous week.

At full service stations regular is 88.4 cents a gallon compared to 87.9 last week; unleaded is 92.2, up from 91.8 and premium is 93.9 up from 92.4.

For those who can find self-service stations this week's prices, with last week's in parentheses, are:

Regular 85.9 (85.5); unleaded 89.8 (89.3); premium 91.7 (91.4).

Nixon Creates Brouhaha

NIXON

Jane Maynard, who lives in the resident-owned building, says she conducted a poll showing half of the 34 residents don't want Nixon and his wife, Pat, to move in because they fear commotion and security problems.

The status of Nixon's application to move in this fall is unclear. He is believed to have purchased an apartment for $750,000, and a majority of the co-op's nine-member board of directors is said to have held a telephone poll and approved the purchase.

But Leonard Henry, a board member, said he believed it was "not settled yet. We're familiar with the unhappiness, and I think that will be part of our discussion."

The board is scheduled to meet soon.

But Nixon had some support. "I'm totally in favor of them moving in," said one resident who declined to be identified. "I think New York should welcome them back."

Musician's Son, Police Chief Clash

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Police Chief William Obanhein, known to many through Arlo Guthrie's film "Alice's Restaurant," has clashed again with the son of a famous musician.

Obanhein has apologized in writing to the son of former Boston Symphony Orchestra Music Director Erich Leinsdorf for allegedly hitting the young man outside a concert last week.

Obanhein apologized to Gregor J. Leinsdorf, one of two persons he allegedly struck when they attempted to enter a restricted parking lot on the concert site's grounds Friday night, said John Beacco, chairman of the city's governing board.

"I personally want to make it clear Mr. Leinsdorf did absolutely nothing to provoke Chief Obanhein," he added. Beacco said Obanhein had gone on vacation "to take care of personal business."

Obanhein came to prominence 10 years ago when Arthur Penn's film about the little Stockbridge restaurant run by Alice Brock told of the chief's arresting Guthrie for littering.

Right Place, Wrong Man

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A Connecticut teen-ager who allegedly wanted to make an illicit drug sale went to a Kiss rock concert and picked out a possible customer, a man wearing blue jeans and a T-shirt.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

But, the prospective client turned out to be Assistant Attorney General Frederick G. Cass, who was taking his son David, 13, to the concert at the Providence Civic Center.

Cass said Wednesday the teen-ager offered to sell him marijuana and Quaaludes, a depressant. "I said 'no' both times," Cass said. He gave police a description of the would-be drug vendor on his way into the concert. Police arrested a Groton, Conn., man and charged him with possession of hashish oil. Other substances seized during the arrest have been sent to state laboratories for analysis.

Motorists' Views Change Toward Autos

DETROIT —(UPI) — Two rounds of gas shortages and steep price hikes might have changed forever the U.S. motorist's view of his car and the auto industry, says General Motors President Elliott M. "Pete" Estes.

Estes said Wednesday Americans are unlikely to shrug off the effects of the 1979 gasoline crunch and return to buying gas-guzzling cars the way they did after the 1973-74 energy crisis.

By contrast, some other auto industry officials have said they believe the traditional mix of small and large car sales will be restored when public fears over gasoline availability and prices are eased.

"A cat which sits on a hot stove and gets burned might forget and do it again. But twice burned is a hard lesson learned," Estes said in a wide-ranging speech at a University of Michigan management seminar at Traverse City.

Estes also said two other forces will shape the auto industry in the future — competition to capture expanding world markets and the drive toward new technology as represented in the electrc car and the versatile turbine engine.

If U.S. motorists have become permanently dedicated to fuel economy, it could be a good thing for automakers, Estes said.

It means the industry can return to meeting public demand rather than concentrating resources and energies on complying with government standards, he said.

In ignoring gas-guzzlers and turning since March to smaller, fuel-efficient cars, consumers "seem to be reasserting themselves as our No. 1 taskmaster," Estes said.

"The advantage of working to meet the customer's demands rather than the government's is obvious: the risk that the industry will invest billions to produce cars that the public doesn't want to buy is greatly reduced.

"Our U.S. customers, concerned about the availability and price of gasoline, are buying with fuel efficiency paramount in their thinking," he said. "It seems clear that this will continue to be the case in the future.

"There is every reason to believe that the impact f the fuel shortages and higher prices that arrived in 1979 will be longer lasting than they were in 1973-74."

Estes refused to concede the government was correct in imposing fuel economy standards on the industry or that additional regulations are needed — requiring costly "gold-plated technology" — to further improve gas mileage.

"Just look at the distortions — the mess — that we have because of the regulation of energy — prices and allocation — in this country," he said.

"On the other hand, regulation which mandates products that people seem to be demanding anyway is just another, unnecessary bureaucratic expense."

Expensive technology, he said, "is fine for trips to the moon. But it doesn't make economic sense for trips to the grocery store or to work."

Election Primary Sparks Conflict

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts House Speaker Thomas W. McGee, furious at reports he has succumbed to pressure from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, says he will make his own decision about whether to try and push back the date of the state's second-in-the-nation presidential primary.

McGee is being pushed by Kennedy to keep the March 4 date in order to hold leverage over President Carter's energy policy, according to Boston attorney and Kennedy associate Gerard F. Doherty. Carter campaign officials, apparently concerned about a poor showing in Kennedy's home state, have asked that the primary be moved to April 22, following primaries in some Southern states where Carter is more popular, according to House sources.

Farmers Disappointed With USDA's Parity Study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Early this year, when protesting farmers drove about 2,000 farm vehicles into Washington, D.C., a few farmers worked closely with Agriculture Department economists for an analysis of the impact of the farmers' proposals.

Three to five American Agriculture Movement farmers met with officials on and off for seven weeks to discuss the impact of setting price support loans at 90 percent of parity.

Finally, a study has been released, several months after most of the farmers went home. Farmers who worked with it are disappointed at the bias which they said appeared in the final draft.

Keith Goldman, a Richland, Ind., farmer who worked with the project, said top officials in the department "turned it from an objective study, which it was in the beginning, into something that really reflects present agricultural policy."

"It certainly doesn't look like what we worked on for two months."

The study said if loans were set at 90 percent of parity — in effect setting a floor under farm prices — mandatory production controls would be needed to prevent overproduction of crops in response to higher prices.

That disturbed the farmers, who said the American Agriculture Movement never has proposed mandatory controls.

The study said the cost of restraining producers from overproduction would be excessive if production controls were voluntary. Estimated costs of voluntary controls were $18 billion in fiscal 1979, $10 billion in fiscal 1980 and $14 billion in fiscal 1983.

Initially, there would be a "substantial transfer of wealth" to farmers who produce controlled crops of milk, wheat, corn, sorghum, barley, oats, soybeans and upland cotton, the study said. The losers would be livestock producers, it said. In turn, livestock producers would consume less feed.

Farm income would rise 50 percent during the first year after radical changes were made in agricultural policy, but would decline in real terms during subsequent years because of rapid increases in costs of owning land, the study said.

It predicted adverse consequences for the livestock industry. Increased feed costs would cause meat and poultry production to decline. Consumers would have to pay more for meat and per capita meat consumption would decline, the study said. Beef production was predicted to decline 10 percent in 1983 and pork production by 13 percent.

The study predicted retail food inflation would rise 15 percent the first year, 9 percent in 1980 and then correspond to the general rate of inflation for the entire economy.

The economy would weaken slightly in 1979 and continue to be sluggish in 1983, the study said, contrary to American Agriculture Movement farmers' beliefs that higher farm prices would stimulate the entire economy.

The final draft of the study said higher prices could cause the United States to lose exports without formation of cartels. But it disputed the workability of cartels among leading exporters of major commodities.

However, the farmers said they only briefly discusseds cartels, which were not a major component of their proposal.

The study said cartel members for wheat would be Argentina, Australia, Canada and the United States. A feed grains cartel would be comprised of Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, South Africa, Thailand and the United States.

Soybean cartel members would be Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay and the United States. The cotton cartel would include Brazil, Egypt, Guatemala, Mexico, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Russia, Syria, Turkey and the United States.

Officials envisioned problems with other cartel members. For example, Brazil and Argentina are attempting to expand their shares of soybean markets, so they would have incentive to avoid an arrangement assigning them market shares.

Expensive prices would encourage grain production in importing nations and would discourage imports, the study said.

With a cartel, the value of U.S. farm exports would increase about 25 percent and the quantity would decline about 20 percent. Without a cartel, but with higher prices, the value of exports would increase 13 percent and the quantity would decline by 45 percent, the study estimated.

Goldman said the last draft which he saw several months ago said that increased farm prices would knock $15 billion off the U.S. trade deficit. That monetary figure was omitted from final draft.

Houston Officials Seek Fire's Cause

HOUSTON (AP) — A "suspicious fire" is what investigators still call the seven-alarm blaze that destroyed 224 fashionable apartments on Houston's west side and left more than 1,000 homeless.

"We're still treating it as a suspicious fire," said H.G. Torres, the Houston arson officer in charge of investigating the Tuesday fire which destroyed the Woodway Square Apartments.

Accounts differ about who was seen working in the 1,000-unit complex before the fire began, he said, and must be sorted out before causes of Houston's worst fire in 40 years can be determined.

Fire officials blamed the quick spread of the flames on wood shingle roofs. It was Houston's seventh major apartment complex fire within three years and the fourth involving wood shingles.

Houston Fire Chief V.E. Rogers said more than 400 firefighters from Houston and a dozen surrounding areas brought the blaze under control after about three hours.

The blaze, which amazingly killed no one, may have lit a fire under Houston City Council which unanimously passed a long-delayed ordinance Wednesday strengthening standards for use of wood shingles on multiple residential units. Amendments to the ordinance will make it also apply to all new single-family dwellings.

Ironically, the council had tabled the measure just as the wind-whipped flames erupted Tuesday afternoon.

Investigators sifted through the 4½ blocks of rubble Wednesday looking for clues, while tenants searched for belongings that could be salvaged from the ashes.

By late Wednesday, about 1,500 Houstonians had offered aid to the victims ranging from food and clothing to low-cost apartments, loans and animal shelters. Federal, state and private agencies operated at least a dozen centers to help the burned out residents and last week's flood victims.

Tropical Storm Claudette dumped up to 30 inches of rain a week ago damaging more than 12,000 homes.

Wednesday night Torres said about 20 more witnesses were to make statements.

"We've been taking statements all day," he said. "Until we decipher all the information, we won't know.

"It's one giant, ugly puzzle we have to put together," he said.

Fire department spokesman Dale Everitt said between 1,000 and 1,200 persons were displaced and that 457 units were damaged by fire. In an "unofficial, walk-through figure," he estimated losses in personal property to total $4 million.

Deaf-Mute To Appear Before Grand Jury

DALLAS (AP) — A deaf-mute, who is taking a crash course in sign language so he can understand the murder charges against him, will go before a Dallas grand jury Aug. 21.

Although a tentative trial date of Sept. 7 has been set for Jerome Fisher if he is indicted, prosecution and defense attorneys have said the trial could be delayed up to a year because of the difficulties in communication.

Judge James Zimmerman, who Wednesday reduced Fisher's bond from $25,000 to $5,000, also set an examining trial for early August.

Fisher's older sister, Lillian Mills, made the bond and Fisher was released.

"I'm going to work with Jerome to investigate this case," said court-appointed attorney Scott Anderson, adding he will join Fisher in sign-language class.

Fisher, 27, is charged with murder in the strangling death of prostitute Dorothy Armstrong. Family members say Fisher was asleep at home at the time of the slaying, which took place in a motel room.

One of two sign-language experts who have been working with Fisher said it will be "some time" before he comprehends sign language well enough to stand trial. "He's very eager to communicate with us, and he's picked up American sign language very quickly," Ann Phillips said.

Fisher can neither read nor write, she added.

Making his first appearance in a courtroom, Fisher had to be told the meanings of the words "judge," "court" and "trial."

"I'm not even sure he understands he is charged with murder," Anderson said.

Fisher lived with his sister before his July 14 arrest. She said the family had worked out a private sign language to communicate with her brother. "When I wanted him to wash the dishes, I would take him over and show him," she said. "He would do it."

Increased Credit Purchases Result Of 'Baby Boom'

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — If you're worried about getting into debt, you may want to take a look at a few barometers offered by a University of Iowa professor to see how your debt load stacks up against those of your neighbors.

The average American is using 20 percent of his after-tax income to pay installments on a home mortgage and such major items as cars and household appliances, Professor Richard Stevenson notes.

"If you're in the 25-to-44 age bracket, you may be earmarking considerably more than one dollar out of every five left after taxes for such debts," the finance professor points out. "These are the years when you're setting up housekeeping and raising a family, so you'll be in the market not only for a house, but for all its furnishings. Many of us make such purchases 'on time.'"

Since 1972, the number of Americans aged 25 to 44 has been increasing at seven times the rate of the 1946-71 period as a result of the post-World War II baby boom.

This accounts, in part at least, for the recent boom in consumer installment credit, Dr. Stevenson explains.

The amount of money Americans owed for installment purchases at the end of 1977 was $216 billion, up more than 31 percent from the end of 1975. This did not include mortgage loans on residential property, which totaled $652 billion at the end of 1977, up 33 percent from two years before.

More Americans are in the first-car-buying stage now, too, Stevenson points out. This accounts for some of the 32 percent rise in automobile installment credit from March 1977, to March 1978.

Yet with all our borrowing, nationwide rates of delinquency in paying off installment loans are low, Stevenson says.

Going into debt has some pluses, the University of Iowa professor points out:

— Homeowners often can take interest expense and property taxes as itemized deductions on their tax returns.

— If inflation continues, you'll be paying off that mortgage and those installments on new cars and household appliances with cheaper dollars, since prices and interest rates "freeze" at the time you make your purchase in most cases.

— The salary from which you'll be making those payments will be going up as wages rise to keep up with inflation, so your installment payments will shrink in the percentage of your income they take.

— You build up a good credit record by paying off your debts on time.

Stevenson believes that by 1985 many Americans may be spending as much as 35 percent of their after-tax income on housing expenses — mortgage payments (interest and principal, property taxes and insurance).

"As prices continue to rise and interest rates go up, it's hard to argue today against buying a house, even if you become 'house poor' for a few years," he says.

Each family is unique in the amount of installment credit it can handle, Stevenson says. So study your resources: Are both wife and husband bringing home paychecks? Are teen-agers earning their own clothes and incidentals? Do your job benefits include health and major medical insurance and a good pension plan? Do you have a financial "security blanket" in savings you can tap if an emergency arises?

Despite the potential benefits of taking on debt, excessive borrowing does restrict a family's financial flexibility, Stevenson points out. For example, you may have to pass up that new-car bargain because your existing debts keep you from getting more credit.

"If you're still in doubt about whether to buy your first home or make some other major investment, seek professional advice," Stevenson says. "Find an investment counselor or some other unbiased professional to assess your financial situation.

"You don't need to be a millionaire any more to make it worthwhile to seek competent help in making the best use of your money," he adds.

Meat Cooks Best At Lower Setting

CHICAGO (Special) — Sacrifice a little speed and achieve a lot more satisfaction. That advice for consumers who want to cook roasts in their microwave ovens comes from the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Tests conducted in the Board's kitchens show that lowering the power at which roasts are cooked in microwave ovens results in a more juicy, tender, flavorful and uniformly done product.

The recent extensive microwave test program was prompted by reported consumer disappointment with the results obtained by cooking roasts in microwave ovens. Included in the experiments were beef, pork and lamb roasts cooked at low, medium and high wattages.

Although medium to high wattages are frequently recommended for tender roasts, those cooked at a lower power setting (approximately 200 watts or 30 percent power) scored higher on all points. Not only did turning down the power result in a better quality product, but cooking losses were reduced. Since there was more meat to serve the cost per serving was reduced. For example, the losses of 28 to 31 percent for beef top round roasts cooked at high power were more than double those recorded for low power or conventional roasting.

Although lower power does call for increased cooking time, it is felt that higher eating quality is more important than super-speed to many microwave cooks. And even use of 30 percent power saves substantial time over conventional roasting.

The time increase can be minimized by starting roasts on high for five to ten minutes before reducing the power to 30 percent. Pork and lamb roasts cooked at 50 percent power were satisfactory. Cooks really pressed for time may find this power setting acceptable for beef roasts, although they should expect somewhat less uniformity of doneness.

Also important to successful microwave roasting is the selection of appropriate meat cuts. Tender, boneless cuts of compact uniform shape weighing three to four pounds are top choices, although some bone-in cuts are satisfactory.

Appropriate beef roasts include top round, tip (cap off), rump, rib eye and rib. Good pork choices include boneless top loin (double) and center loin roasts, boneless smoked ham, canned ham and center ham slice. When selecting lamb roasts consider boneless leg and loin and bone-in center leg, shank half and rib.

1. Place roast on rack in dish (use only microwave-safe materials).
2. Do not add liquid.
3. Place wax paper over top of toast (use of closed cooking bags or sealing in plastic wrap is not recommended for tender meat cuts).
4. Use low to medium power. Not only will a better roast result, but it will take much less attention during cooking and cleanup chores are minimized.
5. Turn roast during cooking — first, fat side down, then, fat side up.
6. Rotate dish during cooking for uniformity of doneness.
7. Shield specific areas with small pieces of foil.
8. Use a microwave thermomenter or sensor probe during cooking or a quick recovery or regular meat thermometer after the roast has been removed from the microwave oven.
9. Allow standing time before carving. Tent roast with foil during this period.
10. Allow for temperature rise. The amount of rise in temperature upon standing depends to a great extrent upon the power at which the meat was cooked. In general, allow for a rise of 15 to 20 degrees for roasts cooked on high, about 10 degrees on medium and 5 degrees on low.

Opening lead: Six of ♣.

Do experts make blunders? Here is an example from a world championship match between France and Italy. You be the judge.

Sitting North-South were Pietro Forquet and Benito Garozzo, then regarded as the world's finest pair. They were using the Blue Team Club system. The opening bid showed at least 17 points and the first response denied 6 points. Therefore, the bidding was natural. Note that, despite his unbalanced hand, Garozzo chose three no trump as his final contract, not four spades, because it appeared he had eight top tricks in his own hand.

It would seem that the normal lead by West is a diamond — not only his long suit, but also the unbid suit. That would have led to automatic defeat, and this column would never have been written. For reasons best known to himself, West chose to lead his singleton club.

Dummy's king of clubs was played and East won the ace. A diamond shift would have been deadly, but East elected to shift to a heart. Declarer ducked, West won the jack and returned a heart to declarer's queen.

By now, Garozzo must have thought that both defenders were void in diamonds! So grateful was he for their munificence that he overlooked a play that would have assured the contract even against a 4-1 spade division. All he had to do was lead the nine of spades. If either defender won the jack, the ten in dummy would serve as an entry to the high clubs. If both defenders played low, declarer would come to six tricks in spades and at least three tricks in the red suits.

Unfortunately, it was Garozzo's time to err. He overlooked this line completely. Instead, he cashed his high spades, and now he could not come to more than eight tricks when West, after winning the jack of spades, at last found the diamond shift — probably only because, at that stage, he was out of every other suit!

THOUGHTS ON MUSIC

No one really understood music
unless he was a scientist, her father had declared, and not just a scientist, either, oh, no, only the real ones, the theoreticians, whose language was mathematics.
She had not understood mathematics until he explained to her that it was the symbolic language of relationships.
"And relationships," he had told her,
"contained the essential meaning of life."

Annual Folklife Festival Highlights Varied Texas Cultural Facets

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — Any child interested in putting away his toy space gun in favor of a haystack should check out the special children's area of the 1979 Texas Folklife Festival, "Frontier Playland."

The Folklife Festival will take place today through Sunday on the grounds of The Institute of Texan Cultures on HemisFair Plaza in downtown San Antonio.

Special emphasis has been put on Frontier Playland by festival planners since the United Nations has declared 1979 as "The International Year of the Child."

For the first time, the area will be sponsored by the San Antonio Association for the Education of Young Children and The Education Arts Clearing House. Both groups have promised special activities for the younger visitors to the festival.

Sandy Cormier, director of the Kathryn Ryan Child Development Center and SAAEYC member, said, "I think the children are really going to like it. We'll make stick horses, dolls, Indian costumes and puppets."

In addition, Frontier Playland will include authentic games and activities that used to interest pioneer children, such as hopscotch, jacks, skiprope, marbles and painting. Also, children will have the opportunity to jump into a large pile of hay and participate in a wheelbarrow obstacle-course race while blindfolded.

A big difference this year at Frontier Playland will be the theatrical productions and booth sponsored by TEACH, an organization that uses performing arts as a means to teach children.

TEACH will perform a different children's play each afternoon of the four-day festival. Today, the show will be "Western Melodrama" and Friday it will be "Leyendas," a play that mixes English and Spanish dialogue.

The Saturday play will be two Oriental presentations called "The Miracle" and "The Nightingale." Sunday, the group will perform a clown act. The shows begin each day at 4 p.m.

All of the plays are original, written by TEACH staff members.

To supplement the plays, TEACH also will hold a theatrical workshop. Friday, children will be given a demonstration on masks and how to make one at home. Saturday, TEACH will show many uses of stage makeup and Sunday will smear makeup on the children and teach them Oriental and Indian dances, according to Maura Osborne, who is directing the Frontier Playland project for TEACH.

Festival manager Claudia Ball said, "Frontier Playland is an important part of the festival because it's educational. Children get to see how people used to live a long time ago."

"We've researched the authenticity of the games at Frontier Playland," she said, "and bill the festival as Texas' most entertaining educational event."

Cormier, who will organize the quarter-acre playland area, said she thinks the festival will mean more to children because of Frontier Playland.

"The folklife festival is so big and overwhelming to so many children that they just get swept through it. Here we will look them in the eye and talk to them. We'll show them that we're interested in making it meaningful for them," Cormier said.

Frontier Playland is directed toward children between ages kindergarten through 13, Ball said. The children's area tends to close down around dark, even though the rest of the festival continues until 11 p.m.

Frontier Playland is not a baby-sitting area, Cormier added. "Parents can't park children there for the day and leave them unsupervised."

The festival has other child-sized attractions beside the playland area. There are live animals to observe, a wagon ride, arm wrestling, Berm sliding contest, chicken flying contest, an old-fashioned see-saw, the Belgian shower bath game and others.

Booths that children might find interesting include the sandcasting booth, the cornshucking and shelling booths, the kite making booth and a whittling booth for children.

Emphasis in most of the child-oriented activities is on touching and working with the actual materials. "A bigger impressio is made if they do it just like the pioneer children did it," Cormier explained.

Ball noted, "The children often get to make things, like stick horses, and take them home for free.

"Most of the children who attend the festival are from urban environments," Ball said. "Some of them have never seen a cow before.

"I think the festival creates an understanding and appreciation between rural and urban folks. Last year a woman wrote me to say what a good time her child had at the festival and all he did was jump in the hay the whole time. But then, how often does a city child get the opportunity to see a hay stack?" Ball said.

Children under six are admitted free of charge to the festival grounds. Otherwise tickets are $1 for children under 13 years of age.

A special discount book of four children's tickets can be purchased in advance for only $3 at 22 San Antonio locations, including The Institute of Texas Culture.

Adult tickets for the festival are $3 in advance and at the gate except Saturday, when the gate admission rises to $4.

In its eighth year, the Texas Folklife Festival celebrates the [illegible] nic cultural heritage of Texas. Over [illegible] participants will gather from [illegible] state to share their skills, [illegible] plays, exhibits, demonstrations, [illegible] tests, dancing, music and food.

There will be no parking available on the Institute grounds during the festival.

However, free shuttle bus service will be available from downtown parking lots. Park and ride buses coming from Wonderland Mall on IH 10 and Windsor Park Mall on IH 35 will take visitors to the festival grounds for a $1 round trip fee.

The festival is open from 5 p.m. — 11 p.m. today and from 12 p.m. — 11 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

By BARBARA BASLER
AP Newsfeatures

Judy George is an interior designer who never fails to bring a little color into the lives of her clients.

That's because Miss George firmly believes color is one of the least expensive and most effective tools of the decorator's trade.

And, she says, when color is used "smartly and shrewdly," people with ordinary incomes can create extraordinary room designs, working on their own or with a professional.

Miss George, who is executive vice president of a New England chain of home-design stores, says that every color contains some tricks and treats, so it is important to remember which colors produce which effects. Basically, she says, there are three types of color — warm, cool and neutral.

Warm colors — red, orange, yellow — can make a room appear smaller and ceilings appear lower. They can warm up rooms that have too few windows and too little sunlight, but they can be too bright for rooms with lots of both. Warm colors, Miss George says, create a stimulating mood, but they can be overpowering if they are used excessively.

Cool colors — blue, green, purple — can make a room appear larger and they can make the long walls of a narrow room appear further apart. These colors, which create a relaxed atmosphere, can cool down a room with too much window exposure, but they can be too subdued for a room that lacks windows and light, Miss George says.

According to Miss George, black, white and grey, the neutral colors, are good for large backgrounds. And, in their lightest and darkest shades, they make good accent colors.

To choose colors you can really live with, Miss George advises researching your color preferences.

"I ask my clients to visit several museums and notice the colors in the paintings and watch which colors appeal to them. I also ask clients to bring me a favorite scarf or blouse or necktie — some piece of clothing whose color has never lost its appeal," she says.

Miss George cautions against following decorating trends in colors because "trendy colors tend to become boring or uncomfortable after a while. I steer my clients away from 'with-it' color schemes."

When it comes to decorating a room, Miss George recommends starting from the bottom up. "Choose a color for the rug or carpet and the walls and ceiling. Then you are ready to select fabrics, drapes and accessories," she says. Rugs and walls, she explains, "exert a great deal of control over the room," so their color should be more than an afterthought.

Miss George says a good decorator will gather dozens of paint and fabric samples — the bigger the better. "Take them home and try them in the room where they will be used," she says. "remember that colors change according to the amount of light and the source of light in a room. So always evaluate colors in the same kind of light they will receive at home."

When selecting a color for a sofa or chair or any other piece of furniture, remember that colors can produce different effects depending on their value and intensity.

Value refers to a color's lightness or darkness, intensity refers to its brightness or dullness.

If you like the color blue, you must decide whether you want a light or a dark blue, and whether you want it bright or dull.

Light, bright shades of color tend to make furniture appear lighter in weight, Miss George says, while dark or dull shades will make the same piece of furniture appear heavier.

When you put together your color scheme for a room, try to combine one dominant color with two supporting colors for the best effect, Miss George says. And if you are using a fabric pattern as the basis for your color scheme, the decorator recommends using and repeating the colors in about the same proportion as they appear in the pattern.

National Grocery Prices Rising

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Supermarket shoppers had to stretch their dollars still further last month as grocery bills measured by an Associated Press marketbasket survey rose by more than half a percent.

At the beginning of August, the average cost of a random selection of food and non-food items was about 5 percent higher than it was seven months earlier. One out of four products checked by the AP increased during July.

The AP survey covers 14 commonly purchased food and non-food items. The price of the items was checked at one supermarket in each of 13 cities March 1, 1973, and has been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped at the end of November 1977 because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

Among the latest findings:

—The marketbasket bill increased at the checklist store in seven cities and decreased in six cities during July. On an overall basis, the average marketbasket was seven-tenths of a percent higher at the end of the month than it was at the beginning. During June, in contrast, the average marketbasket bill dropped by seven-tenths of a percent.

—Comparing prices today with those at the beginning of the year, the AP found that the average marketbasket bill at the checklist store has increased by 4.9 percent.

—The price of food has been rising much more than the price of other supermarket items. During July, for example, non-foods accounted for only 9 percent of the increases, although they represented 21 percent of the items surveyed. When non-food items were removed from the marketbasket totals, the AP found that the average bill at the checklist store had increased by 6.2 percent in the first seven months of 1979. The government is now predicting food prices alone will increase by nearly 11 percent this year.

—Coffee and milk led the list of items increasing in price last month. The price of a pound of coffee increased at the checklist store in 11 cities, to an average of $3.03. Coffee prices have been increasing since a frost in Brazil wiped out hopes of a crop surplus. The price of a quart of milk rose last month at the checklist store in seven cities, reflecting higher prices paid to farmers.

—Eggs decreased in price in seven cities at the checklist store, offering bargains to consumers looking for non-meat sources of protein. There also were some specials on meat — the price of chopped chuck went down at the checklist store in five cities during July, while frankfurters declined in six cities.

	June	July
Up	26.9	24.7
Down	21.4	22.0
Unchanged	47.3	47.3
Unavailable	4.4	6.0

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the overall total.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item increased 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The USDA marketbasket issued each month is based on a complex set of statistics. It is designed to show changes in the relation between farm and marketing costs rather than actual family spending.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

Here is a city-by-city breakdown of what happened during July:

ALBUQUERQUE: The marketbasket went from $18.27 to $18.94, up 3.7 percent. Chopped chuck, coffee, peanut butter and sugar increased; orange juice, tomato sauce and frankfurters decreased; other items were unchanged.

ATLANTA: The marketbasket for 13 available items went from $17.21 to $16.90, down 1.8 percent. Increases in the price of coffee, orange juice, butter and milk were more than offset by substantial drops in the cost of eggs and frankfurters. Paper towels were temporarily out of stock at the checklist store. The other seven items were unchanged.

BOSTON: The total for 13 available items went from $17.01 to $17.89, up 5.2 percent. Coffee and milk went up; there were no declines. Medium eggs were temporarily unavailable at the checklist store. The remaining 11 items were unchanged.

CHICAGO: The bill for 12 available items went from $13.83 to $13.69, down 1 percent. Chopped chuck and butter went up; paper towels, eggs and frankfurters went down. The requested size and brand of fabric softener were unavailable at the checklist store; other items stayed the same.

DALLAS: The total for 14 available items went from $16.89 to $17.88, up 5.9 percent. Pork chops, coffee, milk and frankfurters went up; chopped chuck, orange juice, butter, eggs and tomato sauce went down. Paper towels were temporarily out of stock at the checklist store. Peanut butter, fabric softener, detergent and sugar were unchanged.

DETROIT: The marketbaset for 11 available items went from $12.25 to $12.62, up 3 percent. Coffee and sugar were responsible for the increase. Orange juice and tomato sauce declined slightly. Chopped chuck, pork chops and milk were out of stock on one of the two survey dates. Other items stayed the same.

LOS ANGELES: The total went from $17.39 to $16.37, down 5.9 percent. Only pork chops and coffee increased, while frankfurters, chopped chuck, sugar, orange juice, paper towels and eggs decreased. Other items were unchanged.

MIAMI: The total went from $17.56 to $16.49, down 6.1 percent. Coffee, butter and milk went up; chopped chuck, pork chops, orange juice, eggs, tomato sauce and frankfurters decreased. The remaining five items stayed the same.

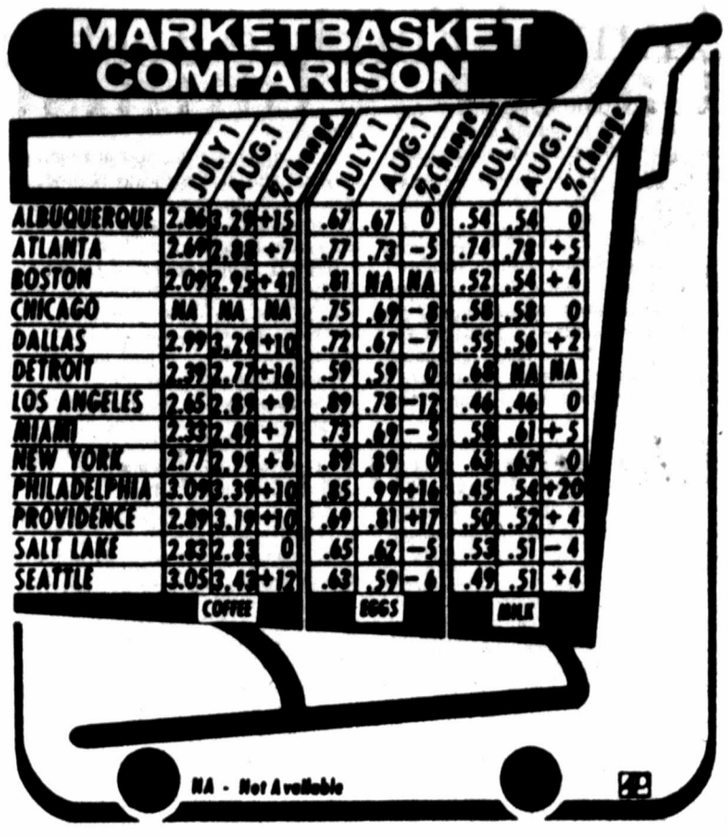
NEW YORK: The total for 13 available items went from $20.09 to $20.52, up 2.1 percent. Chopped chuck, coffee, paper towels and detergent increased; pork chops decreased. The requested size of fabric softener was unavailable at the checklist store. Other items were unchanged.

PHILADELPHIA: The bill for 13 available items went from $16.41 to $16.98, up 3.5 percent. Coffee, butter, eggs, peanut butter, tomato sauce and milk went up; pork chops and detergent went down; chopped chuck was temporarily sold out on one of the survey dates; other items were unchanged.

PROVIDENCE: The total went from $18.18 to $19.18, up 5.5 percent. Chopped chuck, coffee, butter, eggs, milk and frankfurters went up; there were no decreases; other items stayed the same.

SALT LAKE CITY: The bill for 13 available items went from $15.64 to $14.98, down 4.2 percent. Detergent was the only item to increase. Chopped chuck, butter, eggs, peanut butter and milk all decreased. Pork chops were temporarily out of stock at the checklist store. Other items were unchanged.

SEATTLE: The total went from $18.06to $17.80, down 1.4 percent. Increases in the price of milk, detergent, orange juice, coffee and tomato sauce were more than offset by declines in the cost of eggs, pork chops, chopped chuck, butter and frankfurters. The remaining four items were unchanged.



Cleaning Woman Lived In Infested House

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — Madeline Cooper, who lived in a house health authorities say had ankle-deep masses of cockroaches, works for this city as a cleaning woman.

The 67-year-old Miss Cooper was a "superb worker" who would feed her dogs "before she'd feed herself," Ann Gurley, director of the city's federal employment program, said Wednesday. Miss Cooper was hired by Mrs. Gurley 18 months ago.

Miss Cooper lived in a house where police rescued another "badly bitten up" woman and many pets Tuesday.

Miss Cooper works under the federal employment program as a cleaning lady at a school.

She pleaded innocent Wednesday in Schenectady Police Court to a charge of failure to provide proper sustenance to her pets. Her case was continued until next Wednesday.

Wednesday and scrubbed the street which cockroaches had covered the pre-

Police discovered the insects swarming inside and outside the home when they responded to a complaint of a barking dog at the house. The roaches swarmed outside, fell from trees and hung from telephone wires.

City Health Commissioner William Bartlett said Wednesday that recent hot, humid weather caused the cockroaches to "reproduce and multiply in astronomical proportions" until they spilled out of the house and into adjacent buildings.

Miss Cooper and the tenant of the other apartment in the house, 62-year-old Iva Fletcher, face cruelty to animal charges stemming from the condition of two dozen dogs, 15 cats, two mice and a parrot rescued from the house.

Miss Fletcher was listed in good condition at Ellis Hospital, where she was treated for cockroach and flea bites on most of her body.

Exterminators sprayed insecticide over a three-block area around the house vious day.

Bartlett said the house is scheduled for demolition Friday, after rats discovered in the basement are poisoned. The owner of the house, landlord Peter Galvin, has vowed to fight the demolition in court.

Galvin blamed his tenants for the roach condition, claiming they hadn't allowed him inside the house for a year.

"What am I supposed to do?," asked Galvin. "Mop the floors? Teach them personal hygiene?"

Mrs. Gurley said Miss Cooper had repeatedly asked her landlord to exterminate the cockroaches, but to no avail.

Toll-Free Ally Found In Carter

OWENSBORO, Ky. (UPI) — Juanita Smith has an impressive ally in her battle to extend her toll-free calling area from Bullitt County to Louisville — President Carter.

Richard Taylor, chairman of the state Regulatory Commission, said Carter called him about 4 p.m. Wednesday to discuss Mrs. Smith's complaint that a toll call is required between adjacent Bullitt and Jefferson Counties.

Mrs. Smith says Bullitt County residents need toll free service because many of them have jobs, friends and relatives in Jefferson County, particularly in Louisville.

Mrs. Smith presented her complaint to Carter Tuesday during a town meeting in Bardstown. Carter agreed to intercede.

Parks Director Dunked In Pool

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — As one teen-ager described it, Louise Brown "didn't lose her cool, but she didn't exactly look happy."

Mrs. Brown, city parks and recreation director, wanted a first-hand look at purported vandalism and misbehavior at the public swimming pool in the city's Brookline section, she got it.

A band of youths threw her in — summer dress and all.

Mrs. Brown said she was talking to a lifeguard when several teen-agers grabbed her by the arms, dragged her about 15 feet and tossed her into the 9-foot-deep section of the pool.

"I think they thought it was funny, and I think it's unfortunate because it shows they hve no respect, no idea of pool safety," she said.

Mrs. Brown, responding to what she called a "very serious" behavior problem at the pool, closed the facility, but later relented and ordered a reopening.

"A lot of people will suffer if it is closed," she said.

The city Wednesday assigned a policeman to the pool grounds when it reopened to try and keep order.

Carter Administration Sees Deeper Recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — An internal Carter administration document predicts Americans will face a deeper recession with higher unemployment next year than the White House has forecast publicly, according to a source.

The internal assessment says the jobless rate will hit 8.2 percent during the fall of 1980, meaning a total of 8.2 million Americans could be out of work. In June, the unemployment rate was at 5.6 percent.

A source, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday night the projections are contained in "an internal document" which probably never was intended to be made public.

The predictions were prepared by a joint task force that included senior staffers from the Treasury Department and Council of Economic Advisers, the source said.

The internal forecast differs sharply from the economy outlook the Carter administration released July 12.

At that time, the administration was projecting an unemployment rate next year of 6.9 percent. The latest Labor Department figures for June show 5.6 million Americans were unemployed. The internal projection means an additional 2.6 million Americans could be out of work next year.

The figures in the more pessimistic forecast closely parallel predictions being made by the Federal Reserve Board. The board chairman, G. William Miller, soon will move into the administration as secretary of the treasury.

It was expected the internal document would increase pressure on President Carter to propose a tax cut for 1980 to give the economy a boost.

The gloomy assessment was discussed this morning by Carter and about 100 House Democrats who call themselves United Democrats of Congress. But one participant, Rep. Beryl Anthony Jr. of Arkansas, told reporters, "There was no discussion of a tax cut."

There was no immediate White House reaction to publication of the report.

The internal document made the following predictions:

—Economic output: A decline in the gross national product of 1.4 percent this year, rather than the milder 0.5 percent dip in real terms the administration predicted July 12. Also, recovery will be weaker in 1980 than that forecast predicted. The administration said three weeks ago output would grow by 2 percent in 1980, while the internal document predicts a 1.1 percent rise.

—Unemployment: The nation's jobless rate will rise in the remaining months of this year and hit 8.2 percent by the end of 1980, not the 6.9 percent forecast earlier.

—Inflation: The inflation rate for the economy as a whole will be 8.6 percent in 1980, compared with the July 1978 rate of 8.1 percent. These figures include a variety of goods outside the Consumer Price Index, which has been climbing at a 13 percent annual rate this year.

Without making a recommendation, the economists also included estimates of how various tax cuts and anti-recession spending programs would affect the economy.

They said combining a $20 billion cut in Social Security taxes and a $5 billion increase in government spending would slow the inflation rate to 8.5 percent in 1980.

The president has mentioned the possibility of a cut in Social Security taxes as a non-inflationary way of stimulating the economy because slicing the payroll costs of businesses would help slow price increases.

Chagra Jurors Hear Opening Arguments

AUSTIN (AP) — Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra — big-time smuggler of "Colombian Connection" cocaine and marijuana or a hero who flew to South America only on a mercy mission?

Lawyers for the 34-year-old Las Vegas gambler and the United States government placed that question before jurors Wednesday at the start of Chagra's trial on charges he masterminded the importation of tons of marijuana and pounds of cocaine.

The eight-man, four-woman jury was picked after U.S. District Judge William Sessions of El Paso warned that jurors must not consider the fact that the original judge in the case was assassinated May 29.

Federal Judge John H. Wood Jr. of San Antonio was murdered by an unknown gunman as he left his apartment.

Sessions is protected around-the-clock by armed U.S. marshals, and guards searched purses or briefcases of everyone entering the federal courthouse.

Wood was not the only person connected with the case to die violently.

Chagra's lawyer brother, Lee, was murdered last December in his El Paso office, and the records law enforcement officers found there reportedly fueled a federal grand jury drug investigation that still continues.

The charge against Chagra with the biggest wallop is "continuing criminal enterprise" in illicit drugs. Conviction carries a prison sentence of 10 years to life imprisonment, a possible $100,000 fine and confiscation of any profits he might have made from the drug trade.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ronald Guyer of San Antonio said in opening arguments to the jury that the continuing criminal enterprise law "may be termed the 'kingpin statute.'"

"What the government will bring to you will be testimony of accomplices of Mr. Chagra, co-conspirators who acted with Mr. Chagra in many offenses from 1974 to 1978," Guyer told the jury.

He said the government would prove that Chagra flew to Colombia in November 1977, met a confederate who had "made contact with Mr. Chagra's sources" and flew out with 13.2 pounds of cocaine.

Other accomplices, Guyer said, sold 4.4 pounds of the drug and returned $70,000 to Chagra to finance a shipload of marijuana from Colombia.

Ultimately, he said, federal authorities confiscated three ships carrying 100,000 pounds of marijuana, all tied in some way to Chagra.

Guyer said the government also would prove that in 1974 through 1976 Chagra "was responsible for delivery" of tons of marijuana to Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Oklahoma — the latter case involving a single shipment of 17,000 pounds to Ardmore.

Chagra's lead attorney, Oscar Goodman of Las Vegas, Nev., said the government's case rested on "purchased testimony" of the alleged accomplices.

"The government witnesses have been offered the fact that they won't be prosecuted for their offenses," Goodman said.

Commission Says Nuclear Plant Misused Safety Equipment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident last March might have been prevented if the plant operators had allowed safety equipment to function as planned, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff said today.

The NRC Office of Inspection and Enforcement, in a report more than two inches thick, said it was still investigating some 35 possible violations of federal operating rules and radiation protection limits in connection with the March 28 accident 28 near Harrisburg, Pa.

But Victor Stello Jr., director of inspection and enforcement, wrote in a summary of the report, "Perhaps the most disturbing results of the ... investigation is confirmation of earlier conclusions that the Three Mile Island Unit 2 accident could have been prevented, in spite of the inadequacies" whichinvestigators found.

Stello said the plant's design, equipment, accident analyses and emergency procedures "were adequate to have prevented the serious consequences of the accident, if they had been permitted to function or be carried out as planned."

"For example, had the operators allowed the emergency core cooling system to perform its intended function, damage to the core would most likely have been prevented."

Instead, the core of the reactor, containing radioactive fuel rods, was severely damaged by overheating and released so much radiation inside the reactor building that the operators are still unable to enter for inspection and clean-up operations and the building may remain sealed at least through this year.

The report said the operators probably were not alone in accepting some responsibility for the accident.

"On the other hand," Stello wrote, "had certain equipment been designed differently, it too could have prevented or reduced the consequences of the accident."

Search Continues For Davis Jurors

FORT WORTH (AP) — Half the number of prospective jurors needed in the Cullen Davis' murder solicitation retrial have survived prosecution questioning, and attorneys today will try to obtain an additional 16 potential jurors.

After the 32 prospects are seated, the prosecution and defense each will "strike" 10, leaving a panel of 12 to hear the case.

State District Judge Gordon Gray has asked prosecutor Jack Strickland to speed the pace of the questioning. Gray said Wednesday he will call "as many as it takes," and said he would be willing to bring in more jurors from the central jury room.

"The further we go, the quicker it ought to get," Strickland said. "Obviously, all of us here are interested in going as quickly as possible."

Strickland said he is aiming for 15 minutes per juror for questioning. He has questioned 27 of the panel of 65 so far, but some jurors farther along the line have volunteered their problems and already have been cut.

Thirteen potential jurors were excused on Wednesday, one of them a woman who had spoken to an assistant district attorney about the case.

Davis, a Fort Worth industrialist, is accused of masterminding a plot to kill his one-time divorce judge, Joe Eidson. Eidson and the FBI participated in a secret scenario that led to Davis' arrest last August.

The defense contends Davis was framed by his ex-wife Priscilla and others.

Davis' first trial on the murder solicitation charge ended in a mistrial last Jan. 22 in Houston when jurors failed to reach a verdict.

Youth To Stand Trial As Adult For Killing

A 16-year-old Waco youth Wednesday was certified to stand trial as an adult in the July 7 stabbing death of an East Lubbock apartment manager.

Ynes Salazar, a high school junior in Waco, was certified as an adult by 72nd District Court Judge Denzil Bevers after a 4 1/2-hour hearing Wednesday afternoon.

Defense attorney Tomas Garza said the ruling would be appealed. Judge Bevers set a $1,000 personal bond for the youth pending the appeal and possible grand jury consideration of an indictment.

Salazar is accused in the death of 38-year-old Ben P. Guzman Jr., who police reported was beaten and then stabbed about 3 a.m. July 7 after he tried to break up a disturbance at the 1027 E. 29th St. apartment complex where he was manager.

A 19-year-old Marine military policeman, Victor Salazar of Slaton, also has been charged with murder in the case.

Patrolman John S. Barker testified Wednesday that Guzman showed no sign of life when he arrived at the apartments and found Guzman lying near the apartments swimming pool.

Barker said a bystander told him Victor Salazar had beaten Guzman with a shotgun Guzman had been carrying. Salazar was arrested and taken to the police station.

Officers subsequently were dispatched to bring Ynes Salazar from the apartments to the station, Barker said.

Garza argued that certification "only means the possibility of prison" and that young Salazar did not have a sufficiently bad record to justify certification as an adult.

Assistant District Attorney Paulina Jacobo argued that he was "sophisticated and mature" enough that he should stand trial in Lubbock County district court.

House To Erect Statue Of King

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Of the numerous statues lining the halls of Congress — many dating to the days of the nation's founding — none is of a black.

The House moved Tuesday to change that by approving legislation to put a statue or bust of Martin Luther King Jr. in the Capitol. It would be the first work of art in Congress to honor any black American.

The vote was 408-11, although the only stated opposition during a brief debate was from Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, who said a better person could have been picked to honor black Americans.

The resolution, which now goes to the Senate, would authorize up to $25,800 from the House contingency fund for the project. All details would be worked out later by the Joint Committee on the Library.

Stafford's Wife Testifies On Steakhouse Murders

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Roger Dale Stafford's estranged wife says she saw Stafford and his late brother open fire on six steakhouse workers killed in a robbery here a year ago.

"Verna Stafford is a first-class liar," Stafford's chief attorney, J. Malone Brewer, said Wednesday, promising to attack Mrs. Stafford's testimony today.

Defense attorneys were to continue their cross-examination during a preliminary hearing before Special District Judge Leonard Geb, who must determine whether there is enough evidence to try Stafford, 27, on six first-degree murder charges.

Mrs. Stafford, 26, admitted under questioning by District Attorney Andrew Coats Wednesday that she had lied to police, minimizing her involvement in the steakhouse robbery-murders on July 16, 1978.

"I figured I'd be locked up ... and wouldn't be able to tell you the story," Mrs. Stafford said, explaining why she had denied participating in the robbery.

"No one's promised me anything" to testify, she said. Coats said after Wednesday's court session that he had not decided whether to file any charges against Mrs. Stafford.

The young woman testified in chilling detail about the killings, alleging that her husband and his late brother Harold, 29, committed the murders during a $1,200 robbery. Harold died in a motorcycle accident six days later.

Mrs. Stafford testified that the shootings began when her husband became angry at Louis Zacarias, 43, who was acting as manager of the steakhouse.

"The manager was upset because he was being held up and made the statement that he couldn't understand why people would steal money instead of working for it," Mrs. Stafford said.

Zacarias also vowed to have the Staffords convicted of robbery, she said. "Roger said they deserved what they were going to get" just before he opened fire, Mrs. Stafford said.

After the shootings, Roger Stafford "said it was time that I became part of them," Mrs. Stafford testified.

Local Man Charged With July Burglary

A 47-year-old Lubbock man was charged Wednesday with burglary of a habitation in a reported July 26 break-in at a 1608 Ave. D apartment.

Robert Murry Sanders of 1602 Ave. C, No. 11, is accused in the early morning break-in, which resulted in his being shot in both legs by a Lubbock man living in the apartment.

Sanders was treated at a Lubbock hospital following the shooting and later released.

The criminal district attorney's office has recommended bond be set at $25,000.

Congressmen Vote On Amtrak, Busing, Abortion

HOUSE

AMTRAK — The House rejected, 197 for and 214 against, an amendment to continue the full 27,500-mile Amtrak passenger train network for another year. The amendment was proposed to HR 3996, a bill authorizing Amtrak operations in fiscal 1980 and beyond. As later passed and sent to the Senate, the bill cuts Amtrak to 22,000 miles in order to stem its massive financial losses.

Rep. Albert Gore, Jr., D-Tenn., the sponsor, said that due to shortages of gasoline, passenger train service should be kept intact for at least another year.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., an opponent, said that in preserving Amtrak's least-productive routes the House invites the failure of the entire system.

Members voting "yea" wanted to keep Amtrak at its present size during the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Rep. James Wright, D-12, did not vote.

STAFF INCREASE The House voted, 214 for and 120 against, to allow House members to enlarge their staffs by up to four part-time or temporary positions. This raises the present ceiling of 18 aides that a member can have on his personal (as opposed to committee) staff. If leaves unchanged the $288,000 limit on salaries for a member's personal staff. The measure (H Res 350) does not require Senate concurrence and takes effect Aug. 1.

Rep. Carroll Campbell, R-S.C., a supporter, said the staff enlargement will give members "some flexibility for dealing with situations in their offices, such as a maternity leave, such as the need for a temporary employee to bring special expertise..."

Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., an opponent, said the hike "will guarantee more staff proliferation and, in its train, a requirement of more space, more furniture, more parking, and more telephones."

Members voting "yea" wanted larger personal staffs.

Archer, Leath, Stenholm, Loeffler, Paul, Kazen and Lujan voted "nay."

SCHOOL BUSING By a vote of 209 for and 216 against, the House failed to achieve the two-thirds majority needed to approve a proposed "neighborhood schools" constitutional amendment. The measure was designed primarily to outlaw court-ordered busing to integrate schools.

Rep. Ronald Motti, D-Ohio, the sponsor, said court-ordered busing "is a social policy imposed by an activist judiciary, and it is a mistaken social policy that is leading to the virtual destruction of public education at neighborhood schools in cities where it is used."

Rep. John Buchanan, R-Ala., an opponent, said: "The Constitution should never be amended in such a light and cavalier fashion. Would we rewrite the Bill of Rights on the floor of the House on the basis of one or two hours of debate?"

Members voting "nay" either favored busing or felt that amending the Constitution was an inappropriate response to the problems of busing.

Hall, Collins, Roberts, Gramm, Archer, Pickle, Leath, Hightower, Wyatt, de la Garza, White, Stenholm, Hance, Loeffler, Paul, Kazen, Lujan and Runnels voted "yea."

SENATE

ELECTION COMMISSIONER The Senate confirmed, 73 for and 25 against, President Carter's nomination of Frank Reiche, a New Jersey Republican, to the Federal Election Commission.

Reiche was opposed by many Senate Republicans who doubted that he was a sufficiently partisan Republican and disliked his refusal to oppose public financing of congressional campaigns. The FEC, which enforces federal election laws, has three Democratic and three GOP commissioners.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., a supporter, criticized "those who lead people to believe they represent true Republicanism..."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, an opponent, said that if Reiche proves to be "not a partisan Republican" the Democratic party point of view could prevail on the FEC.

Senators voting "nay" opposed the nomination.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, voted "yea."

ABORTION The Senate adopted, 57 for and 42 against, a more conservative position on the abortion issue. The language was included in an appropriations bill (HR 4389) later passed and sent to conference with the House. It permits federally-funded abortions when (1) the mother's life is endangered, (2) the pregnancy is the result of rape or incest, or (3) two doctors say the pregnancy will seriously harm the mother's health.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., a supporter, said that due to the House's hard line the language "is about the best we can do under the circumstances."

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., an opponent, said taking a harder line against federally — funded abortions "only denies to poor women equal access to this medical service."

Senators voting "yea" were anxious to compromise with the House on the abortion issue.

Bentsen, Tower and Schmitt voted "yea."

Domenici voted "nay."

Painter Has Varied Backgrounds

CUZCO, Peru (UPI) — "Your're Jewish aren't you?" Peruvian artist Amilcar Salomon Zorrilla asks visiting tourists in his Cuzco studio.

The query seems strange coming from a man whose Inca Indian blood inspired him to create four sets of giant oil canvases portraying Peru's 14 Inca emperors.

"I'm Jewish too," the artist says. "My grandfather was a Chinese Jew whose ancestors fled the Spanish Inquisition to Shanghai, and my mother's family traces Jewish blood. I'm very proud of it and I'm also proud that my mother is descended from Inca royalty."

Salomon, the most widely exhibited modern Peruvian artist, has shown his work in 21 countries including Israel, which he considers one of his three spiritual homelands along with Peru and China.

"My father was very proud of his mixed-up background and told me we came from the famous Salomon family of Jewish-Chinese artists in Canton," said the 54-year-old artist, recalling his youth in the Andes mountain city of Ayacucho. "He was not a professional artist but he taught me how to draw."

Salomon joined the Peruvian navy at age 17 and became an engineering officer on a submarine. The art emerged when patriotic zeal inspired him to paint his first large oil, a detailed historical representation of the Peruvian-Chilean naval battle of Angamos in the 1879 War of the Pacific.

An impressed commander granted Salomon special permission to combine submarine work with study at the National School of Fine Arts. At graduation seven years later, the artist won out over the sailor and Salomon resigned from the navy.

"The first thing I did was visit Cuzco, the capital of the Inca Empire," Salomon said. "The re-encounter with my Inca past floored me. I moved here and began to study history and talk to archaeologists. And I began to paint the Inca emperors."

Working with spatula and oils, Salomon completed one canvas of more than four square yards every three weeks until he painted all 14 Inca emperors.

Salomon started showing his paintings in Santiago, Chile, in 1957, but his big break came in 1966 when his bold portraits of the emperors caught the attention of another emperor, Hirohito of Japan, who put the 14 paintings in his private collection and presented the Peruvian artist with the Imperial shield, one of Japan's highest non-military decorations.

Since then Salomon has exhibited his abstract-expressionist paintings throughout the United States, Western Europe, Canada and South America.

"In my work I want to show my great love of my people, the Inca Indians," Salomon says.

Students Learn From Islanders

KALYMNOS, Greece (UPI) — For a group of American high-school students, the Greek island of Kalymnos has become school, workshop and way of life.

"I got sick of high school and Kalymnos was a good reason to go someplace else," said John McShane, 17, from New York's suburban Westchester County. "You learn most from just seeing how the people here live, but the academic side's good too."

Twelve students, nine girls and three boys, were taking part in a semester on this barren island in the Dodecanese, home of the Greek sponge-fishing industry.

"Culture shock is at the root of what we're trying to do," said Nick Germanakos, a Cypriot-born, Oxford-educated writer who created the Kalymnos program four years ago.

"It's not an entertainment. We work the kids harder than they've ever worked before. It's a very intense experience that lasts 100 days.

"The island is the school. These privileged, protected kids learn to see life through others' eyes and find out about a kind of community that no longer exists in their world."

Kalymnos is no place for an Aegean idyll. It is an unprepossessing island, not favored by tourists, with dry gray hills rising above thin green ribbons of valley and a deeply indented coastline.

"I expected something prettier, more romantic," McShane said. "I didn't realize we'd be living in a real town, and that we'd be washing our own clothes in cold water."

The program is run by Interalp (International Action Learning Program), a nonprofit organization in Princeton, that has other schools in Costa Rica and Kenya.

On Kalymnos, each student is apprenticed to an islander and spends the mornings working in a boatyard or carpenter's shop, or clipping and bailing sponges for export, weaving or helping the local confectioner.

"I chose this program because it meant doing a job. It wasn't just a package tour," said Greta Davenport, 17, from Annapolis, Md., who works in the waterfront sweetshop.

In the afternoons Germanakos, assisted by a Greek language teacher and a guest lecturer, holds four hours of classes on Greek literature and history.

"Greek classes take a lot of time, but I also try to give the students a real sense of the past," he said. "American kids see history in linear terms of continuing progress. I try to show them it's more patchy, with only rare periods of achievement."

The students keep journals and write papers, but they also cook for themselves and clean the former sea captain's house they live in.

"They don't like it at first, but they get used to the food — lentils, beans, salads, goat cheese," Germanakos said, "even if you do find them cooking themselves a lemon pie or sneaking out for a Coke."

There are trips to the nearby island of Cos and Rhodes to study antiquities, and a few days in Athens at the end of the semester.

In the winter semester the students pick tangerines. In spring they plant trees.

The students seem most impressed by the collective lives the islanders lead, their extended families and ritual festivities.

"Everyone has a place here," said Catherine McGlade of New Canaan, Conn. "Old people still work end the village idiot is the gravedigger. But it's a funny mixture — you see old women carrying sacks of flour on their backs and their sons riding motorcycles."

"People here live on the edge of things, poverty and even death," said Katherine Sher from Palo Alto, Calif. "They know about reality and I've learned a lot from them."

Senate Votes For 20 Percent Amtrak Cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — About one-fifth of the Amtrak passenger train network appears headed for elimination under a congressional plan that falls far short of President Carter's original rail cutback proposal.

In perhaps the last major fight over Amtrak this year, the Senate voted 89-11 Wednesday to go along with a House-passed formula that probably will result in the closing of 20 percent of the 22,700-mile system.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Commerce Surface Transportation Subcommittee, said the plan will "eliminate those trains that represent an unreasonable waste of limited resources."

Less than one-third of 1 percent of inter-city travelers use Amtrak trains, Long said, and two-thirds of fare costs are subsidized by taxpayers.

The Senate passed the measure after adopting an amendment requiring Amtrak to cut fares at least 25 percent for the elderly and handicapped.

The Carter administration in January recommended a 43 percent cutback with an estimated savings of $1.4 billion over the next five years. That proved to be too sweeping for Congress, and House and Senate committees began rewriting the plan.

The administration finally eased its stance when higher gasoline prices and gas lines in some parts of the country resulted in record ridership on Amtrak trains this summer.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said the congressional plan "is acceptable to the administration."

On a 65-35 vote, the Senate rejected an amendment by Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., for a one-year moratorium on any cuts. He argued that some of the trains being scrapped are almost full and should be saved.

The congressional plan, drafted by a House committee and approved by the full House last week, does not specify which trains will be eliminated, but sets criteria for Amtrak to use in deciding which trains survive.

The criteria call for eliminating long-distance trains unless they carry an average of at least 150 passengers per mile and lose no more than seven cents per passenger for every mile traveled. Short-haul trains would have to carry 80 passengers per mile and lose no more than nine cents.

The bill would preserve all commuter trains at least until April 1, 1981. It also stipulates that each quadrant of the country would be entitled to keep a train if the final Amtrak plan does not provide sufficient service.

The regional balance provision, according to some estimates, would save these trains: the Salt Lake City-Seattle "Pioneer," either the Chicago-Houston "Lone Star" or the Chicago-Laredo "InterAmerican," and two short-haul trains, the Seattle-Portland "Mount Rainier" and the Vancouver-Seattle "Pacific International."

Minor differences between the House and Senate bills will have to be worked out later by a conference committee.

Agreement Sought In Talmadge Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee is close to reaching unanimous agreement on disciplinary action for Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, the committee chairman says.

But Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., said no final decision on what action to take on the financial misconduct allegations against Talmadge will come before September.

The chairman made the comments Wednesday night after the committee met behind closed doors for more than two hours to discuss the case against the Georgia Democrat.

Stevenson said the committee will meet again shortly after Congress returns from a month-long recess Sept. 5.

He said all six members of the committee agreed it was important to have a unanimous decision.

Asked if exoneration of Talmadge could be ruled out, he said, "I wouldn't quarrel with that, but I am not going to confirm it."

Four of the six members of the committee are known to favor some strong disciplinary action against Talmadge, probably censure.

It is possible some lesser penalty such as reprimand might be necessary to obtain the support of the other two members.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures rose Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade as traders awaited an Agriculture Department announcement they believed might mean increased U.S. grain exports.

Wheat futures led other commodities as talk circulated that the Agriculture Department might increase the amount of U.S. wheat that the Soviet Union is allowed to purchase during the upcoming marketing year, which begins Oct. 1.

Brighton Offers Budget Vacation

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

The dog days of summer are more bearable when you realize that the pleasant days of autumn are getting closer. Fall with its cool nights and comfortable days, also brings off-season bargains for traveling — especially in England.

Autumn in England is a perfect time of the year. The theatre in London has started a new season; most tourists have returned home to plan next year's vacation; guides and inn keepers have more time for personalized service; and the countryside is beautiful with leaves of red and yellow — especially in southeast England.

Southeast England has long been a favorite vacation area for the British and now it is being discovered by Americans. Just a few hours from London (the capital city is geographically a part of southeast England) is Brighton. The famous seaside resort is easily reached by automobile, bus or train from Gatwick Airport served by Braniff International from the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

Brighton was only another fishing village until it found favor with certain royalty and became a fashionable seaside bathing place in the 19th century. It was then that Brighton became the site of the bizarre Royal Pavilion.

Sally Lewis, information executive for the South East England Tourist Board, explained to this writer, "The first member of the Royal Family to go down to Brighton was Prince George in the early 19th century; he later became Prince Regent and then King George IV."

Miss Lewis continued, "George had a very strict upbringing in London, so he enjoyed the freer life in Brighton with his cronies and clique of supporters. His mistress also came to Brighton, and the once quiet fishing village became a scandalous place. Brighton became a minicourt for George, so he built a summer palace we now refer to as the Royal Pavilion."

To be frank, the Pavilion may be one of the most interesting places in the world to tour, but it sticks out like a sore thumb. Only paces away from the British scene of narrow streets bordered by small shops is the sprawling Pavilion topped by many minarets and onion-shaped ornate domes. The architecture is like that of a palace in India with a reminder of the Arabian Nights thrown in for good measure. And that's not all — the "Moghul of India" exterior is surpassed by the more amazing interior that is decorated in a Chinese motif! Plus, the long halls are lined with massive life-size oil paintings, antiques from the once sprawling empire, sculpture and stuffed animals. Massive rugs and tapestries could easily cover Jones Stadium.

But the summer palace and its way of life came to a halt when Princess Victoria became the Queen. She had all of the furnishings removed in preparation for the structure being leveled, and elected to spend her holidays at the seadate Isle of Wight.

"The people of Brighton knew that the Pavilion could be a great tourist attraction," noted Miss Lewis. "So the people purchased the shell of the building, and over the following generations the monarchs of England returned all of the original furnishings and art work. Today the Pavilion is almost exactly as it was in the days of George. Without the scandalous happenings, of course."

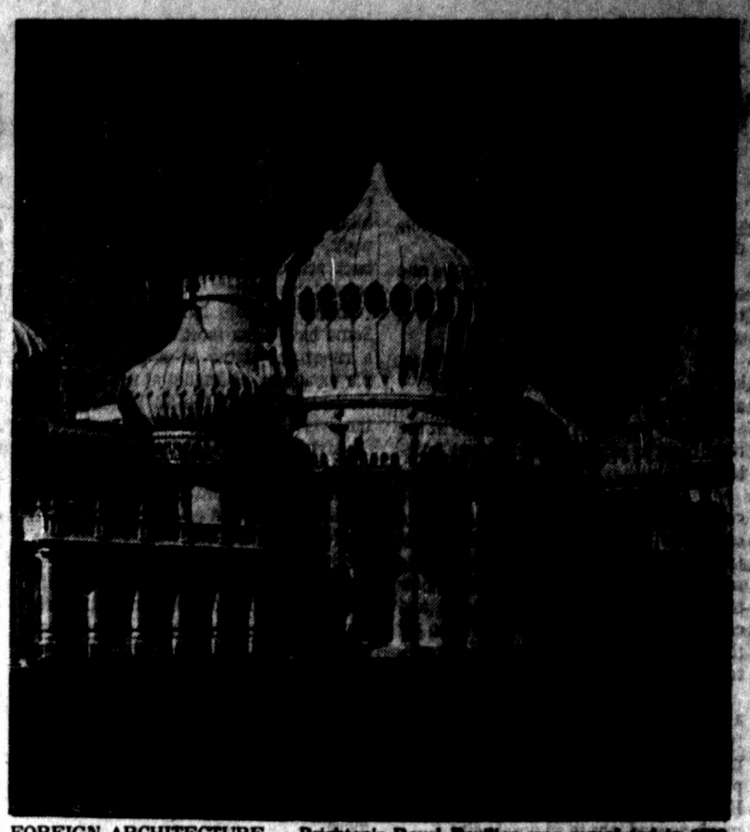
The amazing structure is open to the public every day of the year except Christmas and Boxing Day — the first weekday after Christmas.

Aside from walking the Pavilion's long halls, visitors should take along a good pair of walking shoes to enjoy Brighton's Lanes. A compact area of interesting boutiques, antique shops, cafes and pubs, the streets are too narrow for auto traffic. The "old town" will almost hypnotize you with its many windows of bargains from every corner of the world. Shopping, eating, sightseeing... the hours are too few as you walk about the Lanes. From fish and chips to syllabub (a dessert of raspberries, wine, honey and rich cream), from wooden dolls to procelain figurines — it can all be found in the Lanes.

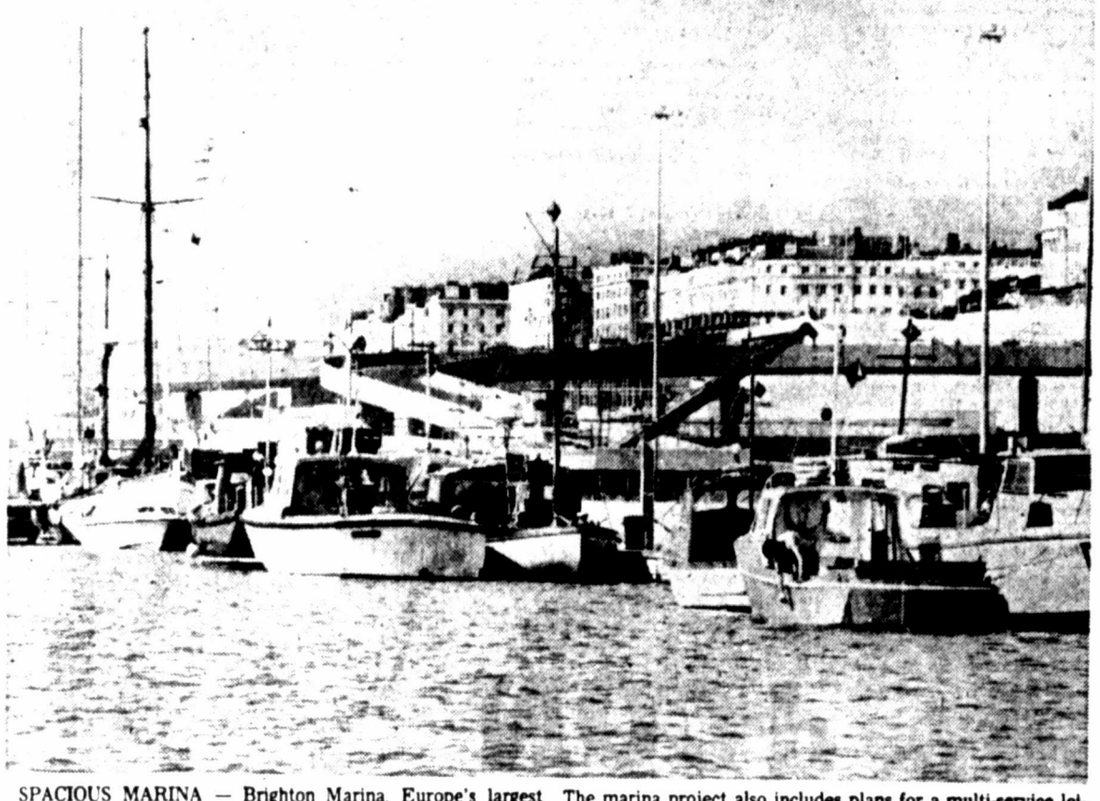
The seaside resort city also has an aquarium, a wax museum, top name entertainment such as Dolly Parton, discos, drama and ballet. There are parks and gardens, horse racing and cricket, motorboat racing and fishing, plus a huge indoor sports center with swimming pool, bowling, sauna and gym.

Brighton has more than 150 hotels and guest houses. The rates range according to location and service, but the rates are surprisingly economical for a resort city. Special off-season weekend rates make Brighton a pleasure for budget conscious travelers. For instance, the Grand Hotel that faces the beach, has a packaged weekend priced at just $30 (at this writing) per person, per day, for two consecutive nights. The price includes full English breakfast, lunch or dinner, and a Saturday night dinner dance. The elegant Grand Hotel has been a landmark since 1864.

For more information pertaining to Brighton and the surrounding area, write to the South East England Tourist Board, Cheviot House, 4-6 Monson Road, Tunbridge Wells, Kent TN1 1NH, England. General information pertaining to England is available from British Tourist Authority, 680 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019. Lubbock travel agents can make complete arrangements at no additional cost.



FOREIGN ARCHITECTURE — Brighton's Royal Pavilion was completed in 1822 for the Prince Regent (later King George IV) as a summer palace. The Pavilion's exotic domes and Indian influence are rivaled only by its still more exotic Chinese interiors.



SPACIOUS MARINA — Brighton Marina, Europe's largest marina with moorings for up to 2,000 yachts, opened in 1978. The marina project also includes plans for a multi-service leisure center, ultra-modern hotel and dock-side apartments.

Undertaker Trying To Bring Life To Dying City

By DALE SINGER

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (UPI) — A young undertaker is trying to bring this dying city back to life.

But Carl E. Officer, who became one of the nation's youngest mayors when he took office at age 27 on May 7, knows it won't be easy.

He has taken charge of a city best known for its crime and corruption — and a city tired of political promises.

Officer hopes his election came at the right time to solve the city's image problem.

"I came along at a good time for the community, which didn't take advantage of earlier opportunities," he said. "Before, people tended to say, 'You're the mayor — you do it.' They realize now that you can't just change names and change faces in the mayor's office to get things done. You've got to change attitudes."

Officer, who still works when he can at Officer Funeral Home, one of the city's oldest businesses, plans to concentrate on the basics — fire and police protection and good municipal services. He knows no business is going to bring much-needed jobs to an unsafe city.

But Officer concedes his biggest problem is convincing the rest of the world that "East St. Louis" is not a synonym for everything that's bad.

"I know things are bad," he said, riding in his car to a lunch-time committee meeting sandwiched between a morning news conference and an afternoon round of appointments.

"They have been bad. The biggest problem here is an image problem. But I point out to people wanting to move their businesses here that I'm a third-generation businessman. I know that with business you can't play on community pride — you've got to look at dollar signs."

East St. Louis long has been known as a center of corruption and a target of derision. "It's been a problem since before the United States was the United States," Officer said.

"Respectable men from what is now the Missouri side of the river would come to the Illinois side to do their gambling and be with their ladies of the night, then they would take the ferry back across the Mississippi and become respectable again."

Many solutions have been proposed. Some have been facetious, like erecting a riverfront statue of a giant croquet player aiming his mallet at the gleaming Gateway Arch on the St. Louis side of the river.

Architect R. Buckminster Fuller wants to use his geodesic dome design for a mile-wide domed city on the East St. Louis riverfront as a model of life in the future.

But Officer's views are more down to earth. When he looks at a riverfront littered with railroad tracks and other debris, he sees a choice piece of real estae waiting to be developed into a modern port to handle the coal, grain and livestock pouring out of Middle America.

"Geographically it's much better to be in East St. Louis," he said. "The movement is back toward the river, and East St. Louis is right in the center. No one wants to build in the boonies anymore."

Business brings jobs, and jobs bring people, and people bring housing. Officer thinks the city can be brought back to life — if it is safe. To help make it safe he is pushing enforcement of a curfew getting teen-agers under the age of 17 off the streets late at night.

The move is designed to reduce the number of burglaries and protect citizens in a city where murder doubled last year.

Other moves Officer made in his first two months in office were the firing of more than 100 employees — saving more than $500,000 — and the rounding up of city-owned equipment that was in the hands of private contractors. He said he was trying to bring some efficiency to a disorganized city government.

"It has behooved politicians in the past to cry, 'We're broke, we're broke, we're broke.' That way you don't have to hire anyone but your friends and you don't have to tell the truth."

When East St. Louis, which has a predominantly black population of 65,000, elected its first black mayor eight years ago, many thought the era of reform was beginning.

But James E. Williams, an attorney, and William Mason, an educator, each had troubles in four-year terms marked by squabbles and scandals.

Officer hopes to learn from the past and succeed where he feels those men failed.

"I'm a better politician than both of them. Mayor Williams was not willing to compromise — not compromise principles or ethics — but on issues. Mayor Mason tried to compromise too much. I'm taking a history lesson here, trying to walk the line between the two of them."

Mason has called Officer a "Machiavelli," and Officer has few kind words for his predecessor, whom he defeated in a bitter Democratic primary that was tantamount to election. Officer says cutting the city payroll was not easy, but it was necessary.

As mayor he works six days a week, up to 16 hours a day. Associates say his day off, Thursday, merely means he comes to work in sports clothes. The schedule leaves little time for marriage for the bachelor who still lives with his family in his boyhood home.

"The job is a lot of fun. I'd be telling you a tale if I told you I don't love being mayor."

Couple Lose Effort To Adopt Black Boy

VERNON, Conn. (AP) — The white foster parents of a 4½-month-old black boy say they have no regrets about the court custody fight they waged and lost.

"It was very difficult to watch him leave," Michael Lusa, 28, of Vernon said Wednesday after a judge ruled that he and his 27-year-old wife, Wendy, had no right to adopt the boy and that race is a relevant factor in adoption proceedings.

"We could have provided him with a good home. That's what it was all about," Lusa said.

The Lusas had cared for the child since March 21, when he was 5 days old. The couple has not decided whether to appeal or try to adopt another child.

Superior Court Judge Harry Hammer, who termed the decision one of his most difficult as a judge, called the Lusas "admirable people" and said he did not question their love for the child.

But he said that with the legal status of foster parents, the couple had no standing or right to adopt the child. He said interracial adoptions subject children to community prejudices and are not in the children's best interest.

Mark Shapera, the Lusas' attorney, said the couple started crying when the child, dressed in a plaid jumpsuit, was taken from them to be turned over to the state Department of Children and Youth Services.

"He was kind of playful and smiling," Shapera said of the child, whose name has not been made public. "I took part in feeding him before I brought him over."

Department officials testified during the two-week trial that several black couples want to adopt the child.

The officials acknowledged that the department discourages interracial adoptions and noted that the Lusas already have two children and expect a third in November.

Resignation Given By Division Chief

The misdemeanor division chief in the criminal district attorney's office has resigned.

Division chief David Nelson's resignation will become effective next month. Nelson will work with a Big Spring law firm.

Montford said Wednesday he has appointed Danny Hurley, an attorney already working primarily in the misdemeanor prosecution division, to fill the vacancy.

Hurley will spend several days this month observing the handling of misdemeanor cases in Dallas County as part of an effort to handle Lubbock County misdemeanors more efficiently, Montford said.

RECORD SALES

LONDON (AP) — London's three top auction houses announced record sales in Britain and abroad totaling $724 million in the 1978-79 season. Sotheby Parke Bernet, with sales of more than $408 million, remained the leader, followed by Christie's and Phillips.

Man Arrested For Growing Pot

A 21-year-old Texas Tech University student was arrested Wednesday afternoon for possession of marijuana when police allegedly found the illegal substance growing in a homemade greenhouse inside a residence on 19th Street near the Tech campus.

The student was taken into custody at the residence after police found six marijuana plants growing inside the house and six other plants growing on the east side between the house and a hedge outside, according to reports.

Police said they also found a large pyrex container with marijuana seeds and two smaller canisters containing a small quantity of dried marijuana leaves.

Police said they obtained a search warrant after receiving a tip that the illegal substance was being grown at the residence.

Somebody rented a seven-horsepower post hole digger from Thrifty Rents at 1104 34th St. early last month and never returned it, according to owner Rudy Maden.

Maden reported the theft after a man failed to return the digger or pay extra rent.

Maden said the digger, with an eight-inch auger attached, was valued at $500.

Maden also reported the loss of a floor jack, battery charger and an impact wrench when the woman who rented the items failed to return them on time.

Reports indicate Maden took down the woman's license number but a check indicated the car belonged to someone else. Maden reported the items were worth $390.

In a related incident, a man rented a carpet cleaner from Maden June 30 and also failed to return the item worth $450, according to reports.

In criminal activity, an aid at the Lubbock State School told police someone stole about $380 from her billfold while she was working in Building 505 Wednesday.

Sheryl Green, 23, of 2202 Main St., Apt. 152, said someone took her billfold from a shelf in the room where she was working between 9:40 and 10:10 a.m. Wednesday. Later, she found the billfold, with the money removed, in a restroom trash can.

Jerry Pernel Rollins, 31, of 4702 50th St. told police someone broke into his house between 9 a.m. and 1:20 p.m. Wednesday and stole a shotgun, stereo, vacuum cleaner, jewelry and clothes, all valued at about $3,500.

Police said entrance to Rollins' house was gained by breaking the door knob off the back door.

A thief prepared himself for football season when he stole several shoulder pads, tackling dummies and other football equipment from the rear of a pickup parked in the Gibson's parking lot at 50th and Avenue H.

Oscar Roman of New Home told police Wednesday that someone took the equipment, valued at about $600, from his pickup about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Melvin Shields, 41, of 1818 E. 1st St., told police someone broke into his house between 9 and 11:30 a.m. Wednesday and stole a tape player and tapes and meat valued at $75 from his freezer.

Police said entrance to the house was gained by breaking a window. They said they found a hammer believed to belong to the burglar near the broken window.

Foreign Buyers Purchase Small Amounts Of Texas Farmland

First official reports on foreign investment in Texas farmland show that only 0.44 percent of the arable land in the state has been purchased by out-of-country buyers.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown says the total Texas acres owned by non-citizens is 53,002.09, with an estimated value of $27,291,493.

The largest single tract is in Pecos County, where 14,030 acres are used as pasture by a citizen of Mexico.

In Lubbock County, the only foreign investment in farmland is on 153 acres, with an estimated value of $450,000, by a company in Jordan.

Foreign investments were reported in only five High Plains counties.— Dallam, Hartley, Lubbock and Kent. The total acreage is 3,566 and the total investment is $1,368,900.

The High Plains investments are owned by individuals or companies from Canada, Holland, Jordan and Scotland.

The largest single tract on the High Plains is 1,920 acres worth an estimated $102,000 in Kent County. It is property inherited by a resident of Scotland.

Under the Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure Act of 1978, the U. S. Department of Agriculture is responsible for gathering reports which must be completed by foreign owners on the acreage, estimated value, use of the land and details on management or rental agreements.

This information then is submitted to state departments of agriculture for their use.

Brown said the reports will be open to public inspection at the Texas Department of Agriculture headquarters in Austin.

West German buyers are the heaviest Texas investors with more than $7,248,460 in 8,456 acres. More than 1,000 acres of this total are in citrus groves in Hidalgo County. In nearby Zavala County, 3,548 acres owned by West Germans are devoted to other crop production.

Residents from the Netherlands and Switzerland have purchased land with an estimated value of $5,538,669 and $4,074,144, respectively.

Brown said it should be emphasized that the value of the land is estimated in some cases. Much of the land was inherited, he said, and some was bought in the 1960s when prices were lower.

The Swiss have bought land mainly in East Texas and along the coast. Buyers from the Netherlands have invested in farmland in North Central Texas, in addition to the High Plains.

Mexican farmers and ranchers traditionally have owned acreage along the Texas border. In Hidalgo and Zavala counties, they have 1,471 acres in crop production or grazing. In other South Texas counties, Mexican ownership extends to 1,007 acres in Atascosa County and 1,099.77 acres for grazing in LaSalle County.

Other property has been bought by residents of Canada, 1,607.73 acres; Italy, 40; France, 80; Brazil, 10; United Kingdom, 141; Japan, 42.18; Guatemala, 40.86; Austria, 500; Venezuela, 100.

Outgoing Tech President To Attend Last Meeting

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Friday's Texas Tech Board of Regents meeting — the last Dr. Cecil Mackey will attend as Tech president — will be devoted to end of the fiscal year details.

Mackey will begin his presidency at Michigan State University Saturday. Dr. Lawrence Graves, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, will take over duties as interim president following the meeting.

Friday's agenda will begin with a closed executive session, tentatively scheduled for 9 to 9:30 a.m. In open session, university affairs will be discussed first, including athletic affairs, policies on broadcasts of athletic events, basketball tournaments and football bowls and travel for athletic department personnel.

Suggestions on a change in authority to approve travel, a general student code and a law school honor code will be given by the academic and student affairs committee, chaired by regent Clint Formby of Hereford.

A policy regarding coordination of programs and activities by the private support groups of the university was on the agenda. But wording of the policy alarmed some contributors and it is expected that regents will postpone the matter until the wording is revised.

Approval of contract documents and authority to receive bids for Lubbock Coliseum dressing rooms and the final construction phase of the Goddard Range and Wildlife Management Building, and selection of an architect for the music building addition will be considered under campus and building committee action.

Matters affecting regents will include election of board officers. The current board chairman is Robert Pfluger of San Angelo.

Numerous business items are on the agenda including approval of concession contracts, awarding of a cash investment depository contract, approval of an interagency cooperation contract between the university and the Health Sciences Center for the next biennium and approval of the 1980 budget.

Health Sciences Center matters to be discussed include authority to proceed with planning and appointment of an architect for construction at the regional academic health centers in Amarillo and El Paso, an addition to the affiliation agreement with Hotel Dieu Hospital in El Paso, and changing the official seal from Texas Tech University School of Medicine to Health Sciences Center.

Earth-Sheltered Homes Seminar Set

A seminar on the advantages of earth-sheltered homes will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Aug. 11 in room 169 of the Home Economics Building at Texas Tech.

The concept of an earth-sheltered home, according to one Texas Tech University researcher, mixes both fire and tornado resistance with superior insulation characteristics and resistence to noise entry into the house.

The seminar is designed for potential home buyers as well as architects, engineers and representatives of insurance, lending or real estate companies.

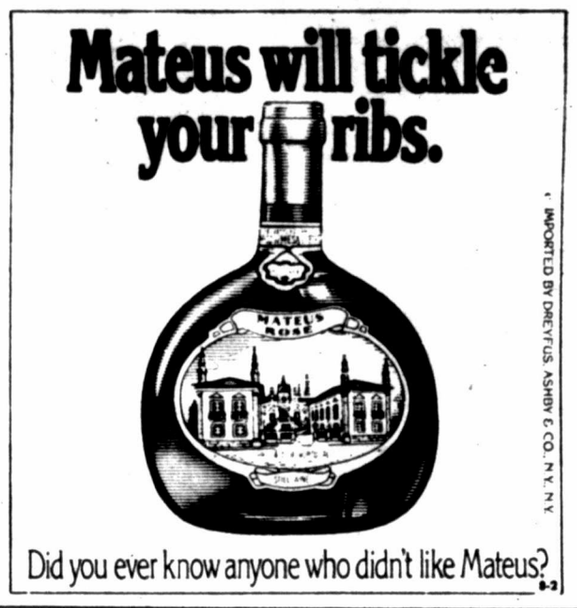
Speaking at the seminar will be three speakers who have had a special interest and study in various housing concepts. Dr. Ernst W. Kiesling, who heads the civil engineering faculty and whose housing concepts have attracted nationwide interest, will be on the panel.

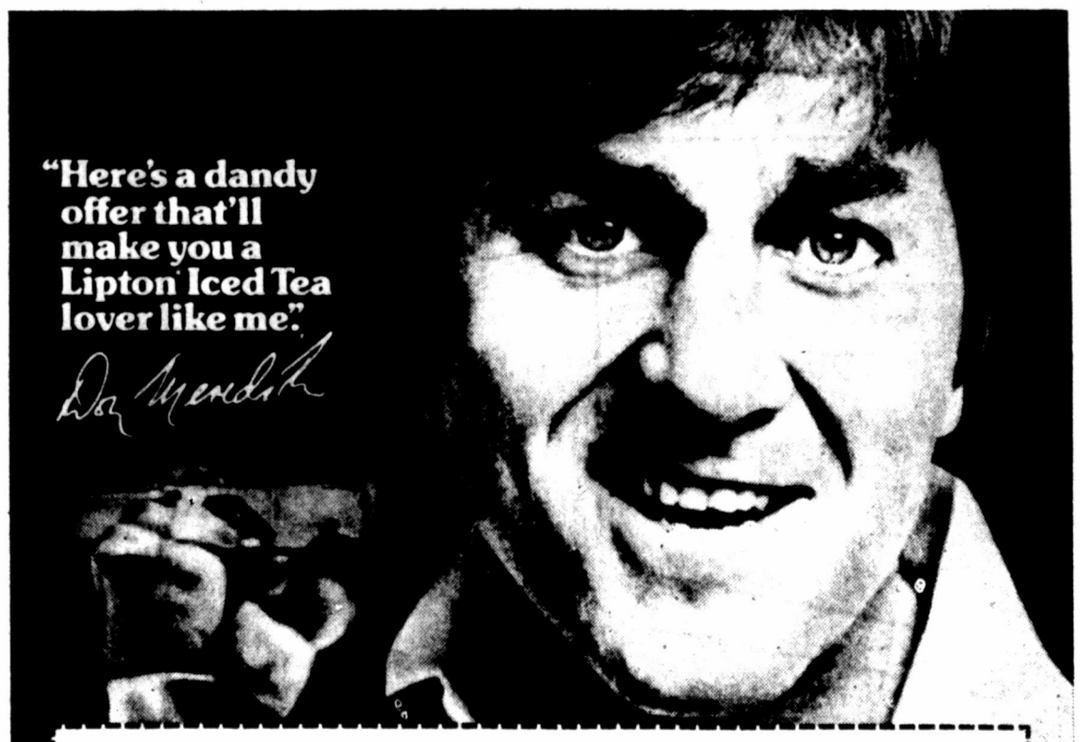
With him will be Richard A. Behr, who holds the master's degree in civil engineering and specializes in new concepts in construction. The third speaker is Gary A. Boubel, who earned a degree in architecture and now is working toward the master's degree in civil engineering. Behr is a research associate and Boubel a research assistant in the Texas Tech Department of Civil Engineering.

Interiors of earth-sheltered houses are quite traditional and designers can have more architectural freedom, in some cases, than with conventional building.

Behr notes the structures are resistant to high winds and fire, and not likely to suffer hail damage. They also are big savers as far as energy and maintenance are concerned.

Pre-registration fees should be mailed to the Department of Civil Engineering, P.O. Box 4089, Texas Tech University, Lubbock, 79409. The cost is $30 a person or $45 for married couples who register before Aug. 4, and $40 per person or $60 for married couples if fees are mailed after Aug. 4.





Chemical Company Reduces Energy Consumption

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Several years ago American Cyanamid Co. set up a plan to save energy in its conglomeration of manufacturing and office facilities, and learned the results can be measured in dollars.

The chemical concern estimates it saved $19 million last year. Its U.S. and Canada fuel bill was $106 million. Had it used energy in the old way it would have spent about $125 million.

That's the beginning. The company expects to do much better in future years, when the program is extended to overseas operations. Present savings come from U.S. and Canadian facilities only.

When Cyanamid began the program, it sought by 1980 a 14 percent saving over 1972 usage, in keeping with an industry goal set by the Department of Energy. It reached 16 percent by 1977; it aims for 30 in 1980.

While these figures seem extraordinary — savings equalled 12 percent of profits last year — they were achieved without damage to product or job quality. The reverse was true; waste alone was eliminated.

That's the beauty of energy efficiency, say its advocates. It often pays for itself, if not immediately then in a period of years. Although its potential was ignored for years, it is simply efficient business.

While the chemical industry is said to be energy-intensive, meaning it uses a lot of energy, most other companies can benefit from keeping an eye on the fuel bill, and save 10 to 30 percent, says Cyanamid.

First they should have an audit, perhaps by a consultant such as the E.I. duPont Company (which developed expertise in auditing its own plants), said Eugene Steel, corporate manager of energy conservation.

Steam heat traps should be examined, for example, to determine if the heat is blowing through instead of being utilized. The problem is a common one not difficult to correct, said Steele.

Lighting is a major wastrel. In his opinion, fluorescent lamps, which use less energy and generate less heat than do incandescent lamps and therefore reduce the need for air cooling, should be considered.

According to Steele, "Lighting levels historically have been higher than needed," based on Illuminating Society of America standards.

Waste heat should be utilized, Steele continued. "We have processes in which the temperature of the final product must be cooled. We'd use water to do it, and then we'd cool the water. Now we pipe it into buildings needing heat. We suck all the heat out of it."

Steele and his associates learned that boilers often operate at low efficiency, a tendency easily measured by examining what goes up the stack. Too little air equals poor combustion; too much wastes heat.

Cyanamid regularly checks all its boilers with sophisticated instruments. "Recent innovations permit us to fine tune them," said Steele. The result: 5 percent to 15 percent of total savings.

The value of any such program, however, is only as good as management participation and backing.

At Cyanamid, all 66 North American plants have fulltime energy coordinators. Each division also has a coordinator. At the corporate level, a committee, headed by a senior vice president, oversees all.

The energy committee, which includes representatives from various departments, including purchasing, engineering and public relations, is headed by a senior vice president, who of course reports to the chief.

The committee reviews progress and sets goals at least every quarter. In addition, ideas are exchanged at occasional seminars.

The arrangement permits a free flow of informationn and provides the authority needed, for example, to make sizeable capital appropriations and even to change entire production processes to save energy.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A small earthquake shook part of the city early Tuesday, there were no reports of damage. The 5:51 a.m. tremor registered 2.7 on the Richter scale and was centered five miles southeast of downtown.

Mayor Warns Of Recession's Effects On Cities

By The Associated Press

How ready are America's cities for the current recession?

Unlike some previous slumps, warnings of this recession have been appearing in forecasters' tea leaves months in advance. Knowing it's coming is one thing. But what have leaders of American cities done to prepare?

Peoria, Ill., Mayor Richard E. Carver, who this summer was named president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, thinks mayors throughout the country have trimmed their budgets and readied themselves for difficult times.

But he warned in a recent conversation that this recession could be even tougher than the last one for U.S. cities.

And if anything, most cities are less prepared to deal with a serious slump than when the last one hit five years ago. Carver says inflation has savaged local tax dollars, and most city budgets have little fat left to trim. If recession forces cities to make further budget cuts, vital services would be sacrificed.

It is likely, he says, that only cities like New York, Cleveland, Newark and others, which would face probable collapse without federal dollars, can expect sympathetic treatment from Washington — especially at a time when the Carter administration is committed to huge spending on the energy front.

"There are certain key cities that can't be ignored. The cities will have to wave a flag and say to Washington we can't ignore the impending problems," he says.

But the Peoria's of the nation — the medium and smaller cities where federal money is not usually a matter of live or death — will probably have to fend much more for themselves this recession, says Carver.

"We are going to have to concede that it'll be tough for the Peoria's. There'll be belt-tightening."

But, he says, cities will take their cues from Washington when combatting the recession. Mayors are now waiting to see if the Carter administration will bolster its jobs programs, provide direct federal aid to help balance the local budgets, or pursue other possibilities.

"The cities understand how to deal with this recession," he says. "But it's up to the federal government to put the mechanisms together and make them clear."

Carver's election to the presidency of the mayor's conference is further evidence that the relationship between urban America and Washington has changed radically in the past few years.

Carver, a second-term Republican mayor of a medium-sized, prospering Middle West city, speaks the language of lowered expectations and self-help — a far cry from the usual calls by big-city mayors for more and more Washington aid.

He has also set his sights on higher goals. July 30, Carver announced his candidacy for the U.S. Senate seat which Illinois Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson III is vacating.

Rather than emphasizing one-shot relief for all cities during the recession, Carver says he intends, as leader of the mayor's conference, to advocate meaningful tax laws to help build inner city commerce.

"The Conference of Mayors will be looking further to see how tax laws can target capital formation to center cities. It's my judgment that we should take a hard look at things like expansion of the use of industrial bonds."

Woman Set Free After Killing

CARDIFF, Wales (UPI) — A woman who stabbed her ex-husband in the heart with a kitchen knife on Christmas Eve and then kicked him as he lay dying has been set free on probation by a judge, who said she was provoked and had suffered enough.

"I have no doubt from the evidence to which I have listened and read that you were, over a period of time, grossly provoked by your late husband to a state which you were no longer able to endure," Justice Tasker Watkins told Catherine Prosser, 27.

The judge ordered Mrs. Prosser released on three years probation Monday after she had pleaded guilty to manslaughter. His decision drew cheers from women's rights supporters in the gallery at Cardiff Crown Court.

Mrs. Prosser told the court she returned home last Christmas to find that her ex-husband had broken into her residence. She sad she asked him to leave, but he hit her and pulled a kitchen knife.

During the struggle that followed, Mrs. Prosser said she managed to grab the knife and plunged it into her ex-husband's heart. Investigators said the wound was seven inches deep.

Mrs. Prosser called police to the scene. Officers said when they arrived, she kicked the bleeding body and said, "I hope he is dead and you can take him to the morgue. I'm glad I did it."

Justice Tasker said the woman had been provoked by Prosser, who had married her when she was 17 and had fathered her three children.

"You have been punished enough," the judge said. "You are a good mother and your children need you.

"I don't think the public interest is served by keeping you in prison a moment longer."

ICC Chairman Resists Reform

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anyone can buy or rent a truck and go into the trucking business. But if he wants to carry computers or clothespins across state lines, the government will tell him what he can haul, how it can be hauled, where his truck can go and what rates he can charge.

At the Interstate Commerce Commission, which administers a law passed in 1887 from a headquarters whose cornerstone was laid by Herbert Hoover, truckers' petitions to go into business or to expand or to charge more or less arrive in a daily flood.

They come in by the truckload. No one knows the volume. But a month's worth of rate filings alone fills 90,000 pages.

Applications for authority to operate arrive at the rate of 1,500 or so a month, and require nine months to process — a big speedup over the recent past.

A major railroad merger case can generate 20 or 30 shelf feet of paperwork and a 30-month delay before a decision is rendered.

Two thousand employees are required to cope with this river of paper.

Small wonder that at a time when hostility to the idea of government regulation is running strong, the ICC is public enemy No. 1 on many reformers' lists. They say market forces working alone would do a better job of running the $56 billion trucking industry.

ICC Chairman A. Daniel O'Neal is not so sure of that. He is not ready to abandon the idea of government regulation of railroads, trucks, buses, barge lines and coal slurries.

"At this stage I don't see it as a viable enswer," he says. "I'm open-minded, but I don't think the case has been made."

But O'Neal has reformed ICC procedures, moving fast enough to antagonize the industry, which portrays him as a wild zealot. He also has prompted Teamsters president Frank Fitzsimmons to urge President Carter to fire O'Neal and curb his "zeal to swiftly deregulate the trucking industry regardless of consequences."

The Teamsters apparently fear an unregulated industry might employ fewer drivers and more non-union drivers.

O'Neal is a native of Bremerton, Wash., where his father operated a shoe repair shop. He worked his way through college and law school by working on a ranch and as a logger. He came to Washington as a young lawyer and learned about transportation issues on the Senate Commerce Committee staff.

President Gerald Ford, an advocate of transportation deregulation, named O'Neal to a Democratic seat at the ICC and Carter, sharing Ford's goal, elevated O'Neal to the $52,000-a-year chairmanship.

Under O'Neal, the commission started approving 96 percent of the applications that arrive in the daily deluge of paperwork and promised to give preference to applicants who pledged to give cut-rate service.

The agency stopped protecting those already in the business. It allowed companies that haul their own goods to carry freight for others on return trips, eliminating the need for trucks to travel empty. It dropped a rule permitting a contract trucker to carry goods for only eight shippers.

And the commission has started to scrutinize rate increases that are proposed by carriers jointly under an antitrust exemption which permits them to get together and agree on rates.

In an interview, O'Neal said truckers — and even shippers, who sometimes prefer stability to the promise of lower rates through increased competition — were angry with what he's done.

"They're very upset," he said. "I know I'm characterized as a radical deregulator. I have problems with that characterization. I'm just trying to be objective and prudent."

But O'Neal is not yet ready to go as far as the administration in advocating the dismantling of his agency.

Wayne Granquist, who advises Carter on regulatory matters, predicts that Carter will call for complete deregulation before his term ends.

At the Civil Aeronautics Board, where airline deregulation has been hailed as a Carter administration success story, chairman Marvin Cohen says, "The same things that made it advisable and helpful and good for society to deregulate airlines apply to trucks in spades."

Economist James C. Miller III at the American Enterprise Institute praises O'Neal for bucking "some very powerful interests" but says of the reforms to date: "We're getting some baby steps being taken."

O'Neal's moment of truth is coming. He will be invited to give the commission's position on a bill proposed by Carter and backed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., which would deregulate large segments of the trucking industry.

So far, O'Neal says, the commission hasn't taken a position on the bill. Because every congressman has trucking firms and Teamsters in his district, the pressure for the status quo can be enormous.

Airline passengers constitute a vocal constituency for airline deregulation and the fare reductions it brought. Airlines profited when lower fares generated more traffic. But people are unlikely to ship more freight if rates drop. And because the cost of freight is hidden in the prices of things people buy, there is no consumer constituency for reducing freight costs. These are arguments with which O'Neal is familiar.

Moreover, he professes to see some merit in the arguments advanced in favor of retaining regulation. He cites a Senate study which said deregulation could reduce 12,000 small trucking firms to 12 national firms and leave small communities, difficult to serve profitably, with poor service at high rates.

"We've lived under this system," O'Neal says. "We know the trucking industry hasn't done a bad job of providing service. It's been pretty good. It's been good enough to cause the railroads tremendous headaches, that's for sure."

Insurance Unchanged By Gasoline Shortage

AUSTIN (AP) — Contrary to what some consumers might believe, the current gasoline shortage will not decrease auto insurance claims, says an insurance company spokesman.

Inflation has increased the costs of automobile repairs and other things that insurance pays for, J.M. Eddins, vice president of Maryland Casualty Companies, said in prepared remarks today.

Eddins and others testified at a State Insurance Board hearing on the industry's request for a 21.7 percent average statewide hike in automobile insurance rates.

"Under the current situation, we cannot expect any added advantage from a change in speed limits, as was the case in 1974," Eddins said, referring to the drop in speed laws from 70 miles per hour to 55 mph.

The subcompacts that consumers buy for better gasoline mileage are higher accident risks and cost more to repair, Eddins added.

"Also, when accidents do occur in these smaller automobiles, the bodily injury implication is much greater than if the same accident had occurred in a heavier automobile," he said.

Eddins represented the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office, which files rate recommendations for car insurance companies.

The insurance board staff has recommended an 8.9 percent rate increase. Board Chairman William Daves said Wednesday the panel will rule on the rate hike request in about a month.

On Wednesday, the insurance board heard comments on possibly reducing collision insurance costs for motorists who regularly carpool.

A motorist reduces the chances of his car being in an accident by leaving it at home and carpooling, industry spokesmen agreed. But they asked whether more people riding in a single auto would increase physical injury risks in the event of an accident.

"We really don't have any hard data, but there are offsetting (risk) factors" to carpooling, said David Irons, attorney for the service office.

Irons said carpooling definitely would help preserve energy and should be encouraged. As a method point, the proposal granting a new insurance class for motorists who carpool at least half the time.

Texans who drive to work pay more for collision coverage than other motorists. City dwellers who commute to work in their private cars also pay more liability insurance than urban Texans who don't drive to work.

In Harris County (Houston), the average driver taking his car to work pays $44 more in annual premiums. An average driver in [illegible] pays over $1 an [illegible] more. [illegible] rating in the new category would reduce the carpooling Houston motorist's premium $11.

City officials from Houston and San Antonio urged the board to adopt a new rating classification as an incentive for drivers to carpool.

By carpooling four days a week, a motorist can save $1,200 a year in gas and other costs, said Sharon Hagan of the Houston Car-Share Program. About 2,200 people take part in the city-sponsored program, which matches drivers with a carpool.

Mexican-Americans Say Whites Violating Voting Rights Act

WASHINGTON (AP) -Mexican-American spokesmen say discriminatory tactics, blatant and subtle, are frequently employed to reduce their clout four years after the inclusion of language minorities in the Voting Rights Act.

Vilma Martinez, president of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund, said a polling place in one Houston district was barely changed.

She said the new location, however, moved the polling place from a Chicano to an Anglo neighborhood, placing it across the freeway and reachable to poorer voters from the Chicano neighborhood only by public transportation.

Willie Velasquez, director of the Southwest Voter Registration Project, told of a Chicano worker in a small West Texas town who said he would be fired if his name appeared on a voter registration roll.

Nor is it unusual for Mexican-American voting rights activists to be ordered out of town, he said.

"West Texas politicos are not housebroken," Velasquez said.

The organizations held a news conference Wednesday to mark the fourth anniversary of the language minorities amendments to the Voting Rights Act.

Joaquin Avila of MALDEF said a legal drive is under way to bring county governments in line with the act's provisions. The San Antonio staffer predicted suits to force redistricting of gerrymandered county precincts would dramatically increase the number of Mexican-Americans elected to county governments in 1980.

Special targets are 99 counties in Texas, six in Arizona and 23 in California, he said.

Velasquez, also of San Antonio, said his group plans 200 additional voter registration drives in the Southwest before the 1980 election, bringing the total number to 400 drives in 125 cities.

Pressure is mounting to delete the bilingual ballot provisions of the act, Al Perez of MALDEF's Washington office said. "This year has been the year in which the efforts have probably gained more momentum than in past years," he said.

Miss Martinez, of San Francisco, said those who oppose the bilingual ballot provisions usually argue against the cost.

Tax Groups To Seek Initiative Approval

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans upset about taxes chewing away nearly half of every $1 they earn have joined to support a proposal to give citizens authority to bypass the Legislature when making laws.

Representatives of 20 local taxpayer associations voted unanimously Wednesday to organize a statewide effort favoring initiative and referendum.

Former Attorney General Waggoner Carr of Texas 13, Inc., a non-profit tax relief group, said the campaign is expected to cost at least $125,000.

The goal is to gain legislative approval — whenever Gov. Bill Clements calls a special session — of a proposed constitutional amendment.

The 1979 regular session rejected the proposal, which was the cornerstone of Clements' "Taxpayers' Bill of Rights."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton opposed the measure.

Carr told a news conference the associations, meeting for the first time Wednesday, supported "direct" initiative and referendum, which means voters could bypass the Legislature through peititions and elections when laws are being made.

Carr said the associations represent 45,000 Texans in Gonzales, Tyler, San Antonio, Fort Worth, Austin, Houston, Waco, Yoakum, Lubbock, Weslaco, Plainview, Runge, Galveston and Irving.

Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, and, according to Carr, some dozen House members also were present.

The purpose of the statewide campaign, Carr said, is to "gain power to control our tax destiny in the years ahead."

"Government has grown too large, it is costing too much money and taxes do not leave enough in our pockets to maintain our desired standard of living."

He said the U.S. Department of Commerce estimates the average American pays 46 cents out of every earned dollar for taxes. "The feudal serfs were required to give their feudal lords one-third of their labor. The average American is already required to give his government almost one-half of all he makes," Carr said.

Based on current trends, Carr added, the commerce department has stated the taxes will claim 65 cents out of every $1 in 20 years.

He suggested the "tax revolt" of the 1970s may become "only a Sunday school picnic compared to the tax revolt that will inevitably come during our children's time" unless government spending and taxing is cut back to a "reasonable level."

U.S. May Be Permitted To Clean Slick

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard has permission to enter Mexican waters to clean up the oil slick from a Gulf of Mexico runaway oil well if the slick moves north of the 25th parallel, to a Mexican government official said.

Capt. Americo Flores Nava of the subcommission for prevention and control of ocean pollution said Wednesday such a cleanup operation would be authorized only if the slick passed the parallel, which is near Brownsville.

Flores Nava said the extreme northern end of the spill has advanced to the 21st parallel, off Tuxpan in the state of Veracruz, about 125 miles south of the 25th parallel.

The U.S. Coast Guard reported Wednesday the unexpected discovery of "tar balls" on a Mexican beach about 60 miles south of Brownsville.

The northernmost portion of the slick, according to the U.S. Coast Guard, is about 70 to 80 miles southeast of Brownsville, a great deal closer to the Texas coast than the location reported by Flores Nava.

He said the slick is only in small, finger-like streaks. "Many people think it involves huge black slicks. . . .but there is none of that," he said.

The well, a test hole being drilled in the Gulf of Mexico about 50 miles offshore from the fishing village of Ciudad del Carmen, went out of control and caught fire June 3. PEMEX, the Mexican national oil company, has hired a team of international specialists to try to stop the flow.

Methods include drilling a relief well at an angle into IXTOC-1 to milk off the flow, which has been reduced from its original 30,000 barrels a day to 20,000 a day.

PEMEX hopes the relief well will reduce the pressure enough to permit divers to plug up the runaway hole with cement. PEMEX says it is using all available resources to stop the flow but that the best alternative appears to be the relief well, which may not be completed until sometime in September.

PEMEX Director Jorge Diaz Serrano said he considers the spill "a serious accident but not a catastrophe." However the ultimate effect of the spill on the region's sea live, including the rich shrimp fishing grounds near the spill, is not known.

CHINESE MAKE TV SETS

PEKING (AP) — China says it manufactured 501,000 TV sets in the first six months of the year, 120 percent more than the same period in 1978, and aims to turn out 1 million by the year's end. The official Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency said the production of small and medium-sized black and white sets was part of China's new policy which emphasizes light industry.

Triumph. Only 3 mg. tar. And a taste good enough to stay with.

Read how new Flavor-Intensified™ Triumph gives you surprisingly satisfying taste at only 3 mg. tar...one of the lowest tar levels in cigarettes.

Triumph. The first and only cigarette that delivers good taste with only 3 mg. tar.

If you've ever been disappointed by one of the very low tar cigarettes, you will understand why Triumph is quite an achievement.

Even the draw is a surprise.

The smoke comes through abundantly. The taste reaches you smoothly. Effortlessly. With none of the struggle you may have experienced in other very low tar brands. You don't have to pull—you just puff on Triumph.

No gimmicks, no miracles.

No less remarkable than Triumph itself, is the technology that enabled us to build it.

The crux of it: Instead of searching for some yet unimagined answer, Lorillard scientists took a more sensible tack.

Why not, they said, take everything we've learned about cigarettes, and push that technology further than we've ever pushed it before.

Delivering taste, limiting tar.

We found, for example, that combining two types of filter fiber produces the best combination of taste and draw.

That tiny "vents" in the rim of the filter work to smooth the taste.

That lower-leaf tobaccos (shaded from the heat of the sun) tend to be milder and lower in tar than those at the top of the plant.

In short, everything we could find that might intensify flavor at 3 mg. tar, was built into Triumph.

Taste you won't get tired of.

What it all comes down to is this: Triumph is not one of those ultra low tars that spoil your pleasure by short-changing you on taste.

Triumph, at only 3 mg. tar, is a cigarette with a taste you can stay with. A taste so good, we believe you'll never want to go back to your old cigarette.

TRIUMPH.®

One of the lowest tar cigarettes you can smoke.
The one with taste enough to stay with.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

3 mg. "tar," 0.4 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

THERE ARE WORSE THINGS TO RUN OUT OF THAN GAS.

Cars can run out of brakes. Or control. And if that happens, a terrific mpg rating isn't much help.

What you need is a car designed to help you stay out of that kind of trouble. Volvo. A Volvo's dual circuit braking system retains about 80% effectiveness if one circuit should fail. The car's weight is distributed almost evenly. So neither the head nor the tail wag the rest of the car. Steering is responsive and fast. And the suspension, like the rest of the car, is finely engineered. So that handling is predictable. Which means you don't have to be a race car driver to know what your Volvo is going to do at all times.

Oh, yes. The Volvo also gets good gas mileage. But for Volvo owners, that isn't the first thing they think of. VOLVO

VOLVO. AT TODAY'S PRICES, IT'S WORTH A LONG HARD LOOK.

Volvo 244 Sedans with 4-speed stick plus overdrive. Use these numbers for comparison. Actual mpg may differ depending on speed, trip length and weather. Actual highway mpg will probably be lower than EPA highway estimate.

Civil Engineering Head Brings Varied Background To Reese

The new head of the civil engineering squadron at Reese Air Force base wears the wings of a navigator, a deceptive title for an all-purpose member of a flying team — whether a backseater for a low-level reconnaissance mission over North Vietnam or one member of a B-57 crew sampling the atmosphere for radiation more than 60,000 feet above the earth.

Lt. Col. Robert Holcomb of Albuquerque flew "up where the U-2s and SR-71s fly" to take air samples and to observe turbulent weather.

His crew was the first to look down into the eye of a hurricane with a camera and picture the swirling mass of fury in its total glory.

Holcomb replaces Lt. Col. Hirum West, a native of Muleshoe with two degrees from Texas Tech University, who turned a non-coordinating squadron into a smooth team which copped outstanding honors in the Air Training Command for 1978. West will be joining the inspector general's team at Randolph Air Force Base.

Holcomb who graduated in 1962 in the fourth Air Force Academy class, "did very little navigating" in his flying career before turning to civil engineering. Mostly he handled the photographic end of a mission.

He flew navigation-reconnaissance duty with the C-124 and the C-141 before moving into the RB-57F which flew the high altitudes doing weather reconnaissance and air sampling.

To assist the Canadian government with experiments, he followed the sun from Albuquerque to Houston with the right wing of the plane pointed always at the sun.

Flying weather studies in Oklahoma, he flew above towering thunderstorms "kicking big boulders of ice out the top."

At graduate school in Albuquerue Holcomb began the change to engineering, then went to Vietnam as a backseater in combat missions in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia which sent him home with the Distinguished Flying Cross and 11 air medals.

He came to Reese from the Pentagon where he was program manager for shuttle facilities, planning and programming facilities for the $300 million launch, recovery and maintenance program.

He also was program manager for all missile facilities, including the upcoming MX.

"It all evolves around civil engineering and will run into billions of dollars," Holcomb said.

After the Pentagon tour ended, he requested the Reese assignment.

West, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theron West who now live in Norman, Okla., came back to Reese from Johnston Island where a missile site was being phased down and his job was to maintain it in readiness.

His first command came as a second lieutenant on Kotzebue, Alaska, where his 28 men included plumbers, electricians, etc. There were no painters so those completing work early painted the base with what paint West could find. A white paint job which looked great in summer almost lost the building in winter snows. At Webb AFB he was chief of programs, and with the Alaskan Air Command again, rated projects by priorities and funded the program. In Missouri, he helped install Minute Men missiles and wound up in charge of missile information.

His three years at Reese, West said, was a big job with a lot of early headaches but turned into an efficient operation which "saved Uncle Sam a lot of bucks" while being very enjoyable for him.

Now, he will be coming back as an outside inspector to see how well the 300 "half-and-half military and civilian" members of the squdron continue to do their job.

Reese Turns 30 Over Weekend

Reese Air Force Base officially marks its 30th birthday this weekend with two days of activities.

Open house will be Saturday and Sunday, with a full slate of activities scheduled on both days. The public is invited and more than 50,000 area residents are expected.

A special section will be published Friday detailing all of the activities. Stories on this page help explain the Reese mission.

Physiological Studies Key Aid At RAFB

There, he learns how to save his own life if emergencies occur thousands of feet above the ground.

In the altitude chamber he learns the symptoms of hypoxia, experiences rapid decompression and hyper-ventilation.

In the vertigon simulator, he learns to trust his instrument panel regardless of what his body senses are telling him.

In the ejection seats, he learns to squeeze the trigger and eject from the cockpit safely.

And, in parasailing he learns the safe way to the earth in a parachute.

As long as he, or she, wears U.S. Air Force wings, the pilot must return to the altitude chamber every three years, to renew acquaintance with symptoms of hypoxia for that emergency which may never come.

The Reese center, with Maj. Jack Cusano heading training, also serves Holloman, Cannon and Dyess, among other bases, plus individual pilots on a Reese layover.

"We deal mostly in emergency procedures, the main part is the pressure chamber," T. Sgt. Charles Carsten, noncommissioned officer in charge of the unit, said. The Paonia, Colo., native was named NCO of the quarter for the base's first 1979 competition.

Students, he explained, get two rides in the chamber — one before beginning T-37 training and one prior to T-38 after the initial ride..

"We take them up to 35,000 feet and one student goes off oxygen to show the others how he loses all coordination and wouldn't be able to handle anaircraft."

At the 35,000-foot level, obtained by removing atmosphere by use of a pump system, time to unconsiousness is 30 seconds to a minute.

At 30,000, the next stop for a student to lose his oxygen, it takes a minute to a minute and a half to reach the same point. At 25,000 feet, where all students lose oxygen, it takes even longer to lose coordination with blackout time from three to five minutes.

"The whole idea is to let them feel what would happen if oxygen equipment failed.. .dizziness, vision loss or impairment, timgling. If that happened they would know something is wrong."

After the initial ride, two more come to the student as he begins aircraft training. Specific situations are simulated.

For the T-37, the chamber simulates 25,000-foot atmosphere to let the student get hypoxia again. A stop at 18,000 lets the student try to experience hyper-ventilation for the stress situations in the cockpit.

For the T-38 pre-training segment, the chamber pressure simulates 43,000 and drops to 25,000 for hypoxia, then down to ground level for rapid decompression.

Procedural trainers for ejection show how each seat works in each craft. The T-37 is completely different from the T-38, and other Air Force planes are different.

"Your body will tell you one thing when actually you are doing another, " Carsten said in explaining the vertigon simulator, which is used teach a student to rely on instruments.

In night vision training, students learn to scan objects, since "when you stare at something it will disappear on you."

Airman Guides Recruits Through Flight Training

Two squadrons and two jets take the student pilot to graduation time and silver wings at Reese Air Force Base.

The 35th Flying Training Squadron, using the T-37 Tweet, teaches him to fly a jet. The 54th Flying Training Squadron completes the job in the supersonic T-38 Talon.

"We take the raw recruit and train him to be a pilot and the 54th polishes him up to fly high performance aircraft, but we are both in the pilot training business," Lt. Col. James Chapman, 35th commander and former T-38 instructor with the 54th said.

A major task, which "saves the taxpayer multi-thousands on each one," is to discover the student who will not be able to complete the undergraduate training program.

Not all are eliminated during the T-37 phase since some are able to fly the slow jet, yet are not able to meet the challenges of the more sophisticated craft.

If the student's inability to take the stress is identified in the 35th phase, all the cost of the T-38 phase is saved.

The T-37, Chapman said, is "fun to fly locally" with its acrobatic ability on fast turns, but training is limited to 700 miles for cross-country flights.

After the slower, shorter hops to "go out and do it in the real world," performing in the environment of a busy airport, the student moves into the supersonic stage in the 54th — going faster, higher and further.

When the T-38 polish job is about complete for a class, Chapman is a member of the board deciding, by past performance of the student in his 49-week UPT program, which plane in the Air Force inventory would come closer to his particular skills.

Students fly 75 hours in the T-37 aircraft, Chapman noted, adding that the number used to be in the 90s but instrument flight simulator hours have replaced the others.

He rehearses landings at other airports with his students, but nothing, he stressed, can replace the feel of the real thing completely.

As commander, Chapman gets to fly with all the students where other instructor pilots are limited mostly to their charges. The IP teaching load puts flying time right at the 70-hour limit per month, beginning in January with the beefing up of the student ranks.

By the first of the year his IP staff will grow to a better student-instructor balance load.

Chapman, an Air Force brat born in Kentucky, graduated from West Point the year before the Air Academy opened. He taught political science at the academy after spending three years at Princeton "picking up a Ph.D."

Flying experience began with a four-engine propellor-driven C-124 with the Military Airlift Command and proceeded through nine other planes including the F-4 Phantom.

During a five-year tour in the Pentagon, he spent half of it working with the SALT treaty and the other half "with a fancy title that meant speechwriter for the Secretary of the Air Force."

Service at Reese began in 1975 as an instructor pilot with the 54th FTS. He also was on the deputy commander for operation's staff before filling the commander slot for the 35th FTS.

RAFB Civil Engineer Unit Wins High Award

Being the outstanding civil engineering squadron in the Air Training Command was just a matter of doing the day-to-day job and drawing on available programs for additional assistance for the half-military, half-civilian squadron at Reese Air Force Base.

The 300-member force, making up 10 per cent of the personnel, spends 30 per cent of the base budget. It keeps the base and Reese village in good working order, from changing light fixtures to controlling structures to patching holes in streets to fixing a water line break at midnight.

"We deal with everyone on the base at one time or another, from the wing commander on down; sooner or later we deal with everyone," Lt. Col. Hirum West, squadron commander, said when the presentation of the prestigious Curtin Award was made to the squadron. West recently relinquished the squadron to Lt. Col. Robert Holcomb to assume inspector general duties with the Air Training Command.

There is a certain satisfaction, West continued, in pleasing as many of the 3,000 persons at Reese as possible.

"We all pay tax dollars and we spend a bunch of those tax dollars, so we try to make them go as far as possible," West continued.

Seeds for an outstanding unit were planted when West took command of the group three years ago. He immediately cut the number of meetings with him because "every minute you tie up ranch chiefs in meetings, the less time they spend out working."

He began by making supervisors feel like they owned the shops, giving them "full authority as far as you can under a bureacracy."

West urged them to run the individual shop as if trying to make a living out of it.

Reese Fuel Logistics Critical

Fuel costs for keeping planes flying at Reese Air Force Base never are seen at the South Plains facility.

The allotment for the undergraduate pilot training mission at the base comes from one worldwide stock for all U.S. military needs.

Only a rare emergency civilian landing would cause the cost of fuel to enter the base picture.

All other aircraft, from whatever branch of the service, are refueled with a transaction moving the amount of fuel from Reese to another base or military arm on paper only.

Turning out 450 pilots a year consumes 120,000 gallons of jet fuel each day of a normal five-day operation. Weekend catchup flying may consume more on some days, but that figure evens out with non-flying times due to weather conditions.

An Abilene refinery fire, added to a trucker's strike, caused inconvenience and longer work weeks for the personnel of the fuel depot, but didn't touch flying operations.

Normally, the depot is open when Reese planes fly. But when supplies dropped off fuel personnel had to take on a seven-day week to play their own catchup game.

"We have a lot of independent truckers hauling from the other side of Houston," M. Sgt. Willie McAlister, field superintendent for the section, said.

Personnel must be on hand so truckers can unload and head back for fuel from a plentiful supply much further away than the regular Abilene source.

Reese planes, he added, will not run out of fuel. If the situation becomes critical, Army trucks will be used to transport fuel to keep the mission going.

McAlister, a native of Memphis, Tenn., oversees all operations for the fuel branch of base maintenance.

There are 54 persons filling slots in administrative services, a storage segment to receive and issue fuel, a liquid oxygen division, a distribution brnch and a quality control function.

Neo-Nazis On Trial In West Germany

By BJORN EDLUND

BUECKEBURG, West Germany (UPI) — The witness, clad in black, strode into the makeshift prison courtroom and flashed his arm in a Hitler salute.

"Cut out that nonsense," bellowed Judge Helmut Moschuring.

His shout jolted the witness, the six defendants, their lawyers and a courtroom of spectators. So did the salute, coming in West Germany's first trial of neo-Nazis for alleged terrorist acts.

"We wanted to show that not only communists have muscle," one of the admirers of Adolph Hitler and his National Socialist movement told the court.

The current trial of six men on charges of robbing banks, bombing two court buildings and attacking military installations was evidence of a neo-Nazi upsurge which, said Interior Minister Gerhart Baum, gave "reasons for concern."

Admirers of Hitler, whose dream of a 1,000-year German reich ended in suicide with the Allies' victory in Europe in 1945, have not matched the leftwing Baader-Meinhof group's 12-year rampage of murder, bank robberies and kidnappings. But Baum said:

"We are particularly concerned that, for the first time, neo-Nazis are engaging in terrorist activities."

According to an interior ministry report on terrorism, 24 Nazi groups in 1978 boasted 1,300 members. Another 52 extreme right-wing organizations have 16,300 members.

The neo-Nazi groups, which give themselves names like "Viking Youth" or "Hansa Recreation Club," meet to sing Nazi songs and listen to speeches attacking the "worldwide Jewish-Bolshevist conspiracy."

The newspaper they follow most, "NS-Kampfruf" (National Socialist Warcry) — like about 95 percent of the Nazi propaganda material spread in West Germany — is produced in the United States.

Gary Rex Lauck, 25, of Lincoln, Neb., has been called as a witness in the Bueckeburg trial, although earlier he had been denied entry into West Germany because of his activities.

One defendant, Michael Kuehnen, has cited Lauck as a major influence on his "patriotic" thinking.

Lauck, who prints the "NS-Kampfruf" as well as Nazi swastika stickers and other propaganda, will appear Aug. 23, probably winding up the trial.

The six dedendants, aged 20 to 42, and defense witnesses used the courtrom to spread their message. Judge Moschuring, granting their right of expression, only interrupts tirades that are out of context.

The saluting witness, dressed like the four younger defendants in black attire modeled on Nazi storm trtoper uniforms, was cut short when he declined to testify "as a National Socialist." Moschuring refused to let him make a speech and gave him other grounds for refusing to testify.

Prosecutor Hans-Juergen Karge said the case had helped map the neo-Nazi network in northern Germany.

Romance Still Alive In Communist China

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — The bright lights of Avenue Joffre have long been dimmed and there isn't a single beautiful White Russian bar-girl left in town, but romance appears to be alive and well in Communist China.

There never was any doubt about that, of course.

But this is a sober and moral society that frowns on sexual display, in posters or parks or anywhere public.

All the night clubs, bars and cabarets of colonial Shanghai are gone. And gone with them is the promiscuity that made Shanghai the sin city of the Orient.

But these days the flowers are in full bloom in the public parks of Shanghai and Peking, and love is not far behind.

While the public address system delivers a lengthy report on the weather and the tides, couples stroll hand-in-hand, and, here and there, on a park bench, you see them locked in romantic embrace.

Under the rule of Chairman Mao Tsetung's autocratic widow and the so-called "Gang of Four," such scandalous behavior was not permitted.

Guards patrolled the leafy paths and, after sunset, turned their flashlights on any couple that dared to sit too close to each other.

Avenue Joffre, one of the gay white ways of pre-Communist Shanghai which has been re-christened Huai Hai Road, looks like the main street of a Chinese country town today.

Sycamores in full leaf line the sidewalks crowded with shoppers in the daytime. But at night, when Avenue Joffre used to burst into bright neon-lit life, the whole boulevard is dark, deserted and slightly eerie, and you have to practically grope your way along.

The flashing signs of night spots with names such as "Casanova," "DD's," "Cafe Renaissance" and "Constantinople" went out 30 years ago.

Their premises now are occupied by a proletarian clothing store, a Chinese restaurant, a barbershop and a store that sells Chinese sausages.

Downtown, the area around the waterfront bund was the financial heart of Shanghai in its pre-revolutionary heyday.

All the great solid stone and brick buildings where colonial Shanghai's financial and political potentates ruled are still there. But they are relics of a bygone civilization.

The buildings facing the bund show 30 years of wear and tear, though they are still in fair shape. But a few steps in from the bund these once-proud edifices of colonial rule are coated with grime, their stonework blotched and chipped, their hallways dark and dank even at high noon.

Many of the windows are caked with dust. Some are broken or boarded up. You can tell people live there or work there by the washing hanging out.

Ace Spices Start Of PGA Tournament

FIRST OFF — The names on the pairings board are not those of the Players and Watsons and Weiskopfs as Larry Ringer of Annapolis, Md., drives off the tee for the first shot of the 1979 PGA championship early this morning. The tournament is being played at the Oakland Hills Country Club outside of Detroit. (AP Laserphoto)

Avalanche-Journal News Services

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. — Gray, overcast skies greeted 150 golfers this morning as play got under way in the 61st PGA Championship at Oakland Hills Country Club in this Detroit suburb, but Frank Conner, playing in the second group with Lindy Miller and Craig Bunker, gave the early arrivals their first tournament thrill with a hole-in-one on the par-3, 225-yard ninth hole.

Rain during each of the three previous days left the 7,014-yard South course soft for the beginning of the $350,000 tournament in which the winner will receive a check for $60,000.

The course has drained well, but many players still were predicting that par would be broken for the first time in any of the six major championships that have been contested over the par-70 layout.

"The grass is turgid," said one greenskeeper. "Those blades are just full of water."

The greens were double-cut, but greens superintendent Ted Woehrle said they still wouldn't be as slick and fast as the tournament committee would like, unless there are a couple of dry, windy days.

Chances of that happening appeared slim as forecasters at the National Weather Service predicted scattered showers for tonight and possibly again for Friday before skies clear for good on Saturday.

Playing in groups of three, the first golfers teed off at 7 a.m. Since all golfers begin play on the first hole in the PGA Championship, the final group wasn't scheduled to begin play until 3:15 p.m. The field will be cut to the low 70 players following the second round.

Familiar names among the early starters Thursday were Tom Weiskopf, who teed off at 8:39 a.m.; Arnold Palmer, who started play at 8:57 a.m., and Lee Trevino, who went off at 9:15 a.m.

Defending champion John Mahaffey was scheduled to start at 1:18 p.m. The order of starts will be reversed for Friday's round.

Even though Nicklaus hasn't won a golf tournament this year, he insisted prior to starting play today that the PGA could be his last event of the year.

"It hasn't bothered me nearly as much as it has bothered you guys who asked the questions," Nicklaus said when asked about his so-far winless 1979 season.

"I'm winding down my golf game," he added. "You just don't go out and win a major tournament every year. I don't have anything to prove to myself and I'm not going to go out and play more just to win a tournament."

But, down deep, golf's all-time money king and the winner of 17 major tournaments, including two U.S. Amateurs, wants very much to extend his "golf season."

"That depends on how I do here," he replied, when asked if he intended to play more this year. "If I win, I'll play in the Ryder Cup Matches."

Nicklaus, who must win his fifth PGA title to make the Ryder Cup team, said, however, he still would pass up the World Series of Golf, scheduled for the Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio, in late September.

Nicklaus, who was making his 19th start of 1979 today when he tackled the treacherous Oakland Hills layout in quest of a purse of $350,000 and a top prize of $60,000, claims he is playing more golf now than when he was a tour regular.

"I'll guarantee you I've played at least 20 rounds more the last two years than I did then," he said. "Now I might play four times a week with my boys."

The large field of the first two days will be cut to the low 70 and ties for the final two rounds.

John Mahaffey, who says he's completely healed from a hand injury suffered earlier this year, said prior to teeing off that par will be broken this year, which hasn't been done in a major tournament here through four U.S. Opens and the 1972 PGA championship.

"The wet weather will make it play longer but I think par will be broken," he said, echoing just about every one in the field with the exception of Hubie Green, who said the so-called "monster" will not be brought to its knees.

Another tour regular, Lee Elder, said, "You definitely will see a lot of 65s here because of the conditions. These guys will really chew it up. If it stays overcast and the sun doesn't come out and bake the course, there is no doubt that 280 will be broken. We don't have the severe rough that we have had in the PGA championship and the U.S. Open."

In 1972, Gary Player was tied for the lead with Jim Jamieson when he sliced his drive behind some willow trees on the 16th hole. To get back into the thick of things, he had to shoot over the trees and a pond that was in front of the green 150 yards away.

He used a nine-iron because a less lofted club would not have cleared the trees. He put everything he had into the 9-iron and the ball landed next to the pin.

"One of the men came out of the gallery and took the divot and planted it in his garden," recalled Player this week. "He wrote me a letter, asking me if I wanted a piece of the divot. I told him I wouldn't mind a piece of the divot as long as I didn't have to mow his yard."

Ranger Front Office Blamed In Mixup

ARLINGTON (AP) — Al Oliver calls them a revolving door. Jim Kern calls them a shambles. Doc Medich calls them embarrassing.

The "them" is the Texas Ranger front office which apparently lost Oscar Gamble to the New York Yankees in the Mickey Rivers' deal Wednesday because they don't understand baseball's rules.

the Yankees had taken the Rangers in a trade that had more twists and turns than the automobile chase in the movie "The French Connection."

Texas announced "completion" of the trade late Wednesday, sending the contract of Gamble to the Yankees in exchange for Rivers' contract — plus third baseman Amos Lewis, a minor leaguer hitting .282 with 20 home runs and two players to be named later.

The Rangers will receive three players to be named.

On Monday, the Rangers and Yankees announced that Rivers had been traded to Texas for minor leaguers Gary Gray, Mike Hart, Domingo Ramos and a player to be named later.

However, Texas failed to obtain waivers on Gray and Hart and could not send them to the Yankees' farm team in Columbus. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn noticed the failure to clear waivers and voided the deal.

The Rangers' chairman of the board, Brad Corbett, and executive vice president Eddie Robinson swung into action, again. Robinson and the Yankees agreed to an even-up trade, Gamble for Rivers and Gamble was pulled from the starting lineup Tuesday night. However, Corbett said no deal and ordered Robinson to get an alternate plan.

By then it was too late and Gamble, who had just bought a new home in Arlington, was sent to the Yanks.

"It seems kind of funny that they would want to trade the leading hitter on the team," said Gamble. "All I know is that they (the Ranger front office) is acting like it messed up. But I don't mind going to the Yanks."

Medich said "They (the front office) messed up. They are trying to pass the buck off to the American League. How can you have any confidence in them after you've seen this fiasco. They (the front office) have been put in a very embarrassing situation."

"Like I said, it's a revolving door around here," said Oliver.

Kern said "It's a shambles around here. But you kind of get used to it."

Oilers, St. Louis To Honor Cain

By The Associated Press

The preseason schedule has the St.Louis Cardinals in the Astrodome tonight opposing the Houston Oilers. But the hearts of the Cardinal coaches and players will remain on a practice field in St. Charles, Mo.

That's where they lost their teammate J.V. Cain 11 days ago.

The late tight end also will be on the minds of everyone else under the Dome tonight when there is a moment of silence prior to the kickoff for the Houston native, who died after collapsing during a pass pattern drill at practice.

"I doubt if the team will ever really put it (Cain's death) behind them," said Cardinal vice president Bing Devine. "But life goes on and I think they are responding. We had a scrimmage on Saturday and that was a benefit. It gave the team some action and something to relate to."

Coach Bud Wilkinson had been banking on Cain's return from Achilles tendon surgery to pay dividends this season. The torch now falls to Al Chandler and Eason Ramson, who filled in for Cain last season.

Houston will start backup quarterback Gifford Nielsen while starter Dan Pastorini continues to recover from a sore shoulder, and Jim Hart will take the first snap for St Louis.

The Cardinals' first two draft picks, running backs Ottis Anderson of Miami and Theotis Brown of UCLA, also will be on display tonight.

Meanwhile, Carl Eller will face his former Minnesota Vikings teammates tonight in the first preseason encounter

HERSKOWITZ

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
And STEVE PERKINS

Q. Has there been any opposition at the University of Colorado to the way Chuck Fairbanks was hired, the lawsuit, and outside money, etc.?

—Cornell Eliott, Las Vegas, Nev.

A. Most people at Colorado blame the controversy on hard-headed old Billy Sullivan demanding recompense on behalf of the New England Patriots. Even so, the reaction there is a massive yawn — except for members of the faculty.

Conrad McBride, chairman of the political science department and the most critical of Fairbanks' hiring, said: "We have a professional team, owned by several large contributors, administered on the campus of the University of Colorado. We ought to raise the question. Does the university want to support a professional football team? If so, hire a general manager, get the best players — buy them, steal them — but don't pretend they are students."

Q. Has there ever been an NFL player who had a son who also came on to play in the NFL? I can't think of any.

—James Regner, Jackson, Miss.

A. Dub Jones was a wide receiver for the Cleveland Browns and his son Bert Jones in now a quarterback for the Baltimore Colts. Steve Wilson, son of the record-setting Rams, halfback, Tom, in the 1950s, is trying to make it as a wide receiver with Dallas, and may wind up with some other team.

Tom Wilson thinks he know why a son rarely makes it to the NFL: Their mamas. They see Daddy going through all those pains and injuries and they start discouraging the kid from football as soon as he can walk.

Q. Can you tell me a few things about the Grand Masters tennis tour for old players? How old do you have to be? How much money are they playing for? Who was the leading money winner last season?

—J. K. Leighton, Palm Beach, Fla.

A. The minimum age is 45, and the old boys are playing for $300,000 in prizes this time around. Frank Sedgman was the top money winner last season, with $59,000.

Knight, Foster's Bat Keep Redlegs Winning

By The Associated Press

George Foster's bat has helped keep the Cincinnati Reds in the National League's West Division race. Ray Knight has been using the injured slugger's lumber for the last four games and has driven in 14 runs in that span.

The last three RBI came Tuesday night in the Reds' 10-5 rout of the Los Angeles Dodgers. Knight had a two-run double in Cincinnati's eight-run first and added a run-scoring single in the sixth.

But that's nothing new. In 1976, while Knight was playing with the Reds' Indianapolis farm club in the American Association, he had hit just one home run going into the last month of the season.

Then he borrowed one of Foster's pitch-black 35-ounce clubs, nicknamed "Black Beauty," and hit nine homers in tnat final month.

The memory of that may have slipped into Knight's mind Sunday, when he went 0-for-5 with his 32-ounce bat in the first game of a doubleheader at Atlanta. He switched to a Black Beauty for the nightcap, hit a homer and drove in five runs, then added three RBI in each of the next three games.

That was proof enough for Knight.

"I ordered a dozen (of Foster's bats) today with my name on them," he said. "I'm not swinging the bat any different. . ."

But he is swinging a different bat, and the second-place Reds have won three of the four games since to remain within 3½ games of the Houston Astros.

Of course, Foster doesn't do too badly himself with the Black Beauty. Entering this season, he had hit more home runs (121) and driven in more (390) than any other major leaguer, and he had 20 homers with 72 RBI this year before being disabled by a muscle pull.

Knight suffered a moment of panic during his third trip to the plate, when he broke the Black Beauty. He kept his poise, went to the clubhouse for another of Foster's magic wands, and in his next at-bat lashed his run-scoring single to left.

Astros 5, Giants 4

Denny Walling overcame some early nervousness to crack a two-run triple off Vida Blue in Houston's four-run third inning and lead the Astros past the Giants.

"He's one of the best fastball pitchers in the major leagues and he's got a lot of stats," said Walling, who then listed some: "He's had the 300 strikeouts, the 24-8 record and the Cy Young Award. I'll admit it: I was nervous the first time (at bat). That was a donation."

The second at-bat, in the third, Walling was ready.

Pirates 4, Cardinals 3

"We're a club that more or less puts things together from the fifth inning on," said Pittsburgh's Dave Parker after the Pirates rallied from a 3-0 deficit to beat St. Louis.

Pittsburgh got two runs back in the sixth on consecutive triples by Manny Sanguillen and Omar Moreno and a sacrifice fly by Parker, and tied it in the seventh on pinch-hitter Mike Easler's RBI triple.

Braves 5, Padres 4

Dale Murphy's three-run homer highlighted the five-run Atlanta eighth inning that carried Atlanta past San Diego.

The game was spiced by a benches-clearing incident, at least the fourth in the major leagues since Friday night. San Diego's Gene Tenace finished trotting out a home run, then charged Braves pitcher Eddie Solomon after the Atlanta hurler apparently said something.

Expos 7, Cubs 5

Montreal got home runs from Tony Perez, Gary Carter and former Cub Rodney Scott, the latter a two-run shot in the bottom of the 12th, to beat Chicago.

Dave Kingman connected again for the Cubs, hitting a three-run shot in the fifth inning and raising his season's total to 36.

Phillies 9, Mets 6

Garry Maddox and Pete Rose each had four hits each, carrying the Phillies to their victory over the Mets. Maddox and Schmidt each drove in three runs, while Greg Luzinski hit his 13th homer of the year for Philadelphia.

Doug Flynn drove in two runs for New York with a single and a double.

Baltimore Cools Off Brewers

By The Associated Press

Now that the Baltimore Orioles have proved to the Milwaukee Brewers who's boss in the American League East, they'll try to show the New York Yankees the same thing.

Baltimore swept three games from the previously red-hot Brewers in Milwaukee, climaxing the rout with a 5-2 victory Wednesday. The Orioles lead second-place Boston by 7½ games, are 9½ ahead of Milwaukee and 14 in front of the two-time defending World Champion Yankees. The Orioles invade Yankee Stadium Friday for a four-game series.

Al Bumbry extended his hitting streak to 13 games, opening the contest with a single that spurred a three-run Baltimore first inning off Lary Sorensen. 13-11. Dennis Martinez, 14-8, coasted home with an eight-hitter as the Orioles won for the 13th time in 15 games.

"It wasn't do or die, but it certainly was crucial," said Bumbry. "We came here feeling we had to win two out of three. Winning all three means now we know we can beat Milwaukee.

"We've beaten them six straight now, three at our place and now three here after they embarrassed us in three games here early in the year."

Milaukee beat the Yankees three times over the weekend for a sweep of their own but those victories had little meaning following Baltimore's devastation of the Brewers.

"Now we have to sweep them three straight in Baltimore next week," said Sorensen. "It's either that or play .800 ball the rest of the way. And the way Baltimore is playing, they might do that, anyway."

Rich Dauer added a solo homer for Baltimore, which has a 72-34 record and a .679 percentage. At their present rate, the Orioles would win 110 games this season.

Red Sox 7, Indians 4

Jim Rice had a pair of two-run homers, giving him the AL lead with 27 this season, and Dennis Eckersley, 13-5, beat his former teammates on a 10-hitter. The Red Sox thus salvaged one game of the four-game series and moved on to Milwaukee tonight.

The game was delayed 2 hours, 18 minutes by rain, which bothered Eckersley.

"I really wanted to play and beat them," he said. "I knew they were due to lose — it was about time."

Garcia was hardly crushed by his first defeat at the Indians' helm.

"I really didn't expect to win them all," he noted. "I'm pleased in a way, if you can be pleased after losing. The way these kids kept coming back. . .they never give up."

A's 7, Twins 1

The A's got their fourth consecutive compete game and won for the fifth time in the last seven contests. Rick Langford pitched an eight-hitter for his fifth route-going effort of the year. Langford has been the victor in five of the last 10 Oakland wins, dating back to June 22.

"I might go into a state of shock with statistics like that being thrown at me," said manager Jim Marshall. "But we're using kids and some are getting better. It would be an awfully long winter ahead if they didn't.

"I knew we'd be a factor in the pennant race one way or another, by playing well against some clubs. But I know that contending teams have got to be thinking sweep when they go up against us, too."

Royals 4, Blue Jays 3

Kansas City got its sweep of a three-game set against Toronto as sore-thumbed George Brett, designated hitting instead of playing third base, had two doubles and a single and drove in a pair of runs.

Brett singled home Willie Wilson in the first, then snapped a 2-2 tie with an RBI double in the fifth.

Yankees 9, White Sox 1

Reggie Jackson, Lou Piniella and Jerry Narron powered home runs and the Yankees completed a three-game sweep of Chicago, which has lost seven in a row. Don Hood, 4-0, pitched seven innings of four-hit ball for New York.

Hood learned 10 minutes before the game that scheduled starter Ed Figueroa had arm trouble.

"It's tough to start on such short notice," said Hood. "But you don't want to think about it. It's hard enough as is."

Rangers 4, Tigers 3

Texas relief ace Jim Kern picked up his 18th save with 2 1/3 innings of hitless ball and struck out five. Steve Comer, 12-6, was the recipient of Kern's help.

"I like to pitch every other day," says Kern, who has appeared in 47 games for Texas this season and has a 1.34 ERA. "Ten to 12 innings a week is right if possible. I can usually pitch on a regular basis."

Jim Sundberg's two-run triple in the sixth produced the winning run.

In the ninth inning, Kern walked Lance Parrish who made a daring play when Sundberg crashed into the backstop catching a foul off Al Greene's bat. Parrish tagged up and darted to second but Sundberg nailed him with a rifle throw.

Parrish tried to apologize to Tiger manager Sparky Anderson but was told one was not needed.

"It was a helluva play by Sundberg," said Anderson.

Parrish said "he (Sundberg) was about as far from second as he could get. I figured he wouldn't be able to make a good throw. I thought I had a decent shot."

Texas Manager Pat Corrales said Kern had been struggling lately but was back on the target now.

"He's a human being," said Corrales. "He's not perfect. Sometimes we think he is."

Texas scored its other two runs on run-producing singles by Mickey Rivers, involved in trade with the New York Yankees for Oscar Gamble, and Buddy Bell.

Texas, chasing California and Minnesota in the American League West, goes on a long road trip in which it will play three doubleheaders and the Baseball Hall of Fame "exhibition" game all in one week.

"We can't even afford to play .500 ball," said Corrales. "We've got to play much better than that."

Mariners 7, Angels 6

Dan Meyer homered, doubled and singled and drove in three runs for Seattle while Randy Stein, 1-1, pitched 3 1/3 innings of shutout relief.

Meyer's homer was his 15th and Bill Stein also connected for his fourth.

Davis Retains Bowling Lead

HOUSTON (UPI) — Southpaw Dave Davis averaged 221 for the second round to maintain a 34-pin lead over Marshall Holman Wednesday night in the $70,000 Houston Open.

The 37-year-old PBA Hall-of-Famer spilled 1,331 pins for the second set after going into the round with a 25-pin lead over Paul Moser. Davis of Tinton Falls, N&J., has 2,809 for two rounds, while Holman of Medford, Ore., has 2,786 and Moser of Somerset, Mass., slipped to seventh place with 2,675.

Holman, 24, who became the youngest PBA bowler in history to win as many as 10 titles when he captured the Seattle Open in June, fired an even 1,400 in the second round after starting the session in 12th position.

However, the biggest jump of the tournament was made by rookie Arnie Goldman of Chicago, who rolled scores of 212, 300, 205, 289, 208 and 214 for a 1,428 second-round total to jump from 28th to third place with 2,703.

It was Goldman's second perfect game in as many weeks and the third of the tournament. Others were rolled by Phillip Ensinger of Fort Worth and Rick Minier of Portland, Ore.

Three-time PBA champion Steve Westberg of Cottage Grove, Ore., and non-titlistJerry Friedly of St. Helena, Calif., are tied for fourth place with 2,700, exactly 100 pins behind the pace-setting Davis. Among the leading five players, only Holman is righthanded.

Babe Ruthers Resume Play

PLAINVIEW (Special) — The Lubbock All-Stars resumed play today in the rain-plagued West Texas State Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament.

Lubbock was to resume its game against defending champion Wichita Falls-Vernon beginning at noon. The game had been delayed two days by heavy rains here Monday night. At the time the game was suspended Monday, Wichita Falls-Vernon was leading 7-0.

In other action today, East Parmer County was take play Plainview and ALMO played South Plains, with the results of these and the Lubbock game to determine participants in two more contests.

GRUVER LEADS TRIALS

Chris Gruver defeated Tim Redus by 14 seconds to win the Lubbock Bicycle Club's five-mile race Wednesday. Chris Gruver posted a winning time of 11:50, with Redus coming in at 12:04. Ken Gruver was third at 13:42, and Stan Stahl fourth at 14:53.

LOOKING FOR ANOTHER VICTORY — Sam Snead, 67, draws a crowd of admirers as he looks for another PGA championship. The tournament at Birmingham, Mich., began this morning. (AP Laserphoto)

Ageless Sam Carries On

By WILL GRIMSLEY

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Ben Hogan is wet-nursing his golf club factory in Fort Worth. Byron Nelson is master of a cattle ranch in Roanoke and doing some informal instruction on the side. Jimmy Demaret, his hair snow white, is running a golf course in Houston with old buddy Jack Burke Jr. Lloyd Mangrum, Vic Ghezzi and other old golfing buddies have gone to the Fairway in the Sky.

Only ageless, indestructible Sam Snead carries on.

"My caddie, Jimmy Steed, got on me the other day," the sweet-swinging hillbilly from Hot Springs, Va., said. "He told me, 'Mr. Sam, you done gone through five bunches. How many more bunches you aim to go through?'

"I didn't have an answer. Fact is, if I can lose 15 pounds and train myself into better condition, there's no reason I still can't win a tournament on the tour. I would like to win one more before the Man Upstairs calls me home."

Sam Snead is 67 years old. He still draws a gallery on the practice tee. Young golfers still stop and watch him swing — a study in pure poetry. Crowds applaud when he rams home a putt with that crazy-looking sidesaddle stance of his. A couple of weeks ago in the Quad Cities Open, Sam shot a 66 and 67, becoming the first ever to match his age in a PGA event.

Today he teed it up in his 37th PGA Championship. He played in his first in 1937 as a raw rookie out of the hills. He won three and came close in many others. Next year his fabulous career will have spanned six different decades.

He is a physical marvel, still able to kick the casement of a door.

"I'm still too heavy," the youngish-looking veteran says, patting his expanding waist line. "I'm about 203, should be around 185. If I'd kept my weight down, I could have won five tournaments last year. I'm going home and pare off some of this lard. I can lose 15 pounds in three weeks just by skipping stuff made of white flour and white sugar."

Snead has 84 tour victories to his credit. That's 18 more than Jack Nicklaus has won and 23 more than Arnold Palmer.

"I'm not sure Jack is going to catch me," the Virginian drawls. "Not if he cuts down on his schedule. When you get older, you cut corners. I heard somebody say the other day that Jack doesn't concentrate, doesn't grind it out any more."

Sam played with stars of the Bob Jones era — Gene Sarazen, Tommy Armour, Henry Picard and Harry Cooper — joined Hogan in dominating the 1950s, moved easily through the days of Arnie's Army and continued as a top gallery attraction with the emergence of Nicklaus, Tom Watson and the game's new breed.

"You have to go by the record," Snead said when thrown the knotty question of whom he rates as the all-time best. "Nicklaus has the best record. He is stronger than either Hogan or Palmer were and a better putter. He is not the shotmaker Hogan and Nelson were but he put it all together better."

Someone suggested that with the game's greatest names on the Oakland Hills course Wednesday, it was Snead who drew the most "ahs" and "ohs" and got the biggest applause.

"They look for rhythm," he said. "Sure, I get a kick out of it. Everybody wants to be liked."

The old master in the traditional coconut straw hat admitted that in his halcyon days "I got knots in my gut although I was loose all over."

Today?

"Naw," he added. "It's like playing a $5 Nassau."

GOLF

Collins had the best second round — a 63, and Watkins shot 65.

BASKETBALL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The state court order halting the New Orleans Jazz move to Salt Lake City was dissolved by a judge who ruled that the move could not be prevented. August - Do or Die Month for Astros

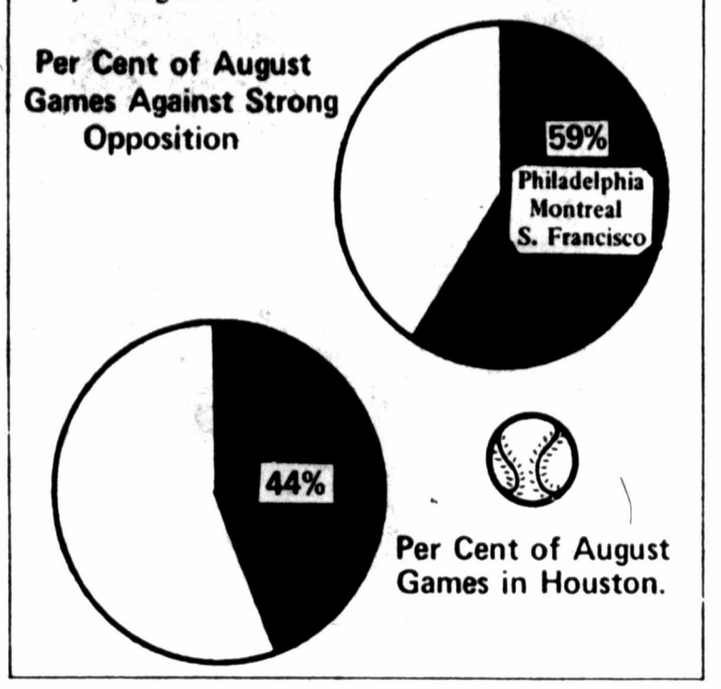
Houston will be facing its moment of truth during August. The Astros will play over half their games on the road and most of their contests will be against very strong offensive teams.



Coach, Athlete Propose Professional Track Plan

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Opening up track and field to some form of professionalism for the athletes would end the present system of "under-the-table" payments that now exist in the sport, say a top-flight athlete and a highly regarded coach.

The two, who asked that their names not be used, both agreed in separate interviews with The Associated Press that as the sport now stands, it is very "hypocritical."

At present, the sport is considered strictly amateur. But that obviously is a misnomer, since it is well known that an exorbitant amount of money exchanges hands between promoters and athletes, between television sponsors and promoters, between corporate investors and promoters, etc.

The athlete and the coach both agreed that so far, most of the "onus" has centered on the athletes, because they are the most prominent of the individuals. They are the ones who run, jump or throw, win the gold medals and set the records.

But the athlete and the coach also agreed that the promoters, the TV people and the corporate sponsors, the ones footing the bills for the meets, should be just as much to blame for any wrongdoings in the sport.

The athlete said that in the recent Golden Mile in Oslo, where Britisher Sebastian Coe set his world record, "I accidentally saw the books. . .and the cheapest guy in it (the meet) got $2,000. Even the 'no-names.' The top price was $4,000."

"If we can get track and field opened up, these kinds of 'under-the-table' payments wouldn't be necessary," he said. "I think we will have open track eventually, but the IAAF (International Amateur Athletic Federation, the governing body of track and field) and the AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) will have to get together first."

The coach pointed out that the IAAF was "in control" of the Oslo meet, sponsored by Dubai.

"Dubai is the one with money to back it," he explained, "and the IAAF is going to help them spend it."

Dubai sponsored its first meet in Tokyo last year and has another meet upcoming in Zurich shortly.

The coach compared staging a meet to putting up a Christmas tree. "You want to decorate it with the nicest ornaments you have," he said, in reference to the promoters trying to grab the top athletes.

But in addition to the money given the athletes, he questioned where a lot of the other money goes.

"Who benefits?" he asked. "A lot of the money is supposed to go to charitable organizations, such as the CYO, and other groups. But does it?

"I'd like to see some of these promoters open up their books and let them give us an accounting," said the coach.

Montana Lass Leads LPGA Qualifying

LONG GROVE, Ill. (AP) — Pamela Allen of Billings, Mont., was the leader entering the third round of qualifying competition for the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour with a 36-hole total of 154.

Miss Allen carded her second consecutive round of 77 at the Kemper Lakes Golf Course on Wednesday to take the lead among 78 entrants attempting to join the LPGA tour at this summer's qualifying school. The field will be cut today to the low 50 scorers.

LPGA officials had projected that a 308 total over the 72-hole competition would guarantee qualifiers a tour card but planned to post a revised score as the third round began today.

One shot behind Miss Allen was Diane Dailey of Greensboro, N.C., a two-time North Carolina women's amateur champion.

Ann-Marie Palli of France, who now resides in Florida and holds 11 international titles, shot the low round Wednesday, a one-over-par 73 to hold down third place at 157.

Yankee Boxer Gains Finals In Spartacade

MOSCOW (AP) — Boxers from the United States and Puerto Rico carried Western banners into crucial bouts today in the Soviet-dominated Spartacade boxing tournament.

Andre McCoy, a lanky 19-year-old from New Bedford, Mass., is the only one of five American fighters to reach the group finals of the pre-Olympic tournament.

He met Alexander Belyaev of the Soviet Union in an International Division bout in the middleweight class, and a victory would earn him a shot at a Spartacade gold medal Saturday, also against a Russian.

Alberto Mercado, an 18-year-old Puerto Rican, upset Bulgaria's Georgy Georgiev in the flyweight class Wednesday to win the right to fight Cuba's Omar Santesteban in the group finals.

The Puerto Rican would also be matched with a Soviet fighter in the division finals Saturday if he gets by the Cuban.

McCoy has specialized in rallying in the last round to gain close points decisions in his two earlier bouts at the tournament. On Tuesday, he battered Soviet Armenian Eduard Mkrtchaynan in the third round, nearly flooring his opponent with a furious flurry, to overcome his rival's lead.

Meanwhile, the U.S. women's volleyball team was to meet Poland in a key match today. The Americans had to win the encounter and then defeat Byelorussia Friday to win a berth in the bronze medal match Saturday.

The Russian Federation team dominated by Soviet National players edged the American women 3-2 for their first defeat in three matches Tuesday.

The U.S. men's basketball team had a day off today in the tournament being played at Vilnius, Lithuania.

The U.S. men notched their third victory against two defeats by whipping Lativa 97-86 Wednesday with a balanced attack paced by the 20-point performance of guard Andrew Toney of the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

The American women routed France 86-51 for their second victory in five games in a game Wednesday.

The defeats handed to the American teams by Soviet teams knocked them out of contention for Spartacade medals.

Most other foreign competitors have already completed competition at Spartacade, which ends Sunday.

Superdome, State Fight Jazz Transfer

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Attorneys for the state and the Superdome management are fighting to overturn a court decision permitting the Jazz basketball club to move to Salt Lake City.

Saying he was ruling despite the "love affair" between New Orleans Jazz fans and the team, Civil District Court Judge Stephen Plotkin Wednesday lifted an order blocking the move. He ruled the club could break its lease at the Louisiana Superdome and be liable only for a maximum of $246,000.

In Salt Lake City, Jazz managing partner Larry Hatfield said the team would resume selling season tickets today. So far, the team has sold 3,100 season tickets for the upcoming season.

But the legal battle continued in New Orleans.

Gibson Tucker, attorney for Hyatt Management Corp., which operates the Superdome, planned to join with Louisiana Assistant Attorney General Robert Redmann today in an appeal to the 4th Circuit Court of Appeal.

They were turned down Wednesday night on a request that the restraining order remain in effect against the Jazz until the appeal can be heard.

Hatfield was pleased with the decision.

Tarkenton Adds Authenticity To TV Booth

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Fran Tarkenton may have finally found his calling. After 18 years of scrambling around, running here and there, never focusing his attention on one thing, he seems to have found steady work.

And he's a natural at it.

His new job is occupying the hot seat between Howard Cosell and Frank Gifford on ABC's "Monday Night Football." Tarkenton and Don Meredith will share color duties, alternating in the role of the former pro quarterback whose career is playfully ridiculed by Cosell.

Tarkenton held up quite admirably Saturday in his ABC debut at the Hall of Fame Game between the Dallas Cowboys and the Oakland Raiders. He and Cosell bantered well together. This is somewhat important because ABC's regular season broadcasts are in prime time, and they need viewership from the folks who don't have subscriptions to "Pro Football Weekly", or don't know the up-to-the-minute point spreads.

"If the game is 35-0, how do you keep interest?" asks Tarkenton. "You've got to talk about something besides the game. Howard is a unique super talent. He gets conversations going. I enjoy that type of bantering. I'm a master at it. I do it all the time."

But more importantly for the football fan, Tarkenton gives real meaning to the term expert commentator. His analysis was interesting and forthright. For example:

• "Many people don't think Ken Stabler can play anywhere but Oakland, which has the best pass-blocking line in football. Stabler doesn't work out and keep himself in shape."

• "It was a bad throw. Too late, too high and too wide, which means incomplete."

• "He (Oakland quarterback David Humm) should have been looking left 'cause the coverage was right all the way."

• "Humm shouldn't be nervous. He's been in for a couple of series. He should have hit him — no excuses."

This commentary drew praise from Cosell. "I like the way Sir Francis talks — right on the line."

If anything, Tarkenton may have problems because he's hyper-critical. His standards may be too high for mere mortals after his spectacular career with Minnesota and the New York Giants stamped him one of the greatest quarterbacks in National Football League history.

"After playing 18 years, I know all the ins and outs," he said in a telephone interview. "My problem will be opposite to many color men. I might be too critical because I demand such excellence of myself and people around me. But the important thing is I've got to be me. I've got to be honest."

Tarkenton has the utmost confidence in himself. When he was looking around for a network TV job, he wouldn't accept second-string duty. He wanted to be part of a network's top football crew. NBC, which used Tarkenton as a pregame commentator the past three years, turned him down. ABC, which had problems convincing Meredith to increase his work load when the network got Sunday and Thursday games, said yes.

"I think preparation is essential for success in anything you do. You can't leave any stone unturned," Tarkenton said. "It's the same whether you're playing football, preparing for a business meeting or a TV show. But I don't believe in cram courses. Since I got this job, I've kept a file on every team."

Before Saturday's game, Tarkenton kept a check on the Oakland and Dallas papers, read "Pro Football Weekly" and talked to an assortment of players and coaches.

Tarkenton, a participating chairman of the board of a management consulting firm headquartered in Atlanta, was asked if it would be difficult to stay on top of the football beat because of his varied business interests.

"It won't be hard because I'm a sports fans," he said. "I read the sports pages every day. It's a great outlet for me. Others use fishing; this is mine."

Tarkenton retired from football because it wasn't a satisfying outlet anymore, even though his 1978-79 season was a good one.

"I haven't had a single pang of regret," he said. "Quite frankly, football wasn't fun last year. I had done it too long."

His first pang may come Oct. 15, when the Vikings play the New York Jets. That Monday night, the best Minnesota quarterback will be in the broadcast booth rooting for the Vikings.

It could be a very helpless feeling.

Dorsett Declines Appeal Of Curfew Assessment

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett says he has had a change of heart about his threat to file a formal grievance with the NFL Players Association if his $1,200 fine stands.

"If all this is taken the wrong way, it could be a disruptive thing and I don't want that," he said Wednesday. "Right now the rapport of the players and coaches is excellent and it is important that we keep that."

Dorsett said he would be "unhappy" if he had to pay the fine, for not returning to the Cal Lutheran campus until 7:30 a.m. Sunday after the Hall of Fame Game against Oakland in Canton, Ohio.

But he added he would not take the matter "that far" — which he indicated referred to filing a grievance.

Dorsett and Thomas Henderson led a group of Cowboys players Tuesday in asking the players union to clear up a a "free time" contract clause. Henderson was penalized $300 for the same offense as Dorsett the same morning, but said he was only one hour late.

The players interpret the clause to mean that for one 24-hour period each week, they will have no practices, meetings or curfews.

Drew Pearson, Cowboys player representative, said Wednesday, "It's my understanding that the wording of the rule states that once preseason games are under way, the team must be given a minimum of four days off per month. During the 24 hours you have off there are to be no practices, no meetings and no curfews. Coach Landry evidently interprets it to mean just no meetings and no practices. He suggested that we get a clarification."

Dick Berthelson, staff counsel for the National Football League Players Association, said he agrees with the players' perspective and has informed Landry of his opinion by Mailgram.

Landry, who has insisted he will continue to enforce curfew until ordered by the league commissioner to do otherwise, apparently made his stand clear in a meeting with players Tuesday night.

Dorsett described the meeting as low-keyed.

"Coach said what he had to say and there were a couple of questions. No one got heated up at all. It's just an issue that's not particularly clear. The players and coaches just need to come to an understanding. Once things are spelled out clearly, everything will be OK," Dorsett said.

Landry says the $1,200 fine was the result of Dorsett's being on a "double" because he already had been fined for being late the previous Wednesday. The amount of the fine reportedly doubled with each hour Dorsett remained away from camp.

Meanwhile, as the Cowboys returned to the practice field, a bruised left knee probably will keep veteran right cornerback Aaron Kyle out of the home exhibition opener Saturday night against the Denver Broncos.

Landry said Dennis Thurman would replace the four-year veteran and former No. 1 draft choice in the Cowboy lineup. However, Landry said second-round draft choice Aaron Mitchell of Nevada-Las Vegas would see action.

Left cornerback Benny Barnes also missed the Wednesday workout after having a wisdom tooth removed, but is expected to play Saturday night.

The Cowboy coach also announced, in keeping with his policy of starting experienced backups during reseason, that he would start linebacker Mike Hegman for Henderson and offensive tackle David Hudgens for Rayfield Wright.

Owners Set To Vote On Sale Of Orioles

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles' board of directors was scheduled to meet today to vote on a Washington-based group's offer to buy the American League team, the Baltimore Evening Sun reported.

The Evening Sun, quoting unidentified sources, said the board would consider an offer from a group reportedly headed by Edward Bennett Williams, the noted attorney and president of the Washington Redskins football team.

Eugene Feinblatt, attorney for Jerold C. Hoffberger, the Orioles' board chairman, confirmed that the board would meet but declined to say what the purpose of the session was.

Hoffberger refused to comment to the Evening Sun. He said last week that he was involved in serious discussions about the club's sale with an unidentified bidder who would keep the team in Baltimore.

Hoffberger said the negotiations with the Washington group had come close enough to completion that he spurned an offer of a local group which had finally come up with the $12 million asking price.

American League president Lee MacPhail told the Evening Sun in Milwaukee that he was not free to say who was buying the team but that the Orioles would remain in Baltimore.

The Orioles currently have baseball's best record and lead the American League East by 7½ games. Attendence at Memorial Stadium has averaged more than 21,000 fans a game.

for his new club, the Seattle Seahawks.

The Seahawks, who obtained the 37-year-old defensive end this week for 24-year-old defensive tackle Steve Niehaus, have been trying since then to justify the deal.

"It is a trade I normally wouldn't make," said Seattle head coach Jack Patera, who coached Eller's defensive line in Minnesota before the Seahawks hired him in 1976. He explained that Niehaus, the club's No. 1 pick that first year, hadn't lived up to his potential, and that Eller "was Minnesota's best defensive lineman last season."

The New York Giants also will meet a recently traded ex-teammate Saturday when they host the Cleveland Browns at the Meadowlands.

The Giants traded Jack Gregory to the Browns Wednesday after the defensive end walked out of camp Monday and threatened to retire unless the Giants worked out a suitable trade.

"Cleveland — that's my town. I've been sorry ever since I left." said Gregory, a 13-year veteran and the Giants' defensive captain the last three seasons. He will be returning to the club with which he began in 1967 and earned All-Pro honors.

The Giants also lost four-year veteran tackle Bill Bain to the Washington Redskins, who acquired him on waivers Wednesday along with guard Gary Anderson from the New Orleans Saints.

Torch-Bearer Closes Festival With Basketball MVP Medal

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Lataunya Pollard, the 19-year-old who helped carry the Olympic flame from Pikes Peak to begin Sports Festival II, was there at Festival's end with a trophy in hand and a contagious smile on her face.

The East Chicago, Ind., resident had just been named most valuable player of the women's basketball competition as the six-day Festival concluded Wednesday night.

"I really didn't know I was going to be picked for this," Miss Pollard said, staring at the trophy. "I just had to try and I did it."

Miss Pollard scored 22 points and had 11 rebounds as her Midwest squad went down to defeat 86-61 at the hands of the powerful East team.

The trophy, she said, "is going right up in my living room."

James Worthy, a 6-foot-9 center from Gastonia, N.C., was named MVP of the men's basketball competition. Worthy, who will play for North Carolina next season, scored 11 points in the South's 111-87 gold-medal victory over the West.

"I just wish the whole team could have got it," Worthy said of his trophy.

The West's Fred Roberts, a 6-10 forward from Brigham Young, was the leading rebounder and second leading scorer of the competition going into Wednesday's pla. But less than two minutes after tipoff, Roberts collided with another player and was carried from the court on a stretcher.

Festival officials said Roberts was hospitalized with three broken teeth, a broken nose and a possible concussion. His loss, coupled with the flu that sidelined Southern California's Maurice Williams, stripped the West of any chance to whip the South, which finished at 4-0.

But West coach George Raveling of Washington State was not about to alibi. "I don't think it made the difference. The South was the best team," he said.

The Festival, which attracted some 2,300 athletes in 31 sports, will not be held next year because of the 1980 Olympics in Moscow. Prime candidates for Festival III in 1981 are Orlando, Fla., Syracuse, N.Y., Indianapolis, Ind., and Colorado Springs.

However, The Associated Press has learned that Orlando will be the site in two years, with Indianapolis seeking the Festival for 1982.

Don Miller, executive director of the United States Olympic Committee, said USOC wants Los Angeles to be the Festival's host city in 1983 "as a dry run for the 1984 Olympic games."

Festival II, which made headlines before it got under way when a number of top athletes changed their minds about competing, still had its share of heroics from established and just-emerging performers.

Cynthia Woodhead, the 15-year-old world record holder in the 200-meter freestyle, claimed six swimming gold medals — tops for the Festival.

Bart Conner collected three gold medals in men's gymnastics, topping Kurt Thomas' total by two and heating up future competition between them.

Lisa-Marie Allen, a stunning blonde 18-year-old figure skater, took the gold medal easily when Linda Fratianne, who beat Miss Allen in the last two national championships, did not compete because of an ankle injury.

Charles Tickner, 1978 world men's skating champion, collected a gold medal, while world champions Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner won the pairs.

NBC National Tourney Set

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A team from Grand Rapids, Mich., has been designated as the No. 1 seed in the National Baseball Congress national tournament that opens Friday.

"I kind of like being the No. 1 seed," said Bob Sullivan, whose team will be making its 20th appearance in the tournament and has won more national tourney games than any other club.

"But I do think it puts a little pressure on the team. We had won 31 games in a row when we got the news that we were the top seed. The next game we played we were behind 6-1 in the second inning. I guess who could say there is pressure."

The remainder of the top 10 seeded teams are: Rapid Chity, S.D., Clarinda, Iowa, Liberal, Kan.; Boulder, Colo.; Eureka, Calif.; Madison, Wis.; St. Louis; Chicago AHEPA, and Ocala, Fla.

The Lubbock Hubbers, which placed second at the State NBC tournament last weekend in Kerrville after losing twice to the Bryan Bombers, are also entered in the tournament.

ICEM Serves As Travel Agent For Boat People

RICHARD H. GROWALD

"Group 191 will not be going to America. Unpack."

Pham Cong Nga, who had said his goodbyes to friends and kin among the other 9,628 islanders, dropped the cheap plastic suitcase which held the extra suit and dress that were the worldly belongings of himself and his wife. His wife, Nguyet, cried.

The more than 190 men, women and children of Group 191 had been left at the altar of salvation. For four days they had been checked, innoculated, photographed and tagged for going to America. Now the loudspeaker said no.

In fiction this might have been a case for the Scarlet Pimpernel or Superman. In fact, it was a case for ICEM, The Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration.

Don't kid yourself. You, too, have never heard of ICEM. You pay for it, or your tax dollars do, but it is a faceless agency. ICEM is the travel agent of the boat people, those hundreds of thousands of refugees from Vietnamese Communism who crossed the South China Sea in search of a tomorrow with a full stomach.

On the mainland, under the hill topped with the gold-domed Islamic mosque, in the fishing port of Mersing, up 34 steps over a cafe selling two-cent cups of tea and concentrated canned milk, the telephone rang on Gianni Bicego's desk. A voice announced the trouble on Pulau Tengah.

Gianni Bicego was born in Italy 33 years ago and grew up in Albuquerque, N.M., and, like so many of his generation, grew a beard and fell to the idealism of John F. Kennedy's Peace Corps. Three years ago he went to Malaysia, building road bridges for Peace Corps officials he decided were more interested in office politics and air conditioning.

He had seen the boat people coming and had seen ICEM. ICEM is not your usual global agency. It is not part of the United Nations. Its founder nations, including the United States, France, Britain, West Germany, Japan, Italy, Belgium, Mexico, and all the rest do not include a single Communist state.

ICEM was founded to help people move freely across frontiers, not a Communist world brag. Does a developing nation need an architect? Well, here's a West German architect who would like to move and is qualified and ICEM does the moving. ICEM gets into bigger game.

Who was the travel agent of so many of the refugees from the 1956 Hungarian anti-Communist rebellion? ICEM. Who gave travelers' aid to the hordes who fled Idi Amin's Uganda? ICEM. Palestinians? Jews from Russia? ICEM Arranged boats, trains, planes, food and shelter.

So, when the world decided to come to the aid of the boat people, the United States and sister states, the United Nations, the Red Cross, The Red Crescent and all the other institutional good samaritans called for ICEM. It is a bad agency for bureaucracy.

The U.S. Embassy, the Red Cross, the United Nations and the other organs have bubbling bueaucracies in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia's capital. They all tell ICEM who to move. ICEM does the moving.

And it does it with a Kuala Lumpur staff of a director, Hans Petter Boe, head of ICEM's local Norwegian mafia, including two doctors and a woman medical radiographer from Oslo and Tromso, and there is Joe Divorak, he with the Viennese brushed-back hair and Austro-Hungarian nose, a New Zealander so quiet few know him more than as "Mr. Mawson" and an unquieter type, actor Paul Hensler, Darth Vader of "Star Wars" but a boat people shepherd in Malaysia.

Oh, they have an icebox of cola and beer, too, and telephones. And brains. And little sleep. They argue governments into providing visas, airlines into providing planes and embassies into having patience.

They have a man at each of the three major Boat People internment camps on Malaysia's east coast. Their man at Mersing, serving the dreadful island of Pulau Tengah, is Bicelo and he was busy with Group 191 being off the rails. An occidental pushed to Pham Cong Nga's side through a crowd of Vietnamese who, for the first time, had lost the glacial calm that soothes their months and years of waiting. "All will be well," the occidental said.

He turned and sidestepped between the refugee shacks and climbed up the muddy hill steps to the Malaysian police chief's wooden residence, high above the smell of the shacks. He roused the chief from a nap.

"Disaseter!" he told the chief. The police official rubbed his mustache and said, "Huh?"

The occidental reported Group 191's undoing and added, "And think of the consequences! President Jimmy Carter is waiting right now in the States to welcome these people and when the plane lands and none appear, oh, may the Lord help Malaysia. And you."

No U.S. diplomat would tell a lie, no sir. No man of the United Nations would so endanger his pension. But the occidental later said some occasons demand not a lie, but a big lie.

The police chief rubbed his mustache. He actually had no direct authority on deciding who goes to salvation and who stays on the camp island. But he acted and 10 minutes later Pham Cong Nga and his now-smiling wife and the 190-odd others were being pinned with the bits of paper which serve as passports to tomorrow.

A Norwegian physician serving ICEM and the boat people, Dr. Tore Nitter, 34, of Tromso, saw Group 191 sailing off from Puleu Tengah. "We didn't come with ICEM as idealists. We're not Albert Schweitzers.

"We came, each of us, probably for adventure," he said, watching the refugees go to a greater glory. "But you know, it's not bad being good guys."

Vietnam Refugees Report Bloodbath

PULAU TENGAH, Malaysia (UPI) — The five-foot widow held the two-foot boy in her arms.

"We won. We survived," she said. "We made it through the bloodbath."

In World War II history the Nazi killing of 6 million Jews is called The Holocaust. In Southeast Asia today the dying of as many as 200,000 boat people from Vietnam is called the Bloodbath.

A bath denotes liquid and the Southeast Asian dying is taking place on the South China Sea, a warm, green and windy slaughterhouse.

Hanoi, according to survivors, made special efforts to have as many refugees as possible go down to the sea at the turn of the year. For that is the monsoon season when the South China Sea rages.

There are no known photographs of the lifeboat-sized fishing boats, sardined with humanity, sinking in a storm. But there is evidence, said survivor Nguyen Van Phuong, onetime general staff major of the South Vietnamese army:

"Our boat set out at night. No moonlight. Not far from shore, we began hearing bumping noises. We leaned over the side. The bumping was caused by the bodies of the dead, victims of sunken craft."

Pham Cong Nga, 31, teacher of chemistry, remembers Vung Tau, once the Coney Island of Saigon, as a place of bathing suits and umbrellas and shore cafes. When his boat left in November, the beaches were dotted with washed-up bodies.

"The new driftwood of Vietman," he said.

Nature did not do all the killing.

The five-foot widow was in a boat caught by Thai pirates. "They lined the men and older boys at the rail and shot them in the head, one by one. They raped and robbed the women. My husband and brothers died.

"My sister was with me and when they shot her husband, she screamed and leaped over the side, preferring the sharks in the sea to those on deck."

A grandmother, Mrs. Tran Kim Ngoc, 74, saw pirates board her craft. They yanked off her earrings — ripping earlobe flesh — and pulled off her rings. Nguyen Si Huyen, 37, a prosecuting attorney before the Communists came to Saigon, had almost made it to Malaysia.

"There were 267 people on our fishing boat. And a Malaysia ship rammed us. I was standing next to my wife and son and I was one of four knocked overboard by the impact.

"I spent 23 hours clinging to a fishing net buoy."

Ten days later, after rescue by a West German ship, he was reunited with his wife and child.

"We cried. It isn't good manners to weep in public. But what do you do when you survive a bloodbath?"

Container Law Begins In Iowa

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI5 — Iowa's new mandatory bottle deposit law took full effect this week, making disposable beer and soft drink cans a thing of the past.

It also may mean an end to the traditional beer drinker's strength test of crushing cans, the motorist's game of "toss the can out the window," simple bookkeeping for beverage distributors, and cheap drinks for consumers.

"You got to be kidding," snarled C.E. Sinks, general manager of Pepsi-Cola General Bottlers Inc. in Des Moines.

"We expected this to happen. The trend in business today is more government interference and higher costs. We're 10 years away from true socialism."

Pepsi-Cola raised its prices two weeks ago to help offset the costs of operating the program.

Sinks said a case of Pepsi now costs 46 cents more, of which 24 cents is for the legislative handling charge and 21 cents is the additional cost of coverage for the business.

The law, passed by the 1978 Iowa Legislature to reduce litter and conserve resources, requires a 5-cent deposit on most beverage containers.

The first phase became effective May 1, when the state's 213 liquor stores began charging nickel deposits on liquor and wine bottles. As of today, consumers will pay deposits on non-refillable containers for soft drinks, mineral water and beer.

Trade Deficit Causes Mixed Mart Effects

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today after the government reported that the United States trade deficit widened in the second quarter, largely due to increased imports of oil and fuel-saving small cars.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 11.60 in the two previous days, slipped .60 to 849.74 in the first two hours of trading. But advancers led gainers by a 7-5 margin in New York Stock Exchange trading.

The Commerce Department said the nation's merchandise trade deficit in the second quarter was $7.64 billion, up from $6.1 billion in the first quarter.

Another development was release of the Carter administration's internal economic forecast, which concluded that the recession will be deeper and unemployment and inflation will both be worse in 1980 than previously forecast.

Ramada Inn, which received approval from the New Jersey Casino Control Commission for an Atlantic City casino, led the NYSE active list and was up ⅜ to 12⅜.

Resorts International A stock fell ¾ to 46⅜ on the American Stock Exchange. Resorts operates a casino in Atlantic City.

Chrysler, which is seeking government aid after reporting massive losses, was down ⅛ to 8.

Banking issues were strong. Bankamerica rose ½ to 29½ and Citicorp was up ½ to 24¼.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was up .07 at 59.43. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .57 to 199.11.

Volume in the first two hours of NYSE trading was 16.38 million shares, up from 15.88 million shares at the same time Wednesday.

Paper Says Carter To Be Judged On Leadership

By United Press International

Following is a sample of what the nation's newspapers have been saying:

The Nashville Tennessean

...President Carter has dumped four cabinet members, accepted the expected resignation of his attorney general, and poised the ax over the senior White House staff.

...If the shake-up had to come, Mr. Carter evidently thought it should be done quickly — that delay would simply continue an atmosphere of uncertainty. Unfortunately the sweeping action did arouse uncertainty and a sense of disarray.

Many political, business and labor leaders were stunned that Carter would ask for resignations of his top management people and proceed to cut them down like trees. Many members of Congress were startled and one, assistant Republican leader Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, suggested the president might be "having some sort of mental problem."

Obviously, the moves have had a chilling effect on the second-level bureaucracy. Many of those brought in by the departing Cabinet members are now fearful for the future.

...With the exception of Attorney General Bell, who had planned on leaving, the dismissed secretaries had one thing in common: they ran afoul of the "Georgia mafia," that little band of lieutenants Carter brought with him.

The inner circle of Georgians didn't invent the political game of back-biting cabinet members and other ranking officials. Many administrations have had them and they usually operate on the basis of fierce loyalty to the president.

The "Georgia mafia" has been hampered some by being a loosely-structured group. But with the naming of Hamilton Jordan as chief of staff, it now has official power...

But new faces in the line-up do not necessarily win the game — not in the fourth quarter and three touchdowns behind. The coach can't send in substitutes and then go into the stands to find out what the fans are thinking. The playing field is Washington and the tough formations are on Capitol Hill. The fans will judge Mr. Carter by the quality of his leadership in a rough-and-tumble game.

Baseless Charges

The Dallas Morning News

Why is it, please, that when the President and other pols want to tar the oil industry with charges of "war profiteering" and "ripoffs" and all those other conspiratorial atrocities, they do it on nationwide TV. But when the feds' own probes find this is all hooey, that news is quietly leaked from an unreleased report, by an official who declined to be identified?

Excuse the question. It's not only too long, it's too easy to answer.

Hooey is a big seller on the political market. Throwing wild, baseless charges around lets the pols look like fearless heroes of the consumer. And the consumer is also a voter.

...While the government was holding facts showing no oil conspiracy to create a shortage, our leader was on the tube sternly promising to force the oil industry to "cooperate'... .

This circus would be bad enough for the travesty it makes of justice. But far worse than that is the political result. The constant scapegoating, threats and hints of evil plots make it almost impossible for either the president or Congress to do what must be done to clean up the energy mess.

Squeeze Competition Out

Scripps-Howard Newspapers

The Department of Energy has not only given this country the distinction of being the only industrial nation to have been plagued with long gasoline lines.

The Small Business Administration charges that DOE also has driven about 7,500 small gasoline retailers out of business in the past six months (bringing the total to 30,000 since 1974).

To be sure, big oil helped. "Major company marketing practices and DOE regulations appear to be functioning as two millstones grinding small business into a smaller and smaller share of the distributing market," says a report by the SBA's Office of Advocacy.

Thus with one hand the Department of Energy prevents the majors from selling their gasoline where the demand is and for whatever price they can get for it. With the other hand, according to the SBA, it permits them to squeeze out the independent who might have given them at least a little bit of competition.

The government may have taken the lead out of gasoline, but it has riddled the whole energy situation with irony. We don't know how much more our health can take.

Proper Incentives

Dallas Times Herald

When the Senate takes up the oil price windfall profits bill, it should focus its discussions on the need to encourage domestic petroleum production instead of following the punitive path laid out by the House.

Although ... Carter proposed ... extra revenues coming from the decontrol of domestic oil prices should be taxed at a 50 percent rate, the House talked of raising the rate to 70 percent and finally settled on a 60 percent rate. Industry officials have warned that the new tax, added to the heavy levies paid by all corporations, would leave little reward for new energy efforts.

Fortunately, the Senate Finance Committee is headed by Sen. Russell Long, D-La., who understands the economics of exploration and drilling. Long ... doubts the windfall profits tax would equal the $142 billion price tag of ... Carter's latest energy plan.

...The American Petroleum Institute has pointed out that decontrol of oil prices will make enhanced recovery processes feasible. Conventional methods can recover, on average, only about one-third of the oil in U.S. reservoirs. To date, the API says, nearly 120 billion barrels of oil have been produced and conventional methods will recover another 28 billion barrels under current economic conditions.

Much of the remaining 300 billion barrels of U.S. oil can be recovered but the processes are costly. At current prices, most enhanced recovery estimates range from about 10 to 30 billion barrels. At higher prices, estimates are as high as 50 to 70 billion barrels....

Alternative sources of energy must be pursued in the years ahead, but our immediate needs can be met more quickly by providing the proper incentives to oil companies for increased production.

Stay In Session

The Atlanta Constitution

Congress, forget the August recess. Stay in Washington and move forward on the pressing issues and problems facing America.

It is the least you can do.

To take the entire month of August off, for a little resting and politicking at home while there's so much that urgently needs attending to in Washington, would be highly irresponsible.

...stay in session and:

—Complete work on the oil profits windfall tax legislation...

—Proceed rapidly with consideration and-or approval of the aspects of Carter's energy program that need congressional action. Movement is needed now on solving the energy crisis. Congress has resisted for six years already in joining with the White House to fashion a strong energy program; the nation is in the energy mess it's now in because of that delay. To delay longer is almost criminal; for sure, delay is reason to vote delaying congressmen and senators out of office.

—Consider and approve or reject President Carter's new cabinet appointments. ..Take action on them, so they and their departments ... can move on with their programs.

...There was a time when the nation was more settled and there was not so much coming down the pike, that Congress could justify taking the whole month of August off to escape the Washington heat. But no longer.

...Congressmen and senators, be the leaders you said you were; stay in Washington and work.

It's the least you can do.

Committee Kills Ban On Busing Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — A restriction that would have barred the Justice Department from spending money to bring about court-ordered school busing has been killed by a House-Senate conference committee.

The prohibition was in the House version of a bill appropriating more than $7.5 billion for the Justice Department, State Department, Commerce Department, federal courts and various other agencies. The Senate version did not contain such a ban.
