Panel to use subpoenas in Contra probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee says his panel will issue subpoenas in its probe of how profits from arms sales to Iran were diverted to Nicaraguan rebels.

"The committee will issue subpoenas to a number of people but there are also a number of other people within the administration who will testify without subpoenas because they normally do," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Friday.

Leahy, speaking by telephone from his Middlesex, Vt., home, also said the panel would subpoena documents in the worst foreign policy crisis of Ronald Reagan's presidency. Attorney General Edwin Meese said up to $30 million in profits from the Iranian arms deal was diverted to the Contra rebels.

The investigation by the Senate panel, which the committee acknowledged has formally begun, is one of several probes by Senate and House committees. The House Intelligence Committee will also subpoena several people, said Capitol Hill sources speaking on condition of anonymity.

Three likely targets of the investigations are Lt. Col. Oliver North, the Marine officer who Meese said oversaw the Iran arms deals from his National Security Council post; Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the former national security adviser and North's boss; and Robert McFarlane, Poindexter's predecessor as Reagan's national security adviser.

Poindexter has been in his old White House office since his resignation Tuesday and unlike North, has not been barred from the White House, the Boston Globe reported Saturday.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Richard Kelly, convicted of stuffing his pockets with cash in the FBI's controversial Abscam sting, has been released from a prison halfway house.

Kelly, 62, was released Friday after spending the last three months at the Suncoast Rehabilitative Center near his St. Petersburg home. He served 13 months of a six- to 18-month sentence after being convicted of bribery and conspiracy.

Kelly was among seven members of Congress caught in the FBI's controversial political corruption sting, Abscam, short for Arab scam.

School again

Classes will resume Monday for all county public school students following the Thanksgiving holiday.

Western Texas College students will return also with the WTC dorms set to reopen at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Snyder school students will receive report cards Monday for the second six weeks of the first term.

Court agenda

County commissioners are scheduled to address only routine items when they meet in regular session Monday. Agenda items include approval of minutes from last week's meeting and county bills. The session begins at 10 a.m. in the courthouse.

Three to meet

The Snyder city council will meet Monday at 6:30 p.m. for its regular December session, and both the Snyder school board and the Western Texas College board will have called meetings Tuesday for executive session items.

The council session Monday will be at city hall.

School trustees will gather at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Snyder Country Club for a dinner and to begin the annual evaluation of the superintendent.

WTC trustees will meet Tuesday at 5:45 p.m. at the campus administration building to discuss personnel matters and to consider the purchase of property.

Snyder's 'other' entertainment star reflects on career

By VICKI BROWN

When four Snyder-raised performing artists returned to their hometown for the chamber of commerce banquet last March, one who has achieved an equal measure of success was invited but could not attend.

Kathleen Kaun, who traveled worldwide for 13 years as an opera star, was in town this past week to spend the Thanksgiving holidays with family members.

KATHLEEN KAUN
...noted singer...

Born in Fort Worth, she moved to Snyder with her parents, R. Virgil and Barbara Mott, in the late 1950s.

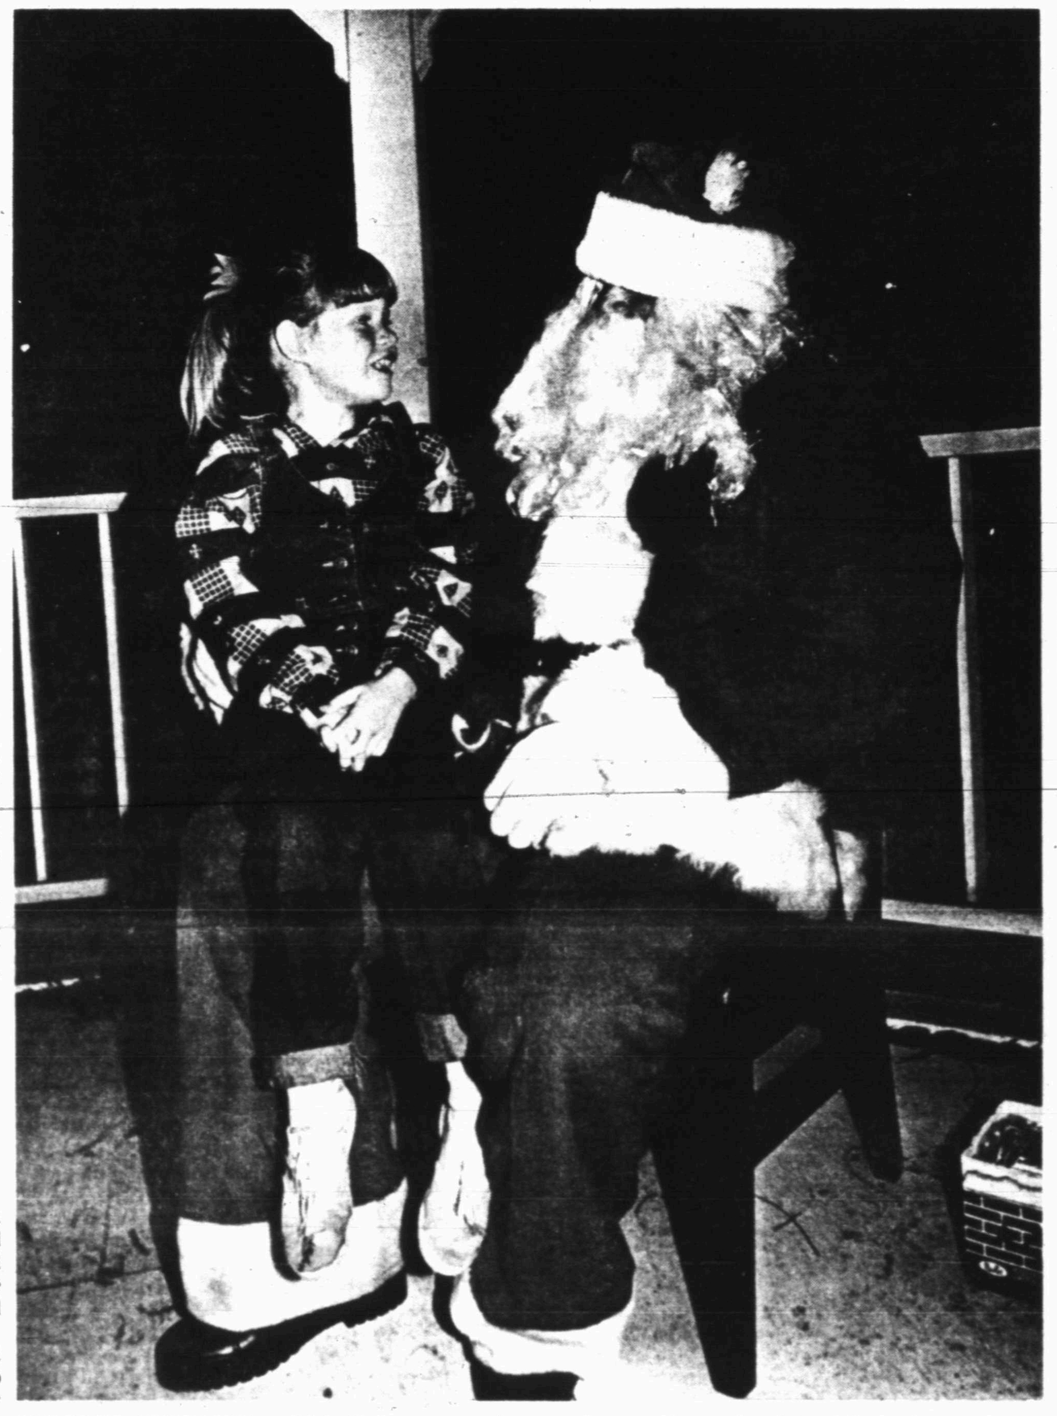

She participated in choir, band and drama while a Snyder High School student. "Any electives I had left, I always took the arts. Academically, I enjoyed English and I loved to write poetry like most high schoolers do at one point or another," she laughed.

Kaun played oboe in the band and offered piano and organ music at First Baptist Church where her father served as minister of education.

After graduating in 1961, she continued her education at Baylor University in Waco. She transferred to the University of Indiana in Bloomington, Ind., for her senior year because of the facility's reputation in the opera field.

She chose to pursue performance in Vienna, Austria, because of the greater opportunities available. "In vocal arts,

Soil profiles 'wet' at almost all levels

Rain amounts here which delayed and, in some cases, canceled the harvesting of Scurry County cotton have had one beneficial side effect--a good supply of stored moisture for land both here and in adjacent Borden County.

That's the indication from soil profile information provided by the Big Spring-based soil scientist with the Soil Conservation Service, Tom Feuerbacher.

As part of a program implemented here last winter, Feuerbacher checks select sites ranging from southeast to northwest here. In addition, two sites are checked in northeast Borden County.

His study, conducted almost monthly, is coordinated through the local SCS office, headed by Sam Buchanan.

Feuerbacher's report from readings taken during the second week in November indicate all levels of a 4 ft. depth profile have ample amounts of stored moisture.

In Scurry County, the wettest areas reported are near Camp Springs and at the far southeastern tip near Inadale. Both reported more than 13 in-

DAYS 'TIL CHRISTMAS

SDN to publish letters to Santa

This year, the SDN is again accepting Santa letters from Scurry County youngsters.

As part of this, the newspaper is encouraging public school children through the third grade to write their letters to Santa.

These will be accepted at the newspaper office through Dec. 17, the Wednesday before school is let out for the Christmas holiday.

The letters to Santa will again be published in the newspaper's special Christmas edition Dec. 24.

Letters mailed to the newspaper should be sent to P.O. Box 949. Also, they can be dropped in the outside mail slot at the SDN offices, 3600 College Ave.

Mid-winter session due from WTC

A mid-winter session is again planned by Western Texas College, enabling students to receive a full semester's credit for course work scheduled over eight class days.

Ten undergraduate courses will be offered.

The session will be offered beginning Jan. 5--a Monday--and will conclude with final exams Jan. 14--a Wednesday.

Classes will meet daily except for the weekend, Jan. 10-11. Class times will be from 8:45 until 11:45 a.m., and from 1 until 3:45 p.m.

Registration will be Dec. 1-18 in

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A committee is a group of people who keep minutes and waste hours."

Bill Clements, chairman of the board of regents of Southern Methodist University, has declared to clean up the mess associated with the school's athletic program.

Already on probation, the Mustang football program appears headed for more investigations as evidence of additional violations surface.

At a recent board meeting, Clements said he was "tired of the monkey business" and vowed to abolish the school's sports program if necessary.

The way we see it, Clements has December to get that job done and then he can start on the state's monkey business in January.

The coffee shop crowd got on SMU football the other morning, and the group was hoping that Snyder's Mr. Methodist, Lyle Deffebach, would come to their defense.

Having been on the hot seat with his coffee buddies before, Deffebach displayed wit and wisdom. Making marks on a napkin to underscore his point, Deffebach replied, "What you have to understand is that not only do we have Methodists who believe in back-sliding, we have some who practice it."

A former SMU player has also reported that Texas Tech offered him $50,000 to play for the Red Raiders. We guess that's possible, Ernie Sears has been giving a buck a year to his alma mater ever since graduation.

Exceeding Salt II limits...

Demos attack latest move

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats are ridiculing the Reagan administration's move beyond the weapons ceiling in the SALT II nuclear arms treaty, with some lawmakers insisting the action helps the Soviet Union.

The Democrats, who will control Congress next year, objected Friday after the United States violated the unratified treaty when an Air Force B-52 bomber, capable of carrying atomic-tipped cruise missiles, became operational.

"I believe the president's decision ... gives the Soviet Union a military advantage, with its near-term missile production capabilities, as well as a substantial world propaganda advantage," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who will chair the Senate Armed Services Committee next year.

"It will cause our allies abroad considerable political discomfort and it will now be much harder to reach a bipartisan consensus on strategic weapons and arms control here at home," said Nunn.

The treaty forbids the United States from having more than 130 bombers equipped to carry cruise missiles unless it eliminates other nuclear weapons from its arsenal.

When an eight-engine B-52, modified to carry up to a dozen of the low-flying cruise missiles, landed at Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth, Texas, on Friday, it became the 131st U.S. bomber so equipped.

"As the only superpower to break through the key limits, the U.S. invites the Soviets to do so for the first time," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

Byrd agreed with Nunn that the Soviets could reap benefits from the American action and said he was urging the administration "to take compensatory action which will keep us under the central limits."

The Pentagon said earlier this week that the Navy isn't retiring an aging Poseidon missile-firing submarine, which would have kept the United States under the total limits of various types of weapons permitted by the treaty.

In a statement, the Pentagon said the step reflects President Reagan's decision that "current and future decisions reflecting our strategic forces must be based on overall U.S. military requirements and the threat we face."

Although many in Congress have taken issue with the action, others, such as Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., applauded it.

Cops hope sketch will help case

CENTERVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Leon County Sheriff's Department has released a composite sketch of one of two men seen with Waco tire dealer and polygamist Harold E. "Jack" McCollum on the day McCollum was shot to death on Oct. 16.

The body of McCollum, 68, was found in weeds along the banks of the Navasota River off U.S. 79 near the Leon and Robertson county line.

The McCollum case has attracted attention in part because of revelations after his death that McCollum had secretly maintained separate families in Dallas and Waco for 29 years.

McCollum had three other wives at the same time in the 1970s, but each of those marriages ended in divorce.

Sheriff Royce Wilson said witnesses reported seeing McCollum with two men in North Dallas about four hours before his body was discovered.

The man in the sketch is described as 30 to 35, white, with dark complexion and dirty blond hair. He was said to have been about 5-feet-8 to 6-feet tall.

Police officers hope that the sketch leads to information about the man.

No sketch was released of the second suspect.

Allies in Europe regret U.S. move

By The Associated Press

Several European allies said they regretted President Reagan's decision to breach the SALT II treaty and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev called the move a "major mistake."

The U.S. Air Force on Friday deployed a B-52 bomber capable of carrying nuclear-tipped cruise missiles, while the Navy failed to retire an aging Poseidon missile-firing submarine.

By doing so, the United States exceeded the SALT II accord's combined limit of 1,320 on nuclear warheads carried by bombers and submarines.

French President Francois Mitterrand, speaking at a news conference in Paris with visiting Premier Bettino Craxi of Italy, said he thought "it would have been very wise and very useful" for the United States to continue to comply with the treaty. Craxi did not address the SALT issue.

In Bonn, West Germany, chief government spokesman Friedhelm Ost said: "The federal government believes that both superpowers should adhere to the agreed- upon upper limits on strategic weapons systems."

Ost did not directly criticize the United States, but he made clear West Germany did not welcome the development. He added that "a drastic reduction of strategic offense potential must remain a goal of the highest priority for both sides."

But Juergen Todenhoefer, arms policy spokesman for the governing Christian Democrats, said: "People in Washington no longer see why you have to keep observing an agreement that the Soviet Union has not been complying with for a long time."

Peter Glotz, general secretary of West Germany's opposition Social Democratic Party, said Reagan's action would "make peace less secure."

Belgian Foreign Ministry spokesman Peter Maddens said "any non-compliance with the provisions of SALT II undertaken by whichever side is regretted." But he added "the Soviet Union was the first one to make several violations" of the accord.

Former President Jimmy Carter and the late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev signed the SALT II accord in 1979, but the U.S. Senate never ratified it. The United States has repeatedly said the Soviets have already surpassed the ceiling set by the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

Soviet reaction to Reagan's decision was blunt.

Gorbachev, concluding a visit to India, said, "We regard this as a major mistake, which will make it more difficult to search for the approaches for disarmament."

Said Soviet special ambassador Vladimir B. Lomeiko: "Today the black day has come." Lomeiko spoke at a news conference in Vienna where he was to meet with Austrian officials.

"They are doing this not out of some oversight, but quite definitely, with the desire for a further continuation of the arms race," Lomeiko said of the American action.

The traditional arguments for shopping with hometown merchants are valid. Snyder merchants are the ones who are asked to support all the good things we enjoy. They simply are the only merchants who even care about Snyder and its future.

But the shop-at-home question goes even deeper. A strong business community helps sustain the quality of life that we all enjoy. Money spent at home changes hands six or seven times, making a real economic impact. In addition to helping pay local taxes, strong local retail sales help create and sustain jobs--the very backbone of any economy.

Do yourself a favor this shopping season--help insure the future of you and your town by Thinking Snyder First!

Pelicans are observed attacking cormorants

CORPUS CRISTI, Texas (AP) — The red tide that ravaged the Texas coast killing millions of fish several weeks ago has left another phenomenon in its wake, pelicans attacking other birds over scarce food, according to a marine researcher.

White pelicans have been seen killing cormorants recently, apparently driven to desperate measures by a shortage of small fish in area waters since the red tide bloom, said University of Texas Marine Science Institute researcher Tony Amos.

"As far as I can tell, this behavior has not been observed before," Amos said Wednesday.

Joe Blankenship, marina manager of Port Aransas Marina, said he first noticed the phenomenon a couple of weeks ago near the marina at Cline's Point, a Port Aransas landmark.

"There were 20 or 30 pelicans with about a hundred or so water turkeys," or cormorants, Blankenship said. "A water turkey would surface with a fish and four or five pelicans would grab him."

The pelicans would herd a cormorant into an area where the cormorant couldn't move because it was surrounded by the larger birds, Blankenship said.

The pelican, he said, would "take the cormorant's whole head in their mouth and sort of shake it around and let go. Then another one would grab it."

Amos said white pelican, a large bird often weighing 25 pounds or more, "would thrash the cormorant around like a piece of rag."

Amos said cormorants would be at a disadvantage because if they have a large fish, they have to arrange it before they can swallow it.

Arms included in May trip

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — As many as 20 planeloads of American weapons were delivered to Iran's fundamentalist Islamic government last May during a visit to Tehran by Robert McFarlane, President Reagan's former national security adviser, according to sources in Iran.

They said most of the cargo planes carried tank engines and spare parts. The sources have intimate knowledge of the internal workings of the Iranian government and spoke on condition of anonymity.

If the sources are correct, it suggests much larger arms shipments to Iran than previously reported.

According to the sources, the planes landed at Qale Morghi military airbase near Tehran's Mehrabad airport and their flight plans were destroyed immediately after the weapons were unloaded.

They also said several airport officials who knew about the McFarlane visit and might have disclosed information about it were arrested.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., White House spokesman Dan Howard said of the report: "It sounds like hogwash to me, but I don't want to comment on specifics of the Iran matter while the investigation is under way. I refer you to the Justice Department."

Justice Department spokesman Pat Korten told reporters in Washington that the department would not comment because the investigation is continuing.

A London newspaper, The Independent, has quoted former Iranian President Abolhassan Bani Sadr as saying McFarlane visited Iran at the end of May and in early September. He said McFarlane had 23 tons of arms aboard his plane in September.

Bani Sadr, in exile in Paris since 1981, said Iran paid $19 million for the weapons delivered in September.

The United States has not detailed what American arms were delivered to Iran nor has Israel, which has said it delivered arms at the request of the United States.

Attorney General Edwin Meese has said Israel brokered several shipments, but has not provided exact information.

The contacts with the United States apparently fueled political infighting in Iran.

Bani Sadr said that McFarlane's contacts in Tehran during the May visit were Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister Hussein Sheikholeslam, a leader of the group that held 52 Americans hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran for 444 days, and Parliament member Mohammad Ali Hadi.

The American television network ABC has reported that the Iranian contacts were Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's son, Ahmad, and Sadeq Tabatabei, another Khomeini relative.

The Iranian sources, who spoke to The Associated Press and whose information has proved accurate in the past, said that five of Iran's top leaders arranged McFarlane's visit without telling Khomeini, the revolutionary patriarch.

Only after McFarlane landed in Tehran did Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, one of the five, tell Khomeini that the American envoy had arrived and sought permission to open negotiations with him, the sources said.

They said the other four Iranians involved in McFarlane's visit were President Ali Khamenei, Supreme Court Judge Abdulkarim Musavi Ardabili, Prime Minister Hussein Musavi and Ahmad Khomeini.

The sources said Ayatollah Khomeini gave an order that no leading Iranian officials would be allowed to see McFarlane to discuss shipments of arms to Iran in a bid to improve relations.

That is why officials from the Information Ministry, which also is responsible for intelligence gathering, acted as liaison between McFarlane and the Iranian leaders, according to the sources.

The sources said that Rafsanjani, under pressure from rival forces, on Nov. 4 disclosed Iran's contacts with the United States and revealed McFarlane's involvement with Iran.

Talking toys big

By Bill Menezes
AP Business Writer

Shoppers armed with credit cards and cash have launched the holiday gift-buying season, rushing to malls and downtown department stores to stock up on things like "laser" guns and pink flamingo toilet plungers.

Retailers began their Christmas offensive in earnest Friday, with many stores opening as early as 7 a.m. to draw customers in for special sales and other events on what is traditionally the busiest shopping day of the year.

"This is what everybody does, and I like to follow the people," said Mike Nohl, 25, of Elgin, Ill., one of the thousands of shoppers jamming State Street in Chicago. "The decorations put me in the holiday spirit."

"We feel like we're 4 years old!" said a beaming John Heins, taking in the scene at the F.A.O. Schwarz toy store in New York with another 22-year-old Princeton, N.J., resident, Carolyn Kuenne.

Retailers around the country said high-tech stuffed animals that speak and infrared light guns were among the hottest items. Also popular were perennial favorites like clothes and electronics.

"I've read about (consumer) debt being high, but right now they're sure buying," said William Tobin, president of Kaufmann's, the largest department store in Pittsburgh.

Some shoppers went to greater lengths than others: Bermuda residents Louise Daniels, her husband, daughter and a friend strolled into Jordan Marsh in Boston on Friday as part of their annual five-day Christmas shopping trip.

"In Bermuda, everything costs three times as much as this."

Merchants in Texas report brisk sales after holiday

By Paul Long
Associated Press Writer

Although some analysts are predicting a slow Christmas season for merchants, shoppers jammed major malls Friday as the holiday gift-buying season officially began.

Store officials said business was brisk, especially among toy buyers trying to snatch up this year's most-popular gifts.

"It's wild," said the manager of a Toys "R" Us store in Austin. "I don't care what happens in the world, there's always kids and toys."

Lazer Tag is a big seller, as are talking animals, he said.

"Because of Teddy Ruxpin last year, we've got a whole aisle of talking animals this year," said the manager, who declined to be identified. "We've got parrots that talk back and every bear you can imagine."

A toy store manager in Dallas said his sales for the week ending Wednesday were up 11 percent over the same period last year.

"I didn't expect to do that well," said Steve Middleton, manager of Circus World at the Northpark shopping mall. "Apparently people in this neighborhood still have their money."

He said he can't keep Lazer Tag in stock.

"It has had a lot of TV exposure," Middleton said. "It was hot before it left the plant. I got 12 pieces at $50 apiece and sold them in an hour."

Scott Walters, manager of VideoConcepts at Northpark, said his sales are up 22 percent this month compared to November 1985.

"People get what they want, not what they can afford," Walters said. "That's why we have monthly payments, so we can all have what we can't afford."

He said the hottest items are big-screen televisions, camcorders, stereos and videocasette recorders.

This is the last year taxpayers may deduct sales taxes on their tax returns. But Walters said he hasn't heard any customers give that as a reason for buying an expensive item.

"It's a pretty sophisticated buyer that buys for that reason," Walters said.

Gary Jackson of Dallas, taking a break from his shopping chores at Northpark, said he is buying traditional gifts such as socks, sweaters and household items.

"I'll probably spend about the same amount as last year," Jackson said. "It depends on the Christmas bonus I get next week."

Molly Thornton of Texarkana, Texas, said she will probably spend less because she bought a new car this year. "Now I have car payments," she said, adding that she took advantage of car dealers' offers of lower interest payments.

Billy D. Hines, Northpark general manager, said store officials "are really excited."

Syria orders out W. German diplomats

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria on Friday ordered three West German diplomats and an unspecified number of West German military attaches to leave the country. The action came one day after Bonn accused Syria of aiding a bomb attack and ordered the expulsion of five Syrian diplomats.

Syria also said it was withdrawing its ambassador from Bonn until further notice. President Hafez Assad's government has denied involvement in international terrorism.

The moves came five weeks after Britain cut diplomatic ties with Damascus, also citing Syrian involvement in a terrorist attack.

The state-run Syrian Arab News Agency said the Foreign Ministry summoned West German charge d'affaires Willibald Dilger on Friday morning to inform him that the three diplomats had a week to leave the country.

It said the number of West Germany's military attaches will be reduced until it equals to the number of Syrian military attaches in Bonn. Two of the five Syrian diplomats ordered to leave Bonn were military attaches, leaving just two Syrian military attaches in West Germany.

It was not immediately known how many German military attaches will have to leave Damascus.

The Syrian news agency said the government expressed regret that West Germany was "bowing to the pressures of the United States and the United Kingdom and joining the campaign of lies and defamation against Syria and taking unjustified action which is not based on any evidence."

In Bonn, a spokesman for the West German Foreign Ministry, Hans Gnodtke, said Syria's move was "regrettable and inappropriate."

A West Berlin court on Wednesday convicted two Palestinians of bombing the German-Arab Friendship Society in the city on March 29, wounding nine people. In pre-trial statements, the Palestinians said they got the explosives from the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin. They identified their contact as a senior officer in Syria's air force intelligence service.

West Germany announced Thursday that it was giving three Syrian diplomats and two Syrian military attaches a week to leave the country and was freezing $28 million in development aid to Syria.

Bonn also said it would not replace its ambassador to Syria, Heribert Woeckel, who ended his tour of duty earlier this month, and would no longer allow Syrian officials who do not have diplomatic status to enter the country on special "service passports."

In response to the last measure, Syria said it no longer would accept official diplomatic passports issued by the Bonn government.

The Foreign Ministry told Dilger it was forced to take the retaliatory measures even though Syria "is very keen on developing relations between the two countries," the Syrian news agency reported.

The Western Allies who govern West Berlin on Thursday backed West Germany's actions by announcing that certain unidentified Syrians would not be allowed to enter the western sector of the city.

Berlin has been divided into four zones of occupation since World War II. The U.S. British and French zones make up West Berlin, which is separated by a wall from East Berlin, which is the Soviet occupation zone and capital of Communist East Germany.

The United States and Common Market countries imposed limited sanctions against Syria last month after Britain severed relations with Damascus. London said it had evidence that Syria backed an attempt to smuggle a bomb aboard an Israeli airliner at Heathrow Airport last April.

More B-52s slated for missile modification

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The B-52 bomber that departed from Kelly Air Force Base Friday will not be the last to be modified here in violation of the terms of SALT II, according to the Pentagon.

The B-52H was the 131st modified to carry nuclear-tipped cruise missiles, putting the United States over the limit of missile-bearing bombers specified in the unratified treaty.

The bomber left Kelly at 11:59 a.m. and arrived three hours later at Carswell Air Force Base, near Fort Worth, where it has become part of an operational squadron.

"When it departs Kelly ... it is in fact deployed," Pentagon spokesman Maj. Randy Morger said Friday. "Its operational unit is at Carswell."

The plane has been modified so that it can carry 12 cruise missiles on racks under its wings. But the bomber that departed Friday was "clean," carrying no weapons, Pentagon officials said.

The bomber is part of a $592.8 million Air Launched Cruise Missile modification program at Kelly. Another 64 bombers will be modified, making a total of 195 of the Air Force's 263 B-52s equipped to carry the cruise missiles, Pentagon officials said.

The program is expected to be completed by early 1990, Morger said, but the next modified bomber will depart from Kelly in January or February, officials said.

Deployment of the aircraft reflects a decision by President Reagan not to abide by the terms of the 1979 treaty, which the United States had followed for seven years even though it was never ratified.

Friday's aircraft will exceed the SALT II limit of 1,320 missile warheads and cruise-carrying bombers.

The aging B-52s have been modified to give them a "stand off" capability that the bombers would not have while carrying conventional bombs. The planes can release the cruise missiles as far away as 1,500 miles from the intended targets.

The missiles then track to the target just above ground level.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher ordered a naval task force to the South Atlantic in 1982 in the wake of Argentina's seizure of the Falkland Islands.

Winter in West should be mild; East faces storms

WASHINGTON (AP) — California and other Western states should enjoy a drier, warmer winter than usual, while the East and Gulf coasts will likely face more than the usual number of storms in the next three months, the government is forecasting.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said these weather patterns were being influenced by a warming trend in the Pacific Ocean that weather forecasters fear could be the harbinger of another El Nino episode, which three years ago disrupted world weather patterns.

The El Nino, which occurs with a warming of Pacific Ocean waters, caused problems from the severe drought in Africa to lower crop yields in the U.S. farm belt.

"This will be a winter favoring extra storminess and precipitation," NOAA long-range forecaster Donald L. Gilman said at a news conference Friday.

He predicted the band of stormy, wet weather would cover the Great Lakes states and the coastal states from Maine to Florida and across the southern part of Texas and into Arizona.

By contrast, NOAA's forecast said many states in the West should have less precipitation and warmer-than-normal temperatures over the next 90 days.

The chances of drier conditions were greatest for a region stretching from California northeastward through the states of Nevada, southern Oregon, southern Washington, Idaho, Montana and part of Wyoming, NOAA said.

All states west of the Rocky Mountains are expected to have temperatures higher than normal, the forecast said.

But an eight-state region centered around Arkansas is facing the prospect of a colder winter than normal. The NOAA forecast said Arkansas and portions of the surrounding states of Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma had a 60 percent chance for lower temperatures.

The forecast for stormy weather was based on a widespread warming in the Pacific Ocean from the Solomon Islands west of Hawaii to near the South American coast. Surface waters in this area have been running between 1 and 3 degrees above normal temperature this fall, Gilman said.

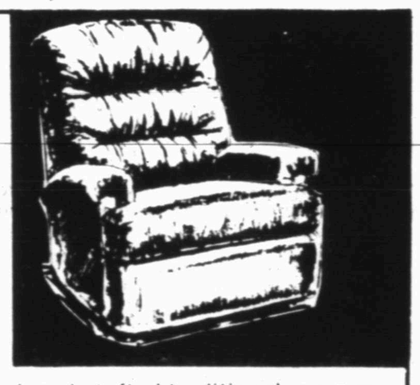

Such a warming has in the past been a forerunner to an El Nino, but Gilman said it was still too early to tell whether such a condition would develop this time.

The last El Nino, in 1982 through 1983, disrupted weather worldwide and was blamed for more than 1,000 deaths and billions of dollars in weather damage.

The weather phenomenon got the name El Nino, a Spanish reference to the Christ Child, because it is often first spotted along South America's west coast around Christmas.

Gilman said the warmer Pacific waters have already strengthened the southern jet stream, the air blowing from west to east at high altitudes that influences weather patterns.

Company under investigation

CONROE, Texas (AP) — Authorities in two states are investigating complaints from consumers that a Conroe-based promotional company failed to deliver on promised vacations, the Houston Chronicle reported Friday.

"We've got complaints, hundreds of them, from 15 states — people who never received their trips," said Jim Wiggins, an investigator for the Montgomery County attorney.

Wiggins' office and attorneys general in Texas and California are conducting independent investigations of Advanced Research Inc. and its president, Conroe native Walter Mitchell Westbrook, 42.

Montgomery County authorities said Oregon and Minnesota attorneys general also inquired about the company.

Armed with a search warrant, Wiggins and other investigators confiscated files from the company's Conroe headquarters last month to determine who actually received trips to Hawaii, Mexico, Las Vegas, and the Caribbean, the Chronicle reported.

Authorities said they have not been able to locate Westbrook, who flew to Mexico the day before the raid. Calls to the Conroe office from The Associated Press went unanswered Friday.

County officials are contemplating legal action against the firm and Montgomery County Attorney Jim Dozier has asked the U.S. attorney's office to investigate possible federal mail fraud violations.

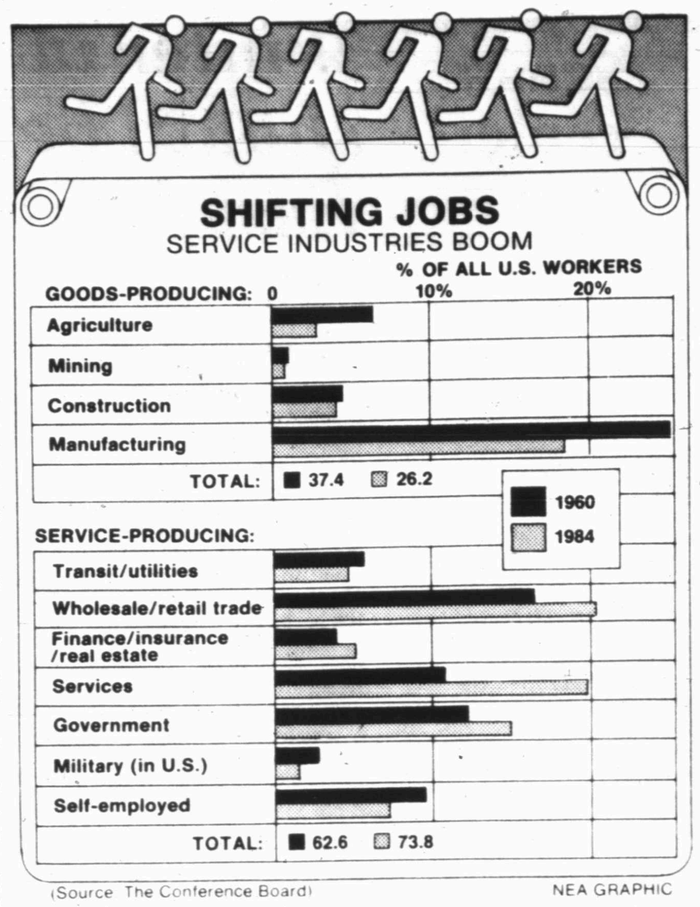

The enticement began, authorities said, with a mail solicitation informing prospective customers a prize — usually a large cash prize, a car, or a trip — awaits them if they attend a sales presentation.

After sitting through the sales pitch, they are given the prize, a trip voucher from Marketing Advanced Research. The customer is instructed to send the voucher with a $30 processing fee to the company, along with personal information and travel dates.

"And therein begins the big stall," Wiggins said.

Roger and Pat Heumann of Spring Branch won a vacation certificate to Hawaii last December from the company, but have yet to collect, Heumann said.

"So far, all we've gotten are these letters: 'Sorry, we can't accommodate you,'" Heumann said. "The way the company works, they take your processing fee and just hope we'll all be too embarrassed to admit we were suckered into something like that."

Coast of Texas got biggest damage during storm season

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — The 1986 hurricane season, which becomes history at 12:01 a.m. Monday, was relatively quiet, but one of the two biggest hurricanes came ashore near Beaumont and authorities are still sorting out the damages.

"This year's been pretty quiet," said Gil Clark, a hurricane specialist with the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla. "We had only six named storms this season, which is pretty dull when you look at previous years."

Only four of those storms were hurricanes: Bonnie, which hit the Sea Rim State Park in June; Charlie, which hit the North Carolina coast in August; and Earl, in mid-September; and Frances, which formed earlier this month. Both Earl and Frances posed no danger to coastal areas, Clark said.

Hurricane season runs from June 1 through Nov. 30. Those dates have been in effect for about 50 years, Clark said. The dates were chosen because of statistical background on when previous storms had hit, Clark said.

"I really have to say this year's been pretty quiet," Clark said. "Especially when you compare this year's damage amounts and numbers of lives lost over last year."

Charlie claimed five lives and caused about $15 million in damage, Clark said.

Bonnie, which claimed three lives, caused about $1.7 million in damage in Jefferson County, said Dick Nugent, Jefferson County Civil Defense director.

"We may never know just how much damage Bonnie caused," Nugent said. "Some people who didn't have insurance may have decided not to rebuild and we just don't know about them."

While the county applied for a disaster area declaration from the U.S. Small Business administration, SBA officials determined there was not enough uninsured loss for it to qualify.

In order to qualify for the disaster declaration, at least 25 homes or businesses in a county must have suffered a 40 percent uninsured loss.

Jefferson County and its neighboring counties have asked Gov. Mark White to seek a disaster area declaration from the SBA for the area's farmers, Nugent said.

"We're still looking at damages from the farming standpoint," Nugent said. "About 80 percent of the area's soybean crop was damaged or lost because of Bonnie and other crops also suffered damage. We're hoping the SBA will give us the declaration so the farmers can be eligible for low-interest loans. Our farmers may not recover from the damages until the next growing season."

Nugent said White forwarded the declaration to the SBA in Washington, D.C., last week.

Why did the Gulf states get off so lightly in 1986?

"Several factors are involved in conditions being right for hurricanes, including the water temperature," said Dave Kava, a weather specialist with the National Weather Service in Port Arthur. "A primary factor, however, is the flow of air in the upper atmosphere.

"We've had chiefly a westerly flow that has canceled out a lot of storms from developing. Upper-level winds, 15 to 20 miles up, shifted to the west and that tends to suppress hurricane activity in the Caribbean and Gulf waters," he said.

Hurricanes normally develop when there is an easterly flow when high pressure areas, persisting over the Atlantic and Pacific, shift to the north, Clark said. Water temperature is another factor in hurricane formation, forecasters said. Once water temperature in the Gulf of Mexico falls below 82 degrees, the chances for a hurricane are slim. August and September are the worst months for storms because the water is generally at its warmest.

Just the opposite was true in the 1985 hurricane season, which, besides causing the most damage ever, set records for the most storms to strike the U.S. Coast since 1916, caused the largest evacuation and produced the first November storm to make landfall in 50 years.

Ira FFA members earn top awards

Ira FFA won six contests and placed second in another during the District FFA Leadership Contest held Nov. 10 at Snyder. The six first place teams competed Nov. 22 at the Area II Leadership Contest held at Howard College in Big Spring. The results are as follows:

—Quiz Team, first in district, Shane Ballard, Greg Box, Cinimin Carney and Shane Bearden.

—Radio Team, first in district, Kerri Carter, Kristi Carter, Julie Sterling, Carla Denson.

—Senior Farms Skills, first in district, fourth in area, Justin Spradlin, Kyle Sorrells, Chuck Barbee.

—Creed Speaking Contest, first in district, second in area, Cinimin Carney.

—Extemporaneous speaking, second in district, Janna Burrow.

—Junior Farm Skills, first in district, first in area and will compete at the state level, Jason Withers, Shane Bearden, and Greg Box.

Richard Long is the vocational agricultural instructor at Ira.

Over 300 vocational agricultural students from 40 West Texas High Schools participated in the FFA Leadership contest in Big Spring on Nov. 22.

The purpose of the creed speaking contest is to develop the speaking ability of FFA members. The contest is open only to first semester students in their first year of membership. They are judged on stage presence, voice quality, expression, and accuracy of statements. Students are allowed four minutes to speak.

The purpose of Farm skills demonstrations is to promote a better knowledge of agriculture, develop individual ability, provide material for TV programs, and to provide programs for service clubs, PTAs, high school assemblies and other groups.

The primary aim and function of the Future Farmers of America organization is the development of competent and aggressive agricultural leadership.

Early release of rapist criticized

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen has criticized the early parole of a convicted rapist accused of assaulting three women in the same area of southwest Houston where he attacked women four years ago.

Klevenhagen said the current charges against John Michael Enard, 32, of Houston, show the state's parole program is out of control and a failure.

"You're seeing inmates walk in the front door and turn around and walk out the back door with no rehabilitation," he said Thursday. "The more early releases we have, the more we're getting back into trouble."

Enard was charged Thursday with aggravated sexual assault, aggravated kidnapping and sexual assault and remained Friday in Harris County Jail in lieu of $60,000 bond, jail spokeswoman Kathleen Scott said.

He was paroled from the Texas prison system last February after serving about 27 months of four concurrent 10-year sentences for sexual assault, police spokesman Daniel Turner said.

Family moves anyway, despite theft

HOUSTON (AP) — An oil engineer said Friday that his family will continue moving to St. Louis despite the daylight theft of a rental truck that contained most of their valuables.

"Considering what we've been through, we're holding up pretty well," said Dale Allen, an employee of Shell Oil Co. "We can't look back."

The 24-foot U-Haul truck and a 12-foot trailer were stolen early Thursday, Allen said. The thieves broke into the locked truck, which was parked outside a motel where the family was staying, and backed it out of a tight area, he said.

The thieves were able to start the truck despite the fact Allen had removed the coil wire, he said.

"We thought we took all the precautions," said Allen, who estimated the loss at $65,000.

The truck vanished as Allen, 32, his wife Annette and their two young children were preparing to leave for St. Louis.

"It was still there at 7:30 in the morning but when we looked out of a window later, it was gone," Allen said.

The thieves did not take the family car, he said.

Police later recovered the trailer that contained bicycles, a lawn mower and other items. But the truck was still missing Friday, police Sgt. Jim Landers said.

A good meal at an honest price.

Bears can grab first playoff berth Sunday

by The Associated Press

The Chicago Bears, becoming accustomed to playing without first-string quarterback Jim McMahon and winning with a first-string defense, can become the first NFL team to clinch a division title this season.

The Bears, four games ahead of the Minnesota Vikings in the NFC Central with four games remaining, can wrap up their third straight division crown Sunday with a victory at home against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Super Bowl winners, with a 10-2 record, also can become division champions if the Vikings are upset at home by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

In other NFL games Sunday, it will be the Los Angeles Rams at the New York Jets, Washington at St. Louis, Cincinnati at Denver, Houston at Cleveland, New England at New Orleans, Philadelphia at the Los Angeles Raiders, Buffalo at Kansas City, Atlanta at Miami and San Diego at still winless Indianapolis.

Monday night, it's the New York Giants at San Francisco.

The long NFL weekend began Thursday, with the Green Bay Packers outscoring the Detroit Lions 44-40, and the Seattle Seahawks upsetting the Dallas Cowboys 31-14.

The injury-prone McMahon, who has led the Bears to victories in his last 23 consecutive starts, is out for the season with a shoulder injury and faces surgery next month. Without McMahon, who has been sidelined much of the season with the shoulder problem and was knocked out of commission for the year last Sunday on a late hit by the Packers' Charles Martin, the Bears' offense has been struggling.

However, the defense, ranked No. 1 in the league, has been outstanding. It has allowed only 140 points, fewest in the NFL. It has allowed only three touchdowns in the last five games. It has allowed only four rushing TDs this season. And it has sacked opposing quarterbacks 17 times in the last three games.

"I figure we've been carrying (the team) since day one," said defensive end Richard Dent, the most valuable player in the Bears' Super Bowl victory over New England last January.

"We've been having quarterback troubles all season long - so it won't be any different. The way I see it, it's a defensive struggle."

Coach Mike Ditka acknowledges that the defense has been carrying the Bears.

"Our defense is having fun," he said. "They're playing football the way it should be played."

What's wrong with the Cowboys?

Nobody seems to have a clue

DALLAS (AP) - The most common question asked in these parts since the turkey was put away Thursday night has been: What's wrong with the Dallas Cowboys?

Should the Cowboys lose all three of their remaining games, the bunch once known as "America's Team" would have its first losing season since 1964.

Nobody seems to know what's gone wrong.

"It's hard to put your finger on it," said secondary coach Dick Nolan.

"You can look at a million different things," said defensive tackle Randy White.

"I'm just as baffled as anyone in Texas Stadium," said cornerback Everson Walls.

"We are in a down dip and it's really coming at the wrong time," said coach Tom Landry.

The Cowboys are 7-6. They lost four out of their last five games. They gave up 72 points in five days in a 41-14 loss to Washington and a 31-14 Thanksgiving loss to Seattle.

Ahead are games with the Rams in Anaheim, Calif., next Sunday and at home the next two Sundays against Philadelphia and Chicago.

Dallas must win one of the three to break even.

To say that the Cowboys don't know about losing would be a slight exaggeration. The Cowboys have lost, but not since the present Cowboys arrived.

The Cowboys came into the National Football league as an expansion team in 1960 and in the first five years didn't have a winning season. In those years the Cowboys' record was 18-46-4.

In 1965, the team broke even at 7-7, although they lost in the playoff bowl to Baltimore.

But since 1966, the Cowboys have had a string of 20 consecutive winning seasons.

Their worse seasons since 1966 came in 1974 when they were 8-6 and in 1984 when they were 9-7. The 1984 team missed the playoffs - the first time the Cowboys hadn't been to the playoffs in a decade.

Linebacker Jeff Rohrer said, "We haven't been getting any breaks, and that has had an affect on us."

White said, "Anytime you give up the big plays, you put yourself at a certain disadvantage. And we have given up some big plays and it has been hurting us."

Landry said, "You can't win these games against good teams if you don't stop their running and passing."

Landry's most telling comment in recent days tied the Cowboys' past sucess to the present situation. "Always in the past we have been able to come back," he said. "But maybe someday we won't."

Should know Saturday...

Players hope Akers is back

AUSTIN (AP) - Fred Akers says he expects to be back as head football coach at the University of Texas next season, and several Longhorn players say they hope he is.

Akers' fate was to be decided Saturday when Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds met with the school's athletics council. The 10-year UT coach has been the subject of firing rumors throughout the season, which ended as the Longhorns' first losing campaign in 30 years.

Texas A&M beat Texas 16-3 Thursday to give the Longhorns a 5-6 season mark.

Throughout the season Dodds said Akers's performance would be reviewed after the final game.

Akers sounded upbeat at his Thursday post-game news conference. "Thanks for being here. See you next year," he told reporters.

Asked if he felt he had earned another year at the UT helm, Akers said, "Of course I do."

"If it's up to me, I'm going to be back. We have gotten used to rumors around here and we try to tune them out," he said.

Longhorn defensive tackle Brian Espinosa said "it would be a crime" if Akers did not return as coach.

"He's taken a lot of heat for our losses. It's not that man's fault. He's a good coach, a very good coach," Espinosa said.

Tailback Eric Metcalf said Akers talked to the team about next year as if it would have the same head coach.

"He said we fought hard and it's rough losing. He told us we've got to keep our heads up and get ready for next year," Metcalf said, adding that Akers has adeptly handled a season of speculation about his future.

"A lot of people would just break down and quit. But he's the tough kind. I can't tell you how much I respect that," Metcalf said.

Placekicker Jeff Ward said, "These guys have handled everything that has been said concerning coach Akers incredibly well. This is a young team. I think it would be a mistake to make them have to start over again with a different coaching staff. I don't know what it would help to change."

Quarterback Brett Stafford said the season-long speculation about Akers was difficult to ignore.

"But Coach Akers and the staff encouraged us to try to play our game. We played pretty good football. We were very close in a lot of games and we have got the talent coming back to be an excellent team next year," Stafford said.

Defensive back John Hagy said "everyone would be a little upset" if Akers were fired.

"But it doesn't really matter who the coach is because of the willingness and determination we have to win. I think we're going to win the conference next year. Whoever the coach is, we're going to make him look awfully good," Hagy said.

More than money is at stake in golf's annual Skins Game

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) - More than money - and there's a lot of that - is at stake this weekend in golf's Skins Game.

There is a matter of pride.

"All our prides and egos," said Masters champion Jack Nicklaus.

"Nobody likes to be embarrassed," said Nicklaus, who will compete against Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino and Fuzzy Zoeller in the made-for-television match Saturday and Sunday.

They will play for $450,000 in the 18-hole Skins Game at the new PGA West course, a Stadium Golf facility that is ranked as the most difficult course in the country.

"One of the toughest, if not the toughest, I've seen," Zoeller said.

"A very, very difficult course. It's entirely possible that a bogey could win a skin," Palmer said.

Designed by Pete Dey, the par-72 PGA West course can play to more than 7,700 yards, but will be cut back to about 7,200 for the Skins Game.

The format calls for nine holes of play Saturday, with another nine on Sunday.

Each of the first six holes is worth $15,000, each of the next six carries a $25,000 value and each of the last six has a $35,000 prize.

If there is not a clear-cut winner on a hole, the prize money is carried over to the next hole.

"It's a different kind of golf. It all comes down to making a birdie at the right time. It's entirely possible that you could shoot 78 or 80 and win all the money," said Nicklaus, who has taken $295,000 from the three previous Skins Games.

Most of that came on one putt, a birdie on the 18th hole of the 1984 Skins Game worth $240,000. Zoeller won a record $255,000 in his first Skins Game appearance last year. It included $150,000 secured by a 15-foot birdie putt on the 12th hole.

Nicklaus, 46, and Palmer, 57, are the only players to compete in all four Skins Games.

Zoeller, winner of three PGA Tour titles this year, gained his spot in the elite field as the defending champion. Palmer was the sponsor's selection. Nicklaus and Trevino, who is making his first appearance in the Skins Game, were picked by a panel of experts.

The event, which sponsors say drew the highest television ratings of any golf telecast in 1985, will be televised nationally by NBC.

WTC slates rodeo school

Western Texas College will sponsor a rodeo school Dec. 29-31 in the Scurry County Coliseum ag annex.

Events will include bull riding, saddle bronc riding, bareback riding and steer riding.

Instructors will be Dave Appleton, Cody Lambert and Tuff Hedeman. These men have won numerous titles and are top instructions. Bob Doty, WTC rodeo coach, will assist with the school and will be looking for prospects for his college team.

Stock will be furnished by Sammy Smith of Mullin. An El Toro bucking machine will also be used. Rides will be videotaped for later discussion. Tapes of NFR rides will also be shown for study.

The school is open to all ages and abilities, Doty said. It is recommended that those 12 and under participate in the steer riding school.

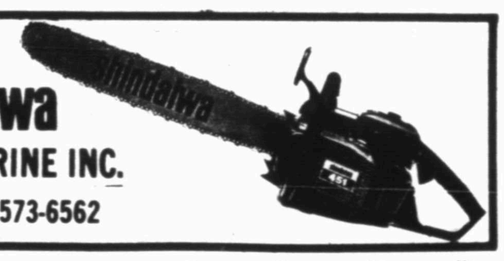

Tuition will be $225 with a $75 deposit due by Dec. 18. The remainder will be due Dec. 29. Students will also be required to furnish proof of insurance converage.

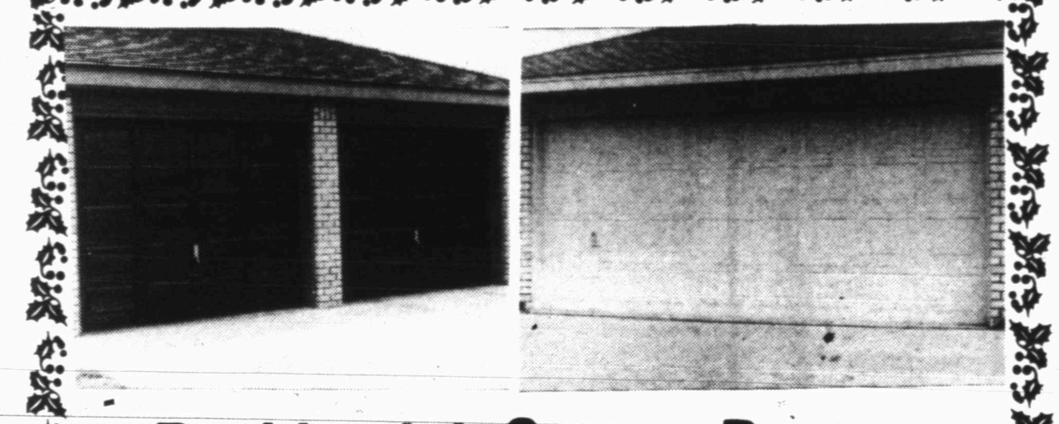

Persons wishing additional information are invited to contact Doty or Wanda Falls at Western Texas College, (915) 573-8511.

In the 1908 Olympics in London, the American team refused to dip its flag to King Edward VII of England, creating a controversy.

Lee sets new record...

Westerners stop OC

ODESSA -- Western Texas College Coach Phil Spradling and his Westerners put a reversal on that old adage, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em."

Simply, it is "If you can't join 'em, beat 'em."

ALVIN LEE

Outmatched in size, Western Texas went to its speed and outside shooting talent to outlast tournament host Odessa College, 99-96, in the Odessa Classic here Friday evening. The victory put the Westerners, 4-4, against Midland in Saturday's 8 p.m. championship game.

"We had to go up and down the floor. Odessa is really big," said Coach Spradling. "We couldn't make it a halfcourt game because we couldn't match up with them."

In the running game, Odessa was at a disadvantage. Especially when it came to sophomore guard Alvin Lee.

"Alvin was just hitting everything," said Spradling. "They tried everything to cover him but he is just a great shooter."

Lee, 6-1 from Richmond, Va., rewrote the Westerner record book for the second time this season. He burned the Wranglers for 48 points - garnering 15 from beyond the three-point line - to establish a new single-game mark. The previous best had been 47 - set by Lee, of course - earlier this season.

Spradling stressed, however, that it was a team victory.

"Everybody just played well. It was a whole team effort," said the coach. "What I was happy to see was that everybody played together and they played to win."

Western held a narrow, 46-45 lead at halftime but went in front by as many as 17 points in the second half. Odessa, which was 8-2 going into the game, rallied back, however.

"I expected it," said Spradling. "Anytime you play somebody at their place, especially in a tournament situation like this, you need to get a lead and hope you can hold on. I thought our guys showed a lot of character to be able to do that."

In addition to Lee's 48, Kevin Kendrick scored 20 - including two buckets from the three-point line - and Amos Jones added 15. Harvey Marshman scored 10.

Odessa got 23 points from Ben Smith, 14 from Wally Price, 12 from Kevin Jackson and 11 from Ron Edwards.

Saturday's game with Midland was to be the final tuneup for conference play for the Westerners, who open WJCAC competition next Monday at Levelland.

Tigers play Levelland; Girls compete Tuesday

Snyder varsity boys were scheduled to play Levelland in Levelland in a non-district basketball game at 7:30 Saturday night.

A junior varsity game was slated also, for 6:30 p.m.

Snyder varsity is 1-2; the JV is 2-1.

Snyder's girls, idle this weekend, take on 3A stalwart Brownfield in Brownfield at 7 p.m. Tuesday. A JV game is set for 5:30 p.m.

The Lady Tigers are 1-3; the Tiger JV is 3-0.

Snyder boys also play Tuesday. The Tigers take on Brownwood at McMurry Gym in Abilene. Tip offs are at 6:30 and 8 p.m.

In other action coming up, Snyder freshmen girls will entertain Abilene Cooper at 6 p.m. Monday.

Play again Saturday...

Dusters press out 84-65 win

Western Texas College's Dusters scored eight unanswered points late in the first half and nine more early in the second to run past Fort Hood in the WTC Thanksgiving Classic here Friday night, 84-65.

The victory was the Dusters' 11th in 12 outings this season. They were to play Hill Junior College at 8 o'clock Saturday night in the classic finale.

In other action here Friday, Howard College whipped Hill by an 82-59 count. Howard was to play Fort Hood at 6 p.m. Saturday. The classic was being held in Scurry County Coliseum.

Western's victory over the Tankerettes may have been a costly one. Duster sophomore Brenda Welch, an all-conference, all-region pick a year ago, sprained an ankle late in the game. She appeared doubtful for Saturday's game with Hill.

WTC took an early lead Friday night but lost it when Tamela Crawford and Tamera Lampley hit consecutive buckets to give Fort Hood a 20-18 lead with less than eight minutes to play in the half. Western rallied back, however, as Welch and Wendy Milner ripped the cords for four points and Lisa Thompson and Karen Smith came off the bench for six more. It was a 10-point turnaround and gave WTC a 28-20 lead with 4:41 to play.

Halftime score was 34-27.

The second half opened as Welch increased WTC's advantage to 10 points with back-to-back baskets. Western then snapped its press defense into high gear to put the game away early.

Thompson cashed in on five quick points for a 50-36 lead with 12:47 to play. The ball stayed under the WTC goal as the Dusters picked off two Tankerette passes and converted them on buckets from Welch and Milner. The result was a 19-point margin, 55-36, with 12:28 still to play in the ballgame.

"I thought the press really helped," said Coach Kelly Chadwick, speaking of both WTC's press defense and press attack. "We had some trouble with their press but we improved as the game went along. We really needed to have somebody run the press on us. I think we got a lot of good out of this ballgame."

Fort Hood committed 23 turnovers and Welch was credited with an unofficial six steals.

"Our press turned the game around. I thought our defense was good again tonight," noted the coach.

Welch scored 27 points and led the board game with 10 rebounds. In a well-balanced inside-outside game, Milner scored 17 points, Thompson 16 and Dee Ann Marr 10, as well.

Fort Hood, 12-4 now, was led by Alette Miller's 17 points. Genedra Graddick added 13.

Everybody played for Western and most played well. Among them was Karen Smith, a 6-0 freshman from Wolfforth.

"Karen came in and really helped us out. That's real important for us and even more so now that it looks like Brenda could be hurting," said Chadwick. "It's important to have people come in and play well and that's what Karen did tonight."

Earlier in the evening, Howard College improved to 9-3 with its 82-59 win over a young Hill Junior College squad.

The talented Hawk Queens got 12 first-half points from long-ranger bomber Terri Powell and 11 second-half points from Trina Allen - both sophomores. Powell finished with 14 for the night, as did Trina Jackson. Allen had 11 and Leslie Gooch popped for 10. All 12 players on the Queens roster scored.

Hill, which started four freshmen and fell to 1-4 on the season, was led in scoring by Sherri Wisenbacker. She had 10 points. Janice Sanders scored 9 and Sheli Reece added 8.

Mavs 119, Nets 94

The New Jersey Nets are down, and Coach Dave Wohl says he may be out.

"Maybe it's time for me to see if they would be better off with another coach," Wohl said after the 2-12 Nets lost their eighth straight NBA game Friday night, a 119-94 rout by the Dallas Mavericks.

Meanwhile, the champion Boston Celtics continued to play well, winning their 48th straight home game with a 111-96 decision over the San Antonio Spurs.

CHICAGO

With McMahon out, the Bears will start Mike Tomczak at quarterback. Behind him are veteran Steve Fuller and rookie Doug Flutie.

The Steelers, 4-8, have been eliminated from playoff contention, but are trying to salvage something out of their worst season since they were 1-13 in 1969.

"There's no excuse for ... (a letdown) at this level," Steelers' center Mike Webster said. "You're cheating your teammates when you allow that to happen."

The Vikings, 6-6, have lost four of their last five games, the four setbacks by a total of 15 points, and have virtually fallen out of playoff contention. They are hoping that quarterback Tommy Kramer, bothered by a thumb injury, will be ready to play against Tampa Bay, 2-10.

The Rams-Jets game will be a matchup of division leaders. The Rams, 8-4, lead the NFC West by a half-game over San Francisco, while the Jets, 10-2, are ahead of New England by one game in the AFC East.

Los Angeles has the league's leading rusher in Eric Dickinson, but rookie quarterback Jim Everett followed a sensational debut two weeks ago with a disappointing performance last Sunday.

The Jets had their nine-game winning streak snapped Monday night in a disastrous 45-3 performance against Miami. They still are hurting defensively, with injuries to linemen Mark Gastineau, Joe Klecko and Marty Lyons, linebacker Lance Mehl, and defensive backs Russell Carter and Johnny Lynn.

Washington, 10-2 and tied with the Giants for the NFC East lead, has played exceptionally well the last two games, beating San Francisco and Dallas. However, the Redskins could be without standout running back George Rogers, bothered with a shoulder injury, against St. Louis, 3-9.

The National Football League had only eight teams in 1932, the lowest number in its history.

Police, protestors clash in S. Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police clashed with thousands of anti-government demonstrators at two dozen sites in the capital and detained nearly 1,600 people, but authorities said they foiled a major rally by sealing off a downtown park.

More than half a dozen demonstrators were injured after being hit by tear gas canisters, witnesses said. Among them were two lawmakers of the opposition New Korea Democratic Party, which organized the rally.

Party leader Lee Min-woo told reporters that continued repression might force the opposition into a tougher stand against the government.

"We will not hesitate to go all-out for a campaign to overthrow the government in place of our efforts hitherto to seek democratic reforms through dialogue and compromise," he said.

Opposition leader Kim Young-sam, who is under house arrest, said the government of President Chun Doo-hwan was using "undemocratic and barbarous moves" to deny people their constitutional right to assemble.

The party had scheduled a rally for 1 p.m. at a municipal park to push for constitutional reforms, but thousands of police set up barricades and sealed off the area hours before the scheduled start.

Police in riot gear also were deployed around the party's headquarters about two miles away.

Crowds first gathered at three major intersections leading to the park and scores of opposition lawmakers tried in vain to march toward the rally site.

Police repeatedly fired tear gas to disperse crowds that regrouped in alleys. Demonstrators retaliated by hurling stones and gasoline bottle bombs.

At one point, about 600 students led by people carrying torches and placards surged out of downtown shopping areas and scattered leaflets denouncing the Seoul government. Most protests were crushed in minutes.

Police said 24 demonstrations took place throughout the city and that 1,598 people were taken into custody. They did not say if anyone was charged.

The Kyodo News Service in Tokyo, however, said nearly 1,937 demonstrators were arrested and that police seized about 800 molotov cocktails, 270 steel pipes and clubs and about 200,000 anti-government pamphlets.

Newspapers reported that authorities mobilized as many as 70,000 police. Officials did not confirm the figure, but witnesses said scores of police buses were sent to Seoul from provincial cities.

Opposition leaders said the rally was planned as part of an effort to pressure the government into changing the constitution to permit direct presidential elections when Chun's term expires in 1988.

The governing Democratic Justice Party also has proposed amending the constitution, but prefers a parliamentary system with a strong prime minister under a figurehead president. A National Assembly committee debating constitutional amendments has been deadlocked for weeks.

The president now is chosen by an electoral college whose delegates are apportioned according to the vote in a general election.

Dissident sources said about 260 dissidents, including opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, were placed under strict house arrest Friday night.

At least 11 killed on Texas highways

By The Associated Press

At least 11 people have died on Texas highways during the Thanksgiving holiday weekend that began Wednesday night and ends late Sunday.

Two men from Beeville died Friday in a collision near George West, authorities said.

Albert Trevino and Victor Salazar were killed and two other men were injured when a pickup truck skidded into the path of a truck on U.S. Highway 59 early Friday morning.

Mary Self, 78, of Marble Falls died about noon Friday as the result of a two-vehicle accident about 2½ hours earlier on Interstate 10 in San Antonio.

The holiday traffic toll also included a teen-ager who was on his way to a dinner when his car was hit by a train during a rainstorm, officials said.

Ammar Bitar, a native of Syria who had turned 17 Wednesday, died Thursday afternoon when the car driven by his sister was struck near Arcola, police said. His sister, Maya, 36, was not injured but their mother, Laila, 51, was treated for two broken ribs and a 10-inch head laceration at the Fort Bend Community Hospital, Arcola Police Chief Don Stanton said.

In other fatalities recorded during the unofficial count that began at 6 p.m. Wednesday and ends at midnight Sunday:

Vickie Snow, 30, of Sugar Land and Billy Brooks Jr., 38, of Houston died in the Houston suburb of Bellaire on Thursday when a car ran a red light and struck another, Harris County Sheriff's spokesman J.R. McFerrin said.

Brooks died at the scene, and the woman, who was pregnant, died in surgery at Hermann Hospital, McFerrin said. Her two children, ages 7 and 9, were in stable condition at Hermann, officials said.

Florentine Ventura, 22, was charged with two felony counts of failure to stop and render aid and two counts of involuntary manslaughter, Harris County Jail spokeswoman Kathleen Scott said. He remained in jail today in lieu of a $5,000 bond set for each charge, Ms. Scott said.

Christy Coman, 32, of Houston died early Thursday after her car careened into a ditch in north Harris County and struck a culvert, he said.

Doris Avery was killed early Thursday in Houston just three days after her 35th birthday, police department spokesman D. Watley said.

Witness reports conflicted on how the woman died, he said. Some said she was hit by a car, others reported she fell out of a car.

John Lewis Pitts, 42, of San Antonio was killed about 9:30 p.m. Wednesday when he was hit by a car while running across Interstate 35 in San Antonio, police said. No citations were issued.

Rogelio Berrueto, 32, of San Antonio was killed when a pickup truck he was driving struck a stalled dump truck on the shoulder of Interstate 410 at about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, police said.

Jean Ann Williams, 27, of Dallas was struck by a small truck and killed as she walked down an exit ramp of U.S. Highway 75 at 11:25 p.m. Wednesday, according to a DPS spokeswoman in Dallas. The accident report included no explanation of why Ms. Williams was walking on the exit ramp that is just south of the McKinney city limits.

Fighting in Beirut said continuing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslems and Palestinians battled with tanks, multi-barreled rocket launchers and hand grenades Saturday in Beirut and south Lebanon. Police said 24 people were killed and 56 wounded.

The fighting blunted efforts by Syrian, Libyan and Iranian mediators to end the 18-month-old war between Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization and Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Shiite Amal militia.

They said the focal point of the fighting was at Beirut's Chatilla refugee camp, where Shiite forces hammered the shantytown of 14,000 inhabitants with a barrage of tank fire all night.

Palestinians struck back with rockets fired from truck-mounted multiple launchers in Chatilla and suburban Bourj el-Barajneh, aimed at densely populated Shiite slums straddling both camps, police said.

The PLO charged that Amal, backed by a Lebanese army brigade, was trying to overrun the Chatilla camp. It said guerrillas repulsed several Amal assaults launched at Chatilla behind sustained barrages of 100mm cannon fire.

But Amal communiques accused Arafat's guerrillas of attempting to break out from Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh to "expand outside the camps," prompting Amal to crack down.

Police said 13 people were killed and 27 wounded in the overnight Chatilla fighting, upping the overall toll in that area to 23 dead and 124 injured in 24 hours.

The PLO claimed in a statement issued in Nicosia, Cyprus, that Syrian artillery shelled the Beirut camps after dark from the central Lebanese mountain range east of the capital.

Damage heavy from auto fire

Units of the Snyder Fire Department were dispatched to extinguish a car fire at Inadale on U.S. Hwy. 84 Friday afternoon.

Listed as sustaining extensive damage in the 4:56 p.m. blaze was a 1978 Ford Pinto owned by Merit Stevens of Inadale.

3 arrests occur

Police logged three misdemeanor arrests Friday.

One woman was jailed on warrants for failure to pay previously levied fines while two men were arrested on alcohol related charges — one for driving while intoxicated and one for the public intoxication.

Minor injuries noted for two

Two Snyder residents reportedly sustained minor injuries which did not require medical treatment in a two-vehicle traffic mishap Friday afternoon.

Involved in the 2:36 p.m. wreck in the 2700 Block of College Ave. were a 1977 Ford driven by Howard Floyd Shifflett of 3602 Hill Ave. and a 1973 Plymouth driven by Queen McDearman Quiett of 603 29th St.

Quiett and Linda Shifflett — a passenger in the vehicle driven by Howard Shifflett — were listed as sustaining minor injuries in the incident.

Opera singer recalls career

this is a big thing — whether to be an American artist or to go to Europe. In Europe, all towns about the size of Abilene have an opera house subsidized by the government," she explained.

"Even today with more regional opportunities (available in the U.S.), I think I would still have gone to Europe because of the opportunity to learn another culture, the opportunity to become fluent in other languages and the opportunity to sing Mozart in the town where he was born."

But, she added that she, like most artists she has encountered, must at some point decide if the pressures of performing justified pursuing the career.

"I was at the point in my career trying to decide whether to go international or enjoy life and my daughter's childhood," she said. "Occasionally, I miss being in costume and singing as someone else. But I didn't enjoy the peripheries. As an artist, your career hangs on chance meetings with the right people and on pleasing one particular person.

"In the performing arts, you must be willing to play that game. When you become an 'adult adult,' you must make the decision. It's a very private decision and you must choose for yourself."

After singing every day for 13 years, she decided to pursue teaching. She opted for a faculty position at Northwestern University in Chicago. "Northwestern had a great need for an energetic voice teacher and word spread that the school had a teacher that had experience in the business."

Currently, she instructs some 20 voice students through the university and an additional 15 to 20 students on a private basis.

"I had performed almost every role I had set my heart on. Performing was absolutely delightful, but I am absolutely happy in what I'm doing now," she added.

She admitted that part of her satisfaction comes through increased time with nine-year-old Arabella.

Although she focuses primarily on her teaching responsibilities, she accepts opportunities to sing, including an engagement here last winter with the Fort Worth Symphony. She had planned to attend the chamber banquet, but a performance of Verdi's "Requiem" prevented her doing so.

To young people considering a career in the performing arts, she offered this advice.

"If you are even thinking about the arts, ask yourself 'Do I love doing this? Does it make me feel good as a person? Do I get deep joy from it?' The way is so rough and there is so much competition, if you experience any hesitation, you better think about doing something else," she said.

She also suggested developing individual art techniques as early as possible. "The earlier you can develop a disciplined technique, the more time you will have to be creative later on."

Kaun also believes that a performing hopeful should look for the best possible training. "Never shy away from going to the best quality education you can find. Go to the top. Don't try to cut corners. Go to the best early," she said.

"Always remember that any talent is a gift of God. Don't ever get too proud about your talent, just work to develop it."

Soil profiles reflect 'wet'

ches of stored moisture in the 4 ft. profile.

Around the Hermleigh area, the total was 11.4 inches; and just west of Snyder the total was some 10.4 inches.

The two Borden County sites, located across the county line almost due west of Fluvanna, showed a soil profile ranging from approximately 11 to 12 inches.

The profiles indicate at every site that this moisture is stored evenly at all levels.

Due to the evaporation process, the top six inches of earth at each site has the least amount of water stored. But even this top soil has from 1.5 inches--the smallest amount recorded at any depth--to 3.2 inches stored, the figures indicate.

In general, each level at each site has from 2 to 3 inches of needed moisture stored. Readings are taken every six inches down to the prescribed 4 ft. depth.

The soil profiles stop there since 4 ft. is generally considered the range of "useable" water available to cotton--the maximum depth a cotton root will go.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

As Christmas nears, some Scurry County residents decide to "make" holiday gifts for the individuals on their list.

One such individual is Charlotte Greene of 2208 27th St.

For her, the current holiday season began the day after Christmas last year as she began planning the creations that would best suit friends and family members this year.

Charlotte majored in art for one year while a student at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos. Later, she switched to an elementary education emphasis, but believes in retrospect, "I should have stayed with art."

Although she has always pursued her love for art through drawing and painting, she became immersed in crafts with her introduction to egg painting a few years ago.

Snyder native Karen Sears, now a noted artist in the South and Southwest, taught her how to transform chicken eggs into delicate Christmas ornaments.

"My husband (Jack Greene Jr.) bought me a small set of watercolors and I got started," she said.

After puncturing small holes in both ends of the egg, she blows out its contents and allows it to dry. Charlotte explained that sanding the shell with very fine sandpaper is required next.

This removes tiny bumps and makes the shell's surface smooth enough to allow the watercolor to soak in.

She completes each egg by adding detail and outlining in India ink.

The mother of three daughters, Charlotte also tries to personalize all items she makes to suit the lifestyle and tastes of the intended recipient. "I made a set of 12 egg ornaments for my mother-in-law. I made them especially for her by painting each of the grandchildren into the scenes," she explained.

When she began painting eggs, she used figures by Joan Walsh Anglund, creator of the "Love Is..." cartoon series. Then she transferred the figures to name plaques for children.

To create the pictures, Charlotte paints the child's name in large block letters. Using the letters as a base, she sketches in familiar objects and activities. "I can personalize by using the photo of a child or by painting the figure with a special dress," she added.

Each year, she tries to learn a new craft form or a new application for a skill she already possesses. "I try to take a class in crafts as offered rather than trying to learn the hard way," she noted.

Sometimes the "class" is instruction offered by a friend with expertise in a particular art, a continuing education class offered through Western Texas College or lessons given through area hobby and craft shops. "I particularly enjoyed the program given through the museum last year. We had the opportunity to make an ornament with the materials they provided," she said, holding a folded star ornament she had created using the original instructions.

She has tried almost all crafts including dough art (stiff dough formed into objects that are baked, painted and varnished), tole painting and wood painting. She began knitting lessons a few weeks ago.

"I try to use a medium that the person I'm making the gift for will enjoy," she said. "But I also like to keep up with what is popular at the time. I like to be one of the first to try something new."

To personalize a gift, Charlotte often adapts patterns or creates new patterns to accommodate her needs. She created a wooden necklace for a daughter particularly fond of cats by drawing and painting three felines similar to the three animals the family owned.

For another daughter, she adapted a Raggedy Ann doll pattern to create a "Raggedy Laura." She changed the doll's body structure slightly and added her daughter's facial features in acrylics. The doll became a miniature version of Laura when Charlotte added yarn hair styled in the same manner as her daughter's.

Her ideas often come from browsing through stores or at garage sales. She admits to sometimes glancing at an object and listing a number of ways it could become a gift. "I have a mind that's always churning. It takes me hours to go through a magazine. I always have ideas on hold," she said.

One current project is fabric baskets created by covering rope with fabric strips. She winds the rope around itself to form a base. Then, using the fabric to hold each layer, she stacks the rope to a desired depth.

The craftsman can form any chosen shape. Charlotte has created a goose-shaped basket to add a country flavor to a friend's home.

Although she likes all crafts, creating pillows remains her favorite. "I find that as you move them around as you make up a bed or straighten them on the couch, they bring to mind the people who made them," she explained.

Because she makes at least half of the presents she gives each year, she constantly looks for bargains. "I'm a very economical person and I'm always on the lookout for things on sale I can use. All year I collect baskets and tins to put things in for Christmas. I'm also an avid garage saler. I buy old candles that can be melted, sometimes old clothes to use for materials and anything that I think I might be able to use," she said.

She noted that through careful planning, creating a handmade gift can be less expensive than purchasing a similar item. "I discovered last year that broomweed makes an excellent wreath. All (the expense) I have in it is the coathanger, the string and the time it took me to make it," she explained.

"Sometimes you can also substitute parts to lessen the cost. For example, you can use a coathanger as a wreath base rather than purchasing a ready-made straw base."

Charlotte and several other area craftsmen plan to open an artists' cooperative store for the holidays in order to sell some of their artwork and to provide local residents the opportunity to learn some of the techniques themselves.

She believes that every individual can create something. "Some people can pick up one kind of craft and do well, but pick up something else and not do as well. Some people simply say 'I can't' when they maybe are just afraid to try. Sometimes people sell themselves short," she said.

"I would really encourage anyone not to give up on themselves because there is something somewhere they can do well and enjoy."

CREATIVE GIFTS — Charlotte Greene enjoys creating about half of the Christmas gifts she gives each year. Among the items she has made are pillows, animals and baskets. (SDN Staff Photo)

Teens learn realities of child-rearing

HOUSTON (AP) — There were lots of oohs and aahs when "Donna" walked into the Family Life classroom with her 2-year-old daughter.

"Isn't she sweet ... isn't she cute," the teens said as they crowded around her.

But after 30 minutes, those same high school students were beginning to get the picture about the responsibilities — as well as the joys — of raising a child. That toddler had located the chalk and the teacher's plant, emptied two purses and had slipped out the door and down the hall with four students and her mother in rapid pursuit.

The mother, one of a dozen adoptive parents representing the Homes of St. Mark, had made her point vividly. As part of an educational and informational program for the Houston based maternity care and child placement agency, the parents are sharing their experience in adopting and parenting with Houston area teens.

"This classroom program is our grass roots effort to reverse the trend toward teens raising babies and to provide more information about what we call the loving alternative — adoption," said Jo Ann Caldwell, executive director of the Homes of St. Mark, established in 1955.

Computer match ends in happy wedding

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An electronic bond which started as a computer relationship resulted in marriage with a couple exchanging vows viewed by hundreds of friends and relatives over their home computers, reports an information management journal.

The newlyweds "met" on a CB simulator — an electronic conferencing program — that enables a subscriber with a microcomputer and modem to access any one of 72 channels, reports MIS Week. Each channel can accommodate a number of users, allowing an entire group to converse party-line style.

The man, a sheet-metal mechanic who is deaf and lives in Texas, found himself able to converse freely with a woman systems analyst in California.

The computer meeting, according to the publication, led to "digital courting over the national network for six months before their first encounter." When they finally met, it was as if they were old friends.

In trouble from the start

By James Jacoby

Don't be bewildered by North's jump to two no-trump. Many people use this jump after an opposing takeout double to show four-card support for partner's opening major and about 9-11 high-card points. Although South had only 14 in high cards, he suspected that West might have a little trouble in getting rid of the lead safely. That was an excellent surmise.

West began with a trump. Declarer won in dummy, led a trump back to his hand and led a low diamond. West chose to play low and dummy's queen won. Now a second diamond was ducked into West's hand. (Had declarer gone up with his ace on the second round, West could have unblocked his king.) West returned a diamond to South's ace, and South now led a low club up to dummy's king. West once again had to duck. When the club king won, declarer returned to his hand with a trump, cashed the fourth diamond, on which he discarded a low club from dummy, and then played the club queen. West now had to win the ace and lead away from the spade ace to give South his game contract.

An interesting point: If declarer plays the diamond ace before leading up to the queen, defender West can win a brilliancy award by throwing the king under the ace. Now East cannot be prevented from winning a trick with the diamond jack to lead through the spade king.

ARAB AND JEW. By David K. Shipler.

Shipler examines the intricate relationships and images that have evolved between Arabs and Jews as they have dwelled together in Israel and in territories under Israeli control. Deeply felt and superbly written, "Arab and Jew" is a fair-minded search for understanding. By asking the proper questions, David Shipler provides the essential framework for that search for anyone seriously interested in the source of the conflicts and the attempts at reconciliation in today's Israel.

ALTERING HOLIDAY FOODS FOR HEALTH

You don't need to give up favorite holiday foods to follow today's dietary guidelines.

Dietary guidelines from the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services, and those from major health organizations, recommend reducing consumption of fat, sugar and salt while increasing the amount of fiber in our diets.

Making an effort to eat nutritiously doesn't have to put a damper on your holiday season. Relatively simple modifications can reduce the fat and total calories in many favorite foods, without significantly affecting their taste.

Sugar can be reduced by a third in many holiday desserts. If a recipe calls for 1 cup sugar, for example, use ⅔ cup. This works best in fruit-based recipes and in making puddings and custards. The sugar in cookies and cakes can also be reduced, but requires some experimenting to find an appropriate level.

Likewise, fat can be reduced by a third in gravies, sauces, puddings and quick breads.

Omit salt or reduce it by half and add more herbs and spices to increase flavor.

To increase fiber intake, substitute whole grain flour for ¼ to ½ of the refined flour in holiday baking. If a recipe calls for 3 cups all-purpose flour, use ¾ whole grain flour and 2¼ cups all-purpose flour.

Yogurt or cottage cheese may be substituted for sour cream in some recipes for sauces, dips, dressings and main dishes.

Use skim rather than whole milk and in some recipes calling for whipped cream, substitute evaporated milk.

Take the time to modify favorite holiday recipes this year and you'll have a healthier alternative to hand down as part of your family tradition.

HOT-STUFF CHIP DIP

1 tablespoon butter or margarine
¼ cup sliced green onions
One 16-ounce can refried beans
One 16-ounce can yellow hominy, drained
1 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese with jalapeno peppers
⅓ cup beer
½ of a 1¼-ounce envelope taco seasoning mix
1 tomato, seeded and chopped
Chopped onion
Tortilla chips or broken tostada shells

In a 1½-quart microwavesafe casserole melt butter on 100 percent power (high) 30 to 45 seconds. Add onion. Cook uncovered 2 minutes. Stir in beans, hominy, ½ cup of the cheese, the beer and seasoning mix. Cook, covered, 5 minutes, stirring twice. Stir in half the tomato. Top mixture with remaining cheese, tomato and additional onion. Serve with chips. Makes 5 cups.

If desired, before adding tomato cover and chill half the mixture for later use. Reheat, uncovered, on high for 3 to 4 minutes. Add tomato and top with remaining ingredients as directed above.

Companies recognize elderly needs

EDITOR'S NOTE — With the population of elderly Americans growing and the number of young people entering the work force shrinking, employers are faced with a new set of problems. Some corporations have begun innovative programs to help their employees care for their elderly kin and to put retirees back to work.

NEW YORK (AP) — A widowed mother of five finds it tough to care for her frail, elderly parents while holding down a full-time job. But she manages.

She's had days when the needs of an 83-year-old father and 94-year-old mother made it impossible for her to go to the office. Like the day she had to take her mother to the doctor to get her artificial leg fitted.

"By the time I got through with what we had to do, I had had it," recalls Therese Lequin, an accounting clerk in the Tewksbury, Mass., office of Wang Laboratories Inc. "I just couldn't go in to work."

Stories of how people like Ms. Lequin cope with competing demands on their time are common in the American workplace.

Many companies have been providing day care services for employees with young children or allow parents to arrange flexible schedules. Now, some companies are taking an interest in employees who care for aged relatives or friends.

"America is growing older," begins a report done by the U.S. Senate Special Committee on Aging in conjunction with the American Association of Retired Persons, the Federal Council on the Aging and the Administration on Aging. "One of the most significant demographic facts affecting America's present and future course is the aging of its population."

WATCH FOR GRASS TETANY IN CATTLE

Scurry County cattlemen need to be aware of a condition called grass tetany that might afflict their herds this time of the year.

Grass tetany is a metabolic disturbance resulting from low blood magnesium in the animal.

The problem occurs frequently in adult cows, especially those nursing calves and grazing lush pastures. However, it can occur in cattle of any age or condition and often develops in those grazing wheat or other cereal crops. Cattle in poor condition and exposed to cold or cool, wet, cloudy weather also are subject to grass tetany.

Grass tetany appears more rapidly in lactating animals and more slowly in poorly nourished cattle. It results mainly from low levels of magnesium and high levels of potassium and nitrogen in grass and small grain pastures. Thus magnesium absorption is limited and the blood serum magnesium level drops.

In serious cases of grass tetany, animals start to tremble, stagger or run in a frenzied manner. Those that fall and show convulsions usually die rapidly. Animals less affected may be nervous, walk with a stiff gait, urinate frequently, and be sensitive to touch and sound. This may continue for several days before progressing to the convulsive stage leading to death.

I recommend calling a veterinarian as soon as possible once symptoms develop since use of intravenous magnesium and calcium compounds can save animals.

Preventive measures can help avoid cattle losses from grass tetany. Feeding a free-choice mineral of 6 to 8 percent magnesium or a mix of 25 pounds each of trace mineralized mixing salt, cottonseed meal, dicalcium phosphate and magnesium oxide has been effective in preventing grass tetany. Other mixes also are available, but the key is for each animal to get at least 1 to 2 ounces of magnesium daily.

Since magnesium oxide is unpalatable, producers may feed mixtures that increase palatability. Start lactating or advanced pregnancy cows (those most susceptible to grass tetany) on a feeding program 30 days before grass tetany is normally observed.

Once the problem appears, crash feeding programs usually are not adequate to prevent losses. Feeds that supply energy, such as corn or milo, as well as legume hay can help prevent borderline grass tetany cases.

FmHA said expecting surge of bankruptcies under law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration has instructed its field offices to read up on the new Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act and be prepared for an influx of bankruptcy applications by hard-pressed borrowers.

Congress created a new chapter in federal law allowing farmers holding as much as $1.5 million in debt to declare bankruptcy and seek protection from creditors under a streamlined procedure similar to those already used by small businesses.

The bill creating a new Chapter 12 of the bankruptcy code was signed by President Reagan on Oct. 27 and went into effect the day before Thanksgiving.

Although the new law applies to farm debt regardless of lender, the FmHA is one of the largest, with a total farm loan portfolio of about $30 billion. Of 274,145 active borrowers on Sept. 30, 79,320 or 28 percent were behind on their payments.

In the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, "acceleration" notices were sent to 7,593 borrowers demanding payment, a step toward foreclosure if some arrangement is not forthcoming.

The new bankruptcy law could turn into a shelter for some of those FmHA borrowers who otherwise would be faced with foreclosure.

Vance L. Clark, administrator of the FmHA, often called lender of last resort for farmers who can't get credit elsewhere, notified agency state directors in a memo dated Nov. 24 that Agriculture Department lawyers have gone over the new law with agency officials.

"We have been advised that the regional attorneys should be familiar with Chapter 12 and can advise field offices on issues which may arise concerning Chapter 12," Vance told the state officials.

Under the new law, a bona fide family farmer burdened with debt — owed to banks and others, as well as FmHA — can file an initial bankruptcy petition. The farmer must follow the petition with a plan within 90 days, and a confirmation hearing must be held within 45 days after the plan is submitted.

"While extensions of both of these dates are legally possible, if the courts adhere to these dates, FmHA must make sure that it timely receives and reviews the plan and provides OGC (the department's office of general counsel) with any objections to it," Clark said.

The memo included a six-page explanation of the new law. It said FmHA can expect many cases under the new Chapter 12 provisions that would have been filed under Chapter 11 in the past or, in some cases under Chapter 7. However, the agency said it had no idea how many cases might develop.

"We also have no way of knowing how many cases will be filed under Chapter 12 by farmers who otherwise would not have filed bankruptcy at all," the memo said.

State officials were also told FmHA does not expect any greater losses than if Chapter 12 had not been created.

The memo said a family farmer is defined as "an individual or a closely held corporation or partnership whose aggregate debts do not exceed $1.5 million, with 80 percent of the debt arising out of a farming operation."

Further, if the farmer is an individual, 50 percent of his gross income must come from farming. If the farmer is a corporation, more than 50 percent of the stock must be held by one family and the relatives of the members of that family. For corporations, 80 percent of the value of corporate assets must be related to the farming operation.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., was a chief sponsor of the bankruptcy bill, along with Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

Synar, noting the law going into effect this week, said the new Chapter 12 was needed because family farmers previously were required to reorganize under either Chapter 11 or Chapter 13.

Chapter 11 proved to be "needlessly complicated, unduly time-consuming, too expensive and, in most farm cases, simply unworkable," Synar said. Further, creditors have the ability to vote down Chapter 11 reorganization plans proposed by farmers.

Most family farmers are not eligible for Chapter 13 because they owe too much — the limit is $350,000 in secured debt and $100,000 in unsecured debt, or they have incorporated or formed partnerships. Chapter 13 is limited to individuals.

"Chapter 12 will make it easier for farmers to keep farming while paying off their debts," Synar said in a statement.

THANKSGIVING NAPKINS–One of the projects which Mrs. Patti Palmer's first graders at West did was a still life art project under the direction of local artist, Carol Bullard. In this project they discovered line, color, shape, texture and perception. The result was a napkin on which each drew a still life. The napkin is a keepsake which can be used on each child's Thanksgiving table to cover the roll basket. Family on move loses belongings in theft

HOUSTON (AP) — A family moving from Houston to St. Louis estimated they lost $65,000 worth of belongings when a U-Haul truck containing most of their valuables was stolen on Thanksgiving.

Dale and Annette Allen discovered the 24-foot-long truck and a 12-foot trailer were missing when they went to breakfast on Thursday.

"What a Thanksgiving," Mrs. Allen said. "We looked out the window and we said, 'My God, the truck has been stolen.'"

"All our personal goods, everything we owned (were stolen)," said Allen, 32, an engineer who was transferred to St. Louis.

Police later recovered the trailer. But the truck with most of the family's goods still was missing today, police Sgt. Jim Landers said.

The truck was last seen at a parking lot of a Houston motel where the couple and their children, Natalie, 5, and Patrick, 2, had spent the night in preparation for their Thursday travels.

The Allens said they postponed their trip to stay in Houston today to see if their possessions can be found.

"And, if not, we are going to St. Louis because I've got to move up there for my job," Allen said.

Aid program has been jeopardized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's policy of helping Nicaraguan rebels is in deep trouble on Capitol Hill following assertions that Iranian arms money helped bankroll the program, supporters and opponents of the Contra aid program agree.

Resumption of Contra aid was only narrowly approved last month before Congress adjourned for the year. Three events since then have led to predictions that killing the program will be one of first items on the agenda when Congress convenes in January.

The first occurred Oct. 5, when an airplane crashed in Nicaragua while carrying supplies to rebels trying to overthrow the Central American nation's leftist Sandinista government.

Two American crew members were killed and a third, Eugene Hasenfus, was captured in an incident that revealed the existence of a private, American-led network supplying arms and ammunition to the rebels, known as Contras.

Then, Democrats retained control of the House in the Nov. 4 election and captured the Senate, reversing six years of Republican Senate control and putting the Contra program in greater jeopardy.

But the last straw, members of both parties say, may have been Tuesday when the White House said profits from the clandestine sale of U.S. arms to Iran were funneled into numbered Swiss bank accounts and then routed to the Contra leaders. President Reagan at that point accepted the resignation of National Security Adviser John Poindexter and fired one of Poindexter's aides, Lt. Col. Oliver North, who assertedly oversaw the money transfers.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass, one of the leading opponents of Contra aid, said Wednesday he plans to try to kill the program "the moment we get back into session in January."

Another opponent, Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., said, "I suspect it will be a cold day in Washington before any more money goes to Nicaragua. Ollie North may have killed his Nicaragua program."

That's why I keep comin' back.

Sonic's been toppin' off their Coney's right for as long as I can remember.

First, Sonic uses only supreme franks, placed in a fresh bun...then drenched in hot, meaty chili. Next it's all smothered in cheese, and chopped onions if you want 'em.

The freshest ingredients...put together the way I like 'em. That's what makes a Sonic Coney the top dog. But don't take my word for it. Take one bite of a Sonic Coney and...you'll keep comin' back.

Dear Abby

Wife Is Ready to Drop Dead After Mummy Has Dropped In

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law just left after one of her surprise visits, and I am ready to explode. Mummy has no husband and can come and go as she pleases. She lives 20 miles away and we never know when she's coming or how long she'll stay. (Overnight? For the weekend? A week? Two?) It's maddening! Arthur and I work different shifts. We have two children and our free time is limited. I work from 11 p.m. until 7 a.m., so I need to sleep in the morning. Mummy always brings her dog, who barks all morning and ruins my sleep. I've asked her to please not bring him, but she brings him anyway.

Yesterday, Arthur and I spent our only day off together in two weeks entertaining her. We had made other plans, but had to cancel them when she showed up.

How can we tell Mummy to back off without offending her? Arthur is her only child. Lord have mercy on us! We've begged her to please call and let us know when she's coming, but she says, "I'd rather 'surprise' you — that way I'm sure you won't go to any extra trouble."

Abby, can you — or perhaps one of your readers who has had to handle this problem — help me? Arthur says, "Just don't pay any attention to her." But you know that can't be done.

HATES SURPRISES

DEAR HATES: There appears to be a communication gap here big enough to jump a horse through. Sit down with Mummy and stress the inconvenience and unfairness of her surprise visits. If your pleas are ignored, then your husband's solution seems the most practical. Don't change your plans; just go about your business as though she weren't there and spend whatever time you have available with her. The barking dog problem is one Arthur should handle — and firmly! Dogs can be trained to be quiet, you know. And if this one isn't, he should be banished from the premises.

DEAR ABBY: With the holidays just around the corner, many people are wondering what they can give an elderly parent or friend who "has everything." I'd like to share with you a gift I gave my mother.

Mother was a great cook, but her eyesight was failing, and she had a difficult time reading her recipes, so I printed all her favorites with a felt-tip pen in large block letters and put them into a three-ring binder under plastic-covered pages. We all enjoyed her delicious meals until she died at 89.

With a felt-tip pen, I made an alphabetized file of the addresses and phone numbers of all the friends and relatives she wished to correspond with. This, too, I wrote in extra-large letters, and easy-to-read numbers. I included the doctors she saw regularly, utilities, store, emergency numbers, etc.

Mother was a thoughtful, active woman and these small things I did helped her to remain independent and better able to take care of herself.

BETTY JO MINGS, GARDEN GROVE, CALIF.

DEAR BETTY JO: Thank you for an excellent suggestion. Helping an older person to remain independent is one of the greatest gifts one can give; it's also one that money can't buy.

DEAR ABBY: Here's a suggestion for the woman who felt frustrated and helpless because her mother's clothing kept vanishing in the nursing home:

Since your mother is either in bed or in a wheelchair and on view from one angle only, take a great big black indelible marker, and in large letters write her name across the seat of all her clothes — expensive ones and all. I guarantee that your mother's wardrobe will remain intact.

Was there really a coup attempt?

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Little evidence has emerged to prove the government's claim that dissident officers were poised to overthrow President Corazon Aquino last weekend.

The only sign of possible rebel movement was a report at the guard station of the parliament building that four sergeants were detained briefly Saturday for "acting suspiciously."

Military sources, including some who were key figures in last week's crisis, told The Associated Press that there was no indication that rebels attempted to seize positions in the capital as government officials claimed.

One senior military officer, speaking on condition of anonymity as did most of those interviewed, said the four were scouting the area in preparation for a rebel takeover.

But guard station records show the four were released later on orders of Gen. Ramon Montano, commander of the Manila district.

Otherwise, the only troop movements that can be documented independently were those initiated by Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, who ordered troops to take over radio and television stations late Saturday.

The young officers close to former Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile who were often cited as the masterminds of the alleged plot remained at their Defense Ministry posts and continue to deny that they planned a coup.

Enrile's successor, Rafael Ileto, has spoken vaguely of conducting an "informal investigation" into the plot. But he also said some of the officers believed involved might be transferred to key positions in units involved in fighting Communist or Moslem rebels.

Politicians identified with deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos claim the plot was concocted by Mrs. Aquino to show herself as decisive and to get rid of Enrile, who had been critical of her peace overtures to Communist rebels.

Well-informed military sources close to Ramos continue to support the following account of events:

At 8 a.m. Saturday, Gen. Montano received a tip from informers that dissidents in the pro-Enrile Reform The Armed Forces Movement planned to seize broadcast stations and the building of the defunct parliament, declare an interim president and call new elections.

Government sources claim the conspirators planned to escort pro-Marcos members of the parliament — which Mrs. Aquino dissolved after taking office Feb. 25 — to the assembly building and reconstitute the legislature as a rival administration.

Suspicions were heightened after the military discovered that 180 pro-Marcos figures from the ex-president's New Society Movement gathered Saturday night at the home of former assemblyman Antonio Carag.

The movement claims the gathering was purely social.

But according to the sources, the conspirators believed Mrs. Aquino might have resigned, easing the way to a change in power.

Paroled rapist charged in spree

HOUSTON (AP) — A convicted rapist paroled nine months ago was charged with sexual attacks on three women in southwest Houston, the same area where he terrorized women four years ago, officials said.

John Michael Enard, 32, of Houston was charged Thursday with aggravated sexual assault, aggravated kidnapping and sexual assault and remained today in Harris County Jail in lieu of $60,000 bond, jail spokeswoman Kathleen Scott said.

The man police sought wore a ski mask during the attacks. Enard was arrested Wednesday when police spotted him driving a car stolen in a recent sexual assault, police spokesman Dan Turner said.

Enard was paroled from the Texas Department of Corrections last February after serving about 27 months, Turner said.

Talk about a matched set of buzz words.

We're referring to the term "sex education," a field of study the Snyder school system is going to introduce to fifth grade, seventh grade and high school kiddoes next spring.

To the credit of local school folks, they didn't quibble too much about calling it just that in the news stories they asked us to write about it.

Of course, when it comes down to it's official description, it's called "curriculum for education for self-responsibility." That scrubs it up pretty good.

Having said this, we'll admit that calling it "sex education" somehow seems to go too much in the other direction.

That little two-worder makes it sound like they're not only teaching it, but soliciting recruits as well.

Such speculations are flighty talk about a serious subject, of course.

Our general discomfort with just the course description fairly well points to the problem associated with the whole dadgum deal.

Nobody is great guns to talk about any of it, so all this secret stuff takes on a great mystery, which often leads to experimentation, which can lead to SEX EDUCATION in capital letters.

We don't profess to know anything about any of it--a statement almost as vague in content as a "curriculum for education for self-responsibility." But, we'll note this example.

Remember back in high school or college when you hadn't read the class assignment the previous night? And to compensate, you bluffed your way through the next day.

You figured that by simply "looking" like you knew what was going on, you could somehow paralyze the teacher's ability to perceive your ignorance.

As any bonafide adult teacher can tell you, there's nothing easier to spot in a classroom than the kid who didn't read last night's assignment.

So the net result is about 1 million BTUs of energy expended annually for something which amounts to an elaborate charade.

As a grownup looking back at puberty and the teenage years, it occurs to us that a similar ruse was taking place between kids and adults in what was supposed to be our sex education.

Two things were occurring with the kids--a great curiosity about such goings on, tempered by an equal measure of guilt for even conjuring up the questions.

This guilt was relieved, of course, by the conviction that no adult who really counted had yet realized what was going on inside that little hyperactive, pea-sized brain.

Score another belief for the "t'ain't true" column.

Between kids and grownups, we had a kind of merry-go-round ride where misinformation was further distorted by ill-conceived speculation.

Like a whole bunch of life's learning process, the innuendo was rumored to be true.

In our business, we have to be a big believer in giving folks the chance to have the facts.

Regarding sex education, hearing that both sides--adults and kids--will have a chance to put their cards on the table gives us two measures of comfort.

One, that youngsters will have a chance for factual information rather than myth; and two, a sigh of relief that someone more informed than we will be providing it.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

The air rumbled with the sound of a 747 passing directly overhead as I looked out from my seventh floor hotel patio. I watched it land at DFW airport. "Isn't the sunrise pretty?" said my traveling companion.

"I didn't know cities had sunrises," I replied.

We were beginning the second day of an intense writer's workshop entitled, "Screenwriting, A-Z." I'd left a very baffled husband at home with two kids, who couldn't understand why I didn't use the money I'd scraped together for the workshop to get my dadblamed dryer fixed, among other things. Because, I'd explained patiently, the same techniques which made a good movie unforgettable can be used to make a novel memorable. Because I don't know anything at all about screenwriting and think it would be interesting to learn. And because you never know when stuff like this might come in handy.

As part of the workshop, we'd studied a real shooting script from the movie "Stand by Me," a story about four young boys who set off to find the body of another boy who'd disappeared three days before.

Our instructor, a story editor, developer, and producer from L.A., pointed out that the theme of the story was that, in order to grow to one's full potential, one must be true to one's own desires, and not live by what others think.

Broken dryers and all, I thought.

By breaktime the middle of the second day, I was getting claustrophobic and headed for an open doorway to get my first whiff of the outdoors, and proceeded to fill my lungs with...cigarette smoke! All the smokers had beelined for the doorway. Fresh air in the city.

My companion brought me an ice-filled glass and a little green bottle of Perrier mineral water. I'd never tasted it, and to my profound surprise, liked it immensely. I wondered what my friends back home would think if they could see me sitting in a room full of screenwriters, sipping Perrier, the Yuppie trademark. I decided they would cover their mouths with their hands and giggle. It was pretty funny.

Once I had a business appointment at the Galleria, an ultra-modern building downtown made of pink granite, with a roof that resembled a paper towel holder. It was an insane drive, up and over cloverleafs, clots of traffic racing along at breakneck pace, missed exits and one-way streets. "Watch out for Dallas traffic these days," my police-officer friend had once told me, "if you make a motorist mad, he's likely to pull a .357 magnum on you."

Deep night, the third day, and I was on my way home at last. Country dark cloaked my car, but I was not afraid. It was nice to be able to drive and think, for a change, instead of drive and react. The words of our instructor haunted me: "Any commitment will be difficult, frightening, and always leads to spiritual growth," he'd said. "If any of those three elements are not there, it is not a true commitment."

The manuscript for my novel, "Darkroom," lay on the seat beside me. I'd revised it, at my agent's request, and was ready to ship it back to her. And wait. My companion at the workshop had received her novel back from her agent after a year with a note that said, "No go." I'd been down that road before, myself.

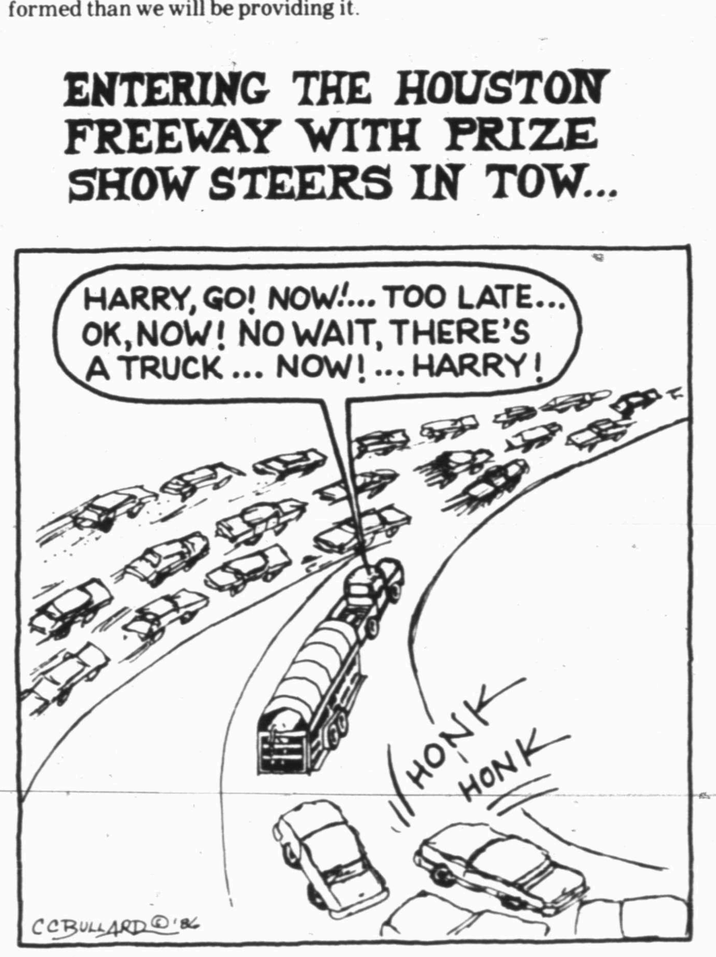

Had I wasted six years of my life, freelancing? Should I go back to teaching and enjoy the security, the continuity? No. Not now, anyway. For now, I was committed.

The crunch of caliche under the tires. A flash of red eyes in the headlight beam. Pulling up to the back door, I cut the engine and sat a moment, reveling in the first complete silence I'd encountered in three days. Opening the car door, I was greeted by the Official Welcoming Committee: cold, wet noses in my hand and tails thumping the car.

I wondered what my new acquaintances would think if they could see my humble little 50-year-old farmhouse. They would probably cover their mouths with their hands and giggle.

The backdoor opened, spilling warm yellow light. As my tall, strong husband took me in his arms, I thought about what it meant to be true to yourself.

I decided that, although I liked the taste of Perrier, I loved being home again.

Officials of Aileen Inc., one of the nation's leading manufacturers of women's and children's clothes, today — Nov. 24 — announced plans to locate a sewing plant in Snyder. Officials said the company planned to build a permanent plant, but would be in operation by Jan. 1 in temporary facilities.

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
November 23

The appeal process related to the capital murder conviction of Dorsie Lee Johnson Jr. will likely take from three to five years to complete, court officials reported Sunday.

It was reported Sunday that police here have now turned their investigation of a threat against District Attorney Ernie Armstrong, received during the capital murder trial of Dorsie Lee Johnson Jr., over to FBI scientists.

The Scurry County Cotton Producer Board has voted to assess the 1986 cotton crop--one which they feel will rival the worst cotton year ever harvested locally--at one-half cent per pound, it was reported Sunday.

MONDAY
November 24

Police arrested a 17-year-old suspect Monday morning in connection with an apparent Sunday evening burglary of the Skinny's store on East Highway.

Six members of the Scurry County Pilots Association presented the names of three individuals to fill upcoming vacancies on the airport board during the regular session of county commissioners Monday.

The pilots recommended the names of association members Roy Idom, Tommie Mills and Lynn McLarty.

The Western Texas College production of "Terra Nova" was chosen over plays offered by other West Texas colleges and universities and will now likely advance to a five-state play competition scheduled in Fort Worth Jan. 20-27, it was reported Monday.

County commissioners approved during regular session Monday an outside audit for 1985 of county holdings. Monte West with the firm Anderson-West, CPAs, presented the report.

TUESDAY
November 25

The Lone Wolf Electric Cooperative, which serves a portion of Scurry County as well as Mitchell, Nolan, Fisher, Borden and Howard Counties, has received a low-interest loan of $875,000 for extensive upgrading of the system, it was reported Tuesday.

Meeting before a group of some 100 parents and education staffers Tuesday, Snyder school board members voted to move forward with plans to implement a new sex education study unit for health classes at the fifth grade, seventh grade and high school level.

The decision included a stipulation that one part of the plan be "evaluated" further, a proposal to offer seventh grade instruction to mixed classes of boys and girls.

The 1986 Snyder Fireman of the Year award was presented to James Baldwin at Tuesday's 57th annual Fire Department Thanksgiving Banquet.

In addition, Charlotte McDowell was named Snyder Fire Department Sweetheart and service pins were presented to three longtime firemen.

THURSDAY
November 27

Plans are now underway to build Phase II of the Golden Terrace Village project, Snyder's first housing area designed primarily for senior citizens, it was reported Thursday.

If ultimately approved, Phase II would add from 16 to 18 additional housing units available to individuals over 60 years of age.

Applications for governmental commodities--specifically for households where the primary wage earner is under the age of 65--increased here again in November, it was reported Thursday.

Local individuals hit hard by the current economic slump now have an additional resource for food.

Earlier this month, participating churches in the Snyder Ministerial Alliance opened a food bank to assist financially strained families, it was reported Thursday.

With the assistance of Snyder Kiwanis Club members, its related Goodfellows organization, senior center staffers and local churches, Snyder's McDonald's fed more than 400 needy individuals here Thanksgiving morning.

As a goodwill gesture, the full line of McDonald's breakfast food items was served to 423 locals identified through Snyder churches and the Senior Citizens Center.

FRIDAY
November 28

Two women, one from Plano and the other from Sweetwater, were being held in the Scurry County Jail Friday in connection with the Thanksgiving Day robbery of the Circle In Grocery west of Snyder.

Verna Mae Parker, 43, of Plano, and Donna Lillian Finan, 30, of Sweetwater, were arrested in Borden County by Scurry County sheriff's deputies less than 15 minutes after the incident was reported.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

Recently, there has been an enormous amount of publicity concerning President Reagan's arms deal with Iran. The President claims that Iran purchased these arms and that they consisted mostly of spare parts that would easily fit into one cargo plane. Yet, it has been revealed that these so-called "spare parts" cost well over $12 million! That seems like an awful lot of money for spare parts.

The people of America elected Ronald Reagan by popular vote to be their President in 1980 and again in 1984. Were they duped into believing that this 70 some odd year old man was capable of running this country honestly and efficiently? I think so.

Mr. Reagan is an actor and the office of the President is, to him, the ultimate Academy Award. He lives in a fantasy world where every script has a happy ending and everyone lives happily ever after. Surprise! This is the real world and everyone is not living happily ever after.

He has had the unmitigated gall on several occasions to compare his administration to that of John F. Kennedy when, in fact, it resembles more the administration of Richard Nixon. An administration based on deceit and half-truths.

President Reagan's term in office has been full of contradictions and unkept promises. He promised to balance the budget and reduce the deficit but the budget has soared and the deficit is out of sight. He promised to lower unemployment but it has been at an all time high and every time something has gone wrong, it has been Jimmy Carter's fault.

Wake up, America! This man is using you! He broke the law when he shipped arms to Iran and now he's asking us to believe

They're off again: Congress likes to travel during recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — From NATO meetings in Turkey to trade discussions half a world away in the Far East, members of Congress are in the air and on the road again, accompanied by aides, military escorts and often their spouses.

The biggest single trip so far during the legislative recess found 21 representatives and seven senators in Istanbul in mid-November for the annual meeting of the NATO Assembly, a conclave of lawmakers from North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations.

The relatively huge contingent — 77 or more people using at least three military aircraft — included retiring Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., the outgoing Assembly president. He needed a special Senate vote to waive a Senate rule against post-election trips overseas by lame duck members.

On the House side, the fact that 21 members went to the meeting may have violated one of the few laws that directly authorize specific foreign travel by U.S. lawmakers.

The U.S. Code states that the NATO Assembly delegation is "not to exceed 24 members of Congress," with half of them appointed by the speaker of the House and half of them designated by the president of the Senate.

"I'm not familiar with it," Chris Matthews, spokesman for House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said when asked about law restricting the size of the delegation.

Dick Nelius, a staff member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which coordinated the trip, offered this explanation of the House contingent: "Twelve were delegates. The others were alternates." He added: "It's not a junket. It's a working trip."

The committee said these House members went to the meeting: Dante Fascell, D-Fla., Jack Brooks, D-Texas; Charles Rose, D-N.C.; Frank Annunzio, D-Ill.; Robert Garcia, D-N.Y.; Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y.; Frank Horton, R-N.Y.; Bill Richardson, D-N.M.; Cardiss Collins, D-Ill.; Lawrence Smith, D-Fla.; Howard Berman, D-Calif.; Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio; Lee Hamilton, D-Ind.; Steny Hoyer, D-Md.; Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y.; Doug Bereuter, R-Neb.; Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y.; Thomas Petri, R-Wis.; Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo.; Bart Gordon, D-Tenn.; and Jim Courter, R-N.J.

On the way to Istanbul, the Senate group stopped in Rome, where they had a 20-minute audience with Pope John Paul II, according to Roth spokeswoman Verna Wilkins.

North negotiated with radical Iranian

LONDON (AP) — A newspaper Friday quoted former Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr as saying American envoys met in Iran this year with a leader of the militants who held 52 Americans hostage in Tehran.

Bani-Sadr also was quoted as saying the envoys — former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane and Lt. Col. Oliver North of the National Security Council — brought 23 tons of armaments with them on a visit to Iran in September.

The two Americans also visited in May, the Independent newspaper quoted Bani-Sadr as saying.

The Reagan administration has acknowledged making diplomatic overtures to Iran and sending weapons as a gesture of good faith, but has maintained it was dealing with moderate elements in the Iranian leadership.

The secret dealings have caused a furor in Washington, especially following the revelation Tuesday by U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese that $10 million to $30 million from the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran was diverted to the Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's government.

President Reagan fired North on Tuesday for allegedly carrying out the diversion of funds, and said North's superior, national security adviser John Poindexter, had resigned.

The Independent quoted Bani-Sadr as saying McFarlane and North met with Iranian officials in Zurich, Switzerland.

Your Birthday

Nov. 30, 1986

The coming year will be an exciting one for you because you will be more enterprising and fearless. Favorable developments are in the offing, provided your boldness doesn't exceed your common sense.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Tolerance could be something that you reserve for outsiders today. If a family member displeases you, you might come down on him or her pretty hard. Major changes are ahead for Sagittarius in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's best today to avoid the company of a person with whom you've had cross words recently. Both of you require a bit more time to cool down properly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you are planning to buy an expensive piece of merchandise today, avoid off-brands. Stick to labels that have pleased you in the past.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't let your pride get in the way when you deal with others today. An overblown ego could cause you to behave in ways pals will find unattractive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Thoughtless comments on your part could ignite sparks in one who has a low combustion point. Be careful what you say today and how you say it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone with whom you are friendly may be too curious today about something you consider personal. Don't feel impelled to reveal secrets.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In order to placate an assertive companion today, you might yield to his pressure and act against your better judgment. Don't let him bully you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A co-worker could be sensitive about criticism of his method of doing things today. If you show disrespect for his intelligence, you might invite a squabble.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not misinterpret a friend's independent behavior as disloyalty today. You want to be your own person, and so does he or she.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you are uncooperative with family members today, it could start a chain reaction of bickering in your household. Consideration can stop this before it starts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In most instances, you're a person who looks for the good in others, but today you may see only their faults. Don't voice your observations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you go shopping today with too long a list and too little time, in your haste to get things done, you may end up buying a whole bunch of things you'll later wish you hadn't.

Dec. 1, 1986

Associations that had little of constructive value to offer you will slip from the scene in the year ahead. They will be replaced by relationships that give more than they take.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will not gain the full respect of persons with whom you'll be involved today if you try to camouflage your motives. Be frank and forthright. Looking for a great Christmas stocking stuffer? Astro-Graphs for the year ahead are perfect for the entire family. Mail $1 each to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state zodiac signs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Guard against tendencies today to see bad situations as you would like them to be instead of as they actually are. You can deal with reality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Self-discipline will be required at this time to live within your means. Make out a budget today and determine here and now to stick to it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're now in a good achievement cycle, but maximum effort will be required to attain your objectives. If you coast, you'll fall short.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your ability to cope successfully with sticky situations today will be determined by your attitude. Don't let despair cloud out your hopes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Before involving yourself today with new associates in a joint venture, check them out to be certain they are everything they represent themselves to be.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Weigh and analyze all of your alternatives carefully before making important career decisions today. Guesses unsupported by facts could cause you problems.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Much depends on the way you respond to the requests others make of you today. Being uncooperative will set the mode for their future treatment of you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you make a poor showing in a social situation today, someone who likes to put others down could use your actions as grist for the gossip mill.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you are a person who sees things through to completion, but today instead of tying up all the loose ends, you might merely trim the threads a bit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your sales efforts today could later come back to haunt you if you try to sell others ideas you're not completely sold on yourself. To thine own self be true.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) New enterprises that require a financial outlay on your behalf should be started cautiously today. Don't open your purse impulsively.

HARD OR SOFT LENSES?

This is a question that is commonly asked by those interested in contact lens wear. The answer is not always a simple one. In fact, recent technological advancements have produced lens materials that are hard, yet allow as much or more oxygen to pass through them than some soft lenses. Your eyes need oxygen to stay healthy and feel comfortable. Most people, even those with astigmatism, can be successfully fitted with gas permeable hard lenses. Make your appointment now to see if you can benefit from these new materials.

THERMATOGENESIS

"If you skip breakfast, eat a light lunch and have your big meal in the evening, thinking it controls your weight, you should be doing the opposite," says Sharon Long, R.D., President/Cal. Dietetic Assoc. Thermatogenesis (the rate at which calories are burned) actually speeds up after a hearty meal, which should occur with an active daytime ahead, rather than just before bedtime.

LAFF-A-DAY

"When are you going to learn to budget your time, Nora? You're supposed to be fixing dinner."

DENNIS THE MENACE

"MR. WILSON SAYS I'M A HOUSEHOLD WORD, BUT MRS. WILSON WON'T LET HIM USE IT."

Ladonia, Tex. man has been an auctioneer for 22 years

LADONIA, Texas (AP) — H.A. Shelby shook his head and admitted he should know better.

After all, hasn't he worked as an auctioneer for 22 years?

And hasn't he auctioned off everything from pre-owned pantyhose to Lear jets to caskets and body shrouds?

"But I can go to another auctioneer's sale and get stuck just as bad as anybody," Shelby admitted.

"If there's something I want, price doesn't make any difference. After I get home, I see that I paid too much. But, by then, it's bought."

Excitement and competition lure people to auctions as much as the hope of a bargain.

Shelby knows that. And he doesn't discourage a little healthy bidding between buyers.

"Say I'm at an auction and I don't like John Henry, and John Henry is bidding on the same tractor I want.

"I'll bid more for it then, just to keep him from getting it."

Shelby, 55, traveled to a special school in Iowa years ago to learn the fine art of auctioneering.

He took his first lesson by correspondence, falling asleep at night to recordings of auctioneers and reciting their chants at work the next day.

He was transportation supervisor for a bakery in Paris and, when one of his drivers didn't show, Shelby would make the run to Sherman or Greenville or DeQueen, Ark.

"As I drove, I'd practice. I'd sell every armadillo, every rabbit that ran across the highway.

"I got so good that I could drive down the road, fast talking, and the cows would jump the fence, worrying that they must be in a sale barn."

Shelby has been in the business so long, that nothing surprises him.

"You run into everything. I'm not kiddin' you.

"I've had husbands and wives split up in the crowd and not know they're bidding against each other."

One problem Shelby never had is a man waving at a friend and accidentally buying, say, a $4,000 bull.

"Well, I know when they're bidding and when they're just waving. And I'll call their attention to it, too. I'll say, 'Now, if you keep waving, you're fixing to buy something.'

Class teaches some foreign speakers some U.S. idioms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Let's say someone suggests you do lunch before going to the Hill to check out that mud-slinging filibuster on the House floor.

To most people in the Washington establishment, that sounds like a plausible schedule for an afternoon on Capitol Hill.

But to others, specifically those not well-versed in idiomatic English, the proposal might elicit only a blank stare.

These are the people who are the target of the Smithsonian Institution's "American English" course.

Students in the class include German business executives, French interpreters, Sri Lankan Embassy employees, Bolivian housewives and Thai diplomats.

All are fluent in English, except when it comes to the endless vocabulary of idiomatic expressions: terms that are an integral part of everyday American life but which leave a foreigner befuddled if he or she attempts a literal translation.

For instance, what's a hung jury? Or a lame duck president? Or why does someone say "Sorry, Charlie" when talking to a person named Mary? What's a political landslide, and how does someone "put it on his tab?"

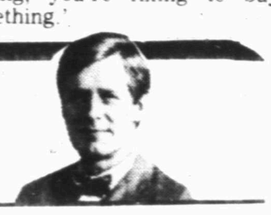

"It's things we take for granted but that a person who is foreign wouldn't know," said Kathleen Diamond, owner of Language Learning Enterprises, a private company that put together the American English course for the Smithsonian's Resident Associate Program.

"They'll say, 'Let's do lunch,' and the diplomat isn't sure what his response is supposed to be."

In 1784, Congress ratified a treaty by which Britain recognized the independence of the United States.

What to check during a checkup

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Learn the facts about osteoarthritis. Send for Dr. Gott's new Health Report on the subject. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to ask for the Health Report titled, UNDERSTANDING OSTEOARTHRITIS.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband and I are in our 70s and are in pretty good shape. How often should we have complete physical checkups, and just what examinations should these checkups include?

DEAR READER: I believe that most people in their 70s should have annual medical examinations. Ideally, these should be performed by a family physician who is familiar with the patients. The checkups should include a history, physical examination and stool blood analysis. Other tests — such as blood counts, blood chemical determinations, cardiograms, X-ray evaluations, Pap tests and proctoscopic exams — are best left to the discretion of the examiner who can individualize depending on the patients' needs and states of health.

My comments are meant to give general guidelines. Your own doctor is the best judge of how often and how extensive your checkups need to be.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife had a sinus infection that left her with a ringing in her ears and sensitive upper right molars. Neither our dentist nor an ear, nose and throat specialist could find anything wrong. Now the right side of her jaw, under her right eye, is painful. Sometimes she can hardly open her mouth. What might her problem be?

DEAR READER: Your wife could have a common condition called temporomandibular joint dysfunction. This ailment is not related to sinus infection, but can imitate it. TMJ dysfunction is due to an inflammation of the jaw joint on one or both sides of the cheek, next to the ears. It can cause headache and facial pain. There are many treatments for it, including biteplates or surgery, depending on the severity of the affliction. If your wife's sinuses are no longer infected, have her ask her dentist for a referral to a specialist who diagnoses and treats TMJ dysfunction.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Recently my husband was told that he has polycythemia rubra. His body makes too much blood. Is there any medication to control this disease?

DEAR READER: Polycythemia can be a primary disease or it can be secondary to other conditions, such as emphysema.

The primary type is treatable with drugs that depress the blood forming tissue within the body's bones. Polycythemia causes the blood to be too thick. Therefore, phlebotomy (withdrawing blood) sometimes helps reduce viscosity until the medicine has had time to work.

The secondary type is more tricky to treat until the underlying disease is controlled. In the case of emphysema, for example, the doctor must try to increase the amount of oxygen the patient inhales. This can be done by using bronchodilators (to relieve airway obstruction), stopping smoking, avoiding air pollution, learning special breathing exercises, combating infection and administering small amounts of oxygen from a machine or cylinder.

Both primary and secondary forms of polycythemia are treatable.

There's a car for every M.D.

With several types of automobiles available, the alert physician is constantly challenged by the many claims made by manufacturers. As a service to the public, I herewith summarize the features of nine vehicles that most interest the medical community.

THE MEDICAR. This prototype is favored by doctors who treat the elderly. Unfortunately, the car's basic design was established 20 years ago and, although new models have been refined, they have not been improved. The Medicar pulls to the left and does not handle well. The original version had too spongy a ride, so designers modified the suspension to make it bumpier and harder — much harder. Its manufacture is subsidized by the government. Accidents are common because there are no safety features. The Medicar is a financial bottomless pit no matter how much money you spend to fix it, the vehicle remains inefficient to operate. It's no fun to drive. Most doctors with a Medicar wish they could trade it in, but there is no resale market. The car is a lemon. At 65, the thing rattles and begins to come apart. Doctors are becoming less convinced that this form of transportation will take them where they want to go and in one piece.

THE DODGE RESPONSIBILITY. This flashy coupe de ville shows great promise. It enables doctors to drive away from their problems. The auto is enjoying great popularity among moonlighting medical residents who staff the emergency rooms of private, for-profit hospitals. When faced with a sick Medicaid patient with no insurance, whom they can't transfer to a state-run city hospital, the healers hop into their new Dodge Responsibilities and escape. The Dodge Responsibility is equally in demand among mid-life physicians who are eager to discover ways to reduce their unwanted workloads. The manufacturer has capitalized on this market with an ad campaign that asks: "Looking for a new dodge? Have we got one for you!"

THE CHIRO MANIPULATOR. This modern automobile is not available to M.D.s, many of whom are desperate to have one. It is equipped with slipped-disc brakes. Although its performance claims have not been verified in road tests, the Manipulator is coming on strong. Its owners claim that they can fix anything. The auto can be fully depreciated in about three weeks. Given the quality of the competition, the Manipulator is sure to be a hit.

THE SOB TURBO. This expensive vehicle is the answer to the mid-career crisis suffered by doctors. Most owners have tried the Medicar, given it up as too unreliable and invested heavily in a Sob. The company has made a fortune using the clever jingle: "If you're choking on a medical career, try a Sob instead."

THE GLUTMOBILE. This unusual car is sponsored by the AMA, an automobile trade union that declares: Since there is a lack of cars in the United States, the answer to the problem is to make fewer cars. The Glutmobile is not yet for sale, but each year its sponsors threaten to bring out a model in the near future. If it is ever marketed, the Glutmobile will be available in very limited quantities, according to the philosophy that less is better. Therefore, the Glutmobile will become more valuable with time, as fewer people have cars. It will be a great investment, if you believe the manufacturer.

THE FMG350i. Clever promoters outside the United States are trying to flood the market with this unpredictable little vehicle that is made abroad and named after Foreign Medical Graduates, the throngs of American youths who are not permitted to obtain standard auto licenses. The "350" refers to its price of $350,000 and the "i" to the fact that prospective owners have to be independent. Financial terms are favorable: the FMG350i buyer has at least 20 years to pay back the loan. Once an owner has an FMG, he or she is set for life. The vehicle will probably never wear out.

THE ODDLY 5000. This car designed and manufactured for psychiatrists. No one knows how to get in it or operate it, but it looks great — if a little strange — sitting in the driveway year after year. The Oddly is like no other car, thank heaven.

THE AMERICAN AMBULANCE CHASER. This popular car, affectionately known as "The Attorney," had its vogue several years ago. However, there is still some interest in this vehicle because it corners well and tailgates any moving object with a rotating emergency light. In its heyday, it won the coveted International Malpractice Award for being such a sturdy machine. Now it has largely been replaced by a pickup truck, the ABA Deep Pocket.

THE 4-WHEEL-DRIVE - WISECRACK. This successful model is almost exclusively sold to medical columnists, doctor-authors and physicians who are so insecure that they make a habit of criticizing other doctors. Detractors claim that it comes with a yellow racing stripe up the trunk; others insist that it should be labeled "self-serve," like some gasoline pumps. Nonetheless, the Wisecrack can get its owner out of innumerable tight spots. The Wisecrack protects the driver from mudslinging; its ability to spin out makes it a natural for medical skeptics. Every doctor who wonders what is happening to the medical profession ought to have a Wisecrack or two.
