Area and local youths garner awards in county livestock show

Members of Gray County 4-H and Future Farmers of America (FFA) clubs gathered at 9 a.m. Saturday in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion for weighing of their swine, lambs, and steers for the Gray County Junior Livestock Show, sponsored by the Pampa Noon Lions Club.

The Junior Livestock show precedes the Top 'O Texas Stock Show which begins today with the FFA Lamb Judging.

A Middle Weight Cross shown by Bobbie Skaggs of the Pampa FFA club garnered Grand Champion in the swine division of the junior livestock show. Randy Skaggs of the Pampa FFA won the Reserve Champion spot with his Heavy Weight Duroc.

Sheila Romines of the Gray County 4-H club won the showmanship award in the swine division.

Randy Skaggs also garnered Breed Champion with the Duroc, while Greg Langen of the Pampa FFA club took the Reserve Breed championship.

In the Heavy Weight Other Pure Breed division, Shawn White of the Pampa FFA won Breed Champion. Robin Rohde of the Gray County 4-H club was awarded Reserve Champion.

Breed Champion in the Middle Weight Cross division was awarded to Bobbie Skaggs. Reserve Champion went to Roy Lot of the Pampa 4-H club.

Grand Champion Lamb was given to Greg Gabel of the McLean FFA. Reserve Champion was awarded to Jackie Caddel of the Pampa FFA.

The Lamb Showmanship award was given to Laura Horue of the Gray County 4-H club.

Gabel also won the Breed Champion in the Heavy Weight Suffolk division. Reserve Breed went to Bobbie Skaggs.

In the Hampshire Lamb division, Jack Caddel won the Breed championship. Reserve Breed was awarded to Kerry Wright of the Pampa FFA.

Weather

Skies will be partly cloudy early today, clearing to mostly fair tonight and Monday. Temperatures will be cooler, with the high today expected to be near 60 degrees and the tonight's low in the 30s. Monday's high will be mid 60s. Winds will be northerly at 15 to 20 miles per hour. Wind advisories are in effect for area lakes.

Randy White slated for choir fund-raiser

Randy White, all-pro defensive tackle for the Dallas Cowboys, will be keynote speaker for the Pampa High School Choir Boosters fund-raising at 8 p.m. in M. K. Brown Auditorium, March 31.

White was selected, along with tackle Harvey Martin, as most valuable player in the Super Bowl XII. His speech will include anecdotes about the Dallas Cowboys, and his experiences in football. A question-and-answer period will be conducted at the end of his talk.

In addition to White's presentation, participants in the fund-raiser will have the opportunity to hear the Pampa High School choir perform under the direction of Billy Talley, PHS choir director.

Proceeds from the event will be used to assist in financing the Concert Choir's participation in the AstroWorld Choral Festival in Houston this April.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Fraser, in charge of financial activities for the booster club, said tickets may be purchased from any member of the booster club, from choir members, at Fraser Insurance, 114 W. Kingsmill or from Bobby Combs at the Pampa News.

Bus crash kills three track team members

FORT STOCKTON, Texas (AP) — Three teen-age girls were killed and 12 people were injured when a bus carrying a high school track team ran off the road and overturned early Saturday, authorities said.

The bus driver apparently lost control of the vehicle when she tried to exchange seats with a second driver, said Texas Department of Public Safety trooper David Wells.

Killed were Gloria Rivera, 18, Sonya Carrillo, 15, and Julie Gomez, 15, all of Van Horn.

Two of the injured were reported in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa — Elva Lara and Sally Sanchez, both 15.

The bus struck a piece of heavy construction equipment, which ripped into the back of the bus where the three girls apparently were sitting, Wells said.

The accident occurred about 7 a.m., 20 miles west of this West Texas town on a section of Interstate 10 that has only two lanes open because of construction.

The girls' track team from Van Horn High School was traveling to Iraan for a track meet.

The other 10 were reported in good condition with cuts and abrasions at Pecos County Memorial Hospital in Fort Stockton.

They were Cindy Enriques, 17, Fatina Vasquez, 17, Nata Rivera, 15, Jeannean Taylor, 15, Pam Lucas, 15, Jackie Espudo, 16, Vickie Vidana, 15, and Sara Beth Beasley, 15.

Several of the students were later released.

Also in good condition were coach Shirley Chandler, 22, and driver Victor Munoz, 24. Wells said Ms. Chandler was driving at the time of the accident.

DPS Sgt. Leon Roberts said no charges are likely in the accident. However, he said he'll confer with the Pecos County District Attorney's office Monday, before completing his investigation.

Fine Wool Lambs Breed Champion was given to Stacie Smith of the Gray County 4-H club. Reserve Breed winner was Dane Eakin of the Pampa FFA.

In the Fine Wool Cross breed division, Amy Brainard of the Pampa FFA won Breed Champion. Reserve Breed Champion was awarded to Danette McFall, also of the Pampa FFA club.

In the Steer Judging, Randy Skaggs won the Grand Champion and Showmanship award with his light weight steer. Reserve Championship honors went to Robin Rohde of the McLean FFA club.

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce has tallied entries for the Top 'O Texas Livestock Show at 322 barrows, 84 sters and 137 lambs entered by 4-H and FFA members from seven Panhandle counties.

At 6 p.m. today, judging of the Lamb division begins. Monday, at 9:30 a.m., Steer Judging will take place. Swine Judging begins immediately following the steer judging event.

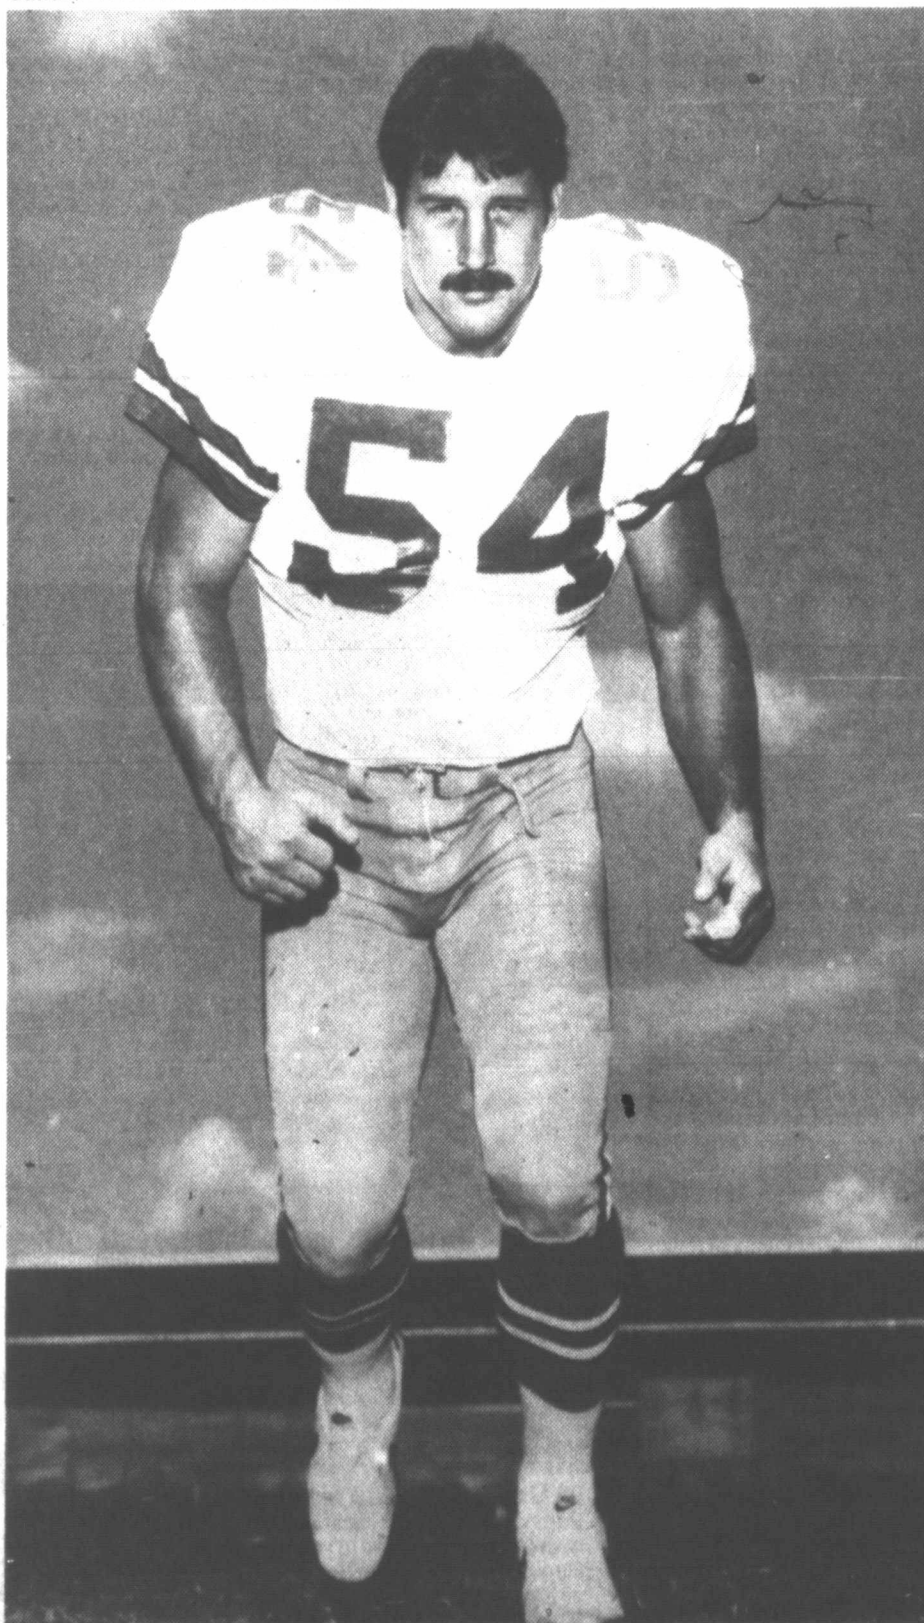

The FFA Judging Contest will begin at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the sales arena of the Clyde Carruth Pavilion. At 1 p.m., the Junior Hereford Heifer Show is scheduled. The FFA Livestock Judging Contest Banquet will be held at 4:30 p.m. in the First United Methodist Church here. Awards, including the Frank M. Carter agricultural scholarship, will be presented to the FFA winners.

At 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, the Annual Hereford Breeders Banquet is scheduled in M. K. Brown Auditorium. Registered Hereford Judging Contest winners will be honored at the banquet.

Gray County 4-H leaders and members will meet at Clyde Carruth Pavilion at 7 a.m. Wednesday for the Bidders Breakfast, with the Junior Livestock following. At 2 p.m., the Registered Hereford Sale begins. Colonel Walter Britter of Bryan will be auctioneer for the annual event.

Hijackers surrender, release 100 passengers

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Three Pakistani hijackers surrendered Saturday after 13 days and released more than 100 hostages when a plane of freed Pakistani prisoners arrived here after an odyssey around the Mediterranean. The hostages, freed from history's second-longest case of air piracy, were taken to a nearby military hospital.

The prisoners came to Syria shortly before midnight local time after Libya, reneging on an earlier agreement to give them asylum, announced it would not accept them when their aircraft was 30 minutes away from the Libyan capital of Tripoli.

The aircraft refueled in Athens before the trip to Damascus, where the Syrian government announced it would "keep" both the hijackers and prisoners. It was not clear if they had been granted asylum.

Moments after the jet carrying the freed prisoners landed on an airport runway, the gunmen emerged at the door of their commandeered Pakistan International Airlines Boeing 720. They waved their firearms — pistols, a submachine gun and a grenade — in the air and flashed a V for victory sign before being hustled into Syrian military vehicles and whisked away.

Fifteen minutes later, the hostages, including some half-dozen Americans and Europeans, began filing off the plane, laughing and sobbing as they descended stairs to the tarmac.

Many of the hostages, who each received a bouquet of flowers from waiting Pakistani officials as they stepped off the plane, were unshaven but appeared in good shape, walking down the steps unaided.

Only two Pakistani captives — an elderly man and woman — had to be assisted off the aircraft.

"It was 300 hours of looking down a machinegun (barrel)," said Jeffrey Balkind, a hostage who identified himself as a World Bank official. His nationality was not immediately known.

The last one to leave the plane was the Pakistani pilot, who shouted at reporters, "God has been great to us," before he boarded the airport bus. Hordes of Syrian security forces prevented the freed hostages from talking with reporters.

Shortly after the crisis ended, a State Department official in Washington said that one of the three men identified as American citizens earlier in the crisis apparently is not who he claims to be and "may be traveling on a false passport."

The State Department last week identified the three as Frederick Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa, Craig Claymore of California, hometown unknown, and Lawrence Mangum of New York City.

Department spokesman David Passage said that "the real Lawrence Clifton Mangum is alive and well and living in Brooklyn." Of the freed hostage, Passage said, "We don't know who he is." He said the State Department does not even know his citizenship.

What were thought to be three Americans were seen leaving the plane, along with several Europeans. But Syrian security officials refused to let reporters talk with them or any other former captives.

Congress postpones Salvadoran mission, as fighting increases

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Anti-junta guerrillas stepped up their attacks on government troops and installations in the capital Saturday, a day after a U.S. congressional fact-finding mission postponed its visit from Washington for "security reasons."

Meanwhile, a Salvadoran probe into the murders of four American woman missionaries has turned up "new evidence" which was given to the FBI in Washington. Junta President Jose Napoleon Duarte said.

Authorities said there were casualties in the Saturday fighting but they gave no figures. Fighting was also reported in the countryside and 10 people were reported killed Friday and Saturday in at least three other cities. Three soldiers, a woman and a judge were killed Friday when guerrillas attacked a bus in San Miguel.

The Reagan administration is sending the Salvadoran junta $20 million in additional military aid and seeks congressional approval for another $5 million. Congressional sources also said the administration proposes $63 million in economic assistance.

The arms aid is in response to allegations by the junta and the Reagan administration that surrogates of the Soviet Union are shipping arms to the leftists.

The United States also is sending more military advisers here to train security forces in anti-insurgency techniques and how to use the equipment the aid package will provide. Administration officials have told congressmen that no more than 54 advisers are planned.

Among the contingent of military advisers now in El Salvador are members of the Special Forces.

Lifeboats found where ship sank

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Searchers have found two empty lifeboats in the frigid Bering Sea near where a Japanese fishing boat sank in a storm with 26 crewmen aboard, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

A Navy plane and 20 Japanese fishing boats were looking again today, but Coast Guard spokesman William Boatman said, "There's not much hope for survivors."

He said "the best thing to hope for is to find debris."

With water temperature in the mid-30s, the life expectancy of someone in a lifejacket is about 90 minutes, officials said.

The 105-foot Daito Maru 55 was traveling with 10 other Japanese vessels fishing for cod when it suddenly went down early Friday, the Maritime Safety Agency of Japan reported.

The boat sank about 380 miles northwest of Adak Island, which is part of Alaska's Aleutian Islands, as the crew of another boat watched, unable to help because of high waves and strong winds, officials said.

Tax cuts to benefit wealthy over poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposed tax cut would provide more inflation protection to wealthy Americans than to middle-income and poor families.

The Reagan plan assumes that Americans will receive pay increases totaling 35 percent through 1984 to offset inflation. But those raises also will boost taxpayers into higher income brackets — and people at upper-income levels, although they would pay more taxes in dollar terms, would pay a smaller percentage of their additional earnings in taxes than those at lower levels.

The administration projects the $75,000-a-year family of four would pay 17 percent more in federal income taxes in 1984 than in 1980, up from $18,282 to $21,394, while the $15,000 family would pay 18.7 percent more, up from $1,233 to $1,464.

The biggest tax increase would fall on the "middle-income brackets" — those that Reagan's advisers say would benefit most. The $40,000 family of four would pay 23.5 percent more tax in 1984 than in 1980, up from $6,312 to $7,795.

The Associated Press calculations, based on Treasury Department figures, reinforce what Reagan and his backers have been saying for months — that any tax cut Congress might pass would be too small to offset the tax increases caused by inflation.

Those increases occur when a pay raise designed to offset increased living costs nudges a worker into a higher tax bracket, and gives the government a bigger share of each additional dollar earned. The worker must look for a still-bigger raise to make up the difference.

The Reagan bill would cut personal tax rates by an average of 5 percent this year, 10 percent in 1982, 10 percent in 1983 and 5 percent in 1984. That would result in an average reduction in tax liabilities of 27.3 percent.

Because couples and individuals with incomes above $40,000 pay 45 percent of federal taxes, it is no surprise that they would get more than 42 percent of the tax cut. In fact, Reagan has said several times that middle- and upper-income Americans must be given tax relief so they can invest the additional money in ways that will benefit the economy.

But analysis of the proposed tax rates indicates the bill would go a step further and actually shift part of the tax burden from the wealthy to those with less income.

The figures are based on Reagan's projection that prices will rise by 35 percent by 1984. To help offset that, the calculations assume each taxpayer will get a 35 percent pay raise over the same period.

Under those assumptions, the four-member family that earned $15,000 in 1980 would make $20,250 in 1984. But the pay raise also would force the family into a higher tax bracket. Thus, because of inflation — and despite the tax cut — that family would pay 18.7 percent more money in federal income taxes in 1984, when their tax rate was 18 percent, than in 1980, when it was 15 percent.

A $40,000 income in 1980, taxed at a 37 percent rate, would be equivalent to $54,000 in 1984, taxed at a 32 percent — but the actual tax burden would increase by 23.5 percent.

The family of four that earned $75,000 in 1980, taxed at 49 percent, would make $101,250 in 1984, taxed at 40 percent, but its tax burden would rise by only 17 percent.

The Treasury Department figures assume that each family involved will reduce gross income by deductions amounting to 23 percent of income.

National weather

Winter storm warnings were in effect Saturday over parts of New Mexico and the southern mountains of Colorado as gale warnings were posted along the northern Atlantic Coast.

Snow flurries were scattered over the lower Great Lakes and northern Maine by early afternoon. Rainshowers were scattered across the southern Plains, from Oklahoma to New Mexico.

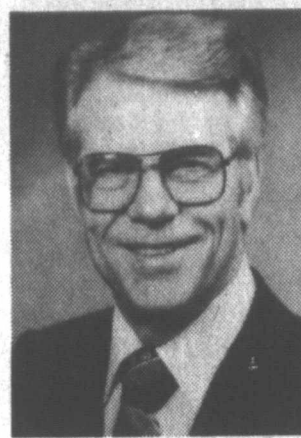

Snow showers were forecast for Sunday from the northern Great Lakes to New England, changing to scattered rain from the Ohio Valley south to the Gulf Coast.

Rain was expected along the northern Pacific Coast, with scattered rain south to central California.

Temperatures near 30 degrees were expected over northern New England. Afternoon highs near 70 were expected to extend from central Arizona and southern New Mexico to the Georgia coast, with near 80 degree temperatures over southern Texas and the inland southwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 p.m. EST ranged from a low of 15 degrees in Montpelier, Vt., to a high of 78 in Miami.

Wayland president will speak at annual Boy Scout banquet

DR. ROY C. MCCLUNG

Dr. Roy C. McClung, the president of the Wayland Baptist University Foundation, will be the keynote speaker for the Adobe Walls Council annual banquet scheduled for 7 p.m., April 4, at Pampa Middle School.

Dr. McClung, also the president of the South Plains Boy Scout Council in Lubbock, will be speaking to the scouts of the Adobe Walls Council gathered to honor volunteers who have given outstanding service to youth.

Several local citizens will receive the Silver Beaver Award, the highest honor a Scout Council can bestow upon its leaders.

In addition, those boys who have earned the Eagle rank in 1980 will be recognized for their achievement of scouting's highest rank.

Dr. McClung, a long-time scout and Silver Beaver Award recipient, has been in education since 1960, when he became a trustee of Wayland Baptist College. In 1963, he became the president of Wayland and has served in the position to this time.

A Baptist preacher, Dr. McClung is a member of the Masonic Lodge, the Plainview Lions Club and the Plainview Chamber of Commerce. His wife, Genelle, and he are the parents of three children, Michael R. McClung, M.D.; Mrs. Nancy Chaddock, and Mark R. McClung.

Tickets for the banquet are available at the Council office in Pampa.

The Adobe Walls Council, composed of 3,200 youth members and 1,200 adult volunteers, includes the 15 counties in the eastern half of the Texas Panhandle and all of the Oklahoma Panhandle. Headquarters of the program is in Pampa. Paul Husen of Borger is council president and Jerry Outlaw of Pampa serves as scout executive.

Charge against local merchant is dismissed

Criminal trespass charges filed against a Pampa furniture store owner last December have been dropped due to insufficient evidence, Gray County Attorney Robert McPherson said Friday.

Delbert Johnson, 56, of 2405 Cherokee, owner of Johnson Home Furnishing, was charged with the criminal trespass of residence of Emilio Castillo of the Pampa Mobile Home Park, which was said to have occurred sometime between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Dec. 1, 1980.

Gray County Sheriff's office reports stated that Mrs. Emilio Castillo reported the burglary of the mobile home and that a Curtis - Mathis color television - stereo combination was reported to be missing from the residence.

The report said the window screen was removed from the window, the window raised and the door unlocked. Entry was believed to have been gained through the front door, the sheriff's report said.

Middle School choir wins high ratings

Pampa Middle School songsters traveled to the Amarillo Civic Center Thursday, returning to Pampa with an outstanding rating earned at the UIL Choir Concert and Sight Reading Contest.

The Middle School Concert Choir garnered a first in the concert and a first in the sight reading division, while the Treble Choir followed closely with a first place rating in concert and a second in the sight reading.

The Mixed Choir brought home third place honors in concert and second place in sight reading division.

The Middle School Concert Choir was the only choir in the Class C division of the three-day contest to receive first ratings in concert and sight reading divisions. PMS choir director Elena Donald said.

Mrs. Donald said 98 students from the 7th and 8th grades attended the choir meet.

'Whisperin' Bill' got nickname from first million seller record

By DEBORAH BRIDGES

Staff Writer

Country music singer Bill Anderson is bigger in life than one might expect. He has soft brown eyes, and although his voice is not soft, it actually has an airy, whisper-like quality to it.

Anderson said he was dubbed "Whisperin' Bill" by comedian Don Bowman, who was working with him on his television show back in the 1960s.

"I didn't do it (whisper) intentionally," Anderson confessed. "It was really something that just developed."

"The first time I ever talked on a record was the first number one record I ever had. It was a thing called 'Mama Sang A Song' back in the early 1960s," he added.

A million-seller record on which he also talked, "Still," followed.

"It just fell in that I got known for doing a little singing and a little talking along with it," he said.

Anderson said he does not actually whisper on the records — that it's his normal voice.

"If you go back and listen to some of my early records, you'll see I was singing about four or five keys higher than I do now, and I was singing a lot harder and the records weren't selling," he added, laughing.

A 21-year veteran in the country music profession, Anderson said the biggest change he has seen in the music is the change from negative to positive lyrics.

"The songs that were selling back when I first started in the late 50s and early 60s were the old 'cry in your beer,' 'you broke my heart, little darlin'...those kinds of songs," he commented.

"Today, country music songs still have some of that in them, but by and large, the songs are more of a positive nature...I love you," Anderson said.

The country western singer said he thinks the songs are more appealing to a wider audience by being this way, "not everybody wants to be sad."

Anderson is not certain of the future of country music but thinks it will always be around.

"I think country music will always be around in some form or another," he said. "I think it will swing to the more traditional for awhile and then it will come back to something new," he added.

Anderson said the one thing about music is it is constantly changing.

"Music never stays the same, which makes it more exciting," he said.

"Be yourself. Be original," Anderson advised young people wanting to enter the country music field.

"We already have a Loretta Lynn, Johnny Cash or Merle Haggard," he said. "Go back and learn to be yourself."

The music business is not the place for copy-cats — it's the place for originality, Anderson added.

Anderson said he envied those in the newspaper business.

"I'm a frustrated reporter," he said. "Long ago, I set out to be the world's greatest sports writer."

Today, Anderson said he lets out his writing frustrations through composing lyrics for his songs.

The country music singer admitted he was "a people-watcher."

"I study people and I love the things people say to me," he said.

As an example, Anderson recalled doing a radio broadcast at a North Carolina shopping center. He was interviewing people, promoting a Red Cross sponsored show, he said.

"This kid — I guess he was 9 or 10 years old — just walked right up to me and started talking to me," Anderson said.

"Here we are talking on the radio and I said, 'Bryan, what are you going to be when you grow up?'"

Anderson said the little boy quipped, "I think I'll be a truck driver when I grow up, if I don't get hemorrhoids."

"It never ceases to amaze you, the things people will say to you," he said with a giggle.

Bush meets with parents of slain children

ATLANTA (AP) — Vice President George Bush met Saturday with city officials and parents of five of Atlanta's 20 slain black children, saying the Reagan administration's concerns "mirror the feeling of the entire country."

Barbara Bush, who joined her husband in seeing the parents, said at a news conference: "We cried a little, talked about the problems. I just thought they were wonderfully brave."

The vice president and his wife, wearing green ribbons to symbolize concern for the 20 killings and two children still missing, flew here a day after President Reagan announced the city would receive $1.5 million in federal funds for investigation of the crimes.

Bush said Reagan "feels very, very deeply as a human being" about the deaths and disappearances, adding the killings have "traumatized the community in what we feel is an unprecedented way."

Meanwhile, hundreds of volunteer searchers, their ranks swollen because of the addition of another name to the list of missing children, resumed their hunt for clues. They found, and turned over to the special task force investigating the child cases, a blue jacket with white stripes on the sleeves. One missing boy was last seen wearing a blue jacket with white stripes on its sleeves.

Mayor Maynard Jackson met the vice president's plane at Dobbins Air Force and drove with him to City Hall. There they met with Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown, Police Chief George Napper, several city council members, the Rev. Joseph Lowery of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the families.

Bush acknowledged at a news conference that his brief visit could be interpreted as political.

"I've wanted to come here since the day I was sworn in as vice president," he said. "But you don't want to do something that kind of looks political or try to do something that could be interpreted as capitalizing on the feelings of the community."

He said the administration was guided by the mayor, "who has given us sound advice."

Hunt brothers score oil, silver victories

HOUSTON (AP) — The billionaire Hunt Brothers scored two victories by default when the Securities and Exchange Commission withdrew subpoenas for information about the Dallas family's silver transactions in the same week a judge threw out a $231 million anti-trust suit against them.

Chris Brown, SEC assistant administrator for enforcement in Dallas, said Friday the requests to two Dallas banks were rescinded Wednesday. He declined to disclose why the commission withdrew the requests for records of Hunt family transactions during last spring's silver crash.

"I would assume there has been communication between counsels," Brown said.

Meanwhile, a federal judge Friday threw out a suit filed against Herbert, Nelson and Lamar Hunt that contended the brothers had conspired to restrain trade by interfering with the purchase of Libyan oil.

The SEC filed administrative subpoenas in February with First National Bank in Dallas and Republic National Bank as part of its probe into Hunt ties to the silver price crash, when the commodity's price plummeted in three months from $52.20 to $10.80 an ounce.

The Hunts filed suit to block the First National subpoena March 2, claiming the request sought proprietary information concerning the family's oil and gas holdings and violated protections contained in the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978.

Thomas E. Whitaker, Hunt Energy Corp. vice president for administration and the family's spokesman, termed the subpoena withdrawal "certainly good news."

"I wouldn't say it wasn't unexpected," he added, but declined further comment pending filing of papers confirming the SEC decision.

After the court decision in Houston, Herbert Hunt said the brothers "were always convinced of the correctness of our position that this was baseless litigation. This holding reinforces our determination to vigorously defend meritless and sometimes frivolous claims against us."

The three-week-old trial, based on a suit filed by Coastal States Marketing Corp. and Valero Energy in 1974, was ended before it had been fully presented when U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue ordered a directed verdict in favor of the Hunts.

Bue said stipulations of facts by attorneys for both sides had left no relevant questions for jurors to decide.

An attorney for Houston-based Coastal States, disagreed and said his client would appeal the decision to dismiss the suit.

Coastal States contended that after Libya's nationalization of the Sarir oil field in 1973, which previously had been owned by the Hunts and British Petroleum, the Hunts notified potential customers that purchases of Libyan oil could result in litigation.

British Petroleum was not named in the suit.

Coastal States and Valero Energy, which signed contracts to buy Libyan oil in 1974, claimed the Hunts' actions caused them to sustain damages totaling $77 million. The companies asked for triple damages under a provision of the federal anti-trust law.

The Hunts argued that the oil was rightfully theirs because the Libyan government illegally nationalized their interest and voided a long-term marketing contract.

East Texas called hub of marijuana trade

DALLAS (AP) — Remote East Texas farms are the hub of activity for marijuana smugglers across the nation and the target of a federal investigation called "Operation Grouper."

The Dallas Morning News has reported.

The three-year operation is investigating 14 major drug rings that federal authorities say are responsible for $22 billion in annual street sales — 30 percent to 40 percent of the marijuana trade in the United States, the News said.

The Justice Department says the investigation has focused on Florida, Louisiana and Georgia, with 155 people indicted so far. But the News quoted federal sources as saying dozens and possibly hundreds of indictments are expected against drug traffickers in Texas.

The sources said hundreds of tons of marijuana brought into Texas through Gulf Coast ports are stored on the East Texas farms, which are visited by drug traffickers from throughout the United States.

The three-week-old trial, based on a suit filed by Coastal States Marketing Corp. and Valero Energy in 1974, was ended before it had been fully presented when U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue

Fiery crash kills two

DALLAS (AP) — A man was being questioned by police Saturday about a fiery four-car accident in which a woman and her 4-year-old son were burned to death.

The Friday afternoon accident killed 26-year-old Denise Johnson and her son Justin, but a second child was rescued by an onlooker who pulled her from the burning wreckage, police said.

The second child, 6-year-old Misty, was not injured.

Officers said the driver of the car that caused the accident fled the scene on foot but later surrendered at police headquarters, where he was being questioned on charges of failing to stop and render aid, involuntary manslaughter and driving without a valid license.

His car ran a red light and struck Mrs. Johnson's car from behind, said investigator R.M. Williams. Mrs. Johnson's car was knocked into the intersection, where it struck a pickup.

The gasoline tank in Mrs. Johnson's car was ruptured, Williams said, causing the vehicle to burst into flames.

The car that ran the light then entered the intersection and struck another vehicle, Williams said.

Three Dallas deputies fired

DALLAS (AP) — Three Dallas County sheriff's deputies have been fired for buying guns and other goods from a convict two of them arrested last summer.

Sgt. William J. Stoffe, 41, and Grady Newton, 45, and deputy Bobby Lee Welch, 35, were fired by Sheriff Don Byrd Friday, said Chief Deputy Bob Pope. The three were unavailable for comment.

Welch and Newton arrested Samuel Eugene Damico, 30, in March 1980 when the pair worked in the now-defunct narcotics task force.

Pope said the three deputies bought and traded goods with Damico — a violation of department policy.

But the main targets of the federal investigation are the property owners and their associates, who sometimes allow a marijuana shipment to be stored on their land in

Attorney seeks to prove 'threat of danger' to Daniel children

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — An attorney will try to prove Monday that Vickie Daniel, charged with the murder of her husband, is going through "the most stressful situation of her life" and should give up custody of the two children she bore former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr.

In the first court trial to arise from Daniel's shooting death Jan. 19, jurors must decide whether the accused murderess "has a mental disorder ... that has manifested (itself) in a history of overreaction in stress situations," as attorney Zeke Zbrank maintains.

Zbrank, attorney for Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph of Richardson, claims Mrs. Daniel's disorder eventually led to the shooting death of her husband. He says he has medical evidence that suggests there is a threat of danger to the two children.

A jury of three women and nine men was seated Friday to hear the suit, filed by Mrs. Murph in an effort to gain custody of Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 3, and Marion Price Daniel IV, 1.

Attorneys for both sides, who questioned prospective jurors for 10 hours Thursday and Friday, used psychologists to help them select the final panel.

Lawyers said the jurors represent a variety of professions and range in age from 23 to 58. One juror has a masters degree; another has just a third-grade education.

Two die in Phoenix fire

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A 64-year-old industrialist from Texas and his 58-year-old wife were found dead in a rear bedroom of their $250,000 home here Saturday after an early morning fire trapped them behind a deadbolted gate designed to keep out intruders, officials said.

The house, along with furnishings and artworks valued at $200,000 were totally destroyed, said Steve Jensen, a spokesman for the Phoenix Fire Department.

Francis J. and Mary Alice Corbin apparently died of smoke inhalation after trying to leave and confronting a wrought-iron grille with a double-deadbolt lock, Jensen said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Area youth welcomed, good news assured

Annually, the agriculture committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce undertakes a big project to promote agriculture and recognize the work of the young folks in our area — the Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show, underway at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion.

A total of 543 animals are registered in this year's show, accompanied by at least one youth and probably a parent or two.

The registrants represent seven counties in the northeast quadrant of the Panhandle, including residents of Gray, Carson, Wheeler, Hemphill, Ochiltree, Lipscomb and Roberts Counties.

The youths have probably already completed grooming their animals, readying for the critical eyes of show judges.

After awards are presented, the youths then wait in anticipation as their animal comes up for the review of the even more discriminating eyes of potential buyers.

Last year's livestock sale netted area youths about $138,000 in cash the youths can invest in next year's show — or a college education.

Occasionally, during this week, we get phone calls from readers asking why we can't have something else on page 1 besides pictures of pigs and cows.

We feel this is one of the few weeks of the year that we get the opportunity to feature this segment of our area communities and recognize youths who are doing something "good."

So, it's with a great deal of pleasure and pride that we take this opportunity to welcome area youth and their families to Pampa. We hope your stay will be enjoyable.

While we won't promise our readers there won't be "bad news" on our pages, we hope our readers appreciate the "good news" they will be seeing.

A necessary sense of realism

We don't place a lot of trust in public opinion polls. The performance of the pollsters until the day before November's election should be reason enough for a certain skepticism. In addition, the responses to questions are affected by the wording of the questions, the validity of the sample selected and other factors both tangible and intangible. Polling is still an emerging science, a long way from perfection.

Nonetheless most pollsters probably make fairly serious efforts to use their polls to get a reasonably accurate picture of what people are thinking. While poll results should be taken with several large grains of salt, they may still provide us with rough approximations of reality.

Thus we refuse to be alarmed by the results of the New York Times-CBS poll reported a few days ago, but we are still a little concerned. If the results are even a dim reflection of reality, there are a lot of illusions prevalent out there amongst the people of this land.

The poll says that balancing the federal budget is more important to the people than a tax cut. Seventy percent of the people preferred a balanced budget to a large tax cut. Perhaps we can understand that if the question was phrased to give people a strict either-or choice. That's not a realistic way to phrase it, in our view, and it's not our understanding of what the Reagan administration has in mind.

The real problem comes when people are asked where they'd like to see cuts made in the federal budget. People may want a balanced budget all right, and most people want lower taxes. But, according to the poll, most people don't want to cut spending, at least in the areas mentioned by the pollsters.

Specifically, only 25 percent of those polled want to cut federal aid to college students, and 24 percent are for cutting aid to the unemployed. A bare 18 percent were for cutting anti-pollution spending, just 17 percent want to cut mass transit aid and 16 percent would be willing to cut spending for highways.

During the campaign Reagan concentrated on denouncing waste and fraud in federal programs. There are plenty of both in Washington programs, to be sure. But identifying and eliminating them will be a painstaking and laborious task, one that will encounter resistance from within the government and from both special interest and "public" interest groups. There will also be sincere disagreements about whether certain programs are really wasteful or not. One man's taste may be another's necessity.

The American people must understand that if they want to reduce federal spending, balance the budget and reduce taxes, some substantial program cuts will have to be made. Setting the watchdogs after waste and fraud won't be enough. Hard decisions about priorities will be required. Some of the battles will be hard-fought, and special interest groups will complain articulately and persuasively. The Reagan administration is going to have to get specific, to think in terms of abolishing agencies outright, and start laying the political groundwork to do so — building the case and developing a political consensus.

The payoff for the vast majority of the American people will be considerable. Given a well-designed program of reduced government and reduced regulation, we may reasonably expect, over the next few years, serious declines in inflation, reductions in taxes, increased productivity, increased real income for most people, an era of innovation, and an increased sense of well-being and personal freedom.

Overtures to South Africa

By Robert J. Wagman

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The United States has not been on the best of terms with South Africa in recent years because of that country's apartheid policies.

But that chill may soon begin to thaw because the South Africans have something that several close advisers to President Reagan think this country will need in the years ahead. That something is a commercially proven synthetic-fuel technology.

No major industrial nation has a more severe petroleum problem than does South Africa. For all of its gold, diamonds and other natural resources, South Africa has little oil of its own as well as great difficulty obtaining a steady supply from abroad because of its racial policies. Iran was its chief source of oil until the overthrow of the shah.

South Africa does have an abundance of coal, however. Since the early 1950s, it has worked to perfect the extraction of petroleum from coal through the Lurgi gasification and Fischer-Tropsch liquefaction processes. The South Africans now boast the world's most advanced synfuels program — and the only such program that has proven itself commercially.

The policy of the Carter administration was to avoid formal contact with the South African government whenever possible. But the perceived need for the United States to develop a synfuels program brought about a relaxation of that policy in the last year or so — at least as far as synfuels were concerned.

The Environmental Protection Agency sought technological aid on several occasions from SASOL, the South African synfuels program. In addition, the Carter administration permitted several U.S. utilities to contact the South Africans directly for technical advice.

Take, for instance, the Great Plains Gasification Project, a $2 billion synfuels plant that five major energy companies are building in Beulah, N.D. The plant will receive at least $15 billion in federal grants and loans before its completion. And it will use Lurgi technology.

The U.S. company with the closest ties to SASOL is the Fluor Corp., an engineering giant that helped to build SASOL in South Africa and that will be the sole marketer of South African synfuel technology in this country. Already, the company, in partnership with the Crow Indian tribe, plans to build a multi-billion-dollar synfuel plant on the coal-rich Crow reservation in Montana.

Fluor's founder, John Robert Fluor, is close to the new administration. He contributed to the Reagan campaign — and then gave $50,000 to help pay for the inauguration. Fluor is urging increased contact between Washington and Pretoria so that this country can take better advantage of South African synfuel technology.

Fluor seems to have found an attentive audience in the Reaganites. The government has expressed doubts about dealing with SASOL, but none of those doubts are political.

Some critics say that technologies currently on the drawing boards will leave the South Africans far behind within the next few years. Others question whether the South African processes are sufficiently economical on a mass scale. South Africa's need for fuel has been so great that it has been willing to pay any price. That is not the case here — at least, not yet.

The Reagan administration seems willing to work with the South Africans to establish several synfuel demonstration projects in this country. If SASOL technology can be modified to work on a massive scale at an acceptable cost and if the other technologies do not quickly become available, cooperation between Washington and Pretoria is likely to increase substantially in the coming years.

As some in the administration see it, this country may be able to do without South African gold, and diamonds. But it may not be able to do without South African synfuel technology.

Letters to editor

Dear Editor,

It seems like most of the time we adults are wishing our youth would act like they had a touch of sense. Pampa sports fans would be in good shape if a set of thirty aged business and professional men would grow up. A home town lawyer and his merchant friend had to be taken from the stands by police for verbal abuse of the Plainview coach and team. The rest of their group sat very still and quiet for a time after their chums returned. The group who were full of spirits of sorts looked like little boys who had been scolded in Sunday School. One would think this warning would do when dealing with grown men. Not so. Two more of their tribe felt that what ever they had to say was just too good to keep to themselves. Again two more of our aging adolescences were pulled by police. What's the deal, guys? You don't like that behavior when you see it in the youth of Pampa. I wonder where they learn it.

Name withheld by request.

Nuking the family

by ART BUCHWALD

In trying to deal with the social and economic condition of the modern family, the government always seems to refer to "a married couple with two children" as the norm.

Unfortunately the "norm" is not normal anymore.

And that's why most government figures are haywire.

Taking the place of the family of four is the family of eight or nine, depending on how many marriages have been involved.

This is the more realistic family profile of the '80s: Betsy is the divorced mother of three young children, whose former husband, Edward, is married to Ruth, who has four children of her own. Edward gives child support and some alimony to Betsy, but not enough to pay the bills. So Betsy has to work. Ruth also has to work to help Edward pay Betsy and keep her kids in shoes, because her former husband, Ralph, doesn't work and won't contribute to child support.

He is married to Greta, (his third marriage) who has one child by a former marriage to John. Since she left John to marry Ralph, she gets no alimony, and she has to work to support the child and her husband, whom she is thinking of divorcing because he's having an affair with the lady upstairs, Maria, who has no children living with her.

The judge awarded custody of her children to Maria's parents when her husband Kip said he was moving into an apartment that didn't take kids. The grandparents, Bob and Lilly, were retired, but Bob had to find a job to support his grandchildren.

One of the grandchildren, Rona, had a child out of wedlock, and she found a job at McDonald's. So she leaves her baby with Bob and Lilly when she works the night shift.

The father of Rona's child is Hal, who is happily married to Carla, and they have five children, three by Hal's first marriage to Inez and two by Carla's first marriage to Fred.

Inez left Hal after she fell in love with his best friend, Dick, whose wife had gone to live in a commune with a religious sect.

Since Dick said he would only marry Inez if they had no children, Inez told Hal he could have the kids, though she sees them on weekends when she isn't doing volunteer work for an adoption agency.

Fred's something else again. He is living with Dedra, who has two children, but he told her he doesn't want to get married again because he doesn't trust women. Dedra doesn't mind because the father of her children, Danny, was a cad, and she's not ready to make another commitment. The state does not consider them a family of four for tax purposes, because they aren't legally wed. So although Fred supports the children, he cannot deduct them as dependents.

Danny lives with this sister Ella, who has four children and a husband named Sid. Sid is sore as hell about this arrangement because he can barely support his family, much less Danny, who only works when the spirit moves him.

Ella keeps introducing Danny to her divorced friends in hopes he'll marry one of them. But her friends all seem to have children, and Danny says his first responsibility is to his own kids.

One of Ella's divorced friends, Caroline, has one child, and is living with a man named Arnie. She was collecting welfare when her case worker paid a surprise visit to her flat and discovered Arnie was living there. "The man in the house" rule prevailed, and her payments were stopped. Caroline got a job, the city closed down the day-care center in her neighborhood, and she couldn't work, so she had to move in with her sister who has four children.

I guess I could go on but I might confuse you. The point is that government statisticians keep sticking to their fantasies that every household consists of a family of four — a mother, a father and two children. That's why nothing they plan turns out to be right.

Iran in brief

By Don Graft

Have you noticed anything different about Iran lately?

It isn't making the headlines it did for so long and until so recently. The country and its continuing tumult have by no means dropped out of the news, but they have slipped from front to inside pages.

It could, of course, be sheer coincidence that this has followed so rapidly upon the release of the hostages. But it is not.

This country and the rest of the energy-consuming world have long since adjusted to the impact of the Iranian revolution on oil economics and politics. The war with Iraq is stalemated, and in their internal squabbles the revolutionaries have been repeating themselves for some time. In short, there's not much new coming out of Iran to make news.

With the removal of the hostage issue that had brought that country's institutionalized chaos so intensely and personally home to this country, Americans have with something like relief turned their attention to other matters — to the settling in of the Reagan administration, early skirmishing over the budget and economy and the explosive development of a new international crisis in El Salvador.

If this comes as relief to Americans, it could also be of some benefit to Iran. A little less publicity for a time may make it somewhat easier for the Iranians to bring themselves to the compromises and accommodations necessary in dealing constructively with their manifold problems, most of which they have brought upon themselves. The revolution has a great deal of unfinished business to dispose of.

This is a situation and a period when little news may in fact be the best news.

They won't go home again

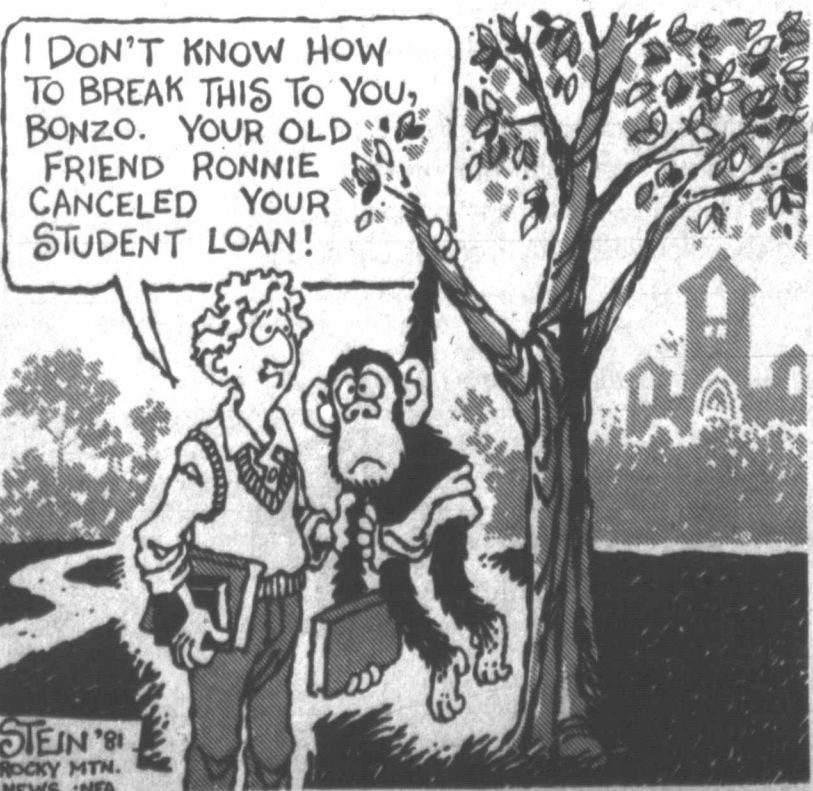

There is also some unfinished Iranian business closer to home — the matter of all those students whose welcome in the United States is in question.

And at the rate the investigation of each individual's status is going, it could remain unfinished indefinitely. Through February, the Immigration and Naturalization Service had invited 2,445 with visa violations to leave. That's out of the some 64,000 Iranians in the country. Only 757, however, had actually packed up, picked up and gone.

Deportees, actual and potential, are outnumbered by another group among the Iranians: Almost 3,000, who know there's no place like home. And that is apparently what bothers them.

They've requested political asylum. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Berry's World

Don't give up coffee yet, more studies brewing

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a study linking coffee to cancer of the pancreas, it's too soon to hang up your coffee mug for good, researchers say. The latest evidence may be misleading, they explain, and three more studies on the disease — whose occurrence has tripled in the past 30 years — are on the way.

The most recent study, by Dr. Brian MacMahon and colleagues at Harvard, turned up a link between coffee drinking and pancreatic cancer, the fourth leading cause of cancer deaths.

The Harvard researchers reported Thursday that people who drink as much as two cups of coffee a day nearly double their chances of the disease, and three-cup-a-day imbibers nearly triple their risk.

Two months earlier, a University of Maryland study said drinking decaffeinated coffee was a risk factor for pancreatic cancer, along with drinking wine and occupational exposure to dry cleaning or gasoline.

But MacMahon warned that his results must be confirmed elsewhere before scientists try to pin down any purported cancer-causing ingredient in coffee. The culprit probably is not caffeine, since no similar link was found with tea.

And the American Cancer Society said it was "too early for any kind of clear-cut conclusion to be drawn."

Studies examining the risk factors of pancreatic cancer are under way at the University of Southern California, the American Health Foundation in New York and Johns Hopkins University.

All these investigations are aimed at explaining why cases of pancreatic cancer have nearly tripled in the last three decades.

The American Cancer Society estimates there will be 22,000 deaths from the disease this year, compared to 13,675 deaths in 1969 and 8,952 in 1950.

Pancreatic cancer is especially hard to treat because the pancreas, a flat gland behind the stomach that secretes a digestive juice, is so well-hidden that the cancer usually is far advanced by the time it's discovered.

The disease also is hard to diagnose, and some patients die of it without ever knowing the exact cause of their malignancy.

A major problem is separating the effect of coffee from that of cigarette smoking, already known to be linked to pancreatic cancer, Dr. Thomas Mack, who heads the USC study, said Friday.

Another difficulty is that studies like MacMahon's find a "link" or "association" between some habit and some disease, not prove that one causes the other. Scientists then must figure out why the link occurs.

Caffeine, although not suspected in current studies, has been proposed by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for review because of evidence it causes birth defects in rats.

MacMahon said he has stopped drinking coffee himself, but in the absence of more evidence cannot advise others what to do.

State board decides 'dirty word' issue

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — High school seniors should be able to look up the meaning of dirty words in a dictionary, the State Board of Education decided Saturday.

The decision came after considerable argument over requirements for textbooks, specifically dictionaries presented by publishers for use in Texas schools.

A proposed textbook requirement for Grade 12 English classes said that dictionaries containing "obscene" words would not be considered.

Mary Ann Leveridge, East Bernard, offered an amendment that dictionaries would be considered even if they contained words labeled "slang" or "vulgar" to "indicate the social situations in which they occur."

"I believe it is very important for 12th-grade students to be able to look up words and find out the meanings," said Mrs. Leveridge. "It is very difficult to determine which words are obscene."

"We don't permit the use of vulgar language in classrooms and in textbooks and we should not permit really obscene words in dictionaries we provide the children," said W.H. Vetter, La Marque.

Board Chairman Joe Kelly Butler pointed out that most school libraries contain big unabridged dictionaries "that have every word you want to know in them."

"If I had known the definitions to some of the words I used when I was six or seven years old I wouldn't have used them," said Jim Hollingsworth, DeSoto.

Wayne Windle, El Paso board member, said prohibiting dictionaries with "obscene" words would "open up a can of worms. It is absolutely ridiculous to could think we can protect high school kids by censoring dictionaries. It would create a whole lot of problems." Butler did not announce the final vote but at least five of the 22 members voted against the approved version that would allow "slang" and "vulgar" words.

The board approved plans to buy $27.2 million in textbooks for use in Texas public schools beginning Sept. 1, 1982.

Asbestos industry liable for damages

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — If a federal judge's ruling on asbestos-exposure damage is upheld, it will be the first time an entire industry has been held liable in a federal damage suit.

The 20-page opinion by U.S. District Judge Robert Parker Friday marked the first time in Texas that an industry-wide product liability suit has been upheld. He held that every asbestos manufacturer named in the suit must pay a portion of any award based on its share of the national market.

The opinion resulted from 57 damage suits filed in U.S. Eastern District Court that name 20 separate asbestos manufacturers.

Parker wrote that plaintiffs who seek damages because of exposure to asbestos may name every asbestos manufacturer that has supplied the product to their workplaces during their time of employment.

Parker wrote that he was aware that the court "is venturing into territory without the benefit of charts drawn by the Texas Supreme Court." The Texas high court has refused to uphold suits involving industry-wide product liability.

Asbestos fibers have been linked to asbestosis and asbestos-related cancers since the 1930s.

Asbestosis is a non-malignant scarring of the lungs caused by inhaling asbestos fibers. Mesothelioma is an incurable asbestos-related cancer of the chest, lungs and abdomen "whose relationship to asbestos has been generally known since the late 1930s," Parker wrote.

The judge also ruled that the manufacturers must prove their product was not the source of the worker's illness to be dropped from the suit.

Parker said he reasoned that since no one asbestos fiber could be singled out as the primary cause of asbestos-related illness, all asbestos manufacturers may be held liable because their product is a contributing factor to the illnesses.

"The conduct throughout the industry, despite the danger, has been summarized as one of indifference and silence," Parker wrote. "The industry was also silent with respect to the damaging relationship between asbestos and cancer."

He said plaintiffs must prove the presence of asbestosis or asbestos-linked cancer, asbestos exposure, the possibility that certain producers manufactured the asbestos and the degree of damages.

The ruling was in response to a motion from Forty-Eight Insulation, one of the defendants in the suits filed by 57 insulation workers, pipefitters, carpenters and factory workers who claim exposure to asbestos at a Tyler asbestos plant.

A spokesman for the Johns-Manville Corp., a Denver-based company named as a defendant in all 57 suits, said attorneys had not decided whether to appeal the ruling.

Attorney Martin Thompson, who has represented other plaintiffs in asbestos suits, called the ruling "intuitive."

Thompson said at least one out of every four people in the United States have been exposed to asbestos and called it "one of the greatest industrial killers of the 20th century."

Jury recommends death for hit man

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Formal sentencing is April 9 for Clifford Henry Bowen, who was found guilty of three counts of first-degree murder by a jury Friday, which recommended he die by lethal drug injection.

Bowen was convicted in the contract killings of three men shot down as they sat beside a motel swimming pool here last summer.

The eight-man, four-woman Oklahoma County District Court jury deliberated for two hours in the penalty phase of the trial after finding the Tyler, Texas, man guilty Friday morning of three counts of first-degree murder. The jurors decided he should be sentenced to death on each of the three counts.

When the jury returned the guilty verdict at 10:20 a.m., the 49-year-old Bowen shook his head, repeatedly muttering, "You're crazy ... you fools."

Later, Bowen's attorney offered a $25,000 reward for what he termed the real killer. "It's the only way we'll get any justice," said attorney Raymond Burger, who also said he would file an appeal. Burger said the reward was being put up by Bowen's friends.

Bowen was charged with three counts of first-degree murder in the slayings of Raymond Peters, Marvin Nowlin and Lawrence Evans about 2 a.m. July 6 at the Guest House Inn.

The jury got the case late Thursday afternoon and deliberated four hours and 40 minutes before being sequestered for the night.

The state had maintained that Bowen was a hit man imported from Texas by a former city policeman to eliminate Peters, who allegedly was involved in a drug ring with the officer. Prosecutors alleged the other two men were gunned down to eliminate witnesses as they sat drinking beer aid talking by the pool.

Harold Behrens, the former Oklahoma City policeman, was convicted earlier of first-degree murder by securing the services of a hit man to kill Peters. He is serving a life term.

Bowen had testified he was at a rodeo in Tyler, Texas, late the night before the killings occurred. Defense witnesses also placed him at the rodeo.

But the jury apparently bought the contention by Oklahoma County District Attorney Bob Macy that Bowen could have hopped a jet at Tyler late July 5 and arrived in Oklahoma City possibly "in less than an hour" — in time to kill the trio.

Macy said he "filled in an ingredient" that made it reasonable for the jury to believe Bowen set up his alibi in Texas before flying to the murder scene.

Burger had contended only a weak connection offered any evidence that Behrens ever knew Bowen and had hired him to kill Peters, a drug distributor for Behrens who had threatened to expose Behrens' organization.

However, Oklahoma City officer David McBride testified on 1975 a special police unit was watching Jerry Ray James, now

Bedlam, chaos, politics mark St. Pat's Day at Charley O's

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — 'Tis a grand old tradition they honor every year at a corner saloon just off Fifth Avenue, and they are girding for it now. 'Tis called bedlam.

The place is Charley O's. In New York, on St. Patrick's Day in the morning, it is where the elite meet to eat.

To do a little pre-noon drinking, too. Last year — it was a chilly morning — the lad at the breakfast counter poured somewhere between 900 and 1,000 Irish coffees before he lost count.

"The place is a madhouse. You can't move in here," Jerry Johnston was saying, contemplating the chaos he anticipates Tuesday. "Last year," Gene Morgan added, "we had to put a man at the door to let in only as many as he let out. It was that full."

Jerry Johnston's brogue is from Belfast. Gene Morgan's is from a small town in Donegal. Jerry is the waiter. Gene is the meat carver. Their time at Charley O's goes back to when the swinging doors first swung open, 14 St. Patrick's Days ago.

"It was a popular place right from the start," Gene recalled. "Being here in Rockefeller Center we've always had celebrities dropping in. But the second year, 1968, that was when the St. Patrick's Day tradition began, the breakfast and all the to-do."

"Wasn't that the year," Jerry said, "that Sen. Robert Kennedy stood on the bar and announced he was running for president?"

"The very year," said Gene. "He tipped over a tray climbing down from the bar and broke six dozen glasses."

The glass swept up, the senator strolled a half block to Fifth Avenue, walked a while in the parade, flew to Washington and made the formal announcement for the television cameras. To the gang at Charley O's, it was old news.

Since then, senators, governors, congressmen, mayors, politicians of every type — and nationality — have made a pre-parade breakfast at Charley O's the start of the St. Patrick's Day routine.

"The way we get ready for it," Jerry Johnston said, "is first to remove all the furniture. Everything goes — tables, chairs, stools, the works. Then all of us become bartenders, me, Gene, everybody. We put on 11 bartenders. It's as crowded behind the bar as in front."

In more sane circumstances, two bartenders are sufficient to handle the crowd at Charley O's, and the crowd is anything but rowdy.

It is a comfortable, unhurried place: tile floor, oak-paneled walls, lots of brass and glass. The atmosphere is clubby, the patrons are regulars, the drinks are honest, the pickles are sour, and a Gene Morgan corned beef sandwich is an act of creation.

'TIS THE SEASON FOR ST. PAT. Gene Morgan, right, the sandwich man at Charley O's in New York, hands waiter Jerry Johnston a sandwich during business hours Friday. On St. Patrick's Day in New York, Charley O's is the place to go to get an Irish coffee.

Prince Charles falls from horse

ESHER, England (AP) — As Lady Diana Spencer looked on, her husband-to-be, Prince Charles, toppled from his horse onto a muddy track and bloodied his nose during a three-mile steeplechase.

But the 32-year-old heir to the British throne picked himself up, remounted his horse and headed to the stables to the cheers of onlookers.

Charles was riding his latest steed, a 12-year-old gelding named Good Prospect, for the first time Friday in the Horse and Hound Grand Military Gold Cup. His last horse, 11-year-old Allibar, collapsed and died last month while the prince was exercising him.

Nineteen-year-old Lady Diana, who will marry the prince July 29, says she lost her nerve for horseback riding after once taking a spill.

fashion-conscious editor at the Peninsula Times Tribune here thought Mrs. Reagan's gown looked familiar.

Editor Pamela Dinsmore searched the paper's files and found a photograph from the opening night of the San Francisco Opera in 1967. Sure enough, said Sheila Patton, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary — the black velvet gown Mrs. Reagan wore to the opera in 1967 and the gown she wore Tuesday were one and the same.

"It's a favorite," Ms. Patton said of the 14-year-old gown. "She loves it and wears it several times a year."

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Movie actress Jodie Foster has managed to keep a low profile as a Yale University freshman, but her fans will have a chance to see her

She will have a supporting role playing the early years of a former prostitute imprisoned for killing a cab driver in the play "Getting Out." It is directed by another Yale student, Tina Landau, daughter of film producer Eli Landau.

The play will run off-campus on March 26-29 and April 2-5 at the Educational Center for the Arts.

"I get to scream a lot, which I've never done before," the star of "Taxi Driver" and "Freaky Friday" said in an interview at a cast meeting this week.

GENEVA, N.Y. (AP) — Frank Sinatra was on the mailing list when DeSales High School launched its annual $100,000 fund-raising drive. Now the famed crooner is on the thank-you list.

On Friday, students and staff at the Catholic high school were stunned to find a $1,000 check from Sinatra in the mail.

Principal Edward Tracey found it "overpowering" that Sinatra would have spotted the request among all his fan mail and responded to it. In honor of the gift, Tracey brought his collection of Sinatra records to school and played them over the public address system.

Freshman Steve Bucklin, 14, had decided to write to him and ask for a donation because he'd read about the singer's generosity.

"I'm going to sit down and write him a thank-you letter," Bucklin said. "I certainly think he's a very caring person."

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — When Ronald Reagan was inaugurated, wife Nancy treated herself to a $25,000 wardrobe. Her friends sported champagne mink. A chap named Adolfo was the fashion designer of the hour, and there was much ad about the return of elegance to the White House.

But when the first lady was photographed with Canadian dignitaries this week, a

Gulf geopressured zones offer no relief for nation's energy plight

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A just-completed economic study throws cold water on previously optimistic forecasts that extremely deep geopressured zones along the Gulf Coast could be an important alternate energy source.

"It's one of these things that's there, like gold in sea water,"

I do not intend to make a "Dear Abby" column out of this space, but I thought you would enjoy one of the hundreds of typical letters I get each week and my reply.

Dear Mr. Whaley:

"The value and worth of the arts is immeasurable in the total education of young persons. What with federal funding to be cut off, state and local moneys have become of utmost importance and an absolute must if we are to wholly and completely educate the future citizenry of Texas."

"For this reason, additionally to the enrichment of our own lives — both my husband and I have long supported both the Amarillo Symphony and the Amarillo Art Center. The production 'Texas' in Palo Duro Canyon each summer season is another both historical and cultural venture which hopefully will continue to be shown."

"The 10.5 million dollar request by the Texas Commission on the Arts is indeed a very small percent of the total budget."

"We urgently request that you support this figure and vote for it. How will you vote?"

"Respectfully submitted,
(S) Mr. and Mrs. P."

My Reply

Dear Mr. and Mrs. P.:

Last week two ladies brought a 5-year-old blind and mentally retarded youth by my office and pleaded with me to recognize the tremendous needs of the school for the blind and multiple handicapped students. Instead of asking for $10.5 million as you have for the arts, they were asking for $9,950,000.00. But the Legislative Budget Board had cut their request back to $9,154,000.00.

Last summer I made an 85-mile trip from Pampa to Wellington in an effort to prevent the Texas Department of Human Resources from turning four ladies (age 74-88) out of a nursing home because of a curtailment of funds. One of these had no relatives and no place to go.

The State now awards only $33.00 per month aid to dependent and poor children. Many teachers that retired before 1967 draw only $310.00 monthly. Many teachers are leaving the profession because they can make a great deal more with industry.

Every day we get from 20 to 40 letters from people representing what they believe is a worthy cause.

Every day I have unfold cards, letters and phone calls telling me to hold down spending, cut taxes and not to be voting new taxes. Now, I would like to ask you what kind of priority would you give to supporting the arts under these circumstances? Would you neglect the dependent children, the blind, the old people in nursing homes, the teachers, and yield to those who have the best lobby?

Please, Mr. and Mrs. P., how would you vote?

Sincerely,
Foster Whaley
State Representative

P.S. In 1967 I helped plan a statewide convention to be held in Amarillo that brought families from almost every county in Texas. It was my suggestion for this group to view the musical drama "Texas." We have been advised this has had a most dramatic effect on attendance of Texas from that day forward. We, too, appreciate the arts.

said engineer Robert K. Swanson, "but it's going to be hell to get it out."

Swanson headed a team of researchers from Southwest Research Institute that completed a study of 20 of the most producible geopressured zones along the coast from the Rio Grande to the Mississippi River for the Electric Power Research Institute.

Swanson said that, unfortunately, his team had to report to the electric utilities that the geopressured zones along Texas and Louisiana offer no value as an alternative fuel source in the near future.

The study was the object of an article entitled "No Great Energy Force," that appeared in SWRI's latest edition of "Technology Today." It discounts previous estimates that "there were hundreds and even thousands of trillion cubic feet of natural gas dissolved in the water in these abnormally pressured formations."

First, the study concluded that instead of "hundreds and thousands of trillion cubic feet" of natural gas, that only 7 trillion cubic feet of recoverable natural gas lies in the geopressured reservoirs stretching from deep South Texas to New Orleans.

Secondly, Swanson's team estimated — based on one test well drilled in Texas — that it would cost $7.50 to $14 per thousand cubic feet (mcf) to recover the geopressured gas. This compares to a maximum $5 per mcf for gas being purchased on a premium basis by some utilities today, and the average Texas natural gas price of less than $2.

"All we said was that for the utilities as a major short-term source of energy, it's hopeless," Swanson said.

Another disappointment of the study, Swanson said, was that the water containing the natural gas sediments isn't hot enough to be of much value as geothermal energy.

He said there were predictions that from the experimental well, drilled in Brazoria County under a Department of Energy Grant, would flow water of 325 degrees Fahrenheit, but instead the water tested only 265 degrees.

"About the minimum temperature you can use in the geothermal business for actually producing power is about 350 degrees. But none of this stuff — the producible stuff — is over 300 degrees. So you can see it's very marginal," he said. Swanson said an example of the disappointing findings was in the McAllen area of the Texas Lower Rio Grande Valley, originally thought to offer the best hope of producible natural gas because it was one of the shallowest zones.

"What you have to do to get this gas is produce a tremendous amount of water," he said. "So it really is a gas dripper operation."

"The wells will flow under this tremendous pressure so you won't have to pump them. This water comes rushing out of there and you separate the gas and dispose of the water."

"In order to make it pay, we know you have to produce at the rate of, say, 40,000 barrels of water a day. But these wells at McAllen would be lucky to produce at 10,000 barrels a day and not for very long. The gas rate is somewhere between 10 and 50 cubic feet per barrel of water. So when you produce it, it comes out like gas out of a Coca-Cola when you open it."

Swanson estimates it would cost $8 million to $10 million to drill each well, so that a well would have to produced for 10 to 20 years to pay the cost. "And they're not going to flow for more than one or two years."

"That means you have to pay for them with the gas and heat you get, and it's just out of the question."

The study estimated there are 12.6 quadrillion British Thermal Units (BTUs) of thermal energy along the coast, but that present prices and high costs of recovering it make its existence negligible in today's energy market.

"We have some shallow, very low-temperature stuff that may be very valuable to us some day. For example, there's a project in Taylor (Texas) where the city water comes out very hot, like 100 degrees Fahrenheit, and they're taking that and heating a hospital," he said.

He said promising studies are under way in the El Paso area for possible geothermal energy production, but that so far Texas has nothing to compare with the "geysers" project near San Francisco.

H&R BLOCK TAX TEST

Question No. 1

It is too late to claim a deduction or credit overlooked on a 1977 tax return.

☐ True ☐ False

If you know about amending a tax return, you probably know the answer. If you don't, maybe you need H&R Block. Because H&R Block knows tax laws that you might not know. You can amend a tax return for overlooked deductions and credits up to three years after the filing deadline. So the answer to the question is FALSE.

Problems for alien children in Texas school

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Until two months ago, 9-year-old Julio had never held a pencil, used scissors or been to school. He still has trouble writing, cutting paper and speaking English.

Julio is one of 750 undocumented children enrolled in local schools for this first time this year under a federal judge's order. He is one of a smaller number who had never been to school, even in Mexico.

Before his family moved to this border city six months ago, he worked on a large ranch carrying firewood and doing odd jobs. The nearest school was more than 10 miles away across often impassable roads in Matamoros.

Along with 26 other youngsters, Julio is in a special program for children who lack basic skills in either English or Spanish.

"These youngsters at first went into regular, bilingual classrooms. But problems emerged very clearly when teachers found the children had no (language) skills," said Cesar Cisneros, director of elementary education for the Brownsville Independent School District.

"You can imagine the frustrations of teachers trying to conduct a regular class when there's one who can't hold a pencil."

The district set up special classes in January at three elementary schools and plans to start the program in two more when teachers are available. The bulk of illegal aliens entering school for the first time are in regular, bilingual classrooms.

At Cromack Elementary School, Blanca Betancourt teaches eight pupils, aged 9 to 13, in the special program.

"It's unbelievable what can happen when a child doesn't get an education," she said. "I never realized there were children with no schooling at all."

Her classroom is similar to a one-room schoolhouse. A girl who normally would be in the second grade sits in front of a boy whose peers are in the seventh.

"I've found it very difficult with the wide age-range and maturity of the children," she said.

Some have "been around" like one boy, aged 13, who worked as a street vendor in Matamoros after his parents died. He enrolled in local schools after moving in with an aunt and uncle here.

All of the children come from families with incomes below the federal poverty line. Their only experience with English is in class unless they follow the teacher's orders to watch American television programs.

"I grew up speaking only Spanish at home but I had brothers and sisters who went to school and we would talk English among ourselves."

But when these kids go home, she said.

She uses English as often as possible for instruction but frequently switches to Spanish when met with uncomprehending faces.

Several children with little or no schooling lack a basic Spanish vocabulary.

"I must teach them the Spanish word so they will know what I mean when I tell them the word in English."

Instructional materials include first grade-level flash cards and a lot of improvisation.

The setting is similar at Egly Elementary School, not far away.

Betty Frausto has seven students, aged 10 to 13, including two who lived on large ranches in Mexico and have never been to school.

1981 TV COMPULOG SER., INC. OWNER CORP. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

As reported in this column two weeks ago, Michael and Kim get caught in bed together on Ryan's Hope by scorned and vengeful Rae who is determined to destroy both their futures. Well, Michael Corbett, who plays Michael Pavel, the aggressive, street-wise young man who uses his sexual charms as well as his wits to climb to the top, need not be afraid of Rae Woodard's wrath. Corbett's career is off and running making him the ABC serial's latest heart-throb.

Following the current trend of bad boys charming the female audience, Michael's Pavel has been taken under the wing of the rich and manipulative Rae Woodard (Louise Shaffer) who lavishes him with gifts, attention and a taste of corporate power. He rewards her generosity by alternating their passionate interludes with a backstreet affair with her daughter Kim (Kelli Maroney). The fact that Kim is married to Seneca (John Gabriel) makes no difference to Michael. Neither does his immoral, self-serving behavior seem to have any effect upon the host of women fans of Ryan's Hope who find him irresistible.

Michael Corbett's background is totally different from that of the character he portrays.

Born in Philadelphia, Michael followed his two brothers to the University of Pennsylvania to study international relations. But a Broadway director saw him in a student show at the University's Annenberg Center and asked why he wasn't studying theater arts.

"That made me think," Michael recalled.

The next year, he enrolled at the Boston Conservatory of Drama, Music and Dance where he earned a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in drama and music theater. He also studied at the CEC Studio in Los Angeles.

The 6' 160 pound actor has appeared in "Love of Life" and has done a variety of regional theatre and summer stock roles.

One positive note on Michael's Pavel character; Michael is the type of character who always lands on his feet and even though Rae has knocked the pins out from under him it's a sure bet that Pavel will find another angle to achieve the life at the top he so strongly craves.

Now a look at what's been happening and what will happen on all the afternoon dramas.

Recap: 3/9-3/13
Preview: 3/16-3/20

AS THE WORLD TURNS — Annie and Brad reach a true parting of the ways. John and Margo begin a true and warm relationship. Joyce wiggles out of another lie.

THE GUIDING LIGHT — Diane and Vanessa try to do a hatchet job on one another. Ross is having guilt feelings and is comforted by Eve. Hope turns the tables on Alan.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW — Ted can't seem to keep saying no to Jamie. Max is patronizing Garth without his consent.

Spence is concerned that Sissy will make trouble for Roger Lee.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS — Laurie will do anything to keep Leslie from Lance including throwing Jonas at her. Michael pressures Julia to let him be a part of her life and that of her child.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES — Joshua tells Marlena that Chandler killed Sunny while Chandler is present. After he leaves, Joshua tells her that Sunny is Joshua's mother. Chandler is causing Tod to worry because it appears he is losing touch with reality.

Marie and Alex are rescued — Marie tells Tom that Jessica is hers and Alex's daughter. Mary has Leslie fired. Tod takes over the corporation when Kellam worsens. Tod asks Jessica to marry him.

THIS WEEK: Chandler becomes more and more irrational. Marlena may be in danger.

GENERAL HOSPITAL — Lesley is wine and dined by Castle unaware that he is Cassidine. Ann is cleared when it is discovered that Diana died instantly and could not have written her name in blood. Jeff makes a home for PJ. Mrs. Grant and Jeff are disturbed when they learn that Heather will be released for day trips soon. Luke gets a new clue to the cabbie he's looking for when Mrs. Lutz visits the diner and tells him her husband is a cabbie working the docks at night.

THIS WEEK: Jeff keeps a tight rein on Heather but is Ann out of reach? Luke gets closer to the Ice Princess.

TEXAS — Reena is beginning to resent acting as a go-between for Iris when it comes to Dennis. Ryan is pressuring Ginny to tell him the paternity of the baby she's carrying and sticks around to find out the truth. Ashley is interviewed for a job and Iris realizes that she has a lot in common with her. Eliot is miffed when Dennis takes a job at KUIK.

THIS WEEK: Iris confides in her new found friend. Ginny is almost caught in a tall tale.

BY MARY ANN COOPER

ANOTHER WORLD

Cecile and Jamie announce their marriage at Blaine's party. Jerry and Blaine have a romantic interlude. Jordan is very disturbed when he becomes convinced that Jerry has come back into Blaine's life. Clarice tells Leigh that she wants no help from Larry financial or otherwise. Sandy confides in Joey about his life in Vegas. Jerry is hit by a car but it was intentional and not an accident.

THIS WEEK: Will Jerry pull through? Blaine is moved by feelings that resurface from the past.

THE DOCTORS — John is involved in an accident on his way home from the wedding. Jack performs surgery on John, but John needs additional treatment in Chicago. Ashley realizes she can't leave John, and goes with him to Chicago leaving Jack broken hearted. Nola is about to tell Jason all when Jason tells her that Mona dragged him to the bank last week to check on Jessica's trust account and everything was fine.

THIS WEEK: Luke's interest in Natalie grows. Alpha goes to bat with Jerry.

RYAN'S HOPE — Michael is the intruder in Rae's bedroom. After some gentle persuasion, Rae forgives Michael and gives him back his job. Siobhan is entranced by Joe. Jack plans to track Joe by offering him a commission on stolen securities. Barry sells Seneca on the idea that Kim should take the TV part.

THIS WEEK: Little John contemplates running away again. Siobhan reluctantly agrees to Jack's plan.

Long-time farm program slated for oblivion

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A 30-year-old program that has helped farmers build storage and drying facilities for billions of bushels of corn, wheat and other crops is slated for oblivion under President Reagan's budget plan.

The program is operated by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the agency in the Agriculture Department that administers farm programs in virtually every county.

Although the program began in 1949, it has picked up a massive head of steam in recent years. Agency officials said Thursday that through the fiscal year which ended last Sept. 30 the program had lent farmers about $2.8 billion for about 4.3 billion bushels of commodities.

During last fiscal year, the loans amounted to $362.6 million for about 291.7 million bushels. That was down from $678.9 million and 684.6 million bushels in 1978-79; and $646.4 million and 753.7 million bushels in 1977-78.

The loans can be for up to 85 percent of the cost of installing on-farm storage and drying facilities — up to a maximum of $100,000 — to help farmers handle barley, corn, dry edible beans, flaxseed, grain sorghum, oats, peanuts, rice, rye, soybeans, sunflower seed, wheat and high-moisture forage.

As with some other loan programs, the interest rates farmers pay to get them are often less than it costs the Agriculture Department to borrow the money from the U.S. Treasury.

Currently, officials said, farmers are charged 12.5 percent interest on the loans, compared to rates as high as 15 percent charged by Treasury at one point a couple of months ago.

According to an Agriculture Department briefing paper on Reagan's budget proposals sent to Congress this week, the program will be changed administratively so loans can cover no more than 75 percent of the costs of storage and drying facilities — instead of the 85 percent now allowed — and the repayment period will be reduced to five years from the current eight.

Further, it said, the Reagan administration's general farm bill will include a provision to eliminate the loans as a program "permanently mandated" by federal law.

Instead, the administration will seek "a small, administratively created, storage facility program that will be phased out over five years, ending completely in 1986."

The reason, according to the budget planners, is "an excess supply of storage facilities," even in 1979 when there was record crop production. Last year, when hot weather and drought sharply reduced output, the excess storage supply almost doubled.

"Drought conditions of the past summer and expected high demand for grain suggest that this excess storage situation will continue for several years," the report said.

"For those few states where adequate storage capacity may still be lacking, a smaller-scale storage facility loan program will be available for several more years in order to alleviate the special problems of these few areas."

It said "major deficits" in grain storage still exist in Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Montana and Ohio.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although prospects look favorable for world grain production, Agriculture Department analysts say there is much uncertainty about global trade in 1981-82.

Among the reasons, they say, is the future of U.S. relations with the Soviet Union. The U.S. embargo on 17 million tons of grain originally intended for the Soviet Union last year and this year and the question of whether there will be another long-term agreement with the Soviets.

But for now, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Thursday, good crops in the Southern Hemisphere and favorable prospects elsewhere have eased fears of a global grain crunch.

"Early prospects continue to indicate an increase in global grain output during 1981-82 and the likelihood of (reserve) stock rebuilding, especially of wheat," the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said.

"Current favorable crop prospects are contingent, of course, on normal or better-than-normal weather — leaving the chance that the outlook could tighten considerably with widespread poor weather in major producing countries."

The report said that although the world's grain trade "appears likely" to increase in the coming year, global market conditions will depend heavily on production in key countries, general economic conditions and government policy decisions.

Two policy issues involve the partial embargo still in effect on sales of U.S. grain to the Soviet Union and whether a new long-term grain agreement will be sought by the two nations.

The embargo was ordered by former President Carter Jan. 4, 1980 in response to the Soviet Union's military move into Afghanistan. Although President Reagan has been under pressure from farm groups and many members of Congress to lift the embargo, he has not indicated whether he will do so.

worked out.

"Both of these issues (the embargo and the agreement) remain prominent variables in determining grain trade flows, the level of world trade, price tendencies and grain production decisions in the United States and its major export competitors," the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Milk production in February rose to 10.1 billion pounds, up 1 percent from a year earlier even though February 1980 had an extra day because of leap year.

The Agriculture Department said Thursday that the additional day in February 1980 added 3.6 percent to production that month.

That meant, adjusting for the additional day, February's milk output actually was up by more than 4 percent from a year earlier, the same rate of increase as in January.

IN AGRICULTURE

By Joe VanZandt
County Extension Agent

The moisture we have received has really been nice. Especially since it has been almost three months since we had received any beneficial moisture. At least we know it can still rain. However, we can't make a crop on this rain, but at least it will help settle the dust and give the wheat crop a good boost this spring.

ESTATE AND TAX MANAGEMENT SEMINARS:
On March 24th, we have two outstanding seminars scheduled with Dr. Wayne Hayenga, Extension Economist - Management and Project Supervisor. These programs will be held in the Courthouse Annex Meeting Room.

The first seminar will start at 1:30 p.m. and will deal with the question, "Can You Pay Less Taxes with a Corporation?" The second seminar to be held at 7:30 p.m. will include a discussion on Estate Planning for the farmer, rancher and small businessman.

I think anyone interested in saving tax dollars will find either - both programs interesting and beneficial.

Dr. Hayenga has an excellent background for dealing with these subjects as his background includes a Law Degree, Ag. Economics Degree, and personal involvement in farm operations. These seminars will be informative and on a practical basis so that you can make use of the material that fits your situation. There will be ample time to get your questions answered.

CHECK SOIL TEMPERATURE BEFORE PLANTING:
In many cases the early bird does get the worm. But, when it comes to spring planting, farmers may want to use a little restraint and take a look at soil temperatures before cranking up their planters.

One of the keys to getting spring crops off to a good start is to heed soil temperatures. Soil temperatures have been shown to have an important effect on how well seed germinate. Planting in cool soils often leads to poor seed germination and poor crop stands. Plants that do come up often lack vigor for early growth. And this opens the door to early season disease and insect attacks.

Farmers are advised to begin planting only after the danger of a late frost is past and the soil has warmed to temperatures favorable to the intended crop.

Farmers also need to keep attuned to weather forecasts prior to planting. A sudden change in weather conditions following planting can be detrimental to the crop, particularly a cool, wet spell that can lower soil temperatures drastically.

Just when is it safe to plant what crop? Average minimum temperatures (at the four - inch depth) for planting are as follows: Corn - 50 degrees F.; Sorghum - 55 degrees F.; Cotton - 65 degrees F.; and Soybeans - 70 degrees F.

4-H CORNER

County Extension Agents

4-H BICYCLE PROJECT:
A 4-H Bicycle Project is being planned. It will start in April. The project will cover safety rules and regulations, along with bicycle maintenance and care. All 4-H members interested in this project should contact the County Extension Office so that we can make arrangements for the number of members in the project.

TEENS EXPLORE PARENT EDUCATION:
The Teens Explore Parent Education project group met for their last meeting on March 4th. The members discussed children's needs and watched and discussed films on "What's in a Name" and "Toys and Activities for the Pre - School Child." Certificates for completion of the TEPE project were presented to Shelly Cochran and Lori Enoch.

DATES:
March 19th - Method Demonstration Workshop in the Courthouse Annex at 3:45 p.m.

4-H OFFERS CHANCE FOR INTERNATIONAL LIVING:
Through the 4-H program, Texas youth are becoming more involved in the international scene. Every year youth take part in the International 4-H Youth Exchange (IFYE). Between 35 and 40 countries participate in this program, with more than 85 participants exchanged each year.

When the IFYE program began in 1948, it was primarily a cultural exchange program. With changing world conditions, however, emphasis in the exchange has been made to best meet the needs of youth and their educational programs.

To create international understanding and assist in the development of youth programs throughout the world, delegates from the U.S. and their foreign counterparts travel abroad from three to six months during spring, summer or fall.

Exchanges live and work with their host families to learn the cultures, language, and ways of life. Opportunities are provided for pursuing special study interests and for observing and working with youth programs.

Serving as a host family to a foreign exchange is a rewarding and satisfying experience. The host family can provide lots of information for the visiting 4-H'er and can also receive new ideas and information of distant lands and their people.

Families interested in hosting a foreign youth exchange or youth interested in being a delegate to a foreign country can contact the County Extension Office for additional information.

Hardy vegetables such as onions, cabbage and potatoes can be planted once soil temperatures range between 45 degrees F. and 50 degrees F. while warm - season vegetables such as tomatoes, melons, beans, and peppers need soil that has warmed into the 60's.

With early season planting, particularly when soil temperatures are still marginal, farmers need to pay particular attention to using high quality seed, fungicides and other seed protectants, and adjusting seeding rates.

How do farmers keep abreast of changing soil temperatures? Daily readings are taken at various locations throughout Texas in cooperation with the Extension Service and Texas Agriculture Experiment Station. Regional readings are made in the High Plains, North and East Texas, Trans-Pecos area, Coastal Plains, South Texas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

As temperatures are collected, they are included in daily agricultural advisories issued by the National Weather Service for each of the regions. The advisories are fed into the NOAA (National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration) weather wire by teletype to be received by the NWS radio network as well as radio and television stations.

Keeping tabs on the weather and soil conditions can help farmers get off to a good start with spring planting. With the high cost of farm inputs, it's information that should be put to good use.

CONSUMER FOOD VOTES IMPORTANT TO FARMERS:
Every day is voting day in America's food stores. While farmers are busy producing raw products, consumers are busy accepting or rejecting the foods made from them.

Consumers have the power to accept or reject a commodity or a service, taking into account its cost and value. Farmers are becoming more interested in the outcome of their voting. Years ago when one farmer fed his own and one other family, the farmer tallied the consumer's votes. There was quick response if the butter was rancid, or the milk had turned sour or the sweet corn was not sweet. These responses came from the cash - paying customer as well as members of the farmer's family. The farmer then had a personal involvement in how consumers voted.

Today, because one farmer produces enough food to feed seventy (forty - eight at home, twenty - two abroad) others, he no longer takes a personal interest in how consumers vote. Though the farmer is giving less attention to how consumers vote than formerly, this does not mean their votes are less meaningful.

The counting goes on continuously, and someone is keeping the record and counting the vote. Someone is getting the rewards for responding to the vote.

Who is this someone? He is the one supplying the products you see in the retail stores or restaurants. He is a processor marketer. Because these people are sensitive to how consumers vote, farmers feel they need not be.

How do we now that processors and marketers are responding to the consumers' vote?

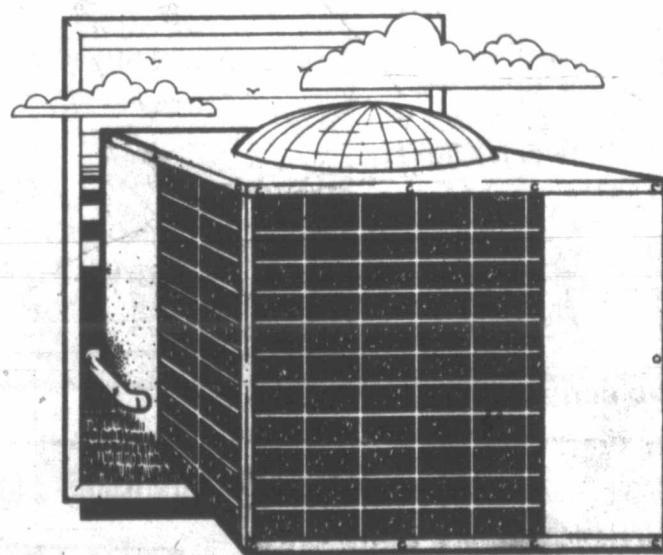

For one thing, we see more and more items on the grocer's shelves. There are now about 15,000 in an average supermarket, and a large number are new. For example, consumers used to buy potatoes on one form - fresh, by the bag. Today there are at least fifty different potato products that require no paring knife for preparation in the kitchen.

Consumers have a choice - either frozen, dehydrated, canned or combined with other foods. Consumers are more and more concerned with taste and convenience than price. This includes more eating out. The eating out business is increasing faster than the retail food business. Today about 31 cents of the average American's dollar goes for food eaten away from the home.

These changes are responses to consumer votes and spell opportunities for farmers just as for the marketers. Farmers can become the innovators of new convenience foods. But, even when they are not the innovators, efforts by others to put more convenience foods on the market puts new demands on the farmer.

These include the need to produce new varieties, new flavors, new colors, greater uniformity, and a lot of other product features that get the vote of modern consumers.

No matter how you look at it, the consumer vote counts.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

March 16, 1981

This coming year will be a busy one for you. In fact, you could even take on several unrelated involvements in order to add to your resources or to raise your station in life.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Sometimes we do things where the proper rewards are denied us. This won't be your case today. The better the job, the bigger the bonus. Find out more about what's in store for you for the year following your birthday by sending for your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) New ideas or concepts will hold a strong appeal for you today. You may even suddenly scrap plans which you spent considerable time working out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Something profitable may develop today, but it's likely to be of a fleeting nature. If you hope to reap its benefits, be prepared to move swiftly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Because you have the ability to handle problem people or difficult situations today, you can turn situations around and make the adverse beneficial.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Beginning today it's possible you'll find ways to add new twists to your work, thus increasing your productivity and, perhaps, enlarging your income.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, others will admire the way you conduct yourself. Your strongest and most favorable impressions, however, will be made on persons who meet you for the first time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A way may be found today to resolve a problem which appeared to have no solution. The answer could come as a flash of inspiration.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) New friends with fresh ideas may start entering your life at this time. You could become involved in projects or enterprises which you never tried before.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're entering a period where conditions should be more favorable than usual where your work, reputation or finances are concerned. Be alert for unique opportunities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) More ingenious and better ways may be found today to advance your self-interests and personal goals. You're off on a new path. Things look good.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There's a chance you could turn a tidy profit today on something which another may be ready to discard. Pick up the pieces.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Lady Luck tends to look favorably on you today in situations where there are partners involved, especially if your collective enterprise is a bold one.

political expediency. In any event, the 1980s will be exciting, challenging and profitable for pipeliners.

The 14 projects include a 4,800-mile United States-Canada gas transmission line at $23 billion, more than 7,000 miles of U.S. coal slurry lines at $15 billion, and $8 billion to $12 billion for a 3,000-mile gas system from Canada's Arctic Islands to Canadian and U.S. eastern markets.

At present, the report said, more than 119,000 miles of line are under construction, planned or awaiting start outside the United States and Canada. The total includes 67,889 miles of gas lines, 31,938 miles of crude line, and 16,174 for products.

The report said Europe's energy requirements are being met to an increasing degree with natural gas.

"As gas use grows, so does the pace of natural gas pipe line construction," the report continued.

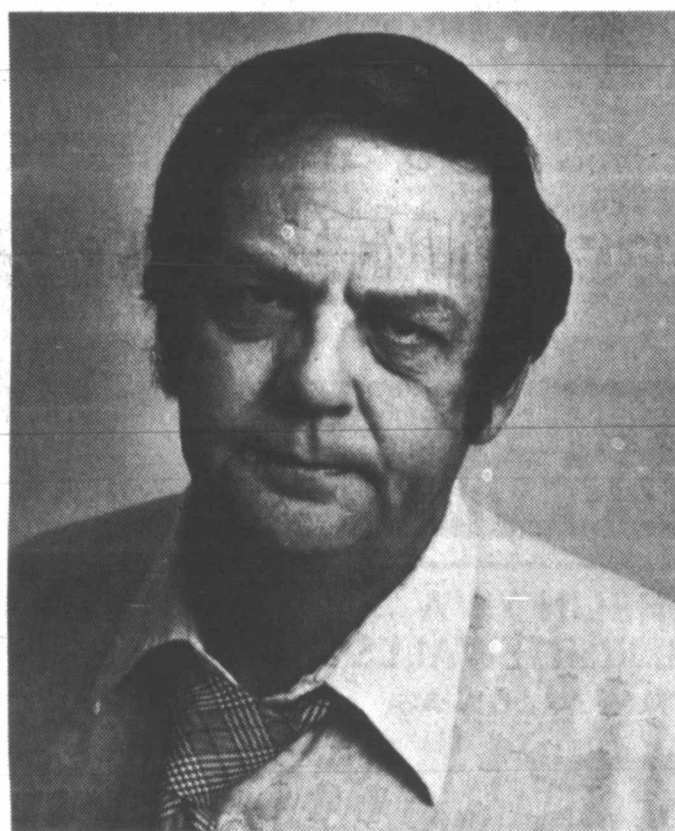

"As a result, natural gas projects dominate the pipe line construction picture in Europe and, based on present indications, the trend is not likely to slow down in the foreseeable future."

Pipe Line Industry said lines under way, planned or proposed in Europe and the Soviet Union total 63,369 miles.

"More than 20,100 miles of the European total are now under construction, awaiting start or planned," the report said.

"The major portion of this work, 17,088 miles, is concentrated in Norway, Denmark, West Germany, France, Italy, Spain and onshore-offshore United Kingdom. Over 9,000 miles of this total will be in Denmark, which has an ambitious program to make natural gas available to some 272 municipalities."

Tulsa posts NIT win

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Tulsa won its first National Invitation Tournament game in history Friday night. And Tulsa Coach Nolan Richardson would like to see history repeat itself Monday.

Richardson's resurgent Hurricane, with an all-time best record of 22-7, used a swarm of substitutes to outnumber Pan American, 81-71, Friday night in the last of 16 first-round NIT games.

Tulsa will host Texas-El Paso, 18-11, at Oral Roberts University's Mabee Center Monday night in a second-round game. Richardson played college basketball for UTEP Coach Don Haskins.

"It will be a pupil trying to beat the teacher," Richardson says. "He will be in the position where he'd like to keep teaching."

Although the second round of the NIT is rare atmosphere for a Tulsa team, some current Tulsa players and Richardson are no strangers to post-season success.

Richardson was 37-0 at Western Texas last year as his team won the national junior college tournament. Four players from that team form the core of the Hurricane.

"We've been playing a little slow the last part of the year and without the kind of intensity we had last year and earlier this year," Richardson said Friday night. "Tonight, we went back to our old style."

Twelve Tulsa players saw action, 11 of them in a close first half, before Pan American's Bronces gave out in the closing minutes.

Tulsa's victory over Pan American made the Hurricane the most improved team in the NCAA Division I this year. Tulsa was 8-19 last year.

Harvesters bow in regionals

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor
MIDLAND—Sometimes those one-point losses can hurt more than a 20-point blowout.

A coach can look back and see where a break here or a basket there would have made all the difference in the world.

That's the way it was Friday night when Pampa lost to El Paso Eastwood by a scant one point, 62-61, in the Class 5A regional basketball tournament.

"I think the second quarter was the difference," said Harvester coach Garland Nichols. "We were up by five points and going good when Charles (Nelson) picked up his third foul and I had to take him out."

The score was deadlocked nine times in the first half with Eastwood ahead by two, 26-24, at halftime.

Eastwood ripped off eight consecutive points in the third quarter to take a nine-point lead, 40-31. The Harvesters could never quite catch up although they pulled within one point five different times in the fourth period.

Pampa started the fourth quarter with a 10-point barrage to draw within one, 52-51, with 4:49 to play. However, Eastwood pulled out to a five-point lead, 56-51, on a fastbreak layup by Rick Clark and a pair of free shots by Johnny Gipson.

Pampa whittled the lead to one again, 56-55, on a 12-foot jumper by Charles Nelson and two free throws by Mike Nelson with 3:04 remaining. But Eastwood's one-point lead was like a brick wall. The Harvesters never could crack it.

Pampa's last chance came when Eastwood's Rick Clark missed the front end of a one and one with four seconds to go and the Harvesters trailing, 62-61.

Pampa's Damon Fleming won the rebound scramble and passed to teammate

Terry Faggins at midcourt. But the final buzzer sounded before he shot and missed.

Pampa led in both shooting and rebounding statistics, but Eastwood counteracted with an aggressive man-to-man defense that forced the Harvesters into 14 turnovers. Eastwood was charged with only eight turnovers.

"The mistakes killed us," said Nichols, who was disappointed, but not devastated by the loss. "The kids played a good game though. This was good playoff experience for them. They have a good shot at coming back to the regionals next year."

For the game, Pampa hit 50 percent (22-45) from the floor and 89 percent (17-19) from the foul line. Eastwood was 41.7 percent (23-62) from the floor and 62.2 percent (16-25) from the foul line.

Pampa won out on the boards, 30-20, with Mike Nelson pulling down six rebounds for the Harvesters. Ray Condo and Terry Faggins had four apiece while Damon Fleming had three.

Nelson (Mike) led all scorers with 18 points and kept the Harvesters close in the fourth quarter by hitting eight of eight from the charity stripe.

Nelson (Charles), a 6-2 sophomore, tossed in 16 points. Condo added eight points and Faggins had six points and six assists. Fleming and Romeryl Dowdy had five and four points respectively while Ed Guerra and Kirt Crouch had two points each.

Mark Wagner led the Troopers with 13 points. Rick Clark and John Shepherd followed with 11 and 10 points respectively.

Pampa finishes with a 23-12 record while Eastwood takes a 34-4 record into the finals against Dunbar, an 80-76 winner over Midland High, Saturday afternoon.

Pampa girls place at track meet

AMARILLO—Pampa High girls' track and field team competed in the Amarillo Invitational Saturday.

There were three Pampa winners in junior varsity competition. LuAnn Murdock won the shot put with a toss of 30-4 and was second in the discus with a 94-0 toss. Rebecca Gunther cleared 15-7 to win the long jump and Tina Greenway came in first in the 100-meter dash.

"I've found some girls who have some competitive spirit," Pampa coach Wendall Palmer said. "It's just a matter of whipping them into shape now."

Also placing were Shelley Duenkel, second, high jump; Greenway, third, long jump; 400-meter relay (Greenway, Duenkel, Powell, Jurnigan), third; Sandy Jones, third, 800-meter run; Jurnigan, third, 100-meter; Powell, sixth, 100-meter; Gunther, third, 200-meter; Powell, fifth, 200-meter; Jurnigan, sixth, 200-meter.

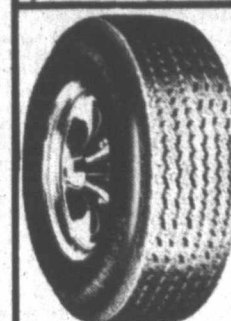

Leslie Albus took fifth in both the 100 and 200-yard dashes in varsity competition. Jessica Marcum tossed the shot put for fifth place.

Pampa girls participate in the Canyon Invitational next Saturday.

Softball meetings set

Organizational meetings for the City of Pampa Park and Recreation summer softball leagues are scheduled this week in commission room 202 of City Hall.

Coaches or managers of all teams planning to enter league play are urged to attend the meetings.

Discussions will be centered around league fees, by-laws and submission deadlines for fees and team rosters. An umpire from the Pampa Softball Association will also be present to discuss rule changes.

Fastpitch leagues for both men and women will meet Monday, followed by slowpitch church leagues (men and women) on Tuesday, and slowpitch industrial league (men and women) and slowpitch mixed league both on Thursday.

All meetings will begin at 7 p.m.

Longhorns sweep twinbill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Longhorns swept a doubleheader from the Texas Tech Red Raiders 5-1, 7-6 at Disch-Falk Field Saturday to complete their 3-game Southwest Conference baseball opener.

In the first game, Texas jumped to a 3-0 lead in the third on a Burk Goldthorn sacrifice fly and a 2-run homer by left fielder Randy Richards.

Mike Withrow, 3-0, picked up the win for Texas.

In the second game, Texas Tech battled to a 6-6 tie in the top of the eighth. But in the bottom of the inning, the Longhorns scored when first baseman Chris Campbell reached first on an error by Tech shortstop Andy Dawson.

Campbell stole second and third baseman Robert Culley, who went 4-for-5 during the day, singled him home with the winning run.

Texas is now 18-2-1 for the year and 3-0 in SWC play. Tech fell to 12-5 and 0-3.

Underrated Northeastern wins opening round in NCAA play

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Coach Jim Calhoun of Northeastern says he's not the type to say, "I told you so," especially to a veteran of the game like former basketball coach Al McGuire of Marquette.

But it was clear Saturday, as Calhoun basked in the winner's spotlight after his first-round NCAA-West victory over Fresno State, that he was slightly indignant that his Huskies have been underrated in the national press, especially in an unflattering column written by McGuire.

"There have been comments and articles that we don't belong here," said Calhoun, whose team is matched against 14th-ranked Utah in the second round of the playoffs Sunday afternoon. That game will follow a 1 p.m. MST game in the Texas-El Paso Special Events Center between sixth-ranked North Carolina, 25-7, and unranked Pittsburgh, 19-11.

And being unranked is what rankles Calhoun.

"Coach McGuire's article citing us as the one team that didn't belong, we felt, was great motivation for our kids," he said. "We're not vindictive about it. We're not saying we told you so. We just want to prove we can play basketball."

Calhoun's Huskies, 24-5, did a little bit of that Friday night in defeating favored Fresno State, 55-53, by holding the ball for more than five minutes with the score tied and then moving in for the winning lay-up by Chip Rucker with only four seconds left.

Pittsburgh won an even more dramatic first round game Friday night against Idaho in overtime. Dwayne Wallace shoveled the ball in from 12 feet out — a shot, he said later, "only God could have put in" — with three seconds left for a 70-69 win over a team that had led during most of regulation play.

"Stranger things have happened," said Panthers Coach Roy Chipman when asked he had a realistic chance of beating the highly touted Tar Heels of North Carolina. "In order for us to win, we're going to have to stop their front line."

North Carolina Coach Dean

Smith said the fact that his team has played 16 other clubs that have made the NCAA playoffs, winning 11 and losing five, "should help us. We've been in many close game situations. The game tomorrow should be a very close game."

Coach Jerry Pimm of Utah, 24-4, said his game against Northeastern will not be like the defensive, slow-paced battle Northeastern fought against Fresno State Friday night.

In the second half last night Northeastern took only 12 shots.

Centenary wins gym title

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Margot Todd placed first in every event and led a dominating Centenary women's gymnastics team to an easy victory in the AIAW Region IV championships Saturday.

Only four contestants from other schools placed among the top six in any of the four individual events or in the all-around scoring. And none of them placed higher than third.

Centenary, the three-time defending national champion in Division II, will try for a fourth championship at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., April 3-4.

Centenary had a 142.05 team score, and held the top and floor exercise. Karen Hunter of Southwest Texas had a 36.60 total. Kim Strauss had 35.70, and Jennifer Forshee and Sue Haynie tied for third at 34.80.

Two non-Centenary University's Val Young was fifth all-around, at 34.00, and contestants placed in individual events.

Miners win NCAA track meet

DETROIT (AP) — Suleiman Nyambui won the mile for the third consecutive year and became the greatest individual winner in the 17-year history of the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships, while leading Texas-El Paso to the team title Saturday.

The Miners, capturing the team championship for the second straight year and the sixth time in eight seasons, amassed a record-tying 76 points in the two-day, 18-event extravaganza at Joe Louis Arena.

The graceful Nyambui, a 27-year-old junior from Tanzania, won the mile in 4:01.85 seconds, about 75 minutes after he had been thwarted in an attempt to capture the two-mile for the third year in a row, finishing second to Brigham Young's Doug Padilla in a stirring duel.

Going into this year's meet, Nyambui had been tied for the record four victories with former Kansas distance star

Jim Ryan, winner of the mile from 1967-69 and the two-mile in 1968.

Now, Nyambui, the 1980 Olympic silver medalist in the 5,000 meters and the indoor record holder at that distance, has won five NCAA indoor titles and he has one year of eligibility remaining. He also has won three NCAA outdoor championships, the 10,000 in 1979 and the 5,000 and 10,000 in 1980.

While Nyambui was making history, so was sophomore Carl Lewis of the University of Houston. The versatile Lewis, a 19-year-old from Willingboro, N.J., added the 60-yard dash title to the long jump crown he had won

Friday night, making him the first athlete in NCAA indoor history to win a track event and field event.

The last athlete to take the sprint and the long jump in a

NCAA meet was the legendary Jesse Owens, in the 1936 outdoor championships.

Harvesters place second in triangular golf meet

Pampa's Gary Cudney fired a 77 (37-40) for medalist honors as the Harvesters finished second to Amarillo High in a triangular golf meet Saturday at the Pampa Country Club.

AHS shot 324 while Pampa was only four strokes off the pace with a 328. Caprock followed with a 367.

"Our score was very encouraging," said Pampa coach Deck Woldt. "We've been averaging around 340, so it looks pretty promising."

Todd Preston and Russ Karr of AHS both shot 80 to take runnerup honors behind Cudney.

Dennis Mashburn of Pampa was third at 81 (39-42). Kenny Martin and Jeff Hanson had an 82 (41-41) and 88 (42-46) respectively for the Harvesters.

Pampa's B team also played 18 holes Saturday and shot 359. David Fatheree led Pampa JVs with an 85, followed by Derick Dalton, 89; Cliff Baker, 91 and Craig Chapin, 94.

"We're in the process of using our scores to determine our lineup in district," Woldt said. "I'm hoping we can get in around 90 holes before district starts."

Pampa hosts the first round of District 3-5A play Friday, March 27.

"We've had some freshmen out for a couple of weeks now and some of them have a lot of ability," Woldt said. "We're going to get some help from them in the future."

Pampa High girls' team shot a 500 to take sixth in the opening round of the District 3-5A Tournament Friday in Amarillo.

Penny Summers led Pampa with a 101. Shelly Crossman followed with a 126. Valrie Bradford, 135; Melissa SSnow, 138 and SGeorgina Milam, 144.

Tascosa leads the eight-team meet with a 357. Jill Prince of Tascosa was medalist with an 82.

UIL recommends competition rule changes among athletes, scholars

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — School students should not be penalized when their coaches or officials violate athletic and scholastic competition rules, the State Board of Education was told Saturday.

The recommendation was one of six major changes proposed by a special study committee of University Interscholastic League operations. The committee's report was accepted unanimously by the board.

The report also recommended that junior high school athletic programs be de-emphasized and limited to the time normally set aside for physical education and intramural activities.

"No athletic endeavor, including preparation and travel time, should be scheduled in a manner that would result in a student's loss of instructional time during the regular school day," said the report presented by Bryan Crouch, board member from Poteet and head of the study group.

Crouch stressed that his committee had never at any time sought to put the UIL under control of the state board.

Board officials said later the board would work with the UIL in coming months concerning the recommendations.

Crouch said the majority of sanctions that are imposed now on school districts for violations of UIL rules "actually penalize the students. In most instances the students neither perpetrated nor are they responsible for the rule infraction. Coaches, sponsors or administrators usually caused the violation of rules."

Other recommendations of Crouch's committee included:

— Reorganize the UIL to provide that a nine-member State Executive Committee would govern all UIL operations. The committee would include five members of the University of Texas staff and four citizen members nominated by the State Board of Education. Since the study began, the four citizen members have been appointed by UT President Peter Flawn. The director of the UIL would be appointed for a specific term.

— Rewrite and codify all UIL rules to be "clear, concise and explicit."

When Oklahoma defeated Wyoming, 41-7, in the 1976 Fiesta Bowl, the Sooners played the entire game without being forced to punt.

In its 17-0 loss to Tennessee in the 1939 Orange Bowl game, Oklahoma had to punt 13 times and had three more called back because of penalties.

Oregon State an upset victim

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Senior guard Rolando Blackman connected on a 16-foot jump shot from the right baseline with two seconds remaining Saturday, giving unranked Kansas State a 50-48 victory over second-ranked Oregon State in a second-round game of the NCAA Tournament's Western Regionals.

Blackman gave the Wildcats of the Big Eight Conference their only lead with his game-winning shot. The triumph boosted Kansas State, 23-8, into the Western Regional semifinals against the winner of Saturday's second game at Pauley Pavilion between Illinois and Wyoming.

The upstart KSU Wildcats, who had come from 12 points down to beat San Francisco 64-60 in a first-round game Thursday night, trailed Oregon State 26-19 at halftime and 39-28 with just under 14 minutes to play before they surged back.

Two free throws by Ed Nealy with 3:23 left made it 48-48 all, giving the Wildcats their first tie since the game's opening minute.

Oregon State center Steve Johnson, who led the Beavers 16 points and six rebounds, fouled out on the play.

Oregon State finished its season at 26-2 and lost its NCAA tournament opener for the second straight year.

Blackman led the Wildcats with 14 points. Forward Tyrone Adams added 12 points for the Wildcats and Nealy finished with 11 points and a game-high nine rebounds.

Guards Ray Blume and Mark Radford added 10 and eight points, respectively, for the Beavers, who lost their second game in a row.

After winning 26 straight games, the Beavers had been beaten 87-67.

LSU crushes Lamar, 100-78

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Senior Forward Durand Macklin powered home a season-high 31 points and yanked down 16 rebounds Saturday to muscle No. 4-ranked Louisiana State University to a 100-78 victory over outclassed Lamar University Saturday, advancing the Bengal Tigers to the NCAA Midwest Regional finals in New Orleans next week.

Macklin, whose previous high was 29 against Mississippi State, dominated the Cardinals as LSU crushed

Lamar's zone with bruising board work.

The Tigers, now 29-3 for the year, got 26 points from sophomore Howard Carter and 18 points from freshman Leonard Mitchell in the runaway over the Cardinals, Lamar, which upset

Missouri 71-67 Thursday night, trailed 55-43 at halftime and saw the Tigers rip off nine straight points to start the second half.

The Southland Conference champion Cardinals were led by senior guard Mike Olliver, who scored 29 points.

Royals down Rangers

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — John Wathan's eighth-inning homer broke a 2-2 tie Saturday and propelled the Kansas City Royals to a 4-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Wathan's blast over the left field wall came off loser Don Kainer, who worked the last three innings for the Rangers. Kainer was also nicked for an unearned run in the ninth when Willie Wilson reached first on an error by second baseman Oddie Davis and later scored on U.L. Washington's third single of the afternoon.

Craig Chamberlain, who held the Rangers scoreless through the final three frames, got the win.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead in the first when Bump Wills, who had led off with a double to right, scored on Al Oliver's infield grounder.

Kansas City evened things in the third on Hal McRae's RBI single and took the lead an inning later when Frank White scored on Clint Hurdle's double at the expense of Ranger righthander Steve Comer.

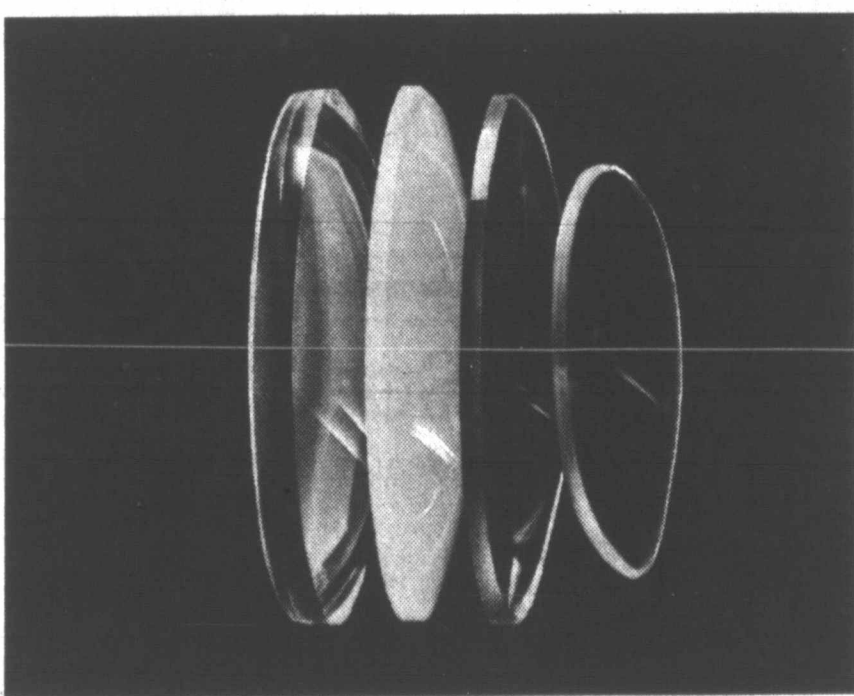

Ranger third baseman Buddy Bell squared the count again in the bottom half of the fourth with a solo homer.

It still pays to make some things as painstakingly as possible — for example, the lenses in your glasses.

TSO could give you ready-made lenses or slightly modified ready-mades in a few hours.

But how well you see and how comfortably depends on how precisely the lenses meet every detail of your doctor's prescription.

So TSO has each lens individually made ... exactly to the doctor's prescription ... in a great optical laboratory that puts each lens through 17 separate inspections for quality and accuracy.

Eyewear with TSO's custom-made lenses. Not the fastest way. Just the best.

Shakespeare exhibit: As You Like It

An exhibit on the life and times of William Shakespeare will be displayed March 23 - April 3 at Lovett Memorial Library.

Special events preceding the opening of the exhibit, "Shakespeare, the Globe and the World," include "An Evening of Merriment, Madrigals and Feasting" and a film showing of one of Shakespeare's plays, "As You Like It."

The special events and exhibit, all of which are free and open to the public, are sponsored by the Friends of the Library and the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

The "Evening of Merriment" will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday, March 26 at the library. The exhibit will be on display, and an audio-visual program will be presented.

Students of Nanette Grainger, Pampa High School drama teacher, will portray excerpts from some of Shakespeare's plays, including "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Comedy of Errors" and "The Taming of the Shrew." Some of Shakespeare's sonnets will also be read.

High school madrigal singers, under the direction of Pampa High School choir director Billy Talley, will also perform.

Foods dating from the Elizabethan period, when Shakespeare lived, will also be served. Refreshments will include hot cross buns, "mulled cider," cheese, fruit and "load in the hole," now known as pigs in a blanket, which are small sausages wrapped in biscuit dough and cooked.

The film, "As You Like It," will be shown at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 22, in the library conference room.

The exhibit, a collection of large photographs provided by the Texas Humanities Resource Center, will be open for public viewing during regular library hours, except March 23, when the photographs will be on display from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Regular library hours are 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

The photographs are of artifacts dating from Shakespeare's lifetime, which currently are touring large cities and museums across the United States.

A series of five slide shows will also be shown at the library in conjunction with the exhibit. Viewing times are 4 p.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays, and 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. Wednesdays. Groups who cannot attend at these times may arrange a special viewing time.

William Shakespeare was born on or about April 23, 1564, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, in a house which still stands at Stratford-on-Avon, England. He began the first of his 37 plays, "Love's Labour's Lost," in about 1588. He also wrote several poems and sonnets.

By 1592 the "bard of Avon" had established himself in the theater in London, first as an actor and then as a playwright. Public theaters, banned by Puritan officials as tools of the devil, were located outside the city. The first playhouse, called simply the Theatre, was built in 1576 on rented land north of London. When the landowner refused to renew the lease in 1599, the structure was torn apart and the timbers transported to Bankside, south of the city, where the Globe Playhouse, Shakespeare's "Wooden O," was built.

It was for these theaters that Shakespeare wrote most of his plays. His last play, "Henry VIII," was written in 1613.

He died on April 23, 1616 at the age of 52 and was buried inside the Holy Trinity church of Stratford, where he had been a lay rector. Over his grave, there is an inscription believed to have been written by him:

GOOD FRIEND FOR JESUS SAKE
FORBEARE

TO DIGG THE DUST ENCLOSED
HEARE

BLESTE BE YE MAN THAT SPARES
THES STONES.

AND CURST BE HE THAT MOUES MY BONES

DREAMY DRAMA. Lori Campbell, left, and Shane Raulston rehearse an excerpt from "A Midsummer Night's Dream," one of three Shakespeare plays included in the "Evening of Merriment."

*All the world's a stage
And all the men and women merely players.
They have their exits and entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages.
--from As You Like It*

THE WOODEN 'O'. Most of Shakespeare's plays were written for and performed in the Globe Theater, built in 1599 south of London. The theater is no longer standing, having been destroyed by Puritans who believed that theaters were tools of the devil.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Step back and view the vivid watercolors of Stanley Obritski Jr. and you'd never know this rising young artist is paralyzed from the chest to his toes, and paints with a brush in his mouth.

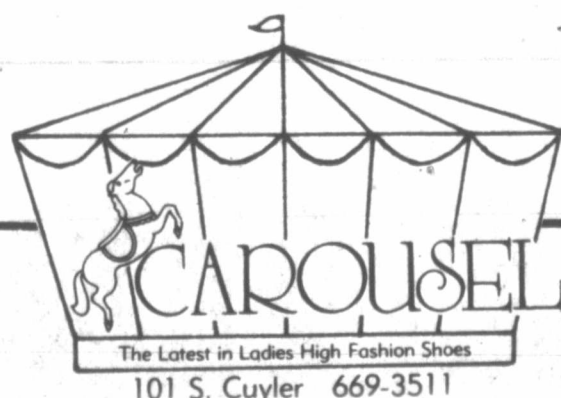

"It was just like a ride on a galloping horse," said the 38-year-old quadriplegic from Jackson, N.J., in describing his first dismal efforts to be creative. "I fell off a lot of times, but it's been a great, exciting ride."

"Oh, man, to be sitting in a wheelchair, and just existing, just wasting, and all of a sudden to be a productive man. That's hard to really put in words."

Obritski, who can spend only a few hours at a time in a sitting position because of a 1970 auto crash that crippled him, was one of the honored guests at an international art exhibit for artists with physical disabilities sponsored by Moss Rehabilitation Hospital. Honorary chairman was Andrew Wyeth.

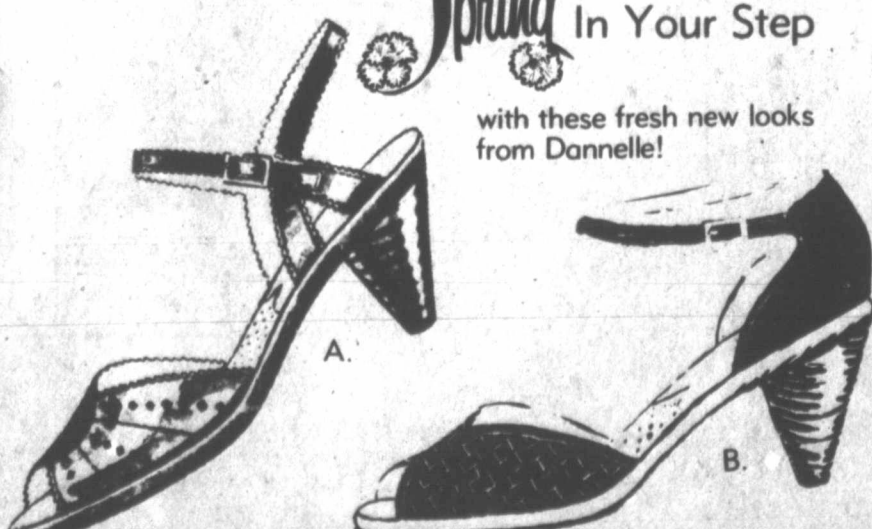

"This show educated the public that handicapped people can do what is considered normal things," said Obritski, whose paintings of flowers, bees and other subjects in nature grace greeting cards, calendars, and galleries all over the world.

"When you see my work you don't have to guess what it is, but you know, too, it wasn't taken by a camera," he said. "It's different, alive. They bang right out at you."

'Berry' interesting snacks nutritious

By ELAINE HOUSTON
County Extension Agent

TOP O' TEXAS JUNIOR LIVESTOCK SHOW

The 1981 Gray County and Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Shows will be March 14-18 at the Clyde Carruth Livestock Pavilion.

The Gray County Extension Homemaker Council will have concession sales featuring a variety of sandwiches, drinks, homemade pie and candy. Proceeds from the sales provide funds for a county 4-H scholarship, send 4-H members to State 4-H Roundup, send homemakers to the district and state conventions and provide funds for demonstrations and activities.

The public is invited to view the youths' projects and stop by the concession stand.

SERVE 'BERRY' INTERESTING SNACKS

Parents who have a hard time getting their children to eat, particularly the foods that are good for them, should appeal to their sense of color with a variety of fresh foods. Serve bright, lustrous, red, fresh strawberries, especially while in season.

Berries are a good source of Vitamin C and, like all fruits, contribute fiber and nutrients to one's diet.

Strawberries are usually at their best during the peak season from April through June. Look for berries with a full red color and a bright luster, firm flesh and the cap stem still attached.

The berries should be dry and clean and the package unstained. Usually, medium to small strawberries have better eating quality than the larger ones. Avoid partially green berries. Strawberries do not continue to ripen after picking and the green is an indication that the berries were picked before mature.

A few less desirable berries are usually found in most containers of strawberries. But try to make sure the berries at the bottom of the container are reasonably free from defect or decay. Mold can spread rapidly from one berry to another.

Remember, strawberries are so delicate they must be picked by hand, and so perishable shippers send field fresh berries to grocers under refrigeration as quickly as possible.

Sort and refrigerate dry berries after they are brought home and plan to use them as soon as possible. Another key in maintaining quality is to keep the cap on the berries. Just before serving, wash in cool water, lifting them gently from the water as dirt and grit settle to the bottom and drain dry. Then let children remove the caps on a big bright bowl of berries!

MARCH FOOD SUPPLY

The severe January freeze in Florida is over, but -- coupled with less than usual shipments from Mexico -- a number of vegetables should be in light supply for March, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture marketing specialists.

Fresh tomatoes and most tender vegetables, including snap beans, sweet corn, eggplant, green peppers and squash may be in light supply, together with frozen sweet corn, lima beans and carrots.

The bright spot in the vegetable picture is cabbage. Active shipments from Texas and Florida assure cabbage a place on the plentiful roster. Peanuts should also be light due to the smallest harvest since 1964.

Otherwise, plenty of pork, broiler, fryers and turkey will be available with all-time high milk production records for March. A record rice crop, and large crops of dry beans and peas last year, ensure plentiful supplies for the month.

Shipments of fresh grapefruits so far this season have lagged behind the heavy volume of one year ago, and harvest in Texas is behind last year's schedule, but the grapefruit supply is large and more than enough for requirements. Fresh oranges are also plentiful because of the bumper crop of navel oranges in California.

Produce bins will be full of apples and winter pears, since storage holdings have been substantially larger than early last year.

BUY SHRIMP BY 'COUNT'

Buying shrimp at the right price is easy -- if you know what to look for. There are three common market species -- whites, browns and pinks -- and since they all cost, look and taste about the same after cooking, there is little reason to select one species over the other. More importantly, select the size and market form which will best suit the recipe you intend to use.

Shrimp sizes range anywhere from 10 tails per pound to as many as 60 or more tails per pound (shell on). The larger the count per pound, the smaller the shrimp tail and so the more work involved in eating the shrimp since each one must be peeled.

For this reason, the smaller shrimp are cheaper. Small shrimp (36 or more per pound) are excellent in gumbos, soups and casseroles. Medium sizes (26 or 35 count per pound) work as well as large (16 to 20 count per pound) for frying or stuffing.

Peeking at Pampa

The fire at the high school was an expensive tragedy and a temporary halt to education there for one day. But repairs are probably in progress already.

Heard that Janice Sackett, art teacher and wife of Pampa's Chamber of Commerce manager, lost part of her own art work as well as the work of her students, possessions that can't be replaced.

Seems many people are taking credit for spotting the fire and reporting it to the fire department. Noted that Paul Payne, H.S. principal, said a junior gave the alarm. Several others turned it in when they spied the flames.

Among them were Jay Williams, 11, his father, Tommy Williams, and their friend, Tommy Bowers. They were driving past the building when young Jay glimpsed the smoke. They drove to the fire station and turned in their alarm.

Later, when the Williams-Bowers group drove back to the school, they found that the big firehoses could not break the heavy glass windows. So Jay was invited to throw rocks through the panes to let out the damaging smoke. How many kids ever get the chance to do that?

Spring is really the time for style shows — and Pampa has been having them by the slither, all beautiful, all exhibiting the best of this season's new attire.

One of the Beta Sigma Phi chapters gave a lovely show. I hear, with the audience proclaiming the models both pretty and graceful. Hostess was Clara Mae Sailor with Ann Franklin as co-hostess.

Models were Helen Barnett, Linda Mackie, Toni Williams, Mary Bowers, Jeannie Mitchell, Georgia Mack and Clara Mae Sailor. Narrator was Kay Williams. Her entire costume was admired, but I heard the most compliments on her gorgeous hat.

Rochelle Lacy commented, "Isn't it a nice family compliment that three generations are represented in this

Almonds add interest to soups, sauces

By TOM HOGE

AP Wire and Food Writer

The almond is beginning to appear more and more in dishes in finer restaurants.

Almonds are gratifying to cook with because their flavor is pervasive but too delicate to dominate the taste of other food.

Almonds have been cultivated since ancient times in Mediterranean countries and the Far East. They have long been especially popular in Spain, where cooks serve them fried or salted and stirred into paellas and dishes. The Spaniards also pound almonds into a paste for sauces and desserts.

It is said the early Spanish missionaries brought the almond to California, where it is grown commercially today.

American cooks have for some years made a practice of garnishing fish and vegetable dishes with slivered almonds browned in butter.

The almond grows on a tree that is related to the peach tree and resembles it in its blossoms and unripe fruit.

Almonds are not a diet food. One ounce packs 170 calories, but they are highly nutritious and are usually limited to an ounce or less per person in most recipes.

The versatile nut adds a lot to casseroles and salads and gives a flavor surprise to creamed soup, like this almond spinach bisque.

2 teaspoons vegetable oil
1/2 cup sliced almonds
1 can (10 1/2 ounces) cream of potato soup, condensed
2-3rds cup half and half
1 package (10 or 12 ounces) frozen spinach, thawed
Salt to taste

Orange slices
Heat oil in skillet over medium-high heat. Add almonds and toss till lightly browned, about 3 minutes. Set aside 2 tablespoons nuts for garnish. Combine in blender rest of almonds, soup, half and half and spinach. Blend till spinach is finely chopped. Pour into saucepan. Heat, stirring often. Add salt. Pour into soup bowls. Garnish each serving with an orange slice and some of the reserved almonds. Serves 4 to 6 persons.

show? Georgia Mack is the grandmother. Kay Williams is Georgia's daughter and Toni Williams is Kay's daughter.

Other style shows are being planned for this month, in various places in town. Some have luncheons along with the show. Keep your ear to the ground for details if you love the sight of new styles as much as I do. I don't always buy them — but it's a great joy to look!

Another family group, this time four generations, was having dinner together recently, as happy a group as you'd want to see. Laura Fatheree was the matriarch, Ann Sidwell Fatheree came next, followed by her daughter and the daughter's baby. So good to see families enjoy being together.

Pampa music students recently came through with many honors, as always. Noted that Brandi Huff, daughter of Vivian and Chester Huff, won a superior rating in the piano competition for junior high and high school students at WTSU.

Cheryl Whitmarsh, a Deca student who works at a job from 6:30 to 11 a.m. as well as attending school, earned a No. 1 rating in flute. She was accompanied by Aitha Wilks of Pampa.

Other young people to be complimented for their achievements at the Canyon meet were Matt Turner, Lana Hilt Brunner, Betsy Hill and Kathy Driscoll. (Hope I didn't miss anybody.) Congratulations to these fine young musicians.

Dr. Julian Key and wife, Katy, returned from Hawaii not long ago. They attended a medical meeting in the islands and also found time for some sight-seeing and general admiration for the "paradise of the world."

Not too long ago John and Inez Morris of White Deer (a personable couple also claimed by Pampa) had the inside of their lovely home destroyed by fire. But they took it better than most people would. I think they're staying at the Coronado Inn while their home remodeling is continuing. She said, "We might as well think of it as a vacation, so that's what we're trying to do." Much to be admired couple.

Saw John and Judy Warner "out on the town" one night. Always have a good time, those two, and always spread cheer, making them excellent company.

Seen any kite flights yet this year? I've spotted a few. Reminded me of the time, years ago, when I saw 18 colorful kites flying along the hike- and -bike trail, all shaped like big, beautiful birds and all operated by father-son duos. Looks like a wonderful pastime for Saturday or Sunday afternoons.

More later. PAM.

Dear Abby

Suicide threats more than empty words

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday at work I overheard a young, well-educated co-worker (I'll call her Judy) talking to a fellow employee. She said, "My mother is having this middle-age menopause depression. This morning she threatened to kill herself, so I calmly said, 'Mom, in case you've forgotten where the gun is, it's under the pillow on Dad's side of the bed. The gun is loaded, so why don't you quit talking about it and go ahead and kill yourself?'" Then Judy went on to say, "You know, people who keep threatening to commit suicide never do. Sure enough, a few hours later, Mom called me at work to apologize for threatening to kill herself."

I was shocked. Maybe Judy handled the situation properly because her mother didn't kill herself, but I've heard that a suicide threat is a cry for help and should never be taken lightly. Who is right?

BETHLEHEM, PA.

DEAR BETHLEHEM: You are. Judy repeated a common misconception. My experts in the field of suicide prevention say that no threat of suicide should be taken lightly - that statistically the likelihood of suicide increases every time a person goes untreated after attempting suicide or threatening to. Judy's mother needs help.

DEAR ABBY: This could be classified as a stupid question, but it has been bugging me. I am 15 years old. A few weeks ago I read an article in the newspaper. It was an interview with a gigolo. He told how much he enjoyed his work and said it was a wonderful way to make a living.

As I was reading this article, a thought suddenly occurred to me. If what hookers do is against the law, then why isn't what gigolos do against the law? It is practically the same thing.

JUST WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: First, the only "stupid questions" are those that aren't asked for fear of appearing stupid.

What hookers do is vastly different from what gigolos do. A "hooker" is a female prostitute who solicits men for the purpose of selling them sexual favors.

A gigolo is a male who is available for a fee to escort a woman wherever she wants to go. Sexual favors are not included.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know why, but whenever I get a compliment I feel embarrassed and don't know what to say,

MR. AND MRS. MARK HOUSTON MARTIN

McNealy, Martin recite wedding vows

Tracy Sue McNealy became the bride of Mark Houston Martin in a recent afternoon ceremony at the Church of the Nazarene in Pampa, with the Rev. Ed Barker officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Martin of Pampa. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Martin, also of Pampa.

The bride wore a blue silk organza gown with white lace trim and a pale blue shoulder length veil.

She was given away by her stepfather, Michael Martin.

Attending the bride was Robin Hyett of Pampa. The bridegroom's attendant was Paul Weeks of Mimi.

Music was provided by Tim Williams. Debbie McNealy, sister of the bride, presided at the reception at Tom's Country Inn.

Out-of-town guests included the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Quayle of Joplin, Mo.

The couple will reside in Pampa after a honeymoon in Amarillo.

The bride is a former Pampa High School student.

The bridegroom attended Grady, Colo. High School and is employed as an oilfield worker.

MRS. STEPHEN WAYNE RANKIN

Fox, Rankin wed in Skellytown rite

Susan Kay Fox and Stephen Wayne Rankin exchanged wedding vows in a recent evening ceremony at the First Baptist Church of Skellytown, with the Rev. Jimmy Fox of Southwest Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fox Jr. of Skellytown. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rankin of Stamford.

The bride wore a traditional formal satin gown with a Chantilly lace yoke and sleeves, and a waist-length mantilla style veil.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Earl O'Steen of Borger, Mrs. Jimmy Fox of Fort Worth, Mrs. Harold Cramer of Borger and Miss Kelley Nickols of Skellytown.

Attending the groom were Kenneth Rankin of Richardson, Mike Viles of Borger, Jim Honea of Amarillo and Zac Rinard of Lubbock.

Dawn Marie Fox of Fort Worth and Candace O'Steen of Borger were flower girls. Ringbearer was Chris Fox of Fort Worth. Julie Gortmaker of Skellytown and Anna Viles of Borger were candlelighters.

Music was provided by Mrs. Roy Lynn McClendon of Leedy, Okla. and Mrs. Garry Gortmaker of Skellytown. Presiding at the reception in the church's Fellowship Hall were Mrs. Kenneth Rankin of Richardson, Mrs. Cliff Davis of Pampa, and Mrs. Todd McMurray, Mrs. Ronald Rankin and Mrs. Mike Viles, all of Borger.

The couple will make their home in Borger after a honeymoon in San Antonio.

The bride is a 1978 graduate of White Deer High School and attended Frank Phillips College.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Denver City High School and West Texas State University.

Mending Mature Marriage

Stormy temper sparks marital turbulence

By LOUISE PIERCE

DEAR LOUISE: Next time you discuss communications, say something about a solution to this. This couple, of which I am a part, have had the same deal going for them for years. Only as I get older, it becomes harder to cope with.

"My husband has never shared his business operations with me, or much of anything else, for that matter. I like to talk things over, whether good or bad, and keep the channels open."

"My husband obviously sees no sense in this, and as a result, he goes his way and I go mine. This goes for finances also."

"Periodically he loses his temper and unleashes the whole load, screaming and yelling at me, bringing out all my negative points, of which he claims there are many."

"I might add that he brings out the bad side of me and the argument is not all one-sided."

"But it doesn't end there. There is never anything patched up and he goes about as if nothing has happened. I am crushed, feel rejected and react by withdrawing."

"It may be a year to three years before he has another 'spell,' but it WILL come, sooner or later. It's a build-up with him."

"Tell those lonesome women out there they don't have to be widows to be lonesome. I would like to know how other women would handle a situation like this — and what would you do, Louise? MARRIED BUT LONESOME."

DEAR M.B.L.: I hereby invite readers who have had similar traumas to write me their experiences, their problems — and how they solved them. I'll use them when I hear from you. And of course real names are not used unless requested by the writer.

I have talked to many couples and have found a few who say their spouses blow up spasmodically. Some of them have let the upsetting episodes drive them apart, which is sad. Others have learned to stay together in spite of the recurring quarrels and are the better for the solutions they worked out.

This is how I would handle your problem: I'd consider the alternative to breaking up my marriage because of the recurring storms. You don't say you are considering separation, but I want to steer you away from that possibility.

Living alone would, in my opinion, be far worse than putting up with a temper tantrum every year or so. The temporary tempest will subside eventually. But permanent loneliness would be with you as long as you live.

I know plenty of widows who would gladly endure fits of rage from their husbands now and then, if they could have them back. Think about it.

As for the unpredictable and violent spells, I would accommodate myself to them somehow. If you know what upsets him, avoid it if you can.

You might leave the house when the fit starts — and come back when you think he's had time to cool down.

Perhaps he is more angry with life than with you. If so, he needs to blow off steam. But you don't have to listen to it. When you come back and, hopefully, when the rage has spent itself, you too can act as if nothing has happened.

Don't fight back at him any more, thus continuing and enlarging the bitterness. It is difficult for one spouse to hurl insults at the other if there is no answering fury.

Your problem is not unique. Quite a few mates, both wives and husbands, endure fits of temper sometimes. But most of them know the storms will subside and tranquility will return, at least for awhile.

know if I really do get the letters that appear in this column. The answer is, yes, indeed, I get them.

Problems do not cease when we reach retirement. Often they are greater than ever before. Readers feel better if they write or call or tell their troubles to someone face-to-face. I serve that purpose for them. I pass on the advice of experts — and my own sympathy — for their problems.

Soil fungi cause damping-off

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

The sudden death of bean seedlings is a common problem in all areas of the county and is brought about by a group of soil-borne fungi.

These fungi are present in soil throughout the year, but are especially damaging during a cool, wet spring. Once the condition begins to appear, there is little that can be done to correct the problem. However, there are several steps that should be taken to reduce losses from damping-off where this disease has become a problem.

Rotation is one of the most important steps in preventing losses from this disease. Never follow vegetables from one group with another vegetable from the same group. Vegetables from the same group have similar diseases which build up in the soil and increase losses each year. Following is a grouping of plants based on their soil-borne diseases.

Group A: watermelon, cucumber, squash, cantaloupe, honey dew melon, pumpkin.

Group B: cabbage, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, turnip, mustard, radish, collards, lettuce, Swiss chard, spinach.

Group C: pepper, tomato, potato, eggplant, okra.

Group D: carrots, sweet potatoes, beets.

Group E: sweet corn, onions, garlic, shallots.

Group F: beans, peas, cowpeas.

"Planting on a bed" is a method of planting which will keep the root zone of developing seedlings in a drier, more aerified soil and thus reduce losses from damping-off. Soil saturated with water has a greater tendency to have damping-off problems than soil from which free water drains quickly after a rain.

Know the soil temperature at which each vegetable grows best and do not plant before the temperature is reached.

Optimum soil temperatures for seed germination of some vegetables are: beans, 86-95 degrees F.; cucumbers, 86-95 degrees F.; lettuce, 77-86 degrees F.; okra, 95 degrees F.; and up: spinach, 77 degrees F.

This is a partial list of vegetables and temperatures at which they germinate best. Gardeners should know at what temperature ranges seed will germinate and grow the most rapid. The less time spent as seedlings, the less plants will suffer from seedling disease.

As seedlings develop into more mature plants, they also develop a resistance to organisms involved in seedling disease.

Seed quality is important because high quality seeds will grow out of the seedling state faster if all other factors favor seedling growth.

Use of Vapam fungicide will reduce losses due to seedling disease, but this practice is expensive and recommended only as a side benefit from nematode control. Captan is a fungicide that can be used on selected vegetables. When using Captan refer to the label for vegetables on which it can be used and the rate per 100 feet of row.

Damping-off can be a problem with vegetables in this area, but losses from it can be reduced significantly by following the above steps.

Nematodes and their control will be discussed in the next column.

130 private radio stations operate in little Belgium

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The last time anyone counted, there were 130 private radio stations operating in this nation of 10 million people — a remarkable number, considering such stations are illegal.

"Because the government won't act, we are headed for anarchy in the airwaves," complains Frans Grootjans, a Conservative legislator.

He has introduced a bill to legalize the private broadcasters — or "free radios" as they're known here — formally ending a state monopoly the government has defended tooth and nail.

As recently as 1979, private radio broadcasting was only for those quick enough to elude the law or brave enough to risk confiscation of their transmitting equipment. Police used to regularly raid private radio stations — usually located in unmarked homes and offices — cart away all the equipment and fine anyone in sight.

"There has been a growing tendency at the political level in this country to legalize the free radios," said a spokesman for Communications Minister Freddy Willockx.

Although the government apparently is willing to change the current legislation, it has not acted in that direction. Meanwhile, starting up illegal radio stations has become something of a growth industry.

Today, police will act only if a station interferes with air traffic control or police radio, and often officers simply will ask station operators to adjust their transmitters or use another frequency.

Nowhere is the pirating of the government-owned airwaves more evident than in Brussels, a city of about 1.1 million, where 30 private broadcasters are crowding the unused area on the FM band.

Those stations and others broadcast up to 24 hours a day in Flemish and French. Topics range from open line talk shows to high-octane punk music, from interviews to lengthy local newscasts.

Most have limited transmitting power — in some cases reaching only about seven miles. Two stations can be heard throughout the country.

"We provide counter information," said a spokesman for Radio Scorpio in Leuven, a university town 14 miles east of Brussels. The comment reflects the dissatisfaction among private broadcasters with the quality of programming on the state-run BRT-RTBF network.

All pirate broadcasters shun commercials, although some eventually would like to have them. So far, they have been able to operate with the help of donations and fund-raising events.

The boom in free enterprise broadcasting has drowned out American Forces Network radio.

Father of 'Waltons' back on Broadway

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Arts Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — About 12 years ago, Ralph Waite, the kindly father of CBS' "The Waltons," made his Broadway debut in a drama about a Vietnam war vet and his family, "The Watering Place."

It closed on opening night. Painful, he says. "After all that work, 10 years to get to a Broadway show, one I loved, to have the lead in it, I really thought I was finally coming into my own."

"We were over at Sardi's celebrating. Then a bad review came in. The producer came over and said, 'That's it.' Next morning, I woke up and said:

"I think it's time for me to blow town for a while."

The while is over. He's back on Broadway, starring in Strindberg's "The Father" at the Circle in the Square. The premiere is on April 2, the run until June 7.

When he blew town in 1969, he went to Hollywood. There, it's said that if a struggling New York actor gets lucky, he often goes crazy, is ruined both as a human and an artist.

The exact opposite happened, says Waite, a sturdy six-footer with a low, rumbling voice, a weathered face, piercing blue eyes and a gray-flecked beard he's growing for "The Father."

"Here, the excitement of theater, of being an artist, gives a real sense that you're on an adventure. That's good, but it also can be used to cover up a lot of destructive behavior that goes on for years."

When Waite went west, he landed "Five Easy Pieces," and the biggie, "The Waltons," now in its ninth season.

He recovered from alcoholism, started his own theater and wrote, produced, directed, acted in and financed his own movie, "On the Nickel." And for the first time in his life found mental peace.

"Strange as it sounds, Hollywood made me grow up, come to terms with myself," he says. "Three months after 'The Waltons' began, I knew I either had to get out or readjust my thinking — and stop drinking — or I was going to get thrown out."

And the key, as simple-minded as it sounds, was that I stopped drinking. I got sober."

Divorced the same year he went to Hollywood, Waite, the father of two, didn't become an actor until the relatively advanced age of 32. "The Father" marks his 20th year in the business.

His return to Broadway comes because of another play out of town. He was getting itchy for stage work again last year when a friend, a director named David Wheeler, called him during a "Waltons" hiatus.

He invited him to do Ibsen's "The Master Builder" at a college in Colorado, with a student cast and a few professionals. Waite did it "and just loved it. I really felt alive then."

They were thinking of doing the play in Boston this year when another call came. How about doing Strindberg's "The Father" on Broadway? Naturally, he reports, "I grabbed it."

He smiled. "I'm a little worried, having done so little theater in the last few years, whether I'm going to be able to do it very well. But I'm going to give it my best shot."

Peter Cook goes with tide

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — English comedian Peter Cook, claiming no specific ambitions, says he just floats along with the tide.

Cook, winner of two Tony Awards and one Grammy, and his long-time partner, Dudley Moore, went their separate ways after they completed an American tour with "Good Evening." Moore wanted to pursue a career in the movies and was later cast in "10."

"It's not that I don't have ambition," says Cook. "I don't have any specific ambitions. I've floated along happily on a series of accidents. This show is a happy accident."

Cook is referring to "The Two of Us," also starring Mimi Kennedy, which CBS plans to telecast as a spring trout series. The tall, lanky, lantern-jawed Cook plays a smooth and snobbish English butler in the comedy series. Miss Kennedy plays his employer, a New York talk show hostess. The series will run for four episodes.

Cook was here last year on vacation when he received several scripts during the torrential downpours that flooded Southern California. One script was for "The Two of Us."

"I'd just met with my agent the day before and one thing we'd ruled out was an American situation comedy," he recalls. "There are no roles for Englishmen, and if there are and it's a success you're stuck here for five years."

"I said, 'I can't come down. Benedict Canyon is a river.' So they sent some four-wheel-drive military vehicle to pick me up. I made the pilot, and it was a surprise to get a cable saying it had been picked up."

The Marble Arch production of "The Two of Us" is based on the English comedy "Two's Company," in which Elaine Stritch played an American author living in London and Donald Sinden was the butler.

In the TV series, Cook plays a snooty butler whose employment with a British delegate to the United Nations suddenly ends when the diplomat meets "a horrible American death." He's thrown from a bucking mechanical bull at a disco.

Cook won Tonys for American stage appearances in "Beyond the Fringe" and "Good Evening."

After "Beyond the Fringe" ended its Broadway run, Cook returned to London and did a weekly, one-man TV series in which he wore a macintosh and delivered deadpan monologues on outlandish themes. Later, the 6-foot-1½ Cook and 5-foot-3 Moore teamed up for the hit BBC series "Not Only... But Also."

"It was just a series of sketches," says Cook. "We had some characters."

Vocational students nab awards

Representatives of the Pampa Area Vocational School attended the TSTI Amarillo's Business Skills Contest sponsored by the Technical Office Training program Feb. 13. The 10 students were among contestants from 9 area high school participating in the contest.

Pampa Area Vocational representatives matched skills with other contestants in typing production, typing speed, shorthand (70 words per minute and 60 words per minute), filing, bookkeeping, and business machines.

Pampa students competing in the business skills contest were: Melanie Chamberlain — fourth place Filing; Labrenda Driver — first place Filing, seventh place Typing Production and sixth place Business Machines; Debbie Drdul — tenth place Business Machines and second place Filing; Terri Eads — sixth place Typing Production and fifth place Business Machines; Karen Price — fourth place Typing Production, fourth place Business Machines and sixth place Filing; Susan Birdsall — ninth place Business Machines and fifth place Typing Production; Sheri Scott — ninth place Filing; Jane McCarthy, Melinda Hogan and Cindy Clark.

Farmers can recover part of losses in grain swindle

WASHINGTON — An out-of-court agreement allows Oklahoma wheat farmers to recover about 60 percent of their losses from the $1 million Bobby Johnson grain scandal of 1976.

The agreement was reached Friday. The issue had been scheduled to go to court Monday in Wichita Falls, Texas.

So far, the 112 Oklahoma wheat and milo farmers and hundreds more in Texas have recovered approximately 50 percent of the losses they incurred when hundreds of bushels of grain vanished with Johnson four years ago.

The new agreement is expected to bring the farmers approximately $320,000 more than they have received so far. The additional payment will bring to 60 percent the amount of losses farmers can recover, said Rex Givens, legislative assistant to Rep. David McCurdy, Norman Democrat.

Johnson, who operated grain elevators in southwest Oklahoma and Texas, was convicted of grain fraud in 1979 and sentenced to a 17-year federal prison term after investigators discovered he was alive and residing in Idaho.

Friends had claimed he drowned in the Gulf of Mexico while on a fishing trip soon after authorities began investigating his business dealings.

Investigators later said 412,000 bushels of wheat the farmers had stored in his elevators was missing at the time of his disappearance.

McCurdy said he was pleased the affair had ended, although he called the agreement "patently unfair."

The agreement, reached by the Justice Department and attorneys for the claimants, allows the Internal Revenue Service to collect $125,000 of Johnson's recovered estate, valued at approximately $1 million.

Last year, the IRS said that federal taxes Johnson owed on his earnings from the grain theft — which included 243,000 bushels of Oklahoma grain — should be paid before the farmers could receive anymore payments for their losses.

The IRS contended that if the controversial case had gone to court, the federal government could have claimed up to $563,000 in taxes, leaving little or no money to be divided among the farmers.

The new payments to be made to the farmers will be subject to federal and state income taxes, said Kellye Eversole, an aide to Boren.

The agreement was announced jointly by Boren, McCurdy and State Rep. Marvin Baughman, D-Geronimo.

McCurdy noted "the law ... appears to be on the side of the IRS."

Boren said he would work to change that law.

"While the settlement agreed upon is certainly better than the one originally proposed by the Justice Department, it still cannot be really termed a truly just settlement," Boren said. "A truly just settlement would have allowed farmers to recover all of their losses, rather than only a percent of them," he said.

McCurdy agreed. "It is patently unfair that these victims of a gross case of fraud are being treated this way. Although the creditors have not received as much as they deserve, they will be getting more than they were awarded originally."

BE A CARRIER: The Big Job you can handle.

In recent weeks, we've been telling you what it takes to be a carrier ... and what you get out of being one.

Having a newspaper route is like running your own business. You buy newspapers wholesale from us and deliver them to subscribers for a profit. The success of your newspaper route business depends on whether you collect and pay bills on time and keep accurate records of these transactions ... on how well you organize your time, get along with people, solve problems and handle yourself in tough situations ... on whether you give courteous, reliable service — even in bad weather!

Having a route is a learning experience: one that can help you do better in school; one that gives you valuable job skills and references for the future. But, you get a lot more than an education out of being a carrier — benefits that you won't find in most jobs open to young people.

You have a steady income; one you can depend upon every week. You can increase these regular earnings with tips, and by adding new customers to your route. With carrier profits, you can buy the things you want like a bicycle, stereo equipment and clothes. Or you can save for college, or a car. It's your money, so you make the decisions.

Delivering newspapers is fun, not "drudge" work. You get to meet people and make new friends.

Being a carrier is a challenging and satisfying experience: one you and your parents can be proud of; one you can have without giving up much of your free time.

So, if you're ready to handle The Big Job, phone 669-2525 or send this coupon to find out if there is a route available in your neighborhood.

Board rejects appeal of boy in box

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Education refused Saturday, without comment, to consider an appeal of a Brownsville boy who wants an air-conditioned classroom instead of a plexiglass box.

The ruling upheld a previous decision by the state commissioner of education after a hearing held by the Texas Education Agency.

The parents of Raul Espino Jr., asked the Brownsville school board to air condition the first-grader's entire classroom instead of furnishing the air-conditioned plexiglass box. The board refused.

The boy was injured in a car accident as an infant and cannot control his body temperature. He cannot walk but crawls using shoulder muscles and his elbows. He is described as an above-average pupil scholastically by teachers.

Records of the hearing show Raul is confined to the box as much as 75 percent of the time, which his parents contend is too restrictive.

The hearing officer, James P. Williams Jr., said there was evidence the boy was naturally developing resistance to respiratory infections and may some day develop greater tolerance to high and low temperatures. Williams said there was no evidence presented that a fully air-conditioned classroom would better enable Raul to learn to adapt to change of environments or would help his educational progress.

CARD OF THANKS

LEILA RUTH WALLS
BELOVED WIFE AND MOTHER
We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many friends and neighbors, especially Rev. John Greenwood, Mitchell Phillips and Dr. Keller who were so kind to us during our recent bereavement and to express gratitude for the beautiful flowers, letters and cards. And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose.

There comes a time for all of us when we must say goodbye. But faith and hope and love and trust can never die.

Although the curtain falls at last is that a cause to grieve? The future's fairer than the past if only we believe.

And trust in God's eternal care ... So when the Master calls Let's say that life is still more fair although the curtain falls.

Mr. Vester Walls
