Ivive chosen to lead development board

Owen Ivive was chosen president of the Moore Development for Big Spring board at the organizational meeting Friday.

Ivive will be joined on the cabinet by Jeff Morris, vice president and Jim Purcell, secretary-treasurer.

The board's will now meet to formulate by-laws. Using a model based on those drafted by other cities' development committees, members will work individually, bringing their recommendations to Ivive before the next meeting.

Members agreed with Morris' suggestion that they seek public input, as well as advice from city officials, before by-laws are formally accepted.

The board agreed to designate its fiscal year as Oct. 1 through Sept. 30, keeping in line with the fiscal year of the city. The 1/2-cent sales tax to fund economic development went into effect Oct. 1; the board will begin receiving funds Dec. 1.

The board will meet again Thursday at 5 p.m. in the offices of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

President's son to be at fish-fry

A fish-fry honoring Rick Perry will be held Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. in the Dora Roberts Community Center. State Representative Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, said he supports candidate Rick Perry for Texas Agricultural Commissioner.

"This race is by far the most important state political race, aside from the governor's, for the people of West Texas," Fraser said. "What's good for agriculture is good for the state, and Rick Perry knows that."

The lunch appearance by Perry will also feature George W. Bush, son of President George Bush.

A donation of $25 will be required. Interested persons are asked to RSVP to Holland Cottonseed, 263-8338.

Press conference planned by Bullock

Bob Bullock, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, will hold a press conference at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, in the meeting room of the Best Western Mid Continental Inn.

Ceremony planned for new postmaster

The U.S. Postal Service has announced Gyvonda G. Teegarden will be installed as Postmaster of Stanton on Thursday, Oct. 18, at 1:30 p.m. in the Stanton Post Office.

The swearing-in will be administered by Joan Clifford, acting director, field operations, El Paso Management Sectional Center.

State should plan against recession

By The Associated Press
DALLAS — Texas enjoyed a boom during the early 1980s while most of the country suffered through lean times, but economists say Texans should brace for the next recession.

The oil and gas industry in Texas and the other Energy Belt states does not have the manpower or equipment it had 10 years ago, and lenders and investors remember getting burned when oil prices collapsed in the mid-80s.

"Some of the stimulus we're getting (from higher oil prices) will keep our economy comparatively healthy," said Bernard L. Weinstein, an economist at the University of North Texas.

"But it's not going to be like the early '80s when we were booming while the rest of the country was contracting."

A study by the state comptroller's office estimates a national recession will cost Texas about 40,000 new jobs in 1990. By 1991, however, continued high oil prices could produce a gain of 90,000 jobs in the state.

There appears to be little doubt that the national economy is either in a recession or rapidly approaching one. Economists across the nation have been racing to issue recession predictions, with the only disagreement seemingly over how severe the contraction will be.

Employment in the state's oil and gas industry has fallen drastically since 1981, and the industry's share of state tax revenues has fallen by two-thirds.

As a result, Texas could suffer with the rest of the nation for as long as six months before it benefits from spiraling energy prices, said Thomas R. Plaut, a senior economist in the state comptroller's office.

Plaut said the initial shock of higher energy costs will slow the state's economy as manufacturers and transportation companies are hit hard. It will take several months for the energy industry to rebound sufficiently, he said.

Texas, however, should eventually benefit, Plaut said.

"In the short term, there will be a negative effect on Texas," Plaut said. "But in the long term, the same factor that is driving the rest

Nobel prizewinner Gorbachev gets Peace Prize

MIKHAIL S. GORBACHEV

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

OSLO, Norway — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev won the 1990 Nobel Peace Prize today for opening up Soviet society to reform, helping slow the arms race and allowing Eastern Europe to break free of Soviet domination.

In awarding the 59-year-old Soviet leader the $700,000 prize, the Norwegian Nobel Committee cited him for his leading role in the world peace process.

"This peace process, which Gorbachev has contributed so significantly to, opens up new possibilities for the world community to solve its pressing problems," said Gidske Anderson, leader of the Nobel Committee.

The committee also cited "the greater openness he has brought about in Soviet society," saying it had "helped promote international trust."

When asked if the award was meant to support Gorbachev because the committee was worried about whether he can weather domestic political storms and stay in power, she refused to answer.

It was the first award to a superpower chief executive since President Woodrow Wilson won in 1919. President Theodore Roosevelt won in 1906.

Gorbachev is the second Soviet to win the prize. The first was nuclear scientist and human rights activist Andrei Sakharov, who won in 1975.

Sakharov, who died in December, was unable

Big Spring man killed in accident

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A 38-year-old Big Spring man died from injuries he received in a one-vehicle accident Sunday when his vehicle overturned on Driver Road.

David Guerrero Alvarado, 1218 Mulberry, was ejected from the vehicle when it overturned 1.1 miles from the city limits on Driver Road at about 5 a.m. He probably died almost instantly, said Texas Highway Patrolman Troy Hogue, the investigating officer.

One passenger sustained serious injuries, while two others had minor injuries. No other vehicles were involved.

Bleeding was not evident in a large cut on Alvarado's right forearm, a possible indication his heart had stopped when the cut occurred or immediately after, Hogue said. "We suspect that he died from a broken neck."

Howard County Sheriff Deputy Bill King, the first law officer at the scene, said Alvarado's body was found about 20 yards away from the vehicle. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Willie Grant.

Alvarado's sister-in-law, AnaRosa Alvarado, 26, Juarez, Mexico, was admitted to Scenic Mountain Medical Center in serious condition Sunday, said a hospital spokesperson. This morning she was stable and scheduled for a CAT scan to determine any internal injuries.

She had received cuts and abrasions to her face, Hogue said. "Her face was quite swollen when I was there."

Two other passengers were treated for minor injuries at the scene, Hogue said. They are Alvarado's wife, Mercedes Blanco, 38, and his brother Hector Hernandez Alvarado, 27, Juarez.

Hogue said Alvarado had failed to negotiate a right turn while driving into Big Spring in a 1981 two-door Oldsmobile Cutless Supreme. He drove through a ditch and struck a highway pole. The car turned over twice, coming to rest on the wheels. "While the vehicle was overturning, he was ejected from the vehicle, the driver's side," Hogue said.

Nobody in the car was wearing a seatbelt and Hogue said he did not know yet if Alvarado was traveling faster than the posted 40 mph speed limit. He said he is still investigating possible contributing factors.

Alvarado, who has lived in Big Spring for eight years with his wife and daughters ages 17 and 16, worked as a salesman with L.B. Price Co. He is a native of Juarez.

Israel opposes U.N. fact-finding mission

JERUSALEM — In a defiant response to the U.N., Israel has rejected a mission to investigate the killings of 19 Palestinians on the Temple Mount and announced a new building drive to populate Jerusalem with Soviet immigrants.

Sunday's Cabinet decisions appear to set the Jewish state on a collision course with its chief ally, the United States, which has appealed to Israel to accept the United Nations investigators.

The U.N. Security Council voted unanimously Friday to condemn the Temple Mount shootings, which occurred one week ago during riots at the Jerusalem site revered by both Jews and Moslems.

In a rare gesture, the United States joined in the censure of its ally, agreeing to a resolution calling for the dispatch to Jerusalem of a three-member delegation to probe the shootings.

The Temple Mount riot began when Palestinians threw rocks onto worshippers praying below at the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site. Police first used tear gas and rubber bullets, then live ammunition.

Israel's Cabinet, at its regular weekly session Sunday, said it saw no reason for the United Nations to intervene when it had ignored worse incidents in other countries.

"We have read the Security Council's decision... and it is completely unacceptable," a Cabinet communique said. "As a result, Israel will not receive the delegation of the U.N. Secretary General."

Israel set up its own inquiry into the shootings Friday. The investigating commission is led by former Mossad spy chief Zvi Zamir and is only empowered to make recommendations.

American Jewish leader Seymour Reich accused Washington of making Israel a "sacrificial lamb" by supporting the U.N. resolution, and siding with Arab states for the sake of the alliance ranged against Iraq in response to its seizure of Kuwait.

"But in practical terms, I don't think Saudi Arabia is going to throw out U.S. troops. This thing got out of hand. The United States should have condemned the attack on the (Jewish) worshippers," Reich, president of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, said on Israel Television.

Foreign Minister David Levy said Israel's stand against the U.N. could strain ties with the United States: "The situation now is difficult, one mustn't take it lightly."

He also accused Washington of acting "on the basis of weakness, fears of dismembering the U.S. coalition (against Iraq), but we will not pay the price."

The Cabinet's response gave vent to Israel's frustration at coming under strong criticism at a time when civilians are being issued gas masks to cope with Iraq's threats to attack with chemical weapons. The army started handing out the defense kits last week in three towns and planned to widen distribution to all cities, including Arab villages, beginning today.

City water supply could lose state approval status

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

Big Spring's water supply may lose its "State Approved" status within a year, a Texas Department of Health official said. The supply was placed on provisional status for the approval during an inspection this summer.

Jed Barker, a sanitarian with the department's Midland office, said the state-approved status refers more to aesthetic qualities than safety.

"In order for a city to be allowed to display signs saying 'Water supply approved by the state,' the water must pass rigid tests for taste and color, texture, that sort of thing," he said. If the water does not improve in a year, the water will no longer be considered state approved, Barker said.

He said the department uses two sets of criteria for water, "primary" and "secondary." The primary criteria — standards necessary for drinking water to be safe — are reported to be consistently met by the city.

"We do meet the primary drinking water standards," said Public Works Director Tom Decell. "That is of course our primary concern."

Decell said the reported problem with much of the city water is an abundance of chlorides, sulfates and undissolved solids (minerals).

Barker agreed. "This doesn't mean it's dangerous," he added. "People drinking the water know the quality. The only effect that we can determine is a laxative effect, somewhat like epsom salts."

"Your body gets used to it, while you live in Big Spring," Barker continued. "So that when you go on a trip... you may get constipated. Then you come back and get used to Big Spring water again."

Decell said the city is "looking at some methods and procedures" for cleaning, diluting or otherwise improving the water.

At this time, the city's overriding concern is the capacity of its water plant, he said.

"We've got a project coming on line this year to add six million gallons a day to the plant," he said, adding that the increased flexibility would be a boon to the city's economic development.

"We won't have the physical facility limitations on us, if an industry or something were to come in, we could handle larger volumes of water."

Despite the poor quality of the supply, Barker said the Big Spring water system "has been operated in an exemplary fashion."

He added that cities all over West Texas are having similar problems with their water supplies.

Barker said Andrews and Odessa were recently placed on provisional status. Stanton's water is not approved, and both Coahoma and Midland are losing their approved status, he said.

"Lakes are low, most cities in the area are still plagued (with water problems). The new lake (Owen Ivive Reservoir) will help."

The Ivive Reservoir will eventually become a source of water for Big Spring, Abilene, San Angelo, Midland and other area cities. Officials of the Colorado River Municipal Water District have said the lake will become a long-range alternative water source.

LTV stickers a big hit

DALLAS (AP) — Defense contractor LTV Corp. is scoring a hit with a new product — bumper stickers.

The aerospace conglomerate's missile systems, attack planes and military vehicles already are in the thick of Operation Desert Shield. The Dallas-based company unexpectedly created a sensation in August when it printed 38,000 bumper stickers supporting the Persian Gulf military operation.

After the message showed up on employees' car bumpers and word spread, requests for the red-white-and-blue stickers began pouring in from all over the United States. Thousands of the stickers, which read "We're proud of our Armed Forces," have been sent to U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia.

The bumper stickers now are in their fourth printing and LTV has given away about 175,000, said company spokesman Charles Palmer.

"We were getting requests faster than we could fill them," Palmer said.

Podiatrist starts shoe giveaway

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Dallas podiatrist says soles are good for the soul, so he's seeing to it that thousands of homeless Texans won't be going without shoes this year.

Dr. Thomas Buehler, who organized Shoes for the Homeless, became acquainted with the foot problems of the homeless about five years ago when he started a twice-monthly clinic at a Dallas shelter.

Some 30,000 pairs of used shoes donated from across North Texas were sized, disinfected, sorted and bagged Saturday by volunteers in an Irving warehouse.

The shoes were delivered by a Fort Worth uniform rental company to shelters and service agencies in Fort Worth and Dallas.

Residents lament Wal-Mart closing

DALLAS (AP) — Residents of Hearne say the closing of their Wal-Mart store at the end of the year spells doom for the town of 5,600.

The 1,485-store chain has 231 stores in Texas, more than in any other state. But Wal-Mart officials say the Hearne store has not turned a profit since it opened 10 years ago.

"It's just kind of sad. They breeze into town and suck up all the business, then with all the businesses gone, they pick up and leave," said Bart Lockhardt, who runs a store his father started 30 years ago.

William and Bonnie Briggs say they'll have to drive an hour from their home north of Hearne to the nearest affordable shopping.

Counselors help students cope with tragedy

HOUSTON (AP) — Counselors and psychologists were dispatched to an elementary school to help children cope with the deaths of a fourth-grade teacher and one of her pupils who perished in a traffic accident during a weekend field trip.

The group will "help the students and the staff to work through this tragedy," said Houston Independent School District spokeswoman Ria Griffin.

Parents also are trying to help their children recover from the shock. Jose Zamora, father of Jo Ann Zamora, 9, who was treated and released after the accident,

"I told them life and death is a cycle. We had lost Ms. Steiner and Nancy in a car wreck. I told them it's OK to cry. It's OK to hug. It's OK to just go in the woods and just think about it." — Jacel Morgan.

said he is encouraging his daughter to stay involved in school activities.

"I told her, 'Look forward to another trip,'" he said. "Just because this tragedy happened does not mean it has to happen every time they take a trip."

The accident occurred Friday, the day after Rebecca Ann Steiner's fourth-graders pooled their money and threw a surprise party for her 25th birthday.

That night, Ms. Steiner and a group of children set out on a camping trip, a first for many of the impoverished children attending Felix Tijerina Elementary School near the Houston Ship Channel.

About 7:30 p.m., outside Splendora, a car crossed the grass median on U.S. 59 and struck Ms.

Steiner's car head-on — killing the teacher and student Nancy Guiterrez, 9. Three other children were injured.

Ahead of Ms. Steiner, 24 more children and 10 parents made it to the camp between Woodville and Jasper, unaware of the accident.

When the children awoke Saturday, Principal Jacel Morgan sat them down around the camp fire and broke the news. "I told them life and death is a cycle," she said. "We had lost Ms. Steiner and Nancy in a car wreck. I told them it's OK to cry. It's OK to hug. It's OK to just go in the woods and just think about it."

Ms. Steiner's relationship with the children mirrored the close-knit relationship between community and school, Ms. Morgan said. That relationship was evident when they arrived back at the school around noon Saturday.

Waiting were parents, counselors, nurses from nearby schools, and ministers, Ms. Morgan said.

Community leaders try to ease tensions

HOUSTON (AP) — Community leaders are trying to heal a rift between residents of a black and Hispanic neighborhood and the Asian business owners who have set up shop.

Anti-Asian sentiment is growing in the neighborhood with residents contending their economic health is being threatened by the influx.

"Will the Asians become our new slave masters?" is the question ending a crudely assembled flier circulating through the Acres Home neighborhood, a predominantly black community 10 miles northwest of downtown.

Other concerns are voiced by a black community newspaper editorial which states: "We as minorities, both black and Hispanic, know how it feels to see our business go under while Asian businesses thrive ... How can you fight the so-called enemy when you bring him home with you and put him in business?"

The ill will has been sparked by the increase of Asian-owned businesses in black neighborhoods, often the only areas in which the new immigrants can afford to buy, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

Similar outrage against Asian-owned businesses has appeared in black communities in California, New York and Washington, D.C., leading to boycotts and attacks on Asians, police say.

Acres Home residents organized a meeting with Asian business owners at a Harris County courthouse annex, but the Asian shop owners were no-shows.

They told Roy Douglas Malonson, president of the Acres Home Citizens Chamber of Commerce, that they worked late and couldn't make the appointment.

But other community leaders did show up, including Glenda Jo of the Council of Asian-American Organizations and Executive Director Dan Nip and President Michael Chou of the Houston Asian-American Chamber of Commerce.

The Asian representatives spoke of cultural differences that may have led to the charges of mistreatment by black residents.

"A lot of the problems stem from pure ignorance on both sides," said Chou.

He said Asians who are new immigrants may fear blacks, while blacks may see Asians "as people who are taking over the jobs."

Malonson, owner of a contracting and design company, has lived in Acres Home since 1952, and said he believes Asian businesses should be welcomed into the community.

Malonson launched a program designed to help the nearly two dozen Asian businesses, primarily Vietnamese, survive in the black neighborhood.

Study: Site cleanup could cost $1.2 million

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Dynamite and other unexploded ordnance at a World War II bombing site here could poison cattle and humans, a report says.

A report by a St. Louis environmental firm says the residues pose a limited explosive threat and cleanup could cost more than $1.2 million.

"The levels of TNT present in the soil may be potentially toxic to cattle," the report says.

"In addition, the herds raised on site are raised for human consumption and ingestion of soil and vegetation may provide a pathway for human exposure to nitroaromatics," the report said.

TNT, a nitroaromatic compound, is a suspected carcinogen and mutagen, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Hilton Wilson, who manages farm operations on the site for Texas Tech University, told the Amarillo Globe News that about 800 cattle browse on the land, which is owned by Tech. The site is adjacent to Pantex, where the nation's nuclear warheads are assembled and disassembled.

Some of the cattle are raised by Texas Tech, others are owned by private individuals, he said. Wilson said he was unaware of the consulting firm's study.

"I've been out here going on 16 years and we haven't lost a head,"

Wilson said. "We wouldn't be raising them if there were any danger. I can assure you of that."

Last year, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers hired Envirodyne Engineers of St. Louis under a $150,000 contract to assess former Defense Department facilities and abandoned bunkers used to build and store conventional weapons manufactured during the war.

Bank failure effects felt years later

LEROY, Texas (AP) — Cecil A. Anderson lost $40,000 when the private, uninsured Leroy Bank failed three years ago.

As a result, he was forced to go back to work at age 75. "When the bank was closed, all I had was $45 in my pocket," Anderson told the Waco Tribune-Herald in Sunday's editions.

For a while, he read water meters for the Birome Water Corp. "I had to quit that," he said. "That's a young man's job." Now he drives tractors and combines.

Anderson is one of the luckier ones among the more than 400 people who lost their deposits in the failed bank. Thirteen depositors have died since the "Curse of the Leroy Bank" threw them into dire financial straits.

Of the 1,181 banks that have failed nationally since 1980, only the Leroy Bank depositors lost every cent when it closed Aug. 7, 1987. The depositors found out the hard way that the bank was uninsured and unregulated by the federal government.

"The Leroy depositors are the only depositors I'm aware of who have lost their deposits during the financial turmoil," said Kent Gilbreath, associate dean of the Baylor business school and a former director of the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank.

Times have been difficult for those who lost their savings. But the survivors press on.

One 73-year-old depositor, who asked not to be identified, said she had sold two businesses and deposited the money less than 24 hours before the Leroy Bank closed. She had planned to build a house and live on the proceeds.

Instead, she lives on $300 a month from Social Security in a house in need of repairs.

"I don't want any money and I don't want anybody feeling sorry for me," she said. "It just seems like a dream now. I don't think about it except sometimes when I see what needs to be done to this house. When it gets real bad I go to church."

The failure of Leroy Bank is having repercussions beyond those who deposited money.

"Clearly, it's devastating not only on a person who lost money, but on their children," said Larry Lyon, director of the center for community research at Baylor University. "The children have to step in and help. But it's still psychologically damaging to parents who have saved money in order not to be a burden on their children."

Lyon said many Leroy depositors probably had not understood the difference between an insured and an uninsured bank.

"But society requires a more and more sophisticated understanding of government," he said. "Tragedies like this happen when you don't understand."

In the last three years, the Leroy Bank saga has continued:

— Depositors formed an association which has raised and spent $60,000 in legal fees in an fruitless attempt to get their money back.

— A California woman claiming to be rich conned another $17,000 out of the residents while promising to reopen the bank with a $10 million injection, according to the Texas banking commissioner.

— Country music superstar

Willie Nelson was able to raise only $4,096 in a private benefit concert in Waco in November 1988 for the Leroy Bank Depositors.

— The bank spent several months in bankruptcy court before the judge decided that the bank was, indeed, a bank and threw the petition out of court. Banks cannot file for bankruptcy under federal law.

Many now believe they never will see any of their money.

"To be frank, I don't have much hope," Anderson said. "If anything, it would be very little. It's been a long, hard fight."

Texas Banking Commissioner Ken Littlefield, who is suing the three former owners of the Leroy Bank in Waco's 19th State District Court, said he also believes the depositors will get "very little."

First Republic Bank, now NCNB-Texas, had $1 million loaned to the Leroy Bank when it closed, Littlefield said. Legally, it has first rights to any money collected by the bank.

As the litigation continues, Anderson says he believes he will be forced to work the rest of his life. His wife broke her hip three weeks ago, which has made finances even tighter.

"I like to work," he said. "But now I have to."

Burning leaves stir passions

CHICAGO (AP) — The autumn tradition of burning leaves has pitted neighbor against neighbor as overflowing landfills force more people to resort to the smoky practice that inflames clean-air advocates and asthma sufferers.

Heated battles are taking place in states like Illinois and Pennsylvania, where bans on the dumping of yard waste in landfills recently were enacted.

Residents who consider the smell of burning leaves fall's perfume and object to the cost and hassle of other disposal methods are asserting their right to light up.

Sufferers of allergies, asthma or other lung ailments are demanding to breathe air free of smoke that environmentalists and health officials say can be dangerous.

"It's always amazing to me how intensely people feel about this issue," said Joseph Minott, executive director of the Delaware Valley Clean Air Council in Philadelphia.

A number of states ban leaf burning in heavily populated areas.

NEW YORK (AP) — Think you have trouble balancing your checkbook? Mayor David Dinkins runs a municipal household with a $222 million electric bill, a $20 million gasoline tab and 103 police horses that gobble up $70,000 a year in hay and feed pellets.

New York's $28 billion expense budget is larger than that of any American city and all but two of the 50 states.

It's easy to wind up $1.4 billion in the hole when you have these kinds of costs:

- $10 million to run Central Park for one year;
- $12.2 million for a year's supply of disposable plates, cups, napkins, forks, knives and spoons for school cafeterias;
- $5,500 a year for 40 pounds of dog chow for each of 18 police dogs;
- $4.2 million a year to make, install and repair 67,420 traffic signs;
- $4.2 million for a winter's supply of rock salt (135,000 tons).

The city pays an unparalleled $2 billion a year in public assistance. By one recent count 849,768 New Yorkers are on welfare, a figure greater than the population of all but 10 U.S. cities.

Musician Leonard Bernstein dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard Bernstein, the "West Side Story" composer and flamboyant conductor who won a wider audience for classical music and became a pop celebrity of the rock 'n' roll age, has died at age 72.

Bernstein died Sunday at his home of lung failure, said his physician, Dr. Kevin M. Cahill.

The son of Russian-Jewish immigrants, Bernstein became the wunderkind of American music nearly five decades ago at a time when all respected conductors in the United States were born and trained in Europe.

Bernstein was a conductor, pianist, educator, author and composer. His compositions included the theatrical, chamber music, symphonies, ballet and even a Mass.

"He was the most versatile musician and he did more than any other person in this century for the appreciation of American music and music culture," said Sir Georg Solti, music director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

A man of strong passions and sometimes sloppy sentimentality, he led an orchestra performance at a liberated concentration camp, raised money for the Black Panthers and on Christmas 1989 celebrated the fall of the Berlin Wall by conducting Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" in Berlin.

His televised "Young People's Concerts" helped introduce the baby-boom generation to classical music and won 11 Emmy Awards. He also won Grammys and a Tony.

Iraq issues harsh warning of retaliation

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq issued a stern warning to the United States and its allies today, saying Israel and other "strongholds of conspiracy" would be crushed if Iraq were attacked.

The statement in the newspaper of the ruling Baath Party comes amid speculation in Baghdad that Iraq will be attacked within three weeks. It appeared intended to counter suggestions that President Saddam Hussein was showing signs of flexibility on the annexation of Kuwait.

The editorial in the Al-Thawra newspaper said Iraqis "are prepared to meet the American troops."

"If they start the war, we will make it a catastrophe for those who ignite it," the editorial said. "The destruction will be total, especially (considering) that Israel is within the range of an al-Hijara missile, and all other strongholds of conspiracy and aggression will be crushed."

Al-Hijara, Arabic for "the stones," is the name of an Iraqi missile that Saddam first described on Oct. 9, the day after at least 19 Palestinian stone-throwers were killed in Jerusalem by Israeli policemen. Saddam said the missile could hit targets hundreds of miles away.

The reference to "other strongholds of conspiracy" apparently meant Saudi Arabia and other Arab countries participating in the U.S.-led multinational force that assembled in the Persian Gulf region after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Initially, the stated purpose of those forces was to defend Saudi Arabia, but there have been indications some Western leaders are losing patience and are considering a military attack to dislodge Iraq from Kuwait. Exiled Kuwaiti officials have encouraged that course.

"We will make them be sorry for listening to the advice of their little stooges in the area," Al-Thawra said. "All the American interests and those of its allies inside and outside the region will explode, and the fires will eat them at the first hour of their aggression against Iraq."

The language seemed aimed at countering suggestions that Saddam might be softening on his refusal to withdraw from Kuwait.

Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat said Sunday that Saddam was showing a "certain flexibility" regarding his claims to Kuwait, and urged all countries involved in the gulf crisis to follow suit.

Public facilities open to blacks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The 37-year-old law barring blacks from many public facilities formally ended today, and the African National Congress urged blacks to counter right-wing opposition by exercising their new rights.

The lifting of the Separate Amenities Act, which was a pillar of South Africa's apartheid system, was not expected to have noticeable effects in major cities, where segregation has eased in recent years.

But in smaller towns controlled by the right-wing Conservative Party, a showdown was set between blacks and white authorities and residents opposed to the changes.

In the town of Middelburg in the Conservative-dominated Transvaal province, residents have voted to close all public facilities rather than open them to all races.

Other towns planned to charge fees higher than most blacks can afford to restrict their use of public amenities.

"Entry to public facilities must be unconditional and free. What these councils are planning is an illegal act of banditry," said the ANC's secretary.

Lebanese president reunites Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The government of President Elias Hrawi moved today to reunify Beirut by dismantling the Green Line that has long split the Lebanese capital into Moslem and Christian sectors.

The army command of Gen. Emile Lahoud ordered military police to stop lawlessness by some leftist and Moslem militias that moved into the enclave of defeated Gen. Michel Aoun in the Christian heartland outside the city.

Syrian and Lebanese troops crushed Aoun's 11-month mutiny in an air-and-ground assault Saturday that left 160 people dead and more than 800 wounded. Aoun took refuge in the French Embassy.

Aoun, 55, remained in the French Embassy today while Lebanon and France argued over French efforts to move him to exile in France. France has been the traditional protector of Lebanon's Christians.

Hrawi's government said it would not allow Aoun's departure until he faces charges including the theft of $75 million from the state treasury.

Christian Democrats win elections

HELMUT KOHL

BERLIN (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl has secured his party's power in eastern Germany 12 days after unity, with the Christian Democrats sweeping elections in four of five new states, projections showed today.

As a result of Sunday's conservative win, the opposition Social Democrats appeared likely to lose their thin majority in the upper house of Parliament and with it the chance to influence national policy.

Kohl's party leads a coalition that already controls the more powerful lower house of Parliament, or Bundestag. Representation in the legislation-reviewing upper house, or Bundesrat, is based on parties' electoral performance in statewide elections.

Sunday's vote was seen as a prelude to nationwide parliamentary elections on Dec. 2 — the first united German vote in 60 years and the fourth this year in what was still East Germany just weeks ago.

Opinion

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Opinions from across the U.S.

How about simple courtesy

A female reporter, Denise Tom, was denied access to the Cincinnati Bengals' locker room by coach Sam Wyche after a Monday night game in Seattle. This episode came amidst a furor over a complaint by Lisa Olson, a Boston sports reporter, that several naked New England Patriots surrounded her in the team locker room Sept. 17 and made lewd comments to her while she was conducting interviews.

Let it be understood that reporters — male or female — do not go into locker rooms because they want to, but because that is their job. Postgame interviews with players and coaches are necessary to the reporters' stories.

But some athletes seem to treat locker rooms as personal playpens. Their immaturity perhaps is understandable, maybe inevitable. Management pays them millions; groupies and other fans lionize them; agents pamper them. They spend much of their lives shielded from responsibility.

They need a spanking, in the form of a major fine or suspension, or both. An athlete who exposes himself is guilty not only of childish behavior, but possibly of an illegality as well.

As for Wyche, his excuse that he didn't want a woman in a locker room full of naked men is beside the point. Can't a quarterback or linebacker put on a towel or a bathrobe for a few minutes and be interviewed before heading into the shower room? Can't a room be set aside for post-game interviews?

No one expects an athlete, physically and mentally exhausted after a tough game, to show impeccable manners while being peppered with sometimes tough questions. But no one is demanding perfect behavior, just common courtesy. If athletes and coaches aren't capable of that, then they aren't entitled to call themselves professionals, and they shouldn't be in the NFL with the real men.

The Milwaukee Journal on female sportswriters:

Don't treat war lightly

Predicting the future is a job best left to prophets and gypsy fortune-tellers. It is a risky business in any circumstance, and is even more so in the Byzantine world of the Middle East.

All sorts of fanciful scenarios are being concocted by so-called "military analysts" as to how a U.S.-Iraq battle would unfold. They all end with the U.S. winning a decisive victory with minimal loss of life.

The scenarios are all very neat. The good guys win and the bad guys lose. But, of all human activities, war is perhaps the least predictable. There never was a war that conformed to expectations.

If war breaks out in Kuwait, this much is certain: it will develop in directions that are utterly unpredictable. It will not be neat or surgical or sanitary. It will be what war has always been: ugly and vicious and more deadly than anyone can imagine.

No one should be fooled by the glitzy video-game scenarios being spun by armchair generals and sunshine soldiers. War in the Persian Gulf would not be a Tom Clancy novel or a Clint Eastwood movie. William Tecumseh Sherman said "War is hell" because that is precisely what it is.

The Arizona Republic, Phoenix

Voters should add pressure

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., summed up the crisis situation at the end of the House debate on the revised budget: "With all my heart, I believe the country is at stake. These deficits cannot go on."

We believe that Gephardt is right on target with this budget message.

Our country's economic future is at stake. It is time to stop catering to the needs of special-interest groups and concentrate instead on the good of the nation.

We believe . . . lawmakers must commit themselves to reducing the federal deficit. Additional taxes may be needed to accomplish this goal. But more importantly, spending must be reduced.

This country is in financial peril, and we cannot continue to be the saviors of the world. Voters must put pressure on lawmakers to act in the best interests of America as a whole.

Perhaps this election-eve financial crisis is what it will take to get lawmakers to concentrate on reducing the deficit — and building an economically stable world for the next generation.

Courier-Post, Hannibal, Mo.

A failure to do the job

What a way to run a government! Millions of Americans who have to handle family and business budgets undoubtedly have been shaking their heads and uttering that comment.

Tourists who have planned vacations for months and traveled thousands of miles only to find the national parks or government museums padlocked shut undoubtedly have been saying worse.

Government employees who literally don't know from day to day whether to report for work can hardly be expected to bring high morale to the work place.

Few can sympathize with a Congress that has known for months that such tough decisions loomed. With an election one month away, members of Congress now stand truly accountable before voters — and those voters are not in a tolerant mood.

'But the judges have changed'

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
WASHINGTON — Thirty-odd years ago, Eric Sevareid of CBS recorded an interview with Justice Hugo Black. Today, in the week that will see David Souter succeeding William Brennan on the U.S. Supreme Court, one telling moment of that interview may usefully be recalled.

Only a few years before the interview, the court had decided Brown v. Board of Education. In that landmark case, a unanimous court put an end to state laws enforcing racial segregation. Sevareid gently needed his subject. After all, he noted, 60 years had elapsed between the Plessy case of 1896, upholding the rule of "separate but equal," and the Brown case of 1954, in which the rule was summarily abandoned. In this period, Sevareid remarked, the Constitution had not changed by a relevant comma. How could the meaning of the Constitution have changed so dramatically?

Black tented his fingers and smiled. In the soft accents of Ashland, Ala., he made a reply for the ages. "That's right, Mr. Sevareid," he said, "that's right. The Constitution hadn't changed — but the judges had changed."

When Souter takes his seat, unless all the commentators are greatly mistaken, we will embark upon a period in which the Constitution significantly changes. The key words of the Constitution will not have changed. The 14th Amendment still will speak of "liberty" and the First Amendment still will prohibit an "establishment of religion." But the composition of the court will have changed. Souter went out of his way during his confirmation hearings to lavish praise upon the departed Brennan. This was lapidary stuff, not to be taken seriously. Brennan and Souter look at the Constitution from opposite poles.

Over the past 10 years at least, Brennan brilliantly led the liberal wing. The warmth of his personality combined with the sharpness of his mind. Brennan's gift was to charm the birds out of the trees. He could count on Justices Marshall and Blackmun almost all of the time; he could win Stevens' vote most of the time. In six of the 37 cases that were decided 5-4 in the 1989 term, Brennan picked up the vote of Justice

White to put together a winning coalition.

With his resignation, Brennan leaves a vacuum behind. The laws of physics do not apply. Nothing is going to fill the vacuum. Marshall is 82, a burned-out volcano. Blackmun will be 82 in November; he was born to follow, not to lead. Stevens, at 70, has none of Brennan's easy manner; he has a way of writing dissents in a tone of petulant carping that gains him neither friends nor respect. The liberal wing barely flutters.

This will become clear as the term moves along. Most casual observers of the high court see only the formal, written opinions. There were 129 of these in the past term. The unseen often counts for as much as the seen. Under the court's traditional procedure, an appeal will not be accepted unless at least four justices vote to put it on the docket. Four affirmative votes are often hard to come by. On Monday of this week, the court granted only 27 petitions for review — 27 out of 1,200 petitions that were pending.

With Brennan no longer on hand to vote for review of really touchy cases, a number of sensitive issues may not be taken up at all. Lower court decisions will be left in force. On other questions, dear to the conservative heart, Souter may cast a fourth vote to hear the cases argued. The shaping of the Constitution begins behind the locked doors of a Friday conference. Here the court sets its agenda and the chief justice assigns the writing of majority opinions. Here in conference the first impact will be felt of a changing of the judges.

One other truism should be kept in mind. Historically, justices have not been tied to ideology or to the presidents who chose them. Given life tenure, they are responsible to no one. Their only restraint, as Owen Roberts once remarked, is their own sense of self-restraint. Souter predictably will serve in this tradition. If he proves as consistently conservative as Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, those of us in the conservative camp should not complain.

Tides ebb and tides flow. Over a period of 35 years, extending roughly from 1935 through 1970, liberals could look forward to a term of court in a sense of pleasant anticipation. Their justices set the agenda. Earl Warren and Bill Brennan wrote the key opinions. They effectively changed the Constitution. With Souter aboard, it's the conservatives' turn.

Hypocrisy worse than pornography

By PAMELA PORTER
Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — This is a lewd, lascivious, filthy and indecent tale. But is it pornography, free speech or politics as usual? You be the judge.

A couple of weeks ago one of my colleagues came barreling across the news room, with a long facsimile message trailing behind him.

"You'll never believe what you just got," he shouted. There it was, in black and white, a picture of two men dressed in nothing but their wire-rim spectacles, engaged in an . . . intimate act.

My mouth dropped open in surprise. Then came the real shock, when a closer inspection revealed that the photograph was skillfully doctored to replace those of the original subjects with the heads of Sen. Jesse Helms and President Bush.

"READ MY HIPS," the facsimile blared in a bold headline. "Mr. President, Jesse Helms loves your position on AIDS. Get off your knees George."

The picture bore the logo of ACT UP, a militant gay-rights organization that has targeted the conservative Helms for defeat. Apparently the picture was part of a series of anti-Helms posters that have been popping up on light poles around the nation's capital this summer.

But here is the twist — the fax wasn't sent by ACT UP. It came from the Conservative Campaign Fund, a group of youthful right-wingers whose purpose is to help return Helms to Washington in November.

"Whoa! Why would Helms' followers distribute pictures of their man in such a precarious pose? I called the group's chairman Peter Flaherty to find out.

"I do apologize to members of the media if they were offended by the fax," Flaherty said. But he added, "It's the job of the media to reflect reality. I knew of no other way of expressing how objectionable it was except to send it to members of the media."

It sounds like the same excuse Helms uses when he displays photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe in the senator's fight to stamp out indecent art, homosexuality and no-smoking areas in restaurants, among other evils.

But that raises the question: if a picture is gross and indecent when plastered on light pole or displayed in a museum, isn't it just as offensive when sent by facsimile or waved at a campaign rally? And didn't Flaherty violate the law by using the telephone to transmit such obscene material?

I called Ken Pitt at the Bell Atlantic Telephone Co. to find out. "I've read about obscene faxes, but you're the first person I've ever talked to that's gotten one." Pitt laughed when I explained the situation.

But is it illegal? Pitt cited communications laws which strictly prohibit "communication by means of telephone (that) makes any comment, request, suggestion or proposal which is obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy or indecent."

Since fax messages travel over telephone lines, Pitt said faxes undoubtedly are covered by the statute, which is punishable by up to $50,000 and six months in jail.

But there was a catch; there always is when you talk about pornography, free speech and politics.

"Your fax is unquestionably protected political speech because the characters in it are public figures," Pitt said.

And another catch. A court would have to rule on whether the content of the fax actually was pornographic, taking into account whether it violates "community standards" of decency.

Pitt noted that the picture was sent to a news room full of seasoned Washington correspondents who have witnessed such obscene events as the escalation of the national debt and politicians trying to raise their salaries without taking a formal vote.

"You can't offend a group of reporters, can you?" he joked. Sure you can. Maybe not with pornography, but hypocrisy will do it every time.

Clear line of command lacking in Gulf

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Who commands what has become a vexing question as more countries commit units to the multinational force confronting Iraq in the Persian Gulf.

"The disparate allied armies... in the Arabian desert must be forged into a unified fighting force if they are to defeat Saddam Hussein," said Michael Dockrill, who lectures in war studies at King's College, London. Military analysts agree that the estimated 350,000 troops, airmen and sailors from 21 countries cannot be an effective force until a chain of command has been established with clearly defined operational areas and functions.

The U.S. and British air forces work closely together, but the French, Canadians, Italians and Belgians also are deploying aircraft.

President Bush and allied leaders have met to discuss the problem, as have the field generals. Bush said last month that, in the event of war, "the command structure will function very smoothly."

At sea, operational zones have been established for the eight Western navies involved in enforcing the U.N. embargo on trade with Iraq.

If war begins, wider cooperation will be essential on land as well as at sea and in the air. Artillery fire zones and tank movements will have to be coordinated, communications systems integrated, air defense sectors assigned.

Capt. Ton van Gorp, who commands the two Dutch frigates in the Persian Gulf, complained in a recent interview with the daily De Telegraaf of Amsterdam: "The way it is right now, I don't even know my assignment in time of war... We don't know what we're ready. Saudi Arabia, sensitive to Moslem criticism for inviting the Americans to protect the kingdom and Islam's holiest shrines, said quickly that no attack could be launched from Saudi soil without its approval.

Who will be in charge of what in combat, and the need for overall coordination, are major Islamic force from at least 11 nations is led by Gen. Khalid bin Sultan, son of the Saudi defense minister, and is not likely to put itself under U.S. command.

Britain has said it will coordinate its forces with Schwarzkopf's. Its 6,000-man 7th Armored Division, known as the Desert Rats, has trained with U.S. troops in Germany during NATO maneuvers.

France, not part of NATO's military command structure, has made clear it will operate autonomously and is deploying its 4,000-man Rapid Action Force alongside Arab troops in the northeastern Saudi desert.

"This situation is containable while the various forces in Saudi Arabia remain on the defensive and each country occupies a well-defined sector of the desert," Dockrill said in a recent paper. "But what will happen if war with Iraq eventually breaks out and even goes in Iraq's favor? Previous examples do not augur well for the outcome."

Noting large-scale multinational military operations in World War II and Korea, he wrote: "Unless coalition forces are tightly controlled by one supreme commander, with a clear chain of command as during the Normandy landings in 1944, setbacks can easily lead to disaster if the enemy enjoys the benefits of good internal lines of communication."

supposed to be doing. "We want to know... who's going to be in charge here if war breaks out, because it's getting more dangerous every day."

He said the lack of a unified command structure among the U.S., British, French, Italian, Canadian, Belgian and other ships could leave them badly exposed. Van Gorp said he preferred a U.N. command.

Most countries involved agree that Iraq must be forced out of Kuwait, which it seized on Aug. 2, but not necessarily on how it should be done or who should do it.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the U.S. commander, dropped a broad hint last month that the allies would have to do the job militarily when their forces were questions. Military experts say a major risk is the possibility of one allied national force mistakenly firing on another in battle. Some units have weapons Iraq also uses, such as French-built Mirage jets and Soviet-made T-72 tanks, making recognition difficult in combat.

The gulf armada includes more than 70 ships from 12 countries, scores of jet fighter squadrons from 10 countries and ground forces from 14, speaking four languages.

The Americans are by far the dominant force, with about 200,000 military personnel committed in the biggest U.S. overseas deployment since Vietnam.

SEASIDE, Ore. — American Kitefliers Association member Dennis Kucmerowski from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., flew his kite with a sense of humor Friday at the A.K.A. convention in Seaside, Ore. It takes four lines to fly his double-diamond stunt kite so naturally, says Kucmerowski, he needs four arms. The five day convention brings together hundreds of kite-enthusiasts and kite makers from all over the world.

Feeding Gulf troops a challenge for cooks

IN NORTHEASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Master Sgt. Russell Johnson admits that taking a freeze-dried beef patty that has been in storage for up to five years and turning it into Chili Mac, a Marine's favorite meal, is not always easy.

If you add the wrong amount of water to reconstitute the beef "it becomes a tough little thing that bites back at you," Johnson said Sunday.

The Chicago native presides over the largest Marine field kitchen ever established, with about 160 men working in shifts around the clock to prepare more than 22,000 meals per day.

Like all military units, this one has an official title. It is the 1st Force Service Support Group of the 1st Marine Division from the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force. Which is why most people call it the mess hall.

The two hot meals prepared each day are among the few highlights for the approximately 17,000 Marines deployed in Saudi Arabia's tractless sands. Without hot meals, all that is available are the "meals ready to eat," or MREs, that come prepackaged at 3,000 calories per bag.

There is a broad menu of MREs, including chicken a la king and scalloped potatoes with ham, but they hold little appeal even with a dousing of tabasco sauce.

"After 45 days the MREs all taste the same. You have to force yourself to eat them," said Lt. Steven Riley, 30, of the Army's 320th Field Artillery Regiment, 1st Battalion, 101st Airborne division.

"My cholesterol count oughta be 1,000 by the time I get back to the States," said the native of Tucson, Ariz.

Not so with the products of the Marine kitchens.

"Troops really love hot chow. That's the biggest thing they like out here," said Johnson.

Mess hall workers start preparing the 5 a.m. breakfast at 9 p.m. the night before. Some units have to drive more than 90 miles to pick up their meals.

At least most of the chow. Johnson said the men voted with their stomachs when he substituted mackerel in a recipe for tuna casserole. Most of the special cans that carry about 30 portions came back full.

"Lord, did those boys get upset. We've dropped that item," he said. Freshly baked goods, including oatmeal and sugar cookies and brownies, are among the greatest hits.

The favorite hot meal is Chili Mac, or macaroni and ground beef in hot tomato sauce. The meat is freeze-dried and stored on ships that carry everything from Band-Aids to tanks for quick deployment.

Stocks are checked every two years but some of the goods can stay on board for more than five.

And what chow it is. A recent breakfast consisted of scrambled eggs — about half are real, the rest powder — spam or beef bacon, French toast, grits, creamed beef, biscuits, apple-pecan or turnovers, fresh fruit, coffee, milk and juices.

Johnson said this was a normal menu but a few of the Marines suggested the reporters might want to visit more frequently.

But the men who work in the kitchen tents aren't complaining. "I haven't been hungry for 11½ years," said Sgt. Scott Appleton, 29, of Novato, Calif.

Tests can be innacurate

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the woman whose doctor diagnosed her with chlamydia. She said she had been faithful to her husband for 9 1/2 years, and he claimed to have been faithful to her. She asked if she could have been carrying the disease that long. You told her yes, it was possible.

This situation sounded all too familiar to me. That's why I'm writing. I recently went for a checkup at my local state health department, and was told upon initial examination that I, too, had chlamydia. I had been married for 10 years and had been faithful to my husband, and never did I doubt his faithfulness. I told the nurse this, and she said that the doctor felt no need to run another test to confirm the diagnosis as I had complained of the symptoms and he was 99 percent sure. But if I wanted to be sure which sexually transmitted disease I had, they would take a sample for the test.

Then I went home and confronted my husband. He said there was no possibility that this was true. He went to the health department the following day so they could take a sample from him. We were both treated for a week while waiting for our tests to come back. Guess what? They had made a mistake! Both of our tests were negative! Quite a mistake, I might add, as I'm due to deliver our first child in February.

I have since contacted the health department and asked the people there to counsel their staff, as this could have ruined a marriage that was not as strong as ours. Please publish this letter. And sign me RETESTED AND PASSED.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the question of who should go to the airport to meet the serviceman who had been overseas for over a year. His wife, alone? Or his parents and his wife? I vote with you, Abby. (His wife and his parents.)

My husband was in the military as a career, and I have shared many a homecoming with parents and children at various times. We are still happily married.

I had a friend whose husband was also in the military. She saved pennies all the time her husband was gone. When he came back, she took the kids with her to meet their dad at the airport. Earlier, she had scattered all the pennies she had saved on the front lawn; when they all got home from the airport, she told the kids they could keep all the money they found. Then she and her husband went inside for some quiet time alone! — AN EX-SEABEE'S WIFE IN BEDFORD, IND.

Two parties closer on budget issues than they admit

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A freshman congressman rushed to the House floor the day after President Bush and congressional leaders announced their now-moribund budget agreement.

"Let us vote this down and get to work on crafting a fair and compassionate deficit-reduction package," he said, attacking the Medicare cuts and working-class tax increases.

He sounded like a Democrat, but he wasn't. He was Rep. Craig James of Florida, president of the Republican freshman class in the 101st Congress.

James illustrates an often-ignored fact in congressional politics: The differences between the two political parties, especially when it comes to domestic programs, are very small.

In the two weeks since the budget deal, as the mid-term elections neared:

- Both parties in Congress have backed plans to ease increases in Medicare fees.
- Both parties have embraced cutting back or eliminating the proposed increase in taxes on gasoline. Ditto for home heating oil.
- Both parties have proposed cutting capital gains taxes.
- Neither party has proposed any further specific cutbacks in federal spending beyond those in the original agreement.

"I think there is a great blurring of the two parties in this country. And I think that's regrettable," said Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H. "The American people do not know who to blame."

Lawmakers of both parties may not have solved the nation's financial ills, but they have been working overtime on blame avoidance.

Democrats, the doves of Congress for the past two decades, don't want to take the heat if something goes wrong in the Persian Gulf — so they adopt a resolution pledging support for Bush's policies.

Republicans, after campaigning for years for "entitlement reform," join with Democrats and run the other way when proposals are made to trim the biggest entitlements, Social Security and Medicare.

Robert Billings, legislative director of the American Conservative Union, said his group has noticed a trend toward the center from both the left and the right in Congress.

"On fiscal issues, that's where it hurts us the most," he said, lamenting the weakening GOP support for spending cuts and no new taxes.

Ron Zucker of the Americans for Democratic Action, a liberal group that also monitors congressional voting, said that on social issues the differences remain pronounced — maybe even more polarized.

But on the budget, "you are going to get some weird flip-flops," he said.

Even the tax issue — one where the differences between the two parties should be easy to discern — can get muddy.

Democrats don't want to talk about raising taxes, though most believe it necessary. "We have to change the debate from taxes to who gets taxed and the fairness of it," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

And Republicans no longer want to claim that giving tax breaks to the rich is the key to economic growth for all. "We have never been a party that was sympathetic to the higher incomes," said Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla.

Of course, with elections just four weeks away, the two parties need positions to run on — the "us vs. them" kind of stuff.

So House Democrats seized on the tax portion of the budget — agreed upon by their own leaders — and declared it unfair. To exploit what they see as a political advantage, they created a soak-the-rich plan designed to boost middle-class voter appeal in uncertain times.

In a rare phenomenon, Republicans are more divided than the Democrats. But they appear to be falling back on a stance of opposing any new taxes. George Bush or not. If that prevents them from offering their own deficit-reduction proposal, so be it, but it makes for good campaign stuff.

Both party positions appear more aimed at the voters than at accomplishing anything.

Government may shut down again, Sununu predicts

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, strongly opposing a House Democratic plan to sharply boost taxes on the wealthy, is setting the stage for an election-season showdown with Congress over a deficit-reduction plan.

The government will be forced to begin shutting down again if it can't agree on a deficit-reduction plan with Congress by Friday, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu predicted Sunday.

All sides "will have difficulty" agreeing on a budget by then, he said.

The president and Congress have been negotiating for months on a deficit-reduction plan to cut spending and increase taxes by about $500 billion over five years.

Bush allowed non-essential federal activity to stop for three days over the Columbus Day holiday weekend after the House rejected a deficit reduction plan on Oct. 5. The government resumed operating on a stopgap measure, which expires at midnight Friday.

The odds are "probably relatively high" the government will begin shutting down a second time if Congress fails to approve a plan acceptable to the White House, Sununu said.

Congress also is racing to complete work on a number of other measures including a clean air bill, crime legislation, the 1990 farm bill and a civil rights measure. Lawmakers hope to adjourn sometime in the next two weeks to campaign for the Nov. 6 election.

Later today, the Senate planned to take up the $268 billion defense spending bill for fiscal 1991. The plan trims about $1 billion from Bush's budget request for the Strategic Defense Initiative but leaves intact the administration's request for the B-2 stealth bomber. It also cuts 100,000 troops from the U.S. worldwide troop level of 2.1 million.

Vice President Dan Quayle said Sunday the president is prepared to keep Congress in session for as long as it takes to craft a budget plan he can accept.

Both Sununu and Quayle attacked a plan that was passed last week by the Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means Committee.

The measure, which would raise the income tax on the wealthiest Americans from 28 percent to 33 percent, is expected to win approval from the full House. A family earning more than $200,000 could see their taxes increase by $11,000 under the plan.

Quayle said the administration is "violently opposed" to the Democratic plan, while Sununu said the administration was "opposed to playing around with the income tax rate for Americans across the board." Quayle appeared on CBS's "Face the Nation," while Sununu was on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said his proposal is designed to "protect middle-income and poor America" and make everyone "share in the pain of governing."

"I'm not going to deny that we're trying to make a political statement, and there certainly is evidence that there's now a division between Democrats and Republicans," said Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

While Sununu and Quayle strongly opposed the House proposal, they did not criticize the Senate Finance Committee's plan to leave the 28 percent rate intact and instead close tax loopholes for the rich.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the committee, said he would not go along with an increase to 33 percent — although he supports it in theory — because Bush's opposition dooms any tax package that includes such an increase.

"That means that we have a progressive table, that those making the highest income will pay the highest increase in the taxes," he said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Any deficit-reduction plan is expected to reduce defense spending, cut Medicare and hold back spending in other federal programs. Debate in recent days has focused primarily on raising taxes, including those on alcohol, gas, luxury items and cigarettes.

Economy

of the economy into recession — high oil prices — will help Texas.

The national economy has been leaning toward recession for some time, but the current concern stems from the aftermath of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2.

Oil prices since then have doubled to the $40-a-barrel range, bringing back memories of the 1981-82 recession, the nation's worst economic downturn since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

A decade ago, it was Mideast turmoil and the 1979 Iranian revolution that sent crude prices on an upward spiral. The price fueled double-digit inflation, which, in turn, persuaded the Federal Reserve Board to put on the brakes by tightening the money supply.

Interest rates skyrocketed past 20 percent and the U.S. economy went into a tailspin.

Texas, however, was experiencing an oil-fired expansion and the number of drilling rigs in operation surpassed 1,300 — up from 500 in 1974 — and non-farm employment in Texas grew by 5.6 percent in 1981, compared to less than 1 percent growth for the entire United States.

But then oil prices collapsed in the mid-1980s, pulling the state's banking and real estate industries down. The rig count plummeted to 312, while banks and savings and loans went belly up by the dozen. The office vacancy rates across Texas were the highest in the nation.

Lenders and investors still remember when the bottom fell out of the Oil Patch.

"You'd be crazy to make loans now based on $35-a-barrel oil," said Robert Lane, president of NCNB Texas National Bank. "Texas lenders were burned twice in the 1980s on energy and real estate, and they ought to be pretty skeptical about artificially induced price movement."

Weinstein added that the people "who funded a lot of the wells in the early '80s are going to be a lot more cautious this time around."

Israel

The Temple Mount clash was the bloodiest of a 34-month Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation of lands seized in the 1967 Middle East war. Moslems revere the site as the place where the prophet Mohammed ascended to heaven.

It is the Jews' holiest site, location of the Western Wall, or Wailing Wall, remnant of their Biblical temple.

The Temple Mount shootings have shifted the focus of the Palestinian uprising from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to Jerusalem, home to 350,000 Jews and 150,000 Palestinian Arabs.

On Sunday night, the Israeli government announced plans for a building campaign throughout Jerusalem to dramatize its claims to the city.

The decision comes despite U.S. requirements that Israel avoid settling Jewish newcomers in occupied territories or east Jerusalem. These were conditions of a $400 million loan guarantee approved by Congress this month.

The opposition Labor Party also rejected the Security Council resolution, but urged that low-level police and city officials cooperate with U.N. envoys so Israel's side would be heard.

to accept the award for 14 years — until Gorbachev freed him from detention and allowed him to travel.

Yelena Bonner, Sakharov's widow, criticized Gorbachev, comparing him to Napoleon, in one of Norway's biggest papers last week.

Ms. Anderson said she would expect the prize to be criticized: "That would be normal." She said the committee had not communicated with Moscow directly to announce the award, but had sent an official in a taxi to the Soviet Embassy in Oslo with the news.

She said she hoped Gorbachev would hear it from the embassy before he heard it from a reporter.

Asked about Gorbachev's domestic policies, which have democratized political life but also led to instability, Ms. Anderson said: "If you will read the text you will see we are talking mainly about international policy," she said.

"The big thing that is happening in the world is the reconciliation of the superpowers. We are very happy to come with a laureate who has such great significance."

Yigor Ligachev, No. 2 in the Soviet government from 1985-88 and one of Gorbachev's main rivals, told Norwegian television in Moscow the Nobel Committee's decision was welcomed with deep gratitude and wonder.

"It means we are finally met with confidence in the world," he said.

President Vacek Havel of Czechoslovakia, a top candidate for the prize, said, "Mikhail Gorbachev contributed significantly to the acceleration of the inevitable changes in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe and certainly deserves the prize. If this prize contributes to the peaceful and quiet transition of the Soviet Union to a society of equal nations and citizens, we welcome it warmly."

The committee commended Gorbachev, who rose to power in March 1985, for bringing "greater openness" to Soviet society, producing a slowdown in the arms race, and encouraging democratic reform in Eastern Europe.

It said the international peace process, "which Gorbachev has contributed so significantly to, opens up new possibilities for the world community to solve its pressing problems across ideological, religious, historical and cultural dividing lines."

But the changes Gorbachev has encouraged have been accompanied by bloody ethnic conflicts in Armenia, Azerbaijan and other parts of the Soviet Union.

And his economic reforms — the transformation to a market-based system is still far off — have led to shortages of food and consumer goods.

The Nobel Committee said the historic changes "spring from several factors" but that it wanted to honor Gorbachev for his "many and decisive contributions."

"The greater openness he has brought about in Soviet society has also helped promote international trust," said the committee.

Knicks show NBA supremacy

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — The New York Knicks adjusted to a couple of different zones in order to reassert the NBA's worldwide dominance of pro basketball.

The Knicks, who had to struggle to defeat an Italian club two days earlier, turned up the defensive pressure to overwhelm European champion POP 84 Split of Yugoslavia on Saturday.

The change from Thursday to Saturday was the team's ability to adapt to European zone defenses and the change in time zones.

"The zone threw us off on Thursday, but tonight we were prepared for the zone," Patrick Ewing said after scoring 23 points and grabbing 13 rebounds to lead the Knicks to the championship of the McDonald's Open.

"Also, we've been here for a little while, so we weren't so tired," he said after the Knicks' 117-101 victory over POP 84.

Payback time for Houston Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — The biggest turnaround in the NFL this season could be Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche's attitude about the Houston Oilers.

Last December, Wyche left the field bitterly criticizing the Oilers and their former coach, Jerry Glanville, after running up the score in a 61-7 victory. Then, Wyche called the Oilers' undisciplined and Glanville a phony.

Wyche did an about-face Sunday after Warren Moon threw a career-high five touchdown passes — three in a run of 31 straight points — leading the Oilers a 48-17 victory, their biggest since beating San Diego 49-33 on Dec. 19, 1971.

"I really liked the way Houston played today, they played with poise and explosiveness," Wyche said. "They can do what they did today every week if things go right for them."

"They think we ran up the score last year, but we put our backups out there and I expected the best out of them. I'm sure Jack Pardee did today."

Cincinnati kicked a field goal as time ran out in last December's game and Wyche later said he wished there could have been a fifth quarter so the Bengals could have scored even more.

Wyche flip-flopped Sunday. He ran across the field at game's end and sought out Pardee, in his first year as Oilers coach. Wyche also offered congratulations to several Oilers players.

By the time Moon left the game with 12:08 to play he had become one of a kind — the only quarterback to pass for 20,000 yards in both the NFL and the Canadian Football League.

Moon completed 21 of 33 passes for 369 yards, bringing his NFL total to 20,204 yards. He threw for 21,228 yards for the CFL Edmonton Eskimos.

The Oilers (3-3) pulled within one game of the Bengals (4-2) in the AFC Central Division race.

Moon's third pass of the game was intercepted by safety Barney Bussey and returned 18 yards to the Oiler 40, setting up Craig Taylor's 2-yard touchdown run — the second rushing touchdown off the Oilers defense this year.

Moon came back with a 33-yard touchdown pass to rookie Tony Jones, who fought for the ball and won a battle with Rod Jones in the end zone. Jim Breech kicked his 10th consecutive field goal, a 29-yarder, giving Cincinnati its lead of the game.

That's when Moon opened up the Oilers' fireworks display with 31 straight points. He completed touchdown passes of 33 yards to Drew Hill, 42 yards to Leonard Harris and 11 yards to Ernest Givins. Richard Johnson returned an interception 30 yards for a touchdown and Tony Zendejas added a 22-yard field goal.

Cincinnati finally broke the spell with 10:33 elapsed in the third quarter on Boomer Esiason's 5-yard pass to tight end Rodney Holman. Moon got his fifth touchdown pass to a fifth different receiver with 2:52 elapsed in the fourth quarter on a 3-yard pass to Hayward Jeffries and Zendejas kicked a 23-yard field goal with 7:06 elapsed.

If Wyche gets a turnaround award, Bengals starting rookie linebacker James Francis should get a sympathy vote.

Pokes offense goes to sleep; Cardinals take 20-3 victory

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Cardinals changed defenses and their luck in the process.

Rookie Johnny Johnson rushed for 120 yards and one touchdown while Phoenix limited Dallas to 100 yards total offense and beat the Cowboys 20-3 Sunday for their first win at home since last November.

The Cardinals (2-3) had been outscored 52-7 in the second halves of losses to New Orleans (28-7) and Washington (38-10).

Coach Joe Bugel spent last week's open date retooling Phoenix's pass rush and secretly switching from the 4-3 to the 3-4 defense.

The move paid off as Troy Aikman completed only nine of 25 passes for 61 yards with two interceptions. He also was sacked four times for 27 yards in losses as Dallas' record fell to 2-4.

"I've put as much pressure on me as I've had this year," Aikman said. "We expected a 4-3 defense and they came out with a 3-4. It wasn't foreign to us. We played against it the last two weeks but we didn't play well against it this time."

"We wanted to fill the passing lanes and get in his face," Bugel said. "We wanted to do something different. Our staff sat down and decided to go a different way on had something to do with their good play."

The Cowboys did make a game of it briefly in the second half when Ken Willis' 37-yard field goal closed the gap to 10-3 with 13:07 remaining in the third quarter. It was set up by defensive end Daniel Stubbs' recovery of a Johnny Johnson fumble at the Phoenix 26.

However, cornerback Jay Taylor's 34-yard interception return to the Cardinal 47 set up Al Del Greco's 28-yard field goal three seconds into the fourth quarter to make it 13-3.

Former Cowboy linebacker Garth Jax ended another Dallas drive with his first career interception and a 4-yard return to the Cowboys' 42 with 14:08 to play.

Johnson, who had his yardage on 19 carries, ended the scoring on a 9-yard touchdown run with 6:11 left.

He became the first Cardinal to rush for 100 yards in a game since Earl Ferrell got 110 on Oct. 30, 1988, at Dallas. It was the first time the Cowboys have allowed a runner to get 100 yards against them in the past 15 games.

Fellow rookie Anthony Thompson, who had 41 yards on 13 carries, gave Phoenix a 7-0 lead on a 1-yard run 5:26 into the game. The score came eight plays after safety Lonnie Young recovered a fumble at

Rice-Montana show plucks Falcons

By The Associated Press

The Houston Oilers weren't concerned with history, San Francisco's Joe Montana continued to write it and, thanks to New Orleans newcomer Steve Walsh, John Fourcade may be about to become history.

Among the NFL's major happenings, the Oilers avenged last year's 61-7 shellacking at the hands of Cincinnati by trouncing the Bengals 48-17, Montana had career highs of 476 yards and six touchdowns passes in the 49ers' 45-35 victory over Atlanta and Walsh made a successful debut with the Saints by throwing three TD passes in a 25-20 triumph over Cleveland.

"We don't worry about history," Houston coach Jack Pardee said, downplaying the revenge angle. "We'll just enjoy this one and start getting ready to play the next one."

Montana described his 32-of-49 performance as "on and off. At times I played pretty well, but I didn't feel like I played up to the standard of the Super Bowl. I was up and down."

Jerry Rice caught 13 passes, a club record, for 225 yards. Five went for touchdowns, tying an NFL record.

Walsh, obtained from Dallas three weeks ago, was even more modest than Montana.

"The receivers made me look good. I don't think I threw one right on the numbers," said Walsh, who didn't start but completed 15 of 26 passes for 243 yards.

Minnesota visits Philadelphia tonight.

Buffalo, Indianapolis, Miami and New England had the week off.

49ers 45, Falcons 35

The Montana-Rice show enabled the 49ers to extend their NFL record for consecutive regular-season road victories to 13. Rice's TD receptions covered 24, 25, 19, 13 and 15 yards. He tied the NFL touchdown catch record set by Bob Shaw of the Chicago Cardinals against Baltimore in 1950 and tied by San Diego's Kellen Winslow against Oakland in 1981.

Montana also threw a 43-yard touchdown pass to Mike Sherard. The six scoring passes broke the club record of five set by Montana twice previously and by several others. Mike Cofer also got in on the fun with a club-record 56-yard field goal.

It also was the 13th consecutive victory for the 49ers (5-0), including their three playoff victories last year en route to a second consecutive Super Bowl championship.

Chris Miller completed 18 of 31 passes for 291 yards and three touchdowns for the Falcons (2-3) before leaving with an injury to his right knee with 8:38 left. The game was tied 14-14 before San Francisco went ahead to stay midway in the second period. It was 45-21 before WASHINGTON — New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor (56) forces Washington Redskins quarterback Mark Humphries (16) out of the pocket during second quarter NFL action Sunday at RFK Stadium.

Atlanta scored two late TDs. Rice would only say that "I had a decent game... but I don't compare games. I don't think I made two mistakes in the Super Bowl. Today I made four or five."

Saints 25, Browns 20

Walsh replaced Fourcade with 10:49 left in the second quarter after the Browns (2-4) had tied the score 3-3. Walsh marched the Saints (2-3) 79 yards in 14 plays on his first series, capping it with a 4-yard touchdown catch record set by Bob Hilliard. The drive consumed 9:41, the longest possession of the season for the Saints.

Walsh also hit Floyd Turner with a 45-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter and threw a 13-yarder to Eric Martin in the final period.

The Browns got two field goals in the second quarter and scored two touchdowns in the final minutes, including Bernie Kosar's 13-yard TD pass to Webster Slaughter. Kosar was 18-of-36 for 168 yards.

Coach Jim Mora wouldn't say whether Fourcade or Walsh would start at Houston next week.

"It's only Sunday and I don't have to make that decision for a week," he said.

Fourcade, who was 3-for-5, doesn't intend to go down without a fight.

"You haven't seen the last of John Fourcade," he said. "It's a long season. I guess I'm back in the position of being one play away from being the starting quarterback."

Giants 24, Redskins 20

The Giants are 5-0 for the first time since 1941 and beat Washington (3-2) for the fifth straight time — by a total of 18 points. The difference came on three big plays by quarterback Phil Simms, starting with the longest passing play of his career, an 80-yard hookup with Stephen Baker for a touchdown.

Simms, who completed 13 of 22 passes for 283 yards and two scores, set up third-period touchdowns by Otis Anderson and Mark Bavaro by hitting Bavaro with a 61-yard pass and Maurice Carthon with a 63-yarder.

Stan Humphries, making his second start for the Redskins, hit 14 of 27 passes for 135 yards. But he threw three interceptions, the last one Greg Jackson's second of the game to end Washington's final threat.

Chiefs 43, Lions 24

Free agent Barry Word rushed for a team-record 200 of Kansas City's 563 total yards and Bill Maas led the defense with two sacks, one for a safety on Bob Galgiano.

Word, outperforming All-Pro Barry Sanders and Christian Okoye, broke the record of 193 yards by the late Joe Delaney. Word carried 18 times as the Chiefs (4-2) ran up their highest point total in more than five

The Cardinals almost shot themselves in the foot by blowing two scoring opportunities in the first half. They still led 10-0 and held on for their fourth consecutive win over Dallas but their first victory at home since beating the Cowboys 24-20 last Nov. 12.

"Phoenix is commended. They were well prepared," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said. "We were in bad field position in the first half and not much changed in the second half. We did not play well and I don't know if Phoenix's off-week

Del Greco made it 10-0 on a 28-yard field goal 6:21 before halftime.

The Cardinals wasted two other drives as they turned the ball over on downs at the Dallas 1-yard line late in the first quarter, and Johnson lost a fumble at the Cowboy 2 early in the second quarter.

Dallas had only 65 yards in total offense in the first half — including 12 yards net passing — and punted five times after never getting within the Cardinal 40.

ABILENE (AP) — Bruce Crampton's 3-under-par 69 clinched the Galin Brothers Southwest Senior Classic by four shots over Lee Trevino.

Crampton had three straight sub-70 rounds for a 12-under-par 204 Sunday on the par-72, 6,843-yard Fairway Oaks Country Club course.

The win was Crampton's 17th in his five-year career on the PGA Senior Tour. He won $45,000 of the $300,000 purse.

Chi Chi Rodriguez and Terry Dill finished tied for third at 210, two shots behind Trevino, who had his sixth runnerup finish of the year.

"It wasn't a precise shot-making round like the other two rounds," said Crampton, who had rounds of 67 and 68 to enter the final day with a three-shot lead over Robert Gaona. The final two days were played in winds that gusting more than 20 mph.

Crampton never led by less than three shots as he started his round with a pair of birdies.

World Series to be battle of bullpens?

CINCINNATI (AP) — Only four years ago, Dave Stewart and Dennis Eckersley seemed headed for baseball oblivion. Now, the term future Hall of Famers is starting to appear before their names.

Their remarkable revival is only a part of the reason the Oakland Athletics are in a position to join the ranks of the greatest teams ever.

The A's start their quest for a second straight World Series title Tuesday night against Cincinnati in what figures to be a battle of the bullpens.

In Stewart and Eckersley, the A's have the best starter and reliever in the series.

"I give the Reds bullpen a lot of credit, and at the same time you believe in yours," A's manager Tony La Russa said. "I'll take our bullpen, recognizing they have a great bullpen, too."

After a 6-11 season for the Chicago Cubs in 1986 as a starter, Eckersley was acquired by the Athletics for outfielder Dave Wilder. At the age of 32, Eckersley started a new career as a relief pitcher.

In the last three seasons, he has saved 126 games. Not bad for a pitcher who leads all current A's in career complete games.

"Dennis Eckersley... I asked guys how do you miss his pitches?" Hall of Famer Johnny Bench said. "He throws the ball over the plate all the time. He's amazing, I'm so impressed... He'll be in the Hall of Fame."

In his last 203 2-3 innings, Eckersley has walked 18 batters. This season, he walked four and struck out 73 in 73 1-3 innings while saving 48 games.

Eckersley's story, however, is no more amazing than Stewart's survival for stardom.

Released by Philadelphia in May 1986, the Oakland native has been a 20-game winner in each of the last four seasons. Stewart is 5-1 in the AL playoffs and was the World Series MVP last season when he beat San Francisco twice.

"It shows what can happen when somebody has faith in you," said Stewart, who will start Game 1 of the World Series against Jose Rijo. "We're just confident of our ability to go out and win."

Cincinnati's formula for victory is to grab an early lead and then turn it over to the Nasty Boys in the sixth or seventh inning. The Reds were 66-22 when they scored first and 74-6 when holding the lead after six innings.

In 15 2-3 innings against Pittsburgh, Rob Dibble, Randy Myers and Norm Charlton gave up one earned run and six hits while striking out 20. Dibble pitched five hitless innings, fanning 10 to tie a playoff record for a reliever.

"It doesn't matter if a guy hits cross-handed, right-handed or he's a switch-hitter," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "It doesn't matter if you have a midget at the plate. If Rob Dibble is throwing 100 miles per hour, I don't care if you're standing on your head. You're going to have a tough time."

Fittingly, Myers and Dibble were selected co-MVPs of the NL playoffs after the Reds won their first pennant since 1976 Friday night in Game 6. Myers saved three games to tie a playoff record and Dibble was so good it went way beyond nastiness.

"I consider it a bullpen MVP," Myers said. "We are a group down there. We're called the Nasty Boys, and that's how we pitch. A lot has been said about Dibble, but he goes out there and gives 100 percent, and I try to do the same thing."

A lot has been said about Dibble because he's been saying a lot about himself. He's not particularly happy as Myers' setup man and wants a big raise.

"Rob's a nice boy," Cincinnati owner-ben mother Marge Schott said. "But sometimes I'd like to smack him."

The A's pen is a little more subtle in their approach, but just as effective. Eckersley, Rick Honeycutt and Gene Nelson combined to give up five hits and no runs in 6 2-3 innings during the AL playoffs.

"La Russa is so smart because he has great people," said Bench, who helped the Reds win the World Series in 1975 and '76. "Sparky Anderson was rather smart, too. When you have great talent, it's amazing what happens."

Sanders scored on a tackle-breaking, 47-yard pass play and a 13-yard run to give Detroit (2-4) a quick 14-3 lead. But Okoye, whose 1,480 yards edged Sanders by 10 for the 1989 NFL rushing title, had touchdown runs of 4 yards and 1 yard as the Chiefs took command in the second half.

Raiders 24, Seahawks 17 Short touchdown passes by Jay Schroeder capped the first three drives as Los Angeles (5-1) retained a one-game lead over Kansas City in the AFC West. Schroeder, who was 19-of-26 for 235 yards, hit Steven Smith for a 1-yard TD in the first period before connecting with Mervyn Fernandez and Ethan Horton from 3 yards out in the second quarter.

Although Seattle (2-4) dominated thereafter, the victory left the Raiders 10-0 at home since Art Shell became coach early last season.

The Seahawks, getting a 22-of-36, 294-yard passing performance from Dave Krieg, didn't get a touchdown from Derrick Fenner, who had scored eight in the previous three weeks to lead the league.

Bucs 26, Packers 14 Vinny Testaverde passed for a season-high 292 yards and Wayne Haddix scored from 45 yards out with one of Tampa Bay's five interceptions. Testaverde completed 17 of 29 passes, including a 14-yard scoring toss to Ron Hall, giving him eight TD passes and only two interceptions.

Don Majkowski, who has struggled since ending a long contract holdout, threw for 355 yards and one touchdown for Green Bay (4-2). But the interceptions, among six turnovers by the Packers, helped Tampa Bay (4-2) build a 26-7 lead.

Steelers 34, Broncos 17 Bubby Brister threw four touchdown passes, three to rookie tight end Eric Green, as revitalized Pittsburgh (3-3) handed Denver (2-4) its third straight loss. Brister also threw a 6-yard TD pass to Louis Lipps and Merrill Hoge ran six yards for another score. Brister completed 21 of 28 passes for 353 yards.

Denver got first-half touchdowns from Sammy Winder and Steve Sewell, but Pittsburgh scored four straight TDs against the Broncos' injury-riddled defense.

Chargers 39, Jets 3 Marion Butts ran for 121 yards and two touchdowns and San Diego's strong pass rush combined with New York errors.

Poor play by the Jets' special teams, including a dropped snap by punter Joe Prokop, put the Chargers (2-4) in good position early. The Jets (2-4) made it easy for the Chargers, once incurring three major penalties on a San Diego drive that made it 19-3 in the second period.

San Diego's pass rush resulted in four sacks and an interception and limited battered New York quarterbacks Ken O'Brien and Tony Eason to a combined seven completions in 20 attempts for 53 yards.

Bears 38, Rams 9 Jim Harbaugh, playing with a cracked rib, passed for two touchdowns and ran for another Harbaugh completed 18 of 25 passes for a career-high 248 yards and the Bears (5-1) scored on their first four possessions for a 28-0 halftime lead.

The Rams (1-4) came into the game leading the NFL in offense but were held to 91 yards in the first half. They didn't get their offense untracked until the Bears had built a 31-0 lead.

Harbaugh threw a 12-yard touchdown pass to Neal Anderson to cap an 88-yard opening drive, ran 12 yards for a touchdown and passed 18 yards to Ron Morris for a 21-0 lead. Chicago also scored on Brad Muster's 13-yard run, Kevin Butler's 27-yard field goal and a 15-yard run by Anderson.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Cher and Madonna have a few things in common — successful singing careers, movie stardom and Warren Beatty.

"That was before Sonny. Warren has probably been with everybody I know and unfortunately I was one of them," Cher said in the November issue of Vanity Fair magazine.

Kid Konnection Johnny, your mother's calling

By SANDY SHORE
Associated Press Writer

AURORA, Colo. — A housewife constantly racing to keep up with her active 4-year-old son has found a high-tech way to get him home in a hurry — she beeps him.

"When Jonathan's beeper goes off, he is home, which is nice. He can't argue; he can't say, 'Just a minute,'" said Pat Hammett.

"It's convenient in that I don't have to stand out and yell for five minutes and be one of those screaming mothers."

The beepers designed for children are the creation of Leslie and John Gilmore, who founded Kid Konnection in this Denver suburb about a month ago.

The pagers come in brightly colored cases that can be worn on a child's waist. They can be leased for $14 to $18 a month, which pays for the beeper and the paging service, Mrs. Gilmore said.

So far, the fledgling company has received more than 200 inquiries and its clients include a Boulder teen-ager and a hearing-impaired child whose beeper vibrates.

"I think it gives children a sense of responsibility rather than having Mom come out, screaming at them," Mrs. Gilmore said.

The couple came up with the idea after Mrs. Gilmore quit her job as manager of a local boutique to stay home with her sons, Christopher, 4, and Jeffrey, 18 months.

Like her neighbor Mrs. Hammett, Mrs. Gilmore had trouble keeping up with her 4-year-old.

"I thought there ought to be a way to communicate with him when I'm in the house and he's out," she said.

Christopher said he's happy with the arrangement.

"It protects me," he said. "When it beeps, I come in."

Mrs. Gilmore said: "It just has become so routine for him, like brushing his teeth."

Although the kiddie beeper is a novelty with a purpose, some wonder whether it will cause a high-tech communication gap.

Mitch Handelsman, an associate professor of psychology at the University of Colorado-Denver, says the potential problem doesn't have to surface.

"Just as TV can be useful if there is sufficient communication, this beeper technology can become a part of optimal family functioning as long as it does not substitute for important communication," he said.

The beepers also aren't foolproof.

Some children "will find 100 creative ways to lose the beeper," Handelsman said.

Mrs. Hammett said that although her son does not leave the house to play without his beeper, the device has not made her complacent.

"I consider myself an overly protective parent," she said. "I still poke my head out the door."

TAAS testing this week

Stanton High School students will take the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test in grades 3, 5, 7, 9 and 11 Tuesday-Thursday, according to Morris W. Williamson, director of curriculum. TAAS replaces the TEAMS test that has been given for the past several years. The new test is designed to measure higher order thinking skills and is more comprehensive than the TEAMS, Williamson said. "Students who miss the exam will not be given an opportunity to make up the test. Parents are encouraged to have their children in school on these dates and to have them there on time," Williamson said.

District taking orders for trees

The Mustang and Soil and Water Conservation District is taking orders for Windbreak Trees, Chairman of the Board for Martin County Newell Tate announced. "Trees can be ordered from now to January 15, but place your orders now before the trees are sold out," Tate said. These trees are sold in bundles of 50 trees for $18. Wildlife packets include four species of trees consisting of 100 trees per packet for quail and pheasant, deer, turkey and squirrel. Each packet of trees sells for $36. The Mustang SWCD has been selling windbreak trees since 1974. The trees are grown by the Texas Forest Service in Lubbock and are adapted to this area. If you want to order your trees you can call 915-756-3421 or go by the Soil Conservation Service office located at 109 East Broadway in Stanton. Trees are to be paid for at the time of ordering. Delivery of the trees will be at the MC Livestock Barn Feb. 28, 1991 at 10:45 a.m.

Gorbachev wins peace prize

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

OSLO, Norway — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev won the 1990 Nobel Peace Prize today for opening up Soviet society to reform, helping slow the arms race and allowing Eastern Europe to break free of Soviet domination.

In awarding the 59-year-old Soviet leader the $700,000 prize, the Norwegian Nobel Committee cited him for his leading role in the world peace process. "This peace process, which Gorbachev has contributed so significantly to, opens up new possibilities for the world community to solve its pressing problems," said Gidske Anderson, leader of the Nobel Committee. The committee also cited "the greater openness he has brought about in Soviet society," saying it

Rams, Chargers victors Saturday

By DONALD AVERY
For the Herald

First game
The Stanton Noon Lions' Pee Wee football league completed its fourth week of action Saturday with the Rams outlasting the Oilers 3-6 in the first game. The second place Rams improve their record to 3-1, while the Oilers drop to 1-3 with two games left in the schedule.

Both teams played tough the first half, and completed the second quarter tied at 0-0. Brad Cox received the second half kickoff and returned it 60 yards, all the way to the Oiler five-yard line. On the next play from scrimmage, Ram quarterback Cox pitched the ball to runningback P. J. Rodriguez, and Rodriguez scored to give the Rams the lead. Cox added the PAT to put the Rams up 3-0.

Brad Hull received the ensuing kickoff for the Oilers and went all the way for a touchdown. The try for two failed, and the Rams held a slim 3-6 lead going into the final quarter. The Rams tried to score again as Cox and Nathan Long moved the football down to the Oiler three-yard line. A tough Oiler stand, however, sacked Cox for a loss and the Oilers took over at their own eight-yard line. The Oilers began a drive of their own, as Hull moved the ball on a 42-yard run to midfield. Runningback Chris Carroll tried to go outside, but Long caught the runner from behind for a five-yard loss. The contest ended with the Rams taking over the ball on downs. Second game The undefeated Oilers defeated the Oilers 14-0. ● FOOTBALL page 8-A

Sununu: Government may shut down again

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, strongly opposing a House Democratic plan to sharply boost taxes on the wealthy, is setting the stage for an election-season showdown with Congress over a deficit-reduction plan. The government will be forced to begin shutting down again if it can't agree on a deficit-reduction plan with Congress by Friday, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu predicted Sunday. All sides "will have difficulty" agreeing on a budget by then, he said. The president and Congress have been negotiating for months on a deficit-reduction plan to cut spending and increase taxes by about $500 billion over five years. Bush allowed non-essential federal activity to stop for three days over the Columbus Day holiday weekend after the House rejected a deficit reduction plan on Oct. 5. The government resumed operating on a stopgap measure, which expires at midnight Friday. The odds are "probably relatively high" the government will begin shutting down a second time if Congress fails to approve a plan acceptable to the White House, Sununu said. Congress also is racing to complete work on a number of other measures including a clean air bill, crime legislation, the 1990 farm bill and a civil rights measure. Lawmakers hope to adjourn sometime in the next two weeks to campaign for the Nov. 6 election. Later today, the Senate planned to take up the $268 billion defense spending bill for fiscal 1991. The plan trims about $1 billion from ● BUDGET page 8-A

Israel's Cabinet rejects probe into killings

By ALLYN FISHER
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — In a defiant response to the U.N., Israel has rejected a mission to investigate the killings of 19 Palestinians on the Temple Mount and announced a new building drive to populate Jerusalem with Soviet immigrants. Sunday's Cabinet decisions appear to set the Jewish state on a collision course with its chief ally, the United States, which has appealed to Israel to accept the United Nations investigators.

The U.N. Security Council voted unanimously Friday to condemn the Temple Mount shootings, which occurred one week ago during riots at the Jerusalem site revered by both Jews and Moslems. In a rare gesture, the United States joined in the censure of its ally, agreeing to a resolution calling for the dispatch to Jerusalem of a three-member delegation to probe the shootings. The Temple Mount riot began when Palestinians threw rocks on to worshippers praying below at the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site. Police first used tear gas and rubber bullets, then live ammunition. Israel's Cabinet, at its regular weekly session Sunday, said it saw no reason for the United Nations to intervene when it had ignored worse incidents in other countries. "We have read the Security Council's decision... and it is completely unacceptable," a Cabinet communique said. "As a result, Israel will not receive the delegation of the U.N. Secretary General." Israel set up its own inquiry into the shootings Friday. The investigating commission is led by former Mossad spy chief Zvi Zamir and is only empowered to make recommendations. American Jewish leader Seymour Reich accused Washington of making Israel a "sacrificial lamb" by supporting the U.N. resolution, and siding with Arab states for the sake of the alliance ranged against Iraq in response to its seizure of Kuwait. "But in practical terms, I don't think Saudi Arabia is going to throw out U.S. troops."

Recession possible for Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Texas enjoyed a boom during the early 1980s while most of the country suffered through lean times, but economists say Texans should brace for the next recession. The oil and gas industry in Texas and the other Energy Belt states does not have the manpower or equipment it had 10 years ago, and lenders and investors remember getting burned when oil prices collapsed in the mid-80s. "Some of the stimulus we're getting (from higher oil prices) will keep our economy comparatively healthy," said Bernard L. Weinstein, an economist at the University of North Texas. "But it's not going to be like the early '80s when we were booming while the rest of the country was contracting." A study by the state comptroller's office estimates a national recession will cost Texas about 40,000 new jobs in 1991. By 1991, however, continued high oil prices could produce a gain of 90,000 jobs in the state. There appears to be little doubt that the national economy is either in a recession or rapidly approaching one. Economists across the nation have been racing to issue recession predictions, with the only disagreement seemingly over how severe the contraction will be. Employment in the state's oil and gas industry has fallen drastically since 1981, and the industry's share of state tax revenues has fallen by two-thirds. As a result, Texas could suffer with the rest of the nation for as long as six months before it benefits from spiraling energy prices, said Thomas R. Plaut, a senior economist in the state comptroller's office. ● RECESSION page 8-A ptroller's office.

Recession

Plaut said the initial shock of higher energy costs will slow the state's economy as manufacturers and transportation companies are hit hard. It will take several months for the energy industry to rebound sufficiently, he said.

Texas, however, should eventually benefit, Plaut said.

"In the short term, there will be a negative effect on Texas," Plaut said. "But in the long term, the same factor that is driving the rest of the economy into recession — high oil prices — will help Texas."

The national economy has been leaning toward recession for some time, but the current concern stems from the aftermath of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2.

Oil prices since then have doubled to the $40-a-barrel range, bringing back memories of the 1981-82 recession, the nation's worst economic downturn since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

A decade ago, it was Mideast turmoil and the 1979 Iranian revolution that sent crude prices on an upward spiral. The price fueled double-digit inflation, which, in turn, persuaded the Federal Reserve Board to put on the brakes by tightening the money supply.

Interest rates skyrocketed past 20 percent and the U.S. economy went into a tailspin.

Texas, however, was experiencing an oil-fired expansion and the number of drilling rigs in operation surpassed 1,300 — up from 500 in 1974 — and non-farm employment in Texas grew by 5.6 percent in 1981, compared to less than 1 percent growth for the entire United States.

But then oil prices collapsed in the mid-1980s, pulling the state's banking and real estate industries down. The rig count plummeted to 312, while banks and savings and loans went belly up by the dozen.

China has bumper harvest, but will keep importing

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — China has another bumper grain harvest and will have tremendous problems of storage, transportation and marketing, according to an Agriculture Department analyst.

But Hunter Colby of the department's Economic Research Service said China will continue to import U.S. grain, primarily wheat, despite back-to-back record harvests.

"One reason is that U.S. grain is very high quality, and they can use it to blend in with their somewhat lower-quality grain," Colby said in a telephone interview.

Reports from Beijing point to a total grain harvest of 422 million metric tons this year. Agriculture Vice Minister Chan Yaobang said the grain crop would exceed the 1989 harvest of 407 million tons, the previous high.

Colby, a China specialist for the USDA, said that while wheat imports from the United States will continue, they probably will be reduced because of the big domestic harvests.

"An interesting thing about this year is that they're having the same problems the Soviets are having," he said. "They can't store it. There's so much grain that it's sitting outside, and they lose a lot."

Farm scene

The Soviet Union, which suffers huge losses of grain after harvesting because of poor storage and marketing facilities, also is having a bumper grain harvest.

The USDA last week estimated total Soviet grain production this year at 235 million metric tons, a near-record.

Colby was asked to comment on other reports from Beijing that Chinese leaders are cautiously planning a partial return to collective farming in hopes of raising productivity.

Land was distributed to individual farming households 10 years ago as the commune system was dismantled. That allowed farmers to sell some crops on the free market. Grain production and rural incomes jumped sharply.

But growth recently has stagnated, and plots worked by individual farmers — an average of 1.5 acres — are too small for efficient mechanization.

Thus, according to the English-language China Daily; party and government officials recently decided that "conglomerates in charge of supply, production and sales" would be established to hasten large-scale mechanization.

No details were provided by Beijing. Colby said there has been talk for several years of trying to introduce larger-scale farming in some areas that could support it.

But Colby said he was not prepared to interpret this as a move back to collectivization of Chinese agriculture.

Meanwhile, he said, the huge harvests of the last two years are putting a lot of budgetary pressure on China's government, which announced plans to raise its grain purchase price.

Also, officials have said the state would buy the entire grain harvest, a practice abandoned in the 1980s. Lately, the state contracted with each farmer to buy part of his harvest, leaving him to sell the remainder on the free market at potentially higher prices.

"The government is talking about ensuring that all the grain is to be purchased and at subsidized prices," Colby said. "So, it's going to cost ... and they've had terrible budget deficits the last couple of years. This is just going to make it worse."

 WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department scientist says kenaf, a fast-growing plant that already has potential as a wood pulp substitute, could also be a good livestock forage crop.

Charles L. Webber III of the department's Agricultural Research Service said kenaf, a bamboo-like relative of cotton and okra, would be grown throughout the South and Southwest.

A plant to produce newsprint from kenaf is under construction near Raymondville, Texas.

Webber said kenaf's value as a feed would give farmers another good reason to grow it. For one thing, he said, kenaf is an annual, which presents fewer problems than with crops such as alfalfa that must be planted each year.

"And kenaf can be grown under a much wider range of conditions than can alfalfa — all over the South and Southwest," he said. "It can tolerate more acid and poorer soils than alfalfa as well."

Webber, an agronomist who works at the USDA agency's South Central Agricultural Research Laboratory in Lane, Okla., reported on kenaf last week in Riverside, Calif., at an international conference on industrial crops and products.

Some of his remarks and findings also were released here by the agency.

Although kenaf can be used to make silage, Webber said its best potential could be as a less-expensive supplement in alfalfa-based pellet feeds.

"Some businessmen have told me they expect to produce alfalfa-kenaf feed pellets that will have the high protein values of normal alfalfa pellets but at about 75 percent of the price," he said.

Kenaf reaches a peak as a feed crop in 90 days after planting, according to Webber's research.

"Before 90 days, the yields are not that high," he said. "But there's no advantage after 90 days because the plant begins to get woody."

Kenaf yields run as high as 3.1 tons per acre, dried weight, at 90 days of growth, with "a minimal input of fertilizer and pesticides," Webber said. "With a 90-day harvest date, it may even be possible for growers to get two cuttings a year."

Budget

Bush's budget request for the Strategic Defense Initiative but leaves intact the administration's request for the B-2 stealth bomber. It also cuts 100,000 troops from the U.S. worldwide troop level of 2.1 million.

Vice President Dan Quayle said Sunday the president is prepared to keep Congress in session for as long as it takes to craft a budget plan he can accept.

Both Sununu and Quayle attacked a plan that was passed last week by the Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means Committee.

The measure, which would raise the income tax on the wealthiest Americans from 28 percent to 33 percent, is expected to win approval from the full House. A family earning more than $200,000 could see their taxes increase by $11,000 under the plan.

Chargers met the winless Chiefs in Saturday action with the Chargers coming out on top, 8-0. The win avenged the only blemish on the Chargers' record, a 0-0 tie from their earlier game with the Chiefs.

The Chiefs got things underway as they received the opening kickoff and set up shop at their own 28-yard line. On the first game from scrimmage, they committed the first turnover of the contest and the Chargers recovered on the Chief 30-yard line.

After forcing a Chargers' punt, the Chiefs took over at their own 11-yard line. They tried an end-around play, but the Charger defense was ready and tackled the Chiefs' runner behind the goal line for a safety and a 2-0 lead as the first quarter ended.

In the second quarter, the Chargers began to move the football behind Kory Williams and quarterback James Villa. The drive ended when Williams went over from two yards out. The PAT failed and the Chargers led the Chiefs 8-0.

The Chiefs took the following the kickoff to their own 33-yard line. On the second play from scrim-

Quayle said the administration is "violently opposed" to the Democratic plan, while Sununu said the administration was "opposed to playing around with the income tax rate for Americans across the board." Quayle appeared on CBS's "Face the Nation" while Sununu was on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said his proposal is designed to "protect middle-income and poor America" and make everyone "share in the pain of governing."

"I'm not going to deny that we're trying to make a political statement, and there certainly is evidence that there's now a division between Democrats and Republicans," said Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

While Sununu and Quayle strongly opposed the House proposal, they did not criticize the Senate Finance Committee's plan to leave the 28 percent rate intact and instead close tax loopholes for the rich.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the committee, said he would not go along with an increase to 33 percent — although he supports it in theory — because Bush's opposition dooms any tax package that includes such an increase.

"That means that we have a progressive table, that those making the highest income will pay the highest increase in the taxes," he said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Any deficit-reduction plan is expected to reduce defense spending, cut Medicare and hold back spending in other federal programs. Debate in recent days has focused primarily on raising taxes, including those on alcohol, gas, luxury items and cigarettes.

had "helped promote international trust."

When asked if the award was meant to support Gorbachev because the committee was worried about whether he can weather domestic political storms and stay in power, she refused to answer.

It was the first award to a super-power chief executive since President Woodrow Wilson won in 1919. President Theodore Roosevelt won in 1906.

Gorbachev is the second Soviet to win the prize. The first was nuclear scientist and human rights activist Andrei Sakharov, who won in 1975.

Sakharov, who died in December, was unable to accept the award for 14 years — until Gorbachev freed him from detention and allowed him to travel.

Yelena Bonner, Sakharov's widow, criticized Gorbachev, comparing him to Napoleon, in one of Norway's biggest papers last week.

Ms. Anderson said she would expect the prize to be criticized: "That would be normal."

She said the committee had not communicated with Moscow directly to announce the award, but had sent an official in a taxi to the Soviet Embassy in Oslo with the news.

She said she hoped Gorbachev would hear it from the embassy before he heard it from a reporter.

Asked about Gorbachev's domestic policies, which have democratized political life but also led to instability, Ms. Anderson said:

"If you will read the text you will see we are talking mainly about international policy," she said.

"The big thing that is happening in the world is the reconciliation of the superpowers. We are very happy to come with a laureate who has such great significance."

Yigor Ligachev, No. 2 in the Soviet government from 1985-88 and one of Gorbachev's main rivals, told Norwegian television in Moscow the Nobel Committee's decision was welcomed with deep gratitude and wonder.

"It means we are finally met with confidence in the world," he said.

President Vaclav Havel of Czechoslovakia, a top candidate for the prize, said, "Mikhail Gorbachev contributed significantly to the acceleration of the inevitable changes in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe and certainly deserves the prize. If this prize contributes to the peaceful and quiet transition of the Soviet Union to a society of equal nations and citizens, we welcome it warmly."

The committee commended Gorbachev, who rose to power in March 1985, for bringing "greater openness" to Soviet society, producing a slowdown in the arms race, and encouraging democratic reform in Eastern Europe.

It said the international peace process, "which Gorbachev has contributed so significantly to, opens up new possibilities for the world community to solve its pressing problems across ideological, religious, historical and cultural dividing lines."

But the changes Gorbachev has encouraged have been accompanied by bloody ethnic conflicts in Armenia, Azerbaijan and other parts of the Soviet Union.

And his economic reforms — the transformation to a market-based system is still far off — have led to shortages of food and consumer goods.

The Nobel Committee said the historic changes "spring from several factors" but that it wanted to honor Gorbachev for his "many and decisive contributions."

"The greater openness he has brought about in Soviet society has also helped promote international trust," said the committee.

The prize was endowed by Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite, and has been awarded since 1901.

He established four other prizes, in medicine, literature, physics and chemistry, which are awarded in Stockholm, Sweden.

The Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science, established by the Central Bank of Sweden in 1968, will be awarded Tuesday. The Nobel physics and chemistry prizes will be awarded Wednesday.

Last week, Mexican poet and essayist Octavio Paz won the prize for literature. Two American doctors, Joseph E. Murray and E. Donnall Thomas, won the prize in medicine for pioneering organ and bone marrow transplants.

The awards are presented in Oslo and Stockholm on Dec. 10, the anniversary of Nobel's death in 1896.
