Earthquake devastates Kobe, surrounding area

Horror of earthquake sinks in

Disaster leaves war-zone devastation; death toll tops 2,000

KOBE, Japan (AP) — Survivors with blank expressions wandered the battered streets of a city that was supposed to stand up to earthquakes, their faith in technology smashed by a disaster that killed more than 2,000 people.

In large areas of this once-prosperous city, fire destroyed what Tuesday's 7.2-magnitude earthquake did not. But by today many of the fires ran out of fuel and burned themselves out.

Elevated roads and bridges that Japanese engineers boasted were quake-proof were broken at crazy angles, flung to earth by the force of nature, crushing whatever was beneath them.

Motorists perished as their cars skidded off the collapsing highways. Tracks and bridges for Japan's famous "bullet" trains were damaged badly enough to be out of action for months. Hundreds of thousands of survivors struggled without electricity, gas or water.

Hardly a block in this industrial port city of 1.4 million people had a house or building intact. Many

Bush takes Austin reins

New governor takes oath, calls for less government

By R.G. Ratcliffe and Clay Robison
Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — Republican Gov. George W. Bush and Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock took their oaths of office Tuesday with bipartisan promises to improve schools, reform the welfare system, crack down on juvenile crime and overhaul the state civil lawsuit system.

Bush also pledged to give Texans a state of less government.

"My guiding principle will be: Government if necessary, but not necessarily government," Bush said.

Under an overcast but rainless sky, Bush, 48, took the oath of office as Texas' 46th governor shortly after noon. He is the third generation of his family to hold high public office.

His parents, former President Bush and former first lady Barbara Bush, joined him on the dais, along with his wife, Laura, their twin 13-year-old daughters, Barbara and Jenna, and the new governor's four siblings.

The president and Mrs. Bush tried gamely to keep public attention focused on their son and they largely succeeded. But Bullock, in his inaugural remarks, praised the former president

Eyes of Midland are upon ceremonies

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — Visions of a better Texas under the reins of George W. Bush — sworn in as governor on Tuesday — were expressed by some Midlanders who attended the inaugural ceremonies.

Meanwhile, some Midlanders took a more active role in the event. Midland's two high school bands marched in the parade, and Midlanders headed the inaugural planning committee and oversaw entertainment.

Bush, 48, the 44th governor of Texas and the second Republican elected to the office since Reconstruction, resided in Midland as a youngster and again when he worked in the oil business in the 1970s.

He married Laura Welch — born and raised in Midland — in 1977. The couple has 13-year-old twin daughters, Barbara and Jenna.

"I think Midlanders are very proud of George W.," said Midland Mayor Bobby Burns, who attended the inaugural festivities with his wife, Denise.

Barbecue, bands, balls highlight festivities

AUSTIN — Gov. George W. Bush, who had not danced with his wife Laura since their wedding day 17 years ago, took the first lady in his arms and swayed to the ceremonial first dance, kicking off the first of three inaugural balls Tuesday night.

Gov. Bush addressed the crowd, danced with his wife and moved on to the next ball.

The governor and first lady danced alone to "Somewhere, My Love (Lara's Theme) from Dr. Zhivago on the raised stage of the ballroom of the Austin Convention Center.

During the dance, which lasted about 15 seconds, Bush gave Mrs. Bush a little twirl and it was over.

"It is a magnificent night for Texas," Bush told the crowd.

He had earlier teased Lt. Gov. Bob

'Too much Juice,' most say of Simpson coverage in call-in poll

Staff Report

Callers to this week's Community Pulse poll appear to be just as sick of the O.J. Simpson trial as Robert Shapiro and F. Lee Bailey are of each other.

More than 72 percent of the almost 200 callers who responded said they've had enough and will not be interested in the trial once it begins, expected to be in the next few days.

"I'm sick and tired of it all," a female caller named LouAnn said.

"When I watch TV I have the clicker in my hand at all times. As soon as they say "O," I switch it off, I don't care what I'm watching."

Cityline Community Pulse

Tommy Rouse said, "I won't be interested in it and never have been. He's just a washed-up, has-been athlete. I don't understand what the big to-do is all about."

Continued coverage of the trial may pre-empt many of the networks' daytime dramas, which prompted one male caller to say, "I like to read about it, but don't mess with my soap operas."

"A paragraph somewhere in the third section of the paper after the final verdict is in will be more than enough," according to James Beatty.

Another anonymous caller echoed that sentiment, saying, "Why can't we just have one quick update when it's all over?"

Another caller commented that "the lawyers have made a joke out of the justice system in this particular trial."

There was a small contingent, though, that said it would still be interested in the news events that come from the trial.

"I felt like for a while the O.J. Simpson trial media was grasping for information," according to John Corbel. "Now that it's actually news and they're coming out with details as far as what the evidence is, it's not so much like the National Enquirer or The Star. It's actually news, and yes, I'll be watching."

Financial crisis could fuel immigration, officials say

WASHINGTON (NYT) — With its $40 billion rescue plan for Mexico running into opposition from members of President Clinton's own party, the administration told leaders of Congress on Tuesday that the number of illegal immigrants crossing the border into Texas and California would increase by 430,000 this year if the the Mexican financial crisis deepened.

That estimate, which administration officials advanced in discussions with lawmakers, would mean a rise of 30 percent over earlier projections of illegal 1995 border crossings, as Mexican workers are drawn to a dollar that has become 35 percent more valuable relative to the peso since the devaluation of the Mexican currency began just before Christmas.

But the numbers have done little to quell growing objections to the bailout. The opposition is led by Democrats who were pressured to vote for the North American Free Trade Agreement in 1993 and who now say American taxpayer dollars should not be put at risk to bail out one of the country's economic competitors.

Under the president's plan, announced last week, the United States would offer Mexico loan guarantees of up to $40 billion, meaning that the Treasury would have to lay out money only if Mexico defaulted on any of its huge borrowings.

The administration has declined to say how much of a fee, akin to an insurance premium, Mexico will be asked to pay the United States in return for the loan guarantees.

But participants in meetings that lawmakers held on Capitol Hill on Tuesday with Treasury Secretary Robert E. Rubin and the chairman of the Federal Reserve, Alan Greenspan, said that to build support for the program, the administration had set a steep price: about 8 percent of the amount of the loan guarantees. That means that if Mexico used the full guarantees, it would pay the U.S. Treasury about $3.2 billion, money the government would pocket as a profit if the loans were repaid.

Clinton's plan was initially endorsed by top Republicans, led by the Senate majority leader, Bob Dole of Kansas. But on Tuesday, Dole seemed to back away, saying the president should not depend on Republicans to pass legislation authorizing the bailout program unless he could bring along Democrats.

"He needs to work within his party," Dole said. "We're not going to carry the whole load here and get hung out to dry."

The White House tried to minimize the extent of the opposition and said Clinton would probably meet with members of Congress today to win support. The administration hopes to bring the authorizing legislation to congressional votes within a week or so, administration officials said.

10-mile walk reveals devastation in Japan

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press

KOBE, Japan — We left our car in darkness about 10 miles outside Kobe on a badly cracked bridge and began to walk toward the red sky.

At first, signs of damage were spotty. Boxes and garbage cans were already stacked at curbside, full of broken dishes and glass that people had swept up and set out for collection.

Farther along, we started seeing cracks in the roads and sidewalks, fallen roof tiles and collapsed fences.

We passed ambulances and fire trucks mired in traffic jams that extended almost 40 miles west from Osaka, Japan's second biggest city, to Kobe, where the worst damage was reported and the most deaths tallied.

Most of the vehicles were ordinary cars, carrying people trying frantically to get home or to go check on relatives.

The air rang with richocheting burglar alarms set off by the ground's shuddering. Some were in banks, others in private buildings. We saw no looting.

In Nishinomiya city, six miles from Kobe, we saw our first completely collapsed house, an older, wooden structure with heavy ceramic tiles on the roof.

Along one avenue, an auto dealer's showroom window, measuring about 20 by 30 feet, was intact. Next door lay the wreckage of four collapsed two-story, wooden houses.

We found Shoji Yasui, 63, his wife and two sons standing on a street corner in front of the ruin that had been their 70-year-old house of two stories, warming themselves around a fire Yasui had made.

"This is nothing compared to what you're going to see down there," Yasui said, pointing toward Kobe.

About two blocks along, a whole block was completely flattened, except for one wooden wall of a house, still leaning precariously against a utility pole.

Another block down, a liquor store remained standing but thousands of bottles lay shattered on the floor. Here, too, a burglar alarm shrieked.

We reached the outskirts of Kobe just past midnight, after two hours of walking, and saw severe damage to new buildings as well as old. A bank building of seven or eight stories leaned over the sidewalk. A five-story building that appeared fairly new had toppled onto its side.

People stood around with stunned, blank faces, wrapped in blankets against the biting cold, which dropped below freezing overnight. If they spoke at all, it was in soft, subdued murmurs.

In one rare show of emotion, a girl drove a car up to some friends she recognized, opened the door and fell out onto the ground, sobbing.

Dozens of fires still burned almost 24 hours after the quake. Next to one were parked three fire trucks, the firefighters helpless and their hoses useless because the quake had broken the water mains.

In many places, there was a strong smell of leaking gas.

We found a taxi (driver Rikihiro Sumino said he escaped serious injury when a dresser fell on his bed and his blankets padded him) and went to Kobe's Western Metropolitan Hospital.

The hospital's steel frame was twisted, and a broken fourth-floor veranda dangled against an outer wall. Inside, blood was splattered on the floors and walls. Bloody handprints marked the emergency room door.

In eerie quiet, perhaps four dozen people with minor injuries like cuts and bruises slept where they could, on gurneys in hallways, on floors, on sofas and benches in the lobby.

There, not far from the emergency room, Hiroaki Teguchi sat stroking his kitten, over and over. The 20-year-old student said he had come to try to find a working telephone; he asked us if we knew whether his family was safe.

Navigating around this city of 1.4 million, lit primarily by the blaze of fires, we saw few blocks without at least one collapsed building. Many blocks were nothing but rubble.

"I never dreamed we'd get hit by a quake like this here in Kobe," Sumino, the taxi driver, said. "You really can't trust those experts. They all said that this wouldn't happen. They said our highways and buildings were safe, not like America. But we've proven them wrong."

Chance of showers clouds day

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of rain in the morning and decreasing cloudiness in the afternoon. The high should be between 50-55; winds will be northwest at 5-15 mph.

Tonight should be mostly clear with a low in the mid-20s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be sunny with a high in the lower 60s.

After an overnight low of 37, Tuesday's high reached 65, compared to the record high for that date of 84 set in 1974.

STATE

Skies were mostly cloudy across the state on Tuesday, except in West Texas where sunny skies prevailed.

El Paso had a different story though with rain falling on Tuesday and expected again today. Some sleet also is expected in the western part of the state and thundershowers should hit in the north.

Skies remained cloudy over much of North Texas Tuesday. Winds were blowing at less than 10 mph. Temperatures ranged from 56 degrees to 66 degrees.

Skies were sunny to partly sunny in West Texas, except near El Paso where rain fell. Temperatures ranged from the 40s to the 60s. The wind was 5 to 15 mph over the Panhandles, 10 to 20 mph elsewhere.

Skies were mostly cloudy in South Texas and along the coast. Temperatures Tuesday ranged from 57 degrees at College Station to 82 degrees at Harlingen.

It will be mostly cloudy in western North Texas today, with a chance of rain or sleet early. Rain will fall in the eastern portion and may mix with sleet in the central area. Temperatures will range from the upper 30s to the mid-50s. Lows will be range from 28 degrees to 34 degrees.

Rain or rain mixed with snow is forecast early today over portions of the West Texas region. Highs will range from the 30s in the mountains to the 40s and 50s elsewhere. Lows will be from the upper teens to the upper 30s.

NATION

A powerful storm dumped more than a foot of snow on parts of the northern Plains and upper Mississippi Valley on Tuesday, and snowstorms continued to batter the West.

In Nebraska, more than 13 inches of snow fell at Hemingford, 9 inches at Chadron, and 8 inches at Alliance and Scottsbluff, closing schools around the state and making driving treacherous.

Storms also developed over the Dakotas, where up to 8 inches of snow fell, and in Minnesota, where 3 inches fell at Baudette and nearly 5 at International Falls. Blowing and drifting snow greatly reduced visibility for travelers.

Winds and new snow produced blowing snow and poor driving conditions in eastern Wyoming as well, where wind-chill temperatures also were driven into the minus 10- to minus 30-degree range.

Freezing drizzle and sleet fell in southern Minnesota and southern South Dakota, but little ice accumulation was reported.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

that, "Every morning I used to get up and turn on CNN to see what had happened while I was sleeping. Since they started the Simpson coverage I refuse to turn on CNN until it's all over again."

And an anonymous male caller suggested Shapiro and Bailey, two of Simpson's lead attorneys involved in a feud over media leaks, participate in a western duel.

"Maybe after that there'd just be one of them left," the caller said.

EYES: Austin events hold Midland flavor

(From 1A)

"I think it is special (that) a Midlander was elected as Texas governor," added Burns, who estimated that several hundred Midlanders traveled to Austin for the event.

Burns viewed the election of Bush as an asset to the state.

"I do think George will make a lot of headway in education, the economy and bringing business back to Texas," he said.

Bush, in his inaugural speech, advocated that communities have more power over their schools and supported measures kind to small businesses.

Bush also spoke of the need for freedom from the federal government to allow the state to move forward.

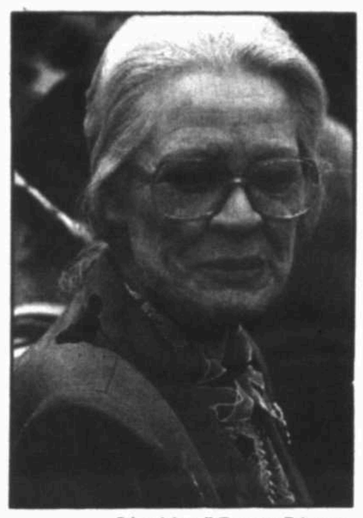

Those sentiments are favorable to the Permian Basin oil industry, which complains of being burdened by federal regulation.

Midland oilman Jan South, who attended the inauguration with his wife Susan, is hoping Bush's presence will help the oil industry.

"Ninety percent of the people are expecting it to be better," South said.

Midlanders also are banking on improvements going beyond the oil and gas industry.

"I think he will be positive for all business in the state," said state Rep. Tom Craddick, a Republican from Midland.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
GOP supporter Mae Dawson of Midland discusses the inaugural ceremony in Austin.

"And I think we'll see major tort reform, major education reform, and major reform of juvenile justice," Craddick said.

Bush has promised reform in all those areas.

Another Midlander anticipated that the business of the state should improve with Bush in office.

"I think the state budget will improve because I believe George W. has the inkling to care what will happen in the state," said Mae Dawson, who traveled to Austin with her husband Ken.

Midlander and long-time Republican worker Margaret Rhea said Bush will pick up where twice-former Republican governor Bill Clements left off.

"I came to the second inauguration of Mr. Clements. Then we had a bad interval (Democrat Gov. Ann Richards) and now I'm glad to come back," she said.

Bush beat out Ms. Richards in the November election with 53.5 percent of the vote — the largest margin of victory for a Texas governor in 20 years.

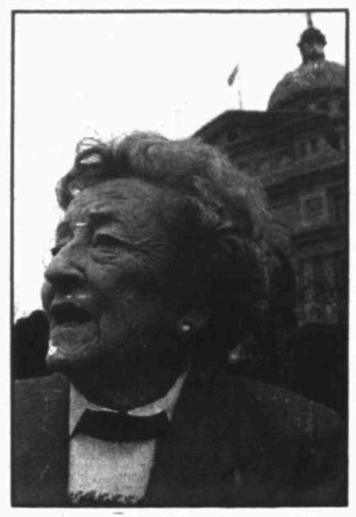

Many Midlanders viewed the election as a personal victory due to Republican stronghold in the Tall City and ties to the Bush family.

Those sentiments were strengthened when the Midland High School and Lee High School bands were asked to march in the inaugural parade. The combined bands were among 80 units that marched, including 22 high school bands and seven college bands.

"We feel pretty honored that they picked us — but we have connections," said Jackie Chou, 15, flute player with the Lee High School Band.

James Brandt, a 17-year-old tuba player for the Midland High School Band, concurred. "It's a real honor to be down here and march for Gov. Bush. Not many bands got to come," he said.

Other local involvement included Midlander Don Evans, president of Tom Brown Inc., who was chairman of the inaugural committee, and Midlander Dennis Grubb, president of Wemus Entertainment, which provided entertainment for a gala and three balls.

SCENE: Bush takes first lady in his arms

(From 1A)

Bullock because he said he was not going to dance with his wife, Jan.

"The reason I questioned his judgment is because he's got one of the most beautiful wives in the world," Bush said.

The governor danced with Mrs. Bullock, but Lt. Gov. Bullock did not dance.

Earlier Tuesday, downtown Austin was overcome by Bushes, bands and barbecue as Texans celebrated the inauguration of the state's top two officeholders.

Gov. Bush was sworn into office as his parents, former President Bush and former first lady Barbara Bush, looked on and wept with pride. Lt. Gov. Bullock also was sworn in, his second term.

Forecasted rains never fell on the crowd estimated at 5,000, and when all the formal stuff was done it was time for beef brisket and marching band music.

For those who favored tuxedos and gowns, three formal inaugural balls were planned for later in the evening.

A $2-a-person picnic on the west lawn of the Capitol was a hit, as visitors wearing blue jeans mingled with suit-clad lawmakers. They plopped on the grass to feast on rolls, baked beans and sliced brisket.

About 10 protesters meandered through the crowd, toting signs and annoying picnic-goers as they shouted criticisms of former President Bush.

"It's fun. It's fun to people watch," said 28-year-old Sarah Starr, of Tyler, who attended the festivities with her husband.

"It's a good time to celebrate and remember why we're proud of being Texans and Americans," Mrs. Starr said.

If they weren't eating, people were shopping. A tent housing the Texas Inaugural Store was packed.

The big sellers: $8 and $10 coffee mugs with the inaugural seal and the signatures of Bush and Bullock.

The non-sellers: a sleeve of three golf balls for $10 with the inaugural seal on them.

"We keep telling people the balls will be the longest off the tee as long as Bush is in office, but they still aren't selling," said Michael Brown, a University of Texas student working as a vendor.

People stood four and five deep along Congress Avenue to watch a 90-minute parade filled with marching bands, drill teams, floats, tanks and horses.

Several Southwest Conference school bands marched in the parade as well as high school bands from as far away as Brownsville and Midland, the Bushes' West Texas hometown.

The Bushes waved and blew kisses to cheering onlookers from a Ford Mustang convertible.

"It was very fulfilling, very exciting," said Norma Henderson, 50, of Austin. "I feel very hopeful, and that's what we need — hope."

REINS: Bush, Bullock take oaths of office

for his service to his country and "for helping to bring world peace."

And the new governor saluted "Mom and Dad" as he began his speech, while his mother beamed warmly at him throughout the ceremony.

Outgoing Gov. Ann Richards, who was in California, did not attend Bush's inauguration, but in keeping with tradition, marked a Bible verse in the governor's office: "Hate the evil and love the good and establish judgment in the gate," from Amos 5: 15. Texas governors often do not attend their successors' swearing-in ceremonies.

Bush, who defeated Richards in a campaign designed to portray her administration as inadequate in addressing the state's problems, praised the Democratic governor.

"My predecessor served our state well. The example she set gives heart to those who battle adversity and hope to those who wonder if opportunity is limited," Bush said.

The inaugural crowd of 5,000 to 8,000 was less than half the number that turned out four years ago for Richards' swearing-in. And while Republican partisans were overjoyed at witnessing the GOP occupation of the governor's office for only the third time this century — repeatedly applauding Bush's speech — the crowd seemed somewhat reserved.

Richards, the first woman elected Texas governor in her own right, had energized her followers by inviting them to join her in a march up Congress Avenue to the swearing-in ceremony.

In his speech, Bush focused on "restoring government to its proper role." He noted that the 10th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution reserves for the states all powers not specifically granted to the federal government.

"The spirit of that amendment has been forgotten in recent decades. I pledge to you, it will be forgotten no more," Bush said, to the crowd's applause.

"As governor, I will use every resource at my disposal to make the federal government in Washington heed this simple truth: Texans can run Texas."

Local citizens, he said, also should have a greater say in what is best for their schools and communities. "By trusting Texans, the state is more likely to focus on its principal responsibilities: good and safe streets, excellent schools, help for those who cannot help themselves and respect for private property."

Bush said he recognizes that by giving greater freedom from government to individuals, "we run the risk that sometimes they will fail. But mistakes made closest to the people are the most easily corrected."

For this vision to succeed, Bush said, individual Texans are going to have to take more responsibility for their actions.

"Responsibility starts at home. It starts with responsible families," he said. "Every piece of legislation that crosses my desk will be judged by whether it keeps families together, safe and strong."

Bullock, 65, pledged his cooperation to the new governor "as we work together to rebuild and renew this state we all love."

Beginning a second four-year term in an office that many people consider more powerful than that of governor because of its key legislative role, Bullock said Texans are "compassionate and caring."

HORROR: Quake flattens city, kills 2,000

streets were reduced to piles of rubble by the strongest quake to strike an urban area of Japan since 1948.

Only a few fires still burned today. One building near the railroad station was burning violently, but few firefighters were in sight. The surrounding area was nearly destroyed, and there was no place for the fire to spread.

Osaka, Japan's second-largest city and across the bay from Kobe, was also heavily damaged. The wreckage extended 50 miles northwest of Kobe to the ancient capital, Kyoto, where treasured Buddha statues and a five-story pagoda built in 951 suffered minor damage.

More than 600 aftershocks hit the area through this morning, including 60 that could be felt.

National police said 2,014 people were known dead by midday today, 1,058 were missing and 11,977 injured. One American was among those killed, the U.S. Embassy said. Details were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The Yomiuri Shimbun, Japan's largest newspaper, said an American woman named Voni Wong, a resident of Ashiya City, had been killed. It was not immediately clear if the newspaper was referring to the U.S. citizen whose death was announced by the embassy.

Just outside Kobe, damage seemed almost arbitrary — a showroom window at an auto dealership survived undamaged. Next to it, four wooden houses collapsed. In the city, a five-story building had fallen on its side, and a seven-story bank building leaned over the sidewalk.

"I thought it was the end of the world," said 64-year-old Minoru Takasu, whose house fell down around him in Nishinomiya city, six miles from Kobe.

"I survived by sliding into a small gap between a dish cabinet and the wall," he told the Asahi newspaper. "I'm happy to be alive!"

The shaking lasted about 20 seconds, and when it was over, 8,380 buildings were destroyed. Many people slept outside for fear aftershocks would cause further damage to buildings left standing.

About 100,000 people spent the night in emergency shelters, eating rice balls handed out by rescue workers and sipping water trucked in by the fire department because so many water lines were fractured.

Many fled their homes with nothing more than scanty nightclothes.

"I brought no food with me," said a man interviewed by Japanese television as he huddled near a fire in a garbage bin in a parking lot. "But someone gave me food. We're all sharing everything."

Takarazuka, Ashiya and Awaji Island were also damaged in the quake, which occurred a year after a magnitude 6.7 quake killed 61 people in and around the Northridge area north of Los Angeles.

"The quake came suddenly. I could not stop trembling with fear under my futon," Tomiko Watase, a coffee shop owner in the town of Awaji, told Kyodo New Service.

The military sent 2,000 soldiers to the quake zone to help rescue efforts. In Kobe, helicopters buzzed overhead as the government ferried in food and blankets.

The devastation shattered Japan's belief that sophisticated engineering would enable its newer buildings and roads to withstand a major quake.

Already, criticism was being voiced about prevention and rescue efforts.

"I think rescue measures have been very slow," said Tokyo University professor Osamu Koide. "I think there was a lack of quake-preventive knowledge."

Following damaging earthquakes in the United States, Japanese experts had confidently predicted that roadways in this country would stand up to even a serious quake. But sections of several major expressways collapsed, as did many modern buildings. Some overpasses buckled like an accordion.

Stocks of insurance companies, which will have to lay out large amounts to cover damage, took a hit. Initial damage estimates ranged from $10 billion to $20 billion, said Patrick Hogan of Smith New Court Securities.

The quake's full force was taken by Kobe, the city where tender beer-fed Kobe beef gets its name. The shipbuilding and steel-manufacturing center is the gateway for 12 percent of Japan's exports.

Fighting rages in Grozny as negotiators discuss cease-fire

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Russian and Chechen negotiators took a step Tuesday toward a cease-fire in breakaway Chechnya, where the bloody 5-week-old war raged on. But many on both sides were skeptical any agreement would hold.

In the streets of Grozny, Chechen fighters scornfully dismissed Russian overtures toward peace, saying they were merely a ruse to fool world opinion while Moscow prepares new offensives.

A cease-fire last week broke down after only several hours.

Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin met Tuesday with two envoys from Chechen President Dzhokhar Dudayev in Moscow, a day after making a televised appeal for peace. The Chechens said both sides agreed to stop using heavy artillery by this evening as a first step toward a full cease-fire.

"We think there's an agreement in principle from both sides," said Usman Imayev, Dudayev's prosecutor general.

But the Russian government continued its tough rhetoric against Dudayev, saying the meeting was brief, at the Chechen side's request, and was a "last chance" for cooperation, according to a statement carried by Russian news agencies.

"Only a step has been made toward cease-fire," Russian government spokesman Valentin Rumyantsev said.

Russian fighter jets kept up attacks Tuesday on targets throughout Grozny, and Russian forces destroyed a bridge between Chechnya and its eastern neighbor, Dagestan, cutting off a main rail and road link. Rebel forces appeared to have recaptured the railway station in a machine-gun battle.

Russian news reports Tuesday said the army's losses in the battle for Grozny were much higher than had been admitted, with up to 1,200 dead.

Imayev, the Chechen envoy, said he would head immediately to Grozny to brief Dudayev. He said dates and exact terms of a cease-fire still had to be agreed on.

It was not clear whether Dudayev, who has been in hiding, could agree on terms with the Kremlin.

Many rebel fighters Grozny, the Chechen capital, reacted to Chernomyrdin's peace overtures with obscene oaths, spitting on the ground.

"Chernomyrdin is saying this just to impress the international community, but at the same time the Russian army has been ordered to seize the city," said Vakha Aigumov, a Chechen officer.

"We would agree to peace," said another fighter, Al Ahim. "But our condition is full independence for Chechnya."

President Boris Yeltsin's chief of staff, Sergei Filatov, also cast doubt on negotiations, telling the ITAR-Tass news agency he doesn't believe Dudayev's envoys can control the situation in Chechnya.

Thousands of people are believed to have been killed since Moscow sent troops into the mainly Muslim republic in the Caucasus Mountains on Dec. 11.

Russian military officials have said fewer than 400 Russian soldiers have died, but the Interfax news agency said Tuesday that corpses of some 1,160 Russian soldiers had passed through Mozdok. The agency said its figure came from confidential sources.

Cold blasts of snow whipped through Grozny on Tuesday, and a heavy mist hung over the smoking city.

At last.

Clinton orders disaster officials to prepare for possible mission

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Clinton ordered disaster relief officials Tuesday to prepare for a possible mission to Japan as early as today. U.S. military officials said they stood ready to assist in the aftermath of that country's worst earthquake in half a century.

Japan had not requested any assistance by the end of the day Tuesday, but U.S. officials gave repeated assurances that they stood ready to provide technical or material aid if needed.

Officials with the Federal Emergency Management Agency, or FEMA, the Department of Transportation and the U.S. Agency for International Development were preparing for a possible mission to help assess needs in Japan.

"The U.S. stands ready to help in any way that Japan wishes," said State Department spokeswoman Christine Shelly. "This is obviously a catastrophe. Japanese authorities might well have their hands full and might wish to seek some additional outside expert help."

Following the Los Angeles quake that left 61 dead a year ago, Japanese businesses and individuals stepped forward to provide more than $3.1 million worth of emergency aid — running the gamut from noodles and cellular phones to flashlights and generators.

This time, as a gesture of goodwill, Clinton made clear that Americans will pitch in for an ally in need.

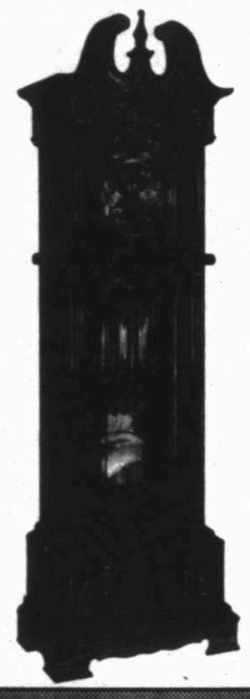

There are roughly 47,000 U.S. troops in Japan along with a wide range of U.S. military air and naval equipment, some of which could be useful in helping to deal with the crisis in Kobe.

Japan's military — the Self Defense Forces — gets extensive training in disaster operations and would be among the country's first line of relief. U.S. forces, which often train alongside their Japanese counterparts, could be called upon to assist them, if needed, said Pentagon spokesman Steve Manuel.

"The U.S. forces in Japan are prepared to respond if asked, but they haven't been asked yet," said Manuel.

Prosecutors: Simpson hit his first wife

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson, accused of murdering his second wife after years of abuse, also hit his first wife, prosecutors alleged for the first time in court papers released Tuesday.

The documents also reveal that Simpson called his first wife, Marquerite Simpson Thomas, on the day he was supposed to surrender on murder charges and told her he was framed and wanted to kill himself.

The allegations were made in papers prosecutors filed in an effort to force Mrs. Thomas to testify at Simpson's trial. Mrs. Thomas is resisting a prosecution subpoena on the grounds it was improperly served at her Fullerton apartment.

"Not only can Mrs. Thomas prove prior acts of domestic violence by the defendant, but she can testify to the statements that the defendant made on June 17, 1994, the day of his arrest," the papers say.

Simpson is charged in the June 12 knife slayings of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Prosecutors are trying to introduce evidence of domestic violence during Simpson's relationship with Ms. Simpson to support their contention that Ms. Simpson's murder was the culmination of years of abuse and degradation.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito did not rule on the domestic violence issue Tuesday. Opening statements were scheduled for Thursday.

The papers unsealed Tuesday include a statement Mrs. Thomas made to police in late June. During that interview, Mrs. Thomas, who was married to Simpson from 1967 to 1979, told police she was "never battered or beat up" by Simpson.

But other documents quote a police officer who said he responded to a domestic violence call at the Simpson house about 20 years ago and that Simpson's then-wife said her husband hit her.

"Some other officers took Mrs. Thomas to the Holiday Inn ... where she spent the night," said the statement from Officer Terry G. Schauer.

In her statement to police, Mrs. Thomas said Simpson called her the morning of June 17 from the home of his friend Robert Kardashian, just one hour before he was supposed to surrender to authorities.

"O.J. told everyone that he was 'framed' for the murders and was going to commit suicide," Mrs. Thomas said.

Japan learned deadly lesson

The devastating and deadly earthquake that ripped through western Japan shortly before dawn Tuesday was a sobering disaster for the Japanese engineering community that had predicted following the Los Angeles earthquake of a year ago that roadways in Japan would stand up to even a serious quake.

Before dawn Tuesday, Mother Nature's fury proved the Japanese wrong with a horrendous quake that toppled nearly 4,000 buildings, destroyed highways and communications, and left at least 1,600 people dead, more than 1,000 missing and over 6,300 injured.

Tuesday's earthquake, measured at 7.2 on the Richter scale, was the most violent to strike a densely populated area of Japan since the 1948 earthquake that killed 5,000 people at Fukui.

President Clinton pledged assistance to the Japanese in responding to the disaster, saying the United States "will stand ready to help" with technical expertise and emergency response, if needed. No doubt emergency assistance will be needed just to help the Japanese recover from the intial disaster. The vicious quake destroyed buildings, collapsed freeways, and left thousands of people trapped in buildings. It will be important for emergency workers to provide help to the Japanese in freeing trapped people and restoring order to cities most severely damaged by the earthquake.

Through the years, seismologists studying earthquakes have been able to improve their ability to predict when and where major quakes will occur, but it still is mostly an uncertain undertaking. So is man's ability to make buildings, roadways and other infrastructure that is "earthquake proof." The heaving, churning, buckling ground still asserts nature's dominance over mankind. Mother Nature still rules.

The Japanese learned that tragic lesson Tuesday.

ANOTHER VIEW

U.N. should stick to peacekeeping missions

U.N. peacekeeping missions have hit hard times. Since the end of the cold war, the use of lightly armed soldiers to police cease-fires or monitor elections has given way to ambitious attempts to impose peace on hostile forces determined to keep fighting, as in Somalia or Bosnia.

The result has been a loss of political support for U.N. peacekeeping, particularly in Washington.

The Clinton administration now shies away from involvement in operations not commanded by an American so that U.S. troops will not be dependent on others for relief or evacuation as they were in Somalia.

Congressional Republicans go further, proposing tight legal restrictions on the use of American forces and opposing participation in the U.N. force that will soon take over in Haiti, even though it will be commanded by an American.

Rethinking and retrenchment are in order. Last week, U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali called for scaled-down expectations and more-limited missions. But if that can be accomplished, U.N. peacekeeping can serve American interests and contribute to global peace.

The use of major powers' troops for enforcement operations under a U.N. flag, like the British, French and Russians in Bosnia or the Americans in Somalia, has not worked well and should not be repeated. Enforcement missions require the kind of firepower that only major powers can supply, but these powers do not easily subordinate their armies to U.N. command.

There should be a shift back toward more limited objectives like policing cease-fires. These missions should be carried out by specialized forces from smaller and neutral states operating under U.N. command.

When major enforcement missions are clearly warranted, they should be assigned to the armies of major military powers, under Security Council mandate but national combat command. This will only be possible where there is a consensus on the Security Council and where an appropriate country is willing to undertake the mission — for example, the French last summer in Rwanda.

U.N. peacekeeping does what it can do very well. It makes no sense to continue eroding its credibility by asking it to do what it cannot.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 18, the 18th day of 1995. There are 347 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 18, 1912, English explorer Robert F. Scott and his expedition reached the South Pole, only to discover that Roald Amundsen had gotten there first. (Scott and his party died during the return trip.)

On this date:

In 1778, English navigator Capt. James Cook discovered the Hawaiian Islands, which he dubbed the "Sandwich Islands."

In 1788, the first English settlers arrived in Australia's Botany Bay to establish a penal colony.

In 1862, the 10th president of the United States, John Tyler, died in Richmond, Virginia, at age 71.

In 1892, comedian Oliver Hardy was born in Harlem, Ga.

In 1919, the World War I Peace Congress opened in Versailles, France.

U.S. fights anti-sanctions tide in U.N.

UNITED NATIONS — In closed-door consultations of the 15-member Security Council, the United States is fighting an increasingly lonely battle against lifting U.N. sanctions imposed against Iraq in 1990.

Anderson

Other members, led by France and Russia, are anxious to certify that Saddam Hussein and Iraq are in full compliance with the conditions of the sanctions. That's at least in part because these countries stand ready and eager to reap the harvest of Iraq's largely idle oil fields.

The very prospect of reopening Iraq is alarming to Ambassador Rolf Ekeus, no-nonsense Swedish diplomat who heads the U.N. Special Commission for the Disarmament of Iraq. He has been Saddam's prime nemesis since the end of the Gulf War. The commission has been conducting arms inspections since 1991.

Ekeus concedes that Iraq has been quite cooperative in the last year or so. Saddam is no longer lying on the same scale as before, and he has stopped blocking inspectors or permanent cameras in some of the key facilities, as required by the U.N. resolutions.

For all of Iraq's "cooperation," Ekeus is not excited about the prospect of a regenerated Iraq. Despite the dismantling of Iraq's once-mighty arsenal, Ekeus once explained to a small gathering in Washington that "the capabilities" are there for Iraq to fully rearm, including "the supply system, the banks and the money." When the oil embargo is eventually lifted, Ekeus said, "Iraq will get all the cash and that will be of great concern. With the cash, the suppliers and the skills, they will be able to re-establish all the weapons programs. They will grow up like mushrooms after the rain."

Jules Kroll, whose company has been hired by the Kuwaitis to identify hidden Iraqi assets abroad, agrees with Ekeus.

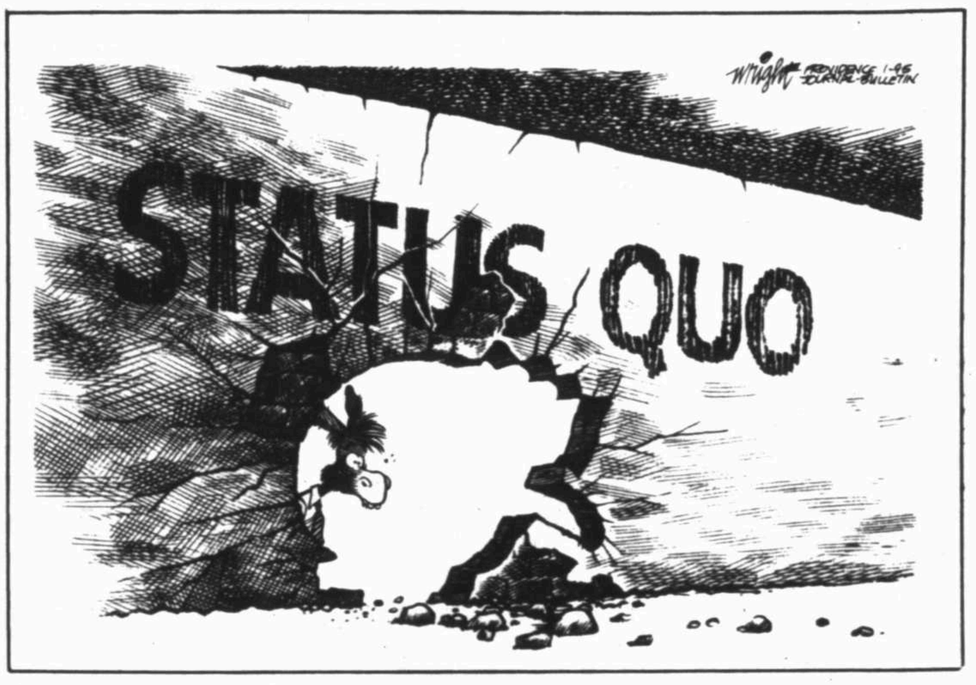

"The network and the arrangement that was set up (by Iraq) in the years prior to the August 1990 invasion of Kuwait still exists," Kroll recently told a congressional panel. "Some of the players have changed, but the strategy is essentially the same. Many of the same businessmen who were operating in France, Germany, the United Kingdom, Switzerland, Austria and other countries, are still there."

Over the past year, businesses from several countries have slipped into Baghdad, trying to be first in line when the sanctions are lifted. Sources told our associate Dale Van Atta that the French and the Russians are first in line because they have been Iraq's chief allies in the secret "informal" consultations of the Security Council. China is described as "going along" with them.

China, Russia and France account for three of the five most important members of the Security Council — the "Perm Five," as diplomats call them here because any one of them can veto U.N. decisions. A fourth member, Great Britain, still sides with the United States, though British resolve is weakening. Sources here say their stance is becoming more of a favor to the United States than an independent position.

Trade delegations have visited Iraq not only from Russia and France, but from Japan, Italy, Spain, Canada and Brazil, according to our sources. Oil companies from Germany, Greece and even Great Britain have been dickering in Baghdad over oil exploration and marketing rights.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Clinton waffles on Baltic protection issue

WASHINGTON — Should we trust the Russians? That's the central strategic question of our time.

Safire

If your answer is yes, then it follows we should send Moscow aid and credits; we should cluck-cluck about the savagery in putting down the Chechen reach for independence but discourage any secession from the vast Russian federation. And not only should we not expand NATO eastward, we should respond to our allies' abandonment of Bosnia by bringing home 110,000 American troops now defending Europe.

But if your answer is no — if you believe that a resurgent Russia will someday again seek to dominate or re-absorb the nations of Eastern Europe — then you, as a realistic distruster, should logically support a much different strategy.

The distrusters would tie American trade and aid to Russian economic and foreign-policy behavior; would lend vocal moral support to peoples within the world's largest empire that want to separate from the huge federation; and would swallow NATO's failure to respond to Serbian aggression for the sake of building collective security against a future threat from the East.

After much thumb-sucking, cognitive dissonance, and cussing out of the Europeans for their Balkan shame, I have come down hard on the side of distrust.

That means supporting the expansion of the NATO alliance while we have the chance — now, with Russia preoccupied. If we wait until the bear regains both strength and appetite, the most vulnerable nations will never be protected — because at that time, faint hearts would see expansion as "provocative."

President Clinton is waffling on this central issue. He talks the talk of protecting Poland and other states at potential risk, but walks the walk of not offending Boris Yeltsin by failing to set out a timetable for new membership. His amorphous "Partnership for Peace" muddies the waters and tootles an uncertain saxophone.

What about the new conservative leadership of Congress? Does the old tug of distrust of the Russians outpull the older tug of isolationism?

Evidently so. In a bill labeled H.R. 7, "to revitalize the national security of the United States," the shock troops of the Gingrich movement — after heaping ritual scorn on the U.N. — assert "it should be the policy of the United States . . . to continue the nation's commitment of an active leadership role in NATO" and that we should "facilitate the transition of Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic and Slovakia to full NATO membership not later than January 10, 1999."

That's encouraging; the new crowd is sensibly internationalist and intends to be tough-minded in asserting itself in the foreign arena. In getting specific about inclusion, however, my right-wing soul mates have made a dangerous mistake.

What about the Baltic nations? By treating Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania as second-class candidates for admission — only to be considered "at a future date" — the House bill condemns these independent states to the Russian sphere of influence. That was F.D.R.'s error at Yalta.

Lest we forget, it was the courageous reach for freedom by the Baltic states — whose incorporation into the U.S.S.R. in Stalin's deal with the Nazis we always refused to recognize — that led to a murderous crackdown by Moscow's "black berets" exactly four years ago. The internal and external reaction to that repression triggered the breakup of the Soviet empire.

For NATO to discriminate against the Baltic states out of a misplaced sensitivity to old, imperialist Soviet claims makes no sense. It all but invites Russian hegemony — at a time when Russia is breaking its agreement to allow international inspection of its remaining radar base in Latvia.

Latvian Foreign Minister Valdis Birkavs was in Washington last week with a creative approach for those who worry about Russia's concern about a steady eastward march of NATO. His suggestion is a "checkerboard integration" — Poland plus Latvia, then the Czechs and Estonia, then Hungary and Lithuania — zig-zag inclusion based on Western readiness criteria. (He does not mention Ukraine, which cannot with consistency be excluded.)

Congress should include the Baltics in its "revitalization and expansion of NATO" manifesto. In open debate during hearings on the bill, the Republicans can build popular backing for tomorrow's containment.

Gingrich tells mom to avoid 'B' word in future

"Mom, are you going on television again?"

Buchwald

"When you're hot, you're hot."

"You got me into so much trouble over the Connie Chung show. Instead of discussing my 'Contract With America' on the greatest day of my life, I spent the entire time denying to the press what a witch Hillary was."

"Witch?"

"Well, something like that. I wish you would stop telling everyone what I told you about the First Lady. That was a privileged conversation between a son and his mother."

"Newt, Connie took it out of context. I told her that when I asked for your opinion of Hillary, you called her a bitch. I then made you wash out your mouth with soap and water. But Connie and her producers left the soap and water part on the cutting-room floor."

"Mom, you can't trust liberal anchorwomen. They'll take advantage of you every time."

"What really got me mad, Newt, was that she told me I could whisper into her ear how you had described the First Lady — and it would be just between us. She sure had me fooled, the b—."

"Hold it, Mom. We have to stop using that word. There are a lot of dog lovers in America, and some of them are conservatives. They don't like to hear their pets being compared to women — especially not on national television."

"What am I to do, Newt? Every time I go on the air, right off the bat they ask me about Hillary. They never ask me about Bill Clinton, only Hillary. Do you want me to lie and say that she's the thinking woman's Phyllis Schlafly?"

"Say what you want, but please avoid dropping the 'B' word during interviews."

"Suppose Barbara Walters asks me to whisper into her ear?"

"Tell her since Connie Chung stabbed you in the back you've cut back on using the word."

"I'll do what you ask, but you're taking a lot of fun out of my celebrity tour. If Diane Sawyer wants to know what we think of Mrs. Yeltsin, can I use the 'B' word then?"

"It won't do any harm, particularly with all the defense contractors who have contributed to my Political Action Fund."

"Newty, what would you really like me to say when they ask me what you honestly think of Hillary?"

"Just tell them that I respect her, admire her intelligence and feel that she's doing an excellent job as First Lady."

"If I say something like that, they won't invite me on television ever again."

Democrat temporarily trips up balanced-budget amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a prelude to the coming battle, Republican efforts to pass a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution slowed Tuesday as it was attacked by a lone Democratic senator calling it "a hoax" on the American people.

Invoking an obscure Senate rule, Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia forced the Judiciary Committee to suspend its work in midsession.

Backers of the amendment said they would try again today. And even longtime opponents conceded that Republicans in both houses likely will command the two-thirds support needed to send the measure — a key component of the GOP "Contract With America" — to the states for ratification.

But Byrd, 77 and an unsurpassed master at using the Senate's arcane rules to his advantage, vowed to keep up the fight. "I may be run over by the streamroller but I don't propose to get out of its way or just jump upon it and ride along with it."

Separately, senior Republicans said it may take two or three weeks of floor debate to move the measure to a final vote this winter.

The struggle contrasted with the overwhelming bipartisan support behind what was certain to be the first piece of legislation to clear the new Congress. A final House vote was expected shortly on a bill to place Congress under the same workplace rules it imposes on private businesses. The Senate passed the measure 98-1 last week, and a similar measure previously cleared the House unanimously.

The balanced-budget amendment is the linchpin of GOP efforts to shrink government and cut spending. Public opinion polls show strong support for the concept after a quarter-century of unrelieved red ink. Republicans are hoping that once enacted, the amendment will provide the discipline needed to force lawmakers to make the politically difficult cuts.

"Our children and grandchildren are being shackled with an insurmountable burden" of debt, said Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, as he convened the abortive session.

Many Democrats are likely to wind up supporting the measure. But in the political maneuvering underway, the White House and Democratic leaders in Congress are demanding that Republicans specify the cuts they envision to wipe out the deficit. Their hope is that the voters will recoil when they contemplate reductions in programs such as Medicare, education, the environment and health.

"Not discussing the options with the American people is like a suitor telling his prospective bride, 'Marry me and I will make you happy,'" Byrd said. "But when she asks what he has in mind, he simply answers, 'Trust me, baby, you don't need to know the details.'

"Why go through all these motions, why go to all that extent to fool the American people and to perpetrate on the American people a hoax?" he added.

To stall the Judiciary Committee's work, Byrd invoked a rarely used Senate rule that denies committees the right to meet after the full Senate has been in session for two hours.

Hatch appeared unperturbed at Byrd's maneuver. But Republican patience was wearing thin as Byrd and other Democrats also slowed progress of legislation on the floor designed to shield the states from costly new requirements imposed by Washington. "We have what we know as "Byrd-lock," said Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

In general, the balanced-budget amendment making its way through the House and Senate call on the president to submit a deficit-free spending plan annually, beginning in 2002. Deficit spending would be barred, except by three-fifths votes of both houses.

At the same time, the GOP is divided over an effort by House conservatives to impose an additional requirement barring any tax hike unless Congress approves it on a three-fifths vote.

With 230 votes in the House, Republicans will need the support of 60 to 75 Democrats if they are to prevail on the amendment, depending on the extent of defections from their own ranks. An aide to one conservative Democrat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that so far, only about three dozen Democrats are believed to support the three-fifths vote for a tax hike provision.

Survey shows lack of equal parenting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six minutes in Hong Kong. Thirty minutes in Belgium. Forty-two minutes in the United States. Preschoolers worldwide spend on average less than one waking hour a day alone with their fathers, according to an 11-nation study.

The mother remains the primary adult in a preschooler's life even when she works outside the home and the child is in day care, said the report Tuesday by the International Association for the Evaluation of Educational Achievement, a private research organization based in the Netherlands.

In their survey of the routines of 4-year-old children in the United States and 10 other countries, researchers for the group known as the IEA found that young children are rarely in the sole care of their fathers, regardless of the culture.

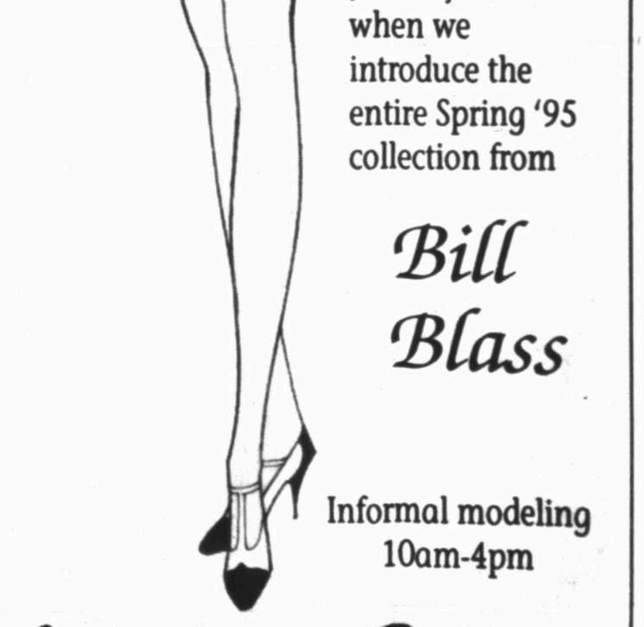

American mothers — about half of whom hold outside jobs — spend nearly 11 waking hours as sole supervisors of their preschoolers each day, the report said.

Company introduces drug for alcoholics

■ Manufacturer to sell drug as supplement to traditional alcoholism treatment.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A drug already used to help heroin addicts kick the habit will also be given to alcoholics, its manufacturer said Tuesday, making it the first new drug used in the fight against alcoholism in nearly 50 years.

Researchers, who concluded that the drug naltrexone has some benefit in blocking the craving for alcohol, cautioned, however, that it does not represent a "magic bullet" in the battle against alcoholism.

The drug's manufacturer, DuPont Merck Pharmaceutical Co., said it would sell the drug as a supplement to traditional alcoholism therapy.

Available since 1984, naltrexone blocks the euphoria from heroin and other narcotics.

The Food and Drug Administration gave DuPont Merck authorization on Dec. 30 to market the drug for use against alcoholism after two studies involving 167 people showed it also appears to curb alcoholics' craving for drink.

The only other drug now sold for alcoholism is Antabuse, introduced in 1948, which makes a person nauseous when they drink. Researchers said Tuesday this drug hasn't been very successful because 80 percent of patients fail to take it properly.

They were cautious in the expectations for naltrexone.

"None of these studies indicate this is a substitute for good psycho-social treatment — 12-step programs like alcoholics anonymous," said Dr. Charles O'Brien, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania.

Drugs like naltrexone "address some unmet needs in alcoholism treatment, but no single medication is a magic bullet," O'brien said, using the term once applied to penicillin.

The drug has been sold under the brand name Trexan, but in the future will be called Revia.

Doctors are permitted to prescribe any approved drug for any reason they see fit, and some have already been using naltrexone for alcoholism, the researchers said.

DuPont Merck — a partnership of the nation's biggest chemical company and the biggest prescription drugmaker — plans to sell the once-a-day pill for a wholesale price of $3.80 per day in a treatment program lasting three to six months. Patients who can't afford it will receive it for free, said DuPont Merck's president and chief executive, Kurt Landgraf.

Alcohol is the most widely abused drug in the United States, and there are about 15 million Americans who are alcoholics, the researchers said. They estimated the annual cost of the disease at $100 billion in premature deaths and illnesses, lost productivity, treatment costs and other expenses.

In the two studies, both done in 1992 in conjunction with counseling, scientists said the drug reduced euphoria, cut the craving alcoholics feel for drinking and also reduced the resulting relapses into drinking that many people suffer after quitting.

A 12-week study of 70 long-term alcoholic men done by the University of Pennsylvania showed 23 percent who were on the drug relapsed compared with 54 percent of those given a placebo. Those who did drink while on the drug drank less frequently and in smaller quantities.

Asked which kinds of people would be best suited to naltrexone, the researchers said they weren't sure and that broader studies are planned to find out.

Child killed

SAN BENITO — A 12-year-old girl was killed and another student was injured when high winds toppled a flagpole at a middle school in this Lower Rio Grande Valley city. Valley Baptist Medical Center spokesman Mike Swartz said Yvette Salinas, a seventh-grader at Berta Cabaza Middle School, died Monday afternoon of head injuries she suffered when the flagpole toppled. Ramon Resendez, 13, was taken to the Harlingen hospital's emergency for treatment of an eye injury. School district officials said he was struck by a piece of the flagpole, rust or paint from the pole. He was released Monday afternoon. High winds broke the flagpole just after noon as students recessed for lunch, according to Superintendent Felipe Alanis. "It could have happened anytime, and it happened during lunch," Alanis said Monday, on his first day on the job. District maintenance workers will inspect other district flagpoles, Alanis said.

4-mile chase

GALVESTON — Two preschool children were back-seat witnesses to a four-mile chase with authorities who pursued their parents for burglarizing vehicles in a Amoco Oil Co. parking lot. Kenton Brion Fox, 33, and Denise Marcrum Fox, 32, were arrested Monday and their 5-year-old girl and 2-year-old boy were released to relatives, said Texas City police Capt. Donnie Carlisle. The couple were charged with burglary of a motor vehicle and were held on $1,000 bond each at the city jail. Amoco security guards monitoring a camera said they saw burglars taking tools from a truck in a company parking lot. As the guards blocked the exit to the parking lot, the suspects drove their van through a grassy area and sped off. Texas City police joined two security guards on the chase and caught the couple on state Highway 146 just south of the Dickinson Bayou Bridge, when they stopped after narrowly avoided a head-on collision, said Texas City police officer Jose Saldivar. The children were found when police searched the van. Officers also found several tool boxes and tackle boxes.

'Roe' attorney discusses case

Woman who took abortion before Supreme Court speaks on issue

■ Sarah Weddington remains amazed that Roe vs. Wade is still source of controversy.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Twenty-two years ago, she went before the U.S. Supreme Court and won her first contested case for what she considered to be the right to privacy.

Today, she admits to being amazed that the case is still a source of controversy, both politically and socially.

"If you had told me back then that Roe vs. Wade would still be talked about today, I would not have believed you," said Sarah Weddington, who took the case of "Jane Roe" from the Texas courts to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1973.

"Roe," a Texas woman whose real name is Norma McCorvey, challenged the state law that made abortion a criminal offense. She sued Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade; the Supreme Court ruled that the Texas law violated a woman's right to privacy.

Ms. Weddington — an author and teacher at the University of Texas — talked Tuesday night about the steps that led to her involvement in the landmark case and her feelings on the escalating violence over abortion rights. The gathering was sponsored by the Midland League of Women Voters, People's Choice and Planned Parenthood of West Texas Inc.

"It started off as a question of whether or not some UT graduates could inform women of safe places to have abortions in Mexico, where abortions were legal," she said. "It started at the steps of a library."

Ms. Weddington — who was a University of Texas Law School graduate who could not get a job as an attorney because she was a woman — said that at the time, her only dealings with law were uncontested divorces and "wills for people who had no money."

"I had no experience and I was in front of the Supreme Court," she said.

Her victory in court sparked a debate that has escalated violently through the years.

"It saddens me to know that a man killed five people and injured numerous more in two abortion clinics," she said. "It saddens me to know that the fringe element out there will use these tactics and believe that they will be blessed by God for this.

"It is beginning to sound like many

Relatives sue hospital, doctor for negligence in Zachery death

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Relatives of James Zachery have filed a lawsuit requesting unspecified damages from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center and Dr. J.J. Waller in connection with Zachery's death.

According to the lawsuit — filed Jan. 3 in Midland's 238th District Court on behalf of Zachery's estate — Waller and the hospital were negligent in Zachery's Jan. 25, 1994, death.

Zachery was the victim of an assault that left him with lacerations and a head injury, according to police and hospital reports.

An 18-year-old man, Duann Dewayne Stewart, was later sentenced to prison for manslaughter in connection with Zachery's death.

At the trial, medical experts from the defense and prosecution disagreed over whether the cause of death was due to blunt head trauma from the attack or the amount of cocaine in Zachery's blood stream.

Dallas attorney Britton D. Monts, however, claims in the lawsuit that Waller — the emergency department physician — and the hospital were directly responsible for the victim's death.

"He should not have died. Had he received proper medical care from Dr. Waller and the hospital, he would be alive and well today," Monts stated in the filing.

"This is a tragic case of medical negligence," he said.

Zachery arrived at the hospital at 1:40 a.m. and was pronounced dead at 4:30 a.m., according to hospital records

Elmo Birkhead is the owner of Birkhead Feed Store, 100 N. Terrell St., which has been in business for 50 years.

Store's 50 years offer memories of city to owner

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Memory brings the olden times right into the present.

Elmo Paul Birkhead, 95, in the livestock-feed business in Midland for 50 years, knows that very well.

He was farming cotton and milo grain sorghum before he was selling feed grains from a store.

"I walked many a mile behind a walking middle-buster (plow)," recalled Birkhead.

A team of four mules led the way.

"It took me three months to get my land put up. I always used four mules. We always used mules. They're a little tougher (than horses)."

The milo he raised was fuel for the mules.

With mules or horses, the farmer had to gather the work animals each morning, gear them up, hitch them to the plow, head them into the field, unhitch them for noon-time feeding and rehitch them for the afternoon's work.

Farming with tractors proved less troublesome and more efficient than farming with teams.

"You can cover more country with a tractor," said Birkhead's son, E.P. Birkhead Jr.

The elder Birkhead's mule-farming days were in Howard County.

In 1932, the year he married Christine Farrar, Birkhead made a "real good cotton crop" on his 160-acre farm near Knott. That year in the depths of the Great Depression, cotton sold for six cents a pound.

In those days, a nickel had worth.

"When I got the crop gathered and sold, I had $500 in the bank," Birkhead

Auto technology program makes advances

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

With the recent addition of new equipment, Midland College's automotive technology program offers students "a very near state-of-the-art" working environment, according to department director Tony Smith.

"We are training to a manner the automotive industry demands and respects," Smith told MC board trustees Tuesday afternoon at their regular meeting.

Smith said the college's program was recently awarded National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence certification. MC is only the 13th of 47 schools to achieve the national certification, he said.

"This means we can teach the entire gamut of the program. It's a real prize for us," Smith said.

The instructor said the MC staff meets twice a year with local employers to find out what skills they are looking for in employees.

"I'd like to build a base of Midland College-trained automotive students out in local repair shops and dealerships," he said.

Smith said that in a couple of years he would like MC to be a training center for technicians for dealerships such as Ford, General Motors and Chrysler.

As an action item, trustees unanimously approved — in an 8-0 vote with Bill Kleine absent — a resolution to lease 12 computers for nearly the same cost as maintaining the same number of obsolete computers.

MC President David E. Daniel said the spring enrollment is up 130 students over last year, with late registration continuing.

Daniel praised the spring registration process, where faculty members greet-

Award-winning storyteller to perform, sign books

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Body language and the spoken word will meld together for adults and children alike this week as award-winning author and storyteller, Rafe Martin, appears at schools and a book-signing.

He will perform at area schools and will sign books at Creative Schoolhouse Thursday afternoon.

In schools, Martin works with all grade levels — telling stories and sharing an empowering vision of language, writing and the storyteller's art.

"Storytelling, simply put, is the telling of tales and the sharing of experience that is personal, cultural and universal . . . (The storyteller's) only tools are the fundamental ones we all share — body language and the mind's understanding," Martin said.

"Stories in words are our oldest tools. They give us what no other technology can — ourselves. They teach us how to form our own images," Martin said.

"Drawing on the world's tradition of tales, as well as a growing number of his own original stories, Martin seeks to pass on the storyteller's primary gifts: the faith in the creative imagination; the power of wish and dream, as awareness of the interrelation of all living things; a respect for the vision of the Earth's many cultures and more," said Jo Miller, the owner of Creative Schoolhouse.

"The Rough-Face Girl" is one of Martin's most acclaimed books and has won several awards. The book is the tale of a young Native American girl seeking true love.

He has written other books for children and adults as well.

He will be discussing his books and signing copies from 4-6 p.m. Thursday at Creative Schoolhouse, 2501 W. Ohio Ave.,

AA annual conference expected to draw more than 1,000

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The 25th annual Mid-Winter Alcoholics Anonymous Conference Friday through Sunday at Holiday Inn Country Villa is expected to attract more than 1,000 men and women who are recovering from alcoholism.

"It kind of showcases the values of Alcoholics Anonymous to the individual and to the community," according to Big Mac, a Midland AA member who is heading up the conference.

Members of Alanon — an independent group of friends and family members of alcoholics — are also to attend.

AA was founded in 1935 in Akron, Ohio, by a New York stockbroker, Bill W., and by an Akron physician, Dr. Bob S.

The fellowship's Big Book was published in 1939.

AA is a worldwide fellowship of alcoholic men and women "who are banded together to solve their common problems and to help fellow sufferers in recovery from that age-old, baffling malady — alcoholism," according to the foreword to the Big Book's companion volume, "Twelve Steps and Twelve Tradition."

The steps are designed to help an individual in recovery from alcoholism. Adherence to the traditions ensures the survival of the thousands of AA and Al-Anon groups.

The AA fellowship "lets you know that living sober is not boring and gloomy," said Big Mac, who has been sober for 20 years. "Living is exciting."

However, "many drinkers live an abnormal lifestyle for so long that abnormal becomes normal," he said. "And the program of Alcoholics Anonymous shows you a way to reverse that (downward spiral) and get back into a normal lifestyle that is acceptable to everybody. And you can do that with pride and dignity."

AA's only requirement for membership is a "desire to stop drinking," according to the traditions, which honor the autonomy of each group and the anonymity of AA members.

Texas House considers new rules for caucuses

AUSTIN (AP) — Funding for legislator caucuses would be changed under proposals being considered by the Texas House.

Caucuses are usually groups of lawmakers who spend money on staff and research to monitor bills and gather information for their legislative agenda.

Under changes proposed Tuesday, caucuses couldn't use House funds or individual members' funds for operation or travel expenses. Caucuses also couldn't raise money during the 140-day legislative session or for 30 days before and after.

The proposal, expected to be considered by the full House on Thursday, became an issue earlier this month, when one caucus held a fund-raiser the day before the legislative session opened.

The Texas Conservative Coalition held a luncheon on Jan. 9 with special interest lobbyists with plates selling for up to $10,000.

Public watchdog groups said the event was hypocritical because the proposal banning such fund-raisers was advocated by Rep. Warren Chisum, chairman of the conservative coalition.

Chisum, D-Pampa, defended the fund-raiser. He said that while he endorsed the proposal for the change, he was simply operating under the current law.

The proposed changes in caucus funding drew mixed reviews from the public watchdog group Common Cause of Texas.

The group's executive director, Suzy Woodford, applauded the change for banning fund-raisers before, after and during the session. But she said she was disappointed with the provision that would prohibit caucuses from using state funds for expenses.

Ms. Woodford said the state should pay caucuses the same amount, thereby putting them on "an even playing field." She said by forcing caucuses to raise money, "some will be able to raise much more than others."

Ms. Woodford said her group will push for an amendment to the proposal that would require caucuses to disclose contributions and expenditures.

"We think the people have a right to know who is giving money to candidates and caucuses," Ms. Woodford said. "Then the public can decide if it's right."

Other proposed House rule changes would create five new committees focusing on juvenile justice, civil litigation, property rights, state investments and parks and wildlife.

Another proposed rule would prohibit House members from being included in a record vote if they aren't on the floor when it is taken.

STORE: Family runs stock-feed business

(From 1B)

recalled. "I didn't owe nobody nothing."

The profit carried him into next year's crop.

"It's just pocket change now," Birkhead said. "If you don't have $500 in your pocket now, you're broke."

Until 1943 — when he bought his first tractor, a two-row "Popping Johnny" John Deere — Birkhead worked his 160-acre farm with his team of mules.

"That's what made me a living. Used to be, a man could go out and farm 160 acres and make a living. There's no way you can do that today."

As farms got progressively larger, the number of farmers and small farms diminished. And particularly in the post-World War II years, more and more rural people left the farms and moved into cities and towns for work.

Today, profitable farming requires far more acreage, multi-row tractors and, as always, the luck of the weather and good prices.

During his youth on his father's farm north of Coahoma in Howard County, Birkhead picked cotton by hand. The old cotton gins required clean cotton for ginning. Later on, the gins became better adept at cleaning "dirty" cotton and took "pulled cotton." Today, cotton is harvested by machine.

In 1945, after he decided to get into the feed business, Birkhead moved his family to Midland and set up his business in J.P. Carson's old feed store near the old Texas & Pacific Railway Co. depot.

Midland's population, which boomed during the war years, was about 14,000 people. Today, it's nearing the 100,000 mark.

Since then, Birkhead has relocated the feed store to south of the railroad tracks off Terrell Street.

In those days, feed was delivered by rail; today, it is shipped in by truck.

In its 50 years, Birkhead Feed Store has evolved into one of Midland's oldest independent businesses.

"The main thing, he has always been fair and honest with people," his son said.

To this day, Birkhead daily drops by the store, where his son and grandson — 34-year-old James Birkhead — manage the operation.

His health in mind and body serve him well.

"Some people have a stronger constitution," he said of his 95 years.

Birkhead wears his farmer's silver-belly, tall-crowned and wide-brimmed hat, which is similar to, but not quite as imposing, as the cowboy's old 10-gallon hat. His son and grandson sport the now-commonplace baseball-style caps.

"You spend more time chasing the (cowboy-style) hat than you do roping," E.P. Birkhead said of the rationale for wearing the baseball cap. That's especially true on windy days, he said.

In his business dealings, the elder Birkhead said, "I always got along with my neighbors and have good friends. If I ever had any enemies, I never knew about it."

His grandson said his grandfather treats other people "fairly and honestly" and shows them respect. He is frugal in money matters.

"He always said, 'Don't spend it before you make it,'" E.P. Birkhead said.

Customer J.D. Inskeep said, "There ain't nobody more honest than this Birkhead bunch."

Midland rancher Ennis Cole agreed.

"I think he's great," Cole said of Birkhead. "I don't think there are many more like him. He's the same everyday."

AA: 25th annual conference of group to be this weekend

(From 1B)

Recovering alcoholics recognize their powerlessness over their compulsive drinking. And they acknowledge how their lives had become unmanageable under the influence of alcohol. With group support, recovering alcoholics decide to turn their "lives over to the care of God" or a Higher Power as they understand that Higher Power.

"The drunk is the only person in the world that can be lying on his back in the gutter and still be looking down his nose on the rest of the world," Big Mac said.

"Alcoholism is the only disease that tells the bearer of the disease that they don't have it."

Members help each other solve their common problem of alcoholism. They share their experiences, strengths and hopes.

Through taking a moral inventory, the recovering alcoholic recognizes his or her character defects, works to change and to make amends and to carry the AA message to suffering alcoholics wherever they may be.

The AA conference program times and speakers include:

- Friday: 8 p.m., AA speaker, Earl H. of Redondo Beach, Calif.
- Saturday: 10 a.m., Al-Anon speaker, Larcine G. of Manhattan Beach, Calif.; 11 a.m., AA speaker, Pat M. of North Myrtle Beach, S.C.; 8 p.m., AA speaker, Clara S. of Los Angeles, Calif.
- Sunday: 10 a.m.: AA speaker, Ray M. of Kannapolis, N.C.

Throughout the conference, there will be a hospitality room set up — offering a smorgasbord of foods — from 1 p.m. Friday until 1 p.m. Sunday, except during meetings and late nighttime hours.

Registration for the conference is $20 a person.

The conference — which is sponsored by the dozen or more AA groups in Midland — is open to anyone who honestly is interested in the AA fellowship and who thinks that he or she or a friend or family member may have a drinking problem.

used in the trial.

In the lawsuit, plaintiffs — which include Zachery's three minor children — maintain that the emergency treatment of Zachery was insufficient, as his blood loss was not replaced until 3:45 a.m. and the high acid levels in his blood were not properly treated.

Monts signed an affidavit stating that he sought competent medical opinion before filing the lawsuit. "We were satisfied that we've obtained competent, expert testimony that the treatment fell below the applicable level of care. That negligence caused his death," Monts said Tuesday.

The lawsuit also alleges that a pint of blood given to Zachery was not one of six originally matched pints and this caused a rapid, feeble pulse, markedly decreased blood pressure, cardiovascular deterioration and eventually death.

At Stewart's trial, Waller testified that it was unclear when Zachery arrived whether the victim's shock was due to brain trauma or from loss of blood. Waller testified that he believed it was damage to the brain and related swelling of that organ that caused Zachery's death.

Rice Freeman-Zachery, a member of the Zachery family, said Monts has asked family members not to make any public comments at this time.

Hospital officials declined to talk about the lawsuit. "We are not prepared to make a statement at this time," one official said.

Damages have not been specified, but Monts pointed out that the needs of the three minor children and the fact that Zachery was a relatively young man will factor into a satisfactory award.

No trial date has been set, but Monts hopes to begin taking depositions in February.

Third World countries, where religious fundamentalists fight wars in the name of God," she continued. "We as a nation should not tolerate this. Our leaders have to pass stringent laws that protect the women who have abortions and those who work and volunteer at clinics, and those laws need to be enforced."

Ms. Weddington said the increased violence is frightening, but has caused many anti-abortionists to step back and take a look at their position.

"These are people who may not vocally advocate killing, but through their words have maybe condoned it," she said. "These people are now being forced to publically denounce these actions and publically take a look at where they stand."

As the controversy goes on, Ms. Weddington said she often gets tired of endless fighting. However, she said what keeps her going is phone calls and letters from people whose lives were changed because of her participation in Roe vs. Wade.

"I have people walk up to me and say 'I'm glad I had the choice, I'm glad I had the facilities to go to,'" she said. "Those are the people whose lives were touched by this case, and that's what keeps me going."

She said Martin will sign any copy of his book; the signing is not restricted to those sold that day.

"You can bring in your tattered old copy of one of his books and he'll sign it," Ms. Miller said.

Martin will also give a keynote speech at the Midland Reading Council Mid-Winter Conference Saturday.

Martin has been featured at events such as the National Storytelling Festival, the American Library Association Annual Conference and at institutions such as the American Museum of Natural History. His work has been cited in Time, Newsweek, U.S. News and World Report and USA Today.

Martin offers adult and family concert performances and speaks regularly to educators, librarians, writers, experienced and novice storytellers and all interested in myth and story. He has a master's degree in English literature and literary criticism from the University of Toronto.

He and his wife, Rose, live in Rochester, N.Y.

State Farm to give employees time off for school service

Staff Report

State Farm Insurance has announced a plan to let its employees get paid time off to serve in schools. Beginning Jan. 1, State Farm's new education support policy allows employees to use one work day per school year to take part in activities helping an entire class, campus or school system.

Under the new policy, employees could volunteer for a field trip, participate in a career day program, or teach a class, among other things.

"We know many State Farm employees want to help and this will make it easier," said Keith Androff, regional public affairs manager. "Many schools have been feeling the pinch budget-wise. This could help ease that pinch."

Participation is open to all full-time employees and is strictly voluntary.

Authorities release witness in beating case

■ Undocumented 18-year-old is key witness in two U.S. Border Patrol agents' defense against charges.

Associated Press

BROWNSVILLE — Jose Lopez Hernandez was jailed not for committing a crime, but for witnessing one.

The 18-year-old undocumented immigrant from Mexico is considered a key witness in two U.S. Border Patrol agents' defense against charges of beating up a one-footed Mexican man.

But Lopez's attorney says it's wrong to jail a witness simply out of fear that he may not show up to testify at trial — regardless of his immigration status.

On Tuesday, lawyers worked out a deal to end Lopez's two-month detention.

"All he wants to do is go home," said John Wescoat Sandlin, a Harlingen immigration attorney who took Lopez's case for free.

The legal controversy involves patrol agents David R. Gonzalez and Manny Figueroa. They are charged in state court in Brownsville with beating an illegal immigrant named David Bergman, throwing away his crutches, and then telling him to swim back across the Rio Grande to Mexico on March 16, 1994.

Figueroa's defense attorney, Ernesto Gamez Jr., said Lopez's testimony can damage the credibility of Bergman's claims.

Gamez, who portrays Bergman as a "border bandit" who robs illegal immigrants as they cross the river, said that Lopez will testify that he was one of Bergman's victims in January 1994.

Bergman denies taking part in robberies.

The Border Patrol picked up Lopez as an illegal immigrant in November and detained him at the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's detention center near Bayview. Sandlin said the normal procedure for an illegal border crosser from Mexico would have been a quick deportation, not a prolonged detention.

Last month, Gamez obtained an order from state District Judge Robert Garza that Lopez remain under detention to secure his testimony.

Lopez was transferred to the Cameron County Jail last week to await Figueroa's trial, scheduled for Jan. 30, and Gonzalez's trial, expected next month.

Gamez said the detention was necessary because he has no power to subpoena a witness in Mexico.

But when attorney Sandlin asked for a hearing to explore the issue Monday, Gamez agreed to take a videotaped deposition from the witness. Gamez withdrew his request for detention after the three-hour deposition Tuesday, and Lopez was released from jail.

Study of abortion pill RU-486 to begin at Houston clinic today

HOUSTON (NYT) — The long-anticipated Houston study of the abortion drug called mifepristone, or RU-486, will get under way today at the Planned Parenthood Fannin Street clinic.

Beginning today and continuing at least for a few months, women who go to the clinic for surgical abortions will be offered the alternative, three-step pill method if they meet the study's criteria, clinic spokeswoman Susan Nenney said.

"We have approval," Nenney said. "We have the pills here, so it's just a matter of offering it to our clients."

Planned Parenthood of Houston and Southeast Texas announced in late October that it would participate in nationwide clinical trials involving approximately 2,100 women at about a dozen sites. But the clinic and Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, which will investigate data collected here, spent several months clearing up paperwork necessary to undertake the research.

While some clinics began their studies shortly after the announcement, several others around the country still are awaiting approval. All are likely to start and finish on different days, said Susan Waldman, director of public information for the New York-based Population Council, which is overseeing the study.

Widespread U.S. study of mifespristone has been delayed for almost a decade because of anti-abortion violence and threats of boycotts against the drug's European manufacturer, Roussel Uclaf. The company donated the drug rights to the Population Council last year.

In the days after the Houston site was announced, more than 1,000 women called to volunteer for the study. But most of those women will no longer qualify because the pill method can only be used through the 63rd day of pregnancy.

Tons of radioactive waste would travel by rail across state, group's study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tons of high-level radioactive waste would be shipped through Texas if the federal government pursues its plan to open a nuclear storage dump in Nevada, according to a report prepared for Nevada officials fighting the proposal.

Opponents of the proposed Yucca Mountain repository Tuesday released a Nevada state agency's report detailing state-by-state rail and highway routes likely to be used in the shipment of spent nuclear fuel to Nevada.

The study's authors suggest that use of the Nevada repository would require more than 15,600 truck or rail shipments through 43 states over a 30-year period.

In Texas, which has two nuclear power plants, radioactive waste would travel by rail on three corridors, the report said.

One route would stretch from the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City north through Houston and Fort Worth and onto Oklahoma. A second route would start at Texas' only other nuclear power plant, Comanche Peak near Glen Rose, and would head west near Abilene and Lubbock and onto New Mexico. The third route, with nuclear cargo originating in Oklahoma, would cut through the Panhandle and near Amarillo before heading west to New Mexico.

News conferences were held across the nation Tuesday by anti-nuclear and environmental organizations seeking to drum up opposition to the Yucca Mountain site.

The Yucca Mountain repository, located almost 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas, would be designed to hold as much as 70,000 tons of high-level nuclear fuel. The federal government wants the storage site in operation by 2010.

The anti-nuclear groups want Congress to reject an effort to designate Yucca Mountain as the nation's nuclear storage dump and convene a commission to decide what to do next.

"The new Congress should realize that a hasty decision to transport these highly irradiated fuel rods will affect the health and safety of millions of Americans, not just Nevadans," said Michael Mariotte, executive director of the Nuclear Information and Resource Service.

Public Citizen, the U.S. Public Interest Research Group, Safe Energy Communication Council and Military Production Network joined Mariotte's group in releasing the study.

Nevada officials have long fought against housing the nation's most radioactive wastes and have raised concerns about the risks of shipping high-level nuclear waste across the country.

State executes San Antonio man for 1984 rape-slaying

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer Mario Marquez, described by his lawyers as having the mind of a 5-year-old, acknowledged killing his teen-age wife and a 14-year-old niece 11 years ago and said he understood why he was being put to death early Tuesday.

"I am truly sorry and I am paying with my life tonight for taking those two lives," the San Antonio man said just before receiving lethal injection.

Marquez, 36, was portrayed by defense attorneys as mentally retarded, a victim of an abusive father and someone who should be hospitalized or imprisoned but not executed.

State authorities, however, characterized him as violent, likely to repeat his crimes and capable of determining right from wrong.

"He raped and killed two teenage girls," said Ed Shaughnessy, an assistant Bexar County district attorney who took the case through the appeals courts. "I don't think you need much more than that. He's a continuing menace to organized peaceful society."

Marquez, speaking softly but clearly as he was strapped to the death chamber gurney, expressed love for his brothers, who were standing a few feet away, and asked for forgiveness for his crime.

"I am sorry for all of the burden I caused my family," he said. "I hold no ill will against the prosecutor and those that brought me here tonight."

He concluded with a brief prayer.

"I want to come home, to my Lord Jesus. . . I am ready to come home," he said.

Eight minutes later, at 12:21 a.m. CST, he was pronounced dead, making him the second condemned killer to die in Texas this year and the 87th since the state resumed carrying out capital punishment in 1982. The figure is the nation's highest.

About 100 people gathered outside the prison in downtown Huntsville, a crowd significantly larger than previous recent executions.

Some two dozen death penalty opponents carrying signs and candles were outnumbered by students from nearby Sam Houston State University, many of whom said they favored capital punishment and were drawn to the scene by a television broadcast from the prison by the ABC "Nightline" program.

A smattering of applause broke out from the crowd as witnesses emerged from the prison following the execution.

Attorneys had argued that Marquez, a sixth-grade dropout with an IQ of about 65, should not have been put to death because of his diminished mental ability.

Marquez was on delayed sentencing, awaiting jail after pleading guilty to four burglaries and leading police on a 100 mph freeway chase, when he was arrested for the Jan. 27, 1984 murders of his estranged wife, Rebecca, 19, and her niece, Rachel Gutierrez, 14.

Testimony indicated Marquez killed his estranged wife because he believed she had been unfaithful. The two bodies were found together at the Gutierrez home in a San Antonio housing project, where Rebecca Marquez was living with her mother.

When Marquez's mother-in-law returned home, he showed her the bodies, then sexually assaulted her before fleeing.

Among evidence used at his trial were bite marks on the slaying victim that matched Marquez's teeth.

He was not tried for his wife's murder but was convicted and sentenced to die for the niece's slaying.

Fire destroys Marfa City Hall, police building

MARFA (AP) — Firefighters were too late Tuesday to save the Marfa City Hall and adjacent police headquarters from a fire, officials said.

The blaze was reported at 4 a.m., but the building was already gutted, said City Manager David Chavez.

All firefighters from Marfa and Alpine could do was keep the flames from spreading, Chavez said.

"There is a lot of speculation that half of the block would have gone down if they hadn't," Chavez said.

Several firefighters were treated for smoke inhalation.

The state fire marshal's office was asked to determine the cause of the fire, Chavez said.

Meanwhile, Chavez and other city employees set up temporary offices in the abstract offices next door to city hall and continued business as well as they could with no records.

The new Presidio County Jail across the street from city hall was not damaged.

Three men face charges in officer's death

■ Suspects in Sunday's killing of off-duty policeman remain in jail.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Three men were charged Tuesday in the execution-style murder of off-duty police officer Fabian Dominguez, who was shot to death as he investigated a burglary in his own neighborhood.

Deputy Police Chief Albert Ortiz identified the three suspects as Jonathon Bryant Moore, 19, the alleged trigger man; Peter Elmer Dowdle, 17; and Paul Houston Cameron, 17.

Moore was held in the Bexar County Jail without bond on a capital murder charge. Dowdle and Cameron each were held on $1 million bond each on the same charge.

Ortiz described a gruesome scene in which he said Dominguez, 29, a father of 8-month-old twin daughters, died early Sunday of gunshots fired at pointblank range from a car containing suspected burglars.

"It was definitely an execution," Ortiz said.

"For at least a month prior to the murder of officer Dominguez, these individuals had discussed, and especially Jonathon Moore had discussed, ambushing a policeman and killing an officer, especially one who was unsuspecting. That's just something that they wanted to do," Ortiz said.

"He just happened to be the first officer that they ran into," he said.

The weekend slaying and $34,000 in reward money prompted calls to the San Antonio Police Department, which identified about 40 possible suspects, including Moore, Ortiz said.

Moore was under police surveillance until about 10 p.m. Monday, when he got into a vehicle and was trailed by police.

Moore noticed he was being followed and led officers on a high-speed chase on the outskirts of San Antonio and into Bandera County, Ortiz said.

The car eventually went out of control and collided with two police patrol cars, and Moore was captured after he tried to flee on foot, Ortiz said.

A search of a nearby field led the recovery of stereo equipment, Dominguez's .40-caliber Glock semi-automatic pistol and a .25-caliber pistol, Ortiz said.

Officers have said at least one shot fired at Dominguez was believed to have been from his own gun. The .25-caliber pistol was being tested to see if it also was used in the killing, Ortiz said.

A young woman who was with Moore during the chase was released and not charged. Dowdle and Cameron later were arrested and charged along with Moore.

"After they were brought in for questioning and given the amount of evidence we have, they became very cooperative," Ortiz said.

Dominguez was still in uniform and on his way home from work in his own car about 5 a.m. Sunday when he apparently noticed what looked like a burglary at a house where the owners were out of town. A car was backed into the driveway.

"He got the driver to turn off the car and give him the keys and at that point he was shot in the face," Ortiz said, adding that Moore — who was sitting in the passenger side of the car — is believed to have fired the shot.

Dominguez fell with the car keys still in his hand.

"That's when Moore exited the vehicle to get the keys and finally to pump a couple of more bullets into the officer's head," Ortiz said.

Moore had previously been arrested on charges of criminal trespass and burglary of a vehicle, Ortiz said.

The 100 Club of San Antonio announced a trust fund has been set up for Dominguez' family.

Authorities charge two in slaying of former high school classmate

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Round Rock High School graduates attempted to cover up the murder of a former classmate by sawing the hands off the dead body and setting it on fire, Travis County authorities say.

Stephanie Lynn Martin and her boyfriend, William Michael Busenburg, both 22, were charged with murder Tuesday in the shooting death of Christopher Michael Hatton, said Travis County Sheriff's Department spokesman Andy Saenz.

"This is one of the most brutal murders we have seen in the county in recent years," Saenz said. "These people went to great lengths to hide the identity of the victim."

Saenz said it would be up to the Travis County district attorney's office to try to indict the suspects on capital murder charges, thus exposing them to the death penalty.

Robbery appeared to be the motive, said Travis County Sheriff Terry Keel. He did not elaborate, but said "money and goods" were involved.

Ms. Martin and Busenburg, who remained in jail Tuesday, could also be charged with theft, auto theft, abuse of a corpse and tampering with physical evidence, Keel said.

Ms. Martin told authorities in a statement that she shot Hatton because he attempted to sexually assault her.

But, Keel said, "The physical evidence does not support that theory."

"We are reasonably certain that there was involvement of money and property and he was intentionally killed," Keel said.

Hatton's body was found Wednesday in a picnic area at Pace Bend Park. He died of a shotgun blast to the head, and his hands had been severed with a hacksaw and his body burned in attempt to hide his identity, Keel said.

Hatton was shot with his own shotgun while he slept in his apartment, officers said.

Hatton and Busenburg had recently shared the apartment, and police say they believe the two suspects entered the apartment with a key Busenburg kept after moving out.

Detectives said they found evidence at Hatton's apartment of an attempt to cover up a crime scene.

They found several pairs of discarded surgical gloves, blood in the bathtub and fresh paint on the walls of the bedroom to hide blood stains and indications that the carpet had been cleaned, authorities said.

Agency harasses Hispanic agents who won lawsuit, attorney claims

EL PASO (AP) — Retaliation and reprisals are widespread against Hispanic FBI agents who successfully sued the agency in a landmark discrimination case, an attorney charged Tuesday.

FBI employees are mistreated and subjected to unjust investigations because of their participation in the class-action lawsuit, said Antonio Silva, who is representing three plaintiffs airing new complaints.

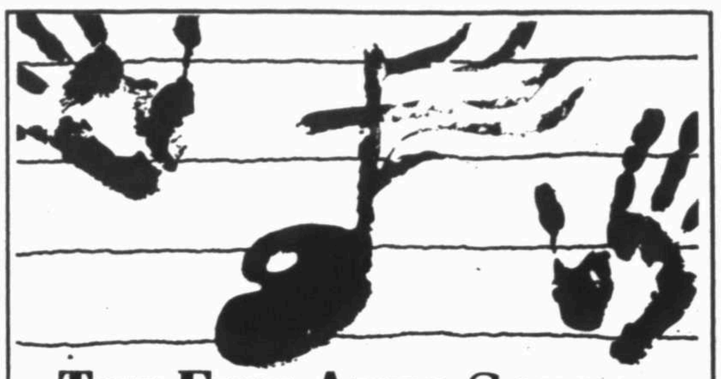

"You will hear reprisals and retaliations continue against these agents. That it was widespread within the FBI and that a decision by this court was seen as little more than window dressing," Silva told U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton as he opened a new hearing in the case.

Bunton resolved the suit in 1988 after agreeing with 311 Hispanic agents who said they were discriminated against in hiring and promotion practices. He ordered the FBI to correct the disparities.

But three agents from the FBI's San Antonio field office have alleged the situation is far from resolved. They asked Bunton to hold a new hearing to consider their request that the FBI be found in violation of the order.

The agents, Gil Mireles, Art Vela and Robert Montoya, testified Tuesday that since the conclusion of the case, they have been wrongly targeted by internal investigations and their careers have come to a standstill.

"I can only conclude that I have not only been discriminated against, but also retaliated against," said Vela.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Financial maneuvers will be high on your agenda in the months just ahead. Independent projects will be extremely successful, helping you shore up your cash reserves. Use your creative and artistic talents to win the attention of prominent people. A summer fling may come to an end around Labor Day. Contact old friends.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: legendary actor Cary Grant, opera singer Evelyn Lear, hockey player Mark Messier, food columnist Johna Blinn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your mate or partner is very supportive now. An unusual and innovative solution to a household problem could leave you with more leisure time. Be considerate. See to it that no one's needs are neglected.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Finance and romance enjoy highly favorable influences. Children's interests and creative projects also do well. Welcome a refreshing change of pace.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The emphasis today is on teamwork. Profits will rise if you bury your differences with a client or partner. A personal relationship is fast approaching a crossroads. Know your own heart.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be prompt in responding to an offer to advance your career aims. Exchanging ideas with your colleagues can be very helpful. Certain social plans may have to be changed. Invest in real estate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Put more energy into your work. Job conditions improve when everyone unites. Be careful not to eat too many sweets. Romance on the rebound has its risks. Avoid investing heavily in a problematic relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Communication with friends and organizations is favored. Money can be made from a publishing venture. Someone may be urging you to make domestic or financial changes. Guard against acting on impulse. Seek experts' advice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A wonderful day for financial negotiations. You reach a private agreement with previously-stubborn associates. Mixing business with pleasure could prove profitable this evening. Your sparkling ideas find uncritical acceptance from an admiring audience.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are cautioned against taking any kinds of risks this morning. Someone who appears honest and capable could yield to temptation. Psychological studies prove illuminating. Trust your instincts if faced with two conflicting reports.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Legal maneuvers and contractual matters can be time-consuming. Your financial judgment may be off; postpone making a decision about distribution of your assets. Spending the evening with a new friend will be invigorating.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Even with the best of intentions, you and a close companion may not be able to agree on social plans. Wait until tomorrow. Smooth over any rough spots in your relations with a colleague.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good news arrives concerning your business or financial interests. Job responsibilities or a health matter demand prompt attention. Seek the advice of experts if interested in blending the old with the new. Pamper your mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Domestic relations may become strained if you take an inflexible stand regarding joint financial interests. Compromise. Tackle a work assignment with zest. You will be compensated for outstanding effort. Plan a special weekend outing.

Opening lead: King of ♡

When you make a descriptive bid, there's a price to pay. If the opponents buy the hand, your action can provide a blueprint of the distribution that enables declarer to get home.

Outside of West's two-heart opening, which systemically showed at least five hearts and four clubs — in our opinion, a convention of dubious merit — there's not much about the auction that thrills us. With two plus defensive tricks, four spades and a singleton, we would have opened the South hand. And the North hand is better suited to a two-no-trump overcall than a takeout double, despite the club shortness.

West led the king of hearts, then shifted to a diamond. With 10 of West's cards known to declarer, it was as if the hand was being played with glass cards.

The second trick was won in the closed hand and a low club was led toward the queen. West grabbed the king and exited safely with a club to the queen and, when West followed to two rounds of trumps, at least 12 of West's cards were known. Declarer didn't give a hoot what the 13th card was. South simply led another spade and confidently finessed the nine.

When that held, declarer could claim the contract, but the game would have been safe even if West held the ten of trumps. On winning the trump trick West would have been endplayed. A club would be into declarer's A 10 tenace, and a heart would set up dummy's queen while there were still diamond entries to the table.

Cybill Shepherd says 'Oh, honey!' about a woman's sex life after 40

NEW YORK — Cybill Shepherd says there IS life after 40. For one thing, there's great, er, sex.

Cybill says there IS life after 40 — especially sex.

"They used to say 35 was a woman's sexual prime," the 44-year-old actress said in the Jan. 20 issue of Entertainment Weekly. "Listen, 40 is when it really starts to get good. Oh, honey!"

In her new CBS sitcom, "Cybill," which is loosely modeled on Shepherd's real life, she plays an actress who is also a single mother with two daughters by different fathers. The twice-divorced Shepherd, co-executive producer of the show, has a 15-year-old daughter by her first husband and 7-year-old twins by her second.

"My age is the best time there is to be a woman," she said. "It used to be middle-aged women just seemed to vanish. Look at me."

The former "Moonlighting" star lives with 46-year-old musician Robert Martin, whom she met when he joined her cabaret singing tour.

LONDON — A man born without eyes pronounced Princess Diana "the prettiest woman I have ever seen" after touching her face Tuesday.

The princess was on a visit to seeAbility, formerly the Royal School for the Blind in Surrey, when Chris Anderson, 22, asked if he could "see" her face with his hands.

"She said she didn't mind," said Anderson, who broke with protocol that forbids touching members of the royal family unless they extend a hand first. "She had very small features and felt very smooth — she has got a nice face."

The Royal School for the Blind was the first charity to which Diana gave her royal patronage, and it remains one of her favorites.

AMBLER, Pa. — Country music legend Chet Atkins has gotten hip to jazz.

"You've got to face the fact that country jocks don't play my records anymore," he said in the April issue of CountryBeat magazine. "So I have to make my records for other stations that will play them, such as jazz and so on."

The 70-year-old guitarist and 10-time Grammy winner said what he plays is not really jazz, though.

"You just state the melody a couple of times, then improvise a little in the middle and play it out," he said. "That's not jazz to me, but that's what the young folks think, so I don't argue."

MULLEN, Neb. — See Ted become a media mogul. See Ted marry Jane. See Ted and Jane discover a secret garden where they raise bison happily ever after.

Ted Turner buys 31,700-acre ranch in Nebraska.

Media mogul Ted Turner bought a 31,700-acre ranch in Nebraska's Sandhills country Friday, said Russ Miller, general manager of Turner Ranches. The price paid for the Spike Box Ranch was not disclosed.

"The Sandhills has the reputation of having some of the best ranch country anywhere," Miller told The North Platte Telegraph. "The area has some of the best water anywhere and, quite frankly, we wanted to purchase land where bison originally were."

Turner, who is married to Jane Fonda, already owns three ranches in Montana, two in New Mexico and other property in the Southeast.

Thank goodness for "Simply Sophisticated" (Summit, $12.95 paper), in which Suzanne Munshower, proprietorof a public relations agency in Burbank, reveals "what every worldly person needs to know," including the fact that "juh neh say QWAH" is the way to pronounce that certain thing you wish you had.

Among Munshower's many nuggets is a list of ideas for creating a sophisticated home. Keep in mind, please:

- That the thread count of your sheets should be 200 or higher per inch.
- That your bathroom accessories should be ceramic.
- That you shouldn't have "self-sticking clothing hooks anywhere they might be seen" by guests.
- That if there is a bookcase visible to visitors in your house, "it does not hold paperbacks."
- That there is at least one needlepoint pillow in your home.

Oh, and never, ever wear anything appliqued.

High court hears attack on affirmative action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special federal help for companies owned by minorities unlawfully steals business from white-owned companies, the Supreme Court was told Tuesday in a key showdown on affirmative action.

But the Clinton administration's top-ranked courtroom lawyer defended the 13-year-old program, saying it's needed to fight "continuing effects of well-documented discrimination."

The potential stakes are enormous. The court's ruling, expected by July, could affect billions of dollars worth of federal contracts. Perhaps at stake also is the future of all government affirmative action, some of it aimed at making up for past societal bias against women.

The court hasn't handled a major affirmative-action dispute since 1990, and its membership today is far more conservative. Serving as a backdrop are the 1994 election results, a rightward turn many commentators attribute to the festering anger of one group of voters — white males.

"That's an impermissible racial stereotype ... that they (racial and ethnic minorities) need the help," Denver lawyer William Perry Pendley argued in behalf of a white businessman challenging the affirmative-action program. He said his client "cannot compete on an equal footing" because of it.

Under one of the many affirmative-action programs required by Congress, the Transportation Department's Central Federal Lands Highway Division gives contractors on federal projects a 1.5 percent bonus if at least 10 percent of their subcontracts go to "disadvantaged business enterprises."

A $10,000 bonus was paid to Mountain Gravel and Construction Co. for a 1989 highway-building project in the San Juan National Forest in Colorado.

Mountain Gravel subcontracted all the project's guardrail work to Gonzales Construction Co. even though another company, Adarand Constructors Inc. of Colorado Springs, submitted a lower bid.

The program has a built-in presumption that minority-owned companies are disadvantaged.

Gonzales Construction is Hispanic-owned and fits the Small Business Act's definition of a disadvantaged business. Adarand, run by Randy Pech, a white man, does not.

Pendley said Pech's company bids on every guardrail contract in Colorado, but in the past has lost 12 such contracts to higher-bidding minority-owned companies.

He said the problems faced by minority-owned firms have little to do with race, but more to do with their size. Such problems are shared by small, white-owned businesses such as Adarand, Pendley argued, adding, "race-neutral solutions are called for."

Solicitor General Drew S. Days III countered by saying the focus of the affirmative-action program is social and economic disadvantage, not race. A minority company can lose its status as a disadvantaged business by reaching "a level of economic take-off," he said.

"There's no showing that Adarand lost this contract because of the rebuttable presumption," Days said.

Oilers tab Rhome

HOUSTON — Former Phoenix Cardinals offensive coordinator and Minnesota Vikings receivers coach Jerry Rhome has been hired to fix the Houston Oilers' broken offense.

Rhome, 52, was hired Tuesday as the Oilers' offensive coordinator, filling a key vacancy on new coach Jeff Fisher's staff. The Oilers also hired Rod Perry as defensive backs coach Tuesday.

Fisher said Rhome "is a players' coach, and he has a great offensive mind."

"He also possesses the ability to get the most out of his players, which is a quality I was looking for," Fisher said.

Rhome, a Dallas native, worked last season as receivers coach in Minnesota. Prior to that, he was offensive coordinator in Phoenix from 1990-93.

Rhome, an eight-year NFL quarterback in the late 1960s and early '70s, played for the Oilers in 1970.

ENMU signs

PORTALES, N.M. — Eastern New Mexico announced the signing of four players Tuesday, including a Houston running back who anchored one of the top teams in the country.

Derrick Johnson rushed for 1,700 yards in 1992 as a senior at Houston Aldine High, which was ranked first in the nation at the time in a USA Today poll. Johnson is a transfer from Trinity Valley Community College in Athens, Texas.

The other signees are from New Mexico. Outside linebacker Pilar Carrasco is a transfer from New Mexico Military Institute and a graduate of Lovington High School, while linebacker Garrett Cunico graduated from Raton High before spending a year at the University of New Mexico.

Offensive lineman Ed Gurrola returns to the Greyhounds after transferring for a year to Angelo (Texas) State University.

Bulldogs reclaim loop lead

■ Midland High blows past Abilene High 102-81 and moves into a tie with Abilene Cooper for the District 4-5A boys lead.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland High, favored to win the District 4-5A basketball race this season, is finally back in first place after an upset loss to Midland Lee during the first game in January.

The Bulldogs rolled to their third consecutive loop victory at the MHS gym Tuesday night with a 102-81 bombing run over the Abilene High Eagles. The result is that Midland High is back in a first- place tie with Abilene Cooper, which sent former league leader Midland Lee into third place by beating the Rebels in Abilene. Cooper and MHS both look down on the league with 4-1 records while Lee is a half-step back at 4-2.

And the contest with the Eagles was never in doubt as the Purple Pack rolled out 31 points in the first quarter and led by 21 points, 48-27, with 4:32 still left in the first half. It was just going through the motions after that.

Still, MHS coach Jack Stephenson entered the game a little concerned when his leading scorer, Jumon Hailey, was involved in a car accident prior to the game.

"I was a little uneasy about this one," Stephenson said. "Jumon was rear-ended in a car wreck right before the game. I really didn't know what to expect."

Hailey never blinked an eye, ripping in a game-high 27 points, 11 in the first period and 17 in the first half.

"Actually, the accident helped me out because I just wanted to get out of Primary Medical emergency room after the wreck," Hailey said. "I didn't get out of there until seven o'clock and I had to hurry to the game. They said I

Lee girls stay tied for 4-5A lead

■ An uninspired Lady Rebel team takes a 49-32 win over Abilene Cooper to stay tied with Midland High for the league lead.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

The Midland Lee girls may have taken care of business with a 49-32 win over Abilene Cooper to stay tied with Midland High for the District 4-5A girls basketball lead, but both the Lady Rebels and the Lady Cougars, who are on opposite sides of the league standings from each other, could not have put on a more uninspired show in front of the sparse crowd Tuesday night at the Lee gym.

The Lady Rebels (15-7, 6-1) held Cooper (6-14, 1-6) to 17 points in the first three quarters and put up enough offense to take, at one time, a 22-point lead before it dwindled to 17 by the end of the contest. But the lackluster effort was enough to stay side-by-side with cross-town rival Midland High, which blew out Abilene High 70-45 on Tuesday.

The win also sets up what will be a bitter fight on Tuesday for control of the league lead. On Friday, Lee is open and Midland High should beat San Angelo Central, which is winless in league play. This would give MHS a half-game lead over Lee when the two collide for their third meeting this season and second district game.

Lee coach Elise Kail said she cautioned her team against a letdown before facing the Lady Cougars, a team the Lady Rebels have beaten twice in a row.

"The crowd wasn't into it. The bench wasn't into it. It was a dead game," Kail said.

Rams finalize St. Louis move

■ St. Louis will get back the NFL franchise it lost eight years ago when the Rams move there for next season.

By R.B. Fallstrom
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS — Eight years after losing the Cardinals to Arizona, St. Louis became the new home of the Rams today.

The Los Angeles Rams, wooed by one of the most lucrative deals in sports, are leaving bankrupt Orange County for a city that lost its first NFL franchise because of lack of fan support.

This time around, the city is offering a new domed stadium and incentives that could give the franchise a $20 million annual profit. The Rams were project-

Pardee near CFL position

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Former Houston Oilers coach Jack Pardee said he is working out the details to become head coach of Birmingham's new Canadian Football League team.

Pardee

Pardee, twice named the NFL's coach of the year, has never coached in the CFL, which uses a larger field, three downs instead of four and a wide-open passing attack.

But Pardee told The Birmingham News in a story published Tuesday that the lack of experience with the CFL would not be an obstacle.

"Coaching's coaching," he said from his Houston home. "I don't see any problems. I like the league and I like the style of play. I've been in Birmingham a lot, too. I really like it. It's a great sports town."

Super Bowl XXIX could be another super bore

■ The 49ers-Chargers title game looks like another in a long line of mismatches.

By Dan Shaugnessy

Nonstop rain. Floods. Mudslides. Fires. Earthquakes. Riots. Twenty-four-hour gridlock. O.J.

Life's not easy out here in California. But now the State of Catastrophe can brag about being the home of both participants in Super Bowl XXIX.

San Francisco-San Diego. It's San vs. San, California North vs. California South, the Niners vs. the Bolts, the boyhood home of Joe DiMaggio vs. the boyhood home of Ted Williams. And wouldn't it be great if Joltin' Joe and Teddy Ballgame lay down one of those corny bets? Joe wages a couple of coffee makers against Ted's 10 loaves of Nissen Bread.

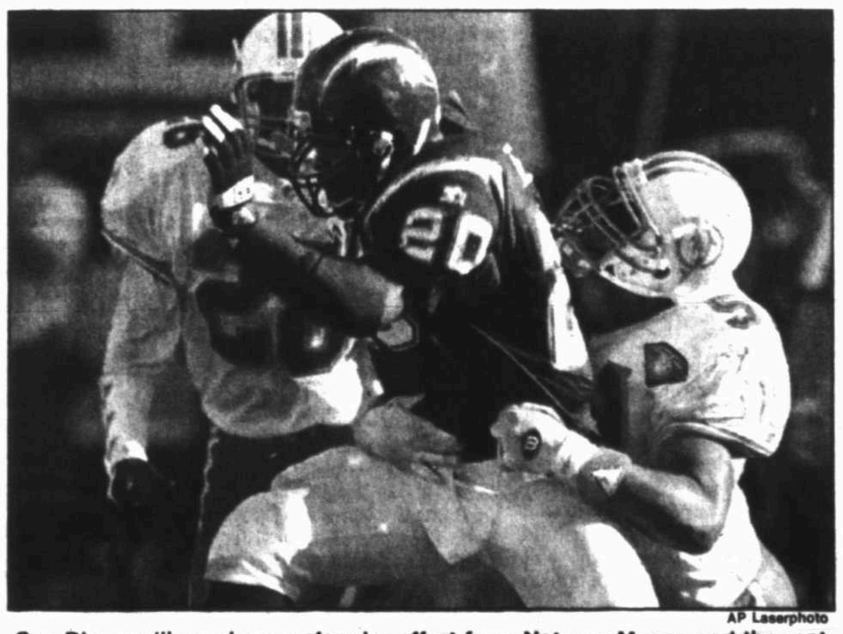

The 49ers are obscene favorites. Why bother to play the game? The wiseguys in Vegas Sunday night stamped XXIX with the most lopsided opening line in history. It started at 17½ and the sports book manager at Bally's said, "The first bet we took was over $10,000 on the 49ers." By Jan. 29, this might be the first Super Bowl where the Roman numeral matches the point spread.

In 1969, the Baltimore Colts opened as 17-point favorites over the New York Jets. Unfazed, Jet quarterback Joe Willie Namath "guaranteed" victory and delivered, beating the Colts, 16-7, in Super Bowl III.

Can Natrone Means and Junior Seau do the same thing for the underdog Chargers? Doubtful. San Diego's going to need Neutron Means, Senior Seau, Lance Alworth and two dozen AFC Pro Bowlers if it wants to challenge the 49ers' wagon.

San Diego will need a spectacular effort from Natrone Means and the rest of its players to upset heavily favored San Francisco in Super Bowl XXIX.

San Francisco's media-hungry club president, Carmen Policy, early Sunday evening delivered the first memorable XXIX quote. Chardonnay glass in hand, Policy said, "The Super Bowl, in my opinion, will be anticlimactic."

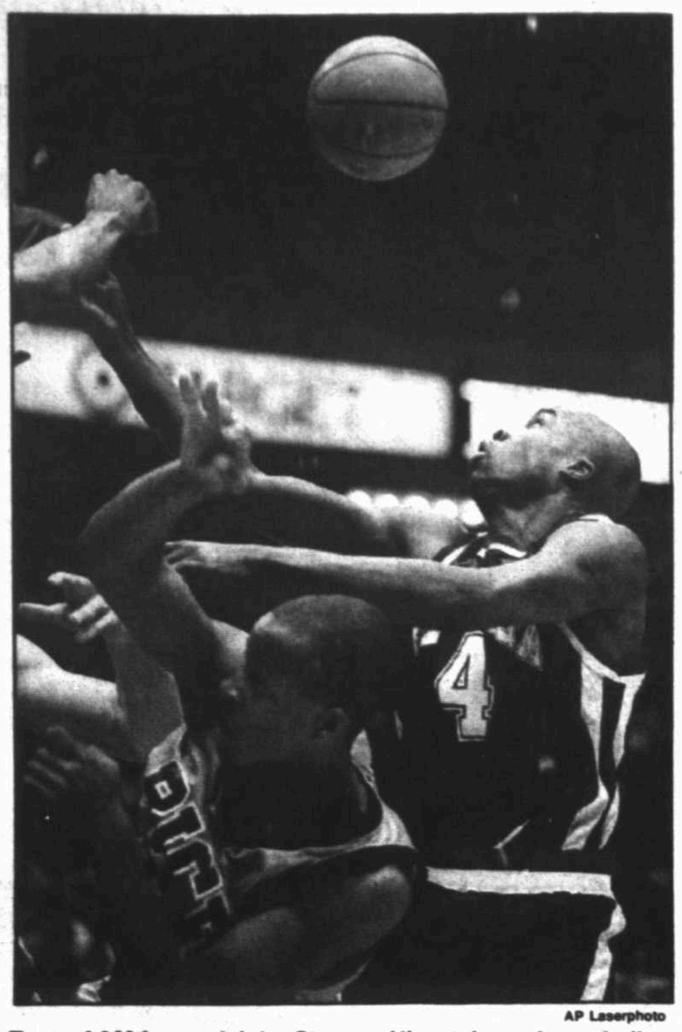

Whoa. That'll play well in San Diego.

The California Raisin Bowl promises to add to the long list of Super Bowl Bores (speaking of the "Super Bowl" yesterday, ESPN's Keith Olbermann said, "That's a brand name, not an adjective"). Approximately 24 of the first 28 Super Bowls have been No-Doz Infomercials, and there's little to suggest that the 1995 Big Name Game will deliver on its promise Jan. 29.

NFC teams have won 10 consecutive Super Bowls, and this 49er edition is considered one of the strongest playoff entries of all time. The 49ers played in Texas A&M forward John Stevens (4) watches a loose ball as a Rice player flies past him Tuesday in Houston.

Rice holds off A&M

HOUSTON (AP) — Adam Peakes scored 20 points, including four free throws over the final 30 seconds, helping the Rice Owls beat Texas A&M 66-62 in a Southwest Conference victory on Tuesday night.

The Aggies (7-10, 1-2) never led in the game but they stayed close and tied it at 47-47 with 5:11 left in the game.

It was close the rest of the game but Peakes hit two free throws with 30.4 seconds to play, giving the Owls a 61-55 lead and he had two more with 1.1 seconds to go.

The Owls (7-6, 3-0) won their third straight game and snapped a three-game losing streak to the Aggies, who lost their seventh straight road game.

Joe Wilbert led the Aggies with 32 points and Tony McGinnis was the only other Aggie in double figures with 11 points.

Peakes, who scored 32 and 26 points in his previous two games, had nine points at the half as the Owls took the lead from the start and never lost it, taking a 31-29 lead at intermission.

Wilbert scored 16 first half points and the Aggies never fell far off the pace but they could do no better than tie the game at 8-8 with 14:10 left in the opening half.

The Owls outscored A&M 9-2 to start the second half for a 40-31 lead, their biggest margin of the game.

Michigan ends No. 20 Illini's winning streak

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Ray Jackson scored 16 points and Michigan applied some tough defense to No. 20 Illinois, beating the Illini 69-59 Tuesday night and ending their five-game winning streak.

Michigan (10-6, 4-1 Big Ten) established its first three-game winning streak of the season and tied Illinois for first place in the conference.

The Wolverines, with consecutive road victories for the first time this season, also denied coach Lou Henson his 400th victory at Illinois.

Illinois (13-4, 4-1) had jumped back into the Top 25 after four straight conference wins.

Jimmy King added 14 points for the Wolverines.

Kiwane Garris and Richard Keene scored 19 points each for Illinois, which has dropped seven straight to Michigan. The Illini shot 34 percent from the field under the defensive pressure, making 17 of 50 shots. They also missed 12 of 30 free throws.

Dugan Fife, averaging just 2.2 points and shooting 21 percent from 3-point rangs, hit three straight 3-pointers as the Wolverine went up nine early in the second half. But Keene kept the Illini close with two long 3-pointers, cutting the Michigan lead to four with 10 minutes left.

No. 6 Syracuse 91, St. John's 87

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Lawrence Moten scored 11 of his 21 points in the final 9:35 as Syracuse held off St. John's to tie Connecticut for the longest winning streak in Division I at 13 games.

St. John's (8-5, 2-4 Big East) trailed by 19 points early in the second half but rallied behind freshman Felipe Lopez, who had 29 of his career-high 35 points in the second half.

The Red Storm, who lost their fourth straight, pulled within 85-82 on a three-point play by Charles Minlend with 32 seconds to play.

Syracuse (13-1, 6-0) made eight consecutive foul shots over the final 39 seconds to stay even with second-ranked Connecticut atop the Big East standings. Syracuse visits Connecticut on Monday night.

John Wallace led Syracuse with 24 points, while Lucious Jackson matched his season-high with 18.

■ Top 25 Roundup

A three-point play by Wallace and a 3-pointer by Jackson gave Syracuse its biggest lead, 51-32, two minutes into the second half.

But Lopez led a St. John's charge by scoring seven straight points in a 10-0 run that cut the lead to nine. After Jackson and Otis Hill hit short baskets for Syracuse, Lopez and Tarik Turner made consecutive 3-pointers to make it 55-48 with 13:50 to play.

No. 22 Georgia Tech 67, No. 15 Wake Forest 65

ATLANTA — Freshman Matt Harpring broke a tie with a layup with 40 seconds remaining and Travis Best added three free throws in the final 20 seconds as Georgia Tech edged Wake Forest.

The Yellow Jackets (10-5, 2-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) had blown an eight-point lead in the final 3:45, with a rebound layup by Travis Banks tying the game at 62 with 56 seconds to play.

The Demon Deacons (9-3, 2-2) cut the lead to 66-65 when Rusty LaRue hit a 3-pointer from the right corner with 14 seconds left, and Wake still had a shot after Best made one of two free throws with 10 seconds to play.

Randolph Childress, who led the Deacons with 22 points, missed a 3-point shot in the closing seconds and Banks failed on a tip-in attempt at the buzzer.

No. 25 Penn 90, La Salle 71

PHILADELPHIA — Scott Kegler led six Pennsylvania players in double figures with 19 points and the Quakers beat La Salle.

Penn (9-2) pulled away in the first half as the Quakers went 8-for-14 from 3-point range, while La Salle (8-5) shot 33 percent from the field, including 3-for-15 from long range.

The Explorers got 36 points from senior Kareem Townes, one point below his season high and three off his career high.

Kegler and Matt Maloney, who finished with 15 points, combined to hit eight of 12 3-point shots. Shawn Trice and Tim Krug added 12 points apiece and Eric Moore had 11.

Jerome Allen, Penn's leading scorer at 16.5 per game, had an off night, hitting only two free throws and turning the ball over six times.

Person leads San Antonio over Celts

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

BOSTON — Chuck Person scored 24 points, Dennis Rodman grabbed 18 rebounds and San Antonio put together a 16-2 fourth-quarter run to defeat the Boston Celtics 101-92 Tuesday night.

David Robinson added 18 points for the Spurs, who snapped a two-game losing streak that followed a run of 13 victories in 14 games. Dino Radja had 22 points and 15 rebounds for the Celtics in his best performance since returning on Jan. 9 from a hand injury that sidelined him for 15 games.

The Spurs led 73-69 after three periods and scored the first nine points of the fourth quarter before Boston's Sherman Douglas hit a 10-footer with 8:24 left. Terry Cummings answered with a jumper and Person sank two free throws before hitting a 3-pointer to make it 89-71 with 7:28 left.

San Antonio led by 19 when Boston ran off six consecutive points to pull to 94-81 with 4:16 left. But the Spurs increased their lead again, thanks to Rodman's jumper and another 3-pointer by Person.

Dee Brown scored 20 points for the Celtics as they wrapped up a five-game homestand 3-2, drawing boos from the crowd that were almost as loud as those that greeted Rodman.

The Spurs opened up a seven-point lead after eight minutes and extended it to as many as 14 before taking a 57-44 lead into the half.

With the Spurs leading by 13 points 90 seconds into the third period, Radja connected on three straight baskets to make it 57-50. It was a nine-point game when the Celtics put together another 6-0 run to make it 63-60 with 5:02 left in the quarter.

David Wesley, who was 1-for-7 on the night, missed a 3-pointer that could have tied it. Dee Brown rebounded, and he missed, too.

Person then got the rebound and threw a baseball pass to Robinson, who dunked to increase San Antonio's lead to 65-60. The Celtics never really threatened again.

Magic 109, Hornets 98

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal scored 35 points and grabbed 15 rebounds to outduel Alonzo Mourning and help Orlando stop Charlotte's eight-game winning streak.

O'Neal overcame a slow start to score 16 in the fourth quarter, six of them in an 8-0 spurt that gave the Magic a 14-point lead with nine minutes left. The Hornets didn't get closer than 10 the rest of the way.

Mourning led Charlotte with 33 points and 12 rebounds. Larry Johnson added 21 points, extending his streak of 20-plus games to 10.

O'Neal struggled early, but finished 14-for-25 from the field and 7-for-12 from the foul line, including 6-of-8 in the last period. Anfernee Hardaway had 23 points for the Magic, while Nick Anderson contributed 18 points and 10 rebounds.

The victory enabled the Magic to remain the NBA's only unbeaten team at home (18-0) and improved the league's best record to 30-7.

Johnson, coming off a stretch of three games in which he averaged 23 points, 9 rebounds and 5.3 assists to earn recognition as NBA player of the week, sat out nearly nine minutes of the opening half after suffering a cut above his left eye.

The Hornets trailed 24-18 when he left the game and fell behind by 16 when Orlando got 3-pointers from Anderson and Brian Shaw during a 12-4 run to start the second period.

Mourning kept Charlotte in the game, outscoring O'Neal 18-12 in the opening half.

SuperSonics 115, Cavaliers 91

TACOMA, Wash. — Detlef Schrempf scored 21 points and Gary Payton added 20 as the Seattle SuperSonics stretched their winning streak to a season-long seven games by defeating the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Five Sonics scored in double figures as they won their 16th straight game at the Tacoma Dome and ended the Cavaliers' seven-game road winning streak that dated back to Dec. 7 when they lost to the Orlando Magic.

Terrell Brandon scored 20 points to lead the Cavs, who were without Mark Price, sitting out the game with a sprained right wrist.

Suns 129, Nuggets 113

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley scored 14 of his 36 points in a 5½-minute stretch in the fourth quarter Tuesday night, helping the Phoenix Suns pull away from a one-point lead and coast to a win.

Dan Majerle had 32 points for Phoenix and Danny Manning added 24.

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf scored 27 points as the Nuggets suffered their second straight loss since Dan Issel retired and interim coach Gene Littles took over.

Rodney Rogers added 19 points for the Nuggets and Reggie Williams had 17 points and 12 assists.

Barkley leads All-Star voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Phoenix guard Dan Majerle joined teammate Charles Barkley on Tuesday among the leaders in NBA All-Star voting.

Barkley leads all Western Conference forwards with 499,244 votes, and Majerle moved into second place among the guards with 297,311.

Golden State's Latrell Sprewell, who has 301,459 votes, leads the guards and Seattle's Shawn Kemp is right behind Barkley at forward with 496,625.

The race for a starting center continues to be tight. Hakeem Olajuwon of Houston has 504,881 votes and leads San Antonio's David Robinson, who has 496,921.

The 45th annual All-Star Game will be played at Phoenix on Sunday, Feb. 12.

The balloting is sponsored by Foot Locker.

CU's Salaam will play in Hula Bowl

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Rashaan Salaam has accepted an invitation to the Hula Bowl on Sunday, becoming the eighth Colorado player to make the trip. The running back is not certain he will play.

"I'll decide once I'm out there," he said. "There are a lot of things to consider, but with seven of my teammates playing in the game, I'm excited to be there."

The seven other CU players in the Hula Bowl are quarterback Kordell Stewart, offensive tackles Tony Berti and Derek West, wide receiver Blake Anderson, defensive tackle Darius Holland and linebackers Ted Johnson and Jon Knutson. Knutson was added as a replacement.

Jones' Steinbrenner-like moves hurt Cowboys

By Mike Lupica
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

■ Sports Analysis

No team ever had won three Super Bowls in a row. Now the Cowboys were one game away from having their shot. Candlestick Park was crazy with excitement and noise, but the Cowboys gathered in a huddle in front of their bench for a last quiet moment. If they could beat the 49ers, they could go to Super Bowl XXIX and separate themselves in the record books from the greatest teams of all time. If the coach had any last words for his players, now was the time, because the 49ers were ready to kick the ball and begin a game that felt as big and important as any pro football game in years.

And there on the edge of the huddle, leaning forward, trying to overhear what was being said, an outsider on the final day of the Cowboys season the way he had been all along, was Barry Switzer.

A guy I know watching on the sideline went up to one of the Cowboys' team doctors.

"Who's doing the talking in there?" the guy said. "Charles Haley?"

The doctor shrugged. "Probably," he said, and walked away.

This was how the day began for the Cowboys. It ended with Jerry Jones, the owner, still defending his decision to get rid of Jimmy Johnson and with Switzer crying about the officials and about the field and explaining why he embarrassed himself with a 15-yard penalty late in the game. Switzer even made sarcastic remarks about his own coaches, who used single coverage on Jerry Rice on the touchdown play at the end of the first half that put the 49ers ahead 31-14.

"To play Jerry Rice one-on-one in that situation, when everyone knows they're going to him, that's really smart," Switzer said. He has been on the outside with his players from the beginning. Now he was distancing himself from his coaches. The more he talked Sunday, the more you wondered exactly what Switzer does with the Cowboys.

The 49ers, on their way back to the Super Bowl, are a wonderful story and a wonderful football show. The Cowboys, even in defeat, are a better story, because of might-have-beens as big as Texas, because they did not just lose a game, but their chance at history. That chance is gone forever, whether the Cowboys win another Super Bowl someday or not.

Jones has been the star owner in sports the past few years, and started to look smarter than the rest of the field. But this season he turned into the football Steinbrenner, and only hurt a team going for three Super Bowls in a row. Jones is exactly like Steinbrenner in this way: He thought he was all his team needed.

Steinbrenner thought he knew more about baseball than all his baseball people combined, even when he was acting like a baseball idiot with the players the Yankees signed and the players they let get away, and all the managers he hired and fired. Jones thought he was bigger in Dallas than Johnson. He and Johnson fought all the way through two Super Bowls about which one of them was the biggest star, at least off the field. Now a dream Cowboys team, the most entertaining team in all of professional sports, is passed by the 49ers.

By late Sunday afternoon at Candlestick, a third trip to the Super Bowl suddenly was a "longshot" according to Jerry Jones. He sounded like a complete phony with that one. Because all along he said the Cowboys would win again, had to win again, no matter who coached the team. And there was not a single weekend during the entire season when the Cowboys looked like the best team in football. Jones lost key players to free agency, and he lost his coach.

Even in defeat, Jones seemed thrilled at the crowd of reporters around him in the Cowboys' locker room. At one point, when asked about his team's 38-28 loss, Jones said, "It was strategically disheartening." He meant, because it came with the Cowboys so close to the third Super Bowl. All the strut was out of him now, like air coming out of a balloon.

Finally Jones did what Steinbrenner always did, and told you about what a sparkling record he has in Dallas.

Johnson is not blameless here, either. Jimmy Johnson is the same as Jones in this way: He wants credit for everything that happened with the Cowboys. If you listen to Johnson, even now, you get the vague idea that he drafted all the good players the Cowboys have, even the ones who already were there when he and Jones showed up at Texas Stadium.

But Jones and Johnson built some football team in Dallas. It was some flashy production. Even with the players the Cowboys lost this season, even with all the players the 49ers picked up, I believe the Cowboys still have more talent on both sides of the ball. There was so much talent, Jones believed he could win the third Super Bowl, make history, without Johnson. He was as fed up with the coach as the coach was with him. He let him go. History began to get away from Jones right there.

"Why would any sane man want to leave the Dallas Cowboys?" Jones said to me one night at last year's Super Bowl, when we both ended up backstage at a television special. "Could you explain that to me?"

"It sounds like Jimmy wants to make a big score someplace else," I said.

"A man would have to be crazy to walk away from a team like this," Jones said.

A few months later, Jones was the one who looked crazy when he fired Johnson and hired Switzer. Jerry and Jimmy now was Jerry and Barry. Jones says Switzer will coach the Cowboys for at least another year: "No question about it. None whatsover." It means nothing. If Jones is serious about giving Switzer another chance, he should go talk to Troy Aikman. Or find out from the rest of the Cowboys how upset Aikman was when Switzer took an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty for bumping an official in the fourth quarter. Whatever Aikman says in public, he hates that Johnson was allowed to walk out the door.

There is no way of knowing how the season would have gone if Johnson still were the coach. It is just more of the might-have-been. But maybe the Cowboys win the regular season. Maybe the championship game is at Texas Stadium. The strategy would have been better after the Cowboys were behind 21-0 Sunday, that is for sure. The Cowboys needed a coach as they went for history this season, not a caretaker.

Buerlein, Doleman in expansion pool

Associated Press

The Carolina Panthers and Jacksonville Jaguars will have some high-profile, high-priced veterans such as Steve Buerlein, William "Refrigerator" Perry, Chris Doleman and Gary Clark available in the NFL expansion draft.

Except for AFC champion San Diego and NFC champion San Francisco, teams were required to turn over six names each for the expansion pool by Tuesday noon EST. The Chargers and 49ers will add their players after the Super Bowl.

Although the names will not be released until Thursday, a number of them became known.

Quarterback Buerlein and wide receiver Clark, who both signed as free agents, were unprotected by Arizona. Buerlein started the season as the Cardinals quarterback and passed for 1,545 yards and five touchdowns. Clark caught 50 passes for 771 yards. Ricky Proel, another Arizona receiver, was also on the list after catching 51 passes for 651 yards.

Perry, a 10-year veteran, won fame with the Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears in the 1985 season. He was a marketing phenomenon, celebrated by the advertising community and centerpiece of the Bears' Super Bowl video. Released by Chicago in 1993, he signed with the Eagles and spent the last 1½ seasons with Philadelphia.

The Eagles also placed center John Hudson, defensive back Al Jackson, fullback Brian O'Neal, defensive back Otis Smith and tackle Broderick Thompson on the expansion list.

Doleman, a six-time Pro Bowl choice, came to Atlanta from Minnesota in a trade this season. He was the NFC Defensive Player of the Year in 1992 when he had 14½ sacks. The Falcons also listed defensive lineman Pierce Holt, signed as a free agent from San Francisco before the 1993 season.

Doleman's salary is $2.7 million and Holt earnes $2.32 million and those salaries could diminish the chances they'll be chosen. The Falcons also offered offensive guard David Richards, offensive tackle Irv Eatman, slot receiver David Mims and linebacker Darryl Ford.

Denver also offered some familiar names, including running back Rod Bernstine, linebacker Mike Croel, cornerback Ray Crockett and offensive lineman Brian Habib.

The complete list of players will be released Thursday.

Teams may not offer more than one player with more than 10 years of experience, nor more than one player who was placed on the club's injured-reserve list after the start of the 1994 season.

RAMS: League must approve move

ed to lose $6 million playing in Anaheim this past season.

"Today is a great day for this community," St. Louis mayor Freeman Bosley Jr. said at the long-awaited news conference. "For the last nine months we have been working around the clock trying to bring NFL football to St. Louis."

If the league approves, pro football will return for the first time since 1987, when the Cardinals left for Arizona.

"The St. Louis Rams — how sweet it is," Bosley said. "Today is the day that the dream of a team of our own is now a reality."

Bosley, former Sen. Thomas Eagleton, who headed the FANS Inc. effort to lure the Rams, U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt, and other officials then signed an oversized "relocation agreement."

"I have waited and wanted this day to happen for a long time," Gephardt said. "Let me tell you, we proved together the naysayers wrong. I am confident professional football is going to be a huge success in this town."

When Rams owner Georgia Frontiere, who grew up in St. Louis, took the microphone, she was met with cheers and applause.

"I'm overwhelmed," she said. "I don't think I've been this happy since the last game we won."

Frontiere said she planned to meet with each player and their families and said she knew they'd be anxious to move.

The deal also calls for Missouri businessman Stan Kroenke to purchase part of the team.

The city assembled the ultimate care package to lure the Rams, who were 4-12 last season. It includes a potential of $20 million in annual profits. The Rams will get a $260 million domed stadium to play in, a $15 million practice facility to prepare in and a cushy $250,000 annual lease that won't cut into profits. The city is retiring the Rams' $30 million debt to Anaheim, Calif., and paying $15 million in assorted relocation fees.

Rams president John Shaw told the Los Angeles Times that the agreement "is as good an economic deal as there is in football today."

So what does the city get in return?

"We all think St. Louis is better off with football for all of the intangibles: emotional, prestige, pride," said Frank Viverito of the city's Convention and Visitors Commission. "All of those are going to make this a winner."

Not everybody is happy about the deal.

"Look at the loot they're going to get," said Tom Sullivan, who heads the Campaign For Better Government in St. Louis. "The Rams are getting all the revenue, and taxpayers are picking up all of the cost."

Sullivan said he's been told by Jerry Clinton, a beer distributor who headed the city's expansion efforts, that the lease alone is worth $30 million a year over 30 years.

"It's apparently the most lucrative lease in the history of sports," Sullivan said.

Not only that, steep ticket prices could exclude some fans. Before purchasing season tickets, permanent seat licenses that could run as high as $4,500 must be bought.

FANS Inc. hopes to raise $60-$70 million in the PSL campaign. The Rams have asked St. Louis to sell at least 40,000 PSLs before the league's annual spring meetings, scheduled for March 12-17 in Phoenix. A move likely would be approved then.

SUPER: San Fran in rout Dec. 11

(From 1C)

San Diego Dec. 11 and routed the Bolts, 38-15. Super Bowl XXIX promises to make the 1994 World Cup final look entertaining.

This won't be the first time that two teams from the same state have hooked up on the NFL's national holiday. In 1991, the New York Giants defeated the Buffalo Bills when Scott Norwood's last-second field goal soared wide right. Baseball's World Series has featured numerous intrastate and crosstown matchups (A's-Dodgers, A's-Giants, Yankees-Dodgers, Yankees-Giants, Royals-Cardinals, etc).

San Francisco-San Diego will be played in Miami. It's a shame all these Californians have to uproot and fly all that way for the inevitable slaughter. Why not meet at a neutral California site — Los Angeles, perhaps? They could play the game at the Rose Bowl and American newspapers could save a ton of dough by having reporters cover the big game and the O.J. trial simultaneously.

In the next two weeks, sports fans will be introduced to the San Diego Chargers. By Jan. 29, Stan Humphries will be more famous than Humphrey Bogart and Football America will be well versed in the Chargers' 51-10 thumping of the Boston Patriots in the 1963 AFL championship game. John Hadl-to-Humphries: The Next Generation.

Niners-Chargers. Yeeech. It's almost enough to make one long for the good old days when we could at least make fun of the Buffalo Bills for a couple of weeks.

That's why this is Super Bowl XXIX. Two weeks from today in Miami, there will be a six-hour television special pitting the winner of today's Dallas-San Francisco match vs. the Pittsburgh-San Diego winner. Corporate America, Up With People and Leroy Neiman no doubt will be there. But they won't be able to say they saw the Super Bowl. Not unless they come to San Francisco today.

PARDEE: Coach fired after 0-9 start

(From 1C)

Pardee said he was working on a deal with team owner Art Williams, who last week refused comment on whether Pardee was his choice as coach.

"There are a lot of formalities to be worked out, so I can't confirm anything just yet," said Pardee, 58.

John Jenkins, like Pardee a former head coach at the University of Houston, told a Birmingham television station, WBRC, that he would be offensive coordinator under Pardee.

Williams was on vacation and could not be reached for comment Tuesday. His publicist, Mark DeMoss, would neither confirm nor deny that Pardee was the choice for head coach.

Williams said last week he was putting up $10 million to buy an expansion CFL franchise in Birmingham. He vowed to hire a coach that would "blow your socks off," but said he would not name him until the CFL formally votes on the team at a Jan. 27 meeting in Edmonton, Alberta.

Pardee was coach of the Oilers from 1990 until midway through this season, when he was fired after an 0-9 start and was replaced by Jeff Fisher. The Oilers made the playoffs in each of Pardee's first four seasons.

Before that, Pardee coached the University of Houston, and the Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League.

Lady Dawgs keep grip on first place

ABILENE — Midland High's Lady Dawgs remained in a first place tie with Midland Lee here Tuesday night with a 70-45 runaway win over Abilene High.

The MHS girls are now 19-3 on the season and 6-1 in loop play, the same as Lee. The Abilene High girls fall to 16-7 on the season and 4-3 in district play. It was the second time this season that the MHS girls have beaten AHS.

Amy Alcala scored a game-high 23 points, all from the field with 11 field goals. Ogonna Merritt and Jamie Rand each added 10 points to the cause.

The MHS girls rolled to a 21-9 first quarter lead and never looked back. Tasha Newman, the Lady Eagles' leading scorer this season, hit for 17 points, but she was the only AHS player in double figures.

The MHS girls now host San Angelo Friday before meeting up with Lee in what looks like a battle for the district lead next Tuesday.

Myers takes gymnastics1st

AUSTIN — Kristin Myers garnered three first places and a second place to take the all-around title in the Level Nine, 14-15 age group state qualifying meet here Saturday. Myers won gold on the bars (9.15), the balance beam (8.90) and floor exercise (9.0) and got second on the vault (8.85) to total 35.9 all-around points.

Myers, along with Hayley Whiteside and Lindsey Dickerson, all live in Midland but competed in the Level 9 meet as members of the Big Spring Sidewinders of the Big Spring YMCA.

Whiteside finished high in several events in the 9-11 age group. She was second in the vault (8.90), fourth in beam (8.90) and fifth in floor exercise (8.75) to total 34.50 points and a third-place all-around finish. Dickerson, competing in the 12-13 age group, finished 12th in the uneven, parallel bars with a score of 8.6. She tallied a 7.4 in vault, an 8.2 on the beam and 8.2 on floor for a total of 32.4 in the all-around category.

Mahoney aces

B.J. Mahoney recorded a hole-in-one at Midland Country Club Tuesday, acing the No. 3, 137-yard hole with a four-iron. It was his first hole-in-one. He was playing with Goss Yager and Byron Greaves.

Lee Sophs win

Midland Lee's sophomore girls defeated Odessa Permian 57-40 in a game played Saturday at the Lee gym. LaSaundra Christian had 15 points and Helen Yee had 13 while Marcie Villa added 10.

Sampras avoids pitfalls, breezes into third round

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — In a zone of his own, Pete Sampras avoided the pitfalls that snared other big names and breezed into the third round Wednesday at the Australian Open.

■ Australian Open

As the sun broke through early afternoon clouds and began broiling the courts, Sampras raced through a 6-2, 6-0, 6-1 victory over young Slovakian qualifier Jan Kroslak in 76 minutes.

"When the sun comes out, it's a lot quicker," said of the rubberized courts. "The wind was swirling around on Court 1. On center court it's in one direction and you have to adapt. And I adapted well.

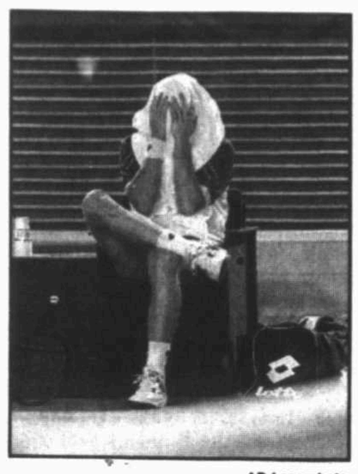

"Upsets happen, especially in the first week. You really need to get through, not take anything for granted, play like it's your last match."

It was the day after Boris Becker fell victim once more to the McEnroe conspiracy at the Australian Open, a long-distance and nearly annual intrigue designed to torment the former champion.

This time it was Patrick McEnroe who knocked out the No. 3 Becker in the first round Tuesday night, slicing, dicing and icing him 6-3, 6-4, 7-6 (7-4) for his biggest win over a seeded player in a Grand Slam event.

That upset, which followed one of women's No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini, made an impression on other highly seeded players.

No. 7 Michael Stich got right down to business against Alex O'Brien, beating him 6-0, 6-3, 6-4. Women's No. 3 Jana Novotna beat Patricia Hy-Boulias 6-2, 3-6, 6-0, and No. 7 Kimiko Date beat Elena Likhovtseva 6-2, 6-2.

Boris Becker hangs his head after Patrick McEnroe beat him in the Australian Open Tuesday.

Three years ago, John McEnroe did the job against Becker, beating him in the third round in Australia, also in straight sets. The year before that, Patrick gave Becker fits, taking the first set and leading in the second before losing in four sets in the semifinals.

The McEnroe brothers spoke last week after Patrick won the first singles title of his career in Sydney. Asked what advice he got from his big brother, Patrick joked, "He said, 'Serve wide, come in, hit a drop volley winner.'"

Actually, that would have been John's style. Patrick's way of playing is to stay back, curl backhands at impossible angles, keep the ball alive and let his opponent make mistakes, which is what happened, with Becker spraying 57 unforced errors to Patrick's 28.

"If he played as well as he could, obviously he was going to beat me," said Patrick, who is ranked No. 65. "But I knew if he was a little bit off, the way I've been playing I had a chance."

On a day when Andre Agassi made his successful debut at the Australian Open with a straight sets victory over Grant Stafford, two big upsets at night stole the show. Sabatini, coming off consecutive wins in the New South Wales Open and last year's Virginia Slims Championship, lost 6-4, 6-4 to American Marianne Werdel Witmeyer.

Sabatini hurt her back during the match and lay face down on courtside while a trainer massaged her for several minutes during an injury timeout midway through the second set.

"I started to feel it at the beginning of the second set," Sabatini said. "It was really painful. After I was treated, it was still there. I don't know what happened."

Becker didn't know what happened to him, and he was more than a little bit off all night. He was sometimes 10 feet off the court, trying to blast shots from the baseline instead of taking charge at the net. He got suckered into playing McEnroe's game and looked bewildered by it.

"I seemed to have no timing, no rhythm, especially on my forehand," Becker said. "And I played against an opponent who won a tournament last week, who was still flying high on his emotions with his first-ever win. He played a great match. He didn't miss many balls. The opportunities he got, he took.

"I didn't have a good feeling for the ball, so I really wasn't sure when I was hitting the ball where it was going."

Wanted: a few good baseball playing men

■ Baseball Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The ads are showing up in the sports section, although maybe they should be in the "Help Wanted" column.

"Could you make it in the Major Leagues?" read the bold-typed notices appearing in several Southern newspapers this week.

They're being placed by the Toronto Blue Jays, who, like every other team in the majors, are scrambling to find players to replace striking major leaguers.

The Blue Jays are holding a tryout camp for potential replacements this Saturday at their spring training home in Dunedin, Fla. Toronto is trying to attract as many players as possible to the workout, and trying different ways to do it.

The team is putting the ads in newspapers in eight cities, including Atlanta and Knoxville, Tenn. On Monday, the advertisement appeared on page three of the sports sections of The News & Observer in Raleigh, N.C., and The Birmingham News in Alabama.

The Blue Jays are looking "to discover new baseball talent," said the ads, both two columns wide and five inches deep. According to the News & Observer's rates, that space would cost about $765.

Potential players must be between 19 and 25 years old and bring proof of age, along with their spikes, gloves and uniforms, it said. Players cannot be under contract to another professional team and cannot be in high school or junior college, or be from a four-year college and have eligibility remaining.

The advertisement lists the phone number of the team's scouting department in Dunedin and is signed "The Toronto Blue Jays."

"We've gotten quite a few phone calls already," Blue Jays spokesman Howard Starkman said Monday night.

He said that although most of the one-time ads were being placed in newspapers around Florida and Georgia, some would run for a day in North Carolina.

"There are a lot of former players in that area, and we want to let as many of them know about this as possible," he said.

The Blue Jays had scheduled a pair of tryouts for California last weekend, but they were postponed because of heavy rains. The Blue Jays advertised those camps in about 10 newspapers in California.

Blue Jays scouting director Bob Engle will run Saturday's camp in Dunedin at 9 a.m. EST.

Toronto plans to start spring training Feb. 18. But under provincial law, the Blue Jays cannot play games in Ontario using replacement players, and the team has not said what it plans to do about that problem.

The California Angels also have announced tryouts camps for this weekend in California.

MHS: Hailey gets 27

strained my back a little, but nothing was broken or fractured.

But Hailey had plenty of help as four of his teammates scored in double figures and 11 Bulldogs in all scored points in an empty-the-bench happy day outing.

Jonathan Hopkins, a transfer from Ponca City, Okla., came off the bench with his best night of the year, scoring 12 points and hauling down a game-high nine rebounds.

"I was just waiting for something like this to happen," Hopkins said. "It's been a tough adjustment for me. In Ponca City, we played a much slower tempo game than we do here, so it has been difficult. But I feel like I have come into my own here now. I just wanted to prove to Midland that I could play."

In addition, Cornelius Mitchell hit 15 points, John Marc Sanon contributed with 13 and Lavius Taylor hit 10, eight coming in the first quarter.

The Eagles also put four players in double figures, but never really threatened to get back in the game after the early MHS lead. Jeff Williams led AHS with 15 points while Charles Hankins came off the bench with 14. Starters Jarvin Hall and Stacy Beaty had 15 and 11 points respectively.

Midland High climbs to a stout 18-4 for the season. Abilene High falls to 7-15, but is now 2-3 in the league race, the first time for the Eagles to be under .500 since the start of loop play.

Stephenson was pleased with the ending result, but he wasn't overly glowing after the win.

"This team seems to play really well when the game is in doubt, but I think we get visions of granduer when we have a lead. Everyone is thinking about how many points they can score," Stephenson said. "Still, since we lost to Lee, we have scored 90 points against Permian, 118 against Lamesa, 98 against Odessa High and 102 tonight. When you are putting up those kind of numbers, you are doing some things good."

The Bulldogs end the first half of 4-5A play Friday in San Angelo, a loser to Odessa Permian Tuesday. Next Tuesday it's that Lee-MHS thing again at Chap Center and the Bulldogs sent a message with this win.

In junior varsity action, Midland High defeated AHS 84-60. Sammy Jurado had 16 points while Russell Gardner had 15. Both Chad Villareal and Justin Reeves had 12 points.

LEE: Lady Rebels clamp down on Sargent

(From 1C)

"We played to the level of our competition," Kail said. "I told them before the game, after the game and at halftime that if we're going to stay where we are, we can't do that in a game."

Part of the problem was the fact that Lee jumped out to an 11-2 lead with less than three minutes to play in the first quarter and a stubborn Lady Rebel defense refused to let Cooper's leading scorer Kati Sargent touch the ball. Lee held Sargent to two points in the first half before she broke out in the fourth to bring her total to nine. It was a good thing, too, because Sargent did not miss a bucket until she jacked up two three-point goals in a fourth-quarter rally attempt.

Sargent, a 6-foot-1 post, rattled Lee for 28 points in the Lady Rebels' first win over Cooper and also stung Midland for 28. Lee sophomore Jamie Rhoads kept Sargent from getting the ball down near the basket in the Lady Rebels' man-to-man defense.

Rhoads led the Lady Rebels in scoring with 12 points while 6-3 post Krissy Woodard hit her first three shots before finishing with 10 points on five-of-eight shooting. Woodard hit three buckets in the Lady Rebels' initial 11-2 run while Michelle Benson added three points and Rhoads hit two free throws.

Woodard, however, was shut down in the second half, playing in the low post position, as the Lady Cougars experimented with a triple-team on the three-year senior and held her to just two-of-two shooting.

"I told Coach (Gena) Lancaster at halftime that we were going to see a whole bunch of different defenses in the second half and we did. They triple-teamed Krissy. Cooper did a nice job of shutting her down in the second half," Kail said.

In junior varsity action, Lee held a slim 27-25 lead going into the fourth quarter before outscoring Cooper 22-14 to pull out a 49-39 victory. Lee, which improved to 9-13 overall and 3-4 in league play, was led by Angie Seibold's 22 points. Kendra Albus added 11.

Colorado State coach to stay with Rams

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Colorado State football coach Sonny Lubick on Tuesday said he is remaining at the school and has withdrawn his name from consideration for the same job at the University of Miami.

Lubick, 57, was not offered the position at Miami, but was widely considered to be the front runner to replace Dennis Erickson, who left Miami for the Seattle Seahawks.

"After thinking about it for 24 hours or a little more, I really felt Colorado State was the place I wanted to be," Lubick said during a news conference. "Certainly Miami has its attractive lure with its great university and its football tradition. But CSU is a place that's treated me tremendously over the last two years.

"I fit in here — that's the basic 'why,' " he added.

Lubick was defensive coordinator for four seasons under Erickson at Miami before taking the CSU head coaching job in 1993. Last season, he led the Rams to their first-ever Western Athletic Conference title, finishing 10-2 and No. 16 in the final Associated Press poll.

"I thought about the atmosphere here, the support of the fans and the student body and about why I came here," Lubick said. "There's something to be said about being happy. Of course, I could be happy with a couple extra hundred thousand dollars, too. Going back there would have been a financial decision."

Lubick, who has three years remaining on his current contract at CSU, is expected to sign a four-year extension in the next few days.

In introducing Lubick at the news conference, athletic director Tom Jurich referred to him as "our coach for not only the next seven years, but hopefully until he decides to retire."

Lubick said rumored impending NCAA sanctions against Miami did not weigh in his decision.

"Every year I was there, a major investigation was going on and nothing ever happened," he said. "That had no bearing on my decision."

He did say, however, that he wanted Miami to expedite its hiring timetable so as not to harm CSU's recruiting effort.

"I don't think our recruiting has been affected, either positively or negatively," Lubick said. "But sooner or later it would. I know some players left here last weekend wondering what was going on."

Lubick noted that with two weeks remaining in the recruiting period, the Rams have received 12 verbal commitments and have only five more scholarships to offer.

Lubick, who met with Miami athletic director Paul Dee and three other officials for an interview Sunday night, said the job was both attractive and challenging, but no more challenging than the task that remains at CSU.

"Winning the WAC was equal to those national championships at Miami," he said. "And in some ways, was more satisfying because of what we had to overcome."

UIL disciplines coaches

AUSTIN — The University Interscholastic League on Tuesday disciplined three coaches, including one for using offensive language during a game.

The UIL State Executive Committee gave T.J. Mills, Sealy High athletic director and head football coach, a public reprimand and two years' probation for violating the league's athletic code.

Mills admitted during testimony that he used vulgar language during a Sept. 30 game with Rice Consolidated.

Mike Inco, San Antonio Kennedy High assistant basketball coach, received a public reprimand and one year's probation for his ejection from two contests.

The UIL said in a prepared statement that Inco was ejected from a boys' varsity basketball game on Dec. 6 for protesting one of the players' foul status.

Inco was also ejected after receiving two direct technical fouls during a Dec. 8 game with Boerne High.

Besides the penalty assessed by the committee, Inco was suspended for three consecutive games by administrators from Kennedy and the Edgewood Independent School District.

Prices surge

NEW YORK — Energy prices continued their bounce-back for a second day Tuesday following forecasts of a wintry turn in the temperatures.

February natural gas prices settled at $1.434 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 4.4 cents.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in February settled at $18.32 per barrel, up 44 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 50 cents to $16.75 a barrel.

After the close of trading, the American Petroleum Institute issued a mixed weekly report on energy stocks.

Stocks of crude oil in the week ending last Friday were at 327.9 million barrels, down 1.37 million barrels and within market expectations.

Stocks of gasoline were 211.46 million barrels, up 371,000 barrels, also within expectations. But distillates including heating oil were down 2.09 million barrels to 141.2 million barrels, way below expectations.

The nation's refineries ran at 92.8 percent of capacity, down 3.1 percent from a week earlier and also below expectations.

Logging group

The Permian Basin Well Logging Society will meet Thursday at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Cost is $11 for members, $13 for non-members. Reservations can be made by calling 694-9561.

Dollar advances

NEW YORK — The dollar posted modest gains Tuesday against other major currencies in domestic dealings as new government reports led to renewed speculation about interest rate hikes.

The dollar was trading at 1.5330 German marks late in the day in New York, up from 1.5318 marks late Monday.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 99.13 Japanese yen, up from 98.52 yen late Monday.

Markets mixed

NEW YORK — Stocks finished mixed on Tuesday after strong economic data renewed fears of higher interest rates and derailed a two-day rally.

Still, investors apparently remained cautiously optimistic. Of the major market indicators, only the Dow Jones industrial average ended with a negative finish, falling 1.68 points to 3,930.66.

U.S. industrial production soars

■ Analysts fear inflation is bubbling up and predict higher interest rates on way.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's industries were churning out goods more rapidly at the close of a strong 1994 than they had in two years.

With factories operating closer to capacity than at any time in 15 years, analysts said they fear inflation is bubbling up and predicted even higher interest rates are on the way.

"These figures are very strong and tell me the economy is operating in an overheated stage," said economist Eugene Sherman of the Wall Street firm M.A. Schapiro & Co. "Inflationary pressures are clearly intensifying."

Stocks and bonds initially fell after the report Tuesday. But the stock market rallied to end mostly higher, although the Dow Jones industrial average closed down nearly 2 points.

Production at the nation's factories, mines and utilities rose 1 percent in December, the largest increase since an identical gain in November 1992, the Federal Reserve said. Output was 5.8 percent higher in December than a year earlier.

And the growth would have been even more robust were it not for a decline in production at utilities due to unusually mild weather in the fall and start of winter.

Outside of lower electricity output, the strength was broadly based. Industry was operating at 85.4 percent of capacity in December, the highest rate since October 1979, when it was 85.8 percent.

The current rate means bottlenecks are likely and prices will be rising, analysts said. Consumers already are paying more for cars and rubber tires, they noted.

The latest data contrasted sharply with a government report last week that retail sales in December declined for the first time in eight months.

Analysts said the sales dip may signal the beginning of a slowdown in Americans' spending spree that has powered the four-year economic expansion.

But there were no signs of any letup in the production figures, which were stronger than economists expected.

"This shows you the economy is still booming but probably is poised for a slowdown," said Sung Won Sohn of Norwest Corp., a Minneapolis bank. "We could see a build-up of unwanted inventories."

Analysts said the Federal Reserve is likely to boost interest rates again without waiting to see whether the economy really is slowing.

The Fed raised interest rates six times last year, and the seventh increase could come when the central bank's key policymaking Federal Open Market Committee meets Jan. 31 and Feb. 1.

"The Fed will be increasingly concerned about the high levels of capacity utilization in the manufacturing sector and the low rate of unemployment in the labor market," said Marilyn Schaja of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. in New York City.

The Federal Reserve also said that production rose 0.7 percent in November, revised upward from a previous 0.5 percent estimate.

Industrial production grew at an annual rate of 5.4 percent in the fourth quarter, compared to 4.9 percent the previous three months.

Factory output, the most closely watched component of the report, gained 1 percent in December. That matched the November advance and for all of 1994 was up 6.7 percent.

Mining production increased 1.2 percent last month after falling 0.5 percent in November. For the year, mining output was up 1.5 percent.

Utility production declined 0.8 percent in December after falling 1.3 percent a month earlier. For the year, utilities were down 0.6 percent.

Factory output was particularly strong for big-ticket durable goods. That category climbed 1.3 percent in December on top of a 1 percent rise in November, and long-lasting goods were up 8.2 percent over 1993.

The overall operating rate of 85.4 percent was 0.7 percent higher than November and was 2.8 percent above the close of 1993.

P&P, Tide West Oil agree to end merger proposal

Staff Report

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. announced Tuesday that it and Tide West Oil Co. have agreed to terminate their merger agreement and will not proceed with the proposed merger.

The agreement had been announced Sept. 20, 1994.

Under the terms of the share exchange provision of the merger agreement, Parker & Parsley would have been required to issue approximately 7.3 million additional common shares based on Monday's closing price.

Scott D. Sheffield, chairman and president of Parker & Parsley, stated, "Unfortunately the recent decline in natural-gas prices has resulted in materially depressed stock prices for most of all of the public independent exploration and production companies, including Parker & Parsley. Consequently, it is not in the best interest of the company to issue the greatly increased number of common shares that would have been required given these very depressed current prices."

Southwest becomes 1st airline to sign for Sabre's low-level service

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines Co. said Tuesday it is the first airline to sign up for a new, stripped-down level of computer reservation service from Sabre that lets travel agents and customers book flights automatically.

Before, agents and others with online access to American Airlines Inc.'s Sabre computer reservation system had to call Southwest on the telephone to make a reservation.

The service is more expensive, but Southwest said it believes its costs will actually fall because of the savings from more automated processing.

"We think that this is a step that will serve our travel agent partners very well, as well as the traveling public," general counsel Jim Parker said.

Southwest will switch to Basic Booking Request from Sabre Travel Information Network on May 1. Southwest also will endorse Sabre and take part in marketing the service to travel agencies.

The new service is aimed at the proliferation of no-frills carriers and replaces two other low levels of Sabre service, meaning 48 small airlines will have to change.

It eliminates some functions that bare-bones carriers like Southwest don't need, such as seat selection, special meal requests and international connections. Full Sabre service costs $2.43 per ticket.

For Southwest and some 29 other carriers that use Sabre's Call Direct service, the cost of booking each ticket will rise from $1.25 to $1.60. For the 18 carriers using the On Request level of service, the price will drop from $1.98 to $1.60, Sabre spokesman Tim Kincaid said. Together, the 48 carriers on the two eliminated service levels make up less than one-half of 1 percent of all Sabre bookings.

Sabre's move is the latest twist in the evolution of how airlines handle their reservations and ticketing in an era of increasing automation.

Among the innovations, Southwest soon will offer its travelers the option of flying without a paper ticket, while United Airlines is testing a "ticketless" system that could go systemwide this summer. Also, Sabre is working on offering a ticketless product.

For Southwest, the need to change became urgent in May 1994, when three of the four major U.S. computerized reservation systems used by travel agents began bumping Southwest because it refused to pay booking fees.

Those systems are System One, owned by Houston-based Continental Airlines, and Apollo, owned primarily by United and USAir. Worldspan, another reservation system, also changed its listing method so it was less convenient for travel agents to see information about Southwest flights and fares.

Southwest for a decade has paid to be listed by Sabre, the largest computerized reservation system.

When the other systems stopped letting travel agents print out tickets for Southwest flights, some had to resort to writing tickets by hand.

New Maytag appliance center is family affair

By Mella McEwen

Just opened in the Cornerstone shopping center, Midland Drive and Loop 250, is FAMILY MAYTAG.

McEwen

Family Maytag specializes in the sale of new Maytag appliances from dishwashers to refrigerators to washers and dryers.

In addition, the store offers service and has parts available for all makes of home appliances and plans are to add a line of reconditioned appliances — all brands — for sale as the business gets established.

Owners are Sharon and Clayton Hale and manager is Larry Rawlings, who is certified to perform warranty work on appliances.

A grand opening celebration featuring Gordon Jump, the "Lonely Repairman" of television commercial fame, is set for Jan. 31.

New on the Midland business scene is SOUTH OF THE BORDER IMPORTS, located at 3328 W. Illinois Ave.

Owner Robert Withrow said his merchandise comes primarily from Mexico, with items also coming — mostly through Mexico — from Central and South American countries.

The inventory includes Southwest decor, Indian busts, vases, decorative pedestals, ceramic animals, rugs, blankets, baskets and clothing, terra-cotta pottery and fireplaces, fountains and bird baths and furniture and some jewelry items.

Withrow said that because he deals directly with artists and craftsmen, he can special order a specific design for a customer. Another benefit of the direct dealing is it lets him be very competitive on prices, he said.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Midlander Suzanne Smith has opened NATURE'S AVENUE in the Plaza Oaks shopping center next to Venezia restaurant.

Managed by Shirlee Locker, Nature's Avenue offers health food ranging from vitamins and supplements to organically-grown fruits and vegetables as well as frozen entrees, chips, pastas and sauces and bulk grains, rices, beans, wheat flour and a fully-stocked herb bar. There is also a line of beauty products and sports medicine products. Items can be special-ordered.

Delivery is available and the store has a drive-up window.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

On the move is CHAPARRAL REALTORS, which will relocate Friday from its location at 911 N. Midkiff Road to 731 W. Wadley Ave., Suite N-100.

The move is to larger quarters that will more comfortably accommodate Chaparral's 25 Realtors.

LUCA'S PIZZA in Midland Park Mall is celebrating 15 years in business in Midland with the completion of a remodeling job on its store.

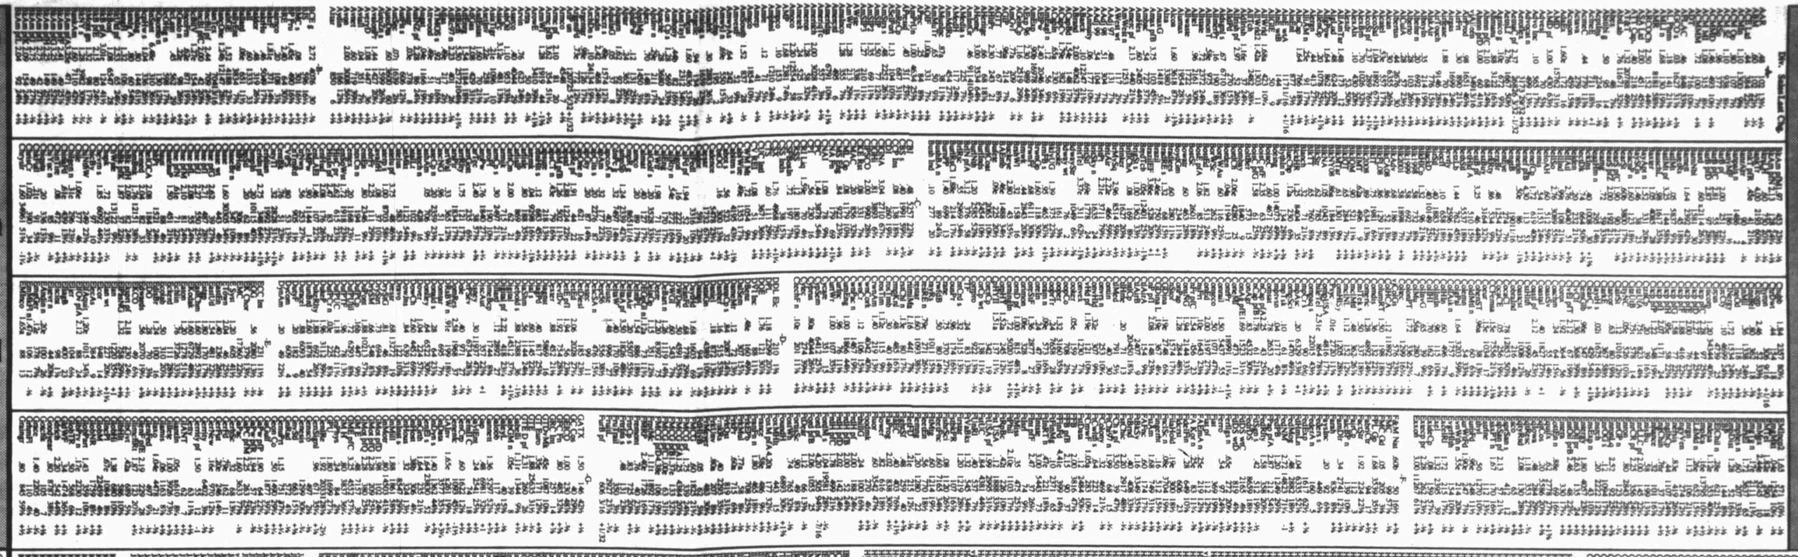

The restaurant has a new, more modern and efficient look that leans heavily on display cases that feature more of Luca's menu items, which include pasta, sandwiches, salad and pizza. A new menu item, a New York-style pizza featuring double toppings and a crust on the bottom and top, has been added as well. The menu also includes desserts.

Luca's offers free delivery on a minimum charge of $10.50 to a limited area that ranges from north of Andrews Highway to west of Garfield Avenue and including Green Tree and Saddle Club developments. Delivery is from 4 to 9 p.m. weekdays, all day Saturdays.

Dallas suburbs vie for basketball, hockey stadium

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — A handful of suburban Lilliputians have engaged Big D in a megabucks competition for the right to build costly sports palaces for fickle pro franchises.

With the Texas Rangers in Arlington and the Dallas Cowboys in Irving — probably for decades to come — Lewisville, Grand Prairie, Arlington, Irving and Fort Worth are jostling with Dallas over restless basketball and hockey franchises and a huge NASCAR auto track.

On Saturday, voters in Lewisville — about 25 miles north of Dallas — will decide whether to raise their city sales tax by a half-cent to pay for a new arena for the Dallas Mavericks of the National Basketball Association and the Dallas Stars of the National Hockey League.

Currently, the two teams are based in downtown Dallas, sharing the 16-year-old Reunion Arena, built at a cost of $27 million and seating 17,000. The sports teams want the city to build a new arena with 4,000 more seats and revenue-producing luxury boxes.

Mavericks owner Don Carter has offered to spend $65 million on a new arena, provided the city forks over an additional $77 million, demolishes Reunion and allows him to design and manage the new building.

To recoup their investments, Carter and the city would split the annual proceeds from the new arena.

The city says Carter is demanding more than half of that projected revenue, however. Carter's son Ronald told The Dallas Morning News that the team merely wants to be guaranteed that its annual share is the first paid.

If the city refuses, Don Carter is threatening to take his team up the road to Lewisville where he purchased a 75-acre tract last year and staged a very public "inspection" by team officials last month.

That followed the Mavericks' complaint to Dallas that the city had defaulted on the team's lease by allowing the Stars hockey team to use Reunion without signing a lease.

The Mavericks said they intend to leave Reunion sometime in the future, voiding some or all of the final seven years of their lease.

As for the Stars, they admit to having spent an unspecified sum to support the Lewisville sales-tax campaign.

Having lost the NFL's Cowboys to Irving in 1971, Dallas City Council members say they do not want to lose any more pro teams to the suburbs. Some politicians are choking on the prospect of finding the money to build one arena, tear down another and pay the long-term interest due on the demolished facility.

Mayor Steve Bartlett says those concerns are misplaced.

Reunion's debt has been pooled with the debt of the Dallas Convention Center and both are subsidized by the city's hotel occupancy tax, according to city officials.

Bartlett points out that if the Mavericks and Stars leave, the city still has to pay off Reunion's debt. That also is true if both teams stay and Reunion is demolished.

"The question now becomes, 'Do we want them in downtown Dallas or do we want them in Lewisville?'" says Bartlett, who wants to retain both teams and build a new arena without raising taxes.

City officials in Arlington, midway between Dallas and Fort Worth, have offered an opportunistic alternative.

Arlington came up with a plan for a $140 million arena that would sit within a slap shot of The Ballpark in Arlington, home of the strike-bound Rangers.

Arlington residents already imposed a half-cent sales tax increase on themselves in 1990 to finance the Rangers' stadium. The city has not divulged how another sports facility would be financed.

Irving officials have said that city could build a hockey-basketball arena with 20,000 seats for fewer dollars and without raising taxes.

However, the Arlington and Irving offers are unlikely to be taken seriously unless the options in Dallas and Lewisville fall through.

Meanwhile, Dallas, Grand Prairie and Fort Worth are competing for the favor of two auto racetrack owners, each of whom wants to build a North Texas track worth $60 million to $100 million.

Just as Fort Worth officials seemed to be at the top of the list for a speedway planned by Bruton Smith, who owns auto tracks in Atlanta and Charlotte, Dallas officials upstaged them with an announcement of raceway plans by Billy Meyer, the owner of the Texas Motorplex.

Then, over the next six weeks, Smith became less enchanted with the Fort Worth site and moved on to Grand Prairie, a suburb just outside Dallas. Grand Prairie is already the chosen site of a Class I horse racing track — a venture that still hasn't obtained financing.

Tea vs. wine

You don't need to drink red wine to get much of its reputed benefits. The fact is that drinking tea may help protect your arteries the same way a little red wine does.

So suggests research by Andrew Waterhouse, Ph.D., University of California at Davis. He has analyzed some of the biologically active chemicals in fruits, juices, tea and wine. "Tea has about the same amount of catechins as red wine," he says. Catechins are the active antioxidants mainly credited with red wine's reputed protection against heart disease.

According to Dr Waterhouse, a 6-ounce glass of red wine has 300 milligrams of catechins; a cup of typical black tea has 210 milligrams. A cup of green tea has 375 milligrams. Fruit juices have very little.

Catechins in both tea and red wine show up in the bloodstream soon after drinking either of the beverages, research shows. These antioxidants seem to help prevent artery clogging by stripping bad-type LDL cholesterol of some of its danger.

The bottom line: Sipping tea with your meals may do as much or more to save you from heart disease as drinking red wine with dinner. And it doesn't have the hazards of alcohol.

Glorious glutamine

It's a remarkable nutrient you may never have heard of. It's glutamine, an amino acid, produced in the body. But supplies run low if you are under stress, run-down or ill.

Taking gluatmine supplements at such times can cut short your illness, hasten your recovery, strengthen your immune system, restore weakened muscles and heal the digestive tract.

So says Douglas W. Wilmore, M.D., Harvard Medical School, a prominent glutamine researcher. In fact, Dr.Wilmore says glutamine is one nutrient that must be added to the diets of sick or stressed people, especially if hospitalized.

The details of the exciting new discoveries about glutamine and how to use it are contained in a book by Judy Shabert, M.D., titled "The Ultimate Nutrient Glutamine," from Avery Publishing Group.

Common doses for mildly sick persons are 4 to 8 grams daily and 20 to 40 grams for patients after surgery, says Dr. Shabert. She also says that if you are completely healthy, you don't need extra glutamine. Only take glutamine under the supervision of a doctor.

Mouth megadoses

Eating lots of antioxidants may protect you from oral cancer that strikes about 30,000 Americans every year. So suggests a string of new evidence. In fact, megadoses of vitamin E and beta carotene have reversed precancerous changes in the mouth leading to cancer.

One recent study at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center found that taking 400 IU of vitamin E for six months helped shrink tiny precancerous "sores" in the mouth, called leukoplakias. About 46 percent of patients showed benefits, lowering their risk of developing the cancer.

High blood levels of carotenoids, antioxidants in fruits and vegetables, also help prevent oral cancer. Researchers at the National Cancer Institute found that oral and pharyngeal cancer patients have extraordinarily low blood levels of these carotenoids, notably beta carotene, found in carrots and green leafy vegetables.

Extremely high doses of beta carotene also reversed premalignant changes in the mouths of 44 percent of patients in an Italian study. Bottom line: Lots of fruits and vegetables and antioxidant supplements may help curb this serious cancer that mainly strikes smokers and heavy drinkers.

Early bird wins

Even with new treatments, early detection remains the best weapon against cancer, according to reports from January's Reader's Digest. Here's the difference early detection can make in some of today's deadliest cancers: colon cancer — 92 percent cure rate with early detection; ovarian cancer — 80 percent; and prostate cancer — 92 percent.

Harshness of winter can be tough on skin

By Dr. Seth Orlow
Associated Press

Wintertime gives your skin, the human body's largest organ, a double whammy. Outdoors, you often get hit by windy, dry, cold air. Indoors, you get dry, heated air.

So as a result of the constant dryness, the water in and under your skin may evaporate, often leading to itchy, cracked skin.

Despite the outdoor elements and indoor conditions, dry skin doesn't have to be your wintertime fate. You can protect against winter-related dry skin and cut down on its annoying discomfort by taking a few skin-care precautions.

Many people will first notice the effects of winter on their skin after showering; once the shower water has been toweled away from your body, a tightness may linger on the skin. The tightness occurs because showering and soaps strip away your skin's superficial layers, which are the layers with the highest oil concentration and which act as a seal that keeps moisture in the skin.

To minimize this loss of protective oils, cut down on the frequency and length of bathing. Our bodies tend not to get as soiled in the winter as during the hot weather months, so long baths and showers aren't usually necessary.

Also, don't use pure soaps; instead, use soaps with a moisturizing cream or glycerin base. Pure soaps act as harsh strippers of the skin. That's how they get rid of dirt and make you feel so squeaky clean. In general, when in the shower, remember that the more you wash and scrub, the more you dry out your skin.

The use of moisturizers is another key to protecting against dry skin. Use a moisturizer immediately after bathing. The moisturizer traps water in the skin, acting as a sealant. In most cases, the thicker a moisturizer, the greater its effectiveness. Thus, greasy feeling ointments are the best, followed by creams, lotions and oils.

Spend extra time on your legs, which are especially prone to dryness.

Once you get out of the shower, use a moisturizer and, when ready to go out into the cold, dress appropriately. Cover exposed body parts. Wear gloves and use some type of balm that will protect lips.

If you spend a lot of time indoors, purchase a room humidifier. Moist room air diminishes skin dryness. If none of the above suggestions work and you end up with an annoying itch, try an oatmeal or starch-and-soap bath which can help alleviate the itching, and be sure to moisturize afterward.

Dr. Seth Orlow is an assistant professor of dermatology and director of pediatric dermatology at New York University Medical Center.

Future work-outs may be in-line

By Trudy Tynan

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — University of Massachusetts senior Deidra Smith likes to call herself "Lab Rat No. 13."

The environmental science major is one of 39 students who have been either running or skating laps for the past semester as part of research aimed at determining the aerobic value of in-line skating.

"In-line skating has become an extremely popular mode of recreation for the public over the past five years, but there has been very little research on the physiology," said exercise science Professor Patty Freedson, who heads the project.

"Running, cycling and swimming have been considered the exercises one should do to keep cardiovascularly fit," she said. "But sometimes people find those activities boring, and it is difficult to maintain good compliance. We wanted to study in-line skating, because it is, well, fun."

She found in an earlier study that skating at 13.5 miles an hour, a typical pace for a recreational skater, burned as many calories as running 7.6 miles an hour.

One other comparative study by researchers at the Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit found that, at recreational speeds, in-line skaters had to expend about 10 percent more effort than runners to burn the same amount of calories.

"It makes sense," said Frank Fedel, who headed the hospital study. "A runner is always working, but an in-line skater has that moment of rest during the glide."

Since September, both groups of UMass students have been going through 40-minute workouts three days a week — the skaters at a rink just off campus and the runners at the university's old basketball gym. They wear heart monitors and their exercise is regulated so that both runners and skaters get their hearts beating at 85 percent to 90 percent of maximum rates.

Researchers recently began measuring and comparing the changes in the students' bodies, muscle tone, endurance, leg strength and general fitness.

Results of the study, financed with a $70,000 grant from skate manufacturer Rollerblade, won't be completed for several months. But both runners and skaters say they benefited from the workouts.

"One of the reasons I volunteered was I wanted some exercise," said Smith, one of the skaters. "Besides, I get a free pair of skates and two credits without having to do a term paper."

"It was a way to get in shape, plus get to know how these things are done," said Adam LaBonte, a sophomore exercise science major. LaBonte and the other runners also got a pair of skates and two credits toward their degree.

The Detroit study, conducted last spring, used only in-line skating racers, but had its own unusual features. After being fitted out with a snorkel-like gas mask and 60-liter plastic bag to collect exhaled air for chemical analysis, a headset that gave timed instructions and a portable heart monitor, the skaters went sent zooming around the concrete concourse of the Pontiac Superdome.

"We got some stares," said Fedel. "But because it was indoors, there was no wind."

But even indoors, wind drag becomes a factor in in-line skating physics at racing speeds of 20 miles an hour, just as it does in skiing, cycling and ice skating.

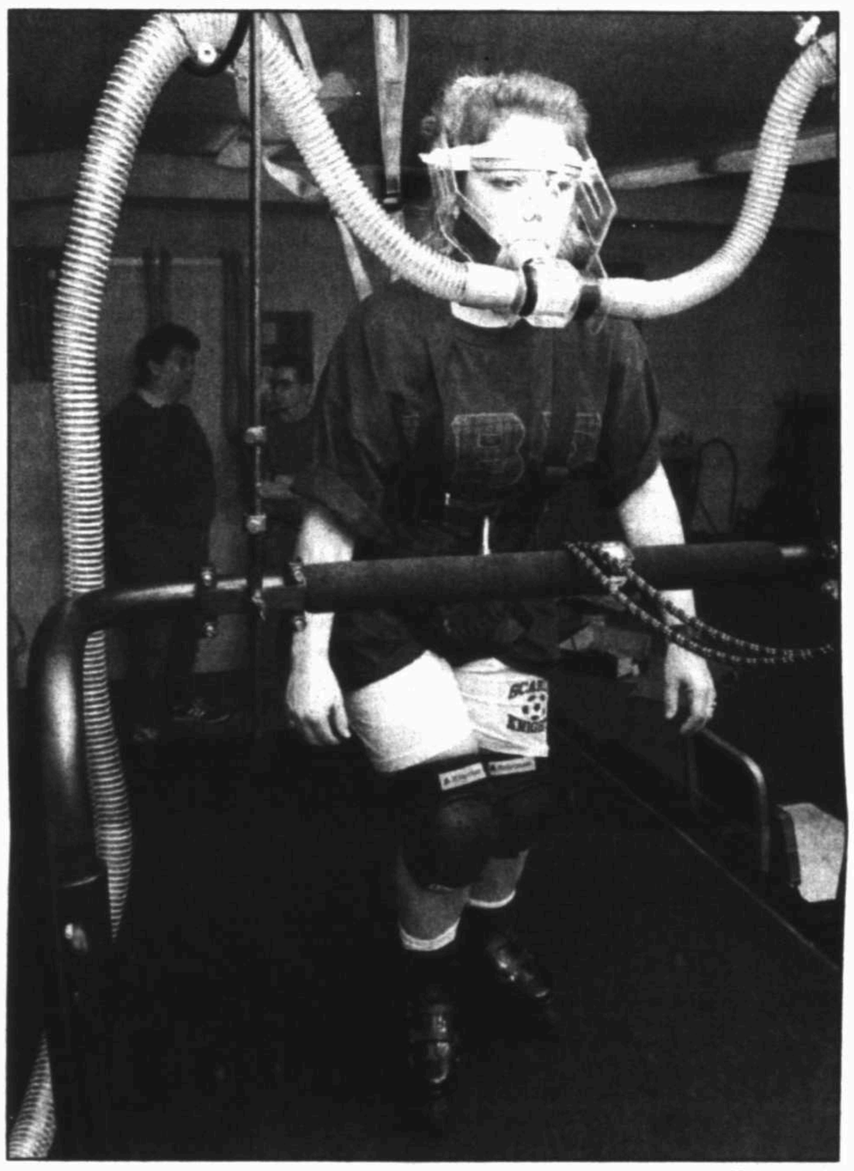

Calorie consumption jumped 50 percent when skaters boosted their speed from 14 miles an hour — a point where a typical recreational skater is working moderately hard — to 17 miles an hour because of the wind, Fedel said.

"At 17 miles an hour, a novice or intermediate skater is working very hard, but at 10 to 14 miles an hour, aerodynamics aren't a factor," he said.

Friction also plays a role at lower speeds. Just how much harder an individual skater had to work to burn the same calories as a runner depended in large part on the quality of his or her skates, the hospital found.

The good news for skaters is that they tend to underestimate the effort they are actually expending, he said.

That's in part because their heart rates rose more quickly than those of runners expending the same effort, he said.

University of Massachusetts senior Deidra Smith of Brookline, N.H., in-line skates on a treadmill in an exercise experiment conducted by the university's Department of Exercise Science in Amherst, Mass. Associate Professor Patty Freedson, background left, who is leading the experiment, confers with student Ed Melason.

Fedel said he is doing further studies, but he suspects that the heart rate increase also stemmed from the glide and the heart having to pump blood to relaxed muscles.

Stress relief can be found in natural and 'home' remedies

Associated Press

Stress can literally make you sick — but you can help yourself be well.

It is estimated that nearly 80 percent of all visits to doctors are triggered by complaints related to stress, Maggy Howe wrote in an article in the current issue of Country Living. And according to statistics in the Harvard Mental Health Letter people subjected to stress associated with anger and tension may be "four times more likely to develop a cold or bacterial infection."

To reduce the amount of unhealthy stress in your life, it is essential to participate in your own healing process by educating yourself about stress and by learning to integrate stress-reduction strategies into your lifestyle.

Everyone responds differently to stress but we can all benefit from adopting a few stress-coping skills. Researchers point to two basic types of stress — positive and negative. When subjected to positive stress, such as exercise, individuals generally feel in control. Negative stress causes us to feel out-of-control.

There are a number of stress-management therapies and stress-reduction strategies if negative stress plays a major role in your life. Following are a few remedies — some of which are traditional country recipes — that may help bring stress-caused biochemical disturbances back into balance.

Not all food problems are allergies

Associated Press

Many people mistakenly call all food-related problems food allergies. In fact, a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association states that 25 percent of adults believe they have a food allergy, says Ladies' Home Journal magazine. However, according to the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, only about 1 percent of adults and 3 percent of children have clinically proven allergic reactions to foods.

True food allergy is characterized by an abnormal immune-system response to ordinarily harmless substances in foods. Symptoms of food allergies may include: itching and swelling in the mouth, sneezing, a runny nose, hives, eczema, abdominal pain, vomiting, diarrhea or an asthma attack. Severe or anaphylactic reactions can include a drop in blood pressure (often signaled by feelings of faintness) and unconsciousness.

Food intolerance is also an adverse reaction to food, but, unlike food allergy, it doesn't involve the immune system. The reactions, however, may be similar to food allergy — nausea, vom-

Choose babysitter carefully

By Eileen DiFrisco
Associated Press

Selecting an appropriate baby sitter is key to providing children with proper care when parents are not at home.

Prospective baby sitters should be at least 12 years old so they are physically and emotionally mature enough to handle problems that may arise.

However, it is important that parents interview potential baby sitters to see how they interact with the children who will be in their care. Some 12-year-olds may be too emotionally immature.

Further, when hiring a sitter, parents should consider the length of time and the time of day when the sitter will work, along with the ages and number of children who will be in the sitter's care. (In some instances, an older, more mature sitter may be the best choice.)

Baby sitters need to know how to handle minor emergencies, including basic first aid. Parents should inquire whether the potential sitter has taken any training courses.

References are also important. Potential baby sitters should have references that indicate a proven record of good judgment, maturity and ability to follow rules. It is generally recommended that sitters do not have friends come to visit. Long telephone conversations should also be discouraged or prohibited.

Parents should be sure to discuss fees, rules and the manner of discipline that is appropriate before leaving children in a sitter's care. Emergency telephone numbers should be posted by the phone. These numbers include:

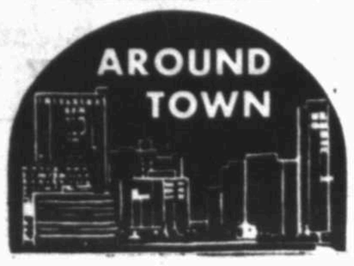

■ Local poison control center.
■ Local ambulance service or 911 service. (Post your address by the phone in case the sitter is not familiar with it.)
■ Where the parents can be reached.
■ Nearby friend or relative.
■ Pediatrician.

Sitters need to know where the first-aid kit is located. For households with young children, it's also important to have a bottle of syrup of ipecac on hand in case of accidental poisoning. However, a baby sitter should not use syrup of ipecac unless instructed to do so by the local poison control center.

The baby sitter should know how the doors lock, where the keys are kept and how to get out of the house in an emergency. (Smoke detectors should be in working order, and sitters should know where the fire extinguishers are located.)

DEAR ABBY

Controversy over sick mom who smokes heats up

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to "Smokeless in Arizona," who wanted to send her ailing mother out in the cold to smoke rather than contaminate her "dream house," was three rings short of a bull's-eye.

Van Buren

Tell this lady that my heart bleeds for her. After all, why should she have to accommodate the woman who bore her, raised her, fed her, clothed her, comforted her when she was sick or sad, and probably went without so that her daughter could have the nice things in life?

"Smokeless" sounds like the kind of woman who would also object to children frolicking and laughing in her dream house, hair on her precious carpets from playful puppies, or a friend's coat tossed on a chair.

If this dream house doesn't have a vented bathroom and kitchen, then maybe her mother and sister's family would have a better time at one of their homes where people are more important than things. — PAUL L. PARETS, DELAWARE CITY, DEL.

DEAR PAUL: Turn in your marksmanship medal. You missed the bull's-eye. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Regarding "Smokeless in Arizona," I, too, have a smokeless home, and guests are not permitted to smoke inside. My children are asthmatic, and so am I.

Your suggestion that "Arizona's" frail, sickly mother get a nicotine patch was insufficient at best. What's the likelihood of an alcoholic, 90-pound woman with emphysema asking her doctor for a nicotine patch? I say, the odds are not good.

People ban smoking from their homes for legitimate health reasons. Why should they sacrifice their breathing in order to accommodate someone so selfish and addicted that she refuses to consider others?

I have an 87-year-old great-aunt in Florida whose only joy in life is smoking. I haven't seen her in ages. If she were to visit, I would NOT allow her to smoke in my house. I might compromise and let her smoke in the garage.

Abby, I thought you were behind the American Cancer Society. Your answer goes against all they have done to make smoking less desirable, and educate the public about the deadly consequences. Please be consistent. — S.G. MACAULAY, PACIFICA, CALIF.

DEAR S.G. MACAULAY: You are not the only person who disagreed with my answer. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm shocked at your answwer to "Smokeless in Arizona." You suggested that she expose her family to the hazards of secondhand smoke and allow her new dream house to stink to accommodate an old fool who won't quit a habit that is killing her. Shame on you, Abby!

Put the old girl up in a motel and tell her that she is welcome to visit, as long as she can do without a cigarette; when she can hold out no longer, it's back to the motel!

"Smokeless" doesn't need the guilt trip unfairly laid on her by you and her thoughtless family.

NO ONE smokes in my home, automobile or office — for any reason. — DAVID L. ETHRIDGE, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR DAVID: My first impulse was to advise "Smokeless" that in her home, she sets the rules. However, I discussed the letter with a physician, who told me that the mother's low body weight indicated that she was probably in the last stages of emphysema. My concern was that the daughter might remember with guilt and remorse her mother's last Christmas — or possibly hasten the woman's death by insisting she smoke by a fireplace located on an outdoor patio.

For an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person, order "How to Be Popular." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. ALLERGY: Intolerances cause discomfort iting, diarrhea. Common causes are lack of a digestive enzyme, and food additives such as monosodium glutamate. If you have a food intolerance, you can usually eat a small amount of the offending food without a reaction. With an allergy, the tiniest amount will cause a reaction.

The most common food allergies for adults in the United States are those to shrimp, lobster and other shellfish, peanuts (the primary cause of anaphylactic reactions), as well as to walnuts and other tree nuts, fish, wheat and eggs. Children are most likely to be allergic to eggs, milk and peanuts.

If you suspect you have a food allergy, keep a journal of everything you eat. Note the details of reactions, and after one to two weeks, discuss your findings with your doctor, who can prescribe treatments to ease symptoms. Among them: an antihistamine for hives, a bronchodilator for asthma, and, most important if you've ever had an anaphylactic reaction to food, injectable epinephrine.

For more information, call the American Academy of Allergy and Immunology (800-822-ASMA), or the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America (800-7-ASTHMA).

Snack foods grow more 'healthy'

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

You've heard of oxymorons, terms that tend to cancel each other out, such as "sweet sorrow" or, if you are the parent of small children, "enough sleep." Well, here's a new one for you — healthy junk food.

All the food manufacturers in the country seem to be jumping on the "low fat" or "healthier" bandwagon by coming out with "New! Low Fat!" versions of their own products — which is just a round-about way of saying the products weren't very nutritious in the first place.

It was only a matter of time before the last stronghold of junk food — the snack machine — was invaded by these products.

Lance has produced snack machine foods for years, mostly in different kinds of cracker sandwiches. In fact, according to information from the company, Lance is "maker of the country's No. 1 sandwich cracker brand."

Now the company has introduced something new — Fat Free Fig Cakes, Fat Free Apple Bars and Fat Free Cranberry Bars. These bars — cookies, actually — are available at convenience stores, in vending machines and in six-count packages at supermarkets, according to the company. The powers that be at Lance sent us samples of all three kinds of the new fat-free cookie-cakes, and a few of us at the office gave them a try.

Usually, vending machines sell products like these for somewhere between 45 cents and 60 cents, depending on the machine and the location. My guess would be that the products would be a little cheaper per cookie-cake if bought in the six-count package, but I don't know for sure.

The company information goes on: "To qualify as fat free, a product must have less than ½ gram of fat per serving. A reduced fat product must have 25 percent less total fat than a company's or competitor's current products.

"In 1988, Lance was the first snack food company to remove from its products all animal fats, as well as tropical oils that are high in saturated fats. Lance was also one of the first snack food manufacturers to publish the make-up of all fatty acids in its products."

A look at the nutrition labels of all three products shows that none of them list any calories from fat. They do, of course, list calories, so if you are watching calories as well as fat, you need to take that into consideration.

The taste test was clear — those of us who liked fig cookies liked the no-fat fig cookies from Lance; ditto for the cranberry and apple cookies. They really don't taste no-fat, and are definitely tasty.

Still seems strange to have junk food that's actually good for you — or at least, better.

Timesaving tools can help make home cooking easier

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

A sharp paring knife will take you far, but for some cooking tasks, tools made especially for the job can save you time and frustration. This list of kitchen gadgets spotlights the ones we think are handiest to have. If you can't find these utensils in the supermarket cookware section, check out a gourmet cookware shop.

■ Shrimp Cleaner: Bearing some resemblance to a letter opener, this gadget peels and deveins shrimp with one quick motion. Starting from the head end of the shrimp, insert the narrow tip of the tool between the shell and meat. Push the whole blade through the vein cavity. The shell pops off and the shrimp is deveined.

■ Citrus Zester-Stripper: This handy citrus gizmo does double duty. For thin strips of citrus peel (called zest) pull the scalloped edge, with multiple holes, along the fruit. For thick citrus strips, run the single-holed, curved blade along the fruit.

■ Apple Corer: After coring apples and pears with a knife, you'll welcome a sturdy, easy-to-use corer. Center the round, scalloped end of the corer over the fruit's core and push the tool into the fruit. Twist to loosen the whole core, then pull the core and corer out.

■ Tomato-Berry Corer: Snatch the cores from tomatoes or the green caps from strawberries by inserting the spiked end of the small, round, saw-toothed tomato corer into the tomato core, or just below each strawberry cap, then twist.

■ Cherry-Olive Pitter: For cherry and olive enthusiasts, this tool is a must. Pop a cherry or olive (pit in) into the little cup, squeeze the handles and the pit falls out of the hole in the cup, leaving a perfectly pitted cherry or olive.

■ Garlic Press: Mince garlic the effortless way.

STRESS: Patient takes part in own treatment

celery, lettuce and carrot juice twice a day to quickly dispel anxiety and worry. Other timeless remedies suggest drinking a cup of chamomile or bee or lemon balm tea. Bathing in water laced with lavender oil and inhaling its scent can help induce relaxation; jasmine and neroli oils may be used in the same fashion.

■ Flower remedies: At the turn-of-the-century, noted British bacteriologist Dr. Edward Bach developed 38 flower remedies that he believed could heal the emotional causes of physical illnesses. Today the one most widely used for stress-related conditions is Rescue Remedy, available at health-food stores.

■ Body-mind remedies: Such consciously practiced relaxation techniques as meditation and yoga are excellent forms of stress-management. Both can evoke healthy states of deep mental and physical relaxation.

Meditation has been found to decrease respiration and pulse rates, in turn lessening the amount of the stress hormone cortisol the adrenal glands must secrete. Practiced regularly, meditation and yoga have helped many people stay calm and exercise control in stressful situations. Regular exercise also helps to reduce stress, as relaxed muscles mean relaxed nerves. Sufficient rest and sleep also are important.

■ Nutrition: Because caffeine overexcites the body's metabolism, you will lessen the amount of work that your adrenal glands must do if you eliminate it from your diet. Try replacing it with natural stimulants and energizers such as bee pollen, spirulina (nutritious sea algae), or ginseng, which are said to strengthen the immune system and build up physical and mental vitality.

Also in health-food stores is pantothenic acid, which is taken to aid the body's adrenal and immune functions in therapeutic amounts of 1,000-2,000 milligrams per day.

Vitamin C and the bioflavonoids, naturally occurring substances that strengthen the capillary blood vessels, play an important role in adrenal function.

Magnesium and potassium also are key ingredients in the body's production of energy. Because processed foods are low in these two trace elements, eat fresh foods and organic produce when possible.
