PLO backs talks plan

Official: Way can be found for negotiations

■ 'We regard this as a historic opportunity,' spokesman says.

N.Y. Times News Service

TUNIS, Tunisia — A spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization said on Sunday that the Palestinians were ready to attend the Middle East peace conference proposed by the United States and that no obstacle was "big enough" to prevent this.

"We are ready to attend the peace conference," Bassam Abu Sharif, a spokesman for the PLO chairman, Yasser Arafat, told a group of American reporters. "We say to President Bush: Yes, we regard this as a historic opportunity and we will do our best not to drop it because we want to establish real peace. And we will do all that we can, all our best, to help Mr. Baker and the president make the convocation of that peace conference."

■ Israeli cabinet endorses U.S. plan/5A

Abu Sharif met in a Tunis hotel with reporters traveling with U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III. Baker, who came to Tunis to discuss the American peace plan with President Zine Abidine Ben Ali, maintained on Sunday the current United States ban on dialogue with the PLO.

Abu Sharif suggested that a face-saving compromise could be worked out to satisfy Israel's demand that the proposed peace conference exclude the PLO as well as Palestinians living in East Jerusalem and those living outside Israeli-occupied territory.

On Thursday, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel accepted the American plan with those conditions, and on Sunday the Israeli Cabinet endorsed Shamir's move in a 16-to-3 vote, with the hardline housing minister, Ariel Sharon, leading the dissenters.

Baker declared himself "very pleased" with the Israeli Cabinet vote. At a news conference on Sunday after his meetings with the Tunisian president, Baker said he

A South African air force helicopter hovers over the sinking Greek cruise liner Oceanos as it readies to airlift passengers to safety Sunday. More than 500 people were plucked from the ship.

Tense rescue effort saves hundreds

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (NYT) — More than 500 passengers and crew members were saved on Sunday in a tense rescue operation when a Greek cruise ship foundered and later sank in the storm-tossed Indian Ocean barely two miles off the rugged South African coast.

The Oceanos, a 7,554-ton cruise liner, was steaming on a weekend voyage from East London to Durban when the ship lost power late Saturday night and went adrift off the so-called Wild Coast, a desolate, treacherous stretch of windswept, ragged coastline that is part of the nominally independent tribal homeland of Transkei.

On Sunday night, a South African navy spokesman in Pretoria said 19 of the 575 people believed on board were still unaccounted for. The spokesman, Cmdr. Tony Absalom, said the search would resume at first light today.

"The weather conditions are fairly horrendous," he said.

'Weather conditions are fairly horrendous.'
South African navy spokesman

TFC Tours, the South African company that chartered the ship, said in an announcement earlier that "it is understood all passengers and crew were picked up." The company said a list would be released this morning.

Capt. Richard Stephen, another navy spokesman, said a Taiwanese trawler that might have picked up other survivors remained out of radio contact.

Stephen called it "virtually miraculous" that so many people had been rescued despite foul weather and high seas.

Buffeted by the fierce winds, 13 Puma and Alouette helicopters dispatched by the South African air force flew into the storm and winched 219 survivors, one by one, to safety as the bow of the ship submerged.

The Oceanos gradually rolled over on its starboard side until it capsized within sight of the shore off the coastal village of Coffee Bay on Sunday afternoon, 14 hours after the first distress call went out.

Ian Laidlaw, a passenger who was rescued with his wife, Karen, by the helicopters, told the South African Press Association that one man with a life jacket jumped into the ocean but that his fellow passengers were otherwise calm.

"When the Pumas came this morning, they all stood in line," Laidlaw said of the passengers. "It was like going to

Military plans environmental cleanup effort

■ Huge project could take 30 years to complete, cost $400 billion.

By Keith Schneider
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In one of the most important early dividends of the end of the cold war, the military industry has begun an environmental cleanup program that may well become one of the biggest engineering projects ever undertaken.

The program has evolved almost totally unknown to the American public, despite its monumental scope and anticipated cost. Representing nothing less than a new strategic goal for the military, it is aimed at restoring the environment and reducing pollution at thousands of military and other government military-industrial installations in the United States and abroad that have been contaminated with untold amounts of toxic substances.

But some of the federal managers, including several within the Defense Department itself, say the program lacks overall direction and coordination and could well result in one of history's costliest failures.

In an undertaking as big and technically complex as the development of the atom bomb in the Manhattan Project, "Star Wars" or the Apollo moon pro-

Texas rustlers turn to exotic bird business

AUSTIN (AP) — Rustlers, who traditionally have stolen cattle and horses, are turning to a new target — emus and ostriches.

Two recent Austin-area thefts netted poachers $132,000 in chicks.

"There's been numerous thefts of ostriches and emus all over Texas and Georgia, and they're extremely hard to trace," said Malcom Wilkes, a Milam County sheriff's department investigator.

'Grandchildren pregnancy' raises issues of surrogacy

By Gina Kolata
N.Y. Times News Service

In a small Midwestern city, a 42-year-old woman, a school librarian, is pregnant with her own grandchildren.

The woman, Arlette Schweitzer of Aberdeen, S.D., is carrying twins produced from her daughter's eggs, fertilized in a laboratory dish with sperm from her daughter's husband. The embryos that resulted were implanted in Mrs. Schweitzer's womb. The babies are due in November.

Mrs. Schweitzer said she was bearing her 22-year-old daughter's babies as an act of love for her daughter, Christa Uchytil of Sioux City, Iowa, who was born without a uterus and cannot bear children.

Doctors and lawyers who specialize in reproductive technology say this would be the first time in the United States that a woman gave birth to her own grandchildren. The only other case they know of is that of a woman in South Africa who gave birth to her daughter's triplets in 1987.

San Angelo is hit

SAN ANGELO — A severe thunderstorm caused power outages and damage but no injuries Sunday evening, authorities said. Firefighters reported the Harvard House Apartment complex had large sections of roof shingles on the ground. One large section had fallen on a vehicle, breaking its front window. "There were high winds, there was no visibility outside the store, you couldn't see anything if you wanted to," said Tony Strappel, night supervisor Schlotsky's on Knickerbocker Road. Police later blocked off several streets in the area to keep spectators away from damaged buildings.

Queen Mother's 91

SANDRINGHAM, England — Queen Mother Elizabeth quietly celebrated her 91st birthday Sunday with her daughter, the queen, at the royal Sandringham estate in Norfolk, eastern England. As the Queen Mother left the Sandringham parish church after morning service, the organist slipped a few bars of "Happy Birthday to You," into the processional, sending the small and smiling former queen out to waiting well-wishers with a flourish. The church was packed with local residents and estate workers who joined the rector in wishing the Queen Mother "a very happy day."

Here come the mid-90s again

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-90s, southeast winds 10 to 15 mph and a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 60s and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Tuesday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 67, Sunday's high was 90 compared with the record high for that date of 104 set in 1944. The record low for today's date was 61 set in 1978.

STATE

Texas skies were partly cloudy Sunday with a few thunderstorms active in the North, West and Southeast.

The activity was caused by a weak trough of low pressure extending from the vicinity of Wichita Falls into the Big Bend area. Other showers were scattered along the coastal plains, with some brief heavy rainfall. Victoria had more than one-half inch in about 20 minutes.

Temperatures were generally high, with Addison Airport north of Dallas reporting 102 degrees. Readings elsewhere were mostly in the 90s, although Abilene dropped to 88 with light showers and the Panhandle had readings in the 70s. Dalhart reported 76 degrees.

Winds were mostly southeasterly at 5 to 15 miles an hour.

Forecasters expected it would be partly cloudy and hot through Tuesday with a chance for roaming thunderstorms. Highs were expected to reach near 100 in parts of North and Southwest Texas, while cooler readings were expected in showers. Overnight lows were expected to be mostly in the 70s, with lower readings in the Panhandle and Far West.

NATION

Rain was scattered from the Rockies to the northern Atlantic Coast and across the South on Sunday, and temperatures hit record highs in the Southeast.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over the the central and southern Rockies, central Plains, middle Mississippi Valley, upper Ohio Valley, lower Great Lakes and the northern Atlantic Coast.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 1.47 inches at Portland, Maine, and 1.05 inches at Brunswick, Maine.

Rain also was scattered along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, and over northern Florida and southern Florida.

Thunderstorms also developed rapidly over much of central and southern Utah with locally heavy rain.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TALKS: PLO might be ready for compromises

had not seen Abu Sharif's statements, but he repeated his contention that the American initiative offered "an opportunity not to be missed."

With Abu Sharif's remarks, the PLO was trying to be as forthcoming as possible to the American initiative while holding to its insistence on determining the makeup of any Palestinian delegation. In offering his conditional acceptance last week, Shamir also sought to avoid being the spoiler, even as he held to basic positions like the Israeli government's refusal to cede occupied land for peace.

The PLO spokesman's conciliatory comments coincided with a strongly worded declaration from Arafat, who told the Reuters news agency that the Palestinians would never give up claims to East Jerusalem, as Israel has insisted, or accept other conditions imposed by Shamir, like the restrictions on who should represent the PLO.

The statements are not necessarily contradictory. In his remarks, Abu Sharif also reaffirmed the PLO's stand on Jerusalem and rejected Shamir's right to determine the shape of the Palestinian delegation. But he repeatedly stressed that the PLO, which many Palestinians consider their sole legitimate political representative, was prepared to negotiate a compromise that would enable the conference to take place.

There is no way yet to gauge the degree of authority with which Abu Sharif spoke. He is regarded as a close associate of Arafat, whose current headquarters are here in Tunis, but he has previously made statements that the PLO subsequently disavowed. At the same time, Abu Sharif is aware that he was talking to reporters traveling with Baker and that his words would quickly reach the secretary of state.

The impression is that the PLO, politically weakened after its support for Iraq in the Persian Gulf war, is intent on working toward the conference, but that it must counter any impression that it is backing down before Israel or accepting an indirect role in the peace process.

In any case, Abu Sharif's statements are the most explicit public indication to date of PLO interest in the American initiative to bring Israel face-to-face with its Arab neighbors.

Israel has long rejected dealing with the PLO, deeming it a terrorist group. It opposes the attendance of Palestinians from East Jerusalem because it says that that would undermine Israel's claim to all of Jerusalem. And it opposes the attendance of Palestinians from outside the occupied territories because many of them have their roots in lands now inside the territory of Israel.

CLEANUP: Military industry begins huge program

(From 1A)

gram, the government will, among other things, use bacteria to purge jet fuel and solvents from vital sources of drinking water, employ robots to clear miles of ground of radioactive contaminants, and use remote-controlled equipment to drain dangerous pools of black grease and blue-green sludges.

In addition, billions are being spent to modernize pollution-control equipment so that installations can comply with environmental laws, and hundreds of millions of dollars are to be spent for research.

This fiscal year, the government will spend $6.9 billion — $2 billion more than the Navy will spend for new attack jets. Next year, Congress is proposing to spend $8 billion, and in the fiscal year 1993, $10 billion. The environmental project, along with the Air Force's new advanced tactical fighter, is one of the rare growth areas in military spending.

Added together, the military-industrial environmental project could take 30 years to complete and cost $400 billion, making it four times as costly as the Mercury, Gemini and Apollo space projects combined and $100 billion more than building the interstate highway system.

Not all of the money has been committed, but the Energy Department says it knows it will need to work on the project for decades, and congressional investigators with the General Accounting Office believe the costs may be even higher than currently estimated.

The extraordinary costs are the result of environmental contamination on a scale almost unimaginable. Atomic weapons plants poured billions of gallons of lethal radioactive wastes directly into the soil, a dangerous practice that quintupled the volume of radioactive wastes to be cleaned up at plants in New Mexico, Washington State and South Carolina.

The Air Force dumped a toxic brew of chemical byproducts into drinking water, disposed of them in stinking pits and poisoned miles of desert and forest surrounding its domestic and foreign bases. The Army left so many unexploded shells at its Jefferson Proving Ground in Indiana that it could cost $5 billion to restore the 50,000-acre installation.

The Navy's bases, shipbuilding factories, and warplane manufacturing centers dug thousands of sumps and ponds to dispose of solvents and paints and toxic materials, sites that are now leaking.

Most of the cost estimates are based on current technology.

ISSUES: Gestational surrogacy is legal in U.S.

(From 1A)

The experts say the story of Mrs. Schweitzer and her daughter brings into sharp focus difficult questions about surrogate motherhood that have never been satisfactorily resolved. For one thing, the financial questions that trouble many ethicists are absent here.

Mrs. Schweitzer took no money from her daughter and says she is horrified at the thought of being paid to carry the babies. So the case makes clear that some ethicists, lawyers and researchers are troubled by the very idea of surrogacy, even when the only motive is love.

Experts say the sort of surrogacy Mrs. Schweitzer entered into, one in which she is only carrying the fetus, providing no eggs of her own, is becoming increasingly common.

John Robertson, a law professor at the University of Texas who follows such cases of gestational surrogacy, said the most recent data, from a survey for 1989 by the American Fertility Society, indicated that there were 198 attempts that year to produce a child with this type of surrogacy and that there were 33 deliveries.

Last month, the San Francisco Giants pitcher Dave Righetti and his wife, Kandice, became the parents of triplets, their own biological children borne by Mrs. Righetti's sister.

Robertson said that gestational surrogacy was legal in all states and that it was unlikely that a gestational surrogate who wanted to keep the child would be allowed to do so.

The only case that has gone to court was one in California last year, involving a woman who was paid to be a surrogate and refused to relinquish the baby. The court awarded custody to the couple who paid her, the biological parents of the child, but the ruling has been appealed.

The case is different from that of Mary Beth Whitehead-Gould, who provided her own eggs when she served as a surrogate mother. A court refused to grant her custody of the child but gave her visitation rights.

Dr. Joseph Schulman, director of the Genetics and IVS Institute in Fairfax, Va., said most couples seeking gestational surrogates did not have a relative who was willing to bear their children. But Schulman said people searching for an appropriate surrogate could get help from a broker specializing in the field.

Reactions to Mrs. Schweitzer's decision to carry her own grandchildren include expressions of admiration and feelings that such acts, even though undertaken with the best motives, are a mistake.

Dr. Arthur Caplan, an ethicist at the Universtiy of Minnesota, said he had nothing but praise for Mrs. Schweitzer. "I think it is a very kind, generous act," he said. "Therefore, I think it is ethically admirable."

Robertson said that "although, at first blush it sounds a little bizarre, a little crazy, when you think about it, this may be the least problematic case for surrogacy." No money changed hands; it is unlikley that the grandmother will want to keep the babies, and the surrogacy arises out of a mother's love for her daughter, he said. "You could argue that this is the ideal form," he said.

Dr. Jay Katz, a professor of law, medicine, and psychiatry at Yale University disagreed. He said he thought Mrs. Schweitzer's surrogacy was "a very very bad idea" and could create problems for the child.

"Is the grandmother the grandmother or the mother?" he asked. "It may ultimately create too many tensions for the child and for the family. I appreciate and I would not dispute the loving intentions of the woman's mother. But sometimes love can create problems of its own."

Dr. Albert R. Jonsen, an ethicist at the University of Washington in Seattle, said his qualms about Mrs. Schweitzer's surrogacy derived from his feelings that surrogacy cuts to the heart of society's notions of who a person is and what constitutes a blood relationship.

"The question is, are there kinds of altruism that may be so troubling to important social and cultural traditions that we'd rather not have that altrusim take place?" he asked. He said he believed that the case of Mrs. Schweizter and her daughter could be one of those cases.

But Mrs. Schweitzer said she and her daughter had never questioned whether her surrogacy was the right thing to do. Mrs. Uchytil has a brother with three children, but there are no other women in the family to bear her children.

"In our case, it goes beyond ethical questions," Mrs. Schweitzer said. She and her daughter have talked about the surrogacy for six years, coming up with the idea at a time when doctors very rarely offered the procedure, if at all, and have never wavered from their desire to do it.

Their decision was made shortly after they learned that Mrs.

Uchytil had no uterus, a problem that occurs in about one in 5,000 women. "We found out when Christa was 14," Mrs. Schweitzer said. Christa had not begun to menstruate, so Mrs. Schweitzer took her to their pediatrician to find out why.

"It was devastating. It was unbelievable," Mrs. Schweitzer said. "Christa loved children. She was one of those people who always wanted to be a mother."

Two years after the diagnosis, Mrs. Schweitzer took her daughter to the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., for consultation. She said to the doctor who examined Christa, "I wish you could transplant my uterus because I'll never need it again."

LINK: BCCI front-man bought stake in Main Bank has been involved in covert intelligence work, drug money laundering, arms brokering, bribery of government officials and aid to terrorists.

U.S. partners in the Main Bank takeover have denied any link between BCCI and the Houston bank during the time they held the bank's stock.

Pharaon, however, was involved both in the Main Bank takeover and the purchase of National Bank of Georgia shares held by Bert Lance, budget director under former President Jimmy Carter. Pharaon began the takeover of the Houston bank just months before starting negotiations with the Georgia bank.

The Post reported that Connally, Mahfouz, Pharaon and Alice banker Fredrick Erck filed an application with Texas banking authorities to buy Main Bank in August 1977. At the time, Main Bank was the 20th largest bank in Houston.

Pharaon had sought out Connally, a former governor and U.S. treasury secretary, to help him find a bank to buy in Houston. Erck told The Post he received a call from Connally asking him to come to Houston to help find the bank and that Erck would operate it for the group.

The group bought the bank from Houston developer, banker and potential mayoral candidate Bob Lanier. Lanier said he did not know of the Arabs' interest until the talks were completed, both Erck and Lanier said.

Connally initially told The Post he didn't own Main Bank stock, but later called the newspaper back after he spoke with Erck.

Public records show that each of the partners owned about 15 percent of the bank.

At the time of the transaction, Pharaon had formed more than 30 corporations across the country, according to documents filed in the Texas Secretary of State's Office.

He also bought stakes in CRS Design Associates, Inc., a Houston architectural firm; in the Sam P. Wallace Co., a Dallas construction company; and unsuccessfully bartered for OKC Corp., a Dallas cement company and the Hyatt International Corp.

Pharaon hired Frank Van Court, a lawyer then working for Vison & Elkins, Connally's Houston-based law firm, to run his operations.

RUSTLERS: Poachers turn to ostriches, emus

(From 1A)

ficers, including the Texas Rangers, are searching for 42 ostrich chicks stolen July 20 from McQuary Farms in Milam County.

"This was our first big year," said Irene Weydell, 75, president of the partnership started in 1989. "We've had good fertile eggs. We had good layers, and we had good chicks until the disaster struck.

"I'm hoping we'll get some of them back," she said, noting a $5,000 reward has been offered for the return of the chicks or information leading to an indictment of the thieves.

The stolen birds would be hard to identify because the McQuarys hadn't yet "branded" the chicks. The preferred identification method among big-bird ranchers is to place a microchip, which can be read with a scanner, under the skin on a bird's neck.

"I believe it's pretty hard to run them down. It's probably ostrich people that took them. They could just drop them in with their birds," said Sid McQuary, 73, company vice president.

About 20,000 ostriches and 18,000 emus are being raised across the country, and Texas is the leading state for both types of birds, according to spokesmen for bird organizations.

One pair of adult emus can sell for $15,000, and two ostriches can sell for $40,000 to $50,000.

Both emu and ostrich farmers envision their livestock's low-cholesterol, high-protein meat as a natural alternative to beef for health-conscious Americans.

American Ostrich Association spokesman Tom Mantzel said about 12 thefts have occurred among the 300 ostrich farmers in Texas since the group organized in 1987.

He said thefts of birds or eggs could become more of a problem "because they are valuable, and there is more demand than chicks.

Panel report calls for Cranston's censure

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Expressing frustration over the Senate Ethics Committee's delays in completing its inquiry on five senators, a member of the panel made public on Sunday a special counsel's report that called for Sen. Alan Cranston to be censured by the full Senate for "reprehensible" conduct.

The committee member, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he released the confidential final report, delivered to panel members more than a month ago, in hopes of forcing the committee to act.

Although the committee issued its preliminary findings on the senators in February, the document released Sunday carries far more detail about their conduct in intervening with federal regulators to help a major contributor, Charles H. Keating Jr., who owned a troubled savings and loan institution in Irvine, Calif. And for the first time, the report lays out guidelines for lawmakers to follow in the future in doing favors for political supporters.

Helms said a major reason the committee had not closed the books on the Keating inquiry, which began in December 1989, was tat panel members were at odds over whether the report should be released at all or in shortened form. Officials close to the committee have said there was sentiment that the language was too strong in describing the senators' conduct.

Helms releases findings 'in hopes of forcing committee action.'

It is highly unusual for a lawmaker to independently release confidential congressional reports, particularly by the Ethics Committee, and even more rare to acknowledge releasing them. Helms sought to reduce the fallout by releasing the report under his own name, although it had been largely written by the committee's special counsel, Robert S. Bennett. Helms said he made only minor changes in the report, which Bennett drafted for the committee to adopt as its own.

A spokesman for Cranston, Murray S. Flander, said Sunday that the release of the report was a "regrettable leak" and "proof that Senator Helms is extremely prejudiced."

In a letter to the committee's chairman and vice chairman that he released with the report, Helms said, "I am absolutely persuaded that after all the time and resources the Ethics Committee has devoted to the Keating case, we owe the public a full accounting of what happened, and why we decided the way we did — not merely as to Senator Cranston but as to all five senators."

The Keating inquiry has cost the government more than $2 million for legal expenses.

In an introduction he appended to Bennett's report, Helms said he was releasing it because the committee had "inordinately delayed issuing a report."

Helms said in a telephone interview that he did not want to discuss the document because it speaks for itself. He said he did not notify any of his colleagues on the panel of his action.

But in the letter to the committee's leaders, sent two weeks ago, Helms voiced frustration and suggested that he might make Bennett's report public.

RESCUE: Ship sinks off coast

(From 1A)

church."

But Laidlaw was less complimentary about the ship's crew.

"Most of the crew commandeered a lifeboat at 3 a.m. and disappeared," he said. "The captain leapt onto the first helicopter out this morning."

There should have been enough lifeboats, another passenger, John Hicklin, said, "but all of a sudden, the crew came out of nowhere and got on the last boat."

The ship's captain, who was identified as Yiannis Avranas, 51, told the South African Press Association that he left the Oceanos "long after the rescue had begun." This was reportedly at 9 a.m., more than four hours before his ship sank and well before all passengers were evacuated.

One of the rescuers told the press association that the ship's hero was its entertainment manager, Robin Boltman, who assembled the guests in the lounge, played music to calm their fears, and was the last person to be lifted off by the helicopters.

More than 300 other passengers and crew members who had cast off in the lifeboats were picked up by merchant vessels that changed course to rush to the scene. The ships raked the seething water with searchlights looking for survivors.

The pilot of a Hercules cargo plane circling the sinking ship related how an ore carrier kept overshooting a small rubber dinghy. The giant vessel eventually retrieved the dinghy's shivering occupants.

Transport Minister Piet Welgemoed told the South African Broadcasting Corporation that one passenger was found six miles from where the ship went down and there were fears that others had been carried off by the current.

23,700 to die violently in 1991, congressional study estimates

WASHINGTON (AP) — America will set a new, grisly record of murders this year if present trends continue, with an estimated 23,700 losing their lives to violence, a Senate Committee predicted Sunday.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden, Jr., whose Judiciary Committee majority staff compiled the report, blamed the "record carnage" on what he called the "three Ds."

They are "drugs, and the mayhem caused by hard-core drug addicts and dealers; deadly weapons, particularly the easily available military-style assault weapons; and demographics, fueling a growth in violent teen-aged gangs," said Biden, D-Del.

The 23,700 predicted homicides would be 260 more than last year's record of 23,440.

And the study estimates that Texas alone will suffer an even greater increase — about 300 more murders — reflecting that the homicidal trend is not hitting everywhere equally.

While 21 states are enduring increases in homicides, 18 are showing declines and 11 states plus the District of Columbia are staying virtually the same, changing by 1 percent or less.

Texas alone will suffer about 300 more homicides, committee predicts.

The staff, basing its predictions on the homicides during the first six months of the year and adjustments for seasonal changes, found that the risk of being murdered in America has doubled over the past 30 years.

However, the murder rate, meaning the number of people slain per 100,000 population, still would remain below that of 1980 which holds the record, with 10.2 killings for every 100,000 people.

The rate for 1991, assuming the Judiciary staff's projection is correct, would be 9.5 per 100,000. To match the 1980 record rate, there would have to be more than 25,400 slayings this year.

The years 1962 and 1963 registered the lowest rates in the past three decades: 4.6 slayings for every 100,000 people.

To counteract the increase in homicides, Biden urged passage of the Brady Bill gun control measure to prevent convicted criminals from buying guns, and a ban on military-style assault weapons.

Meanwhile, in Texas, Houston police officials have seen an increase not in drug-related murders but in robbery-homicides. There had been 56 as of late July, compared with 29 at the same time last year.

This year's homicide situation in the nation's 10 most populous states is mixed, the Judiciary Committee staff found. Four are seeing increases — Texas, Illinois, Ohio and North Carolina — while five are experiencing declines — New York, Florida, Pennsylvania, Michigan and New Jersey. The nation's most populous state, California, is holding steady.

New York's decline of 25 may not be meaningful, the staff said, because the 87 people killed in the arson fire at the Happy Land club last year were considered homicide victims. Without those murders in 1990, this year's violence would increase the number of slayings.

The committee staff's projections last year, which had anticipated a record number of murders in 1990 as well, slightly underestimated the final number, predicting 23,220 slayings. The total was 23,440.

Thornburgh expects BCCI indictments next month; defends agency's conduct

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Federal indictments of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International are expected sometime in September, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said Sunday.

Federal grand juries in Atlanta, Miami, Tampa and Washington are considering the case of the Luxembourg-based bank, which was shut down by regulators around the world on July 5. According to the Federal Reserve Board, BCCI secretly gained control of at least three U.S. financial institutions, including the First American Bank in Georgia.

Thornburgh, appearing on the CBS interview program "Face the Nation," did not say which of the federal juries he thinks will act first. "My expectation is that next month, in a month or six weeks, we'll be in a position to present the first of the indictments," he said. "They're in the area of money laundering and bank regulatory violations, but, obviously, I can't get into the details."

A state grand jury in New York City last week indicted BCCI, along with its founder, Agha Hasan Abedi and his assistant, on charges of fraud, bribery, theft and money laundering.

In congressional testimony last week, a former Senate investigator and a former head of the Customs Service charged that the Justice Department was slow to follow up leads and evidence of BCCI wrongdoing which had been unearthed as early at 1988.

Farmington, N.M., faces fears after rapes, killing

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — Two rapes and a killing within a week in Farmington left many in the city with a sense of fear that has been slow to fade.

"It's almost like a death in the family where you have to go through the stages of shock and denial," said resident Tom Kerley. "It's like we've been personally violated."

A woman jogger was beaten to death in front of Kerley's house last month.

Farmington is a normally peaceful community of 37,000 that has grown into the retail trade center for 220,000 people in a 150-mile area.

But at about 8 p.m. on July 3, a man raped a woman jogger at gunpoint in a wooded area above Lions Wilderness Park outside the northeast edge of town, police said.

The same man is believed to have raped a male jogger at 7:15 p.m. the next night at gunpoint in the same area.

Then on July 10 at 5:25 a.m., Patsy Taylor, 52, of Perryton, Texas was beaten to death while jogging through a well-kept neighborhood on Farmington's east side. Preliminary autopsy reports indicated she was not raped.

"To have the homicide happen in the same time frame, within a week of the rapes, it has gotten a lot of attention," said Farmington police Sgt. Dave Gardner. "We've had a couple of homicides in town. Usually it's people fighting over something.

"This appears random."

Gardner heads a seven-person task force looking into Taylor's death and the two rapes. Police have no suspects in the crimes.

The rapist is described by police as in his mid-20s, 5-feet-10-inches tall with a medium build, sandy blond or light brown hair and "startling" blue eyes.

Gardner said officers have not ruled out the possibility that the rapes and Taylor's killing are related.

All three incidents were unusual.

Taylor's death occurred in a neighborhood in daylight and appears to have been a random attack, Gardner said.

And the rape of a man and a woman by the same individual also is not typical.

But in spite of the unusual features, the method used by the rapist does not match evidence in the Taylor slaying, police said.

Shamir's Cabinet OKs conditional agreement on peace talks

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Cabinet gave resounding approval on Sunday to his conditional agreement to attend a Middle East peace conference under American and Soviet auspices.

Sixteen Cabinet ministers backed the the agreement that the prime minister reached on Thursday with U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III, but three ministers led by Housing Minister Ariel Sharon voted against Shamir, as they said they would do before the meeting.

Israeli government radio reported that the four-hour session was marked by personal argument between the prime minister and Sharon, who are both members of the Likud Party. The hardline housing minister accused his leader of having "fixed" the outcome with Baker before they met.

Shamir responded by charging his rival with being motivated by lust for power.

Interviewed after the session, Sharon denounced the government for placing trust in an apparent change of heart by President Hafez Assad of Syria, who in his meeting with Baker reversed Syria's stand against negotiations with Israel. He called Assad a "tyrant like Saddam Hussein" and termed his assent to the conference "a big lie."

Science Minister Yuval Neeman and Minister Without Portfolio Rehavam Zeevi, who represent small parties that reject any compromise with the Arabs over the occupied territories, also voted against the prime minister.

Neeman said his party would remain in the government only if Shamir refused to negotiate on any return of occupied areas. The prime minister has pledged not to yield any territory.

In giving his approval to Baker, Shamir said that Israel would attend only if the Palestinian representatives at the conference were not members of the Palestine Liberation Organization or residents of East Jerusalem, which Israel has annexed. When they met with Baker on Friday, Palestinian leaders made participation contingent on American guarantees that would in effect nullify Israel's restrictions.

Despite this apparently irreconcilable difference, Palestinian leaders interviewed on Sunday in East Jerusalem expressed a belief that in fact the PLO had decided to accept a formula being discussed with the United States that would permit Palestinian participation.

European peace efforts in Croatia collapse; official warns of tragedy

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — European Community efforts to broker peace in breakaway Croatia collapsed Sunday, and the leader of an EC mission warned that "tragedy and catastrophe" are looming in the troubled federation.

Dutch Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek, who headed a three-man EC peace mission for two days of talks with top Yugoslav leaders, blamed the largest republic, Serbia, for the talks' failure.

"The outside world definitely has the right to know" that the talks broke down because of the Serbian delegation's stubbornness, he said on arrival in the Netherlands.

Van den Broek said that while the Croatians realized "it was time to give up a number of frozen-in standpoints for the greater good" the Serbs refused to compromise on any point.

The breakdown in negotiations suggested a lack of "political will" to keep Yugoslavia from slipping into civil war, he said, adding: "These are fearful days for Yugoslavia."

Van den Broek said the EC will discontinue its mediation efforts but keep a team of 50 cease-fire observers in the breakaway republics of Slovenia and Croatia to monitor compliance with a July 8 accord.

The collapse of the European Community's peace efforts reduces the chances of heading off large-scale battles between Yugoslavia's two largest ethnic groups, the 9.8 million Serbs and about 5 million Croats.

Scores have already died in Serb-Croat clashes and fighting between Croats and the army since Croatia declared independence June 25. At least three Croatian policemen were reported killed Sunday.

They died in an early-morning ambush while on patrol near Karlovac, 30 miles southwest of Zagreb, the police command in the Croatian capital said.

Gorbachev orders increase in imports

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has ordered an immediate increase in production and imports of food and consumer goods in his first step toward a market economy since meeting world leaders last month.

In allocating foreign currency and credits, the trade and finance ministries should emphasize importing grain, medicine and materials or equipment needed to make goods for mass consumption, Gorbachev said in a decree the Tass news agency published Sunday.

The decree also urges republics to barter goods and services to help supply the population. It calls on the Cabinet of Ministers to adjust tariffs to encourage imports of consumer goods in wide demand, while limiting imports of luxury goods.

The decree says the national Cabinet and the governments of the 15 republics should "actively carry out a policy of privatization, de-monopolization, and development of entrepreneurship" to boost production of consumer goods.

In particular, Gorbachev recommended more rapid creation of "a market infrastructure," including trading houses, exchanges and auctions.

The decree, dated Saturday but not made public until Sunday night, was issued under special economic powers the Supreme Soviet legislature granted the president last year.

In the past, his orders often have met resistance from the republics, which claim the right to control their own natural resources and economic policies.

Soviet consumers suffer chronic shortages of many everyday items, ranging from cheese to glass bottles. Inflation has soared, and the Soviet equivalent of gross national product dropped 10 percent in the first six months of this year.

Term limitations test politicians

The idea of term limits for state offices and in Congress is sweeping the country. In the first half of this year, about 150 bills were introduced in 45 states to limit the terms of political incumbents. That includes everyone from a county executive to a U.S. senator.

Most interest is now focused on the state of Washington. A local group has managed to get about 255,000 signatures to force a statewide referendum on whether members of the U.S. House of Representatives should be removed from office after serving six years. If the initiative is approved on Nov. 5, House Speaker Thomas Foley could be retired in 1994.

The League of Women Voters and the AFL-CIO have joined forces in a bid to block term limits, particularly when they affect Congress. They argue that such limitation undermines representative democracy by denying elected officials re-election. The two organizations also say that limiting terms would cause Congress to lose expertise and knowledge about government and how Washington works. These are solid views that cannot and should not be dismissed.

However, those advocating term limits are right in saying that Congress, as a body, isn't functioning properly. Both houses have, for example, raised their salaries significantly while plunging the nation deeper into debt. Scandals like the savings and loan debacle continue. State legislatures are no better. There is wide frustration because legislators — no matter how much expertise they may have — are not performing well. All these views have merit.

So who's right? The voters, that's who. If the nation's voters believe that members of Congress and state legislatures are not living up to their responsibilities, term limits should be imposed. Congress and legislatures are already jockeying to nullify any move to limit terms. Given their track record, that's not surprising. But if lawmakers lose, they should accept the democratic verdict.

Let us see how much they really believe in democracy.

Lab kickbacks line doctors' pockets

WASHINGTON — Florida is a land of opportunity if you happen to be a doctor who isn't above referring your patients for frivolous tests so you can get a legal kickback on the fees.

Anderson

A soon-to-be-released report on medical self-referrals exposes the sleazy profits doctors earn by investing in medical labs where they send their patients for overpriced and needless procedures. The doctors who line their own pockets this way say the proliferation of medical labs increases the patient's access to proper care, especially in rural areas. But the statistics from Florida tell another story.

The research was done by Jean Mitchell and Elton Scott, two associate professors at Florida State University. Their report has not yet been released, but our associate Scott Sleek has obtained details of the contents. It shows that residents in the sunshine state are being bilked through doctors' self-referrals. The only other explanation for the data is that people in Florida have more complicated ailments than the rest of us.

The most attractive investment tool of the '90s for Florida doctors is the Magnetic Resonance Imaging machine, or MRI. They are as numerous as street-corner vendors in Florida. Mitchell and Scott found that nearly all of the centers in Florida with MRI machines are owned by doctors who refer their patients there. And nearly all of the exams conducted at those facilities are done on people with insurance. We have to believe either that people with insurance need more complex diagnostic procedures, or that poor patients are not being run through the same hoops because they can't pay for it.

The number of billings made to patients covered by insurance contradicts the claims of medical groups such as the American Medical Association and the Florida Medical Association that doctor-owned labs and clinics promote better care for the poor.

The three labs in Florida that are not owned by doctors do far less business than the doctor-owned MRI labs.

The researchers found that MRI machines are overworked, but certainly not underpaid in Florida. The study compared urban Broward County Florida with Baltimore, which has two medical schools but almost no doctor-owned MRI facilities. The rate of MRI procedures in Broward County was about 38 for every 1,000 residents compared to 12.3 per 1,000 in Baltimore. And the average charge in Broward County is $783 compared to $450 in Baltimore.

The Health and Human Services Department has announced new rules to curb self-referral abuses by doctors. HHS wants to allow doctors to stay in the business, but with limits set on the percentage of the business that comes from self-referrals. The rules are timid and would require a nightmare regulatory setup to make sure doctors weren't skirting the law with hidden ownerships and bogus billings.

Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., wants to take it a step further. He is considering a bill that would forbid doctors from referring their patients to any medical lab in which they have a financial interest, plain and simple. The doctor lobby claims that Stark's bill punishes the entire profession for the greed of a few.

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Anti-war Democrats hide behind ABM system

Nearly unnoticed and after rancorous closed-door debate, the Senate Armed Services Committee approved deployment of a system to defend the United States against missile attack.

This issue is the inner sanctum of Nuclear Wonderland to the priesthood of strategic Mad Hatters. Like no other nuclear question, it fuses esoteric theology and street politics. Like no other, it sends liberals and conservatives to their torches and thumb screws.

Gelb

How the matter is decided will set the direction of America's nuclear posture in the post-Cold War era. For starters, a decision to deploy an anti-ballistic missile system (ABMS) probably would incite Moscow to cancel the strategic arms treaty just concluded with Washington. If deployed, it would rob tens of billions from other military programs and domestic priorities.

Congress has rejected plans to deploy an ABMS ever since the ABM treaty of 1972, but the Persian Gulf war has changed the political calculus. Once Patriot missiles started ramming into Iraqi Scuds, everyone agreed that we needed more and better anti-missile missiles to protect our endangered troops and allies. And if we would shield others, how could we do less for ourselves? By this thread of logic many Democrats who had always been wary of an ABMS found themselves being trapped.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, snapped the trap last week. He crafted a bill that captured both Democrats desperate to overcome their anti-gulf war votes and Republicans long devoted to space-based or "Star Wars" defenses.

Committee members approved Nunn's proposal for a crash program to build new tactical ABMs like the Patriot. Then he drew them into the broader commitment to "deploy an anti-ballistic missile system, including one or an adequate additional number of (land-based) ABM sites and space-based sensors, capable of providing a highly effective defense of the U.S. against limited attacks of ballistic missiles."

The wily chairman kept most Democrats quiet by stressing that they had signed on simply to deploy one land-based site, allowed by the ABM treaty. He made them smile with language about negotiating with Moscow. But he made Republicans happier still with commitments to space-based sensors and accelerated funding for Brilliant Pebbles, both key Star Wars ingredients.

Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., and Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., warned their Democratic colleagues that while they had approved only one ABM site now, political and strategic logic would carry them much further. The one agreed site in North Dakota would defend only a third of the U.S. Other parts of the country would demand equal protection. And why stop at a simple system to defend against future Saddam Husseins with long-range missiles? What about protection against a breakaway Soviet republic with nuclear arms? That would require a more sophisticated, space-based system.

These arguments were not the usual liberal hysteria. The very language of the committee bill clearly leads toward an ABMS of large proportions.

If Nunn has his way, however, the conservatives will find themselves disappointed down the road as well. His strategy is to set the stage for what he calls a Grand Compromise with the Soviet Union. The idea is to trade away the full Star Wars system with thousands of space-based weapons and sensors, so feared by the technologically inferior Soviets. In return he wants Moscow's assent to a more limited system of six or eight land-based ABM sites hooked into space-based sensors.

But to travel this tortured path with the astute Nunn would be to repeat our long history of allowing the remotest of possibilities to invent reality and drive policy. Even his "limited" ABM system inevitably would undermine mutual deterrence between Moscow and Washington. For 40 years, neither side has dared launch a nuclear attack because neither could blunt a devastating retaliatory blow.

It would be foolhardy to throw away this central pillar of nuclear peace. And for what? To provide political cover for Democrats shell-shocked by the gulf war? To guard against the remote possibility of intercontinental attack by future Saddams? The cheapest and best way, politically and practically, to check the next nuclear Saddam is the way we dealt with this Saddam — by preventive attack.

Sullivan failed teen-agers by cancelling sex study

Secretary of Health and Human Services Dr. Louis Sullivan canceled a five-year, $18 million study of teen-agers' sexual behavior.

Sullivan, adopting the head-in-the-sand thinking of the political right wing, said teen-agers would interpret the study as government promotion of casual sex.

Myriam Marquez, writing for The Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel, correctly pointed out that sexual activity among teen-agers is at an all-time high, that the incidence of sexually transmitted diseases is climbing, and so is the rate of abortions.

But Marquez, unlike Sullivan's cheering section in the right wing, also points to practical solutions.

"The problem is that conservatives don't like what the solutions are," she said. "They have never accepted studies by nonprofit groups like Planned Parenthood that show how talking frankly and openly with children about sex can reduce the pregnancy rate and the abortion rate and, yes, even keep kids from having sex as early as they are today.

"... Which is why a government study under a conservative Republican administration would have been ideal. It could have presented the facts objectively. But that would have been politically incorrect for conservatives, who maintain that teaching kids abstinence is the only acceptable answer to ending the upward spiral of teen pregnancy and disease."

Facts about contraceptive methods and reproductive biology can help prevent disease and pregnancy among those who, despite what anybody else wants, choose to be sexually active.

Let's also be clear about another point: Responsible sex education doesn't promote abortions as birth control. On the contrary, it seeks to prevent the need for abortions by preventing pregnancy with responsible, factual, straightforward information.

When adults who think they know it all stop acting like spoiled children, responsible people working together may be able to reverse some of the tragic consequences of uninformed and irresponsible sexual activity among teen-agers.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 5, the 217th day of 1991. There are 148 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 5, 1962, actress Marilyn Monroe was found dead in the bedroom of her Los Angeles home. Her death was ruled a "probable suicide" caused by an overdose of sleeping pills. Monroe was 36.

On this date:

In 1861, the federal government levied an income tax for the first time.

In 1864, during the Civil War, Union Admiral David G. Farragut is said to have given his famous order, "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead!" as he led his fleet against Mobile Bay, Ala.

In 1884, the cornerstone for the Statue of Liberty was laid on Bedloe's Island in New York Harbor.

In 1914, the first electric traffic lights were installed, in Cleveland.

In 1924, the comic strip "Little Orphan Annie," by Harold Gray, made its debut.

In 1957, "American Bandstand," hosted by Dick Clark, made its network debut on ABC.

Five years ago: It was revealed that artist Andrew Wyeth had, over a 15-year period, secretly created 240 drawings and paintings of a woman named Helga Testorf, a neighbor in Chadds Ford, Penn.

POW/MIA coverup needs to be exposed

Soldiers, like tax dollars, are expendable.

That's the answer to the question, How could the U.S. government abandon prisoners of war and then lie to cover it up? Because, like their comrades killed and wounded in the war, the soldiers left over after the war are expendable.

Reese

War casualties are used by politicians in pursuit of a political goal. Obviously, a government willing to lose 57,000 lives in Vietnam would not hesitate to lose a few hundred more in pursuit of another political goal.

A dishonorable act once committed, a lie once told, cannot be later admitted. That would open up the possibility of retribution, political if not legal. It would wreck political reputations. That's why a simple denial by the government of any wrongdoing won't cut it in the face of so much evidence that appears to contradict the denial.

The gist of the issue is this. Critics contend there were POWs left behind. The government knew they were there. It denied they were there. Having denied they were there, it went and continues to go to extraordinary lengths to discredit all evidence to the contrary.

Here is one example of the case against the government.

Since 1973, the government said publicly it knew of no living Americans in Southeast Asia. Six years later, Bobby Garwood, a Marine, came out. The government charged and convicted him of desertion and collaboration — to discredit him, critics say — but, in the process, the government admitted that it had known all along Garwood was alive in Vietnam. In other words, the government convicted itself of lying when it said it knew of no living Americans remaining in Vietnam.

Of course to any aware American, our government's credibility is on a par with that of North Vietnam. In fact, one of our greatest needs is to restore the credibility of our government. We've had Watergate, Koreagate, arms for hostages, the Iran-Contra affair — each and everyone involving intelligence areas of the government, each and everyone involving lies and public deception.

Most recently we have learned yet again that the Central Intelligence Agency lied to Congress about the Iran-Contra matter.

Lies to the American people have unfortunately become routine. Nor is that surprising. Covert activities of necessity involve lies. You cannot tell the truth about a covert activity and keep it covert.

The people with a credibility problem are not the families of the missing in action and those trying to help them. The people with the credibility problem are in the government — in the White House, in the State Department, in the Central Intelligence Agency, and in the Department of Defense.

The Department of Defense likes to say it has been investigated and found pure in regard to the MIA/POWs. If so, why does it hide behind security classfication? Why does it resist releasing the live sighting reports, at least to Congress? Why has it insisted that it had recovered remains when it at least in one case, an independent forensic expert said no identification was possible? Why has it systematically pursued a policy of discrediting, sometimes with vicious character assassinations, all the critics of its MIA efforts no matter how distinguished they were? Why has it pursued a policy, verified by two senators and its own most recent head of the POW/MIA office, of systematically discounting all of the known 1,400 live sighting reports? Some of them are spurious, sure. But all? Not likely.

It is long past time for the American people to demand of their congressmen and senators that they put people under oath with the threat of perjury prosecutions and root out the truth. After all, these people have been deceiving and stonewalling Congress, too.

Let's have the truth at last. Insist on it. And don't let them con you.

Vietnamese 'cowboy' gangs terrorize own people

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — The pistol-waving bandits shouted in Vietnamese as they burst into the house: "Tell us where your jewelry is or we'll kill you!"

Tying up the terrified Vietnamese family, they forced the children to watch as one intruder twisted their mother's leg and threatened to break it if she didn't reveal where valuables were hidden. Another bandit yanked the pants off the woman's 27-year-old niece and threatened to rape her.

This was no 1970s scene in war-torn Vietnam. It happened last year in Renton, a Seattle suburb. The victims were Vietnamese refugees, among the 1.2 million Southeast Asians who have resettled in America since 1975.

And the bandits? They and others like them have become the scourge of Vietnamese refugee neighborhoods across the United States. Banding together in violent gangs, these alienated Vietnamese youths roam the roadways coast to coast, bullying, torturing, robbing and extorting their own people.

Authorities call them "cowboys" for the whoop-and-holler, gun-toting home invasions that have become their trademark. The marauding gangs have existed for several years, but now they're growing bolder, more violent and more organized, experts say.

In February, five gang members stormed the Queen of Vietnamese Martyrs Parish, a Catholic church near Denver, where 30 worshipers were celebrating the Lunar New Year. The bandits demanded wallets and jewelry. When one man resisted, they shot him in the leg. The next day, five suspects were arrested speeding down a Kansas highway.

Last October, a gang from Texas rode into Lowell, Mass., where Cambodian and Vietnamese refugees now comprise at least 15 percent of the city's 100,000 residents.

"In the course of one weekend, they extorted every single Southeast Asian grocery in the city, about 15 stores. When that didn't work, they robbed them," said Jeffrey Davidson, a Lowell police inspector. Eight gang members were arrested.

In April, four gang members, ethnic Chinese from Vietnam, took over an electronics store in Sacramento, Calif. They demanded $4 million and free air passage to Thailand, shooting two hostages to prove they were serious. Police stormed the store; three hostages were killed by gunmen and three gang members were killed by police.

The Sacramento incident was unusual, experts said, because gang members chose a non-Asian target and seemed to be looking more for recognition than for money. But the violence did not surprise anyone familiar with the gangs.

"The Vietnamese gangs are testing the limits of American law enforcement," said William Cassidy, a Los Angeles-area private investigator specializing in Vietnamese crime.

Long-held fears of a Vietnamese crime syndicate are now being realized, Cassidy said.

"You've got seasoned, professional gangsters using cowboy crews nationally," he said. "There are the beginnings of a Vietnamese Mafia specializing in auto theft and burglary, robbery of gold, diamond and jewelry stores, extortion, and public corruption."

The Renton robbery, which occurred in March 1990, provides a case study of how a cowboy crew operates. Starting at their home base in San Jose, Calif., Phong Nguyen, 23, Giang Vo, 22, and Trung Le, 20, rented a shiny new Cadillac and drove overnight up the coast to Seattle, where they contacted friends.

The men staked out a Nordstrom department store until they saw two prosperous-looking Vietnamese women leave. Then they followed the women home, rushing into the garage as the women parked their car.

For nearly two hours, the bandits terrorized the family, ransacking the house and threatening to kill them if they called police. They fled with $10,000 in jewelry and cash.

The gangs choose Vietnamese families because they know refugees distrust banks and often keep their wealth at home in the form of gold and jewels. They also know refugees are reluctant to call police, who in Vietnam were often as corrupt as the criminals.

Jerry Blunk dazzles his audience with his new career, a clown magician.

Retiree discovers childhood after taking magic as hobby

WACO (AP) — When Jerry Blunk took up magic six years ago, he pulled something better than a rabbit out of his hat.

He grabbed a second childhood.

The 77-year-old retired United Airlines manager began seriously studying the hobby to stay busy. Instead, its illusions of mystery and mirth hooked his heart, and have built a bona fide retirement career for Blunk, clowning for both young and old across the area and beyond.

"I don't aspire to be a television magician and make the Statue of Liberty disappear," he said. "I just want to give people a little fun."

The thrill of illusion appeared in Blunk's life early. As a youngster, he would watch clowns perform in the traveling circuses that set up their big tops in his town.

"They were free and happy and had the ability to make people laugh," he recalled. "That's important."

Blunk would impress his family and friends with rubber band hand deceptions and sponge ball routines.

"They're pocket tricks is what they are," he said. "Nothing spectacular."

Days were too tough then for him to consider a career in magic.

"I never pursued it. I was busy making a living," Blunk said. "During the Depression, we didn't always have the time and money."

The magic never completely left his life, however, and with retirement came the hours to devote.

Blunks' wife, Virginia, a former teacher, said at first she did not understand his excitement.

"He just said, 'I'm going to do this with my time,'" she said. "I said, 'We're too old for that.' He likes it better than golf."

From clown work with a local organization and magic classes at McLennan Community College, Blunk began attending seminars held as far away as San Francisco led by Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey circus people.

His bag of tricks is now worth about $4,000, and comes in roughly 200 varieties.

"He's a good clown-type magician," said Taylor Keen, who instructed Blunk on the art at college. "He's just a real outgoing guy who likes to work for senior citizens. He just wants to help other people."

The desire failed to diminish even as Blunk, the only grandfather in Keen's class, stood on stage during graduation "exams" in front of teen-age classmates.

"We had to swallow fire," he said. "I thought, 'What am I doing up here?' At my age, I ought to be home watching television."

Now that he's been at it awhile, even Virginia has changed her mind.

"She's 100 percent behind it," he said.

LCRA tries out electric van

AUSTIN (AP) — The 60-mile roundtrip to Bastrop would be risky. And the more distant drive to Smithville would likely run aground in Garfield on the way back.

But for errands within Austin, an electric-powered van being tested by the Lower Colorado River Authority is touted as a nearly pollution-free alternative to traditional transportation.

"We see this is going to evolve and be the primary mode of commuter vehicle in the future," said Robert Turner, LCRA's project manager. "This is sort of a Wright brothers venture. Battery technology has advanced. Battery technology is the final breakthrough."

The LCRA recently purchased one of a dozen of these electric-powered passenger vans distributed in Texas and is participating in a U.S. Department of Energy program researching the practical uses of the vehicles.

"The utility is going to be the filling station for these in the future," Turner said. "The utility needs to be in the initial phase of the program."

The river authority will test the vehicle under various road and climate conditions and supply monthly data to the five-state South Central Electric Vehicle Consortium based at Texas A&M University. The consortium recently received a five-year $600,000 federal grant to coordinate the research.

The consortium, established in 1989, includes a half-dozen electric utilities. A City of Austin membership application is pending and Austin, Denton and Garland officials also are exploring buying the vans, said Bill Craven, manager of the consortium.

Craven said that although electric vehicles have been tested for decades, these Canadian-manufactured vans are the first to be mass-produced and highway-certified. About 150 of the vans are in use nationwide and the goal is to have 10,000 built annually within five years.

While the $53,000 vehicles now cost about twice that of a comparable gasoline-powered van, the price tag will be about the same if the production goal is met, Craven said.

The van's range is 60 miles, though one has gone 83 miles, Craven said. A six- to eight-hour charge will allow for the maximum range. Top speed is 60 mph, but 55 mph is the recommended maximum, Craven said.

A 50-mile van trip would cost about $3.30 in electric fuel based on 6 cents per kilowatt hour, said Craven. The cost is about 30 percent less than for a gasoline-powered van rated at 13 miles per gallon.

The most crucial maintenance is plugging the van in at night to an electric current converter, which adapts household voltage for the van's use.

As a state agency, the LCRA is required by law to convert at least half its fleet by Sept. 1, 1996, to vehicles that can use alternative fuels. While the law promotes the use of compressed natural gas instead of gasoline, electricity would be an alternative.

Electric cars — which would be mainly charged at night — would benefit electric utilities by increasing their sales and allowing generating facilities to be used when electric demand is less.

But the main consideration is for the environment, proponents say.

"I think it's important all utilities get involved, not for the purpose of selling electricity, but for the purpose of saving the planet," LCRA general manager Mark Rose said. "Electric cars are part of the solution to many environmental concerns."

Cat treks 1,400 miles to locate former owners

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — It took Sam four years to traverse more than 1,400 miles, but the black-and-white Siamese cat finally made it home.

Sam's owners, Linda Thompson and her two sons, moved from Beaver Dam, Wis., to southern Arizona in 1986. A year later they returned to Beaver Dam.

They left Sam behind in Arizona, at the Tucson Humane Society. Thompson said she was driving back and didn't want to be bothered with a cat.

In June, the cat showed up a few houses from where the Thompsons used to live in Beaver Dam. Neighbors alerted Thompson to an "anti-social" cat that had made a home in their garage, she said.

One of her sons recognized Sam, now about 7 years old, she said.

"The cat seemed to remember all of us," Thompson said. "It feels real good to have him back home."

They identified Sam by distinguishing features, including scars on top of his head, she said.

He was thin and malnourished, but now "he's fattening up and his coat is looking healthy," she said.

No one knows how the cat made the journey of 1,429 miles.

"It's unusual for any animal to travel that distance, but some dogs have done it," said James Bassett, Tucson Humane Society operations director.

The cat probably slipped away from an adoptive family in Tucson, Bassett said.

Illegal alien goes to jail to learn to speak English

ALPINE (AP) — Almost any teacher would love to have a student with the burning desire to learn that Tony has exhibited — so intense that he has insisted on going to jail to have the opportunity to learn the English language. He is only one of several unusual students in Sara Stropoli's classes in Alpine.

Sara fills a unique teaching position in the area. She teaches English to probationers and to prisoners in the Brewster County jail. She also teaches GED classes in the county courthouse.

Tony is an illegal alien who was apprehended by agents of the U.S. Border Patrol in Brewster County.

In addition to being illegally in the country, he was in possession of forged documents that compounded his problem. He was looking at a potentially long jail term and a heavy fine because of the documents.

Tony was driving an automobile with California license plates and had about $1,000 in cash in his possession when he was arrested.

He was brought before Federal Magistrate Kathleen Baker in Alpine, who appointed attorney Mike Barkley to represent him.

Tony spoke no English, Baker and Barkley spoke no Spanish. The arresting officer interpreted for the group.

Since Tony had money and a vehicle and was " . . . looking for a job," the offer was made for him to pay a small fine and be transported to the border in lieu of the major penalties that could have been imposed.

When this was proposed to Tony, he refused. Everyone thought he had misunderstood, according to Barkley. Upon further questioning, Tony continued to insist that he had to be sent to jail. Finally, the judge, attorney and immigration officer decided that Tony meant what he said, and that he was not confused. They asked him why.

Tony said that he had been in California for several years and had tried unsuccessfully any number of times to get into a program in which he could learn English. He told them that he had heard that there was a " . . . lady who taught English in the Brewster County Jail," and that he wanted to go there to learn the language.

After becoming convinced that Tony was sincere, Baker sentenced him to 90 days in the Brewster County Jail with the proviso that he would not be transferred to other facilities.

"He got a scholarship," Barkley said.

Tony is the prize student in Stropoli's unusual class in her unusual classroom — the drunk tank of the century-old Brewster County Jail.

"He has a very strong desire to learn the English language," Stropoli said. "He is trying very hard and becoming more comfortable every day," she continued with obvious pride in her student's accomplishments.

She said that she is using Tony to help teach the alphabet to new students.

Course on sign language fills gap of misperception

WACO (AP) — Moving through the junior high school hallways of her youth, Diane Cotto never stopped noticing the polarization.

Deaf students banded together, rarely making contact with hearing classmates. Those who weren't impaired used the impediment as an excuse to ignore, she said.

"Anything that was different, you were intimidated or scared by it," Cotto said. "We didn't hang around with them, we didn't go where they were at. That's part of being a child."

The presence of the deaf students did arouse Cotto's curiosity, however. But when she asked her father why deaf people couldn't talk, the chasm only widened.

"My parents would say, 'Well, they were born that way.' That's not a very good response to a kid who's looking for answers," the Waco resident said. "I was brought up to think if they couldn't hear, they couldn't learn."

Cotto's perceptions started changing when she gave birth to a deaf child almost eight years ago. The resulting education has prompted the program on sign language for children she is presenting this week at two Waco library branches.

A question-and-answer session gives youngsters a short, fun crash course on sign language and deafness, she said. Underneath that is the hope it can help close some gaps.

It is evident that is already beginning to happen.

A 2-year-old signing course for adolescents, which earlier this month finished its summer run at McLennan Community College, attests to the growing popularity of the special language among youngsters.

About 50 children from third through eighth grades registered for the class. About 35 students in 1990 signed up for the original course, teacher Colleen McCormick said.

Why so popular?

Simple. Children today are more exposed to deaf and hearing impaired people, she said. They see it in episodes of "Sesame Street," where one of the featured characters copes despite the handicap, and in school texts, which devote illustrated pages to the signs of the alphabet.

More and more deaf students in Texas schools are being mainstreamed into hearing classrooms to learn both education and social skills, Cotto added.

Waco schools have a deaf education program that lasts from preschool to secondary school.

In state high schools, a move is afoot to make the study of signing an official foreign language, McCormick added.

'I did it," Mitchell Ray beamed after successfully navigating the obstacle course at Morning Star Farms.

For a few minutes, the usually wheelchair-bound youngster felt the exhilaration of controlling a horse going through its paces on a rudimentary course of barrels and rails. But his excitement was equal that of any Kentucky Derby winner.

The event was last week's Third Annual CP Center Rodeo at Morning Star Farms in north Midland.

The all-day event gives participants in the Cerebral Palsy Center's eight-week summer activity program a chance to show off the riding skills they have acquired.

Horseback therapy is one of six aspects of the program, which incorporates occupational, physical and speech therapies, aquatics and dance, as well as riding.

The therapeutic goal of horseback riding is three-fold — balance, coordination and sensory stimulation, explained Debbie Newcum, an occupational therapist at the center, who supervises the program along with Brooke Mueller.

"The three-plane rhythmic motion of the horse most closely resembles the human gait of anything we can use," Ms. Newcum said. "Not even specifically created machines can match the horses."

The CP Center's summer riding program also has served as a first exposure to an activity in which disabled youngsters can compete equally.

"We have had several riders who have advanced to competitive riding at local 'play days' and horse shows," Ms. Newcum said.

But on Wednesday, all 30 riders who participated took home a trophy, "because they're all winners," their therapist said.

Marcus Barron, 4, displays a smile after an event.

Taxpayers hold stake in Billy Bob's

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Billy Bob's Texas, which calls itself the world's largest honky-tonk, may want to consider a name change — to something like Uncle Sam's.

Since bankrupt entrepreneur Billy Bob Barnett no longer has anything to do with the Fort Worth, Texas, club, the most notable owner of the complex these days is none other than the federal government.

The collapse of thrifts and banks in Texas has left taxpayers with a 25 percent stake in the club and an adjacent retail area in Fort Worth's historic Stockyards district. So every time a customer sidles up to Billy Bob's for a beer, a portion of the bill goes into Uncle Sam's pockets.

Barnett, reached at his new club in New Orleans, was not aware of the government's role in the club that still bears his name. Asked about changing the name from Billy Bob's to Uncle Sam's, Barnett laughed, "That'd be a good idea. That might sell."

The government shares came from the Resolution Trust Corp.'s takeover of Fort Worth's Nowlin Savings Association, which held 20 percent of a $10.5 million loan to Billy Bob and his partners, and from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s seizure of three small Texas banks that each owned a 1.8 percent stake.

Suddenly, (federal) regulators find themselves with the distinction of being honky-tonk bureaucrats, part owners of the rollicking bar that is so closely identified with Fort Worth.

Like everything else the RTC and FDIC own, the Billy Bob's and Stockyards holdings are for sale. However, the government's minority shares are part of a defunct loan made by Nowlin and 12 banks. The holdings will be included in the sale of the entire complex, which was collateral for the loan.

The assets include Billy Bob's itself, the now-closed Brown Derby restaurant, the nearly empty retail area known as the Exhibit Hall on Rodeo Plaza and a 4-acre parking lot.

"We are working with the other lenders. You can't split off the 20 percent," said RTC Dallas spokeswoman Teresa McUsic, referring to the actual real estate. However, a buyer could purchase the government's share of the loans and wait for the eventual sale of the property.

Suddenly, regulators find themselves with the distinction of being honky-tonk bureaucrats, part owners of the rollicking bar that is so closely identified with Fort Worth.

After having been shut down in January 1988, Billy Bob's reopened in November 1988 and is being operated by Link Management Co., headed by local businessman Holt Hickman. The facility continues to be owned by the syndicate of banks and thrifts, and the lead bank for the $10.5 million failed loan — the one that will make a decision on a sale — is Texas Independent Bank of Dallas.

The club is now profitable, Hickman said, but he complained that he and his partners are operating without a lease.

"It's the most unfair thing I've ever seen in 40 years in business," he said. "The banks can't make any decisions."

In 1990, he said he paid the banks $340,000 and "we lost money."

Asked if the RTC and FDIC presence is contributing to a delay in signing a lease, Hickman replied: "I don't think the government is causing this. I think it's a bunch of bankers."

Gayle Earls, president and chief executive officer of Texas Independent Bank, said the 13 financial institutions that made the loan have a short-term arrangement with Hickman and his partners and are willing to negotiate a long-term lease.

"We're trying to maximize the property," Earls said. "We've engaged a commercial broker to get the vacancies filled. Once that's done, our intent is to sell the operation."

Texas Independent Bank, a banker's bank that only serves member institutions, has brought in realty brokers Christon Co. of Dallas.

"We've been hired to see what we can come up with. We're concentrating on leasing the area," said senior vice president Eddie Liebman. "It's hard to sell property when it's vacant."

Hickman, who owns 76 acres in the Stockyards district, is part of a team of developers active in revitalizing the area and appears to be a logical buyer for Billy Bob's.

"We're willing to buy it, but not at an artificial price because they made a bad loan," Hickman said.

Billy Bob's is appraised at $1.3 million, he said, much less than what he thinks the financial institutions want for it. Earls said that no price has been set.

The rise and fall of Billy Bob's in many ways mirrors the fortunes of Texas' go-go years in the early 1980s. Opened in 1981, Billy Bob's became synonymous with Fort Worth, quickly becoming one of the city's most popular tourist draws with big-name entertainment and down-home atmosphere.

To finance a renovation and expansion of the nightclub and nearby facilities, Barnett and his partners obtained the $10.5 million loan in 1985. It was all part of a vision to make the Stockyards a Wild West resort, a "Williamsburg of the West."

"We thought it was a good loan," recalled Wade Nowlin, former chairman of Nowlin Savings. "Billy Bob had great ideas about how to make it work. We always thought that effort and that hype would make it into a real feature tourist attraction."

Former House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, got involved in boosting the Stockyards area, too, by earmarking more than $11 million in economic development funds for the north side in 1985 and 1986. However, Commerce Department officials refused to release the grants, and to this day the money is tied up in red tape. The city recently tried again to obtain the funding.

By January 1988, the oil and real estate market collapse had taken its toll on the state, and the financial institutions foreclosed on the loan that was secured by Billy Bob's and the neighboring complex, shutting down the operation.

Modern medicine's miracle, Faith, turns 1

BURLESON (NYT) — Teri Alexander proudly showed off the Mickey Mouse party decorations, complemented with pink and blue streamers and dozens of balloons waiting to be filled with air.

Her biggest concern, she said last week, was picking up enough party supplies for the more than 60 guests expected Sunday at her Burleson home for an early celebration her daughter Faith's first birthday.

"You'd think you could buy more than eight cups without having to buy a tablecloth, too," Alexander said, laughing as she shuffled the prepackaged decorations strewn on her dining room table. "What am I going to do with eight tablecloths?"

But concern over party supplies pales sharply beside her worries a year ago, when Faith Nicole Alexander was born three months prematurely after undergoing historic in-utero surgery. Doctors initially gave the child, who turns 1 today, only a 50-50 chance of survival.

Strangers nowadays are surprised to learn of Faith's yearlong climb toward more stable health, her mother said. A quick glance at the brown-haired, blue-eyed tot who chuckles often, utters baby sounds constantly and kicks and waves vigorously for attention can seem misleading.

"Everyone thinks she's always been like this when they first meet her," said Alexander, 31. "But when I think back to this time last year ... the present is such a blessing. For her body to have gone through what it did and to be as healthy as she is ... is just a miracle."

The miracle began 13 months ago when Teri Alexander became the first Texan to undergo an experimental operation to try to save her unborn child from an often-fatal defect that afflicts one in 2,400 infants.

Faith had a diaphragmatic hernia that allowed some of her abdominal organs to slip through a hole in her diaphragm into her chest, stunting her lung development.

Without in-utero surgery, the baby would have suffered severe breathing problems and would have had less than a 25 percent chance to live. The surgery had been performed on eight other fetuses, but the first six did not survive.

On July 5 last year, surgeons at the University of California's Fetal Treatment Center in San Francisco partially removed Faith from her mother's womb to cut underneath the fetal diaphragm and shift the misplaced organs back into her abdomen. They patched the hole with a synthetic fabric and returned the baby to the womb.

When medication failed to stop premature labor, Faith was delivered by Caesarean section Aug. 5, 1990, exactly one month after the surgery. Weighing only 3 pounds and 2 ounces, she was smaller and more fragile than some of the stuffed toys that now line her bedroom floor.

In January, Fort Worth doctors mended Faith's original diaphragm hole once more when they found that it had reopened, and abdominal organs again had crept into her chest.

But since then, Faith, named for last summer's constant prayers, steadily has climbed the ladder to better health, according to her parents and doctors.

"She's small for her age, but she's very healthy and made lots of improvements," said Dr. Dick Ellis, a Fort Worth children's surgeon who operated on Faith in January and has monitored her progress since.

One sign of that progress is Faith's weight gain, Ellis said. Although she now appears healthier at 17 pounds, the girl had dwindled to a meager 5½ pounds during the January ordeal.

Her lungs also have grown to near normal size for a child her age, after being underdeveloped at birth because of her prematurity and the crowding caused by the misplaced organs, Ellis said. Faith's breathing now is fairly normal, he said.

However, her health complications have not completely subsided, and her development is somewhat delayed, factors that led to Teri Alexander's decision to leave her job as an Alcon secretary. Her 28-year-old husband, Mike, a Dallas Area Rapid Transit mechanic, is the sole income provider.

While at home June 2, her daughter suddenly stopped breathing and turned blue momentarily for still-unexplained reasons, Teri Alexander said. Faith was hospitalized for three days while doctors ran tests and made sure she had not suffered a hernia relapse, Alexander said.

Faith is being fed formula through a rubber stopperlike opening in her left side because she was weaned from a bottle during the January relapse. And she suffers from mild asthma that necessitates medicated mists several times daily to clear her airways, her mother said.

11 judges appoint campaign-backing attorneys, report shows

HOUSTON (AP) — At least 11 felony court judges in Harris County are making a significant number of appointments for indigent defendants based on attorneys' campaign contributions, a Houston newspaper reported Sunday.

In a copyright story, The Houston Post said a review of the 12 judges who received contributions in 1990, 11 accepted campaign contributions from lawyers they later appointed to represent indigent defendants. Six of those judges got more than half of their campaign contributions from such attorneys.

Although the practice is legal, some judges and attorneys say it raises question about their ethics.

"This court doesn't accept contributions from anybody who works in the criminal law area," said State District Judge Michael McSpadden, the only one of the 12 that didn't take such money. "I hear it from everybody outside the system — there's a terrible perception that justice is for hire with the campaign contributions that are accepted. The whole perception makes the system stink."

Last year, Harris County paid $14.4 million for legal fees for indigent defendants in felony and misdemeanor courts.

The Post compared monthly reports by the Harris County auditor's office that detail payments to appointed lawyers with attorneys' names on campaign contribution filings. The newspaper said the contributions could be higher still, because some attorney also contribute through their firms.

Judges taking the contributions say the money is tough to avoid because of the difficulties in raising campaign funds. They note that average contributions to civil court judges are far greater than for those serving in criminal courts.

"As long as we have to be elected, it is the only way we have the means to get money to finance our campaigns," said State District Judge Jay Burnett, who received 10 of his 12 campaign contributions in 1990 from attorneys he later appointed to cases.

Burnett and fellow State District Judge Lupe Salinas said they don't allow the contributions to influence their actions on the bench.

Lawmakers debate state budget

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — The Texas House worked late Sunday night on a two-year, $56.1 billion state budget that some lawmakers said needed to be trimmed and others said was so lean it would damage state services.

As proposed, the measure would require about $1.6 billion in new state revenue. More than 100 amendments were offered.

The bill would allow an additional $1.57 billion in spending in priority areas including education, prisons and welfare services — but only if lawmakers come up with the extra money through tax increases or cuts in other areas.

The budget was debated the day before the House was tentatively scheduled to consider a state lottery proposal, which would bring in $450 million over the next two years, and a $3.3 billion proposed increase in fees and taxes.

Lawmakers have been working to make budget cuts and come up with new revenue, in the face of a $4.8 billion projected shortfall in the money needed to continue current services for the next two years.

Although the spending bill recommended by the House Appropriations Committee would exceed spending in the current budget cycle by billions, lawmakers said it still would fall short of the level needed to continue that current level of services and meet court orders.

"The majority of the committee wanted to deliver to you a budget that would represent the very minimum government should do over the next two years," said Rep. Ric Williamson, D-Weatherford, committee vice-chairman.

The budget proposal would lower by $200 million the spending increase for human services, making fewer people eligible for nursing home care, lawmakers said. It would slash $500 million from higher education, which university officials said would hurt programs.

The measure would spend $760 million less than called for under the state's new school-finance law, which lawmakers said would force local school property taxes to go up. Gov. Ann Richards said she wouldn't support that cut, demanding that lawmakers fully fund the school bill they approved last April.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, right, answers questions Sunday with committee members Henry Cuellar, left, and Richard Williamson.

Necessary funding for operating prisons also was excluded from the bill, said Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

An amendment adopted 68-63 by the House would spend the additional $1.57 billion on those programs if that funding later is approved.

Not counting the $1.57 billion option, the bill would require $32.56 billion over the next two years from the General Revenue Fund, the main state bank account.

That is $1.6 billion more than the comptroller has estimated will be available. General revenue does not include federal money or revenue dedicated to specific purposes.

The general revenue spending would fall $2.86 billion short of the "current services" level, according to the House Research Organization.

The current services budget includes court-required spending on prisons and on mental health and mental retardation programs; federal mandates, and such items as interest payments on outstanding bonds.

The House rejected a proposal by Rep. Talmadge Heflin, R-Houston, to whittle another $869.5 million from the budget proposal.

Opponents said his proposed amendment, which would take most of the money from human services, would cost the state $2 billion in federal matching funds.

Rep. Jack Vowell, R-El Paso, said Heflin's amendment would be a "total disaster" for poor people who rely on government services.

Rep. Fred Hill, R-Richardson, said that when budget cuts are discussed, "The one list of people they never talk about is the 17 million people out there who pay the taxes in this state."

He said the proposal is $8 billion more than the budget approved by lawmakers for the current two-year budget cycle, and questioned the spending priorities it sets.

Fistfight turns into gunfight; 2 die, 3 hurt

GRAND PRAIRIE — Two men were killed and three youths injured when a fistfight escalated into fatal semi-automatic gunfire at a west Grand Prairie apartment complex, police say.

John Fitzgerald Greer, 19 was fatally shot early Saturday while trying break up the fight, according to witnesses and police.

Also killed was Derrick Lamont Louden, 22.

A 16-year-old was shot in the left hand, but was treated at Dallas-Fort Worth Medical Center and later released. A 15-year-old was shot in his upper right arm and a 17-year-old was shot in his right ankle and upper right leg. The two were treated and released at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas.

Perry Glenn Grundy, 21, was arrested on capital murder charges with bail set at $50,000, police said. Grundy and another man whose name was not released were being held in Grand Prairie City Jail.

Houston pastor faces charges of extortion

HOUSTON — A southeast Houston pastor has been arrested for extorting money from the landlord of a nearby dance hall, the Houston Post reported Sunday.

The Rev. Jack D. Bolt, 59, pastor of Bethany Temple Assembly of God, posted a $24,000 bond early Sunday and was released from Harris County Jail. He was charged with felony theft of an amount more than $750 and less than $20,000.

Bolt threatened to shut down the nearby Wagon Wheel Dance Hall through liquor license complaints unless $15,000 was paid to him, said Bobby Nash, who owns the hall with Frank Metcalfe.

Metcalfe and Nash said Bolt accepted $12,000 from Nash in a parking lot near the dance hall Saturday.

Bolt's meeting with Nash was recorded by the district attorney's office and the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, they said.

"Money did change hands and the man was arrested," Nash said.

Rusk County, USPS investigate explosions

HENDERSON — Bombs in six Rusk County mailboxes and a mail drop box in Henderson exploded over the weekend, county officials said Saturday.

Sgt. Jerry Hays of the Rusk County Sheriff's Department said bombs exploded in mailboxes on Farm-to-Market Road 1798, FM 840 and County Road 366.

Investigating officer Deputy Ed Chaney said the six boxes were on two rural routes and did not contain mail when the explosives went off.

Chaney said the devices were fuse-type and homemade. He said the materials to build them can be purchased over-the-counter.

Chaney said the United States Postal Service is investigating the incidents in conjunction with the Rusk County Sheriff's Department.

Gov. Richards steps up push for state lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards, stepping up her push for a state lottery, took to the airwaves Sunday to encourage Texans to personally ask their lawmakers to approve lottery legislation.

The alternative, she said, is "a huge" tax increase.

"It's a question of money. Either we get it from a lottery — or we'll get it from a huge tax bill," Richards said in a videotaped message offered to television stations statewide.

The House has defeated lottery bills repeatedly since 1983. But backers are hoping that the projected $4.8 billion deficit facing lawmakers will turn the tide in favor of the gambling game.

"The choice is simple, I think. Either we have a huge tax bill or we approve a lottery. That's what it comes down to," Richards said in the 1-minute, 25-second broadcast.

'The choice is simple, I think. Either we have a huge tax bill or we approve a lottery. That's what it comes down to.'

— Gov. Ann Richards

The Texas Constitution prohibits lotteries. The legislation being considered would require ratification by voters.

If approved, a Texas state lottery would generate an estimated $450 million in 1992-93, and more than $1 billion a year after that.

Richards urged viewers to pick up their telephones and put pressure on House members to approve the lottery proposal, which is tentatively scheduled for debate on Monday.

"There are special interests who have opposed a lottery for a long time. They are here (at the Capitol) today, putting on a full-court press to keep you from having a choice," the governor said.

"If you want that opportunity (to vote), you must contact your representative in the next 12 hours. The choice should be yours. Don't let anyone take that away from you," she said.

While the governor was promoting lottery legislation, a coalition of anti-gambling groups was opposing it.

The groups distributed a 45-page document to lawmakers entitled, "Good Reasons to Oppose the Lottery.

"The lottery is a drastic change in the role of government, diverting the traditional mission of promoting the general welfare to that of actively promoting a gambling activity," said the coalition's pamphlet.

Sue Cox, executive director of Texans Who Care, said a lottery would be only a short-term fix and "make the state the biggest gambling promoter in Texas."

Couple spends their wedding night in wrong condo

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your readers are sending in their crazy wedding night stories, so here's ours:

When Rick and I married, Dec. 14, 1985, we had only a weekend to honeymoon, so we took my aunt's advice and rented a condo on the beach in Rosarito, Mexico. After the wedding, we made the two-hour drive, arriving at the gated entrance after dark. We asked the Spanish-speaking guard to point us in the right direction to our rented unit, showing him the street address.

Van Buren

Upon finding our condo, we could not imagine why the key wasn't in the potted plant by the door where the owner promised it would be. Also, my aunt had told us that the unit was right on the beach — this one was across the street. Finally, Rick climbed the balcony and entered the condo through the sliding glass door; then he opened the front door for me. We had brought along groceries and even logs for the fireplace, so we made a delicious dinner and built a romantic fire in the fireplace. It was a perfect wedding night.

The next morning, I decided to go outside and try to find the key. When I looked on the wall above the potted plant, I saw a ceramic plaque with the condo's full address — a completely different street name than the condo we had reserved! I don't think I have ever washed dishes faster than I did that morning! We made the bed, cleaned up the place and ran out the door as fast as we could — scared to death, but laughing hysterically. We drove as fast as we could to the right condo — just a few blocks down the street.

We never did find out who owned that first condo, but if the owners happen to see this in print, "Thank you, and we are sorry!" —KRISTA AND RICK TOBERIO, SAN CLEMENTE, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: When I was 11, my parents divorced and my mother moved to another state and took me with her. I saw my father only three times until I was 15. I've talked to him over the telephone a few times. (I called him — he has never called me, not even on my birthday.) He is now remarried and living a comfortable life with his second wife and two stepchildren.

How can a father ignore his own blood child? I have tried over and over to build some kind of relationship with him, but it hasn't taken hold. I admit, I've had some problems growing up. I dropped out of high school, and every time I called him he mentioned it, saying I didn't live up to his expectations, so I finally quit calling him.

I haven't called him in two years. I am 21 now. Should I give up or keep trying? It probably shouldn't bother me after 10 years, but he is still my dad. Well, maybe if he reads your column he will recognize me. Sign me ... "ORPHANED" IN IDAHO

P.S. I am engaged to be married. Should I ask him to pay for my wedding?

DEAR "ORPHANED": Apparently your father isn't as eager to build a relationship with you as you are to build one with him. How sad. Let him know that you are engaged to be married, and if he offers to help pay for your wedding, fine — but don't ask him. If you expect nothing, you won't be disappointed (again).

You deserve some happiness in your life. I hope you have it. Congratulations and all good wishes.

Swaggart-Gorman trial: It's not exactly a tabloid's delight

By Alan Sayre
Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — There was the hint of testimony that packs courtrooms and leaves disappointed spectators waiting for a chance at a scarce seat and reporters from all over scrambling for a telephone.

Television preachers scheming to do each other in. Sex scandals beneath the steeples. Claims of demon possession and Mafia connections.

Marvin Gorman vs. Jimmy Swaggart. The stake: a $90 million defamation claim.

Instead, on a Wednesday afternoon last week, State District Judge Julian Bailes, who exhibits a patient smile and talks softly, hinted to spectators that they might find something better to do than stick around.

Attorneys needed to wade through depositions — sworn testimony taken down on paper — to determine what the jury should hear.

With a glimmer in his eyes, Bailes, a retired judge who was shipped in from Natchitoches in central Louisiana, explained the pending procedure to be complicated and tedious. "Sometimes, I don't understand what's going on myself," he said with a grin.

What went on the rest of the day defied description by even the most adept reporter. And as the judge suggested, it drove away most of the spectators.

After the jury was sent home for the day, attorneys took off their coats and went over the depositions page by page in preparation for reading them to the jury later.

It was not the first such instance. Much of the last two weeks has been devoted to depositions. At one time, a fast-reading juror who finished her document before the others was admonished by the judge for pulling out a book and starting to read.

At another time a spectator fell asleep. A bailiff told him to nap elsewhere.

Oh, there was some excitement during jury selection. A woman found her way to the front and asked to address the court as a messenger of God. Bailes, the easy-going judge, had her shown out, minus the contempt citation that often goes along with such interruptions.

The first 2 1/2 weeks of testimony poked along. Lead attorney Hunter Lundy tried to show that Swaggart and others spread untrue stories about Gorman's alleged sexual infidelity — sprinkled with tales of demon possession and connections with the underworld — to undermine Gorman's New Orleans-based ministry.

Gorman, who didn't yet have the television reach of Swaggart's Baton Rouge ministry, was regarded as one of the up-and-comers in the business of saving souls. His talks were in demand and he had his own program on the PTL cable network.

All of that went belly up after Gorman met with Swaggart and others who confronted him about an affair with another minister's wife. Gorman resigned his ministry at the First Assembly of God Church on July 16, 1986.

Gorman has admitted to the affair. In the words of co-defendant William Treeby, Swaggart's longtime lawyer, Gorman asked for and received forgiveness from the jilted minister. Gorman says Swaggart took it far beyond that and destroyed his ministry in order to squash a potential competitor.

Despite the tedium of many days in court, there have been moments that lived up to expectations. Early testimony focused on rumors of sexual affairs. One preacher testified about hearing a demon speaking in Gorman's voice.

On Thursday, Paul Dunn, once music minister at a Kenner church and now a Texas furniture salesman, testified that he had also had an affair with the same woman as Gorman. On cross-examination by defense attorneys, he also confessed to having sex with four women in his congregation.

"Did you feel you had to have sexual intercourse with every woman you encountered?" asked Phillip Whittman, Swaggart's attorney.

"Yes, sir," the witness replied.

After that, came still another deadly dull deposition reading. Then Gorman's bankruptcy trustee testified. To what wasn't clear. The judge wouldn't allow part of the testimony. Part was recited with the jury in the courtroom, part of it with the jury outside.

Then Bailes sent everyone home for the weekend.

Lundy promised the case would pick up Monday or Tuesday when Swaggart is called to the witness stand. Defense attorneys, who have been smiling a lot for most of a month, said he would merely repeat what was said by other witnesses: Swaggart didn't do anything to Gorman.

Gorman, of course, was the minister who, in 1987, provided pictures of Swaggart with a New Orleans prostitute — a revelation that caused Swaggart's own ouster from the Assemblies of God, his share of financial problems and a more-than-noticeable loss of viewer interest in TV evangelism.

More allegations about Swaggart's private conduct? No, the judge and an appeals court already have said. That's not what the case is about.

Due to the large number of attorneys, Gorman and Swaggart have sat out in the courtroom with the spectators. Not surprisingly, they avoid each other and sit on different sides. Swaggart says he's confident of exoneration.

Gorman, seen almost every day wheeling his crippled lawyer, Tommy Frazier, in and out of the courtroom, hasn't had much to say. But, on Thursday, he smiled ever-so-slightly at reporters when asked about his new ministry.

"I really don't want to talk about it," he said. "But we're on the way back. Our church is growing and we're back on TV."

Asked how the suit could possibly help his revamped ministry, Gorman said: "It will clear up some things."

Then he left, along with everyone else — at least those who hadn't cut out earlier.

Galileo spacecraft closes in on asteroid Gaspra

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (AP) — The Galileo spacecraft soon will be the first to speed past an asteroid. Scientists say future missions to asteroids and comets might mine rocket fuel, prepare astronauts for Mars landings and get clues to the birth of the solar system.

Still, much of the first International Conference on Near-Earth Asteroids, focused on how to detect and divert large asteroids that someday might smash into Earth with the power of thousands or millions of nuclear bombs — a scenario some scientists consider unlikely.

But there are other reasons to study asteroid besides their potential for destruction. The big rocks are remnants of the young solar system, and can reveal clues to the formation and evolution of the planets, said Cornell University astronomer Joseph Veverka.

He heads a NASA committee that wants to launch an unmanned Near-Earth Asteroid Rendezvous spaceship in 1997 to go into orbit around asteroid Anteros in 1998 or asteroid 1982XB in 1999.

The $150 million NEAR mission would be the first launch in NASA's Discovery program. The program is aimed at mounting relatively low-cost, easy missions to unexplored targets such as asteroids and comets, which are the icy cousins of rocky asteroids.

Veverka said a decision to proceed with the NEAR mission isn't expected from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration until September.

Meanwhile, NASA's Galileo spacecraft will zoom 1,000 miles from asteroid Gaspra on Oct. 29 — the first asteroid flyby by any spaceship. Galileo ultimately is bound to go into orbit around Jupiter in December 1995.

Unlike Galileo, which will collect information only briefly as it whizzes past Gaspra, the NEAR spacecraft would orbit an asteroid for a year, collecting data and pictures, Veverka said.

Galileo was launched by a space shuttle in 1989. NEAR would be launched by an unmanned Delta rocket. Galileo will explore Gaspra, located in the main asteroid belt near Mars, while NEAR would circle an asteroid with an orbit that comes near Earth.

NASA also wants to launch a Comet Rendezvous-Asteroid Flyby spacecraft in 1996 to zip past asteroid 739 Mandeville in 1999 and orbit Comet Tempel 2 in 2003. But the flight, part of the $1.6 billion CRAF-Cassini mission that also would send an identical spacecraft to Saturn, is widely considered to recent asteroid conference, sponsored by NASA and the non-profit Planetary Society.

"Humans can do excellent science at these accessible bodies," said Thomas Jones, of NASA's astronaut office at Johnson Space Center.

"I don't see that the important questions about asteroids require a human presence," replied Arizona State University graduate student Jeff Moersche.

"Asteroids can be used to simulate and train for the Mars mission" in a couple decades, said Stewart Nozette, of Synthesis Group in Arlington, Va.

They also would be better than the moon as a source of water that can be broken into hydrogen and oxygen rocket fuel or used to propel nuclear-powered, steam-driven rockets, he added.

Physicist Anthony Zuppero, of the Energy Department's Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, proposed using giant space tugs to mine comets for water that could be used as fuel in steam rockets. The proposal sounds like science fiction, but Zuppero insisted it's possible within a couple of decades.

He said rocket fuel made from water on comets would be 10 to 100 times cheaper than having space shuttles carry booster rockets into low Earth orbit, where they now launch communications satellites into higher orbits.

Zuppero said the space tugs would be propelled by nuclear-power steam engines like those on nuclear submarines. A tug would bite huge chunks of ice off comets, melt it with heat from the onboard nuclear reactor, then pump the water into a zeppelin-like balloon.

Castro salutes American flag

■ Mike Herbert, a U.S kayaker, is presented his gold medal at the Pan American Games by the Cuban president.

Associated Press

HAVANA — U.S. kayaker Mike Herbert gained a gold medal and a unique place in history Sunday as the man who got Fidel Castro to salute the American flag during the playing of the Star Spangled Banner.

Castro stood at attention in his olive green fatigues, his right hand raised to the bill of his cap, but Herbert didn't even look at him.

"I had my eyes on the flag," said Herbert, a 30-year-old from Rogers, Ark., who beat Cuban Angel Perez by nearly four seconds to win the 1,000-meter single kayak at the Pan American Games.

Castro came to present the medals in canoe-kayak, but he probably didn't think he'd be giving out any golds to Americans. Cuba swept all five men's golds Saturday at 500 meters and looked as if they'd do the same Sunday at the longer distance.

But Herbert surprised the president and everyone else by winning easily — giving the United States its only gold in the races, compared to Cuba's 10 and Canada's two. Castro graciously handed Herbert the medal and went through the ceremony.

"I don't speak very good Spanish," Herbert said, "but I think he said, 'Congratulations.' It was definitely worth coming here for that."

"Spiritually, I am a sportsman," Castro said afterward. "Physically, I was a sportsman and now I am a fan. I am very satisfied with our Pan American Games. I think these games will help the friendship between people."

The results of these races were a reversal of the last Pan Am Games in Indianapolis in 1987, when the United States team won 10 golds. Most of the top U.S.

Triple play

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros completed their second triple play of the season in the fifth inning of Sunday's game against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

After singles by Mike Sharperson and Stan Javier, Alfredo Griffin hit a fly ball that was caught by right fielder Mike Simms. Sharperson tagged up on the play and was tagged out by third baseman Ken Caminiti after a throw from Simms. Javier then attempted to advance to second, but was tagged out by shortstop Andujar Cedeno after a throw from Caminiti.

The National League record for triple plays in a season is three held by the 1964 Philadelphia Phillies and the 1965 Chicago Cubs. It's the third time that a Houston team has recorded two triple plays in a season.

'Sheriff' reports

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Sheriff has reported for patrol duty in San Diego.

Free safety Stanley Richard, the Chargers' No. 1 and last unsigned draft pick, agreed to terms during the first quarter of Saturday night's exhibition victory against the Houston Oilers.

"I'm happy to say that finally, there's a new sheriff in San Diego," said Richard, who earned the nickname "The Sheriff" while patrolling the secondary at Texas.

Hole-in-one

James B. Davis sank a hole-in-one Saturday on the third hole at the Midland Country Club golf course.

Davis used a 4-iron to eagle the 159-yard, par-three hole to earn his third-ever ace. Witnesses were Bill Franklin, Frank Powell and Ken Tomlinson.

Bryan retains title

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Larry Bryan Jr. overcame a spectacular birdie putt by Steve Whiteside on the 18th hole to successfully defend his Midland Men's City Golf Championship Sunday night at Hogan Park.

Bryan, who also birdied No. 16 to take a one-stroke lead over Whiteside and Bill Baker, had but one bogey for the second straight round.

Bryan said he had been "hoping just to two-putt" on the 18th hole to secure the win, but then Whiteside calmly rolled in his picturesque 40 foot birdie putt — in virtual darkness, no less — making it necessary for Bryan to one-putt for the victory.

Making things even more interesting was Baker, who followed Whiteside's putt with a birdie of his own.

Bryan then shrugged off his challengers' heroics, sunk a six-footer for his birdie and sealed the win for himself on the last shot of the day.

Bryan, who shot a final-round, 3-under par, 68, finished the 54-hole tournament at 5-under par, 207; Whiteside, who suffered four bogeys on the final day, finished with a 71—208, while Baker, ended with 69—208. Benton Spradlin closed with a fourth place 69—210.

Both Bryan and Baker began the final round at 2-under for the tournament, two strokes off Whiteside's two-day 137.

"I liked to see Steve and Bill make those putts (on 18)," Bryan said. "It made it seem more like a win, instead of the others falling off."

Harry Bettis, the final member of the final foursome, shot a final round 72 to finish at 213 for the tournament.

On his 40 footer, Whiteside said "I had to wait until dark when I couldn't see before I started making them."

Whiteside said the turning point for him was a bogey on No. 11. That bogey, the first of two straight, came after his birdie on the par 3 No. 10 to open the back nine.

Baker, 2-under going into Sunday's final round, played what he termed a "conservative" front side, and entered the turn at 1-under, three strokes behind Whiteside and Bryan, who had made the turn tied at 4-under for the tournament.

Wranglers survive late rally, 10-6

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

When Wichita starting pitcher Darrin Reichle left Sunday's game against Midland with a 9-2 lead after six innings at Angels Stadium, he should have felt fairly certain he would earn a win for the game.

But after the Angels went scoreless until the bottom of the ninth, the Haloes began chewing away at the lead and scored four runs off Howard Hilton before Rick Davis came in to put the fire and keep the Wrangler win intact, 10-6.

In an inning that surely lasted an eternity for Reichle, he grew increasingly antsy but only managed to say "Howard Hilton's my roommate, and he's not going to like this."

Reichle's worries were for naught, though, as the Angels came only halfway to closing the eight-run gap they faced with three outs to go, and the Wichita pitcher moved to 3-1 for the season, with all three wins coming against Midland.

"I've been on and off the disabled list three times this season and when I come off it's usually against a team I have faced," the oft-injured Reichle explained.

But in the opening inning, it appeared that the Angels had his number, as Midland touched him for two runs on three hits in the first.

That gave Angel starter Fili Martinez a lead to work with, and he protected it for four innings, entering the fifth with a 2-1 edge. But then the roof caved in.

Wichita racked up three runs in the fifth and Tim McWilliam's three-run home run capped a five-run sixth that saddled Martinez with a 3-4 record.

Meanwhile, Reichle settled down to shut Midland out for the next five innings.

"I felt pretty good down in the pen before the game, then I got into the game and my breaking ball was not in the strike zone. Also, my fastball was up and in the middle. Then in the second, my changeup came on and my slider came around," he said.

Hilton was effective for two innings, as well. After sitting the Angels down in

Steelers rally past 'Skins in exhibition opener

Washington tight end Jimmie Johnson (88) reaches for a pass that falls short of the mark as Steeler strong safety Carnell Lake closes in during first-quarter action Sunday.

■ Washington's four quarterbacks prove inconsistent in a 16-7 defeat in Pittsburgh.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers, overcoming two first-half touchdowns wiped out by penalties, rallied behind Neil O'Donnell's 34-yard touchdown pass to Ron Fair in the fourth quarter to defeat the Washington Redskins 16-7 in an exhibition game Sunday night.

Chip Lohmiller missed two field goal attempts for the Redskins, who played all four of their quarterbacks a quarter apiece and were inconsistent offensively. Fourth-teamer Cary Conklin accounted for their lone score by throwing a 19-yard touchdown pass to Ricky Ervins with 28 seconds left in the first half.

Pittsburgh starter Bubby Brister played all but one play of the first half and completed 11 of 14 passes for 114 yards, but had apparent touchdown passes to Louis Lipps and Merril Hoge reversed by penalties.

With Washington leading 7-6, O'Donnell directed the Steelers on a decisive seven-play, 80-yard drive.

O'Donnell hit Fair for 11 yards to the Steelers' 40 and Lorenzo Davis for 14 yards one play after Hoge ran for nine yards. O'Donnell then found Fair open in the front left corner of the end zone with 9:54 to play for a 13-7 Pittsburgh lead.

O'Donnell played the entire second half after backup Rick Strom tore rib cartilage in the pregame warmups.

Fair, a first-year receiver from Arizona State, was waived during training camp last August, but re-signed on Oct. 1 and remained with the Steelers' practice squad the rest of the season.

Richard captures Phar-Mor

Associated Press

VIENNA, Ohio — Deb Richard rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole, from virtually the same spot she missed a potential winning putt moments before, to beat Jane Geddes and win the Phar-Mor in Youngstown Sunday.

Richard, who won a playoff at the Women's Kemper Open earlier this year, collected $75,000 for the victory, the third of her six-year career.

A closing 4-under 68 left her at 207, nine under, for the tournament after rounds of 70 and 69 at the Squaw Creek Country Club..

Starting four shots behind Juli Inkster, Richard pulled into a tie for the lead with birdies at the sixth, seventh and eighth holes. She dropped a shot behind Tammie Green with a bogey at the 10th, but then pulled back into the lead with a birdie at the 14th. She made par the rest of the way to force the playoff.

On the 150-yard, par-3 finishing hole, Richard barely missed a birdie putt, but would get another chance.

Going into the extra hole, Geddes was 3-0 in playoffs.

Deb Richard

Richard was 1-1, both sudden-death finishes coming this year.

Geddes, who also closed with a 68 for a 207, just missed a 20-foot birdie putt on the playoff hole.

Inkster, who started the round with a three-stroke lead, faded to a 75 and finished sixth at 210. She birdied the first hole for a four-stroke lead, but lost the lead to Green with bogeys on the fifth and seventh holes.

Faxon downs Beck in sudden-death

Associated Press

Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — Brad Faxon ended seven years of struggle on Sunday, beating defending champion Chip Beck in a playoff at the Buick Open for his first victory on the PGA Tour.

Faxon is the 10th first-time winner this year and the fifth straight. It was the 12th overtime in golf this season, including the 18-hole playoff at the U.S. Open.

Winning the Buick Open has been bad news for the five previous champions. None of them has won a PGA Tour event since.

That drought has reached four years for Robert Wrenn. Scott Verplank and Leonard Thompson have been blanked since their success in 1988 and 1989 and Beck hasn't won since his victory in 1990.

Since 1982, only 10 players have defended their titles in any PGA Tour event.

The late Tony Lema, who won in 1964 and 1965, is the only man to repeat as Buick Open champion.

Faxon and Beck both finished at 17-under 271 after 72 holes at Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club.

The playoff began on the 10th hole, a 401-yard, par-4.

Beck's 8-iron approach landed on the far left side of the green, 60 feet from the pin. His first putt stopped six feet from the cup and his attempt to save par slid two feet past the hole.

Faxon hit a 9-iron from the rough to the center of the green, 2-putted from about 25 feet, and thrust his arms to the sky in celebration.

Faxon turned 31 on Thursday, the day the tournament began. In 19 previous starts this season, he had finished in the top 10 just twice. He was 73rd on the money list at $154,791 but added $180,000 to that with the winner's check from Buick.

In 1986 Faxon won the Provident Classic, an unofficial event.

Scott Hoch, Jerry Pate and John Cook finished tied for third at 272, one shot ahead of Nick Faldo, Gene Sauers, Hal Sutton and Howard Twitty.

Marco Dawson, the PGA Tour rookie who led after 54 holes at 16-under, closed with a 74 and was in a group at 274 which included Greg Norman, PGA champ Wayne Grady, Tim Simpson and Bill Britton.

Faxon started the final round at 205, five strokes behind Dawson. He had birdies on the first two holes to go 13-under. Faxon bogeyed the par-4 fourth but rebounded with birdies at the sixth and eighth to turn at 14-under.

Faxon birdied the par-5 13th to go 15-under and then made eagle on the next hole to go 17-under. He gave one of those strokes back with bogey at No. 15, then got it back with birdie at the par-5 16th.

Beck had a birdie on the first hole but lost that stroke with a bogey at the seventh to remain 14-under at the turn.

Beck started his move with birdies at the 11th and 12th.

Archer retains Long Island championship

Associated Press

Senior Tour

JERICHO, N.Y. — Defending champion George Archer held off Jim Colbert and Larry Laoretti Sunday to retain his title in the $450,000 Northville Long Island senior golf tournament.

Archer, who started the final day in a tie with Laoretti, shot a 3-under-par 69 for a 54-total of 204.

Colbert, 50, in his rookie season on the PGA Senior Tour and troubled by back spasms, started the day in a five-way tie for third, three strokes off the lead. He shot a 68 to finish tied at 206 with Laoretti, who shot 71.

It marked the third time that Laoretti has finished second this year.

Archer, the 1969 Masters champion collected $67,500 for his first victory on the tour this year, boosting his winnings to $384,241.

The 6-foot-5, 195-pound Archer saved par on the par-5 17th hole with a 6-foot putt after blasting out of the bunker, where he landed on his third shot.

Colbert birdied the first six holes of the back nine of the par-72, 6,655-yard Meadow Brook Club and closed within one shot. It remained that way until Colbert, who quit the regular tour in 1987, two-putted for a bogey on the par-3 final hole.

Laoretti fell out of contention when he bogeyed the par-4 11th and 14th holes, falling behind by three.

Bob Charles took fourth place at 207, followed by Bob Brue and Jim Dent at 208. John Brodie, former quarterback with the San Francisco 49ers, finished in a tie with Gary Player and J.C. Snead at 209.

Charles shot 69, Brue 67 and Dent 70 on the final day. Brodie closed with a 67 and Player and Snead shot 69s.

Lee Trevino, who had an opening-round 78, shot his second consecutive 66 to tie the course record and finish at 210, tied with Rocky Thompson (71), Charles Coody (71) and Dick Hendrickson (72).

GAMES: Steinbrenner displays patriotism

(From 1C)

canoers and kayakers skipped this meet to go to Lake Placid, N.Y., and train for the world championships in Paris later this month.

"We should be sending our best teams to the Pan Am Games," said annoyed U.S. team leader Chick Dambach. "The effect that it would have on our performances at the world championships would be minimal. The experience of racing in this kind of international competition is so valuable that it might result in better performances."

Dambach joined a chorus of U.S. officials upset by the absence of some of America's best athletes in most sports.

The United States women's basketball team, riding a 42-game winning streak in international competition, was close to full strength, yet it suffered a shocking loss in its second game in the preliminary round, 87-84, against Brazil. Despite the loss, the American team is still favored to win its third straight Pan Am gold.

No American official was more upset by the weak U.S. performances here than George Steinbrenner, the New York Yankees boss and U.S. Olympic Committee vice president who spearheaded an effort to improve the quality of American teams in international competition.

"We have to have our best here," Steinbrenner said, referring mainly to the track and field athletes who chose to compete in the lucrative European meets and skip the Pan Ams. "There's no excuse for them not to be here. That's got to stop.

"The USOC supports them all year," he said. "We'll just have to tell them, 'Don't look to the USOC for dollars. Get the Europeans to pay you.' We'll give our money to the younger kids.

"I want to emphasize that I'm not criticizing those who are here. But most of them finished fourth, fifth, sixth or seventh in our national championships."

Track and field is not the only sport in which the best of the U.S. is missing. Others include boxing, swimming and men's basketball.

When the men's basketball team fell behind in the first half of its opening game against Cuba, Steinbrenner muttered repeatedly, "We have to have our best players here." The ones who came, though, came back to beat Cuba, and Steinbrenner cheered them at the end.

"Anytime the U.S. sends a team somewhere, like the Pan Am Games, we should send our best," he said. "It's a matter of national pride. We support them all year.

"It's just not right that they're not here. That's wrong. It will be put to a stop. You have to be here when your country competes."

Referring to criticism of Cuba by ABC reporter Brent Musburger, Steinbrenner said: "The Cubans deserve a pat on the back, not a kick in the rear."

Ollan Cassell, executive director of The Athletics Congress, governing body of U.S. track and field, agreed with Steinbrenner in general, but sympathized with some athletes who chose to stay out.

"We have a world championships in 10 days in my sport, and they didn't want to take a chance on coming to Cuba and getting sick," he said.

Brazilians bump U.S. women

Associated Press

HAVANA — Brazil ended the United States' 42-game winning streak in major women's international basketball with an 87-84 victory Sunday in the qualifying round of the Pan American Games.

A U.S. women's team had not lost since the 1982 world championships final and the current team is made up of members who won quite a few of those games, with five players having earned Olympic gold medals.

"How would you feel if you beat the world champion and the Olympic champion?" Brazilian coach Maria Cardoso said. "We can be today the world champion and the Olympic champion. I am very, very happy."

Brazil was the country that started the recent non-gold medal run of U.S. men's teams, beating the host country for the title in the 1987 Pan Ams in Indianapolis. Since then, the U.S. men have come up short in three consecutive major international competitions.

The United States trailed most of the second half, but took a brief lead at 78-77 with 3:45 left on a rebound basket by Katrina McClain. Brazil made four free throws in the next 59 seconds for a three-point lead.

TOURNEY: Night falls before final putt

(From 1C)

Baker got hot, though, carding an eagle-birdie on 14 and 15 to create a three-way tie with just three holes to play.

It was on the 16th, however, that Bryan birdied and broke the tie for good.

"I was getting pretty pumped up," Baker said after his eagle-birdie. "The next four holes were legitimate birdie holes. And when you're putting in the dark, you don't know what's going to happen. You don't know when lightning's going to strike. But I'd much rather play in the daylight."

Baker, who won the city championship in 1973 and '83, jokingly said he "wanted to make it three decades, but I guess I'll have to wait'll next year."

Things indeed may get a little easier in 1992. Bryan, now defending champ twice over, said he "may or may not be back." His plans now are to graduate from Abilene Christian University, marry and move to Fort Worth next spring where his fiancee will work.

"I think this one meant more to me than the other one," said Bryan, a 1987 Midland Lee grad. "It felt good to pull one out when it was that close. Especially when they started making putts on me like that."

As Midland city champ, Bryan, along with the Top 10 finishers in each flight, will be invited to participate in the first Midland-Odessa Intercity Championship, Sept. 27-29.

The first and third rounds of the tournament will be held at Hogan Park with Saturday's round scheduled for Ratliff Ranch Golf Links in Odessa.

Final results at the 1991 Midland Men's City Golf Championship, played Sunday at Hogan Park Golf Course (Holes 10-27, 10-18):

Family Reading Challenge 1991

Boys and Girls

Rex and Rita Saurus™ challenge you and your family to sign on for the Family Reading Challenge 1991.

The rules are simple: Read at least two books, two magazine articles and two newspaper articles between June 9 and Aug. 18 and discuss what you have read with a parent or guardian.

If you are between the ages of 5-12 and successfully complete the reading challenge, you will qualify for a nationwide drawing Sept. 6 for thousands of neat prizes. You could win an IBM Writing to Read Laboratory for your school and an IBM PC for your family, Rex and Rita Saurus hand puppets, bicycles, World Book encyclopedias and much more! Look for an official entry form in this newspaper throughout the summer.

Also watch this newspaper each week for enjoyable summer reading activities that will help you and your family read and use the newspaper together.

Rex and Rita Saurus, the "world's leading reading dinosaurs," hope that you will read MORE than just two books, two newspaper articles and two magazine articles this summer. Because Rex and Rita know that "Winners Read and Readers Win."

Don't forget to complete the entry form below as soon as you have met the requirements of the challenge.

Family Reading Challenge 1991

Trivia Contest

Use today's newspaper to come up with questions for a trivia contest that you can play at home with your family.

Examples: What was the score of last night's baseball game? How hot did it get in your town yesterday? How much are carrots at the supermarket? What movie is now showing at the theater?

You can use these questions within any trivia board game you may have at home. Or you can create a quiz show patterned after your favorite television game show.

We hope you enjoyed this. Don't forget to complete the entry form below as soon as you have met the requirements of the challenge.

ANGELS: Late rally falls short order in the seventh and eighth, though, it was his turn to give up runs in wholesale fashion.

(From 1C)

Midland's Walt McConnell drew a leadoff walk and Tim Salmon looped a broken-bast single to left. One out later, Don Barbara drove McConnell in with a double to right and Marcus Lawton's 3-1 groundout scored Salmon.

Then Mick Billmeyer's infield single brought Barbara across the plate and Reggie Williams singled in Bobby Jones, who was pinch running for Billmeyer. Kevin Flora also batted an infield hit before Mark Howie ended the game on a strikeout.

ANGEL NOTES — Howie is now batting .360 and has driven in 97 runs. With 29 games left in the season, he needs 22 RBI to surpass the franchise record of 119 set by Midland Cub Tom Lombarski (the Midland Angels record is 108 by Joe Redfield of the 1987 Haloes). If he maintains his .360 average, he will also pass the team record of .359, set by Bob Rose in 1989. Howie also has a 12-game hitting streak after his 2-for-5 effort Sunday.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, AUGUST 5, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Now is the time to expand a business or change careers. Influential people will back you when the chips are down. Learning high-tech skills will increase your earnings in October. Travel in November. December brings new romance and a lot of questions. Be careful not to drop the ball at work in early 1992. Greater social prestige will be yours by next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Loni Anderson, astronaut Neil Armstrong, basketball star Patrick Ewing, country singer Sammi Smith.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Employment and residential projects deserve the lion's share of your time. Lending a hand to a business associate helps you reap new rewards. A romantic relationship improves. Say what you feel.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Go slow if thinking about making a permanent commitment. Your timing could be wrong. Be careful not to overreact to something a loved one says. This person has your best interests at heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Show your appreciation for those who mean the most to you by giving generously of yourself today and tomorrow. You may be able to mix business with pleasure later this evening. Be subtle.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): When confronted with a choice, give top priority to immediate gains rather than shooting for grandiose possibilities. A former love surfaces. Be honest if you are still not ready for a commitment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Try to stay as organized as you can. Many phone calls, errands and talks are indicated. Be prepared to rearrange your schedule. Someone's confusion about a personal matter is cleared up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Not a good day to stay home. Get out and mingle more. Being part of a professional or social group will make you more dynamic. You will score an impressive victory later this week.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get a pleasant surprise where your job or home life is concerned. Be careful not to alienate someone whose support you may need later on. Keep your options open.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Solo projects produce the best rewards today. Let potential allies know what you are working for and why. Looking great will boost your self-confidence. Update your wardrobe and hairstyle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hunches linked to your household, family or friendships have an excellent chance of coming true today. Make the first move in social situations. Someone influential is charmed by your remarks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your promotional skills are in demand. Launch a project with great fanfare. One word from you and others snap to attention. Avoid appearing harsh or dictatorial. A smile will work wonders!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are very aware of what pleases your relatives, friends and co-workers. Being a team player will boost both business profits and your popularity. Let others know that they can depend on you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A sneaky co-worker could cause trouble; watch out. Do not get drawn into secret meetings. Steer clear of people who gossip. Seize an opportunity to correct a mistake.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J86 ♡KQ ◇KQJ9 ♣AK84
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—With 19 horrible points we are almost tempted to pass, but just can't bring ourselves to take such a pessimistic course. We would double, although we have a sneaking admiration for those who can steel themselves to bid one no trump.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠762 ♡AJ ◇AQ3 ♣AKQ102
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—If you have adopted the modern style where a reverse bid would be a one-round force, then two diamonds is the standout action. If not, you probably have to opt for a somewhat mis-descriptive non-forcing jump rebid of three clubs, which is only slightly better than a jump to two no trump.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A654 ♡AJ1032 ◇95 ♣42
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—It is not yet time to insist on a heart contract—you might have a 4-4 spade fit and a jump to three hearts would exclude that possibility. Start by probing for a major-suit fit by bidding two clubs. If partner denies a major, you can then jump to three hearts.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ952 ♡KJ104 ◇Void ♣762

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Since a jump to three spades would be invitational, not forcing, the choice lies between a jump shift to three hearts and a leap to four spades. Partner could easily have a four-card heart suit, so our choice is the jump shift to three hearts.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡AQ10 ◇AKJ63 ♣AQ65
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Your jump shift was a game force, so there's no need for anything dramatic at the moment. Continue to describe your hand by preferring to three hearts now. Among other things, that highlights your spade shortness.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡AQ10 ◇AKJ63 ♣AQ65
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Your jump shift was a game force, so there's no need for anything dramatic at the moment. Continue to describe your hand by preferring to three hearts now. Among other things, that highlights your spade shortness.

New poll names Jaclyn Smith most beautiful woman on TV

RADNOR, Pa. — The most beatiful woman on television isn't on television.

Jaclyn Smith, the former Charlie's Angel who hasn't had a series since "Christine Cromwell" in 1989, topped TV Guide's nationwide poll to find the fairest of all in television land.

Smith, who will be seen next season in the NBC movie "The Tangled Web," outpolled runner-up Candice Bergen of "Murphy Brown" fame.

In third place was "Wheel of Fortune" letter-turner Vanna White, followed by Joan Lunden of "Good Morning America" and Phylicia Rashad of "The Cosby Show."

Rounding out the top 10 were Kirstie Alley, Jane Pauley, Kathie Lee Gifford, Oprah Winfrey and Connie Chung.

Most attractive face? Smith again, followed by Bergen and Lunden. Best body: White, followed by Alley and Gifford. Most attractive personality: Winfrey, Rashad and Bergen.

The Roper Poll was done by telephone and surveyed 502 men and 505 women.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Russian-born actress Milla Jovovich says she is tired of being compared to Brooke Shields.

Jovovich

Jovovich, 15, is making her movie debut in "Return to the Blue Lagoon," a sequel to the movie that starred Shields and grossed more than $100 million at the box office.

Jovovich, the daughter of a Russian actress mother and a Yugoslav doctor father, has four years of modeling behind her and has appeared on the covers of Mademoiselle, Seventeen and Elle magazines.

But the similarities between the actresses end there, Jovovich told The Tennessean in an interview in Saturday's edition.

"She has her career and I have mine. I really don't see what we have in common," Jovovich said.

"Besides, it has been a very long time since she was my age," Jovovich said the of 26-year-old Shields.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Yoko Ono says her relationship with the surviving Beatles has improved since the group's breakup to the point that she considers them friends.

"Sometimes they are friendly, sometimes they are not; sometimes one of them is friendly and sometimes one of them is not — like all relationships with friends," Ono said in an interview published Sunday in The Knoxville News-Sentinel. "I think that's natural with friends."

Ono said her relationship with the late singer John Lennon created jealousy among the other members, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr. She was blamed for the band's breakup, but she said the pain of the split went both ways. "They hurt us and we hurt them," she said.

"Songwriters in this world are pretty harmless people.They're not doing anything like creating a nuclear bomb or trying to decide whether people should be killed. I have a lot of respect for them," said Ono.

ATLANTA — Former first lady Rosalynn Carter helped launch a nationwide campaign to immunize all children against measles and other illnesses by the age of 2.

Carter

Mrs. Carter and Betty Bumpers, the wife of Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., opened their "Every Child By Two" campaign Friday and will begin a national tour next month. Next spring, they will focus on immunizing children along the poverty-stricken Mississippi Delta.

More than 27,600 cases of measles were reported in the nation last year and 89 people died in what health officials said was the largest outbreak in 20 years.

"It is a shameful fact that children in this country suffer from a disease that is so easy to prevent," Mrs. Carter said Friday.

The women will lobby for greater reimbursement for immunizations and less expensive shots, Mrs. Bumpers said.

The two teamed up on the same issue in the 1970s and again during former President Jimmy Carter's term. Mrs. Bumpers' Arkansas program was adopted as a national model by the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — U.S. Rep. Harold Ford says he's not anxious to repeat a four-hour stay in jail but he feels his talk with inmates turned out well.

"Next time I think I might sign the ticket," said Ford, D-Tenn., who was jailed Friday night for refusing to sign a speeding ticket.

Memphis police ticketed Ford for allegedly traveling 55 mph in a 40-mph zone near his home and for driving with a revoked registration. Ford was arrested when he refused to sign the ticket even though officers explained his signature would not be an admission of guilt.

He was released early Saturday. A hearing was set for Monday.

Astros triple up Dodgers

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Craig Biggio's run-scoring single in the 10th inning gave the Houston Astros a 2-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers on Sunday and a surprising three-game sweep.

NL

The Astros, last in the National League West, have won seven straight games for the first time since May 26-June 4, 1989. All three wins over the first-place Dodgers came in the Astros' final at-bat.

On Sunday, the Astros also turned their second triple play of the season.

Gerald Young started the 10th with a walk from reliever Kevin Gross (6-7) and moved to second on a single by Steve Finley. Biggio then lined a single to right field, scoring Young.

Al Osuna (7-3) pitched two hitless innings for the victory.

The loss cut the Dodgers' lead over Atlanta to 3½ games, three in the loss column.

Pirates 2, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — John Smiley pitched a five-hitter, and shortstop Ozzie Smith's throwing error in the sixth inning allowed the winning run to score as Pittsburgh ended an eight-game losing streak.

The losing streak was the longest since 1985 for Pittsburgh, whose National League East lead had shrunk to 4½ games over St. Louis before Sunday. It also averted a four-game sweep by the Cardinals.

Smith's fifth error of the season gave the Pirates the go-ahead run in the sixth. With runners on first and second and one out, Smith took a throw at second on Gary Varsho's grounder, then spun and threw the ball over the head of third baseman Todd Zeile in an attempt to catch Orlando Merced off the bag and Merced scored easily.

Smiley (13-7) won for the fourth time in five starts and equaled his career high for victories. He struck out four and walked one.

San Diego's Leon Roberts tries to break up a double play by rolling hard into second base, but Braves second baseman Mark Lemke, left, got the throw away in time to retire Tony Gwynn at first. Shortstop Jeff Blauser tiptoes back from the double play.

Phillies 3, Expos 2

MONTREAL — Pinch-hitter Dale Murphy's run-scoring double in the 10th inning gave Philadelphia a victory over Montreal. It was the sixth straight win for the Phillies.

The Expos have lost six games in a row, and 14 of their last 17. Montreal has also dropped 16 consecutive games to National League East opponents.

Lenny Dysktra beat out an infield single with one out in the 10th against reliever Jeff Fassero (1-2) and stole second before scoring on Murphy's hard grounder just inside the third-base bag.

Braves 9, Padres 7

ATLANTA — Ron Gant had four hits, including a three-run homer in a six-run first inning, and Atlanta held on to beat San Diego.

Francisco Cabrera, who had three hits and drove in four runs, and Gant keyed the big first with home runs off Dennis Rasmussen (3-9), who has lost eight straight games.

Cabrera added a two-run double in the fifth off reliever John Costello after singles by Gant and Jeff Blauser to give the Braves an 8-2 lead.

Cubs 8, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Chicago chased struggling David Cone in a five-run third inning, and went on for a victory over New York that sent the Mets to their fifth straight loss.

The Mets returned from a 2-7 West Coast trip only to lose three straight to the Cubs, falling six games behind first-place Pittsburgh.

Reds 6, Giants 5

CINCINNATI — Barry Larkin drove in five runs and Paul O'Neill drew a bases-loaded walk with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning to lift Cincinnati over San Francisco.

Jeff Brantley (3-2) issued three walks in the bottom of the ninth, the last one on a 3-2 pitch, to give the Reds their seventh victory in the last 24 games.

Brewers fight way past Rangers, 3-2

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Willie Randolph's two-out double drove in Milwaukee's second unearned run in the ninth inning Sunday, rallying the Brewers to a fight-interrupted 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Milwaukee starter Chris Bosio began a bench-clearing brawl in the seventh after he hit Kevin Reimer in the knee with a pitch. The incident came just after Texas had taken a 2-1 lead, and both Bosio and Reimer were ejected.

The Brewers ended their four-game losing streak as B.J. Surhoff led off the ninth with a fly ball that left fielder Dean Palmer dropped for a two-base error. Jim Gantner sacrificed and, after pinch-hitter Candy Maldonado grounded out, Paul Molitor singled home Surhoff.

Jays 2, Red Sox 1

BOSTON — John Olerud doubled home the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning and Tom Henke tied a save record as Toronto salvaged the finale of a three-game series.

Olerud lined a shot off the center-field wall with two outs. The play came after third baseman Steve Lyons, filling in for back-troubled Wade Boggs, had trouble getting the ball out of his glove and managed only a force play on Joe Carter's potential double-play grounder.

Royals 2, Indians 0

CLEVELAND — Bret Saberhagen pitched a three-hitter for his first shutout since 1989 and Kansas City beat Cleveland.

Gary Thurman drove in both runs for Kansas City, which has won four of five and 11 of its last 14 games. Cleveland, shut out for the 14th time this year, has lost seven of eight.

American

Mariners 5, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Jay Buhner homered for the fourth straight game, a three-run shot in the 12th inning that lifted Seattle over California.

The Mariners improved to 57-48, the first time in their 15-year history that they've been nine games over .500.

Tigers 8, Yankees 7

DETROIT — Pinch hitter Tony Phillips tied the game with a two-out homer in the ninth inning and Lloyd Moseby singled home the winner in the 10th as Detroit beat New York.

Moseby's first four-hit game since 1987 helped Detroit improve to 9-1 in extra innings.

White Sox 1, Orioles 0

CHICAGO — Charlie Hough pitched his first shutout since 1989 and Frank Thomas homered for the second straight day as Chicago spoiled Mike Mussina's major league debut.

Hough, the 43-year-old knuckleballer, gave up five hits. He struck out seven, walked two and retired 15 straight batters early in the game.

Twins 6, Athletics 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Scott Erickson won his major league-leading 15th game and the American League West-leading Minnesota Twins, helped by a controversial call, beat Oakland.

The Twins won two of three in Oakland. Dave Stewart took the loss as the third-place Athletics fell five games behind Minnesota.

Mears outlasts Luyendyk to capture first Marlboro 500

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Rick Mears took advantage of a race of attrition Sunday to win his first Marlboro 500, easily fending off a late challenge from Arie Luyendyk.

It was the eighth 500-mile victory for Mears, who also won his fourth Indianapolis 500 in May.

The 21 starters were the smallest field ever for a 500-mile event and only seven of them were running at the end, tying the Michigan record set in 1986.

But a crowd of more than 50,000 at Michigan International Speedway was treated to some great racing in the early going, with 18 lead changes among eight drivers.

Late in the 250-lap event, however, the race boiled down to a dual between Mears and Luyendyk.

When Luyendyk pitted on lap 167, Mears took the lead, then lost it back to the Dutch driver while making his own scheduled stop on lap 169.

A caution flag came out on lap 183 when series point leader Bobby Rahal, running third at the time, blew his engine. Luyendyk made an unexpected pit stop, giving up the lead to Mears on lap 183.

Luyendyk then made a costly mistake, passing John Andretti in the lapped Hall/VDS car between turns three and four on the 2-mile, high-banked oval moments before the green flag was waved for lap 188. CART, the series sanctioning body, handed down a stop-and-go penalty, which Luyendyk took on lap 192.

That sent him to the rear of the lead lap, just ahead of Mears and appeared to end his chances of a victory. But he hung in, hoping for another opportunity.

Prices steady

NEW YORK — Oil prices held firm and gasoline shot up sharply Friday in quiet trading on the anniversary of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in September settled at $21.32 per barrel, up 5 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Unleaded gasoline for delivery in September settled at 66.40 cents a gallon, up 1.22 cents. Home heating oil for delivery in September settled at 59.80 cents a gallon, up .29 cent.

Natural gas futures were mostly higher, with contracts for delivery in September settling at $1.260 per 1,000 cubic feet, up .5 cent for the day and 2.2 cents for the week.

Dollar drops

NEW YORK — The dollar fell sharply Friday in heavy trading following the release of a report that indicated U.S. companies continued to lay off workers in July.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 137.53 Japanese yen from 137.20 yen at Thursday's close. at 137.20 yen, down from 137.55 yen on Thursday..

In London, the British pound rose to $1.6945 from $1.6725 late Thursday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Thursday's rates included: 1.7415 German marks, down from 1.7570; 1.5147 Swiss francs, down from 1.5335; 5.9210 French francs, down from 5.9700; 1,301.50 Italian lire, down from 1,312.00, and 1.1505 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1498.

Pan Am cutbacks

NEW YORK — Pan Am Corp. announced heavy layoffs and quarterly operating losses because of the sickly airline's precarious financial condition. Pan Am said it will furlough 5,000 employees, nearly a quarter of the work force, in a seasonal shrinkage that is worse than usual this year. The struggling airline has been in bankruptcy court since January.

Trump's Castle

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Donald Trump moved a step closer to keeping control of the Trump Castle, meeting a state deadline showing the casino's financial backers support a restructuring plan. Trump on Friday submitted to the Casino Control Commission a signed agreement between his organization, bondholders and Midlantic Bank. The commission said a preliminary review appeared to show the documents meet its requirements. The panel also set Aug. 14 for a full hearing on the financial stability of the casino.

Grifters return to oil patch

■ Drilling recovery attracts carpetbaggers to oil-and-gas industry, observers say.

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil observers say the emerging presence of con artists in Texas is signaling a recovery in the petroleum industry like no other gauge available.

Richard Latham, securities commissioner for the Texas Securities Board in Austin, said higher oil prices and the success of horizontal drilling operations are attracting thieves who prey on dreamers looking to get rich quick.

"In the last several months, we've had more than 60 firms identified that we were looking at" for possible securities fraud, Latham said. "We have been fairly successful in doing our investigations, but we're a long ways from winding them up."

The fraudulent sale of fractional interests in oil and gas projects has long been a cyclical problem in Texas.

"Over the years, more than half of all of the enforcement cases we've opened are somehow related to oil and gas. So it's been a major problem for a long time," Latham said.

But while Houston handles most of the state's oil, "the vast majority of Texas boiler rooms have been in and around the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex area. There may be a few in Houston, but it's not nearly as pronounced as in the Dallas area. I'm not sure why that is," said Latham, who added the area was popular with con artists even during the boom days of the late 1970s.

Scott Stapf, spokesman for the North American Securities Administrators in Washington, D.C., said the number of petroleum scams have been increasing for more than a year.

"Working on headlines is one of the ways con artists like to operate. Con artists take an article from a trade publication or a daily newspaper describing gains by legitimate operators and tack that on to promote their schemes," Stapf said. The Mideast war provided a colorful backdrop for get-rich-quick schemes.

"The beauty for a con artist is that he can get you coming or going," Stapf said. "If times are good and oil prices are high, they tell you it's time to cash in. If times are bad, they say it's the time to get in on the ground floor."

With the proliferation of telemarketing, the grifters have easy access to potential victims. Working from books the size of phone directories, the con artists can flip to sales pitches and canned answers for objections.

"The classic con game approach is to take the new wrinkle and claim access to it, or particularly that the promoter can allow the 'little people' to profit like the 'fat cats,'" he said.

But Stapf and Latham said while the con artists might be smooth, it should be easy to see through their game:

— Real oilmen generally rely on established connections for drilling money, not telephone calls to strangers;

— Most sales are made by dealers licensed through the state securities board;

— Real oilmen have small interests in several wells and do not have large sums in a single project.

— There is rarely urgency to make a deal with a stranger.

Squeaky wheels get the grease

Exxon set to buy out unhappy homeowners in Baytown, Texas

Associated Press

BAYTOWN, Texas — Exxon officials are planning to spend up to $3 million to buy 120 lots in a Baytown subdivision where residents have complained of noise and pollution coming from the company's refinery.

Plant manager Sherman Glass said it could take up to five years for Exxon to complete the purchase, which includes all the property and 60 homes built more than 40 years ago in the Busch Terrace subdivision.

For years, residents have complained about noise and air pollution belching from one of the world's largest refineries, said City Councilman Mario Delgado. Exxon already has spent $250,000 for equipment to quell the noise from the smokestacks and flares with little effect, he said.

Exxon is offering to pay fair market prices for the lots and homes, all closing and appraisal expenses, plus a 10 percent premium for relocation costs. The company then will donate homes to charity or demolish the structures, leaving the property as a vacant buffer zone between the refinery's eastern border and other residents.

"Our primary reason is to create a market for those who have asked us to do so and to put distance between an industrial complex and residences," Glass said. "We don't want to buy their friendship but make them a fair offer and then treat them with dignity and respect.

"Ultimately, it is clearly their decision. If they choose not to move, so be it. We will continue to be their neighbors," he said.

Glass denied reports that the oil company wants the property for expansion, saying there are already 800 acres of vacant property available for growth on the 3,600-acre complex.

The company might install a truck terminal on a small portion of the property when the Fred Hartman Bridge opens next year, but Glass said Exxon already owns another truck terminal a block away.

He said 10 residents already have asked to be bought out.

"So far, nobody has indicated that they want to stay," Delgado said. "But there are a lot of retired people there with modest incomes. Their taxes are low now, and they are fearful a move would make them go up. The price has to be right."

But some residents remain skeptical of the company.

"We feel like Exxon has monopolized the area and made it depressed. Exxon has been encroaching on these residents for a long time," said Willie Chapa, whose parents have lived across the street from the refinery since 1958.

Copeland leaving Popeyes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Al Copeland will step down as owner and chief executive officer of the Popeyes and Church's fried chicken empire as part of a plan agreed to last week in federal bankruptcy court in Austin, Texas.

Merrill Lynch & Co., Copeland's largest unsecured creditor, will end up owning 85 percent of Copeland Enterprises. The rest will be held by financial institutions led by Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce of Toronto. Copeland Enterprises owes the banks $279 million, including unpaid interest.

Bid-rigging probe spoils dairies' images

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department investigation of bid-rigging of school milk contracts has spread to at least 16 states and implicated some of the country's best-known dairies in what appears to be a widening scandal involving millions of dollars.

So far, 16 people have been sentenced to jail, and fines and damages sought by the Justice Department total $21 million. In all, 34 cases involving 44 individuals or corporations have been filed by the federal government, while states like Texas have also taken action.

A total of 31 defendants have entered federal guilty pleas, one plea agreement is pending, two defendants are awaiting trial, seven have been acquitted and charges have been dismissed against two others. A case filed Friday is also pending.

Most of the Justice Department's cases involve school districts in Florida, where the first prosecution was filed three years ago.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, who is investigating bid-rigging conspiracies in the state, said the companies he has prosecuted "have all exhibited proficiency at turning a profit in the dairy product industry. Not only was their conduct illegal and morally reprehensible, it is baffling."

He said he discovered "broad patterns of bid-rigging and price-fixing."

Morales said the school milk contracting market is wide open, and the opportunities for the successful legal pursuit of business are boundless.

"Yet the companies in the Texas school milk bid-rigging scandal succumbed to the temptation to take advantage of public school administrators and students, and engaged in a fraudulent manipulation of the milk transaction process," Morales said Friday.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Closing account of useless stock right move

By Bill Doyle

Q. I left 6,000 shares of a stock with a brokerage firm. It is the only thing I have there. The monthly statement I receive, copy enclosed, shows that stock as "unpriced" and its market value as "zero." It also lists an "amount debit" of "$15."

Doyle

That firm is charging me $15 a month on a useless stock. I suspect I am the victim of a rip-off and sent the brokerage people a letter instructing them to close my account. Was that my right move?

A. Of course. It makes no sense to be hit for $15 per month for owning something worthless.

That statement also shows your account had a debit balance — the amount you owe the brokerage — of $75 at the beginning and $90 at the end of the month. Don't be surprised if the brokerage attempts to collect that. It might even levy another fee for closing the account.

I suspect you will ignore those charges and get away with it, unless you want certificates for the 6,000 shares delivered to you. In that case, the brokerage will demand payment.

However, certificates might not be available. I can find no record of that stock any place. The company evidently has gone out of business. When that happens, stock certificates no longer are issued.

There's one saving grace in all this. You're entitled to take a capital loss, equal to the amount you paid for the stock, on your income tax return. List the stock as having a zero value on Schedule D of your Form 1040. The brokerage statement will be your proof.

Q. You have explained that the endorsement on the back of a stock certificate, or a separate "stock power," must be filled out in order to transfer the stock's ownership. The signature there must be guaranteed.

You also wrote most transfer agents accept signature guarantees only from brokerage firms, commercial banks and trust companies.

A section of Public Law 101-429 (S. 647) enacted by Congress in October 1990, requires transfer agents to accept signature guarantees from all financial institutions, including credit unions, savings and loan associations and savings banks. Right?

A. You are correct about the legislation being passed. But that part of the law has not had much impact to date.

It states transfer agents "may not... reject signature guarantees in contravention of such rules and regulations as the (Securities and Exchange) Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest, for the protection of investors, to facilitate the equitable treatment of financial institutions."

Here's the hang-up. The SEC still hasn't come up with regulations broadening the definition of financial institutions making acceptable signature guarantees.

The wheels of bureaucracy grind slowly. Until new SEC rules are published and take effect, most transfer agents will follow their previous procedures on accepting signature guarantees.

310 General Help Wanted

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
