Got them covered

Four British Bobbies are partially covered by a 7-foot high replica of their police helmet as they load it onto an airplane Friday at Stansted Airport in England. The helmet is headed for New York and Boston where it will be used in connection with a fund-raising drive for a British charity. The 90-pound helmet is made of foam covered with fiberglass.

Reagan will oppose dismantling settlements

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has informed Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin that he will oppose the dismantling of existing Jewish settlements on the West Bank and in Gaza while Palestinians make the transition to self-rule, it was disclosed Friday.

Sources here said Reagan also advised Begin that defense of the Israeli-held territory should remain in Israel's hands but that the Palestinians should be in charge of internal security during the transitional period.

The president sent his letter to the prime minister before announcing an American formula for the Middle East in a speech Wednesday night. According to the sources, who declined to be identified, Reagan made the following additional points:

— The United States will oppose both Israeli and Palestinian sovereignty over the West Bank and Gaza while their final status is being worked out.

— In exercising "full autonomy," the Palestinians should have "real authority" over themselves, the land and its resources, subject to fair safeguards on water.

— THE UNITED STATES supports economic, cultural and social ties with Jordan for the 1.3 million Palestinians who live under Israeli control.

— Those Palestinians who live in east Jerusalem should be permitted to vote on arrangements for the West Bank.

— During the transition, Israel should refrain from any new settlements on the former Arab lands.

— The United States will oppose any effort to isolate the West Bank and Gaza from Israel.

Turning to the post-transition period, Reagan informed Begin that Israel would have to withdraw from the West Bank and Gaza in exchange for peace. But he did not call for the return of all this territory captured from Jordan and Egypt during the 1967 Mideast War.

He said the borders should be worked out in negotiations, with the extent of Israel's withdrawal linked to its security situation.

PAST U.S. administrations have insisted that Israel should return to its pre-1967 borders except for some minor adjustments. Reagan seemed to be making less of a territorial demand.

On another critical issue, the president assured Begin that the United States would not support the creation of a Palestinian state. At the same time, though, Reagan did not promise to oppose statehood if the negotiators chose that course.

The permanent status of Jerusalem and whether Jewish settlements should remain on the West Bank and in Gaza past the transitional period is up to the negotiators, Reagan said.

However, the sources said, the president made the additional point that the United States would not support the continuation of the settlements as extraterritorial outposts" — meaning as extensions of the Israeli government.

Reagan took these positions in "talking points" that were attached to his letter to the prime minister, the sources said. Some of them were made public Thursday by the Israeli cabinet as it unanimously and emphatically rejected Reagan's plan.

White House officials confirmed that the letter included so-called talking points but said they were unable to verify the details obtained by The Associated Press.

FBI agent under investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department confirmed Friday that an FBI supervisor has been under criminal investigation for two years — reportedly for masterminding a string of bank robberies — but the department vehemently denied there was any FBI effort to cover up the case.

Scripps-Howard Newspapers reported on Thursday that the supervisor, a $40,000-a-year agent working at the headquarters of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is accused of directing seven bank robberies in five states.

Associate Attorney General Rudolph W. Giuliani told a news conference the investigation has been underway for two years, but that published reports suggesting a cover-up were "absolutely false and outrageous."

"The FBI has been completely professional and responsible," Giuliani said. But he said that the unnamed FBI employee has not been fired or suspended "because at this time there is not enough evidence to warrant discharge."

Justice Department officials, who asked not to be quoted by name, said the investigation of the supervisor has not uncovered evidence of involvement in bank robberies.

Giuliani said the FBI supervisor has been re-assigned to a job that does not involve any sensitive matters.

The case is before a grand jury and Giuliani said he did not know when the investigation would be concluded. "It's a question of not being able to resolve" the charges, he said.

Giuliani refused to comment on any of the charges against the FBI employee. He noted that the investigation began before the Reagan administration took office.

The newspaper report quoted an unnamed Justice Department official as saying that the FBI wanted to handle the matter internally without bringing criminal charges. A source was quoted as saying that the FBI's top echelon "wanted to shove it under the rug" but the Justice Department insisted on a full-scale criminal investigation.

Giuliani said, "There is no truth to a contention by the Scripps-Howard Newspapers that the Federal Bureau of Investigation failed to conduct a criminal investigation of an FBI supervisor who was suspected of criminal conduct.

"The fact is that the FBI uncovered alleged wrongdoing by an employee and promptly reported the matter fully to the Department of Justice and United States attorney for the District of Columbia. The FBI promptly began an intensive criminal investigation into the allegations against the employee."

Giuliani, acting as attorney general in the absence of William French Smith, who was out of town, said that the Justice Department will try to find out who was responsible for the news leak and will discipline the Justice Department official if it can determine his or her identity.

"It was a very irresponsible act," said Giuliani. Outside the room where the news conference was held, he remarked to reporters that the charge against the FBI was "off the wall...crazy."

Under repeated questioning, Giuliani said there was nothing unusual about the fact the investigation was underway for two years.

Finance ministers: Industrial nations' economic course must be reversed

TORONTO (AP) — Finance ministers representing 126 developing countries said Friday the "international system of trade and finance could collapse" if industrial countries don't reverse their economic course.

In a communique issued at a conference preceding the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank, the ministers called for a substantial increase in lending by the two agencies. The general meeting opens Monday.

"There is no substitute for an increase in quotas" that each country should contribute to the IMF, said Charles A. Jacelon, finance minister of Trinidad and Tobago and the official spokeman for the developing countries.

The Reagan administration is opposed to any major increase in the IMF's general lending fund, which often is a last resort for troubled countries. It instead proposes a modest expansion of an existing standby fund to provide emergency loans.

The developing group also called for reductions in military spending by the rich countries, with the money to be made available to the poorest nations.

Officials from both America's industrial allies and the Third World countries are pressing Washington to support sizeable increases in lending by the 146-nation IMF. It has a lending pool of $67 billion, but only $26 billion is in sound currency, such as the U.S. dollar, West German mark and Japanese yen, with the rest in currency restricted to the issuing country.

Conern about IMF lending and the possibility of an international economic crisis has been heightened by Mexico's financial plight and the mounting list of major Third World borrowers encountering similar debt problems.

Although formal meetings do not get under way until Monday, 24 ministers representing regional blocs of developing nations held a preliminary meeting.

They issued a communique condemning U.S. positions on virtually every issue.

"Unless the adverse trends in the international economy are reversed, the whole international system of trade and finance could collapse," it said.

"It is therefore imperative to formulate a world recovery program to stimulate noninflationary growth in the industrial as well as developing countries."

The ministers called on wealthy countries to revive their economies "through an appropriate mix of policies, a removal of protectionist barriers to international trade, a reduction of military expenditure and a rechanneling of such resources to increased (development aid) and other flows."

They also deplored stringent economic measures imposed by the IMF for its loans.

Economic stagnation in the industrial countries has made growth prospects "grim" for developing nations, and high interest rates have added "enormously" to their debt burden, the ministers said.

They declared "there is no effetive substitute" for an increase in IMF lending resources and said that as a minimum the pool should be doubled.

Pastor arrested for illegal school

LOUISVILLE, Neb. (AP) — A sheriff arrested a minister in his church as he led a children's song session, and the pastor was taken to jail Friday for refusing to close an illegal school in the basement.

A hundred ministers from around the nation had gathered at the Faith Baptist Church to show their support for the Rev. Everett Sileven in his five-year battle against state regulation, and they lined up on the sidewalk and sang as he was taken away to serve a 3½-month term.

Then they followed the sheriff's car to the Cass County Jail, where some vowed to stay outside as long as Sileven is held.

"One little kid started crying" when Sileven was arrested at his Louisville church, said Cass County Sheriff Fred Tesch, who made the arrest. "But Reverend Sileven told him that the sheriff is a nice guy and that they shouldn't be mad at the sheriff."

Sileven was to have started serving the jail term Wednesday as ordered by Cass County District Judge Raymond Case in May. The pastor had been convicted of being in contempt of an order that the non-accredited fundamentalist Faith Christian School be closed. The school, with about 20 pupils, is held in the church basement. Sileven refuses to use state-certified teachers.

Solidarity supporters charged in plot

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Martial law authorities, challenged by three days of protest riots, on Friday charged four of Solidarity's most radical supporters with plotting to overthrow the Communist government.

The charge carries the death penalty.

Annour.cement of the "arrests" of Jacek Kuron, former chairman of the disbanded KOR organization, and three other KOR members followed speculation by Western diplomats that political trials for leading Polish dissidents were planned.

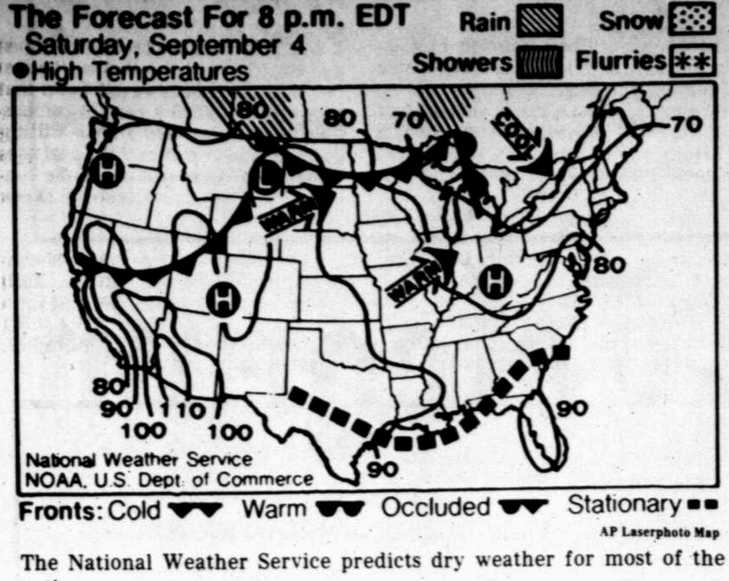
When asked if trials would be held for the four men, Jerzy Urban, the government spokesman, said only that he could not speak for Poland's military prosecutor, who has responsibility for the cases.

Kuron, Adam Michnik, Jan Litynsky and Henryk Wujec have been interned without charge since authorities declared martial law on Dec. 13, seized thousands of Solidarity leaders, activists and advisers and suspended Solidarity.

Urban said Kuron and the others no longer are considered internees, but are being held on charges of "undertaking preparations aimed at overthrowing the political system by force."

He told foreign journalists that the army prosecutor also issued arrest warrants for other KOR members who still are free, including Jan Jozef Lipski, who is in London, and MTHE Pw Chojecki, who is in the United States.

WEATHER SUMMARY



The National Weather Service predicts dry weather for most of the nation.

Weekend weather will be hot, dry

Weatherwise, the weekend won't be much different from the rest of the week: hot and dry.

That more-of-the-same weather, which was threatened by a slight chance of showers Friday night, will hold peak temperatures in the mid-90s and overnight lows in the upper 60s, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The weekend is to be fair and warm.

Friday's high temperature of 94 degrees was short of tying the record high of 101 degrees for the date in 1939. The overnight low of 63 degrees was 11 degrees higher than the record low of 52 degrees for the date in 1961.

Marines in Beirut have sense of humor

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Marines in Beirut are manning shell-blasted observation posts and standing guard for hours under the blazing sun, but they still manage to find a little humor in their situation.

One group of Marines has a post in what was once an office building but, since being fired on in the 1975-76 civil war, has become a debris-strewn, rat-infested shell. The sign they put over the door reads "Beirut Hilton."

Several other Marines have built a shack with a corrugated tin roof that provides the only shade in their area of the port. It too has a sign: "USMC 1st Platoon Tours, Open 24 Hours." Under USMC, the Marines have written "Uncle Sam's Misguided Children."

With American, French and Italian soldiers guarding a Lebanese city with a large concentration of Palestinians, there is bound to be a certain clash of cultures. But there is a merging of cultures, too.

Capt. Henry Donigan, of Bedford, Mass., was asked how he liked serving as a liaison officer with French troops and concentrated his reply on only one aspect of French culture. "The chow is great," he said. "I'll come back with a taste for champagne and caviar."

Another Marine serving as a liaison with the French was asked where he was from. "Jacksonville, N.C.," he replied, smiling as he awaited a reaction. There was reason to smile for the accent immediately said this was no southern boy. It was, in fact, more redolent of Parisian cafes than of North Carolina coast. It turned out the man who calls Jacksonville home was Gunnery Sgt. Jean-Louis Poulain, born in France but a career U.S. Marine.

One of the Marine commanders, Lt. Col. Robert Johnston, was born in Scotland, but now calls San Diego, Calif., his home. When Johnston was told he had no Scottish accent he quickly turned on a thick burr and said, "I lost it quite easily but it comes back when I drink too much."

The Lebanese have a reputation for resiliency, and one owner of a grocery near the Green Line dividing east and west Beirut proved it.

While reporters were waiting Thursday for the ceremony in which leftist Lebanese Moslem guerrillas would give up their positions along the line to Lebanese police, the man was working about 50 feet away.

His grocery store had no glass left in the windows and there were several holes in the wall left by shells. Around him stood militiamen from a faction called the Mourabitoun. They still had their machine guns, tanks and artillery, but none of it stopped the man from welding wrought iron bars over the glassless windows.

How soon would he reopen? "As soon as I can," he said.

A boy of 7 or 8 approached a reporter on a street in the bombed-out Fakhani section of west Beirut. He said something in Arabic and when he got no response set out to prove his linguistic prowess.

"Comment ca va?" he asked — French for "how are you?" Then he added in English, "Hello, hello. How are you."

"I am fine, how are you," the reporter replied.

"I am fine too," the boy said.

The reporter was getting into a car and said goodbye. The boy stood there, holding a sack of apples in a plastic bag. He reached into the bag and pulled out a dud grenade. He laughed and pretended to throw it under the car.

The street with its shell craters and the buildings reduced to rubble made clear that grenades were no laughing matter, but there wasn't time — or language — to explain.

Arafat prepares to reorganize PLO

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — About 2,000 people thronged the Tunis airport Friday and cheered PLO chief Yasser Arafat as he arrived to begin a reorganization of his guerrilla army, which was evacuated from Lebanon as a result of the Israeli invasion.

A luxurious presidential villa on the northern outskirts of Tunis will be, at least temporarily, his third home in exile since the 1948 Arab-Israeli war that erupted after the Jewish state was established.

His Palestine Liberation Organization was driven out of Jordan in 1970 by King Hussein's army. Arafat then established a power base in Lebanon, but his command and some 8,000-9,000 guerrillas were forced to leave that country over the past two weeks under a U.S.-mediated evacuation plan after the Israeli army invaded Lebanon June 6 and trapped the guerrillas in west Beirut.

Wearing the traditional kaffiyeh headcloth, with a pistol strapped to his waist, Arafat vowed to continue the fight for a Palestinian homeland.

"The battle is long and we have just moved from one position to another in order to continue our struggle until we achieve victory in return to Palestine and Jerusalem," Arafat told the crowd at the Tunis-Carthage airport.

He was welcomed by Tunisia's pro-West, 79-year-old President-for-life Habib Bourguiba. The president made no public statement, but walked hand-in-hand with Arafat in a review of a Tunisian honor guard and about 50 PLO guerrillas as a band played the national anthem.

Arafat arrived on a chartered Tunis Air Boeing 727 from a two-day visit to Greece, with the jetliner escorted by two Tunisian warplanes. He had left Beirut Monday aboard a Greek cruise ship, and the choice of Athens for his first stop reflected his fury toward Arab states for their lack of backing during the Beirut siege.

Yassar Arafat

Government sources said they expected Arafat to pay a visit today to some 1,000 PLO guerrillas camped in tents and the buildings of a former agricultural college in scrub-brush country at Oued Zargua 45 miles west of Tunis. Under the evacuation plan arranged by U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, the guerrillas were sent to a half dozen Arab countries.

The 53-year-old guerrilla leader and Bourgiba rode in a convertible to the Saada presidential palace in Lamarsa, which is used as a guest house for visiting dignitaries.

Arafat was expected to begin efforts immediately to reform his scattered forces.

Capt. J.P. Lynch

Retiring ranger honored

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Some 300 friends, relatives and colleagues gathered at a banquet in Midland Center Friday night to honor Texas Ranger Capt. J.P. Lynch, a former oilfield worker who is retiring after 34 years in law enforcement work, 25 of which were spent as a member of the Rangers.

Department of Public Safety Director Col. Jim Adams presented Lynch with a plaque of appreciation. Adams noted that the Rangers were formed 47 years after America gained its independence and their work has shifted from the problems found on the frontier to those of today: oilfield theft and white collar crime.

"He's excelled in everything he's been assigned to do," Adams said of the 62-year-old Lynch, who served with the U.S. Navy during World War II and then joined the Department of Public as a trooper in 1948.

The Texas Rangers originally operated out of the state adjutant general's office, but were attached to the DPS when that agency was formed in 1935. The number of Rangers is set by the legislature and their force currently stands at 94.

They can be likened to the FBI and enjoy a reputation as crack felony investigators who aid local law enforcement agencies, by invitation, when the need for their specialized talents arises.

The number of Rangers is kept low to maintain flexibility and to keep them from growing so large that they begin to supplant other law enforcement agencies in the state, Adams said earlier in the evening, adding: "J.P. Lynch represents the best of the Texas Rangers."

Among the speakers was DPS Commissioner Bill Blakemore of Midland, who presented Lynch with a watch bearing the Ranger star on its face. He also received a shotgun shell loading machine because, it was noted jokingly, he would no longer have access to state ammunition when he goes bird hunting.

Tom Green County District Attorney Royal Hart served as master of ceremonies.

Rapist outraged at Soviet newspaper

SEATTLE (AP) — The man convicted as Spokane's notorious "South Hill rapist" is outraged at a Soviet newspaper for calling him a millionaire who turned to murder after being spurned by "the American financial elite."

"I guess the Soviet media wants to make American life look as despicable as possible. But this story really is something," said Kevin Coe, who was never accused of killing anyone.

He is serving life plus 75 years in prison and has changed his name from Fred to Kevin.

Seattle Times columnist Erik Lacitis telephoned Coe in prison to read him a story that appeared June 13 in The Lenin-gradskaya Pravda, circulation 350,000, a major Leningrad newspaper. The Times said it got the article and a translation from a Soviet immigrant who keeps contacts in his homeland, and also had the article checked by the reporter's mother, who speaks five Eastern European languages.

The story said Coe wanted to win immortality by setting a murder record, and was already up to 20 victims, because he was frustrated over failure to crash America's aristocracy. The paper even quoted Coe as complaining about his lot as an "average provincial millionaire."

The facts of the case are these: Police attributed two dozen rapes to Coe, son of the retired managing editor of the Spokane Chronicle. Coe was convicted in 1981 of four counts of rape. None of the victims was killed or seriously injured physically.

Coe's mother, Ruth, was found guilty of trying to hire someone to kill the judge and prosecutor instrumental in her son's conviction and sentence. She is now serving a one-year term.

Under the headline, "Entertainment in the rainy season," the Leningrad story began, "An impudent and bloodthirsty criminal appeared in the American city of Spokane, who was waylaying lonely pedestrians (chiefly women), robbing them, and then unmercifully shooting them down."

It called Coe "a successful businessman, who made millions in successfully selling paintings, who was president of a charitable family foundation, author of several pretentious pseudo-sociological researches and editor of the literature and arts section in the newspaper belonging to his father."

> "Finally, Fred Coe understood that it is for him too difficult to storm the commanding posts of the American financial elite...."

Coe had no connection to the newspaper or a charitable foundation. He was by no means wealthy.

The Leningrad paper said Coe failed in attempts to get into America's ritziest social clubs, including the Knickerbocker in New York and the Metropolitan in Washington.

The paper said, "Every applicant is screened for three generations. He has to furnish a document which testifies for his and members of his family's impeccable origins (descendant from white Anglo-Saxons, Protestant-Evangelical religion), certificate of graduating from one of six aristocratic schools of New England, diploma from one of the three more prestigious universities (Yale, Harvard or Princeton). He has to have a limousine of acccepted standard brand, a dog of a certain breed, use of services of a 'respectable' physician, attorney, tailor, and be an owner of not less than six houses, including no less than two in the neighborhoods of fashionable resorts, etc."

The Leningrad paper wrapped up its account of the case by saying, "Finally, Fred Coe understood that it is for him too difficult to storm the commanding posts of the American financial elite. His attempts to conquer the Olympus of literature did not succeed, either. And so, the 'average millionaire' from Spokane tried to find Herostratian fame (Herostratos was a Greek who burned down a temple to make sure his name would be remembered).

Coe said, according to the paper, "It became for me completely impossible to vegetate as an unknown. I decided to make the world talk about me, no matter by what means."

Coe told The Seattle Times: "I guess the Soviet media wants to make American life look as despicable as possible. But this story is really something.

"They made up all the quotes. I don't know where they got any of the stuff," Coe said. "In fact, if they hadn't put my name in it, and the mention about Spokane, I wouldn't have know what they were talking about."

Bargain hunters checked at border

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Mexican customs officials stepped up inspections of vehicles leaving their country Friday in an attempt to halt raids on supermarkets by bargain-seeking Americans.

Traffic lines at one international bridge between El Paso, and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, were backed up nearly a mile as Mexican customs inspectors checked trunks of cars, examined underframes of trucks and opened packages carried by Americans and Mexicans alike.

Luis Gutierrez y Gonzalez, head of Mexican customs in Juarez, said he had been advised by Mexico City officials late Thursday that visitors should be allowed to take only enough government-subsidized food for "daily consumption" into the United States.

Jack Flynn, acting district director of the U.S. Customs office in El Paso, said, "If you have some foodstuffs that are subsidized by the government and you have an excess of a particular item like sugar, then they'll take it away from you."

Flynn said the rules governing how much is too much are "pretty subjective."

Normally, traffic going out of Mexico is not even monitored by Mexican customs officials, although cars often are checked by U.S. customs officers on the northern side of the bridges.

"To say their checking has been stepped-up might be an understatement," Flynn said.

The inspections follow buying sprees by Americans that began after the Aug. 5 devaluation of the peso. When the Mexican government allowed the peso to float on international money markets, it fell from a rate of about 49 pesos to the dollar to more than 100 to the dollar.

With their dollars suddenly worth twice as much in Mexico, shoppers from the United States hurried across the border to take advantage of bargains ranging from food to beer to clothing.

Particularly attractive were basic foodstuffs such as sugar, coffee, cooking oil and tortillas that remained at pre-devaluation prices because they are subsidized by the Mexican government.

Merchants on the Mexican side of the border claimed Americans were clearing their store shelves, causing shortages of food that Mexicans needed.

"Stores were being raided last week," Flynn said. "What would be considered to be a normal shopping trip would be two grocery bags full of food. Last week, they were bringing them across by tens instead of twos."

Juan Garcia, acting supervisor for the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Laredo, Texas, said Americans returning from Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, on Friday were complaining that "some of the foodstuffs are being picked up by officers over there."

Garcia said the goods were being confiscated "only if they're bringing large amounts."

Minister strangled during robbery

MUSKEGON HEIGHTS, Mich. (AP) — A 94-year-old minister was found dead in his home Friday with a belt wrapped around his neck, and police said he was strangled during a robbery.

Muskegon Heights Police said the Rev. Clayborn Casey was probably killed Thursday evening. A 26-year-old man was being questioned and police were seeking two other people.

The three were spotted in downtown Muskegon about midnight Thursday in Casey's automobile, which was missing from the man's home, police said.

Police said Casey's wallet and its contents were scattered around the room where he was found. A neighbor called police to the house Friday morning.

"It looked like they just overpowered him," said Police Chief Willie Howell, who said he had known Casey for many years.

Despite his age, Casey was the active pastor of the Greater Harvest Baptist Church — a position he had held since 1953.

He had moved back into his home last week after damage from a March fire was repaired.

After the fire, Casey had taken several guns to the Muskegon Heights Police Department for safe keeping, Howell said.

Correction

Two stories by The Reporter-Telegram this week regarding Sunday night's raid on a pit bulldog fighting arena in rural Midland County listed the address of the arena as County Road 146 and FM-715. The correct address is FM-715 just south of County Road 145. The error resulted from an incorrect address on the press release issued by the sheriff's department.

With HALT's help, you can take law into your own hands

By HARVEY HAGMAN
Hearst Feature Service

More people than ever before are taking the law into their own hands.

Michael Richards, legislative director of Help Abolish Legal Tyranny (HALT), a Washington-based consumer interest group for legal reform, says his 100,000-member organization is growing by 1,000 members a week — 50,000 over the last year. The reason: Americans are discontented with rising legal fees and the needless complexity of U.S. law, he says.

Not that there isn't risk in representing yourself. In traffic cases, for example, stiffer drunk driving laws have prompted more people charged with drunk driving to hire attorneys rather than risk error representing themselves.

Fear often prevents people from doing their own legal work, Richards said. But with the right information, many legal matters can be handled by the consumer.

When people decide to take the law into their own hands, they often turn to small claims court, which handles civil suits from $1 to $1,000, does not require attorneys and allows up to 30 days for appeals. Here are tips for making your trip to small claims court a successful one:

—Try to settle disputes out of court first. Discuss your problem with the person or people involved.

—Make a demand and get an answer. Agree on a deadline and expect the other party to meet it. Follow the call with a registered letter.

—If everything else fails, go to court. It costs $5 to file your case, $2 for certified mail to deliver your summons, or $5 to have a constable deliver the summons.

Baltimore Small claims court Judge George Taylor offers tips for bringing your case to court:

—Bring all papers pertaining to the matter which bear your signature. Collect the evidence and plan your presentation.

—Tell the truth.

—No matter how angry you get, don't show it in court.

—Tell your side of the story, but don't use the court as a debating society.

—If your claim is more than $300 or $400, consider contacting a lawyer.

—Proof is particularly vital in cases involving home ownership or home improvements. Bring estimates of repair costs as assessed by another contractor.

—Watch other trials and note the time limits for each case. Don't forget "the Preponderance of Evidence" rule, which means the plaintiff must offer more evidence to support his claim than the defendant to counter it. Use expert witnesses. Be organized.

—Be on time. Before the session begins, check the court calendar. If the other side fails to appear in court on the scheduled day, you may win by default (but that's up to the judge).

—If the defendant agrees to settle out of court, get any agreement in writing.

Linguistically, probate means to prove. Legally, it refers to the process of establishing the validity of the last will and testament of a deceased person.

According to Richards, "This is probably the largest area of consumer legal extortion. To varying degrees, probate is a simple administrative task. If problems arise, contact a lawyer, but hire him on an hourly basis for a specific problem and get all fee agreements in writing."

To avoid most problems, follow these basic steps.

—Learn to speak and understand legalese; the jargon makes the task seem more difficult than it really is. The probate system is mainly a question of finding and locating heirs, appointment of the personal representative named in the will, a few newspaper ads, filing an accounting with the probate court and filing state tax forms.

—Learn what to do and when to do it. HALT outlines the administration of an estate: Open the estate for probate, inventory the estate, distribute the assets. Most of this can be accomplished by phone or mail.

Do as much of the divorce work as you can yourself, advises Richards, then comparison shop for the best price from legal clinics and private attorneys. Hire an attorney on an hourly basis for specific areas. In an uncontested divorce, attempt an agreement without an attorney. "Emotional issues are not best handled by lawyers," Richards says. Such services aim to allow the couple in a separation or divorce to resolve issues such as custody, child and spouse support and property to their mutual satisfaction. Mediation costs $40 to $50 an hour and covers both parties.

Most mediations cost less than $1,000, compared to $2,500 for most adversary divorces, and take less time. Do-it-yourself uncontested divorces can cost as little as $130 to $140.

HALT cautions that purchasing real estate is often a complex matter. According to attorney and author Alex J. Soled, "Real estate brokers say, 'Just sign this.' The pitfall is that on the real estate form the brokers put down that they are entitled to a percent commission; as long as they find a willing buyer, it doesn't matter if the deal goes through. A lawyer will put in the contract, 'provided settlement takes place.'"

HALT publishes five manuals containing tips about law libraries, small claims court, real estate, shopping for a lawyer and probate. Write HALT at 201 Massachusetts Ave., N.E., Suite 319, Washington, D.C. 20002.

More Americans turning to do-it-yourself law books

Hearst Feature Service

Do-it-yourself law books are one way of dodging needless legal expense, but when a case involves a number of complex technicalities, "see a lawyer," as Elloyd Lotridge, deputy director of Legal Aid Inc., cautions.

Here's a sampling of current books:

—"How to Avoid Probate Updated" (Norman F. Dacey, Crown Publishers Inc., $14.95) describes three kinds of property that can be passed on to your heirs without going through the probate procedure: life insurance payable to a named beneficiary, property owned jointly "with right of survivorship" and property held in a "living trust." The book focuses on these "living trusts." Michael Richards of Help Abolish Legal Tyranny credits this book with opening the eyes of a number of people to how probate is often a scam. Its shortcoming, he says, is that it emphasizes forms which require consistent updating and elucidation.

—"The Essential Guide to Wills, Estates, Trusts & Death Taxes: How to Save Taxes and Avoid Costly Common Mistakes" (Alex J. Soled, Chancey Publishers of Baltimore, $12.95) aims to "educate the public," says Soled, a Baltimore lawyer. "Most lawyers charge on an hourly basis, so you don't want them wasting their time defining terms, which is the purpose of my book. Any information is good, but avoid 'how-to' books." He advises against doing your own will: "It creates more problems than it solves."

—"The Attorney's Pocket Dictionary" (Law and Business, Inc., $12.50) includes annotations from the United States Uniform Code plus a section on the code.

—"The Legal Word Book" (Frank S. Gordon and Thomas Hemnes, Houghton Mifflin, $7.95) translates more than 20,000 terms.

—"Consumer Guide: Get More Money from....Social Security, Government Benefits, Medicare, Plus Rules on Divorce and Remarrying" (Grossett and Dunlap, $4.95) tells how to deal with Medicare and Social Security and make them work for you, how to apply for benefits, and appeal a decision.

—"Who Gets It When You Go?" (David C. Larson, Random House, $4.95) is a guide for planning your will, protecting your family's financial future, managing inheritance taxes, avoiding probate.

—"When in Doubt, SUE" (John H. Lehnert, Sologra-phic, $4.95) tells how to sue in the "most litigious" nation on earth.

—"Handbook of Everyday Law" (Martin J. Ross and Jeffrey Stevens Ross, Fawcett, $3.95) is a guide to aspects of law toucing your daily life — taxes, real estate, contracts, wills, Social Security, Medicare and trusts.

—"You Can Win Big in Small Claims Court" (Judge James E. Morris, Rawson and Wade Publishers, $7.95) shows how to file your claim easily, quickly and cheaply — sans lawyer.

—"Sue the Bstrds: A Victim's Handbook" (Douglas Matthews, Priam Books, $7.95) tells how and when to use small claims courts.

—"Legal Agreements in Plain English" (J. D. Joseph and J.D. Hiller, Contemporary Books, $12.95) includes 33 contracts for common business and personal transactions — buying, renting or selling a house, premarriage, separation and divorce contracts.

Legal service fees vary somewhat

Hearst Feature Service

Here's a general range of what you can expect to pay attorneys for legal services. (Lawyers who identify their firm as a "legal clinic" often are less costly because they handle routine cases in volume.)

Initial consultation: Free or up to $25.

Uncontested divorce: $125 to $175 plus court costs. Both parties must live in the state. Extra costs run about $150, including a $75 filing fee, and $65 to $75 fee to go before a master. Travel time is usually extra.

Contested divorce: $200 to $300 retainer. Hourly fees of about $60 plus filing and masters fees.

Separation agreements: $150 and up depending on complexity of case.

Simple will: $35 to $100.

Husband and wife will: $50 to $200.

Reciprocal wills with trust provisions: $75 and up. Some clinics charge $100 for each person involved.

Charge to incorporate a small business: $300 to $400.

Book offers some advice on legal agreements

Hearst Feature Service

The book, "Legal Agreements in Plain English," advises:

—Get a copy of everything you sign.

—Read and understand every agreement you sign.

—Put the agreement in clear, concise, written form.

—Make sure everything you buy is in proper mechanical condition. Have a professional write a report on the condition of the house or vehicle you are buying.

Lehman's threat creates some jitters

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The decision by Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr. to make public his threat to cancel the costly F/A-18 program has caused some jitters among allied purchasers of the aircraft.

In a newspaper interview this week, Lehman told a reporter what he told the Defense Resources Board, a senior Pentagon policy panel, several months ago: If McDonnell Douglas Corp., the prime contractor, failed to hold the flyaway unit price of the carrier-based plane at $22.5 million, the Navy would halt further procurement of it.

Canada, Australia and Spain have made commitments to modernize their tactical air forces with purchases of the F/A-18. The first of 138 Canadian Hornets has already rolled off the line and the first two of 75 contracted for by Australia are to be delivered in 1984. Spain wants to buy 84, but no firm delivery date has as yet been set.

A cancellation of more than 1,000 of the 1,377 F/A-18's in the current U.S. Navy program would almost certainly jeopardize these foreign sales because the unit price contracted for would be prohibitive for the company to maintain. The fact that Lehman made his threat public increases the pressure on McDonnell Douglas, but also reduces the secretary's flexibility in the matter.

The Navy bought 60 Hornets at a flyaway unit cost of $22.5 million in fiscal 1981. Lehman wants the manufacturer to hold this price — or lower it — for fiscal 1982 through 1984, in fiscal 1982 dollars.

While this may seem tough on the contractor, who would have to absorb inflation, the fact that more aircraft would be purchased should allow significant reductions in unit costs.

The Navy and McDonnell Douglas have been negotiating since last April on the fiscal 1982 buy of 63 aircraft. The year ends Sept. 30. For fiscal 1983, the Navy plan calls for 84 Hornets and Congress has already authorized funds for that number, although it has not yet appropriated the money for them. As for fiscal 1984, the plan is to buy 96.

The flyaway cost is the lowest of all the estimated costs because it does not include research and development, military construction and certain support charges. Total program unit cost is the highest.

In a statement last night, McDonnell Douglas asserted that "the costs of purchasing each F/A-18 have been decreasing and are expected to continue decreasing as the program matures and larger numbers of aircraft are produced annually."

Farmers cut sugarbeet production

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — American farmers have cut sugarbeet production sharply because of sagging prices and huge world supplies of sugar — and the situation continues to look grim.

The Agriculture Department says world sugar output in the year ahead may fall just short of the record production of 1981-82.

Global output for the sugar marketing year which ended Aug. 31 was estimated Thursday at a record 97.9 million metric tons, up the previous forecast of 96.3 million tons last May.

Officials said the 1982-83 world crop could yield 95 million to 97 million metric tons. Production of beet sugar is expected to decline about 1.5 million tons, but cane sugar may not drop so much.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Beet sugar output in the United States in 1982-83 may drop 13 percent from last season, reflecting sharp cuts in this year's plantings by farmers.

"Sugarbeet production is declining considerably in all areas except the Red River Valley of Minnesota and North Dakota," the report said.

However, it added, U.S. cane sugar output, excluding Puerto Rico, will probably match 1981-82 production.

The huge world sugar output in the season just completed triggered a sharp increase in surpluses and plummeting prices on the international market.

With 1981-82 sugar consumption estimated at about 91 million metric tons, that means an inventory buildup of nearly seven million tons, the report said.

Consequently, that could push global stockpiles to 28.1 million metric tons — 31 percent of total consumption "and far above the 25 percent generally regarded as a good balance," it said.

"World consumption, discouraged by poor economic growth, is unlikely to rise above 93 million tons" in 1982-83, "so another sugar surplus appears probably and prices will stay low."

Prices of raw sugar in the Caribbean, which are used as the world price, averaged 6.8 cents per pound in August, about half what they were a year earlier.

World raw sugar prices averaged 16.9 cents per pound in 1981 and 29 cents in 1980.

President Reagan in May ordered import quotas to protect domestic producers from cheap foreign sugar being dumped on the U.S. market and to forestall large federal purchases of domestic sugar under federal price support programs.

Cryts suing judge for $35 million

NEW MADRID, Mo. (AP) — Wayne Cryts, the farmer jailed for contempt in a bankruptcy case, has filed a $35 million lawsuit against the judge, saying the month he spent in jail caused him "personal embarrassment and humiliation."

Cryts, of Puxico, Mo., was joined in the lawsuit, filed Thursday, his wife, father and two fellow farmers. Named as defendants were federal Bankruptcy Judge Charles Baker of Little Rock, Ark. and four others.

Cryts was jailed for 34 days when he refused to tell Baker on June 4 who helped him remove 32,000 bushels of soybeans from a bankrupt grain elevator in Ristine, Mo., in defiance of the federal marshals assigned to protect the stored crop.

The soybeans, which Cryts claimed belonged to him, were caught up in a bankruptcy case involving the James Brothers of Corning, Ark., owners of the elevator. Baker had ordered the soybeans sold to help pay off the debts of the bankrupt elevator.

Baker later levied a $287,000 judgment against Cryts for taking the soybeans, a judgment Cryts has appealed.

Besides Baker, the lawsuit names Robert Lindsey, trustee of the bankrupt Ristine Elevator; Ben F. Arnold and Warren Dupway, attorneys for Lindsey, and Donald F. Voight, attorney for St. Paul Life & Marine Insurance Co.

North Carolina senators facing sheaf of trouble in tobacco state

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Tobacco is Mr. Big in North Carolina, a crop that provides farmers with more than $1 billion a year in income. And anything that smacks of a vote against the flue-cured leaf ranks somewhere up there with treason.

As a result, the state's two Republican senators, Jesse Helms and John P. East, are harvesting a sheaf of trouble for switching their votes on the tax bill that doubled the federal excise tax on cigarettes.

They changed "no" votes to "yes" to help the tax bill squeak through the Senate, and even though they later voted against a final conference version, it was too late. The bill became law anyway.

The new tax has created trauma in North Carolina. But tobacco is suffering from other problems as well. Part of the problem is a mediocre crop, part of the problem is the economy and another part is the higher price supports authorized by new tobacco legislation.

Cigarette companies are nervous about a consumption drop that is projected as high as 8 percent. Tobacco isn't moving well at the big North Carolina auction markets, and more of it than usual is flooding into the government support-loan pool. Export sales have fallen precipitously. Farmers are furious at the turn of events.

"We can't take sides politically," said Bill Little, an official of the state Farm Bureau Federation, "but concern has been expressed by the farm community and we have expressed it to the senators.... They have received a lot of flak and they are attempting to explain their votes."

State Democrats, meanwhile, gloatingly united against the tax, are savoring the fallout from last month's congressional action that raised the cigarette tax to 16 cents.

They're looking ahead to the November congressional elections, with most of their seven incumbents facing tough sledding, and to 1984, when Helms may be challenged for his Senate seat by Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.

Hunt says he was "very disappointed" by the tax vote and fears the state economy will be hurt badly as a result, with lower state tax collections and fewer jobs and manufacturing activity if cigarette consumption drops as expected.

The Democrats have started a campaign to publicize the Helms-East switcheroo on the tax bill. Within days of the switch, they were being assailed as "The Tobacco Tax Twins" in a full-page ad published by the state party in the Raleigh News and Observer. Now they are papering the state with reprints of the ad, urging an anti-Republican vote in November.

For his part, Helms, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, has sent many constituents a long letter explaining his first vote for the tax as one of the costs of his earlier successful effort to win passage of a new tobacco price-support program.

And East asserts undying loyalty to tobacco, but he has told Carolinians that he switched his vote only after a personal appeal from President Reagan. He said he would help Reagan "fix a flat tire" on that one vote, but he wasn't going "for the whole ride."

Wool incentive program will cost nation about $46 million this year

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The gumshoes from the General Accounting Office have found some more fuzzy business in government: the federal wool incentive program.

That's the Department of Agriculture's program of payments to farmers to support, encourage, abet and spur the production of wool.

This year alone, it's going to cost more than $46.6 million.

But the GAO, after taking a close look at the wool program, concluded that someone — and it isn't the sheep — is getting fleeced.

Although the program has cost taxpayers about $2 billion since 1955, GAO argued in a recent study that it really hasn't achieved its goal of increasing U.S. wool production. The level of 106 million pounds of wool in 1980 was less than half 1955 production.

Back in the beginning, one of the justifications for the wool-incentive program was national security. Wool was important to the military for uniforms and blankets and it was vital to the U.S. textile industry.

Then, somewhere along the line wool got undercut by synthetic fibers and its strategic importance waned. But the wool-support program kept right on going.

The GAO has recommended that Congress take a new look at the support program (even though it did so last year and continued it with hardly a peep of dissent) to determine if changes ought to be made. The report already has one important supporter, USDA.

"We agree with most of the findings," commented Everett Rank, administrator of the Commodity Credit Corp. He added that the study was "well prepared" and a "fair appraisal of the strengths and weaknesses of the program."

Wool producers get about three-fourths of their income from sheep raising by selling lambs for slaughter. And while U.S. wool production increased last year for the third straight year, world production is up sharply and imports of wool and woolen goods have shorn some of the domestic industry's enthusiasm.

Under the support system, a farmer sells wool to a commercial processor and then gets a bonus payment from the government. This year, the way the formula is calculated, if the farmer sells $100 worth of wool, the CCC pays the farmer an additional $42.90.

In the typical year, about 80,000 farmers are getting the payments, averaging about $400 each.

Producers get paid for the wool shorn from sheep as well as for wool pulled from the carcasses of lambs sent to slaughter. The program has cost as much as $102 million (in 1971) when wool prices were severely depressed and as little as nothing (in 1973) when market prices went above the guaranteed support.

According to the GAO, it really is a bonus because most sheep-raising decisions are based on the profitability of the lamb market, rather than on the wool program.

This is the scene Friday in Mexico City's Zocalo Square where an estimated one million people gathered to demonstrate in favor of President Jose Lopez Portillo's decision to nationalize the country's privately owned banks.

People support Mexican bank nationalization

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Jose Lopez Portillo told cheering supporters at a huge rally Friday that nationalization of Mexican banks has divided the country between honest citizens and a thieving minority.

The state television estimated 1 million people packed the capital's main Zocalo Square for the demonstration, called by the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party.

Some of the workers thronging the plaza said they had been threatened with loss of pay if they failed to show up.

"I want to tell you that here the road is forked once again," Lopez Portillo told the cheering crowd in a brief speech.

"On this side are the majorities that demand justice, that demand our national values, and on the other are those who want to leave with the treasury in their hearts," he said.

Labor leaders stood behind Lopez Portillo as he spoke from a balcony at the Presidential Palace.

Long columns of workers carrying banners and large signs snarled traffic as they marched toward the square.

Some of the signs read, "Well Done" and "We're With You Mr. President."

THE GOVERNMENT party, known by its initials PRI, called the rally after business leaders bitterly criticized Lopez Portillo's actions and the National Banker's Association threatened to contest the nationalizations in the courts.

Labor unions and leftist parties hailed the measures.

"Many thanks for backing this measure of a nationalist nature. You are the workers of my country. From you, from all of you, with the vitality of your blood, I receive the support to continue ahead," Lopez Portillo said.

In a surprise move Wednesday, the outgoing president imposed tough currency exchange controls and ordered the banks nationalized, accusing the owners of "sacking" the country by encouraging people to send their money abroad.

He also ordered the Bank of Mexico, the country's federal reserve which functioned as an independent agency up to now, turned into a bureau of the federal government. The bank's director, Miguel Mancera, resigned in protest.

In his last state of the union speech before the Congress, Lopez Portillo said Mexicans took $22 billion out of the country during the past two years, most of it to buy real estate in the United States. "They will not sack us any more," he said.

Mexico's troubles started when prices of oil, silver, coffee and other major exports dropped last year and the country was in the midst of an ambitious plan to develop industry, forcing it to borrow massively abroad.

IN LESS than two years, the foreign debt doubled to $81 billion. Inflation soared to 60 percent and may top 100 percent by the end of the year.

During the past six months, the government has been cutting spending drastically, sharply raising unemployment, and devalued the peso twice — from 27 to the dollar in February to more than 120 this year — to correct the imbalance.

Last month, Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog won a 90-day reprieve in debt payments from 115 private banks meeting in New York City, 55 of them American ones.

But despite these measures, the flight of capital continued and Lopez Portillo decreed more drastic ones, the toughest Mexicans have seen in more than a century.

"State ownership of the banks is a definite blow to private enterprise and a clear signal the country is entering socialism, a measure that is unacceptable because it concentrates all political and economic power in the government turning it totalitarian," the banker's association said in a statement.

"The flight of dollars originated in the government's economic policy; Mexicans lost their confidence in their rulers and tried to protect their savings," the statement said. Many business leaders echoed the complaint.

Carlos Tello Macias, the new Bank of Mexico director, denied that nationalizing the banks amounted to socialism. "It simply involves placing (private banks) at the service of the people," he said in a statement.

THE COUNTRY'S 35 private banks and their 4,159 branches will remain closed until Monday by order of the president until transfers are completed. Many of them had police guards at the door. Lopez Portillo said the owners will be justly compensated but gave no details.

Miguel de la Madrid, a 47-year-old economist who succeeds Lopez Portillo for a six-year term Dec. 1, said he supports the president's actions.

The executive order also declared the peso Mexico's only legal tender. Dealing in foreign currency will be considered contraband, a crime punishable with up to 15 years imprisonment.

Beginning Monday, Americans and other foreigners entering Mexico will have to convert all their money into pesos at customs, the government said. They can exchange their remaining pesos for foreign currency when they leave Mexico.

Gunmen kill Italian anti-Mafia police official

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Gunmen firing from an open car killed Italy's top anti-Mafia police official and his wife and driver near the Sicilian capital's central plaza Friday, police reported.

A short time later, a previously unknown group calling itself the Guerrilla Party claimed responsibility for the attack in a telephone call to the Messina newspaper Gazetta del Sud. "This is the Guerrilla Party. We have killed Gen. Dalla Chiesa. A communique will follow," an anonymous caller told the paper.

Police were studying the authenticity of the call.

The dead were Gen. Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa, 61, of the Carabinieri paramilitary police; his 34-year-old wife Emanuela, and his chauffeur, Domenico Russo, 32.

President Sandro Pertini issued a statement saying the "challenge of organized crime and terrorism against the democratic state has reached the most intolerable levels."

Government officials said Pertini would return to Rome on Saturday morning from the Italian Alps, where he was vacationing.

In Rome, Premier Giovanni Spadolini said Dalla Chiesa was killed in the middle of his campaign against the "Mafia and terrorism."

At least 10 bullets were fired at Dalla Chiesa's car in a commercial neighborhood in downtown Palermo, police said. Since stores had closed for the day, the neighborhood was nearly deserted.

There were conflicting reports on how many vehicles were used in the ambush.

The Italian news agency ANSA said the killers used two cars and a motorcycle. It said all three vehicles were found burned in a street less than a mile from the scene of the attack.

Another news agency, AGI, said the killers' car was a Fiat 112 with a Rome registration plate. AGI said the shooting occurred in Piazza Nasce, near the main square Piazza Politeama.

The national television network RAI said the killers used four automobiles. It said Dalla Chiesa's wife had picked him up at his office shortly before the attack.

Dalla Chiesa earned a reputation for toughness when he waged a successful campaign against terrorism. He was appointed last May to lead Italy's drive against the Sicilian Mafia as prefect of Palermo — the central government's representative and head of the city's police force.

He worked as commander of an anti-bandit squad in Sicily from 1966 to 1973, nabbing such gangsters as Frank "Three Fingers" Coppola, an Italian-American who died in Rome in April.

In the 1970s, Dalla Chiesa was the first investigator to note that the Sicilian underworld was abandoning its traditional specialization in protection rackets and rapidly increasing its investments in world heroin traffic.

American and Italian officials now say Palermo is the major source for heroin smuggled to the United States.

Labor Party endorses Reagan plan

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The opposition Labor Party on Friday endorsed President Reagan's Middle East peace plan as "a basis for serious dialogue," defying the Cabinet's rejection of the proposal and opening a national political rift.

The division marked a rare failure by an Israeli government to rally support of the mainstream opposition on a major foreign policy crisis. Labor supported the June 6 invasion of Lebanon, but opposed the siege and heavy bombing of Beirut.

"The Labor Party decided yesterday unanimously to see in the American proposals a basis for serious dialogue with the United States and other parties," Labor leader Shimon Peres told foreign reporters here. "We are going to put our case before the people."

Peres said Reagan's proposal creates "a national debate of the utmost importance."

He said his party, which is the biggest in Parliament but is not considered a serious threat to Prime Minister Menachem Begin's coalition, supported the U.S. suggestions because they draw other Arab states, particularly Jordan, into the peace process.

PERES SAID Jordan was now willing to negotiate with Israel on the basis of Reagan's proposal for Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza strip in close association with Jordan.

The Jordanian government has not yet issued an official reaction to the U.S. proposals, but a government spokesman said they had "some positive points."

Labor has long advocated offering Jordan part of the West Bank in return for peace, and has made vague proposals calling for some form of Palestinian autonomy after the disputed territory is partitioned.

But Begin insists Jordan would never agree to partition, and his spokesman, Uri Porat, dismissed Peres' claim that the government of King Hussein looked favorably on the U.S. proposal.

"The problem is not whether the American proposals are acceptable to Jordan, but whether they are acceptable to Israel," Porat added.

Labor holds 50 of the 120 seats in the Knesset, or Parliament, while Begin's Likud Bloc has 46 seats and rules in coalition with four small factions. However, Begin has shown no inclination to heed Labor's advice in the past, and opinion polls indicate Likud would gain ground over Labor if an election were held right now.

REAGAN HAS called on Israel to establish tight links between the West Bank and Jordan; give Palestinians more say on land, water and security issues; allow Jerusalem Arabs to vote for West Bank autonomous institutions; and freeze settlement construction in the territories.

The Cabinet unanimously rejected the proposals Thursday as "a serious danger to Israel," and said they deviated from the Israel-Egypt Camp David accords of 1978, which Israel regards as the only framework for peace efforts.

The Cabinet said settlements are "an inalienable Jewish right," that Reagan's proposal would repartition Jerusalem, which Israel has declared its capital, and that Palestinian control of security, along with the Jordanian tie, would enable the Palestine Liberation Organization to take over the West Bank.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said he was sure most Israelis and Jews abroad would support this stand.

"Our answer to Reagan is negative, and that's what matters," he said in Jerusalem, where he relayed Israel's position to U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

In brief remarks to reporters at the end of a two-day visit to Israel, Weinberger appeared to dismiss Israel's complaint that the proposals deviated from Camp David.

"THE PROCEDURAL issues are totally secondary to the content of the plan," he said. "It was vital to ensure that countries that did not participate in the Camp David process participate in this."

He called the Israeli Cabinet statement a "first, sharp reaction."

Weinberger added: "We have seen that there are a number of people in Israel and a number of possibilities for consideration of the plan."

Still, Shamir sounded confident Israel would eventually bury Reagan's initiative.

"In the history of U.S.-Israeli relations there were many declarations and announcements that were unacceptable to Israel and they became a thing of the past," he told Israel army radio.

Last British troops come home

BRIZE NORTON, England (AP) — The last of the British troops who saw active duty in the Falkland Islands war with Argentina returned home Friday to a noisy welcome at Brize Norton Royal Air Force Base.

Most of the 200 returnees were sappers who cleared mines and ammunition dumps on the islands, which Argentina captured and held for 74 days before surrendering June 14.

Lt. Col. Geoffrey Field, commander of 36 Engineers Regiment, told reporters the sappers' courage undoubtedly saved many British lives.

He said the men braved gunfire to remove mines and dig trenches within 100 yards of Argentine positions.

After the conflict ended, the sappers remained on the Falklands to clear Argentine mines, many of them unmarked, and help restore electricity, water and sewers and rebuild roads.

Midland Christian official excited about school future

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With a reorganized administration, new facilities, new programs, a new sustaining campaign and an increasing enrollment, the future of Midland Christian School looks as successful as its past 25 years.

"The key word we've used a lot is excitement," said Dr. Harley J. Tefertiller, new vice president for academics. "There is a lot of commitment and people are saying they want this school to really be something. We have the potential to make it an outstanding facility. Not that it isn't now, but we don't ever want to become complacent."

According to Tefertiller, the curriculum has expanded this year to introduce several new programs.

Fifth through eighth graders now have a chance to participate in the new band program. "Obviously, that's a program we will have to build from the bottom up," he said.

Dr. Harley J. Tefertiller

Students in the seventh through 12th grades are eligible to enroll in a new industrial program, and a new emphasis has been placed on music with restructuring of the music program, he said.

The school also will join the Texas Association of Private Schools this year, which allows them to participate in the athletic league with Lubbock Christian School, Abilene Christian School and several others scattered in the Dallas/Fort Worth and Houston areas.

While the football team is using the six-man format, Terfertiller said he hopes within two years they will be engaged in 11-man games. The basketball team will be eligible for participation in the TAPS league this year, he pointed out, adding that the construction of two tennis courts will allow students to participate in tennis.

Tefertiller came to Midland from Lubbock, where he had been superintendent of Lubbock Christian Schools and assistant professor of education for Lubbock Christian College for the past four years. He received his bachelor degree from Abilene Christian University in 1970, his masters at Tarleton State University in 1975 and his doctorate in education from Texas Tech University in 1981. He holds certificates from the state of Texas in Professional Superintendent and Mid-Management and Provisional High School Mathematics and English.

And, by his own admission, he carries a deep interest and respect for computers.

"I feel that in the next four or five years, if we're not graduating students who are computer-oriented, we'll be behind," Tefertiller said. "It's unbelievable how fast the market has grown — and we're already in the middle of it.

"I would love to see us very soon have computers in our learning centers," he continued. "I would like to see students use computers as teaching aids to polish their math and reading skills. Many of those kinds of programs already are available. And the biggest key in using them effectively is having them available."

While five computers are used in the introduction to computer class, Tefertiller said two more are being incorporated for administrative duties.

"I think they are extremely valuable to us if we are trying to maximize our time," he said. "I'd much rather be using my time working and counseling the students than doing administrative paperwork. I really feel that we're wasting valuable resources if we don't use computers."

While many people criticize video games, Tefertiller said he is a strong advocate of them.

"As an educator, I see a lot of value in them," he said. "There is an amazing amount of motor-perceptual and hand-eye contact. I just feel like the whole computer age will be exciting for our kids. And challenging for us older kids, too."

While enrollment is "not up particularly, except in the high school," Terfertiller said it is growing.

With about 495 students enrolled at the end of last year, and 510-515 enrolled during last week, he said several spaces are open in the five-day preschool program and the fourth grade. High school enrollment is up 25 percent.

The school, which could accommodate a maximum of 700-750 students, will graduate its third senior class next May.

"It's not a tremendous amount of growth, but in a lot of ways, considering the economy, it is.

"We're trying to control our growth," he added. "We want to mature as we grow. We've hired a lot of good people for our staff. But when we produce a finished product, our graduates, we want to produce good people, good taxpayers and good citizens."

Howard Ware Mosley hugs his wife, Linda, left, and mother, Bertha, outside the Galveston County courthouse after he was set free from the Galveston County Jail. All charges against Mosley were dropped.

Mosley has combination freedom, wedding party

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Howard Ware Mosley and the woman who married him in jail had a long-delayed wedding night after he was freed of a life sentence for a crime he didn't commit.

Mosley, 25, was cleared of an attempted murder conviction by the confession of Coral Eugene Watts, a man who has admitted 13 slayings to police. Mosley was freed Thursday, went to church to give thanks and then went home for a combination freedom party and wedding reception.

On Friday, Mosley spent his first day as a free man looking for work.

"I prayed and I prayed and I prayed," said Mosley after he had walked out of the courtroom clutching a pocket-sized Bible and still wearing prison clothes. "My prayers finally paid off."

Mosley was arrested earlier this year for the Jan. 20 slashing attack on Patty Johnson. The victim picked him out of a police lineup and Mosley was convicted of attempted murder. With two other felony convictions on his record, Mosley was sentenced to life in prison.

But he continued to insist he was innocent. His girlfriend, Linda Sanchez, believed him.

"I had no doubt he would be set free," she said. "He was with me that night (of the Johnson assault)."

Mosley and Miss Sanchez were married in jail in early August, days before Watts confessed to the Johnson assault.

Galveston police made sure that Watts was telling the truth, officials said, by taking him to the site of the assault. They said he gave them details that only the true assailant would know.

Mosley was cleared of the Johnson assault on Aug. 17, but was kept in jail on an assault charge in a separate case.

Watts gets 60-year sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — Admitted mass slayer Coral Eugene Watts was formally sentenced to 60 years in prison Friday after hearing a litany of death from a policeman and a stinging lecture from a district judge.

Watts was sentenced after pleading guilty to a charge of burglary with intent to commit murder, but officials read into the record a list of 13 women whom the 28-year-old man admitted killing.

Judge Douglas Shaver, in delivering the sentence, expressed hope that Watts would spend the entire 60-year sentence in prison without hope of parole.

Watts, dressed in a dark suit, sat motionless and without expression throughout the hour-long court appearance.

"If you do not act well in prison, it is my hope that they will put you so deep into prison they'll have to pipe someone in to see you," said Shaver. "Since the death penalty is not available, I, therefore sentence you to the Texas Department of Corrections for a term of 60 years."

Watts admitted killing women in Houston, Austin, Galveston and Michigan under a plea bargain arrangement that gave him immunity from the murder charges. He pleaded guilty to the burglary charge as part of the plea bargain.

Shaver said the 60-year sentence was the maximum allowed by the law for the crime.

"Sadly to say," said the judge, "this (the attempted murder) is the only evidence the state of Texas has against you. The only greater sentence would have been death if you had been successful in this offense. I thank the grace of God that you were not."

Days of Edsel recalled

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Retired oilman J.W. Butler of Abilene recalls 25 years ago today when Ford Motor Co. unveiled the Edsel in 1,100 dealership showrooms across the nation.

"I thought it was the ugliest car I ever saw in all my life," Butler said.

Initial reviews were favorable on the Edsel, which was supposed to be "different" and was lauded by Ford as "the one car that can look you in the eye and say you never had it like this before."

But opinion soon swayed the other directions, and the Edsel — with its distinctive vertical grille — soon became one-liner fodder. Some people said it looked like an Oldsmobile sucking a lemon; others said it looked like a Mercury pushing a toilet seat.

In late 1959 Ford pulled the Edsel off the production line, and the vehicle has become enshrined in the ranks of all-time losers.

"The only reason it doesn't look ugly to me is because they won't make any more of them, thank goodness," said Honey Casey of Abilene. She and her husband, W.N. Casey, have displayed their 1959 Edsel Ranger for the past 12 years at Old Abilene Town, a tourist attraction they own.

Butler and the Caseys are among about 1,000 present or former Edsel owners who revel in the infamy of the Edsel. They belong to the "Edsel Owners Club, Inc.," which recently held its 14th annual meeting at the Edsel's birthplace in Dearborn, Mich.

Shelley Cleaver of Jacksonville, Texas, is president of the Edsel Owners Club. He says members share common traits: "They like cars that are different, and they'll always brag on it (the Edsel)."

The Edsel was surrounded by an aura of well-publicized mystery. Photographs of a hood ornamnent ran in newspapers and magazines for months before the car's introduction. The June 10, 1957, cover of Newsweek showed little more than an Edsel hubcap. The baring of the full body was front-page news in several major newspapers.

But sales disappointed Ford Motor Co. from the start. A pre-showing survey had projected the sale of 435,000 Edsels in 15 months. The actual figure during three years of production was closer to 111,000.

"I saw my first Edsel on Sept. 4, 1957," said Cleaver, one of the few people who recall E-Day fondly. "I thought it was the neatest car I'd ever seen."

Brain-dead woman's baby grows to normal, healthy infant

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The body of a brain-dead pregnant woman was used as an "incubator" to keep her unborn baby alive until it had a better chance of survival outside the womb, doctors in Buffalo, N.Y., reported Friday.

After more than a week of artificially supporting the dead mother's vital functions, the premature infant, a tiny girl weighing about two pounds, was delivered by cesarean section, crying vigorously.

A precarious period of intensive care followed. But the child, an orphan, was discharged from the hospital three months later, adopted, and so far appears to be meeting "normal milestones," said Dr. William P. Dillon, an obstetrician who helped make the agonizing life-and-death decisions involved in the case.

Dillon and his colleagues at the Children's Hospital of Buffalo report their experience, which took place in early 1981, in Friday's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The case, thought to be the first of its kind, is sure to stir tremendous debate over the medical, legal, ethical and even economic questions involved.

It is an example of how recent advances in medical technology have created problems far more profound than those in medicine's historical domain. It occurs because doctors now have both the ability to keep heart and lungs working through artificial means when the brain is no longer functioning and the ability to save premature infants who once would have died.

The unusual medical circumstances of the pregnancy complicated the case. The 24-year-old woman was an epileptic who had been taking medication which greatly increased the risk of birth defects. Doctors did not know whether the baby was deprived of oxygen during the prolonged seizure that brought her mother to the hospital. And no one knew for sure why the woman's brain became so inflamed it ceased functioning.

Beyond that, the woman was unmarried and her elderly mother gave the doctors permission to do what they thought best. And because the state of New York had not adopted a statute defining brain death as death, there were potential legal problems.

"It was our decision, and in the final analysis we were plunged into an area where there was no medical experience. We assumed the mother intended the fetus to survive and would have wished life support to be continued. And we assumed that if the fetus could have been asked, it would have chosen life," Dillon said in an interview.

While there was "no hope" for the mother, he said, "we considered her as an incubator who could nurture and support a human being whose existence still depended on her."

In their report in JAMA, Dillon and his colleagues also cite a 1980 Buffalo case in which life support was stopped in an unconscious pregnant woman who also had suffered irreversible brain damage, but whose unborn child was only halfway to term.

The doctors suggest that there is a point, between 24 to 27 weeks of pregnancy, at which it becomes reasonable to attempt "extraordinary" life-support of the fetus in the womb in the face of maternal brain death. They note that at their hospital, a fetus delivered at 25 weeks of gestation has only about a one-third chance of surviving, while at 27 weeks three-fourths of the premature infants may survive. The brain-dead mother's baby was delivered at 26 weeks. A full-term birth occurs at about 38 to 40 weeks.

Dillon said that an extensive search of medical literature revealed no previous cases of successful cesarean delivery of such a young fetus following maternal brain death.

Hepatitis vaccine double-checked

ATLANTA (AP) — Chances are slim that a new vaccine for hepatitis B could become contaminated with the unknown agent responsible for an often fatal breakdown in the body's immunity system, scientists say.

Prompted by continuing inquiries, scientists from the Centers for Disease Control, the Food and Drug Administration and the National Institutes of Health double-checked available data on the vaccine.

The group found the vaccine shows miminal immediate side effects and no long-term reactions.

It also found that the purification process for the vaccine inactivates all other known animal virus groups, that each lot of vaccine is tested for safety and that no cases of hepatitis B or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome have been associated with the vaccine, the CDC said Thursday in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Hepatitis B is a type of liver inflammation found to be transmitted by blood, hypodermic needles and sexual contact.

The vaccine, recommended for high-risk groups, was made available for general use in the United States in July. The high-risk group includes homosexual males, abusers of intravenous drugs, patients in mental institutions, some immigrants and people in close contact with carriers of the disease.

AIDS, a newly identified and life-threatening breakdown in the body's natural immune system, was first observed in homosexual males in 1978.

CDC scientists said they studied more than 19,000 subjects, many of whom were high hepatitis risks, following inquiries into possible contamination of the vaccine, which is made from blood plasma, by other viruses. Some scientists were concerned about possible contamination by the agent responsible for AIDS.

Dr. Donald Francis, assistant director of the CDC's hepatitis division in Phoenix, Ariz., said chances are slim for contamination of the vaccine.

"The vaccine goes through the most thorough inactivation process of any vaccine ... treated with three processes," he said. "Any other known animal virus group wouldn't survive one of these, not to mention three."

The vaccine has been tested in three studies between 1978 and 1980 among 1,927 people, including high-risk homosexual men and hospital employees, the CDC said.

Another 17,602 people, including 5,985 healthy people outside the high-risk group and 8,941 health care workers, were involved in other tests of the vaccine, the CDC said.

Approximately 200,000 people, primarily young adults, are infected by hepatitis B each year in the United States, with an average of 250 dying from it, CDC figures show.

New drug tested on spinal injuries

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Prevention of paralysis after spinal cord damage — one of medical science's dreams — may be a step closer.

A New York University scientist says he has reversed severe spinal cord damage and prevented permanent paralysis in cats by injecting a drug as much as seven weeks after injury.

The achievement, Dr. N. Eric Naftchi says in the current issue of the journal Science, "introduces a new approach to amelioration and restoration of function" after spine injuries.

Thousands of persons are paralyzed every year after spinal cord damage in car and motorcycle crashes, gunshot wounds, diving accidents and other mishaps.

Two years ago, two Army scientists here — Drs. Alan Faden and John Holaday — created spinal cord injuries in anesthetized cats, then successfully prevented paralysis in some by injections of naloxone, a drug widely used to counteract heroin and morphine overdoses.

Since then, their work has been confirmed by other scientists, and Faden and Holaday have used another drug, TRH (thyrotropin-releasing hormone), with even better results.

These drugs have to be used within the first few hours of injury, however, to have any hope of preventing paralysis.

Naftchi, too, created injuries in cats, but then injected them with clonidine, a drug that lowers blood pressure. It restored at least some nerve cell activity in 17 cats, he reported, though they were not treated until 14 to 48 days after the injuries. Six of the cats walked normally after a period of recovery and treatment, he said.

This is a field in which it can take time to confirm results, and some scientists this week said they were skeptical about being able to repeat Naftchi's results.

But Naftchi called them "a breakthrough" that may ultimately help persons suffering from strokes and brain injuries, as well as spinal injury victims. He said some doctors have begun to try his approach.

Faden reported that a controlled trial of TRH in spinal cord injury may begin at a major university soon.

Panda saga has soap opera twists

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — It has all the ingredients of a daytime soap opera: two lovers drawn to each other by pure animal magnetism; an inept spouse who failed to give his mate a child; a sizzling international romance; a complicated paternity question; a false pregnancy.

It sounds like "Days of Our Lives" or "General Hospital," but this drama was played out at the National Zoo here as hundreds of schoolchildren, tourists and animal lovers looked on.

For, after months of uncertainty, several false alarms and a series of other disappointments, zoo officials ruefully acknowledge that this year's efforts at breeding Ling Ling, the zoo's female giant panda, have failed.

"And that's final. No question about it. We've cried wolf so many times, it's surprising anyone listens to us," said an official who is distressed that the zoo has flip-flopped so frequently in the last few weeks on whether Ling Ling was pregnant.

So the zoo is calling off its 1982 Panda Watch. And, at the same time, it is gearing up for new efforts next spring to impregnate the lovable, 239-pound bear.

Two weeks ago, zoo keepers were excited and optimistic that Ling Ling, who had been artificially inseminated last March, might deliver a cub. Then last week, they announced with "bitter disappointment' that the pregnancy had been false.

But suddenly last weekend, only a day after the gloomy announcement, Ling Ling again began showing signs of maternity. For one thing, the playful 12-year-old began fashioning a crude nest out of bamboo, and zoologists were ecstatic.

The excitement was short-lived. Ling Ling lapsed back to her normal behavior, destroying her nest, and lolling in her $500,000 air-conditioned apartment.

"She really is out to torment us," Zoo Director Theodore H. Reed said.

Zoo officials are intent in their quest for a panda cub. Some have suggested enlisting the services of Pe Pe, Mexico City's virile male panda, Known as "El Macho." He has sired several baby pandas and National Zoo officials believe the Latin touch just might do the trick. But they are not yet ready to take that step.

Once again next spring, the zoo will give Hsing Hsing, Ling Ling's regular Washington bunkmate, another go at it, and then, if all else fails, try artificial insemination again.

"We're hopeful about next year," Ilene B. Ackerman, a zoo spokesman said. "At least next year we won't be unprepared. If anything, we have too many alternatives."

Ling Ling, one of a set of pandas given to the United States by China in 1972, has led the life of a classic femme fatale, leaving inept bunkmates and impotent international lovers in her wake.

Every year, for nearly a decade, hopes have arisen in the spring, hovered in suspense through midsummer and been dashed in August as a variety of attempts to mate Ling Ling — which means "darling little girl" in Chinese — have failed.

At first, Ling Ling and Hsing Hsing — "shining star" — were too young, taken from China at the ages of 2 and 1, respectively. Then, she was willing but he was inept. "He's an inept lover. He has the will but he just doesn't have the way," zoo spokesman Michael Morgan said.

Then Chia Chia, a jet-setting suitor from London was flown to the United States. The international love affair was a disaster. Chia Chia beat up Ling Ling, and the English panda was sent home in disgrace.

Mammoth Lakes tourism slumps

Hearst Feature Service

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. — It's touted as "The Mammoth Experience!" on 50-cent bumper stickers and campaign-type buttons. But the 5,000 people who live and work in this resort town near Yosemite National Park no longer know if the slogan means skiing, fishing, hiking or contemplating volcanic hazards that could make Mount St. Helens pale by comparison.

Mammoth Lakes could well be fighting for its economic life because of constant comparison with the Mount St. Helens eruption in Washington state. "People call up and want to know if the lava is running in the streets yet," said Cyndy Hake, a University of California-San Diego student who works here during summer vacations.

Her observation sums up the frustrations afflicting the Mammoth Lakes business community, which has been in a funk since the U.S. Geological Survey issued a volcano hazard warning for the nearby Minaret mountain range on May 26. The impact on tourism was devastating, and residents and business owners complained bitterly because of the way the news media played up the report.

Julia FitzPatrick, manager of the Mammoth Lakes Chamber of Commerce, angrily brandished several newspaper headlines which read, "Evacuation Plans Urged for Mammoth Lakes" and "Geologists Fear Mammoth Eruption." "This valley was created 700,000 years ago and has always had geological events," said FitzPatrick. "That hazard alert almost ruined tourism here."

The sentiment was echoed by Diane Heitzler, manager of the Mammoth Reservation Service, who said that reservations dropped from 10 per day to one or two after the volcano alert was issued. But Nancy O'Kelly, co-owner of the Snow Goose Inn, said that one customer came all the way from Canada to watch a volcano blow, then "broke down in tears" when she was told such a sight wasn't available.

Other merchants agreed that many people have come to Mammoth Lakes expecting to find "lava flows" everywhere. Larry White, who works at the local Forest Rangers Visitors' Center, said that so many people have asked about volcanic eruptions lately that the center has added a presentation on the subject to its program of events.

So far, the only evidence involving possible eruptions are earthquake "shudders" which have hit the area in increasing numbers since June. But residents point out that Mammoth Lakes has been shaken by a growing number of earthquakes every year since 1978.

An unidentified flyer takes to the air in a tiny open-cockpit ultralight airplane, made of aluminum tubes, which will be used by the Downey, Calif., Police Department as a low-cost alternative to helicopters.

Police take to skies in ultra-lights

DOWNEY, Calif. (AP) — Police officers in this southern California city will be sailing aloft in ultra-lights — aluminum-frame hang gliders powered by snowmobile engines — as a low-cost alternative to helicopters, the police chief says.

"Its first and foremost role is as a deterrent to crime," Downey Police Chief Bill Martin said Thursday. "We'll be up there and we'll make sure the criminals know we're up there. The bad guys go wherever it's easiest and we're going to make sure Downey's not the easiest."

The single-passenger plane, weighing less than 250 pounds and designed primarily for recreational fliers, will be used for surveillance patrols "and it should be a very, very useful tool for use in apprehension, as well," Martin said. "It flies low enough and slow enough that you can keep a (fleeing) suspect under observation and direct the ground units by radio."

The craft is made of Dacron stretched across an aluminum frame and has large, sail-like wings. The pilot sits in a sling, in front of a lawn mower-type engine.

The plane's small engine could be shut down and the plane could "glide by and take a good look without scaring anybody away...But we won't be trying to land this thing and apprehend people," Martin said.

Martin knows of only one other police department in the country that has bought an ultra-light: Officers in nearby Monterey Park recently began a training program. Downey is about 20 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

The low cost of the ultra-light is a big selling point because of the tight budget of Downey's 104-officer department, Martin said. A Quicksilver MX has been ordered. Including a spare engine, spotlights, radio, parachute, other equipment and one year's maintenance, it costs about $12,000, he said.

A helicopter costs $250,000 to $500,000, plus more than $75 an hour to operate, he said.

Ultra-lights are a descendant of hang gliders and are selling briskly to recreational pilots. The model chosen by the police department has 32-foot wings. The plane will have white wings and tail with the word "Police" in big blue letters, Martin said.

The plane, with a top speed of 55 mph, can fly as slow as 25 mph and cruises at 35 to 45 mph. It needs only 50 to 75 feet to land and Martin said he's considering landing strips at places such as city parks and parking lots.

The department, which includes several licensed pilots and one ultra-light enthusiast, is "going through the selection process now to determine who's going to be in our program," Martin says.

A pilot's license isn't required to fly the plane, although the Federal Aviation Administration on Friday promulgated the first flight rules for ultra-lights and hang gliders. Formal flight training will be provided, the chief said.

There's no shortage of applicants: "Everybody's all jazzed up now with the prospect of doing something new and innovative," he said.

FAA publishes rules for hang-gliders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hang-gliding enthusiasts, who leap from high ground and soar through the air attached to bright, kite-like contraptions, are having their wings clipped by the federal government.

The Federal Aviation Administration published final regulations governing hang gliders and ultra-light motorized aircraft in the Federal Register on Thursday.

The U.S. Hang Gliders Association immediately attacked the regulations, saying the government "has no business regulating an outdoor recreational sport that consists largely of people running and gliding down remote hills and sand dunes."

But Fred Farrar, a FAA spokesman, said the regulations were needed to ensure safety for the sport's participants while keeping the airspace safe at the same time.

"We're trying to keep this regulation to a minimum," Farrar said. "The point here is concern with the safety and well-being of others...We have had cases where hang gliders have been as high as 13,000 feet."

Women's colleges grow in 1980s

EDITOR'S NOTE — It's not the same anymore. There have been drastic changes since the days when marriage and a home followed Ivy League mixers at Smith or Wellesley. The corporate world now lures graduates from women's colleges, which have grown in enrollment, curriculum and financial support.

By TRUDY TYNAN

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Women's colleges, once the declining wallflowers of higher education, are blooming these days.

The nation's 116 colleges with all-female enrollments are survivors that had to weather financial pressures and a push toward coeducation in the late 1960s. Since then they've prospered. Enrollments are going up steadily — and so is financial backing.

And they're changing. Campus life today is a lot more than social studies and sedate afternoon teas.

"My definition of liberal arts includes computers," says Nannerl Keohane, Wellesley College president and a leader in the new wave that combines women's issues with emphasis on technical skills long dominated by males.

Seniors at Smith College talk about plugging into an "old girl" network of alumnae in Fortune 500 corporations after graduation and are more interested in becoming a chief executive officer than in marrying one.

IN 1960, THERE WERE about 300 colleges for women, but the number dwindled as financial pressures grew and the move to coeducation attracted many women to previously all-male schools.

Today, 116 women's colleges educate about 125,000 students or 2 percent of the nation's college population.

Women's colleges are still strongest in Massachusetts, where Mary Lyon founded the nation's first college for women, Mount Holyoke, in 1837. The state has 17 all-women's colleges, including two-year and four-year institutions. Pennsylvania has the next highest total, 16.

The sharpest turnaroud in enrollment has been at the 52 Roman Catholic women's colleges, where student levels are up 35 percent in the last decade, compared with 25 percent for all women's colleges and 18 percent at coeducational private colleges.

"We can offer something special at a time when there is a renewed interest in a search for values on the part of many young people," says Sister Mary Dooley, SSJ, president of the College of Our Lady of the Elms in Chicopee. The school's enrollment has increased a steady 10 percent a year for the last five years.

DIFFICULT TIMES LIE AHEAD for all colleges and universities, as the pool of available students diminishes because of declining birthrates and federal financial support is cut back.

But Marcia Sharp, executive director of the Women's College Coalition, says women's colleges will be better equipped to compete.

"All colleges will have to demonstrate some particular and distinctive appeal to students to attract them, and women's colleges have that specificity to draw on when the college makes its case," Ms. Sharp says. "They are in the business of being responsible to women students and have the luxury of arranging the institution to meet those needs."

Cuts in federal aid and scholarship money are causing some worries, particularly at more expensive women's schools such as Smith, Mount Holyoke and Wellesley, which will cost more than $11,000 next year.

BUT THE WOMEN'S COLLEGES are among the best at raising money, especially from their alumnae. On average, more than one-third of the graduates of women's colleges give to their schools, compared with 18 percent at all colleges, according to the Council For Financial Aid to Education. At schools such as Smith and Mount Holyoke, more than 50 percent of graduates contribute.

At Smith, alumnae gifts increased from $3.5 million to $11.3 million in five years and foundation support tripled. Grants from corporations have also increased as businesses become more interested in recruiting women.

Ms. Sharp says the growth of the women's movement since the mid-1970s has had an "enormous effect" on the health of the women's colleges.

"It came at just the right time," she says.

Wellesley's Mrs. Keohane says, "I am a feminist. We have always provided education by women and for women. What was not so clear is what it means to teach about women. I feel a women's college has the responsibility to provide a place for real scholarship about women."

SINCE SHE BECAME THE school's 11th president last spring, Wellesley has revised its curriculum to emphasize women's issues. A major in women's studies was established along with a campus women's center.

Feminist influences are also clear at Smith, in western Massachusetts, where researchers in the School of Social Work are re-examining some of the basic tenets of sociology and psychology. At Elms College, one of the required theology courses is Women in the Scriptures.

But studying about women isn't the only way the women's colleges are rewriting the traditional liberal arts curriculum.

Aided by an exchange program with the nearby Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Wellesley now requires all students to take a course in computers.

Mount Holyoke President Elizabeth Kennan, a medieval history scholar, says: "An educated citizen needs to know about the tools of analysis that belong to mathematics and the decision-making processes of technology so that she can be enfranchised. Unless you can enter into the debate on that technical analysis you really can't be part of the decision-making process."

SMITH HAS A DUAL DEGREE program in engineering with the nearby University of Massachusetts and is adding a major in computer science next year.

Mount Holyoke is revising its curriculum to include more requirements in math and science and wants to improve the way math is taught to high school girls.

"The basic educational problem in this country today is the growing inability of students, particularly large numbers of young women, to deal with the basic concepts of mathematics," says Mrs. Kennan. "And we intend to change the math skills of the young women in this country."

Starting with a summer camp for high school girls this year, Mount Holyoke plans special courses and programs for high school math teachers.

The schools also have expanded special programs for older women returning to school, a group that has more than doubled at women's colleges, especially the Roman Catholic schools, in the past decade.

"THE WOMEN'S MOVEMENT HAS made it respectable and dignified to seek the company of other women," says Smith President Jill Conway, a historian.

But she adds the obvious: "There isn't the same kind of dating situation" at a women's college.

"The students tend to meet young men around activities, such as the debating team, and unless you are a reasonably outgoing person it can be intimidating finding your way into that kind of situation," she says."It can be lonely."

"You are thrown back on yourself," says Kirsten Kjerstengmeiner, a freshman from Seattle."You have to learn to get along with other women. It's survival."

But the campuses aren't all that isolated.

"It would be bad if we were out in the middle of nowhere," one Smith senior says. "But there are plenty of colleges around and lots of men."

FCC to rule on transmission of data

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nobody knows whether average Americans will ever prefer "reading" their TV sets instead of a newspaper, but the federal government may decide soon how such a system would work.

With little public fanfare, a debate has begun at the Federal Communications Commission that could determine whether electronic information services can be offered by broadcasters as well as cable TV operators and newspaper publishers.

The issue is deceptively simple: Can broadcasters demand that their electronic information services be carried by local cable systems?

The answer may be crucial, however, because broadcasters maintain they can hardly be expected to enter the electronic publishing business if the rapidly growing cable industry can deny them an audience.

THE BROADCASTERS suggest a consumer who subscribes to cable is not likely to go to the trouble of erecting or maintaining an antenna just to receive an electronic information service over the air.

Consumers may also have a stake in whether broadcasters get into the fledgling electronic publishing business. The type of electronic service offered by TV stations is normally cheaper to build and operate than those using cable or telephone lines, and the major TV networks think they have a better shot at developing an advertising-supported service that won't be as expensive to use.

An electronic publishing service is one in which information — from news to airline schedules to advertising — is transmitted to the home in written text or graphic form for recall by consumers on their TV sets or personal computers.

THERE ARE TWO different types. If the service is one-way and transmitted by broadcasters on an unused portion of the normal TV signal, it's known as teletext. If the service is transmitted via cable TV or telephone lines and is two-way — meaning consumers can respond to the information they receive by answering questions or ordering merchandise, for example — the service is known as videotext.

Videotext, with its two-way capability, is often viewed as an inevitable winner over teletex. But a teletext system is normally cheaper to build and operate, and it might be years before consumers are comfortable with the idea of shopping or banking at home via videotext.

The teletext-videotext battle can not get underway, however, until the FCC authorizes teletext service and answers a number of policy issues, including the cable question. Agency officials have begun reviewing written comments submitted earlier this year and a top staffer who asks not to be identified says a ruling should be made before the end of the year.

BROADCASTERS POINT to the FCC's basic licensing scheme for radio and TV stations in making their case: Broadcast stations are licensed to a specific community and are expected to serve the needs of that local audience.

So strong is this concept that cable operators are required by the FCC to retransmit local TV stations on their systems to ensure that broadcasters don't lose access to their audience.

The National Association of Broadcasters maintains the same concept must be extended to electronic publishing. It asserts a TV station will be unable to develop a teletext service if local cable subscribers can not gain access to it via the cable system.

Unless the FCC requires that cable carry teletext, the broadcasters' association argues, cable operators would have a real incentive to make reception of teletext as difficult as possible to favor their own videotext systems.

THE NATIONAL CABLE Television Association, that industry's largest trade group, vigorously disagrees. It argues a teletext system is an "ancillary" service, transmitted in addition to the main TV signal, and that the FCC's rules apply only to regular programs.

What the broadcasters really want, the association concludes, is for cable "to subsidize the broadcast industry's attempts to gain a toehold in the teletext market."

"There seems to be this general perception that electronic publishing is the wave of the future and that the whole thing could pass broadcasters by depending on how we answer this question," says another high-ranking FCC official who requested anonymity. "But it's a terribly difficult issue.

"IF A LOCAL NEWSPAPER wants to lease a cable channel instead of setting up a videotext system using telephone lines, it's going to pay for that channel or else form a partnership with the cable operator," the official explained. "And here's the broadcaster, arguing he can't fulfill his responsibility to serve his local audience unless he's guaranteed free carriage."

Navy will decommission 12 active fleet ships

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The Navy Wednesday announced it would decommission 12 active fleet ships within the next 13 months.

Among those to be decommissioned is the research submarine Gudgeon, based in San Diego, which joined the fleet in November, 1952, and was the first U.S. submarine to circumnavigate the globe — September, 1957-February, 1958. Normal complement for this diesel-powered boat is eight officers and 75 enlisted personnel.

The nuclear-powered ballistic missile submarine Ethan Allen, home-ported in Bremerton, Wash., is also on the list.

The Navy explained that deactivation of the Ethan Allen and its missile (Polaris) launchers was required to compensate for the introduction into the fleet of the bigger, more powerful Trident submarines in consonance with the SALT I agreement with the Soviet Union.

A third submarine, the Seadragon, a nuclear-powered attack type, two destroyers, four ocean minesweepers, one ballistic missile cargo ship and a fleet tug make up the remaining 10 ships slated for decommissioning.

The Seadragon is homeported at Pearl Harbor while the fleet tug, the Takelma, is based at Long Beach, Calif.

The Navy said the 12 ships were being taken out of active service primarily because of their extended age and obsolete weapons systems, and to meet budgetary constraints.

Researchers predict weather changes

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Although studies predict the world will get hotter in the next century with potentially destructive changes in global weather, governments are turning a cold shoulder to the problem, researchers say.

Experts at the federal National Center for Atmospheric Research say there is growing international consensus by scientists that the atmosphere's carbon dioxide level will double over the next 40 to 100 years, raising temperatures by an average 5 degrees.

The phenomenon is known as the "greenhouse effect," so called because, like a greenhouse, carbon dioxide gas traps heat inside the atmosphere. It was first noticed in the late 19th century after the worldwide industrialization began spewing huge quantities of carbon dioxide from the burning of fossil fuels.

"It's a global problem — the most complex and interesting problem facing the 20th and 21st century," said Robert Schware, a political scientist affiliated with the atmospheric research center.

A report in July by the National Academy of Sciences, reaffirming its 1979 warning, said higher temperatures could increase the quantity of polar ice melted each year, cause earlier spring snow melts and later autumn snowfalls, and result in a decline in soil moisture in the middle and northern parts of the northern hemisphere.

Scientists have speculated that increased melting of glaciers could raise the level of the ocean — with widespread effects on coastal cities.

"Changes in climate can be good or bad," said Schware. "People in Boston might like to have Miami's climate. It's an extremely fascinating question."

But Schware said in a recent interview that the prospect of such changes is not a hot topic for policymakers.

"One reason is because they're living on a four-year political cycle," he said. "The other is that with our current knowledge, the scientific community cannot tell decision-makers information that will be useful for them and their constituencies."

And some scientists have disputed the effects of increased carbon dioxide, speculating that any rising temperatures from a greenhouse effect would result in more clouds, reflecting more sun away from the earth and thus preventing serious overheating.

Court upholds four Abscam convictions

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court upheld Friday the Abscam convictions of four former congresmen and three others people, ruling that the way the investigation was conducted was not grounds for reversing the convictions.

"The four congressmen were caught on videotape in the very act of committing federal crimes," the court said. "There was sufficient evidence of their guilt and that of the other defendants.

"The conduct of the investigation, though subject to some criticism, affords no basis for rejecting the convictions."

The three-judge panel of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned one count of the indictment against former Rep. John Murphy, a New York Democrat.

The single count sent back for a new trial concerned Murphy's actions in a matter involving the immigration of foreign nationals, actually FBI agents posing as Arab sheiks.

The immediate effect is to reduce to $10,000 the $20,000 fine imposed on Murphy, who also was sentenced to three years for conspiracy.

The other Abscam convicts in the appeal were former Democratic Reps. Frank Thompson of New Jersey and Raymond Lederer and Michael Myers, both of Pennsylvania; Angelo J. Errichetti, former mayor of Camden, N.J.; Louis Johanson, former member of the Philadelphia City Council, and Howard L. Criden, a law partner of Johanson's.

They were sentenced to terms ranging from three years to 15 an fined $20,000 to $40,000.

The appeals judges, J. Edward Lumbard, Henry J. Friendly and Jon O. Newman, in an opinion written by Newman, praised the way the case was handled in the District Court by Judges Jacob Mishler and George C. Pratt.

"The pretrial proceedings conducted by Judge Mishler and the trial and post-trial hearings conducted by Judge Pratt were vigorous contests marked throughout by the fairness, patience and thoroughness of the district judges," the appeals court said.

"In considering the myriad issues raised by these seven appellants, we are not passing judgment on the wisdom of the Abscam investigation, nor on whether the means by which it was conducted conformed to internal administrative standards of the Department of Justice or to other standards that the executive branch might choose to adopt or the legislative branch might require."

The task of the appeals court was to decide if the methods employed and the conduct of the trials were unconstitutional, it said.

The appeals concerned three separate jury trials in which the seven men were found guilty of various offenses related to corruption of public office.

Because the convicted men raised similiar questions, the court said it was considering them in a single opinion.

The Abscam investigation was a sting operation in which FBI agents pretended to represent of two Arab sheiks interested in getting into the United States and investing money here.

Michael Tigar, Murphy's lawyer, said after learning of the decision, that he would peitition the Court of Appeals for a rehearing and if not successful, go on to the Supreme Court.

"We're on the road. Our pursuit is slow, but we are making progress wherever we go," he said.

Reputed mobster indicted for murder in Masselli slaying

NEW YORK (AP) — A reputed mobster was indicted for murder Friday in the shooting of a contractor who assisted in the government investigation of Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan.

Bronx Assistant District Attorney James Shalleck said Salvatore Odierno, 67, of Valley Stream, "acted in concert with others in causing the death of Nathan Masselli."

Masselli, 31, and his father, Pellegrino William "Billy the Butcher" Masselli, had been witnesses in the investigation by Special Prosecutor Leon Silverman into allegations that Donovan had mob ties before his appointment as labor secretary and knew about illegal payoffs.

Silverman had reported "insufficient credible evidence" to back up the allegations against Donovan, but he has since reopened the probe on the basis of new allegations.

Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola said Friday he had no reason to question Donovan about Masselli's death.

Merola said the motive for killing Masselli had not been established. Masselli was gunned down last Saturday in a car across the street from Van Cortlandt Park in the Bronx.

One published report said law enforcement officials believed Masselli might have been killed in a dispute over a construction company's assets with associates of his father, who is serving a term of seven years for truck hijacking and who was an owner of the company.

Merola said two other men were being sought in Masselli's killing but he refused to answer when asked if he knew whether they were involved in the Donovan investigation.

At another point, he said, "I believe the people involved in this are all involved because of money."

Shalleck declined to say whether Odierno was the triggerman. He said a witness had identified Odierno in a lineup.

Louis Aidala, Odierno's attorney, said outside the courtroom he believed the witness was across the street at the time of the shooting and that he would argue "the so-called identification is not an identification at all."

Odierno will be arraigned Sept. 16.

Schiavone files defamation suit against union official

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of the construction company that Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan once helped run has filed a $2.5 million defamation suit against a union official whose allegations led to an investigation of Donovan.

Ronald A. Schiavone, president of Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J., charged that Mario Montuoro had falsely stated that Schiavone had taken part in a lunch meeting at Prudenti's restaurant in Long Island City where a $2,000 payoff allegedly was made to insure labor peace.

In the suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, Schiavone said a special prosecutor had found the statements by Montuoro to be "wholly unsubstantiated."

The suit asks $2.5 million, the precise amount that Montuoro won in the New York State Lottery last spring.

Montuoro charged that in 1977, when Donovan was executive vice president of the company, Donovan was at the luncheon meeting when another official of the firm, Joseph DiCarolis, delivered the $2,000 to Louis Sanzo of Laborers Local 29 in a white envelope.

Montuoro first made his charge in 1977 and repeated it last year, leading to the appointment of a special prosecutor, Leon Silverman, to investigate Donovan's affairs before he was appointed to President Reagan's cabinet.

Silverman, in a report released June 28, found that there was "insufficient credible evidence" to justify prosecuting the labor secretary. Silverman has recently reopened his investigation on the basis of new allegations but he has refused to disclose them.

In a second action in the defamation suit, Schiavone charges that Montuoro and five "John Does" whose names are unknown to him conspired to defame him and asked another $2.5 million payment.

Nun claims unjust treament by diocese

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A dissident nun says she is being treated unjustly by church officials who refuse to renew her diocesan teaching certificate because she sued her bishop in a contract dispute.

"I just didn't think they'd do it," Sister Mary Rita Furlong said of the action earlier this week by the Roman Catholic Diocese.

"As Catholics we're supposed to obey church law and she has disobeyed church law," said Brother Roger Lemoyne, diocesan superintendent of schools. "The actions she has taken are certainly not indicative of someone who can teach children the faith."

Sister Furlong and three other teaching nuns sued the diocese for a public hearing after they were fired from Sacred Heart elementary school in Hampton. The case comes before the state Supreme Court on Tuesday, the same day that classes resume at the school.

"I feel I have been unjustly and unfairly treated, especially since I have completed 29 years of service in the diocesan educational system and never before had my certification been questioned," Sister Furlong said.

The other three nuns hold state, not church, teaching certificates, which do not include religious criteria. Lemoyne said he would recommend Sister Furlong for a state certificate, but probably would not rehire any of the four nuns for teaching jobs anywhere in the diocese.

"When I sign a diocesan certificate as superintendent that indicates a person's conduct as a Catholic Christian is above reproach," Lemoyne said. "Their acts since Jan. 28 certainly do not make their conduct above reproach in terms of respect for the church."

Lemoyne on Jan. 28 gave the nuns dismissal letters listing seven charges, including cliquishness, lack of communication and isolation from the school board and parish.

The nuns sued Lemoyne, Bishop Odore Gendron, the diocesan school board and the parish school board after being denied a public hearing by the parish board. The diocese maintained that the matter was an internal church issue outside the court's jurisdiction.

The suit apparently is the first filed by nuns against a bishop in the United States, according to Monsignor John Tracy Ellis, a church historian at Catholic University in Washington.

In April, Superior Court Judge Joseph Nadeau agreed that the nuns could sue the parish board, but said their contracts still did not guarantee them a public hearing. He also said Lemoyne, Gendron and the diocese board could not be sued because of the separation of church and state.

In denying Sister Furlong's recertification, Lemoyne said she erred as a Christian by suing Gendron in civil court — a violation of canon law — and by making ethnic comments in a newspaper article.

The nuns have said their dispute stems in part from tensions in the diocese between priests and administrators.

Mining magnate candid as he nears retirement

EDITOR'S NOTE: Diamonds are Harry Oppenheimer's best friends. So is gold. And platinum. He's been able to parlay these precious materials into a $15-billion empire in South Africa. Ready to retire now, he talks about how he feels his business has helped blacks in the white minority-ruled nation.

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — After 25 years atop a mining empire worth more than $15 billion, Harry Oppenheimer says business, more than politics, has improved the lives of blacks in the continent's last white minority-ruled nation.

The ruling National Party may disagree with Oppenheimer, but it wouldn't argue that the 73-year-old mining magnate has been a major force for change. The two have been at odds since Oppenheimer won a seat in Parliament for the United Party in 1948 — the same year the Nationalists took power and began to build the system of apartheid.

Oppenheimer, always polite but never reluctant to state his opinion, says: "Well, it never pays to say I told you so. But I think that what is called progress now by our government is rather cautiously undoing a great many of the things they have done over the past 30 years."

IN MAY, the National Party took the first step toward restoring the vote to coloreds (mixed-race people), whom the party deprived of the vote in the 1950s.

Oppenheimer's corporate empire produces roughly a third of the Western world's gold, controls the world's biggest platinum mine and more than 80 percent of the diamond trade. White-supremacists have accused Oppenheimer of deliberately sabotaging the government's plan to segregate the races and move the black majority to rural tribal areas.

He does not dispute that business has worked against apartheid, saying economic growth has "produced a situation where it was essential for more and more black people to come and live in the cities and where it was essential for more and more black people to be trained."

He adds: "This whole development was destructive of the old idea that black people only came to the cities as temporary sojourners and the old idea that black people only did unskilled work. The thing has grown to such an extent that you can't run this country with white people having a monopoly of skills. And this has changed things greatly."

He says South African industry has achieved the elimination of nearly all job restrictions based on race, has recognized black unions, in some cases before they were legal, and has raised the wages of blacks faster than those of whites. The vast majority still earn more than blacks.

IN JULY, his Anglo American Corp. of South Africa , the nation's biggest private employer, announced it was raising pay for blacks an average of 16 percent. Various other South African mining houses raised wages of black miners by at least 11 percent.

Oppenheimer has announced that he is resigning at the end of the year as chairman of Anglo American, which he had headed since the death of his father, Sir Ernest Oppenheimer, in 1957.

Like Sir Ernest, he has retained a special interest in diamonds, and plans to stay on as chairman of De Beers Consolidated Mining, the major diamond company. Mineral and Resources Corp. (Minorco) and Charter Consolidated also are part of his corporate empire.

Unlike his father, Oppenheimer will not be succeeded, at least immediately, by his son, Nicholas, 32.

But Oppenheimer has named Nicholas as deputy chairman of Anglo-American, and "I am pleased about that because it means a continuation of the family connection, which is very important to me, both for sentimental reasons and for investment reasons." Gavin Relly, 56, was named to succeed Oppenheimer.

REVIEWING HIS 25 years as head of a complicated, interwoven structure of companies, Oppenheimer says:

"I'm pleased that I've been able over the years to keep it together.... I think it's evolved but it's not basically changed from the way it was when my father ran it.

"I think one can still trace back the sort of policies we have now as being natural growth from what we had before and I believe that will go on in the future."

Oppenheimer is credited with extending the business empire to include the United States, where his companies have a larger turnover than any other foreign-owned investments.

He has managed to preserve many of the companies' interests in black Africa, where anything with a South African connection is anathema.

"We've tried to work in a way which was useful, which did have the effect of raising the standard of living of countries and also of course which had the effect of making money for the company....

"And we haven't interfered in the politics of these countries. We try to work with whatever government may be in power and I think people understand this and have found us useful."

He adds, "I daresay it doesn't do me any harm in those countries that people know that from a political point of view I am not at all happy with the policies of the South African government, though I think these are improving now."

OPPENHEIMER GIVES some credit to U.S. President Ronald Reagan, who discarded the previous administration's public attacks on apartheid, preferring to offer friendship to Pretoria while working behind the scenes for change.

Oppenheimer 20 years ago believed a qualified franchise, in which anyone who met certain standards could vote, might be the answer for South Africa. Now, he says, it is too late for that. A one-man, one-vote government — which blacks obviously would dominate — is no alternative because it could not be achieved "except by violence."

H.L. Mencken never wanted the simple row house in which he lived for 70 of his 75 years in Baltimore to be turned into a "shrine." But the question of what should be done with the house on Hollins Street continues to be raised almost three decades after the "Sage of Baltimore's" death. Some want the three-story Victorian brick house to become a repository of his possessions and others want it renovated and turned into a community center.

Mencken Society wants house made into museum

BALTIMORE (AP) — H.L. Mencken, the sage of Baltimore, never wanted the simple row house where he lived for 70 years to be turned into a shrine.

But nearly three decades after his death, debate about what should be done with the three-story Victorian brick home on Hollins Street continues among the Mencken Society, local residents and the University of Maryland.

Some members of the society, founded to honor the acerbic editor, author and critic for the Baltimore Evening Sun, want the house to become a repository of Mencken's widely scattered possessions.

Newer residents of Union Square — the west side neighborhood where the home is located — have offered to renovate it and make it available as a community center.

Some older residents, however, insist that Mencken, who died in 1956 at 75, did not want a museum and his wishes should be strictly followed, with the building open to the public only on its currently restricted basis.

Alice Blondell, who has lived next door for near half a century, opposes the idea of a shrine.

"No, no, no way. That will never happen," she said. "He (Mencken) was for no show...that was against his wishes and against his will."

And the University of Maryland at Baltimore, which was willed the home along with $25,000 by Mencken's brother August, is caught in the middle.

"It's not in very good condition," said Carl Bode, an American Studies professor at the university's College Park campus and founder of the Mencken Society, referring to the home's first floor and rear garden. "There's a little bit of furniture left, and it looks desolate...The university doesn't know what to do with it."

The home itself appears to be in a state of transition and signs of its institutional affiliation are apparent. Though its interior walls are freshly painted, they are barren. A fire alarm bell in a first-floor room, once Mencken's dining room, is painted bright red. The room is lighted by large fluorescent lights, as is the kitchen. Large central air conditioning units also clash with the Victorian ambiance.

Two years after August Mencken's death in 1967, the house became part of the university. Since then, the first floor has provided offices for the old VISTA program, the school's Center for Voluntarism and the School for Social Work and Community Planning. The top two floors were converted into low-cost housing for graduate and medical school students.

With the completion of a large campus housing project, the house no longer will be used as a dormitory. Instead, the separate apartments are being rented to two university adminstrators who share the expense needed to maintain the house, according to school spokeswoman Louise White.

Guatemalan ruler gets mixed reviews

By DIAL TORGERSON
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

GUATEMALA CITY — Just seven months ago the chill of terror filled this capital. Hard-eyed men with bulges in their coats monitored guests in hotel lobbies. Few residents ventured out at night. And each dawn disclosed bodies on the roadsides.

But on a recent Saturday night, cars were double parked outside a U.S.-style Western bar where crowds cheered riders of an electric bronco and the hard-eyed men were gone.

In many ways — and the diminished fear of death is only one — Guatemala City has become a place to live again since Gen. Efrain Rios Montt, a born-again Christian, took power last March 23.

But while his rule has brought remarkable changes, some have been accomplished under a heavy-handed "state of siege" that has curbed the press and other basic freedoms. And in the countryside a guerrilla war continues with often wanton violence — much of it attributed to Rios' army, though he denies it.

RIOS IS A STRANGE MAN, governing in a strange way. He is both a preacher, an evangelical, and a tough, veteran soldier. To save Guatemala, he believes, there must be a moral rejuvenation. After taking power in a bloodless coup, he startled a meeting of prominent businessmen by cautioning them: "You must get rid of your 17-year-old mistresses."

And when a reporter asked him to identify his closest advisers, he brandished a Bible and said: "They are in here."

The 55-year-old general is clearly an unlikely successor to the long line of dictators who ruled from Guatemala's presidential palace, a block-long crawl of pale green stone. His predecessors were noted for their repression, corruption and the brazen theft of presidential elections, including Rios' own apparent victory in 1974. Their rule spawned rebellion that ruined the once promising economy, destroyed tourism and pushed Guatemala, Central America's largest, most populous nation, close to an all-out civil war. The young officers who ousted the last strongman, Gen. Fernando Romeo LCAS Garcia, believed only sweeping change could save Guatemala, and they chose Rios to lead them.

"RIOS MONTT," SAID A political scientist here, who asked his name not be used, "is an odd man. But he may be the last hope..."

Rios began by disbanding the detective bureau of the National Police, whose members were the reputed gunmen who, at the orders of right-wing political and military powers, executed intellectuals and professionals suspected of "subversion." Private armies were also disbanded under pressure from the new president.

"Violence in the city," he said in a recent interview, "is down 90 percent. There may be still some, but no more than you would find in New York or Chicago."

Rios is tough and autocratic, and what he says goes. He has canceled extravagant projects planned by the previous regime, whose leaders reportedly collected tens of millions of dollars in bribes from contractors. He has ordered the courts to weigh charges against officials of the previous regime, including the ousted Lucas.

AND IN JULY RIOS TOOK a step that Lucas, a classic Central American strongman, had never attemped: He declared a 30-day state of siege, setting up tribunals which can mete out the death penalty for anti-government activity, and suspended basic civil and political rights.

"We merely made legal what had been going on before," he explained. "People who were murdered before we now jail and hold for trial."

He has sent his officers to town in a campaign against homosexuality, drunkenness, prostitution and paying bribes. And he is attempting to smooth relations between Guatemala and other nations, including the United States, which has considered Guatemala a pariah because of its human rights record.

It is human rights that present the greatest challenge to Rios. In recent years hundreds of Guatemalans have been killed each month in the struggle of right against left. In the capital, assassinations of government officials and kidnappings of wealthy men were attributed to the left, but they were far outnumbered by murders attributed to the right.

UNDER RIOS' RULE, the killings in the city have dropped sharply. But in the countryside violence continues and nearly all the victims are Indians.

There are 7 million Guatemalans, perhaps a million of them light-skinned Ladinos of mixed European and Indian stock like Rios. The rest are Indians. Some dress and live like the Ladinos, but the vast majority follow traditional Indian customs.

Largely illiterate and speaking dozens of Indian dialects, many live on the high, chill plateau that rises up south of the Mexican border. They are marginal farmers, working rocky fields, or migrant field hands working on the coffee and banana plantations of the coastal plain.

Leftist insurgents sought shelter and recruits among the Indians, and "unknown armed men" soon began killing them in lots of 20 and 30 at a time. And the violence continues.

"We are getting slaughtered by both sides," a massacre survivor in a village west of Guatemala City told a reporter. But another said: "I know they were soldiers. They were well fed and had no running sores. The guerrillas are always thin and sick."

FOREIGN DIPLOMATS HERE SAY that both sides are killing Indians: that the army makes an example of a village which cooperates with the rebels, and then the rebels make an example of one which cooperates with the army.

"There is violence in the west end of the republic," Rios said at a recent meeting with reporters in his office. "But it is due to the troubles with insurgency. It is the violence of forces fighting a war. We kill 40 guerrillas, they kill some of our men."

Would he say as a Christian, he was asked, that the army is not massacring Indians? Rios smiled. He smiles at times when one would think he should show anger. "I do not steal, deceive or lie," he said. "Let me say the army does not do that."

But some Indians say soldiers killed their families, he was told. He smiled again. "It is probable," he said, "that people you were talking to wanted you to receive misinformation. A lot of Indians are collaborating with the guerrillas."

Fifty acres of Falklands for sale; No Argentinians need apply

LONDON (AP) — Fifty acres of land near the Falklands battlefield of Darwin will come under the hammer at a charity auction later this month. But there are a couple of catches.

First, no Argentines need apply.

Second, the land cannot be guaranteed mine-free. Mine-clearing has been a serious problem for British troops on the Falklands since they reclaimed the Falkland Islands in June after 10 weeks of Argentine occupation.

"But clearing 50 acres of mines cannot be the biggest job in the world," said Malcolm Allsop, secretary of the Great Falklands Auction, which is to be held Sept. 23 for the benefit of the islanders and the families of servicemen killed in the Falklands war. The land to be auctioned was donated by the Falkland Islands Co. and its parent Coalite Group Ltd.

"It is a very rare chance to buy a site on the Falklands," Allsop said. "Land does not come up for sale very often there."

Other items already donated for the auction include a "personal item" from Prince Andrew, Queen Elizbeth II's second son, who flew a helicopter in the conflict; a china plate from heir-to-the-throne Prince Charles bearing his personal crest, and a copy of the Argentine surrender document signed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Restaurant to celebrate 400th birthday

AP Laserphoto

Claude Terrail, owner of the Tour d'Argent, the oldest restaurant in Paris, chats with diners recently in front of a window facing the famed Notre Dame Cathedral. Five separate banquets, beginning September 30, will mark the restaurant's 400th anniversary.

PARIS (AP) — It will be a sophisticated orgy of conspicuous consumption — including quails' eggs, pressed duck and gallons of vintage champagne — when La Tour d'Argent, the oldest restaurant in Paris, celebrates its 400th birthday this month.

The five separate banquets, beginning Sept. 30, for more than 500 VIPs may raise a few eyebrows in a country going through its deepest financial crisis since the Great Depression.

"Never mind, let them eat cake," says suave 65-year-old owner Claude Terrail as he gazes out on the panoramic view of the Seine and Notre Dame from the seventh-floor restaurant where dinner can cost up to $90 a person. "This is our fete, a real celebration."

AND HE KNOWS that in a country that reveres gastronomy nearly as much as Gothic cathedrals, such lavish spending on food will be forgiven, by all but the most hard-core leftists.

"We chose 1982 to celebrate because it marks the first royal visit by King Henry III in 1582," Terrail said in an interview. "Back then, they were just beginning to eat with forks."

The banquets for 100 or so guests each will be largely paid for by France's most prestigious champagne companies.

No matter that the bubbly did not exist back in the time of Henry III; sparkling champagne was not "invented" by the Benedictine monk Dom Perignon until the late 17th century.

"OUR DINNERS will be based on historical menus served to royalty," said Terrail. "Les tres grandes heures de la Tour d'Argent" — The finest hours of the Silver Tower.

Terrail, a tall, dashing man with a blue carnation boutonniere in his impeccably cut lapel, is a showman at heart. He always breezes in as if making a stage entry and loves the theatrical effects of his restaurant.

The Tour d'Argent — which boasts three stars in the Michelin guidebook — is a perennial favorite with moneyed tourists from New York to Tokyo.

Back in the 16th century, it was a rough-and-tumble hostelry, the scene of revelry and duels. Things shaped up for Henry III's visit on March 4, 1582, when forks were used — an innovation brought to France from Italy by Henry's mother, Catherine de Medici.

"PEOPLE DIDN'T take to forks easily," said Terrail. "Even Catherine...preferred to use her fingers."

The first grand birthday dinner will be based on Henry's 1582 menu — featuring quails' eggs, eel stew, roast capon and deep-fried salsify, a root vegetable also called oyster plant.

Duck prepared in 14 different ways is the Tour d'Argent specialty today — a tradition started in the 1870s by the maitre d'hotel Frederic Delair. The Oct. 21 dinner will pay him homage with the Tour's renowned pressed duck starring on the seven-course menu. Delair also started the custom of "numbering" ducks, and today more than 600,000 have been served.

"I HATE DUCK, unless I eat it here," said Terrail. "Ours are specially raised semi-wild on my own property in the Vendee region of Brittany. We order about 500 a week, and every day the necessary number of ducks are sent here immediately on order. Their necks are wrung — to preserve the blood for sauce."

Another dinner hosted by Jacques Mouclier, a leader of the French fashion industry, will commemorate the visit of three emperors, including Czar Alexander II of Russia, in 1867. Duck will appear on the menu, along with filet of sole and saddle of lamb, 1964 Chateau Giscours Bordeaux wine, and Dom Perignon vintage 1970 champagne.

Bell companies asking for $6.2 billion nationally

By NORMAN BLACK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers across the country are facing the prospect of sharply higher local telephone bills — in some cases more than a doubling — even before many local telephone companies count the cost of separating from the Bell System.

A survey by The Associated Press has found what appears to be a record dollar amount of rate hike requests now pending before state utility commissions — an estimated $6.2 billion in annual revenues.

Telephone trade groups and regulators believe that's a record total, though such shifting statistics are difficult to tabulate. Rate increases are pending in more than 30 states, and most were filed without consideration of increased costs that may occur in 1984 when American Telephone & Telegraph Co. will spin off its 22 operating companies.

MANY EXPERTS EXPECT a new spurt of rate increases then, but consumers won't have to wait that long before paying higher bills. Consider:

—The Bell System companies now owned by AT&T have requested or announced their intention to request a total of $4.82 billion in additional annual revenue.

According to AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner, the Bell companies could have rate requests pending at any one time in 48 states plus the District of Columbia. As of the end of August, Wagner says rate cases were pending in 31 states.

—Two local companies in which AT&T is a minority owner — the Southern New England Telephone Co. and Cincinnati Bell — have rate requests that total $164 million.

—The General Telephone & Electronics Corp. (GTE), the nation's second largest telephone company, says its subsidiaries have requested or announced their intention to request $759.7 million in additional annual revenue from consumers in 10 states.

—REPORTS FROM STATE UTILITY commissions and from the U.S. Independent Telephone Association indicate roughly $412 million dollars worth of rate hikes filed by other non-Bell phone companies are still pending.

That's despite the approval of an estimated $312 million worth of rate hikes for independent telephone companies during the first six months of 1982, according to Henry Wieland, a spokesman for the independent telephone association.

"While I can't speak from personal knowledge, I think it's a supportable conclusion that the rate requests now pending across the country represent a record," said Eric Schneidewind, the chairman of the public service commission in Michigan.

"We have been saying for some time that the decisions being reached in Washington would result in very, very sharp increases in basic local rates," added John Bryson, the chairman of the public service commission in California. "And that's what is happening."

BY ALLOWING OTHER FIRMS to enter the long-distance business, for example, the Federal Communications Commission has not only eroded AT&T's monopoly but disrupted the long-standing system by which AT&T shares long-distance revenue with local companies, Bryson says.

In Pennsylvania, the local Bell company is awaiting a decision on a $402 million rate hike request — the largest ever requested by any utility in the state. If granted in full, the average consumer's charge just for local service — excluding long-distance and equipment charges — would rise from $7.01 a month to more than $12 a month.

In California, Pacific Telephone & Telegraph is awaiting a ruling on a $69.9 million rate hike, but this week filed a notice of its intention to seek a $864.5 million increase for late 1983. If both requests are granted in full, the basic residential flat rate for consumers in the Los Angeles and San Francisco areas would skyrocket from $7 a month to $15.65 a month.

IN KANSAS, SOUTHWESTERN BELL Telephone is seeking a $63.7 million rate hike that would boost basic residential rates in Topeka, for example, from $8.20 a month to $12.10 — a jump of 47.5 percent.

State commissions rarely grant the entire rate request sought by a utility, and many of the telephone proposals pending across the country affect other things besides local service rates; for instance, the cost of installing telephones and the cost of pay telephone calls.

But the rate requests appear to bear out the predictions of AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown that local rates will rise, regardless of what happens as AT&T's Bell System companies are set free. That break-up was approved last week by a federal judge and will take place no later than February 1984.

Freshman Writes Home

That first letter from college to the folks back home is often a masterpiece in controlled emotion.

The excitement of new adventure in a strange environment is paramount. But it cannot hide a hint of nostalgia for fond faces and familiar places. The firm resolve to fulfil high hopes is not without a trace of apprehension or anxiety.

That is because the freshman as never before is on his own.

Being on our own can be the threshold of our greatest spiritual discovery . . . the realization of God's power and love inspiring us and strengthening us in the face of life's challenges.

What we gave the freshman back home—the faith, fervor and fortitude religious training and example cultivated in his soul—these become prime resources when he is on his own.

This is an exterior drawing of the Unitarian Universalist Church, now under construction at Neely and Midkiff streets. The congregation, organized in 1954, is currently meeting at the Central YMCA Sundays at 10:15 a.m. The new facility, which should be ready for occupancy by Jan. 1, will feature landscaped berms and a glass brick front. Parking and the main entrance will be located off-street on an inner courtyard.

'Ambassadors of God' preach on street

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Under a blazing sun, 55-year-old Robert Eckhardt paces the steps of the gleaming U.S. Capitol, hoping to impress congressmen and the throng of casually dressed tourists with a huge sign that reads, "The wicked shall be turned into hell."

At a busy downtown square, twilight catches Dora Riddle as she clutches a yellow plastic bag and tries to put religious pamphlets into the hands of hurrying commuters. In a singsong voice, she calls on them to "praise God and praise His holy name."

And, across town, Basil Wachuhu, known as 'Dr. Basil," walks softly among his myriad boxes of herbs and leaves, telling all who will listen that in his huge, worn Bible is proof that God makes better medicine than man does.

Eckhardt, Riddle and Wachuhu are members of a highly visible but little studied group of street preachers, or — as Riddle says with her ready smile and firm gaze — "ambassadors of God."

IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL, as in other cities, the preachers' "pulpits" are sidewalks, parks, shopping centers and other public places likely to provide them with "congregations."

In Los Angeles, where street preachers hold forth a few blocks from his City Hall office, Sherman Williams Jr., an investigator in the Los Angeles

RELIGION

Social Service Department, said some preachers are indigents at missions who are "looking not so much for money but trying to fulfill a mission in life."

However, George Delianedis, Williams' superior, said not all are so highly motivated. "I don't know if they believe what they preach, but their hand is out," he said. Some of them have such a good gift of gab that they can collect as much as $100 a day, he added.

IN ATLANTA, SOCIAL WORKER Iris Brooks, who has listened to street preachers shouting on Marietta Street and exhorting commuters at the Five Points subway stations, said that if anyone wanted to get them off the streets he would face a "mission impossible" because the preachers seem to believe strongly in what they do.

"When you don't have a whole lot going for you, such as a job or prestige, religion can become all-encompassing, tied to your personal esteem," she said.

Street preachers come from diverse backgrounds, but they appear to share a number of characteristics, according to experts, who often describe them as living on society's edge, an edge that grows during times of economic hardship.

"These are marginal people leading lonely lives and expressing that loneliness in a seemingly religious way," said Dorothy Austin, professor of psychology and pastoral counseling at Harvard University's Divinity School, which is near Harvard Square — a popular "pulpit" in Cambridge, Mass.

IN INTERVIEWS WITH RELIGION experts and social scientists and with the preachers themselves, a picture emerges of a group that embraces God but strongly rejects organized churches and that feels misunderstood and rejected by the public — the congregation it is trying to reach.

Take Eckhardt, who usually starts his day on the Capitol's steps at 9 a.m., dressed in tennis shoes and khaki clothes. He is "dead set against organized religion," he said.

In lamenting the fact that thousands of persons pass him daily and few acknowledge his presence, he said, "I'd rather they hassle me than say nothing. They celebrate Christmas. Why do they celebrate it if they think I'm a nut out here?"

So why does he continue to preach? "As a Christian, you really don't have to give an account of how many people listen," the 55-year-old New Jersey native declared.

MANY STREET PREACHERS SAID they knew at an early age that they had the gift of preaching but waited until adulthood to use it. Their reasons for taking their gift to the streets usually were expressed as a call from God and a desire to help turn around a wayward world.

Despite the long hours the preachers devote to spreading the Word, many of them do have lives outside of street preaching. And, not all live on the streets or in mission houses.

For instance, Eckhardt, who said he began preaching at the Capitol eight years ago, has a wife and a 9-year-old son who also sleep in his green camper pickup truck.

When winter descends on Washington, Eckhardt packs up his sign and religious pamphlets and takes his family to Columbia, S.C., where he said he usually finds enough odd jobs to support the family through the year.

Others, like Riddle, travel alone.

Christianity, Buddhism have much in common

Copley News Service

Christianity and Buddhism perhaps have more in common than any other world religions, although their definition of God appears to divide them widely from each other.

Both religions have a single founder, Jesus for Christianity and Gautama for Buddhism. Each is a daughter religion. Christianity grew out of Judaism in the first century. Buddhism grew out of Hinduism in about the fifth century B.C.

During a seminar on Buddhism and Christianity held recently, one of the speakers said that for those approaching it for the first time, Buddhism doesn't even seem like a religion.

"The reason for this, is the lack of a defined deity," said the Rev. Charles Easton, a Presbyterian minister. "For a Buddhist, the ground of all being includes everything, so there is no God 'out there.'"

Western religions, including Christianity, Judaism and Islam, stress the transcendent God outside of us, he said.

FOR CHRISTIANITY, theological speculation has often seemed to be the most important activity of all and, in the Middle Ages, was dubbed "the queen of sciences." Buddhists, however, object to metaphysical speculation and place the emphasis on meditation to arrive at a knowledge of the unity of all things.

Gautama is called the Buddha, which means the enlightened one, because he sat under a Bo tree until he attained enlightenment. He was born in about 563 B.C. in the northern part of India near the border of Nepal.

Like Jesus, Gautama gathered a group of disciples around him and began to teach about what he had found. So successful was their mission that today there are at least 270 million Buddhists in the world.

"It is a system of thought and a practical guidance," Easton said. "All metaphysical views are only a partial description of reality. Faith and doctrine are only vehicles to reach the truth. When you reach it, you can discard the doctrine."

BUDDHISM SPREAD FROM India to Southeast Asia, China and Japan. In Japan, it took root so successfully that today its trademarks, calligraphy and the martial arts, are perceived as hallmarks of Japanese culture.

Buddhists also believe in Karma and reincarnation, as do the Hindus. These teach that one is continually reborn to reap the fruits of action in former lives. When the Buddha achieved enlightenment, he could have gotten off the wheel of rebirth and attained Nirvana, the closest Buddhist equivalent to the Christian heaven, but he stayed on earth another 45 years so that all men could be enlightened.

In Nirvana, the "self" is eliminated. It is the small self that leads to desire and suffering. This "self" is considered an illusion. The real or larger self is identified with the ground of all being, or what westerners would call God.

"For a Buddhist, the ideal state is Nirvana, yet it is also here and now," Easton said. To a Christian this has a familiar sound, since Heaven is believed to be the blissful vision of God after death, yet Jesus told his listeners in Palestine, "The Kingdom of Heaven is within you."

BESIDES MEDITATION, Buddhists practice ethical disciplines and take five vows. They vow not to take life, not to take anything not given to one (including by power plays), not to engage in improper sexuality, not to speak anything that would harm another and not be become intoxicated.

Buddhism has adapted itself to each country to which it has beeen brought by its missionaries. So, in Tibet and Japan it has different variations than it does in Southeast Asia. Since coming to America, all these varieties are meeting and mingling, and some of its adherents are confident that a truly American expression of Buddhism will evolve.

Del Schneider, a teacher at the University of San Diego and a Lutheran pastor, said we can no longer look forward to a world that is exclusively Christian, as missionaries used to do.

"The world is religiously plural and gives every evidence of remaining so," he told seminar participants.

"WE HAVE TO REMEMBER that covenant theology, which includes both Christianity and Judaism, always points to an age that will transcend all religions," he said.

Schneider sees great potential for Christians and Buddhists to come to some understanding of each other. Many Christians have taken up Zen meditation as a way of enhancing their own spiritual lives. This is no problem to a Buddhist, since Buddha taught that all religions are valid insofar as they lead to enlightenment.

Easton agreed that the early Christians in the East may have been closer to Buddhism in their thinking until they were wiped out by the controversies over doctrine during the first few centuries of our era.

Most seminary professors politically liberal, says study

NEW YORK (AP) — The first detailed study ever made of the views of the nation's seminary professors finds that they mostly hold traditional concepts of faith and social morality, but tend to be political liberals.

Compared to the general public, they're more consistently conservative about religious beliefs and moral conduct, but they're more liberal about public policy issues — reflecting an oft-charged gap between church members and professionals.

They're "far to the 'right'...in religious and moral orthodoxy," comments Catholic scholar Michael Novak. "The orthodoxy of the professors in belief and their fervor in practice are quite stunning."But "they're disproportionately to the left in their politics."

Findings of the unprecedented study, conducted by the Roper Center at the University of Connecticut, are reported in "This World," a newly founded journal of religion and public affairs, published in New York.

In the study, 1,112 professors at 211 seminaries and schools of religion, representing all Christian denominations — Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox — answered lengthy questionaires of 208 questions regarding doctrine, practice and U. S. policies.

Philip Marcus, executive director of the Institute for Educational Affairs, which financed the study, said no such exploration previously has been made specifically into views of religious faculties in the country.

It found them overwhelmingly committed to classical Christian teachings — the reality of God, the divinity of Jesus, final judgment and eternal life. Most of the professors pray daily, attend worship more than once weekly, regularly sense a "special closeness" to God and his forgiveness. A majority claims a "born-again" experience.

Seventy percent of them consider abortion immoral for a woman who doesn't want more children, compared to 65 percent of the public. Strong majorities of the professors also regard homosexual, premarital and extramarital sex relations as immoral, but don't favor government laws against such behavior.

Hispanic bishops issue letter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hispanic bishops of the U.S. Roman Catholic Church have issued their first pastoral letter to their swelling ranks of Americans of Spanish descent, telling them to uphold their cultural traditions.

The guiding letter, published in English and Spanish, traces the often difficult experiences of Hispanics in the United States in the past two centuries, but cites their growing contribution to the church and American society.

Noting the growth of Hispanics entering vocations of the priesthood and religious life, the letter says, "The blossoming of new vocations for our people fills us with joy. However, the number is minimal in relation to the need."

The letter was writtten in commemoration of the 450th anniversary late last year of Our Lady of Guadalupe, a shrine at Mt. Tepeyec.

Stan Mooneyham, former president of World Vision International, talks with Cambodian refugee children in a camp orphanage curing his visit to Southeast Asia in 1979. World Vision International, one of the largest Christian humanitarian organizations, provides relief and comfort to refugees in Asia, Africa and around the world.

Camera records suffering, dignity

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Eric Mooneyham has spent the past 10 of his 26 years in the most miserable places of the earth, recording with his camera the variations of human suffering — starvation, homelessness, war, death, and through it all, dignity.

He has flown into Phnom Penh under gunfire to capture the panic and chaos of Cambodia and experienced the frustration of being only a photographer when a refugee in Somalia needed a doctor for her dying baby.

Mooneyham, who does his photography to portray and advance the relief work of World Vision International, which his father, the Rev. Stan Mooneyham, had headed for years until his recent resignation, says:

"Many times I've felt like a voyeur, that suffering sells. My only justification is my motivation.

"I don't think physically there's any difference in me sticking my camera in someone's face and someone else with another motivation sticking their camera in someone's face. The only difference between us is our motivation."

A collection of Mooneyham's photographs were being exhibited this week under the title "Dignity in Suffering" at the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena.

Mooneyham's pictures belong to World Vision, one of the world's largest Christian missionary and humanitarian organizations. The photographs are used in publicity releases to show what the organization has done and what needs to be done.

"I was sort of a problem kid in high school, so my father would take me with him on trips overseas. He put a camera in my hand on one trip and said, 'Make yourself useful,'" Mooneyham recalled.

Mooneyham calls still photography "innocent," comparing it to "pictures of starving people on television.

"The visual images are so manipulated with emotive words and music when they're trying to show you a situation, it tends to rip your heart out. My photographs are very honest and straightforward," he said. "They will cut you, but they won't rip your heart out. When I go into a situation like a refugee camp, the photographs are not the worst possible images, but I'm not trying to make it look like a vacation place either."

Mooneyham deals with the overwhelming obstacles and the never-ending tragedy as his father does: "The way you help suffering people is one at a time."

THROUGH THE BIBLE

Tomorrow I will begin preaching through the Bible. We will be studying a different Bible book each month. The book of the Month for September is Genesis. Read Genesis and come study with us.

'No Name' Rebels impress Coronado, 17-3

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

It wasn't one of those rafter swinging victories, but by the time the clock ran out on Midland Lee's 17-3 win over Lubbock Coronado at Memorial Stadium Friday night in the 1982 season debut for both teams, it looked like the Rebels might be on the right track.

The "No Name" Rebels, the ones without any returning starters to rely on, looked somewhat sluggish in the first half, but ended up dominating the Mustangs when all was said and done.

And in the process, Lee fans grabbed a few names to hold onto for awhile. Like Darrell Fennell, who busted for 121 yards rushing in his debut as a Rebel ball carrier. Ninety of those yards came on one first half play when he zoomed the home sidelines with nary a Mustang hand on him for a deep six and one of the longest runs in Rebel history.

ALSO SPLIT receiver Luther Johnson put his name in lights with four circus catches for 92 yards, all of which had possible breakaway written on them. The speedster has hands of glue and speed to throw a scare into any secondary.

The Lee defense bent and bent in the first half, threatening to put the Rebels in real trouble, but all Coronado could manage was a 32-yard field goal from Lance Cochran in the second period. Coronado lived in scoring range most of the first half, but Lee was stubborn when it counted.

But the vaunted Lee defense showed its muscle in the second half, holding Coronado to a mere 37 yards rushing. The Lee defense also held college prospect quarterback Mike Meeks to a mere two completions in 10 attempts for a minus five yards in the air. That mark was helped by two fourth quarter defensive plays by David Hastings and Kevin Taylor in the end zone and Coronado's Eddie Moreno dropped one in the end zone.

Lee's Mike Mercurio came out on top in the Lee passing ranks with four completions in six attempts for 65 yards and starter Paul Cox completed one of three attempts for 36 yards. Johnson's aerial circus on the receiving end, however, was what made the passing game work.

IT LOOKED like Lee was going to open the 1982 campaign with an explosion when Clarence Smith returned the opening kickoff for 90 yards, but he was ruled out of bounds at the Lee 39 and the Rebels lost a score.

Coronado dominated the ball most of the first half with nothing really spectacular, but they didn't give the Rebs the ball much. Lee coughed up two fumbles from Scott Ackroyd to help the Mustangs.

But Fennell took things in his own hands with 10:25 left in the second period when his sweep went undetected for 90 yards and a breeze. That gave Lee a 7-0 lead despite Coronado throwing away two scoring opportunities deep in Lee territory.

Coronado did get the field goal from Cochran after an Ackroyd fumble set up the Mustangs at the Lee 31. Coronado died on the 17 before Cochran ramed it home.

In the third period, Lee's Kerry Robertson booted a 34-yard field goal that was set up by a 14-yard pass from Mercurio to Johnson.

But the impressive drive of the night was turned in the fourth period when Lee marched 77 yards, which ended after 5:27 minutes of the clock had been eaten up on a three-yard run by Fennell. Smith's 28-yard, forearm attack run was the big gainer in the drive, but Mercurio hit Johnson with an 18-yard pass and Carlton Johnson with a nine-yard toss. Everything just clicked here and it was a good way to leave the field while turning thoughts to Monahans, who the Rebels meet next week for Game No. 2.

LEE COACH Spike Dykes was true to his word as nine different players got to tote the ball for the Rebels, who ended the night with 222 yards rushing and another 101 passing. Coronado had 106 yards rushing at the half, but ended up with only 143 yards rushing on the night as the Lee defense got salty.

The opinion left from the game is that the Rebels have room for improvement in the next two weeks prior to District 4-5A play, but the tools are there to work with. At least the youthful Rebels have been under fire and showed improvement with nearly every quarter of action. They showed the breakaway threat and the big play possibility. It wasn't beautiful, but it wasn't ugly either.

Hobbs triumphs

HOBBS (AP) — Billy Howard took off in the first quarter and ran 61 yards for a touchdown to put the Hobbs Eagles on top for good as the No. 8 ranked Class AAAA team shut out the No. 1 ranked Class AAA team Artesia Friday in New Mexico high school prep football.

Howard's TD was soon followed by a second for Hobbs as Doug Haynes ran 35 yards. Quarterback Manny Marquez and Chris Broom connected for the extra point.

The only other score of the game came in the second quarter for the Eagles as Jerry Hernandez kicked a 28-yard field goal.

Cranes whoop it up, 17-0

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

When the Golden Crane football team took to the field following their 17-0 victory over Reagan County it looked like they had just won the state championship.

The celebration was indeed justified, for the Cranes had just stopped a losing streak that extended back to the 1980 season. Last year Crane didn't win a football game as they went 0-10 including a 42-38 opening game loss to the same Reagan County Owls.

Tailback Gilbert Ramirez was the workhorse for Cranes offense as he rushed for 154 yards, 92 of which came in the first half when Crane took a 10-0 lead.

All week Crane head coach Rickey White was saying that his defense was ahead of the offense going into the game. And it was defense, the same one that surrendered 42 points to the Owls last year, that proved to be rock steady as they held Reagan County to one firstdown in the first half of play, and 222 yards total offense for the game.

AFTER A scoreless first quarter Crane mounted a 10-play, 36-yard drive for the first score.

After seven rushing plays Crane had moved to the Owls 37-yardline when they decided to go to the air. But a holding penalty put them back on the 46-yardline making it third-and-25 to go for a firstdown. It was the second drive that the Golden Cranes appeared to stop themselves with a penalty. But after gaining nine yards on a pass play White decided to go for it all on fourth-and-16.

Having just thrown two consecutive passes to tightend Clint Barrett, quarterback Eugene Morris decided to go up top.

Split reciever Junior Sena scurried past the defensive secondary, gathered in Morris' pass on the 12-yardline and scammpered into the endzone untouched.

The story of tailbacks was a key in this contest as Reagan County's Gregg Fisher sat on the sidelines watching this contest. Last year Fisher rushed for 238 yards in the Owls victory, over Crane.

Ramirez's 154 yards rushing was just one yard short of the Owls rushing totals for the game.

Crane started the second half determined to make their superiority at the line of scrimmage pay off. They took the opening kickoff on their own 33-yardline and marched in for their second touchdown.

This time it was Eddie Jones running from his fullback slot who slammed it over from two yards out. In the 13-play drive Crane didn't put the ball in the air once.

Bulldogs lose to Plainsmen

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK—Midland High Coach Pat Culpepper was upset. His Bulldogs had just played what he called, "The best defensive game I've seen since I've been here." And they still lost 17-2 in their season's opener against Lubbock Monterey here at Lowery Field.

There is little doubt that the MHS defensive performance is one of the best since Culpepper took charge of the Bulldogs—and some might say for nearly three quarters of play, it was either the best or among the best in the school's history.

DESPITE BEING outweighed 20 pounds per man, Midland High's eight-man, and sometimes 10-man line, dominated the Plainsmen as seen in the first half stats when Monterey was able to gain a mere 38 total yards, 25 rushing and 13 passing.

It looked like things would stay the same in the third quarter as Culpepper's "Junkyard Dawgs" forced Monterey tailback Jay Douglas to cough up the ball on the first possession, 38 yards from the goal line (a 44-yard return set up the field position).

After the turnover, MHS picked up one first down on a Mark Page to Chuck Dickenson 15-yard pass, one of seven times the combination clicked. But a loss of nine yards when Page dropped back to pass two plays later put a quick stop to that short drive. So, in comes punter Jay Harkrider. Up in the air goes the ball and downfield goes the MHS coverage. There was no where Richard Armenta to go.

WITH A first and 10 on their own 10, Monterey's offense again found a stiff Midland High front wall too much to break through and, without gaining a yard, the Plainsmen were forced to punt.

Kevin Short, standing in his own end zone, took the snap from center and as his foot connected with the ball, Clifton Hinds, guard, came bowling through to block the punt for a safety and 2-0 lead with 6:28 left in the third quarter.

The way the Midland defense had been playing, that 2-0 lead looked like it could hold up as the final score. But, two MAJOR miscues in the third quarter cost them the momentum they had built up as well as an eventual 17 fourth quarter points.

The first mistake came near the end of the third quarter when Harkrider mishandled the snap from center and was sacked on a punt. Monterey took over on the Bulldog 49, but the Dogs held to force a fourth and one at the 40. Hines, after mix up call in the huddle, went after his second block when he should have been setting up for a return. He ended up running into Short to pull the penalty and give the Plainsmen new life.

THE NEW life was all they needed. Kicker Stewart Brann capped the drive a few plays later with a 25-yard field goal, 45 seconds into the fourth quarter. On their next possession, Plainsmen Gary Warren broke free up the middle on a 30-yard run for the game's first touchdown and then quarterback David Hagood hit Jay Douglas on a 39-yard touchdown pass to give Monterey the 17-2 victory.

Despite the loss, Culpepper was pleased with the way his defense played, saying, "I'm real proud of these kids. They battled hard and hung in the ball game. They (Monterey) were a tough outfit and they don't make many mistakes. We forced them (three fumbles, two of which Midland recovered)."

"It was as good a defensive effort as I've seen since I've been here and we're going to play it like that again. I'm going to get on them to play that way again. I'm not going to let them get down."

Diablos defeat Midland Cubs

EL PASO—Midland's Cubs were backed into a corner and will have to come up with a couple of wins tonight to advance to the Texas League championship playoffs.

El Paso's John Cocanower tossed a three-hitter at the Cubs to give the Diablos a 1-0 edge in the best-of-three Texas League West playoff series. A doubleheader, if necessary, is scheduled at 6:30 p.m. tonight in Dudley Field. The first game will be nine innings. The second game would be a seven-inning contest.

DOUG WELENC, 13-11, took the loss for Midland, yielding solo homers to Dion James and Don Davidsmeier and he also forced in a run with a bases loaded walk.

Midland's lone run turned out to be a welcome gift from Cocanower, who threw Henry Cotto's game-opening tap back to the box wildly to first. Cotto went to third and scored on Joe Carter's infield out.

After that, Cocanower was untouchable.

EL PASO tied it in the first when James homered to right. The Diablos took the led in the fourth. Randy Ready doubled off the wall in right and with two out Steve Michael was walked intentionally. However, Welenc then walked the next two batters as well to force in the go-ahead run.

Davidsmeier hit his 11th homer in the sixth to clinch it.

Schmidt homers, Phils win

Phillies 2, Astros 1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Schmidt hit a home run with two outs in the ninth inning to break a 1-1 tie and Steve Carlton pitched a two-hitter as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Houston Astros 2-1 Friday night.

Carlton, who struck out 12 and did not walk anyone, became the major league's first 18-game winner and he has now beaten each team in the National League at least once.

Schmidt slugged a 1-0 pitch into the left field seats off starter Joe Niekro, 13-10, who allowed only five hits, struck out four and walked only one. The blow was Schmidt's 29th homer.

Niekro is 5-10 against the Phillies and has not beaten them since August, 1979. Carlton defeated Houston for the 31st time against 10 losses.

Carlton had allowed only a single to center field by Danny Heep in the second inning before Art Howe connected for his fifth home run of the season on a 3-2 pitch with two out in the fifth to give the Astros a 1-0 lead.

Niekro, who had pitched shutouts over New York and Montreal in his last two starts, gave up only two hits before the Phillies scored the first run off him in 23 2-3 innings when they tied the score in the bottom of the sixth.

Manny Trillo walked with two outs, and scored when Gary Matthews' high fly dropped in left-center field. Trillo beat center fielder Tony Scott's throw to the plate.

The run ended a streak of 24 consecutive scoreless innings by the Phillies.

Rangers lose

CHICAGO (AP) — Greg Luzinski doubled, singled and knocked in three runs and the Chicago White Sox got strong relief pitching to hold on for a 7-5 victory over the Texas Rangers Friday night.

The Rangers chased starter LaMarr Hoyt with four runs in the fifth, capped by Larry Parrish's one-out, two-run homer that pulled Texas within 6-5.

Left-hander Kevin Hickey got the last two outs of the inning to end the threat and right-hander Warren Brusstar, 1-0 — making his first American League appearance since being acquired from Philadelphia this week — pitched two innings. Jim Kern hurled the final inning for his second save.

The Rangers opened the scoring in the first on a single by George Wright and John Grubb's double.

Badgers capture thriller

MCCAMEY — The McCamey Badgers made it exciting for the hometown faithful as they opened the '82 season with a one-point victory over Iraan, 22-21 with the winning TD and two-point conversion coming in the final 22 seconds of a wild four-touchdown fourth quarter.

McCamey spread the scoring around as three Badgers carried the ball over the goaline for six pointers.

As it turned out the most important tally was a matter of timing.

The last team to score had the opportunity to go for a two-point play and that opportunity belonged to McCamey.

Paul Wilson gathered in a nine-yard pass from Ray Zarate to set up the winnin two-point conversion.

Senior Kenny Terry then took a pitchout from his halfback position and ran in with the critical PAT.

Jesse Banner provided Iraan with their three touchdowns including runs of 29 and 26 yards and a 45-yard pass from quarterback Troy White.

Both teams put on an offensive show to rival eventhe best, as they rolled up 556 yards total offense in the game.

Black paces Red Devils

RANKIN — Dennis Black scored three times and threw a TD pass to lead the Rankin Red Devils to 29-19 victory over Eldorado here Friday night in the season opener for both teams.

The highly touted Red Devils scored in every quarter to nail down the victory, but it was Black who led the way with an amazing 348 yards rushing in 38 carries.

Black scored on two runs of five yards and one pass play from Quad Midkiff for 30 yards and also hit Midkiff with a 15-yard scoring toss.

Buffs open campaign with impressive victory

STANTON — The Stanton Buffaloes opened the 1982 football campaign here Friday night with a 15-0 victory over Tahoka.

The Buff defense got the shutout, but it was Scott Church's 30-yard field goal in the second period that was all the Buffs needed for victory.

However, Maurizo Iaguanello ignited the Stanton offense in the third period when he broke on Tahoka for a 72-yard TD romp. Stanton's Bobby Barnes added a 16-yard scoring jaunt in the same period to end the scoring.

The game was close as far as the statistics were concerned, but the Buffs held the edge there also. Tahoka had 149 yards total offense to Stanton's 231. Tahoka had nine first downs to Stanton's five, but Tahoka had four interceptions and a lost fumble to stall their threats.

Stanton completed only two of 11 passes for 43 yards, but the Stanton defense turned in four interceptions and a fumble recovery to keep Tahoka at bay all night.

McGraw-Edison presents the truth about evaporative cooling.

It saves you money.

As an add-on to your refrigeration system, an evaporative air conditioner can cut your cooling costs several ways.
It costs less to run, because it draws less current. It costs less to repair, because mechanically it's a very simple piece of equipment.
And if it's a McGraw-Edison evaporative air cooler, it gives you • a rigid, all-welded cabinet of hot-dipped galvanized steel (superior to plastic cabinets because they deteriorate in strong sunlight, eventually sagging and leaking) • a durable, corrosion resistant appliance-like Polybond paint finish • certified air delivery based on standards of the Air Movement and Control Association.

It keeps you cool.

During all but the hottest days of summer, an evaporative air conditioner cools the air to a comfortable temperature just as well as a refrigeration unit, and for a lot less money. Because the air it circulates is slightly moist, it's better for your plants, your lungs and your complexion. And because outside air is drawn through your home, stale odors from cooking, pets and cigarette smoke are never a problem.

Call

As your authorized McGraw-Edison dealer(s), we're eager to give you all the details on how an evaporative air conditioner can keep you cooler, cheaper, this summer. After all, McGraw-Edison has been the leader in energy-efficient cooling for 35 years.

College 11's cross fingers

By Associated Press

Every college football team in the country, except those few who opened earlier in the week, are still unbeaten, untied and unscored upon. Much of that will change Saturday when 38 of the nation's 96 Division I-A teams swing into action.

Those coaches whose teams are in the preseason Top Twenty are saying a small prayer that the so-called experts are right. The others? Well, polls are only opinions. And opinions are like noses — everybody's got one.

"No coach knows how his team will perform in an opener," says Arizona State's Darryl Rogers, whose Sun Devils are rated No.19 in the preseason Associated Press poll. "You have no way of knowing if you're good or bad. Nothing has been proven, so they're scary whether you're playing at home or away. But they are exciting. Nobody has an advantage, other than perhaps an experience factor."

ARIZONA STATE opens on the road against Pacific-10 rival Oregon. The only other members of the Top Twenty in action Saturday are eighth-ranked Penn State, which entertains Temple, and a pair of Sunshine State foes — No.15 Miami at No.16 Florida.

As a couple of appetizing attractions next week, defending national champion Clemson, No.11 in the preseason, visits seventh-ranked Georgia on Monday night (ABC-TV), while top-rated Pitt hosts No.5 North Carolina on Thursday night (CBS-TV).

"It's a pleasure to be ranked," Rogers says, "but it really doesn't mean much. Before anyone has played a game, it's pure speculation. There will be some great surprises this weekend. Every year, somebody else is always better than the team picked by these preseason experts. I don't recall too much preseason talk last year about Clemson, and it won the national championship. Rankings really can't be used as much of a barometer until eight games into the season."

ARIZONA STATE is the only Pac-10 team without its 1981 quarterback, but the Sun Devils are loaded on defense, with linebacker Vernon Maxwell and safety Mike Richardson the standouts. On the other hand, Penn State, Miami and Florida all have some holes to fill on defense, but all have highly regarded quarterbacks — Todd Blackledge at Penn State, Jim Kelly at Miami, Wayne Peace at Florida.

"A good defense can't entirely overcome a weak offense," Rogers says. "You have to have a total team. Many times, poor football teams are strong on one side of the ball, but weak on the other. If your offense is able to move the ball, you have a better chance to be a good defense because your defenders aren't on the field all day.

"If you continually run three plays and punt, your defense has to go right back on. When the defense goes to the sideline, it doesn't want to order a Coke to go; it wants to sit down and enjoy it."

Zoeller streaks to record 62 for two-stroke margin

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller streaked to a course record 9-under-par 62 Friday to grab a 2-shot lead over Calvin Peete at 12-under 130 midway through the $275,000 B.C. Open at the En Joie Golf Club.

Peete almost matched Zoeller's blazing pace by birdieing eight of the first 16 holes before a bogey-birdie finish left him with a round of 8-under 63 and a 36-hole total of 132.

Jerry Pate was third at 133, with Tom Kite four shots behind the leader at 134 after his second straight round of 67.

Zoeller, 30, who won the 1979 Masters among his three tour victories, played almost without a pause between shots.

Zoeller's error-free round — one shot shy of the best on the Professional Golfers Association tour this year — included nine birdies and nine pars.

Lendl staves off expulsion

NEW YORK (AP) — Third-seeded Ivan Lendl, pressed to the limit by an inspired Tim Mayotte, fought back from near-elimination to post a 6-4, 3-6, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4 victory Friday and advance into the third round of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

The narrow victory kept alive Lendl's hopes of capturing his first Grand Slam title.

Earlier, tall Chip Hooper blasted his way past 16th-seeded Roscoe Tanner and the two top seeds, John McEnroe and Martina Navratilova, solved the swirling winds and their stubborn opponents to post second-round victories.

Hooper outlasted Tanner 6-7, 7-6, 4-6, 7-5, 7-6; McEnroe eliminated Martin Davis 7-6, 6-4, 6-3, and Navratilova ousted Jill Davis 7-6, 6-1.

Also moving into the third round was second-seeded Jimmy Connors, who had no problem eliminating Hank Pfister 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

The Lendl-Mayotte contest was suspended Thursday night by a torrential downpour at the National Tennis Center with the Czechoslovakian leading 6-4, 1-2, 30-15 on center court at Louis Armstrong Stadium. It originally was scheduled to be resumed on the grandstand court, then was switched to center court when the Hooper-Tanner match lasted so long.

But Lendl reportedly asked that the match be resumed in the grandstand, which is a smaller facility, because he would less affected by the winds.

It wasn't the wind, it was Mayotte who caused problems for the strong right-hander. The Springfield, Mass., right-hander kept the pressure on Lendl with his strong serve-and-volley game. He broke the Czech in the eighth game of the second set and the ninth game of the third set to grab a 2-1 advantage in sets.

The two held serve in the third set, and Mayotte broke Lendl to take the first point of the tiebreaker when the Czech netted a backhand volley. But Lendl put the tiebreaker back on serve when he won the third point.

With the score 5-4 for Lendl, Mayotte was long with a forehand volley, giving Lendl set point. The third seed evened the match on the next point when he ripped a backhand service return down the line.

Walker Cupper in semis

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Walker Cup ace Jay Sigel, All-Americans Rick Fehr and Jim Hallet, and South Carolina co-captain David Tolley charged into the semifinals with a pair of victories Friday in the 82nd U.S. Amateur golf championship at The Country Club.

Sigel, 38, and Fehr, 20, had little trouble in their two matches, but Hallet and Tolley, both 22, had to survive bitter struggles as they were forced into overtime before managing quarterfinal victories.

Sigel, the 1979 British Amateur champion appearing in his 16th U.S. Amateur, and Fehr, a Brigham Young junior from Seattle, today and Hallet, the New England amateur champion and a senior at Bryant College in Rhode Island, meets Tolley.

An 11-time Pennsylvania champion who boasts nine consecutive match victories in Walker Cup play since 1977, Sigel defeated Julian Taylor of Youngstown, Ohio, 3 and 1, and then downed David Tentis, University of Houston, 4 and 3.

Fehr romped to a 4 and 3 victory over Kevin Slater of San Diego in the third round and then defeated Michigan's Ed Humenik 5 and 4.

Hallet, Massachusetts amateur championship, defeated co-medalist Bob Stanger of Durham, N.C., 1 up in the morning and then came back to edge Tim Krapfel of Columbia, S.C. 1 up in 20 holes.

Tolley, Roanoke, Va., defeated Corey Pavin 3 and 2 in the morning and then edged Jim Holtgrieve, Missouri, 1 up in 21.

All-American got its start in a bar

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — A barroom conversation almost three decades ago led to the start of the world's richest horse race.

From that little chat about some unborn foals — and an inevitable difference of opinion concerning their qualities and speed — grew the All-American Furturity, an event unique on the American sports scene.

It will be held Labor Day at Ruidoso Downs, a modern little track nestled in the shadow of the pine-covered mountains in southern New Mexico.

At about 5:30 p.m., 10 2-year-old quarter horses will race one-quarter of a mile.The total value of the race is $2,530,000.The winner receives $1 million.

PEOPLE USUALLY are stunned by the purse size, said Dick Alwan, public relations director for the track. The question most frequently asked is: Where does all that money come from?

The track puts up $25,000. The rest, more than $2.5 million, comes from the horsemen.

The format is based on the gambling instincts of the owners, the men who think they have a fine blood line going, Alwan said.

To put a horse in the All-American, the owner must either meet a series of nomination payments or make one, expensive late supplemental payment.

The first nominations closed Jan. 15 of last year, with 2,914 yearlings named at $50 each. Three more nominations, increasing in price to $400, were held in 1981. Three more, including a $1,000 fee to enter the trials, were held this year. Supplemental nominations of $30,000 closed June 15.

IT ALL started with that conversation in an Albuquerque bar in 1953 among J.B. Ferguson, Elmer Helped, Jim Derrick and a couple of other horsemen.

They all had top mares in foal and started comparing breeding lines. Differences of opinion developed.

Five 2-year-olds ran in that first one, won by Segura Miguel. The public ignored it. But it fired the imagination of breeders. It amounts to betting on breeding lines. And the idea caught on.

San Angelo lives up to high state ranking

District 4-5A favorite San Angelo got off to a blazing start Friday night with a 42-14 victory over Austin Anderson by scoring the first three times they had the ball, including a 50-yard run by Henry Klepec.

Jimmy Speirs also had a 90-yard kickoff return in the game as the Bobcats showed little mercy to the Trojans.

Odessa High marched 80 yards in 14 plays in the fourth quarter in Odessa Friday night to defeat Amarillo High by a narrow 8-6 margin. The winning points came on an Albert Cruz pass to David Tavarez for the two-point conversion. OHS was trying to kick the extra point when Cruz dropped the snap, but threw to Tavarez for the win.

Howard Harris, who rushed for 107 yards, completed the 80-yard drive with a one-yard plunge for the Bronco score.

Amarillo took a 6-0 lead in the first period when Paul Adams produced a 50-yard run for the Sandies only score of the night, but the kick failed, setting up Odessa High's fourth quarter comeback.

In other 4-5A action, Brownwood, the Class 4A favorite to win the state championship, stunned Abilene Cooper with a 21-14 victory. Abilene High, on the other hand, won a 21-12 decision over Wichita Falls Rider as the Abilene schools split decisions Friday.

The Midland schools also split with Lee taking a 17-3 win over Coronado while Midland High dropped a 17-2 decision to Lubbock Monterey, making 4-5A teams 4-2 on the night. Odessa Permian plays El Paso Coronado tonight.

Sherill makes long-awaited debut

A&M, Baylor favored in openers

By Associated Press

Texas A&M an Baylor were favored to get the Southwest Conference's annual football outings against outside foes off to a successful start Saturday.

While the remainder of their SWC bretheran practice, the Aggies host Boston College in Coach Jackie Sherrill's Kyle Field debut and the Bears entertain North Texas State and Corky Nelson.

The Aggies were a touchdown favorite to whip the team which beat them 13-12 last year and the Bears were twotouchdown choices over NTSU, a new entry into the Southland Conference.

Texas A&M must stop BC quarterback Doug Flutie, who passed for 347 yards and two touchdowns last year against Sherill's Pittsburgh team.

Flutie, a sophomore, was the nation's ninth-ranked passer last year.

THE EAGLES have had success at Kyle Field in the past, winning 32-24 in 1973.

The game has a scheduled 6:10 p.m. CST start and will be televised nationally by Ted Turner's WTBS-TV station cable network.

Coach Jack Bicknell of BC said "Texas A&M is an excellent team ... their speed, according to every report is exceptional."

He added, "Defensively, they are a veteran team with proven people at many positions. Greg Williams and Billy Cannon are top-notch defensive backs.

"On offense, Earnest Jackson and Johnny Hector make the best combination of backs we are likely to see this year."

Sherrill said Flutie is a real threat.

"He's very exciting ... he's all ver the field," said Sherrill. "You've got to hem him in ... he'll throw it out of bounds ... he'll throw in behind his back ... he'll spring to the sideline, stop, then do a 360 and throw it back across the field."

SHERRILL SAID defensive tackle Junior Poles "can dominate a game ... He's listed at 6-4, 281 but I think he's closer to about 300 pounds."

Greenwood rally falls shy

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood Rangers scored two fourth quarter touchdowns here Friday night in their season football debut at home, but it wasn't enough to erase a 19-point lead posted early in the game by Jal, N.M.

Greenwood ended up losing a 19-13 decision to Jal. Jal took a 6-0 lead in the second period when Tim Epperson caught a 38-yard TD pass.

Jal struck for 13 points in the fourth period. Quarterback Jose Ruiz passed 21 yards to Mark Lee and then Guy Gage caught a 34-yard to make the score 19-0 in favor of the Panthers.

Greenwood tried frantically to get back into the game as fullback John Ellis got the Rangers moving with a one-yard plunge. Ellis scored again on a one-yard run with 2:17 left in the game, but it was too little, too late. Greenwood id have the ball with 33 seconds left, but an interception foiled the Ranger's last bid.

Orioles' binge continues

Ripken, Murray homer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Cal Ripken Jr. and Eddie Murray hit home runs to support Mike Flanagan's six-hit pitching as the streaking Baltimore Orioles defeated the Minnesota Twins 4-2 Friday night for their 13th victory in 14 games.

Flanagan, 12-10, notched his fourth straight triumph while beating the Twins for the 12th time in a row since 1977.

Ripken connected for his 22nd homer of his rookie season after Rich Dauer walked in the first inning. Murray, who had four hits, hit his 25th homer in the third off Jack O'Connor, 6-6, giving him eight home runs and 24 runs batted in during his last 17 games.

The Orioles pushed across their final run in the sixth without a hit. After a walk, a hit batsman and a sacrifice bunt, Lenn Sakata was walked intentionally to load the bases and Dauer followed with a sacrifice fly.

Flanagan, who retired 14 straight batters after John Castino beat out a bunt single in the first, yielded two unearned runs in the seventh.

Tom Brunansky opened the inning with a bunt single and moved to second on a one-out throwing error by shortstop Ripken on Gary Ward's grounder. After another out, the runners advanced on a balk and scored on Mickey Hatcher's double.

Laga, Parrish hit homers for Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Mike Laga and Lance Parrish both drilled two-run homers to back the eight-hit pitching of Jerry Ujdur as the Detroit Tigers downed the Oakland A's 6-3 Friday night.

Wayne Gross gave the A's a brief 1-0 lead with his eighth homer, leading off the second. The Tigers charged back for a 2-1 lead in their half of the inning when Parrish singled and Laga, called up from Evansville this week, hit his first major league home run off A's starter Rick Langford, 10-15.

Enos Cabell drove in a sixth-inning run with an infield hit off reliever Tom Underwood, who came on in the sixth after Langford's elbow stiffened. In the seventh, Lou Whitaker singled and eventually scored on a single by Larry Herndon.

Parrish followed with his 27th homer to put Detroit ahead 6-1.

Mitchell Page doubled and scored on a single by pinch-hitter Cliff Johnson for the A's second run in the seventh. Oakland moved within 6-3 in the eighth when Dwayne Murphy belted his 21st homer.

Ujdur ran his record to 9-7, striking out nine and walking three in his sixth complete game.

Boston socks Mariners

BOSTON (AP) — A three-run homer by Reid Nichols and a solo shot by Tony Perez boosted Boston to a big lead Friday night and the Red Sox survived a Seattle explosion to defeat the Mariners 10-8.

The Red Sox, who won their sixth straight game, scored five runs in the second inning and four in the fifth for a 9-0 lead. Seattle then scored seven runs in the sixth on three-run homers by Todd Cruz and Al Cowens and a solo shot by Gary Gray.

Bob Stanley finally defused the assault to gain his 12th save and nail down the victory for starter John Tudor, 10-9. Floyd Bannister, 11-10, lasted just 1 1-3 innings and took the loss.

Boston shelled Bannister for six hits in the second, including two-run doubles by Dave Stapleton and Gary Allenson and a run-scoring double by Jerry Remy.

Perez started the fifth with his fifth homer of the year, off Ron Musselman. After Carney Lansford walked and Wade Boggs singled, Larry Andersen replaced Musselman and gave up Nichols' sixth homer.

But Tudor faltered in the sixth as Gray led off with his fifth homer. After Dave Henderson doubled and Jim Essian reached on an error, Cruz smashed his 12th homer.

A double by John Moses chased Tudor, and reliever Tom Burgmeier allowed a double to Julio Cruz and Cowens' 18th homer.

Stapleton's 12th homer of the year gave Boston a 10-7 lead in the seventh. Gray singled in Cowens, who had doubled, with Seattle's final run in the eighth.

Seattle finished with 17 hits and Boston had 16.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Veterans Toby Harrah and Andre Thornton smacked consecutive first-inning homers to lead the Cleveland Indians to a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Friday night.

With two out in the first inning, Harrah lifted his 25th homer into the left field seats off Jim Clancy, 11-13. Thornton followed with his 29th homer, a line drive over the center field fence. Larry Milbourne lined a run-scoring single in the fourth to give the Indians a 3-0 lead.

John silences Brewers on eight hits for Angels

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tommy John scattered eight hits in his first game for California while Bobby Grich cracked a two-run homer and Juan Beniquez added a two-run triple, leading the Angels to a 5-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Friday night.

John, 11-10, acquired by the Angels from the New York Yankees on Tuesday, allowed two unearned runs, struck four and walked one.

Milwaukee's loss trimmed their American League East lead to 3 1-2 games over second-place Boston and 4 games over Baltimore, which both won Friday night.

The Angels overcame a 2-1 deficit against loser Bob McClure, 10-7, in the sixth as Rod Carew led off with a single, extending his hitting streak to 18 games. Carew moved to second on a groundout and Reggie Jackson walked.

Don Baylor forced out Jackson, putting runners at first and third, and Beniquez then tripled when left fielder Mark Brouhard missed a sliding catch try. Grich followed with his 16th homer.

California's Brian Downing opened the game with his 23rd homer. It was the sixth time this season that Downing has homered as a leadoff hitter, tying a American League record shared by Eddie Joost of Philadelphia, Eddie Yost of Detroit, Tommy Harper of Milwaukee and Bert Campaneris of Oakland.

The Brewers took a 2-1 lead in the second when Ted Simmons singled and scored on a double by Gorman Thomas. Jim Gantner singled in Thomas.

Royals 5, Yanks 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Willie Wilson, the American League's batting leader, legged out his 10th career inside-the-park home run and Frank White delivered a two-run single Friday night, helping Kansas City to a 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

Vida Blue, 11-9, survived a shaky start while the loss went to rookie Jay Howell, 0-1, who was making his Yankee debut.

George Brett led off Kansas City's four-run, fourth inning with a double and scored one out later on a single by Willie Aikens to tie the score 2-2. After Steve Hammonds' single, both runners moved up on a passed ball and John Wathan drove in Aikens with a single.

Dave LaRoche relieved Howell, and Wathan stole his 32nd base. White then looped a single to center, scoring Hammonds and Wathan for a 5-2 Kansas City lead.

The Yankees stranded five runners the first three innings. Willie Randolph walked leading off the first, took second on a passed ball and scored on a double by Ken Griffey, who was 4-for-4. In the third, Lee Mazzilli walked, went to third on Griffey's single and scored on Dave Winfield's sacrifice fly.

Browns Modell accuses Davis of flouting NFL

CLEVELAND (AP) — Al Davis, who spurned the National Football League by moving the Raiders from Oakland to Los Angeles this year, is flouting the league again by televising the Raiders' home preseason games in Los Angeles, says Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell.

Modell has sent a message to Davis, managing general partner of the Raiders, objecting to local television coverage of Friday's game between the Browns and Raiders in Los Angeles.

Modell said Davis is continuing his defiance of the league by ignoring its rules for televising games.

"All I'm trying to do is protect the by-laws of the National Football League," Modell said, calling the televising of the game in the Los Angeles area "another example of the Raiders violating rules."

"What's next? Will I see (University of Georgia running back) Herschel Walker on the field Saturday night for the Raiders?" Modell asked.

Davis could not be reached at the Raiders' offices in Los Angeles and Oakland late Friday afternoon. No other Raiders officials were available for comment at those offices.

Davis reportedly has contended that the league has no jurisdiction in the matter, since it involves an exhibition game.

The Raiders' contest with Green Bay at the Los Angeles Coliseum was televised in the Los Angeles area last week and attracted an estimated 2 million viewers.

Keeping it in the family

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Russell Causby and Josei Henson expected to take active roles in their children's weddings, but they didn't expect to be saying the vows.

That's what will happen today at 2 p.m. when Causby, 57, marries Mrs. Henson, 46.

At the same time, Causby's youngest daughter, Hazel Marie Causby, 17, will marry Mrs. Henson's oldest son, Thomas Dywan Henson, 26; and Causby's second son, Irving Knight Causby, 28, will wed Mrs. Henson's youngest daughter, Frances Lavonne Henson, 19.

"When people hear about it they ask what relation we will be to each other," Russell Causby said. "It really flips you out. It's a hard situation to figure out. I guess we'll be our own grandma and grandpa."

Dywan Henson tried to explain some of the complications.

"Russell will be my stepfather and also my father-in-law. Marie will be my wife plus my stepsister. My mother also will be my mother-in-law," he said.

Russell Causby, a retired truck driver whose wife died about a year ago, said he met Mrs. Henson three years ago at Independent Baptist Church. Her husband died three years ago.

"She and my first wife were close friends. We started courting three months ago and decided two weeks ago to get married," he said.

Dywan and Marie also met at church while Irving and Lavonne met at a park in Valdese. Both couples have only been dating about a month although they have known each other longer.

Prince Claus

THE HAGUE (AP)— Prince Claus, husband of Dutch Queen Beatrix, was admitted to the University Hospital of Nijmegen Thursday for an undisclosed ailment, the Dutch Government Information Service announced.

Spokesman Henk Bax said that the 55-year-old prince "had not been feeling well" the last few weeks. Bax declined to specify the nature of the prince's symptoms.

On Wednesday, Claus was feeling ill and canceled an appearance in The Hague where he was scheduled to deliver a short speech, said Bax. He added that the Royal Family's physician then suggested a general medical checkup.

Prince Claus will be examined by several medical specialists, Bax said.

Claus expects to be released from the hospital on Monday, his 56th birthday, Bax said.

Andrews

CHICAGO (AP) — Maxene Andrews, one of the singing Andrews Sisters, has been hospitalized after suffering a heart attack this week.

Miss Andrews, 66, was admitted to Northwestern Memorial Hospital on Monday, was being treated in the coronary care unit and was expected to remain in the hospital for 10 days, said a spokeswoman who asked not to be identified.

Miss Andrews had completed a two-week cabaret performance in suburban Evanston the day before being admitted.

The Andrews Sisters — Maxene, La Verne and Patty — reached the height of their popularity in the 1940s. La Verne died in 1967.

DEKALB, Ill. (AP) — Computer analysis indicates that this year's Miss America likely will be Miss North Carolina, says a college professor who has predicted correctly two of the last three winners.

Northern Illinois University Professor George Miller said Thursday his computer study has led him to a preliminary prediction that Elizabeth Gray Williams, 22, a Shelby, N.C., resident and graduate of Converse College in Spartanburg, S.C., probably will be chosen in the Sept. 11 finals.

Miller said the computer gave Miss Williams, a 5-7, 112-pound musician with brown hair, green eyes and a figure measuring 36-24-36, a one-in-five chance of taking the title.

The professor also listed the 10 most likely finalists as being from North Carolina, Texas, Colorado, Maine, Washington, Illinois, Ohio, Minnesota, Connecticut, and Oregon.

Hubbard comes from tradition of 'outlaw' country music

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

ODESSA — His voice on the phone has the qualities often associated with a good old country boy; his words come in a rough, yet soft-spoken drawl which conveys the sense of someone unassuming and polite.

The drawl is deceptive. It sounds slow, yet as his words gather momentum, they spill over each other. He still has that country boy drawl, but it's delivered with a quickened intensity.

Singer, songwriter and musician, Ray Wylie Hubbard comes from that tradition of country music that some call progressive. Others refer to it as redneck rock. Most agree it's outlaw music.

Ray Wylie Hubbard

Hubbard's reason for calling was simple. He and his band, composed of Bob Livingston, John Inmon and Paul Pearcy, are playing outside Odessa this weekend at the Honky Tonk Under the Stars.

With 20 acts listed on the entertainment bill, Honky Tonk Under the Stars promises to provide those who go with music from 2 p.m. today to 2 a.m. Sunday, starting again at 2 p.m. and shutting down around 1 a.m. Labor Day.

Tickets may be purchased at Endless Horizons, Midland and Odessa, and Suds Unlimited.

When asked what he plans on playing, Hubbard replied, laughing, "Anything we can get away with. It depends on the crowd. We're going to do a bunch of new songs; we'll do a little bit of everything. I never know what we're going to do; that keeps me on my toes."

Hubbard's musical past has been intwined with some of the same names he went to school with in Dallas — Michael Murphey and B.W. Stevenson.

As for Murphey, Hubbard said, "He got me started. He was a senior and I was a junior. He played at the assemblies and, you might say, it inspired me.

"I play with some of his old cohorts and we've been together about three years," Hubbard said, referring to his current band.

Livingston first worked for Hubbard in 1970 in Red River, N.M. When he left Red River, he went to Austin and worked with an old friend of Hubbard's, Murphey, and with Jerry Jeff Walker.

It was Livingston who, to fill a gap in a Dallas show when Walker broke a string, stepped up to the mike and began to sing "Up Against the Wall, Redneck Mother," written by Hubbard. Walker liked it and included it on his Viva Terlingua album.

Livingston and Inmon were both members of Walker's Lost Gonzo Band, with Inmon also having previous experience working with Murphey, Livingston and Gary P. Nunn.

Although Hubbard admitted that "sometimes traveling gets old," he said, "The band I have now, we really like it. It's the best fun I've had in some time."

When asked if he was, as his biography stated, a soft-core cynic, a shameless cigarette bum and a semi-good eight ball player after a couple of beers, Hubbard replied, "You can tell that was written about five years ago.

"The first part is true I guess, but I no longer smoke or drink beer. I quit hard liquor five years ago.

"I married five years ago and have a 4-year-old son," he said, adding, "There are more important things than going out and having a good time. I quit everything. I didn't need that stuff to have fun."

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 150 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 15.50%.

Tired of Searching?

MLS

Just like many Midlanders you want to provide your family with the best home you can. You want your new home in a modern, well planned Midland neighborhood that is both attractive and convenient. And of course you want to be able to afford the kind of home that suits your needs and tastes. Those are sensible goals but not an easy task. Yet BROOKEHAVEN has some answers. And among them a few pleasant surprises.

Through a uniquely exclusive program of new home selections, BROOKEHAVEN will eliminate the worry and confusion often associated with searching for a new home. Instead of "house hunting" BROOKEHAVEN will enable you to shop for your new home amid a variety of distinctive styles, floor plans, and color schemes.

You will actually have five completely furnished model homes in which to browse – as much as you like. Each home will be furnished and accented according to its own architectural style and motif.

They are beautiful, and they will each be on display, with one thought in mind: that you not only be able to afford and finance the home of your dreams but also that your family can shop for that home with the ease and pleasure home buying could be.

(Watch for our Grand Opening!)
