Hostages say Shiites 'growing impatient'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Four kidnapped Americans sent a letter to President Reagan Friday, appealing to him to negotiate their release because their Shiite Moslem captors were "growing impatient."

"It is in your power to have us home by Christmas," the four men said in a letter addressed to Reagan and delivered to The Associated Press in Beirut. "Will you not have mercy on us and our families and do so?"

A White House spokesman said Friday night that the United States will not negotiate concessions to terrorists — but is "prepared to talk to obtain the safe release of our hostages" in Lebanon.

Edward Djerejian, deputy press secretary for national security affairs, said the Reagan administration has offered to talk with anyone who can help secure the release of the six Americans missing in Beirut, including the kidnappers who hold them.

The letter was the first public appeal by the group of hostages for negotiations to obtain their freedom.

They said they would be killed if any attempt was made to rescue them. The letter also said they were being held in primitive conditions and their physical and mental health was deteriorating.

Djerejian's remarks seemed to signal a change in emphasis from earlier White House comments. He restated the administration position in terms that put the emphasis on a refusal to make concessions or deals with terrorists.

In the first Washington response to the message, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "The president's policy has not changed as far as negotiating with terrorists and will not change. We do not negotiate with terrorists."

"Until we see the letters, we cannot verify either that they are genuine or when they were written," he added. "We remind the kidnappers that we hold them fully responsible for the well-being of their captives. We call upon the kidnappers to release the American and all other hostages in Lebanon forthwith."

Speakes said Reagan had been briefed on news reports about the letter and the U.S. Embassy in Beirut was examining it to verify its authenticity. The handwriting of two of the hostages was verified by former co-workers or relatives in Beirut.

An unidentified young man threw a package containing the handwritten appeal to Reagan at the feet of a guard outside the Associated Press bureau in Beirut and told him to deliver it to the news agency.

The parcel was a blue folder, sealed with transparent tape. It contained several other letters, including ones to the families of each hostage.

One of the four hostages is Terry Anderson, chief AP correspondent for the Middle East, who was seized in Beirut on March 16. AP staff members said they recognized Anderson's handwriting in two of the letters and his signature.

It has been the Reagan administration's policy not to negotiate with terrorists, but the letter said "there is no alternative."

U.S. 'prepared to talk' to obtain hostages' release

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House spokesman said Friday night that the United States will not negotiate concessions to terrorists — but is "prepared to talk to obtain the safe release of our hostages" in Lebanon.

Edward Djerejian, deputy press secretary for national security affairs, said that White House policy has not wavered. But he also said that the administration has offered to talk with anyone who can help secure the release of the six Americans, including the kidnappers who hold them.

Four of the hostages signed a letter delivered to The Associated Press bureau in Beirut, urging President Reagan to negotiate for their release and saying he could have them home by Christmas.

In the first White House response to that message, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said: "The president's policy has not changed as far as negotiating with terrorists and will not change. We do not negotiate with terrorists."

Djerejian's remarks seemed to signal a change in emphasis.

On Capital Hill, a conservative California congressman, Rep. Robert K. Dornan, proposed negotiations, saying in a statement he was ready "to do whatever I can to begin a negotiations process that brings freedom" to the hostages.

Speakes said Reagan was briefed on news accounts of the open letter addressed to him by four of the hostages.

The letter was dated at 1 p.m. (5 a.m. CST) Friday. One of the signatures was that of Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, held hostage since March. In a separate letter to his family, Anderson used personal information only he would have known.

In saying the terrorists would be held responsible for all hostages held in Lebanon, Speakes said this included William Buckley, political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, and Peter Kilburn, a librarian at American University in Beirut, who did not sign the letter. A group called the Islamic Jihad claims to have executed Buckley, and published what it said was a photograph of his body.

Friday night, Djerejian restated the administration position in terms that put the emphasis on a refusal to make concessions or deals with terrorists.

He also emphasized a willingness to establish direct contact with the kidnappers. "We have even offered to talk with the abductors, but that has never been responded to in a positive sense," he told the AP.

Meanwhile, Walter R. Mears, vice president and executive editor of The Associated Press, and Charles J. Lewis, chief of the AP's Washington bureau, discussed the new developments Friday with Richard Murphy, assistant secretary of state for the Middle East, and Robert Oakley, director of the office of counter-terrorism.

Mears said he and Lewis were told the administration "would like very much" to talk with kidnappers. "Any inhibition against contact and communication is not on the part of the U.S," he said.

Asked whether he had asked the administration to negotiate with the captors, Mears said, "No, the AP does not have a foreign policy."

Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine, who has been in office for the past 21 years, will be honored at 7 p.m. today at the Holiday Inn Holidome by the Midland County Young Democrats.

Pine 'small cog in wheel' of justice

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The unassuming fellow likely would pass for "Mr. Congeniality" in most any situation. But mostly he's simply "Judge Pine" or just plain Bob.

He's appreciated.

His wife says he's a bit peculiar, loves his work and family, but just doesn't have the knack for being a clown. She does.

Others who know him say he's compassionate, personable and good at what he does.

The happy man is Robert Henry Pine, Midland County justice of the peace who, at 70, is approaching his 21st year in office. He has no notion of retiring.

"It's kind of hard to say," he said of the appeal the job holds for him. "It's interesting work — somewhat of a public service to the community. You feel like you're doing something worthwhile."

Pine, who came into the office in late 1964 as a Democrat, will be honored at 7 p.m. today by the Texas Young Democrats of Midland County in the Holiday Inn Holidome in far west Midland.

"You're part of the judicial system, though it is a small cog in the wheel," Pine said of his work. "This is the basic — where the foundation starts."

Pine's role in the judicial process started on Dec. 1, 1964, when the Midland County Commissioners' Court appointed him to the post. On that very day, Judge Perry D. Pickett, then presiding judge of the 142nd Texas State District Court, swore him into office.

"I THINK MR. PINE will make a fine justice of the peace," Judge Barbara Culver, then county judge, said in 1964, when the commissioners unanimously opted for Pine.

Culver, now judge of the 318th Texas State District Court for Midland County and a Republican, hasn't been disappointed.

"I certainly appreciate all of the fine work he has done," she said.

Pine succeeded his good friend, David M. "Doc" Ellis, who died in office.

Doctor finds drinking wine chilling experience

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

After reading an article in the Nov. 11 Newsweek magazine entitled, "Tuning up with a little Riunite," a local physician examined a bottle of wine he and his wife had just finished.

"It was the same code numbers as in the article," said Dr. Eric Svenson, of Allison Cancer Center.

The Newsweek story, which described a recall of 400,000 cases of antifreeze-tainted wine by Riunite, listed "1.5 liter bottles of Rosato code-numbered 3321" as one of the wines that contained traces of diethylene glycol, a solvent used in antifreeze. Others included the 750 milliliter bottles of Riunite Lambrusco, Bianco and Rosato, code-numbered 1124 and the 750 milliliter bottles of Spumante code-numbered 813. The number appears on the labels and the caps; on the Spumante, it appears on foil covering the cork, said the article.

Svenson said that he felt "a little feverish" a couple of times, but was not sure if it was from the bad wine.

"I called up the health department and they said that it was no big deal and that it was only a trace," he said. "It was a little strange."

Jim Roberts of the Midland City/County Health Department, said he told Svenson earlier this week that the health department was unaware of the problem and that he should contact the state health department.

"It's a state or federal issue," said Roberts. "We are not aware of it."

On Friday, however, Roberts received a notice from the Texas Department of Health, Division of Food and Drugs.

In the communique, Director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Stephen Higgins urged health officials to warn consumers of the tainted wine.

"Consumers should return the wine containing diethylene glycol to the retailer," he said.

The antifreeze was thought to have gotten into the wine from leaky cooling equipment, according to Newsweek, with "the one facility that was the source of the contaminated shipments having been closed."

Higgins stated to date the ATF has tested over 1,000 brands of imported wine and has found diethylene glycol in 45 Austrian, five German and 12 Italian wines (with the Riunite).

"The testing is continuing and if additional wines are found to contain diethylene glycol, ATF will provide further consumer advisories as necessary," said Higgins.

Svenson said he had purchased the wine from Albertson's on Andrews Highway and returned the bottle Friday afternoon.

"I called them and they were very nice and thanked me and said they would take care of the problem," he said.

Charlie Stephens, manager of Albertson's, said he had only one other complaint.

High school football game echoes Civil War

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — When North battles South in Grand Prairie, it's normally just a matter of two high schools squaring off on the football field.

But a contest between South Grand Prairie and Grand Prairie became embroiled in another struggle — a black player's refusal to take the field under South Grand Prairie's Confederate flag symbol.

The flag remains an innocent symbol to many white Southerners, but an emblem of racism to many blacks.

About 40 people, most of them black, marched quietly Friday night across from Grand Prairie High School's Gopher Stadium and carried U.S. flags and placards that read "No More Racial Slurs; No More Rebel Flag" and "Use the U.S. or Texas Flag."

"It's strictly non-violent," said Lee Alcorn, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement for Colored People. "That's why we chose this particular street. There's less traffic and it decreases the potential for violence."

South Grand Prairie High School's rebel flag flew high over the Warriors' heads when they ran onto the field at the start of the game. Spectators waved about 40 miniature Confederate flags when the school song was played. The flag has been a school symbol since it was founded.

Although team players voted 36-6 Friday night to keep the flag, they did make one concession: instead of the traditional blue and red, the flag bore the school colors of red and gold.

Texas Revolution ensured U.S. 'secure from sea to sea'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Revolution of 1836 was the second-most important event in American history, says author and historian T.R. Fehrenbach.

Fehrenbach, author of "Lone Star: A History of Texas and the Texans," ranks the revolution that won Texas independence from Mexico ahead of the Civil War, which he said was "abortive," but behind the writing of the Declaration of Independence in importance.

"Consider the United States without Texas," Fehrenbach said. Without Texas, there also would be no Colorado, California or other states in between but rather "a large Mexican empire to the west."

"One fourth of American territory hinged on the fate of Texas in 1835 and 1836," he said, adding that if the United States ended at the western border of Louisiana, "there would be no nation secure from sea to shining sea as we know it now."

Church council could back Campbell's boycott

STATE

FORT WORTH (AP) — National Council Of Churches governing board members say if Campbell Soup Co. has not reached an agreement with farm workers by early next year it will endorse the workers' boycott of the firm.

After a narrow defeat Wednesday of a proposal to endorse a boycott of the soup company by Farm Labor Organization Committee members, church council executives said they would reconsider their vote.

The members decided Thursday morning to allow mediation to continue, but said they would join the boycott if no resolution is reached by Feb. 21, 1986, said Willette Bond, a spokeswoman for the council, which is composed of most major denominations.

The deadline is the same date as the council's next executive committee meeting.

Language in resolutions passed earlier during the council's meeting in Fort Worth this week reprimands Campbell Soup Co. for "participating in discussions agreed to...at a pace that reflects reticence."

A committee chaired by William Thompson, the former head of the United Presbyterian Church, has been mediating between Campbell and the farm workers represented by the Farm Labor Organization Committee.

"We believe that the growing church support for the boycott will move Campbell to settle with the farm workers and bring justice to the people who feed this country," said Blademar Velasquez, president of the Toledo-based FLOC.

"We are pleased with this endorsement and I know it will also send a message to other food processors profiting from the poverty of farm workers," he said in a statement.

Religious organizations already endorsing the farm workers' embargo include Ohio and Illinois Catholic bishops, United Methodist Boards Of Global Ministries and National Conference of Catholic Charities.

"It seems to me that the churches are precisely where they should be on the issue of justice for the farm worker," said the Rev. Avery Post, president of the United Church of Christ and a member of the board.

"Certainly the mediation efforts on the part of the National Council of Churches have been effective," he said, "but the churches also are called to be forceful advocates. In the light of a need for a contract for the 1986 season, the boycott is just a way to express that forceful advocacy."

FLOC began the boycott in 1978 after complaints from farmworkers that they are forced to endure substandard living conditions while harvesting crops that Campbell uses in its products.

Whitmire endorsement leads to suspension of black caucus

HOUSTON (AP) — Members of a black caucus within the Houston Professional Firefighter's Association were temporarily suspended for endorsing Mayor Kathy Whitmire after the association had endorsed her challenger, the chairman of the caucus said.

Herbert Sims, chairman of the 200-member black caucus, said Thursday that Lester Tyra, president of HPFFA, the firefighters' union, temporarily suspended the group from the union and also threatened to expel him.

But Tyra later said the group's executive committee voted to lift the suspension. Tyra said he didn't agree with the decision, but the group has to " stick together."

Tyra acknowledged he withdrew official recognition of the black caucus and filed union misconduct charges against Sims because of his endorsement.

The 450-member HPFFA threw their support to mayoral challenger Louie Welch at an Oct. 7 meeting.

Tyra said Sims violated the association's bylaws by endorsing Mrs. Whitmire because the group voted 117 to 24 to back Welch.

But Sims said he did not violate any HPFFA rules because he was not representing the caucus when he endorsed the mayor on Oct. 29. He said he was speaking on behalf of the Houston chapter of the International Association of Black Professional Firefighters of which he is president.

Loeffler jumps political gun with early ads

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Tom Loeffler is buying expensive, early-season television ads to introduce voters to himself, his family, his horse and his views.

The GOP primary is not until May, and a Loeffler aide Friday acknowledged that the TV ads that begin Saturday might be the earliest in Texas political history.

"But this is a unique race and interest is high very early," said deputy campaign manager John Weaver, who refused to say how much Loeffler is spending on the two-week ad campaign.

Former Gov. Bill Clements, former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance and Loeffler are the major GOP candidates to oppose Democratic Gov. Mark White.

Loeffler is not as well-known outside his congressional district as he needs to be to win the GOP nomination, Weaver acknowledged. The Hunt congressman began his campaign during the summer

"Getting into the race we all realized that Tom Loeffler had low name identification outside the 21st congressional district and Bexar County. But we also know he has no negatives, no baggage. He's the kind of candidate, once people get to know him, they like him," said Weaver.

The four ads will turn up on television stations in areas with strong Republican representation.

In an ad called "Family," Loeffler introduces his wife Kathy, daughter Lauren, sons Lance and Cullen and horse Liberty. Liberty stares over Loeffler's right shoulder as the camera hones in on the candidate.

"I'm running for governor of Texas because I think it's time we brought some Reagan horse sense into this state government of ours," Loeffler says.

A recurrent theme in the ads is, "Look, we're Texas, don't tell us it can't be done." All four ads end with an announcer saying, "Tom Loeffler, the one candidate Mark White hopes he never has to run against."

One of the ads identifies Loeffler as "a man who once played football with two broken wrists." Loeffler was a substitute defensive back at the University of Texas and played high school ball at Mason.

Hance campaign spokesman Byron Nelson was unavailable Friday for comment on the Loeffler ads. A Clements spokeswoman said Loeffler probably needs the early ads to boost his name identification.

Bingo operators warned

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock says as many as 200 bingo operators in Texas are in danger of losing their licenses because they do not contribute enough of their profits to charity.

"We've given them warning after warning that bingo money is to go to charity," Bullock said Friday. "And we've given them time to adjust their operations to meet that requirement."

Three-vehicle mishap sends three to hospital

From Staff Reports

A three-vehicle accident west of Odessa on Interstate 20 sent three people to a hospital Friday afternoon with cuts and bruises.

James Milton Crawford, 47, his wife Jeanie, 41, of Grand Falls and 20-year-old John Paul Calder of Odessa were treated and released from the Odessa Medical Center Friday.

The accident occurred at 4:40 p.m. about 8 miles west of Odessa on I-20.

Crawford and Jeanie Clopton of Monahans had stopped their vehicles for a earlier accident blocking I-20, when Calder's van struck Crawford's pickup which was then knocked into Ms. Clopton's car, the Department of Public Safety said.

All three persons injured were not wearing seatbelts, a DPS official said. Ms. Clopton was the only one wearing a seatbelt and she was not hurt, the official said.

In other law enforcement reports, about $5,000 in damage occurred to a trailer being used as a woodshop/workshop following a fire Friday afternoon.

Midland Fire Department officials said five units responded to the trailer fire at 5:50 p.m. Friday. The cause of the fire was unknown. The trailer is owned by Max McAdam, County Road 130 and Midkiff.

The Sheriff's Office said Mike Laughlin, Route 7, Box 433, reported the burglary of $450 in cash from Maintenance Plus at County Roads 1185 and 140.

Bob Cherry, a member of the South Grand Prairie Warriors' Quarterback Club, said the club had considered passing out small Confederate battle flags to their boosters and "walk right through them (pickets) with the flags." No one bothered the demonstrators.

"Everybody is blowing this thing out of proportion," Cherry said. "They are creating a monster out of nothing."

Blacks make up 8.5 percent of the school's student body.

Friday's annual contest between the two schools also included a kickoff of Grand Prairie's sesquicentennial featuring the six flags that have flown over Texas.

TEXAS

Speaking Thursday at a Sesquicentennial program for teachers, historians and journalists at the University of Texas, Fehrenbach said it was important in a strategic sense for the United States to control both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

"The Texas revolution gave the United States finite and, as it turned out, secure boundaries," he said.

The Texas Declaration of Independence, adopted March 2, 1836, during the siege of the Alamo, is modeled after the American Declaration of Independence. It was adopted largely by Americans who were frustrated by the centralized Mexican government and wanted to set up local government, Fehrenbach said.

"I see this not as a Texan document. It is an American statement. It is a statement of free men, no matter how brawling, no matter how much at each other's throats," Fehrenbach.

"Americans felt themselves free people with inalienable rights as free people.

Police seek man wanted in murder of West Odessan

From Staff Reports

■ More Local stories, Page 10C

ODESSA — Ector County authorities Friday night continued to seek a man who shot and killed a 24-year-old West Odessa man during the robbery of an adult bookstore early Friday morning.

Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss Friday afternoon identified the victim as Ricky Anchondo, 2404 Santa Cruz.

Kloss said Anchondo was shot once in the chest with a .22 caliber revolver as he emerged from a back room of a West Highway 80 adult bookstore, 6024 W. U.S. Highway 80, about 12:20 a.m. Friday.

According to Kloss, Bill Robinson, 210 N. Tom Green, told deputies investigating the shooting a man armed with a long-barreled revolver entered the store and demanded money and was in the process of cleaning out the store's cash register when the man subsequently identified as Anchondo came into the store from a back room.

According to store owner Robinson, the gunman yelled at Anchondo to stop and almost simultaneously fired one shot.

Kloss said Robinson said he saw Anchondo fall down, but thought the bullet had missed him — that Anchondo had merely dropped to the floor when he heard the shot. It was not until after the gunman fled the store with about $35 from the cash register that he (Robinson) realized Anchondo had been shot.

Anchondo was transported to Medical Center Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival. Peace Justice Manuel Valles ordered an autopsy.

The man being sought by law officers is described as a white male, about 6-feet, one-inches tall, weighing about 180 pounds, with blue eyes and wearing a red ski mask.

PINE

" 'Doc' Ellis, when he knew he was going to die (of an illness), asked me if I wanted it (the JP's job)," Pine recalled. "I said 'no.' "

But he changed his mind after other friends persuaded him to apply for the appointment, and Ellis' widow recommended Pine for appointment to the elective post.

Pine said Ellis worked at his job "real hard. I think he was dedicated to it, too."

Prior to entering the justiceship, Pine, a businessman, owned and operated an office-equipment company, which he first operated in 1947, and kept the business until the late 1970s.

"My wife (Mary Jo) was bossing it down there," said Pine, who worked nights and weekends at the office when he wasn't on JP duty. He did mechanical work at the shop. "When they went to electric typewriters and (electronic) calculators, that sort of left me out...I still worked on mechanical machines."

In his role as peace justice, Pine holds examining trials, issues arrest warrants, sets bonds, administers warnings and rights, handles traffic cases, holds inquests, acts as a coroner, issues felony complaints, holds suspension hearings to revoke driving privileges, and, among other procedures, performs marriages.

"He's a very special person," said Judy Massingill, his lead clerk. "He takes time to listen to people and has the understanding and patience to go with it."

Joe Agan, a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper who has dealt with Pine in 17 of his 20 years in the DPS, said Pine is "just top of the list."

"He's the best JP I've ever worked with," Agan said. "You can't say anything bad about him."

PINE DOESN'T deny his popularity among law-enforcement officers. But he doesn't claim perfection, either.

"I make myself available and am willing to be of service," Pine speculated on his rapport, "and my dedication to work."

The justice is mild-mannered.

"Well," he admitted, "I lose my cool once in awhile. I think everyone does once in awhile. I don't mean to hurt anybody's feelings."

Another DPS Trooper, Sgt. Andy Eubanks, said Pine conducts his affairs in the office, courtroom and elsewhere "in a business-like manner and in a business-like atmosphere.

"He handles his business in a fair and impartial manner."

Midland Police Officer David Shearod first met Pine in the mid-1960s before he was a policeman and while he was a student on a basketball scholarship at West Texas State University at Canyon.

Shearod, then 19, had been ticketed for driving a car with a headlamp out. Pine had forgotten the incident; Shearod hasn't.

"You did me right," he told Pine. "The judge put me on probation. That was before I ever thought about being a police officer." Shearod has been on the police force since 1968.

Lt. Earl Luckey, senior detective with the Midland Police Department, said he holds Pine in high regard.

"We owe a great deal of gratitude to that man and to his wife, 'Jo Jo, the Clown.' " Mrs. Pine, a teen-age counselor, has been a legitimate clown since the 1950s and views her sad-faced role as a "godly experience." Her husband once dressed up as a "happy clown" but flopped. The attention all went to the missus, who's an admirer of Emmett Kelly, the clown's clown.

"He has been a tremendous friend of the citizens of Midland in doing his job," said Luckey, who has a "tremendous amount of respect for that man. We consider him one of the finest justices of the peace in the state of Texas."

Luckey said Pine has "never refused" to answer calls on weekends or any hour of the night to assist law enforcement."

Janet Massey, chairman of the Midland County Democratic Party, said she views Pine as "compassionate as any JP could be. He's up on a pedestal as far as I'm concerned."

Mike Higgins, president of the Young Democrats in Midland, said Pine is a "very personable, very likable fellow. It's hard not to like him. He seems to enjoy his work."

"HE LOVES HIS job," said Mary Jo Pine, his wife of 53 years, "but not better than me. He does love his job, and it comes first."

Mrs. Pine said her husband has no hobbies; his work is his pleasure.

"He takes each case to heart. He's a peculiar little guy."

Pine is a faithful member of Lions International and has maintained a perfect-attendance record in the service club since 1947. "I feel like everybody should devote some time to community service." He is a Mason and a Baptist.

The Pines have reared four sons: Bobby, 51, a state penal inspector in Little Rock, Ark.; David, 42, a Midland building contractor; Larry, 40, a legitimate-theater actor in New York, and Glenn, a retired contractor who died at age 49 in 1984.

"Glenn was the hub of them all," Mrs. Pine said. "He told each one of them (his brothers) goodbye, hugged and kissed them. Our boys all loved each other very, very much."

"They were all characters," said Mrs. Pine, who's more of a dramatist, a ham, than her modest husband. "I grew up with them."

And she's just a bit fond of Pine, the justice of the peace.

"When he says something, we always listen," she said. "We may not do it. He's a good man. He's a good friend."

WINE

"There was a woman who brought a bottle in but she said she hadn't drunk from it," he said. "We only had about three bottles in each size on the shelf and they've all been pulled."

American Wine and Import Co. which distributes the wine in the area, insisted that the wine poses no public health threat.

"The wine is not bad," said a spokesman. "You'd have to drink literally thousands of bottles before it would do anything. Most of our people are not even doing anything about it."

"We've had a few complaints, but we are recalling the bottles upon request," he said.

According to the Newsweek article, diethylene glycol is poisonous in large quantities.

Zimbabwean blacks' acceptance of whites 'staggering'

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent

GURUVE, Zimbabwe (AP) — "We're bloody lucky, you know," allowed Mike McGrath on his 5,000-acre farm. "We can find things to complain about, but our life hasn't changed, really."

McGrath is a white who stayed here five years ago when Rhodesia, the breakaway British colony the whites called "God's Own Country," was forced to become independent, black-run Zimbabwe.

His assessment of conditions today is shared by other whites who stayed while others fled, some to neighboring South Africa where the white minority remains dominant but under pressure to give in as Rhodesia did.

Despite Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's often repeated wish for a one-party Marxist state in Zimbabwe, the private sector thrives. Some racial tensions exist, but most agree multiracialism is working well, even in the aftermath of a seven-year guerrilla war waged by black nationalists against whites.

"When I think what this place was like during the war, the blacks' acceptance (of whites) is absolutely staggering," said Charles Attwell, a South African zoologist. "I can't get over it."

Many, like Attwell, feel the average Rhodesian treated blacks far more harshly than South African whites do today.

"I was amazed," said Felicity Wood, a white Agriculture Ministry officer. "Going to school together, dying together in the hospital instead on the battlefield, those fears fell away immediately."

Salisbury, the capital, was renamed Harare, but it is still the cleanest city in Africa.

THE JACARANDAS are blooming in the Southern Hemisphere spring, and each gust of wind touches off a brilliant purple snowfall. Each morning, sidewalks are inches deep in blossoms until city crews carefully sweep them away.

Around Guruve, this little northern farming town, white farmers like McGrath grow tobacco and coffee, and meet for "sundowners" at the Horseshoe Club bar.

Perhaps 130,000 whites remain in Zimbabwe, half the number in 1980, among 8 million blacks.

Life is difficult now in South Africa, and the former Rhodesians there are moving back in growing numbers. Many are refused entry.

Zimbabwean authorities have ordered everyone with dual nationality to make a choice by December, and those who do not take Zimbabwean citizenship must apply for a residence permit.

Officials who tightly control the press declined to arrange an interview with a spokesman who could explain government policy toward returning whites. No figures on returnees were available.

Whites and blacks alike cite such bureaucracy and government control as a serious cause for concern, dulling what otherwise might be enthusiastic optimism.

"The pitfalls and potholes are unbelievable," said a white teacher whose pension application has been delayed for months despite an official friend's help. She is moving to London where, she said, her children can attend better high schools.

But white emigration, which averaged 1,800 a month in the first years of independence, is down to 1,000.

HARARE HOUSING costs have doubled in 18 months, according to Roger Senior, a leading real estate agent. Moving vans that once returned empty from South Africa are booked up months in advance.

An estimated 80 percent of Zimbabwe's abundant harvests this year came from 4,500 white commercial farms, just 800 fewer than there were in 1980.

Some whites remain because authorities permit immigrants to take out only 1,000 Zimbabwe dollars ($600) and a few pieces of furniture.

Mugabe reacted angrily in July when white voters gave former Prime Minister Ian Smith's hard-line party 15 of the 20 seats reserved for whites in the 100-seat Parliament.

Smith served as prime minister of Rhodesia from 1964 until 1979. In 1965, he unilaterally declared Rhodesia independent from Britain because it insisted on greater black representation in government.

Although Smith's supporters totaled only 55 percent of whites who cast ballots, Mugabe was stung by what he clearly considered a personal insult after trying hard to accommodate whites.

He dismissed Agriculture Minister Denis Norman, the only white among his senior ministers. Since then, however, the national mood has relaxed.

"We don't pay the slightest attention to what Mugabe says but wait to see how it goes, day by day," said one farmer who spoke only on condition of anonymity. "Government people advised us to do that. They're right."

Western diplomats express concern over what they call the domination by Mugabe's Shona Tribe over the minority Matabele. Anti-government dissidents terrorize parts of Matabeleland, around Bulawayo, and some white farmers have left because of that.

Mugabe is negotiating a political coalition with Joshua Nkomo, his Matabele opponent.

But the diplomats are encouraged by Zimbabwe's agricultural policy and its approach toward development.

"THEY ARE the best users of foreign aid on the continent," said Roy Stacey, Zimbabwe director of the U.S. Agency for International Development. "Much of it is channeled into the private sector."

Zimbabwe's agricultural extension service, widely regarded as the most effective in Africa, encourages new black farmers, including several who are moving into the once white preserve of Virginia tobacco.

Zimbabwe's maize (corn) crop of nearly 3 million tons last year equaled Rhodesia's best year, with 1 million tons available for export. About 900,000 tons were grown by black farmers, 45 percent more than the previous year.

Since 1980, health authorities have cut the infant mortality rate in half from 120 per thousand to 60 per thousand. School attendance has increased from 800,000 to 2.4 million. Officials are working to train more teachers to improve overall quality.

Adult literacy and family planning programs are pushed hard. State-run television campaigns for village health and conservation between such U.S. shows as the "A-Team" and "Gimme a Break."

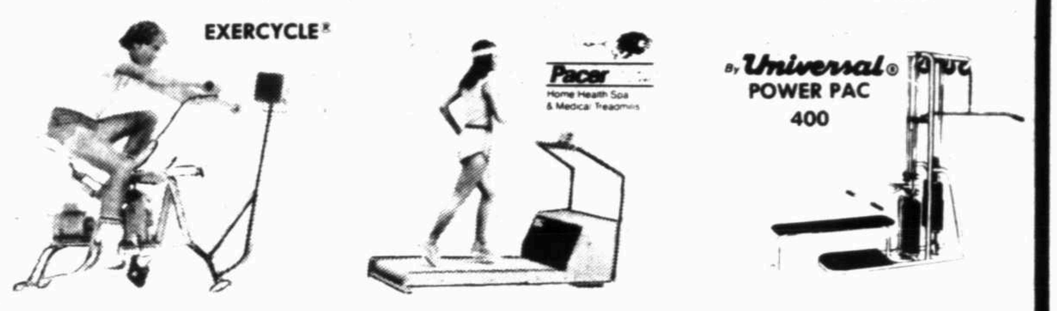

Until this season, Zimbabwe has been hard-pressed by three years of drought, and low world mineral prices cut deeply into foreign exchange.

Businessman and industrialists face rigorous currency controls.

But, if the rains hold, economists expect substantial growth.

State board rejects 'negative' history text

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education decided Friday not to recommend a U.S. history high school textbook because it took a "negative" attitude toward the nation's history since World War II.

"School children will read this book and think more went wrong the last 40 years than went right," said board member William McBride of San Antonio.

Board member Jack Strong of Longview had criticized the text, "Our Land, Our Time," by Coronado Publishers, on Thursday as attempting "to do a hatchet job on (President) Reagan."

Strong also was successful, 10-0, in requiring that all the authors of all direct quotations in a U.S. history book be identified as to political affiliation — "whether they are definitely known as a member of the Communist Party or the Ku Klux Klan. Students need to know where these people are coming from."

The motion by McBride to delete the Coronado text from those recommended for Texas schools the next six years and to replace it with a high school history book from McDougall, Littell publishers carried 6-5 in a preliminary vote.

The final vote will come at the board's formal meeting today.

The board, sitting as a committee of the whole, approved on voice vote without discussion five life science books that had been highly controversial in public hearings Thursday.

Several biologists and People for the American Way urged the board to delay recommending any life science books for junior high students until more detailed information about evolution could be included. The American Way organization said two of the books had been turned down by California as providing inadequate treatment of evolution.

"These life science books give a balanced, adequate treatment of the subject of evolution for 7th graders," State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said Friday in recommending adoption without any delays.

Arlene Ruffin of Dallas, a member of the State Textbook Committee, which screened the textbooks for the state board, said, "These are life science books, not biology texts. They are intended only to give an introduction to biology."

The board voted, 6-3, Friday to delete one recommended text for prekindergarten bilingual classes because it did not provide teacher instruction guides in Spanish.

"A lot of teachers in bilingual classes are not fluent enough to translate the teacher material," said board member Maria Elena Flood of El Paso. "They would have to do it outside the classroom on their own time."

A journalism text on "Mass Media and the School Newspaper" was approved but only with the understanding there would be corrections. One would eliminate a reference to the Cosmopolitan Magazine as "the housewife's Playboy."

Cause of fire in gas storage caverns probed

MONT BELVIEU (AP) — Investigators are attempting to uncover why three automatic shutoff valves failed, allowing gases from underground storage caverns to fuel the explosive fire that killed two men at the Warren Petroleum Co. gas storage facility earlier this week.

"These valves are supposed to sense a problem and then shut down fuel supplies to anything burning," Texas Railroad Commission spokesman Ray Grasshoff said Thursday.

Valves to 22 underground caverns closed automatically when a cloud of propane, ethane and butane gas from a severed pipeline ignited Tuesday morning, causing a series of explosions and a massive fire.

"Three valves were too hot to work — made inoperative by the blast," said Clay Hooper, a Warren Petroleum spokesman. The valves had to be manually closed several hours later by firefighters shielded by a wall of water.

The plant and community of about 1,700 sit on top of a salt dome that has 44 million gallons of petroleum products underneath.

Railroad Commission investigators sifted through debris Thursday.

Public 'increasingly aware' of farm problems

AUSTIN (AP) — While the Farm Aid concert and recent news coverage have made the public aware of the farm crisis, the Reagan administration remains seriously out of touch, the head of the National Farmers Union said Friday.

"The public is increasingly aware of the farm problems. Perhaps the best illustration of that is the Farm Aid concert," said Farmers Union President Cy Carpenter.

"The entertainers clearly reflect the mood of the public. They were reflecting a growing mood out there...that something must be done," he added.

However, Carpenter said, President Reagan and U.S. Department of Agriculture officials have failed to deal with the financial problems dogging agriculture.

"The largest and most important industry in this nation, perhaps the world, is facing bankruptcy," he said.

"The 1984 net farm income was barely enough to pay the interest on the farmers' debt; 1985 will be $10 billion less than 1984; 1986 will be lower than 1985, and 1987 will be lower than 1986, according to this Department of Agriculture.

"The situation will not only get worse, but according to their own projections it will stay worse. If anything approaching that happened on Wall Street, you would have people jumping out of windows."

Carpenter, a Minnesota farmer, was in Texas Friday to meet with state Farmers Union officials. He said the organization plans to campaign for congressional and U.S. Senate candidates next year who have "the courage and conviction to offset the dictatorial attitude of the Reagan administration" on farm problems.

"We need to take these steps to ensure that farmers will continue to control our agricultural system and to rebuild our rural communities and lending institutions."

Carpenter said President Reagan fails to realize the gravity of more than just farm finance problems.

"I think they're out of touch when you have a $2 trillion debt and indicate it isn't a serious concern to the economy, when you have nearly a $200 million balance of payments problem," he said.

Proposed AIDS quarantine draws full range of reaction, official says

AUSTIN (AP) — A plan to add AIDS to the state quarantine list has drawn a full range of reaction, according to the man who made the proposal.

"There are some folks who are very fearful of such things as a matter of principle. There also are rednecks who think we are not going far enough," State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein said Friday.

Bernstein wants the State Board of Health to allow quarantine as a last-resort measure in the battle against acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Under his proposal, AIDS patients could be quarantined if they are deemed a public health threat.

Marvin Wetchsensky, right, and Jim Brookins, handle air traffic control duties at Majors Field in Greenville, Texas.

Controllers make pilots feel safe

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Climbing one hundred and eleven steps to the Majors Field control tower makes the novice knee quake, but the world above the large, metal trap door is a steady one.

At first glance, it looks like a forest service fire tower — lots of glass, some radios, a phone and instruments with beeping lights funneling from every wall. It also bears some resemblance to the helm of the Starship Enterprise.

It is the work-day world of Marvin Wetchensky and Jim Brookins, air traffic controllers.

"November 8427 Gulf west of airport," the radio cackles. "Request landing instructions."

Wetchensky provides the information; he is in charge of planes within a five-mile radius up to 3,000 feet.

Brookins, his working partner of six years, is in the right-hand seat attending to ground control, handling all vehicular traffic on the runways.

The private Greenville airport handles a variety of traffic — training flights from other areas in touch-and-go landings, private pilots passing through, military flights and test flights from the military contractor located near the flightline, E-Systems.

Wetchensky and Brookins are employed by E-Systems and do not belong to the federal system of controllers.

"We are two of the few privately employed air traffic controllers around," Brookings says. "We both were military flight controllers for a long time while working at the same base together. Then, at separate times, we joined E-Systems."

They must meet strict qualifications and undergo annual physicals which have strict requirements, especially for eyesight. The two are also certified by the Federal Aeronautics Commission and, in fact, have all the qualifications of federal controllers. Both also are pilots.

The two controllers handle all traffic at the airport, working daytime hours. After hours, the airport becomes an uncontrolled facility demanding that pilots talk to each other on a set frequency, giving their location.

Brookings described the control system used during the day:

"The larger airports are all instrument landing facilities where teams of controllers handle large traffic loads with radar. We are a visual facility under most conditions. We give pilots the standard rectangular patten, and they are responsible for keeping an eye on each other. With poor visibility, we relinquish control to the Fort Worth Center which is set up to help a lot of smaller airports under its jurisdiction."

The controllers are also responsible for hourly weather reports to the Dallas Flight Service which disseminates the information throughout the country.

Resting on the control panel is a red phone. It is lovingly called the "crash phone" and is used in all emergencies to summon fire trucks and ambulances to the runway.

"We've never had to use that phone in the eight years that I have been here," Brookins said.

The daily routine of these co-workers exists in a vacuum connected to the outside world only through a chattering radio. The 10-by-10 room and six years together could make for a less-than-charming relationship, and mistakes.

Supervisor Jack Weathers clears up that notion: "I don't worry about them. Before they arrived, we had nothing but complaining and griping from pilots, and mistakes. When these two started working together, all that complaining changed and it has been this way for six years. If every supervisor had people like these two, it would be great."

E-Systems test pilot Don Pourch said, "These guys are professionals. A couple of days ago we had some equipment malfunction, and we didn't even have to ask these guys for help. They were there immediately asking if we needed emergency equipment."

E-Systems public relations officer John Sutton, also a pilot, said, "When things aren't perfect in the air, it is nice to hear those quiet, confident voices reach out to a lonely cockpit."

While there has never been a crash at the facility while these controllers have worked there, there have been some tense moments.

"We have had our share of minor problems. We get a lot of lost student pilots, and once we had a landing gear from a private plane collapse on landing. That pilot was pretty pale-faced when he got out," Wetchensky said.

Weinberger report confirms Soviets have violated Salt II, official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger will send President Reagan a report next week alleging the Soviet Union has continued to violate the SALT II arms control treaty even after Reagan overruled the Pentagon to extend it an extra year, according to a senior Pentagon official.

The official, who insisted on not being identified, said Weinberger will propose several options, including terminating the agreement or allowing it to be breached when the next Trident submarine is due to begin sea trials next summer.

The timing of the report is regarded as sensitive because it will come on the eve of Reagan's departure for the U.S.-Soviet summit and it could, in the view of some experts, adversely affect the climate for the talks. But officials said Reagan could decide not to make it public until after the summit.

Meanwhile, Paul H. Nitze, the president's chief arms control adviser, said Friday the United States and the Soviet Union are still trying to negotiate a statement of arms control guidelines for Reagan's summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Geneva Nov. 19-20.

He also said Washington wants the summit to be a success and he thinks Moscow does, too. He said the two leaders will discuss whether and when to meet again.

In an appearance before the Overseas Writers group, Nitze said the guidelines should embrace both offensive and Strategic Defense Initiative, also known as "Star Wars," defensive systems and provide direction for the U.S. and Soviet arms control negotiations in Geneva without trying to "define set limits."

"I personally think this would be a good idea and I think the executive branch agrees with that," said Nitze. He declined to predict whether he thought it would be done, however.

The Pentagon official said the report on SALT II violations will make it possible for Reagan to go to the summit "well-armed with information on what the Soviets have done after the president went the extra mile on SALT II."

"Anybody who expected the Soviets to take this gesture of good will and change their ways, was a bit naive," said the official.

The deadline for the SALT II report is Nov. 15. Reagan is to leave for Geneva the following day.

The report, still being written, is seen as a reflection of differences between the Pentagon and the State Department in approaching arms control. Weinberger was opposed to extending SALT II, while Secretary of State George P. Shultz was among several officials urging it be extended.

Soviets refuse to honor subpoena

RESERVE, La. (AP) — Congressional representatives presented a subpoena Friday to Soviet officials requiring a ship-jumping seaman to testify before Congress, but the Soviets responded that the document would not be honored, authorities said.

The Soviets were told the ship would not be allowed to leave New Orleans unless the seaman, Miroslav Medvid, went to Washington to testify next Tuesday, said Terrance Wear, a lawyer for the Senate Agriculture Committee.

"Since the subpoena has been served, under Customs regulations the ship cannot leave U.S. waters," Wear said.

He said U.S. officials were not allowed to board the Marshal Koniev on Friday.

Wear said the Soviets do not believe U.S. laws apply to them on their ship.

He said representatives of the Soviet ship and the Soviet embassy had assured them that Medvid, a Ukrainian seaman who jumped ship twice and raised an international ruckus over whether he wanted to defect, was aboard and in good health.

"The ball's in the Soviet's court," said David Sullivan, an aide of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who signed the subpoena for the Senate Agriculture Committee which he heads.

"If they choose to ignore our subpoena, then they stand out in that stream at anchor until further matters are clarified," he said.

Sullivan said the Soviets also insist they will deal only with the State Department, but he said they had been negotiating with lawyers for the U.S. Senate during the day.

Wear and Sullivan had boarded the ship late Thursday to deliver the subpoena, written in English, Russian and Ukrainian, but were turned back.

Soviet diplomats arrived at the ship shortly after noon.

Earlier, demonstrators waving U.S. and Ukrainian flags gathered on the Mississippi River levee and used a bullhorn to call to the ship in Ukrainian.

Wear would not comment Friday on possible legal challenges the Soviets could make in response to a subpoena.

"There are a hundred what-ifs and I don't want to comment on any of the possible scenarios," said Helms' press secretary, Ron Phillips.

In Washington, presidential press secretary Larry Speakes said that despite reports to the contrary, the U.S. Customs Service had not decided whether the ship would be detained until the subpoena had been served.

"They have not — I know they have not," he said.

Laos tentativley agrees to U.S. search for MIAs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, poised to begin its first excavation of a B-52 crash site inside Vietnam later this month, has reached a tentative agreement with Laos to conduct additional searches there for missing American servicemen, the Pentagon said Friday.

Richard L. Armitage, the assistant defense secretary for international security affairs, also announced an Army laboratory had succeeded in identifying the remains of five more Americans killed in Vietnam, including the first U.S. pilot to crash in North Vietnam 21 years ago.

Armitage said details of the new agreement with Laos remain to be worked out, and no dates have been established for starting new excavations at crash sites. But he added the Latians have accepted the idea of "multiple-site excavations" during the six-month dry season that just began.

Laos permitted an American team to conduct a crash excavation for the first time last February. That project led to the recovery of 13 missing American servicemen.

Armitage led off a Pentagon news conference on Friday by confirming earlier reports by diplomatic sources in Bankok that the first Vietnam excavation would begin Nov. 18.

He said an 11-member U.S. squad would oversee the work at the B-52 crash site in a paddy about nine miles outside Hanoi. The American team will be assisted by 10 Vietnamese workers. Armitage said the work would take 10 to 12 days and that the U.S. government would bear the estimated $150,000 cost.

The B-52 that crashed at the site is believed to have gone down in December 1972, he said, but the Pentagon has no idea how many remains of servicemen might be recovered. A B-52 carried a normal crew of six.

"This combined operation marks the first time U.S. personnel have been allowed to participate in a recovery operation in Vietnam since 1975 (when the war ended)," Armitage said. "We hope this excavation will prove to be the first of many efforts which lead to the fullest possible accounting of missing U.S. servicemen."

Armitage announced several other developments in the continuing effort to account for missing Americans.

He said the Vietnamese government recently informed the United States it would turn over seven more suspected remains of U.S. servicemen. Vietnam has also agreed to hold another meeting of technical experts from the two countries on Nov. 13 to discuss the next steps in the search.

And an Army laboratory in Honolulu has identified five more remains that were among a group turned over by the Vietnamese this summer, Armitage said. Among the five is the first American pilot to have crashed in North Vietnam 21 years ago.

The Vietnamese returned 26 sets of remains to the United States on Aug. 14. Nineteen of the 26 were identified last month. Of the remaining seven, five were identified Friday; efforts are continuing to identify the sixth.

Friends build home for paraplegic

PLAIN CITY, Ohio (AP) — Neighbors and friends recently raised the roof for Doug Mitchell and his family, building a three-bedroom house in a show of compassion for the wheelchair-bound man.

"It's hard to believe I'm in this chair. I should be out there pounding nails," Mitchell, 21 and a paraplegic, said as about 40 volunteers from Sharon Mennonite Church built the house worth an estimated $80,000.

Doug and his parents, Carl and Betty Mitchell, are not even members of the local Mennonite church. They belong to Plain City Methodist Church, but raising a house or barn in a day is a traditional Mennonite gesture for neighbors in need.

The new farm house has ramps, wide doors and halls and a special bathroom to accommodate Mitchell's wheelchair.

"The old house is just not set up for a wheelchair," said the elder Mitchell.

He said several neighbors took time from harvesting to help with early stages of construction.

Mitchell was injured when he was thrown from a pickup truck in December 1984. After a 5½-month stay at University Hospital in Columbus, he returned to his parents' farm in a wheelchair. He can use his arms, but has no use of his legs and very limited use of his fingers.

"It's tough to accept help," said Carl Mitchell, who farms 720 acres about 20 miles northwest of Columbus. "But I guess if I was on the outside I'd do the same.

The Plain City Lions Club has contributed $1,000 toward the $3,500 cost of training a dog to help Mitchell in daily living. The dog is being trained by Happy Canine Helpers, a nonprofit organization in Johnstown, Ohio.

A three-sport athlete in high school, he has learned to adapt.

Judge releases 'Hurricane' Carter from prison

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Rubin "Hurricane" Carter, after nearly 20 years in prison, was freed Friday by a federal judge who a day earlier had thrown out the former boxer's triple murder conviction and said "human decency" required his immediate release.

U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin rejected prosecutors' claims that Carter, a onetime middleweight boxing contender, remains a "violent, dangerous man."

He granted a writ of habeas corpus freeing the 48-year-old Carter shortly before 3 p.m., based on his ruling Thursday that Carter's 1977 conviction was based on racism and concealed evidence.

That trial had been the second for Carter in the 1966 murders of a Paterson bartender and two tavern customers. Carter is black; all the victims were white.

"If my ruling is correct, Mr. Carter's past imprisonment may have been a travesty. To continue it would be even a greater one," Sarokin said. "Human decency mandates his immediate release."

When the judge issued his ruling, Carter smiled broadly and the courtroom broke into applause. Carter embraced his alleged accomplice John Artis and his attorneys.

"Wow, man, wow!" shouted Artis, who was paroled in 1981. "We finally made it!"

"I really feel like having a blast," Artis added. "It's New Year's already."

Carter avoided reporters and photographers as he left the courthouse immediately after being freed.

Sarokin said, "To deny the relief sought would be inconsistent with my own ruling and render compassion meaningless."

"I cannot in the face of the conclusions reached in my opinion and the injustices found permit Mr. Carter to spend another day or even an hour in prison, particularly considering that he has already spent almost 20 in confinement based in part upon a conviction which I have found to be so constitionally flawed," the judge said.

Following the ruling, the Passaic County prosecutor's office asked Judge John J. Gibbons of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for a stay. But Gibbons rejected the request, and the prosecution then appealed for a hearing before the full appellate court. The request will be acted on at a later date.

If the full appeals court refuses to overturn Sarokin's ruling, then prosecutors will take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court, said John Goceljak, Passaic County first assistant prosecutor.

"If you look at defendant Carter's background, every aspect of his background suggests a man who is a risk to the community," Ronald G. Marmo, the county's chief assistant prosecutor, argued before Sarokin.

NATION IN BRIEF

ESM settlement announced

MIAMI (AP) — Twenty-one creditors and the state of Ohio will share $35 million in a tentative settlement reached Friday between the trustee of the collapsed ESM Government Securities Inc. and lawyers for most of the company's customers.

"I want to stress that this is just the first step," said Thomas Tew, court-appointed trustee for the Fort Lauderdale-based securities company that was shut down in March owing about $315 million to dozens of creditors. The company's collapse led to a run on deposits at savings and loan institutiions in Ohio last spring.

The proposal still must be approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Miami.

"The buzz word is that they (lawyers) have agreed to recommend the settlement to their clients," Tew said. "Other creditors may object, or clients may reject the advice of their counsel."

Under the proposed settlement, which Tew negotiated with dozens of lawyers during the past two months, $10 million would go to the state of Ohio as liquidator for Home State Savings Bank. The bank, which had invested heavily with ESM, lost about $150 million and collapsed March 8 after runs by depositors. Home State's failure caused runs at other state-charted savings and loans, prompting Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste to order temporary closings of 69 other state-chartered institutions.

Rajneesh pleads innocent

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Indian guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh pleaded innocent Friday to immigration-fraud charges and was ordered held on $500,000 bail after being returned to Oregon in federal custody from North Carolina.

In setting the bail, U.S. District Judge Edward Leavy said the guru could not travel in airplanes or leave Oregon.

A federal magistrate in North Carolina denied bail to the guru because of the possibility that he might flee, but his attorneys had asked Leavy to overturn the ruling and set bail.

Rajneesh and seven disciples are accused of covering up sham marriages between some American followers and foreigners who came with the guru to the United States. He also is charged with lying to immigration officials to conceal his intent to remain permanently in the United States after he arrived in this country in 1981.

Judge questions policy

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A federal judge in the alien-smuggling conspiracy trial of 11 sanctuary movement members asked the prosecution Friday whether government policy lets some violators off the hook for assisting aliens who enter the country illegally.

U.S. District Court Judge Earl H. Carroll told prosecutor Donald M. Reno Jr. to determine what policies the government has had, past and present, concerning the prosecution of illegal aliens and those who transport and otherwise aid illegal aliens.

The judge earlier Friday heard testimony from former U.S. Attorney Michael D. Hawkins, who said a general agreement once existed among some U.S. attorneys in the Southwest that growers would not be prosecuted under some immigration statutes for merely providing housing for illegal aliens.

Guerrillas wanted to try Betancur

WORLD

BOGOTA, Colombia (Ap) — Leftist guerrillas who seized the Palace of Justice and held it for two days against an army assault had planned to put President Belisario Betancur on trial before a hostage Supreme Court, according to a statement their organization delivered Friday. More than 100 people died.

The statement from the April 19 Movement, known as M-19, was slipped under the door of the AP office in Bogota. It said Betancur was to have been tried for what the rebels said was betrayal of his promise to make peace with Colombia's insurgent groups.

Gunmen who entered the building Wednesday morning took 23 of the 24 Supreme Court justices captive and demanded that Betancur come to the Palace of Justice. The other judge was in a hospital at the time of the raid.

The siege in downtown Bogota, which ended when soldiers swept into the burned-out marble building, resulted in the deaths of half the Supreme Court justices, all 41 of the invading rebels, at least 17 soldiers and police and 39 other people, army sources said. The known dead totalled 109, the sources said.

The statement delivered to the AP office carried the signatures of five members of the M-19 high command — Luis Otero, Andres Almarales, Alfonso Jacquin, Guillermo Elvecio Ruiz, and Ariel Sanchez, the only signatory not killed in the Palace of Justice. He did not take part in the raid.

Betancur and the "minority oligarchy" were to be tried, it said.

Another statement delivered at the same time apparently was drawn up after the guerrillas at the palace were killed. It said the rebels' only purpose was to seize and make public several documents of a presidential peace commission.

Two men who slipped the statement under the door ran away before reporters could ask them about the contradiction between the two statements.

Tape recordings played to news media over telephones during the siege also indicated the guerrillas planned a mock trial of the president, giving the same reason as the statement.

Tragedy also came to Dante Fiorillo, the ailing justice, who had undergone heart surgery earlier this year and was in Bogota's Military Hospital.

The daily El Espectador said he clutched his arm, grimaced and fell dead when told guerrillas had taken his colleagues hostage.

The guerrillas apparently thought seizing the justices would force Betancur to meet their demand that he come to the palace. Instead, he sent the army on the fiercest response to terrorism Colombia has seen in 30 years of insurgency.

By late Friday, the army had taken 92 bodies from the charred interior of the marble building fronting Bolivar Plaza, a police colonel told The Associated Press. He would not give his name.

Many bodies were burned beyond recognition by a fire that swept through the building Wednesday night.

Seventeen of the rebels were found dead in a third-floor restroom, apparently from mass suicide, the newspaper El Tiempo said, quoting government sources it did not name.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said the United States supports the government's use of force. "We are deeply shocked by this senseless act of terrorist violence perpetrated by the M-19 guerrillas," he said. "It represents a fundamental atttack on the institutions of democracy and we condemn these lawless attacks."

Betancur said the rebels tried to burn court documents involving the cases of drug traffickers. The army claimed last year that guerrillas had entered the marijuana and cocaine traffic to get money for weapons and ammunition.

Witnesses said the guerrillas slipped into the building through the basement garage and hid in a stolen telephone company truck.

Six men in custody for killing of Mexican anti-drug squad

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Six men were in federal custody Friday in connection with the slayings of 22 members of an anti-drug squad by alleged drug traffickers in southern Mexico, authorities said.

Members of three families have been identified as the "authors" of the Nov. 1 ambush, Interpol-Mexico Cmdr. Florentino Ventura said. Mexican officials often use the word to identify people who plan a crime but do not necessarily participate in its execution.

One suspect admitted during questioning that he killed three of the drug agents, the government newspaper El Nacional reported Friday, quoting a police investigator who demanded anonymity.

More than 60 people were questioned in the week since the bodies of five federal policemen, 12 state and local police and five civilian assistants were discovered near a remote village in Veracruz state along the Gulf of Mexico. Two people who lived in the area also were slain.

Some of those questioned were detained and later released, the Veracruz state government said through its spokesmen.

Ventura said late Thursday the case was "virtually cleared up in its totality." He said the names of the six suspects flown to Mexico City and other details would be released Friday by the federal Attorney General's Office here.

However, the Attorney General's press office said late Friday afternoon it had not been authorized to release any new information.

Counties forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Saturday, early morning cloudiness, otherwise fair. Becoming warmer, with highs lower 80s. Wind southwest 10 to 20 mph and gusty.
Saturday night, mostly fair with lows lower 50s.
Sunday, mostly fair with highs near 80.

Midlanders can expect weekend to be very warm

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders can look forward to a warm weekend with highs in the lower 80s predicted by the National Weather Service.

Today should be fair with early morning cloudiness and a high in the lower 80s. Winds will be southwest 10 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight's low should be in the lower 50s.

Sunday is expected to be mostly fair with a high near 80.

Friday's high of 74 degrees missed the record mark for that date by 13 degrees. The record high was 87 degrees set in 1934. The overnight low of 43 degrees missed the record mark by 16 degrees. The record low was 27 degrees set in 1948.

STATE

A developing storm in eastern Colorado prompted strong winds of 15 to 25 mph across much of Texas Friday and gusts of up to 30 mph in western North Texas.

The strong south winds brought an increase in moisture to the state that resulted in low clouds over the eastern half of Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Skies over far West Texas remained cloud-free, while only scattered high clouds marred the High Plains. A few showers dotted sections of the northwest Gulf of Mexico and South Texas.

Late-afternoon temperatures were mainly in the 70s statewide with the execption of South and south Central Texas, where a few lower 80s prevailed.

NATION

A snowstorm in Utah, Wyoming and Montana dumped up to 10 inches of snow on parts of the Rockies on Friday, and strong blasts of arctic air accompanying the storm dropped temperatures to single digits.

Temperatures even at midday were only in the teens over parts of the northern Plains, with readings in the 20s from the upper Great Lakes to the northern Rockies.

By contrast, 60-degree temperatures had pushed as far north as the mid-Mississippi Valley and central Plains.

Snow fell across the northern part of the country from the mid-Missouri Valley to the northern Rockies, with flurries across part of the upper Great Lakes.

In Utah, 3.5 inches of snow fell overnight at Snowbasin, with about 2 inches at Snowbird and Alta. Casper, Wyo., also had 2 inches of snow by early Friday, as did parts of the western Dakotas. About 10 inches of snow fell overnight in Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming, prompting park officials to close all roads inside the park to automobiles.

The snow forced the temporary closure of Interstate 70, near the Continental Divide's Eisenhower Tunnel, because of accidents. No one was injured in the collisions, state police said.

Midland Lee quarterback Tuey Rankin didn't throw the ball very often, but when he did it was effective and it lead the Rebels to a 27-21 come-from-behind District 4-5A victory over the Midland High Bulldogs.

Except for one Jake Madrid interception at the goal line, Rankin's passing was deadly as the senior quarterback hit 3-of-5 for 63 yards and two touchdowns, including the game-winner in the fourth quarter to tight end Anthony Dickens.

It was Dicken's foot height advantage over Bulldog defender Anthony Adkinson that made the difference. Adkinson had coverage against anything thrown low, but the 6-foot-6 basketball center went high, where the junior defender couldn't follow.

"I don't think Midland High expected me to catch a pass, but it was in the end zone and it was mine. I had to come back a little because the ball a little under thrown, but I was able to get it."

Rebel kicker Terry Baxter missed the ensuing point-after attempt, but the Rebel defense kept the Bulldogs from any last-minute heroics, stopping them on their final four series in the game.

RANKIN'S PASSING also opened the game's scoring. After Rebel Ronald Pertile recovered MHS quarterback Matt Marcum's fumble on the Bulldog 20, Rankin hit split end Dexter Traylor on a 23-yard pass. Baxter made it 7-0 with 10:36 left in the first quarter.

"It was a regular slant-in pass and everything happened so quickly that I remember breaking a tackle, but I didn't even know when I crossed the end zone. Tuey's pass was right on the money."

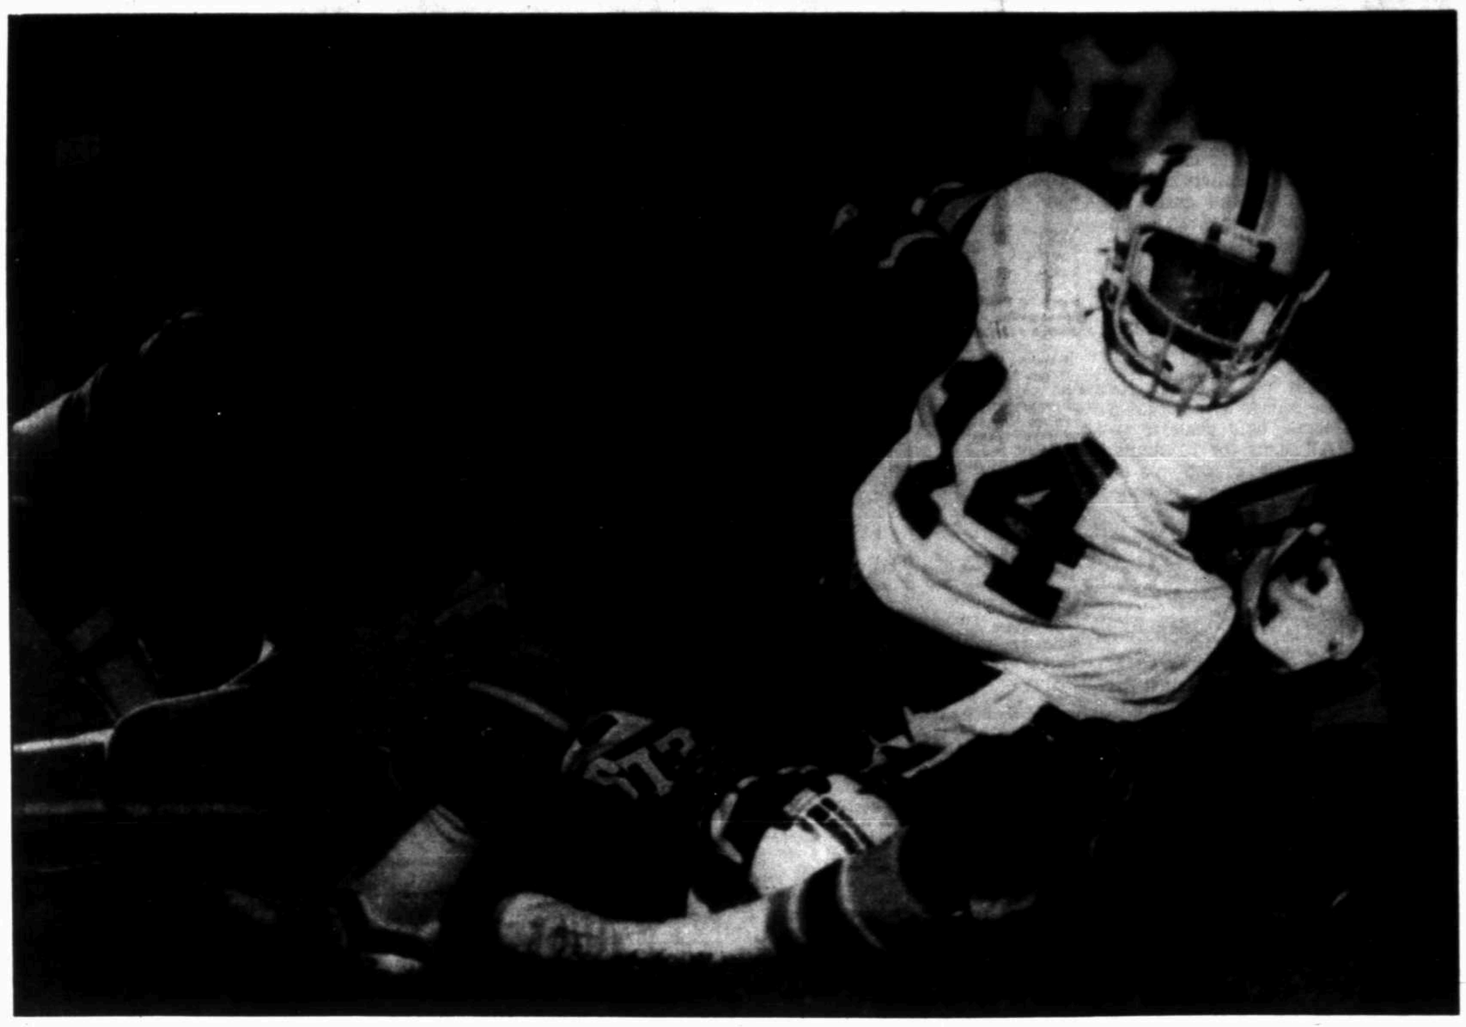

Down, but far from out, the Bulldogs came out with a tremendous determination, led by halfbacks Mark Johnson and Jake Madrid.

On three straight carries following the kickoff, Johnson punched out 11-yard gains. Madrid carried the ball eight times in the drive for 45 yards, including the final two for the TD. Bobby Williams tied the game at 7-7 with the PAT.

"The weasels (MHS front line) really blocked," said Madrid. "Lee couldn't do a thing. Our running game was there."

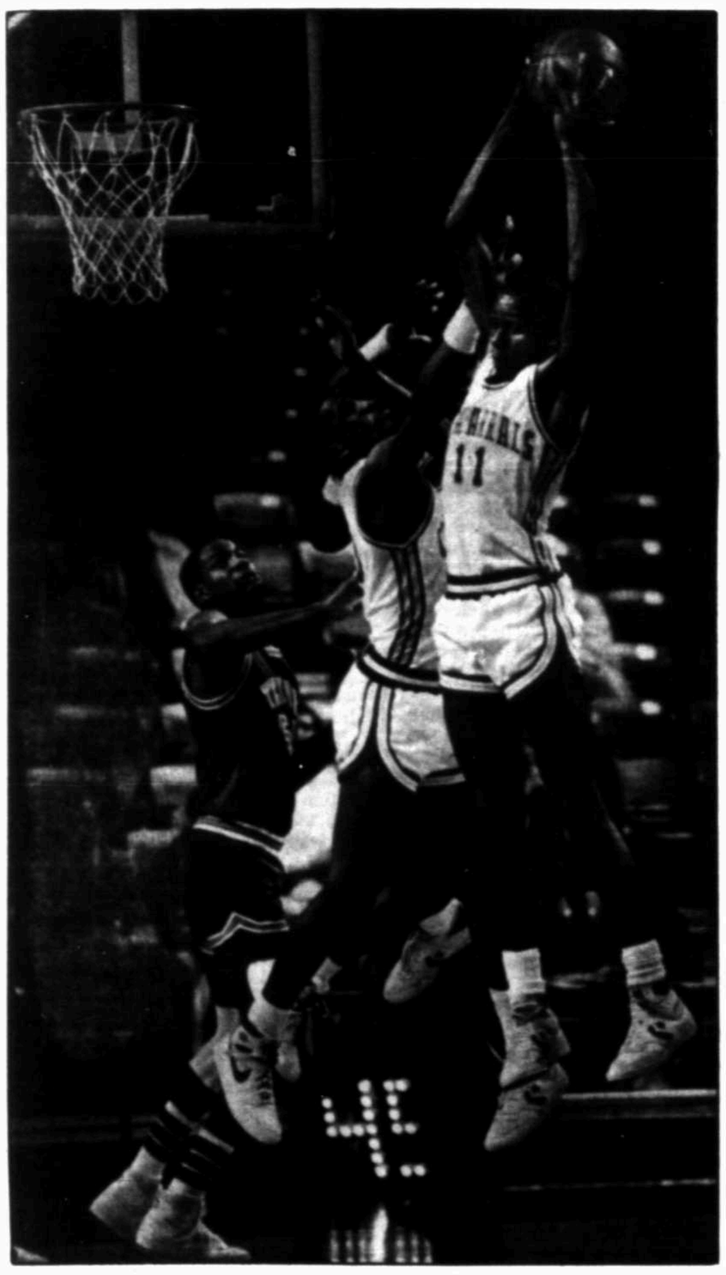

The Bulldogs looked like they might be pulling off an upset when they scored two consecutive touchdowns in the second quarter, the first coming on a 50-yard punt return by Tyrone Oliver and the second on a seven-yard Madrid run. Williams added both PATs for a 21-7 Bulldog lead.

MC, OC clash in Chap finals

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College boosted its season's record to 3-0 and moved into tonight's 7 p.m. Chaparral Classic basketball finals at the Langford Chaparral Center against Odessa College, the third straight year the neighborhood rivals have met in the finals.

And if this one is anything like the previous two, the fans are in for a treat.

OC defeated Howard College, 74-65, in the other game of the all-Western Junior College Athletic Conference semifinals.

In Friday's other results, Garden City, Kan., defeated McMurry JV, 79-75, in overtime and Murray State of Oklahoma breezed by Grayson County, 87-78.

Play begins in today's final round of play with Grayson and Lubbock Christian College JV playing in the 1 p.m. seventh place game while consolation will be at stake at 3 p.m. when Murray State and Garden City tangle. South Plains and Howard squre off in the third place game.

Guard Ricky Grace ramrodded MC's win with a 20 point contribution in what evolved into a game of attrition as the two teams paraded to the free throw line for 63 shots. Both coaches Jerry Stone of MC and Ron Mayfield of SPC made maximum use of their benches.

The Chaps trailed 17-12 midway through the first half before Stone came up with the right chemistry and a zone trap that turned things around. The Chaps made a 15-2 run at the Plainsmen as Grace contributed two baskets and a free throw and Lincoln Minor added all five of his first half points to boost MC into a 27-19 led with 6:08 left in the half.

When Robbie Garner slid inside for a layup at 3:50, it marked SPC's first score from the field in almost seven minutes. In fact, SPC scored only two baskets in the final 10:42. Midland managed only one in the final 6:40, so there was a lot of whistle-tooting and it was the Plainsmen's accuracy from the line that kept SPC within reach, 33-28, at half. Two of the SPC free throws came on a technical against the MC bench.

With slightly over 10 minutes left in the second half, the Chaps had assumed command with a 57-36 lead as 6-6 Eddie Frazier and Mookie Blaylock went to work. Frazier scored eight of his 14 points in this stretch and Blaylock contributed six of his 11 points.

Tab Harris with 14 and Daryl Rudolph with 12 points led SPC.

Melvin Herring's 24-point burst paced Garden City while Jose Ybra scored 22 for McMurry JV.

Barron Moore with 26, Tyrone Ree with 21 and Thomas Anderson 24 did the damage for Murray State against Grayson, led by Steven Thompson, 24, and Deon Phelps, 23.

Greg Lazard led OC with 20 points as the Wranglers pulled out to a 20-point lead early in the second half and Howard could get no closer than seven points there after. Bruce Kimble's 14 points paced Howard.

Lee-Midland treat for spectator

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The word is that when Midland High meets Midland Lee on a football field you are going to get a game for the spectator. But what we saw at Memorial Stadium Friday night went beyond the wildest expectations.

History will record that Lee's playoff bound Rebels won this Tall City championship for the third year in a row by a 27-21 margin. Pure reason says that there couldn't possibly be a loser. The fans, Lee, MHS and District 4-5A were the winners.

To be sure, there were some mistakes by both teams. There were fumbles and key interceptions and bad punts and punt returns for touchdowns. But there was the struggle of almost unbearable intensity that will last in the minds for a long time for those who were fortunate enough to witness this one — one for the ages.

It was a game that Midland High's Bulldogs came out a winner, despite the score. It was a game that the Bulldogs will never drop a head over. They came to play and sent the Rebels to the playoffs with a tester of major proportions.

It was also a game in which the Rebels showed some gritty determination. They rallied from a 14-point deficit to take the win. They enter the playoffs knowing that faced a major bullet and were able to survive.

And there were the heroes that are etched in our minds. Midland High's Jake Madrid running and playing defense like a champion. Burt Fisher and Brent Barton with head jarring tackles. Tyrone Oliver with that nifty punt return and offensive lineman Marvin Mitchell having one of his best games. And of course, there were more, many more, with no space or time to mention.

And Lee quarterback Tuey Rankin coming off injury with a 57-yard TD run and two touchdown passes. And Dextor Traylor with another in what is becoming a long string of touchdown catches. There was Anthony Dickens acting like the basketball player he is with one of the most fantastic catches ever in the end zone with what proved to be the game winning touchdown. There was Tony Brown and Ricky Lee coming to play after spending most of the week in bed with the flu bug.

It was one to remember and it had the respective coaches giving only praise to both teams after the game.

"Nothing is easy in this league," noted Lee coach Jack Tayrien for about the 10th time this year. "What an effort by both teams. Midland High is a class outfit and they came out to play.

"And I have to be proud of our kids because they came back from 14 points down and that is extremely hard to do in this league. We could have packed it in when it was 21-7 and Midland High threatening again in the first half, but we showed some poise and I'm pleased with that."

Midland High coach Doug McCutchen said, "You have to give Lee credit for coming back like they did. They are a good football team and deserve to be where they are, but I really feel so much for our kids — the way they played tonight.

"We went out and played as hard as we could. We didn't leave anything in the dressing room. We were out of it as far as the season is concerned and really had nothing to play for but pride. I think we showed we had some pride. Our kids have come up just short so many times this year, but these kids kept coming back every week. That's a tough thing to do, but they did it as well as

Baylor still looking for respect

According to Southwest Conference soothsayers, Baylor should be just playing out the schedule, scrounging for an upset that might save an otherwise disappointing season.

Instead, Coach Grant Teaff's Bears are playing the best football in the SWC. The team that was supposed to finish just ahead of Rice and Texas Tech is within a victory of clinching yet another Cotton Bowl trip.

That sign of relief in the background is probably from SWC fathers. Baylor is one of the few lodge members whose players aren't accompanied to class by NCAA investigators. Well, at least, not yet.

Baylor's only loss was to Georgia. At the time, it appeared the Bears were lucky to escape Athens with their self respect and a moral victory. In retrospect , after wins over USC, SMU, A&M and the others, it now appears that perhaps the Bulldogs were the lucky ones.

But respect comes grudgingly and this year is no different. Going into Saturday's big one against Arkansas, the game that could be Baylor's ticket to Dallas New Year's Day, is favorite.

The SWC....

Arkansas minus three over Baylor- This corner is as bad as the rest of the scoffers, I suppose, but Fayetteville gives the Razorbacks that all important edge in what should be a close game.

TCU minus 9 1/2 over Texas Tech- The point spread for Tech is too much.

Houston plus seven over Texas- Horns' inconsistency is frightening...well, for that matter so is Houston's inconsistency.

SMU minus 22 over Rice- Mustangs aren't too dedicated a team, yet they have the talent to make this one lopsided.

The Big Ones....

Maryland plus 2 1/2 over Miami- Terps catch Hurricane at an opportune time, right after the war with Florida State.

LSU minus one over Alabama- You'd never catch me living so recklessly if the Bear were still around.

Illinois minus seven over Iowa- Both teams coming off big games last week...so the task is to figure out which one is flat.

Army plus 11 over Air Force- Who would have thought, five years ago, this would be "A Big One".

Arizona plus four over UCLA- MRT staffer Mark Lewis confides, "UCLA never wins at Tucson."

Georgia plus six over Florida- I can't get it out of my head that the Gators tied Rutgers.

The others....

Penn State minus 12 1/2 over Cincinnati- Is that the Bengals or Bearcats?

Wisconsin plus 11 over Minnesota- Strange things sometimes happen in this series.

Oklahoma minus 26 1/2 over Missouri- Unless the Sooners' get so bored they start daydreaming.

Colgate minus eight over Penn- Penn strays outside Ivy League and pay the price.

The pros...

Cowboys plus 2 1/2 over Redskins- Didn't Dallas beat this bunch 44-14 once?

Rams plus three over Giants- Apparently, the NFC West isn't very highly regarded. LA has lost only one game, yet....

Raiders minus 2 1/2 over Chargers- Another game like last week and Los Angeles will make Oakland go back home.

Miami minus 3 1/2 over Jets- A To-Win ticket on Dan Marino's nose.

Lions plus 11 over Bears- You've got to figure Detroit will be gunning for divisional foe.

Oilers minus 2 1/2 over Buffalo- If Houston keeps this up, they'll go over .500. I understand the NCAA is already asking questions.

ODESSA — Odessa's Permian Panthers put a little more District 4-5A history in their hip pocket here Friday night in a 37-7 win over cross town rival Odessa High.

Permian became the first 4-5A team to win six district championships in a row. The Panthers are now 6-0-1 in league play and enter the state playoffs next Friday at 8 p.m. in Lubbock's Jones Stadium against Amarillo Palo Duro.

The game also marked the final 4-5A outing for OHS coach Jerry Millsapps, who resigned his position two weeks ago, effective after the Permian game.

Woody Bryant was the key for Permian as he scored a touchdown and kicked three field goals to go with four PAT boots for 19 points.

Greg Anderson also scored on a 40-yard pass play from Jason Herrington while Marcus Lott scored on runs of one and 19 yards.

Odessa High tied the game at 7-7 in the first quarter on an 86-yard kickoff return by Gary Powell, but Permian dominated the rest of the way.

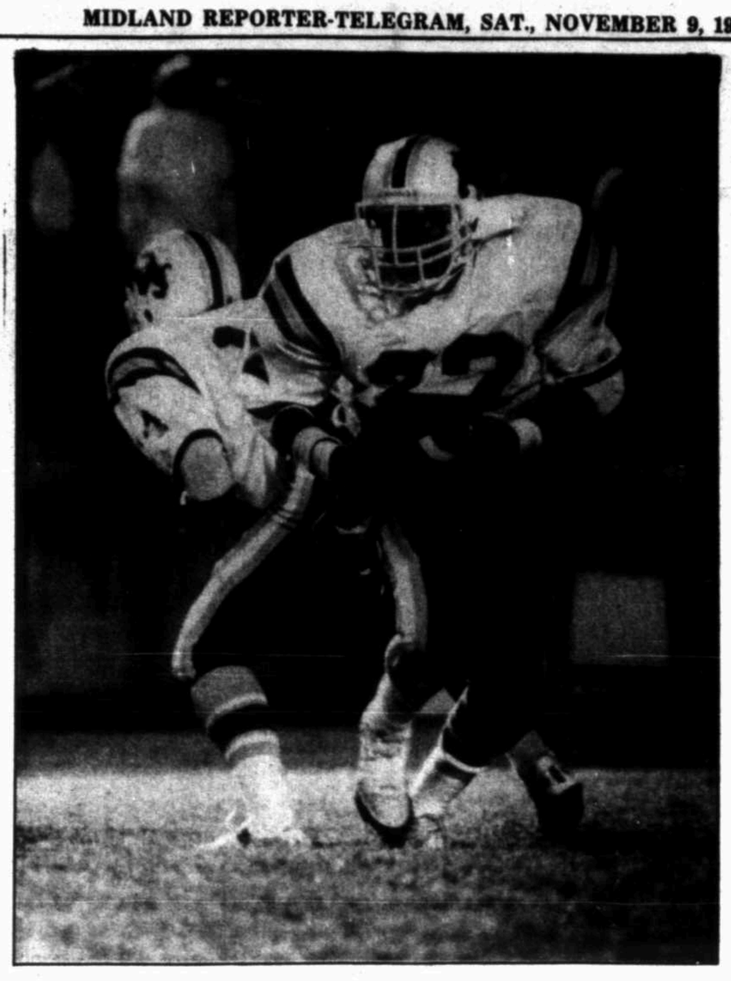

Permian ends regular season play at 9-0-1 while OHS ends at 6-4, losing three in a row.

Ex-fighter Wepner booked for drug use

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Former heavyweight contender Chuck Wepner was arrested Friday and charged with several drug offenses, the result of an eight-month investigation, Middlesex County Prosecutor Alan Rockoff said.

Wepner, 46, who Rockoff described as a "mid-level" drug dealer, was found with four ounces of cocaine in his car when he was arrested in Sayreville. Rockoff said the drugs had a street value of about $12,000.

Authorities also found between six and seven grams of cocaine and $365 in cash in his pants pocket.

Wepner was charged with possession of cocaine, possession with intent to distribute cocaine and conspiracy, said Rockoff.

Following his arrest, police moved in on two others for whom Wepner was allegedly supplying drugs, said the prosecutor.

Wepner, dubbed "The Bayonne Bleeder," was defeated in a heavyweight title bid when he was knocked out in the 15th round by Muhammad Ali on March 24, 1975 in Cleveland.

Coots get in golfers' way

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Golfers are complaining about too many birdies - flocks of migrating coots that use the course as a winter resort.

Employees at the Shoreline Golf Course last week slaughtered 400 of the duck-like mud hens with shotguns, bringing in the Humane Society of Santa Clara Valley.

The coots keep coming back and this week the society persuaded course officials to use black plastic flags it hopes will serve the same purpose as scarecrows.

"I'd be the first one to put away the shotgun if someone comes up with a better idea," he said.

TV robbed golf excitement

Golf used to be a head-to-he sport like bullfighting, prizefighting, tennis and cheek-to-cheek dancing.

You had your man right in front of you and you had 80 ways to beat him besides just scoring lower or hitting the ball better.

You could probe for psychological weaknesses. You could smile in the wrong places, work your man over with silences and do 15 things between shots that would affect his frame of mind, perhaps fatally. No one did this any better than Walter Hagen.

It made you a better competitor if not a better shot maker. They still play the game this way in almost 100 percent of the country clubs around, on almost any course in the world.

I don't know when the game became a series of solo performances. Probably when the professionals began to come onto the scene, because professionals despise anything that does not hue to the percentages.

You see, in match play in golf, it is perfectly possible to shoot, say, a 79 and beat a man who is shooting a 69. This drives a guy making his bread and butter at the game up a ballwasher.

If you shoot an eagle in match play, all you win is the hole. If your opponent shoots an 8, all he loses is a hole.

It's unfair. That's what's so beautiful about it.

AMERICANS don't like it. Gamblers don't like it. Because, you see, gamblers don't like to leave anything to chance. The word is misapplied when used to describe a man who makes his living pitting his skills against yours. Because a gambler's stock-in-trade is not the gamble, it's the sure thing.

The PGA, the third-most prestigious golf tournament in the world, used to be match play. So did the U.S. Amateur.

The Scots probably never even envisioned medal play for the game when they invented it. But they never envisioned television either.

Television needed smelling salts when it got a load of match play.

You see, the trouble with match play is, it introduces the human element.

The "stars" of the game got used to playing against a standard – like a skier competing against a clock. They perfected this kind of meticulous, cocoon-like game you could play almost by yourself. I believe you'll find that such phrases as bird, ie. eagle, bogey, and leader in the clubhouse" were all American inventions.

That's the way they played the game at Brigham Young and Wake Forest and Houston, as a nice, sterile operating-room exercise. The players were soloists, like a guy giving a recital. The guy you had to beat might be five threesomes ahead or half an hour behind on the course. It was like locking Dempsey and Tunney in separate rooms and deciding the issue on the computed velocity of their various punches.

Television couldn't live with match play. It forced both the PGA and the U.S. Amateur to go to the medal format, although the Amateur has since gone back to match play because nobody cared much about it in either form.

THE PGA had been a great tournament in the days when great players coming up came out of the caddy shacks and hustlers' groves and not the halls of higher education. You had some great finals, like Sam Snead-Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan-Porky Oliver, Tommy Armour-Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, of course, won it four times.

But the modern crop of players couldn't handle the hand-to-hand combat. When they hung up red numbers on a scoreboard, they wanted to win more than one hole.

And they kept getting outhustled. A lot of us thought this was funny, kind of charming. But when television got Walter Burkemo-Felice Torza, Chandler Harper-Henry Williams Jr. and Lionel Hebert-Dow Finsterwald, the guys who run it weren't laughing. They cried, "Enough!"

The PGA went to medal play. It became just another Phoenix Open, but it sold beer and cars on Sunday afternoon.

There have been periodic attempts to revive the royal and ancient game as the Scots played it. Perhaps you saw the latest in Tucson last weekend in the Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship.

The results were predictable. The great names of the game went flying out of the tournament in Rounds 1 and 2, and the modern-day Walter Burkemos and Felice Torzas marched inexorably to the final.

Television finally ended up with the likes of Mark Wiebe, Jim Thorpe, Mac O'Grady, Phil Blackmar, Bob Tway and Jack Renner to buck the World Series and pro football.

I sympathize with their plight. Except that a lot of these guys won a tournament this year already. We have had to contend with the Mark Wiebes and Phil Blackmars all year long. And Jim Thorpe, the winner, is practically a legend. He won one tournament and was in a playoff for another this year.

If golf is going to be a game that has no marquee winners anyway, if it's going to be a national lottery with a winner a week and no star system, why not have a tournament where when you turn sweetly to your opponent and say, "I believe you're away," it'll mean something.

And he won't be able to smile back and say, "I know, but I'm four shots ahead from yesterday."

The nice thing about match play is, there's no yesterday. The only better way to test a man's nervous system is to make him play for his own money, too. I mean, isn't that the way you and I play the bloody game?

Despite Card loss, Pokes over Skins

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

In Washington, there are 14 weeks to the National Football League season — and two Dallas weeks.

This is a Dallas week.

With the Cowboys losing to the Cardinals Monday night, the Redskins enter the game at RFK Stadium just a game behind the Cowboys and Giants in an NFC East race that looks like it may become the same mad scramble it was a year ago. Washington comes in having won four of its last five games after a 1-3 start.

"I think I feel better about this team that at any time this season," says Coach Joe Gibbs.

Perhaps, but Washington, which is favored by 3, seems to have established a pattern. The 'Skins roll over bad teams and lose to good ones — 44-14 to the Cowboys, 45-10 to the Bears and 17-3 to the Giants.

The Cowboys are a good team. It may not be 44-14 this time, but go with the ...COWBOYS.

New York Jets (plus 3½) at Miami

Drag out the cliches. It's a must-win for the Dolphins, whose backs are to the wall. They also have to face facts. Without Mark Duper, Nat Moore or a running game, Dan Marino is no more than an above-average quarterback, not a superman. The Jets are ... well, pretty darn good.

JETS.

Pro Picks

Los Angeles Rams (plus 4½) at New York Giants

The Giants have the toughest part of the schedule, New Orleans and Tampa Bay, behind them. The Rams have Jeff Kemp in place of Dieter Brock and, face it, they don't need this one that badly.

GIANTS.

San Francisco (minus 3) at Denver (Monday night)

The 49ers have spent the last two Sunday afternoons playing like NFL champs. Why not on Monday night?

49ERS.

Detroit (plus 11) at Chicago

Everyone figures The Refrigerator will throw a pass this week. Wrong. He'll carry it on a reverse.

BEARS.

Cleveland (plus 3) at Cincinnati

For whatever it's worth, the winner is 5-5 and holds onto at least a share of the AFC Central lead. Ho hum.

BROWNS.

St. Louis (minus 2½) at Tampa Bay

Onto the bubble leap the Cardinals. Opposing coaches always say the Bucs aren't an 0-5, 0-6, 0-7, 0-8 or 0-9 team. How about 0-10?

CARDS.

Indianapolis (plus 9½) at New England

When you're a contender like the Patriots, you'd better beat teams like this. Especially at home.

PATRIOTS.

Los Angeles Raiders (minus 2½) at San Diego

The Raiders won 34-21 two weeks ago and the last San Diego touchdown was a gift.

RAIDERS.

Atlanta (plus 8½) at Philadelphia.

The Falcons are making a good case for themselves as the worst team in the league.

EAGLES.

OTHER GAMES (Home team in CAPS)
Pittsburgh (plus 2) over KANSAS CITY
Seattle (minus 6) over NEW ORLEANS
MINNESOTA (minus 6½) over Green Bay
Houston (minus 2½) over BUFFALO

Last week: 5-9 (spread), 8-6 (straight up)
Season: 54-66-6 (spread), 77-48 (straight up)

Reserve wins semifinal

TEXICO (AP) — Tailback Gary Zuniga ran for a touchdown and wore down Texico's defense with 223 yards rushing to lead defending champion Reserve to a 20-0 win over Texico in a Class A semifinal playoff football game Friday night.

The victory will send the Mountaineers, 7-1-1, into the Class A state title game next week against the winner of the Tatum-Carrizozo game.

Texico played well against the favored Mountaineers but could not stop Zuniga, who repeatedly found holes in the Wolverines' defense.

Texico finished the season with a 7-4 record.

Reserve	0	6	6	8—20
Texico	0	0	0	0—0

R—Zuniga 1 run (kick blocked)
R—Fisher 3 run (run failed)
R—Fisher 1 run (Delgado pass from Zuniga)

Bears' McMahon out for Sunday

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim McMahon will not start at quarterback Sunday for the Chicago Bears against the Detroit Lions. McMahon was listed as questionable on the injury report with an injured shoulder and reserve Steve Fuller will replace him, the National Football League club said.

But McMahon will suit up and be available for the Bears, 9-0, the league's only undefeated team. McMahon was injured last Sunday against Green Bay.

Scott, MSU AD, calls it quits

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Athletic Director Charley Scott acknowledged dissatisfaction with his handling of Mississippi State's sports program Friday and announced his resignation from the post he has held two years.

Scott's resignation followed reports that football coach Emory Bellard was being considered for the head post at Texas Tech and that Southern Methodist Coach Bobby Collins, a Mississippi State product, would become coach and athletic director. Both Bellard and Scott discounted the reports.

There have been reports for two years that Mississippi State alumni were displeased with the school's football fortunes. Bellard flatly predicted a Southeastern Conference championship this season, but has yet to win an SEC game.

Albert King inks for '$3 mill'

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Free agent forward Albert King, whose holdout sparked an arbitration ruling that some say blows the lid off the National Basketball Association's salary cap, has signed a reported five-year, $3 million contract with the New Jersey Nets.

"It's going to take me a while to get into game shape," King said Friday. "I will work doubly hard to get back into shape. For the last couple of weeks I've been working out twice a day at Ramapo College."

U.S. advances to finals

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — The American team won four of six matches Friday, got the help it needed from Bernhard Langer, and advanced to the finals against Europe in the Nissan Cup World Championship.

The Americans won 18 points in their match against Japan, including 10 bonus points. That gave them 38 for three rounds of round-robin competition — not enough to secure a place in Saturday's final match.

The entire team — Floyd, Lanny Wadkins, Calvin Peete, Mark O'Meara, Corey Pavin and Curtis Strange — gathered by the 18th green to watch the finish of the Europe-Australia match. In order for the United States to reach the finals, the Europeans needed to win five points from Australia.

They won 11. But it went down to the final match, between European captain Langer and Australian David Graham. Until Langer won, 65-67 — with Graham making eagle-3 on the final hole — the Australians retained a chance of gaining the finals.

Lee followed later in the half when Rankin showed he could do as much damage on the ground as he did through the air, breaking a 57-yard run on an option play right. Baxter sent the Rebels into the lockerroom down by seven, 21-14, at halftime.

The Rebels came up with a big break in the opening minutes of the the third quarter when the defense forced Midland High to punt, a play that turned into a disaster for the Bulldogs.

Williams, who is considered one of the most improved kickers in the district this year, got horrible kick into the wind that went for no gain. Lee took the ball at the MHS 22.

Five plays later, the game was tied with Rodney Sims capping the short drive with a five-yard run and Baxter hitting the PAT.

The score remained knotted until the fourth quarter when Dickens hauled in the eventual winner.

"I knew this would be a tough ball game because they are a tough football team. It was a great effort by Midland High," said Lee coach Jack Tayrien. "We were fortunate to win the game. I'm tickled to death to win."

For awhile, Tayrien was feeling the pressure of falling behind by 14 points. "I was extremely nervous," he said. "But, I think the credit goes to the kids because they didn't panic, I think our playoff experience helped out. We've been behind before and have come back before."

THE BIG difference in the ball game was the passing effectiveness for the two clubs. While Rankin was hitting them when it counted, Marcum was having an awful night, completing only 4-of-19 passes for 36 yards and two interceptions.

"I'm glad it was an off night for him and not one like we've seen before," said Tayrien. "I'm glad if he had to be off, it was tonight."

According to MHS coach Doug McCutchen, the Bulldog passing game was dictated by the wind. When it was in Midland High's face, they were keeping it on the ground, with good success as the final statistics show. The Bulldogs gained 199 yards on the ground while Lee picked up 183.

"When we were going against the wind we didn't throw the ball much," said McCutchen. "But, in the fourth quarter we had the wind at our backs and when Lee went in and scored we had to throw the ball. Lee made some adjustments at halftime that worked well.

"Two things were working well fors us. First, out backs were doing a great job running, breaking tackles and running hard and, second, we were running from different formations to confuse them."

And, about Madrid's effort, McCutchen said, "Jake has been one of the leaders all year long. He's carried the load on offense and carried the load on defense. He's been a super performer all year long."

But, to no avail. The Bulldogs end their year with a 4-6 overall record, 2-5 in 4-5A play while Lee is preparing to face District 3-5A champion Amarillo High next Saturday at Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

The Rebels finished second in 4-5A with an 8-2 record, 6-1 in the league.

any team I've ever seen."

Lee's tight end Dickens said, "I think this game will help us enter the playoffs with a lot of confidence. We did what we had to do in a tough game. This will be good for us."

Midland High's James Campbell, a Bulldog stalwart all year, said, "It was a real tough ball game all the way through. Lee just came out on top, but they knew we played."

And Midland knows they played football Friday night at Memorial Stadium. Lee may offer more of the same down the playoff road, but MHS may be a big part of that.

Last year after a narrow 14-6 loss to Lee, McCutchen said, "Just watch what Lee does now in the playoffs. I think we helped make them a better team."

The Bulldogs did it again Friday night.

Rampaging Red Devils plunder Wink's Wildcats

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

RANKIN - Red Devil Coach Dwayne Turner uncaged an unstoppable ground attack on the Wink Wildcats Friday night and the result was not a pretty sight.

Rankin's Mick McCravey and Randy Fulton ran wild on Wink, scoring a pair of touchdowns apiece and tacking up a 40-0 victory. The win puts the Red Devils on a return path to the playoffs for the first time since 1980, if they can get past Sanderson next week.

Fulton scored on runs of 67 and 84 yards en route to 185 on the night, the bulk of the 473 rushing yards for Rankin. Quarterback McCravey totaled 121 yards with scoring runs of six and 40 yards to raise the Devil's record to 6-3, 2-1 in Distrcit 6-A play. It was Rankin's first win over Wink since 1980 and there have been some lopsided scores since then.

"That was going through my mind, but I don't think we were trying to run up the score kor anything," Turner said. "Our backs just did a real, real good job tonight. That was their best running job all year."

Rankin did not waste time in blowing out Wink in what was supposed to be a tight ballgame. Fulton broke out for a 67-yard touchdown run on a misdirection play on the second play from scrimmage and the Wildcats never got any closer. The Devils' next possession came deep in Wildcat territory, after a fumble recovery by Bill Day. On third down, McCravey went six yards on a keeper for his first score and a 13-0 lead. It was just the beginning of a long night for Wink, now 2-1 in the district. The Wildcats face state-ranked Iraan next Friday.

The Wildcats found both McCravey and Fulton too slippery to handle all night, allowing each to break away for a second TD run. McCravey's was a 40-yarder off a busted play at the line, while Fulton's was an 84-yarder after it appeared he was stopped for no gain.

"They never whistled it dead and we just tell Randy to keep those feet moving and he'll get one of those sometime," Turner said.

Wingback George Abalos added to the ground barrage with a 60-yard breakaway of his own. In all, the Devils rolled up 311 first half rushing yards and a 33-0 lead at intermission. Wink was held to minus one on the ground in the first half and nine for the night.

"One thing I was disappointed in tonight is we didn't drive the ball for any scores, we had to have a big play to do it," Turner said. "But I'll take those 80-yard runs anytime

"Our defense did an awfully good job also, but we were afraid of their passing game. They didn't play anything like they did last week when they beat Sanderson."

The final Rankin score came in the third period on a 14-yard pass play from McCravey to Steven Cole.

The Red Devils now can write their own ticket into the state playoffs with a win over Sanderson at home next Friday. Wink must try for an upset of undefeated Iraan and hope the Devils lose to create a three-way tie.

"It's all in our hands, that's the way I like it," Turner said. "I'm not a good gambler, I don't like those coin flips."

Badgers beat Buffs, 42-0

STANTON — The McCamey Badgers put the final touches on the District 8-2A football championship here Friday night with a 42-0 win over the Stanton Buffaloes.

McCamey enters the playoffs next weekend with a 9-1 record and a perfect 5-0 record in loop play. Stanton finishes the season at 3-7 and 1-4.

McCamey's first playoff opponent will be Marfa at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Alpine.

The Badgers got a sterling performance from quarterback Nandy Zarate in the win over Stanton. He scored on a one-yard run, kicked a 26-yard field goal, threw a 14-yard touchdown pass to split end Vivian Garza and kicked two extra points.

The Badgers also got two touchdowns from Rodney Terry on runs of 31 and seven yards. Oscar Rodriquez and Emmit Brown both had TD runs.

The Badgers led only 12-0 at the half, but scored 24 points in the fourth period to ice the decision. Stanton got to McCamey's five and 15-yard lines in the first half and to the one in the fourth period, but couldn't score.

Stanton's Tommy Smith, Joe Flores and Gary Montez came up with fumble recoveries and Robert Tello had an interception, but the Buffs could never penetrate the scoring column.

Pride returns to West Point

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Pride is evident on the granite West Point campus where gray-garbed cadets stride quickly down Thayer Road and the recently-painted words 'Beat Navy' shine from the roof of Cullum Hall.

The long-suffering days, in which Army managed just one winning football campaign in 11 seasons, are over. The Black Knights rolled to an 8-3-1 record in 1984, and this season stand at a proud 7-1.

Past heroes from the military academy's glory days call Army a reborn winner.

"Everybody is really pleased to see them competitive again," said Felix "Doc" Blanchard, Army's stellar running back who won the Heisman Trophy in 1945. "They answered the problems, I don't know how, but they found the answers."

The success has Blanchard clapping more when he hears the list of college football scores on Saturday night.

"The Corp of Cadets, for the first time in many years, has taken the team into its bosom as it were," said Earl "Red" Blaik, who coached Army to three national championships during the 1940s and '50s. "They're the pride of the entire West Point community, and it has an effect on the players."

ARMY'S turnaround can be attributed to a number of factors, growing interest in the service academies, a realistic schedule with fewer national powerhouses and more Ivy League opponents and a handful of blue-chip discoveries.

Senior Doug Black was deemed too small for tackle and too slow for running back in his freshman year and never made the varsity squad. Two years later, the junior from Salado, Texas, impressed the coaching staff with his 9-0 boxing record.

Black started at fullback in 1984 and set Army single-season rushing record with a total 1,148 yards.

Nate Sassaman, a sometime-quarterback, sometime-defensive back, finally earned the No. 1 quarterback job in his senior season and rushed for 1,002 yards in 1984.

However, the major reason for Army's recent football prowess is Coach Jim Young and his adoption of the wishbone offense.

During his coaching days at Purdue, Young assessed the team's talent, noticed a hard-throwing quarterback named Mark Hermann and followed a pro-type offense.

The Boilermakers racked up 38 wins, 19 losses and one tie during Young's five seasons and appeared in three post-season bowl games.

IN 1983, Young accepted the head coaching job at Army, where Lou Saban disappeared after one season and Ed Cavanaugh had been cut after three years, and the Cadets struggled to a 2-9 record.

The following season, Young instituted the run-oriented wishbone, used by only nine teams in the nation, and Army posted its first winning season since 1977. The Cadets also captured the Commander-In-Chief trophy with victories over Air Force and Navy and won the inaugural Cherry Bowl, dropping Western Michigan 10-6.

'Gators risk No. 1 ranking

Florida puts its new-found No. 1 status on the line Saturday against No. 17 Georgia in their annual border war at Jacksonville's Gator Bowl, an event which has gained some notoriety in the past as the "World's Largest Outdoor Cocktail Party."

This time, what happens on the field could be at least as interesting.

Florida never before has been in the position of defending so prestigious a status, and that will mean added pressure.

"There is always pressure to win when you are at the top, but the really good teams deal with it," says fullback John L. Williams.

"We have had to deal with a lot of different challenges over the past two years and have conquered a great many," says Williams. "This is something we have to deal with as well."

Besides Florida-Georgia, there are two other games pairing members of the AP's Top Twenty — No. 11 Baylor vs. No. 12 Arkansas at Little Rock and No. 20 Alabama at No. 15 LSU.

Meanwhile, runnerup Penn State visits Cincinnati, third-ranked Nebraska entertains Iowa State, No. 4 Ohio State is at Northwestern, fifth-ranked Air Force plays host to Army, No. 6 Iowa is at home to Illinois, seventh-ranked Oklahoma visits Missouri, No. 8 Miami meets Maryland in Baltimore, ninth-ranked Michigan entertains Purdue and No. 10 Oklahoma State hosts Kansas State.

Elsewhere in the Second Ten, East Carolina is at No. 13 Auburn, No. 14 UCLA at Arizona for a night game, South Carolina at No. 16 Florida State under the lights, No. 18 Brigham Young at Utah State and No. 19 Tennessee at Memphis State.

Florida, because it is on probation, is ineligible for the Southeastern Conference crown and a bowl game, but not the national championship. In going about their business of trying to joing Auburn (1957) and Oklahoma (1974) as teams that won national championships while in the NCAA doghousea, the Gators have stretched the nation's longest unbeaten streak to 18 games (16-0-2).

"We were No. 2 last week, and I thought that was pretty exciting, but it didn't keep us from getting ready for Auburn," says quarterback Kerwin Bell. "I don't think No. 1 is going to bother us none. We're where we want to be and want to stay there."

"We knew last week that if we beat Auburn and Ohio State beat Iowa, we'd be No. 1," adds linebacker Patrick Miller. "But that's over with. This is a new week. It doesn't matter where you are at the beginning of the season, or in the middle. All that matters is where you end up."

Right on, agrees Penn State Coach Joe Paterno.

"I don't think weekly polls are worth a nickel, and I've said that consistently," Paterno says. "I've said at the end of the year polls have a place. But I think a weekly poll does nothing but sell newspapers and generate some fan interest.

"I don't think being ranked high helps anybody. All it does is make people more anxious to beat you."

Cincinnati upset Penn State 14-3 two years ago and both teams are coming off wins against Boston College — Cincinnati by 24-17 two weeks ago, Penn State 16-12 last Saturday.

"I'm not sure if the bye helped us as much as the win over BC," says Coach Dave Currey of 5-4 Cincinnati. "We enjoyed savoring the win over BC last week because watching the films of Penn State has humbled us this week."

Baylor's 7-1 start matches that of the 1980 team that won the Southwest Conference championship and the Bears have their fans thinking Cotton Bowl again.

Williams-Amherst... 'the last football game'

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Williams seniors call it "the last football game of your life" and Amherst Coach James Ostendarp is taking nothing for granted when the two small colleges meet Saturday for the 100th time.

The Lord Jeffs have lost only one game in the past two years, while Williams is 2-4-1 this season. But Ostendarp said in this game "records don't mean anything."

"We may be low key about football, but this is the No. 1 small college rivalry in the country," he said.

"It's hard to explain. You can lose every game and upset Amherst and that will make your season," said former Baltimore Colts player Jack Maitland, a 1976 Williams grad.

The two exclusive liberal arts schools more noted for turning out business and government leaders began meeting on the football field in 1884. Williams' Ephmen lead the series 51-44-4.

It may not be "The Game" for everyone, but the season-ending contest doesn't lack for fierce old-time rivalry.

Statues are snatched, veteran coaches unveil trick plays and classical scholars armed with catapults bombard the opposing stands with water balloons. About half of the Williams players shaved their heads Friday.

"I don't really know why," said Williams publicist James Kolesar. "But the explanation offered was: It will be bad enough to look like this if we win and if we lose it will be even worse."

"We're something out of another era," said Williams Coach Bob Odell, pointing out that players are regularily excused from practice and games when they would interfere with their studies."

Will real Mustangs stand up?

SWC Football

By CHARLES RICHARDS
AP Writer

Southern Methodist football fans — who began the season hoping for a perfect 11-0 season and a mythical national championship — have been on a roller-coaster ride this year.

Along with losses to Arizona (28-6), Baylor (21-14) and Texas A&M (19-17) have been impressive victories over Houston (37-13) and then-ranked Texas (44-14).

So, which SMU team will stand up in Saturday's 2 p.m. game in Texas Stadium against Rice, which is 3-5 overall and 2-3 in league play?

"I think we may just blow them out of the stadium," SMU offensive guard David Richards said.

Then he added, "Or it may be a close game. Any more, I just don't know."

The oddsmakers have SMU a 22-point favorite, and Mustangs coach Bobby Collins said, "We've had a good week's work. I think we're going to go out and really play hard in the ball game, and that's all you can ask."

Elsewhere around the league, 11th-ranked Baylor is at 12th-ranked Arkansas in a 2:30 p.m. game before a regionally telecast game at War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock; Texas is at Houston in a noon game, also televised; and Texas Christian is at Texas Tech at 2 p.m.

Arkansas was favored by 3 points over Baylor, Texas by 8 over Houston, and Tech by 10 over TCU.

Both TCU and Texas Tech are winless in SWC games. The Horned Frogs have won only five in 19 tries at Lubbock. The last three meetings between the two teams in Lubbock have ended in ties.

Baylor stands all alone atop the Southwest Conference football standings with a perfect 5-0 record, and the only blemish on its record all year was a narrow 17-14 loss to Georgia early in the season. However, Arkansas still is in the title chase, with a 7-1 season record and a 4-1 conference record marred only by a 17-15 defeat to Texas.

Baylor linebacker Alan Jamison said of the Hogs: "This is the biggest game of the year. You work all your college career to be in this position — playing in November with a chance at the conference championship."

Baylor has a home game against Rice and a road game against Texas remaining on its schedule after the Hogs.

Arkansas players see the game as a must in their hopes for the league title.

"This game will determine whether or not we have a chance to go to the Cotton Bowl," Arkansas halfback Carl Miller said. "I ran a kickoff back against Baylor two years ago, and nothing would be sweeter than to do it again."

The Razorbacks must still play Texas A&M and Southern Methodist.

Gators' Hall set for lifetime

By FRED GOODALL

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Fourteen months after taking over as interim head football coach of the Florida Gators, Galen Hall is about as permanent as you can be without a lifetime contract.

One opposing coach calls his arrival in Gainesville a "miracle," while his own quarterback — whose success story at Florida is about as unlikely as Hall's — says he's simply "right for the job."

In any case, the Gators are 15-0-1 since Hall replaced Charley Pell three games into the 1984 season. They're gunning for a national championship in 1985, ranked No. 1 in the country for the first time.

"Galen Hall has got the magic," says Coach Bobby Bowden of archrival Florida State. "He's just what they needed."

A MESSY recruiting scandal claimed Pell's job. Hall, who left Oklahoma to join the Florida staff as offensive coordinator in February 1984, landed in the hot seat on an interim basis because he was the highest-ranking assistant unscathed by an NCAA investigation.

The Gators were slapped with two years' probation and stripped of scholarships, live television and bowl appearances as well as their first-ever Southeastern Conference title.

The team's performance on the field has been unaffected, though, and the word "interim" has long since been dropped from the coach's title.

SOME SAY the soft-spoken Hall's relaxed approach to the game is as responsible for his success as the talent Pell left. One of the main criticisms of the Pell during his tenure was that his intense nature caused players to become uptight before important games.

Under Hall, however, Florida has shed its reputation for being unable to win the big one and become a team that doesn't know how to lose.

The Gators, 9-1-1 a year ago, were 8-0 after Hall took over. The team was 7-0-1 heading into Saturday's game with Georgia in Jacksonville.

"Coach Hall has instilled in us a quiet confidence that has so far paid off," says sophomore quarterback Kerwin Bell, another unlikely hero who as a freshman walk-on led the Gators to a No. 3 finish in the final Associated Press poll.

"He also has a way of relieving tension. He seems always to have a little joke for us if we are a bit tight," said Bell, whose climb up the 1984 preseason depth chart was facilitated by injuries and other departures. "He is right for the job."

BOWDEN, whose team was stopped by Florida 27-17 in last season's regular season finale and faces the Gators again on Nov. 30, feels the same way.

"A lot of people would have gone in there and pressed, but not Galen," Bowden says. "He's genius with his play-calling. He's got it all. It's a miracle he decided to leave Oklahoma when he did."

Hall, an assistant at Oklahoma for 18 years, doesn't quite know what to make of all the talk about his suitability for the job. In more than 25 years of playing and coaching, the one-time Penn State quarterback has never been associated with a losing season.

"I don't know why people say things," Hall says of the glowing terms used to describe him. "It's nice, but hopefully they realize there are a lot of people involved."

Technology spindles punch-card checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 40 years, Americans will soon be able to fold their government checks, but spindling and mutilating the new paper checks is still a no-no.

The Treasury Department announced Friday that the old green punch-card checks will be totally phased out over the next year in favor of modern pale-peach colored checks featuring a drawing of the Statue of Liberty.

Starting next month, the checks will be distributed nationwide for the first time with the Dec. 3 mailing of Social Security checks to more than 20 million beneficiaries. By the end of the year, more than 115 million Americans will have received one or more of the new checks.

Officials estimated that the change from punch-card checks to paper checks will save $6 million annually, with about two-thirds of the savings coming from use of a cheaper paper stock and savings on storage of the thinner checks.

The switch involves a one-time cost of $5 million, officials said.

"We're changing the check because the punched card technology is obsolete," Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said at a news conference. "We also wanted a more secure check — one that is more difficult to alter or counterfeit."

Among more than a dozen new security features aimed at thwarting counterfeiters, a hidden word "void" appears when the check is photocopied and stains show in the name of the person and the amount printed on the check if any attempts are made to alter them.

The government green of the old checks has given way to a rainbow of pastels ranging from light blue to pale peach. The design also features a full-length engraving of the Statue of Liberty on the left and a faint close-up of her face and torch on the right.

A pattern of the letters "USA" is painted on the back of the check in a pale blue that does not reproduce on copying machines.

Gone is that most famous of government warnings, "Do not fold, spindle or mutilate."

'An Early Frost' full of potent drama

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Millions of words have been written and spoken in news reports about the deadly disease AIDS, but few accounts have generated the kind of sympathetic understanding likely to result from Monday's NBC movie, "An Early Frost."

Hospitals and doctors play small roles in "An Early Frost." This is no tale of valiant medical efforts against incurable disease, but rather a story about a family coming to grips with a sudden, devastating double revelation: their son is a homosexual, and he has AIDS.

The son, Michael Pierson, a successful young lawyer played by Aidan Quinn, is at first unable to tell his parents about his illness and his sexuality. Unable to sleep one night while he is home visiting his parents, he unexpectedly unleashes the truth. His father's initial reaction is to try to strike him, but Michael's mother intervenes.

The father, Nick, portrayed by Ben Gazzara, does not speak to Michael until the next day. "I never thought the day would come," Nick says bitterly, "when you'd be in front of me and I wouldn't know who you are."

Michael has become a stranger in his home. Only a day before, he and his family had seemed enviably full of love and respect for one another.

Then begins the slowly growing awareness of the meaning of Michael's disease. Michael's sister, pregnant, refuses to see him. "I can't take that chance," she tells her mother.

Michael leans over to kiss his mother. "Don't do that!" his father shouts.

These scenes are strong. Michael's mother, played by Gena Rowlands, knows from reading a magazine article on acquired immune deficiency syndrome that there is little chance anyone in the family can catch the disease, and she urges her daughter and her husband not to abandon Michael.

John Erman directed from a screenplay by Daniel Lipman and Ron Cowen and a story by Sherman Yellen.

The wonder of the film is that the mother's kindness and intelligence allow Lipman and Cowen to make a profound point about the loneliness and desperation of AIDS patients without for a moment transforming a drama into a lecture.

"An Early Frost" — the title comes from a line of dialogue about rose blossoms being nipped prematurely — is potent drama. It is also a vehicle that ever so gracefully dispels many of the misconceptions and fears surrounding this frightening illness.

That it accomplishes as much as it does within the confines of dramatic imperatives, on the one hand, and the skittishness of television executives about homosexuality, on the other, is remarkable.

Michael's father is a self-made man who runs a construction company and to whom the discovery of his son's homosexuality is as shattering as the knowledge of the illness.

Much of the film's drama turns on Nick's initial rejection of Michael and his later attempts to understand him, with his wife playing the intermediary.

The acting throughout is superb. Gazzara, Rowlands and Quinn are absolutely convincing, as is Michael's lover, Peter, played by D.W. Moffett.

The movie also stars Sylvia Sidney as the grandmother, Sydney Walsh as his sister and John Glover as an AIDS victim abandoned by his family.

Actor brings 'authority' to James' character

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — For viewers of public television's "Mystery!," actor Roy Marsden has become Chief Inspector Adam Dalgliesh, the Scotland Yard detective from P.D. James' mystery books.

But for Miss James, her image of Dalgliesh is still in her mind's eye, and Marsden doesn't totally match it.

That's not intended as criticism, Miss James said in an interview. No actor could fully capture her visualization of the character, since she's had the image since inventing the detective in 1959.

Marsden is the right age and height, over 6 feet, just as Miss James described Dalgliesh, but he has a mustache and his hair is lighter.

"Roy Marsden, who's very popular back home, is a very masculine actor and yet a sensitive one and I think has an extremely attractive voice," Miss James said. "He gives the part great authority. I think you do feel that this is a professional detective. I know he researched it extremely carefully and visited a lot of senior detectives at the Yard."

Roy Marsden

"Death of an Expert Witness" began its six-part dramatization several weeks agot, on "Mystery!"

The author finds "Death of an Expert Witness" close to her book and true to its spirit. She's pleased that it was filmed in the area where she set it, the flatlands of eastern England.

"In the book, the laboratory where the murder happens isn't a new, modern one; it's part of a very old house," she said. "They've done that with remarkable fidelity."

Miss James had "virtually nothing" to do with the dramatization of "Death of an Expert Witness" and her other Dalgliesh mysteries, "Shroud for a Nightingale," "Cover Her Face" and "The Black Tower." Marsden stars in all four.

"I took the view that when you sell a book for TV, the story passes into the hands of experts in a totally different medium and they will make changes," she said. "If a writer dislikes the thought of any change, then I think she just must refuse TV offers."

She wasn't asked to write the "Death of an Expert Witness" screenplay. If she had been, she thinks she would have had mixed feelings.

"When characters are not speaking your dialogue, there are moments when you feel, 'I wish I'd written it, because they would have said something different.' But I think there's a limited amount of time that one has for writing. I'm sure it's better for me to spend that time doing a new book.

"I may not have been able to do it; I don't underestimate tackling something in a totally new genre. Another problem would be that it seems to me that writing a screen treatment is very much a cooperative effort. If you're a novelist, you're used to producing your own work. I think I would find it difficult to be told, 'We're having to cut that scene.'"

Miss James, who has written 10 novels, is working on a new one about Dalgliesh, "A Taste for Death."

The author is a widow who gets her literary identification from her name, Phyllis Dorothy, and her maiden name. She has two daughters and five grandchildren.

Fort Worth museum acquires works

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Fort Worth Art Museum has acquired 21 works by Jackson Pollock, an American pioneer in abstract expressionism, museum director E.A. Carmean Jr. announced.

The collection includes three paintings completed between 1938 and 1952, along with four drawings and 14 prints. The works were purchased from New York's Pollock-Krasner Foundation with a grant from the Anne Burnett and Charles Tandy Foundation in Fort Worth.

No purchase price will be disclosed according to museum policy, but art-world experts estimate the value of the Pollocks exceed $1 million.

Pollock died in 1956 at age 44. He was at the forefront of the post-World War II abstract expressionism movement that gave American art international prominence.

In September, the museum also bought 10 works by Robert Motherwell, another great abstract expressionist artist, who is 70 years old.

Carmean said that the addition of the Pollocks and Motherwells reflects his desire "to build this museum's collection in depth on certain key figures."

Fund-raising schoolgirl wins trip to view renewed 'Lady'

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — Fifth-grader Becky Wilson should have plenty to tell her classmates next fall about her summer vacation. She's going to attend next summer's July Fourth re-dedication ceremony for the newly restored Statue of Liberty.

Becky, 11, collected more donations to restore the statue than any other student in 692 schools in 32 states participating in the Statue of Liberty Fund, Inc., drive, Elkhart fund coordinator Anne Griffin said.

She won the free five-day grand prize trip to New York City after she raised $925 for the Kansas-based fund-raising effort. The non-profit fund has turned over its money to the national Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, Inc. based in New York, according to Ms. Griffin.

DO YOU KNOW THIS BOOK?

Maybe it seems odd to think that anyone has to discover the Bible. Yet stop and think how few of us really know this Book of books.

Time was when families read the Bible together, and most youngsters could quote their Scriptures. Biblical allusions were commonplace and understood by one and all.

Then somehow, over the years, a lot of people forgot about the Bible. Or they reserved it exclusively for Sundays in church.

Now there is a great and blessed resurgence of Bible reading throughout the world — thanks to the great work of organizations like the American Bible Society. Youngsters like these are learning new truths for themselves. They are putting God's word not just into Sunday, but into every day.

Pianists to give free concert

C. Machen

D. Machen

Chris and Diane Machen, concert and recording artists from Plano, will present a concert of "praise and worship" at 7 p.m. Nov. 16 at the Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, 2800 Mogford St.

The two have shared the concert stage with such artists as the Cruse Family, Andrus, Blackwood & Co., Doug Oldham, the Hawaiians and Ken Medema. They have also joined forces in crusade meetings with evangelists such as John Bisagno, Ron Herrod, Manley Beasley and Jay Strack.

Machen, originally from Arizona, has a degree in music from Baylor University and a master of church music degree from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. He writes much of the music the duo performs. Ms. Machen, who is from New York, also has a music degree from Baylor. She has had 12 years of private study in piano and arranges the musical scores for the concert ministry.

A nursery will be provided. The public is invited to attend this free concert.

Macedonia Church plans revival

Rev. Laymond

The Macedonia Baptist Church is holding its annual Fall Revival at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Special speaker is the Rev. Dr. James E. Laymond of Houston.

A native Texan, Laymond was educated in the Houston public school system, where he later taught. He earned his bachelor of science and master of science degrees from Prairie View A&M University and his doctorate from the University of Beverly Hills, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Laymond organized and is pastor of Mt. Moriah Missionary Baptist Church, Houston. He has led tours to the Holy Land, Egypt, Greece and Jordan and traveled to South America with an evangelistic team of Southern Baptists.

Laymond is married to the former Patsy A. Shelby and the couple have three sons.

The pastor and members invite the public to attend.

Hymn workshop scheduled

The Rev. Roger Deschner is presenting an open workshop entitled "Understanding the Wesleys' Spirituality through their Hymns" and an open forum on the current revision of the United Methodist Hymnal at 8 a.m. today in the Fellowship Hall of First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Illinois Avenue.

Deschner is head of the Sacred Music Program at Perkins School of Theology, Southern Methodist University, Dallas. The sessions are designed to relate to church members, Sunday School teachers, pastors, musicians, Christian educators, youth workers and any other interested parties.

Deschner, who has been the head of the Sacred Music Program at SMU since 1975, is also currently serving as the Secretary to the United Methodist Hymnal Revision Committee. It is the committee's goal to have its work complete to present to the General Conference in 1988. Prior to his tenure at SMU, Deschner was minister of music at First United Methodist Church, Houston, Methodist's largest congregation.

He is a native Texan and a graduate of the Yale University Institute of Sacred Music.

Child care will be provided. Those attending are asked to bring a sack lunch.

Jail ministers seminar slated

A Community Seminar for all those interested in becoming involved in ministering to Midland County jail inmates and their families is being held at First Baptist Church from 2 to 5 p.m. Nov. 17.

The afternoon session is sponsored by the Midland Ministerial Association in conjunction with Prison Fellowship, a national prison ministry begun by Watergate figure Chuck Colson of Washington, D.C., some 10 years ago. The purpose of the meeting is to acquaint prospective volunteers with the various forms jail ministry takes.

"Retired teachers, business people and 'just plain folks' are needed and welcome," says John Setzer of Petroplex Covenant.

Speakers include Nancy Berry, director of Prison Fellowship for Texas; Sheriff Gary Painter; Lt. Richard Sexton, Midland County Jail; and Barbara Gideon, director of adult education for Midland College.

For more information call Setzer, 682-2190, or Nellavee Clark, First Baptist Church, 682-1646.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Altman

Ex-Midlanders to be missionaries

Mr. and Mrs. D. Ray Altman, formerly of Midland, were among 40 people named missionaries by the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board in October at Derbyshire Baptist Church, Richmond, Va.

The Altmans will work in Israel, where he will be a maintenance worker and she will be a church and home worker. He attends Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth. They are members of Gambrell Street Baptist Church, Fort Worth.

Born in Lubbock, Altman is the son of Deamos Altman of Stamford, and Peggy Altman of Slaton. While growing up, he also lived in Southland. He considers Post his hometown and First Baptist Church of Midland his home church.

He received his bachelor of science degree from Texas Tech University, Lubbock.

While he was living in Midland, he was an assistant mamager for a corporation and owned Altman Rain Guage Sprinklers.

Born and reared in Slaton, Mrs. Altman, the former Suzanne Kenney, is the daughter of Wayne and Annie Kenney of Slaton. She, too, considers First Baptist Church of Midland her home church.

She received her bachelor of science degree from Texas Tech and has been a teacher in Midland.

The Altmans have three children, Leah Raye, born in 1980; Adam Joseph, 1982; and Noah Benjamin, 1984. The family will go to Rockville, Va., in January for an eight-week orientation before leaving for the field.

St. Ann Spiritual Church will hold revival

Guest speaker is the Rev. John Joiner. The church's pastor, Mother Scott Willaims, invites the public to attend.

Report makes suggestions on women's role in church

Four representatives at the Nairobi, Kenya, meeting concluding the United Nations Decade for Women were sponsored, in part, by the Midland Seventh-Day Adventist Church. Headed by Helen Thompson of Loma Linda, Calif., delegates in their report sent to the local congregation recently commended the church in four areas and made suggestions for betterment in eight others.

First of the commendations, according to Jerry Oster, pastor of the Midland church, is the fact that the church recognizes "the Biblical principle that men and women are equal partners in Christ. That equality has always been the church's position, because it is delineated in the creation story of Genesis."

The report also praises the church for "becoming recognized as a non-governmental organization in a consulting role to the United Nations and being sufficiently interested in women's concerns to participate in the Decade for Women Conference."

The delegation, which included two women and a minister from Kenya, recommended that the church take a more active role in seeking solutions to the problems women face. One way they feel this can be done is by establishing at every level of church governance an office dedicated solely to maintaining awareness in both church administration and in themselves the concept of "proportionate participation" in the decision-making process.

Supporting that recommendation was the observations that "women are well over half" of world church membership and that "many are well-educated and competent professionally." there is a call for the church to "use their talents for the futhering of God's work."

Delegates specifically asked that positions in the church be filled with "whoever is best qualified regardless of sex."

Speaking of the report, Oster says, "This recommendation coincides with one made earlier in the year by the church's special study commission on the role of women. At that time, committees were set up to be specific about the functions of women in the church, ideas which will be presented to the annual council of administratirs from around the world."

Holy Trinity church will pay tribute to Bach, Handel

From Staff Reports

A tribute to Johann Sebastian Bach and George Frederic Handel will be performed at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, 1412 W. Illinois Ave.

The musical presentation is being performed by the Choristers of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church and members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony. Conducted by Darryl Knapp, organist and choirmaster for Holy Trinity, 45 choristers and the chamber orchestra will perform a program which includes Bach's Cantata "Wachet Auf (Wake, Awake)," No. 140 with soloists Lee Harley, Karen Ellis, David Morrow and Paul Talbot, "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring" from Cantata No. 147, The Brandenburg Concerto No. 3 in G Major for Orchestra and "O Sacred Head Now Wounded."

Also featured on the program will be the Handel Organ Concerto for Organ and Orchestra No. 13, more commonly known as "The Cuckoo and the Nightengale," Handel's coronation anthem "The King Shall Rejoice" and his "Hallelujah Chorus" from "The Messiah."

"According to a poll of the members of the American Musicological Society," Knapp says, "Bach is 'the most eminent composer of all time.'

"Bach spent his 65 years on earth serving courts, churches and towns in several roles: organist, choirmaster, teacher, violinist, composer, harpsichordist. Inwardly, he served one master only, God. His deeply Lutheran faith gave him courage to face countless difficulties with officials, a life of financial distress and recurring death as he lost both parents, his favorite brother and 11 of his children. He even faced a period of imprisonment.

"Through these trials and that of final blindness, Bach toiled steadfastly at his art. His complete works fill half a hundred volumes today, although only a handful saw publication while he lived."

Handel is often known as the inventor of the organ concerto with orchestral accompaniment.

"These original concertos, with their warm, expressive melodies, are uncomplicated, popular concert music in the best sense of the word," Knapp says. "Handel has spaciousness in his music and a marvelous sense of timing. His dramatic silences are full of awe. Handel found his way to the heart of the world by the understanding of simple things."

Sunday's performance is free and open to the public.

Surrogate mother was 'just babysitting'

MALDEN, Mass. (AP) — Sherry King said she never felt the pull of motherhood toward the baby she bore because she had impregnated herself with her brother-in-law's sperm just to give her sterile sister a child.

"To this day, I feel like an aunt. I was just baby-sitting," the surrogate mother said Thursday, the day she delivered the baby girl into the arms of her sister, Carole Jalbert.

The 7-pound, 6½-ounce baby was named Kristen Jennifer Jalbert, and she arrived early in the morning at Malden Hospital.

Hospital officials said Mrs. Jalbert exclaimed, "Oh, my baby, my baby," when the girl was born. Her husband, Ernie, cut the umbilical cord.

"I think every man should see something like that," said Jalbert, who was nicknamed "the Snipper" by his brother-in-law for his part in the birthing process.

Mrs. Jalbert wept at the news conference as she described her joy. "It's overwhelming," she said.

Owen King, husband of the natural mother, said the child was "the culmination of a two-year project with a pretty heavy emotional investment.

"When the baby was born, to say we felt ecstasy and just incredible cheerful joy is an understatement," King said.

He was there when his wife gave birth, as were the adoptive parents-to-be and the two sisters' parents, Barbara and Harry Dodge of Beverly.

The Jalberts said they would explain the circumstances of her birth to the child when she is old enough to understand. Mrs. Jalbert already has a 15-year-old stepdaughter, Celeste.

Asked whose child her mother had carried, Mrs. King's 3-year-old daughter, Sarah Elizabeth, told reporters, "Carole's baby." Asked where the baby came from, she said, "the doctor's office."

William R. Rollins, an attorney for the Jalberts, said he would file adoption papers within a week. He said the adoption would take a month at least.

King said the couples were being paid "peanuts" for their stories by a nationally syndicated television show, The Boston Herald and some magazines, but added: "I'm not rich and I can use a few peanuts."

The family began working for a child for Mrs. Jalbert in 1983. The 39-year-old woman is unable to bear children because of a hysterectomy 18 years ago.

Jalbert said he got the idea from a television talk show about surrogate mothers. "I had no reservations. It was my idea," said the Beverly police officer.

His wife said she agreed to it because the adoption process took too long, and the Kings said they accepted the idea immediately.

"I'm doing this for love and for my sister," Mrs. King, 35, said in an interview last week. "I never thought of it as my baby. It was always my sister's baby."

Mrs. King became pregnant by artificially inseminating herself at home under the instructions of Dr. Leo Sorger, an infertility expert from the Boston area. Every week for nine months, she inserted a cervical cap filled with sperm into her cervix.

She became pregant four months after the inseminations began, but suffered a miscarriage.

"I was devastated that she lost her baby. I did not feel a loss for myself," she said.

Nine months later, she became pregnant again. That pregnancy was a success.

The Kings live in Tamarac, Fla. During the final weeks of Mrs. King's pregnancy, she lived with the Jalberts in Danvers. King, a public relations official with the American Education Association, stayed in Florida until birth was imminent.

In the weeks before the birth, the two sisters were almost inseparable. Mrs. Jalbert accompanied her sister on prenatal visits and in a tour of the maternity ward.

'Hustling Herdsmen' 4-H Club not running from 'sexist' name

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Federal officials are trying to get the Hustling Herdsmen and dozens of other 4-H clubs to adopt new names if the old ones carry sexist overtones, but change is not coming easily.

"Little boys don't want to be Dainty Dollies, and little girls don't want to be Banty Roosters," said Randy Johnson, Clay County 4-H adviser.

Some groups are resisting the change, saying there is no discrimination as long as a separate club exists for the other sex.

"I think it's ridiculous," said Vicki Kerns of Plover, who has been the adult leader of the Powhaten Squaws for four years and was once a member herself.

"As long as they have a boys' club, they're not going to want to join ours anyway. You can read discrimination into just about anything, but we're not going to change until we have to," she said.

Mrs. Kerns said the name of her group, the Squaws, has not prevented girls from doing things that might be considered boys' activities. "We've got lots of girls that exhibit sheep and other livestock," she said.

The campaign for name changes has been going on for about two years, but there has been little publicity, said Roy Hougen of Fort Dodge, assistant state 4-H leader. "We've been playing it low key," he said.

Marcos to resign after January election

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos announced Friday he will resign, but his resignation will not take effect until after a Jan. 17 presidential election that Marcos indicated he expects to win.

His governing party agreed to hold the election in an attempt to blunt American and local criticism of his 20-year rule.

The decision to hold an early election followed visits by U.S. officials, including Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a personal emissary of President Reagan, who expressed concern over growth of a communist insurgency.

Marcos announced he will submit his resignation Monday to the National Assembly, but it will not take effect until after the inauguration of the winner of the early election.

"What was agreed upon here is resignation effective after the proclamation of a winner of the election," Marcos told reporters after a two-hour caucus of his party.

"So I continue as president but with a compulsory vacancy created after the election because of the resignation," Marcos said.

If Marcos, 68, is re-elected, he would start a new 6½-year term the day his resignation takes effect. If the election is canceled, the resignation would never take effect.

If he loses, Marcos would leave office 10 days after the election, when the new president would be sworn in.

Marcos said the resignation would satisfy a constitutional requirement that there must be a vacancy in the presidency for an election to be held before its regularly scheduled date in 1987.

Members of the opposition, who have 24 days to unite behind a presidential and vice presidential candidate, criticized Marcos' move but indicated they would still participate in the election.

"He is making a fool of the Filipino people in saying he is complying with the constitution but at the same time holding onto the office," said Assemblywoman Cecilia Munoz Palma, leader of an opposition coalition, the National Unification Council.

Opponents said the post-dated resignation would enable Marcos to manipulate the campaign.

"He's staying on to ensure that the whole machinery of government is used to his maximum advantage to make him win at all costs," said Rene Espina, secretary-general of the United Nationalist Democratic Organization.

Time runs out for funding of Greenwich Observatory

LONDON (AP) — Britain's keepers of Greenwich Mean Time, ever short on cash, have decided to let their expensive atomic clocks run down and stop.

John Pilkington, head of timekeeping at the Royal Greenwich Observatory, said Friday that the observatory's six atomic clocks will be left to run down and stop over the next two or three years because there isn't enough money to keep them going.

The observatory, which has been keeping time since its founding in 1675, will now have to rely on time readings provided by the International Organization of Legal Metrology (weights and measures) in Paris.

The decision comes just a year after the centennial of Greenwich Mean Time was celebrated, when timekeepers looked back fondly on how their world had progressed from the grandfather clock to atomic technology accurate to one-millionth of a second.

"It's very sad to break a tradition like this — a long distinguished history," Pilkington told The Associated Press.

The problem is that it costs $70,000-$140,000 a year to keep the clocks going, Pilkington said. At the heart of the clocks are expensive vacuum tubes containing the atomic element, cesium. The tubes have to be replaced every few years.

The state-funded Science and Engineering Research Council, which runs the observatory, wants to spend more of its money on a new international observatory that has been built at La Palma in the Canary Islands.

White editor charged with violating security act

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government Friday charged a prominent white newspaper editor with violating South Africa's Internal Security Act by publishing an interview with the head of an outlawed black guerrilla movement.

The action against Anthony Heard — editor of the Cape Times, the nation's oldest daily — was the latest in a series of moves against the media and an attempt to clamp down on contacts with the African National Congress, which commands strong black support despite being banned by the government since 1960.

The white government charged Heard with violating internal security by publishing his interview in London with ANC leader Oliver Tambo. If convicted, the editor faces up to three years in prison.

Tambo is one of 95 exiled anti-apartheid leaders whom the Ministry of Law and Order has proclaimed unquotable in South Africa. The government calls the ANC a Moscow-controlled Communist organization and has ruled out negotiations with the group until it renounces violence.

Heard, 47, said he decided to publish Tambo's remarks "to let people decide for themselves. We've got the ANC according to everyone else, but not the ANC according to the ANC. Why should one be afraid of listening to them? They might have something useful to say."

Heard, who was not asked to enter a plea, was released without bail until his next court appearance on Dec. 9.

His arrest came a week after the government imposed restrictions on coverage of unrest in 38 areas under state-of-emergency rule. Television crews and photographers may not film any violence or police action, and print journalists must report to police if rioting breaks out.

Penalties for violations include a prison term of up to 10 years.

In the interview, Tambo said the organization turned to violence only after it was banned and had no further peaceful means of fighting apartheid.

He said the ANC would only attack government and military targets, but he added that civilians would inevitably be caught in the crossfire as the campaign escalated. Tambo said a cease-fire was possible if the government released jailed leaders and began to dismantle the country's system of apartheid rule.

Heard said in a telephone interview after his brief court appearance, "I believe in maximum information...I'm not a propagandist for any cause. But I am a propagandist for free expression."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ecological destruction cited as cause of African hunger

NAIROBI, Kenya (LAT) — Continuing ecological destruction in Africa is a main cause of hunger and poverty, according to a report by the United Nations Environmental Program published Friday.

The report said that over-farming and excessive grazing, cutting down of woodland, and continued use of obsolete cultivation methods — aggravated by drought — had led to destruction of the environment and a major drop in food production.

UNEP Executive Director Mustafa Tolba also announced that African environment ministers would meet in Cairo Dec. 16-18 to discuss the crisis. The meeting would seek ways to achieve "rehabilitation of the destroyed environment to achieve self-sufficiency in food," he added.

The report said that Africa is "suffering from a continual drain on, and degradation of, its natural resources — plant cover, soils, water, animal resources and climate."

Since 1968 the continent had been receiving less water, and drought, which began by affecting the Sahel, south of the Sahara, and then spread to all of the semi-arid and sub-humid zones, had advanced even to countries with forests.

Yamani: Oil price may fall

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (LAT) — Oil Minister Ahmed Yamani was quoted Friday as warning of an oil price war that could "temporarily" drop the price per barrel to below $20 next year.

"The only way to avoid a price war is for producers inside and outside the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to agree on limiting their production and sticking to defined quotas," Yamani said in an interview published here.

He said that Saudi Arabia was still maintaining its production below its OPEC quota of 4.35 million barrels daily "but we are not willing to shoulder the burden alone."

United Arab Emirates Oil Minister Mana Said Otaiba created shock waves in OPEC last week by saying that each OPEC member was now free to sell its oil "at whatever price it can get on the market."

Tanker forced to island

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The Iranian navy forced a Greek oil tanker, crippled in an Iraqi raid earlier this week, to proceed at gunpoint Friday to Iran's Sirri Island, the London-based Lloyds Intelligence Unit reported.

Meanwhile, Iraq said Friday its air defenses prevented four Iranian warplanes from raiding residential areas in the north and south. The two neighboring countries have been at war for five years.

The 300,000-ton Canaria had been under tow by a tugboat of the Dutch salvage firm, Wijsmuller. Earlier in the week it was hit by a missile while sailing from Sirri to the key Iranian oil terminal at Kharg Island, further north in the Persian Gulf waters.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Keep your mind on your work and you will chalk up one triumph after another in the months ahead. The financial picture looks great. Travel abroad is a real possibility. Family problems have a way of ironing themselves out. Look for good career news in December. A pet project finally gets the backing it needs from those in authority. Play your cards right and you could be promoted. Curb a tendency to spend every dollar you make. Build savings! CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Irish writer Oliver Goldsmith, English painter William Hogarth, German religious reformer Martin Luther, actors Richard Burton and Roy Scheider.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Brief moments won't be enough to nourish a relationship you hope will grow and grow. You must work at it full-time! Something wonderful happens when you confide in mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A child blossoms when you take a special interest in his or her development. A direct approach works best where career and romance are concerned. Keep your personal and professional lives separate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Sharing, not sparring, is the answer to a domestic problem. A financial breakthrough is likely in the very near future. Take heart. Your past efforts will not go unrewarded.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A new romance makes it difficult for you to think about anything else! Your concern over someone's health could be unfounded. Put work aside for today and relax with loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your stability is a tremendous asset now. A phone call brings both money and memories. An optimistic newcomer gives you fresh hope for the future. Pool your ideas and talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spend more time outdoors with someone special. Nature's wonders seem even more glorious when you view them with a loved one. You have everything to gain by sticking with a self-improvement project.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Entertaining at home holds more appeal than usual. Keep the guest list small and do things simply. Accepting a last-minute invitation gives you a change to make a dramatic entrance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A day trip helps you relax. You and a loved one draw closer together. Being on good terms with a sibling means a lot to you. Forget past grievances and offer encouragement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your prospects for a happy marriage are good. Family members accept your ideas and put them into practice. Go "first class" if traveling today. A chance meeting could change your life.

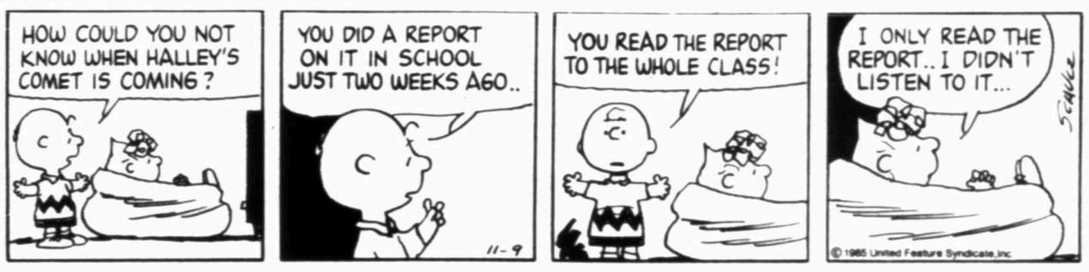

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be willing to take the great leap that will allow you to make large amounts of money. Those who never take risks cannot succeed. Cultural pursuits are favored. A flirtation blossoms into love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Try to find out why someone is avoiding you. It could be the result of a misunderstanding. Outdoor activities hold considerable appeal. Invite friends to join you on special trip.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel could prove disappointing now. Why not wait a while? There are plenty of fun things to do close to home. Plan a social event and invite that special someone!

Charles and Diana face Washington schedule full of ritz, glitz, glamour

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana of Wales arrive Saturday for a whirlwind tour that will fulfill the dream of a young man struggling with inoperable cancer, tap the wallets of American millionaires and, as Buckingham Palace puts it, "show her the delights."

That, mind you, doesn't mean that the glamorous Diana, making her first real visit to the United States, will be sampling Georgetown's night life or strolling the Capitol grounds wearing her Sony Walkman. The royal couple have a tight schedule full of ritz and glitz, with few chances for the public to even catch a glimpse.

After an 18-hour rest stop in Hawaii, Charles and Diana will arrive at nearby Andrews Air Force Base, Md., at 8:45 a.m. EST today, to be greeted by Sir Oliver Wright, the British ambassador, and Selwa Roosevelt, the State Department's chief of protocol.

Also expected in the greeting party is Jonathan Lollar, 16, of Ocean Springs, Miss., who has said his life's dream is meeting the princess. Young Lollar is blind and suffers an inoperable tumor on his pituitary gland. With help from Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., the Make A Wish Foundation, and the British Embassy, Lollar was invited.

"I'm going to at least get to hug her neck," the youth recently told reporters.

Mrs. Roosevelt's method of greeting will be watched just as closely. On a previous visit by the prince, Lenore Annenberg, her predecessor, curtsied deeply, triggering a storm of protest in the society pages. The British agree that Americans needn't bow to royalty.

Questions like that are occupying hundreds of reporters, including at least 150 from the British press, who will be tracking the prince and princess.

Michael Shea, the press secretary to Queen Elizabeth II, fielded the opening salvo at a jam-packing briefing Friday at the embassy.

Q: Is the princess carrying a third child?

A: We get about five of those reports a day. And one day, presumably, one of them will be true.

A British reporter noted that Charles, during the couple's just-ended tour of Australia, was said to have dropped a hint about enlarging his family. "So this report," he persisted, "is rather respectably sourced. It came from the prince."

"In that case," said Shea, "I have no comment."

Q: What will the princess wear?

A: I rather imagine it depends on the weather.

Q: There's been some criticism of her wardrobe.

A: The princess of Wales is in a no-win situation. Either she is wearing the same thing twice, or she's in the position of spending $20,000 a day.

Q: Will Americans ignore the prince?

A: No doubt they will each be of interest.

The prince, said Shea, "is going to show the princess of Wales the delights of Washington."

The royal couple will meet with President and Mrs. Reagan at the White House for coffee soon after their arrival, then return to the executive mansion for a gala dinner Saturday night.

Princess Diana will join Barbara Bush, wife of the vice president, for a visit to a Washington hospice in the afternoon, while Prince Charles meets with community leaders of Savannah, Ga., and Baltimore to discuss urban revitalization methods.

Charles and Diana will remain in Washington through Monday, with elaborate dinner parties each night and a super-private trip Sunday afternoon to the estate of Paul Mellon in Virginia's horse country. They'll also visit on Sunday the "Treasure Houses of Britain" exhibit at the National Gallery of Art. Charles is a patron of the exhibit.

They will make precious few public appearances, including church service at the National Cathedral on Sunday. On Tuesday, they'll head for Palm Beach, Fla., where Charles will participate in a polo match before he and the princess headline a $50,000-per-couple charity ball in behalf of United World Colleges, of which he is international president.

LONDON (AP) — During their U.S. visit, Prince Charles and Princess Diana are promoting a range of British treasures — including themselves.

The royal couple are riding high on a burst of news media exposure that has scotched notions their marriage is in trouble. The press has abruptly dropped the stories about an age gap, differing interests and cultural clashes, and it is back to cooing about prospects for another baby.

The British, bereft of empire, plagued by chronic unemployment, beset by urban riots, can still count on the nearly 1,000-year-old monarchy to give their national image some luster and put money in the Bank of England.

Even so, they appeared bemused by the sensational media buildup in the United States before the couple's five-day visit, which began Friday.

"Never has the expectation been so palpitating, the social jostling for invitations so frenzied, the baying of the social newshounds so raucous," the London Times correspondent in Washington informed readers back home Friday.

"They have tried to explain to themselves what it is that has generated such excitement. And they have come up with one simple answer: Princess Di."

It is Charles' fifth visit to the United States, but the first for Diana, one of the world's most talked-about, written-about and photographed women.

Venturing into the suburbs of Virginia, the royal couple will stop by a J.C. Penney store to advertise the chain's "Best of Britain" campaign, a nationwide promotion of British merchandise.

Elizabeth Moore and jump master Ray Ferrell buckle up before a tandem parachute jump in Lodi, Calif.

LAT Photo

Coming in tor a landing doesn't have to be a solitary experience anymore, as Elizabeth Moore and Ray Ferrell demonstrate in this tandem jump maneuver with their "parachute-built-for-two" near the airport in Lodi, Calif.

Beginners try a 'chute' for two

By ANN JAPENGA
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LODI, Calif. — A trio of spectators looked up from the alfalfa field that serves as a parachute drop zone at Lodi airport on a recent afternoon and saw a great striped canopy drifting down in silence. A drop zone is normally as hushed as a mountain meadow; falling parachutists have no one with whom to discuss the view.

But as this particular canopy came closer, the people on the ground heard a man speak above them. Then a woman said something, in a calm, alert voice.

"OK, pull back hard now," came the man's voice. The chute, which had been descending rapidly, slowed as the controls were adjusted. Although it had looked to the observers as if there were only one body suspended from the lines, two sets of feet hit the ground. The canopy collapsed in the grass, and tandem jump master Ray Ferrell congratulated his passenger, Elizabeth Moore of South Pasadena, Calif., on her first free fall.

Until recently, a first parachute jump was something a person had to do alone. As such, it only appealed to the confident few who trusted themselves to remain composed in a new and frightening situation where a mistake might prove fatal.

But when the Federal Aviation Administration approved the tandem parachute as an experimental device last June, the skies suddenly opened to people like Moore, a recent graduate of the University of Southern California School of Medicine. Before beginning her internship, Moore said she wanted to try something daring. She did not have the time to go through the extensive training required for a solo free fall. But for $125 and with just 15 minutes of instruction, she was able to experience free fall strapped to tandem jump master Ferrell, a veteran of more than 2,000 solo jumps.

Bill Booth of DeLand, Fla., who designs and sells the specialized tandem harnesses, has predicted that in the next two years the number of people making their first jump in this country will double because of the device.

Ferrell, 32, has taken a 64-year-old man and his wife on tandem jumps; they then went on to complete an accelerated free-fall course. He has jumped tandem with a woman amputee who wanted to be sure her leg prosthesis could handle landings before embarking on a parachute course.

In teaching sky-diving the conventional way, Ferrell has dumped hundreds of frightened people out of airplanes. He sees the stunned look on their faces; there's a whoosh as the door opens, and they're gone. Ferrell never knows until both plane and parachutist are on the ground again what the students felt while they were falling.

With the tandem system, Ferrell enjoys an "up close and personal reaction" to the first time jump, which almost always, he said, is one of joy.

Before the flight, Elizabeth Moore had stood in the shade of a tree at the tiny Lodi airfield not far from Stockton and recited the promises that she had made to Ferrell on the phone when she made a reservation to jump: She would assume the correct exit position, she would smile back at the pilot as she left the plane, and she would not shut her eyes as she fell.

Students whose first jump is on a static line (a cord that automatically opens the main chute when the student leaves the plane) or by the accelerated free-fall method (students exit the plane with two instructors, then are on their own after they open the canopy) often find the experience so terrifying that the close their eyes, or just go blank and remember little about the adventure. An advantage of tandem jumping, Ferrell said, is that the fear level is greatly reduced because the passenger's fate is in the hands of someone besides him or herself. First-time tandem jumpers are usually relaxed enough that they have total recall of their flight.

Ferrell finished rolling and packing the canopy on the grass. Moore, 32, slipped into a white jump suit and pulled a leather cap over her head — it would keep her hair from whipping Ferrell's eyes when they jumped.

Over at a small plane waiting on the runway, Ferrell hooked the harness he was wearing to one worn by Moore so that her back was facing his chest, and they were secured at the hips and shoulders. In a move made somewhat clumsy by the shared harness, they tucked themselves into the side door of the plane and sat on the floor where the seat had been removed. With Moore on Ferrell's lap, they then practiced an exit.

Moore leaned her head back to avoid hitting Ferrell in the face with the back of her head when they leaped into the wind. He swiveled so that both were facing out over the runway. "Ready, set...go," Ferrell said and pushed off with one hand. Moore shrieked as if they were really at 7,000 feet. The pair jumped a couple of feet and landed on the pavement.

In the accelerated free-fall program, a student must have at least six hours of ground school and seven practice jumps before he or she is ready to free fall unassisted. A static line program requires 24 practice jumps. But with just a few words of instruction and a simple exit drill, Elizabeth Moore was ready to free fall.

Once the plane reaches 7,000 feet and Ferrell opens the door of the plane, fear invades most first-time jumpers, Ferrell said. A few are so frightened that their bodies become rigid, or they hyperventilate. In that case, Ferrell said he sits in the doorway of the plane for several seconds and reminds the student that they are there to have fun.

Once out the door, the terror diminishes, Ferrell said. Most of the 175 tandem jumpers he has fallen with have remembered to smile back at the pilot, who snaps their picture with a wing-mounted Nikon. The point is not only to have a souvenir photo, but also to give the first-time jumper a point of reference so that they don't "gray out" with the rush of new sensations.

For the 15 seconds that they are in free fall, there's not much talking, except that Ferrell said he often yells something like "yahoo" in the student's ear, which acts like a gentle jolt to make sure the student is alert.

Many students are so enthralled by the feeling of free fall — it is like floating on a cushion of air, Moore said — that they tell Ferrell they are disappointed when the canopy opens. For the next eight minutes, while the pair makes a swaying 5,000-foot descent, Ferrell teaches sky diving.

Ferrell slips the student's hands into a dual set of control toggles. The rider gets a feel for controlling the direction of flight, and learns what a properly inflated canopy should look like from below. That eight minutes of training is invaluable should the student elect to go on and take a accelerated free-fall course. People who have made a tandem jump tend to learn faster because they know what sky diving feels like, Ferrell said.

Some old-timers in the sport believe that tandem jumping eventually will become the standard method of learning to sky dive. "That's always been the problem with learning to jump — there's no bunny slope," said Ben "Skratch" Daniels, a 23-year veteran of the sport. "This (tandem jumping) is a doorway that a lot more people can go through."

The reason that tandem jumping has been so long in coming is that until recently it was not possible to create a canopy large enough to carry two people, and strong enough to endure the added impact when the chute opens (normal terminal velocity in free fall is 100-120 m.p.h.; tandem jumpers reach speeds of 180 m.p.h.), and yet compact enough to be packed on one back.

The current revolution in jumping came only with innovations in materials and design that made it possible to create a canopy that can carry 400 pounds, and weighs only 37 pounds. Ferrell's canopies come from Pioneer, the same company that makes parachutes for the space shuttle. He purchases his tandem harnesses from Bill Booth's Relative Workshop in DeLand, A complete tandem rig, which includes harness, container, and main and backup chutes, costs $4,500, Ferrell said.

Pinch-hitter pilots learn how to take the controls in a crisis

Peggy Weddell checks out instruments with Tom Gallagher, of Santa Barbara, Calif., who teaches non-pilots how to land planes in emergency.

LAT Photo

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Peggy Weddell gazed out the right front window of a Cessna 172 at an even line of oil rigs dotting the sea 3,500 feet below.

A reluctant passenger who had flown in a small plane only once before, Weddell was just beginning to enjoy the sensation of being airborne when the pilot quietly collapsed against the door panel on the left side of the plane.

Weddell tuned in the numbers 121.5 KHZ (the international emergency frequency) on the radio, and reached for the microphone. "The pilot is unconscious and I don't know how to fly," she said.

"How much fuel do you have?" a voice came back.

"Five hours."

"Do you know what a transponder is?" the controller asked.

Weddell said she did, then set the knobs on a black box in the panel so that the numbers matched a setting she had memorized. (The transponder is an instrument that allows the craft to be identified on radar from the ground.)

"Very good ma'am. We've got you on radar now," the controller said after a long pause. "You're five miles east of Santa Barbara airport. We're going to get you down."

When Weddell, 36, turned the control wheel and felt the plane lurch in response to her touch, the fear she felt was quite real — even though she knew the emergency was not.

The pilot had simulated a collapse in order to allow Weddell, a drafting supervisor for a computer company, to try out the lessons she had learned at a "pinch-hitter" course she had attended the night before. A concept originated in 1963 by the Air Safety Foundation of the Airplane Owners and Pilots Association, the pinch-hitter class is designed to teach non-pilots who fly frequently in small planes how to get the plane back to earth in the event the pilot is suddenly incapacitated.

Although no one seems to keep records on how often this actually occurs, such incidents appear in the news with enough regularity that most pilots take the possibility seriously, Tom Gallagher said. Director of ground training for Santa Barbara Aviation, a flight school and air charter service, Gallagher offers a pinch-hitter course several times a year.

The emergency training figured in a situation two years ago when a 78-year-old non-pilot, Editha Merrill, saved herself and two passengers by landing the plane after their pilot died of a heart attack over Sedona, Ariz. A back-seat passenger who had just completed a pinch-hitter course made contact on the radio and communicated with controllers on the ground. She then relayed step-by-step instructions to Merrill at the controls.

The scenario can also end tragically. Gallagher told the class about a disaster in the South in which four people were killed when the pilot lost consciousness during the flight. The controller asked a non-pilot who was to take over the controls to turn on the transponder, Gallagher said. The stand-in pilot apparently believed the instrument was critical to their survival (it wasn't), and panicked when she realized she didn't know where it was located. Gallagher thinks the victims in this case might have been saved if one of them had known something about the instrument panel.

"People think it takes more knowledge than it actually does to fly a plane," Gallagher said. "Just knowing a few facts can enable you to get that plane on the ground." Given two hours of training, said Gallagher, a novice need not feel overwhelmed in an emergency.

The pinch-hitter course designed by the Air Safety Foundation includes four hours of air time and students make as many as four landings.

Gallagher contends that anyone who flies frequently in a private plane should be required to complete a pinch-hitter course. Even if an emergency never occurs, he said, the experience can transform a timid flyer into a bold and involved flying companion.

Peggy Weddell, for instance, does not intend to spend a lot of time in small planes, and it is unlikely she will ever find herself in a predicament like the one she enacted in the sky. But a number of her friends are private pilots, and Weddell said since taking the class she feels more comfortable in the air.

Dick Busch of the Air Safety Foundation based in Frederick, Md., said 30 percent of all people who complete pinch-hitter courses go on to become private pilots themselves. A number of the pinch-hitter students are executives who fly frequently in company jets, said Busch. (Gallagher said that because corporate jets are more complex to operate, the odds of a novice pilot successfully landing one in an emergency are not good.)

At a class, Gallagher pointed to a poster of the control panel of a Cessna training plane.

The point of the abbreviated flight class apparently was to identify just which dials and gauges were necessary to fly and land a plane, and which were beyond the scope of emergency procedures.

"The first thing you have to do is to let someone know you're in trouble," Gallagher said. A would-be pinch-hitter is doomed if he or she can't locate the radio or is not able to dial in a frequency where the message can be intercepted. Some make the simple mistake of not releasing the button on the microphone in order to hear the controller's reply to their distress call.

"You should know where you are," Gallagher added. Short of knowing an exact location, "you can tell the controller when you left, where you're heading and how long you've been flying. In the meantime, if you leave the plane alone, it's probably flying all right. All you're trying to do is not to get it flipped over or to stall it (a stall occurs when there is insufficient air flow over the wing to keepthe plane aloft, Gallagher explained). Odds are then you can get it down."

Gallagher took the class through the basics — determining altitude and available flight time ("pilots work in time, not gallons"), how to keep the air speed constant and the plane more or less straight and level. Within minutes of a distress call, the control tower will probably have a plane in the air flying within sight, Gallagher told the class. Chances are controllers will steer the plane toward the largest nearby airport, possibly a military field with long runways and emergency vehicles on hand.

"Maybe by now you've calmed down a little bit because you've been flying successfully for five or 10 minutes," he said. "We've turned around. We've lined it up. We're 10 miles out from the runway. Now we've got to get down..."

"All right. We're going to make a slight descent now," Gallagher said. "See the throttle by our left knee? Pull it back slightly. Do not touch the red knob (the fuel mixture control; pulling it all the way back would stop the engine). Slowly move it back a few inches. Pull back just a little. Don't let it go down too fast. What's our air speed now?"

"80."

"Do you see the runway?" Gallagher asked. "It's approximately 3 miles ahead to the left. don't get much slower now than 80," he added, concerned about stalling at this low altitude. "Do what you have to with the control wheel now.

Aliens neglected, at center, group says

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Illegal aliens held at a federal detention center sometimes are neglected and when released on bond cannot go to live with relatives, a panel looking into the detention of immigration violators was told Friday.

Jim Cushman told the 11-member Texas Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights that the federal detention center in Bayview, Texas, is not a hotel.

"It's more like a concentration camp, much similar to the concentration camps that we have heard about in the past in other countries," Cushman said.

"If we're going to detain these people, I think we should detain them in humanitarian conditions," he added. "If not, we should let them go so they can take care of themselves."

The detention center can accommodate 680 prisoners who are awaiting deportation hearings or are there for processing.

Cushman, who has been a paralegal with Proyecto Libertad in Harlingen for the past seven months, said many of the prisoners do not get enough soap, some have had to wear the same clothes for two weeks and that some ill prisoners, especially women, do not get adequate medical attention.

"The drug of choice seems to be aspirin," Cushman said. "I know aspirin is cheap, but that's not reason to have so much of it. It's not a cure-all. It seems to be the answer of all the medical problems in there."

He also said conditions at the camp improve when, like in this case, visitors are expected.

But Silvestre Reyes, chief border patrol agent in McAllen, said the committee was getting a distorted picture from people opposed to immigration laws.

"There was, there has been and there will continue to be a deliberate attempt to misrepresent facts before not only before your committee but before the public," he said.

"I have seen that for a year and a half. I will continue to see that, but we're going to meet the challenge, and we're going to refute allegations and we want facts. We will investigate, and we will report to you. We will report to the attorney general and whoever else is interested."

Ed O'Connor, regional commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service said he would look into accusations of neglect of prisoners.

"I feel that everyone should be treated properly. There's no question in my mind about that," he told the committee. "The minute, surreptiously or any other way, that a person gets into the United States, that person is protected by the Constitution."

Many of the prisoners are Central Americans and attorneys testifying before the committee on Friday said that some of the Central Americans are released on their own recognizance, but then must stay in the Rio Grande Valley.

Linda Yanez, an immigration attorney from Brownsville, told the panel that those prisoners who are released, but can't leave the area are placed in a hardship condition.

"It's ridiculous. These people don't live here. They're in transit between the Valley and friends on the east or west coast or Houston and they can't leave here," Ms. Yanez said. "The unemployment situation here is one of the highest in the country and yet they're being forced to stay here."

The committee earlier on Friday toured the facility and members said prisoners complained mostly about the food.

"They said it was boring," J. Richard Avena, regional director of the U.S. Commission of Civil Rights said.

He said other prisoners also complained about their length of stay.

"Of course, nobody likes to be in jail," Avena said.

While the committee was inside talking to officials, about 100 prisoners crowded arounded a fence and told reporters about unfair treatment inside the facilities. They complained about the food and poor sanitation facilities.

Avena said the committee will make its findings available to its parent commission, but he said he didn't know when that would be.

At the hearing, committee member Ed Robb of Marshall, asked Cushman, the paralegal, if his presentation intimated that he wanted U.S. foreign policy changed in respect to Central America.

Cushman said yes.

PBPA president testifies against tax reform proposal

From Staff Reports

Perry Bolger, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and Brazos Petroleum of Midland, gave testimony to the Fossil & Synthetic Fuels Sub-committee of the Energy and Commerce Committee in Washington this week regarding the impact on the independent oil producers in the Permian Basin if the House Ways and Means Committee tax reform proposal is passed into law.

Bolger told the committee of the PBPA's role in the petroleum industry and the significance of the Permian Basin to domestic crude production. Bolger also told committee members that the independent producers of the region would be crippled, and "many finished," if the committee proposals concerning intangible drilling costs, depletion allowances and investment tax credits are enacted, and that the opinion expressed by the Association members concur with the Frank Pitts and Ernst and Whinney surveys that independent producers would at minimum, reduce wildcat drilling by 84 percent, and development drilling by 67 percent, if the tax proposal was passed into law in its' present form.

Bolger strongly emphasized to the committee that lower oil prices, lower gas prices and the uncertainty over tax laws have already caused a severe downtrend in that segment of the industry, and that "the addition of devastating tax reform proposals would all but ruin" the independent producers.

"The independents who have survived all these problems can live under pricing uncertainties, but not the proposed changes in tax treatment," Bolger said. He added, "There are approximately 275 rigs running in the 58 county Permian Basin — down from a peak of 520 rigs in 1982 and 87 percent of those rigs are working for the independent producers who produce 20 percent of the nation's crude oil from the Basin.

"The production of the 24 largest companies has been continually declining in the lower 48 states; the other 15,000 or so smaller companies (independent producers) have been responsible for maintaining the independent production at a rate equal to 1979. Without the independent producer, domestic production would be over one million barrels lower per day than it was in 1979."

Bolger also testified, "Under the current tax proposals, most drilling would cease, except a few exploratory wells by large companies. Many of the smaller independents would liquidate immediately, and there would be venture capital, no entrepreneurs, no entry level people interested in a high risk, and totally unstable, business. With no drilling, and the acquisition of existing reserves by the stronger entities, instead of drilling, most reserves will end up in the hands of the majors, and the smaller independent producer and explorationist will disappear."

Homemakers clubs sponsor bazaar at Dellwood Mall

From Staff Reports

Home-baked goods, canned foods, handmade items and a brass "treasure" chest of sundry items will be featured today in the annual bazaar sponsored by the Midland County Extension Homemakers clubs.

The bazaar will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. today in Dellwood Mall at Illinois Avenue and Midkiff Road. Proceeds from the sale will go toward projects and charities of the five Extension Homemakers clubs putting on the bazaar, according to Laveren Lindsey.

"Each club will have handmade items, canned goods and baked goods" in the bazaar, she said.

The Prairie Lee Homemakers, one of the clubs in the bazaar, will feature a handmade quilt to be offered in a raffle.

Bazaar-goers each may donate $1 toward winning a brass chest of about 70 kitchen and other home-use items "for the housewife or bachelor."

Clubs in the Homemakers organization, which is guided by the Texas Agriculture Extension Service (TAEX), and their presidents are Chaparral, Berley Anderle; Moonlighters, Susan Weaverling; Prairie Lee, Paula Shepherd; Valley View, Gerry Goode, and Sagebrush, Jenny Tuck. Adviser to the clubs is Marian Farr, TAEX county agent for home economics.

"It's really enjoyable and worthwhile," Mrs. Lindsey said of club work. Goals of the Homemakers include practicing wholesome nutritional habits, working toward better and safer environments, and sharing knowledge on issues affecting family life. The Homemakers clubs formerly were called Home Demonstration Clubs.

About 65 women are in the five clubs.

"They're open to everyone," Mrs. Lindsey said. "We'd love to have men's clubs, but we don't. We can't get the men interested."

Foundation's records to be audited

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney has been appointed to oversee an audit of the Rainbow Foundation Inc., which is being sued by the state attorney general's office for allegedly dipping into contributions earmarked to help dying children.

State District Judge Peter Solito on Thursday appointed Ronald Sommers of Houston to oversee an audit of the organization and to freeze its assets until a Nov. 14 hearing.

The organization, which also does business as Make A Wish Come True Foundation, was set up to make the "last wish" of terminally ill children a reality.

But a lawsuit filed Thursday by the attorney general's office alleges "donations were not accurately accounted for and were subject to misapplication."
