Democrats sharpen attacks before debate

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

NEW YORK — Geraldine A. Ferraro is accusing her Republican opponents of airing inaccurate television ads that are "almost like brainwashing," while presidential challenger Walter Mondale ridicules George Bush's income tax bill as an example of unfairness in administration tax policy.

Vice President Bush, said the Democratic presidential nominee, paid a tax rate last year that was proportionately "less than the maid pays who cleans up the office of the vice president."

Both Mondale and President Reagan were in Washington again today, deep into preparations for their televised debate Sunday evening in Louisville, Ky.

Ms. Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, wrapped up a four-day campaign trip Thursday after drawing big crowds in the South and hitting Republican policies in the Midwest.

Bush, who released his tax information Wednesday, avoided reporters' questions about his finances Thursday by departing from his usual agenda of holding a news conference in every city. He focused instead on the arms race, maintaining the United States was "less closer to war" under Reagan, as he appeared with Reagan in Washington and flew to Memphis to pick up the endorsement of independent Mayor Dick Hackett.

Bush's disclosure showed that he paid 48.6 percent of his adjusted gross income in taxes in 1981, including a $198,000 bill he is challenging the Internal Revenue Service over. In 1982, Bush's tax rate dropped to 24.2 percent, and in 1983 it was down to 12.8 percent.

Ms. Ferraro, campaigning in Dayton, Ohio, expressed irritation at Bush's "snide comments" during the controversy over her own finances, and said it is time for Bush to get the same type of tough questions she did.

"He and his Republican people were all yelling about my finances, now let's see what they're going to do on theirs," she said in an interview with the Dayton Daily News.

"He was sitting there for three months hitting at me for my finances, and he knows damn well that ... he had $198,000 he was holding back from the government," Ms. Ferraro said.

Mondale said Bush symbolizes the imbalances prompted by Reagan's tax cuts enacted in 1981.

"That reminds us again of how unfair the present tax system is," Mondale said.

Joblessness edges down, supporting predictions

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON — Civilian unemployment edged down to 7.4 percent last month, the lowest since June, as the labor market resumed its improvement after two months of rising or standstill joblessness, the government said today.

The 0.1 percentage point drop from August's 7.5 percent — made possible by the creation of more than 270,000 jobs — seemed to bear out predictions by private economists that July's rise in unemployment was a temporary phenomenon.

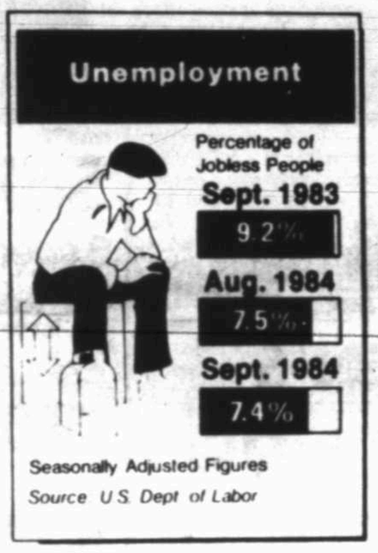

The overall rate has fallen 1.8 percentage points since September 1983, from 9.2 percent to 7.4 percent. In June, however, the rate stood at 7.1 percent. Unemployment was 7.5 percent when President Reagan took office in January 1981.

The total number of Americans with jobs in September climbed to 105.2 million, but that was well short of the record 105.7 million in June, according to Labor Department.

September's minuscule decline in the civilian rate, when adjusted for seasonal variations, translated into a decline in the number of Americans officially categorized as unemployed from 8,526,000 to 8,460,000 — a drop of 66,000.

An alternate unemployment rate, which groups the 113.7-million-member civilian labor force with the more than 1.7 million armed forces personnel stationed in the United States, dropped from 7.4 to 7.3 percent last month, the report said.

The politically sensitive unemployment figures, coming just over a month before the presidential election, also showed that the number of Americans on business payrolls rose by 139,000 last month, and that the labor force figures were not meaningfully affected by a United Auto Workers' strike against General Motors Corp. or a hospital workers' walkout in New York City.

AP Laserphoto Graphic

The only significant rise in joblessness among the various population groups was for teenagers. That rate jumped from 18.4 percent to 19.3 percent — an increase that is not unusual at the beginning of the school year.

Since the trough of the 1981-82 recession, when civilian joblessness peaked at 10.7 percent, roughly 6 million Americans have gone to work, according to both the household survey and a separate compilation of business establishments by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In advance of today's report, several private analysts said the civilian rate will likely hold steady in the coming months as new hiring slows with the slackening in the overall recovery.

The bureau also reported that the number of "discouraged workers" — people not counted as unemployed because they have stopped looking for work — fell by 100,000 in the July-September quarter to 1.2 million and was down by about 600,000 since the pit of the recession at late 1982.

In testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, bureau Director Janet L. Norwood noted, however, that "women and blacks continue to be disproportionately represented among the discouraged."

Ms. Norwood, sizing up general labor market conditions, said, "The unemployment rate has been on a plateau for several months. The overall employment figures, which had shown a moderation in the pace of labor market improvement in recent months, were little changed in September."

Among the various population groups, the monthly changes in the unemployment rates were:

—Adult men, 6.5 percent, up from 6.4 percent.

—Adult women, 6.7, down from 7.1.

—Whites, 6.4, unchanged.

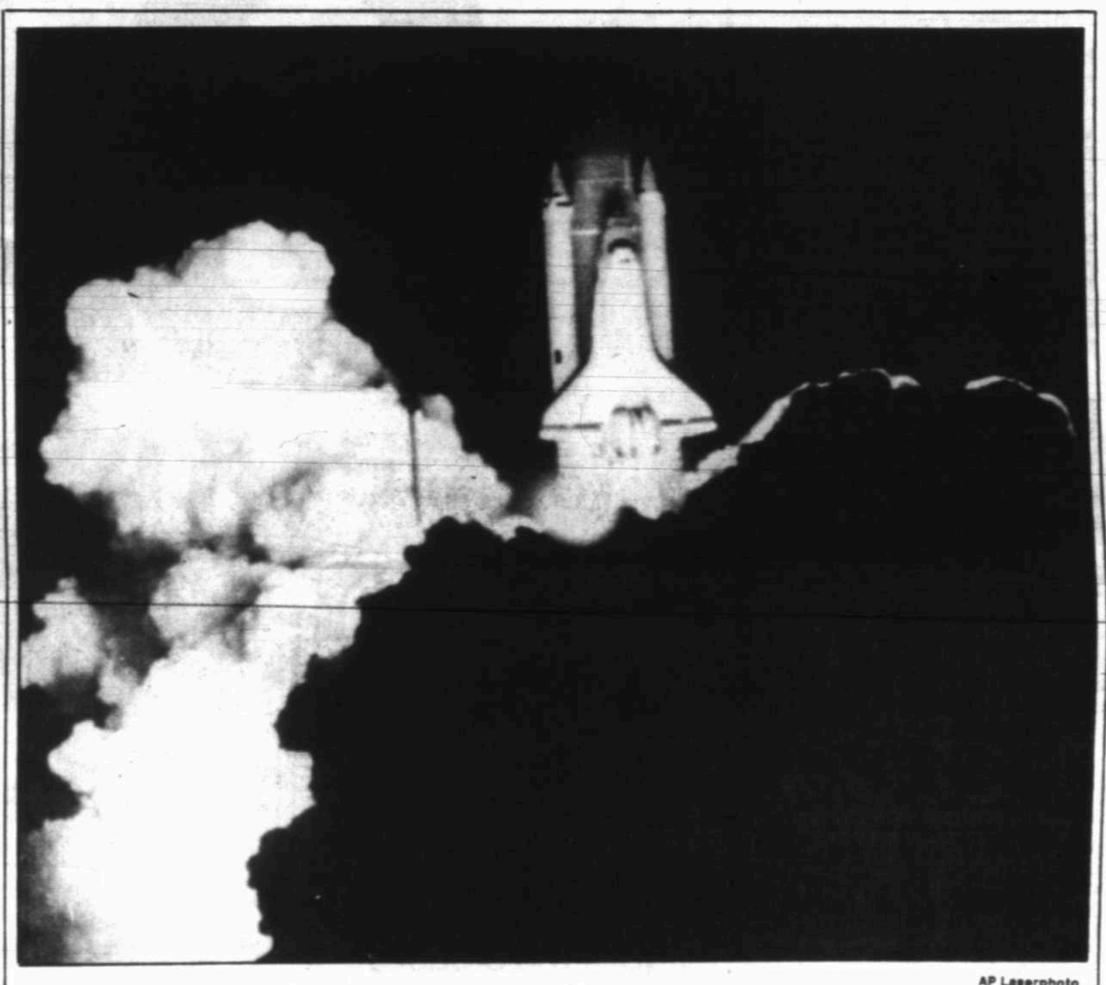

—Blacks, 15.1, down from 16.0.

—Hispanics, 10.7, unchanged.

Before today's announcement, private analysts said the surprising and impressive job gains of the year's first half cannot be repeated because a host of other indicators of business health demonstrate that the recovery has slowed significantly.

David Ernst, vice president of Evans Economics Inc., a forecasting firm based in the nation's capital, said that "in line with the slowing of the economy, employment growth will be slight" in the next few months.

"With businesses still focusing on trying to improve their efficiency, we're not going to see a lot more (employment) growth," he said.

Space Shuttle Challenger illuminates its exhaust as it leaves the launch pad.

Pre-dawn shuttle launch carries seven into space

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Shuttle Challenger soared spectacularly into orbit today with a record crew of seven on an Earth-surveying mission that includes the first space walk by an American woman.

During eight days in space, the crew of five men and two women will use radar, sensors and cameras to study the Earth's atmosphere and oceans and search for ancient lost cities. The space walk by astronauts Kathy Sullivan and David Leestma will allow them to practice refueling a satellite in orbit for the first time.

The spacecraft thundered away from its launch pad on time at 7:03 a.m. EDT, 14 minutes before dawn — its smoketrail brilliantly illuminated by the rising sun — and sped into the sky on a northeast path up the East Coast of the United States.

Challenger's ascent was traced by a bright flare arching through the sky seen 160 miles to the south in Miami.

As Challenger settled into orbit at 17,400 mph, mission commander Robert Crippen said, "That launch team did a really nice job. This is really a nice vehicle."

Astronaut Sally Ride, making her second space trip, added, "The consensus of the rookies on board is that the ride was worth three 'E' tickets. " The reference was to the way Disneyland once charged for its rides, with an "E" ticket being the most valuable. On her first flight, Ms. Ride said that the launch was worth one "E" ticket.

Liftoff came exactly one month after sister ship Discovery returned from its inaugural flight. That's the quickest turnaround yet between shuttle launches and is good news to NASA, which plans to send the space planes into orbit at a one-a-month rate for the next 14 months, accelerating that to 16 flights in 1986.

"We're off and running on a launch a month," said launch director Bob Sieck, who reported the countdown was near-perfect, with Challenger taking off just 43 milliseconds late.

The launching, as usual, thrilled tens of thousands gathered to view the fiery departure.

'Low-income' housing residents may earn as much as $29,280

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A person making as much as $29,280 per year can still qualify for apartments reserved for low-income renters in eight complexes financed through the Midland Housing Finance Corporation, according to the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

These complexes were built with the help of low-interest, tax-free bond issues, which allow the builder to charge lower rents. In return, the builders are required to reserve 20 percent of the units for low-income renters, "and the rent could not exceed 30 percent of their income," said Fred Kester, MHFC secretery.

Federal workers return to jobs

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Federal workers were back on the job today following a partial shutdown of the government, but Congress still must approve an emergency spending bill to avert further disruptions and allow the 98th Congress to adjourn.

Government offices were opening today thanks to a stopgap measure Congress passed Thursday to keep most government departments and agencies solvent until 6 p.m. tonight.

After word that President Reagan would sign the temporary measure came from the White House, the word went out for all furloughed workers to report for work as usual today. And a House-Senate conference committee agreed the workers should be paid for their day off Thursday.

Still unresolved, though, was a spending bill that will provide money for most of the government for the remainder of the fiscal year that began Monday. Congressional negotiators worked through Thursday night trying to agree on a compromise version of the broad spending bill that has been passed by the House and Senate.

Before the full conference quit shortly before midnight, conferees agreed unanimously to pay federal employees for any time lost from work as a result of the money crisis. "I don't think they should be penalized," said Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass.

Subcommittees meanwhile met through the night in an attempt to hammer out agreements.

The House and Senate would have to ratify a compromise before it can be sent to the White House. Congressional leaders had hoped to adjourn for the year by the end of this week, but that cannot be done until a long-term money bill is enacted into law.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said Thursday it was "extremely unlikely ... one chance out of 100" that action could be completed by tonight.

Meanwhile, another fiscal housekeeping measure Congress must pass before adjourning for the year is an increase in the government's borrowing authority — the national debt — to $1.823 trillion from its present level of $1.573 trillion.

The Senate today was tackling this and it had the potential to become as entangled with unrelated amendments as the money bill has.

New funds for the government will not be necessary until early next week because of the upcoming weekend and Columbus Day on Monday, a federal holiday.

The unprecedented, more than $460 billion legislation encompasses government operations from the Pentagon and foreign aid to water projects and agricultural programs.

Budget director David A. Stockman told legislators in a letter Thursday that if the spending bill becomes too fat from the session-end rush to load it with pet projects there would surely be a presidential veto.

Despite the scramble Thursday to reopen government offices, the president and congressional leaders found time to trade partisan charges of who was to blame for the mess.

Asked why he ordered government offices to shutdown Thursday, Reagan replied: "This has been very typical of what has happened ever since we have been here and you can lay this right on the majority party in the House of Representatives."

"Just once it would be great to have a budget on time," Reagan said.

Man ending century as single

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — One year into his second century, Artur Jonsson is about to try something new — marriage.

Jonsson spend his first 101 years single — mostly farming and dealing in horses near the town of Askersund, about 110 miles southwest of Stockholm. However, he began to feel his age earlier this year and advertised for a housekeeper, the newspaper Aftonbladet said today.

He found 55-year-old Ingrid Engdal, who moved in this spring to take care of Jonsson and became his fiance this week, the newspaper said.

"I'd planned to stay for a couple of weeks, but then love intervened," she was quoted as saying.

Pregnant diabetics should take test five times a day

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have diabetes but my husband and I are planning to start a family. I know I will have to take certain precautions when I am pregnant and I am prepared to do whatever my doctor tells me to do. But at this point I have some specific questions: How many times a day will I have to test for sugar while I am pregnant, and what meal changes will I have to make? — Elsie, Columbia, S.C.

Dear Elsie: Dr. Eric A. Orzeck, a physician in private practice in Houston, suggests that pregnant diabetics perform blood glucose testing before each meal, at snack time, and at bedtime. In addition, the urine should be tested once daily.

Dr. Orzeck also notes that an optimal schedule would include three meals a day plus two snacks.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother has some knee condition that I am not sure what it is. He says that the doctor he went to told him that he would recommend knee replacement if my brother was older. I would think that it would be better to perform an operation on a person when he is younger, not older. Did my brother misunderstand what the doctor told him? — Max, Wilkes-Barre, Penna.

Dear Max: Total knee replacement has an estimated life of from 10 to 15 years. If the procedure has to be repeated, the result generally is not as successful as it was the time before. Therefore, it is considered preferable for the operation not to be performed in patients under 55 years of age.

Patients who do have the operation can anticipate relief from pain in normal motion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: One of my neighbors was involved in a serious automobile accident, and one of her children was severely injured around the head. In fact the child was unconscious for a while. He seems to be doing all right, although I guess it's still too early to tell. I know you can't predict what will happen with a particular child, but can you give some general idea about what the chances for recovery are in a case like this? — Mrs. G.D., Mobile, Ala.

Dear Mrs. D.: The development of new diagnostic procedures and modern techniques of intensive care have substantially improved the outlook in the kind of situation you describe. Unlike the case with adults, where maximum improvement is generally achieved in about six months, children may continue to show neurologic improvement for months or even years following a head injury.

This optimistic note should not be interpreted as minimizing the seriousness of head trauma in children or the importance of prevention. Children who ride in automobiles should be strapped into safety seats. Two minutes of prevention can avoid a lifetime of suffering.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have an uncle who is in his eighties and who is becoming forgetful and beginning to show signs of senility. His wife wants to do what's best, but she doesn't know what the best thing is. They have no children. The family doctor has suggested that my uncle see a neurologist. Is there any point to this in a person his age? — Veri, Springfield, Ill.

Dear Veri: The fact that a person is in his eighties does not mean that the condition you describe cannot be reversed. My answer to your question is that your uncle should receive the same treatment he would be getting if he were 50 years of age, and that includes a complete physical examination and neurologic work-up.

For Stacey, Raleigh, North Carolina: Both Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis come under the heading of inflammatory bowel disease. Although they are considered to be separate diseases, they have been reported to have occurred in the same patient.

Old-fashioned pump still fills 'em up at Gordonville station

GORDONVILLE, Texas (AP) — Standing defiantly among its successors outside a service station here is a symbol of one man's stand against progress.

T.J. Flowers, a longtime Gordonville resident, had owned his Gulf station for about two years in 1948 when a representative from the Pittsburgh, Pa.-based corporation informed him that the company was about to undergo a major change.

As part of a modernization plan for the Gulf Oil Corp., all of the old, hand-action gas pumps were being removed nationwide for the slick, modern electrical versions. And that included getting the old pumps "off-the-books" at Flowers' Gordonville station.

"I told them if they wanted to take the pump, then they could just take the whole damn station," Flowers recalls. "I didn't want to get rid of it, so finally they just decided to let me keep it."

And 38 years later, Flowers and the 9-foot gasoline pump are still together. At one time, Flowers had another such old-time pump that sold premium gasoline, but it was taken out when the company stopped selling the product.

The pump, in fact, has seen more action with the company than Flowers, outdating his affiliation with Gulf by several years.

"They put it in just before I got here," he said. "It wasn't a brand-new one either; they had been using it somewhere else before they brought it here."

The faded orange pump, with its old-fashioned Gulf globe on top, is pumping out gasoline just as it did the day it was put in — most of the time even better than the other pumps that have come and gone, Flowers said.

"I've never really had to fix it except for the tubes," Flowers said, adding that the pumps had been installed several years before he bought the station.

The inner workings of the pump are wonderful in their simplicity. With just a couple of pulls on a long handle located on the side of the pump, up to 10 gallons of regular leaded gasoline appear in a glass storage container at the top of the unit.

From there, the gas flows down through a more familiar black hose — similar to those seen on modern gas pumps — directly into the automobile.

The pump shows little wear from its more than 40 years of faithful service. Although there are rust spots here and there, the paint job has held up remarkably well. A small crack has appeared around the base of the glass container.

Flowers has had to make a few adaptations to the pump, including addition of several federal regulations signs. Also, he has had to equip the pump with a series of locks to guard against gasoline theft — things not deemed necessary in the era when it was built.

On a busy summer day, Flowers said the old pump gets a real workout, even if many of the younger people who come to the station have no idea what it is.

"On holidays, it gets like a bunch of ants through here, just one car after another," he said, "A lot of the young people who come through here stop and look at it, but just can't seem to figure out what it is. They look all confused because they just don't know what the hell it is."

On the other side of the coin, Flowers said, are those people who know exactly what the odd-looking contraption is — right up to the pump's value as an antique. He said he constantly gets offers to sell the unit.

Road led to fame for TV host

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — It's a long way from playing music at bars in Robstown to hosting a television show with higher ratings that "60 Minutes."

But Johnny Canales, a native of Robstown, made the trip.

Canales hosts and stars in the "Johnny Canales Show," an hour-long English-Spanish language variety program that features Chicano musicians from throughout the U.S.

The show is aired in 16 markets including Corpus Christi, Dallas, San Antonio, Houston, Chicago, Denver and El Paso.

Canales said he is negotiating with an independent station near Los Angeles to have his show broadcast in the city with the nation's largest Mexican-American population.

The show is aired on Spanish International Network stations, SIN, but also on seven independent stations and three network affiliates.

Ed Gomez, who with Canales owns the Coronado Network production company, estimated that the cities in which the show airs have a total Latin population of 6 million.

Gomez estimated 200,000 households view the program each week.

Canales' show is so popular that in one market, KGNS-TV in Laredo, an Arbitron television rating survey showed the program received a 29 percent share of the audience opposite "60 Minutes" which received a meager 14 percent in one rating period last July.

For Canales, the popularity is a long way from the small neighborhood bars in which he and his father, Esteban, used to perform. Canales played guitar while his father played violin.

"Those are the people that are most excited about how I've done, the people that knew me then," Canales said. "I'll always remember where I came from and where I grew up."

Canales said that, at least every two shows, he reminisces about his childhood and his performances with his late father.

Canales would like to see his program shown in New York, although the Hispanic viewing audience in Los Angeles is larger.

This is the Lakeview trailer park in Weslaco, Texas, where an 11-year-old boy was ambushed Wednesday night. Evert Bowen Ballard Jr. was arraigned before Judge Jaime Garza in Edinburg Thrusday morning where bond was set at $50,000.

Mother: Son frustrated with recent burglaries

Evert Ballard Jr.

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — The mother of a man charged with shooting an 11-year-old boy he believed to be involved in a string of buglaries said she understands what drove her son to violence.

Martha Francis Ballard, who lives at the Lakeview Trailer Park owned by her son, Everett Bowen Ballard Jr., said he had grown frustrated with failed efforts by local police to solve a slew of recent burglaries at the trailer court.

"They came out here every time we had one, but nothing was solved and they were getting worse," Mrs. Ballard said Thursday.

Ballard, 48, was released on a $50,000 bond Thursday afternoon after being charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

The victim, Juan Antonio Sauceda of Weslaco, remained in stable condition in the intensive care unit of Knapp Memorial Hospital suffering from buckshot wounds to his abdomen and arm suffered in the shooting Wednesday night.

Ballard, dressed in camouflage clothing, carried a shotgun and a .44-caliber Magnum, both of which were fired, police said.

"I was shocked," said Ballard's mother.

Police investigators said Thursday they had no evidence connecting the wounded boy with the buglaries, said Erasmo Bravo of the Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department.

Mrs. Ballard said most of the park's 175 lots are rented by elderly visitors who spend winter months in South Texas.

She said her son, a Korean War veteran, was frustrated by the 24 robberies at the park in the last four months and decided to take matters into his own hands.

Bravo said police investigators had been at the Ballard home less than two hours before the shooting occured.

He said Ballard did not tell police he had discovered some of the stolen goods but had left them hidden so he could "stake out" the scene and wait for the robbers to return for the stereo equipment, televisions and electronic gear taken from the trailers.

Not long after Ballard hid beside the road near the stolen property, a vehicle in which the boy, his father and two other people were riding pulled up, Bravo said. Ballard opened fire on the vehicle, hitting the boy, he said.

Firm barred from doing business with government

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The suspension of government purchases from a local aircraft spare parts firm will cost the federal government $30 million, an attorney for the company said.

Joseph Petrillo, an attorney for Alamo Aircraft Supply Inc., made the comment after the company was informed the government was ceasing business with it for three years.

The suspension results from company workers allegedly giving "things of value" to federal employees in exchange for "proprietary drawings."

Proprietary drawings are blueprints of spare parts, for which the government guarantees secrecy.

"The result (of Alamo's suspension) will be sharply reduced competition," Petrillo said.

Loss of Alamo as a supplier will cost the government $30 million over the next three years, he said.

The suspension of the San Antonio firm was contained in a "memorandum of debarment," dated Sept. 28 and authored by Carl Kabeiseman, general counsel of the Defense Logistics Agency, The San Antonio Light reported Thursday.

The DLA acquires and manages 2.3 million consumable items used by the military and controls the nationwide Defense Property Disposal Office, which oversees sales of used military goods to the private sector.

DLA spokesman John Goldsmith said the memorandum identified retired Kelly Air Force Base employee Ramiro Chavarria, 56, as the provider of proprietary drawings of aircraft parts to Alamo, operated by Jesse, Carl and Leon Wulfe.

In return, Goldsmith said the memo noted, Chavarria allegedly received payments of cash, liquor, a portable television, binoculars and a radio.

The gifts and payments allegedly were given between Christmas of 1979 and Christmas of 1982.

Chavarria is awaiting sentencing after he pleaded guilty in federal court in Connecticut last year to a single count of bribery.

That case involved acceptance of a total $25,000 from Alfred T. Stanger, owner of Electro-Methods Inc. of South Windsor, Conn., and Stanger's partner Jack R. Mason, head of Macor Sales Co. in Midwest City, Okla.

Chavarria retired from his job as a mechanical engineer with the Air Logistics Center at Kelly before he entered the guilty plea.

New justice promises hard work, honesty

AUSTIN (AP) — Raul. A. Gonzalez, the newest justice of the Texas Supreme Court and the first Mexican-American, promised Gov. Mark White that he would bring two things to the job.

"I'll give you hard work and honest decisions," Gonzalez said Thursday as White named him to the high court bench.

In making the appointment, White noted that Gonzalez is the son of migrant farmworkers.

"Raul Gonzalez remembers his earliest experiences as a migrant worker in Texas, and his appointment to the state's highest court demonstrates that the doors of opportunity are open to all persons in our state," White said.

"I am delighted that Judge Gonzalez has accepted this appointment, making this a historic day in Texas," White said.

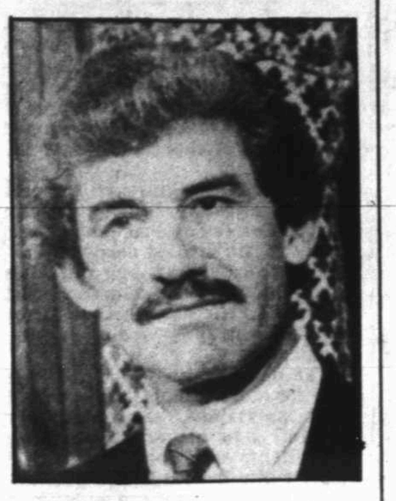

Gonzalez, 44, has been an associate justice on the 13th Court of Appeals. He will complete the unexpired term of Charles Barrow, who stepped down from the Supreme Court last month to become dean of the Baylor University Law School. The term extends until Dec. 31, 1988.

The Texas Supreme Court is the highest state appellate court for civil and constitutional cases. Criminal cases go to the Court of Criminal Appeals.

White said that Gonzalez, as the second of five children, worked with his parents harvesting apples in Washington, cotton in Arkansas, and tomatoes and apricots in California before the family settled in Weslaco, where Gonzalez completed high school.

A graduate of the University of Texas, Gonzalez received his law degree from the University of Houston Law School in 1966 and currently is working on a master's degree in judicial process from the University of Virginia Law School.

He was appointed to the 13th Court of Appeals in 1981. Before that, Gonzalez was a judge of the 103rd state District Court at Brownsville, a post he held from 1978 to 1980.

Raul Gonzalez

From 1969 to 1973, Gonzalez was an assistant U.S. attorney for the southern district of Texas, and was chief of the U.S. attorney's Brownsville division. He also worked as an assistant city attorney for Houston.

"His legal and judicial experience makes him uniquely qualified to serve on the Texas Supreme Court," White said.

White had been under some pressure to appoint a minority to the Supreme Court bench. In announcing the appointment of Gonzalez, the governor's office noted that White has named 153 Mexican-Americans to state boards, commissions and other positions.

Asked if he had specifically sought a Hispanic judge, White said he was looking only for "a quality appointment."

The governor said everyone he consulted about Gonzalez "said he was first class, and that's why I made the appointment."

Gonzalez, who said he was a Democrat and would seek election when his Supreme Court term expires in 1988, was named to the 13th Court of Appeals by then-Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican.

Education board looks at problems

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature dictated what it wants done for public education in Texas. Now it's up to the 15 members of the new State Board of Education to figure out how to do it.

"There is a lot to do," said Jon Brumley, the Fort Worth oilman who serves as chairman.

"Once we see what the problems are, we'll be able to relax a little bit. But I think when you are in the midst of being told the problems it makes you anxious. There's a lot of anxiety," he added.

That the board faces a big job became obvious about 90 minutes into the Thursday meeting when everything already was behind schedule. Texas Education Agency officials did not have time to complete the presentations they planned.

"We're trying to do too much here," Brumley said, telling his colleagues to spend more time listening than asking questions during the sessions. "We're not moving as fast as we'd like to."

The goal Thursday was to brief the board members on the questions they face. Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum read a list of problems that need solutions. Some are problems caused by differing interpretations of the reform education package approved this year by lawmakers.

Many of the problems must be given an "extremely urgent" priority, Bynum told the board.

Among the most pressing issues is the teacher competency test program mandated in the new law. All Texas public school teachers must pass an exam by June 30, 1986 in order to stay in the classroom. Bynum said work must begin immediately on developing a test program.

"I frankly think we are going to have some difficulty" getting a test together in time, he said.

The board also must interpret the new law's academic requirements, including a mandate against social promotions. The law says 70 is the passing grade.

Tom Anderson, a deputy commissioner, told board members the problem is, "What does a grade of 70 mean?"

"Right now, there is no consistency among the districts as to what a grade of 70 means," said Anderson.

He also raised questions about the high school diploma test mandated by the Legislature.

"How hard do you want the test?" he asked, adding that "a majority" of students would not be able to pass a test requiring a 12th-grade reading level.

The board also must determine what to do about students who do not pass the test, and students — such as some special education participants — who probably have no chance of passing it, according to Anderson.

Officials track source of herbicide

AUSTIN (AP) — Penalties for improper application of a weed-killer will be levied in a few cases after the herbicide drifted and damaged cotton crops, state agriculture officials say.

A Department of Agriculture lawyer said Thursday that officials found "a lot of possible sources" of 2,4-D, a weed-killer used on wheat crops, but only a few violators can be identified.

The chemical killed some cotton plants and damaged others this past summer in Deaf Smith and Palmer counties.

"We found a lot of possible sources for each instance of drift and we found numerous permit violators," said Sam Biscoe, general counsel for the state agriculture department.

Pregnant diabetics should take test five times a day

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have diabetes but my husband and I are planning to start a family. I know I will have to take certain precautions when I am pregnant and I am prepared to do whatever my doctor tells me to do. But at this point I have some specific questions: How many times a day will I have to test for sugar while I am pregnant, and what meal changes will I have to make? — Elsie, Columbia, S.C.

Dear Elsie: Dr. Eric A. Orzeck, a physician in private practice in Houston, suggests that pregnant diabetics perform blood glucose testing before each meal, at snack time, and at bedtime. In addition, the urine should be tested once daily.

Dr. Orzeck also notes that an optimal schedule would include three meals a day plus two snacks.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother has some knee condition that I am not sure what it is. He says that the doctor he went to told him that he would recommend knee replacement if my brother was older. I would think that it would be better to perform an operation on a person when he is younger, not older. Did my brother misunderstand what the doctor told him? — Max, Wilkes-Barre, Penna.

Dear Max: Total knee replacement has an estimated life of from 10 to 15 years. If the procedure has to be repeated, the result generally is not as successful as it was the time before. Therefore, it is considered preferable for the operation not to be performed in patients under 55 years of age.

Patients who do have the operation can anticipate relief from pain in normal motion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: One of my neighbors was involved in a serious automobile accident, and one of her children was severely injured around the head. In fact the child was unconscious for a while. He seems to be doing all right, although I guess it's still too early to tell. I know you can't predict what will happen with a particular child, but can you give some general idea about what the chances for recovery are in a case like this? — Mrs. G.D., Mobile, Ala.

Dear Mrs. D.: The development of new diagnostic procedures and modern techniques of intensive care have substantially improved the outlook in the kind of situation you describe. Unlike the case with adults, where maximum improvement is generally achieved in about six months, children may continue to show neurologic improvement for months or even years following a head injury.

This optimistic note should not be interpreted as minimizing the seriousness of head trauma in children or the importance of prevention. Children who ride in automobiles should be strapped into safety seats. Two minutes of prevention can avoid a lifetime of suffering.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have an uncle who is in his eighties and who is becoming forgetful and beginning to show signs of senility. His wife wants to do what's best, but she doesn't know what the best thing is. They have no children. The family doctor has suggested that my uncle see a neurologist. Is there any point to this in a person his age? — Veri, Springfield, Ill.

Dear Veri: The fact that a person is in his eighties does not mean that the condition you describe cannot be reversed. My answer to your question is that your uncle should receive the same treatment he would be getting if he were 50 years of age, and that includes a complete physical examination and neurologic work-up.

For Stacey, Raleigh, North Carolina: Both Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis come under the heading of inflammatory bowel disease. Although they are considered to be separate diseases, they have been reported to have occurred in the same patient.

Old-fashioned pump still fills 'em up at Gordonville station

GORDONVILLE, Texas (AP) — Standing defiantly among its successors outside a service station here is a symbol of one man's stand against progress.

T.J. Flowers, a longtime Gordonville resident, had owned his Gulf station for about two years in 1948 when a representative from the Pittsburgh, Pa.-based corporation informed him that the company was about to undergo a major change.

As part of a modernization plan for the Gulf Oil Corp., all of the old, hand-action gas pumps were being removed nationwide for the slick, modern electrical versions. And that included getting the old pumps "off-the-books" at Flowers' Gordonville station.

"I told them if they wanted to take the pump, then they could just take the whole damn station," Flowers recalls. "I didn't want to get rid of it, so finally they just decided to let me keep it."

And 38 years later, Flowers and the 9-foot gasoline pump are still together. At one time, Flowers had another such old-time pump that sold premium gasoline, but it was taken out when the company stopped selling the product.

The pump, in fact, has seen more action with the company than Flowers, outdating his affiliation with Gulf by several years.

"They put it in just before I got here," he said. "It wasn't a brand-new one either; they had been using it somewhere else before they brought it here."

The faded orange pump, with its old-fashioned Gulf globe on top, is pumping out gasoline just as it did the day it was put in — most of the time even better than the other pumps that have come and gone, Flowers said.

"I've never really had to fix it except for the tubes," Flowers said, adding that the pumps had been installed several years before he bought the station.

The inner workings of the pump are wonderful in their simplicity. With just a couple of pulls on a long handle located on the side of the pump, up to 10 gallons of regular leaded gasoline appear in a glass storage container at the top of the unit.

From there, the gas flows down through a more familiar black hose — similar to those seen on modern gas pumps — directly into the automobile.

The pump shows little wear from its more than 40 years of faithful service. Although there are rust spots here and there, the paint job has held up remarkably well. A small crack has appeared around the base of the glass container.

Flowers has had to make a few adaptations to the pump, including addition of several federal regulations signs. Also, he has had to equip the pump with a series of locks to guard against gasoline theft — things not deemed necessary in the era when it was built.

On a busy summer day, Flowers said the old pump gets a real workout, even if many of the younger people who come to the station have no idea what it is.

"On holidays, it gets like a bunch of ants through here, just one car after another," he said, "A lot of the young people who come through here stop and look at it, but just can't seem to figure out what it is. They look all confused because they just don't know what the hell it is."

On the other side of the coin, Flowers said, are those people who know exactly what the odd-looking contraption is — right up to the pump's value as an antique. He said he constantly gets offers to sell the unit.

Road led to fame for TV host

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — It's a long way from playing music at bars in Robstown to hosting a television show with higher ratings that "60 Minutes."

But Johnny Canales, a native of Robstown, made the trip.

Canales hosts and stars in the "Johnny Canales Show," an hour-long English-Spanish language variety program that features Chicano musicians from throughout the U.S.

The show is aired in 16 markets including Corpus Christi, Dallas, San Antonio, Houston, Chicago, Denver and El Paso.

Canales said he is negotiating with an independent station near Los Angeles to have his show broadcast in the city with the nation's largest Mexican-American population.

The show is aired on Spanish International Network stations, SIN, but also on seven independent stations and three network affiliates.

Ed Gomez, who with Canales owns the Coronado Network production company, estimated that the cities in which the show airs have a total Latin population of 6 million.

Gomez estimated 200,000 households view the program each week.

Canales' show is so popular that in one market, KGNS-TV in Laredo, an Arbitron television rating survey showed the program received a 29 percent share of the audience opposite "60 Minutes" which received a meager 14 percent in one rating period last July.

For Canales, the popularity is a long way from the small neighborhood bars in which he and his father, Esteban, used to perform. Canales played guitar while his father played violin.

"Those are the people that are most excited about how I've done, the people that knew me then," Canales said. "I'll always remember where I came from and where I grew up."

Canales said that, at least every two shows, he reminisces about his childhood and his performances with his late father.

Canales would like to see his program shown in New York, although the Hispanic viewing audience in Los Angeles is larger.

This is the Lakeview trailer park in Weslaco, Texas, where an 11-year-old boy was ambushed Wednesday night. Evert Bowen Ballard Jr. was arraigned before Judge Jaime Garza in Edinburg Thrusday morning where bond was set at $50,000.

Mother: Son frustrated with recent burglaries

Evert Ballard Jr.

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — The mother of a man charged with shooting an 11-year-old boy he believed to be involved in a string of buglaries said she understands what drove her son to violence.

Martha Francis Ballard, who lives at the Lakeview Trailer Park owned by her son, Everett Bowen Ballard Jr., said he had grown frustrated with failed efforts by local police to solve a slew of recent burglaries at the trailer court.

"They came out here every time we had one, but nothing was solved and they were getting worse," Mrs. Ballard said Thursday.

Ballard, 48, was released on a $50,000 bond Thursday afternoon after being charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

The victim, Juan Antonio Sauceda of Weslaco, remained in stable condition in the intensive care unit of Knapp Memorial Hospital suffering from buckshot wounds to his abdomen and arm suffered in the shooting Wednesday night.

Ballard, dressed in camouflage clothing, carried a shotgun and a .44-caliber Magnum, both of which were fired, police said.

"I was shocked," said Ballard's mother.

Police investigators said Thursday they had no evidence connecting the wounded boy with the buglaries, said Erasmo Bravo of the Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department.

Mrs. Ballard said most of the park's 175 lots are rented by elderly visitors who spend winter months in South Texas.

She said her son, a Korean War veteran, was frustrated by the 24 robberies at the park in the last four months and decided to take matters into his own hands.

Bravo said police investigators had been at the Ballard home less than two hours before the shooting occured.

He said Ballard did not tell police he had discovered some of the stolen goods but had left them hidden so he could "stake out" the scene and wait for the robbers to return for the stereo equipment, televisions and electronic gear taken from the trailers.

Not long after Ballard hid beside the road near the stolen property, a vehicle in which the boy, his father and two other people were riding pulled up, Bravo said. Ballard opened fire on the vehicle, hitting the boy, he said.

Firm barred from doing business with government

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The suspension of government purchases from a local aircraft spare parts firm will cost the federal government $30 million, an attorney for the company said.

Joseph Petrillo, an attorney for Alamo Aircraft Supply Inc., made the comment after the company was informed the government was ceasing business with it for three years.

The suspension results from company workers allegedly giving "things of value" to federal employees in exchange for "proprietary drawings."

Proprietary drawings are blueprints of spare parts, for which the government guarantees secrecy.

"The result (of Alamo's suspension) will be sharply reduced competition," Petrillo said.

Loss of Alamo as a supplier will cost the government $30 million over the next three years, he said.

The suspension of the San Antonio firm was contained in a "memorandum of debarment," dated Sept. 28 and authored by Carl Kabeiseman, general counsel of the Defense Logistics Agency, The San Antonio Light reported Thursday.

The DLA acquires and manages 2.3 million consumable items used by the military and controls the nationwide Defense Property Disposal Office, which oversees sales of used military goods to the private sector.

DLA spokesman John Goldsmith said the memorandum identified retired Kelly Air Force Base employee Ramiro Chavarria, 56, as the provider of proprietary drawings of aircraft parts to Alamo, operated by Jesse, Carl and Leon Wulfe.

In return, Goldsmith said the memo noted, Chavarria allegedly received payments of cash, liquor, a portable television, binoculars and a radio.

The gifts and payments allegedly were given between Christmas of 1979 and Christmas of 1982.

Chavarria is awaiting sentencing after he pleaded guilty in federal court in Connecticut last year to a single count of bribery.

That case involved acceptance of a total $25,000 from Alfred T. Stanger, owner of Electro-Methods Inc. of South Windsor, Conn., and Stanger's partner Jack R. Mason, head of Macor Sales Co. in Midwest City, Okla.

Chavarria retired from his job as a mechanical engineer with the Air Logistics Center at Kelly before he entered the guilty plea.

New justice promises hard work, honesty

AUSTIN (AP) — Raul. A. Gonzalez, the newest justice of the Texas Supreme Court and the first Mexican-American, promised Gov. Mark White that he would bring two things to the job.

"I'll give you hard work and honest decisions," Gonzalez said Thursday as White named him to the high court bench.

In making the appointment, White noted that Gonzalez is the son of migrant farmworkers.

"Raul Gonzalez remembers his earliest experiences as a migrant worker in Texas, and his appointment to the state's highest court demonstrates that the doors of opportunity are open to all persons in our state," White said.

"I am delighted that Judge Gonzalez has accepted this appointment, making this a historic day in Texas," White said.

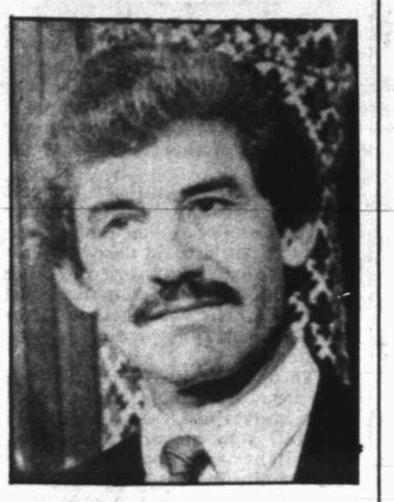

Gonzalez, 44, has been an associate justice on the 13th Court of Appeals. He will complete the unexpired term of Charles Barrow, who stepped down from the Supreme Court last month to become dean of the Baylor University Law School. The term extends until Dec. 31, 1988.

The Texas Supreme Court is the highest state appellate court for civil and constitutional cases. Criminal cases go to the Court of Criminal Appeals.

White said that Gonzalez, as the second of five children, worked with his parents harvesting apples in Washington, cotton in Arkansas, and tomatoes and apricots in California before the family settled in Weslaco, where Gonzalez completed high school.

A graduate of the University of Texas, Gonzalez received his law degree from the University of Houston Law School in 1966 and currently is working on a master's degree in judicial process from the University of Virginia Law School.

He was appointed to the 13th Court of Appeals in 1981. Before that, Gonzalez was a judge of the 103rd state District Court at Brownsville, a post he held from 1978 to 1980.

Raul Gonzalez

From 1969 to 1973, Gonzalez was an assistant U.S. attorney for the southern district of Texas, and was chief of the U.S. attorney's Brownsville division. He also worked as an assistant city attorney for Houston.

"His legal and judicial experience makes him uniquely qualified to serve on the Texas Supreme Court," White said.

White had been under some pressure to appoint a minority to the Supreme Court bench. In announcing the appointment of Gonzalez, the governor's office noted that White has named 153 Mexican-Americans to state boards, commissions and other positions.

Asked if he had specifically sought a Hispanic judge, White said he was looking only for "a quality appointment."

The governor said everyone he consulted about Gonzalez "said he was first class, and that's why I made the appointment."

Gonzalez, who said he was a Democrat and would seek election when his Supreme Court term expires in 1988, was named to the 13th Court of Appeals by then-Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican.

Education board looks at problems

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature dictated what it wants done for public education in Texas. Now it's up to the 15 members of the new State Board of Education to figure out how to do it.

"There is a lot to do," said Jon Brumley, the Fort Worth oilman who serves as chairman.

"Once we see what the problems are, we'll be able to relax a little bit. But I think when you are in the midst of being told the problems it makes you anxious. There's a lot of anxiety," he added.

That the board faces a big job became obvious about 90 minutes into the Thursday meeting when everything already was behind schedule. Texas Education Agency officials did not have time to complete the presentations they planned.

"We're trying to do too much here," Brumley said, telling his colleagues to spend more time listening than asking questions during the sessions. "We're not moving as fast as we'd like to."

The goal Thursday was to brief the board members on the questions they face. Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum read a list of problems that need solutions. Some are problems caused by differing interpretations of the reform education package approved this year by lawmakers.

Many of the problems must be given an "extremely urgent" priority, Bynum told the board.

Among the most pressing issues is the teacher competency test program mandated in the new law. All Texas public school teachers must pass an exam by June 30, 1986 in order to stay in the classroom. Bynum said work must begin immediately on developing a test program.

"I frankly think we are going to have some difficulty" getting a test together in time, he said.

The board also must interpret the new law's academic requirements, including a mandate against social promotions. The law says 70 is the passing grade.

Tom Anderson, a deputy commissioner, told board members the problem is, "What does a grade of 70 mean?"

"Right now, there is no consistency among the districts as to what a grade of 70 means," said Anderson.

He also raised questions about the high school diploma test mandated by the Legislature.

"How hard do you want the test?" he asked, adding that "a majority" of students would not be able to pass a test requiring a 12th-grade reading level.

The board also must determine what to do about students who do not pass the test, and students — such as some special education participants — who probably have no chance of passing it, according to Anderson.

Officials track source of herbicide

AUSTIN (AP) — Penalties for improper application of a weed-killer will be levied in a few cases after the herbicide drifted and damaged cotton crops, state agriculture officials say.

A Department of Agriculture lawyer said Thursday that officials found "a lot of possible sources" of 2,4-D, a weed-killer used on wheat crops, but only a few violators can be identified.

The chemical killed some cotton plants and damaged others this past summer in Deaf Smith and Palmer counties.

"We found a lot of possible sources for each instance of drift and we found numerous permit violators," said Sam Biscoe, general counsel for the state agriculture department.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service predicts showers Saturday for the Pacific Northwest and a mixture of snow and showers for sections of South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri.

Temperatures in mid-80s due in Basin Saturday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Saturday will be a great day for outdoorsmen as sunny skies and temperatures in the mid-80s will dominate the Midland area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Lows tonight are expected to be in the middle 50s, slightly cooler than the low of 60 recorded this morning. Partly cloudy skies are expected to accompany southerly winds at five to 10 mph.

Winds Saturday will be variable, but mostly from the southwest at less than 15 mph.

The 96-degree record high set for Thursday's date in 1937 was 18-degrees above Thursday's recorded high of 78. The record low for this morning was 36 set in 1932.

STATE

A blanket of moist Gulf air continued today to flow North across the eastern half of Texas, while a trough of low pressure moved East from the Panhandle, producing scattered rain statewide.

Isolated heavy thunderstorms and scattered light rain were detected over portions of Central Texas between Junction and Mineral Wells, while other showers were noted near Greenville. Widely scattered showers also dampended parts of the southeast.

Drier air, meanwhile, pushed its way into West Texas, bringing mostly clear skies to the northwest and some high clouds in the southwest.

Low-level clouds were the rule over the remainder of Texas, except for some patchy light fog in the deep South.

FORECAST

Tonight should have partly cloudy skies with a low in the mid-50s. Winds from the southeast at 5 to 10 mph. Saturday: Sunny with highs in the middle 80s. Variable winds, but mostly from the southwest at 5 to 15 mph.

Court tires of delays, takes cases

By KEVIN NOBLET
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The highest civilian court, faulting a military tribunal for excessive delays, has taken over the trials of nine former junta leaders accused in the disappearances and presumed executions of thousands of Argentines.

The Federal Court of Appeals ruled Thursday night that the Armed Forces Supreme Council was guilty of "unjustified delay" in handling the case. Although the trials were supposed to be summary court martials, the council had not reached a single verdict in nine months.

The decision was a decisive victory for human rights groups, which have maintained that the military council was biased toward the defendants and would never find them guilty in connection with the abduction, torture and presumed execution of thousands of suspected leftists in the late 1970s.

"It's the right decision" said Emilio Mignone, head of the Center for Legal and Social Studies, a group that provides legal representation to victims of the repression."It's a step forward."

Three days after his Dec. 10 inauguration ended nearly eight years of military rule, President Raul Alfonsin ordered the Supreme Council to try the nine members of three successive juntas that ruled Argentina after a 1976 coup.

Several other top-ranking military officials also are on trial before the council on charges stemming from the repression. The appeals court gave the armed forces council 180 days, dating from Sept. 21, to complete those trials.

Alfonsin has been under steady fire from human rights groups for not initially giving jurisdiction of all cases to the civilian courts, but he has maintained that the defendants deserved the chance to be tried by their military peers.

Advisers also have said that giving the military a chance to clean its own house was part of Alfonsin's strategy to defuse undemocratic elements in the country's armed forces.

While praising the decision to transfer the nine top cases, Mignone said he would have preferred to see all of the trials moved to civilian courts.

"There are some questions that now have to be answered," he added, noting that the appeals court did not specify whether a summary tupe of proceeding would be used to reach quick verdicts. Under standard trial rules, it could take years for the cases to be resolved in a civilian court.

The nine defendants whose cases were removed from the military council's jurisdiction include three ex-presidents — former army commanders Jorge Videla, Roberto Viola and Leopoldo Galtieri. The others are ex-navy commanders Emilio Massera, Armando Lambruschini and Jorge Anaya, and former air force chiefs Orlando Agosti, Omar Graffigna and Basilio Lami Dozo.

In its ruling, the appeals court noted that since Aug. 21 the Supreme Council had taken little action on the cases, ordering only that Massera appear and give testimony.

"Acceptable contingencies have not been shown that would explain such limited action, given the summary nature of the proceedings," it said.

The Supreme Council was twice granted extensions of its deadline for concluding the trials. In the most recent extension, ordered in June, the appeals court gave the council until Oct. 11 to issue sentences.

However, the council last week told the court it would not be able to finish the trials in the approved time and had no idea how much longer it would take.

The council also said that, based on the evidence it had seen so far, it could not find the defendants more than indirectly responsible for the repression. It said the regime's formal orders to combat terrorism were not objectionable, and questioned the veracity of testimony by victims and victims' relatives.

A government-created commission reported to Alfonsin on Sept. 20 that it had documented 8,962 cases of disappearances linked to the repression. It said the actual total could be much higher.

The commission said the repression was carried out in "an organic and official manner" by the armed forces and included the systematic torture and execution of suspected leftists or their acquaintances.

Argentina, Chile — with papal assistance — reach agreement

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — With the help of Pope John Paul II, Argentina and Chile announced an agreement on the disputed Beagle Channel, a potential oil bonanza at the tip of South America that nearly caused a war between the two nations.

No details of the tentative agreement were released. But an annnouncement issued simultaneously Thursday at the Vatican, in Argentina and Chile, said it was based on proposals made by John Paul in 1980.

It was the first papal involvement in a territorial dispute since Pope Leo XXIII stepped into a Spanish-German controversy over the Caroline Islands in the Pacific in 1885.

Argentine President Raul Alfonsin said the agreement represented "something very special to Argentine mothers and Chilean mothers," whose sons nearly went to war in 1978 over the 150-mile long waterway which connects the Pacific and Atlantic oceans.

The dispute centers on three small, sparsely inhabited islands — Lennox, Nueva and Picton — at the Atlantic mouth of the channel.

The 1980 papal proposal was never officially disclosed, but news reports at the time said it granted Chile sovereignty over the islands while preserving Argentina's offshore rights in the South Atlantic.

The proposal also reportedly called for joint economic ventures in the channel, whose width ranges from three to eight miles.

Preliminary testing has indicated the area may contain substantial petroleum reserves, but thus far exploration has been limited.

Chile's foreign minister, Jaime del Valle, told a news conference in Santiago that the agreement was "excellent news. ... I see this long mediation process ending. I think this will guarantee peace because behind the agreement there is the categorical will of two countries and because the agreement is a very good one."

The three-paragraph Vatican communique said the delegations of both countries would continue working in Rome to iron out details and produce a final treaty.

Army Col. Ernesto Videla, chief of Chile's negotiating team, said in Santiago that the agreement's terms were kept secret to avoid speculation over how they would be interpreted in the formal language of a treaty.

"This next step is a very delicate one," he said. "We want to avoid during this final period any rumors or speculation about the solutions we have agreed to."

Alfonsin has said his government will conduct a non-binding referendum to determine public opinion on the treaty before it is presented to Congress for a vote.

CONGRESS

The House had passed the long-term money bill in an afternoon last week, leading House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., to blast the president's remarks, saying, "Ronald Reagan is embarrassing his office by using the presidency to engage in a Hollywood publicity stunt."

"He stopped the government today not for purposes of good public policy, but for purposes of melodrama. ... By pulling the curtain on the government, the actor in the Oval Office is making his final grab for an Oscar," O'Neill said in a statement released by his office.

Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said Reagan told a "falsehood."

"That's just a lie. ... It ain't right for him to make us eat crow. It ain't right," Wright said.

Congressional aides said the long-term bill is the most expensive, most inclusive piece of legislation Congress has considered, and its "must" nature has made it a magnet for all sorts of riders that members have been unable to pass otherwise.

The Senate passed the measure Thursday afternoon after government workers already had been sent home, ending a week of debate on the legislation that climaxed with two around-the-clock Senate sessions.

The measure was needed because Congress had passed only four of the regular 13 appropriations bills needed to finance the federal government when the government's 1985 fiscal year began on Oct. 1. An initial short extension of the deadline approved by Congress on Monday expired at midnight Wednesday — prompting the administration officials to send workers home.

Federal law bars the government from operating non-essential services unless money is first appropriated by Congress.

In other congressional action Thursday:

—The Senate gave final congressional approval to legislation designed to strengthen the ability of the nation's health care systems to provide organ-transplants. The bill, which goes to the White House, establishes a national organ network with a computer registry and telephone hot lines.

—The Senate also approved a formula for distributing $7.2 billion to the states to pay for highway construction. The money comes from federal tax on gasoline. A compromise with a House version of the measure is still necessary.

—The House passed and sent to the Senate a measure requiring states to adopt a regional striped bass conservation plan or face a federally imposed moratorium on fishing for that species.

Wright rates Congress' effect on state

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — House Majority Leader Jim Wright says this Congress "has not been the best nor the worst" as far as Texas is concerned.

Texas usually fares pretty well on Capitol Hill since "we have at least one member (of the Texas delegation) on every major committee," Wright, D-Fort Worth, told a news conference Thursday in his Capitol office.

Wright handed out to reporters a list of goods Texas received or is expected to receive from Congress before adjournment.

Among them were:

— Aid to school districts that must provided education of illegal aliens.

— The state's share of federal highway money.

— A small business loan program.

— Environmental project grants.

— A children's nutrition research center in Houston.

— A limitation on Medicaid spending that will reduce how much Texas has to spend.

— Aid to public schools for math and science.

— A new formula to give Texas an advantage in distribution of drug abuse and alcoholism funds.

— Appropriations for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, including three facilities in Texas.

Congress also was expected to send to President Reagan a bill that would establish a 34,000-acre protected wilderness area in East Texas.

"We did not inflict certain injuries that could have been inflicted such as the natural gas bill," Wright said.

The bill would have reinstated price regulation. It has gotten no further than the House Rules Committee, where it has not been considered.

Most of the Texas delegation voted against an immigration law reform bill narrowly passed by the House in June. Wright said he favors some kind of bill, but that he sees no chance for one this time around.

"For this year, the immigration bill is dead," he said. "It isn't possible to have a conference report that the president will sign."

House-Senate negotiators have not met on the bill since last week.

"It is a serious national problem and it deserves to be dealt with," Wright said.

He also criticized this Congress for not doing more to reduce the federal deficit and for not dealing with an increasing trade deficit.

HOUSING

But according to Linda Hanratty, an economist at the Department of Housing and Urban Development regional office in Fort Worth, the definition of who qualifies as low income is someone who makes less than 80 percent of the median family income, which in Midland is now $36,600.

"To qualify as low-income, you'd have to make less than 80 percent of that — $29,280 by my calculations," she said.

A person with that kind of income may not strike most people as deprived, even in Midland, but when the program began in 1961, the definition of low income was someone who made less than $17,000 per year.

"People have had a pretty good increase in income" said MHFC board member Steve Davidson, who pointed out that it's the federal government, not the MHFC, that determines the formula.

"The Housing Finance Corporation is simply a conduit for financing," he said. "We just work within those numbers."

But two of the eight apartment complexes built with multi-family bond financing do not work within those numbers. While managers of the other six complexes said they do comply with the 20 percent low-income requirement, managers of Countryside Apartments at 516 N. Loop 250 and the Ranchland Apartments at 1212 E. Wadley said they were unaware of any such restrictions.

"If (Countryside) does (have to comply), then they never told me about it," said Pixie Barrett, Countryside manager. "There's nothing set up."

Ranchland manager Marie Boyce also denied that she was under any obligation to reserve units for low-income people.

"Not Ranchland," she said. "We don't have low-income people here."

But with low income defined as under $29,280, both Countryside and Ranchland probably are in compliance, even if they aren't trying to be, according to Jim Badger of Campbell and Co. in Houston, which owns both apartment complexes.

"Most apartment dwellers do qualify, particularly in Midland, Texas," he said. "I know there is substantial compliance with both federal and local standards, whatever those standards are."

Badger said policing the 20 percent low-income requirement isn't Campbell's responsibility.

"I'm sure that responsibility lies with the housing authority."

But according to Elbert Morrow, a Dallas lawyer who is the MHFC's bond counsel, the responsibility for ensuring compliance lies with the trustee.

"Whoever holds the mortgage" is responsible, he said. The trustee, however, disagrees.

"How would we know if 20 percent of the housing is being kept for low-income people?" asks Pat Samtivasci, assistant vice president for U.S. Trust Co. of New York, the trustee. "It should be the owner."

Fred Kester has another candidate.

"I would assume the IRS," he said. "We weren't charged with that responsibility as a board."

But the IRS refers all questions about the multi-family bond program to HUD, which also disclaims responsibility.

"HUD doesn't really monitor that," said Grover Colter of the HUD Fort Worth office. "We really don't get involved," other than to supply the median family income figure.

Whatever agency is supposed to monitor the apartments for compliance, its presence obviously hasn't been felt at Countryside or Ranchland. But as Badger noted, the two complexes are almost certainly in compliance even without trying, because at least 20 percent of their units are probably rented by people making less than $29,280.

The other six apartment developments built in Midland with the help of the multi-family bond program are Manor Club, 5009 Rio Grande; Quinten's Walk, 3100 Caldera; Sierra Paseo, 3417 N. Midland; Trinity Place, 3600 N. Midland; Wildflower, 4301 Raleigh Court; and Windscape, 3500 N. Loop 250.

DEBATE

Before returning home to Queens, N.Y. to spend most of the next week preparing for her debate with Bush, Ms. Ferraro vowed to become "a one-woman truth squad" about the GOP ticket.

In Harrisburg, Pa., the New York congresswoman said Reagan is running inaccurate ads that are deceiving the voters.

"What you are seeing on television is not accurate. The problem that I have is that so many people are buying the inaccuracies of this administration, accepting them as true and then, I'm afraid, indicating support for President Reagan because of the inaccuacies," she told 2,500 at a town meeting.

" And if you keep those ads going over and over and over and over again, it's almost like brainwashing. After a period of time, people begin to get the subliminal message that maybe things are better ... and they are really not," she said.

But she described his media efforts as masterful.

"Ronald Reagan has been an actor for 40 years. Give him a script and he's terrific," she said. "You've seen a tremendous media campaign by this administration. And we lose on a media campaign."

She said she was particularly angered by a Reagan commerical she saw on television saying Mondale's "tax plan will cost the average American family $1,800 a year.

"That just isn't so," she declared. "The only way it could cost the average family $1,800 a year was if the average family — which could be Reagan's friends — made $90,000 a year," she said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Teen found burned to death

LATTINGTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — A 15-year-old girl who apparently committed suicide by setting herself on fire was popular, a varsity field hockey player and a member of the National Honor Society, according to officials at her school.

Nancy McCarthy was found burned to death in the backyard of her family's home in this wealthy New York suburb, police said Thursday. She apparently doused herself with rubbing alcohol, ail polish remover and gasoline before setting herself on fire Wednesday.

"She was very popular, and had a 100 percent attendance before yesterday," Louis Barlow, the assistant principal at Locust Valley High School, said Thursday.

Lawyer says charges political

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A lawyer for a doctor charged with murder for allegedly denying care to a baby that survived an attempted third-trimester abortion on her 13-year-old mother says the charges were politically motivated.

District Attorney Edward Rendell on Thursday filed the charges of murder, involuntary manslaughter, abortion after viability and infanticide charges against Dr. Joseph Melnick, 62.

Attorney Hillel Levinson said Rendell was using the case "for his own future ambitions." Rendell denied that, saying "It is strictly a case of murder."

Teacher's killer could go free

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — A man twice denied parole for refusing to agree to stay away from Stanford University, where he killed a professor with a hammer in 1978, could go free without restrictions next September.

The California parole board Thursday affirmed a second denial of parole for Theodore Streleski, 48. Streleski was freed on parole in March, imprisoned hours later for refusing to sign a pledge to stay away from the school, and denied parole a second time for another refusal to sign in September.

Straleski's next parole heaing is set for March; he could again be denied parole then, but must be freed without restrictions on Sept. 8, 1985, when his prison term expires.

Murder suspects plead innocent

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Two men charged with murdering, kidnapping, and robbing two teen-age boys whose bodies were found in a vacant lot have pleaded innocent and face preliminary hearings Oct. 12.

George Ellis Wade, 23, and Victor Dewayne Taylor, 24, both of Louisville, were charged Thursday and ordered held in lieu of $500,000 bond.

The bodies of the youths, both 17, were bound at the ankles and wrists when discovered Sunday. The boys last were seen alive when they left Saturday evening for a high school football game.

Parents may sue government

CHICAGO (AP) — An appeals court is considering whether a couple who claim an incorrect listing of the husband's blood type on an Army dog tag led to their twin daughters being born with a rare disease may sue the government.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, after hearing arguments Thursday, took under advisement the case of Stanley and Ann West. The Wests claim the incorrect blood type listing caused them to mistakenly assume they could safely have children.

Defense attorneys said the Wests could not seek damages, and cited a series of Supreme Court decisions that say members of the military generally may not sue for injuries stemming from their service.

Colleagues reportedly held counterspy in low regard

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fired FBI counterspy Richard W. Miller, accused of selling classified documents to the Soviet Union, had been excommunicated by the Mormon church and was reportedly the butt of frequent office jokes by colleagues who held him in low regard.

"Everybody's got an R.W. (Miller) story," an unidentified source told the Los Angeles Herald Examiner. "He got suspended once for selling Amway products out of the trunk of his bureau car."

Other reports quoted government sources as saying Miller, the first FBI agent ever charged with spying for a foreign government, should never have been assigned to counterespionage — preventing foreign powers from infiltrating American intelligence activities.

The Los Angeles FBI office declined comment Thursday on the newspaper reports, but the agency's Washington headquarters denied reports that Miller's personnel evaluations may have been better than he deserved because he and two of his superiors were Mormons.

The 20-year FBI agent waived his right to an extradition hearing Thursday in San Diego and was ordered to appear in Los Angeles Oct. 15. Fired from his job Tuesday, he was charged Wednesday with conspiring to commit espionage and is being held without bail because authorities fear he may flee to avoid prosecution.

The FBI alleges Miller, 47, plotted to sell government secrets to the Soviet Union for $50,000 in gold and $15,000 in cash. Miller's attorney said he would plead innocent.

The FBI said Miller, who has eight children, may have been having financial difficulties, but would not elaborate.

Also arrested on conspiracy charges were Svetlana Ogorodnikov, 34, an alleged KGB major, and her estranged husband Nikolay, 51. They are being held without bail in Los Angeles pending an Oct. 15 hearing.

Some people interviewed in the wake of Miller's arrest said the case raises questions about why he was assigned to his sensitive counterintelligence job.

"He must have some clout somewhere," an FBI agent in Los Angeles told the Los Angeles Times. "I know some people are going to take a look at that factor, and by that I mean both the media and the people back in Washington."

Patient accuses nurse of shutting off respirator

Victoria Knowlton

NEWBURYPORT, Mass. (AP) — Unable to speak and barely able to move, a 59-year-old victim of Lou Gehrig's disease painstakingly typed the words he hopes will convict his former nurse of trying to kill him.

Referring to the respirator he depends on to breathe, William Cronin slowly tapped out: "machine ... she shut ... off."

Cronin's testimony, videotaped at his bedside at Salem Hospital, was shown Thursday to a Superior Court jury in the opening day of Victoria Knowlton's trial on a charge of assault with intent to murder.

Prosecutors allege Mrs. Knowlton, 36, a registered nurse employed by Cronin as a private duty nurse, turned off his respirator Feb. 17 while caring for him in his home.

Cronin fell into a coma, but was revived by his wife and two sons, who were home at the time.

Cronin suffers from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a degenerative nerve ailment also known as Lou Gehrig's disease, after the former New York Yankees baseball star who died from the illness in 1941.

Cronin laboriously struck letters on a special computer keyboard, or nodded and shook his head as attorneys questioned him while they took the bedside deposition.

Cronin was asked what Mrs. Knowlton did the night of Feb. 17.

"Machine," he typed.

"What did Victoria do with respect to the machine?" asked Assistant Essex County District Attorney Thomas Drechsler.

Cronin told Dreschsler the woman moved the machine two feet, then shut it off.

Asked what Mrs. Knowlton said after shutting off the machine, Cronin typed, "You're going die."

She then went into the kitchen and lit a cigarette, he testified.

Cronin's hour-long testimony was halted twice when he became too weak to answer the questions. At times, a therapist had to help position his hands on the keyboard.

In his opening argument, Drechsler said police summoned to the suburban Boston home by Cronin's son would testify that Mrs. Knowlton seemed "spaced out" and kept repeating, "He's dead, he's dead" when they arrived.

"They observed an odor of alcohol on the person of Mrs. Knowlton," the prosecutor said.

Judge Andrew Linscott permitted Cronin's testimony to be prerecorded after the witness collapsed outside the Peabody District courtroom in March following his testimony at a pre-trial hearing.

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Thomas F. Sullivan, Cronin repeatedly denied that he was despondent in the weeks before the incident. He said he never considered suicide.

Cronin's son, 23-year-old Ronald Cronin, testified Thursday that Mrs. Knowlton entered his room about 10:30 p.m. the night of the incident to ask his advice on how to deal with his father's stubbornness.

The younger Cronin said he remembered that during their conversation, "she was continuously smiling.

"I didn't see anything smiling or funny about the conversation," he said.

He testified Mrs. Knowlton woke him an hour later and that he helped her raise his father to a sitting position. She woke him a second time after midnight.

"Her statement was, 'Ron, come help me. Your father, he's dead,'" Ronald Cronin testified.

He said he ran and got his mother, called police for an ambulance and began resuscitating his father.

During that time, Mrs. Knowlton stood next to him, her hands to her temple, saying, "He's dead, he's dead, oh my God, he's dead," Ronald Cronin testified.

The younger Cronin said that minutes later, his brother, Jim, noticed the respirator switch was off and his mother asked Mrs. Knowlton for an explanation.

"At first she said I don't know. Then she said, 'Well I might have shut it off when I gave him a face rub. I sometimes do that,'" he testified.

Bush wants to focus attention on Mondale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush, accused by Walter Mondale of not paying a fair share of income taxes, is trying to shift attention away from his finances and back toward his own criticism of the Democratic challenger.

Departing from his normal practice of holding a news conference in each city he visits, Bush refused to meet with reporters Thursday during a trip to Memphis. Meanwhile, Mondale attacked him for paying roughly 13 percent of his adjusted gross income in federal taxes last year.

"The story's over," said Bush's press secretary, Peter Teeley. "Tomorrow is a new day."

When reporters urged Teeley to have Bush hold a news conference to answer more questions about taxes, the press secretary said, "Memphis is being shortchanged."

Reporters tried to question Bush as he prepared to leave Memphis en route back to Washington.

The vice president sat in his limousine, with the windows rolled up, as reporters shouted questions and urged him to stop and talk.

Speaking over a microphone that broadcast his voice from the car, Bush said: "I haven't had a press conference in 20 minutes. One last question. One last question. Come on. Come on. What have you got? The answer is no."

The vice president's most recent news conference was in Tulsa, Okla., on Wednesday night when he answered questions for about 15 minutes on his tax returns.

While insisting that Bush would not have a news conference in Memphis, Teeley cited figures prepared by his staff showing that between Labor Day and the beginning of October, Bush had appeared at 27 news conferences and 100 one-on-one interviews.

Bush seems likely to be unavailable for more questions until his debate next Thursday with Democratic rival Geraldine Ferraro.

His only public appearance before the debate is in the Columbus Day parade in New York where he is to march 25 blocks Monday. The rest of his schedule has been cleared for debate preparation.

Mondale, during a stop in Washington, ripped into Bush on his taxes.

"Vice President Bush is among the 1 percent of wealthiest Americans," Mondale said.

The 13 percent reported for his 1983 tax year, Mondale said, "is less (proportionately) than the maid pays who cleans up the office of the vice president."

"That's not fair at all," Mondale charged.

In information made public Wednesday, Bush said he paid 48.6 percent of his adjusted gross income in taxes in 1981, 24.2 percent in 1982 and 12.8 percent in 1983.

The figures released by the Mondale campaign showed that he paid 40 percent in 1981, 39 percent in 1982 and 32 percent last year.

Forget Donovan

Anytime a public official is indicted on a criminal charge only a month prior to a major election, it's understandable that there will be calls from some quarters for the official's resignation — or his ouster. Such has been the case for Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan since he was indicted along with seven officials of his former construction company on charges of falsifying records for a multmillion dollar subway project.

Donovan has termed the 137-count indictment politically motivated "nonsense" and taken a leave of absence from his duties as Labor Secretary. President Reagan has expressed full confidence in Donovan, adding: "I trust in his integrity."

To put the indictment in its proper perspective, it must be noted that Donovan was cleared of wrongdoing by two previous investigations. In fact, he has been under investigation since being nominated by President Reagan.

The timing of this indictment is bad for the Reagan campaign, of course. The indictment comes out looking political regardless of the truth, but there are other points to consider.

A public official — any public official — brought up on criminal charges should immediately reliquish the duties of his or her office. That's a simple but important action because it removes them from the role of representing the public. Had Donovan not asked for a leave of absence, President Reagan certainly should have taken the initiative to place him on automatic suspension, pending outcome of the criminal proceedings.

But that's all hypothetic. None of it is necessary because of Donovan's action in taking the leave and he should be given credit for upholding his public trust by his decision.

The calls for Donovan's resignation from his government position are another matter altogether. No, he should not resign for a number of reasons. In the first place, an indictment is not a presumption of guilt but rather the means by which a person is brought to trial. At this point in time, Donovan is innocent of the charge against him and will continue to be until the complaint is resolved. For him to resign his position at this point, might well convict him in the minds of some Americans.

But there is the overriding concern for the Reagan campaign at this point. So far Donovan is the only Reagan administration official implicated in the alleged crime and it's far-fetched to think any American voter would decide how to vote based solely on the allegations against an underling.

For the present, it's better to forget Donovan until after the election at which point he should be given a fair and impartial trial. The presidential election is another matter.

Another View:

Try the ceasefire

The pace quickens in Nicaragua. The government is offering to sign, at once, a regional peace treaty some of whose key details (on enforcement, for instance) have yet to be written. Some sort of negotiation goes on between the ruling Sandinistas and opposition leader Arturo Cruz over the terms on which he might take part in, and thereby legitimize, the Nov. 4 elections. In Washington, meanwhile, Congress juggles the fate of President Reagan's program to run an armed Nicaraguan insurgency against Managua.

For a couple of years now, Washington and Managua have been competing to demonstrate their support for the Latin democracies' Contadora initiative for peace in Central America. The Sandinistas' decision to embrace a treaty still in draft can be seen in that context. But the United States should not simply be stumbling in embarrassment to find itself one-upped in this round. It should be welcoming Managua's opening, advising Contadora to complete the treaty and assuring the region it will support the security and political arrangements of its collective choice. Otherwise it risks hardening a widespread impression that its priority is not peace but to do in the Sandinistas.

Will the Sandinistas allow the Nov. 4 elections to be worthy of the name? The regime's assurances of procedural fairness must be measured against the continued mob assaults on Arturo Cruz's meetings — a pattern that has kept him from organizing a campaign and that validates his request to postpone the vote a couple of months. Fortunately, the Latin and European democrats cultivated by the Sandinistas are still pressing them to open the elections. The foreign parties are also watching Mr. Cruz to ensure that his coalition does not make arbitrary demands. If the Sandinistas are half as confident of their popular appeal as they claim, they will make the right move soon.

The House has voted to cut off American funds for the Nicaraguan guerrillas. The Senate is unlikely to follow suit. The difference will be resolved in a context that has changed in the time that Congress has been addressing this issue. The new factor is the possibility that the insurgency is one factor inclining the Sandinistas to consider broadening the elections. The insurgents have agreed to impose a cease-fire if that happens. We are torn on this one, having consistently opposed the American role in the insurgency but seeing in the elections the single possible route to national reconciliation. Why do not the insurgents consider accepting a cease-fire right now to show they mean it?

JACK ANDERSON

'Strings' attached to Israeli aid

WASHINGTON — Israel's economy is in such desperate shape it threatens to undermine U.S. relations with its closest ally in the Middle East.

Jack Anderson

The new Israeli prime minister, Shimon Peres, is coming to town next week with his hand out. He needs help from the Reagan administration if his country's economy is to survive its 400 percent annual inflation rate and burdensome foreign debts. The question is how far the White House will go to accommodate Israel this time.

Peres's visit is shrewdly timed. Probably the best thing he has going for him is President Reagan's high hopes of winning traditionally Democratic Jewish votes next month. Giving Peres a sympathetic hearing won't hurt this effort.

But with Reagan cruising comfortably down the road to re-election, the Jewish vote won't be as important as it might otherwise have been. Peres's bargaining position is further weakened by the desperate plight of the Israeli economy itself.

Finally, he's at a disadvantage because of the indecisive outcome of the recent Israeli election and the musical-chairs arrangement in which he must rotate government leadership with his bitter rival, Yitzhak Shamir.

If Peres accepts submissively every demand of the Reagan administration, it could cost him politically at home.

But administration sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado that the White House is going to make some stiff demands on Peres before it agrees to come to Israel's rescue.

An internal State Department group and a team of outside experts have been examining the Israeli economy for long-range solutions to its problems. Here's what they've recommended the administration insist on in its talks with Peres:

— Israel's economic reforms must be "comprehensive" — meaning that budget cuts must be across-the-board, hitting every agency: defense as well as education and social services.

— The reforms must be put into effect promptly, to build public confidence that the government is determined to address the problems decisively. The administration was pleased at recent Israeli economic moves — cutting some subsidies and devaluing the currency — but feels much more needs to be done.

— The reforms must be "irreversible" — that is, not subject to revocation or second thoughts if the public grumbles about austerity.

— The administration will also require assurance that Shamir agrees with the reform steps, and will support them when it's his turn to be prime minister. This would remove the reform measures as a political football between the Labor and Likud blocs.

— The administration will try to persuade Peres that the Bank of Israel should be more independent from the government — like the Federal Reserve Board. Though the Reagan administration has complained bitterly about the Fed's independence, it evidently believes Israel's central bank is too political, and should fight government decisions that are good for votes but bad for the economy.

— Israel will have to drop its long-time practice of matching wage increases to the inflation rate.

— Finally, the administration wants Israel to put the brakes on its socialist policies, giving greater opportunity to the private sector.

Will Peres buy these demands? My Israeli sources have their doubts. They point to the weakness of Peres's government and to the potential political disaster of unemployment, which could result from the austerity measures the White House wants.

BLUNDER OF THE WEEK: As fat-watchers are well aware, eggs are among the foods with the highest concentration of cholesterol, and have been linked to atherosclerosis, a major cause of heart attacks.

Imagine, then, the astonishment of physicians across the country who received a free egg cookbook recently — from a company that specializes in the manufacture of drugs that combat heart disease. The little book, containing 250 artery-clogging egg recipes, was sent by CIBA Pharmaceutical Co.

"I thought it was a sick joke," said one physician.

Audrey Kriegman, CIBA's director of medical services, acknowledged that the cookbook mailing was in bad taste. Some doctors even harbored the suspicion that it was intended to boost the company's drug sales by promoting egg consumption. But nobody at CIBA "ever thought of it until afterward," Ms. Kriegman said.

She explained that the book's egg theme was merely supposed to remind the doctors of an earlier CIBA advertisement that depicted a new product emerging from an egg.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?: Right-wing military men in Central America know which side their guns are buttered on. They repay their debt to the Reagan administration with honorifics. For example, in El Salvador a few months ago the outgoing commander of government troops in embattled Morazan province created a new unit to fight the left-wing guerrillas there. He called it the "Ronald Reagan Battalion."

EVANS & NOVAK

Reagan's words chilled Soviets

WASHINGTON — An unnoticed but revealing portion of President Reagan's tempered speech last week to the United Nations sent a premonitory chill into the Kremlin, duly reflected in Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's speech three days later.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Without naming names, Reagan reminded the Soviets that in various treaties they have pledged "periodic and genuine elections," the right to join labor unions, to emigrate at will and to enjoy "freedom of opinion and expression."

Few honest words from an American president could more provoke the Kremlin than those. They showed that despite his ice-breaking meeting with Gromyko, Reagan is not an easy target for the arms-control bloc, both in Congress and within his own administration.

Indeed, despite possible moves toward serious U.S.-Soviet talks on the nuclear issue following Gromyko's visit here, Reagan remains unlikely to make the one-sided concessions pressed by some advisers who are eager for faster progress.

One insider described Reagan's low-key pressure on the Kremlin for revolutionary reforms as an "across-the-board whack" by a man likely to remain president during the next four years. That "whack" coincided with other unnoticed Reagan moves in the days leading up to and during the tense, suspenseful hours he and Secretary of State George Shultz spent with Gromyko, most of them reinforcing the image of an unchanging Reagan faithful to his tenets.

Because the heart of Soviet fear over Reagan's preparedness program involves space-based defense against Soviet missile attack, called "Star Wars," Shultz proposed a quick, clean concession by the U.S.: a moratorium on both "Star Wars" research and anti-satellite weapons in exchange for a Soviet return to the arms control table.

Reagan considered this proposition a bit too long for some hard-liners, but in the end came down against it. White House aides insist that this refusal casts the president's commitment to "Star Wars" in concrete. If so, Soviet strategy to force a U.S. "Star Wars" retreat in return for arms control talks looks futile — as of today. Reagan must become convinced that the Soviets will agree to large mutual cuts in the numbers of offensive missiles before he trims his "Star Wars" sails.

The president did make some decisions that were pleasing to Shultz and the State Department. He decided to delete a crack at Poland that survived several early drafts of his U.N. speech. But neither that deletion nor his much-criticized refusal to chastise Moscow for its invasion and continuing war in Afghanistan shows a change of Reagan temperament under the temptation of quickie arms control agreements.

Not all hard-liner fears are laid to rest. When the pressures of the arms-control bloc and the Europeans reach the boiling point, as they are bound to, Reagan may find himself unable to withstand the cry for concessions. Moreover, some backstairs talk has been heard inside the White House about making a "peace president" out of Reagan in a second term. The president himself, on rare occasions, has confided to insiders that he might be destined as the one American leader finally able to keep the Russians under control.

That presidential self-view may have been evident in the way he surprised his top advisers — Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and national security adviser Robert NcFarlane — just before his Friday morning meeting with Gromyko. He had decided, he said, to spend a few minutes completely alone with Gromyko at the end of the formal conversations. He wanted to say a few things with no one else around.

What he said remains private, beyond the fact that he emphasized his hatred of war, having lived through four conflicts himself. But some hard-line officials close to the president saw disturbing implications. "Could it be," one asked us, "that Reagan will fall into that classic trap of thinking that he can tame the Russians by the force of his personality, where all others have failed?"

That remains to be seen. In the immediate aftermath of Reagan's grandest diplomatic stagecraft some realistic hard-liners worry more than they did before about the president being jostled and jerked by the arms-control bloc, but their view is tentative. For other Reaganauts, Gromyko let the president steal the peace issue from Walter Mondale without losing his virtue.

CHARLEY REESE

Reagan not really a conservative

People who say this year's presidential race offers a choice between two opposing philosophies are wrong. The choice is between an expensive welfare state or a cheap welfare state. The differences between Fritz Mondale and Dutch Reagan, as far as domestic issues are concerned, are differences in degree and approach, not in philosophy.

Charley Reese

Reagan, despite partisan claims to the contrary, has not moved to or even suggested abolishing the welfare state. He never did so in California. He merely tightened it up a bit, eliminating those totally undeserving and actually increasing what went to those who did deserve some public help. In California under two Reagan administrations, the cost of social services went up, not down. Under President Reagan, the dollar expenditures for social services have gone up, not down. Under a Mondale presidency, they would go up at a much faster rate.

The contest between Reagan and Mondale is a contest in philosophical terms between a New Deal liberal (Reagan) and a Sixties-style liberal (Mondale). That is still a significant difference, but it is not really a conservative-liberal contest.

Reagan appears conservative in the eyes of the new breed of liberals simply because they are so much more radical than the old traditional liberals.

A truly conservative president would seek to cut federal spending to the bone marrow. He would seek to eliminate completely food stamps, aid to families with dependent children, aid to education, and any and all subusidies to the private sector. He would seek to end all foreign aid and all contributions to international organizations.

A welfare state is simply a state in which segments of the population plunder other segments. It inevitably breeds envy and cynicism because it is unjust on its fce. Mondale is simply more open and reckless about encouraging plunder than is Reagan.

And the issue in a welfare state is plunder, not compassion. If we make arrangements to help the truly helpless, that is compassion. but when we, as we do today, simply compete to see if we can, by hook crook, confiscate a portion of our neighbor's earnings to enrich ourselves, that is plain plunder. In contemporary America, the best of people do it.

It is plunder to get a subsidy for the arts. There is no just reason on God's earth to tax a deaf waitress or rock music fan to pay for a symphony orchestra. There is no just reason to tax the sober to dry out alcoholics.

It is plunder to give a private developer tax-free bonds to build a commercial enterprise. By doing so, government forces his competitors to subsidize their competition.

It is plunder to provide subsidized or free day care centers, population control programs, subsidized mail rates for business or charity, government insurance for private investments, college loans and grants, subsidized housing, and medical care for the poor and the elderly.

If I walked over to your house with my gun and said I need money to send my son to college, give it to me, that would be called robbery. What's the difference if I send the government with its gun to take you money to send my son to college? Why should your labor or your savings be expropriated for my benefit? Why should my needs or desires constititue a legal claim against your life?

These are the kinds of issues which would be debated if Reagan were really a conservative, but since the contest is between a liberal and a radical, the debate will be over how to structure and manage the welfare state.

The fact that Reagan's proposals to do a better job of managing public welfare strike some people as a "revolution" simply reveals how far those people have moved toward socialism in their thinking.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 5, 1947, in the first address televised from the White House, President Harry Truman asked Americans to go without meat on Tuesdays and eggs and chicken on Thursdays to build up a stockpile of grain for Europe.

On this date:

In 1813, the Battle of the Thames was fought in Upper Canada during the War of 1812. The British troops were soundly defeated, and their ally, Indian leader Tecumseh, was killed.

Arab men held for suspicion of Cyprus embassy bombing

Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — A judge today ordered two young Arabs held in custody for eight days on suspicion that they were involved in Thursday's bombing outside the building that houses the Israeli Embassy.

The two men, each handcuffed to a policeman as they were brought into the heavily guarded courtroom, were identified by their passports as Azmi Hussein Mahmoud Salah, 22, a student from South Yemen, and Salam Moustafa, 28, a computer trainee from Iraq.

Police inspector Sotiris Pafitis told the court "there is reasonable suspicion" they were involved in the explosion of a bomb-filled Honda Civic in the open-air parking lot of a six-story building on Nicosia's main shopping thoroughfare.

The explosion caused no casualties, according to Cyprus police. Damage was confined to broken windows in adjacent buildings and the complete demolition of the car. Some people on the street were slightly injured by flying glass when the bomb went off at 11:10 a.m. Thursday. Police said the car had been left in place the night before.

Police said there was no damage to the Israeli Embassy on the top two floors of the building.

The defendants' only statements in court were objections to the order that they be remanded to custody. Throughout their proceedings, they hid their faces with their unshackled hands.

A police source who did not want to be identified said that a man with an Algerian passport, Hussein Anwar, 26, had rented the car used for the explosion and left Cyprus the day before the bombing.

A guerrilla group — a Pro-Syrian faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization — issued a statement Thursday in Damascus, Syria, taking responsibility for the bombing, and claiming it had blown up the Israeli Embassy.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ethiopia needs food aid

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopians are starving to death by the thousands because of a 10-year drought and the failure of international donors to provide enough food aid, officials in Ethiopia say.

Inadequate rainfall this year in the East African country of 33 million will mean another poor harvest and continued food shortages in 1985, Hans A.H. Dall, a representative of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization said Thursday in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia's capital.

"It is a fact that people in the hundreds, perhaps in the thousands, are certainly dying every week," Dall said in a telephone interview.

An Ethiopian official complained that donations of food this year have fallen far short of Ethiopia's needs.

Embassy bars visitors

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany has barred visitors from its embassy in Czechoslovakia and says it cannot help the East Germans who have packed the building "to capacity" in hopes of gaining political asylum in the West.

A spokesman for the West German government, Peter Boenisch, said in a television interview Thursday that negotiations on the fate of the asylum seekers in Prague had begun with East Germany.

But he said Communist authorities had "advised that they are no longer prepared to grant permission to emigrate to asylum-seekers who try to force it."

Pandas facing threats

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — China's giant pandas are surviving a bamboo shortage better than once feared but are threatened more in the long term by farmers and loggers who destroy their food supply, a U.S. zoologist says.

About 1,000 pandas remain in the wilds of China, their only natural country of habitat, said Dr. George Schaller, co-director of a panda research project in China's Sichuan province.

Schaller, who gave his assessment to reporters on Thursday, came to Frankfurt to speak today to a group in environmentalists. The zoologist, associated with the New York Zoological Society, returns to China on Sunday.

The project was established in 1980 under the auspices of the World Wildlife Fund, a private international organization, together with the Chinese government to study the giant panda and try to save it from extinction.

The giant pandas, a member of the raccoon family, live in the high mountain bamboo forests of central China. Their diet is made up almost entirely of bamboo shoots.

Dead caribou removed

KUUJJUAQ, Quebec (AP) — Inuit natives chopped antlers off thousands of drowned caribou and bundled them together for helicopter airlifts that were to begin today in an effort to clear two northern rivers of carcasses before freezing sets in.

Officials said 9,600 migrating caribou are known to have drowned in the swollen Caniapiscau and Kaksoak Rivers last weekend when they tried to cross a treacherous stretch of rapids and waterfalls.

Local natives and Quebec provincial officials want to get the dead animals away from the riverbanks before ice formations freeze them in and the decaying bodies pollute the water.

Freezing temperatures have kept the carcasses from decomposing rapidly and smelling foul, Quebec government wildlife specialist Didier LeHenaff said Thursday.

U.S. blasts Greek ally

WASHINGTON (AP) — In one of the sharpest U.S. statements ever directed at a NATO ally, the United States is accusing Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou of showing a "willful disregard for the facts" in his comments on the Soviet Union's shooting down of a South Korean airliner.

State Department deputy spokesman Alan Romberg said Thursday that Papandreou, in accepting the Soviet explanation that the jetliner was on a CIA spy mission, appeared to be engaging in a "blatant replay" of the Soviets' own "cover story."

Calling Papandreou's statement "outrageous," Romberg said, "There is not the slightest evidence for a claim of a 'spy' mission and any such claim can only be termed irresponsible."

At the time Romberg spoke, the State Department had seen only press accounts of Papandreou's remarks; but later officials said they had received confirmation from their own sources.

Sankara addresses U.N.

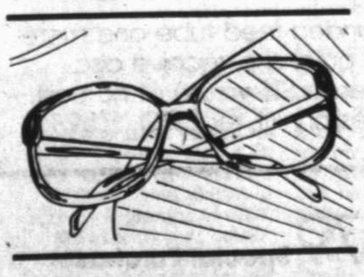

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — The leader of Bourkina Fasso, formerly Upper Volta, said in the General Assembly Thursday that while his country was part of what has been "maliciously baptized" as the Third World, "we won't be the world left behind by the West."

In a fiery speech, the leader of the West African nation, Capt. Thomas Sankara, called on developing countries to maintain the struggle against foreign domination.

At the same time, he denounced "development specialists in the Third World who are sending us back to the world of slavery."

Very few countries, he said, "have been as inundated with aid as mine has been," but "look at the wretchedness we inherited."

Midland selected as test site for satellite industry

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

For four months, Tim Givens and his colleague Doug Brown have been combing the country measuring footprints.

Givens and Brown aren't measuring human footprints, however.

Instead, they are refining data of satellite coverage known to the satellite television industry as "footprints".

The two men wheeled into Midland from El Paso Thursday to set up their equipment and hook up to 17 different communications satellites in geo-stationary orbit located 22,300 miles above the equator.

A geo-stationary orbit is one in which a moving satellite appears to be stationary. This is accomplished by regulating the speed of the satellite to match the speed of the earth in rotation.

Their equipment, which consists of a van pulling a trailer on which two dish antennas are attached, is adjusted to connect power cables from the trailer to the van.

The effectiveness of the satellite is measured in decibels and its signals are logged from a focal point to where it radiates from the center and diminishes.

Denver is considered the focal point of the satellite signal in the Continental United States, said Givens, explaining that Midland receives a less intense signal which is compensated for by larger receiving dishes on earth.

Givens said Midland was selected as a data test site based on a decision to monitor signals at 400 mile intervals.

"The signal is everywhere," he said. "It just varies in intesity throughout the country."

Givens and Brown began the first leg of their journey May 28 from Shelby, N.C.

To date, they have traveled to 120 test sites in the United States and have logged more than 24,000 miles in their effort to aid manufacturers and dealers in determining which satellite equipment is most suitable to various regions of the country.

In addition, the men, employees of Satellite Television Magazine, are promoting the satellite television industry.

"People have been very responsive and interested in satellite TV. They're enthusiastic about what we're doing," said Givens.

"Some people in rural areas have never seen a satellite dish. Some have guessed that the dishes on the van are solar reflectors. These are the people we hope to educate because, for them, it can be very useful," he added.

According to Givens, the satellite television is the second largest growing industry in the nation, behind computers.

Approximately 20,000 earth receiving dishes were in operation in 1983 with the figure increasing to 600,000 this year; and "we expect that figure to triple next year," he said.

The pooch on the left appears to be offering the olive branch to his antagonist, but the other dog isn't quite ready to negotiate a settlement. Since both dogs are unleashed, the ultimate arbiter of this dispute may be the dogcatcher — and a new impoundment fee schedule which ups the ante for repeat offenders goes into effect Monday.

Animal control increasing fees

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Approved by the Midland City Council to be written into the city ordinance, increases in impoundment and licensing fees charged by the Midland Animal Control Department will go into effect Monday.

Animal control officers urge Midlanders to come into compliance with the new ordinance immediately.

While the $25 adoption fee and $20 surgery deposit for cats and dogs will remain the same, a new structure for impoundment fees will go into effect, according to Rice Freeman-Zachery, public informations officer for the department.

Fees will be determined by the classification of animals and the number of times they have been picked up and impounded in the past, she said.

"A licensed animal means the animal has to be wearing current license tags when we pick them up," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said. "It won't do any good to have the tags in a drawer or to have expired tags."

Licensing fees, which increased from $3 to $4, are required each year for the protection of the animals and the public, she said. City law requires that all pets be licensed to show they have been vaccinated against diseases such as rabies.

Vaccination fees are determined by individual veterinarians.

With tags, a pet's owner or veterinarian can be quickly notified in case of an injury, she said. An animal without tags could die while animal control officers seek the names and addresses of its owners.

"We're really urging people to get your tags out of the kitchen drawer, off of the window sill and out of your coat pocket and you've got to do it by Monday," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said.

Impoundment fees, which used to be $25 per pickup, will be divided into different charges for licensed and unlicensed animals.

The fees for licensed pets will be $15 for the first impoundment, $25 for the second and $45 for the third time. Unlicensed pet owners will be charged $35 on the first impoundment, $70 on the second, and $120 on the third, fourth and fifth.

Midland residents who do not wish to keep a pet will be charged a $10 pickup fee and a $10 euthanasia fee if they wish to put the animal to sleep.

Livestock impoundments, which used to be $25 for each animal, will increase Monday to $50 per animal.

Former engineer asks jury for $139,052

ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former El Paso Products Co. chemical engineer who claims the company demoted him and then forced him into "involuntary retirement" because of his age is asking a federal jury in Midland to award him $139,052 in damages.

The company, however, holds that the engineer, David S. Thayer, 62, was retired at age 61 in 1983 because his and other staff jobs were abolished "out of economic necessity." Massive cuts in the work force and in management were to help the Odessa plastics company survive in a time of economic crisis and to salvage the jobs of more than 1,200 other employees, the company contends.

The work force had been reduced from more than 1,800 to 1,200-plus.

Thayer says El Paso Products Co. violated the federal Age Discrimination In Employment Act of 1967.

In allegedly doing so, the company's management retained Dr. R.D. "Dee" Martin, then 34 and now a company officer, and gave Martin "more favorable treatment," Thayer claims.

"When Mr. Martin is 61," Thayer's Dallas lawyer, Hal K. Gillespie, told the jury in U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton's court on Thursday afternoon, "he doesn't (won't) have any job security (unless the age discrimination act is enforced). He would have been a rising star who rose and fell...It's a very sad thing...

"We're all lucky we're going to live long enough to be discriminated against because of age," Gillespie said.

Thayer was hired by El Paso in 1969 as manager of strategic planning. On May 6, 1983, his job title was changed from director of chemical planning and business analysis to manager of business analysis. His pay remained unchanged.

On Aug. 31, 1983, he was retired and was awarded $42,602 in termination pay, according to evidence.

By then, El Paso Products Co., which is in the "highly competitive" plastics industry, already had lost multi-millions of dollars, had eliminated its air fleet and had reduced expenses by millions of dollars in employee pay cuts.

In January 1983, Burlington Northern Inc., the railroad-energy company, gained control of The El Paso Natural Gas Co., parent company of the 1955-founded El Paso Products Co., and decided to shut down or sell the plastics company.

Massive cuts into the plastics company started. And at the outset of 1984, El Paso Products Co. was under new ownership — a group of Odessa investors headed by Bill Noel, retired El Paso Products Co. chairman, and O.R. Clements.

In his arguments to the four-man, two-woman jury, Gillespie said Paul Graham, now a retired El Paso Products Co. vice president, had told Thayer: " 'David, you know at our age, we don't need to think about our future with this company.' "

He suggested that that comment bolstered Thayer's case in proving age discrimination.

"You don't have to have a smoking gun (to prove discrimination)," he said.

Gillespie said Thayer had a "marvelous record" with the company and that both Thayer and Martin had received "commendable ratings" from management.

Elton Gilliland, El Paso Products Co.'s Odessa attorney, said age discrimination had nothing to do with Thayer's forced retirement.

"He did it to himself." The lawyer said Thayer at one time had "passed the buck" to Martin and told him, " 'You're better qualified to do this (planning) than me.' "

Gilliland suggested that Martin, who holds the doctorate in economics and finance, had qualities which El Paso Products Co. crucially needed to survive in 1983 and to find a buyer: expertise in computers and finance and a background in negotiations.

United Way volunteers and staffers watch Great Scott perform his magic at the Thursday report rally at the Yucca Theatre. With three weeks to go, the campaign is half way to its goal of $1.95 million.

United Way 'glass half full'

From Staff Reports

The United Way of Midland announced Thursday that $978,913 has been pledged so far for the fall fundraising campaign.

"I'm happy to say that's 50.2 percent of our total goal" of $1.95 million, said Campaign Chairman Joseph I. O'Neill III.

"For all of you who've worked so hard, my message is the glass is half full," O'Neill told the 250 campaign workers and volunteers who attended the report rally luncheon at the Yucca Theatre. But O'Neill emphasized that the job isn't over yet.

"We've got a long way to go," he said. "There's three more weeks — let's get this job done."

Division totals include: Special Gifts, $98,215 (21.0 percent of goal); Independent Oil I, $3,815 (9.4); Independent Oil II, $7,200 (17.3); Residential, $10,306 (51.5); Major Firms, $345,193 (92.6); Pacesetters, $12,754 (19.7); Small Business, $4,960 (40.8); Major Oil, $246,731 (63.0); Intermediate Oil, $65,105 (59.0); Trailblazers, $48,404 (44.0); Education, $62,058 (84.0); Government and Services, $32,815 (61.0); Professional, $32,290 (31.0); and Wildcat, $9,067 (26.8).

"What the campaign means to us is it provides us with resources into the community which we never would have had" without the United Way, said Charleen Rosebery, president of the board of directors of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

"We have also gotten some volunteers" through the United Way, which supplies the center with 20 percent of its budget, Ms. Rosebery said.

The report rally featured appearances by Great Scott the magician and Stagnasia, the former hostess of a local late-night horror movie show, and was emceed by Ed Clements of KCRS Radio. The next rally is scheduled for Oct. 11 at 11:45 in the Yucca Theatre.

Candidates attend GOP 'pep rally'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Republican congressional candidates fielded an opening kickoff for their campaigns from President Reagan at a White House picture-taking session that turned into a pep rally.

Reagan told about 200 Republican incumbents and challengers gathered on the south steps of the White House Thursday that they are part of his team and exhorted them to "go get 'em."

The Texans who attended said they were happy for the chance to associate themselves with Reagan, but that they are not counting on being swept into office with him.

"I don't think that President Reagan's coattails will elect me to Congress," said Beau Boulter, who is seeking the seat currently held by Jack Hightower, D-Vernon. He said he is concentrating on convincing voters that Hightower is a big spender.

The politicians responded with applause when Reagan, with Vice President George Bush by his side, told them, "Today the people are back in charge and we're scoring touchdowns again."

"The point is to show the Republican team, including the congressional candidates, is of the people," Boulter said.

Other Texans who attended the event were Tom DeLay of Houston, who is running for the seat being vacated by Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson; Jim Mahan of Galveston, seeking to unseat long-time incumbent Democrat Jack Brooks of Beaumont; and Louis Dugas of Orange, who is running against incumbent Democrat Charlie Wilson of Lufkin.

Mahan said he was counting on convincing Southeast Texas voters that Brooks, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, "is plugging away for the East Coast establishment instead of the people from the district."

"But we're not running against the president, we're running with him," Mahan said.

Despite bad publicity, Edna Gladney Home surviving

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Despite bad publicity from a suit filed last winter by a 19-year-old woman who said she was pressured into giving up her baby for adoption, the Edna Gladney Home in Fort Worth has continued to survive with about 15,000 children placed in adoption since its beginning in 1887, according to the executive director.

The home's philosophy of supporting the mother emotionally in her decision is one of the reasons all of the five similar suits that have been filed were found in favor of the home, said Eleanor Tuck, in town Thursday to speak to the Permian Basin Edna Gladney Home Auxiliary.

With the home for 21 years, Ms. Tuck said the trial was "intense" and that in all such cases, "no one is really the winner."

But the letters of support received by women who had spent the last months of their pregnancy at the home helped.

The woman decided she wanted to keep her baby 10 days after she had signed the papers relinquishing parental rights, charging she had been pressured into the situation, according to Ms. Tuck. But the philosophy of the home is to "provide an atmosphere that a young woman can be in to make a decision that's right for her."

Although more attention has been given in recent years to the rights of the baby's father, Ms. Tuck said the woman is the one who must live with the decision.

"I think one of the reasons our maternity home still exists is because it's very individual, tailored to the needs of each woman," she said.

Housing women ages 14-24, the home provides education through teachers with the Fort Worth Independent School District, medical attention through a private hospital on the grounds attended by three physicians and vocational training.

Three separate living areas are included for different age groups. Girls in junior high school through juniors in high school are housed in dorms. Those ages 18-19 have efficiency apartments, allowing them to cook their own meals or eat in the dining room with the younger girls. Women over 20 are housed in new apartments.

"The positive thing about them living together is being able to share their experiences," Ms. Tuck said. "There is a great deal of support there."

Each girl is assigned a social worker with whom they work individually and in groups. A staff psychiatrist also helps them emotionally, as well as providing vocational skills testing.

The education is "like the little red schoolhouse," Ms. Tuck said. "The English teacher may have five different levels of English in one class and six in the next."

Because the schooling and credits are provided by the school district, no one knows the girls received their education at the home.

Eleanor Tuck

Established to adopt out older children, Edna Gladney began moving toward infant placement in the 1920s.

"But in the last 20 years, the focus of the entire program is on the maternal aspects," Ms. Tuck said. "The girls need to recognize it's not the end of her life. It can be a positive experience and we encourage them to set goals during their time with us."

Most of the women who enter the home have already decided they will carry their baby for the full term and give it up for adoption. But of the more than 350 women who entered the home last year, 33 left with their babies and 62 left before the babies were born, presumably with the intention of keeping them.

No mother is allowed to make a decision about putting her baby up for adoption until four days after the birth.

The home provides verbal as well as non-verbal encouragement to the women, Ms. Tuck said. "The girls have said to me throughout the years that the most difficult thing to say is, 'I'm pregnant.' Telling your parents that is more difficult. Very often, this is the beginning of the young woman growing up. They realize the world isn't going to crash around them."

An average of 30 babies are delivered at the home each month. Although the facility would accommodate 144 women, an average of 100-110 women live there.

Twenty-eight auxiliaries are established throughout the United States to help communities know of the services provided at the home. The Permian Basin auxiliary, which has a membership of 35 couples, can be reached at 689-8430.

Ten women from the Permian Basin area were residents of the home last year while five babies were placed in this area. The home received 139 calls from the region about maternity services and more than 4,000 about adoption. Couples seeking to adopt babies can be on a waiting list anywhere from one to three years.

Homemade medicines confiscated by officials

TYLER, Texas (AP) — The maker says the medicine will cure a host of serious ailments. But detractors are not so sure.

Regardless of who is right, the remainder of a Brownsboro woman's natural medicine business sits in a vault in the U.S. Marshal's Office in Tyler.

Bottle labels say the substances are concentrated extracts of vegetables and fruits laced with vitamins and minerals — good for what ails you.

Mary Beth Alexander used to sell the bottles from her home on Route 2 near Chandler, until federal marshals came and took them away.

The seizure was executed because the products Miss Alexander distributed carry labels of those made by Mildred Trumbell of Tulsa, Okla.

Mrs. Trumbell, author of the pamphlet, "Dust to Dust, the Life Cycle of Man," is under a federal court order not to ship her products, manufactured at MT Products in Tulsa, across Oklahoma state lines.

YET THE PRODUCTS can easily be obtained in East Texas.

A telephone call to the Tulsa headquarters netted the name of a distributor in Edom.

A spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration said an investigation is under way to determine if the substances were shipped in interstate commerce.

When contacted at MT headquarters and asked how the products became available for sale in East Texas, Mrs. Trumbell was blunt.

"I have nothing to do with the people in Texas."

She then hung up the telephone.

Ted Rotto, division head of FDA in Dallas, said Mrs. Trumbell began her business venture several years ago.

The labels on OM-12, Vital Force, Extracts of Yarrow and Goldenseal, and T3 Cleansing Lotion advertise the fluids as cures for varicose veins, arthritis, acne, gout, internal and external bleeding, herpes, eczema, open sores, ringworm and sinus problems.

A quart, plastic bottle of OM-12 sells for about $12, a distributor in Edom says.

The OM-12 label promises the liquid will restore movement to paralyzed limbs and help diabetics discontinue insulin use.

WRITTEN ON THE bottle are the words, "Man was made from the dust of the earth."

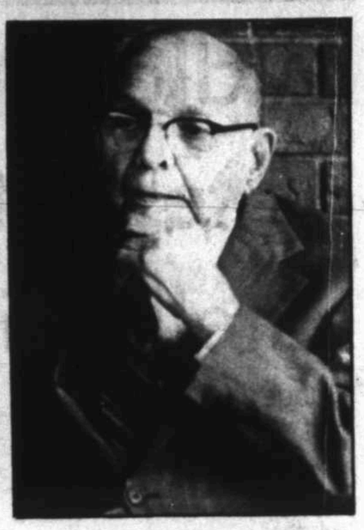

The products can be legally sold in Oklahoma due to a law passed in 1979 by the Oklahoma Legislature.

In every other state, possession of the products is illegal because they lack FDA approval.

Last December, the U.S. Attorney's office in Tyler, acting on a report from FDA investigator Bill Sedgewick, authorized Tyler federal marshals to seize 25 cartons from Miss Alexander.

Hill Country man looks over century of history

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP) — Otto Dittmar, who began his second century this week, remembers well the settling of the Hill Country, a time of no fences and lonely nights guarding his father's sheep.

Otto Dittmar

He and his younger brother, Alfred, tended the sheep for their father and uncle, and spent many nights around campfires.

"It was a tough job," Dittmar said on the eve of his 100th birthday Tuesday. "We always made sure to take our dogs along because the coyotes would come in after the sheep if it wasn't for the dogs."

Dittmar's father, Martin, loved the land. In 1868, he acquired 110 acres near Cherry Spring in northern Gillespie County to establish his own ranch, which still remains in the Dittmar family. He also loved good cattle, and was one of the first ranchers in the area to purchase a registered Hereford sire.

His 701 brand was widely known for many years, and is still registered to the Dittmars. The original branding iron is in the possession of Robert Dittmar, Otto's son, who lives near Harper.

"I've used that iron many a time," said Otto Dittmar, a resident of Knopp's Nursing Home in Fredericksburg. "We all had to help out at branding time."

The 701 appears among other famed Texas cattle brands in the branded staircase of the Kleberg Animal Sciences Building at Texas A&M University.

Dittmar grew up in a home where German was spoken, since both his parents had come to this country from Germany as small children.

He remembers that his mother, Elizabeth, worked almost constantly. There were many mouths to feed, and everything had to be saved. Cabbages, green beans, turnips, beef, and venison were all preserved in brine so they could be eaten in the winter months.

Clothing was all sewn by hand. Much of it was from wool that had been shorn from sheep on the ranch, then washed, carded, spun and woven into fabric.

Otto Dittmar was born in a log cabin. When he was about a year old, his parents moved their sizable brood into a big two-story house with rock walls 20 inches thick. Family prayers were said around the dining table after the girls had cleared supper away, because religion was an everyday matter with the Dittmars, who were devout Lutherans.

Otto Dittmar became a rancher, as his father had. His wife, Olga, a schoolteacher, is believed to have been the first woman to cast a vote in the Doss community in Gillespie County, when Texas women were first allowed to vote in primary elections in 1918.

"Dad told me he bought the poll tax for her, and everybody stood around and watched when they went in to vote," said Robert Dittmar, Otto's only son. "He said those men sure looked real big to him that day."

Olga died in 1965.

Dittmar, who had very little schooling, always insists that his education was "herding sheep, staying in a sheep camp, and eating rancid bacon." But he was a successful rancher, and one of the first in Gillespie County to own an automobile.

Leader says punishment hurting Texas A&M cadets

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — New guidelines restricting punishment of underclassmen in Texas A&M's Corps of Cadets may lower the quality of the organization, the student leader of the group said.

The limitations were begun after a 20-year-old sophomore, Bruce Goodrich, died of heat stroke during an alleged hazing incident.

"There's a certain amount of harassment that needs to go on because of the way we're structured and what we're set up to do," said Chuck Rollins, the corps' commander.

The new rules limit immediate punishment to 20 pushups. Previously the number has been left to the discretion of upperclassmen in the corps.

The rules also allow "bull rings," in which a cadet marches in a small courtyard carrying a rifle, and "sitting a weekend," during which a cadet must don full uniform and report every two hours to the corps' guardhouse.

"A lot of the pressure has disappeared and a lot of respect has gone with it," Rollins, 21, said in a speech to a sophomore honorary society Wednesday.

Rollins said older forms of punishment did a better job of instilling the corps' military discipline.

"As soon as you do it, you feel like you're cleansed of your sins," Rollins said.

He said "physical discipline is the easiest and quickest way" to teach military training to younger students.

Goodrich died Aug. 30, hours after he was awakened at 2:30 a.m. and forced to run and do situps and pushups until he collapsed. Even then, he was encouraged to get up and continue, university officials have said.

Such late night or early morning "motivational exercises" have always been frowned upon, but daytime versions of the grueling workouts have gone on for years, Rollins said.

Three juniors who were present when Goodrich collapsed and a senior have been indicted on misdemeanor criminal charges in the death. Juniors Anthony D'Allesandro and Jason Miles, both 21 and from Houston and 20-year-old Louis Fancher of San Antonio are charged with negligent homicide and hazing.

Senior Gabriel Cuadra, a 21-year-old from Houston, is charged with hazing and tampering with evidence.

The four belonged to the corps unit that Goodrich had joined that week.

Dr. J.C. Lee, a Bryan pathologist, said Thursday the final report confirmed Goodrich died of heat stroke.

"Essentially, he was a healthy young man," Lee said. "When you overdo it, it (heat stroke) usually happens very abruptly without warning signs. It is rare, but not strange."

Indicted sheriff continues attempt for re-election

DALLAS (AP) — Kaufman County Sheriff Roy Brockway says he will not resign from office following his indictment by a federal grand jury in connection with alleged violations of the civil rights of two 23-year-old men.

Grand jurors on Thursday handed down the indictment on two misdemeanor counts. Brockway, 53, is unopposed this year in his race for a sixth term.

"We've contended all along that Sheriff Brockway has not violated anyone's civil rights," said the sheriff's attorney, Doug Mulder of Dallas. "But I think the time, place and forum for us to defend this is the courtroom before a jury.

" ... The government's going to get what it wants from a grand jury. ...," Mulder said. "As far as I'm concerned, the whole witch hunt was a foregone conclusion."

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division in Washington, said Brockway faces charges in connection with alleged violations of the Civil Rights Act that stemmed from the treatment of a prisoner at Kaufman County Jail last year and another man in 1981.

Brockway, the North Texas county's chief law enforcement officer for the past 20 years, is accused of beating Tim Barrickman while Barrickman was being questioned about a series of farm tractor thefts.

The count charged Brockway with assaulting Barrickman on Oct. 27, 1983, violating his constitutional rights not to be deprived of liberty without due process of law and not to be compelled to be a witness against himself.

Barrickman told the FBI and other investigators that Brockway kicked him with a pair of steel-toed boots, then struck him repeatedly.

Braniff considering expansion to Detroit

DALLAS (AP) — Struggling Braniff Inc., which has lost more than $70 million this year competing against stronger rivals American and Delta airlines, is considering expanding its service to Detroit, two newspapers reported today.

Also, Braniff officials were quoted as saying the carrier, which resumed service in March after being rescued from bankruptcy by the Hyatt Corp., had reached agreements with United Airlines to sell leases on three gates for $16 million.

The sale would give Braniff a much-needed cash boost, analysts have said.

Braniff vice chairman Patrick Foley told the New York Times that the airline was considering expanding its service between its Dallas-Fort Worth hub and Detroit, which it currently serves with two daily flights.

Detroit, which is served primarily by Republic and Northwest airlines, is considered less comeptitive than American-dominated Dallas.80

The Wall Street Journal quoted Foley as saying Braniff may "test the Detroit market" by moving some of its 30 planes there, beginning in November. Foley also said Braniff is considering expanding service to other cities, including Des Moines, Iowa, and Omaha, Neb.

Foley's secretary said today he was out of town until Monday afternoon and other officials were not yet available for comment.

Braniff, faced with mounting losses, scrapped its high-quality service plan in September and became a discount carrier in a move to attract more passengers. The strategy has yet to fill enough Braniff seats for the airline to break even.

Foley has said in the past that Braniff was actively seeking a buyer or merger partner.

The company no longer needed five-year plans and business analyses such as those prepared by Thayer.

"That's part of the fat that had to be rendered...and it's not Dave's age," Gilliland said.

"What they needed to do is make plastics and sell it," he said. Martin's role with the company today is investing funds and "taking care of the company's money." The company made money this year, he said.

Even today, Gilliland said, the still-struggling El Paso Products Co. is "not doing that kind of stuff" (long-range planning).

"They did what they had to do (cuts in staff and work force) to save the company."

Wet, cold spell drop demands on water district

BIG SPRING — Demands on the Colorado River Municipal Water District plummeted in the face of a wet, cold spell the last five days of September.

During that period deliveries dropped 15 million gallons a day, consequently the 1,634,635,494 gallons pumped to all customers was down 115,320,000 gallons, or 6.58 percent off from September 1983. Another loss was the 73,253,000 gallons of surface water delivered to the SACROC secondary recovery unit a year ago, whereas there were no such deliveries this September.

Municipal deliveries for the month were 1,534,287,310, down 4.69 percent; oil and industrial deliveries were 120,348,184, off 25.26 percent.

Deliveries to the cities were: Midland, 384,610,000 gallons, down 0.72 of 1 percent; Odessa, 721,429,310 gallons, down 1.88 percent; Big Spring, 267,413,000 gallons, down 10.21 percent; Robert Lee, 19,663,000 gallons, off 20.17 percent; San Angelo, 3,989,000, off 26.25 percent; Snyder, 106,426,000 gallons, off 17.52 percent; Stanton, 10,757,000 gallons, up 14.91 percent.

Ballinger, which took 70 million gallons emergency supply a month ago, required none in September.

Carla Melson, 804 W. Michigan, reported Thursday that property, valued at $2,000, was stolen from a storage unit at 2840 Rankin Highway.

Mules still pull barges along historic canal

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LAT Photo

Steve Henshaw of the New Hope Barge Co. leads two mules along a towpath next to the Delaware Canal in New Hope, Pa.

NEW HOPE, Pa. - Jerry Buckley, 22, strummed his banjo and sang the century-old song about the 152-year-old, man-made waterway.

Birds chirped in trees canopying the Delaware canal on a lazy summer day. Dragonflies zipped back and forth. Pigeons cooed as the barge sailed under the Rabbit Run Bridge.

Two mules, William Penn and Old Red, ambled along the towpath, pulling the barge filled with 60 men, women and children.

Pages of time flipped back to 19th-century America when 2,000 to 3,000 mule-drawn barges carried cargo and passengers up and down the busy canal.

Now, persons from miles around charter the mule-drawn barges for weddings, birthday parties and other festive occasions.

The New Hope Barge Co. re-creates life as it once was one of few nation's remaining intact stretches of two path canal.

Today, the Delaware Canal, running from New Hope to Bristol, through historic Bucks and Northampton counties, is a 60-mile-long, 60-foot-wide Pennsylvania state park, the narrowest state park in the United States.

Leo Ramirez, 40, a former coffee grower in Colombia, and George Schweickhardt, 42, one-time captain of motorized barges on German canals and rivers, have owned and operated the 33-year-old New Hope Barge Co. since 1977.

"We met in Montreal, formed the partnership and bought out the mule-drawn barge company," Ramirez explained. "I ran 40 mules on my father's coffee plantation in Colombia and George was a German bargeman. We make a good team for this job."

Plodding steadily beside the still waters of the historic canal, the mules pull the barge past stone Revolutionary-era cottages, quaint country inns, quiet glens and open fields.

On this summer's day, a postman and a dog walked behind William Penn and Old Red as they were led by mule skinner Steve Henshaw, 20. Cyclists and hikers waved as the barge moved through the water. A dazzling array of touch-me-nots, wild day lillies and other flowers embraced the towpath.

"The old Delaware Canal was built by thousands of Irish immigrants with pick and shovel, paid a quarter a day to work 10 to 14 hours," said Buckley, a music and history major at Temple University when he is not serenading on the New Hope barges.

"Those mules," he said, pointing toward William Penn and Old Red, "are ex-Amish animals, living out their retirement pulling barges one day on, one day off, pulling three barges a day. It's easy work. They get paid in hay."

One of the passengers, Earl Theobald, 68, a retired auto mechanic from Feasterville, Pa., piped up: "I seen mules haul coal barges up and down the Delaware Canal when I was a kid."

A mule-drawn coal barge was last used on the canal in 1932, exactly 100 years after the Delaware Canal was completed. Mules transported an estimated 30 million tons of anthracite coal and about 6 million tons of other cargo on the canal from 1832 to 1932.

Whistles made while man works

BENTON, Ill. (AP) — Some holes here, some grooves there, and the big pieces of wood Arnold Moore turns into little pieces of wood sound just like a steam locomotive's whistle.

"They don't look very pretty, I suppose," Moore said. "But really, I'm proud of what we've done."

Moore's creations started out as a hobby, growing until demand for his whistles was so great he launched a business.

"I wasn't looking for something to make a living at when I came up with this," the former Southern Illinois coal miner said recently.

"I've made trains and toys all my life," said Moore, 46. "But this was a new item — something that caught on and kept growing until it outgrew everything else."

In five years, Moore has gone from whittling one whistle a night for friends to machine-producing 1,000 a week for sale at gift shops throughout the country.

Moore developed the whistle, which he patented in 1980, during spare moments while working as a coal hauler in a mine near Benton.

"To try to keep from going to sleep, I'd do whittling," he recalled. "I got to making whistles, and somebody would want one, so I'd make another one and then another."

After a co-worker suggested he try to sell them, Moore took two dozen to a gift shop in the Ozarks. The storekeeper bought them on the spot and ordered a hundred more.

The orders never stopped.

"I'd get up at 5:30 in the morning to go to work, come home, eat supper and work out here making whistles until midnight every night," Moore said. "Finally, I had to quit the coal mine to keep up with the whistles.

"I had to quit one or the other; I couldn't do both ... and whistlin' was a lot more lucrative."

That was a year ago, and Moore says he has no regrets.

"I made pretty good money, but it got to where it wasn't fun any more," he said. "Now, I can work the hours I want to work and make a lot more money ...

"This past year has been what everybody dreams of — work a little bit and play a little bit. What more could you want?"

Moore claims customers in 35 states, Germany, Switzerland and Sweden. Among them have been a life insurance company, the United States Football League's Memphis Showboats and a Las Vegas, Nev., casino with a railroad motif.

"I really haven't hunted customers," he said. "If we did, I couldn't keep up with it."

His company, Moore's Crafts, sells whistles in quanities of 24 or more, and he said customers generally retailed them for about $5.

"Really, I'm proud of what we've done," he said. "It's not very much — just a nine-inch piece of two-by-two.

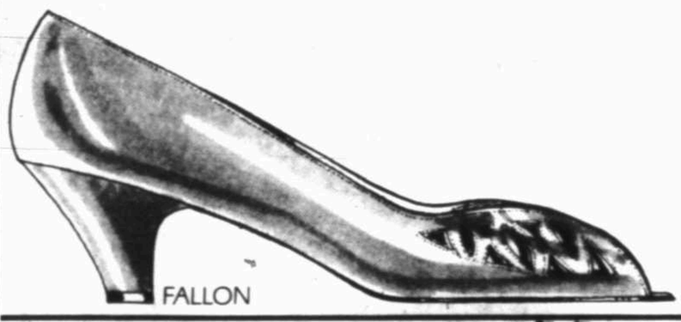

"But it was an idea that I had; I designed my machinery to build it; I got out there and merchandised it. It's a family thing, from the thought to the selling."

Moore holds patents on two types of train whistles and has further product plans, but said he was reluctant to expand too quickly.

DEAR ABBY

Grandma: Sex is marriage's 'price'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Mismatched" said that her husband would be satisfied with sex three times a week, but twice a month was enough for her.

With all the frank talk about sex these days, I'm surprised "Mismatched" didn't know that men are every-nighters, and women are once-a-weekers.

Her grandmother could have told her that marriage is the price a man pays for sex, and sex is the price a woman pays for marriage. — GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: "Mismatched" was not speaking for all women — only for herself. She didn't "know" that men are every-nighters and women are once-a-weekers because it's not a fact — it's bogwash that's been handed down from mother to daughter along with, "No decent woman really enjoys sex; it's just something she has to put up with." Also, "Men need sex more often than women do."

Grandma, sexual appetites vary. Not all men are once-a-nighters; some are once-a-weekers, once-a-monthers, and some not-at-allers. Nor are all women once-a-weekers. Women range from once-a-nighters and once-a-weekers, to once-in-a-blue-mooners.

Furthermore, the person who says that marriage is the price a man pays for sex must have been unconscious for the last 25 years. It is not necessary for men to marry to obtain sex. And to say that sex is the price women pay for marriage labels all women as prostitutes.

Today's woman marries because she WANTS to — not because she needs a meal ticket. And women no longer submit to sex — they are equal partners. Get with it, Grandma!

DEAR ABBY: My parents divorced about a year ago. My father is very bitter, and asks me all sorts of questions about my mother's social life. (Who is she dating? What do they look like? What do they do?) I have met many of her dates, but I feel very uncomfortable telling my father about them.

What should I do? — K. IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR K.: Be honest. Tell him you feel very uncomfortable answering questions about your mother's social life, and you'd appreciate it if he didn't ask. And if he persists, repeat the above.

DEAR ABBY: How do you think a girl would feel receiving an engagement ring that had been the engagement ring of her fiance's grandmother?

The grandmother is no longer living, and the girl never knew her. Except for sentimental value, the ring has very little value. — JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: You are asking the wrong person. Ask the girl.

AT WIT'S END

TV puts U.S. inside 'Twilight Zone'

By ERMA BOMBECK

You can't travel abroad anymore without realizing what an impact American television has on the world.

Our lifestyle, our attitude, all are watched closely by foreigners. To some of them, it's the only contact with the United States they will ever have. They perceive us as we appear on the tube.

When we visited Australia, they questioned how we ever won the war with Gomer Pyle on our side. In South America, they believe equality for women was won singlehandedly by Lucy Ricardo. In Sweden, people wondered why, if Matt Dillon was so vital to the town, they didn't all chip in and buy him a horse that fit. And after seeing "Hawaii Five-O," no one from Italy would be caught going to the big island after seeing all those dead bodies wash up on the beach of Waikiki week after week.

In a way, I'm glad to see the decline of the family sitcom. I've felt for a long time they were perpetuating myths and distorted views of American life we couldn't possibly live up to.

Imagine the shock of coming to America and discovering that alcoholism, drug problems, old age, failing in school, broken marriages, espionage, major crimes, losing your job, and all the other major problems in the top ten could be resolved in 24 minutes. (With six minutes to spare for theme music, credits and commercials.)

I feel sorry for the people who come here expecting to be happy in a house with no laugh track. A home where the father comes in and says, "Anyone home?" and when no one falls off the chair laughing says, "What's the matter? That line always worked for Ward, the Beaver's dad."

People from other countries must be amazed that with all their money, the people on "Dallas" don't eat. They are all on a liquid diet. You never see guacamole dip, meat loaf or homemade vegetable soup . . . just black coffee for breakfast and scotch at 10 a.m.

And what kind of workers dominate the American scene in our sitcoms? Private eyes and doctors lead the world to believe that we fix our own plumbing, build our own houses and teach our own children.

And what would make good propaganda for this country? Let's see. Dynasty? That's real. The Love Boat? Your basic, average American holiday. Diff'rent Strokes? Your basic, average American family. Mork and Mindy? It would certainly cut down on illegal immigration.

When you think about it, it's hard to figure out what would typify this country. The Twilight Zone comes close.

Remember 1983? Cougars shock Rebs

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Nearly a year ago there was shock and stunned disbelief registered on every face in P.E. Shotwell Stadium.

Abilene Cooper fans couldn't believe they weren't dreaming and Midland Lee fans thought it was a nightmare. The Cougars had just upset the highly-rated Rebels, 23-21.

An 83-yard screen pass from quarterback Doug Hadley to tailback Alan Gunter late in the fourth quarter had done the damage. Suddenly, Lee's District 4-5A title hopes were flying out the window. If it hadn't been for Odessa High knocking off San Angelo that same night, state playoff dreams might have gone too.

"They're aware of it, we've talked about it," said Lee head coach Jack Tayrien of last year's loss to Cooper. "They know what happened last year but I don't think it will be a factor. That was last year."

This is the year Tayrien is worried about.

"On any given Friday night, any team can knock off anybody in this district if a team isn't mentally and physically read to play the ball game."

A lot of names have disappeared from the rosters of each team but there are some players fans from both teams will remember seeing in last year's programs when the two teams meet at 8 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

SOME OF the names on the list that fans will recognize include tailbacks Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman from Midland Lee and Hadley from Cooper.

However, the respect for Lee backs doesn't stop at those two, at least as far as Cooper first-year coach Mike Garrison is concerned.

"Good Lord, they've got four backs as good as anybody in the state of Texas," said Garrison. "Angelo loaded up to stop the two halfbacks and Randy Ellis hurt them. We've got a good idea of what Lee is going to do so it's just a case of getting our people to execute against them. However, Lee is extremely well coached and has a lot of talent."

From Lee's point-of-view, "They've always been difficult for us to play and this year doesn't seem to be any different," said Tayrien. "San Angelo has a better football team than in the past couple of years. They can do more things.

"Hadley is an excellent passer," continued Tayrien. "He's leading the district in passing and Cooper has three of the top five receivers in the district. He hasn't been sacked yet this year. They're doing a good job of protecting him. He's also only thrown five interceptions in 93 attempts and his efficiency is about 50 percent. That's good for any league and great for high school. Nobody else has been able to sack him and I don't know if we can. We're certainly going to try and put some pressure on him."

"Cooper is also a balanced team," continued Tayrien. "They're even in rushing and passing so we can't just defense one aspect of their game. They have the second lading rusher in the district, Jay Tollson, so they are certainly creditable."

The equalness of the Cooper attack stems from a concious effort on the Cougar coaching staff.

"We've tried to balance the offense," said Garrison. "I didn't realize until I got the district stats this week that we were this balanced. I looked at the passing and we've thrown 93 passes. When I was head coach at Frona, we only threw 47 passes the entire season."

Despite Lee's history of trouble with Cooper, Garrison is concerned about this year's game.

"We're a heavy underdog and our kids will have to give a great effort," said Garrison. "We're going to come and try to play hard and hope we don't get blown out of the stadium."

That comment sounds like a smoke-screen to Tayrien, who doesn't see a blow-out as a likely happening. Since he and Garrison were assistants together at Lee in 1982, he expects a better fight that Garrison is talking.

"He lockered right next to me and is a close friend of mine," said Tayrien. "Mike is an excellent coach and he'll do a fine job of getting Cooper ready to play."

"I think Coach Tayrien and that entire staff has done a great job," echoed Garrison. "They are super coaches and super individuals. Lee has a great tradition and a fine athletic program. I really enjoyed working with them."

Padres down but not out, post 7-1 win over Cubs

San Diego fans singing in seventh

By DAN LANGENDORF
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN DIEGO — By the seventh inning stretch Thursday, it was the San Diego Padres singing "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," not the Chicago Cubs. They wailed the Chicago Blues.

It was not a good night to be a Cub in San Diego. The 58,346 at Jack Murphy Stadium, the largest crowd to see a Padre game, sang a hearty chorus of a song made famous by the Cubs and their announcer, Harry Caray. "One! Two! Three! strikes, you're OUT!" they screamed mockingly.

Behind the five-hit pitching of righthander Ed Whitson, the Padres buried the Cubs, 7-1, in Game 3 of the National League Championship Series. Whitson pitched eight innings, striking out six and walking two. He threw 114 pitches, 76 for strikes.

Free-agent reliever Rich Gossage, who did not pitch in the first two games because of early Cub leads, relieved Whitson in the ninth. To chants of "Goose!" Gossage retired the Cubs 1-2-3.

The victory keeps San Diego alive in the playoffs, which Chicago leads 2-1. Game 4 in the best-of-five series will be Saturday night.

AFTER TWO humiliating losses in Games 1 and 2, in which San Diego was outhit 24-11 and outscored 17-2, the Padres wanted to kick Cub tail. And that's what they did.

The Padres got 11 hits off three Cub pitchers, starter Dennis Eckersley (0-1) and relievers George Frazier and Tim Stoddard. Right fielder Tony Gwynn led the way with three hits in four at-bats, while second baseman Alan Wiggins, catcher Terry Kennedy and center fielder Kevin McReynolds each had two hits.

Shortstop Gary Templeton got the game-winning hit, which led to a three-run Padre fifth. McReynolds hit his first home run of the series, which capped a four-run sixth.

Cub right fielder Keith Moreland, one of many headaches for Padre pitchers this series, led off the second inning with a double just inside the left-field line. Another foot, and Moreland's double would have been foul.

Moreland isn't a speedster, but he managed to score when third baseman Ron Cey singled up the middle. Moreland chugged home just ahead of McReynold's tardy, off-the-mark throw to Kennedy. Cubs 1, Padres 0.

So what's new?

FOR SAN Diego's next three innings, nothing. Eckersley shut down the Padres 1-2-3 in the second and allowed a bunt single by Wiggins in the third and a single to right by Gwynn in the fourth.

But by the fifth, Padre had hitters figured out Eckersley. For once, San Diego would have an edge. Not the Cubs.

Kennedy, hitless in eight at-bats, led off the inning with a single to right. McReynolds followed with a single to shallow center, and for the first time, San Diego had two runners on base.

Drowning Sorrows

Chicago Cub fans, in a bar near Wrigley Field, tell the story as their beloved team lose Game 3.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

It's never been done before

Several people have approached me with the question, "When was the last time both local teams opened the same season with perfect 4-0 football records?"

Strange as it may seem, the answer is that it has never happened. A bit of District 4-5A history was set last weekend when Midland Lee defeated San Angelo and Midland High downed Big Spring. It was the first time ever that both schools got off to a perfect 4-0 start in the same year.

The reason is that Midland High hasn't gone 4-0 since the mid-1950s and, since Lee's inaugural season was in 1961, that would make it impossible for both teams to be 4-0 at this stage of the season.

Bulldog fans will point to the fact, however, that they've had to open District 4-5A play against powerful Odessa Permian for the last several years and this year, with the new schedule change, the opener was against Big Spring.

So, it's easy to understand why there is a football revival going on in Midland these days. Of course, the Lee bandwagon began last year when the Rebs knocked off a 13-3 record and a berth in the state finals. The fever is now spreading to Midland High.

IN ANOTHER trivia note, Midland is the only city in District 4-5A that owns a dead solid perfect mark. Permian is undefeated as usual at this point, but Odessa High has lost twice. Lee ended San Angelo's claim to the unbeaten ranks last week and Abilene has three losses and Big Spring two.

But there has to be a warning sign flashed for the Bulldogs and Rebels at this point. In District 4-5A, a loss can come in a hurry from almost any direction.

Lee would appear to be especially vulnerable this week after a big victory over highly regarded San Angelo. Lee doesn't tradionally play very well against Abilene Cooper. Lee has beaten the Cougs only twice since 1978 and most of those years Lee was the favorite. You only have to go back to last year to make the point.

The Rebs also face Permian next week and the urge to look forward is no small matter to consider since Cooper has shown some punch this season.

MIDLAND HIGH is gaining confidence week by week, but all the marbles don't seem to be in place yet. The offense is still making a lot of turnovers. That has coach Doug McCutchen wondering, "What kind of team would we have if we didn't have the turnovers? We might put some big points on the board."

The Bulldogs still must face reality. They are unbeaten, but haven't received much respect for it. The Harris Poll is picking 2-2 Abilene High over unbeaten Midland High. You talk about the Rodney Dangerfield of 4-5A — Midland High is it.

But if the two teams survive tonight, you will be able to see your basic revival in action. Then it will be Lee at Permian for your basic 20,000 fans and Odessa High at Midland High. Folks, it doesn't get any better than this.

But will it happen? Here are the answers.

Midland Lee 35, Abilene Cooper 14: The only real question for tonight is does Lee have a bus that can make it from the Lee Field House to Memorial Stadium.

Midland High 21, Abilene High 13: Harris likes the Eagles, but this is a great time for the Bulldogs to be making a trip to Abilene. The Eagles may have lost confidence after drubbings from highly ranked Longview and Permian.

Odessa Permian 42, Big Spring 7: My chief scout, Kent Finley, who formerly coached at Abilene Cooper before becoming a Midlander, says Permian is for real. I never doubt my scout when he adds, "And I guess Lee is for real too."

San Angelo 28, Odessa High 10: You talk about your standard "Angry Orange." The Bronchos are in for a long night from the Bobcats, who have been close-mouthed all week.

Now, does anyone have tickets for next week's game between...shhhh...

Something has to give in Andrews-Lamesa battle

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Lamesa and Andrews open District 2-4A play Friday night and something's got to give.

Lamesa's Tornadoes are off to their best start in years at 3-0, while Andrews is 2-1. Both schools had last week off in preparation for their district opener against each other.

For Lamesa it has been two weeks to savor, get healthy and refocus on the district battle.

Lamesa will go with its' 1-2 punch of Williams and Warren. Kenneth Williams has already gained half a thousand yards in only three games, and he'll most likely see plenty of action since he's carried 70 times in his last two outings, producing three TD's and 417 yards rushing.

Quarterback Doug Warren can rifle the ball when he gets the time. Lamesa's biggest problem is small size. The defensive unit averages only 156 pounds per man, although defense has been a Lamesa strength. Says coach Clyde Noonkester: "They like to get after it."

Coach David Visentine's bunch dropped their first two disrict games in 1983 and never fully recovered. Somebody's got to lose Friday. Flip a coin...heads, tha means home team. Home team loses, Tors keep it up, 14-12.

Crane at McCamey: The Cranes won this one a year ago, 24-14, but in a 1-3 start the Cranes have been blanked twice and have scored only 13 points all season. The 4-0 Badgers, meanwhile, have exactly the same numbers on defense - two shutouts and 13 points allowed.

McCamey can play defense, and the only area the Cranes have a decided advantage is with size. Both squads are capably coached, but in 1983 Crane boss Rickey White had the luck that has eluded the Cranes in 1984. McCamey also wants to win this annual feud between the towns 20 miles apart. Badgers should enter the District 8-AA wars unscathed, 20-7.

Greenwood at Rankin: These schools are like cars passing on a desolate stretch of I-20. One is going places, the other can't avoid West Texas. But this year, Rankin is the squad being buried in the dirt. The 1-3 Red Devils would probably take a 33-0 loss and consider it a moral victory. Greenwood is not only a classification higher (AA), but is 4-0 and hasn't surrendered a score this season. Coach Joe Longley will kill me if I pick too lopsided a score, so let's call it (wink, wink, nudge, nudge) Greenwood 20, Rankin 0. Now in the second quarter,...

Stanton at Seagraves: The Buffs are no longer the easy date they were a year ago. In a 2-1-1 start, only the names have changed, but the top reason for the Buff ledger is desire. In their tie against Coahoma, they scored eight points in the final seconds to slavage a 14-14 standoff. Last week they easily disposed of Ozona 22-8. Seagraves would be better off on a sea cruise, but they'll likely get a trip to Davey Jones' locker Friday, 14-0.

Reagan County at Sonora: Finally it's about to be over for new Big Lake coach Ronnie Reeger. The Owls face their fourth class AAA school this week, then get a break when they get to play the District 8-AA field. Some break. That means instead of playing teams that are simply bigger, now they get to play teams that have incentive in one of West Texas' most competitive loops.

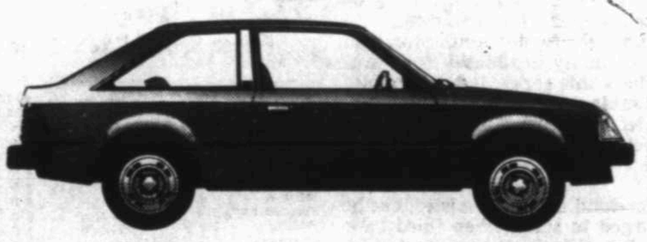

The Owls fell from the ranks of the unbeaten for the first time last week in a 28-6 loss at Coahoma. They hit the road again this week, and Sonora has been very strong. Their first loss came in a surprising 6-2 game with Brady last week, so both teams want to get well. Unfortunately, things may catch up a bit to the over-achieving Owls, 21-12.

Last week's picks weren't as accurate as before, falling to 3-3 on the week, but still 21-8 on the year.

Eagles edge Bullpups; Lee sophs rip Cooper

From Staff Reports

Abilene High blocked Midland High's tying extra point kick in the third quarter and then scored a long-range touchdown in the fourth to post a 22-13 junior varsity victory Thursday.

Trailing 14-0 in the first half, the Bullpups put their first score on the board in the second quarter when Tommy Yorkman punched the ball across the goal line from three yards out.

Richard Triplett added the extra point kick.

In the third quarter, Midland High had a chance to tie the game at 14 when quarterback Jamie Madrid scored on an eight-yard keeper.

However, Triplett's PAT attempt was blocked and the score remained at 14-13.

The Eagles added a long pass for a touchdown and threw for the two-point conversion to reach the final 22-13 score.

The loss gives MHS a 0-4 record on the year.

THE MIDLAND Lee sophomores had a highly successful night against Abilene Cooper, claiming their first victory of the season by a 50-8 score.

With the victory, Lee's sophs are now 1-2 on the year.

The next game for the Lee sophs will be on Thursday at Lee Field at 5 p.m. against Little Mo, the Permian sophomores.

Neither the MHS sophomores or Lee J.V. played Thursday night.

The MHS sophs are off until Oct. 18 when they host San Angelo while Lee will play Cooper on Saturday in Abilene at 1:30 p.m.

Cub busters beat stuffing out of helpless Chubbie

By PETER ROWE
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — You want Cub busting?

A life-size stuffed bear named "Chubbie" took a fist to the nose, then a baseball bat between the eyes.

"We picked him up at a garage sale a few weeks ago," explained Brad Constantine, an 18-year-old college student, pummeling the cuddly critter perched atop a car in the parking lot of San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium.

Thud. Chubbie's head limply rolled left — whump — and right.

"Since then," Constantine continued between blows, "he has been kicked, hit and beaten, all to help the Padres whip the Cubs."

Chubbie's other guardian, Pat Shaw, predicted that the animal abuse would pay off.

"I grew up outside Gary, Indiana," said Shaw, who is also attending college. "I was around the Chicago Cubs enough to know they can do the Chicago choke."

Hours before the game, the tailgate brigade confidently predicted three wins at home to erase a two-game deficit and propel the Padres into their first World Series.

"The only reason we came down here was to see the World Series," said Peter Boswell, a Padres fan from Calgary, Alberta, who drove south from Canada with two friends for the occasion. "We didn't come just to see a playoff game."

"I'm sure we'll come off with it tonight," said Benny Hollman, leader of the Caliente Brass, one of four bands hired by the stadium to perform outside the park before the game.

But could the Padres, just one game from elimination, win three straight?

"I hear they've only done it once in the American League and never in the National League," Hollman said. "Maybe it's our turn."

After helplessly watching the Padres lose twice in Chicago — and listening to network broadcasters laud the intensely loyal Cub partisans — San Diego fans embraced the symptoms of pennant fever.

"We're more laid back than Chicago is," admitted Debbie Cono. "But, hey, we're native Californians. And we're just as much a fan as anybody in Chicago."

Ron Craddock, who hired a white Lincoln limousine to deliver him to the game, argued that San Diego is overdue a little national respect.

"We're here," he said, "to show the rest of the United States that San Diego has some class, too."

Craddock, at least, has flair. While leaning out of the limo's sunroof, he commented on the differences between San Diego and Chicago between blows to a little teddy bear.

"We were die-hard Cub fans" while living in the Midwest, he said. "But we came here two years ago and San Diego has been good enough to adopt me and I've adopted the Padres."

Craddock was not alone. Among the nearly 60,000 fans in the ballpark Thursday were more than a few refugees from the Midwest, San Diego residents — and Padres fans — by choice.

"My grandfather used to take me to games at Wrigley when I was a little girl," said Rosemary Bentley, who now lives in San Diego and holds Padres season tickets. "I was in junior high when the Cubs won their last pennant."

But after 30 years in San Diego, Bentley — sporting a Padres' cap, windbreaker and jewelry — has transferred her allegiance westward, right?

"I didn't have any trouble deciding to root for the Cubs — I mean the Padres," she said. "Every once in a while, it comes out wrong."

Others' loyalties are a bit more tangled. Thursday, San Diego resident Joel Aven wore a "Padre Busters" T-shirt to the ballpark.

"I'm for the Padres," said the former Chicagoan, "until they play the Cubs."

Several hundred bona fide Cubs fans were evident in the parking lot, many huddled around the portable studio of WGN radio, the station that broadcasts the games from Wrigley.

"I think the Cubs will sweep the series," said Harry Caray, the Cubs' announcer. "We'll stay here overnight and leave tomorrow (Friday) for Chicago — and a World Series with Detroit."

Confident? Absolutely, but several among the Chicago faithful argued that they have been misrepresented by the media.

"There are two misconceptions about us," said Bill Hitchcock, a Cubs fan who deserted the Windy City 26 years ago for Anaheim. "We haven't been suffering. We love the games, win or lose.

"And, two, we are not jerks."

"It's unfortunate that people think we are obnoxious," said Bill Fisch, a 26-year-old fabric salesman from Chicago. "I think Chicago fans are really more intensive than anything. There's a legacy of rooting for the Cubs and always feeling bad because they've always lost.

"For Chicagoans, it's a way of life."

One of the hurdles facing fans was parking. Only 17,000 parking spots were available to the 60,000 people.

Thunderin' Lumber, meet lumberin' fenders.

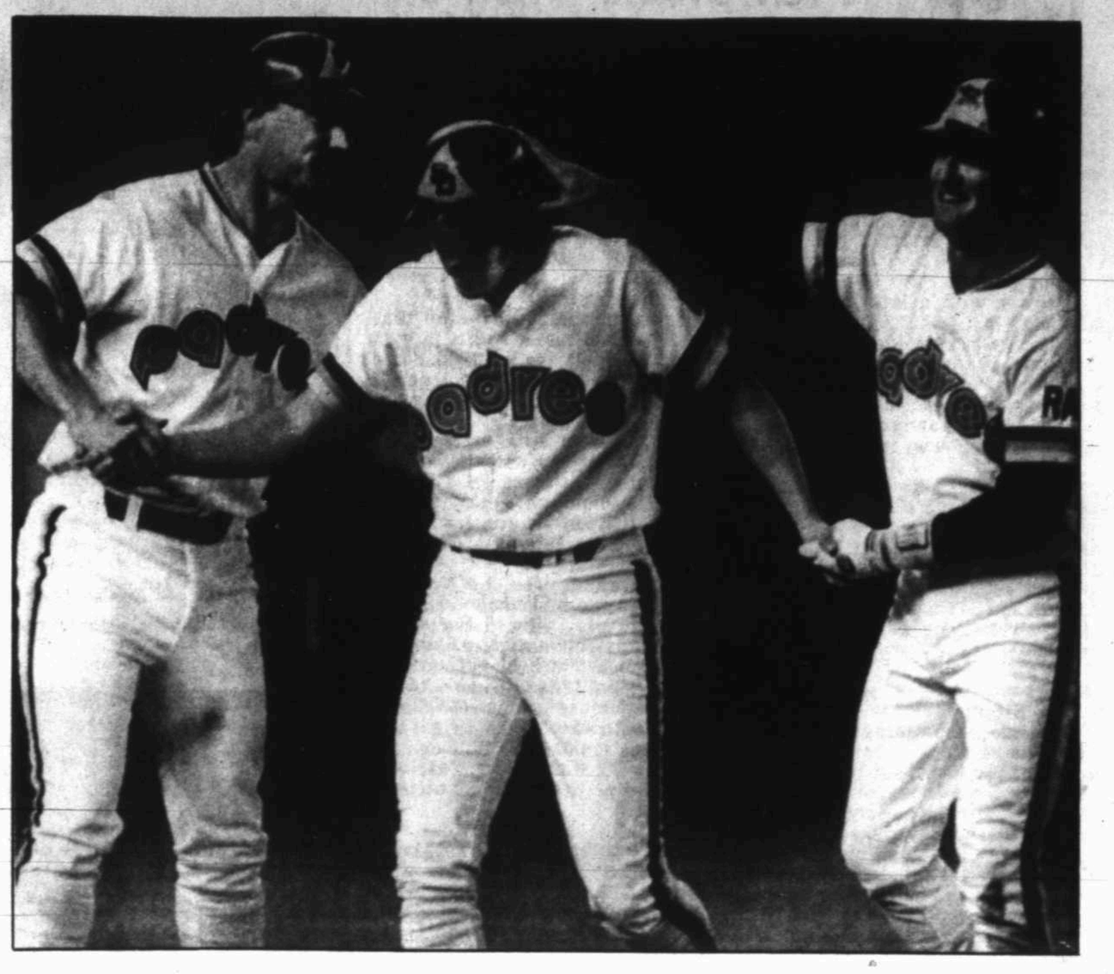

An hour before the 5:30 p.m. (PDT) contest, there was a 45-minute wait to get into the Padres' gift shop. The line was 18 deep at one stadium phone booth, eight deep at the portable toilets dotting the parking lot.

Trying to beat the lines, fans began to arrive before 11 a.m. and settled in for the day. Of course, that created another problem — fashioning a believable alibi for the boss.

For Donald G. Rez, a downtown lawyer, the solution was simple.

"I made my partners sit there and work so we could bankroll this," he said, hoisting a dark Beck's beer with two other gray-suited lawyers and a sharply dressed businesswoman.

"This," said the woman, "is how people get out of work."

San Diego's Kevin McReynolds is congratulated by teammates Greg Nettles (right) and Terry Kennedy (left) after a Cub-busting three-run homer in the sixth inning Thursday night.

Whitson popped out, but Wiggins got Templeton home with a single to center. Wiggins tried to take second, but Bob Dernier relayed to first baseman Leon Durham, who threw to Sandberg for the out.

"Eckersley had pitched very consistent in the second half, but he got the ball up and out over the plate," Cub manager Jim Frey said. "He got in trouble with that. Like when Templeton got that big hit."

Templeton said: "I saw what the Cubs did the first two games. I thought somebody had to get us to rally."

TEMPLETON GOT the rally started. The fans took it from there.

In the sixth, Gwynn led off with a single to right, his third consecutive hit. This time, Gwynn wasn't left standing on first or second base.

An infield out by first baseman Steve Garvey moved Gwynn to second, where he scored easily on third baseman Graig Nettles' single to center. A 4-1 Padre lead was all Frey could stomach, and he replaced Eckersley with Frazier.

Frazier was a mess. Kennedy hit a fastball to center, moving Nettles to second. McReynolds followed with his first home run since Sept. 3. San Diego led, 7-1.

"I thought he (Frazier) was going to throw away from me," McReynolds said. "He threw me a sinker that didn't sink. I didn't hit it well. I think I cracked my bat. Luckily, the ball got out. It probably wouldn't have in Chicago."

K.C. last hopes rest on Leibrandt

DETROIT (AP) — The last hope for the Kansas City Royals rests with someone they did not want before the season started.

Charlie Leibrandt, who began the year in the minor leagues, will be the Royals' starter tonight when they try to derail the Detroit Tiger express that has rolled to a two games-to-none lead in the best-of-five American League Championship Series.

Very few people thought Leibrandt would figure in Kansas City's plans this season. Now, very few people figure the Royals have a chance as they go against Detroit's Milt Wilcox, 17-8.

"In this situation, we can't lose," Leibrandt said.

But, one more loss and the Royals are gone and the AL East-champion Tigers will be in the World Series for the first time since 1968.

Only one team, the 1982 Milwaukee Brewers, has ever overcome a 2-0 deficit in a league championship series.

Tiger Stadium will be jammed with 50,000-plus roaring fans, anxious for their team to make the kill.

"I can't even imagine what it will be like," said John Grubb, the hero of Game 2. His two-run double in the 11th inning off Dan Quisenberry lifted Detroit to a 5-3 triumph.

"It's going to be electrifying," said Alan Trammell, the star of an 8-1 rout in the series opener. He went 3-for-3 and drove home three runs as the aggressive Tigers ran the Royals out of their own ballpark.

Kansas City has won five of six games against the Tigers in Detroit this season, although the Royals are not overly enthusiastic about their chances.

"Nobody's saying, 'Hey, great, we've done well in Detroit,' " Quisenberry said.

Partly cloudy skies and temperatures in the 50s were forecast for the 8:35 p.m. EDT matchup.

Win or lose, this season has been a success for Leibrandt, who turned 28 on Thursday. The left-hander racked up an 11-7 record with a 3.63 earned run average.

In March, it looked like he might not even be with the team.

Leibrandt, 16-17 in four years with the Cincinnati Reds before spending the entire 1983 season in the minors, came to spring training as a veteran trying to find his way back to the major leagues.

He was immediately disappointed.

"I could see the handwriting on the wall," he said. "They didn't need me. I deserved better."

He pitched just one inning of exhibition ball for the Royals. And Kansas City Manager Dick Howser wasn't sure Leibrandt deserved much more than that.

"I'll tell you how he looked in the spring," he said. "He looked like Omaha. He looked like down the road."

Leibrandt was given a one-way ticket to the Royals' Triple-A team in Omaha, a place where "they have a really nice park to play in but you wouldn't want to spend your entire life there."

Rather than stay frustrated — a thought that occurred to him — he channeled his energy into pitching well.

One by one, the victories came.

By early May, he was throwing as well "as I ever had in my career."

"I kept thinking that something had to happen," he said. "I knew I was putting pressure on them. About a month later, something did happen."

The Royals, at the time, were struggling and needed help.

"Give him credit," Howser said. 'He forced us to recall him."

He was 7-1 with 1.24 ERA when he was brought up May 30, and Howser quickly put him into the starting rotation.

"When you're trying to make a living in this business, and you're hurting for pitching, you give 'em a chance if you think they can do it," Howser said. "He'd had some success in the big leagues and I think that helped make it easier for him to step right in."

Said Leibrandt: "It means a great deal to a young guy to know he's going to get to pitch and not worry about getting into the doghouse."

Leibrandt felt he had been in exile during the last year he spent with the Cincinnati organization, and hoped things would work out once he was traded in June 1983 to the Royals, who assigned him to Omaha.

Prospets for progress did not look any brighter when he began this year again in the minors.

Nationals aren't needing bullpens

Some predicted the National League playoff series would boil down to a battle of relief pitchers...the Cubs' Lee Smith and the Padres' Rich Gossage. The theory was that which ever team could go to its bullpen for a 95-mph flamethrower with a late inning lead would win.

The Padres couldn't be blamed, maybe, if they felt they had the upper hand. Although Smith was 2-1 against San Diego this year, he also had a 8.49 earned-run-average against the Padres and in both wins had failed to do his job. He had failed to make a lead stand up in the first place, each time surrendering the tying run.

That's not the way it turned out Wednesday. Smith was called upon to protect a Steve Trout lead in the ninth and he simply blew the Padres away with what was reported to be a 100-mph heater. Talk about pumped up.

IF SMITH had had his way, the one-time gospel singer wouldn't even be in the NL playoffs. He'd be playing pro basketball.

In fact, someone had to twist his arm just to make him try baseball.

Smith, who played his AA ball for Midland's Cubs, grew up in Casper, La., where his father hauled wood for a living and helped his wife Bessie raise six children.

The nearest Lee got to a baseball diamond was firing rocks at mail boxes.

"Everything is slow and relaxed in Casper," says Lee, "There were only 400 kids in our school and that includes kindgarten through high school. There were 26 people in my high school graduating class.

"When I came to Chicago, I couldn't believe everybody here didn't go to the same school."

SMITH'S father, brothers and sisters formed a gospel singing group to pay the bills. They toured the south and were called the Gospelletes. "I played the guitar and we went to places in Arkansas and mostly Texas."

Smith figures it was an experience "that helped prepare me for performing in front of big crowds, maybe not as big as those in the playoffs, but it seemed like they were then."

It was in the ninth grade that Lee's baseball career began, in gym class. "I was playing left field. Some guy hit the ball in the corner. I picked it up and threw the guy out at home plate on the fly.

"When I went to my next class, I got a note on my desk to see Mr. (Ron) Daniels. I was scared to death." At 6-5, 240 pounds, it's hard to believe, that anyone ever frightened him, but Lee was probably only 6-0 and 190 then.

"Mr. Daniels was the baseball coach and the basketball coach. He wanted to know why I hadn't come out for baseball with such a strong arm. It took him two years to convince me, but I finally came out."

In his junior-learning-year Smith was 8-0 with an 0.14 ERA. He got better in his senior year, although he was only 7-1 with the same old 0.14 ERA. He pitched four no-hitters, however.

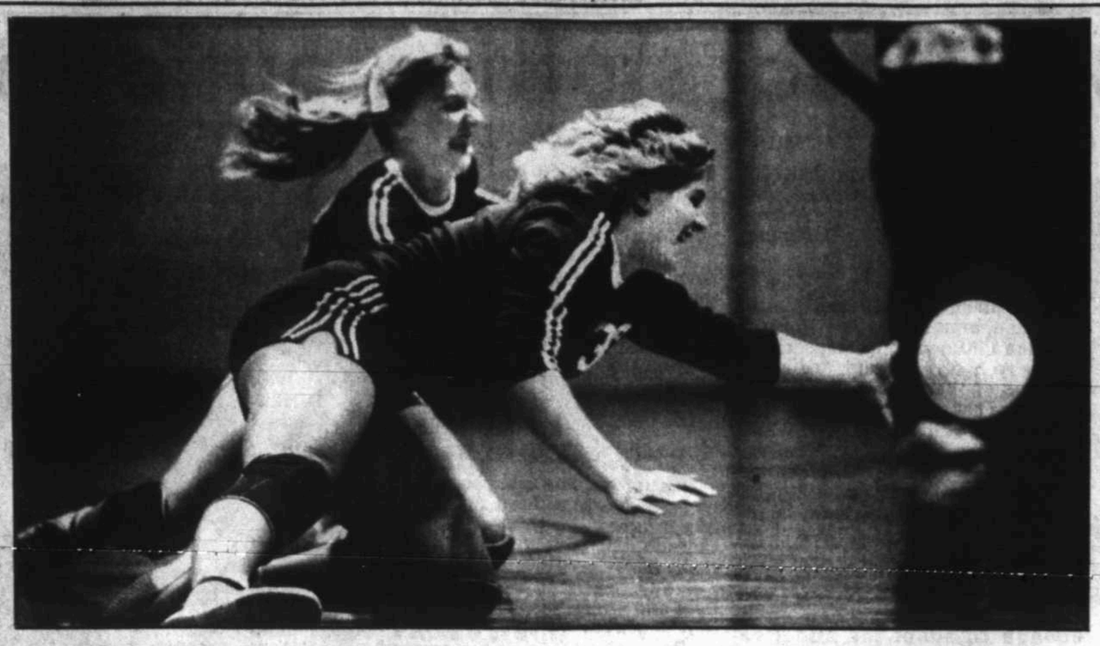

SMITH attended Northwest Louisiana State for two years and although the Chicago Cubs made him a second round draft selection in June 1975, that wasn't his druthers.

He was good enough in basketball to have arranged tryouts with the Los Angeles Lakers and New Orleans Saints, envisioning himself as an NBA power forward.

Even after his draft, it took some convincing that baseball was his future. "That fall, instead of going to Instructional League, I played college basketball."

Things have worked out, it seems, pretty satisfactorily, despite the efforts of Lee Smith.

Midland High's Denise Lanz (front) and Laura Martin (back) hit the floor in an attempt to save a shot during Thursday's District 4-5A volleyball against Big Spring at MHS Gym.

MHS, Lee tied for 3rd in volleyball

From Staff Reports

The Midland High Bulldogs had a gut check in their District 4-5A volleyball match against Big Spring Thursday night. They passed with flying colors.

After winning the first game by a 15-7 margin and then losing the second 13-15, the Bulldogs had to fight back from a 13-8 margin in the third and decisive game for a 15-13 win to keep their hopes of a second place district finish alive.

"We won the first game handily and had a mental lapse in the second and lost," said MHS coach Sonja Pittman. "We had to come from way down to win the third and we did."

The victory gives Midland High a 5-3 district record this year and leaves them in a tie for third place with Midland Lee, a 15-10, 18-16 loser to league-leading and unbeaten San Angelo. Abilene Cooper is alone in second at 6-2.

"Now that we've lost three games, we're going to have to win everything to finish second," said Pittman. "First is no longer realistic. I'm really happy with the way the girls have performed. They've given more than I've asked of them and have already done better than expected."

For the Rebels, it was a hard-fought match that ended in the narrow second-game defeat.

"San Angelo had some probelms receiving the serve but their hitters are so tough you almost have to put it down because if they get to it they are real good at working the ball," said Lee coach Janice Baulch. "We played real well. The kids played as hard as they could play and I think that when the game was over they realized it too. Sure they were disappointed they didn't beat them but they know it isn't over yet. We still have to play Cooper yet and if we can beat them we're back where we were before."

The Rebels will host second place Cooper Tuesday night at 7 p.m. while Midland High travels to Abilene High, also playing at 7 p.m.

String of six birdies lifts Streck into Texas Open tie

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Ron Streck took in stride a string of six consecutive birdies — including a bunker shot that found the cup — that propelled him into a four-way tie for the first round lead in the $350,000 Texas Open golf tournament.

"I got hot," Streck said Thursday, then added:

"I've been hot here before."

It's something of an understatement. Streck set an all-time PGA Tour record when he played the final two rounds of the 1978 Texas Open in 125, scoring his first professional victory.

"It's a good feeling to come back here. I know I can win here," said Streck, who shared the first round lead with defending champion Jim Colbert, Mark Wiebe and longshot Kurt Cox, all tied at 65, 5-under-par on the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course.

Cox, 36, was less than overwhelmed by his no-bogey effort, only his fifth round of PGA Tour competition this year.

"I haven't played but maybe a half-dozen rounds since the Buick Open in early August," said the San Antonio native. "I guess I've just got a lot of natural talent and it came out today.

"I didn't get gung-ho or excited about it. You can't play golf that way. It's no big deal to be leading the first round," he said.

COX TIED for 50th — the last qualifying spot — in the last PGA Tour school and has played in only one event this year, a tie for 62nd (worth $840) in the Buick Open.

Cox, who runs a golf school and club repair shop in Longview, Texas, said he didn't know how many times he'd attempted to gain his approved playing rights on the Tour — "but it's been pretty steady, I think I've tried every year since 1977," he said.

Unable to qualify for the American circuit, he has played several seasons on the European and Asian tours and has collected three Asian titles, in the Singapore, India and Hong Kong opens.

Turning 68s into 74s could putt Stephenson from pro golf career

WOBURN, England (AP) — Australia's Jan Stephenson says she is ready to quit the women's professional golf tour unless her putting improves.

"I have shot two 68s and turned them into 74s on the greens," said Stephenson, who was in third place, six strokes off the pace at 148, going into today's third round at the $200,000 British Women's Open Golf Championships.

Ayako Okamoto of Japan was clinging to her one-stroke lead over Dale Reid of Scotland after firing her second 71 on the par-73 Woburn course. Reid also shot a 71 Thursday for a two-round total of 143.

Americans Robin Walton, Lenore Muraoka and Amy Alcott were in a tie for fourth at 149. Walton and Muraoka had 75s and Alcott a 76 on Thursday.

At 150 were Americans Betsy King, Pat Bradley and Bonnie Lauer. King and Bradley shot second-round 75s and Lauer a 72.

"I've been through 18 months of anguish because of my putter, and that is long enough," Stephenson said. "I'm close to quitting because of my putter.

"It all went wrong after I won the U.S. Open last year, and if I had putted half decently today I would have shot a 66.

"I've cried many times and it feels like the end of the world — my putting is slowly killing me. I've probably blown yet another tournament on the greens."

Stephenson missed eight putts from inside eight feet, including two two-footers. Once, she three-putted from eight feet.

Sherri Turner of the United States, who turned 28 Thursday, was disqualified after her playing partner and marker, former English champion Beverley New, failed to countersign her card Wednesday.

"Although I am very disappointed, it was my own fault," Turner said. "I signed the card, Bev didn't and it was my responsibility to ensure that she did. I've been playing golf since I was five, so I ought to know the rules by now.

"We were the last match out and it was cold, dark and raining. Everybody was keen to get away and Beverley had gone before I could do anything about it."

Spurs' Lucas off to Houston for Bailey, draft pick

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Veteran guard John Lucas, traded by the San Antonio Spurs, says he's delighted to be returning "home" to play for the Houston Rockets of the National Basketball Association.

The San Antonio Spurs traded Lucas Thursday for forward James Bailey and a future second-round draft choice, the Spurs said.

Lucas, who originally played with Houston after leaving the University of Maryland in 1976, has been used as a point guard by the Spurs, whom he joined in 1983 after stints with Golden State and Seattle. He has an 11.1 point per game average in the NBA.

"I'm excited," Lucas said Thursday night after the Spurs beat Houston 125-95 in a preseason game. "I'm really grateful to be coming back home. We're going to be good.

Bailey, a five-year league veteran from Rutgers, played as a power forward with the Rockets and would have been overshadowed this season by Ralph Sampson and Akeem Abdul-Olajuwon.

Bailey has been with Houston for year and a half and played 73 games averaging 8.8 points and 4.1 rebounds last season. He was drafted sixth by Seattle.

WTSU new LSC member?

AMARILLO (AP) — The West Texas State Advisory Athletic Committee voted Thursday to recommend to the Board of Regents that the Buffs join the Lone Star Conference.

The committee will make its recommendation at the November regents meeting.

Dr. Ed Roach, WT president, said the Buffs will continue to compete in the Missouri Valley Conference until the end of the 1985-86 school year.

The regents voted last August for WT to drop out of the Valley no later than the spring of 1986.

Joining the Lone Star means the Buffs will drop from NCAA Division I to Division II.

Abilene Christian, Angelo State, East Texas State, Texas A&I, Howard Payne and Eastern New Mexico make up the Lone Star.

"We believe the Lone Star will be a very exciting alternative for WT," Roach said. "If I didn't think it was a positive move, I wouldn't have opted for it."

Young leads Sam Houston to win

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Tailback Raymond Young scored on runs of 6 and 8 yards in a 21-point third quarter and helped lead Sam Houston State University over Southeastern Louisiana 28-3 in a Gulf Star Conference game.

Quarterback Lanny Dycus threw for one touchdown and ran for another in Thursday night's game. The Bearkats improved their record to 4-1 overall and 2-1 in conference play.

Southeastern Louisiana is now 1-4 and 0-1.

Dycus' scoring pass to Sam Moore covered 20 yards. Dycus scampered in from three yards out in the big third quarter.

Injuries end Bruni's football season

BRUNI (AP) — A high school football team in this South Texas community has cancelled the rest of its games for the 1984 season because of player injuries, school officials say.

Class 1A Bruni, which started the season with 15 players, lost three to injuries, said school principal Kim Black.

Bruni, in District 16, was scheduled to play La Pryor tonight. District games were scheduled with Agua Dulce, Mirando City, Ben Bolt and San Isidro.

Bruni, 0-2 this year, earlier lost to Asherton 45-6 and to the Laredo United junior varsity team 25-0.

"We didn't think the situation was going to get better," Black said Thursday.

Weak sisters becoming powers?

Vandy, Kentucky haven't seen so much success in years

Associated Press

College Football

Two traditional weak sisters, Vanderbilt and Kentucky, have shown early signs of becoming college football's version of baseball's Chicago Cubs.

Vandy, ranked for the first time since 1958 at No. 19, takes a 4-0 record — its best start since 1950 — into Saturday night's game against Tulane, while Kentucky, 3-0, entertains Rutgers in hopes of going 4-0 for only the second time in 34 years.

Vandy and Kentucky share Saturday's spotlight with many familiar football names, including Texas, which puts its No. 1 ranking and 2-0 record on the line against Rice at Houston. And second-ranked Ohio State, 4-0, calls on dangerous Purdue, which already owns an upset of Notre Dame this season.

IN OTHER Top 10 games, No. 3 Washington, 4-0, is at Oregon State, No. 6 Florida State visits Memphis State, No. 7 Brigham Young is at Colorado State and No. 8 Nebraska, attempting to rebound from the loss of its No. 1 ranking collides with No. 9 Oklahoma State in a Big Eight shootout. Boston College, Oklahoma and Southern Mehtodist, ranked 4-5-10, are idle.

In games involving the Second 10, No. 11 Penn State entertains Maryland, No. 12 Georgia Tech is at home to North Carolina State, No. 13 Michigan hosts Michigan State in a battle matching traditional foes, No. 14 Miami, Fla., calls on No. 16 Notre Dame, Stanford is at No. 17 UCLA, No. 18 Auburn visits Mississippi and No. 20 Georgia faces Alabama at Birmingham. No. 15 Louisiana State is off.

VANDY COMES into the Tulane game after a 30-21 upset of Alabama, only the second Commodore victory in the last 25 meetings with the Crimson Tide.

"We're certainly excited, but we have to come down out of the clouds as a team," said Vandy Coach George MacIntyre, whose previous five teams lost 39 of 56 games. "We'll let our fans play the Alabama game over and talk about the ratings the rest of the week. We'll concentrate on Tulane," which has lost all four games this season.

Kentucky Athletic Director Cliff Hagan was a Wildcat basketball star when the football team opened with four victories in 1950. And he was the guy who scheduled Rutgers for a game that figured to match teams down on their luck. Instead, each is 3-0 and Rutgers is basking in the reflected glory of Syracuse's 17-9 upset of Nebraska last weekend. Two weeks ago, Rutgers blanked Suracuse 19-0.

"Who would have guessed?" mused Hagan.

Both Vandy and Kentucky have been statistically impressive so far. Vanderbilt beat Kansas State 26-14, Maryland 23-14 and Kansas 41-6 before stopping Alabama with an offense that quarterback Kurt Page has led to an average 405 yards a game.

Page, the nation's fifth-rated passer, has completed 74 of 118 passes for 1,000 yards and seven scores. Wide receiver Chuck Scott has caught 20 for 339 yards and three scores to complement the running of tailback Carl Woods, who has 400 yards and three touchdowns.

Kentucky has risen to fourth nationally in scoring (40 points a game), ninth in rushing (286 yards a game) and 10th in total offense (436 yards a game) after beating Kent State 42-0, Indiana 48-14 and Tulane 30-26.

Tailbakc George Adams leads the nation in scoring (14 points a game), ranks fifth in rushing (130 yards a game) and seventh in all-purpose yardage (158 yards a game). When Adams doesn't do it, sophomore quarterback Bill Ransdell does. He ranks right behind Page in the ratings after completing 33 of 50 throws for 449 yards and two touchdowns.

NEBRASKA'S CELEBRATED 31-30 loss in the Orange Bowl made a national champion out of Miami, but Cornhusker linebacker Mark Daum recalls that Oklahoma State almost ruined that dream matchup by holding Nebraska to a 14-10 decision last season.

"That was probably the best game the defense played last year," said Daum. "I think the defense is going to have to play a great game again this year" against a Cowboy team that reached 4-0 by ripping Tulsa 31-7 last week.

"Watching the films on Okie State this year has really impressed me," Daum said. "They look like a No. 1-ranked team . . . I think the one person I'm most impressed with this year over last year is (quarterback) Rusty Hilger. He looks like he's become real comfortable in that position."

Tampa Bay's Green injured in automobile accident

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay Buccaneers All-Pro linebacker Hugh Green was scheduled for eye surgery Thursday following a three-car accident, according to a team spokesman who said the defensive standout will miss two weeks of play in the National Football League.

Green, 25, was listed in satisfactory condition Thursday at St. Joseph's Hospital recuperating from a puncture wound of the thigh and face cuts, said Rick Odioso, a Bucs' spokesman. Odioso said Green would undergo surgery for a fractured orbit of the eye.

"The nature of the injury is facial and thigh," said Odioso. "The injuries do not appear to be serious. They would not seem to affect football on a long-term basis, but they could affect his ability to play Sunday."

Sunday's home game against the Minnesota Vikings is the first Green will miss in his four year career.

Green was a passenger in a sports car which went out of control Wednesday evening, crossed a concrete median, went airborne and hit two vehicles traveling in the opposite direction.

Longhorns looking for 19th straight win over Owls

Associated Press

SWC Football

Texas, newly installed as the country's top-ranked college football team, seeks to upend the Rice Owls Saturday for the 19th year in a row and record its eighth straight 3-0 start under head coach Fred Akers.

Las Vegas oddsmakers have made Texas a 29-point favorite, but Rice defensive lineman Doug Johnson said he is looking forward to the game.

"There has been some talk among the team members that we have a shot at upsetting the No. 1 team in the nation," Johnson said.

Indeed, the last time Texas was voted No. 1 was 1981, and the Longhorns occupied the lofty spot only a week, dropping in the poll after being upset by Arkansas.

"If anything, No. 1 puts some added pressure on us, the kind of pressure we love," Texas defensive lineman Tony Degrate said.

Rice takes a 1-2 record into Saturday's 7 p.m. game at Houston after being routed last week 38-3 by Miami-Florida.

In all, four Southwest Conference football teams have taken an unbeaten record into October. That's the first time that's happened since 1969, when NCAA schools moved their opening dates to early September to accommodate 11-game schedules.

If oddsmakers are right, all four will still be rolling along after this Saturday's action.

Texas A&M (3-0) is a 9-point favorite over Texas Tech (1-2) in an 11:30 a.m. confrontation at College Station; and Arkansas (2-0-1) is a 3½-point pick over TCU (2-1) in a 2 p.m. game at Fayetteville. Southern Methodist (3-0), the nation's No. 10 team, is idle.

In another league game, Baylor (1-2) is favored by 8½ points over Houston (1-2) in a 7 p.m. contest at Waco.

The game between Texas A&M and Texas Tech will mark the first time former Texas A&M head coach Tom Wilson has been at Kyle Field since he was fired three years ago.

"I think it's only natural that I would be looking forward to the game," said Wilson, who was coaxed by Tech coach Jerry Moore out of two years in private business to become offensive coordinator at Texas Tech, where he starred as a quarterback in the mid-1960s.

Wilson was the Aggies' offensive coordinator for 3½ seasons and head coach for 3½ seasons before being ousted in 1981 and replaced by Jackie Sherrill.

Although favored Saturday, A&M has yet to beat Tech since Sherrill's arrival. The Red Raiders won by 24-15 in 1982 and by 3-0 last season.

Senior quarterback Perry Morren will miss his second straight game with a bad wrist, and Tech likely will again alternate between freshman Aaron Keesee and sophomore Monty McGuire. A&M lost quarterback Kevin Murray for the season last week, and Craig Stump will handle the duties.

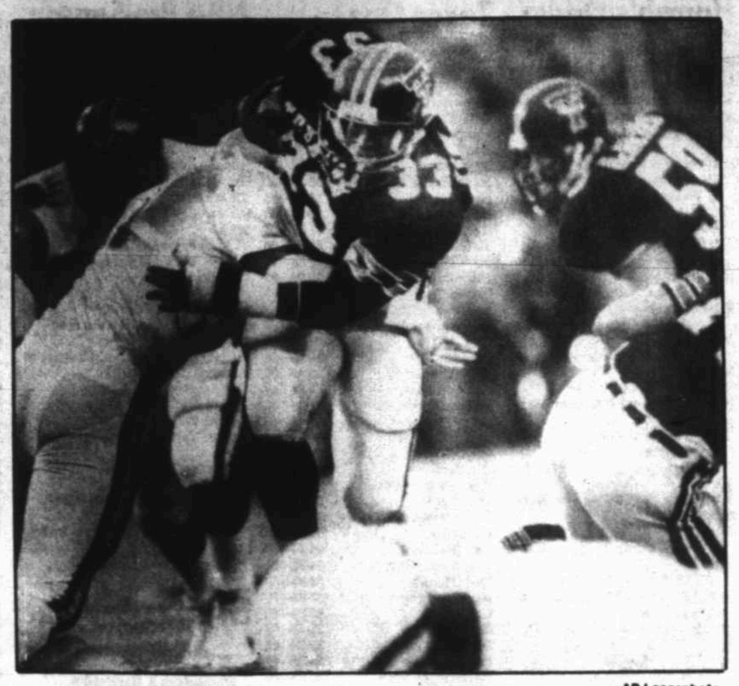

Arkansas has posed a major hurdle for TCU over the years, particularly in Arkansas. The Hogs won 22 in a row between 1959 and 1980; their only loss in a quarter century was in 1981, enabling Arkansas to take a 37-21-2 lead in the all-time series.

Speaking of having to play in Fayetteville, TCU coach Jim Wacker said, "I don't think TCU has won there since they changed the shape of the football."

Actually, it was 29 years ago, in 1955.

A touchdown in the game's final minutes let nationally ranked SMU wrap up a 28-17 victory over TCU last week. Arkansas coach Kenny Hatfield noted that TCU opened the season with two big victories and went into the SMU game feeling it could win.

"It's amazing to have that kind of confidence when you've only won one game the year before. He (Wacker) has done an outstanding job."

SWC Highlights

DALLAS (AP) — Here are highlights of this weekend's Southwest Conference football games:

TEXAS TECH (1-2, 0-1 in SWC) at TEXAS A&M (3-0, 0-0 in SWC), 11:34 a.m. (Raycom-TV) — Both teams would be unbeaten if Tech's last two games hadn't included final 70 seconds. Raiders had 18-7 fourth-quarter lead at New Mexico, lost 29-24 when Lobos scored winning points with 28 seconds left, then surrendered two TDs in final 70 seconds last week to drop 18-9 SWC opener loss to Baylor. Aggies have had opposite endings with 20-17 win over UT El Paso when Miner field-goal try at finish hit cross bar and missed, then followed with second-half rally and late TD for 22-21 win over Arkansas State. Aggies have 23-18-1 series lead. Raiders have won last two vs. A&M. Both teams lost starting QBs in last two weeks, Tech's Perry Morren now expected to be out for at least two weeks after breaking wrist vs. New Mexico, A&M's Kevin Murray breaking ankle late in victory over Arkansas State. Aggie frosh Craig Stump leads SWC in passing efficiency with 190 rating points, only SWC individual offensive leader in game. Intriguing matchup has Tech leading SWC in pass defense with yield of 92 yards per game and 37.2 completion percentage, Aggies leading in passing at 219.3 yards per game, with 58.5 completion percentage. Both teams have fared better in the air, Tech at 180.3 passing yards to 130.0 rushing. Aggies rushing for 121.3 per game. Tech is also SWC total-defense leader (297.5 yards per game), only SWC team keeping average yield under 300. Teams almost mirror each other in scoring and scoring defense, Tech scoring 25.7 and yielding 18.0, A&M scoring 26.7 and yielding 18.3.

TCU (2-1, 0-1 in SWC) at ARKANSAS (2-0-1, 0-0 in SWC), 2 p.m. — Frogs remain one of nation's top offensive teams and Razorbacks are moving up fast. TCU leads nation in rushing offense (369.3 yards per game) and second in total offense (524.0), while Arkansas is 14th nationally in total offense (418.3), third in SWC in both rushing (219.7) and passing (198.7). Frogs also No. 3 nationally in scoring at 40.3 a game, Arkansas tenth in scoring defense with yield of 11.0 a game. Teams also boast five of SWC's 10 individual statistical leaders–Frogs Kenneth Davis (148.0 yards a game) and Tony Jeffery (120.0) are one-three in SWC rushing, one-three in SWC tandem offense (148.7 and 125.3, respectively) and Clinton Brown is first in kickoff returns (24.8 yards a return). Arkansas' James Shibest caught nine passes in last week's 33-10 victory over Navy to take SWC receiving lead with average of six catches per game, while QB Brad Taylor paces SWC in total offense at 210 yards per game, and sub QB Danny Nutt is second in passing efficiency with 176.2 rating points. Taylor missed Navy game with ankle injury, expected back for TCU. Frogs' offensive output remains astronomical despite 28-17 loss to SMU last week–they average 7.0 a play and a TD every 13 plays. Hog defense has allowed only three rushing TDs and a TD every 50-plus plays. Hogs own SWC's longest member-vs.-member domination with 22 straight victories over Frogs that ended with 28-24 TCU victory in '81, but Arkansas has won last two for 24-1 lead in last quarter-century...that gives Arkansas 37-21-2 all-time series lead, 37-19-2 SWC lead, and Razorbacks have won 14 in a row from Frogs in Arkansas, last TCU win in Fayetteville by 26-0 in 1955.

HOUSTON (1-2, 0-0 in SWC) at BAYLOR (1-2, 1-0 in SWC), 7 p.m. — Teams had different finishes last week, Baylor scoring two TDs in final 70 seconds to overhaul Texas Tech, 18-9, Houston grabbing 28-7 third-quarter lead over Louisville before losing on field goal in last 20 seconds, 30-28. Despite two straight defeats, Cougars rank fourth in SWC in both total offense (371.5 yards a game) and total defense (334.7), while Bears are last in offense (300.3) and sixth in defense (350.7) Teams are about equal in passing as Bears continue to have problems in expected strong area — completing 44 per cent for 166 yards a game to Houston's 46.8 per cent for 156.3 yards. Despite two-to-one rushing over passing ratio, Houston QB Gerald Landry leads SWC with five TD passes. Game offers three of SWC's top six rushers–UH's No. 4 Raymond Tate (97.3 yards per game) and tied for No. 5 are Cougars' Sloan Hood and Baylor's Ron Francis with identical gains of 264 yards for 88.0 per-game averages. Baylor unveiled strong running threat in rally over Tech as Ralph Stockemer scored both last-minute TDs and accounted for 66 of Bears' 83 yards in those TD drives. Baylor claims two SWC individual statistical leaders--Buzzy Sawyer with 44.8-yard punting average and Thomas Everett with 14.0-yard average on seven punt returns. Houston is 5-2-1 in past SWC openers, building 5-1-1 record in openers vs. Baylor. Houston holds 8-7-1 series lead. Bears won 42-21 last season.

TEXAS (2-0, 0-0 in SWC) at RICE (1-2, 0-0 in SWC), 7 p.m. — Longhorns took over first place nationally after 28-3 victory over Penn State last week. Rice, meanwhile was dropping 38-3 decision to last year's No. 1 team, Miami (Fla.) Texas passing game was instrumental in victory over highly-ranked team for second straight game (following 35-27 victory over Auburn in opener), Todd Dodge hitting William Harris on 84-yard TD pass, tied for ninth- longest in SWC's 70 seasons. Both teams relying heavily on passing. Texas operating its best-balanced offense yet with 172.5 rushing yards per game and 199.0 passing, while Owls are rushing for 115.0 and passing for 198.0. Both also allow more passing yardage than running, Texas at 208.5 per game passing and 146.0 running, Rice giving up 235.0 passing and 214.0 running. Owls rank eighth in SWC pass defense, Texas sixth without yet allowing a TD pass. Texas running game showing depth with Terry Orr, Rob Moerschell and Jerome Johnson. Rice relies on No. 2 SWC receiver Melvin Robinson (4.3 catches per game) and No. 6 Darrick Wells (3.7). No. 1 familiar spot for Longhorns, who won one or more national titles in '63, '69 and '70, held top spot at various times in '41, '46, '61, '62, '64, '65, '73, '77 and '81. Last time Texas held No. 1, Longhorns suffered 42-11 loss to Arkansas on Oct. 17, 1981. Owls have lost 18 straight to Texas. Texas has 49-20-1 all-time lead, 47-19-1 lead in SWC play, 20-12-1 advantage in games played in Houston.

Mavs, Perkins still far from deal

DALLAS (AP) — Just three days before the Dallas Mavericks play their first preseason basketball game of the 1984 season, the club apparently still is not close to signing Sam Perkins, the fourth player selected in this year's NBA draft.

Mavs owner Donald Carter said Thursday night that general manager Norm Sonju "is still having dialogue" with Perkins' agent, Lee Fentress, but added that Perkins' signing does not appear to be imminent.

The Dallas owner was piqued by reports that Fentress plans to leave the country on Monday.

"I had a hard time conceiving that when I heard it, but I know that's what he told Norm," Carter said. "His leaving the country will not affect what we do.

"But if I was a ball player, and he was my agent, I don't know if I'd sit still for that."

Carter said the major holdup in signing the 6-10, 230-pound forward-center has been Fentress' insistence that the Mavericks offer Perkins a contract equal to that of his University of North Carolina and Olympic teammate, Michael Jordan, whom the Chicago Bulls made the No. 3 pick of the draft.

The Mavericks say other NBA teams have been irresponsible in the contracts they offered and that it would be folly for Dallas to follow suit. At any rate, they say they don't feel Perkins should get as big a contract as Jordan or the No. 1 pick in the draft — Houston center Akeem Olajuwon.

"I've already made the statement, he's Sam Perkins and we love him and we need him. But he's not Michael Jordan and he's not Akeem Olajuwon," Carter said.

Carter made it clear he blames Fentress, not Perkins.

"I look forward to his being here. He's an A-OK guy, a young man you'd like to have around. I don't want the Dallas fans to hold this against him."

Perkins, like Jordan, was a key member of the United States' Olympic championship basketball team. But Mavs coach Dick Motta said Perkins is falling behind in technical areas. The team opened practice Saturday night and has held two-a-day drills every day.

"We've finished our 11th practice. That's 22 hours. Our practices are very detailed, and he's getting behind," Motta said after Thursday night's workout.

"He's a quick learner, but he's getting to the point that he's going to have so much to learn that he's going to have trouble," Motta said.

"I'd compare it to signing up for a Spanish class and missing the first 10 days. Whether you could ever learn everything you'd missed is questionable. Some might be able to, and others wouldn't."

Also unsigned and not in camp is Terence Stansbury, a 6-5, 170-pound guard from Temple whom the Mavericks took as the 15th selection in the draft with their second first-round pick.

Of the 24 first-round picks in this year's NBA draft, Perkins and Stansbury are the only ones who have not signed contracts and reported.

"Because of Perkins' height and ability, he has a better chance to succeed (despite missing the start of pre-season practices)," Motta said. "We need him to succeed more than we need Stansbury to succeed."

White Sox plan to offer Luzinski new contract

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox said Thursday they planned to offer designated hitter Greg Luzinksi a contract when he becomes a free agent on Nov. 1.

Club spokesman Chuck Shriver said "we've been saying publicly all along that we intend to offer him a contract when his contract expires."

Luzinski, who suffered through one of the worst years in his career this season, is completing the final year of a three-year contract with the White Sox. His annual salary has been estimated at $725,000, according to published reports.

When asked recently if he'll don a White Sox uniform again, Luzinski said, "I don't know. I think it's going to come down to dollars and cents."

Campbell, Moon have yet to work CFL magic in NFL

HOUSTON (AP) — The combined efforts of Coach Hugh Campbell and quarterback Warren Moon resulted in five Canadian Football League Grey Cup championships, two 5,000-yard passing seasons for Moon and coach of the year honors for Campbell.

Then they left the Edmonton Eskimoes and came south hoping to work the same magic with the National Football League Houston Oilers.

They discovered more than a change in the weather.

Despite an offensive line filled with first-round draft choices and former three-time NFL rushing champion Earl Campbell, the Moon-Hugh Campbell duo has yet to get the Oilers a victory. They are 0-5 going into Sunday's game at Cincinnati.

But neither man is looking back.

"I recognized that it was going to be a very difficult job," Campbell said. "When I took the job I didn't have our quarterback (Moon) so I was prepared for anything."

But even with Moon calling the signals, the Oilers have continued to lose at the same pace as in the past.

"It's not enjoyable being in a situation of not winning football games," Campbell said. "That goes for the coaches, the owners and most of all the fans. But there is some enjoyment in getting better."

Campbell said he did not set a goal of winning a certain number of games when he accepted the Oiler job.

"I didn't feel I had enough grounds to predict wins and losses," Campbell said. "I knew it would be a tough situation but I'm not ready now to say how tough it is until the season is over."

Expectant Oiler fans have been surprisingly patient with the Oilers despite the lack of victories. The Oilers are 3-29 over the past three seasons and have an NFL record 20 consecutive road losses.

Moon grew accustomed to cheers over the past five years in Canada, the last two spent passing for over 5,000 yards each season.

But he's known worse criticism than he's received here.

"I think in college it was tougher for me because there was a lot of criticism about me," Moon said of his beginning at the University of Washington. "I came in and beat out a favorite up there and I got a lot of booing because things weren't going well.

"So it was a lot tougher then because I was only 18 years old at the time.

But now I'm more mature and if something like that happened here I'd be more used to it."

Moon turned Husky boos to cheers however, leading Washington to a 27-20 Rose Bowl victory in his senior season.

He hopes his Oiler career has a similar ending.

"I went on and did some good things there and (Washington Coach) Don James is known as one of the best college coaches in football.

"Things have a way of working out as long as you're patient and never lose sight of what you know you can do."

The Oilers showed a brief sign of improvement last week, rallying in the third quarter before losing to New Orleans 27-10. Moon thought the Oilers would be farther along.

"I thought we'd have at least a couple of wins by now," Moon said. "I knew it was going to be tough when I came here and that was the thing that kind of made me want to come here, it was a bigger challenge."

Moon accepts part of the blame for the Oilers' slow start but he sees a need of improvement for the entire team.

"I've looked at myself and I've wondered if it's been me," Moon said. But I had a chance to look at the game from the sideline this past game because I wasn't feeling that well.

"I saw some things that were still happening out there even though I wasn't in the game. Those are some of the things that have been beating us so I know it's not all me.

"I know I can play a lot better and that's going to happen. But I know as a team we can play a lot better too and that's going to happen in the very near future," Moon said.

Miami's Marino returning home

NFL

Associated Press

Dan Marino, who grew up a few blocks from Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh and played college football at Pitt, returns home for the first time as a pro this Sunday to confront the man he replaced as the Miami Dolphins' quarterback — David Woodley of the Steelers.

Marino, who threw for a team-record 429 yards to eclipse Woodley's mark of 408 in a 36-28 win over St. Louis last Sunday, comes home at the top of his game — leading the National Football League in passing with 1,527 yards and 15 touchdown passes, a pace that if continued would shatter all records.

He goes against not only Woodley, who has was traded to the Steelers in the off-season after being replaced by Marino last season, but also a quick-moving Pittsburgh secondary. That band of Steelers picked off five passes and returned two for touchdowns in a 38-17 victory over Cincinnati Monday night. The victory improved the Steelers' record to 3-2 and gave them a two-game lead over Cleveland in the weak AFC Central.

"He has a twinkle in his eye this week," Miami Coach Don Shula says of his quarterback, who was available on the next-to-last pick of the first round of the 1983 NFL draft after a sub-par senior year at Pitt.

IN OTHER games Sunday, Denver is at Detroit, Minnesota at Tampa Bay, New England at Cleveland, New Orleans at Chicago the New York Jets at Kansas City, Philadelphia at Buffalo, St. Louis at Dallas, Washington at Indianapolis, Atlanta at the Los Angeles Rams, Houston at Cincinnati, San Diego at Green Bay and Seattle at the Los Angeles Raiders.

The San Francisco 49ers visit the New York Giants Monday night.

The Dolphins will have to go against Pittsburgh without defensive end Kim Bokamper, who broke an ankle in a freak pre-game accident in St. Louis and is lost for six weeks. But their attack, featuring Marino firing to sprinters Mark Duper and Mark Clayton, has thus far compensated for any other shortcomings.

That passing threat has just pumped up the Steelers

"It's a challenge but every week is a challenge," says veteran safety Donnie Shell, who returned one of his two interceptions Monday night for a touchdown. "When you experience success, it gives you that much more confidence to do your job."

The game between the Seahawks and the Raiders features two of the three teams tied with 4-1 records atop the AFC West, where all five clubs are over .500. The Seahawks won both regular-season meetings last season but the Raiders won the game that counted most — the AFC title game.

Seattle, which lost AFC rushing titleholder Curt Warner with a knee injury in the season-opener, has depended primarily on a defense that forces mistakes —it scored three touchdowns itself in a 38-9 win over Chicago two weeks ago.

"They're always scrapping for the ball, they're very aggressive," says Raider Coach Tom Flores. "Their defense is all over the field, they gang-tackle, try to strip the ball."

The Chicago-New Orleans game between two 3-2 teams is overshadowed by the assault by the Bears Walter Payton on Jim Brown's all-time NFL rushing mark. Payton, who is averaging 124 yards per game this season, needs 66 yards to tie Brown's record of 12,312.

But Payton is more concerned about the Bears winning. They've lost two straight after opening the season with three wins.

"The hardest thing to do is to talk about one's accomplishments when you have 48 other guys on the team," Payton said after he gained 155 yards in 25 carries in last Sunday's 23-14 loss to Dallas. "It's even harder when you've lost a tough game.

Petty would like to erase disgrace at '83 Charlotte

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Richard Petty, the "King" of stock car racing, went from glory to disgrace in a matter of hours last October at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Now, with the 1984 Miller High Life 500 set for Sunday, Petty has been thinking about what he admits is one of the dark blots on a generally bright and shiny Grand National record.

The popular driver from Level Cross, N.C., drew the accolades of the huge crowd after winning the 1983 Miller 500 with a late-race surge.

But, even as he and his family and crew celebrated the triumph, NASCAR technical inspectors were grimly going about the task of checking out his Pontiac Grand Prix.

What they found was an illegal engine — about 25 cubic inches bigger than the allowable 358 — and the fact that Petty's crew had used the softer, more adhesive left-side tires on the right side of the car — another illegal move.

NASCAR let Petty keep the tainted victory — one of the 200 he has earned in his career — but it fined him an unprecedented $35,000 and took away 100 of the 180 Winston Cup championship points he had gained in the race.

"It (the penalty) probably wouldn't have been as severe either way if they'd just got us on one thing," Petty, speaking frankly and with no outward embarrassment, said Thursday as he waited in the garage area for the start of second-day qualifying.

"But, finding both those things made it pretty bad."

Alston: Preacher running wild animal act

I don't know why, but every time I'd sit down with Walt Alston it crossed my mind that this was the kind of person who won the Civil War. Fed the world. Tamed the wilderness. Built the country. You knew Walt, you knew where Lincoln had come from.

Walt was as Midwest as a pitchfork. As American as fudge.

He looked like a guy you could sell the Brooklyn Bridge to, but he was an educated man, a schoolteacher, in fact. He was at pains to conceal it. His conversation was sprinkled with "you was" and colloquialisms of the cornfield, but he knew which fork to use at state dinners.

He wasn't scared of anything, not a man with a gun, a New York Yankee with a bat, a Bob Gibson with a fastball, a writer with a grudge, a player with a gripe or an announcer with a microphone. Walt Alston had no trouble sleeping at night or looking at himself in the mirror.

The press always pictured him as a preacher running a wild-animal act, but he handled ballplayers by the sheer weight of self-respect better than all the hollerers in all the dugouts of the league.

He wasn't a prude. His language was as full of four-letter words as his players', only coming out of Walt Alston they seemed to lose their effect. Still, for some people, it was like seeing a nun smoking a cigar.

He never lived the role of a celebrity, although he was one of the biggest in both L.A. and New York. It's doubtful that he ever went on the Sunset Strip or bought anything on Rodeo Drive, and he was never a regular on Broadway. He didn't drink and he didn't eat in places where pie a la mode wasn't included in the dinner or they didn't have toothpicks.

IT USED to puzzle him that people could spend fortunes sitting along a wall in a nightclub when they could be out hunting squirrel for less money.

He never had pictures of movie stars on his office wall. His taste ran more to pictures of his grandkids. His office was too small, anyway, with just room for a telephone, a home schedule and a peg for his hat. His idea of a shopping spree was two hours at J.C. Penney's and his idea of the ideal gift was a set of tools.

He liked Hollywood all right. He saw every movie Tom Mix and John Wayne ever made, but he probably never saw a movie that The New Yorker liked.

To tell the truth, he was kind of a disappointment to owner Walter O'Malley. Walter liked the Hollywood crowd hanging around his dugout and clubhouse. He believed it gave the sport a cachet that helped sell tickets, and he would periodically staff the coaching crew with a gregarious type like Leo Durocher or Charlie Dressen to swap jokes with the Friar's Club types, and the press would instantly predict that Alston would be undercut. The only time one of them tried it, he, not Alston, was back in street clothes.

Not that Alston had any talent for clubhouse intrigue. It was just so far beneath him, it didn't work. The Dodgers had great continuity, dignity and respect under Alston. He understood that great ballplayers, like great artists everywhere, are temperamental, but, when Walter Alston said bunt, they bunted.

He was happy at what he did. He never asked for a raise, haggled over a contract and he stayed aloof from that part of baseball altogether. He took the players they gave him and won the pennant with them. He was more interested in what they hit than what they made.

HIS OWN life had been hard. Dad was a tenant farmer who, when he finally got enough money to buy his own 280-acre spread, went broke in those cruel years, and had to auction it off. Walter often bragged that it took his dad years to pay off the debt, but he did it. Walter, who used to trap possum, slop pigs and feed silage to cows before the sun came up, never ceased to marvel that he could get $100,000 a year for changing pitchers.

He went home to Darrtown — and Morning Sun, Ohio, and Seven Mile and Scipio and Collinsville — every winter. We used to keep up a running gag with him: "Darrtown is a place where the trains don't stop unless they hit a cow." "Darrtown doesn't have an international airport, but they enlarged the community birdbath." "Darrtown has a subway, but there are gophers in it."Alston revelled in its smallness. He thought small-town America was the only place a man could get in touch with himself, and he really felt that if you didn't grow something or hunt something, you were stealing.

He left his stamp on the Dodgers and on the game. He pioneered a whole new type of manager, the dedicated minor-league graduate, low key, low profile, high morals.

I hope that wherever he is they have someone who wants to talk about how you pitch to Henry Aaron with two on and less than two out, what the balk rule is and when to bring in your stopper in a rally. Some called him the "Quiet Man." Well, I don't know about the adjective. But they sure got the noun right. He was by any description a man.

Umpires still in contact with both leagues in effort to end dispute

Associated Press

Baseball's top league officials and Richie Phillips, the attorney for the striking major league umpires, continued their long distance talking in an effort to end the dispute.

"Yes, I have talked to both" American League President Bobby Brown and National League President Chub Feeney, Phillips said by telephone from his Philadelphia home. "But I'm not going to discuss anything about the details."

Three of the substitute officials who worked the AL playoffs in Kansas City — Bill Deegan, John Bible and Randy Cristal — are scheduled to be on the field tonight when the Detroit Tigers play host to the Royals. They will be joined by three Michigan men — Doug Cossey, Richard Runchey and Richard Fetchiet.

"We had many discussions today," Phillips said just before midnight Thursday of his conversations with the league presidents. "And we will have more tonight."

A new set of replacement umpires worked Game 3 of the NL playoffs in San Diego on Thursday night, where the Padres defeated the Chicago Cubs 7-1. The Cubs won the first two games in Chicago.

Crew chief Terry Bovey, 37, said he and his crew did an excellent job in their first postseason appearance.

Except for two incidents, Bovey said he felt comfortable behind the plate with familiar faces at the other three positions.

Bovey, Frank Campagna, Frank Fisher and John Stewart have worked together for 12 years, most of the time in college games and major-league spring training contests in Arizona. They also worked 33 spring training games and 18 regular season contests during the 1979 umpires' strike.

"I thought we did a good job, considering the TV timeout and the block between innings," said Bovey. "We've done this stuff before, but I'm used to going right away where you don't have to wait for the TV. Once we got used to that, it went okay out there."

Both managers argued briefly after Bovey twice called time in the first inning just as Padres pitcher Ed Whitson was ready to deliver a pitch to Gary Matthews.

"He said he called a timeout too late, and I told him we shouldn't be penalized for it," said Cubs Manager Jim Frey. "But he stuck to it."

In the sixth, Campagna, at first base, ruled that Cubs right fielder Keith Moreland had swung on a two-strike pitch out of the strike zone. Moreland angrily threw his bat to ground.

"I just didn't think I swung," Moreland said. "It was one of those things in the heat of battle . . . a game this important.

"I don't know if I would have been thrown out (by a regular umpire). I might have been fined $100 or something. But the guy (Campagna) was trying. I don't have anything personal against him.

"I just lost my temper. I'm not proud of it."

Stewart, who was umpiring at third base, said the bat-tossing incident was insignificant.

"I didn't like it, but if they throw it at you, it's another thing altogether," Stewart said. "This isn't high school."

Frey said he was satisfied with the officiating Thursday night, although he felt Bovey "had a pretty good size strike zone."

"But they hit the ball good off of us," Frey said. "I can't complain about that."

On Wednesday, Phillips said in a television interview that he though the leagues were "stonewalling us to send a message to the players, who are going to be negotiating with them. They want to show the players how firm and tough they are."

The players' collective bargaining agreement expires before the start of the 1985 season.

The key issues in the umpires' dispute involve pay and job security, two areas covered for only the first two years in the four-year agreement reached April 5, 1982. Those parts of the contract expired Sunday when the regular season ended.

One baseball official, Jack McKeon, the Padres' general manager, assailed Feeney and Brown for what he saw as their failure to move quickly enough to head off the strike.

"Something should have been done before this week," McKeon said. "They knew about this possibility. There should have been some strong negotiations."

Bank bailout could net profit

By NEIL McLAUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman William Isaac says the $4.5 billion Continental Illinois National Bank bailout ultimately could net a multimillion-dollar profit for the government.

While the government could lose millions if the bailout fails, he said Thursday, a recovery could raise the value of the Continental stock held by the FDIC under provisions of the bailout agreement.

Testifying before a House Banking subcommittee, Issac speculated that if the increase is high enough, the FDIC could recoup all its outlays and make a profit in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

"I'm not predicting it," he said. "I certainly wouldn't stake my career on it. I'm telling you it is not out of the question."

The panel heard from Isaac during a second round of hearings on the Chicago bank's financial perils and the government's efforts to save it.

The bank received interim help in May after concerns over the quality of its loan portfolio sparked a run on its assets. Bank regulators unveiled the $4.5 billion permanent aid plan in July; it was ratified by Continental stockholders last week.

Isaac defended the actions of federal regulators in trying to keep the bank open. And he bristled at a Congressional Budget Office analysis saying government losses from the bailout could run as high as $3.8 billion.

Isaac said a decision to let Continental shut down and have the FDIC pay off insured deposits there and at other banks that may have failed in its wake could have cost more than $500 million.

Isaac also objected to suggestions by Banking Committee Chairman Fernand St Germain that federal regulators exaggerated the number of bank failures that would have been triggered by a Continental closing in order to justify the bailout.

In testimony last month, Comptroller of the Currency C.T. Conover said more than 100 banks could have fallen after a Continental failure.

Isaac said he never predicted how many banks would have failed, but insisted Continental's demise would have pushed some financial institutions and indebted corporations into ruin.

If he hadn't acted the way he did and Continental had gone under, Isaac said, "I think this committee probably would have been justified to consider lynching me."

Interest rates down

By The Associated Press

The interest rate on fixed-rate home mortgages fell in September to the lowest level since May, marking the first time since June that the rate dipped below 15 percent, the government reported.

The nationwide average for a conventional mortgage on a new house was 14.91 percent in September, down from 15 percent in August and 15.23 percent in July, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Thursday.

In other economic developments, the nation's major retailers reported modest sales gains in September compared to the boom of a year ago and the government said new applications for unemployment compensation were down moderately in mid-September from the previous week.

Also, the Federal Reserve Board reported the nation's money supply dropped in mid-September from the previous week.

In releasing the mortgage figures, the government said the rate on the more popular adjustable-rate mortgages, in which the homebuyer's payment varies with fluctuating interest rates, was unchanged in September at 12.89 percent.

Comparisons of adjustable rate averages are general at best because they are not regulated and vary widely in design from bank to bank.

The bank board said adjustable-rate home loans accounted for 63 percent of all mortgages closed in September, down from 70 percent in August.

Among the top retailers, No. 1 Sears, Roebuck & Co. posted the lowest September increase, 4 percent above September a year ago.

Analysts said there was little September growth in sales of durable goods, such as appliances and furniture, which are a major part of Sears' vast line.

But they said there was strength in apparel sales. That led to a 17 percent sales gain for No. 2 K mart Corp. and a 14.6 percent increase for J.C. Penney Co., third-largest in sales.

The Labor Department said new applications for unemployment compensation benefits totaled 377,000 in the week ended Sept. 22, down 4,000 from the preceding week.

In New York, the Fed said its M1 measure of readily spendable money, mainly cash in circulation, checking-account deposits and nonbank travelers checks, fell to a seasonally adjusted $547 billion in the week ended Sept. 24 from $549.4 billion the previous week.

In other economic news Thursday:

—Chrysler Corp. named United Auto Workers union President Owen Bieber to its board, making him only the second national union leader ever to have a seat on the board of a majoor U.S. industrial corporation. The first was retired UAW President Douglas Fraser, who resigned from Chrysler's board June 7 to make room for Bieber.

In the money

Virginia Whitmore, a 71-year-old widow who kept shares of Days Inn stock in memory of her husband and the motel chain's founder, smiles this week, after learning that the 'worthless' stock is valued at more than $56,000.

Ford, UAW wage talks 'pick up steam'

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s chief labor bargainer says wage discussions with the United Auto Workers union have picked up steam at the bargaining table, but job security hasn't been addressed in great detail.

"We have exchanged some data as well as some contract language" on economic issues, Ford labor chief Peter Pestillo said Thursday.

The UAW, however, had hoped to receive Ford's new job security proposal, which would address what the union has called its No. 1 issue in the talks. But Pestillo said he did not know when the proposal would be delivered.

Pestillo, meeting informally with reporters at Ford headquarters, said he was confident that a labor contract replacing the 1982 UAW concessions pact could be reached by Oct. 12.

The union hasn't said it would strike without a pact, but has told Ford not to expect workers on the job if no agreement was reached by that date.

"The 12th date is one we've all thought we could look to and reach," Pestillo said.

Chief union bargainer Stephen Yokich declined to meet with reporters Thursday. But UAW President Owen Bieber said he would pay a visit to Ford before the weekend.

Both sides have said they probably would bargain Saturday and Sunday.

The UAW reached a tentative contract with General Motors Corp. on Sept. 21, and 350,000 hourly workers are voting on it.

Most of the GM voting will be conducted over the weekend and early next week, the union said, with all ballots due by Oct. 14 at headquarters in Detroit.

PUC asked to revoke HL & P permit

AUSTIN (AP) - The Public Utility Commission has been asked to overrule an examiner's recommendation that a 1982 permit to Houston Lighting & Power Co. for construction fo a lignite-powered plant near Malakoff be revoked.

Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncancille, and Rep. Tom Waldrop, D-Corsicana, filed the request with the PUC Thursday after holding a joint news conference at the Capitol.

PUC examiner Ramon Dasch recommended the permit be cancelled because conditions have changed in the past two years and HL&P no longer needs the plant for its generating needs.

"According to him (Dasch), this permit is like Confederate money — it might look good in a picture frame, but it's worthless," Edwards said.

The final decision on the case will be up to the PUC.

Edwards said more than $100 million has been spent in expectation of the plant's construction.

"To make sure the plant could be finished on time and hundreds of new employees would have needed services, a new medical clinic and shopping center have been planned and condominiums and apartments have been built," Edwards said. "All this based on citizens' good faith in the permit granted by the PUC."

He said revoking the permit would destroy a potential $26 million annual payroll and nullify the employment of 485 people in the lignite mine plus at least 600 other workers in the power plant.

"What is most important," Waldrop told the news conference, "is whether people and industries that require permits from the state to operate can rely on them once they are granted."

Tanker work stoppage ordered

By PATRICK BRESLIN
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Work by ship captains and first mates aboard 66 commercial tankers has been ordered stopped by their international union in a protest over stalled contract negotiations with five companies.

The order was sent in a telegram to the affected ships Wednesday evening, but the deck officers would continue working until the tankers arrive safely at their scheduled ports throughout the country, a union spokesman said Thursday.

"As a ship comes into port, it is affected by this stoppage," said Sam Thompson, spokesman for the 15,000-member International Organization of Masters, Mates and Pilots, AFL-CIO, based in Linthicum, a Baltimore suburb.

Thompson said there was not much difference between the union's "job action" and a strike.

"That's our term for it, that's all," Thompson said. "Stopping all work means no undocking, shifting (moving the tanker from one spot to another within the same port), loading, discharging, cleaning tanks, ballasting (using water to fill a tanker's empty hull), transferring of cargo, and also not performing administrative duties including clerical work of any kind."

He did not know how many union members were employed by the five affected tanker companies — Maritime Overseas Corp. with 21 ships, Marine Transport Lines, 17 ships, and Moore-McCormack, five ships, all of New York; Keystone Shipping Co. of Philadelphia, 20 ships; and Trinidad Corp. of St. Louis, three ships.

The union's contracts with the companies expired June 15. Negotiations were being held with each company individually, but the talks have stalled and no further bargaining is scheduled, according to Thompson and company officials.

Contract issues varied, Thompson said, but the job action began because "the companies have refused to bargain in good faith. We of course are looking for wage increases, increases in vacation pay."

Company officials said the impact of the job action was not felt immediately.

"We seem to be working OK," said Robert Johnston, spokesman for Maritime Overseas, which employs about 65 Masters, Mates and Pilots members. He said the firm mostly transports oil from the Alaska pipeline, through the Panama Canal, to Gulf of Mexico ports such as Houston, Corpus Christi and Port Arthur, all in Texas, and New Orleans.

Michael Berkowitz, general counsel for Marine Transport Lines, said the job action had a minor impact but "we don't anticipate any severe effect on our ships."

Berkowitz said his firm, which employs about 110 members of the union, ships dry and liquid chemical cargos to ports along the East, West and Gulf coasts.

An attorney for Keystone Shipping, Betsy Plevan, said that oil-tanker firm had extended its contract with the union beyond the expiration date but terminated the agreement Sept. 27 for economic reasons.

"There are lots of problems, as we all know, with depression in the shipping industry," Ms. Plevan said.

Officials of the other two firms did not return calls.

Texas company wins court case

JASPER, Ala. (AP) — For the third time, a Texas insurance company has won a court case over land reclamation on the basis that the state did not complain soon enough.

Winston County Circuit Judge Bobby Aderholt ruled Tuesday that Commercial Standard Insurance Co. of Dallas does not have to pay $18,000 to help reclaim 15 acres mined by the C&I Coal Co. in Winston County.

The insurer had posted that amount in surety bonds for the coal company, which went out of business before reclaiming the land it had mined.

The Alabama Surface Mining Commission in Jasper had ordered Commercial Standard to forfeit the bonds to defray reclamation costs.

But Aderholt said the commission did not file reclamation complaints against C&I Coal within the time required by a 1975 law that was in effect at the time of the mining.

That law said companies must reclaim the land within six months after it had been mined and that the commission had 90 days to file reclamation complaints after that six-month period.

In two earlier cases, Alabama courts freed Commercial Standard from forfeiting bonds totaling $112,000 as ordered by the commission.

In those instances, mining companies for which Commercial Standard had posted bonds also went out of business without reclaiming the land. But again, the courts ruled that the complaints did not come in time.

The unreclaimed lands were in Tuscaloosa and Marion counties.

Virgil Willett, the commission's director, declined to comment on Aderholt's ruling.

Dollar recovers, Gold listless

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was down against key currencies in early trading today, but it partially recovered from a late tumble in New York. Gold prices edged up in listless trading.

The dollar was depressed in New York Thursday, despite earlier rises in the Far East and Europe, amid a dip in short-term U.S. interest rates and an unexpectedly large $2.4 billion drop in the U.S. M1 money supply.

However, many dealers said the dollar, which has pulled back from record highs last month, remained strong despite threatened intervention by the West German Bundesbank to bolster the mark.

In Tokyo, where the business day ends as Europe's begins, the dollar closed at 246.35 yen compared to Thursday's late level of 246.23 yen.

In London, sterling's early gains melted away and at mid-morning it cost $1.24485 to buy one British pound. It cost $1.2420 late Thursday.

Other morning rates compared to Thursday's late rates:

—9.2875 French francs, down from 9.3245.

—3.0265 German marks, down from 3.0365.

Energy firm reorganizes

SHREVEPORT, Louisiana–(SWN)–Transcontinental Energy Corp. has announced that the company, seven of its subsidiaries and nine of its affiliated limited partnerships had filed voluntary petitions for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, Fort Worth Division.

Under Chapter II, a company continues to operate under court protection from creditors while seeking to work out a plan of reorganization. The company indicated that its principal lenders had agreed to consider funding of the Company's operations on an interim basis, subject to court approval.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Dollar cost averaging' good retirement plan

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I are in our late 50s. About a year ago, we started investing a specified amount of money in a growth-income mutual fund every month. We understand this method of investing is called "dollar cost averaging." We feel, if we continue to do this, we stand a fair chance to double or triple our money over the next five years.

Do you consider this a reasonable plan for us to accumulate some wealth for our retirement?

A. Oh, yes! This column has always favored that investment method for retirement or any other purpose, regardless of your age.

Dollar cost averaging is just about the simplest way to invest. It involves putting the same amount of money into the same security at fixed intervals — monthly, quarterly or whatever other time span you choose.

Mutual funds make it easy to dollar cost average, because you buy full and fractional shares to the third or fourth decimal place. As a result, all your money is working for you — unless you're investing in a "load" mutual fund on which there are commission charges. Of course, you can avoid that by using "no-load" mutual funds.

When you dollar cost average, you buy fewer shares when prices are high and more shares when prices are low. Unless the price of the security you are buying drops and never comes back up, you come out with a profit.

Whether or not the value of your investment will double or triple in five years is pure conjecture. Many mutual funds have done that well or better. So you have a fair chance of accomplishing your aim. However, there always is the possibility that stock prices might go into a major decline, taking your investment down.

• • •

Q. What is a "growth-income" mutual fund?

A. It's sort of a cross between a "growth" mutual fund and an "income" mutual fund.

A growth fund aims to increase in value by investing in securities — mostly common stocks — that are expected to rise in price at a rate exceeding the stock market in general.

An income fund tries to provide high current income to its shareholders by investing in bonds paying high interest and, sometimes, in stocks paying high dividends.

No mutual fund or any other investment can produce both high growth and high income at the same time. You have to give up some of one to get more of the other.

A growth-income fund aims to provide some growth and reasonable income — not as much growth as a growth fund and not as much income as an income fund.

• • •

Q. Part of my individual retirement account is in an "option income" mutual fund, which doesn't seem to be doing too well. It is my understanding that money market mutual funds involve virtually no risk. Is there any incentive for me to move my IRA money from the option income fund to a money market mutual fund?

A. The incentive would be safety. If that's your prime consideration, make the move.

The value of shares in a money market mutual fund remains constant and the fund pays rather high dividends. Lately, many such funds have been yielding better than 10.5 percent.

An option income fund invests in stocks and sells call options on those stocks. Besides collecting dividends, it also gets premiums from the sale of the options. In theory, this should result in high income to pass along to fund shareholders.

But theories don't always work out in practice. Some option income funds have done well; some haven't. When market values of stocks fall, so do the values of option income fund shares.

Q. Our daughter died last year, leaving three children, each of whom will receive about $13,000 from her estate. The two oldest, a boy and a girl, have received most of their money. The youngest will receive hers in three months, when she comes of age.

Their father suggests putting the money in stocks. We, the grandparents, feel it would be wiser for them to have bank money market deposit accounts and certificates of deposit. Would you comment on this?

A. This is a classic disagreement. The father advises taking some investment risk, in hopes of growth in value. You, being one generation older, understandably urge conservative handling of the money.

Let's hope the father and you realize that the two "children" who are adults have every right in the world to make their own investment decisions and the youngest soon will have that right. Their father and you grandparents can attempt to guide them, but the final decisions will be theirs.

I certainly would advise against their putting all the money into stocks — especially in one shot. A program of gradually accumulating stocks at about $2,000 a year for each of those young adults is the limit I would suggest.

But, rather than picking individual stocks, my suggestion is to start with growth mutual funds — those holding stocks expected to increase in value. That way, risk will be reduced.

The rest of the money should go into money market deposit accounts and CDs, both of which pay high interest and are rock-solid safe.

You should see that my comments sort of split the difference between the father's recommendations and yours — and hopefully keep peace in the family.

• • •

Q. My six grandchildren are ages 1 through 15. I would like to open a gift to minors account for each to help with their education.

In what sort of mutual fund do you suggest I put the money? When they become adults, will they be able to withdraw the money for any purpose, or can I specify the use to which the money should be put?

A. I suggest a growth mutual fund. Pick a no-load fund, so you avoid the heavy commission costs of load funds.

When each child reaches the age of majority, which varies from 18 to 21 depending on the state in which you live, the assets in the gift to minors account must be turned over to him or her. The new adult then can do anything he or she pleases with the money. You can't specify how it will be spent.

Martin named to museum board

Martin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Martin is best known for his zany standup comedy routines, but the silver-haired star of such films as "The Jerk" and the current box office hit "All of Me" is also an avid collector of modern art.

Martin, whose collection reportedly includes works by such early 20th century modernists as Arthur Dove and Georgia O'Keeffe and contemporary artists Franz Kline, Willem de Kooning, Cy Twombly, David Hockney and Helen Frankenthaler, was elected Thursday to the board of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, museum officials said.

Martin, who pledged $250,000 toward the county musem's new wing for 20th century art, becomes the 40th member of the museum's board, alongside such other Hollywood figures as Hal Wallis, Ray Stark and David Wolper.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The ears, nose and throat of rock singer Wendy O. Williams are "perfectly normal," despite her claim in a $6 million lawsuit that she suffered permanent injuries in a police beating, a doctor testified.

S. Frederick Horwitz, a specialist who examined the self-proclaimed high priestess of heavy metal, said Thursday in Circuit Court her ears were normal and her throat was in excellent condition.

Ms. Williams and members of her group, the now defunct Plasmatics, are suing six Milwaukee police officers for damages they claim to have sustained in their 1981 arrests.

Charges against the group of presenting what police termed an obscene performance were later dismissed. The suit asks for nearly $6 million.

Ms. Williams said that as a result of a police beating during the arrest, she has difficulty hearing, often can not sing for longer than an hour and is bothered by her ears during air travel.

Horwitz said Ms. Williams suffers from a treatable sinus condition, but that it was not clear that the condition was a result of a beating.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — William S. Farish III, as competitive on the polo field as he is in the board room, wasn't too surprised when Queen Elizabeth II decided to stay at his 1,400-acre Lane's End Farm next week.

They first met on a polo field in 1973 while Farish was playing in the Queen's Cup in England. And it was their common interest in the sport that led to his invitation to the queen to stay at his home for her first visit to Kentucky, a spokesman for the British Embassy said.

Farish is a 45-year-old oilman and financier who has turned his full-time attention to horses in recent years. Forbes magazine recently estimated his net worth at $150 million.

Townsend

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wayne Townsend responded to his challenger's rock 'n' roll political video by sending a Boy George lookalike to deliver a sequined glove and a note to Gov. Robert D. Orr.

The Boy George imposter also dropped off an outfit for Orr to wear in his next video. Included were a gold silk jacket, camouflage-patterned walking shorts, silver glitter socks, a pair of black-and-white checked sunglasses and a T-shirt proclaiming the rock group "Peter and the Test Tube Babies."

The response from Orr's office was puzzlement.

"I don't know whether those clothes will fit or not. They look a little short," said Orr's deputy press secretary, Nancy DiLaura.

Orr unveiled his rock video, "Stay With Me," Wednesday night at The Vogue, an Indianapolis nightclub. Aides say it is the nation's "first political music video."

"Stay With Me" was designed so that Orr, who at 66 is the nation's oldest governor, could lure the nation's youngest voters — those in the 18-24 age group.

Parrish richer after lottery win

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A little generosity plus a little luck added up to manna from heaven for St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church. The parish grew $100,000 richer thanks to a communicant's contribution of a lottery ticket.

The Rev. Augustine Giusani, pastor of St. Ann's in New Britain, appeared on the weekly show of the Connecticut state lottery Thursday night and beat out four other contestants to win the "Rainbow Jackpot" prize.

Giusani said he received the ticket from a parish member who contributes a ticket a week to the collection plate. The holders of five tickets are invited to the weekly lottery show.

Once on the show, the 62-year-old Giusani said he chose the color blue to advance through the elimination rounds because "it was the color of the Blessed Mother, and October is the month of the rosary of Mother Mary."

St. Ann's parish has about 2,100 families and really needs the money, according to Giusani. The parish was established in 1938 for Italian-speaking people and still has a largely Italian-American congregation.

The church receives three or four lottery tickets every week, but never before has it won a large amount. "Oh, five dollars now and then, but nothing like this," Giusani said.

Giusani said the money will go to improvements in the church's school program and other parish expenses. The church will now be able to pay bills that would have taken a lot longer to pay up, he said.

Men's dorm 'guest' turns out to be pig

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP) — Residents of a men's dormitory at Hastings College had a house guest that turned out to be a real pig.

Students were coming down a stairway at Weyer Hall about 10 p.m. Wednesday when "someone drove up and cast into our north entrance a large pig," said resident counselor Katherine Tinder.

Residents corraled the pig in the entry way and held it until animal control officer Tim Walz arrived with a rope. Walz recruited a couple of college boys who grew up on farms and they pushed the pig from behind while Walz pulled it to the truck.

"It was quite the exciting little scene," Walz said, adding that not all the boys wanted to give up the pig.

"They wanted to keep him but the dorm mother wouldn't let them," he said.

Time runs out — on check

GOSHEN, Mass. (AP) — Time has stopped in this town, and so has payment on the check to the guy who cleaned the clock.

When Goshen received a $70 bill for cleaning its Center School clock this summer, no one could remember authorizing the job and no one knew the "Dennis N. Page" who cleaners insisted had signed the invoice.

The invoice was in fact signed by Dennis W. Forgea, chairman of the selectmen in nearby Cummington, who had ordered the cleaning of that town's church clock.

Somehow the company mixed the towns up and the repairman, upon arriving in Goshen to find no church clock, crossed the street to work instead on the school clock.

The clock, unserviced for five years, probably needed to be cleaned anyway, said Mary Ann Nelson, the accountant of this western Massachusetts town.

But the town still hasn't paid the repair bill. The reason:

"The clock hasn't worked for beans since they fixed it," said Selectman Raymond Morin.

Three-cent change costs $100

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A 3-cent change in a $191,028 contract to improve the road surface at an intersection had officials writing memos for five months and probably cost more than $100.

The expense came from memos, duplicate copies, mailings and staff time as the order ground through the bureaucratic channels, said William Addison, head of the city-parish Department of Public Works.

Metropolitan Council Administrator Donald Nijoka considered taking a shortcut through the bureaucratic morass.

Hawaii will be adopting official state fish

HONOLULU (AP) — The nominees are the manini, hinalea, uhu uliuli, humuhumunukunukuapua'a, 'aweoweo, kumu, lauwiliwili and kala.

No, they're not up for disease of the year. Hawaii is in the process of adopting an official fish.

The only island state in the nation already has a state bird, the nene; a flower, hibiscus; tree, the kukui; and even a state marine mammal, the humpback whale.

Eight candidates have been nominated from 26 eligible fish. To be eligible, the creatures had to be native to Hawaii waters, culturally important and easily seen in their natural habitat.

Every Hawaii resident and visitor to the islands can vote for one of the nominees or write in an alternative.

Ballots will be distributed to schoolchildren, appear on a supermarket's grocery bags and run in the Honolulu Advertiser newspaper.

Rubber bridge and duplicate are not just two different forms of the same game. In some respects, they are two different games.

This is a perfectly normal deal. At rubber bridge, a good player should always make the contract. At duplicate pairs, an expert should go down!

The only point of interest in the auction is North's raise to four diamonds with a low doubleton. A jump shift response either denotes a fit for opener's suit or a self-sufficient suit of one's own. After South's rebid had clarified which hand he held, a doubleton was more than adequate support.

Since declarer's spade loser can go away on the ace of clubs, the only problem is to hold your trump losers to one. That is a threat only if trumps break 4-0. If West has all four missing trump, nothing can be done about it. But the hand can be virtually assured if East has all the trumps.

At rubber bridge, you win the ace of spades and lay down the ace of trumps. When West shows out, you enter dummy with a heart and lead a trump toward your hand, winning as cheaply as possible. East will be held to only one trump trick.

The chances of East holding all four trumps are under 5 percent. However, there is a much better chance that East has either K-x or K-x-x in trumps. Therefore, the trump safety play at duplicate is a losing tactic. Correct pairs technique is to win the opening lead, cross to dummy with a heart, discard a spade on the ace of clubs and lead a trump to the queen. When West shows out on this trick, you cannot recover — East's singleton heart will prevent you from getting back to the board to repeat the finesse. You lose two trump tricks and go down one. But that shouldn't affect you much. You can expect similar results at most tables for an average score. You would get a bottom if you took the safety play, then discovered that East's king could have been captured.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Norwegian explorer Thor Heyerdahl, journalist-author Shana Alexander, tennis great Helen Wills, actress Britt Ekland, Chicago Cubs rookie reliever Bill Johnson and Philadelphia Phillies reliever George Riley share your birthday. Also born on this date: singer Jenny Lind and Carole Lombard. Follow your intuition when offered a partnership or job. Only you can decide what you really want. The sky is the limit! Show your affection more openly to mate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Staying close to home holds special appeal today. An associate's talents help you clinch a lucrative deal. Avoid spending a lot of money this evening. Voice your affection to loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An excellent day for home improvement projects. Talented do-it-yourself types save lots of money. Pay more attention to your personal appearance. Buy something to enhance your winter wardrobe.

Fawcett: Movie proves I've grown beyond 'Charlie's Angels' role

Hearst Feature Service

Farrah Fawcett is proud to talk about her new TV movie, "The Burning Bed," in which she portrays a woman who set fire to her sleeping ex-husband after years of physical and emotional abuse at his hands. She says that the movie, which airs Monday on NBC, will show the TV-watching world that she has grown beyond the "Charlie's Angels" character with which, to her regret, she is still most often identified.

"When I started to prepare to play Francine Hughes, all the questions I never had when I first read the script hit me," says Fawcett, who is determined to talk about her movie, to be serious and to be taken seriously. "Why did Francine stay with him? At what point did she stop interpreting her husband's obsessive jealousy as love? The director and scriptwriter couldn't answer these questions. I watched tapes of Francine on 'Donahue' after her trial. I reread the book. But there was no explanation of what held this couple together. Nothing could give me the vital something I needed."

To research the part, Fawcett went to group meetings at shelters for battered women, where she met a woman she has been unable to forget.

"She had a huge scar across her forehead. She told me the last time he beat her she was feeding her 2-month-old baby and her husband came in, took the bottle out of her hand and smashed it against her head. She was feeding their baby! This woman had been in and out of the shelter for two years and had been divorced for eight months when I met her, and she said she just couldn't come to terms with it. She said to me, 'He's now in a relationship with another woman and here I am alone and I still love him.' That's what I needed to understand to play Francine."

The film is based on Faith McNulty's account of Francine Hughes' life, "The Burning Bed: The True Story of an Abused Wife," which tells of a dependent Southern woman who suffered 15 years of merciless beatings and humiliations from her husband. In 1977, after he had beaten her and forced her into having sex with him, Francine Hughes decided she could take no more. She waited for him to fall asleep, soaked the bedroom with gasoline, then put a match to the father of her three children. Francine entered a plea of self-defense when she was taken to court. The jury was convinced and freed her.

Farrah Fawcett stars as Francine Hughes, a battered wife with three children, who after years of beatings and humiliation, ends up on trial for murdering her ex-husband, in "The Burning Bed."

AP Laserphoto

Says Fawcett: "I had just finished 'Murder in Texas' when screenwriter Rose Leiman Goldemberg brought it to me to read. We took it to all three networks. I think they all turned it down because of the violence and because of my image. The networks have a formula that works and they'll put a lot of money into stories that fit into the formula. This was not that kind of project."

Determined to break out of the image she calls "a Southern California dumbbell" with or without the part in "Burning Bed," Fawcett dove into the role of a would-be rape victim who turns the table on her assailant for the New York production of "Extremities" and won some critical acclaim.

"When I came back to L.A., there was a complete turnabout about 'Burning Bed.' I had proven I could be taken seriously in New York. They not only wanted to do the story, they wanted me. The wonderful thing with this movie is that it is getting talked about on non-entertainment pages of newspapers and it's helping to broaden people's understanding of the problem."

Whether the film succeeds in launching Fawcett as a serious actress, it appears the process of searching out that vital something that made Francine Hughes tick was a provocative personal experience for the actress.

Says she, "I used to always feel that it was just me, that it had to do with my growing up in the South, that it was the way I was brought up — having to defer to men and being in a business that is dominated by men. Now I see that all businesses are dominated by men."

Music for movies has songwriters singing the blues

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Music for the movies isn't what it used to be.

Professional songwriters lament the decline of original scores for films and complain that the symphonic backgrounds of Max Steiner and Franz Waxman have been replaced by series of vintage rock records.

Another trend they deplore is the use of electronic music, such as Vangelis's one-man score for "Chariots of Fire." And with virtually no musicals being filmed, work in Hollywood has been scarce for most of the men and women who have made America's movie music.

"Twenty years ago, every studio had staff orchestras," said Jimmy Clark, local business representative of the American Federation of Musicians. "That is all gone, and now all musicians are free-lance. Once a player gets inside, it's OK. But you've got to know somebody who knows somebody who knows somebody. That's the way it works."

Many of today's films are scored with old tapes, Clark added; others are "runaway" scores recorded in England, Germany and other foreign countries. The union has tried to stop the runaways without much success.

At a recent celebration by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences of 50 years of Oscar-winning music, Clark and others in the music end of moviemaking talked about the fate of the movie score.

During the celebration, Bill Conti's 30-piece orchestra played the lush Oscar scores of the years. The last decade seemed sketchy and undistinguished.

"'Nashville' was the first movie in which the actors were encouraged to write their own songs," said actor Keith Carradine, who introduced the Oscar winners of the 1970s.

Though Carradine's song, the endearing "I'm Easy," was the 1975 winner, having actors write their own songs is something the pros deplore.

"Did you notice how they skipped over the songs of the 1970s, throwing in a bunch of scores like 'Chariots of Fire'?" said songwriter Jay Livingston. "Most of the songs aren't worth hearing."

Livingston and partner Ray Evans were Paramount Picture's resident songsmiths during the '40s and '50s, producing an incredible amount of title songs and musical scores. Their Oscar winners include "Buttons and Bows," "Mona Lisa" and "Que Sera, Sera." And among their other movie songs were "To Each His Own," "Golden Earrings" and "Silver Bells."

"Ray and I haven't worked in a studio for years," Livingston said. "We write special material for nightclub acts and play concerts ourselves. We just finished writing a score for an animated version of 'A Midsummer's Night Dream' on spec. A couple of former Disney artists are trying to get it financed. If it goes, we'll get a piece of the profits."

Harry Lowjeski, executive director of music for MGM-UA, traced the history of film scoring: "In the first days of underscoring, published mood music was used. Then Erich Korngold, a schooled composer, became the first to write music for the film, treating the script like the libretto of an opera. In the period that followed, it was fashionable to fill the motion picture with wall-to-wall music."

Pop songs were popular on film scores in the '60s, said Lowjeski, then Francis Lai's score for "Love Story" brought a return to the classically oriented scores by such composers as John Williams and Jerry Goldsmith.

"Saturday Night Fever" proved the value of having an album complement the release of a movie, and afterward producers went album-crazy.

"You had record executives trying to dictate what music would be in the film," said Lowjeski.

Because studios are eager to capture the 14-24 age group that supports most movies, the trend to pop music will doubtless continue, he added.

"Nowadays they hire a rock musician to write the songs," laments songsmith Livingston. "They never have any relation to the picture. It makes no sense."

'Gone With the Wind' magic remains after 45 years

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — If you can recite in your sleep all of Scarlett O'Hara's lines, if you know that George Reeves — TV's original Superman — had the minor role of Stuart Tarleton and if Max Steiner's musical score makes you reach for a hanky, then you'll probably want to be here over the weekend.

That's when the Frankly, My Dear, We Do Give a Damn Committee holds its two-day celebration of "Gone With the Wind," David O. Selznick's 1939 film classic.

"It's like a cult. Like the Trekkies. Only this is the Gone-With-the-Windies," said Travis Wolfe, co-chairman of the committee. "We've got a woman coming who's seen it more than 100 times. It's just a cult."

It began as a 1,037-page novel called "Tomorrow Is Another Day," and producer Selznick originally thought it was too long to make into a movie.

But today, nearly 45 years after it premiered at the old Loew's Grand Theater in Atlanta, "Gone With the Wind" is still one of the most popular films of all time.More than 300 million people have paid to see the three-hour, 39-minute saga of Rhett Butler and Scarlett O'Hara.

"I think it's the greatest work of art ever in a book or a movie," Wolfe said in an interview. "First, it was done in a book that was the best book that ever came along. And they did the movie even better."

The agenda for the Oct. 5-6 celebration in Chattanooga includes a forum to discuss the movie and Margaret Mitchell's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, a 30-minute stage satire of "GWTW" and a visit to an antebellum mansion.The Technicolor blockbuster will be shown each night at the historic Tivoli Theater.

Co-chairman Pat McCarver, a collector-dealer of movie memorabilia, plans to display a 15-foot-long, four-section scale model of Tara, Scarlett's plantation. It's on sale for $15,000.

The committee — which takes its name from Clark Gable's famous and then-controversial exit line, "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn" — expects participants from as far away as California.

McCarver, whose prize possession is the cutaway coat Gable wore in the film, helped organize the first nationwide "GWTW" convention four years ago in Memphis; one was scheduled in 1981 in Atlanta but fizzled because of the air controllers' strike. Last year, it was held in St. Louis.

The epic story of a Southern belle's struggle to survive the Civil War only to lose the man she loves has always occupied a special place in film history.

The 1936 novel originally drew its title from Scarlett's final line: "I'll think of it all tomorrow at Tara. I can stand it then. Tomorrow, I'll think of some way to get him back. After all, tomorrow is another day."

Man collects old military vehicles

FLOWER MOUND, Texas (AP) — Some of John Todd's collection went through The Big One.

A few pieces in his collection of old U.S. military vehicles actually run. Others sit in a hangar-type building waiting for restoration.

"When I'm through they'll all be pretty much rebuilt with new engines and paint jobs," he said.

Todd, a representative for baby furniture manufacturers, began his collection 10 years ago and now has a dozen vehicles — including three jeeps, an ambulance, an aircraft recovery truck, a Gen. George Patton-style staff car, and an armored scout car.

He also owns a weapons carrier, a Burma jeep, a 2½-ton cargo truck, a land car, and a World War II observation airplane.

"It's a hobby," he said. "This is a little easier to do because you don't have to be so neat. This is a hobby the whole family can ride in and use. You can get stuck (in the mud) and not worry about it."

Despite the fact that his collection is worth $25,000 to $30,000, he says "it's a hobby that anybody can do. It's not expensive." When all the vehicles are restored "they'll probably be worth twice that."

He said a jeep purchased for $1,000 and restored may be worth $2,500 or $3,000. And spare parts are plentiful. "There's still a lot of parts around the country still in the original cases."

Todd, one of 4,000 members of the Military Vehicle Collectors Club, buys some of his pieces from farmers who have used them to haul grain. "Most of my vehicles I've just stumbled across driving around the country.'

He travels throughout Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas representing the furniture companies.

There are about 125 club members in Texas, said Sondra McCoy, business manager of the club.

"They find these things on old farms in very rusty condition," she said, and restore them. Members of the club have everything ranging from military bicycles to Sherman tanks.

Many members are veterans and collecting the vehicles is a personal thing to them, Mrs. McCoy said. "We do try to promote the fact that we are a history-oriented club," she said.

Todd bought his aircraft recovery truck, which can lift 10 tons, in Fort Smith, Ark., "It was the largest wrecker in northwest Arkansas for many, many years and was used to get 18-wheelers that went off the side of mountains," he said.

The truck, with a top speed of 30 mph and gas mileage of 2 miles per gallon, helped move airplanes forced to crash land on runways during World War II.

His World War II airplane, being refurbished at an Aero Valley Airport at Roakoke, eventually will be flown to his private airstrip. It will be kept at his farm in Flower Mound.

Six years ago Todd paid $3,000 for a general staff car similar to the one use by Patton, which Todd describes as "a great big Jeep."

"Now it's worth at least $8,000. "They made a lot of them, but after the war farmers took out the back seat," he said, and used them as trucks. His still has a back seat.

His armored car, from early World War II, was bought in New Orleans and hasn't been used since the war.

All his vehicles except the airplane and recovery truck are kept in a hangar that is littered with spare parts and extra engines. And the ones that run must occasionally be used and checked, especially the plane.

"If you get up there and something starts leaking, you're in trouble," he said.

Artifacts studied to determine Indian schedules

CINCINNATI (AP).— "Imagine what you do every day," says anthropologist C. Wesley Cowan. "You have a varied schedule, but with a certain amount of regularity you do the same thing every day."

If the same was true for Indians in Ohio a thousand years ago, Cowan expects to have a good idea what their schedules were like, when he finishes his work at the Cincinnati Museum of Natural History.

In an upstairs room at the museum, a wall of beer cartons holds relics of the lives of some Indians of the Ohio River Valley. Crammed in the cartons, in paper bags the size that hold peanuts at ball games, are bone tools, stone tools and pottery fragments.

The artifacts were left by Indians who lived on the banks of the Little Miami River north of Cincinnati between A.D. 450 and A.D. 1400. They were found in a plowed field some 40 years ago, but their full story has never been told.

Scientist Charles Oehler supervised that dig, but was too busy to do a thorough evaluation of the artifacts. Since then, scientists and students have analyzed parts of the collection. But no one has analyzed the whole.

So, this summer, with a $26,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the museum hired Cowan, 32, of Louisville, Ky., to find out what the artifacts say about the people who once lived here.

Pulling bags from the cartons and inspecting the contents, Cowan said, is like Christmas without the elves.
