Polish workers protest Solidarity ban

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Thousands of workers struck at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk today for a second day to protest the ban on Solidarity and were joined by thousands more in the nearby Baltic port of Gdynia, witnesses said.

They said the Gdansk strikers, shouting "Solidarity is alive," resumed their strike early in the morning. The government said police battled rioters in Gdansk throughout the night.

Western journalists, driving out of Gdansk to nearby Elblag to breach a telephone blackout imposed by Communist Poland's martial-law regime, said the Paris Commune shipyard in Gdynia had joined workers at the V.I. Lenin shipyard in Gdansk.

An estimated 5,000 workers could be involved in the Gdansk protest, with several thousand more joining the strike in Gdynia, the reporters said.

They said the strike had resumed in Gdansk at 6 a.m. and that police backed by water cannon had surrounded the giant shipbuilding complex at 9 a.m.

Western correspondents in Gdansk said strikers closed the shipyard to demand release of union chief Lech Walesa and others jailed for violating the martial-law edicts of Dec. 13.

In Warsaw, government spokesman Jerzy Urban told foreign journalists there were attempts at organizing strikes at eight shipyards and factories in the Baltic area Monday, and that police had used tear gas, water cannon and flares to disperse rioters in Gdansk during the night.

Urban said about 600 people fought police on the streets near the Gdansk train station and the city's old quarter Monday night, smashing windows, setting fires and building barricades from streetcar tracks and stones. He said about a dozen people were arrested.

In Washington, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the strike in Gdansk was "an indication the Polish workers feel very strongly about Solidarity and that Solidarity lives in Poland."

Asked how far President Reagan would go in showing support for the Polish workers, the spokesman said Reagan would make statements but, he said, "we don't welcome violence."

The Polish workers were the first to openly defy the tight union controls adopted Friday by Parliament.

They decided not to wait for a four-hour general strike Nov. 10 urged by the underground committee of four top Solidarity leaders. That date is the second anniversary of Solidarity's official registration by a Warsaw court as the first independent union in the Soviet bloc.

Three large convoys of police trucks were seen heading north in the direction of Gdansk on Monday.

Reporters and witnesses returning to Warsaw said the Gdansk strikers appealed for support from other factories in the tri-city area of Gdansk, Gdynia and Sopot. The Gdansk organizers also urged walkouts in Silesia, center of the coal industry.

In Warsaw, one official source said there could be trouble in Poland's five coastal provinces and two in the interior, where Solidarity support was strong.

Reagan: Market trend a 'vote of confidence'

By GEORGE E. CONDON JR.
Copley News Service

IRVING, Texas — Aiming some of his sharpest barbs of the 1982 campaign at his Democratic foes, President Reagan declared Monday that his economic program is "beginning to work" and pleaded with Texans here to give him more Republicans in Congress.

The president also reacted with glee to the news that the Dow Jones Industrials had surpassed what he termed "the magic 1,000," calling it "a strong vote of confidence" in his policies.

Speaking at the last stop of a Western trip that combined campaigning in three states, vacationing at his California ranch and meeting the president-elect of Mexico, Reagan singled out for attack the two top Democratic leaders of the House.

Professing a lack of understanding of the popular Pac-Man video game, Reagan said he had been told the game featured "a round thing that gobbled up money."

To the laughter and applause from a crowd of about 400 Texans at an outdoor GOP rally, the president said, "I thought that was Tip O'Neill."

The criticism was not laced with similar humor, though, when the president turned his attention to House Speaker O'Neill's top lieutenant, Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas.

Again, the president drew cheers in this wealthy Dallas suburb when he recalled his support for a constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget.

Reagan noted Wright's challenge to him to submit a balanced budget and accused Wright of "a little hypocrisy" because, he said, Wright was "one of the prime leaders in increasing...the two budgets that I have been able to send to the Congress since I've been there."

"He has made them bigger with added spending," said Reagan.

Later, aboard Air Force One on the return flight to Washington, White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III told reporters the president's remark about O'Neill "wasn't intended to be personal."

Reagan, who visited briefly with Wright's Republican opponent, issued no similar disclaimer about the Texas Democrat.

As he has throughout the last two weeks, the president placed all the blame for the country's economic woes on his opponents while claiming the credit for the lower prime rate and the taming of inflation.

He acknowledged, though, that, "I'd hoped that we'd be further along."

Water permit to be considered

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

A hearing examiner for the Texas Water Commission is recommending the city of Midland be granted a permit to pump primary treated sewage water to J. "Timber" Floyd's land, but with a five-year limit attached.

That recommendation and protests from the city and various other persons will be considered Thursday when the Texas Water Commission meets in Austin to rule on Midland's permit application.

Representing Midland at the 10 a.m. meeting in the Stephen F. Austin Building will be Utilities Director John Lowe and Assistant City Attorney David Reagan.

Hearing Examiner James Larkins, who conducted the public hearing on the application in Midland on June 30 and July 1, has released his Findings of Fact and Findings of Law to the TWC. Included is a summarized report of data presented at the Midland hearing.

Midland's application calls for installing a system that would pump the effluent from the sewage treatment plant through a pipeline to Floyd's land 15 miles southeast of the city. There it would be retained in lined holding ponds until needed for irrigation.

Lowe said the city has filed a protest to the recommended five-year limitation.

"LARKINS SAID there are some things we don't know and the permit should be reconsidered in five years," Lowe said.

"We said it is a no discharge permit.

Commissioners hope for January vote on jail funding plan

By ED TODD

The proposed $8.6 million bond issue to finance a Midland County Jail and courthouse addition and to renovate the 1930-vintage downtown courthouse may be presented to the electorate Jan. 15 for acceptance or rejection.

However, the Midland County Commissioners' Court hasn't determined how to ask the voters to finance the issue: by general obligation bonds or certificates of obligation. But the commissioners did retain E.F. Hutton, stock and bond brokerage company, to study both means of financing and to determine the optimum one for the county.

Either might or might not entail the raising of taxes.

"I think we can get this study done in 45 days," Dan Grothe of Hutton's Denver, Colo., public finance office told the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday. Grothe said his firm then could tell the court the "advantages and disadvantages" of each.

"It takes a quite a bit of time," he said, "because we have to make a couple of computer runs and follow the market closely. You can go either way."

"Whatever will be more attractive," said Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis. "I'd like to see the study done."

"I think it's necessary," said County Judge Bill Ahders.

Commissioner Durward Wright noted that "we've been aware all the time that we had a choice" of financing.

"I was not aware," admitted Davis.

Without specifically detailing the benefits of either route, Grothe simply told the court that "there are some advantages that one has over the other. The market fluctuates. There'll be some minor ticks in the market."

"I think we need all the input we can have," said Davis.

Grothe and Frank Maggio, manager of E.F. Hutton's Midland office, have agreed to conduct the market surveying gratis and would expect no fee unless the county later retained Hutton for its services.

Wright said that he had "no problem with the survey" but wanted to ensure that the agreement would in no way "lock us with E.F. Hutton."

Davis responded that that condition had been agreed upon sometime ear-

Nursing homes take precautions

By GAIL BURKE

A blazing fire sends smoke billowing through the halls of a 150-bed nursing home.

Smoke inhalation takes the lives of two and hospitalizes eight others.

This scene could happen anywhere. It did — last weekend in Pampa.

Many victims of fires die from smoke inhalation rather than burns, said Bob Williams, Midland's assistant fire marshall.

Midland's nursing homes are equipped with various fire prevention devices to protect and warn patients of a potential fire and smoke. And they practice evacuation drills to be prepared for what they hope never happens.

Because there is around-the-clock supervision and better fire prevention equipment in nursing homes, Williams said Midland's convalescent facilities should be safer than some private homes — if the equipment is in working order and periodic drills are followed.

Restrictions on cigarette smoking also help prevent a potential fire, say Midland's nursing home

Advisory council designed to voice concerns of blacks

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Lack of organization and communication among the black citizens prompted Gloria Ellis to attempt to do something about rectifying the voiceless black community.

As a result, the Black Advisory Council has been organized and will be trying to demonstrate the ability for blacks to work together to better their community when they meet at 9 a.m. Saturday to clean up Washington Park.

Prior to that, there will be a membership meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday at Park Center YMCA to review goals of the council and get citizen input as to projects that could be undertaken.

The Thursday night and Saturday morning sessions are open to the public.

Ms. Ellis, who came back to Midland to work after completing her degree at North Texas State University, said she wanted "to get the young people involved in the community" after hearing complaints from that group after Juneteenth affairs that they didn't feel they were part of the community.

She got on the telephone and asked several young black adults to attend a meeting at Carver Cultural Center. Out of that came the Black Advisory Council with 16 board members, a charter, set of by-laws and officers.

SERVING AS OFFICERS are H.T. Jumper Davis, president; Morris Conner, vice president; Gloria Caldwell, secretary-treasurer; Dorothy Nelson Nash, assistant secretary; and the Rev. Johnny Mitchell, parliamentarian.

Instead of waiting around for major problems to crop up in the community, Ms. Ellis said she wanted to see the residents band together to address everyday issues.

Washington Park was selected as the first project to tackle, she said. "It's a big park and it's nice, but it has a bad image. Parents are afraid to let their children play over there."

The park, according to Ms. Ellis, has been taken over by teen-agers and young adults who use it as a meeting place for drinking and gambling.

And city officials aren't happy with events over there, either, she said, citing the example of a water fountain that was installed in the park and had been broken by someone 45 minutes later.

In addition, the tennis court net and basketball net are gone, she said.

"Once a month or every two months we're going to get out and pick up trash in the park. We want to bring the image up so people will feel comfortable going there. We're trying to make it a community park," said Ms. Ellis, who works for the Human Relations Council.

TO ASSIST THE GROUP, the Parks and Recreation Department is supplying rakes, brooms and plastic bags. Wayne Kohout, department director, "thinks it's a good idea. He thinks it's about time for us to start doing things instead of asking for things," Ms. Ellis related.

But Saturday morning isn't the end

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers from Masachusetts southwest to parts of Tennessee and Kentucky.

Thunderstorms likely in Midland tonight

The National Weather Service forecasts a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight, even as Midland is wringing out Monday's afternoon shower which dumped .21 of an inch of rain on the city.

Weather prognosticators predict tonight's low should dip into the low-40s with winds from the north at 5 to 10 mph. The cloudiness should dissipate a bit Wednesday, when the high should reach the low-60s and winds will once again breeze from the north at 5 to 10 mph.

Monday's showers, which knocked a quick 8 degrees off the thermometer between 11 a.m. and noon, also pushed monthly and yearly rainfall totals to 1.01 and 12.63 inches.

Monday's high of 60 degrees fell far short of the record 94 set in 1979. The overnight low of 49 compares with a record low 40 set in 1946.

Sunset tonight is at 7:20 p.m., with sunrise Wednesday coming at 7:51 a.m.

Commissioners interview developers

Midland County commissioners on Monday again interviewed developers who might consider aligning with the county in a venture by which the county would get "for free" a 50,000-square-foot annex in exchange for allowing the developer to build a hotel and parking garage on county property in downtown Midland.

"We're looking for a free ride," Commissioner Charlie Welch told John Loyd, senior vice president and partner of The Murphree Co. of Houston, "and don't want to cost the taxpayers any money."

"I just can't see that," said Loyd. "I don't want to say 'never.'"

Commissioners interviewed three developers who expressed interest in the county's proposal: Dan Hanesworth of SP Realty & Development Co., a subsidiary of Southern Pacific Transportation Co. in Dallas; Dallas architect Ken Easterwood, Austin Lewis of Dallas; and Loyd.

The developers are exploring financing and, particularly, the tax benefits of any industrial revenue bonds. Southern Pacific opted to submit a proposal Monday after Houston's Turner Construction Co., which last summer seemed to be the frontrunner in the annex-hotel scheme, bowed out.

Commissioners are to select a developer, assuming one is willing to invest in the downtown property, before the end of the year.

The county property in the scheme is between Illinois Avenue and Texas Avenue and lines along and either side of Baird Street.

Odessa man dies in traffic accident

ODESSA — An Odessa man is dead after the 1970 Impala he was driving left the street and hit a utility pole in the 1300 block of West County Road about 3 p.m. Monday.

Ector County Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles ordered an autopsy on the victim, 69-year-old Joe Gibson, to determine if he suffered a heart attack at the wheel. Gibson has had bypass surgery, according to police, who said he was southbound on West County Road at the time of the accident.

He suffered internal injuries in the wreck and was pronounced dead on arrival at Medical Center Hospital. Services are pending at a local funeral home.

Oilfield equipment theft investigated

Sheriff's deputies are investigating the weekend theft of an estimated $40,000 worth of oilfield equipment belonging to the Yale E. Key Well Service Co., 1502 Carol Drive.

The stolen equipment includes rod tongs, tubing tongs, elevators and assorted tools taken from two pulling unit sites about two miles east of the Interstate 20 and U.S. 80 overpass. The theft was discovered when employees arrived for work Monday.

Water permit request to be considered

There's no purpose to have a five-year limitation. The commission has the authority at any time to revoke the permit if they feel we are in violation. It's not fair to the taxpayers to spend $20 million for this system if they shut it down in five years and tell us to go do something else. We should do that something else now. I sure would want to rethink our position if we get the permit for only five years. But they (water commission) haven't offered us a better alternative."

Lowe explained that a discharge permit is reconsidered every five years, but a no discharge permit is "issued for ad infinitum."

Other than that limitation, Larkins has recommended the permit be approved to follow Midland's application.

However, other groups have filed protests with the TWC, objecting to the permit being issued even with a five-year limit.

One protester is the Glasscock County Underground Water District, which stated it would like to see the five-year limit.

Another is Rick Lowerre, representing Mr. and Mrs. David Harris, Rita Boone and others, who is protesting that the residents weren't allowed party status at the hearing.

PARTY STATUS, according to Lowe, was given by the hearing examiner to persons he determined would be directly affected by the project.

He pointed out that a hydrologist, Dr. Lee Wilson, wasn't afforded party status but was allowed to cross-examine the witnesses. "We weren't allowed to cross-examine him," Lowe said, and the city has filed its exceptions to that.

Getting into the picture for the first time is an L.L. Dixon of Arkansas, who says in a protest filed by Arkansas attorney Marvin Thaxton that they own land adjacent to the six-section Floyd site.

Lowe said Thaxton appeared at the June hearing, "but he never asked for party status." In its exception, the city pointed that out, in addition to the fact the protest was filed past the deadline.

The three-member commission appointed by the governor will first have to determine if these other persons should be awarded party status. If so, another public hearing will have to be held. But if these persons are denied party status, the commission can make a judgment on the permit application.

"There's a slight possibility they will take some testimony down there. The meeting should take all morning," Lowe said. Accompanying Lowe and Reagan will be the hydrologists Joe and Ed Reed and Glen Doty with the engineering firm of Black & Veatch.

IF THE TWC grants the permit this week, Lowe said the city could be ready to begin work in 45 days. They would start ordering pumps and switching gear immediately since "it takes a long time to make that and put it together."

And within 60 days, the city would be ready to advertise for bids on the pipeline and reservoir. "These are the key elements and take the longest construction time," Lowe said.

However, if the TWC rules another public hearing must be held, Lowe couldn't guess as to when the city might start construction on the project. Getting a permit is a lengthy process, he said, noting that the city's application was filed on March 3. The hearing wasn't held until June and the TWC is just now looking at the application.

The project was prompted by an unusually high increase in the amount of sewage being treated and retained in holding ponds southeast of the city. Although some farmers had been using part of the effluent for irrigation, additional amounts had been overflowing and running down Midland Draw, bringing cries of protests from residents who lived along the draw.

The major problems come during the winter when smaller amounts of the effluent is taken for irrigation.

Lowe noted that the treatment plant has seen an increase from 6 million gallons per day to 9 mgd over three years. Not all of it is effluent, he said, contending that some of the liquid is underground water being pumped from basements into the sewer system.

"Tell me how bad the winter is going to be and I'll tell you how tough it will be," Lowe said of impending problems with overflowing effluent this winter. "If it's going to be a bad winter and we can't irrigate, then we've got trouble."

Nursing homes take fire precautions

administrators.

"WE CANNOT ALLOW patients or family members to smoke in the rooms," Delores Cregg, administrator of Terrace Gardens Nursing Home, said. "We have designated areas for smoking."

But a patient may not want to follow these restrictions -- sometimes cigarettes are rationed to the patients for better control.

"Cigarettes are the biggest fire hazard in Texas' nursing homes," Donna Hallman, Sage Healthcare Center administrator, said. "Some patients' hands shake. They can't light their own cigarettes. For precaution we hand out their cigarettes as a control."

Although cigarettes are a potential hazard, Williams said a fire could break out from faulty wiring, or even a kitchen fire could cause a disaster.

In any case, Midland's nursing homes are equipped with state approved indoor sprinkler systems, smoke alarms and doors. Also, fire extinguishers and fire boxes which can be activated by anyone in the home hang in accessible areas of the halls.

A master fire alarm and an evacuation plan alert the staff to the location of the fire so an evacuation can begin.

Williams said most nursing homes make arrangements with neighboring churches to take their patients, or in the case of Sage, with nearby Parkview Hospital.

In fact, Terrace Gardens nursing home went through the motions of their evacuation plan last summer.

AFTER AN APPARENT tampering of the Terrace Garden's drain apparatus located outside the home, the water pressure was lowered which kicked off the sprinkler system alarm.

"We didn't know there wasn't a fire," Ms. Cregg said. "So we carried out our evaeuation plan as though there was a fire."

Ms. Cregg said about 50 patients were evacuated in an orderly fashion.

"The firemen who arrived complemented the staff on the excellent job they had done," she said.

Midland fireman George Woody, along with other firefighters, responded to the call that August evening.

"Our primary concern is to form a search and rescue," Woody said. "There was some indication that the nursing home's east wing was the location of the fire and they had all of their people evacuated out of that wing.

"If there had been a fire we could have gone in and contained it immediately."

The false alarm prompted Terrace Garden's staff to follow the evacuation procedure.

First an attempt to locate the blaze and contain it to one area was made.

"We have a master fire alarm board at our nurses' station which lights up to show us where a fire might be," Ms. Cregg said. "The board showed a fire in the east wing."

If there had been a fire, smoke doors, which are located at the end of each corridor in most nursing homes, close automatically to keep air away from the fire area, said Greta Baker, assistant to the Sage administrator.

"THIS PRECAUTION prevents a draft which can spread the fire to another wing," Ms. Hallman said.

Woody said this type of door can prevent, in most cases, the incident that took place in Pampa.

"The doors keep the smoke from going from one wing to another," he said. "And if the homes have sprinkler systems, it will usually hold a fire."

Once the charge nurse, or person on-duty, locates the fire, the rest of the staff closes all doors and windows to prevent the fire from spreading.

The first patients who are evacuated are those in the danger area.

"Then the ambulatory (walking) patients are moved, next the wheel chair and, if the home has any, the bed patients," Mrs. Baker said.

Smoke alarms are another safety device used.

The smoke alarm is activated at the slightest sign of smoke, but it takes a qualified experienced staff to get patients and the remaining staff to safety.

In addition, state-required fire drills are practiced each month on every shift.

If a fire should break out in these two Midland nursing homes, their administrators and staff feel confident that patients will be transferred to safety and the fire would be contained.

Advisory council designed to voice blacks' concerns of Ms. Ellis' work. At 1 p.m. that day, she is holding a neighborhood meeting in the home of Bertha Starks, 2201 E. California, to implement an idea for a neighorhood beautification project.

She plans to start with a few blocks, and keep expanding the idea to other streets. She first considered giving out prizes for the block or house that were cleaned up and looked the best, but decided against it.

"We should do it because we want to do it," she reasoned. And the city, again, has volunteered its assistance by providing dump trucks to clear out the trash and large items.

"A lot of people may live on the south and east sides of town, but that's no reason to have yards looking messy. People in big homes on the north side don't depend on the city to clean up their yards.

"It's up to us to take charge and improve our community," she said. "We need to change our attitude about ourselves and where we live. You don't need a lot of money to keep your yard clean."

OF OLDER RESIDENTS who complain they can't do the work themselves, she suggested they call a neighbor youth or church youths. "People seem too scared to ask neighbors. We have the manpower and we're trying to get the old and young together."

The council's goals are to encourage basic reforms, self-determination and fundamental transformation to improve the living conditions of minority people in Midland; to develop a cooperative relationship through a supportive role with existing organizations; and to enlarge existing means of communication, information dissemination and education for the minority community to educate those citizens of their rights, issues, remedies and redress available.

By keeping the meetings open to the public, Ms. Ellis said the Advisory Council wants to get more people involved.

Over a long range, Ms. Ellis hopes the council will start a service to inform the black residents on voting procedures and candidates. A lot of the black residents don't vote, she said, because they are naive and don't know how to operate a voting machine.

Eventually, she would like to see a minority representative elected to the City Council, County Commission and school board. And that will take cooperation between the blacks and Mexican-Americans.

"The only way to survive is for minorities to stick together," she said.

Earnest Kiker to be new Midland agricultural agent

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Earnest Kiker, a 34-year-old Texas Agricultural Extension Service agent from Briscoe County in the High Plains of Texas, on Monday was hired as Midland County's agricultural agent by the Midland County Commissioners' Court.

He will succeed Charlie Green who, at 56, retired Aug. 31 after serving as the Midland County senior agent for 33 years.

Also upon the recommendation of TAEX District Director Roberta Johnson, the commissioners rehired Willie Stumberg, 27, who resigned earlier this year as Green's assistant in charge of the 4-H program. He left TAEX six months ago to enter private business.

"I think he's by far the most qualified candidate for the second position," said Ms. Johnson.

"Welcome back," Commissioner Charlie Welch told Stumberg, who earned the bachelor's degree in range science from Texas A&M University in 1977. "He's a good businessman."

Kiker, who attended public school in Rotan, holds bachelor's and master's degrees in agricultural education from Texas Tech University, and was the assistant county agent for Swisher County and the senior agent for Borden County before becoming the senior agent for Briscoe County.

He is to report for work here Nov. 16, while Stumberg will be on the job a month earlier. Meanwhile, Green has been retained on a consulting basis to keep the Extension Office's programs active. The county has two additional agents in its employ: Sharon Hillis and Cindy Mann.

Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis said he had "talked to" several people in gleaning Kiker's reputation.

"It's so favorable," he said, "I would just run out of superlatives."

Davis said that "Midland County is very fortunate this morning."

Said Welch: "We owe a great deal of gratitude to Roberta Johnson" for seeking out the candidates to succeed Green and to fill the No. 2 slot and for recommending Kiker and Stumberg for the jobs.

After meeting with the Commissioners' Court, Stumberg said of his return to TAEX work: "I've been looking forward to this for a long time. The Extension Service kind of grows on you, (though) it's hard work."

Kiker noted that his main function will be "working with people" in trying to make agriculture — on the farm and ranch — more productive and profitable.

Both noted that farmers are in an economic slump.

"Agriculture is going downhill everyday," Stumberg said.

"We're overproducing in agriculture," said Kiker.

Postal clerks tired of being America's punching bag

WASHINGTON (AP) — The postal clerks union, determined to "fight fire with fire," is launching a television advertising campaign designed to counter private competition to the Postal Service.

With the blessing of the U.S. Postal Service management, the American Postal Workers Union will begin its $2.7 million image-building campaign next week in 26 cities.

Moe Biller, president of the 340,000-member APWU, said the message simply is that government-employed postal clerks will be "America's punching bag no more."

The advertisement "will set the record straight — that postal workers are not malingerers," he said.

The commercial, produced for the union by the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency, introduces the slogan: "We Try To Be Letter Perfect For You."

It is to commence Oct. 18 in some 26 cities, although the spot has been aired regionally in some Northeast markets during CBS telecasts of NCAA football games.

The union had been considering such a move for sometime, but the spur to action was a television advertising campaign run last spring by Federal Express, a major private competitor of the U.S. Postal Service.

The advertisement depicted two older Postal Service clerks chatting about their pensions and other benefits while a frustrated customer sought vainly to get help in mailing a package.

Jail construction funding plans studied ner.

"I knew it, they knew it, and I think the gate post knew it," he said.

Meanwhile, Arthitect Walter Pate is preparing the "schematic design" of the jail and courthouse addition, which may be built on the northside of the courthouse square.

"We are under way with the schematic design phase of our services on the Midland County Jail and Courthouse Addition," Pate said in a report to the court. "We have met with several department heads. Most of our efforts have been centered around the jail and sheriff's department." Pate said that the design is about 40 percent complete and that he will present his "pre-schematic design" to the court on Oct. 25 and the final product on Nov. 22.

Pate said he has informed the Texas Commission on Jail Standards of the court's intent to "bring the existing jail up to minimum standards and expand the jail."

The proposed jail would have cells for 225 inmates; the existing jail on the fifth floor of the courthouse legally has space for about 85 inmates, though up to 120 men and woman have been held prison there. In addition to the jail, the courthouse addition is to contain Sheriff Dallas Smith's office, which would be on the ground floor, and offices of Constable Tom McGinnis and Justices of the Peace Robert H. "Bob" Pine and Charles Sprayberry.

Plane heads for Rome

ROME (AP) — A chartered Alitalia DC-10 plane headed for Rome today after leaving Bolivia in mysterious circumstances carrying a long-sought Italian terrorist suspect, the Interior Ministry announced.

In San Juan, Puerto Rico, officials said the plane departed the Isla Verde International Airport at 1:13 a.m. CDT after a one-hour stop to take on fuel and food following its five-hour flight from Bolivia.

Officials at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport said the plane was expected to arrive in Rome about 9:30 a.m. CDT.

Diplomatic sources in Bolivia, contradicting earlier reports by Bolivian aviation officials that the plane had been hijacked, said the operation amounted to a drug bust approved by the Bolivian government.

BIT THE Italian news agency ANSA said the plane is carrying Pierluigi Pagliai, 28, an alleged drug trafficker sought on an international warrant in connection with the Bologna train station terrorist bombing in August 1980 that left 85 people dead and 200 others injured.

Quoting unidentified police sources, the agency said Pagliai was wounded slightly in a firefight with police near the southeastern Bolivian city of Santa Cruz de la Sierra, believed to be the world's major cocaine center.

The Interior Ministry confirmed Pagliai was aboard the flight, but gave no further details.

ANSA said Pagliai was handed over to Italian police officials who had been in Bolivia for several days along with Italian secret service agents.

Fernando Caballero, a spokesman for San Juan Aviation Services, the firm which serviced the plane, said he was told there were 16 passengers and 14 crew members aboard. He said one of the passengers was sick and was given a pain killer by a nurse.

Earlier, an unidentified spokesman for Aviation Services said the private company received a cable from headquarters of the Italian airlines in Rome, advising of the stopover and saying 36 passengers were aboard the jet.

It was not immediately clear why the figures did not agree, and officials would not give any details on the passengers' identities.

Alitalia, which has no scheduled flights to Bolivia, said the plane had been chartered, but refused all comment on the incident.

BEFORE IT departed San Juan, the green and white wide-bodied jet was parked at the far end of the airfield and civilians wearing badges were seen going in and out, but apparently no crewmembers or passengers disembarked.

Events surrounding the mystery plane began unfolding Sunday night when it was spotted by reporters in Santa Cruz and the next day turned up 325 miles away at La Paz' El Alto airport, where it was surrounded for several hours by Bolivian Air Force police.

A Santa Cruz newspaper, El Mundo, which photographed the plane, reported that 18 men wearing the green uniforms of Bolivia's National Police boarded the aircraft there, escorting a foreign-born local resident who had been shot.

Bolivian government aviation officials, usually reliable but who do not allow their names to be quoted, confirmed the El Mundo story to reporters, but said a lone hijacker had forced the plane off its normal flight path over neighboring Brazil, to Santa Cruz, and that 17 to 20 armed men, possibly "terrorists," had boarded.

The same sources said the uniformed men were "paramilitary" thugs who had served the former military regime, replaced by a civilian administration Sunday with the inauguration of President Hernan Siles Zuazo.

Poll finds most Vietnam POWs unhappy with design of national war memorial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A poll of former U.S. prisoners of war in Vietnam found that most are unhappy with the design of a national memorial honoring Americans who fought in the war.

The poll was made public Monday by Tom Carhart, a former infantry platoon leader who is leading an effort to make certain the original design for the monument is modified by the addition of two patriot symbols — a flag and flagpole and a larger-than-life statue of three battle-weary combatants.

The original design provided for a stark monument of two submerged granite walls meeting in a V and bearing the names of 57,692 Americans who died in the war and 2,500 still listed as missing. Construction is nearly complete.

In the survey, 67 percent of the former POWs said they disliked the original design. Thirty-three percent approved of it.

Responses were received from 265 of the 587 American servicemen who returned home after being held prisoner.

The survey showed that 70 percent thought the color of the memorial should be white instead of black, 96 percent felt a flag should be a prominent part of it and 82 percent felt the monument should be above the ground

The poll was paid for by Texas computer millionaire H. Ross Perot, who joined the protest that led to the agreement to add the new elements.

Perot had contributed $160,000 to underwrite the cost of the design competition which led to the selection of the plan to which he later objected. It is the work of Maya Ying Lin, who was an architecture student at Yale.

Perot called the design a "tombstone" and a "slap in the face" of those who served in the war, but said he would withdraw his objections if a poll showed veterans supported the monument.

He originally intended to commission a poll among all Vietnam veterans but later decided to survey only former POWs.

The monument has been built on the Mall, between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument.

Fat soldiers shed pounds in army reducing program

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Of 125 obese soldiers selected for a weight-loss program, 124 shed excess pounds and one reverted to his mother's cooking, the base surgeon says.

"We try to educate the troops that if they go to a party and drink a six-pack, they more than consume their 500-calorie meal right there," said Maj. Harold Timboe of the 82nd Airborne Division, explaining the "Lifestyle" program started in March.

The only soldier who didn't lose weight was on an extended leave and spent it eating at his mother's, Timboe said.

Soldiers in the program found themselves on 500-calorie meals taken at special mess halls.

High-calorie foods such as hamburgers or milkshakes suddenly made way for fruits and vegetables, high-protein salads, baked or boiled meats and steamed or boiled vegetables, Timboe said.

"This is a very good program," said Staff Sgt. Robert Benavides. "I've lost about 31 pounds since March, and I want to lose 15 more."

Troops also were counseled weekly and educated to learn to count calories, Timboe said.

The Army also tried to get spouses involved.

The average declarer reacts to a bad trump break with blind panic. But there is often a counter if you keep your cool and look for it. Consider this hand from a recent rubber bridge game at New York's famed Cavendish Club.

In modern theory, North's response of two diamonds promised another bid. However, he decided that the hand was likely to break badly because of East's double, so he made a well-judged pass.

The defenders started with king, ace and another club. West ruffed and cashed the ace of hearts before exiting with a low heart. It looked as if all he had to do was sit back to collect two trump tricks for a one-trick set.

Sitting South was Bee Schenken, a winner of many national championships. She cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond, then led a trump to the king to get the news about the bad break. But now declarer's technique of ruffing a diamond early paid off handsomely. She reduced her trump length to that of West's by ruffing another diamond, then cashed her high heart. She was a trifle lucky to find that West had three cards in each red suit, but that was her only chance to make the hand.

Declarer simply exited with the ten of trumps. West won the jack, but he was end played out of his second trump trick. He was forced to lead away from his Q-7 of trumps into declarer's A-9.

Even a lowly two-level contract can provide exciting play. All too often we are mesmerized by the games and slams, only to ignore far more interesting part score battles.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Toeing the spending line

Even the most devout churchgoer needs an occasional nudge from a pulpit-pounding evangelist to make him stay the straight and narrow. Congressman Phil Gramm undoubtedly is one of President Ronald Reagan's most noteworthy evangelists.

With the American economy stuck in neutral and unemployment at staggering levels, the temptation to abandon the economic course mapped for the country is stronger than ever. A talk with conservative, Democrat, bollweevil Rep. Gramm is just the nudge needed. His conviction about the economic course Reagan has put the United States on is unwavering.

"We were at the end of a 15-year spending spree and the bill collector was standing at the door," the congressman told a number of Midlanders Monday. "We had neglected the economic infrastructure."

There was a time not all that long ago when the American people were pleading for relief from double-digit inflation, sky-high interest rates and a rapidly deteriorating economy. Americans said at that time they realized that the course back to economic stability would be a rocky and long one. Now we are finding the recession the United States slipped into in the summer of 1982 is deeper and longer than many Americans anticipated. This recession is no fun, but what recession is?

"The economy is recovering," Rep. Gramm says confidently, so confidently in fact that he makes it believable for all except the most skeptical. But he has words of caution, too, for those who he knows are quick to find failure in the nation's economic roadmap.

"It's a slow, painful recovery. We'll have a slow recovery for the remainder of this year," he says. "The next two years look pretty good as the economy gains momentum. By 1984, we'll be looking pretty good."

Rep. Gramm has figures to back up what his words proclaim, Inflation has fallen from 18 percent a year and a half ago to 6 percent currently. Interest rates are down from 20 percent to about 13.

The economic recovery has started, we believe, but it is proceeding slowly and will continue to do so. But as we've noted before, a slow recovery will be a beneficial, long-term one.

The nation must never return to the foolish free-spending habits of past years.

Bronx boo for Michel

Congressman Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., Republican minority leader, went out of his way recently to confirm Lenin's legendary thesis that we would scramble to sell the communists the very rope they would use to hang us.

Instead of leading administration forces in the House, Michel headed an effort to pass a measure that called for overturning President Reagan's sanctions against construction of the Soviet Union's new gas pipeline to Western Europe.

When the electronic tally boards in the House chamber registered a vote of 203 to 203, a tie that would have called for Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. to cast one of his rare votes, a chant of "O'Neill! O'Neill!" went up from the floor, mostly from the Republican side.

Republicans and their Democratic allies on this issue were calling for O'Neill because he had earlier denounced the measure from the floor following a telephone call from Secretary of State George Shultz. O'Neill said such a vote would embarrass the administration, even though President Reagan would veto it if it ever got to his desk.

As it turned out, the speaker didn't have to break a tie because three tardy representatives cast their votes to move the bill off the floor for revision, in effect to support the administration.

During the debate, Michel acknowledged he was pressing to get the pipeline sanctions lifted, mostly for political reasons. Never mind that the Soviet Union is using slave labor to build the pipeline according to recent, reliable reports.

Michel wants to sell rope to the Russians because he is in a difficult re-election campaign and might be helped if he could throw pipeline business to the Caterpillar Corp., which has its headquarters in his district and would have been working on the project, but for the president's embargo.

Narrow and comfortless as it was, the House vote sustaining the administration's embargo against the Soviet Union for its part in imposing martial law on the Polish people avoided an embarrassing humiliation for the United States with its allies as well as the Soviet Union.

So, let's hear it for O'Neill who put patriotism above politics, and a Bronx boo for Mr. Michel who put politics above patriotism.

Another View: It's a commie plot!

Something is wrong. The staunch Republican township of Leyden, Mass., voted for a nuclear freeze last spring. There is a picture of the townspeople in a July issue of the New York Times that shows them smiling in front of one of those white frame New England town halls, proud of what they have done for America. They look like regular folks. But the plugged-in Reader's Digest knows better. These people, and silly millions like them across America, are communist dupes.

In its October issue, the magazine has revealed — and politicians on the order of Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., have swallowed whole — evidence that the Soviet cloak-and-dagger boys "have been involved from day one in the U.S. disarmament campaign." KGB agents have shown up at American forums advocating peace, the article explains. They have enticed the unwitting with free trips to Moscow "to reduce misunderstanding." And any expert can see that their tracks are simply everywhere, from churches to colleges to parades for peace.

The article points out that peace is only for the naive, the innocent, those unschooled in the double entendres of international intrigue. Denton was held prisoner by the North Vietnamese for seven years and is now an authority on the communist menace. He rose in the Senate recently to carry the implications of the Reader's Digest article one step further.

A Senate resolution naming Oct. 10, 1982, "National Peace Day" was, he said, "a sucker deal we're falling for." Then he questioned whether a handful of Senate wives, Betty Bumpers and Nicola Tsongas among them, who have founded a group called Peace Links weren't really lending aid and comfort to the enemy.

There was appropriate outrage on the Senate floor. Denton was reminded that his tactics smacked of McCarthyism. He was told, by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., husband of Betty, that young Peace Links was born "not in the Kremlin, but in my kitchen."

But Denton is no fool. He knows that the peace and nuclear freeze movements are crude fronts for communist world domination. The freeze movement in New Jersey? A cover, obviously. The Catholic bishops who are preaching peace and lobbying against military spending? Playing into Moscow's hands.

If you look carefully again at that picture from Leyden, Mass., it is not so hard to see what has got Denton worried. In the background, there are lots of bushes. Lord knows what is hiding behind every one of them.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Massacre by Indonesia deserves attention

WASHINGTON — The civilized world reacted with horror to the slaughter of several hundred Palestinians in Beirut last month, as well it should have. But butchery of a far greater order of magnitude has been all but forgotten — the genocidal attack on the peaceful people of East Timor by Indonesian troops on Dec. 7, 1975.

Jack Anderson

The subject of the bloody conquest of East Timor may come up when President Suharto of Indonesia meets with President Reagan in the White House this week — but don't bet on it.

The Reagan administration seems determined to play the same see-no-evil, hear-no-evil, speak-no-evil role that the Ford and Carter administrations saw fit to enact over the Indonesian campaign that cost the lives of as many as 200,000 East Timorese. Indonesia's oil and its staunchly anti-communist regime are considered too important to risk by asking picky questions about mass murder and repression.

It's bad enough that President Ford gave his tacit OK to the Indonesian invasion, and that President Carter declined to apply his loudly proclaimed human-rights standards to Indonesia. But U.S. diplomats ever since have been playing down the Indonesian conquerors' continued brutal treatment of their vanquished neighbors.

"The State Department has engaged in a consistent pattern of discounting reports of Indonesian-inflicted suffering upon the people of East Timor," declared Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio. He and Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., have emphatically challenged the glowing reports submitted by Foreign Service personnel fearful of offending their Indonesian hosts. In addition, 75 members of Congress have signed a letter to President Reagan protesting the Timor tragedy.

Starvation, which played a major role in the mass deaths, is once again a danger, according to the scant first-hand reports issuing from East Timor. Malaria is a serious problem. And the Indonesians have "relocated" almost 4,000 Timorese to an island called Arturo, which amounts to a detention camp.

Don't expect any outcry over East Timor from the man who is in line to be the new U.S. ambassador to Jakarta, Kent Crane. A former aide to disgraced Vice President Spiro Agnew, Crane reportedly has close ties to the oil and financial interests that dominate Indonesian politics. He'll be no boat-rocker.

Sources told my associate Jack Mitchell that a formidable coalition of presidential aide Ed Meese, CIA officials and right-wing advisers are pushing Crane's appointment. Foreign Service officials oppose the nomination because of Crane's reportedly close ties to the intelligence community as well as some alleged business dealings in Indonesia.

Crane's cordial relationship with the spooks is confirmed by a Greek exile leader in a good position to know. Years ago, when the exile, Elias Demetracopoulos, raised questions about Thomas Pappas, the Greek-American businessman who helped bankroll Richard Nixon, Agnew dispatched Crane to the CIA's "dirty tricks" division to get derogatory information about Demetracopoulos. The CIA obligingly gave Crane a calumnious one-page memo on Nixon's troublesome tormentor.

So the fix is still in, apparently. Oil and anti-communism will once again keep an American administration from embarrassing Suharto by speaking out in behalf of the oppressed people of East Timor.

Footnote: State Department officials have insisted to Congress that the Agency for International Development (AID) is doing all it can to assist the Timorese. Kent Crane had not returned several telephone calls by the time I went to press.

EXHUMING AN ISSUE: The Federal Trade Commission, buried but unbowed, will once again try to get Congress to agree to a regulation requiring funeral directors to provide at least minimal information on costs to their bereaved customers.

In 1979, a stronger version of the FTC's proposed disclosure regulation was quietly cremated by Congress.

Leading the attack this time, as in 1979, will be Rep. Marty Russo, D-Ill. So the same old arguments will be disinterred.

As it happens, former FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk has written a lively book on the unholy alliance between Congress and special-interest groups. "Revolt Against Regulation" will be published soon by the University of California Press.

Three years ago, Russo argued, among other things, that cost disclosure would hurt the undertakers' productivity. "Russo's outrage at the impact of this rule upon productivity is particularly curious," Pertschuk writes. "To the best of my knowledge, undertaking ... is, indeed, part of the service sector that, in general, reflects the lowest productivity growth within the U.S. economy."

At one point during the congressional debate, Pertschuk recalls, ex-Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., told him that in spite of the proposed FTC regulation's merits, "we're going to give this one to Marty as a going-away present." Russo was transferring off the committee that had oversight of the FTC.

WATCH ON WASTE: When Harry Homeowner goes out to buy an aluminum ladder, he can get one that'll take him as high as he wants to go for under $100. But when the Air Force's San Antonio Air Logistics Center went shopping for a ladder about 10 feet long to get a pilot into the cockpit of his A-10 fighter plane, the cost was a mind-numbing $1,676 each. Investigators for the House Defense Subcommittee boggled at the price. They found that the A-10 ladder was almost identical to the one used for climbing into the F-105 — and that model cost "only" $600 apiece. One trouble may have been that the Air Force shopped at only one ladder source. The 71 ladders cost taxpayers about $120,000.

INSIDE REPORT:

New Germany pledges allegiance to U.S.

WASHINGTON — Confidential word has been passed from conservative Chancellor Helmut Kohl to Secretary of State George Shultz that his new West German government no longer will play middle man between Washington and Moscow, as attempted by ousted Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and his left-wing political advisers.

Communicating outside diplomatic channels, senior officials in the new Kohl government also have signaled Shultz to expect "significant and specific efforts" dramatizing changes now in the works. The aim is to cleanse the relationship between the U.S. and its most important European partner that turned rancid during the last few of Schmidt's 13 years in power.

That lays the foundation for restoring health to the foundering Atlantic Alliance. Some formidable issues, such as pipeline sanctions, will not find immediate solutions. But the message sent to Shultz through American specialists in German affairs was clear: The psychology and atmospherics of the U.S.-German partnership will be transformed.

Quite apart from policy changes, purifying the mood of suspicion in Washington about secret West German machinations in Moscow would clear the political air. Schmidt himself was never the prime target of suspicion. It was Egon Bahr and other Social Democratic Party (SPD) operatives with close ties to SPD leader and former Chancellor Willy Brandt who aroused deep suspicions here with private visits to Moscow.

But Schmidt himself was provocative. Squeezed between his own pro-American policy and his party's runaway left wing (fueled by the explosive anti-nuclear peace movement), Schmidt sought political salvation by portraying himself as broker or middle man between Washington and Moscow. That undercut U.S. plans for nuclear rearmament of the North Atlantic treaty alliance (NATO) and President Reagan's START proposal for reducing U.S.-Soviet nuclear weapons.

Last week's message to Shultz was specific: Under Kohl, West Germany will insist on full partnership with the U.S., but will not make private deals with the Russians that damage the "partnership" or undercut American policies.

Bonn's sudden change from socialist to conservative has not produced universal joy in the U.S. government. Some middle-level American Foreign Service officers, long attuned to the detentist policies of Schmidt, are fearful that the right-ward swing in Bonn will strengthen Reagan's hard line on arms control.

A Reagan administration official told us that is the only plausible explanation for a cable sent from the U.S. Embassy in Bonn to the State Department last week. It quoted an official in the new Kohl government as praising Eugene Rostow, U.S. arms control director, and excoriating "ultra-conservative critics" of Rostow in the U.S.

What made that message unique was its transmission as an "open" cable, not classified. That meant the sender wanted it leaked here as evidence that even the conservative Kohl government worries about hard-line Reaganauts. The cable made no impact here.

The senior officials who sent direct word about Kohl's plans to Shultz reflected no concern about Reaganite intransigence. To the contrary, they stressed three targets for quick action by Kohl, all of which the Reagan administration repeatedly pressed on Schmidt without result:

Point No. 1: The Kohl government will spend up to half a billion dollars on long-delayed improvements to U.S. military installations in West Germany, moving barracks and military stores closer to the front.

Point No. 2: Schmidt's buckling under to anti-Turkey human rights pressures from his left wing will be reversed and German help in the modernization of Turkey's army will be resumed. The Reagan administration wants to strengthen Turkey's eastern approaches to Iran to block any Soviet move toward the Persian Gulf.

Point No. 3: The anti-U.S. propaganda line preached by the left wing of the SPD will be transformed by the Kohl government from "Why doesn't the U.S. do something for peace?" to "Why doesn't the Soviet Union do something for peace?" Trifling though it seems, this change could exert profound impact in a country that, like West Germany, lives on television and radio.

This change from skeptical ally to full partner of the U.S. in the East-West struggle is not revolutionary. But in its evolution, both Kohl and the Reagan administration see new strength for persevering against left-wing agitation next year over deployment of nuclear missiles to protect the West.

CHARLEY REESE

Altering government slow process

My wife looked at me across the table and said, "You're becoming a liberal."

Charley Reese

We had just finished a meal of roast chicken, black-eyed peas from her garden, cornbread dressing and cranberry sauce. I've never eaten at Maxime's in Paris, but I would bet a bottle of Tennessee sour mash against a bottle of champagne they have nothing half as good as that meal.

"No, I'm not. What makes you say that?"

"Because you used to talk about people taking responsibility for their own lives and now you're talking as if the government should bail out farmers."

"Well, that's because it doesn't do any good to talk individualism when the government is spending $800 billion. The more immediate issue is how that money's going to be spent."

"You'd better explain yourself," she said with that tone of finality that means she knows she is exactly right. And so I shall.

I don't have much patience with theoretical discussions such as how many angels will fit on the head of a pin. If something usable or entertaining is not to be gotten out of a discussion, then it's better to go off and clean your guns or water the flowers or check the oil level in your car.

If you ask me what is the best system in theory, I will answer in an instant — as little government as possible and no government welfare at all.

But that question, for the moment, is irrelevant. We don't have a system of laissez-faire government and no one in power — Democrat or Republican, liberal or conservative — is proposing that we do. In the first place, you can't go overnight from 50 years of collectivism to individualism. True individualism and laissez-faire government have to be long-range goals.

The argument today is not over big versus small government, despite the propaganda coming from both Democrats and Republicans. The argument is over merely shifting priorities and swapping duties between one level of government and another. Ronald Reagan has not proposed dismantling the welfare state, merely altering its shape.

So it seems to me the most practical political discussion should be directed, for the immediate future at least, at how government shall spend our money and on what its proper objectives should be. We aren't likely to persuade a Congress afraid to balance the budget to reduce it drastically. We might persuade them to direct those funds toward helping Americans rather than foreign governments and international organizations.

The very fact that such a suggestion draws such a chorus of protest tells you that it is a proper subject for debate. Anytime proponents of an issue tell you that it's all been settled (in their favor) and there's nothing more to talk about, you should talk all the more forcefully because they've just told you without intending to that they are nervous about defending their position.

For suggesting that the proper business of the American government is to look out for the American people, I've already been called a blindly selfish, jingoistic beast who wants to pretend the rest of the world doesn't exist. Perfect nonsense.

We're broke, and it's time we faced up to that. Our government has a $1 trillion debt and another three or four trillion in obligations. It's time to put our own house in order.

For 37 years, at great expense, we have protected Western Europe and Japan. Now it's time to tell them to protect themselves. We no longer have the highest standard of living in the world; our workers are no longer the best paid in the world; our currency is no longer the strongest in the world; our military is no longer the most powerful in the world.

The Japanese government is facing a crisis because they have a 2.5 percent unemployment rate; ours is edging close to 10 percent. Business bankruptcies are running at depression rates. Foreclosures are accelerating. We simply have a lot of work to do here at home.

Sure, I'm still a conservative. I want to reduce the size of government, but that's not number one on the agenda at the moment. Number one on the agenda is preventing our economy from collapsing into rubble. If that happens, chances are you can kiss your freedom goodbye along with your savings.

Local fliers win third places at U.S. aerobatics finals

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Aerobatic pilots Gene Beggs of Odessa and Mike Sharp of Midland won third places in their respective flying categories in the week-long national aerobatics finals last week in Sherman.

Beggs, who flies the bi-wing Pitts Special S-1T, placed third in the unlimited — the ultimate — category and was named to the world aerobatic team. He had won the national intermediate championship in 1978 and the advanced championship in 1979.

Sharp, who was flying a 1946 clipped-wing Taylorcraft monoplane, ranked third in the intermediate category and was the 1980 national champion in the sportsman category.

Beggs and Sharp were among the 99 pilots who were competing in the annual contest, which was sponsored by the International Aerobatic Club.

"We had a helluva time," Beggs said after flying the Pitts back to Schlemeyer Air Field in Odessa. "This is the first year I qualified for the world team."

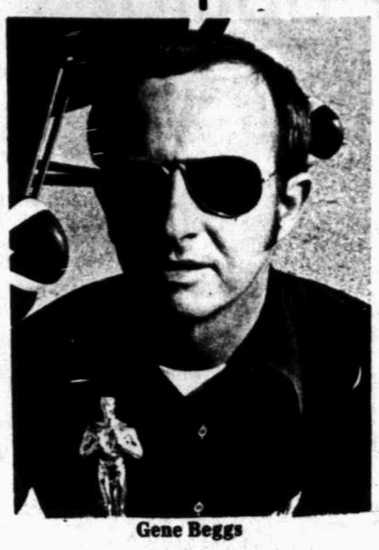

Sharp, who is accustomed to winning championships and occasional second places, was appreciative of but not satisfied with his placing.

"Most people would be happy with it," he said, "but I never was a gracious loser." He has won 11 first places, three second places and this one third place in his regional and national flying.

Sharp, who was his own critic, said he twice flew out of the "box" — designated flying space — at the onset and thereby crippled his chances for the intermediate championship.

"It was so uncalled for the way I flew on that first flight," said Sharp. "I had two outs. I came back strong; I kind of smoked back. I had a strong freestyle.

"You can set back and 'if' yourself to death," Sharp said after he and his wife, Maxine, returned the high-wing Taylorcraft to its hangar at Midland Air Park. "I if'd myself crazy.I'm pleased in a way," he said. "It was a good record for the Taylorcraft." He's retiring the modified aircraft from aerobatics and is building a world-class Z-200 mid-wing airplane for flying competition in ensuing years.

Beggs, who is determined to win first in the unlimited category and to capture the national championship title, was pleased, but not contented with his placing among the 19 fliers seeking the unlimited title and the national champion.

Again winning the unlimited championship and national title was Leo Loudenslager, who flew the mid-wing Laser 200. Coming in second place was Howell, Mich., flier Henry Haigh, who piloted the SuperStar, an experimental aircraft similar to the Laser and inspired by the Stephens Akro competition aircraft.

"That's about as good as winning for Gene," Sharp said of his friend and mentor. "He did super," and noted that the championships "are determined by the slimmest of margins." Loudenslager, an American Airlines captain based in Sussex, N.J., won the world aerobatic championship in 1980, and Haigh barely missed the world title.

Though Sharp is switching to a monoplane similar to the Stephens Akro, Beggs is trusting his biplane in his flight to the national and world championships.

"I like the Pitts," Beggs said. "I believe this new Pitts S-1T is my airplane."

"I would have liked to have finished in the first-place position. I was very, very happy to come in third place and outflew some past world team members. I was really happy to best them.

"I feel very optmistic about becoming the national champion," Beggs said. "It's a long road to the top, and I know of no one who has reached it overnight." Loudenslager has won seven national titles since 1975; Haigh won the title in 1979.

Beggs, 39, now is one of five members of the United States team. That's "Gene's great accomplishment," Sharp noted of Beggs, who had instructed him in aerobatic flying. They critique each other in practicing maneuvers.

Beating Sharp out of the intermediate championship was Tom Bishop, who flew the Z-200. Coming in second place was Lonnie English, who was flying the Pitts S-1S.

Mike Sharp

Illinois officials cancel daily briefings for news media on Tylenol investigation

CHICAGO (AP) — Authorities have canceled twice-daily news briefings in the investigation into seven Chicago-area deaths of people who took cyanide-packed Extra-Strength Tylenol.

"Leads continue to be followed, otherwise there is no significant reportable change in the status since the last briefing," said Mort Friedman, spokesman for the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement.

Authorities have briefed news reporters twice a day on developments in the case since Sept. 30, the day after the first death was discovered. But Friedman said Monday that future news briefings would be announced when scheduled.

A task force of more than 100 investigators from federal, state and local agencies is still working intensively on the case.

Meanwhile, Jerome Howard, 20, of Chicago, accused of threatening to put cyanide in a hospital's Tylenol, remained in the federal Metropolitan Correction Center awaiting a hearing Friday.

Commissioners table doctor's request

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Jail inmates, who may be complaining more than they are ailing, apparently will have to make do without on-duty nurses for awhile longer.

Midland County's jail physician, Dr. Patrick Y. Leung, on Monday requested that Midland County hire two nurses, a registered nurse and licensed vocational nurse, to tend to inmates in his absence. However, he said that one nurse would suffice until a second could be hired, but the Commissioners' Court tabled any action until Sheriff Dallas Smith could appear before the court. The sheriff's $1.26 million budget for 1982 doesn't provide funds for nurses.

"Where's the money coming from?" asked County Judge Bill Ahders.

"In my discussion with the sheriff," said Chief Deputy G.W. Thompson, "we don't have the money in our budget for this year, (but) there's a definite need" for nursing care. The chief deputy also said that a registered nurse working in a hospital in Midland could earn $30,000 a year, "and that was pretty shocking to me."

"I think we're in a Catch 22 situation," said Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis. "I'm for the recommendation very definitely."

"We're stuck without the sheriff," said the judge.

What Leung finally had proposed was a $20,000-a-year registered nurse, who could perform many of the rountine medical procedures normally performed by a medical doctor and would examine each prisoner who is booked into jail. "An RN could do what the doctor can do," Leung said.

The inmate population, which has been in the 80s, earlier in the year had increased to 90 and up to 120 inmates, including men, women and juveniles. Nurses, who would rotate their on-call duties, also could operate the electrocardiograph, draw blood and run urine tests, and the doctor would do the interpretations.

For his services, Leung this year is being paid $20,736 for his routine visits to the jail and for performing emergency services.

The physician noted that his medical services help to minimize any inmate lawsuits which might be filed in federal court againt the county and the commissioners.

"We are running a real professional service in jail," he said. The doctor said the nurses in their examination of inmates could "pick up all the problems pertinent to future complaints."

He also noted that 80 percent of the inmates's complaints "are not really genuine."

"They (inmates) were neglecting their own personal health before they got caught," Leung said and cited the prisoners' "bad teeth" due to poor hygiene.

Inmates, who apparently request tranquilizers to soothe their nerves, complain that they "cannot sleep," as they are "under too much pressure" while awaiting trial.

The doctor also observed that some inmates suffer from skin problems.

"The water is terrible," he said, "(and has) a lot of impurities. We don't know if this just the water (from bathing) or infection" that is causing the skin problems, which, he said, could be rooted in nerve, water or hygiene problems.

On prescription drugs, Jail Capt. Bennie Cureton said that the jail "already has 50 different types of drugs, and our people (jailers) don't know what they're for."

Nurses could discern the drugs.

"We want to run a model (medical) practice," Leung said.

TDHR has funds for insulation

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — West Texas Opportunities, Inc., which serves Midland, Andrews, Borden, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Martin and Upton counties, has been allocated $77,480 to spend on a weatherization program for those with low incomes, the Texas Department of Human Resources has formally announced.

The Weatherization Assistance for Low-Income Persons Program assists low-income residents, especially the elderly and the handicapped, in reducing energy consumption by improving insulation and reducing air infiltration in their homes. The program is intended to improve the health and economic conditions of the recipients by reducing hardship caused by rising energy costs.

Funding for the weatherization comes from the Department of Energy and the Department of Health and Human Services, and it is implemented in Texas through the Department of Human Resources, which administers it through local agencies and governments.

About 6,000 homes in the state will receive services from the program until June 30, 1983, according to the Department of Human Resources.

Fifty-one community agencies and local governments have been allocated funds for the program since July, but Charles Smith, DHR director for special programs, said Friday 21 counties have not been covered yet. The DHR is still in the process of contracting and no deadline has been set, he said.

'Copycat' puts acid in Visine eye drops

By The Associated Press

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. — A "nut" trying "get on the bandwagon" after the Chicago Tylenol murders put hydrochloric acid in Visine A.C. eye drops, burning a man's eyes and prompting a county ban on sales of liquid eye care products, police theorize.

"It was like getting hit with a hot poker, I hollered pretty loud," said Larry Martin Tingley, a patient being treated for depression at the Veterans Administration Hospital. He said the two drops he took Monday burned so much he dropped to the floor in pain.

Police theorized that whoever tampered with the Visine may have been a copycat who got the idea from the seven Chicago-area deaths between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1 in which cyanide was placed in Extra-Strength Tylenol, Grand Junction Police Detective Tom Freeman said. Last week, a woman in Rialto, Calif,. complained of being burned by Visine A.C., but tests showed the acid level was normal.

Freeman said authorities don't think the cyanide killer in Chicago contaminated the eye drops in Colorado.

"Anytime there is a poisoning of major proportions which is reported in the press, all the nuts out there want to get in on the fun," said Dr. Barry Rumack, director of the Rocky Mountain Poison Control Center in Denver.

"I'm unhappy with it, but we assume someone else wanted to get on the bandwagon," Rumack said.

AFTER TINGLEY WAS INJURED, police found a second acid-laced bottle of Visine A.C. at a store in Grand Junction, the biggest city on Colorado's Western Slope of the Rocky Mountains. The seals on the bottles had been broken and they contained a yellow, smelly liquid.

"Somebody obviously tampered with it," said Rumack. "What we don't know is whether it was done in the store, the distribution chain or exactly where."

Rumack cautioned consumers nationwide to make sure eye product seals are unbroken and to check for a pale yellow color and a sharp smell indicating acid contamination. Uncontaminated Visine is clear and odorless.

Officials in Mesa County, population 81,000, ordered shopkeepers to take eye care products off the shelves as hundreds of calls from concerned consumers flooded the poison control center.

"A madman can make his way around any kind of precautions that you can install," said Dr. Richard Hopkins, a state epidemiolgist.

About 25 of the calls to the poison center in Denver were from people reporting a stinging sensation after using Visine, said Rumack.

"PART OF THE PROBLEM is that the Visine A.C. preparation normally will cause a slight pain when first instilled into the eyes," said Dr. Kenneth Kulig, a toxicologist at the center. "Right on the box there is a warning. The manufacturer called it a tingling sensation."

Lawyer may offer new evidence in suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A lawyer for Vicki Morgan says he may offer new evidence at a hearing on whether to reopen a $10 million "palimony" suit against Alfred Bloomingdale's estate and widow.

Superior Court Judge Christian E. Markey granted a petition for arguments on whether Miss Morgan's lawsuit should be allowed to go to trial, attorney Michael Dave said Monday.

Markey scheduled the arguments for Nov. 1, Dave said.

The petition submitted Friday urged Markey to reconsider the lawsuit's palimony claim on grounds that sex played only an "incidental" part in the couple's relationship.

Miss Morgan, 30, sued Bloomingdale and his wife Betsy shortly before Bloomingdale died last August at age 66. Miss Morgan claims she is entitled to $5 million from Bloomingdale's estate and $5 million from his widow, because Bloomingdale had promised to support her for life. Miss Morgan said that her relationship with the multimillionaire started when she was 17, and that he had been paying her as much as $18,000 a month in support.

Miss Morgan also sued the widow for allegedly interfering with the relationship.

Markey had dismissed the palimony claims Sept. 28.

Transfer of college credit to be examined at hearing

A hearing on setting standards for the transfer of junior college credits in mass communication/journalism to senior colleges will be conducted Wednesday at Midland College by the Transfer Study Committee for Journalism/Mass Communications of the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. in the faculty lounge of the Student Center. Additional hearings are planned Oct. 27 in Houston and Nov. 5 at Richland College in Dallas.

Testimony at these hearings will be incorporated in the committee's recommendations to the Coordinating Board which will eventually determine what credits may be transferred.

Wilma Wirt, chairperson, Department of Communications at The University of Texas at El Paso, chairs the Transfer Study Committee. She said the hearings offer the public and media representatives with an interest in mass communications and journalism education an opportunity to influence the ultimate decision on transfer credits.

The allure of chateau sophistication is recalled in the styling of a French-inspired bunching cabinet, shown here in triplicate, for a display wall of extravagant depth and reflection. Designed to stand alone or in combination, the wall unit from the "Heritage Old World" collection is highlighted with rich scroll motifs, a custom "Anitque Bisque" finish, beveled-glass in doors and sides — a few of the luxurious details that place the piece in a class by itself.

'Spanish Sinatra' ready for U.S.

By RANDALL HACKLEY
AP Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Who is Julio Iglesias and why has he decided to take on the United States?

"America may not be ready for me, but I am ready for America," says the Spanish singing star, said to be the world's top selling solo singer.

Since 1978, CBS International reports sales of more than 52 million of his silk-voiced albums. But for all his record sales, he is virtually unknown in the United States, except in Miami, where he lives in a $3 million bayfront estate and is revered by the area's large Latin exile community.

"While America sleeps, Julio has conquered the world — he is the Spanish world's Frank Sinatra," says Felicia Soledad, a 24-year-old secretary who recently attended three of four sold-out Miami Beach concerts that launched a 7-week world tour.

But the hazel-eyed Iglesias says he is no singing kin to Sinatra.

"I am no Sinatra — he is unique," Iglesias says of Sinatra's vocal talents. "Between here" — he gestures from his throat to mouth — "there is no other. Me? I am just Julio Iglesias — nothing more."

More, however, is what fans want of Iglesias. Young and old women alike have to be constantly repelled by police as they rush the stage to toss roses at Iglesias or beg for a kiss.

Kisses at a recent afternoon performance — "a breakfast show," said Iglesias, who is more accustomed to later party and singing hours — were reserved for his 11-year-old daughter, Chavely.

While she sat smiling on a stool in front of 10,000 fans, he crooned softly his hit song, "De Nina a Mujer" — "From Child to a Woman." Romantic ballads sung in five languages are his trademark, and women throughout the crowd oohed and aahed.

"Give me a wish, and I'd wish I could have a day with Julio," said Carmen Ignacio, waiting after the show for a glimpse of Iglesias.

The 38-year-old waved once toward the well-wishers and disappeared to his dressing room, where he was given a rubdown and visited by a blonde Venezuelan woman.

"He is not serious (about her). Tomorrow it will be someone else," said Iglesias' press aide, Fernan Martinez-Mahecha. Iglesias is divorced, and has three children.

He has been romantically linked in recent years to Monaco's Princess Caroline and Priscilla Presley, former wife of the late rock'n'roll star.

Today, Iglesias and his entourage of 45 musicians fly to Buenos Aires, the second step of a three-continent concert tour where he will sing to 75,000 fans in Rio de Janiero and in concert halls throughout Europe.

In Europe, Iglesias' posters are plastered in the streets of Paris; his face has graced the covers of Italian and German news magazines. In his homeland, Spain, he is revered second to the king, his aides say.

In London, he will perform at the Royal Albert Hall before the queen and her family.

When he returns from England in November, he will begin a musical assault on the English-speaking world. He will record his first English album, including at least two duets with superstar Diana Ross.

"Our voices blend well together, and she will help me ease into the American scene," he said.

It has taken Iglesias four years to feel confident enough to tackle America's musical charts."It also took me four years to learn enough English."

Conquering the rich English-speaking musical market will require perseverance and good fortune, he said.

"Con suerte" — with luck — "I can make it. If not, I will go to the mountains and watch the stars."

Designer of unusual aircraft tries bikes

By ALLAN PARACHINI
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

When Paul MacCready designed the Gossamer Albatross, which became, in 1979, the first human-powered aircraft to cross the English Channel, a lot of people said he was crazy — just a dreamer.

When MacCready and AeroVironment, Inc., the Pasadena, Calif., company he founded and runs, put aloft the first solar-powered airplane — called the Gossamer Penguin — a year later, many of those same people started calling him a visionary.

So here was that same MacCready, wearing a floppy pseudo-safari hat, leaning against a parking lot fence at the Orange County (Calif.) International Raceway. To a small audience paying rapt attention he was critiquing some more new technology and fantasizing about the future of his latest project.

It is not something that will fly. At least not intentionally. MacCready's new vision is the bicycle of tomorrow.

And it is largely shared by many small entrepreneurs, tinkerers and craftsmen — primarily in California and a couple of other Western states. When it finally evolves, it may not be a bicycle at all, literally, since it may have three wheels.

IT WILL LIKELY be a people-powered commuter vehicle — assisted up the worst hills by an electrical boost — whizzing along at surface street traffic speeds, riders and their briefcases or shopping bags fully protected in a space-age plastic cocoon in case they crash.

MacCready will not say a great deal that is specific about his own project — perhaps the most anxiously anticipated in the future bike field. But from what he will say and what could be learned about it, one can assume that the vehicle:

* Has three wheels and is powered primarily by pedaling. People in normal physical shape would be able to propel it at a steady 30 or 35 mph on level ground.
* Has a fairing — an airplane-like aerodynamic body — that surrounds the rider. The fairing may be made of space-age plastics called Nomex or Kevlar, a material that, ounce for ounce, is stronger than steel and is commonly used in the manufacture of bulletproof vests.
* Probably has provisions for auxiliary electrical power to help it climb hills. The system includes a tiny one-pound motor fed by six pounds of batteries.
* Weighs somewhere between 30 and 45 pounds.
* If it ever goes into full-scale mass production, will cost something in the neighorhood of $500.
* Is nowhere near complete, even as a prototype. Because of that, MacCready is afraid a public debut might permit some large bicycle company to steal his idea, since the new vehicle generally does not rely on any new or patentable technology in its drive train.

BUT MacCREADY'S CONCEPT is still in the tinkering, dreaming, almost drawing-board stage. What had attracted MacCready's attention in the drag strip parking lot was a group of vehicles that together are at the cutting edge of a major, new evolutionary form of what everyone familiarly knows as the bike. They are not the vehicles of tomorrow. They belong to today.

They are not unrecognizable — even the ones that have wind-breaking fairings, primarily for speed in racing. Most of them have two wheels but some have three. They have chains and derailleurs and gear shifting levers. Most of the running gear has been available in the neighborhood bike shop for more than a decade.

The fairing is a refined version of the wind-cutting plastic bodies that have appeared on motorcycles within the last few years — only in the case of the bike of tomorrow, the fairing will probably closely resemble an automobile body.

The rider doesn't sit on them straddling a seat. Instead, he — or she — lies back, low to the ground, with the feet pushing on the pedals almost horizontally, instead of up and down. From this new riding position, the bikes take their generic name: recumbent, which means "lying down."

THEY HAVE NAMES like Easy Racer, Aerocoupe, Infinity, Avatar and NYAB, a lovely acronym coined by a Tucson inventor. It means: "Not Your Average Bike." One of the three-wheelers hasn't got a sexy name yet, so it is known simply by the name of the little company that makes it: San Luis Plating, of San Luis Obispo, Calif.

They are, quite definitely, not prototypes, but production models — for sale at prices ranging from about $700 to as much as $4,700. The average cost: about $800. And that's expensive for a commodity whose conventional incarnation has an average price of less than $200.

This is a cottage industry, centered primarily on the West Coast. The owners of the companies that make the recumbents generally know each other.

But they all know that the manufacturing titans of the bicycle world are watching carefully.

While neither Schwinn nor Huffy, the two major nameplates of the American industry, currently plan to produce a recumbent, both firms admit they have quietly gone to bike shops and bought models produced by the industry midgets. Those bikes have been dragged back to research and development laboratories for analysis.

AND IF THE LITTLE companies with the strange-looking new bikes start to make any significant dent in the market, Schwinn, Huffy and, presumably, their major competitors in Europe and Japan will pounce quickly into the void, spokesmen for for the two U.S. firms confirmed.

The production recumbents — six of them, in all — were on display together at the annual competition of the International Human Powered Vehicle Association, a group founded eight years ago to promote advancements in bicycle engineering. The key outlet for the new engineering has been speed competition sponsored each year by the association. And that is why the Orange County drag strip was the place Paul MacCready was visiting the other day.

The members of this new, possibly interim, generation of bikes are noticeably longer and sit far lower to the ground than the conventional vehicle. The recumbent, with either two wheels or three, is so low, in fact, that safety in traffic will rely on having flags and even strobe lights attached to the frame at the eye level of passing motorists.

The new bikes can cruise at higher speeds than their conventional ancestors. The recumbent riding position requires the use of somewhat different muscles than pedaling a regular bike. A long-time bike rider piloting several of the new vehicles for the first time feels the experience primarily as a tightening of the thighs.

AND THE NEW RECUMBENTS are no better at climbing hills, by most accounts, than what's on the market today. Once a new rider gets used to them, they are described almost universally as more comfortable than existing bicycles and easier to accelerate and keep at cruising speed in traffic.

Allan Abbott, organizer of a "practical vehicle" competition at last week's meeting, said he isn't so sure that what is happening now is more than novelty fascination.

"It's going to be difficult for any of these machines to overtake the standard bicycle," Abbott said. "The bike has been developed over 70 years and you are not going to suddenly replace it. It would be like trying to replace the piston engine. I expect that what we'll see on the street 10 years from now will still be conventional bicycles, mostly. If there is a future in recumbent bikes, I think it'll be in the two-wheelers. The tricycles are just too dangerous in traffic."

Nearby, Fred Tatch and Karl Maxon of Eugene, Ore., were attempting in vain to ready their two-person recumbent for the speed competition. It is a strange-looking creation called the ManUped Traveler in which one rider sits facing forward in the front, pedaling a chain that powers the front wheel, and the second sits backwards behind him, pulling and pushing with both arms and legs on levers that work a chain drive to the rear wheels.

"It'll also have electric brakes, working off the auxiliary electric motor," Tatch said as Maxon muttered something from inside the transparent fairing. As it usually appears on the street in Oregon, the ManUped has no enclosure, but Tatch and Maxon had been up all night jury-rigging something out of bamboo slats and clear plastic film to make a run at the speed record.

"It'll be a vehicle similar to this," Tatch said, "but it won't be completely enclosed, so the rider can get some ventilation through the sides. And it will have to be able to lean into the turns."

TATCH SAID THE MANUPED, which can also be driven without the rear rider, has been turning heads on the streets of Eugene for about two years. His thinking has evolved just like MacCready's. He envisions virtually the same vehicle.

Neither the ManUped nor any of its exotic two- and three-wheeled cousins uses mechanical parts very different what's on bikes now. That's because, explained Al Voight, an aeronautical engineer who developed the Vector, one of the first new generation streamlined bikes, today's bicycle running gear works very well.

"THE CONVENTIONAL BIKE transmission, with its gears and chains, is already very efficient," Voight explained. "It's been developed over 70 or 80 years and it delivers up to 95 percent of the maximum efficiency you could have in terms of the energy that goes in from the body and comes out in terms of force on the wheels. The overwhelming area where we need improvement is in aerodynamics."

America's 'father of standing anthem' forgotten by history

By GORDON DILLOW
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The last time you stood up for the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," did the name Rossell G. O'Brien come to mind?

Probably not, and John Murray, a Los Angeles amateur historian, thinks that is a shame. Murray has spent the past two decades trying to put the name of Rossell G. O'Brien in the minds and on the lips of every red-blooded American who ever stood up for those stirring lines, "Oh, say can you see..." etc.

O'Brien was the man who, in 1893, came up with the idea of standing up whenever the national anthem is played or sung. "Not everybody knows that," says Murray, in a masterpiece of understatement.

Murray, a retired department store maintenance man, began his crusade on O'Brien's behalf in 1962. During the course of a research project he stumbled on the fact that in 1893, O'Brien — a Civil War veteran and member of the Tacoma, Wash., chapter of a veterans organization called the Military Order of the Loyal Legion — had introduced a resolution at a legion meeting requiring that all Loyal Legion members in good standing stand during the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner."

The lyrics to the "Star Spangled Banner" were written in 1814 by Francis Scott Key and set to the tune of an old English drinking song called "To Anacreon in Heaven" — Anacreon being an ancient Greek with a gift for drinking. Prior to O'Brien's resolution, whenever the "Star Spangled Banner was played at public occasions, everyone just sat there with their hats on. O'Brien thought that standing and doffing hats would be a nice, patriotic touch.

The standing resolution was adopted, and soon spread to other chapters of the Loyal Order, and from there to the public at large. The Loyal Order died out sometime around World War I, but the custom lived on, eventually reaching the point where standing during the national anthem became almost a reflexive action, and anyone who failed to do so — at a baseball game, say — ran the risk of being scorned by an angry crowd for failing to show the proper respect.

The custom was written into law in 1931, when an act of Congress made the "Star-Spangled Banner" the official national anthem, winning out over other contenders such as "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." Unfortunately, O'Brien, who died in 1914, was never given credit for coming up with the idea.

Murray wants to change that.

"I think he should be honored as a patriotic American," Murray says. "When you stand up during the anthem you should know who started it and why."

NABW group will host seminar in Odessa

ODESSA — The Permian Basin Group of the National Association of Bank Women will be hosting a seminar on "How to Talk to Those You Love and Other Critters" October 16 in Odessa Country Club.

Leading the seminar on body language will be Jayne Lybrand. She is one of the most respected authorities in the field of non-verbal communication. The knowledge of her subject has made her one of the most sought after speakers for colleges and conventions.

During the program, Lybrand will demonstrate how to: Win the confidence of others in a social, as well as business, setting; discover that "what you do" is just as important as "what you say;" re-establish good rapport when you feel it is drifing away; assertively say "no" and mean it; come across as the most appealing, confident you; find out if the non-verbal messages you are sending are in sync with the real you.

The program will be at 9:30 a.m. Anyone desiring more information may contact Venita Gaston at 563-1152 or 682-5292 before Friday.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Nursing, colitis medication mix OK

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have had ulcerative colitis and am now pregnant. I would like to know whether I will be able to nurse my baby if I am taking prednisone at the time. — Mrs. M.H., Stamford, Conn.

Dear Mrs. H.: In general, the answer to your question is "yes." Whether or not you are pregnant, however, the dosage of prednisone should be reduced or even discontinued as early as possible. This is true of any patient.

If you are on either a moderate or high dose of prednisone at the time you want to nurse, your pediatrician should be made aware of this so that baby can be carefully monitored.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read in your book "Stop Smoking Lose Weight" about cholesterol and overweight and how they can hurt your health. What I'd like to know is this: If a person is overweight, is it the extra weight that can cause a heart attack, or is it the fact that fat people have more cholesterol and higher blood pressure that causes the heart attack? — Bert, N.Y.

Dear Bert: It appears that obesity itself is an important risk factor for heart disease, regardless of cholesterol or blood pressure. This conclusion is based on a study of more than 5,000 people who were followed for 26 years as part of the Framingham Heart Study.

Dr. Helen B. Hubert reports that the relationship between obesity and heart disease is independent of the person's age, blood pressure, cholesterol levels or even cigarette smoking. The men who participated in the study appeared to be more affected by weight gain than did the women.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can understand why, if a person's stomach is smaller, he wouldn't be able to eat as much as he otherwise would. As I understand it, that's the reasoning behind the operation in which staples are used to cut down on the size of the stomach. Now I heard on the radio that the same thing can be done by filling the stomach with air. How is this possible? If the stomach is full of air, won't the person simply pass it off? — Steve, Queens, N.Y.

Dear Steve: The procedure to which you refer involves the insertion of a rubber balloon into the stomach and inflated with air. The technique was tried on five women by researchers at the University of Copenhagen in Denmark. The balloons remained in place for from one to three weeks, after which they broke and were passed in the stool.

The balloons apparently decrease the person's appetite and cause feelings of fullness or even pain if large amounts of food are consumed. There were no complications in any of the women in whom this method was used.

Dear Dr. Solomon: About five years ago I worked for a while in a plant where asbestos was used. I have had no bad results from this employment as far as I know. Does that mean I've got nothing to worry about in regard to the asbestos? — Mel, St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Mel: Unfortunately, asbestosis (a lung disease caused by inhaling particles of asbestos) may not develop for as long as 20 years after exposure. Much depends on the degree to which a worker is exposed. If your employment in the plant was brief and your exposure to asbestos minimal, there would of course be much less risk than if you were employed over an extended period of time with significant exposure to asbestos.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I started working as a volunteer in an emergency room where emotionally disturbed patients are seen. At our orientation, one of the doctors said we must consider that the people who come there might be suicidal. Is this true all over, or just in certain cities or certain hospitals? — Judy, Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Judy: People who come to the emergency rooms of psychiatric facilities apparently are prone to suicide. A study of more than 5,000 patients conducted by the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., showed that such patients had a suicide rate of about 113 per 100,000; the rate for the general population is about 13 per 100,000.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I usually don't drink very much, but we celebrated a friend's anniversary over the weekend and I really tied one on. But that's not what I'm writing about. Before the night was over, I had a splitting headache and wanted to take aspirin, but my wife said she heard that it's not a good idea to mix aspirin and booze. Does she know something I don't? — Herbie, Flint, Mich.

Dear Herbie: There have been reports that alcohol increases the tendency of aspirin to cause bleeding. The effect is not the same in all persons, but spontaneous bleeding may occur even in otherwise healthy individuals.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I understand that the insulin that is given to people with diabetes is made from pigs. Why don't they use cows, sheep or even horses? — Greg, Utica, N.Y.

Dear Greg: Insulin is a hormone that is manufactured in the pancreas. Since it was discovered about 60 years ago, it has been made from cowand pig pancreas. However, the chemical structure of the insulin that is made from the pancreas of pigs is much more like human insulin than that made from the pancreas of cows.

For Gladys, Rye, N.Y.: Food additives are not necessarily harmful and it would make no sense to ban all of them outright. Some food additives are beneficial to health, decreasing the risk of bacterial infections and preserving the product's nutritional value.

For Mrs. A.R., Washington, D.C.: The fact that headaches are not uncommon does not mean that they should be ignored. Children who complain of headaches should be followed carefully for at least a few months after the initial complaint to see what develops.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

King Henry's ship returns to port

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — Greeted by tooting car horns, flares and cheering crowds, the fragile, wooden hull of the Mary Rose, King Henry VIII's flagship, was back home today — 437 years after the warship sank while sailing into battle against the French.

In the climax of a three-year, $6.8 million salvage operation overseen by Prince Charles, the recovered starboard section was towed triumphantly back to Portsmouth harbor Monday night, the same place where the Mary Rose had sailed from on its ill-fated voyage.

The recovery followed two days of tension as the hull was precariously lifted from its English Channel grave by a floating crane. On Sunday, one of four steel legs of the 56-ton lifting frame buckled and had to be cut away.

Charles, aboard the giant floating crane Tog Mor during the lift, said the frame's sudden slip at one point made him feel "slightly horrified. It left a nasty feeling in the tummy."

He is president of the Mary Rose Trust, which conducted the salvage operation.

The most sophisticated warship of its day, the Mary Rose will be moored on a buoy until Friday when the barge will move into a drydock and lay the wreckage down for thorough renovation alongside another famous flagship, the HMS Victory, warship of Lord Nelson, Britian's greatest naval hero.

Eventually, the Mary Rose and 17,000 artifacts reclaimed from it will be the centerpiece of a new maritime museum in a Portsmouth suburb. After four centuries in the thick mud of ocean floor, the 108-foot ship has been called a time capsule of life in Tudor times. Divers have recovered such things as cannons and longbows, combs and early medical equipment.

"It's a dream come true," said Margaret Rule, archaeological director of the Mary Rose Trust. She dived 900 times to the wreckage and was given a standing ovation by members of the recovery team when the barge pulled into harbor.

Car horns, flares and scores of cheering local townsfolk greeted the old oak hull as it arrived by barge in darkness, accompanied by a small fleet of support ships.

MC starts new short courses next week

Ten short courses will be offered beginning Monday by the Midland College Department of Community Services. They are House Plants, Attitude Awareness Seminar, The New You (modeling), Defensive Driving, Christmas Decorating I and II, Self Hypnosis II, Expanded Use of Overhead Projectors, Interior Decorating II and Microwave Cooking I.

House Plants, taught by Vannah Kleinbeck, will meet starting Monday from 7 to 9 p.m. The four-week course will teach light selection, feeding, watering, potting and how to multiply house plants. Terrariums and hanging baskets will be included in the study. Fee for the course is $12.

A month-long Attitude Awareness Seminar also begins Monday and will continue on Wedesdays from 6:30 to 10 p.m. The seminar, taught by Dr. Clyde Smith, will include topics such as how to insure effective communications, how attitudes affect results, how to understand others, how to develop good human relations, how to solve problems and how to tap more of your leadership potential. Fee for the seminar is $50.

Carole McCarter will teach The New You on Mondays from 6 to 7:30 p.m. for eight weeks. The modeling course is directed toward junior and senior high school girls who will benefit from learning correct posture, diet, exercise, makeup procedures, hair grooming and personal maintenance. Various modeling stances and techniques are included in the course. Fee for the class is $21.

Defensive Driving will be offered Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 7 to 10 p.m. Fee for the class is $18.

Christmas Decorating I will begin Tuesday and will meet every Tuesday for six weeks from 7 to 9 p.m. Betty Ambrose will instruct students on how to make cotton snowmen, table decorations, wall hangings, tree ornaments and gift ideas. Many decorations can be made using materials on hand; inexpensive ideas and the patterns will be furnished. Students will be able to select decorations and determine what is done in classes. Fee for the course is $18.

Ms. Ambrose also will teach Christmas Decorating II on Thursdays for five weeks from 7 to 9 p.m. The course format will be similar to Decorating I. Students will construct table decorations, centerpieces, gift items, wall hangings and tree ornaments. All items made during this course are different from those completed in Decorating I. Fee for the course is $18.

Betty Brannen will teach Self Hypnosis II on Wednesdays for six weeks from 7 to 10 p.m. The course is designed for self-improvement, greater business success, better health and happiness and is focused on a personalized approach. The class is suggested for mid-management personnel with supervisory responsibilities and is limited to 20 students. Fee for the course is $28.

Expanded Use of Overhead Projectors will be from 7 to 9 p.m. each Thursday through Dec. 9. The course is limited to a maximum of 20 persons and the fee for the course is $21, plus about $10 for supplies. Mrs. Lou Greenwood will be the instructor and will stress effective use of overhead projectors to enhance the effectiveness of speakers, salesmen, classroom and Sunday School teachers, small production theatricals, puppetry and storytelling.

Michael Wortman will continue to teach Interior Decorating II from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursdays for six weeks. Soviet minister forecasts failure for Polish Solidarity strikers

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov said today that Polish counter-revolutionaries are "doomed to failure," and pledged the Kremlin's "full support and assistance" to the neighboring Warsaw Pact state.

Ustinov's pledge was in a message to Polish martial law leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski on the 39th anniversary of the modern Polish army. The message was published in the Soviet army newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda.

Publication of the message coincided with the outbreak of strikes in the northern Polish city of Gdansk. However, the Ustinov message made no mention of the latest developments in Poland, and it appeared that the timing of the message was coincidental.

The governmnent-controlled Soviet media have not reported the latest strikes in Poland, staged in response to the Polish Parliament's vote last Friday to outlaw the independent trade union Solidarity.

A Western diplomat speculated that Ustinov's promise of "full support and assistance" to Poland probably referred to political support and did not constitute an implied threat of Soviet intervention of the type that the Kremlin issued several times prior to the martial law crackdown in Poland Dec. 13.

Texas Army salutes King Olav

AP Laserphoto

Norway's King Olav walks the honor guard line of the Texas Army Monday as he arrived to tour the San Jacinto battlegrounds southeast of Houston. The Texas Army is a ceremonial group that keeps alive traditions from Texas' fight for independence in the 1830s.

HOUSTON (AP) — Other visiting dignitaries might have been nonplussed by the authentically dressed Texas Army lining the shoreline, complete with coonskin caps and muskets — but not Norway's King Olav V.

About 80 members of the Texas Army, a ceremonial group that promotes the dress and weaponry used during Texas' fight for independence in the 1830s, fired a salute into the air as the visiting monarch arrived by boat Monday at the San Jacinto Monument. He had just toured the Houston Ship Channel.

"He said he had studied Texas history and was familiar with the time period," said Texas Army Col. Mike Powasnick, dressed in full frontier gear. "He said he was very impressed."

After the greeting from the Texas Army, General Carroll Lewis presented the king with an authentic replica of a frontier rifle.

"We wanted to present a historian with something that would be appropriate for that period," Powasnick said.

Olav visited the San Jacinto battleground, site of a major Texas victory in becoming an independent nation in 1836, as part of his tour of the area.

Powasnick said the rifle bore an engraving that showed the Alamo, site of a defeat by the Texans, the year 1836, and the surrender at San Jacinto by Mexican General Santa Anna.

"It's just symbolic of Texas of that period," he said.

The king also placed a cornerstone at the site of the Norwegian Seaman's Church and attended a $250-a-plate benefit Monday night to assist in construction of the facility.

The king's visit was to continue today with a seismic shoot demonstration and a luncheon hosted by Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire.

Olav's arrival at the battleground was accompanied by rains — and only a few curious tourists.

"We're just vacationing, seeing Texas. We didn't plan on seeing a king," said a tourist from New York. "We couldn't figure out who those people were in costumes."

Alien may have drowned

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — The fifth victim from an aborted attempt to smuggle aliens into the United States may have drowned as he tried to drink from a drainage ditch, authorities said.

An autopsy on the decomposed remains of a Salvadoran found Saturday revealed he died of a combination of dehydration, exposure and heat stroke, Hildago County medical examiner Dr. Ruben Santos said Monday.

But Santos said the body was found underwater and "there's a good possibility that he was trying to drink water and he couldn't get up anymore."

The victim was tentatively identified as Oscar Armando Espinal, 42, said Erasmo Bravo, the sheriff department's chief investigator. The body was found 1½ miles north of an orange grove near Edinburg where smugglers abandoned 10 Salvadorans.

Four other Salvadorans — three men and one woman — were found dead the night of Oct. 4 in a tractor-trailer rig that smugglers had abandoned near Edinburg. Autopsies showed they died of suffocation compounded by heat stroke when the truck's air conditioner failed.

Espinal and nine other Salvadorans were taken by smugglers from the abandoned truck and left in the grove, said U.S. Border Patrol investigator Ray Diaz. Officers found seven Salvadorans there last Wednesday and suspected the three others, including Espinal, had fled.

The search was continuing for the two missing aliens, Diaz said.

He said the Salvadorans reported the latest victim "lost his mind" and ran away shortly after being left in the grove.

Two men have been charged in federal court with transportation of illegal aliens and a third is being sought.

Post office demolition opposed

DALLAS (AP) — A proposal to demolish the post office in downtown Dallas and construct a high-rise office tower on the site has run into stiff opposition from the Texas State Historical Preservation Office.

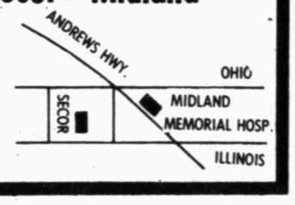

The request, issued by the U.S. Postal Office, marks the first time that any federal agency has sought to tear down a historic government building in Texas, according to Laverne Herrington, deputy director for the historical preservation office.

The Postal Service wants to lease the site to a private developer who would demolish the structure and construct an office building. Under the plan, expanded offices for the postal service would be provided on the lower floors of the building as part of the lease agreement.

Woman struggles with lion

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A woman accidentally shot her 31-year-old daughter who was struggling with a pet African lioness that had escaped from its cage, authorities said.

Connie Shams, the cat's owner, was treated Monday for bites on her legs and a minor gunshot wound on the hand, said police spokesman Mac Craft. The lioness was killed by police officers.

The lioness, which weighed about 150 pounds, escaped Monday afternoon from its backyard pen, Craft said.

"Connie looked out her window and saw that the pet lion was out of her cage. She went out and tried to put her back in, but apparently the lion didn't like the idea and mauled her," Craft said.

Ms. Shams' mother, Christine Lamb, heard her daughter screaming for help, grabbed a .357 Magnum and fired several times, hitting the lion and striking Ms. Shams on the hand.

"Thank God I got the gun out," she said. "There wasn't enough time to call the police."

The wounded animal ran into a field and police were summoned, Craft said. Officers surrounded the 2-year-old lion and killed it, he said.

The animal's head was removed and sent to Austin, where it will be examined today by experts to determine whether it was rabid.

Executive protection seminar set

In conjunction with the Crime Prevention Unit of the Midland Police Department, the Midland Crime Prevention Commission will host a four-hour Executive Protection Seminar at Midland Center Oct. 20.

"The Executive Protection Seminar is being offered to men and women who, because of their access to company funds, might be targets for kidnapping and extortion attempts," said a recent announcement from the MCPC.

A registration fee of $25 per person, $45 for a family, is being charged. Registration is limited to the first 175 applicants. The deadline for registration is Friday. The seminar is scheduled to start at 1 p.m. Oct. 20.

Speaker will be Larry Rollins, a crime prevention officer with the Garland Police Department and a pioneer in executive protection seminars in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, according to the MCPC. He will be assisted by local crime prevention officers.

More information can be obtained by calling the Crime Prevention Unit of the Midland Police Department, 683-4281.

Utilities request cost hearing

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Public Utility Commission has set a public hearing for 10 a.m. Nov. 16 on applications from three power companies for approval of estimated costs for affiliate fuel and related services.

Approval of the applications would have no effect on consumers, spokesman Rick Hainline said, noting the requests would "streamline paperwork" between the affiliated companies.

The companies involved are Texas Electric Service Company, Texas Power and Light Company and Dallas Power and Light Company.

Murder suspect kills himself

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — A 24-year-old man, facing an arrest warrant for attempted murder, fatally shot himself in the head after authorities attempted to flush him out of his house with tear gas, police said.

National Newspaper Week October 10th- 16th

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

Advertising Representatives.. your ADVantage

Over a century of advertising experience.

Where advertising serves as the stage for the business world, our advertising representatives serve as their producer...and a complex production it is. Each phase of the department is specialized to meet an individual audience. Four divisions share in the total performance: Local retail staff, Classified personnel, National advertising and the Dispatch department.

Reviewing current market conditions and determing the best uses for ones advertising dollars, is just the beginning of the retail salespersons role. Once a budget is outlined, the sales representative puts on a creative face and designs an advertisement which will achieve optimum results. With the assistance of Jan Drake, the Reporter-Telegram staff artist, and resources of several art services, the possibilities for creativity are endless.

It's true...the phones never stop ringing in the Classified advertising department...because classified ads get results. There is always a home or car to sell, a pet that needs a family, or a garage that needs to be cleaned out. And there's always a friendly classified representative to assist you. When you need a special service call a CLASS act.

Clip, Clip, Clip...the familiar coupons of some of the best known products on the market are the results on the National advertising department. National Advertising under the direction of Mary Burrueso is assisted by the Texas Daily Press League, National Advertising Bureau and professional advertising agencies throughout the country. National advertising touches just about every part of your life.

Dispatch is truly the right-arm of the advertising department. They serve as a mediator between the advertising department and production, as well as advertising and their clients. Whether it be proofing advertisements, delivering daily tearsheets or keeping records, the proof is in the dispatch department.

With the assistance of 27 talented advertising employees, one can create and appeal to every segment of the Permain Basin. Advertising representatives are your advantage.

Michelle Northington and Furd Love of the RETAIL ADVERTISING staff plan a creative layout for a local shopping center.

Advertising's "right-arm" is their DISPATCH department. Priscilla Perez (back) and Judy Folia dispatch tearsheets of the newspaper to individual advertisers.

The phone never stop ringing in the CLASSIFIED department...where more than 20,000 advertisements are published each week. Jan Andrews (left) and Karen Wald (right) review the day's publication.

...And at The Reporter-Telegram that means people working in a dozen different departments with one common goal: To produce and deliver to you the best daily newspaper possible.

To help us do a better job we're taking a close look at ourselves, how we do things and how we could do them better. We're examining all the possiblities and looking at all the angles that could result in a better Midland Reporter-Telegram for you.

And our people are deeply involved in helping us make those changes. This week we'll be letting you know who some of them are and the role they play in producing your daily paper.

While a newspaper's task is to keep citizens informed on what's happening throughout the world, and The Reporter-Telegram utilizes five national news services to do that, we believe you also want thorough, timely, comprehensive local coverage...news and features about people, places and events here at home.

To obtain and produce that news we have enlarged our staff to its present size... 32 editors, reporters and photographers. We're proud of them because we know "It's PEOPLE that make newspapers go!"

Dow breaks 1,000, moves toward high

By MARTIN BARON
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Powered by optimism about falling interest rates and a contagious bull-market psychology, the Dow Jones Industrial Average raced ahead 25.94 points on Monday to break the magical 1,000 mark and move within striking distance of its all-time high.

In an advance that was particularly remarkable because it came while many investors were away for the Columbus Day holiday, the Dow Jones index of 30 major industrial corporations closed at 1,012.79. The New York Stock Exchange experienced its second busiest day in history, with 139.87 million shares changing hands.

The Dow Jones index now stands at its highest level since April 28, 1981, when it reached 1,016.93.

A dramatic rally of nearly 106 points in the last four trading days has vaulted the Dow to within range of its record high of 1,051.7 set on Jan. 11, 1973.

With the market's rise, Wall Street is now awash in enthusiasm. Many analysts are now confidently predicting that the Dow and broader measures of the stock market could easily shatter their previous records.

Despite a painful history in which stock market rallies have crumbled every time the Dow has topped the 1,000 mark, analysts believe the stock market could go substantially higher as the changing fundamentals of lower interest rates and slowing inflation stir new vigor into an anemic U.S. economy.

"I think this time we're in for an extended market advance in all the market averages," said Fred Fraenkel, chief strategist for E.F. Hutton Group Inc., the New York brokerage. "I think they could go well beyond their record levels."

While some analysts said some profit-taking and a momentary pause in the stock rally is easily possible, they argued that the long-term trend is up. "I don't expect a massive retrenchment," said Richard Hoffman, an analyst at Merrill Lynch, Pierce Fenner & Smith, the nation's largest brokerage, "This is a major bull market."

The Monday advance came after a weekend speech in which Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker pronounced inflation under control and emphasized the need to promote an economic recovery. The speech before the nation's business leaders seemed to confirm reports last week that the Fed was pursuing a policy that would promote lower interest rates.

On Friday, the Fed lowered the interest rate it charges on loans to banks to 9.5 percent from 10 percent. At the same time, its announcement that the nation's money supply had dropped $2.7 billion last week reassured investors with lingering concerns that inflation will kick up again if the money supply grows too much.

Many analysts now believe that the stage has been set for an improved economic order of permanently lower inflation and interest rates.

"We're coming out of the woods," said William Gillard, director of investment policy for Kidder, Peabody & Co., a New York brokerage. "We see a decline in interest rates bridging us right into much better business activity in the second half of next year."

Foreign investors, fearful of circumstances in their own country and comforted by the Reagan administration's economic philosophy, are pouring money into the U.S. stock market. Wall Street "is the place where all the international bucks are stopping," Gillard said. "This is the only country in the world heading toward a free-market economy."

While the Dow Jones Industrial Average already has risen 240 points from its low in early August, many analysts believe that the presence of a lot of cash in the coffers of large innstitutional investors could propel the market still higher. "The same things that have fueled the market so far — falling interest rates and so much cash on the sidelines — still seem to be in place," said David Testa, chairman of the investment policy committee at T. Rowe Price Associates, a Baltimore-based mutual fund company.

Even so, the stock market is haunted by a history in which it has never been able to progress appreciably from the Dow's 1,000 mark.

After the Dow first topped 1,000 in the middle of a trading day during January 1966, it fell to 744 by October of that year. The Dow first closed a trading day above 1,000 on Nov. 4, 1972, when it hit 1,003.16. After it advanced to its all-time high of 1,051.7 on Jan. 11, 1973, it collapsed to 577.6 by Dec. 6, 1974.

Although the Dow hovered in the 1,000 range for most of 1976, the index fell to 800.85 by Nov. 2, 1977. After reaching a recent peak of 1,024.05 in April 27 last year during the so-called "Reagan rally," the Dow steadily declined to its recent bottom of 772.21 on Aug. 11 this year.

Kenneth Schnitzer, chairman, Century Development, left, and architect Helmut Jahn, Chicago, discussing the proposed high-rise office/commercial tower to be built in the heart of downtown Houston. The tower will offer 82 floors and two million rentable square feet of space and is expected to be the tallest building outside Chicago and New York.

Houston developer plans tallest building in West

HOUSTON (AP) — The city's skyline will reach higher than ever before if developers build a proposed office tower, which at 1,400 feet would be the tallest building outside of Chicago and New York.

The world's tallest building is the 1,454-foot-tall Sears Tower in Chicago. Houston's tallest is the 1,049-foot-tall Texas Commerce Tower, measuring six inches below the maximum specified by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Kenneth Schnitzer, chairman and founder of Century Development Corp., conceded the FAA has not yet approved the application for approval for a 1,400-foot-tall building. But he said it would be unfair for the FAA to reject the building, since New York and Chicago have taller ones.

Century Development and Southwest Bancshares Inc. on Monday unveiled a model of a design from three submitted in an architectural competition.

The winning design — by Murphy-Jahn of Chicago — envisions a tapered shaft of steel, granite and reflective glass, encompassing 82 floors and two million square feet of office and retail space covering a full block in the center of downtown Houston.

Four peaks rise to the top of the building and come together to make a point, resulting in a cap somewhat resembling the head of a Phillips screwdriver. Atop that is a 150-foot-tall spire included in the 1,400-foot height.

Cost is estimated at $350 million to $400 million. Schnitzer said work toward financing is just beginning and no construction start date has been determined, though occupancy has been projected to begin in late 1986.

Helmut Jahn, president of Murphy-Jahn, said the building "can become a true centerpiece for Houston" and offer the city more than just another skyscraper.

"The building is designed to provide a major civic space, to welcome people and foster human activity by the configuration of its entrances and their relationship to the street, tunnels and other facilities for pedestrians," he said.

Public areas include a 79th floor completely reserved for use as an observation deck, and a 10-story, street-level pedestrian arcade that could be used for art shows and other events, the developers said.

Instead of directly facing the streets, the building would sit at a 45-degree angle to the streets, with each of four peaked entrances facing a a street corner.

"This is not a building that can turn its back on any part of the city," said Richard Everett, president of Century Development. "The building will stand as a landmark of Houston's progress and a symbol of the city's economic prosperity."

The building site is bounded by Walker, Milam, McKinney and Louisiana strects. A fourth of that block now is occupied by the Southwest Tower and the rest by parking lots.

The Southwest Tower, a 20-floor office building built in 1963, will be torn down next year to make room for its successor, which tentatively has the name of Southwest Tower, Schnitzer said.

Southwest Bancshares Chairman John Cater characterized the location as a "perishable opportunity" to make a significant contribution to the city.

"We are fully committed to making that block a landmark site for the city of Houston for years to come," said Cater, whose company has 37 member and pending member banks.

Century Development has developed more than 13 million square feet of space in 30 major buildings in the Houston area in the 29 years of its existance. It now is building the 71-story Allied Bank Plaza in downtown Houston.

Its projects also include Greenway Plaza in southwest Houston and Allen Center in downtown Houston. Greenway Plaza covers 127 acres and includes 5.5 million square feet of office space, a Stouffer's hotel, a retail mall, two condominium towers and the Summit sports arena. Allen Center, on 21 acres, includes the 50-story Capital Bank Plaza, the Hotel Meridien, office towers of 36 and 34 stories and a retail mall.

Southland tests Montana oil discovery

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Southland Royalty Company today announced test results of an oil discovery on its Oilstone Prospect in Dawson County, Montana. On a 24-hour test, the Y. B. Federal No. 1-24 flowed 362 barrels of oil per day, three barrels of water per day and 129 MCF of gas per day on a 28/64-inch choke through perforations in the interval from 10,086 to 10,118 feet. Flowing tubing pressure was 375 pounds per square inch and the gas/oil ratio was 356 cubic feet per barrel.

Southland owns a 50 percent working interest in the discovery well and 1,204 acres in the prospect area. Other working interest owners are LAE Energy, Inc., 32 percent and Texaco, Inc. 18 percent. Development drilling will depend on evaluation of the production performance of the discovery well and additional geological information.

Evidence suggests USSR using slaves on pipeline

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst European Correspondent

PARIS — Hard evidence is piling up that the Russians are indeed using political prisoners, working under grueling sub-arctic conditions, to build the controversial Siberian-European natural gas pipeline.

Strong indications are that as many as 90,000 prisoners are involved. At least two-thirds of these virtual slave laborers may be women.

Such allegations have been rife for months about the 4,000-mile pipeline which Western European governments are financing and furnishing with high technology over the intense opposition of the Reagan administration. But recently precise, first-hand testimony has come from a number of former political prisoners who claim they did early work on it.

The International Human Rights Society in Frankfurt has been in the forefront collecting their reports and relaying them to the West German government. Former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, a leading exponent of the pipeline until his government fell last week, reacted by accepting Soviet assurances that all such charges were "cold war propaganda." He certainly did not let the allegations influence his rejection of President Reagan's demand that cooperation on the project be ended.

The new Christian Democratic chancellor, Helmut Kohl, is expected to come under mounting pressure from both inside and outside his party to launch a government investigation. Observers believe that merely the announcement of such an inquiry would lead the Soviets to drop the project or at least threaten to do so.

The IHRS believes that now the pipeline has made headlines in the West the Soviet authorities will ensure that former prisoners who have had anything to do with it will no longer be allowed to emigrate to tell their stories. But Dr. Franz Escher said no such precautions were taken in the case of eight ex-slave laborers who have given the IHRS detailed briefings on conditions on sections of the pipeline where they worked as recently as 1980.

Their testimony indicates that as many as 100 camps, containing up to a thousand inmates each, have been set up for the specific purpose of providing workers for the pipeline and adjacent projects.

About 70 of these "special" camps are for women. They perform some of the heaviest labor as well as make heavy clothing for the work force.

While the use of political prisoners on large-scale public works schemes in Siberia and elsewhere is an old Soviet tradition, in this instance prisoners are being employed because the arduous working conditions have made it hard to recruit ordinary workers even for high wages. Assigning women to backbreaking and distasteful work is also an old Soviet tradition.

S&Ls lose record amount

WASHINGTON (AP) — Savings and loan associations lost $3.3 billion in the first half of this year, a six-month record amounting to more than double the losses in the same period of 1981.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported Monday that 82 percent of the government-insured savings and loans lost money in the first half of 1982. The board also said the drop was ahead of the $3.1 billion reported in the last six months of 1981. Losses for all of 1981 were $4.6 billion.

"The slight increase in losses reflected a reduction in income tax credits which could be taken by associations," the bank board said.

The new report follows recent passage of legislation providing a hefty aid package for weak savings and loans and gives them new powers to operate more like commercial banks.

Industry officials have said the package was needed to reinforce the faltering industry, which has been battered by the lengthy spell of high interest rates.

Savings and loans have large portfolios of old home loans agreed on years ago when interest rates were much lower. As a result, they've been forced to pay more for new money than they've been taking in from the old home loans.

In its report, the bank board said 2,942 out of 3,573 federally insured S&Ls — or 82 percent — lost money in the first half of this year. Seventy percent lost money in the first half of 1981 and 85 percent in the last half.

Beaufort Sea lease sale could be Watt's 'crown jewel'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil industry officials say the sale of leases in Alaska's Beaufort Sea may be the "crown jewel" of Interior Secretary James Watt's ambitious program to offer virtually the entire U.S. coastline for exploration.

Experts say the lease sale Wednesday of 1.8 million acres in the Beaufort Sea may produce the biggest U.S. oil and gas discoveries in 14 years.

Many oil company officials believe the sale, to be held in Anchorage, Alaska, will be the most lucrative of the 41 to be held by Watt over the next five years.

Some say revenues from the Beaufort Sea lease sale could go as high as $3 billion.

While Watt has said anything over $1 billion would be a tremendous success, he is counting on high industry interest to silence critics who have complained that his plan to offer vast amounts of acreage during a worldwide oil glut is the equivalent of a bargain-basement fire sale.

"What we need is a big one — something that will show that the oil industry wants this land," Watt has said.

The sale covers the Diapir Field, named for the type of geological formation. It lies at the top of Alaska just offshore from the Prudhoe Bay field, the 1968 discovery that supplies the country with 18 percent of its domestic oil production.

Diapir's proximity to the Prudhoe field is the reason the oil industry is excited.

The Interior Department puts the chance of finding commercial quantities of oil and gas at 99.3 percent. It estimates that Diapir holds 2.4 billion barrels of oil and 1.8 trillion cubic feet of gas.

"This is the crown jewel of the leasing program. Right now it is the most promising area we want to get into," said Charles D. Matthews, president of the National Ocean Industries Association, which represents 485 companies involved in offshore exploration and drilling.

Matthews said the bids could reach "between $2 billion and $3 billion." The most successful sale in the 28-year history of the federal program was a 1980 Gulf of Mexico sale which brought the government $2.7 billion.

Interior Department officials, however, say bids for Diapir could be held down by the harsh Arctic conditions companies will have to drill in.

To compensate, the government is demanding lower royalty percentages on tracts in the deepest water and giving all successful bidders 10 years instead of the normal five years to develop the leases.

The sale has been challenged in court by native Alaskans living on the North Slope who contend that drilling will seriously endanger the whales, seals and other marine life that they depend on for their livelihood.

Environmentalists are also unhappy over the method used to determine whether the government is receiving the proper prices for the leases.

Interior has abandoned the practice of setting "fair market value" for each tract before the lease. Now, government officials will only evaluate 35 percent of the tracts at random after the sale to make sure the oil industry is not getting tracts too cheaply.

Six states — California, Alaska, Oregon, Washington, Florida and Massachusetts — along with several environmental groups have filed suits over Watt's leasing program, but those suits will not halt the Diapir lease.

Interior officials believe the sale will send a message to those with legitimate concerns over the pace of Watt's program, but will do little to sway environmentalists.

"The paid, professional critics of the Reagan administration and of the secretary would not stop throwing stones at us if this sale brought in $20 billion," said Doug Baldwin, Watt's chief spokesman. "The honest critics who wondered if it was wise to have that much acreage out will be impressed and they will read the results accurately."

Gold higher, dollar lower

LONDON (AP) — Gold was slightly higher early today, and the dollar was slightly lower in quiet European trading.

Dealers described the price moves as technical and attributed the slowness of trade to Monday's holidays in the United States and Japan.

In Tokyo, where markets close before Europe's open, the dollar fell to a closing 264.25 yen from 269.10 late Friday. Later today in London, the dollar was quoted at 263.58 yen.

Other dollar rates in Europe at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

— 2.4985 West German marks, down from 2.5005

— 2.1243 Swiss francs, down from 2.1348

— 1,420.80 Italian lire, down from 1,423.25

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.7192, compared with $1.7170 late Monday.

London's five bullion dealers fixed an indicative gold price of $442.25 a Troy ounce, compared with $437.50 late Monday.

Suds Series final chapter in the Perils of Pauline

Matchup reminder of Gas House Gang and Bronx Bombers

Bob Forsch

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Baseball's version of the Perils of Pauline goes into its final chapter tonight in St. Louis' Busch Memorial Stadium.

Will the Milwaukee Brewers allow themselves again to be pushed over the edge of the precipice only to grab a limb and hang perilously until rescued by some anonymous passerby?

Or will the law of averages prevail and the limb break, erasing the Brewers from the script and allowing the systematic St. Louis Cardinals to ride off into the sunset, leading characters of a new special?

"We keep getting into life-or-death situations and clawing our way out of them," says Brewer manager Harvey Kuenn. "These are the gutsiest guys I've ever seen."

Certainly the 1982 World Series is one of the most unpredictable of sports events as it takes off on its best-of-seven game journey with all the earmarks of one of those 15-minute movie serials we oldsters used to see as kids.

It shapes up as a battle between two clubs of contrasting styles and philosophies — the Brewers, loose, free-swinging and devil-may-care; the Cardinals, cooly disciplined, methodically cutting down obstacles with textbook finesse.

One of them swings a sledgehammer, the other uses a scalpel.

These are not the two teams that should be in the World Series anyhow -not, that is, if you listened last week to the highly touted statistical wizard Bill James, originator of what publishers call a "mind-boggling analysis of major league baseball."

What James did was throw all the numerical indicators into one big tub, scramble them gingerly and come up with the California Angels and Atlanta Braves as pennant winners, with the Angels a sure-shot to capture the World Series.

The formula, he claimed, was strictly science — no fudge, no room for intangibles. That's where he blew it.

What was there in James' system to account for rightfielder Charlie Moore's rifle throw that nailed Reggie Jackson at third, snuffing out an incipient Angel rally? Or the great leaping catch by Marshall Edwards, filling in for Gorman Thomas? Or Peter Ladd, the unheralded relief pitching ace?

These heroics, linked with a game-winning hit by Cecil Cooper, a .125 hitter in 16 previous at bats, provided the non-statistical, unpredictable quantities that gave the Brewers a 4-3 last gasp victory over the Angels in the showdown American League playoff game.

This is the Milwaukee team that had a three-game lead over Baltimore with four to play but had to win the final game to survive, then lost the first two games to the Angels in the playoff — presenting another cliff-clinging situation.

Given up for dead, the Brewers stormed back to win the next three — an unprecedented feat — without the services of ace reliever Rollie Fingers and with the muscle of their power machine — Thomas, Cooper, Ben Oglivie and Ted Simmons — batting an anemic combined .118.

"I'm not one to panic, I don't push them much," says kindly Kuenn, a June managerial replacement who had undergone three serious operations and lost part of one leg to amputation.

He is no stranger to adversity.

"I just give them the ball and let them play," he says.

Whitey Herzog, his counterpart on the Cardinals, is the antithesis. He is intense, strict, methodical, respected by players and peers alike. He lays heavy stress on the speed, defense and good pitching.

Not blessed with wholesale power, he squeezes out runs as he might toothpaste from a tube. He operates on the theory that you make sure you don't lose a game before you try to win it.

He is a hard-knuckled guy who played for eight years and then tackled baseball's risky managerial musical chairs. He's been fired, rehired, fired again with clubs like Texas, California and Kansas City, having won three division crowns and finished twice as skipper of the Royals.

NFL negotiators agree on federal mediation in strike talks

Rozelle says season may resume after October deadline

AP Laserpho o

Ed Garvey, Executive Director of the Players Association, gestures while explaining to the press the grounds on which a federal mediator was agreed to by himself, Gene Upshaw (middle) and the owners' representative Jack Dolan, right.

By The Associated Press

With both sides in the National Football League strike apparently in a mood to bargain and a mediator about to be named, the NFL seems ready to modify its threat to cancel the season if no agreement is reached by the end of October.

As the two chief negotiators were meeting Monday at the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to decide on a mediator, Commissioner Pete Rozelle was saying the league would be flexible in determining when the strike had cancelled too many games to allow the season to continue.

In the past, Rozelle had said that thirteen was the minimum number of games that could be played to make the season viable. That would mean a settlement would have to be reached in time for the games of Oct. 31 to be played.

But on Monday, he told Associated Press that it would be possible to play the season with 12 games or even less. "None of this is etched in stone, to borrow a phrase," he said, referring to a statement commonly used by union president Gene Upshaw about union contract demands.

Meanwhile, chief management negotiator Jack Donlan and his union counterpart, Ed Garvey, were meeting with Kay McMurray, chief of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. They emerged to say they hoped for a quick announcement naming a mediator to help end the walkout, which enters its fourth week today.

There have been no formal negotiations since Oct. 2, when talks broke off after there was no agreement even on non-monetary issues, let alone the union's demand for a wage scale that is the major issue in the strike.

Since then, much of the verbal sparring has been over a mediator — management has sought federal mediation; the union, while finally agreeing to accept a mediator, has insisted that he not be with the Mediation and Conciliation Service. Last week, they submitted a list of nine men they would accept, but management summarily rejected it.

On Sunday, in an informal meeting in Rye, N.Y., the two sides finally agreed to ask McMurray to choose a mediator. And both said it was time to get on with negotiations.

The length of the season came up last week, when Rozelle was quoted as saying that 13 games was the minimum number that could be played. Each team has each missed three and next weekend's games are almost sure to be scrapped. The league has said it could make up two, which would mean one more weekend — Oct. 24-25 — could be missed before 13 is reached.

Last Saturday, Chuck Sullivan, chairman of the Management Council's executive committee, said "12 or 13 games, somewhere around that," was the minimum. Rozelle echoed that Monday.

"Everyone asks me. Everyone asks Chuck Sullivan. Everyone asks the owners," he said. "Why don't they ask Garvey how long a credible season should be."

Big Spring Steers causing problems in District 4-5A

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Around District 4-5A, they are beginning to ask, "What are we going to do about Big Spring?", unless you happen to be Midland Lee, whose undivided attention this week is focused on a vital, crucial, must game with Odessa Permian.

The once docile Steers have won two district games in a row and that's something that hasn't happened since Clovis Hale guided the 1970 Steers to a down-the-stretch finish that saw Big Spring beat Lee, 7-3, lose to Cooper, 3-17, and beat Odessa, 27-24, and San Angelo, 20-9.

In fact, the last time Big Spring won two-in-a-row was in 1980 when they beat Snyder and Sweetwater in non-district play.

THE THING that impresses is that the Steers beat Midland, 9-6, and then knocked off Odessa High, 10-7, handing the Bronchos their first league defeat. Midland High then turned around and beat Abilene Cooper, one of the league's most respected powers.

For years, Big Spring, the smallest school in tough 4-5A, has been the league dormat. The last coach to compile a more-wins-than-losses career record at Big Spring was Spike Dykes, back in 1967-69. In fact, Quinn Eudy says Spike "encouraged me to take the job when it came open this year."

When Ralph Harris moved on to Marshall, Eudy was there. "In two years as an assistant, I'd seen the kids who are seniors now bust their butts in off-season workouts. I felt like we could have something, if we could just get them to believe in themselves," says Eudy.

"You know, great things come from the human mind. And these seniors have given us the leadership we needed. There are no big heroes. It's mostly mental. The attitude of the kids is the big difference over last year, plus we have a young, enthusiastic staff that has a positive attitude."

WITH ABILENE Cooper coming up in Abilene this week, it looks like the amazing turnabout could continue. The Cougars are 0-3, but Midland AD Gil Bartosh still feels Cooper has some of the best material in the district. That's what worries Eudy. "I watched them in baseball last spring. They lack the pure, raw speed, but they have those 6-2, 6-3, 190-to-210 pounders that everybody likes to have."

"It may sound stupid, but we believe we've got a chance. This is the game we're concentrating on. We lack the depth of the other schools, so we play each game like it's our Super Bowl."

Eudy gives a large share of the credit for the turn-around in attitude to the Big Spring baseball team. Last spring, the Steers discovered it was a lot more fun abusing league rivals than being abused and it carried over.

"The fans are really getting excited," says Eudy, "the response has been wonderful. They were even standing up and yelling DEFENSE last week."

OF COURSE, despite its size, Big Spring has always had some great athletes. In fact, until a few years ago, it could boast of producing more NFL players than the rest of the district combined.

And the Steers have had their moments in other sports. Jan Loudermilk led the Steers to basketball titles in the late 1950s and then helped make SMU a dominant force in the SWC. Willie Williams and Charley West were outstanding three-sport athletes whose influence was felt more in baseball and basketball and John Thomas is currently with the Kansas City Chiefs. And Toothpick Newman was one of the better hurlers produced in the district, helping make the Steers a baseball contender a decade or so ago. Charley Johnson and Dare Birdwell were long time NFL stars at St. Louis and Oakland. West, who had to decide between a pro baseball or pro football career, cavorted for years in the Vikings secondary.

However, the Steers haven't enjoyed a championship year in football since Frosty Robison led Big Spring to the state AAA, now 4A, state finals in 1953.

Shortly after, Big Spring was elevated to 4A, now 5A, and it has been a long drought. The Steers had some of the biggest linemen in the state in the late 1950s. When they came out of a game, they didn't go for the water dipper. They waited for someone to flip them peanuts. But they never won.

"YOU CAN get kids that are big and strong," says Eudy, "but getting them to believe in themselves is something else. And that's what we are striving to do here."

Eudy went to S.F. Austin, where he first met Dykes, and coached at Needville for 14 years. He was head coach the last two years and his teams finished second both seasons. He was also track coach and won the state title the last two years.

No one can begrudge the Steers their success. It's always more intersting to play someone competitive and, for the ADs around the district, it helps sell tickets and, in turn, finance the overall athletic program.

WITH FOUR weeks left in league play, Odessa's loss to Big Spring has turned the race for second into a free-for-all. Odessa, Big Spring and Midland Lee are all 2-1. San Angelo, ranked in the state's top 10 a couple of weeks ago, is wondering what happened after two straight losses.

Midland, out of it after two straight losses in 4-5A, suddenly has hope as the Bulldogs head for Odessa Friday after beating Cooper.

Permian, meanwhile, is 3-0 and 98-0 in district as it prepares for Friday's game against Lee. Last year, the Panthers won in the fading seconds, 9-7, on field goal. —TED BATTLES

Tide rolls past Pittsburgh, Washington remains No. 1

By the Associated Press

The state of Pennsylvania has had enough of Alabama for one weekend.

The Crimson Tide not only beat Penn State Saturday, but also bumped Pitt out of second place in the Associated Press college football poll.

Penn State plunged from No.3 to No.8 as the result of its 42-21 defeat by Bear Bryant's team Saturday. In the process, Alabama moved from No.4 to No.2, knocking idle Pitt down to third.

The Crimson Tide received 13 first-place votes Monday from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters and collected a total of 1,016 points as the result of its impressive victory. Pitt received nine first-place votes and a total of 996 points.

The Crimson Tide's total left them behind the No.1 Washington Huskies, who received 31 of the 54 first-place ballots and 1,046 of a possible 1,080 points as the result of their 50-7 triumph over California. It's the fifth week in a row Washington has been on top of the rankings.

Florida State showed up in this year's polls for the first time, moving into the No.19 spot after trouncing Southern Illinois 59-8. Meanwhile, Clemson, the defending national champion, climbed back into the Top Twenty at No.20 after routing Virginia 48-0 for its third straight victory. The Tigers had started the season with a loss to Georgia and a tie with Boston College.

Georgia, which received the other first-place ballot, moved up one place to No.4 following a 33-10 triumph over Mississippi, and was followed in the rankings by No. 5 Southern Methodist, No.6 Nebraska, No.7 Arkansas, No. 8 Penn State, No.9 Notre Dame and No.10 Arizona State.

North Carolina led the second ten in the No.11 spot, followed by UCLA, West Virginia, Southern Cal, Illinois, LSU and Miami, Fla. Texas fell to No. 18, while Florida State, No.19, and Clemson completed the Top Twenty.

Florida, No.14 last week, and Boston College, No.19, dropped out of the rankings after weekend losses.

The Top Twenty teams in The Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, season records and total points. Points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1.

Brewery mayors bet their beers on World Series

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The stakes were appropriately beer as the major league teams from a pair of cities noted for their breweries squared off in St. Louis in Game One of the World Series.

Wisconsin Gov. Lee S. Dreyfus said Monday he bet four cases of beer on the Milwaukee Brewers against Missouri Gov. Christopher Bond's St. Louis Cardinals.

Mayor Henry Maier said he made a one-case wager after being telephoned by St. Louis Mayor Vincent Schoemehl Jr.

Dreyfus said he is betting Pabst and Miller, whose headquarters are in Milwaukee. Anheuser-Busch is based in St. Louis.

Should Bond lose, he is to pay off with four cases of Missouri-brewed beer, "if they make any down there," Dreyfus sniffed facetiously.

Milwaukee, meanwhile, geared its facilities for the crowds expected Friday for Game Three in the series.

It is the city's first World Series since 1958 when the former Milwaukee Braves lost to the New York Yankees.

The last few hundred tickets to 52,600-seat Milwaukee County Stadium stadium were sold Monday, and most of those were standing-room-only at $8 apiece, the Brewers said.

Major downtown hotels reported all rooms had been reserved. Tourist spokesmen said suburban motel space was still available.

The Greater Milwaukee Convention and Visitors Bureau estimates the city's merchants will realize at least $650,000 from out-of-town guests from each game, not counting the earnings from baseball fans who buy food and drink before, during and shortly after each game.

Series pits Cards' speed against Brewers' brute

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The position-by-position matchups for the 1982 World Series between the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League and the Milwaukee Brewers of the American League:

FIRST BASE

Each team boasts one of its league's finest hitters playing the position. Keith Hernandez of the Cardinals hit .299 this season — failing for the first time since 1978 to hit over .300 — and drove in 104 runs. Cecil Cooper of Milwaukee was a .313 hitter with 32 homers and 121 RBI, enjoying one of his finest seasons.

The fielding edge goes to Hernandez, one of the best glove men at first base, but the overall edge goes to Cooper, who blends a solid job at first with his potent offensive capabilities.

SECOND BASE

This position is tough to call. Jim Gantner hit .295 with 43 RBI near the bottom of Milwaukee's fatting order this season, while Tommy Herr batted .266 with 34 RBI and 25 stolen bases in the leadoff spot. Herr's quickness in both fielding his position and baserunning make up for the 30 points he lacks in batting average.

Call it even.

SHORTSTOP

Ozzie Smith of the Cardinals may be the best fielding shortstop in the business. His agility, balance and ability to throw from awkward positions are unparalleled. But how can he compete with Milwaukee's Robin Yount, in the midst of an MVP season. While Smith, sidelined part of the season with a leg injury, hit only .248 with 43 RBI, Yount hit .331 with 114 RBI and 29 homers.

It wouldn't even be close if it weren't for Smith's nonpareil fielding abilities, but Yount still gets a sizable edge.

THIRD BASE

Neither Paul Molitor of Milwaukee nor Ken Oberkfell of St. Louis are particularly smooth-fielding third basemen. Molitor even admits he's not very good at the position, which he assumed only this season.

So, you have to go to their offensive statistics, where Molitor emerges on top. Molitor hit .302 with 71 RBI and 19 homers, while Oberkfell was a .289 hitter with 34 RBI and only two homers.

CATCHER

It's a tough pick, since the Cardinals have Milwaukee's Ted Simmons outnumbered 2-to-1. St. Louis platoons left-handed hitter Darrell Porter and righty swinger Gene Tenace. Both Porter and Simmons have suspect arms, but Porter's problems have been compounded by an off season that saw him hit only .231 compared to Simmons' average of .269. The power is about equal, and all three are fine handlers of pitchers.

It's almost a tossup, but the edge goes to Porter-Tenace.

LEFT FIELD

Two fine athletes — Lonnie Smith of St. Louis and Ben Oglivie of Milwaukee — roam left field for their respective teams. Oglivie has more power and is perhaps the better outfielder, but ....

Smith may be the most versatile offensive threat in baseball. He hit .307 this season with eight homers and 69 RBI, and he still found time to steal 68 bases and lead the league in runs scored with 120.

Smith gets the edge.

CENTER FIELD

Gorman Thomas of Milwaukee shared the major league lead in homers with Reggie Jackson at 39, and normally he would get a substantial edge over St. Louis rookie Willie McGee.

But the Milwaukee slugger has a problem with his knee that has slowed him down in the field, and he is mired in a 3-for-44 slump. McGee, meanwhile, has all the speed and agility to play his position well, while hitting .296 with 56 RBI this season.

McGee gets the call, but it could go the other way if Thomas goes on a tear.

RIGHT FIELD

Charlie Moore of Milwaukee probably was one of the most improved fielders and hitters in baseball this season. He has a good arm, he hit .254 with some power and there's few any better in the clutch.

Speaking of which, George Hendrick comes to mind. With 104 RBI, 19 homers and a .282 batting average this season, the St. Louis right fielder has all the tools.

Hendrick in a landslide.

DH

The Cardinals have Dane Iorg against right-handed pitchers and Gene Tenace against left-handers. Iorg batted .294 this season in 102 games, while Tenace was .258 in 66 games.

Tenace has had previous World Series experience with the Oakland A's. He became the first player to hit home runs in his first two times up in a World Series, on Oct. 4, 1972, when Oakland played Cincinnati. He hit two other homers in that Series, batted .342 with 9 RBI and set a record with a slugging percentage of .913. He also set another record with 11 bases on balls in the 1973 Series against the Mets.

Roy Howell is the Brewers' DH against right-handed pitchers and Don Money will bat against left-handers. Howell batted .260 in 98 games, with four homers and 38 RBI. Money was .284 in 96 games, with 16 homers and 55 RBIs in only 275 at-bats.

PITCHING

Only one name need be mentioned: Bruce Sutter of St. Louis.

Milwaukee's pitching staff started the season suspect and wound up that way. Although Pete Vuckovich won 18 games and lost only six, the Brewers will have to go with more than a one-man rotation. Lefty Mike Caldwell gets the opening bid, bringing with him a 17-13 record and 3.91 ERA. Bob Forsch, 15-9 and 3.48, goes for St. Louis.

The Cards team ERA this year was 3.38, while the Brewers were at 3.98. And with Milwaukee's Rollie Fingers inactive since Sept. 2 with a torn muscle, Sutter has the field to himself with his 36 saves and 2.90 ERA.

The Cards get a substantial edge.

MANAGER

Harvey Kuenn of the Brewers took a 23-24 team on June 2 and turned it into the winningest team in baseball, finishing the season with 95 victories.

But the man in the Cardinals' office, Whitey Herzog, has this election all tied up.

Detroit Express to join the NASL

Soccer-The Detroit Express will be playing in the Motor City next season, only this time the club will be part of the North American Soccer League. Suburban Detroit businessman Sonny Van Arnem purchased the Jacksonville Tea Men of the NASL Monday and said he would move the team to Detroit.

The aching right knee of West German soccer star Hansi Mueller does not need surgery and the insider of Italian major league Internazionale of Milan should be back on soccer fields within two or three weeks. Mueller, who was hired by Internazionale this season, missed last Sunday's major league match against Torino after growing pains in the same right knee which required surgery and benched him for months in the past, when he played with Stuttgart.

Boxing-Davey Moore's World Boxing Association junior middleweight title defense against Gary Guiden Oct. 23 at Atlantic City, N.J., has been postponed because of a cut Moore received in training, Top Rank, Inc., said Monday. A fight will be announced later to replace the Moore bout as part of a CBS-TV doubleheader with a 12-round match between two unbeaten welterweights, Don Curry and Marlon Starling, at Convention Hall.

Leroy Haley Jr., who won his World Boxing Council super lightweight crown here, returns for his first title defense Oct. 20 against the WBC's top-ranked contender, Juan Jose Gimenez. Haley, 27, upset Saoul Mamby in a split decision June 26 at the Front Row Theater to win the 140-pound championship. Mamby, now the No.3 contender, will take on Monroe Brooks in a 10-round bout on the undercard of Haley's title fight.

Field Hockey-Powered by three goals by defender Fieke Boekhorst, Holland, the No.1-ranked women's team in the world, blanked Australia, 3-0, Monday to take the American Cup International Women's Field Hockey Tournament. In the consolation match, two Massachusetts and two Pennsylvania players chipped in one goal apiece to lead the United States over New Zealand, 4-1.

Chris Larson-Mason, of Williamstown, Judy Strong, of West Hatfield, Kathy McGahey and Sheryl Johnson, both of Philiadelphia, each scored a point.

Running-Favorite Anne Audaine ran the 10-kilometer Bonne Bell race in an unofficial time of 31:41 minutes Monday knocking 22 seconds off the American record. Audain, who has been in Brisbane, Australia, competing in the Commonwealth Games, didn't let the long trip to the United States slow her down, leading a field crowded with a record 7,700 competitors.

Landry thinks NFL will finish season

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry said on his radio show Monday night that he believes there will be a 1982 National Football League season.

"I don't think we will lose the season," Landry said. "There are too many people who want to see the season played."

Landry also said on his KRLD radio show that all conference games would have to be made up to keep the divisional champions from being watered down ones.

"My thought is that you have to make up all the conference games so there is creditability in the conference winners," he said. "It would be foolish for us not to play those games."

Dallas already has missed National Conference Eastern Division games against the New York Giants and Washington Redskins.

The Cowboys are scheduled to play the Philadephia Eagles on the road this Sunday.

Cowboys' player representative Robert Newhouse told The Associated Press Monday night he thought most players would abandon their demand for a wage scale before they give up the entire season.

"A lot of players are not too gung-ho on sitting out all year for the wage scale," Newhouse said. "But we still are not ready to go back until something better is offered."

Newhouse said 27 Cowboys players attended a meeting Monday to plot strategy.

"We discussed all the issues, including (team owners) opening the camps, and we all still had thumbs down on going back."

He said the turnout for the meeting was light because he called it at 10 p.m. Sunday.

Newhouse also denied reports that the Cowboys had told union executive director Ed Garvey that the team no longer supported the wage scale demand.

Fashion Floors Captures MSAT

Midland's Fashion Floors went 5-0 to win the Midland Softball Association Tournament at Hogan Park, which gives Fashion a 3-for-3 record in Co-Ed meets this year.

Mid-San Angelo took second, followed by Western Transmission and BHI Ink of Odessa.

Fashion's Mike Brown was MVP while Charley Pearce, Mitch Pryor, C.E. Martin and Lori Balus made all-tournament. Other Fashion players were: Kim King, Pam Caffery, Leslie Burns, Elaine Irvin, Danny Thompson, Billy Mayes, Bill Robinson, Larry Linne and Player-Coach Roy Williams.

Pint-size Mattison sparks Rangers

Garrett Mattison was a new and welcome face in the Greenwood (2-4) lineup as the Rangers won their second in a row, beating Water Valley (2-4) 29-20.

It was Mattison's first start since being called up from the junior varsity three games ago. The 5-foot-3, 125-pounder was inserted into the starting role to help bolster a fatigued Ranger running game.

The freshman showed some fast foot speed and responded with an impressive 63 yards in nine carries.

"Starting on the varsity is something I've always wanted to do," the 14-year-old said, "It feels good."

In other district 7-A games, Eden (5-0-1), Sterling City (5-1) and Garden City (4-2) improved their district records to 3-0 with easy victories Friday. Number four ranked Eden beat Bronte 26-0, Sterling City shutout Robert Lee and Garden Cuty defeated Irion County 30-6.

Sweetwater (5-0), Lakeview (5-0) and Andrews (3-2), remained undefeated in District 2-AAAA with 2-0 records.

Sweetwater posted its fourth shuout with a 28-0 win over Lamesa (1-4), Lakeview rolled over Pecos (2-3) and Andrews beat Fort Stockton (2-3) 21-7. The losses left Lamesa, Pecos and Fort Stockton winless after two games of district play.

What influenced actor Richard Dreyfuss' close encounter with tree?

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Academy Award-winning actor Richard Dreyfuss was saved by his seat belt when his sports car flipped over, but faces a drug-related investigation stemming from the accident.

R. Dreyfuss

Dreyfuss, who played a sculptor paralyzed by an auto crash in his last movie, "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" was listed in good condition Monday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center after his car overturned Sunday and slammed into a palm tree in a Beverly Hills canyon.

"It was his seat belt that saved his life," said Police Lt. Russ Olson.

Olson said a small amount of white powder believed to be cocaine was found in Dreyfuss' car and that the actor was "booked in absentia" for investigation of driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs and possession of a controlled substance.

The 34-year-old Dreyfuss won an Oscar for best actor in the 1977 film "The Goodbye Girl." He also appeared in "American Graffiti," "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Hospital spokeswoman Tess Griffith said Monday that Dreyfuss was resting comfortably in the intensive care unit. She did not know when he would be released.

Dreyfuss' agent, Meyer Mishkin, told the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, "I've never seen him under the influence of anything. I've always seen him perfectly sober."

LONDON (AP) — When Princess Diana flew into London's Heathrow airport, she didn't let the rainy weather dampen her sense of humor.

Princess Diana

"I thought you'd all be in Mustique," she told soggy photographers, referring to the Caribbean island where her brother-in-law, Prince Andrew, is vacationing with American-born actress Koo Stark.

The trip by the 22-year-old prince has created a public stir because Miss Stark, 25, once appeared in a soft-porn movie. Nude photos of her have recently appeared in several British tabloids.

Princess Diana, who has been staying at the royal residence in Balmoral, Scotland, flew into London on Monday from Aberdeen. She was expected to join her husband, Prince Charles, in Portsmouth, where the Tudor warship Mary Rose was raised Monday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A movie about the late Princess Grace of Monaco, starring Cheryl Ladd, will go ahead despite the death of the princess but with a new title, the producers say.

Cheryl Ladd

The film will be based on the life of Grace Kelly, the Academy Award-winning actress who married Prince Rainier III of Monaco in 1956.

After Princess Grace died of a stroke on Sept. 14, following an automobile accident, it was uncertain if Embassy Television and ABC would proceed with the project.

Princess Grace

"The two-hour drama, as originally planned, will begin during Princess Grace's teen-age years and culminate with the royal wedding," Embassy vice president Barbara S. Brogliatti said on Monday.

The film, in pre-production, had been titled "An American Princess" but has been renamed "The Grace Kelly Story."

Mrs. Brogliatti said Embassy executives had consulted with Monaco's royal family and agreed to observe the official mourning period, which ends Dec. 14, except for "required contractual commitments."

NEW YORK (AP) — Master pianist and author Arthur Rubinstein will be forced to miss a dinner in his honor Oct. 18 because he is "not strong enough to travel" from his home in Switzerland.

The announcement that the 95-year-old maestro could not attend was made Monday by the Weizmann Institute of Israel, which is giving the dinner here in Rubinstein's honor.

The announcement said Rubinstein's son, actor John Rubinstein, would stand in.

The institute, which is devoted to research and graduate training in basic and applied sciences, has invited 1,200 guests, including 17 Nobel laureates. Honorary co-chairmen are orchestra conductor Zubin Mehta and arts patron Avery Fisher.

Chicago zoo misses tea party member

CHICAGO (AP) — Eve, a 3-year-old chimpanzee known for her boisterous afternoon "Tea Parties," has vanished from the Lincoln Park Zoo and officials don't know whether the disappearance is an abduction or a breakout.

"She's gone," zoo spokesman Don Garbarino said Monday. "We checked the entire premises up and down, inside and out and in every nook and cranny...There's pretty much nothing more we can do."

He said "some kind of force" heavily damaged the lock on the cage Eve shared with Sibu, a 4-year-old orangutan who performed daily with Eve at the "Great Ape Tea Party" — a popular event at the zoo.

Garbarino said the evidence points toward a kidnapping, but officials could not rule out the possibility that Eve and Sibu broke the door themselves. Sibu was still there when keepers arrived.

Garbarino said a family reported seeing a man near the zoo carrying a bundle wrapped in a blanket with what appeared to be the face of a chimp looking out. But he said the report came more than two hours after Eve was reported missing Monday.

Eve wasn't in her cage when keepers opened the children's zoo at 7:45 a.m. The door to the cage was broken and an outside door to the zoo building were ajar, Garbarino said.

Eve, admired for her cute face and silly antics, poses no danger to the public if she's on the loose, but senior children's zookeeper Pat Sass said the 35-pound animal needs three meals a day and "constant monitoring," like a small child.

During the summer, crowds of people jammed the children's zoo each afternoon to watch Eve and Sibu sit at their table, which is set with tiny teacups, lemons, spoons and napkins.

Members of the country music group Alabama display their Entertainer of the Year award at Monday night's Country Music Association Awards ceremonies in Nashville. Alabama took the honors away from Barbara Mandrell, who has dominated the awards the past few years. The group also won awards for Vocal Group of the Year and Instrumental Group of the Year.

And the winner is...not Barbara Mandrell

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The young band Alabama, known for its progressive style, capped a rags-to-riches saga by dethroning Barbara Mandrell as entertainer of the year at the Country Music Association's annual awards show.

"There's a lot of great entertainers," lead singer Randy Owen said after the nationally televised awards program Monday night. "To be the first group to win it...feels good."

The four-piece band from Fort Payne, Ala., was playing for tips just two years ago and was rejected several times by recording companies until RCA signed it to a contract.

Alabama, which has reeled off a string of hits including "Feels So Right," "Old Flame," "Take Me Down" and "Mountain Music," also won for top instrumental group and top vocal group.

They are more progressive than traditional in style, although some of their instrumentals have a bluegrass flavor.

After receiving the bullet-shaped trophies at the Grand Ole Opry House, Alabama led its road crew in a backstage cheer, "Ain't We Having Fun Now!"

Miss Mandrell, who was co-host with Mac Davis of the 16th annual program, won no awards.

The petite singer, who has dominated country music awards shows in recent years, was among five finalists for entertainer of the year and top female vocalist.

Willie Nelson, who was writing songs before members of Alabama were born, won two awards — single of the year for the tender "Always on My Mind" and album of the year for the LP of the same name. He did not attend the ceremony.

"Always on My Mind" also won song of the year for writers Johnny Christopher, Wayne Thompson and Mark James.

Young Ricky Skaggs, acclaimed for his piercing tenor, won top male vocalist over Nelson, Merle Haggard, George Jones and Ronnie Milsap.

"Well, hmm. Didn't plan no speech," said the 28-year-old Skaggs, who has had a recording contract less than a year. Skaggs, who also won the Horizon Award as most promising newcomer, hit the top of the charts in April with "Crying My Heart Out Over You."

Janie Fricke, who toiled in obscurity for years as a backup singer at Nashville recording sessions before making such hits as "Baby, It's You" and "Playin' Hard to Get," was named female vocalist of the year. She beat out Miss Mandrell, Rosanne Cash, Emmylou Harris and Juice Newton.

Singer Marty Robbins, whose gunfighter songs like "El Paso" accented the western style of country music, was chosen for the Country Music Hall of Fame along with the late singer Lefty Frizzell and Roy Horton, a former music publishing executive.

"I never had any idea this would happen," said Robbins, a composer, musician and actor for more than 30 years. "It might not happen again, so I'm going to take it tonight."

Other winners included Chet "Mr. Guitar" Atkins, instrumentalist of the year, and David Frizzell and Shelly West, vocal duo of the year for the second straight year. David Frizzell and Lefty Frizzell, who died in 1975, are brothers.

Davis drew a gasp from the audience of 4,400 when he sang his latest release, "The Beer Drinkin' Song." The song mentions "Reaganomics" as one of the things that would drive a man to drink.

The song has been on the charts for three weeks and mentions by name President Reagan, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Soviet Communist Party boss Leonid Brezhnev as other excuses for drinking.

Winners were picked by the 5,000 singers, songwriters, musicians, disc jockeys and record company employees who belong to the association, which is the industry's trade organization.

The awards show launched a week of special country music-related activities in Nashville, including awards banquets, parties, concerts, a disc jockey convention and a Grand Ole Opry birthday celebration.

The program was also broadcast by about 100 radio stations.

POSITIVE THINKING

Think yourself into what you want

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

You can make things go well. You don't have to just let life happen to you. You can exert a creative influence over circumstances and change them.

Many people make the mistake of thinking circumstances are things to which they simply have to resign themselves. Instead, by using a simple formula, you can take charge of conditions. You can so think and act within this complicated and difficult world that you will make things go well.

A big order. Sure is. But there is a certain type of person who does "make things go well." And it's not the sit-down-and-wait-for-it-to-happen-to-me type, either. Recently I ran into a friend who, on the basis of his achievements, is considered one of the greatest and most successful sales merchandisers in this country. And he started from the humblest of beginnings. To use his own phrase: "He didn't have two nickels to rub together." But from earliest days in poverty this man had real faith; faith in God, faith in people, faith in his country and faith in himself.

I asked him the other day, "Are things going well with you?" He looked at me with surprise and said, "Well? Of course they are going well. How can they help it? I make them go well."

In some amazement, I asked, "But don't you ever have a bad day?"

Again he spoke with confidence, "Not me, I never have a bad day. Oh, naturally some days are maybe better than others. There is bound to be a little variation between days, but when I start having what you'd call a bad day, I just look more closely to see what that bad time is telling me, and you would be surprised how some days that start out on the bad side turn out to be good days after all."

The significant fact that I believe in these upbeat comments is the word "goal." A strongly held, clearly defined goal can change things from bad to good. People with sharply defined goals have enthusiasm. They study and follow through. So they make days good which less committed people find bad.

"How did you condition yourself to look for positive goals so you can now make every day a good day?" I asked my dynamic friend.

He told me that he was born in a family which was all the way poor. No member of the family had ever had as much as a high school education. He had three strikes against him and then some.

Then something happened that really motivated him. A teacher told him he could go as high as he could think. And he believed her.

So he formulated a goal to be the best salesman in his city, even in the entire country.

He imaged a high school and college education. "What you can see yourself doing you can do," he insists. Graduating from both, top student in his class, earning his way by working in a restaurant and selling in vacation periods, he began to lay up a little money. "I studied; I thought; I watched how successful people did it. I worked and had faith, positive faith. I became a positive thinker. I developed faith in myself. I worked giving each job all I have. And that was all there was to it."

Hillbilly image bothering some Ohio transplants

CINCINNATI (AP) — A hillbilly convention is coming to town, and some groups don't like it, saying the festival perpetuates a "L'il Abner" stereotype of Appalachian people.

The Oct. 22-24 gathering of "hillbillies" — actually all members of the Shriner's organization — will include parades, hoedowns, displays of old cars with outhouses on them and costumes like those worn by the famous comic strip characters Li'l Abner and Daisy Mae.

Cincinnati is a magnet for people leaving the economically depressed mountains of Appalachia. An estimated 250,000 ex-Appalachians live in the area.

Mayor David Mann, a native of Appalachia, said he had second thoughts about an official welcome to the convention when he learned about local objections.

"Maybe I won't be doing it. I don't know much about the organization. It's unlikely now," he said Monday night.

Robert Craig of Milford, editor of the "Hillbilly News," said 8,500 members of the group are expected at the Cincinnati Convention Center.

"I've had this clan for 10 years and never heard anyone speak up that we were making fun of anybody," said Raymond Woods, another ex-Appalachian and head of the local hillbilly chapter. He said that in the past 10 years, the Shriner group has raised $46,000 for projects.

"I think it's benefited people a whole lot more than it's hurt anybody," Woods said.

"That's one of the problems in Cincinnati — people believe in the Li'l Abner stereotypes," said Ray West, director of the Norwood and South Fairmount Organizing Project, an Appalachian advocacy group.

"The general saying among Appalachians is, 'If you use that word (hillbilly) around me, it's a fighting word,'" said Mike Maloney, director of the Appalachian People's Service Organization.

"I think there is a new consciousness among us that those who would impose that stereotype can't do that without insulting us," said the Rev. Benjamin Foulk, a member of the board of the Urban Appalachian Council.

Craig said the hillbilly group was begun 10 years ago in Ashland, Ky., and now has 71 individual "clans" in the United States and Canada with 33,000 members.

THE CAPER IS ON!

Now here's the plan.

Sneak through your home and make a list of those good things you no longer use. Then we'll make a contact. I've got a contact in mind that will help us get cool cash for the merchandise. Things like appliances, furniture, bikes, typewriters, sporting goods, you know the kind of stuff I mean.

Now get this . . . when you've got the list written, dial the classified advertising department at the newspaper. A knowledgeable Ad-Visor helps you word your ad to make a fast connection with your buyer. To clue you in, here's the type of items that you could be looking for . . .

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 9¾% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 14¾% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 16½%.

GAS, CLEAN ENERGY FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW. FHA/VA financing availble.
