The winged power of America's fighting forces is strikingly pictured in this formidable array of navy planes on the deck of the aircraft carrier Saratoga as it cleaves the Pacific to take part in the navy maneuvers. Efficiency of the air arm of the nation's defendere will be given a severe test in the sea war games, which will continue until June 19.

Italy Orders New Troops to Africa

By Associated Press
ROME, May 7.—Italy today mobilized three new divisions and recalled to colors a part of the class of 1913 in answer to "steps of mobilization taken by the Ethiopian government."

An official communique cited three reasons for the newest phase of Italy's military preparations for possible trouble in East Africa:

"The notable furnishing of arms to Addis Ababa by European factories which he have definitely identified.

"The recent address of Emperor Haileselassie to parliament."

Italy's Eritrea and Somaliland border the Ethiopian kingdom. Many times in recent months frontier squabbles have served to increase tension between the two nations.

'G' Men Indicate Kidnaping Hoax

By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, May 7.—The interstate "kidnaping" of David Levinson and Robert Miner, radical leaders, was a hoax, the department of justice indicated after thorough investigation.

The department said its inquiry showed the two were not transported illegally from Gallup, N. M., to Arizona.

"The Department of Justice contemplates no further action in the matter," the attorney genral's office announced.

By Associated Press
SAN ANTONIO, May 7.—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Leake, Sr., missing from their home since yesterday, were found near the Blanco road several miles from San Antonio, today. Both were shot.

Mrs. Leakes body was sprawled in the back seat of an automobile. His was in the front seat, with a pistol in his lap.

Feels Social Securiiy Plans Not Endangered

By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, May 7.—Donald Richberg, chairman of the NRA board, informed congressional leaders today he felt the Supreme Court's decision against the railroad retirement act had cast no serious doubts on the constitutionality of the administration's social security program.

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, began a study of the decision to ascertain if another railway pension bill could be prepared that would be upheld.

SOIL EROSION PROGRAM IS HALTED

Commodity Orders To Be Returned To Austin

Emergency soil erosion work in Texas has been brought to a complete halt and commodity orders for fuel and feed for listing of lands must be returned to the Texas Relief Commission, according to word received this morning by Judge A. C. Hoffman, county relief administrator.

A communication received today by the local administration from Austin said that regional offices would be closed within the next 10 days and that payment on commodity orders that were not reported by that date would be delayed.

Commodity orders were issued for $1,500 for the emergency wind erosion program in this county. The program was schecounty. The program was scheduled for completion May 1.

SENIORS THINK PLAY 'NATURAL'

Believe 'Along Came Peggy' To Be One of Most Popular Local Comedies

With advance preparations almost completed, the senior class is anticipating exceptional success with the presentation of its annual class play Friday night.

"Along Came Peggy" will be presented at 8 o'clock at the High school auditorium.

As work progressed, those in the cast and connected with the play became more and more certain that they had an outstanding home talent production, well cast and ably directed.

With a comedy team that is certain to draw many hearty laughs from the audience, according to those familiar with the play, "Along Came Peggy" is the story of a young writer who finds it necessary to explain all his actions to his sweetheart.

Naturally, an old girl friend comes upon the scene to complicate matters. The comedy is offered by the butler and maid, who, in the play, are secretely married— with the butler being incapable of sticking exactly to the truth at all times.

County School Board To Convene Thursday

H. W. Kuhn, president of the county school board, has announced that the board would meet in the office of the county superintendent in the court house at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

All individuals or members of school boards who have special problems or suggestions relative to work of the county school board are invited to be present, Mr. Kuhn announced.

New Welfare Head Is Selected Here

Mrs. A. Haas, formerly of Plainview, arrived in Memphis this morning to assume charge of the Welfare department of the local relief office. Mrs. Haas will act as social welfare supervisor, according to Judge Hoffman, county relief administrator.

She succeeds Miss Martha Temple, who has been transferred to the Crosbyton relief office. Miss Temple was local supervisor during the past year.

Mrs. Haas plans to make her home in Memphis.

Robert A. Edwards (above), central figure of the real-life American Tragedy, yesterday received the same fate as the hero of Theodore Dreiser's famous novel, the plot of which was closely paralleled in the circumstances of Freda McKechnie's death, for which Edwards was convicted. Refusal of commutation doomed the college student to death in the electric chair at Pennsylvania's Rockview Penitentiary.

Memphis To Bid for Sheriff Convention

Bids for the next annual convention of the Northern Texas and Southern Oklahoma Peace Officers Convention to be held in Memphis, will be placed at the 1935 convention in Hollis, Okla., today.

Sheriff J. N. Colvin and a delegation of local citizens left at noon for the convention at Hollis. Among those accompanying the sheriff to the convention city are Deputy J. R. Turlington, County Attorney Carl Periman and Edwin Thompson.

More then 150 peace officers from the entire Panhandle of Texas and Southern Oklahoma are in attendance. The two-day convention is the biggest gathering of peace officers in this section and local citizens are enthused over the possibilities of securing the next convention for Memphis.

The local delegates plan to return to Memphis tonight.

American Legion To Hold Meet Tonight

Regular monthly meeting of the Charles R. Simmons Post, American Legion, will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock, it has been announced by L. L. Doss, post commander.

Regular meeting nights for the local post were changed recently from Thursday to Tuesday nights. Meetings are held each first and third Tuesday nights in the month under the new plan.

Kansas City Kidnaper Given Execution Stay

By Associated Press
JEFFERSON CITY, May 7.—Governor Guy Park today granted Walter McGee, kidnaper of Miss Mary McElroy, a stay of execution until May 31. McGee was scheduled to be hanged in Kansas City Friday.

The governor's action was taken a few minutes after McGee's fight to escape the gallows apparently reached the end of trial in the Missourian's courts when the supreme court ruled against him in two proceedings.

"I granted McGee a stay of execution in order to study the case and go over records," Parks said.

FARM FAMILIES TAKEN FROM RELIEF

80 in Hall County Moved to Rehabilitation Section

Effective immediately, county relief administrators no longer will be permitted to extend any form of relief from general funds to any employable farm family, it was learned today by Judge A. C. Hoffman, county relief administrator.

The order will effect more the 80 farm families now on relief rolls in this county, Judge Hoffman said.

As explained by Adam R. Johnson, state director of the Texas Relief Commission, "a farm family is one residing outside the limits of incorporated or unincorporated towns, and who depend upon farming operations for the major portion of their income.

"Farm families, henceforth, may receive aid only in the form of advances through the rural rehabilitation corporation. County administrators were instructed to recall any work cards issued to rural families for work relief in May and to make advances through the rural rehabilitation department, secured by notes and mortgages," Mr. Johnson explained.

The plan is the completion of the move to take all farm families from direct relief and place them in the rural rebahilitation division. A. N. Crandall is rural rehabilitation supervisor of the Hall County relief office.

Three Local Men In Amarillo Jail

Special to The Democrat
AMARILLO, May 7.—Three Hall County men, held in the Potter County jail and facing charges of possession of counterfeit $10 bills, had not made bonds this morning following their arrest Saturday at Parnell.

Fred G. Nivens is held on $1,500 bond, Melvin Meads, $1,000, and Willie H. Hale, $1,000. They were arraigned here Saturday before the United States commissioner in the Federal Building.

The arrests were made by Department of Justice Agent R. K. Oakes, of Amarillo.

Brazilian Storm Takes More Lives

By Associated Press
BAHIA, Brazil, May 7.—The most violent storm in Bahia's history beset the city yesterday for the seventh straight day, with deaths and injuries mounting and floods adding to the devastation.

Rains lashed the sea coast site and high winds wailed as officers and volunteers dug through the debris, dragging out the bodies of the dead.

Deaths had been estimated unofficially at more than 400 but in the confusion the toll was believed to have run much higher.

Only Tiger Hunter Can Win Merry

The next husband of twice-married, thrill-seeking Merry Fahrney, above, must prove his love by going tiger hunting with her, declares the patent medicine heiress who has been in aviation, movie, and elopement spotlights. Merry admits she has lost her heart to a Chicagoan who's getting a divorce, but says he won't win her hand till he plays the hero role. She won't tell the name of her No. 3 candidate, because "it might spoil the divorce."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MILLICENT GRAVES, secretary to GEORGE DRIMGOLD, finds her employer in his office dead. JARVIS HAPP, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a brunet, then takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets Happ's son, NORMAN; his stepson, ROBERT CAISE; MRS. HAPP; DICK GENTRY, Happ's partner; VERA DUCHENE, Mrs. Happ's maid.

In Happ's home Millicent sees the mysterious "woman in black ermine" whom she believes has some connection with Drimgold's death.

The chauffeur is found dead. Later Happ is kidnaped.

Millicent and Norman learn the car driven by the woman in ermine belongs to PHIYLLIS FAULCONER. They go to her apartment, find the missing suitcase of books showing a shortage of $200,000 in Gentry's accounts.

Millicent and Norman leave and later return. Norman goes in first. When he does not reappear Millicent enters. The place is in wild disorder. A policeman arrives. Millicent escapes.

Millicent goes to a nearby garage, asks to see Phyllis Faulconer's car and goes to the second floor. Someone grabs her arm. It is DETECTIVE BUCHANAN. He opens her purse, finds the note written by Bob Caise, and accuses her of being Phyllis Faulconer.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLV

Buchanan said, "That clinches it. You're Phyllis Saulconer. That note was written by Bob Caise. Sergeant Mahoney bet me 10 bucks that when we got Phyllis Faulconer I'd find that Bob Caise had tipped her off about the car. That's why he sent me to wait for it. Come on, you're going to headquarters and get booked."

"But you don't understand," she said. "That note wasn't left for me. That was . . ."

"Oh baloney!" he said. "I've heard enough of your alibies. You come with me. You can tell your troubles to Sergeant Mahoney."

"Thank heavens!" she said. "I can at least talk with some one who's got intelligence."

"Go on, smarty, make all your wise cracks," he said, opening the door of the automobile and pulling her by the handcuffed wrists. "You may think I'm dumb but I had sense enough to trap you and trap you right."

She recognized the futility of further argument and braced herself to be led down the stairs. Once more she saw the pitying glance of the uniformed attendant of the garage and now she understood its complete significance. He had known that a police detective was waiting to arrest whoever showed up to take out that Faulconer sedan, and he had known she was walking into a trap when she climbed the stairs.

She felt her cheeks burn with humiliation as she was led, handcuffed, in charge of the officer, across the lighted lower floor.

"Well," Buchanan said triumphantly, "I got her."

"Do you need those handcuffs?" the garage man asked.

Buchanan flashed him a belligerent glance.

"I'll say I do. She's wanted for murder."

The garage attendant stuck by his guns.

"You're about a 100-pounds heavier than she is," he remarked. "If she hasn't got a gun you should be able to handle her without handcuffs."

"You don't need to tell me how to do my job," Buchanan remarked. "All I want you to do is to show me where the telephone is and then keep quiet."

The attendant jerked his head toward the office. Buchanan took Millicent into the office, hooked his foot around the leg of a chair, jerked it a few inches toward Millicent and said. "Sit down there and rest yourself. Don't try to make a break."

He picked up the telephone, said, "Police headquarters," and then, after a moment said, "Homicide Department . . . is Sergeant Mahoney there? Well, let me talk with Ramsey . . . Hello, Ramsey, this is Buchanan. I got the Faulconer jane . . . Yes, she's sitting right here at the Savoy garage. Where's Mahoney?"

The receiver made a long series of squawking noises, and Buchanan said, "Well, see if you can get Mahoney and tell Johansen to come around here. It's just a couple of blocks . . . Yes, sure, he's off duty, but he mixed into it and he might as well see it through. Tell him it's big stuff and he may get his name in a newspaper. Only shoot him along."

* * *

Buchanan hung up the telephone.

"And now," Millicent asked, "do we start for headquarters?"

"Not yet, sister."

He tilted back in the chair, put his feet up on the desk pulled a black cigar from his pocket, clipped off the end, inspected it, wrapped his lips around it, scratched a match on the sole of his shoe and concentrated his attention upon lighting the cigar. When he had it burning to suit him he puffed out clouds of smoke, his manner that of one who is very well pleased with himself.

"Well," Millicent demanded impatiently, "what are we waiting for? I want to talk with someone who has some authority."

"Sister," he told her, "I've got all the authority you need to bother about."

"I mean," she said, "someone who has sense as well as authority."

"I had sense enough to outsmart you," he told her.

She ignored the comment.

After a few moments she demanded again, "Well what are we watiting for?"

"That," he said, "is one of the things you might like to know, but you're pretty smart and you'll know what I want to tell you and nothing else."

"I demand," she said, "to be taken to headquarters. I happen to know that you've got to take me before a magistrate when you arrest me."

"So," he said, "you've got a criminal record, have you?"

"No, I haven't a criminal record. I've got work to do and I demand an opportunity to vindicate myself."

"Don't worry. You're going to get that, I promise. If you're on the up and up we'll know it in a very few minutes."

"How?"

* * *

"We've got someone coming who can identify the real Phyllis Faulconer. I won't take your word one way or another. I'm betting you're Phyllis Faulconer, but just the same I'm going to give you all the breaks."

"Oh," she said, "if you'd only do that! If you'd only have someone from the apartment house who knows the real Phyllis Faulconer it would save you the humiliation of making a false arrest and save me a lot of time."

"Okay, sister," he agreed goodnaturedly, puffing smoke at the ceiling. "I've got a chap by the name of Johansen coming around here. He knows the real Phyllis Faulconer and I know him. He's a square-shooter, but he's hard-boiled and you can't slip anything over on him. Here he comes now."

Millicent heard the pound of heavy steps. She already anticipated the vindication that was to be hers. She turned a smiling face, and then the smile froze on her lips and panic filled her eyes.

"Hello, Johonsen," said Buchanan.

The man who pushed his way through the glass paneled doorway nodded a greeting and then shifted his eyes to Millicent.

He was the officer who had knocked on the door of the apartment and complained to Millicent about the excessive noise—the man who had blown the police whistle when she fled from the apartment!

STAMP SPANS 24 CENTURIES

THE ultra-modern and the ancient were brought together, across a span of 24 centuries, on some of Greece's airmail stamps. An airplane flying over the Acropolis or some of the other relics of a past culture: the Graf Zeppelin in a similar flight over Greece; symbolic representations of Hermes, a famous messenger of Greek fable, and an airplane, are shown on most of this country's airmail issues.

The stamp shown below is one of four values lithographed in from four to six colors and issued in 1926. The Acropolis, on the six color stamp below, is the flat-topped hill on which stand the remains of a classic art. The best known relic is the Parthenon, perfect example of a pure Doric temple and one of the most beautiful buildings in the world.

This Plan Would Erase State Lines

Increasing friction between federal and state governments, and constitutional limitations which hold back united national action because of states' rights, have caused students to ponder plans to eliminate state governments entirely. They would elect Congress from regions or departments. Here is one of the suggested groupings. Representatives would be elected from districts as at present, but senators would be chosen at large, an equal number from each department. Many proposals along the lines of the above suggestion are being made by students of government.

In Des Moines, Senator Long told his followers, "I could take Iowa like a whirlwind." Good thing he didn't say "dust storm."

Schedule Is Announced for City Softball Lo

PLAY TO START HERE FRIDAY, MAY 17

Split Season Takes Two Rounds, Ends On August 20

With eight clubs ready to go, the playing schedule was worked out last night for the City Softball League, composed of teams from Memphis, Salisbury, Hedley, Estelline and Turkey.

Play will start Friday night, May 17, under the floodlights of Fair Park Stadium, and will run for 14 weeks.

The first half ends on Tuesday, July 2, and on the following Friday night, the clubs start over to battle for the second half title.

Title Play-Off

At the end of the regular season, the winners of each half—if both halves are not taken by the same team—will have a championship series play-off.

The regular season will close on Tuesday, Aug. 20.

Games will be played on Friday and Tuesday nights of each week, with doubleheader games each night. The games are to get underway at 8 o'clock and run for seven innings.

Each team is limited to a roster of 15 men, and in case of changes in the roster must notify the league scorer before game time.

Although it was announced that no club would play more than one game each week, this should be simplified slightly. Occasionally, a team is required to play twice in one week, according to the calendar, but never two games on the same night.

Schedule Explained

Once play opens on Friday, the playing week includes Friday night and the following Tuesday night. Figured in this manner, no team plays more than one game each "playing week."

Bonura's Appetite Threatens Career

BY JIMMY DONAHUE
NEA Service Sports Writer

Chicago's surprising White Sox are going to lose the batting punch that is keeping them in the hair of American League leaders if big Zeke Bonura doesn't curb his appetite for spaghetti and bananas and cream.

So says Jimmy Dykes, who, as boss of the Sox and signer of meal checks, has been gazing aghast at the huge quantities of the stringy dough Bonura has been stowing away, and who is in a position to know that overtraining at the festive board means a quick ticket back to the bushes.

"Zeke is eating his way out of the majors." Jimmy has said. "If he doesn't change his diet, his career will end in a hurry."

The Sox first sacker, who ranked sixteh in home run swatting in the American Leauge in 1934 with 27 circuit clouts, and who has a big future in store as a slugger, HAS changed his diet. It is doubtful, however, if his switch from miles of spaghetti to barbecued spareribs is going to keep weight from piling onto his own ribs.

It isn't the quantity of food a ball player stows away as much as what kinds of food he eats that puts weight on his waistline, slows him down to minor league speed, and spells his demise.

* * *

Big Players Need Plenty

That's the opinion of Rogers Hornsby, boss of the St. Louis Browns, who, in managerial posts in both leagues, has marveled at the appetites of many ball players. But as many as he has seen hit .400 at the table, he never has had a player on his squad eat himself out of the league.

The reason is that the Rajah insisted on ball players eating foods that agreed with them.

"Plenty of big eaters have stuck around in the majors for a long time," Hornsby relates.

"Fatty Fothergill, former Detroit and Boston outfielder, could stuff it in with the best of them, yet he was one of the best gardeners in the business for years. Hack Wilson was another who could eat with the best of the trenchermen, but he didn't begin to slip until he started eating the wrong kinds of food.

"Big ball players like Fothergill, Wilson, Babe Ruth, Babe Herman, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, and others need lots of food, or they become undernourished and lose the power in their big frames. This condition is just as bad as a player eating too much starchy and sweet food and becoming fat, flabby, and out of condition. Steaks and plenty of vegetables never put on weight.

"An example of a ball player eating what didn't agree with him was Babe Ruth. You'll remember a few years back when he had such a mania for hot dogs and pop that he contracted a stomach condition that threatened to end his career.

"So it is with any player. Their careers depend on their condition, and it is up to them to watch their diet to prolong their life in baseball."

Waistline Hinders Fielding

Bonura has declared that spaghetti gives him batting power, and points to the fact that, after eating a big dinner of it one recent Sunday, he went out against the Browns and hit two home runs in one game, knocking in five counters. Shortly after, he duplicated the feat against Detroit, batting in four runs with two homers.

All this may be true, but Dykes, in asserting that Bonura is eating himself to a fall, probably had in mind the fact that the huge 205-pound first sacker isn't exactly a gazelle when is comes to fielding finesse.

He is aware of Bonura's punch at the plate, but he doesn't want his punch at the table platter to bring about and drop in his standard of defensive play.

Big Zeke Bonura, after Jimmy Dykes, his Chicago White Sox boss, declared Zeke soon would eat himself out of the majors if he didn't change his diet, has sworn off spaghetti and got down to the business of reducing. Here you see the first sacker stretching for a throw—which is good exercise to take off surplus poundage.

Loop Plays New Game--'Lead, Lead, Who Has Got the Lead'

by Harry GRAYSON

CLEVELAND, May 5.—What's in a name? Plenty—when you are an umpire.

Billy Evans, cutting up old touches with George Moriarty, recites the amusing story of Harry Colliflower, a left-handed pitcher who thinks the same way when he joins the bluecoats.

Evans breaks in a number of American League arbiters—Moriarty, Bill Dinneen, George Hildebrand, Ollie Chill, Red Ormsby, and Bill McGowan, to list those who excel.

Moriarty and Dinneen are among the mighty few who wiggle the thumb in the majors with no previous experience. Moriarty steps right in after a spectacular career at third base and a fling at managing the Detroit Tigers. Dinneen hops directly from the pitcher's box.

Moriarty laughs as Evans relates how George keeps him awake nights going over the more complex problems.

"But Colliflower is the daddy of 'em all at getting on my nerves," says Evans. "He has two strikes on him with that monicker in the first place, and he is the world's worst umpire. They call him 'Cabbage,' and liken him to more vegetables then they heaved at Joe Medwick in Detroit last fall. All that saves him from being showered is lack of ammunition. I don't mind nearly getting killed pulling him out of difficulties, but his mimicking me finally has me ankling away from him.

* * *

Gets in Evans' Hair

"Colliflower joins me in St. Louis along about 1911.

"I eat a sort of woman's breakfast for a big fellow—orange juice, cinnamon rolls, and a cup of coffee.

" 'That'll do for me,' says Colliflower.

" 'Wrap up six of the same kind, size 15 1-2' for me," Colliflower instructs the clerk.

"I think nothing of it at the time, but as the days roll on, Colliflower gets in my hair. He rises and retires when I do, eats what I eat, and wears what I wear. He commences to look like me, or I get that impression, at least.

"I wear a diamond ring that my father gives me, and Colliflower shows up with one that looks something like it.

" 'Now I'm a real big league umpire,' he beams. 'This isn't as good as yours, but it will be all right as long as I keep it out of water.'

"I order apple pie for dessert one night, and Colliflower kicks through with his customary, 'That'll do for me.' I got to waiting for that, and to biting my tongue to keep from screaming. In this instance I decide to switch to lemon meringue. "Change mine, too, please,' chirps my partner.

"Finally, I can't stand it any longer.

" 'Colliflower,' I says, 'why do you persist in copying me?

" 'Because when I take this job Ban Johnson tells me to do everything that Billy Evans does,' he replies.

"Colliflower lasts about three months, and lands in the old Eastern League.

" 'Your name's a tough one in this business,' I advise him as he says goodbye. 'Now that you're going to a league in which nobody knows you, why don't you take another name? It will get those guys in the bleachers off you.'

" 'Thanks for the tip, Bill, I'll do that,' he answers.

"Some time later I hear that

Pepped up by their overwhelming of the Shamrock nine here Saturday afternoon, the Memphis Owls are ready to keep going in the Western Division of the Red River Valley League next week against the Hollis club in the Oklahoma city and then to start over against the loop leaders.

In the meantime, fans, sports writers and the team, itself, is wondering just where it stands in the league. Attempts to organize the sports writers over the loop in order to exchange results and compile standings apparently had failed this week—and the Red River Valley League is not furnishing the information.

This is a big blow to the loop. Unless fans here and in each of the other cities are able to follow the league more closely, they are likely to lose all interest in scheduled games. Unless some method of compiling results and standings is worked out, even the ball clubs are likely to finish the season without knowing where they stand.

However, the Owls do know that they have won a game now—by a 13 to 1 margin. That sounds like a rout, and it was, but only in one inning, fortunately near the close of the game.

For seven innings the clubs battled on an almost even basis, with the Owls leading, 3 to 1, by virtue of L. Marcum's triple, Tunnell's two-baser and Williamson's single in the second that brought in two tallies.

Shamrock accounted for its lone tally in the third, when Davis doubled and came in when Williamson fumbled Thurmond's drive across third.

Glasgon, Shamrock hurler, cracked in the eighth, the Owls' last time to bat, and Memphis chased in 10 runs. L. Marcum started the inning with a single, and on his second trip to the plate in the inning he was hit by a pitched ball. Tunnell came up twice and received free tickets to first. Joe Marcum and Widener, who batted for Marcum in the second round of the frame, went out; Williamson walked on the first trip and tripled on the second; Stewart was hit by a pitched ball and singled; Thompson and Morrison singled; Melear tripled and Sims hit for one base, to complete the inning of earned runs.

Baby Jane comes today in "Straight from the Heart."

Local theatre-goers soon will have the opportunity of seeing this talented three-year-old screen discovery in her first great part. It is in "Straight from the Heart," which is now at the Palace.

Featured with the tiny starlet in the Universal picture are Roger Pryor, Mary Astor, Carol Coombe, Henry Armetta, Gaant Mitchell and other players of note.

Baby Jane, who won this opportunity through her work in "Imitation of Life," is the youngest child player speaking lines on the screen.

The story, centering around a day nursery and telling an absorbing tale of politics in a big city, was written especially for Baby Jane by Doris Anderson, and was directed by Scott R. Beal.

THE NOSEY GUY

The weather yesterday was too fine to last—and the sky was true blue—bluest since last year. Today it is murky and gray from the Kansas dust. I knew it couldn't last, for housecleaning was done at home yesterday.

But when a woman sets her head to clean house—it's set. Guess they get pleasure out of having their homes clean once in a while.

From the many complimentary remarks made concerning the Daily Democrat's anniversary edition, it must have been a creditable paper as people don't generally brag on a newspaper, even when it is extra good—usually the reverse is true. Some people like to hand the publisher a brickbat instead of a rose. This has not been the case concerning the anniversary edition—no brickbats, but plenty of roses have come to The Democrat.

An optimistic belief that this country has not gone to the bow-wows and that it is on the way back to normalcy was clearly shown by the publisher and his co-workers and by the many advertisers who co-operated in making the edition a front-window display of their faith and grim determination to march onward in spite of all obstacles.

Quanah Tribue-Chief: A lot of superstitions still abide, though this sophisticated generation does not accept them as whole-heartedly as former ones. Old-fashioned folk still think it is bad luck to start a journey on Friday, that the number 13 is unfortunate, or that one will have seven years of sorrow if he breaks a mirror. The howl of a dog is believed by some to be an omen of death or to carry a sharp-edged implement through the house will bring death to that family. And so on: the list might be extended indefinitely. But this modern age hoots at most of these old beliefs. It isn't that it is smarter or more hard headed than its forefathers, only that it has more grim realities to worry about. Its fears lie in the practical realms of loss of jobs, loss of income, loss of investment, fear of a penniless old age or a pauper's grave. The human family will always suffer to some extent from its primordial instance, but this generation and the next is going to worry a lot more about its bread and butter problems than fantastic and imagined ills.

PROSPERITY IN JUNE

GENERAL CHARLES G. DAWES is still planning to pull a rabbit out of his hat and bring his "unexpected upturn" to prosperity in June, according to a news dispatch yesterday.

It is just like predicting that the world will come to an end in 1945—there is nothing definite upon which to base the assumption, other than just a guess.

With everybody studying the cause of depression, suggesting cures, attempting corrective measures and doing a thousand and one things to bring about prosperity, it is something for someone to be anticipating an "unexpected upturn."

Mr. Dawes evidently is looking so intently ahead that he is not watching the present. The upturn was started months and months ago. Everywhere improvement is in evidence.

But the term "prosperity" is a little bit vague. Personally, prosperity has not returned until a sizeable amount of money jingles in the pocket of the individual—but in many cases this was not true before the depression and will never be despite other conditions.

Whereas the Memphis Area has moved forward rapidly during the past two years, it was prohibited from making greater strides by a sub-normal crop production. Here "prosperity" cannot be ezpected in the old sense until another crop is produced.

If Mr. Dawes would explain his meaning when he uses the word "prosperity" his predicttion might be simplified. He doesn't need to explain what will cause his "unexpected upturn" because at most his prediction is only a guess and needs no vindication other than his own opinion.

WORLD TO BAT, AT TENSEST MOMENT

WHATEVER else you may say about the present moment in world history, you at least have to admit that it is exciting.

It is exciting for much the same reason that a baseball game is exciting when you have the bases full and the town's best fence-buster coming to bat; nobody knows just what is going to happen next, but whatever it is, it is bound to be something spectacular.

In the uncertainty of the present he sees youth presented with the greatest of all challenges.

"When all of youth that has been born in 1885-1935 shall have had its chance, this half century may perhaps be put down as the noblest in history," he remarks. "But to take that chance, youth must not be afraid to show itself, not as perpetually clever and shiny and speeding, but as filled with the awkward, faith-dipped simplicity which is the quality of greatness.

"It must not be afraid of anything—for just ahead of us may lie the world's most vicious war, or the benign curbing of cancer and tuberculosis; another Shakespeare, or another scourge of Dillingers in low places and Kreugers in high; a flight to Mars, or a descent into an ocean of lava; a peaceful world nation, or a world shattered into 10,000 bandit tribes."

And then he adds this significant comment:

"There are two equal sins for a thinker or doer in this year of 1935: to despair of the noble future of mankind; and to believe that this savage race, mankind—so much more savage than the tigers, because we kill not just for meat, but for our highest ideals—can be made all sweet and holy just by a few fine phrases.

A size-up of this kind is worth re-reading and thinking about. For while nearly all of us are painfully aware of the disastrous things that may happen to the world during the next generation, we often forget that it is equally possible for truly magnificent things to happen.

The world may go up as well as down. It has cut its moorings and is off on one of the most momentous trips it has ever taken; if the prospect is frightening, it can also be encouraging.

Too much optimism at a time like this is silly—and so is too much pessimism. If we can temper optimism with a sane realization of the difficulties ahead and an iron determination to make things work out for the benefit of mankind as a whole, this time may be known as the prelude to the greatest era of advancement in the history of the race.

SOME MORE DUST STORM REFUGEES

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

In most civilized countries number of deaths of babies in the first year of life has been reduced from half to two-thirds, and it seems likely that continued advancement of medical science will still further lower this incidence.

At the same time, however, there is a steadily decreasing birth rate, and as yet there is no sign that this is going to slow up In fact as the young people who passed through childhood during the lean years of the World War come to the marriageable age, the number of births is likely still further to be lowered.

With a rapidly declining birth rate, control of infant mortality becomes of even greater significance.

* * *

Lowest infant mortality rates of the world are those of Australia and New Zealand, where special efforts have been made in the past, and consistently maintained, to control this factor. Rates for the United States compare very favorably with those of other countries of similar size, such as Great Britain and Germany.

Among other factors determined by a recent investigation is the fact that the male infant dies more easily than the female. This has always been so, although no adequate explanation has ever been established.

Only answer given by scientists is the statement that nature has endowed the female organism with greater vitality than the male because it is meant to bring forth the next generation. However, that is a statement of opinion and not an established fact.

* * *

It has also been proved that infant mortality increases when the age of the mother passes a certain limit, and experience has shown that babies born to mothers well along in years are not as likely to survive as those born to mothers of a younger period, provided they are not too young.

Illegitimate babies have a much higher death rate than those born legitimately, and figures show that their mortaliy during the first 24 hours of life is far greater than that of legitimate babies. The reasons for this can be readily surmised.

Factors responsible for deaths of infants during the first year of life are both medical and social. Modern infant welfare work and sanitary improvement have begun to overcome effects of poverty.

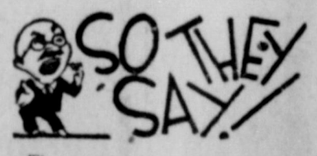

Advancement of medical science and spread of information concerning prenatal care are doing much to overcome medical causes of infant deaths.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Look Back a Thousand Years and You'll Find "New Deal" Problems . . . Even the Chinese Had the Idea in B. C. Period . . . Prophetic Words From Henry George.

WASHINGTON, May 7. — There is one indoor pastime of which this community seems never to tire.

First, you have to have a book. Then you open it up, lick your chops, and start reading passages which tend to indicate that the problems of the New Deal are really only the same old problems of a hundred or a thousand years ago and that there really isn't anything new under the political-economic sun.

Thus a bureau chief recently pulled out from a library shelf Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" and read therefrom certain comments of the central character, Sir Boss.

One assumes Mr. Roosevelt read them at one time or another and although it isn't on record that he seized the expression "New Deal" from Twain, the comments have a rather familiar ring in these days of worry over concentrated wealth and corporate power. Here's the passage:

"And now here I was, in a country where a right to say how the country should be governed was restricted to six persons in each thousand of its population.

"For the 994 to express dissatisfaction with the regnant system and propose to change it would have made the whole six shudder as one man, it would have been so disloyal, so dishonorable, such putrid black treason.

"So to speak, I was become a stockholder in a corporation where 994 of the members furnished all the money and did all the work, and the other six elected themselves a permanent board of direction and took all the dividends.

"It seemed to me that what the 994 dupes needed was a new deal."

MOTHER'S DAY SERVICE IS ANNOUNCED

Attention Called to Special Occasion Next Sunday

"On Sunday, May 12, the people of the United States will again pay homage to motherhood," J. Henry Read, acting postmaster, stated yesterday, announcing plans for postal work during the period prior to Mother's Day.

"The custom of observing Mother's Day is a beautiful one, not only because it revives precious memories of bygone days, but for the reason that it is full of opportunity for the renewal of the love which rightfully belongs to mothers and can be visibly and tangibly expressed by sending her letters, gifts, greeting cards, flowers and other suitable remembrances. A letter or package to mother delivered on her day is a sure messenger of happiness and cheer.

The postal service is glad to have a part in the observance of this custom, according to Mr. Read, and in this connection it is desired that postmasters suggest to patrons that in the absence of regular Sunday delivery the letters or other articles sent in remembrance of Mother's Day should be mailed sufficiently early to reach the offices of address in time for delivery Saturday, May 11.

"Many persons prefer to send Mother's Day letters or articles special delivery with the endorsement 'deliver on Mother's Day,' and it will be proper for postmasters to call attention to this feature," Mr. Read tated. "The special delivery fee may be paid by means of special delivery stamps or ordinary postage stamps, the endorsement 'special delievery' appearing prominently below the stamps."

Senate Misses Two-Thirds on Bonus Payment

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 7.—By a 54 to 30 vote—less than the two-thirds required to override a predicted presidential voto—the Senate today lined up with the House in favor of a cash payment of the bonus.

The Senate substituted the Vinson cash payment bill, backed by the American Legion, for the compromise offered by Senator Harrison in an effort to obtain legislation satisfactory to the administration.

Committee Makes Brutality Report

By Associated Press

AUSTIN, May 8.—A special investigating committee told the Texas Touse of Representatives yesterday that some brutality had existed at the Retrieve prison farm, but that this was only one of several cases of 21 convicts maiming themselves since last September.

The House ordered the investigation after claims had been made that the prisoners were so badly treated that many of them mutilated theselves to escape further mistreatment.

A few convicts amputated a hand or foot, but in most instances they cut off fingers or toes or gashed their legs.
