Council to pick sports complex board Tuesday

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

City Council members Friday finalized the selection process for the seven-member board that will become the 4b Corporation, an organization required by state law to oversee the sports complex until the final bonds are paid off.

Four councilmen will serve on the board, along with two members representing Midland Independent School District and one Midland resident at large.

And how will the City Council select its four members?

"We want to make sure we have a board of directors that represents the whole of our community," explained Mayor Bobby Burns.

So who will those directors be?

Councilman Dale Brown said he had no reason to not desire being on the board, but acknowledged that others on the council have been more involved in the stadium effort and, therefore, might be considered more qualified to serve on the 4b Corporation.

Likewise, Councilman Juluis Brooks said it didn't make much difference to him whether he served on the board, so long as there was a member of the minority community who did.

Brooks said if a minority councilman isn't assigned to the board, he would nominate J.W. Cooper, who works for Bankers Life Insurance and who earlier served two terms on the Midland College board of trustees.

"Once we finish this sports complex, it will be a step to higher heights," said Brooks. "This is for the entire city of Midland. We are going to benefit from this."

Berry Simpson said the smart thing would be to appoint seven public representatives to the board, which he feels would be the best use of tax money.

"I'm not lobbying, but I'd love to serve," Simpson said. "It's in my district so I'll be involved."

Burns has already indicated Lee Wood and Don Washburn should get seats as a result of their extensive research of the baseball and

Sales tax revenues down in November

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

The city of Midland's sales tax revenues for the month of November were down 12.27 percent compared to the same month last year, continuing a downward trend that has existed during most of 1999.

The city received $1.13 million for the month of November, which is based on sales that took place in September.

Deputy City Manager Rick Menchaca said sales tax receipts for this month are having a "carry-through effect" which may explain the dip. That "carry-through effect," said Menchaca, has resulted from many companies filing their financial reports on a quarterly basis which didn't coincide with the end of the city's fiscal year on Sept. 30. Lee survives 35-28 scare from Bulldogs

By Terry Williamson

■ Game coverage/1B

Midland Lee's football Rebels, ranked No. 1 in the state (AP) and No. 1 in the nation (USA Today), may have found out Friday night at Memorial Stadium that their toughest foe lives in their own backyard.

The Rebels survived a 35-28 scare from Midland High, who saw major upset hopes and playoff dreams die at Lee's 10-yard line. Forever, this game will live with memories of "The Interception."

Lee defensive back T.J. Glover, who was a wide receiver on Lee's state championship team a year ago, intercepted a Laynce Nix pass with 2:02 left in the game with the Bulldogs perched at the Lee 10. It came when fans on both sides of the field were gearing for almost certain overtime.

"We were in man coverage and I couldn't let my man get away," the senior Glover said. "Coach said we had to step up and make a big play. It was my time to step up and grow up."

For Nix, also a senior who had 171 yards passing which is near his career single game best of 178 yards, this is one

Police device burns child during raid

By Art Sinclair
Big Spring Correspondent

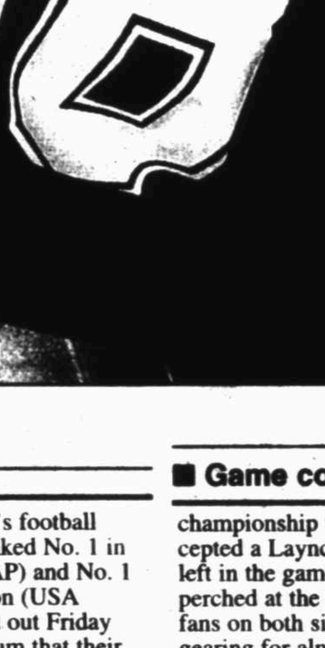

BIG SPRING — A 17-month-old Big Spring child remained hospitalized in University Medical Center's burn unit in Lubbock Friday after receiving a burn on each leg from an incendiary device used in a narcotics raid.

According to Sgt. Roger Sweat of the Big Spring Police Department, the Big Spring Police Department's SORT team and agents of the West Texas Narcotics Task Force had raided a residence in the 2700 block of Williams Rd. in Howard County on Thursday when the incident occurred. The warrant was issued on information from an undercover narcotics officer from the West Texas Narcotics Task Force.

David Bradshaw, commander of the task force, said his men were manning the perimeter of the crime scene while officers of the special operations response team entered the residence. A "distraction device was deployed into a bedroom of the house thought to be unoccupied," Bradshaw said. The infant was alone in the bedroom when the incendiary device exploded.

The small child was rushed to Scenic Mountain Medical Center in Big Spring, and then airlifted to Uni-

A federal judge declared Microsoft, Bill Gates' software empire, a monopoly Friday.

Judge rules Microsoft is monopoly

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge declared Microsoft Corp. is a monopoly Friday, ruling that aggressive actions by Bill Gates' software empire to protect its technology dominance are "stifling innovation" and hurting consumers.

■ Reaction/7A

The decision could lead to serious sanctions against Microsoft and a reshaping of the multibillion-dollar high-technology industry.

In a decision tilted heavily toward the government's view of the antitrust case, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson said Microsoft has "demonstrated that it will use its prodigious market power and immense profits to harm any firm that insists on pursuing initiatives that could intensify competition against one of Microsoft's core products."

The judge added that some innovations "that would truly benefit consumers never occur for the sole reason that they do not coincide with Microsoft's self interest." He said harm to consumers was "immediate and easily discernible."

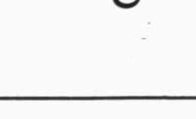

Gates said he and other company executives "respectfully disagree with a number of the court's findings."

The decision to apply the monopoly label is a significant setback for Microsoft, as well as a clear recognition of the expansive influence of the software giant whose Windows products run most of the world's personal computers.

Still, Friday's action does not necessarily mean

Hearing postponed

Monday's scheduled hearing in U.S. District Court on an agreement between the Midland Independent School District and the U.S. Department of Justice regarding unitary status has been postponed to give plaintiff-intervenors time to file any objections to the agreement.

No new date has been set.

MISD Superintendent Joe Baresi on Friday explained that District Court Judge Ed Prado earlier gave plaintiff-intervenors 10 days to file objections, with their deadline to do so being Nov. 12.

Plaintiff-intervenors have indicated they intend to object to the agreement and a hearing could be held later if they file objections.

DeZavala hosts veterans' tribute

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Under a waving American flag, a group of children, veterans and teachers stood at attention as "Taps" filled the early Friday morning silence at DeZavala Elementary, where for the ninth year in a row, the school hosted a special Veteran's Day Tribute.

The group got a head start on Veteran's Day, which is next Thursday.

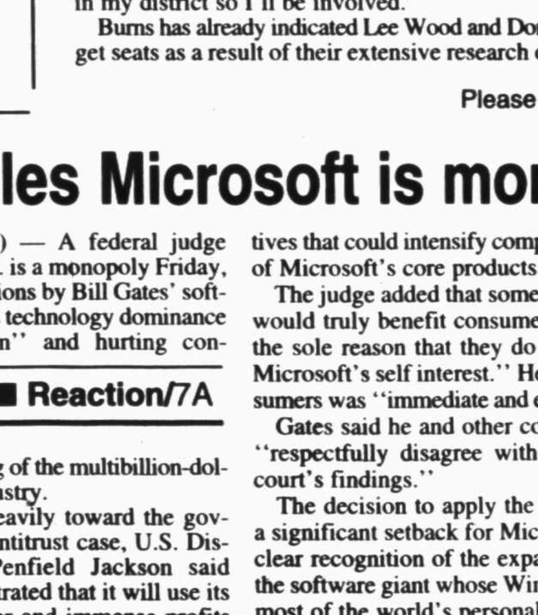

DeZavala began hosting the annual ceremony during the Gulf War as a way to help children understand what was taking place at the time, said Estelita Q. Davila, coordinator for the event, teacher at DeZavala and a U.S. veteran.

"We start planing this event in September," she said. "It takes a lot of time to do so much with small hands. The teachers have to be dedicated to the project for it to work."

Ms. Davila said all the hard work is worth it because the students come away with a better appreciation for all the veterans.

This year's program featured presentations to a number of veterans, and music from the Abell Junior High School Band. Other contributors to the festivities were the Odessa High Drill Team, Alamo Junior High Men's Choir, Alamo 8th Grade Treble Choir, the DeZavala Elementary strings as well as the DeZavala first-grade students.

Hindu-Christian tensions boiling as pope arrives in India

By Krishnan Guruswamy
Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — In his first visit to India in 13 years, Pope John Paul II was greeted Friday with a constellation of tensions between Christians and majority Hindus, a problem the pope's spokesman called one of human rights, not religion.

As the pope left Rome for New Delhi, a city where he has been burned in effigy, the Vatican issued a statement calling for "collaboration" between India's 820 million Hindus and 23 million Christians. But before he even touched down, the right-wing World Hindu Council renewed its demand that the pontiff withdraw foreign missionaries from India.

The pope's visit, which comes as attacks against Christians and Muslims have increased in recent years across India, has triggered a debate about the conversions of poor, mostly illiterate Hindus to Christianity. Some groups say the conversions are done through coercion.

Aboard the jetliner, papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said the tension between Hindus and Christians is "not a religious problem but a human rights problem."

"The biggest democracy in the world is facing a problem on whether or not to recognize religious freedom for everyone," he said.

The visit, the pope's second to India, triggered thousands of police officers to go on alert in New Delhi as he landed at a near-empty air force base. Security guards frisked some 300 journalists and officials, traditionally the only people allowed into the base during visits by dignitaries.

The pope, who is 79 and in frail health, climbed down the stairs from the special Alitalia 747 flight. He was met by Deputy Foreign Minister Ajit Panja and by local bishops and government officials. Commentators said it was the most low-key arrival of his 22-year papacy.

As he was driven to the Vatican's embassy, which is in the city's diplomatic neighborhood, fireworks lit up the sky ahead of Sunday's Hindu festival of Diwali, or Festival of Lights.

On Diwali, John Paul will celebrate a Mass in the 70,000-seat Jawaharlal Nehru Stadium. Church leaders have incorporated an Indian motif on the dais, with a stylized depiction of an earthen lamp representing Diwali.

The festival is marked by feasting, fireworks and lighting of lamps to represent the triumph of good over evil.

Hindu fundamentalists, meanwhile, have prepared for the pope's visit by staging marches and sit-ins in protest, demanding an apology for 16th-century killings by Portuguese Catholic colonialists during the Inquisition. They also demanded an end to conversions and a declaration by the pope that Christianity is not the only path to salvation.

On Saturday, the pope will visit Raj Ghat, the memorial to Mohandas K. Gandhi, who led India's freedom movement with a campaign of nonviolence.

During his last visit 13 years ago, the pope surprised onlookers by kneeling at Gandhi's grave on the banks of the Yamuna River and praying for several minutes.

In recent years, attacks against religious minorities have been on the rise. Some commentators have blamed the attacks on the growing political strength of right-wing Hindu groups, such as the party of Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee.

Vajpayee, who is seen as the moderate face of his Bharatiya Janata Party, will call on the pope Saturday.

The pope's visit will mark the closure of the synod of Asia's Roman Catholic bishops. The bishops met in Rome earlier to finalize an 80-page document — which he will release — outlining the future of Christianity in Asia and the church's relationship with the continent's other religions.

Asia's Christian leaders have called for showing greater respect and understanding of other religions such as Hinduism, Buddhism, Sikhism and animism, and respecting local customs.

The revival of religious fundamentalism in India "is an ever more aggressive and worrying phenomenon, a serious threat to the church and Catholics," said the Vatican's missionary news agency, Fides.

John Paul has made interreligious dialogue a principal theme as his church prepares to mark the start of Christianity's third millennium.

Catholic leaders in India said they did not expect the pope to make an apology or meet with the Hindu groups that have made demands, although he will address religious leaders of other faiths and Christian denominations in a one-hour meeting Sunday.

However, they noted the pope has apologized previously for other historic acts of the Catholic church, including the killing of Protestants during Europe's religious wars.

Man-eating big cats kill 21 in Tanzania

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Lions and leopards have killed 21 people in southern Tanzania this year, largely because a severe drought has killed their normal prey, a government official said Friday.

"Drought has forced older animals to move closer to human settlement in search of food and into killing people they come across during late hours," Natural Resources Minister Zakia Meghji said.

She said the government has sent armed scouts to the area to hunt down the man-eaters.

"Experience has shown that once a lion has a taste of human blood, the beast will come back for more and it must be eliminated," she said in a telephone interview from Dodoma, the capital.

Some people make matters worse by settling in isolated areas surrounded by tall grass that provides cover for lions and leopards, the minister said.

"They creep close to the homesteads and then attack," she said.

Morgan ends 23-year career with TXU

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

LuAnn Morgan has left her position as district manager with TXU Electric and Gas effective Friday, ending a 23-year career with the Dallas-based utility.

She explained that she accepted a severance package offered managers at different levels that the company wanted to streamline.

"It's an amicable parting," she said. "More than anything, I'd come to a crossroads: Do I stay in my career or do I move on. I saw this as a great opportunity."

She plans to remain in Midland, complete her dissertation toward a doctorate in psychology, something she took up as a new challenge, and, most importantly, take the opportunity "to do something I've never done and that's be a full-time mom to my children."

She and her husband have two sons, 12 and 16, and have been parents to an exchange student from Belgium.

Long active in community organizations and a member of numerous boards, including United Way of Midland, Boy Scouts, Meals-On-Wheels and the Midland Chamber of Commerce, she said she plans to remain active in those agencies.

pass he would like to have back. However, this was a gutsy showing in an effort to knock off a state power and end what is now a 49-year streak without a state playoff berth for MHS.

"I lost the defender (Glover) for one second," Nix said. "I thought he was doing something different than he was doing and I made a mistake.

"I learned a lot from this game. You have to take the good with the bad. You can either move on down the road or lay down. I intend to move on down the road. This team played with a lot of heart."

Lee coach John Parchman said, "Obviously, the interception (by Glover) there at the end was a big time play. Before he came up with that play, we were on the sidelines wondering how much time would be left if they scored. We were wondering if we would have enough time to come back.

"Our kids played hard and their kids played hard. I think you have to give us credit and you have to give them credit."

Lee goes to the state playoffs as the undisputed District 4-5A champion with a 10-0 regular season record, the first ever for a Lee team. This was one feat that Lee couldn't accomplish last year.

"All the district games are tough. They say you get better when you play good people. Well, 4-5A is good people."

For the second year in a row, Midland High has gone into this game needing a win over Lee to make the state playoffs. If the loss was bad news, it got worse. Abilene High defeated Abilene Cooper which would have put MHS in the playoffs had they pulled off the miracle upset.

"My heart is breaking for these kids, especially the seniors who have been with us three years," said MHS coach David Browning. "It's going to be tough to let these kids go. We played the No. 1 team in the universe and our offensive line blocked the snot out of them. We took those guys the distance. We executed our offense in the first half, but gave them the short field on turnovers in the second half. They scored on two of our three turnovers and the third one sealed the win for them."

Lee quarterback Jon Rogers, who passed for 142 yards and two touchdowns, was able to guide the Lee team downfield when the Rebels had the ball, but MHS kept the Lee offense off the field much of the game.

"We were shocked when the score was tied (21-21) at the half," Rogers said. "But there wasn't any finger pointing at the half. We came out in the third quarter and pounded and pounded the ball and it finally worked. Then our defense came up with the interception and that was the play we needed."

Lee linebacker David Dakil, who came up with several big plays in the game, felt like the Lee defense didn't play very well, saying, "We were missing some players on defense and we just didn't come to play like we are capable of," Dakil said. "I'm just glad we got the win in the big rivalry."

While the Lee defense was giving up over 400 yards of offense to the Bulldogs, including a season high 237 rushing yards to MHS tailback Jimmy Smith, an injured linebacker Joe Norman stalked the sidelines like a lost puppy.

"I can't explain how I felt," Norman said. "It was heartbreaking not being able to get in the game. We were giving up all those yards and points, and there was nothing I could do about it. It was driving me crazy, but T.J. (Glover) came through with that interception and made the big play. I felt a little better then."

Parchman also held out fullback Clint McNutt. McNutt and Norman wanted in. Parchman wanted them out. Although both could have played, they will be needed in the playoffs.

"When the game was a close as it was, it crossed the mind a few times to let those two go in, especially with them nipping at my heels all night. But I think we made the best decision in the long run for the team."

If you have two hands, you probably have enough fingers on them to count the number of people in Midland who thought that MHS could defeat Lee. But this game will go down as one of the all-time greats in the 39 games between the two teams.

"We came out knowing that we could do it," said MHS tight end Randy Gardner, who now moves over as a starter for the Bulldog basketball team which is again favored to win the District 4-5A title. "This team has the most heart of any team I've ever been on. They didn't know when to quit. We came out and played as hard as we could."

Lee is now in the state playoffs for the 16th time in the last 17 years and for the 18th time in school history. Lee has also won 18 consecutive games and will now face San Angelo Central at 7:30 p.m. next Friday at Memorial Stadium. Lee didn't have a playoff game at home last year in the state championship run.

MHS hasn't been to the state playoffs since 1951, but it sure looked like a playoff caliber team on Friday night.

"The key to this game is us," Browning said. "It's not anything Lee did to us. We just shot ourselves in the foot. And that makes it a little tougher to take."

It may be tough to take, but at least, there won't be any hanging heads in Midland today.

RECEIPTS: City officials think numbers in December report will be more positive he said, could have had adverse effects on the city's bottom line. But, he added, there's no definitive answer for the 12.27 percent drop.

Menchaca also said Midland's financial officer Troy Gifford told city officials there may be a residual effect from the tax holiday in early August, a three-day period in which no sales tax was collected on many items, especially those involving back-to-school shopping.

Gifford was unavailable for comment Friday.

City Manager Mike McGregor has predicted in the past that the city wouldn't start seeing improvements in year-to-year comparisons on receipts until the December report. McGregor based that opinion on the fact oil prices have risen above $20 a barrel — and remained steady for several months — and that sales tax revenues tend to rise and fall with the price of oil.

McGregor, too, was unavailable for comment on Friday, but Menchaca reaffirmed that belief by predicting that the numbers in December's report would be more positive.

"We think there's a three-month lag effect," Menchaca said. "The oil's been up since late summer. We can tell that the December check should at least not have a decrease. We're going to monitor (the situation) before we make any additional assumptions or revisions to the budget."

The 1999-2000 budget expects to see $12,500,000 in sales tax revenue.

"The public's confidence is increasing so they'll be purchasing more durable goods and clothing (which should eventually reflect sales tax receipts)," Menchaca said.

BOARD: Council to select members of 4b Corporation

football/soccer components of the complex.

"Yes, I want to be on board," Wood said Friday. "We've come this far."

Wood had the responsibility of spearheading all the research of the baseball stadium.

"I'd enjoy doing it," Washburn said. "I think there will be a lot of us that would be involved. I'm the only one that's gone to all the football stadiums. I would probably expect to be. The mayor will probably chair it. We're going to try to look at all parts of the community. We have to make sure all interests are served. It's going to be tough living up to the airport, to meet the success of the airport."

"Yes, I want to (be on the board)," Councilman Jose Cuevas said. "It's going to be a very difficult decision (for the council)."

He said it would be critical to have a board that was fair in terms of representation. But, he acknowledged the decision on who to appoint from the council would be tough.

"I think the leadership did a good job," said Cuevas of the stadium effort. "I think West Texas will win big. I think of the frontier and the people who founded this community. I think with the addition of this new complex it'll just be more of a crown jewel. We've stepped into a new age - the dawn of a new future."

Joseph Baressi Jr., MISD superintendent, said he has submitted four applicants for the two spots reserved for MISD. Those candidates are MISD school board members George Lara, James Fuller, Becky Oekerman and Martha Manulik.

The seven appointees to the board are scheduled to be determined at Tuesday's City Council meeting.

MICROSOFT: Final ruling could come by end of year the company will lose the case. Federal law generally bans companies from maintaining monopoly power through illegal business practices, but not from achieving their success selling popular products or making shrewd business decisions.

"We'll continue to make our best efforts to resolve the case," Gates said in an apparent reference to possible settlement talks.

Assistant U.S. Attorney General Joel I. Klein said the government was "always prepared to discuss settlements." But he added that "any talks would have to fully and properly address our competitive concerns."

James Barksdale, former chief executive officer of Netscape Communications Corp., said Jackson's strong language — the judge called one of Microsoft's claims "specious" — suggests the possibility of severe punishments. The government had portrayed Netscape as an Internet pioneer that was among Microsoft's victims.

Shares of Microsoft on the Nasdaq Stock Market closed Friday before the ruling at $91.56 1/4, down 18 3/4 cents.

A final ruling could come by the end of the year, with any penalties or remedies spelled out next year.

Jackson could order that Microsoft be broken up into smaller companies that would compete against each other. Or he could choose from a range of lesser punishments, such as requiring Microsoft to allow rivals to sell and improve its dominant Windows operating system, or prohibiting the company from interfering with new technology that could threaten Windows.

The government previously accused Microsoft of breaking an important related agreement in 1995, and mutual distrust remains. Gates privately said a few months after that earlier deal, "We haven't changed our business practices at all," according to trial evidence.

Famous for being personally involved in decisions at Microsoft, Gates avoided appearing as a trial witness.

HONOR: Veteran wants monument to honor Hispanic men, women who served in WWII

(From 1A)

One of the many veterans on hand was Ciro Sanchez, who has been leading the charge on getting a monument built to honor the Hispanic men and woman who served in World War II.

During Friday's event, Sanchez talked about how he spent his time during World War II.

"I landed on Omaha beach, but I was about two months too late," Sanchez said. "By the time I got there, the Germans were on the run. When I got back, I started working on gathering names of the Mexicanos that served from Midland. I expected to find about 30 or 40, but found out there were 123 that came out of Midland to serve."

It is because of that large number, Sanchez said, that he has worked so hard to make the monument a reality.

RAID: Child in stable condition

versity Medical Center in Lubbock. Hospital sources list the child's condition as stable.

Bradshaw expressed his regrets in the injury of the child. "My people are saddened by the child's injuries," he said. "We always take care in using incendiary devices; making sure that they are activated away from people. It's simply a diversionary device."

Two men were arrested during the raid on the house. Officers found a quantity of marijuana (less than a 1/4 pound), less than a gram of cocaine and a small quantity of prescription drugs in the house.

Undercover agents had received information that the two men arrested were handling a large quantity of drugs. Domingo Castillo, 29, of Howard County was charged with possession of marijuana, possession of dangerous drugs and possession of controlled substances.

Justice of Peace Bennie Green set bond on Castillo at $5,500.

Fred Castillo, 53, of Howard County was charged with violation of a protective order. His bond was set at $2,000.

House approves Medicare relief bill

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

West Texas' rural hospitals took another step toward Medicare relief Friday as Medicare Refinement Bill 3075 received unanimous approval on the floor of the House. The bill will next be passed on to the Senate, and if approved there, sent on to President Clinton.

"In the two years since we passed the (Balanced Budget Amendment) we've heard it went a little too far," said the bill's cosponsor, Republican Tom Bliley of Virginia. "Today we're back to make some corrections. It's a good bill and it deserves the support of all my colleagues."

The bill, sponsored by Bliley and Bill Thomas of California, was criticized by some Democrats for what they called partisanship during its creation and for the exclusion of a prescription drug plan that would reduce costs to senior citizens.

New York Democrat Charles Rangel protested that Democrats had been left out of the planning process on the bill. He, along with other Democrats, expressed anger over there not being an attachment that would lower prescription prices for the elderly.

"It is a refinement bill, not a reform bill," countered California Republican Bill Thomas, who serves as chairman of the health subcommittee.

Others agreed.

What's most important at this point in time, said Iowa Republican Jim Nussle, is saving America's rural hospitals.

"It shouldn't be a debate on prescription drugs. This is the most important issue in health care this year. We can't wait while you're cutting 30-second spots for your campaigns. Our hospitals across the country are in danger of closing."

According to supporters, although the bill won't offer total relief, it will provide many of the Medicare easements hospitals have been seeking.

Bob Dimit, president of the board of directors for Midland County Hospital District, said he could not comment on the bill until reading it thoroughly himself.

Windell McCord, head administrator of Texas Memorial Hospital in Brady, said the bill was positive in that it would help more hospitals than it would hurt.

John Boff, president and CEO of TORCH (Texas Organization of Rural and Community Hospitals) said rural Texas would still prefer to be totally exempted from Outpatient PPS, and that may still happen, he said, because that language exists in the Senate version of bill. "We're optimistic we'll get the Senate version."

But, he said, if that doesn't happen, then the five-year phase-in (system) would be much more advantageous than the current system for outpatient care.

Smith: Texas should become top producer of renewable energy

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Texas has a full menu of renewable energy resources and should become the top producer of renewable energy within 20 years, according to Russell Smith, executive director of the Texas Renewable Energy Industries Association.

Smith, who has been in Midland this week serving as the moderator for the association's annual convention, said the three main sources of renewable energy are wind, solar and biomass, but wind would probably grab the lion's share in Texas.

Smith said landfill gas, methane created by landfill debris, was big in Texas, as was photovoltaic solar. "Photovoltaics will probably be confined to individual needs. Remote homes and cabins, stock watering, and communications will be some applications. One of the biggest is the oil and gas industry, which used photovoltaics on remote leases."

The association executive from Austin added: "Texas has the most renewable resources of any state, and now geothermal has been introduced into the mix and may bring some surprises."

He noted that the renewable energy movement in Texas was being driven by a commitment on the part of the state to add 2,000 mega watts of renewable power by 2009.

"Renewable energy can become another asset for the area," Smith said, adding, "if the people of West Texas will embrace its potential and pursue it with the same energy as fossil fuels. It will spring from the grass roots."

Mike Sloan, an Austin renewable energy consultant, said major Texas utilities had conducted a number of customer surveys around the state, and concluded that Texans want renewable energy and were willing to pay more to make it happen. "Cost efficiency is still a factor, but customer surveys say that renewable energy doesn't have to be the cheapest."

Added Sloan: "We have these energy resources, and if we don't use them we waste them. Texas is now a net importer of energy, and we are going to need all the energy we can get — renewable and non-renewable. We continue to push natural gas very hard, because it has potential in transportation."

Smith said the three primary directions of the Texas Renewable Energy Industries Association were to use more natural gas, expand conservation, and increase renewable energy. "We want to create clean energy and Texas jobs."

Some Texas companies have already seen the potential to create profits and jobs from renewable energy. Enron, who bills itself as a "natural gas major," is the world's second largest manufacturer of wind turbines. Enron was an exhibitor at the conference held at the Midland Hilton. Around the world, Enron has developed and financed more than $1.3 billion in wind power projects.

"It is technically possible to meet all of Texas energy demand with renewable energy, but not economical," Sloan said. "Economics is a major factor in how fast the renewable energy market moves, and economics is a moving target. If hydrocarbon prices become high, renewables are not far away."

Both Smith and Sloan acknowledge that the renewable energy movement is motivated primarily by environmental issues, but added that energy security must also become an issue.

Poorly equipped Russian forces face insurgents, harsh conditions

By Maxim Marmur
Associated Press

Body exchanges have become common in the hills surrounding Bamut. The Islamic insurgents place great value on quickly burying their dead, so the Russians seize bodies of dead fighters to trade for prisoners.

ARSHTY, Russia — The group of thirsty Russian soldiers nervously eyed the well. Standing in front of it were a line of Chechen villagers, refusing to let the soldiers drink.

The commander of a passing Russian armored personnel carrier saw what was happening and stopped the vehicle, its squat armored prow facing straight at the Chechens. Reluctantly, the villagers moved aside so the soldiers could approach the well.

"Welcome to hell!" a teen-age boy shouted at the Russians. "You guys won't leave Bamut alive."

A few miles away, the sound of artillery and fighting could be heard around the town of Bamut, a center of Chechen resistance to Russia's assault on the breakaway republic. Located high in the forests of southwest Chechnya, Bamut guards the gateway to the southern mountains.

It took Russian forces four major attacks to capture the town during the 1994-96 Chechen war. Now Russian forces are fighting for Bamut again.

"Aren't you afraid that we will take you prisoner?" some teenagers in Arshty shouted at Warrant Officer Vladimir Dovydenko.

"You won't get me alive," he answered, flashing a hand grenade at them. "I would rather blow up myself and you."

Mindful of the last war, when the Chechens fought the Russian army to a standstill, federal forces are relying on artillery and airstrikes this time to try to avoid costly infantry battles.

The tactics worked well on the plains of northern Chechnya. They are not so successful in the mountains, where deep forests and fog hide the insurgents.

The Russian tanks and other heavy vehicles have trouble moving along the narrow and slippery mountain roads, and often get lost. The Russian infantry often moves only when it has tank support.

In one recent incident, soldiers said a Russian tank became detached from its convoy. The crew followed a maze of forest roads until they suddenly blundered into rebel-held Bamut.

Initially stunned, the insurgents quickly opened fire. The tank managed to reverse out of the town, but five soldiers who were sitting on it were tossed to the ground.

Two were taken prisoner, but the other three escaped. Pvt. Alexei Dmitriyev, badly wounded in both legs, spent several days hiding in a forest before he started crying in agony and was captured.

The Chechens freed Dmitriyev and another prisoner in exchange for the bodies of several comrades killed in a skirmish, soldiers said.

Now, body exchanges have become common in the hills surrounding Bamut. The Islamic insurgents place great value on quickly burying their dead, so the Russians seize bodies of dead fighters to trade for prisoners.

As the fighting goes on, hatred grows on both sides. Some of the Russian soldiers in Arshty said they were watching a Chechen TV station and saw the charred body of one of their comrades who had been missing. The body was on display in the center of Bamut.

Constant skirmishes and the harsh mountain conditions have taken their toll on the Russian troops, who look tired and wear ragtag uniforms.

There is enough food, the troops say, but they complain of frequent water shortages. The army's water trucks often get stuck on the mountain roads. There is no water for washing, and soldiers say they are crawling with lice.

When Gen. Vladimir Shamanov, who commands Russian forces in western Chechnya, asked his men what they needed most, they asked for sleeping bags and sweaters.

Officers said there weren't any. Col. Alexander Chereshkov, the sector's supply chief, said warm clothing was on the way from Vladivostok — 10 time zones away from Chechnya. He couldn't say why nothing else was available.

The young Russian soldiers, who wear heavy, cavalry-style boots, say they dream of mountain boots and waterproof clothing. The rain and snow in the mountains means they are often drenched for days and unable to walk safely on the slippery, muddy trails.

On one recent mission, a patrol passed the bodies of several dead Chechen fighters. The Russian soldiers looked at the Chechens' modern, Western-style camouflage uniforms with open envy.

But many of the soldiers insist they are not despondent and that they want to defeat the Chechens.

"We must crush this bandit state," said Lt. Pyotr Nikonchuk. "They subsist on trading drugs and kidnappings."

Campaigners make final pitches ahead of Australia's republic vote

By Mike Corder
Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — Supporters and opponents of Australia becoming a republic made their last pitches Friday before a referendum on whether the nation should say goodbye to Britain's Queen Elizabeth II as head of state.

"Vote with your heart and vote for Australia," urged Malcolm Turnbull, chairman of the Australian Republican Movement.

Opponents argued that the proposed change offered no improvement.

"I think we are right to be skeptical and suspicious of people saying there will be a new nirvana if we become a republic," Prime Minister John Howard told Australian Broadcasting Corp. radio. "I mean, that's just not true."

Australians began voting Saturday at polling booths from downtown shopping malls to remote sheep farms spread across the vast nation. Four dozen mobile voting stations were being flown from one outback settlement to another, and 42 were set up in prisons. Voting is compulsory and turnout was expected to be high.

Even though most Australians believe the queen is a throwback to the days of colonialism, opinion polls suggested the referendum was doomed to failure, in large part because the nation has not been able to agree on a system of government without her.

Although Australia gained independence in 1901, it still recognizes Britain's monarch as its head of state.

Under the system being put to the nation's 12.3 million voters, the queen would be replaced by a president elected by a two-thirds majority of parliament.

Monarchists and those republicans who want the public to elect the president have united in a powerful marriage of convenience against the proposal — the monarchists hoping a no vote will end the republican debate, and the radical republicans hoping if they scuttle this model, they will soon be offered the one they want.

The republican cause even united two former prime ministers, Gough Whitlam and Malcolm Fraser, whose bitter rivalry once plunged the queen's representative in Australia — the governor-general — into the heart of a constitutional crisis.

In 1975, Governor-General Sir John Kerr used his generally ceremonial power to sack Whitlam's Labor government and appoint Fraser, a conservative opposition leader, in order to break a parliamentary deadlock over government spending. It was the only time a governor-general flexed any political muscle.

But Whitlam and Fraser campaigned together in favor of the republic, saying Australia came of age as a nation long ago and no longer needs the queen.

Becoming a republic would have no impact on the day-to-day workings of government, and the economy and trade would not be affected. The queen's head would remain on Australian money and Britain's Union Jack would still occupy a corner of Australia's flag.

Peter Costello, Howard's deputy in government but adversary in pre-referendum campaigning, said Australians clearly want a republic but are divided on how to elect a president.

Choosing to remain a constitutional monarchy "will bear trouble for Australia, because our constitution will tell us something that we don't feel in our hearts nor our heads," Costello said.

Also headed for rejection, according to polls, was a second question asking if Australians want to add a preamble to their constitution.

A general statement of Australian values and with no legal significance, the text also officially recognizes Australia's Aborigines as "the nation's first people," and praises them "for their deep kinship with their lands and for the ancient and continuing cultures which enrich the life of our country."

The proposed preamble also refers to generations of immigrants who have helped shape Australia. Many of them — about 23 percent of Australia's 20 million residents were born overseas — have said they likely will be voting for change.

Last year, the Federation of Ethnic Communities' Councils of Australia, the national umbrella group of various migrant organizations, overwhelmingly endorsed the proposed switch to a republic.

The preamble was crafted and supported by Howard, but has received little attention — overshadowed during weeks of intense lobbying about the republic question.

Almost nothing has been heard from an estimated 200,000 British citizens living in Australia and registered to vote.

If the referendum succeeds, Australia will become the world's 147th republic on Jan. 1, 2001. It is now one of 64 nations with a monarch as head of state.

Nations join forces to save toothfish

HOBART, Australia (AP) — Antarctic nations agreed Friday to fight illegal fishing of the Patagonian toothfish by forcing anglers to show special documentation before they bring the fish ashore.

The agreement was reached at the meeting of the Convention on the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources, a treaty overseen by 23 nations with fishing interests in the Antarctic region.

The catch certification scheme, which goes into effect next year, will enable authorities to trace fish from the Southern Ocean to the market place and oblige member nations not to accept illegal stock.

Proper paperwork also will be needed to offload fish to a ship registered in one of the commission's member states.

Environmental group Greenpeace welcomed the idea, but criticized the commission for not imposing a moratorium on all toothfish fishing.

Toothfish is so valuable in the fishing industry that it is known as "white gold." Illegal vessels are making $500 million a year hauling in 110,000 tons of toothfish, twice the amount of the legal catch, marine authorities say.

Company mergers help and hurt hunt for new drugs

By Phil Galewitz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — With pharmaceutical companies pursuing mergers to reduce costs and boost profits, some fear the new gargantuan combinations will stop developing drugs that are important but have little sales potential.

Others say that research is getting so expensive, drug companies have no choice but to merge with rivals.

"Size confers different sets of advantages and disadvantages," said Joseph Zammit-Lucia, chief executive of Cambridge Pharma Consultancy of Cambridge, Mass.

The debate over whether drug mergers are good or bad for consumers is arising anew as Pfizer Inc. tries to break up Warner-Lambert Co.'s planned merger with American Home Products Corp.

The fight is the biggest hostile takeover battle in the history of the drug industry and comes after several other mergers this year.

Pfizer launched a hostile counter-bid for Warner-Lambert on Thursday, hours after Warner-Lambert and American Home said they would merge. Pfizer's shares fell for a second day Friday, cutting the value of its offer from an original price of $82.4 billion down to $74 billion. The value of the American Home-Warner-Lambert combination stood at $70 billion Friday because American Home's shares remained stable.

Executives from all three drugmakers said they need to merge to keep up with the rising cost of finding new drugs. New drugs are the lifeblood of every major drugmaker, helping them meet Wall Street's expectations for ever-higher profits.

Companies say increased regulatory scrutiny has also upped their costs, as have competitive pressures that require them to spend millions on marketing.

Bigger companies can devote more money to research and have a bigger cushion in case too many drugs fail during research.

But Dr. Beth Maggio, president of Pharmaceutical Consultants Inc. of Leawood, Kan., said when drug companies merge, they often cut research projects to save money.

"They tend to develop the drugs that are at the top of each company's pipeline and neglect the second- and third-generation drugs that may turn out to be important advances," she said.

That could prevent some medicines from ever getting on the market. For instance, some of today's drugs are found through serendipity. Pfizer found the impotence drug Viagra while developing a pill for angina. Fewer research projects could mean fewer chances to stumble onto new cures, Maggio said.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of Public Citizen's Health Research Group in Washington, said he worries that if drug companies get too big, they will have undue influence with government regulators, allowing drugs of questionable safety to get onto the market.

In addition, the cost savings touted by drug companies engaged in mergers usually benefit only their shareholders, Wolfe said.

"This would be the 29th significant merger in the drug industry in the past 10 years, and I'm not aware of any evidence that when economies of scale are achieved that the savings are ever passed on to patients," Wolfe said.

In fact, earlier this week, a consumer group reported that prices for the drugs older Americans use most often have been soaring far above the overall rate of inflation — more than four times higher last year.

"More and more seniors are finding the cost of these drugs unaffordable," said Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA.

While more money certainly helps in the hunt for new drugs, it by no means guarantees success.

"Big companies don't have a monopoly on good ideas," said Zammit-Lucia of Cambridge Pharma Consultancy. "They also have a disadvantage in terms of creativity, as big bureaucratic companies by their very nature are different sort of beasts from the fleet-of-foot entrepreneurial biotech companies."

On the other hand, bigger companies are generally more successful in bringing drugs to market more quickly, said David A. DeLong, president of the DevStrat Group, a consulting firm in Foster City, Calif.

Experts: Judge's harsh wording may hasten a settlement

NEW YORK (AP) — The judge's blunt language in declaring Microsoft a monopoly Friday could prompt the combative software maker to seek a truce in its war with the government instead of dragging the case out with court appeals, industry analysts said.

"I see very little subtlety here," said Carl Howe, an industry analyst at Forrester Research in Massachusetts. "Using the word 'monopoly' means a very specific thing ... There wouldn't have been any pressure to settle this if that had not been the case."

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson ruled that Microsoft has used its dominance of the personal computer software industry to stifle competition, hurting consumers.

While few had expected a victory for Microsoft in its antitrust trial, the harsh and stinging tone of the decision startled many observers.

"I was really surprised," said Bob Davis, chairman and chief executive of Lycos, the Web network and search service. "I didn't expect the force or the condemnation that we have seen."

Art Russell, an industry analyst with Edward Jones, an investment firm in St. Louis, also said the ruling could force Microsoft to rethink its legal strategy and pursue a settlement. "The way this thing is worded so harshly — that language is a little strong."

However, he added, an appeals court could find the judge's tone extreme, helping Microsoft get the decision overturned.

Predictably, Microsoft's rivals gloated, the company's supporters stressed that the decision is only a first step in deciding the case and investors pounded the company's stock in after-hours trading.

"Hallelujah. If we could jump any higher right now, we would," said Ransom Love, president and chief executive of Caldera Inc., a Utah-based software maker that's suing Microsoft in a separate case charging predatory practices.

Paul Rothstein, a Georgetown University law professor and a consultant to Microsoft, said the decision was an "unwarranted extension of the antitrust laws," adding that it is too soon to say Microsoft has lost the case.

As expected, the judge made no mention of potential punishments, which likely won't be determined until well into next year. At the extreme, he could order that Microsoft be broken up into smaller companies.

Other possibilities include forcing Microsoft to allow rivals to sell their own versions of the Windows operating system, requiring Microsoft to incorporate rival products in Windows, or preventing Microsoft from selling Windows at lower prices to favored computer makers.

Microsoft's stock plunged about 3 percent after the decision. The stock ended the regular trading day on the Nasdaq Stock Market at $91.56 1/4, but fell below $89 in after-hours trading on other markets.

But, said Russell, the Edward Jones analyst, "As a shareholder of Microsoft, I would not panic and sell the stock. The business is still very solid."

Report: Shipyard shooting was result of a grudge

SEATTLE (AP) — Investigators believe the fatal shooting at a shipyard this week was sparked by a grudge against one of the two men who died, according to unidentified law enforcement officials who spoke to The Seattle Times Friday.

The conclusion was drawn from evidence at the scene and leads, the sources, who spoke on condition on anonymity, told the newspaper.

A gunman who has not yet been caught walked into the shipyard office Wednesday morning and fatally shot Peter Giles, 27, and Russell James Brisendine, 43. Two others — a new employee and a fisherman — were wounded in the attack. The sources, who are familiar with the investigation, did not say who was believed to be targeted.

In a news conference Thursday, Police Chief Norm Stamper described the attack as "a deliberate, calculated act" but would not comment on a motive.

On Friday, police refused to comment on the report.

Unemployment rate falls to three-decade low

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

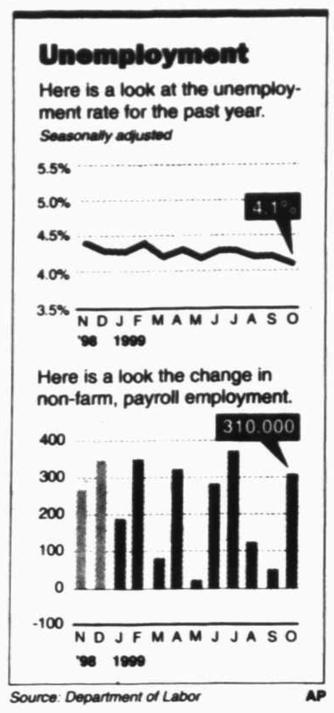

WASHINGTON — The nation's unemployment rate fell to a three-decade low of 4.1 percent in October — with only modest wage inflation — in a showing made to order for nervous investors. Wall Street rallied on the news.

The new jobless rate, down from 4.2 percent in September, continued the outstanding performance of the job market. Strong economic growth has pushed unemployment down to levels most working Americans have not experienced since they took their first jobs.

Unemployment hasn't been lower since it stood at 3.9 percent in January 1970, the Labor Department said.

Wall Street was buoyed by the smaller-than-expected rise in wages and a moderate gain of 310,000 new payroll jobs. The Dow Jones industrial average was up 110 points in midafternoon trading. Bond prices were lifted as well.

Still, many private economists cautioned that investors should not be ruling out the chance of another rate increase by the Federal Reserve. They said that the dip in unemployment, even though it wasn't accompanied by higher wage demands, still will keep the central bank worried about rising inflation down the road.

Source: Department of Labor — AP

A key gauge of inflation pressures — average hourly earnings — grew by a tiny 0.1 percent to $13.37 in October, indicating that the tight labor market thus far isn't triggering wage inflation.

But Merrill Lynch's chief economist Bruce Steinberg said he believed the unemployment report depicted an economy growing too fast for the Fed's comfort and "pretty much guarantees that the Fed will tighten" in November.

Wages had jumped by a worrisome 0.5 percent in September, but many analysts blamed that increase on statistical distortions caused by Hurricane Floyd, which hit the East Coast that month and shortened the workweek for many.

Fed Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and his colleagues meet Nov. 16 to decide whether a third interest rate is needed this year to keep inflation at bay.

Paul Kasriel, chief economist with The Northern Trust Co., and one of those on the side of a Nov. 16 rate increase, said he believed the dip in the unemployment rate to 4.1 percent is troubling to Greenspan, who has raised concerns that employers trying to snatch up scarce workers offer them higher wages, benefits or other incentives, costs which could boost consumer prices and spark inflation.

"In our view, the new low in the unemployment rate tilts the balance back toward a Fed tightening," said First Union's chief economist David Orr.

Just a few weeks ago, it appeared a sure thing that the Fed would raise rates again. But the odds of that happening have been on a steady decline given a host of economic data pointing to some slowing in the economy and no troublesome signs of inflation.

But other economists believe Friday's report makes it less likely that the Fed will nudge up rates this month because of the small rise in wages.

"I don't see anything in this report that will move the Fed to tightening. This is reasonably benign," said William Cheney, chief economist for John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. KeyCorp economist Ken Mayland agreed. "I think they can afford to stay on the fence."

Despite the gain in payroll jobs, manufacturing continued its decline losing 15,000 jobs in October. The rate of job loss, however, is slowing. U.S. manufacturers have seen foreign demand for their products rebound somewhat from a global financial crisis that began in 1997.

The service sector, the driving force of job creation in the United States, rebounded in October, adding 293,000 jobs. Business services led that growth with a gain of 215,000 jobs.

But retail businesses cut 30,000 jobs, its third consecutive monthly decline after a large increase in July. Bars and restaurants lost 28,000 jobs.

The gain in overall payroll jobs followed a revised increase of 41,000 jobs in September, better than the government previously estimated. That low job growth was blamed in part on the adverse effects of the hurricane.

"The nation's economy continues to perform at a solid and steady pace," said Labor Secretary Alexis Herman.

Robot hears EgyptAir jet's black boxes but can't see them

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Navy experts using a robot to explore the bottom of the Atlantic heard but could not see the black boxes from EgyptAir Flight 990 on Friday because they apparently were buried under debris.

The search was suspended Friday evening because of high seas.

The contents of the flight data recorder and cockpit voice recorder could explain why the jetliner plummeted into the sea early Sunday, killing 217 people.

Before the search was suspended, the Deep Drone — a remote-controlled vehicle the size of a minivan — captured the distinct pinging sound emitted by the boxes 270 feet down shortly after it was lowered into the sea Friday morning. The robot came within 20 feet of where the boxes are believed to be.

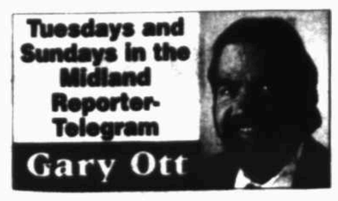

Technicians on the USS Grapple found the pinger signals to be so "loud they had to take their earphones out," said Capt. Bert Marsh, Navy supervisor of salvage.

But an effort by the giant underwater robot to snare the boxes was stymied because they were apparently buried under wreckage or something else at the bottom of the sea, he said.

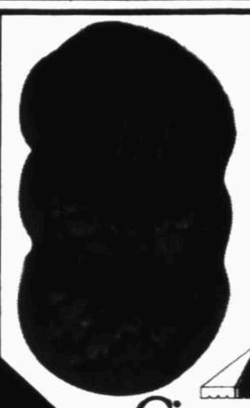

Work was also slowed as technicians tried to maneuver the Deep Drone closer to the boxes because visibility was blurred each time they tried to move anything to reach the boxes.

"Every time you start to dig into anything, you immediately have a puff of smoke come up," Marsh said. "You have to let the current clear that out and then go in again."

The search for the boxes was suspended at 7 p.m. when the waves reached higher than 10 feet, said Ted Lopakiewicz, spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board.

Pop quiz suggests Bush might not be ready for tests ahead

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Should a presidential candidate be required to know the heads of Pakistan, India, Taiwan and Chechnya? Maybe so, maybe not. This much is certain: The way George W. Bush handled his pop quiz on foreign policy suggests he might not be ready for the tests ahead.

"Wait. Wait. Is this 50 questions?" a flustered Bush asked the Boston television reporter who posed four surprise questions. The Republican front-runner got one name right, admitted he didn't know the other three, and fumbled on the crisis in Pakistan.

And he looked badly doing it, glaring off camera after dressing down the interviewer with a convoluted rebuke — his jaw clenched in anger or frustration.

The episode is unlikely to damage Bush's sky-high polls numbers or leave a long-lasting impact. But it does suggest that the two-term Texas governor has an Achilles' heel: Unexpected questions that lead to embarrassing answers, fueling charges that he is not ready to be president.

"If Bush's rap is going to be that he is weak on foreign policy — not that foreign policy matters to voters — this just adds to the buzz," said Republican consultant Tony Fabrizio, who worked for Elizabeth Dole's failed presidential campaign.

Bush should have been prepared for the sneak attack.

The interviewer, Andy Hiller of WHDH-TV, is known for asking aggressive questions and relishes his role of provocateur. Bush was not warned because his aides in Texas didn't know about Hiller's reputation and were not alerted by their Boston team.

However, the Austin camp had been preparing for this kind of confrontation since the spring, when a few foreign policy gaffes became fodder for Jay Leno and David Letterman. Bush called Greeks "Grecians," Kosovars "Kosovoians" and mistook Slovakia for Slovenia.

Knowing somebody would try to trip him up, Bush was prepared with a reply to any question he couldn't answer. Aides say it went something like this: "Americans don't expect their presidential candidates to be trivia experts; they want a leader who has a clear vision for America's future."

When it came time to deliver, Bush failed.

He let Hiller get under his skin, asking the interviewer to name the foreign minister of Mexico. When Hiller drew a blank, Bush launched into his well-rehearsed reply.

"What I'm suggesting to you is, if you can't name the foreign minister of Mexico, therefore, you know, you're not capable of what you do. But the truth of the matter is you are, whether you can or not," Bush said.

He also said the president "has to have a vision for the world," but the damage was already done. Clinton rubbed salt in the wounds by telling reporters Friday that knowing names is not as important as "knowing what America should look like."

"That was our line," groused a top Bush official.

Spokeswoman Karen Hughes said she was pleased with her boss' performance — "You saw a leader who was even keel." Others in Bush's camp said the governor is still learning to adapt to the change from Texas, where he was comfortable with the state's issues and press corps.

One adviser said Bush got miffed at Hiller, and lost his train of thought.

Republican officials not associated with the campaign said Bush shouldn't be faulted for not knowing the answers, but he should have been prepared to handle the situation better.

"This is a lesson that every good campaign learns," said Ari Fleischer, who also worked for Dole. "It's part of a healthy process where a nominee becomes battle-tested for all eventualities."

Reaction among Democrats was mixed.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, former National Security adviser under President Carter, said he could have answered only two of Hiller's questions. "Bush fumbled and stumbled, but quite honestly I don't think that anybody would think it is significant," he said.

Democratic presidential candidate Bill Bradley said the questions were "a little out of left field."

Bradley's rival, Vice President Al Gore, was less forgiving, noting that Bush said the Pakistani general who seized control in a coup had brought stability to the region. Bush also said the general has "just been elected," but quickly corrected himself.

Gore hopes to make the case that Bush is not up to the job, especially when it comes to foreign policy.

Bush's team hopes voters will give him the benefit of the doubt because his father, President Bush, was adept at foreign policy. One adviser called it the "apple not-falling-too-far-from-the-tree thing."

There is a threat that Bush will join legions of other candidates who developed unwanted reputations, exaggerated by the media and late-night television comics. Accurate or not, the perceptions harden with every episode that fits their political myths.

Gerald Ford is a klutz.

Bob Dole is mean.

Bill Clinton is loose with the truth.

Al Gore is boring and exaggerates his record.

John McCain has a bad temper.

Dan Quayle is stupid.

Quayle, who served as vice president under Bush's father, never recovered from a spelling gaffe. Should a presidential candidate be required to spell "potato"?

Maybe so, maybe not. But he better be ready to explain why he can't.

Reactions to pop quiz

By The Associated Press

Some reaction Friday to George W. Bush's foreign affairs quiz:

"America understands that a guy doesn't know the name of every single foreign leader. That's not what Americans are making their choices on about who's going to be the president."

— Bush said in an interview with ABCNEWS.com

"People can trick me, trip me up with questions and ... the American people, those are the people who are going to have the ultimate decision in this campaign. They want somebody who they trust to lead the world to peace."

— Bush on ABCNEWS.com

"I find it troubling that a candidate for president in our country — the world's oldest democracy — would characterize this military takeover as 'good news.' This very serious and troubling event that occurred in Pakistan constituted a military coup — not an election."

— Vice President Al Gore on Bush's comment that the takeover is "good news for the subcontinent."

"If Mr. Bush were President, he would soon enough learn their names. I think that, as a presidential candidate, in the main trouble spots in the world he should, and probably will, pick up those. But the real, the most important thing is, do you have a clear idea of what the world ought to look like, and what America's policy ought to be in these areas. So, that's what I would say."

— President Clinton

"I thought it was, shall I say, a pop quiz that not everybody could answer ... I think the real question is where do you want to take the country and how are you going to get there?"

— Democratic presidential candidate Bill Bradley

"The issue is not one of memorization of heads of state. The real issue is what the governor's father once called 'the vision thing.' ... The governor's staff begs us to ignore the issue of whether he knows the names of foreign heads of state and focus instead on his foreign policy vision. But it is that vision which is so badly out of focus."

— Republican presidential candidate Gary Bauer

"Questions like those asked of Governor Bush neither inform voters nor tell them much about our stands on the issues. It's more important to coherently explain our foreign policy views than it is to know the capital of Vanuatu."

— Republican presidential candidate Sen. John McCain of Arizona

Clinton, Hastert cooperate on revitalization

CHICAGO (AP) — Promising a "good faith" effort to help the poor, President Clinton and House Speaker Dennis Hastert met Friday to announce a bipartisan effort to steer investment to the nation's neediest urban and rural areas.

"This isn't about politics," Hastert said. "This is about the future."

Hastert and Clinton announced a merger of Clinton's "New Markets" initiative with the GOP's "Renewable Communities" proposal. Both aim to spur investment in America's neediest communities.

"We're here to commit to you and to the American people to work in good faith to merge our proposals into a historic bipartisan effort," Clinton said.

"If we work together in this way, Mr. Speaker, we can ensure that every working family has a share of the prosperity and a stake in the future that our country plainly has before it," he said. "We have a lot we can do."

The accord stood in stark contrast to the rancorous debate between Democrats and Republicans over the federal budget and the bitter divide that developed during last year's House impeachment proceedings against Clinton.

"I know all you ever read about in the papers is when the Republicans and Democrats fight in Washington," Clinton said before he shared the dais with Hastert at Englewood High School. "But we don't fight over everything."

"Sometimes Democrats and Republicans do fight a lot," Hastert said, picking up the theme. "But you know what, people of different political beliefs can also agree. ... It's time to come together and make things happen."

The event capped Clinton's two-day tour highlighting public-private efforts to boost small business ventures in distressed communities.

Earlier Friday, at a tomato farm cooperative in Hermitage, Ark., Clinton said that at a time of economic prosperity, "it bothers me that there are still whole communities that have been completely left behind."

Hastert recalled walking the streets of Chicago four months earlier, and how the shuttered stores and vacant lots represented to him broken promises and broken dreams.

"What we're doing here today is trying to create a climate that encourages people to help themselves," Hastert said. "We're trying to create a climate that encourages investment in job growth."

Clinton's New Markets plan seeks to spur $15 billion in new investment in poor communities. The Republican approach would emphasize tax breaks, not new government funds, to spur the investments.

Clinton's tour highlighted cooperative efforts that work in hard-scrabble areas. After visiting Newark, N.J., and Hartford, Conn., on Thursday, he traveled to Hermitage and Chicago on Friday.

In Hermitage, the purchasing agent for Burger King, which has an exclusive agreement to buy tomatoes from a farming cooperative, announced a commitment to buy up to 200 acres of cucumbers from the Mississippi Association of Cooperatives.

The cooperative approach helped save tomato farms in the Hermitage area, and the hope was that the minority-owned cooperatives in the Mississippi Delta, where Clinton visited on his earlier poverty tour, would likewise thrive.

"Why Soft Water Can Save You Money & make You Look & Feel Better"

Water quality affects more than just the taste of your drinking water. For example, did you know hard water (over 85% of household water is - by definition - hard) actually costs you more money than water that's treated? Here's how it can all add up very quickly to be very expensive:

- Gas water heaters heating hard water use 29.75% more BTUs to operate, electric water heaters 21.68% more BTUs increasing your annual utility bills.
- Clothes laundered in soft (treated) water last 15% longer increasing the amount you spend unnecessarily replacing clothing.
- Hard water requires more detergent more than doubling the amount you spend on laundry and dish soap.

Hard water may be costing you hundreds - even thousands - of dollars year after year after year.

Untreated hard water can also build up problem-causing scale in your pipes and plumbing... leave hair and skin coated with an uncomfortable and unattractive soap film... and make household cleaning take longer with less effective results.

How do you know if you have hard water? If you do have it, how serious the problem and what should you do about it?

House OKs foreign aid deal, focus shifts to other fights

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A compromise $15.3 billion foreign aid package breezed through the House on Friday, and Republican budget negotiators began resolving remaining disputes with the White House over abortion, buying park lands and other issues.

A night after the two sides struck an agreement, the House approved the foreign aid bill by 316-100, with clear majorities of both parties voting "aye." The package contained $2.6 billion more than Republicans initially wanted for the Middle East process, economic assistance and other programs.

"I hope this marks the start of a bipartisan effort to ensure that America has not only the will and the resources to lead, but also the wisdom to invest in peace," President Clinton said after passage.

The foreign aid bargain was considered pivotal, raising hopes that deals on the three remaining, contested spending bills could be cut in time for Congress to go home for the year by Wednesday. Eager to adjourn, GOP leaders were beginning to ease controversial stances in hopes of getting signable bills, and bargaining was possible over the weekend.

"Once we have done this, the other outstanding obstacles should come together fairly quickly," House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bill Young, R-Fla., said of the foreign aid bill.

Almost as soon as he spoke, the bill ran into problems in the Senate. Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., was blocking a vote, angling for a commitment that Congress would address legislation letting West Virginia coal mines continue to dump their waste into the state's streams.

The foreign aid package's passage, perhaps Monday, was not in doubt. But Byrd's roadblock underlined how seemingly unrelated, eleventh-hour hurdles can pop up before adjournment as lawmakers make last-ditch efforts to win legislation.

For a third straight year, Rep. Christopher Smith, R-N.J., was insisting on language forbidding abortion-rights groups from lobbying foreign governments in return for the addition of money the administration wants for overdue U.S. dues to the United Nations.

"We've compromised" in the past, Smith told reporters. "It's time for accommodation downtown" by the White House, he said.

But GOP leaders had already told Smith he would have to compromise again, said Republican aides speaking on condition of anonymity. The key remaining question seemed to be whether Congress would agree to provide the full $926 million for U.N. dues that the administration wants, or $111 million — the minimum that some say the U.S. could pay and retain its vote in the General Assembly.

The GOP was ready to provide at least $300 million of the roughly $500 million extra Clinton was demanding for park land purchases, energy conservation and other land programs, Republicans said.

And at least some legislative provisions benefiting forestry, mining and other companies using federal lands that the administration says would harm the environment were expected to be dropped or watered down.

Democrats were claiming victory on the foreign aid bill, noting the package contained all $1.8 billion Clinton wanted for Israel, Jordan and the Palestinians under the Wye River.

It also had $799 million out of the $1.4 billion he wanted for other foreign aid initiatives, including extra money for overseas economic aid and debt relief, African development, U.N. peacekeeping and aid to former Soviet republics.

In one sign of the administration's success, Rep. Sonny Callahan, R-Ala., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee's subcommittee that wrote the original foreign aid bill, voted against it after party leaders took control of the final bargaining.

"It's not a pleasant situation," Callahan said of voting against his own bill. "But even members of Congress, some of us, have principles."

35th Anniversary

Midland Memorial Hospital and Casa de Amigos have a working relationship that blossomed into a partnership in 1993. At that time, the Hospital was evaluating ways to improve access to healthcare for adults living in Southeast Midland. A hospital study showed that while 16% of Midlanders lived in that geographic area, they accounted for 35% of admissions for diabetes, hypertension and pulmonary disease.

Dr. Harold Rubin

Casa, Midland Memorial, and the United Way of Midland formed a healthcare coalition, resulting in a "start-up grant" for the Hospital to staff a clinic at Casa and the Southeast Senior Services Center in May 1993. Casa served as an incubator for Susan Sanders, A.N.P., working with Dr. Viola Coleman's backing, to provide adult medical services at Casa.

This early relationship led to the development of a full-blown clinic in 1996, the Health Care Center Family Services clinic, located on Florida Street now staffed by, Susan Sanders, A.N.P., Dr. Viola Coleman and Dr. Charling Williams. The provision of preventive medical service to residents of Southeast Midland has decreased admissions to Midland Memorial Hospital by 14% for diabetes, hypertension and pulmonary disease.

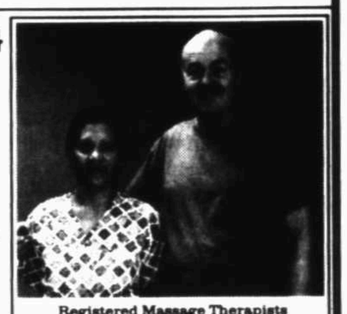

The role played by Casa and its staff facilitated the development and increased access to healthcare for many Midlanders. Congratulations to the staff of Casa for the concern and support it has provided to so many people in our community.

After 12-year wait, giant pandas arrive in Atlanta

By James Pilcher
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Atlanta's zoo had been waiting 12 years for the delivery that UPS made on Friday: two giant pandas from China.

The furry, black-and-white animals were unloaded from two brown United Parcel Service trucks after flying halfway around the world on a special UPS plane.

Lun-Lun and Yang-Yang, both 2, will be quarantined until Nov. 20, when they go on display at Zoo Atlanta in a new, $7 million habitat. They will stay in Atlanta for 10 years as part of a project to learn why the endangered animals show little interest in mating while in captivity.

With their arrival, the U.S. panda population is now six. The National Zoo in Washington has one, and the San Diego Zoo has three, including a cub born Aug. 21.

When the pandas arrived at the zoo, they were in no hurry to move into their new home. It took about an hour to coax them out of the bamboo-lined crates in which they had lived for nearly three days while in transit.

"This is a completely new place for them," said Rebecca Snyder, a Zoo Atlanta researcher who has spent the last two years studying Lun-Lun and Yang-Yang in China. "There are new smells and new surroundings, and they are used to being taken care of. But they'll adjust to everything."

Zoo Atlanta is paying the Chinese government $10 million for the loan of the pandas, and if they do reproduce, any offspring would belong to China. Zoo Atlanta had been trying to get pandas for 12 years.

AP Photo

A giant panda from the Chengdu Giant Panda Breeding Research Center leaves with another giant panda to begin their journey to the U.S. as students see them off in Chengdu, China. The two pandas "Lun-Lun", and "Yang-Yang", female, will reside at the Atlanta Zoo for the next 10 years.

The pandas began their journey at the Panda Breeding Center in China's Sichuan province. After a long flight to Beijing, they had to wait in their crates 12 hours before beginning the 17-hour flight to Atlanta on the "Panda Express," a Boeing 767 owned by UPS.

Since the pandas like a cool climate, the UPS plane and delivery trucks were chilled to about 55 degrees.

Zoo Atlanta veterinarian Dr. Rita McManamon, who accompanied the pandas with two Chinese vets, said the animals seemed to enjoy the trip.

"They both ate a lot and slept a lot, and basically relaxed," she said. "I didn't see any signs of any emotional distress. In fact, they appeared to be natural travelers."

Pandas are native only to China. Of the roughly 1,000 remaining pandas in the world, more than 120 live in captivity and 80 percent live in Sichuan.

Even though they weren't yet on display, Yang-Yang and Lun-Lun did make a stir among zoo visitors Friday.

"We kind of planned our trip around this," said Amy Zawosky, 12, who made the hour's drive from Macon with her seventh-grade class. "We tried to get the security guard to let us in to get a peek, but he wouldn't. I definitely want to come back on a weekend to see them."

Salmon swimming upstream after Maine dam destroyed

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — To the delight of conservationists and fishermen, Atlantic salmon have returned to the waters above the site of a 162-year-old dam that was torn down earlier this year to allow fish to swim upstream.

Striped bass have come back too, in such numbers that fly fishermen have been having a field day on the upper Kennebec River. The stripers have been feeding on yet another species that swims upstream from the sea, alewives.

The removal of the 24-foot-high Edwards Dam has completed the rebirth of what was historically such a rich fishery that early colonial settlers grew weary of eating fish.

The first stage involved cleaning up the Kennebec, which along one stretch was so polluted it was practically an open sewer. After the cleanup, attention turned toward to the closest dam to the Atlantic.

The Edwards Dam was built in 1837 to supply power to mills that rose along the river's banks. It was about 40 miles upstream from the Atlantic and stretched 917 feet across the Kennebec, blocking salmon, shad, herring and other fish from reaching their spawning grounds upstream.

In 1997, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission decided the dam should be torn down for the good of the environment. The Edwards became the first hydroelectric dam in the country ordered removed by the U.S. government against its owners' wishes.

Contractors completed the removal of the timber, stone and concrete structure Oct. 8, just over three months after the dam was breached.

With the dam gone, gazing at the Kennebec from its high banks in Augusta is like looking more than a century and a half back in time.

The flat, gravelly Cushnoc Island is again in view as it was when colonial fishermen filled barrels of salmon at a time from the river. And just as Benedict Arnold may have noticed when he passed through in the late 1700s, Coon's Rock rises near the left bank of the river.

In Augusta, rapids ripple as they did until Henry David Thoreau's time, while sturgeon, Atlantic salmon and stripers swim easily upstream.

Arizona caverns unveil dainty, white, lace-like helictites

BENSON, Ariz. (AP) — Light and heat give way to deepening shadows and, as the first of two stainless-steel airlocks clangs shut, to a cool dampness.

Step through the second airlock, and you're in a rotunda-like chamber with walls climbing almost four stories to a ceiling spiked with tawny- and chocolate-colored stalactites. Stalagmites jut like spears from the floor.

This room, these caverns, stood untouched for hundreds of thousands of years until they were discovered 25 years ago by two spelunkers, who then kept them a secret for four more years to ensure their preservation.

The public finally gets a chance to enter them when Kartchner Caverns State Park opens Nov. 12 with much fanfare, anticipation and relief after a two-year delay and cost overruns in the $28 million project.

Some of those who have already seen the 2 1/2-mile cave complex in the Whetstone Mountains about an hour from Tucson have called it world-class.

"There are beauties you cannot imagine," said Randy Tufts, who discovered the caverns along with Gary Tenen. "I remember just staring intently at everything, as if it might go away."

Unlike much bigger and better-known caves such as New Mexico's Carlsbad Caverns, these caverns are still mostly alive and evolving thanks to the moisture that drips off the tips of stalactites.

"The cave formations are still growing, where many of the caves in the Southwest have dried up over the last 10,000 or 15,000 years," said David Jagnow, conservation chairman of the National Speleological Society.

At Carlsbad, probably 90 percent of the formations have dried out, turned white and stopped growing, Jagnow said.

Kartchner Caverns were formed by underground water cutting through Escabrosa limestone over the eons. Water, with mineral deposits such as calcium and iron, has also fashioned all sorts of intricate formations, from dainty white lace-like helictites to features resembling pearls, popcorn and cotton in taffy hues of cream, pink and red.

Tenen and Tufts first made it inside in 1974 through a sinkhole after feeling a draft and smelling bat guano. They entered the big Rotunda Room by slithering on their bellies in the pitch black with only hard-hat lights to show them the way.

For years, the two men kept their silence, worried that others would damage the delicate formations. They finally confided in the landowners, James and Lois Kartchner, who later approached state officials. Secrecy prevailed, and by 1988 legislators approved acquisition and development.

All-white jury chosen for dragging death trial

By Megan K. Stack
Associated Press

JASPER — An all-white jury was impaneled Friday for the murder trial of Shawn Allen Berry, the third and final white defendant charged with last year's dragging death of a black man.

Also Friday, a Texas appeals court lifted a stay of a contempt finding against producer Mary Mapes. She was held in contempt by the trial court for failing to turn over a copy of a transcript of an interview CBS anchor Dan Rather did with Berry.

Her lawyer, Chip Babcock, said she was ordered to report to the Jasper County Jail by 4 p.m. Babcock made an emergency plea to the state Court of Criminal Appeals.

Berry, 24, is the youngest of the men accused of chaining Byrd, 49, to the back of a Berry's truck in the early morning hours of June 7, 1998, then dragging him nearly three miles over a bumpy country road just outside Jasper, about 125 miles northeast of Houston.

Opening statements in the case are set for Tuesday morning.

John William King and Lawrence Russell Brewer already have been convicted and sentenced to death for the murder.

Jasper County Prosecutor Guy James Gray said he was disappointed at not being able to seat blacks on the jury, but he thinks the panel can hear the case fairly. The county is predominantly white.

King was convicted by a jury of 11 whites and one black in Jasper. There were no black jurors for Brewer's trial, which was moved to Bryan.

Gray said the defense lawyers "had the ability to eliminate any black jurors, and that's what they did."

Nonetheless, Berry's attorney, Joseph Hawthorn, filed a surprise motion Friday asking to have the trial moved out of Jasper. Berry's attorneys previously had said they could get a fair trial in Berry's hometown, but Hawthorn said that during the jury selection, it became apparent that there is much prejudice against Berry here.

Golden scheduled a Monday hearing for the request.

Hawthorn said media coverage surrounding the CBS matter had helped taint public opinion. But Gray said the defense waited too long to raise such concerns.

"Too late. We've already gone through the process of interviewing the jurors," Gray said. "Once you have established you have a fair and impartial juror base, it's too late to say, 'I want it moved.'"

The selection proceeded quickly and quietly over the past two weeks, a seeming afterthought to the fight between prosecutors and CBS News over the video outtakes of the interview between Rather and Berry.

The state seeks the outtakes and a transcript of the interview, portions of which aired Sept. 28 on "60 Minutes II." Prosecutors subpoenaed Mapes, a Dallas-based producer, and also moved to have Rather subpoenaed in New York, where he is based.

Prosecutors want to compare Berry's statements in the interview with others he gave during the investigation.

Questionnaire targeting Hispanics angers LULAC

HOUSTON (AP) — The survey circulated around Memphis, Tenn., by the local utility looked harmless enough at first glance.

But a closer read raised the ire of a Hispanic civil rights group.

The 27 questions distributed earlier this fall by Memphis Light, Gas & Water Division asked about the activities and habits of Hispanic customers.

Among the queries:

- "Do Hispanics run up bills and do not wish to pay?"
- "Do Hispanics park illegally in handicap (sic) parking spaces?"
- "Are Hispanics sometimes squatters?"
- "Would you say that Hispanics work 3-6 months per year and leave without disconnecting the service?"

The questionnaire "demonstrates at best ignorance towards Hispanics in general and at worst outright intolerance and racism," League of United Latin American Citizens national president Rick Dovalina wrote in an Oct. 20 letter to company president Herman Morris Jr.

LULAC, and its Houston-based president, Dovalina, complained to the utility after learning of the survey. The two sides met in recent days.

The power company apologized and agreed to improve its Hispanic relations, spokesman Mark Heuberger said Thursday.

"When something like that happens, there's not much else you can do," Heuberger said. "You can't take it back."

Dovalina said he found the questions outrageous.

"I can't believe they thought they would get away with it," the president of the 115,000-member group said.

The electrical engineer who wrote and distributed the survey said the questions were meant to learn more about the roughly 100,000 Hispanic residents in Memphis. The surveys were sent to utility workers and "pillars of the community," James Overton said.

State education board revisits phonics changes

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education on Friday rejected at attempt to rescind new phonics requirements for first-grade reading materials and gave publishers until Nov. 12 to update plans for meeting agency standards.

Some board members who supported Thursday's move to raise the first-grade phonics standards for decodeable text, or easily sounded out words, from 51 to 80 percent, wavered on their original decision.

But ultimately the change — which publishers say could cost them as much as $25 million — was upheld.

The board voted 10-5 to give publishers until Nov. 12 to update plans for books due to be in classrooms in August 2000. The motion approved also contains the board's definition of decodeability, including a copy of the Texas Education Agency's method of measuring phonics.

Board member Geraldine Miller, who spurred the change, called it a victory for Texas children and the board, which endorsed a phonics-balanced curriculum in 1997.

"It is so exciting. It's historical," she said.

Publishers have already spent more than $100 million to develop books to meet the former 51 percent guideline, said Joe Bill Watkins, an attorney representing the Association of American Publishers.

Board member Mary Helen Berlanga of Corpus Christi, who voted for the change Thursday, changed her mind a day later.

The methods used to calculate decodeable words are inconsistent, Ms. Berlanga said.

"We have to go back and ask ourselves a question about this 80 percent. Who decided it? Why did they decide it?" she said. "Who is deciding what 80 percent means? It wasn't our board."

Will Davis, who voted against the change twice, said the revision is illegal because state law prohibits the board from reviewing content or quality of textbooks. Davis said phonics are part of a book's content and quality.

Midland High running back Jimmy Smith (26) struggles for yardage with Lee's J.R. Brown hanging onto the back of his jersey. The Rebels survived a down-to-the-wire game, beating the Bulldogs, 35-28, Friday night at Midland's Memorial Stadium.

For the next week, at least, the most talked about sports subject in Midland might not be the new football stadium.

Three days after the citizens of Midland voted to build a new sports complex, which will include a new football stadium, the football teams of Midland High and Midland Lee bid their first farewell to the old one — Midland Memorial Stadium — playing one of the greatest games ever on Cuthbert Street.

However, upset bids by the Tall City's version of David (Midland High) over Goliath (Midland Lee) were put to rest Friday, thanks to a fourth quarter interception by Lee defensive back T.J. Glover.

"It is heartbreaking," Midland High coach David Browning said of the loss which also cost the Bulldogs their first spot in the UIL playoffs in 48 years. "They played as hard of a game as has ever been played against Lee. We had to take responsibility for teams that preceded us with nothing to play for but pride. We had something to play for."

Midland High falls to 7-3 on the season (2-3 in District 4-5A). The Rebels, ranked No. 1 in the state and No. 1 in the nation by USA Today, won their 18th straight game and finished the regular season at 10-0 for the first time in school history.

Were rankings or a perfect season in the head of Lee head coach John Parchman with two minutes on the clock as MHS drove the field and threatened to score? Absolutely not. This game turned out to be big for Lee, almost like a playoff game.

"This one will help us when we get to the playoffs," Parchman said.

For Lee, the playoffs start at 7:30 p.m. next Friday at Memorial versus San Angelo Central.

It will be hard to think that the Bobcats, which Lee defeated 49-7 in week 5 this season, can give the Rebels a game like MHS.

The Bulldogs had more yards rushing than Lee (239-219), more yards passing (206-142), more first downs (20-17), and one less punt (2-1). Individually, MHS running back Jimmy Smith had more yards than Lee's Cedric Benson (237-191), and MHS receiver Lamar Hickey exploded for 158 yards receiving. The problem was that MHS also had three turnovers compared none by Lee. The Rebels turned those turnovers into 14 points.

None were bigger than the one by Glover, who was moved to defensive back at the beginning of the season to rebuild a defense which lost 10 starters. With two minutes, 27 seconds remaining in the game, MHS had second-and-eight at the Lee 10-yard line ready to punch a score in and tie the game, 35-35, when Glover stepped in front of a pass from Laynce Nix.

"From the time they are growing up to the time they are seniors, they worked to beat Lee. That is something I wouldn't let happen," Glover said.

The interception ended a game of who can outdo whom. Four times, MHS found the end zone to tie or take the lead from the Rebels.

MHS showed it was ready for the battle in the first quarter. Lee had opened the game with an 80-yard drive, capped by Benson's 24-yard scoring burst. Then, the Bulldogs had drove down the field, and appeared ready to kick a field goal, but a fake was called and MHS holder-turned-thrower Colter Lange hit Hickey for 35 yards.

Lee went to the air on the next drive, hitting on two key receptions. The last one — a 42-yard strike from Jon Rogers to J.J. Jackson — again gave Lee the lead, 13-6.

"I loved it," said Rogers of the game's electric atmosphere. "It shows if we have a game like this that we can get the job done. Sometimes I wish it wouldn't happen, but I loved it."

Those two scored opened the flood gates. On its first play of the next possession, MHS came back as Laynce Nix hooked up with Hickey on an 86-yard catch on MHS' first play.

Again, Lee took the lead. In the second quarter, Benson was again brilliant. On a seven play, 70-yard drive, the junior totaled 69 yards, including a 46-yard burst on a third-and-five. He capped the drive with a 7-yard score.

MHS came back with a 14-play, 80-yard drive that ate up 6:17 off the clock. The Bulldogs converted three third-down conversions on the drive, which Smith finished with a 1-yard plunge.

In the second half, a 21-21 tie turned into a 28-21 Lee lead. MHS fumbled the ball in its own territory, and Lee turned it into points. Rogers hit Benson for 7 yards and a touchdown.

MHS again came back. An 11-play, 77-yard drive took another 6:14 off the clock, and tested a few nerves. MHS converted on two third downs and one

Steers whip Sweetwater without Ford

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — With the sense of urgency that the playoffs bring, maybe it took losing its best offensive player to academics to galvanize the Big Spring football team when it mattered most.

The Steers knew they would be entering Friday's District 5-4A game against Sweetwater without tailback Colby Ford, the team's leading rusher who was declared academically ineligible earlier in the week. Big Spring not only had to beat Sweetwater, but win by at least nine points and hope that Snyder beat San Angelo Lake View.

Not only did things fall into place for the Steers, they did so even more comfortably than they could have realistically expected. By the time that the crowd in Big Spring found out that Snyder had beaten Lake View, the Steers were taking care of business on the field as decisively as possible, going on to clobber Sweetwater 48-14 and claim 4-5A's third playoff spot. Big Spring will play Brownwood in San Angelo next Saturday at 2 p.m. in the first round of the playoffs.

Lady Rebels face familiar foe in playoffs

This time around, when the Midland Lee volleyball team plays El Paso Andress in the area round, the roles are reversed.

Last year, the Lady Rebels went into the area match in Pecos remembering how Andress had beaten them earlier that season in the ECISD Tournament. Lee won the playoff match, 15-12, 15-5, and advanced to the regional quarterfinals.

Today, when they meet at 2 p.m. in the Pecos Gymnasium, the Andress Lady Eagles will be remembering last year.

"We're the ones that put them out last year," Lee coach Connie Alexander said. "From the quotes in the (El Paso) paper, we know they'll be out for us."

Alexander got to read the El Paso Times the morning after watching Andress' bi-district win over El Paso Montwood. There wasn't anything inflammatory about Lee in the Times' pages; Alexander just got a subtle reminder.

"We've got an incentive to play better (than last year)," Andress coach Eva Navarro told the Times.

Naturally, Alexander didn't drive five hours just to read the newspaper. She and her assistants got a good look at Andress (23-6) to refresh their memories. She said that, much like Lee (25-7), Andress has most of its players back from last year. Foremost is 6-foot-2 middle blocker Melissa Robinett.

"They've got a big girl, No. 33, Robinett. She's big and she does a good job at the net," Alexander said, adding that Andress also has one tall outside hitter. "There's a big block to get around on their first rotation."

Robinett led Andress with seven kills in the playoff match against Lee last year. She'll be a big weapon again today.

"She's who they center their offense on," Alexander said. "A lot of their offense is centered on her. As she goes, as she plays, so goes their team. They look

STANTON — With Stanton having the 3-2A district championship wrapped up, the Tahoka Bulldogs visited Buffalo Stadium with hopes of catching the Buffaloes napping and possibly coming away with a win.

Sadly for the Bulldogs, that was not the case as Stanton was wide awake and delivered a sound thrashing of Tahoka, 61-27.

Amazingly, the game was not as close as the score indicates. It was, in actuality, much more of a blowout than the scoreboard shows. Along with pulling out most of the starters by the end of the third quarter, Stanton gave the ball up four times on fumbles in Tahoka territory and even pulled back on an extra point conversion near the end of the game in order to spare the Bulldogs further embarrassment.

Many of the early mistakes made by the Buffaloes were mental lapses on the part of both the offense and the defense.

"All week long we were flat in practice," said Stanton head coach Mark Cotton. "We just had to raise our concentration levels and our focus. We are going to have to step up our game in the playoffs. Hopefully the renewed level of excitement will come back to our players and help us go far in the playoffs."

Penalties, inconsistency and turnovers kept the Bulldogs within shouting distance of Stanton for almost the entire first half. For every outstanding play, like Jeremy Hull's 59-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage, there was

ALPINE — Greenwood secured a playoff spot with a convincing 49-8 win over Alpine Friday night.

The win is only the second time in 10 years that the Rangers (7-3 overall, 4-1 in District 4-3A) have won in Alpine. In other action from around the district, Monahans secured the final playoff spot with a 21-0 win over Kermit, while Crane won the district title with a win over Presidio.

Greenwood proved consistent through the first three quarters of the game scoring two touchdowns per quarter.

Stephen Kimble had two touchdowns on 7- and 8-yard runs. He also rushed 157 yards on 18 carries. Wes Smith, John McSpadden and Justin Outlaw also scored touchdowns on runs of 5, 36 and 15 yards. Smith had two interceptions and McSpadden carried the ball 13 times for 135 yards. Talian Thompson returned a fumble for a touchdown.

Alpine (4-5, 2-3) finally scored a touchdown in the fourth quarter when Cougar McBride had 1-yard run for the score.

Greenwood's Kimble answered that touchdown when he ran 16 yards for a score.

AMARILLO — The Midland Trinity Chargers won their second straight TCAL West championship by stomping Amarillo Trinity, 52-6, Friday night.

The game was called with eight minutes to go in the third quarter thanks to the 45-point mercy rule in six-man football. The contest got off to a late start because game officials were late in arriving.

"We're real excited about it," said Midland Trinity coach Karl Kitto about winning the TCAL West title. "We feel that we have a much stronger team than last year. Our defense was really tough this week. Our offense has always been there but defense wins championships."

Nathan Pirtle rushed 11 times for 165 yards and had touchdown runs of 2, 55, 7 and 14 yards. Jeehoun Yi rushed five times for 102 yards and scored on a 7-yard run. Yi had 25 yards on two carries with a 16-yard TD pass from Matt Midkiff and the game-ending 9-yard TD run. Midkiff was 2-of-3 passing for 29 yards and kicked 2-of-8 extra points. Clint Adcox intercepted two Amarillo Trinity passes including one returned 22 yards for a touchdown. Clint Kitto also rushed twice for 24 yards.

The only score Amarillo Trinity (5-3) got was on a long run in the first half. The Chargers (6-4) led 46-6 at the half.

Midland Trinity will next host the first round of the TCAL playoffs at Coombes Field against San Antonio Town East. The game will more likely take place on Saturday, Nov. 13, with the time to be determined.

SAN MARCOS — The Midland Christian Mustangs dominated in every fashion on the way to a 63-2 romp over San Marcos Baptist Friday night.

The win secured the TAPPS District 3-4A title for the Mustangs, who is tentatively scheduled to face Austin Hyde Park at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13 at Mustang Field.

The Mustangs (7-3 overall, 3-0 in district) scored the first 63 points in the game. The Bears (1-7, 0-3) got their only score on a blocked extra point attempt by the Mustangs late in the game.

Midland Christian rushed for 537 yards and passed for 72 more as the Mustangs held San Marcos Baptist to a minus-11 yards rushing.

Josh Gunter rushed 14 times for 186 yards and had three touchdowns on runs of 5 and 20 yards. Gunter also scored on a 7-yard pass from Jamie Beeghley. With Friday night's total, Gunter has surpassed the 1,000-yard mark for the season with 1,054 yards. Kurt Corley added 119 yards rushing and two TDs.

Sands' Junior Martinez rushed 166 yards on 15 carries. He also had two touchdowns, a 10-yard run and a 51-yard run. Marcus DeLeon also had two touchdowns for Sands. He scored on 27 and 9 yard runs. Caesar Martinez scored three touchdowns, one a 1-yard run, one a 2-yard run and one a 44-yard pass from Coby Floyd. Floyd also threw 39 yards to Dusty Floyd for a touchdown.

'Horns present many threats

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Forgive Texas quarterback Major Applewhite if he licks his chops on third-and-long plays against Oklahoma State on Saturday. He may not be able to help himself.

Oklahoma State's defense has had a rough time getting off the field when it has gone against good teams. Kansas State burned the Cowboys several times in a 44-21 victory two weeks ago. Texas A&M did the same in a 21-3 victory last week.

In the past two years, Oklahoma State is 1-8 against ranked teams. Those opponents have converted 45 percent of their third-down plays, usually through the air.

"I've never seen a defense get capitalized on the way we have," said defensive end Zac Akin. "I guess it comes with the territory, being such an aggressive defense. But people make plays against us they just don't normally make against other people."

Applewhite has made plenty of plays against everyone this year. He has thrown for 2,649 yards and 18 touchdowns, completed 61 percent of his passes and been intercepted only four times.

He threw for 345 yards last week as the 11th-ranked Longhorns held off Iowa State 44-41 on the road.

LEE: Rebs earn first 10-0 record

fourth down. Smith again scored from 1 yard out to tie the game.

At the time, Smith had 179 yards. He would finish with 58 more. He would become the first back to outgain Benson this year.

"This was the best game I played in my life," said Smith, who carried the ball 39 times. "We knew if we came out and played to our capability, we had a chance to win. The offensive line came to play and I made my yards. It was like a different environment."

No. 1 rankings, however, are earned for a reason and Lee showed why. The Rebels made plays defensively when they had to. MHS got the ball with the score tied at 28-28, but Glover intercepted an attempted hookup from Nix to Hickey.

Lee scored on a five play, 43-yard drive. Benson again got all the carries. His 12-yard score was his 20th TD in district play.

That left Glover to come up with more heroics. MHS took the ball on the last drive and got off 13 plays, but Glover's pick means national title hopes are still alive at the Lee Fieldhouse. It also ended the season for MHS.

4-5A Playoffs: Abilene High will play Lubbock Monterey at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

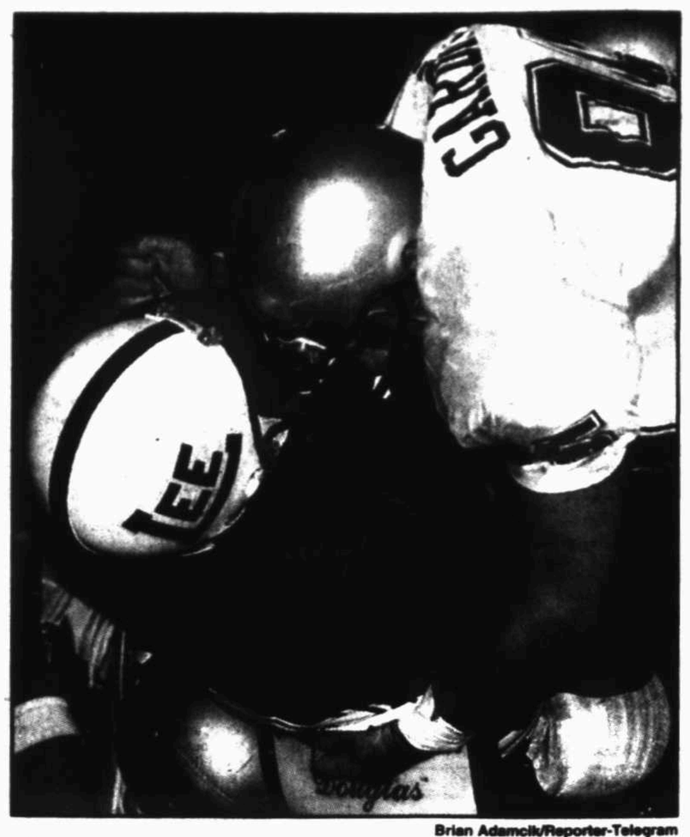

The next day, Abilene Cooper will play Amarillo High at 2:30 p.m. at Jones Stadium. Abilene High defeated Cooper 20-7.

4-5A FOOTBALL

Abilene 20, Cooper 7

ABILENE — Abilene High defeated Abilene Cooper by a 20-7 margin here Friday night at Shotwell Stadium, but both sides of town came away happy as both teams made the state playoffs.

AHS finishes at 8-2 overall and 4-1 in district play for second place in District 4-5A. The Eagles, making their first playoff run since 1959, will play Lubbock Monterey at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Lubbock's Jones Stadium in the bi-district round of the Class 5A Small School division.

Cooper tied Midland High for third place at 2-3, but Cooper defeated MHS earlier this season to win the tiebreaker. Cooper enters the playoffs with a 4-5 overall record. Cooper will play state ranked Amarillo High at 2:30 p.m. next Saturday at Lubbock's Jones Stadium in the Small School playoffs.

It is the first time in District 4-5A history that two teams from the same city make the state playoffs in the same year.

Against Cooper, AHS scored 17 points in the second quarter after Cooper had taken a 7-0 lead early.

Permian 21, Odessa 0

ODESSA — Odessa Permian waited until the last night of District 4-5A play to get a league win, but they did it in shutout fashion with a 21-0 win over cross town rival Odessa High.

The two teams now share the league cellar of 4-5A with identical 1-4 league marks. OHS is 5-5 for the year. Permian is 4-6.

The two teams battled to a scorless deadlock until the 2:01 mark of the third quarter when Permian's Chris Vasquez scored a touchdown from one-yard out.

That's all Mojo would need, but the Panthers got 14 insurance points in the fourth quarter. Roy Williams, playing his last football game at Permian, caught a 23-yard scoring toss from Justin Whitaker. Whitaker later scored on a 9-yard run.

Neither team made the state playoffs, but played this one before a near sellout crowd.

STEERS: Big Spring earns playoff berth

intimidated by having to beat the Mustangs (3-7, 2-3) by a certain margin without Ford. In fact, it almost looked as if the Steers viewed the game more as a challenge they had to rise to meet.

They didn't meet it — they rose above it. Without Ford, the Steers had one of their most balanced offensive attacks of the season, piling up 554 yards of total offense. Ford's replacement, Jason Woodruff, went above and beyond the call of duty, gaining an astonishing 289 yards on 24 carries and scoring a pair of touchdowns which helped Big Spring get well beyond the margin it needed to make the playoffs.

"We were going to stay with the same game plan no matter what," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler of how his team would prepare for the game without Ford. "We have as much faith in Jason Woodruff as we do in Colby. I think when you lose a superstar player it brings you closer together as a team."

The Steers have, at their offensive best this season, shown that they are more than a one-man gang, and they regained the early season form which earned them a 6-0 record and a No. 10 ranking in the state. They had a solid passing attack as Lance Brock completed 8-of-13 passes for 134 yards and three first half touchdowns. Brock even caught a pass for 34 yards from wide receiver James Clements on a trick play, as their passing would eventually open the way for Woodruff's running.

Brock's most reliable target on the night was Jason Choate, who caught five passes for 86 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Choate returned a short Sweetwater punt 12 yards to set up the Steers at the Sweetwater 36-yard line in the first quarter. On the next play, Choate caught a short pass from Brock in the flat and turned it into a 27-yard gain to Sweetwater's 9, and two plays later Choate caught a 2-yard scoring flip from Brock to make it 7-0.

The Mustangs tied it four plays later when speedy tailback Willie Amos took a pitch and changed directions, rumbling through a huge hole up the middle for a 63-yard score to tie it at 7-7. That's where things got strange.

On the ensuing possession, Big Spring marched to the Sweetwater 2 where it faced fourth and goal. Woodruff was stopped short of a touchdown, and it appeared as if some momentum had shifted.

It did — in Big Spring's favor. Sitting with the ball only inches from its goal line, Sweetwater threw three straight incompletions into coverage down the sidelines. Instead of punting on fourth down, the Mustangs opted to have quarterback Rusty Rainbolt take the snap and run out of the end zone for a safety, giving Big Spring a 9-7 lead.

The strategy to surrender two points and let the defense do the job, usually associated with the fourth quarter, backfired big time on Sweetwater. Choate returned the ensuing free kick 22 yards to Sweetwater's 44. Five plays later, Brock threw another short scoring pass, a 1-yarder to Daniel Beauchamp to make it 16-7, giving the Steers the nine-point margin they needed.

They made sure it held up. Big Spring stopped Sweetwater on its next possession, then when it took over, went up 23-7 on a 38-yard pass from Brock to Choate.

While Big Spring showed it could go over or through the Mustangs, Sweetwater's offense, other than Amos' big run early, went practically nowhere. Amos finished with only 113 yards on 14 carries, and other than his first scoring run didn't break a run longer than his 8-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, by which time the game had already been decided.

"I think who has to get the credit is our defense," Butler said. "They've been much maligned and tonight they really rose to the occasion in the way they contained Amos."

With 26 seconds remaining in the half, Woodruff, who has been one of the team's stars at defensive end this season, grabbed the offensive spotlight with a 73-yard scoring run which gave Big Spring a 29-7 halftime lead and all but slammed the door shut. On the first possession of the second half, Woodruff scored on a 49-yard run to extend it to 35-7.

STANTON: Buffs stay perfect at 10-0

a critical mistake, such as a high snap to the punter inside Stanton's 20 yard line. For a while, it seemed as if Tahoka and Stanton were like two wrestlers trading eye gouges in the middle of the ring.

Nevertheless, the Buffaloes rushed for 390 yards and six touchdown. Hull led the team, carrying the ball 19 times for 189 yards, 136 of which came before halftime. Even with all of those big numbers, Stanton felt like it was not playing up to par in the first half.

"At halftime Coach Cotton told us that what we were doing out there was not Stanton football," said Hull. "We concentrated on the mistakes we made in the first half and corrected what we did wrong."

The second half was a different story for the Buffaloes. Stanton scored touchdowns on four of the first five drives.

"We weren't playing well at all in the first half," said quarterback Will Harris, who threw two touchdown passes. "We just picked up our intensity level and that gave us the edge in the end."

By beating Tahoka, Stanton cleared the final hurdle in its quest for a perfect 10-0 regular season record.

"I couldn't ask for anything more (of the regular season)", said senior Kenneth Hull, who scored the Buffaloes last touchdown of the game late in the fourth quarter. "Just seeing this team come this far was great. Now we need to take it to the next level."

But make no mistake - the Buffaloes have not reached their finish line quite yet.

"We are going to take the playoffs one game at a time, each game is a different challenge" said Jeremy Hull.

Stanton begins the road to the state championship against Farwell in the bi-district round of the small school playoffs. The game will be played in Levelland at 7:30 p.m. on Friday evening.

'Huskers, Aggies need win to stay alive

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum is not worrying about the Aggies defending their Big 12 championship.

Slocum knows the No. 21 Aggies are not likely to return to the conference title game for a third straight year if they do not win at Nebraska on Saturday.

Texas A&M (6-2, 3-2 Big 12) trails Texas in the Big 12 South Division by a game. The Aggies and the Longhorns close the season Nov. 29 at A&M, but an Aggie loss before then would essentially take them out of the race.

"Two years ago we were in the same situation and we needed some things to happen, and those things did happen," Slocum said. "We're not really worried about all that right now."

Nebraska (7-1, 4-1) is in a similar situation. The Huskers trail Kansas State by a game in the North. The Wildcats visit Lincoln next weekend, but that game's division implications would drop with a Nebraska loss Saturday.

The Huskers and Aggies, who played in the 1997 Big 12 championship, were the preseason media picks to win their divisions. Both teams say they don't want to look that far ahead.

Greenwood 49, Alpine 8

ALPINE — Greenwood secured a playoff spot with a convincing 49-8 win over Alpine Friday night.

The win is only the second time in 10 years that the Rangers (7-3 overall, 4-1 in District 4-3A) have won in Alpine. In other action from around the district, Monahans secured the final playoff spot with a 21-0 win over Kermit, while Crane won the district title with a win over Presidio.

Greenwood proved consistent through the first three quarters of the game scoring two touchdowns per quarter.

Stephen Kimble had two touchdowns on 7- and 8-yard runs. He also rushed 157 yards on 18 carries. Wes Smith, John McSpadden and Justin Outlaw also scored touchdowns on runs of 5, 36 and 15 yards. Smith had two interceptions and McSpadden carried the ball 13 times for 135 yards. Talian Thompson returned a fumble for a touchdown.

Alpine (4-5, 2-3) finally scored a touchdown in the fourth quarter when Cougar McBride had 1-yard run for the score.

Greenwood's Kimble answered that touchdown when he ran 16 yards for a score.

Mid. Trinity 52, Amarillo Trinity 6

AMARILLO — The Midland Trinity Chargers won their second straight TCAL West championship by stomping Amarillo Trinity, 52-6, Friday night.

The game was called with eight minutes to go in the third quarter thanks to the 45-point mercy rule in six-man football. The contest got off to a late start because game officials were late in arriving.

"We're real excited about it," said Midland Trinity coach Karl Kitto about winning the TCAL West title. "We feel that we have a much stronger team than last year. Our defense was really tough this week. Our offense has always been there but defense wins championships."

Nathan Pirtle rushed 11 times for 165 yards and had touchdown runs of 2, 55, 7 and 14 yards. Jeehoun Yi rushed five times for 102 yards and scored on a 7-yard run. Yi had 25 yards on two carries with a 16-yard TD pass from Matt Midkiff and the game-ending 9-yard TD run. Midkiff was 2-of-3 passing for 29 yards and kicked 2-of-8 extra points. Clint Adcox intercepted two Amarillo Trinity passes including one returned 22 yards for a touchdown. Clint Kitto also rushed twice for 24 yards.

The only score Amarillo Trinity (5-3) got was on a long run in the first half. The Chargers (6-4) led 46-6 at the half.

Midland Trinity will next host the first round of the TCAL playoffs at Coombes Field against San Antonio Town East. The game will more likely take place on Saturday, Nov. 13, with the time to be determined.

Mid. Christian 63, S.M. Baptist 2

SAN MARCOS — The Midland Christian Mustangs dominated in every fashion on the way to a 63-2 romp over San Marcos Baptist Friday night.

The win secured the TAPPS District 3-4A title for the Mustangs, who is tentatively scheduled to face Austin Hyde Park at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13 at Mustang Field.

The Mustangs (7-3 overall, 3-0 in district) scored the first 63 points in the game. The Bears (1-7, 0-3) got their only score on a blocked extra point attempt by the Mustangs late in the game.

Midland Christian rushed for 537 yards and passed for 72 more as the Mustangs held San Marcos Baptist to a minus-11 yards rushing.

Josh Gunter rushed 14 times for 186 yards and had three touchdowns on runs of 5 and 20 yards. Gunter also scored on a 7-yard pass from Jamie Beeghley. With Friday night's total, Gunter has surpassed the 1,000-yard mark for the season with 1,054 yards. Kurt Corley added 119 yards rushing and two TDs.

'Horns present many threats

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Forgive Texas quarterback Major Applewhite if he licks his chops on third-and-long plays against Oklahoma State on Saturday. He may not be able to help himself.

Oklahoma State's defense has had a rough time getting off the field when it has gone against good teams. Kansas State burned the Cowboys several times in a 44-21 victory two weeks ago. Texas A&M did the same in a 21-3 victory last week.

In the past two years, Oklahoma State is 1-8 against ranked teams. Those opponents have converted 45 percent of their third-down plays, usually through the air.

"I've never seen a defense get capitalized on the way we have," said defensive end Zac Akin. "I guess it comes with the territory, being such an aggressive defense. But people make plays against us they just don't normally make against other people."

Applewhite has made plenty of plays against everyone this year. He has thrown for 2,649 yards and 18 touchdowns, completed 61 percent of his passes and been intercepted only four times.

He threw for 345 yards last week as the 11th-ranked Longhorns held off Iowa State 44-41 on the road.

fourth down. Smith again scored from 1 yard out to tie the game.

At the time, Smith had 179 yards. He would finish with 58 more. He would become the first back to outgain Benson this year.

"This was the best game I played in my life," said Smith, who carried the ball 39 times. "We knew if we came out and played to our capability, we had a chance to win. The offensive line came to play and I made my yards. It was like a different environment."

No. 1 rankings, however, are earned for a reason and Lee showed why. The Rebels made plays defensively when they had to. MHS got the ball with the score tied at 28-28, but Glover intercepted an attempted hookup from Nix to Hickey.

Lee scored on a five play, 43-yard drive. Benson again got all the carries. His 12-yard score was his 20th TD in district play.

That left Glover to come up with more heroics. MHS took the ball on the last drive and got off 13 plays, but Glover's pick means national title hopes are still alive at the Lee Fieldhouse. It also ended the season for MHS.

Abilene 20, Cooper 7

ABILENE — Abilene High defeated Abilene Cooper by a 20-7 margin here Friday night at Shotwell Stadium, but both sides of town came away happy as both teams made the state playoffs.

AHS finishes at 8-2 overall and 4-1 in district play for second place in District 4-5A. The Eagles, making their first playoff run since 1959, will play Lubbock Monterey at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Lubbock's Jones Stadium in the bi-district round of the Class 5A Small School division.

Cooper tied Midland High for third place at 2-3, but Cooper defeated MHS earlier this season to win the tiebreaker. Cooper enters the playoffs with a 4-5 overall record. Cooper will play state ranked Amarillo High at 2:30 p.m. next Saturday at Lubbock's Jones Stadium in the Small School playoffs.

It is the first time in District 4-5A history that two teams from the same city make the state playoffs in the same year.

Against Cooper, AHS scored 17 points in the second quarter after Cooper had taken a 7-0 lead early.

Permian 21, Odessa 0

ODESSA — Odessa Permian waited until the last night of District 4-5A play to get a league win, but they did it in shutout fashion with a 21-0 win over cross town rival Odessa High.

The two teams now share the league cellar of 4-5A with identical 1-4 league marks. OHS is 5-5 for the year. Permian is 4-6.

The two teams battled to a scorless deadlock until the 2:01 mark of the third quarter when Permian's Chris Vasquez scored a touchdown from one-yard out.

That's all Mojo would need, but the Panthers got 14 insurance points in the fourth quarter. Roy Williams, playing his last football game at Permian, caught a 23-yard scoring toss from Justin Whitaker. Whitaker later scored on a 9-yard run.

Neither team made the state playoffs, but played this one before a near sellout crowd.

STEERS: Big Spring earns playoff berth

intimidated by having to beat the Mustangs (3-7, 2-3) by a certain margin without Ford. In fact, it almost looked as if the Steers viewed the game more as a challenge they had to rise to meet.

They didn't meet it — they rose above it. Without Ford, the Steers had one of their most balanced offensive attacks of the season, piling up 554 yards of total offense. Ford's replacement, Jason Woodruff, went above and beyond the call of duty, gaining an astonishing 289 yards on 24 carries and scoring a pair of touchdowns which helped Big Spring get well beyond the margin it needed to make the playoffs.

"We were going to stay with the same game plan no matter what," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler of how his team would prepare for the game without Ford. "We have as much faith in Jason Woodruff as we do in Colby. I think when you lose a superstar player it brings you closer together as a team."

The Steers have, at their offensive best this season, shown that they are more than a one-man gang, and they regained the early season form which earned them a 6-0 record and a No. 10 ranking in the state. They had a solid passing attack as Lance Brock completed 8-of-13 passes for 134 yards and three first half touchdowns. Brock even caught a pass for 34 yards from wide receiver James Clements on a trick play, as their passing would eventually open the way for Woodruff's running.

Brock's most reliable target on the night was Jason Choate, who caught five passes for 86 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Choate returned a short Sweetwater punt 12 yards to set up the Steers at the Sweetwater 36-yard line in the first quarter. On the next play, Choate caught a short pass from Brock in the flat and turned it into a 27-yard gain to Sweetwater's 9, and two plays later Choate caught a 2-yard scoring flip from Brock to make it 7-0.

The Mustangs tied it four plays later when speedy tailback Willie Amos took a pitch and changed directions, rumbling through a huge hole up the middle for a 63-yard score to tie it at 7-7. That's where things got strange.

On the ensuing possession, Big Spring marched to the Sweetwater 2 where it faced fourth and goal. Woodruff was stopped short of a touchdown, and it appeared as if some momentum had shifted.

It did — in Big Spring's favor. Sitting with the ball only inches from its goal line, Sweetwater threw three straight incompletions into coverage down the sidelines. Instead of punting on fourth down, the Mustangs opted to have quarterback Rusty Rainbolt take the snap and run out of the end zone for a safety, giving Big Spring a 9-7 lead.

The strategy to surrender two points and let the defense do the job, usually associated with the fourth quarter, backfired big time on Sweetwater. Choate returned the ensuing free kick 22 yards to Sweetwater's 44. Five plays later, Brock threw another short scoring pass, a 1-yarder to Daniel Beauchamp to make it 16-7, giving the Steers the nine-point margin they needed.

They made sure it held up. Big Spring stopped Sweetwater on its next possession, then when it took over, went up 23-7 on a 38-yard pass from Brock to Choate.

While Big Spring showed it could go over or through the Mustangs, Sweetwater's offense, other than Amos' big run early, went practically nowhere. Amos finished with only 113 yards on 14 carries, and other than his first scoring run didn't break a run longer than his 8-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, by which time the game had already been decided.

"I think who has to get the credit is our defense," Butler said. "They've been much maligned and tonight they really rose to the occasion in the way they contained Amos."

With 26 seconds remaining in the half, Woodruff, who has been one of the team's stars at defensive end this season, grabbed the offensive spotlight with a 73-yard scoring run which gave Big Spring a 29-7 halftime lead and all but slammed the door shut. On the first possession of the second half, Woodruff scored on a 49-yard run to extend it to 35-7.

STANTON: Buffs stay perfect at 10-0

a critical mistake, such as a high snap to the punter inside Stanton's 20 yard line. For a while, it seemed as if Tahoka and Stanton were like two wrestlers trading eye gouges in the middle of the ring.

Nevertheless, the Buffaloes rushed for 390 yards and six touchdown. Hull led the team, carrying the ball 19 times for 189 yards, 136 of which came before halftime. Even with all of those big numbers, Stanton felt like it was not playing up to par in the first half.

"At halftime Coach Cotton told us that what we were doing out there was not Stanton football," said Hull. "We concentrated on the mistakes we made in the first half and corrected what we did wrong."

The second half was a different story for the Buffaloes. Stanton scored touchdowns on four of the first five drives.

"We weren't playing well at all in the first half," said quarterback Will Harris, who threw two touchdown passes. "We just picked up our intensity level and that gave us the edge in the end."

By beating Tahoka, Stanton cleared the final hurdle in its quest for a perfect 10-0 regular season record.

"I couldn't ask for anything more (of the regular season)", said senior Kenneth Hull, who scored the Buffaloes last touchdown of the game late in the fourth quarter. "Just seeing this team come this far was great. Now we need to take it to the next level."

But make no mistake - the Buffaloes have not reached their finish line quite yet.

"We are going to take the playoffs one game at a time, each game is a different challenge" said Jeremy Hull.

Stanton begins the road to the state championship against Farwell in the bi-district round of the small school playoffs. The game will be played in Levelland at 7:30 p.m. on Friday evening.

'Huskers, Aggies need win to stay alive

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum is not worrying about the Aggies defending their Big 12 championship.

Slocum knows the No. 21 Aggies are not likely to return to the conference title game for a third straight year if they do not win at Nebraska on Saturday.

Texas A&M (6-2, 3-2 Big 12) trails Texas in the Big 12 South Division by a game. The Aggies and the Longhorns close the season Nov. 29 at A&M, but an Aggie loss before then would essentially take them out of the race.

"Two years ago we were in the same situation and we needed some things to happen, and those things did happen," Slocum said. "We're not really worried about all that right now."

Nebraska (7-1, 4-1) is in a similar situation. The Huskers trail Kansas State by a game in the North. The Wildcats visit Lincoln next weekend, but that game's division implications would drop with a Nebraska loss Saturday.

The Huskers and Aggies, who played in the 1997 Big 12 championship, were the preseason media picks to win their divisions. Both teams say they don't want to look that far ahead.

Costello's 38 drive Chaps to victory

Staff Report

Eugene Costello poured in 38 points and made Junsie Cotten's debut as Midland College's head coach a successful one as the Chaparrals downed Cochise College, 97-82, Friday night in the Midland College Classic.

Costello led three Chaps in double figures as Ricky Duff had 13, while Alvin Brooks contributed 11. Teohn Conner added nine points and 10 rebounds.

"We came out with a lot of energy tonight. I was pleased with the way we played," said Cotten about his Chaps' season opener. "We made a lot of mistakes but that's to be expected for the first game. I was proud with the way the guys competed.

"Cochise is a well-coached team. Tim Smith was a beast on the boards. Their team played really hard, it was just our kids played a little harder. We wore them down with our depth."

Midland College took a 46-34 lead at the half.

Up next for Midland College (1-0) is Weatherford, which lost earlier in the day to New Mexico Military Institute, 71-65.

"We're catching Weatherford at a bad time," said Cotten about tonight's 8 o'clock matchup. "I just hope our kids don't come in on a high tomorrow, 'cause if they do, we'll get beat by 20. We need to play with the same intensity and purpose we had tonight."

In other action from the Midland College Classic, the Weatherford women defeated Phoenix College, 87-63.

Aikman still feels effects in his head

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Four days after Indianapolis safety Jeff Burris went helmet to helmet with him, quarterback Troy Aikman took a couple of aspirin and worked out with the Cowboys, getting ready for Monday night's game in Minnesota.

Aikman said after Thursday's practice he's still having headaches, but expects to be OK for the Vikings game.

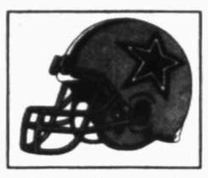

"If I'm still experiencing headaches a week after, then that would be a concern and that would be discussed. I'd hate to say right now that I would not play. But I'd hate to say I definitely would play," Aikman said.

"The only comment I guess I can make is I plan on playing, and I will go out and practice this week, anticipating that the headaches will stop."

Aikman has suffered five concussions, but none has prevented him from playing the following week.

The Cowboys, criticized because Deion Sanders returned to play in the Washington game on Oct. 24 after a concussion, refuse to say that Aikman suffered a concussion. Trainer Jim Maurer termed what happened as "a hit to the head" and said an MRI didn't reveal any damage.

Maurer said it's not unusual for Aikman to experience headaches. That the headaches don't last as long and aren't as severe is a good sign, he said.

The Cowboys made no effort Thursday to give backup Jason Garrett any extra snaps.

Aikman missed only one series after Burris buried him on a blitz early in the fourth quarter of Indianapolis' 34-24 victory Sunday.

Aikman said he felt a constant headache through Monday. The pain has come and gone since then, each time decreasing in duration and intensity.

"It's a concern," Aikman said. "There's no question."

Aikman's first concussion came when he was a rookie in 1989, and again after being knocked out of the January 1994 NFC championship. He played the following week both times.

But things are different now. Several players have retired in recent years because of the cumulative effect of concussions. San Francisco quarterback Steve Young is being urged by many to join that group.

Like Young, Aikman is a client of agent Leigh Steinberg. Steinberg has done extensive research into the subject, and he and Aikman already discussed plans to have the 32-year-old quarterback examined in the offseason. The latest injury has made those tests more of a priority.

"There's some people he thinks can be very helpful when the season ends," Aikman said. "I'll meet with them and they can evaluate it and see exactly where I'm at."

An MRI taken Tuesday showed no brain damage, but Aikman said that test can only detect major trauma. Part of the problem with diagnosing and treating concussions is that no test truly gauges the severity. The best indicators are how long the symptoms last and how strong they're felt.

"I'm not as knowledgeable about the whole concussion thing as I'd like to be. I don't know if that many people are," Aikman said. "I think there are so many questions about the long-term effects of what can happen from repeated blows to the head.

"So I don't know how to answer my status. All I can say is I'm still experiencing some headaches. I don't minimize the seriousness of it. If the headaches continue, that will obviously be something that will have to be looked at."

Valley officials taking next step to lure Cowboys camp

HARLINGEN (AP) — There's an excellent chance that the Dallas Cowboys' training camp will move next summer to the Rio Grande Valley, the head of the Valley's sports authority said Friday.

The Rio Grande Valley Sports Authority, as well as commissioners from Hidalgo County and the cities of McAllen and Mission will soon vote whether to approve a letter of intent from each entity confirming a commitment to host the team, Sports Authority chairman Randy Whittington said

Whittington said since the Cowboys could make a formal announcement about training camp sometime this month, the letter of intent must be formalized quickly

"I feel real good about it but they have not told us yes," Whittington said. "If they did, I'd be sitting here drinking champagne."

Whittington also asked the city and county leaders to make themselves available for a possible announcement in Dallas beginning next week, just in case.

to her for a lot of leadership."

The Lady Rebels are not unaccustomed to playing against a tall middle. Abilene Cooper features April Coffield, and Lee is coming off a big win over Cooper last Saturday in a playoff for the District 4-5A championship. Although Cooper didn't play its best, Lee played very well. Alexander wouldn't mind a repeat performance today.

"We're going to have to play well," she said. "They serve well, so we're going to have to pass well. We're going to have to have the same intensity and focus that we had Saturday.

"Once you hit the playoffs, you can't have any letdowns. All the teams that have made it this far are used to the pressure and used to playing in it."

And sometimes they remember past defeats, raising the pressure on the other team.

ELSEWHERE IN THE PLAYOFFS: The winner of the Lee-Andress match will play Amarillo Tascosa in the next round. Tascosa got over a slow start to beat El Paso Eastwood, 8-15, 15-1, 15-6, Friday in Denver City. Eastwood was the team that knocked Lee out of the playoffs last year, while Tascosa beat Midland High in bi-district last year... Denver City hosted an Amarillo vs. El Paso double-header Friday; Amarillo High defeated El Paso Hanks, 15-3, 15-6, in the second match... Abilene Cooper's bi-district win over Lubbock Coronado Tuesday was the first playoff win by a District 4-5A team over a 3-5A team since 1991, when Abilene High did it... Cooper (25-9) will play El Paso Franklin (30-2) at 4 p.m. today in Monahans. That would give true volleyball fans another spectating option on the way home from Pecos...

Rangerettes take on River Road with some playoff-like experience

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

Even though Greenwood got a bye in the first round of the Class 3A volleyball playoffs and won't officially start until today, it's almost like the playoffs started a week-and-a-half ago.

The Rangerettes went to Monahans Oct. 26 to close the regular season. They knew the winner would finish second in District 2-3A, receiving a first-round playoff bye, and that gave the match playoff-like implications. The Rangerettes earned the big road win, 15-11, 13-15, 15-6.

"The girls are playing together," said Greenwood coach Sheila Smith, whose 20-13 team will play an area round match against Amarillo River Road (17-12) at 5 p.m. today at Lubbock High School.

"They came together as a team, and they've realized what they're capable of. They've put their hearts and dedication into it, and they've come out on top."

Offensively, Greenwood relies heavily on the hitting of senior Stephanie Willis, who has recorded more than 300 kills this year. Willis was a starter on the Greenwood team that went all the way to the state championship match two years ago.

"She's our go-to girl," Smith said. "We'll go to her 50 percent of the time, and sometimes more than that. If she's getting blocked, we'll change it up — if she's getting blocked, she knows we're going to change it up. My setters do a good job; they know whenever it's time to change. They do a good job moving the ball around."

Those setters are Johnna Stewart and Lindsee Dickerson, whose other options to set include Sally Smith, Rocio Montoya and Elizabeth Havalak. Shanna Zachry and Lindsey Lankford lead the back row defense.

River Road is led by Kelly Larkan, a middle hitter with good leaping ability — she competed in the high jump at the state track meet last spring.

"They have a couple of tall girls, good middle hitters," said coach Smith. "One girl (Larkan) is good at hitting down the middle, but from what I've heard from coaches, if you can block her a couple of times, she'll quit hitting. And that's what we'll try to do."

Although Smith is only in her first year as the head coach at Greenwood, she knows what it takes to win in the playoffs, having won state championships at both Bronte and Imperial Buena Vista.

"We have to play consistently," Smith said. "We have to have strong serves. I think we've got an advantage because we've picked up our serving. We've done a good job of placing the ball where I wanted it. If we can (use serves to) keep the ball away from (Larkan), we'll have the advantage.

"That's what Monahans found out."

CLASS 3A NOTES: The reason Greenwood had a first-round bye is that the second-place team from 2-3A would normally play the third place team from 1-3A. But there is no third-place team from 1-3A, because Alpine and Presidio are the only teams in that district... Because not all Class 3A schools in West Texas play volleyball, the alignment is different from in football. The Greenwood gridders play in District 4-3A... Monahans (15-15) beat Presidio, 15-5, 13-15, 15-7, on Tuesday, putting all three teams form 2-3A in the second round. Crane, the 2-3A champion got a first-round bye.

Guitarist fulfills pope's wish, ministers with his music

Tony Melendez, who was born without arms, plays guitar with his feet during a show in Branson, Mo., in September. Melendez began to minister to people with his music after Pope John Paul II, during his visit to Los Angeles in 1987, told him: "And my wish for you is to bring hope to all the people."

BRANSON, Mo. — It was, quite literally, the kiss seen 'round the world when Pope John Paul II darted into an audience of thousands to brush the cheek of a man who had just played a hauntingly beautiful song on the guitar.

"You are a courageous young man," the pontiff told Tony Melendez on that day in Los Angeles in 1987. "And my wish for you is to bring hope to all the people."

Years before, Melendez had tried to become a Catholic priest but the church had rejected him, saying one must have a thumb and index finger to perform the Eucharist.

"It hurt," he says now. "But I found out real quickly that through my music I could get into ministering. I could minister in the streets, in the prisons, in the hospitals, in the schools."

So that's what the young musician from Chino, Calif., set off to do. Spread hope, through his voice and the six-string acoustic guitar he plays with his feet.

"People still remember it," says Melendez, who was born without arms after his mother took the prescribed drug Thalidomide during pregnancy. "I'm amazed. It's what — almost 12 years later now? And people still ask me about it."

They asked him again recently while he chatted with fans and signed autographs after a two-hour show at Branson's Remington Theatre.

After 12 years on the road, Melendez, 37, decided it was time to slow down a bit. And when an offer for his own morning show at one of Branson's dozens of music theaters came along this year, he seized it.

Jose, the musician's manager and older brother, says Tony considered coming home after his son took his first steps. "It doesn't matter how much your wife tells you about it on the phone, if you're not there, it's just not the same."

Though Melendez may stop traveling, he won't stop trying to fulfill the pope's wish.

His show, five mornings a week, is called "A Gift of Hope." And he makes it clear during the fast-paced two hours that he's delighted to be alive, to be happily married and the father of two small children; to be a guy who has learned to do just about anything with his feet, including waving goodbye when the curtain comes down.

He's upbeat off-stage, too. In the past

Siblings on a mission

Local pastor's 2 sisters also serve the Lord

When Luis Orozco and his two sisters get together, it's a little like having a child's birthday party at the United Nations, with a lot of laughter and a cacophony of accents, overlaid by the awareness of the inevitable parting back to other parts of the world.

They've all been similarly led by faith. Their preferences took them to different parts of the world. Orozco is minister of Midland's Asbury United Methodist Church. One sister, Elvira McIntosh, is co-founder with her husband, Laurie, of the Cornerstone Community — a network of Christian training centers for missionaries based in Australia. Another sister, Elizabeth (Ely) Sharp, is a member of a Wycliffe Bible Translators team based in Chad.

During a recent reunion, the three of them and Ms. McIntosh's son, Aidan, talked about their lives and missions, and how, after being raised in a conservative fourth-generation Methodist family in the interior of Mexico, they followed their separate visions of discipleship.

Ms. McIntosh was first called while a professor at a university in Mexico City. She became involved with Campus Crusades for Christ, and there she met Laurie McIntosh, an Australian civil engineer who had recently changed careers to do an ethno-linguistic survey of the Chinanteco tribe with the Wycliffe Bible Translators. Ms. McIntosh said that when they married, she had planned to join Wycliffe.

"But instead, he joined Campus Crusades, and we went to England in 1967," she said.

By 1970, there were Campus Crusades throughout Europe, and the McIntoshes

Organizations translate Bible, train missionaries

The Wycliffe Bible Translators was founded in 1942 by William C. Townsend, a missionary to the Cakchiquel Indians of Guatemala, eight years after being asked by a Cakchiquel man, "If your god is so great, why doesn't he speak in my language."

Townsend responded by resolving that one day every man, woman and child would be able to read the Bible in their own language, according to history included on the organization's Web page.

Townsend first founded a linguistics training school in 1934 and named it

Midland is next stop for UMC truck collecting relief supplies

By Johnnye Montgomery

If all goes well, the United Methodist Church's 18-wheel trailer will be headed this way from Seminole today or Sunday, pulled by a McClatchey tractor and bearing flood buckets filled by the people of Seminole. McClatchey will park it in the parking lot of First United Methodist Church at the corner of Baird and Ohio streets in downtown Midland.

Now it's Midland's turn to start filling the buckets with cleaning supplies.

The trailer is criss-crossing the UMC's North Texas Conference, staying about a week at a designated church in each district, to collect relief supplies to send to the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR) depot warehouse in Baldwin, La.

The supplies collected are used to speed help to disaster areas around the nation and around the world.

The idea is to collect specific items to aid in doing a specific job — in this case, flood damage cleanup — which can then be immediately be implemented upon arrival at the disaster site, said Midland's district coordinator, Lon Pardue.

The UMCOR warehouse is located near an ocean port, so that transportation is available whether by truck, train or ship.

Cleaning supplies that are needed by the United Methodist Committee on Relief :

- bleach, 1/2 gallon,
- scouring pads,
- scrub brush,
- cleaning towels, 18 to a package,
- sponges, assorted size,
- laundry detergent (50 oz.),
- household disinfectant (12 oz.),
- disinfectant dish soap (28 oz.),
- clothes pins (package of 50),
- cotton clothesline (100 feet by 3/16 inches),
- dust masks (five packs),
- latex gloves (two-pair packages),
- work gloves,
- trash bags (24-count 45-gallon capacity, heavy duty - remove from box),
- mosquito spray, (14 oz.), and
- air freshener (9 oz., liquid or spray cans)

After the Rio Grande overflowed its banks in 1998, the UMCOR truck took flood buckets to Laredo, where volunteers put them to use in a massive cleanup of homes that were half swallowed in mud and debris. The latest mission in motion was to South Carolina to clean up the mess left by Hurricane

Law officers arrest stress by gathering to pray

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press Writer

VENTURA, Calif. — Christian law enforcement officers gather once a week to arrest stress: Sipping coffee and flipping through well-worn Bibles, they talk shop, share anxieties, read Scripture and bow their heads in prayer.

"It's critical for me. I can feel the difference when I don't attend," said Sheriff's Senior Deputy William Stevens. "It's a dark world out there."

To make policing it brighter, the Ventura County chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Peace Officers gathers for an hour each Thursday in a cafeteria meeting room in the county's Government Center.

Up to 35 people attend, including policemen, sheriff's deputies, FBI agents, game wardens and California Highway Patrol officers.

The group is a local chapter of the national Fellowship of Christian Peace Officers, an organization launched by a handful of Los Angeles Police Department officers in 1971. The nondenominational group, now based in Chattanooga, Tenn., counts some 4,000 members in 150 chapters.

At the weekly Ventura meetings, prayers are sometimes offered for officers and their families, for friends in crisis and for hospitalized cops. Topping the list at a recent meeting were a California Highway Patrol officer shot on a freeway 24 hours earlier and a Thousand Oaks police officer critically injured in a squad-car crash.

"It's important to keep our fellow officers uplifted," said Vinse Gilliam, deputy chief investigator for the District Attorney's Office who led a Bible study session.

The Rev. Charley Trigg, who attends the meetings twice each month, said they help relieve the anxiety that comes from dealing with crime every day.

"They feel the stress of a society that doesn't appreciate police officers in general and peace officers who put their life on the line each day," said Trigg, pastor at Oxnard's Calvary Chapel.

"The meetings help to encourage their individual walk with the Lord," Trigg added. "A lot of them find it difficult sharing their faith with their partners or people they work with. This gives them a chance to reach out for their

The Good Book: 2 Peter (Part 60 of 66)

Overview:
Second Peter is written as a "last testament" of the author, Peter, who senses that his death is imminent "as indeed our Lord Jesus Christ has made clear to me." The letter encourages Christians to remember all that Christ has taught them and done for them. False teachers have arisen in the congregations. They are like "waterless springs" who promise freedom while they, themselves are slaves of corruption. They circulate erroneous teachings that Christ is not coming back and that all things will continue as they have been. The letter clearly refutes this teaching and gives reason why Christ's coming has been delayed.

Theme Passage: 3:8-9
"But do not ignore this one fact, beloved, that with the Lord one day is like a thousand years, and a thousand years are like one day. The Lord is not slow about his promise, as some think of slowness, but is patient with you, not wanting any to perish, but all to come to repentance."

Being 'not of the world' is a challenge

Kituku

Diets of African people, up until recent advancement in modern distribution systems, depended on the region where a community lived. For communities living around water bodies, fish was their main diet. People of my home area, though near a perennial river, could not be classified as fish-eaters.

However, this changed for me when I joined Shimo-La-Tewa High School in Mombasa, Kenya. The school was on the shores of Indian Ocean, thus fish was a major part of our diet.

For two years I swam in the salty waters and ate fish caught from the ocean.

But, I always wondered, "Why did we have to put salt on the fish? The fish lived in and drank salty water, yet the meat was not salty."

When I became a Christian, the concept of living in salty water, but being not salty, started to have spiritual application.

Christians are the fish while the world is the ocean. The worldly attractions and/or indulgences that are detrimental to one's relationship with God are the salt.

Unlike fish, Christians cannot let themselves to be contaminated by the "saltiness" of the world and expect to have a closer walk with God. The Bible teaches us to be in the world but not of the world. Being not of the world is a challenge we have to overcome daily. We sometimes look back on some things we could do, talk about or places we could not go when we first received Christ. Has the "saltiness" of the world caught up?

As we live in our "ocean," we are admonished to " ... touch not the unclean thing." It is an effort one has to make to abhor all appearances of evil, even if popular culture shows it as harmless.

Motorcyclists don't drink, smoke or ride on Sunday

By Hannah Wolfson
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — They don't drink, they don't smoke, and they carry extra copies of the Book of Mormon in their saddlebags.

The Temple Riders are mostly Mormon, but they're as proud of their big bikes and black leather as any other motorcycle gang.

"We're just a part of the motorcycling community," says Ted Gregory of Plain City, 40 miles north of Salt Lake.

Don't be fooled, though. There are some major differences between your local Hell's Angels and Utah's most orthodox motorcycle gang.

First of all, the Temple Riders don't ride on Sunday. They don't curse. But the mostly over-60 members do wear traditional motorcycle garb, plus gray-blue dress vests. And they keep their duds — and their bikes — immaculate.

"This group is very clean, very well groomed," said Gregory, 62, who joined the group about 10 years ago. "They just stand out; they've got that glow about them."

Many of the group's rides, including one or two cross-country trips a year, make a stop at the Mormon temple, and some of the bikers wear hats bearing the image of Salt Lake City's most famous landmark. The group's biggest rides include 95 bikes, almost all ridden by couples who belong to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

For most, the fellowship is what's important.

"The main thing is they're just a good bunch of LDS people," said president Cliff Beattie, a Salt Lake architectural consultant who at 55 is one of the group's youngest members. He joined about four years ago.

"We're way over on the other side from the Hell's Angels," Beattie said.

Temple Riders was founded in 1987 by Frank and Catherine Reese, avid bikers who were frustrated because so many groups rode on Sundays. By the following spring, they had a handful of couples and a regular newsletter.

Missionaries on motorcycles are nothing new. The Christian Motorcyclists Association was formed in 1975 and has about 60,000 members preaching the word around the world.

But the Temple Riders — who claim members in Idaho, Texas and California as well as all over Utah — are more about lifestyle than Gospel.

In fact, Beattie said, more non-Mormons are also turning out.

"You don't have to be LDS to ride," he said. "All we ask is that

WYCLIFFE: Teams translate Bible into almost 500 languages

(From 2C)

Camp Wycliffe to honor John Wycliffe, who first translated the Bible into English. When students finished their training, they began work as Bible translators. By 1942, the two branches had separated into the Wycliffe Bible Translators and the Summer Institute of Linguistics.

In the 57 intervening years, Wycliffe translators, in cooperation with 14 national Bible translation organizations around the world, have completed the translation of the New Testament into almost 500 languages. A pie chart on Wycliffe's Web page shows that of the 6,858 known languages in the world, there are still some 2,000 waiting for translations of the Bible. 366 languages have an adequate Bible translation; 928 have an adequate New Testament translation and another 918 have some Scripture translated.

Other Wycliffe statistics:

■ Wycliffe has completed or helped to complete New Testament translations for more than 35 million people speaking 481 languages.

■ While the population of individual language groups needing translation varies from fewer than 100 to more than 10 million people, it is estimated that there are at least 440 million people who speak a language with no Scripture translation.

■ Wycliffe translators are presently working in 1,095 languages.

■ There were 5,155 active Wycliffe personnel as of the August 1999 update of the Web page, with 600 more being trained for service.

■ There are 46 countries providing translators; about 70 percent of those come from the United States.

■ Wycliffe needs more than 1,500 additional people, including linguists/translators, literacy specialists and people to fill a wide variety of support roles.

CORNERSTONE: Students study Bible, work in communities

munity, work and mission. During the first year, students spend 25 hours each week of formal Bible study with collateral studies intended to provide "a reasoned and articulate grasp of the truth," according to the course description. Spiritual guidance is given in work, community participation and mission.

Classes are small — about 16 students. Each student is expected to help with community duties.

The second year provides practical experience. Students go out in small teams to work with churches, while continuing their studies. Each team is overseen by a teacher who regularly visits and encourages students.

Each training center operates around a different industry. For example, students at the center in Bourke, Australia, find work on the cotton farms, Canowindra students work at vegetable farms and the centers at Dubbo, Broken Hill and Dalby operate pizza shops and laundromats.

Students work 20 to 30 hours a week, and turn over their salaries to the center to pay expenses; they receive small allowances.

Qualified teachers may take a two-year Christian Educators Course at Cornerstone, which integrates study, mission and all the elements of the Foudnations Course within the context of Christian education in Cornerstone's primary or secondary schools, which are affiliated with the Christian Community School movement.

Graduates of the Foundations Course, or students with comparable experience in mission life or similar experience, are eligible for Cornerstone's two-year Leadership Course, which prepares students for Australian College of Theology courses, or for leadership within the Cornerstone context in business, administration, mission and teaching.

Cornerstone students range in age from 17 to 60, and come from all over the world. They may be students straight out of high school, retirees, entire families or recent graduates.

UMC: Local trucker, store help with relief effort

Floyd.

Pardue said that while the district owns the trailer, it has to depend on the generosity of others for the means to move it from town to town. He said this would be the local district's first involvement in the project, which has received a gratifying response.

"McClatchey Trucking is pulling the trailer to Midland from Seminole at no cost to us. They're furnishing the driver, buying the fuel; all we have to do is start filling the flood buckets. Then once we get the trailer loaded, Midland Precast has volunteered to move it on to Big Spring, again at no cost to us, where it will sit on the lot at Big Spring's United Methodist Church," Pardue said.

The five-gallon buckets with lids are furnished by Wal-Mart Super Stores, free of charge, he said.

UMCOR asks that all items be unopened, and that liquids be in plastic containers.

Pardue said cost of supplies is between $35 and $45 depending on where supplies are bought.

"We're just buying at the best price we can get, whatever brands are available."

For more information call Pardue at 570-5424 or Bob Scharr at 684-9702.

POPE: Guitarist enjoys doing all kinds of music

(From 2C)

12 years he has married and fathered two children, a daughter, now 5, and a son, now 2. He's also published an autobiography, released five albums and performed in 20 countries.

His hair is still full, his face unlined and his beard unshaded by gray. "Let's get some light on in here," he says, flipping a switch with his shoulder as he sits in his dressing room to talk

Melendez considers himself lucky. "Since I never had the arms, you couldn't tell me I couldn't do it without them," he says. "I write. I drive. I can even diaper my 2-year-old, and that's tough when he's squirming around. That's tough, even for a person with hands.

"The toes are pretty much my fingers. They're not quite as long as fingers, but you can do a lot with them."

Melendez was born in Nicaragua but a year later moved with his family to the United States when doctors told his parents he would get better medical care here.

His father, who built big-rig trailers for a living, played the guitar some, and he would put it on the floor at home so his son could fool around. But it wasn't until he was 16, Melendez recalls, that he got serious about the instrument. By 25, he was making his living as a musician.

He performed at churches around Southern California and sometimes played for spare change at the beach. Then, the Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles invited him to a meeting in 1987. "It turned out it was an audition," he says. "I had no idea. Luckily, I had brought the guitar."

Church officials were looking for a suitable gift for the pope from the Catholic youth of Los Angeles, and they thought a performance by Melendez might be it. "Like at a lot of auditions," Melendez says with a laugh now, "they said, 'Don't call us, we'll call you.'"

They called, and that September he was seated on a platform in the audience of the Universal Amphitheater as he played a song called "Never Be the Same."

To the surprise of everyone, most notably the security guards, a visibly moved John Paul II jumped off the stage, rushed through the audience and embraced Melendez. That moment turned the young guitarist's life in a new direction.

An unabashed fan of folk-rocker Dan Fogelberg and groups like the Doobie Brothers when he was younger, Melendez now offers a broad-based show that mixes spiritual and contemporary music with songs he heard in Spanish as a child.

Backed by a four-piece rock band, he's as comfortable doing "La Bamba" and the Doobies' "Takin' It to the Streets" as "Hands in Heaven." And he's still ministering.

"I love life. I enjoy life. And I think they see that," he says en route to greet his audience. "And I think it encourages those that have maybe had a tough road. They think, 'If he can make it, I can too.'"

LAW: Officers share camaraderie at meetings

fellow officers."

Meetings begin with chitchat, then a prayer to "eliminate baggage of the past week." Gilliam then offers a bit of levity with a religious-themed joke and Stevens talks about inspiration he gets from an Internet prayer chat room.

"We enjoy a camaraderie which cannot be imitated by anyone outside our unique profession," said the fellowship's executive director, C. Grant Wolf, from his Tennessee office. "Police officers deal with the garbage of society.

"Instead of people appreciating and honoring law enforcement officers, they are often dissed by the public. They deal with murders and traffic accidents where people are killed and they are expected to say, 'Just the facts, ma'am, just the facts.' But they are human beings."

And the nature of their profession, which includes working odd hours, often makes it difficult for officers to get involved with people outside law enforcement, Wolf said.

Additionally, there are some within law enforcement who feel Christian officers are wimps who might hesitate to act in a life-or-death situation.

"He might say, 'Oh, Lord! Should I shoot this guy or not?'" Wolf said, relating a fear expressed by some officers who say they don't want to work with Christian partners.

As a result, he said, not all officers want to be frank and public about their religious beliefs.

"There are what we call 'secret service' Christians on departments," Wolf said, "those who feel they have to be very secret about their Christianity. They feel that Christianity is not macho enough for a peace officer."

Groups are on pilgrimage

BOSTON (AP) — About 70 Catholic and Jewish leaders from the Boston area are on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem and Rome to explore the often-troubled relationship between the two religions.

"It is a sign of hope to me that as Christians begin to celebrate the second millennium of Christ's birth that we are going to the Holy Land with our Jewish brothers and sisters," Cardinal Bernard Law said as the group left Boston.

"May the peace we find in Jerusalem be something that we can share," he said.

The pilgrimage is being led by Law and Rabbi Samuel Chiel of Newton.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 6, 1999:

Stay sure of yourself this year, even when challenged. You might want to evaluate some of your beliefs or ideas that no longer work. Once you gain a clearer picture of yourself, others and your immediate universe, you'll find relationships unusually bountiful and successful. If you are single, opportunities for romance are especially abundant this spring. You could develop quite the case of "spring fever"! If attached, your relationship is transformed, and both of you come out happier. SCORPIO can be difficult to deal with.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Insecurity earmarks your decisions involving money. The prescription is a healthy dose of optimism! Visit with another who reinforces your positive self-image. Confusion marks plans. You'll loosen up once you decide to go with the flow. Tonight: Delight in change.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Sometimes, understanding a partner takes a lot of talent. You could wake up on the wrong side of the bed this morning. Understanding this, you might remedy the situation by going back to bed or making what you consider fun plans. Tonight: Laugh at a personal flub-up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You might not always be able to deal with others, the world and perceived demands. Take some time off for your needs. Rather than working, lounge around and relax. Tonight: Do only what you like!

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Dig up your resume and think about making a major change. You could simply be sour for the moment. Be a naughty kid again; laugh and tease with friends! Tonight: A dear friend confuses plans.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Get into a stress-buster today; you have pushed way too hard lately. A loved one or friend truly is witty. Bring others together, yet make it easy for you. Stay close to home, as you want to relax and get those extra ZZZs! Tonight: Order in a favorite type of food.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Getting the whole story might be complicated. Why worry about it? Make plans to visit a favorite spot today with friends. A change of setting freshens your perspective. Allow yourself to get to know someone who is a little different. Tonight: Laugh, eat and visit with friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Use care with your finances while others have great ways of spending your hard-earned cash! Listen to feedback from a difficult partner but flow with your needs. A child is pulling a ruse on you. Tonight: Treat yourself well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Build better relationships, even though this might be hard with someone who is dour at best. Broaden your horizons. Allow more cheerful personalities into your life. A family member means well but could still mess up your plans! Tonight: Beam in what you want.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★ Take some time off. There's no need to stress out. At first, you might be uncomfortable about the feeling of inertia; after all, you are always busy. Allow yourself the pleasure of getting into a favorite hobby — or doing nothing at all. Confirm plans. Tonight: Be mysterious ...

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Aim for what you want, despite a nagging feeling that you might not be able to get it. Don't let anyone or anything get you down. Use creativity and you'll roll past any problems. Evaluate what you want to spend before you charge out the door. Tonight: Where you are, the party is.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You could be overwhelmed as responsibilities peak and you feel like you can't cover all bases. A family member proves to be supportive in a pinch. Listen to a loved one's feedback; a different slant on the problem helps. Follow your impulses. Tonight: Others admire your ability to kick up your heels.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Communication with another could be tense at first. You might need to think about how a loved one feels. Your empathetic nature holds the key to understanding. Reach out for another; make an extra effort. Tonight: You could be overreacting.

Gifford sends Stern sympathetic note

NEW YORK — The breakup of Howard Stern's 21-year marriage led his arch-nemesis, Kathie Lee Gifford, to send him a sympathetic note. Guess what happened next.

"I was laughing as I read it," Stern told his nationally syndicated radio audience on Wednesday. "It's a really, really nice note, very religious, references to the Lord. It's like I'm her ... test in life."

On Thursday, Stern read the letter on the air.

"I was very sorry to hear the news that you and your wife have separated," it read. "God loves you and he cares about you and each member of your family. He's there when you need him."

Stern called the letter "insincere and ridiculous."

"She took the opportunity to preach to me about Jesus Christ and God, and it's just like proselytizing. Come on, honey, get off the high horse, and be human for once," he said.

A spokesman for Ms. Gifford said the letter was never intended to be read on the air. He declined further comment.

Stern and his wife, Alison, announced their separation on Oct. 22.

FARGO, N.D. — Didn't get enough of Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura in Playboy? You're in luck — there's more.

Lawrence Grobel is writing a follow-up to the controversial interview Ventura gave for the November issue, using 10,000 words that went unpublished, Grobel said Thursday.

The story could run within two months, Grobel told Fargo radio station KFGO.

In the first story, Ventura called religion a "crutch for weak-minded people" and said the Navy's Tailhook scandal was "much ado about nothing."

Grobel spent nine hours over three days talking with Ventura.

LOS ANGELES — Van Halen is 0-for-3 on lead singers.

Gary Cherone is leaving the band to pursue "new musical ventures," he said in a statement Thursday.

The departure "was both mutual and amicable."

"I had a great time singing with the band and I wish Eddie (Van Halen), Alex (Van Halen) and Michael (Anthony) all the best," Cherone said.

Cherone, 38, joined Van Halen in 1996 after a stint in the band Extreme. He replaced Sammy Hagar, who became the lead singer after David Lee Roth quit in 1985 to pursue a solo career.

"Gary is a brother and he and I will continue to have a personal and musical relationship," Eddie Van Halen said.

LOS ANGELES — An exotic-car designer is suing Jay Leno, accusing the "Tonight Show" host of making disparaging comments about him at a car show and other events.

The "Tonight Show" host was accused of calling Claudio Zampolli a crook during last year's classic car show in Van Nuys and discussing rumors that Zampolli sold cars he never delivered.

"There were several events where Mr. Leno made slanderous remarks," said Zampolli's attorney Tristram Buckley said.

"It's a very small community," Buckley said, referring to car enthusiasts. "So if you make slanderous and defaming remarks in that community and you are Jay Leno, the repercussions are very serious."

Leno did not return a call for comment.

The Superior Court lawsuit, filed Wednesday, seeks $150 million in damages for allegedly damaging the car designer's reputation.

MILAN, Italy — An appeals court refused to revive an Italian singer's copyright-infringement case against Michael Jackson, saying both singers copied the tune in question from old blues songs.

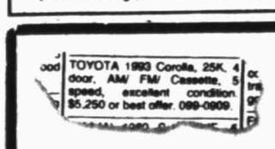

Thursday's ruling in Milan upholds a 1997 ruling rejecting the lawsuit by singer and songwriter Al Bano.

Bano claimed Jackson stole part of the musical motif of the 1987 song "I Cigni di Balaka" (The Swans of Balaka) and used it in "Will You Be There" on the 1991 album "Dangerous."

The courts said both songs were "devoid of originality" and inspired by old songs, including "Tell Hope," "Bless You" and "Just Another Day Wasted Away."

The civil case is independent of a criminal case over the same song.

SERVE: Couple develops written alphabet to translate Bible returned to Mexico where they assisted in crusades for almost a year. Then McIntosh's father became too ill to manage the family farm, and they returned to Australia. While farming, they began working with young Australians in their church and university ministries.

(From 2C)

In 1978, they founded the Cornerstone Community, a training center for missionaries, in a rural setting near Bourke.

"We wanted to provide a place for people who were responding to the Gospel, to teach them all that we knew about Jesus Christ, then send them into the world," said Ms. McIntosh. "The first year, their training is done at the center. Then they go in teams of five or six to churches, to assist in whatever activities the churches need help with. They can then go back to the center for a third year, to receive more comprehensive training in theology."

She said however, that participants are never secluded, or shielded from the real world.

"First, we work for our living, because in many countries, churches aren't able to support missionaries. We do this with businesses when we can. We run pizza shops in Dubbo and in Broken Hill in New South Wales, where we make and deliver pizzas. We have laundromats and vegetable markets. In other places, we hire ourselves out as cotton workers, doing irrigation and harvesting, or baby sitting, house cleaning, window cleaning, mowing lawns.

"We share resources in a common purse with all our monies going into it, but we all get paid salaries. Each family has a house. We have no expectations for spouses to do the courses, or to work in the field unless they want to.

"Our work also gives us avenues to witness to people wherever we go. We become friends with people, and we're invited into their homes. Then we invite them to visit us, and to participate in our devotions and Bible study."

The center begins each day with devotions, and ends the day with vespers. Ms. McIntosh said the center accepts both individuals and families, and that there are no restrictions as to backgrounds.

"We take anybody 17 and over who is willing to learn from us, and wants to know God in a very personal way. We believe people come to us because God sends them.

"Some come and stay, but others find after a few weeks that this is not where they should be. We respect that choice."

The Cornerstone Community celebrated its 20th anniversary in 1998, having seen its program grow and serve churches throughout Australia, with alumni establishing centers in other countries patterned after Cornerstone.

Elizabeth, the youngest Orozco sibling, went to Australia to visit her sister, and in 1980, entered the Cornerstone community. During her second year, while working at a contemporary Christian radio station, she met David Sharp, who had recently finished a short course through Wycliffe.

"David is a very quiet person, and he never liked the idea of getting up and preaching, so he knew his job to serve the Lord was going to have to be in the background," said Ms. Sharp. "We got married in 1986, and went back to Wycliffe and took the courses, then applied for membership."

They finished their Wycliffe training in 1989, and went to Belgium to learn French, then spent a year and a half in Cameroon before being were called to Chad, in the north central part of Africa, where the only written language was French, and there are 120 distinct unwritten languages. They were given a 15-year contract to translate the Bible into the unwritten language of the Mokoulou.

Ms. Sharp said they began by learning Mokoulou.

"We've been there about seven years, and we're still learning," she said.

"The first thing we had to do was to work out the sound system, then work out what kinds of letters we were going to use to represent the language, then work out the grammar and do the anthropological work.

"We also had to choose (village) men who would work with us to do the translation, and we had to get the alphabet accepted by the community, the church and the government," she said.

"People really do want to learn to read and write; they want their language to go on, and therefore, the sultan, the chief of our village, is very much behind our work," she said. "Since we developed the alphabet, we've developed a primer for teaching people to learn to read and write their own language. We've already started classes with the men. Now we're working to make sure that the primer will be expanded in its usefulness, and that people who learn the new symbols for their own language will teach it to others."

She said the village exists on subsistence farming, and the women gather wood during the dry season.

"They're very strong. They have to go very far away to get wood. You see them coming in from the bush with large bundles of wood on their heads. I have a weekly Bible study with the women, and they understand it at a much deeper level than we do in the West. They are much closer culturally to the Bible than we are.

"Some of those women are a part of a two-wife relationship, and for them to realize that God cares for second wives and their children is wonderful. Also, there is the example of Joseph, as he cares for Jesus, who is the son of God, and they are so encouraged by that."

Biblical social customs also resonate with the women, she said.

"They drink Arab tea, very strong and very sweet, and it's a social thing they do. When somebody comes, you have to offer them tea, so it can be a very demanding custom for such poor people. We've had people say that if they have no tea and somebody comes to visit, they leave by the back door, because otherwise, they'll have to borrow from a person who sells tea, and they'll be in debt."

When asked about danger, she said it was something they took for granted.

"You live with your bag packed — one bag for the family. That's level one contingency phase. In level two, you have money ready and petrol in the car. Level three, you start to make your way to the capitol, where either the French government or the American Embassy will get us out. We know we're in Chad on borrowed time, but for now, we're all right."

Orozco came late to the ministry, having taken one degree in fine art and making it his career before coming to Texas to enter the Bible Institute at Edinburgh.

He said he found his vocation for the ministry through his love of art.

"There is a beautiful Anglican chapel in Mexico, built in 1878, and this is what led me to theology. I was brought up a good Protestant, but John Wesley is too organized for me. I took a small step over to St. Francis."

Orozco says what kept him from following the rest of his family to Australia from Mexico was the prospect of Christmas in Australia.

"You look out the window during that wonderful season, and what do you see? Women in bikinis," he said.

"I need to see snow, or if it doesn't snow, at least I want it to be cold, when we celebrate the birth of Jesus."

TEMPLE: Mormon motorcyclists do mission work on the road

(From 3C)

when people ride with us they keep to the same standards we do.''

Though the group is not sanctioned by the church, members say Mormon leaders are well aware of their activities. Many members have been members of the faith's lay clergy.

''We do mission work on the trips,'' but it's not the main goal of the group, said Ted May.

May, 64, took up motorcycling shortly before he retired from banking. He joined the Temple Riders about a decade ago. Members sometimes have playful competitions to see how many copies of the Book of Mormon they can hand out at rallies.

''You don't try and push it, but if people come up and ask who we are, we tell them. And they always do,'' he said.

May remembered one time when their ''hogs'' almost got them in trouble when they pulled up to a Mormon temple.

''They called the police on us!'' he said. ''They were worried this big motorcycle gang was rolling in to the temple.''

Fortunately, a group member had already notified local police that the Temple Riders were in town, May said.

- Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.
- Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item, such as "Stove" or "Guitar" rather than "Kenmore" or "Gibson", "Ford 1987" instead of "1987 Ford", or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads..

2000 Toyota ECHO

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Toyota continues to gain momentum in the white hot marketplace called the United States. Its products are considered the benchmark in most segments it competes against. Dealers sell just about everything the factory can manufacture as it hits the blacktop and offering rebates to "move the iron" is largely unneccessary. So why would the automaker, who can't seem to build enough of anything it sells right now – car or truck – desire to allocate precious resources to develop a class leading product in the entry-level segment of the marketplace?

Toyota's future success lies in its appeal to young buyers looking for something new, different and affordable," said Don Esmond, Toyota Division group vice president and genenral manager. "ECHO is the first in a line of new vehicles being developed by Toyota to appeal to the specific, unique demands of young, new-car buyers."

Built at Toyota's Takaoka plant in Toyota City, Japan, the ECHO is available in two- and four-door models powered by an all-new 1.5L DOHC 16-valve twin cam four-cylinder engine. The new motor features Toyota's VVT-I variable-valve timing technology that delivers an exceptional blend of power and fuel economy. Consumers can choose between the standard five-speed manual or $800 optional four-speed automatic transmissions.

Although the ECHO is smaller than Corolla – over an inch in width, just under four inches in wheelbase, almost eleven inches in overall length – its interior room ranks as a compact, just like the larger Corolla. Its tall profile – the ECHO is almost five inches taller than the Corolla – combined with a cab-forward silhouette provides exceptional headroom and allows for more upright seating. This layout also combines the low floor height of a sedan with a high seating position, similar to that of a SUV or minivan, which greatly enhances entry/exit.

Inside the cabin, displays are actually located in the center of the dashboard, canted in the direction of the driver instead of dead center of the steering wheel. This is going to be a love it/hate it attribute of this vehicle. Controls are well laid out and found just below the new location for the displays. Plenty of nooks and crannies abound for storing a vast quantity of personal items. Cargo space is enhanced with the optional 60/40 rear fold-down seat back available in Upgrade Package 1.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers are 108 hp at 6,000 rpm and 105 lb/ft of torque at 4,200 rpm. EPA fuel economy ranges from 34 city/41 highway for the five-speed manual to 31 city/38 highway for the four-speed automatic using regular unleaded gasoline. Standard safety/security equipment includes dual front airbags, side door impact beams and head impact protection. Four-wheel anti-lock brakes with daytime running lights are available at additional cost.

The Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the Toyota ECHO starts at $9,995 for the two-door manual up to $11,095 for the four-door automatic. Destination charge adds $455. This is another scarce product where patience will be required. As production gets up to speed, expect the ECHO to become more widely available in the coming months.

"Although the ECHO is smaller than Corolla -- over an inch in width, just under four inches in wheelbase, almost eleven inches in overall length -- its interior room ranks as a compact, just like the larger Corolla."
