Q—Has a date been set to begin construction on the city's $4 million wastewater treatment plant?

A—It is now planned to begin the bidding process in March, with a tentative construction start-up date of July 1.

In Brief

Mark 13th

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Tens of thousands of Iranians gathered at the tomb of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini near Tehran Saturday to mark the 13th anniversary of his triumphant return from exile and the rise of the Islamic republic.

Reports by the official Islamic Republic News Agency and Tehran Radio indicated a turnout far lower than the millions of chanting mourners who have thronged the tomb since Khomeini died nearly three years ago.

An estimated 8 million Iranians, pounding themselves with grief, took to the streets when Khomeini died of cancer June 3, 1989, at the age of 86.

911 system kinks being worked out

Some country residents won't be serviced as yet

Scurry County's 911 emergency system was put on line last week, but the start-up has not been without surprises.

The 911 dispatcher is located at the Snyder Police Department, and Chief Lannie Lee reported that to date no real emergencies have tested the system's ability.

Currently only residents with a Snyder prefix (573) or Hermligh prefix (863) will reach the 911 dispatch system. Persons who live on the fringe of Scurry County are not yet able to reach emergency service by calling 911.

Affected in Scurry County are residents on the Rotan exchange (735), Roscoe exchange (766) and Colorado City exchange (728).

Lee said it is his understanding that when 911 becomes operational in those areas within the next few months, emergency calls will be transferred to the Snyder emergency center by a single stroke of a computer key. Meanwhile, these residents should continue to call emergency numbers in the traditional manner.

Both Colorado City and Rotan are in the testing mode for 911, indicating that 911 service will soon be available. Status of Roscoe was not known.

Scurry County's system was in the test mode until Wednesday afternoon when the Snyder center was contacted by Southwestern Bell advising the local emergency center that the system had been put in the active mode.

Identification of rural locations continues to be a problem for the local system. Julie Strunk, Scurry County 911 coordinator, said some 500 rural address cards have not been returned.

The computer screen is able to show the name and telephone number of a caller, but specific location must be obtained by voice.

A similar situation occurs with regard to rural residents on a party-line telephone. Southwestern Bell, Strunk said, is in the process of converting those customers to single-line service.

Strunk said all of the information, such as lengths of certain roads and streets are not yet in the telephone company computer, making it impossible for all the necessary data to show up on the computer screen when a 911 call is received.

Both Strunk and Lee said flaws in the system and data will be worked out in the coming months.

In theory, when an emergency call is received, sufficient information should appear on the emergency center screen to implement proper emergency response even if the caller is excited or may not be able to provide additional information.

Disaster plan meetings set

Scurry County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Office will be conducting two informational meetings Tuesday at the Fine Arts Theatre on the Western Texas College campus.

The meetings are scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. 1990 and 1991 Disaster Program provisions will be discussed.

"These meetings are very important and will assist producers in making decisions regarding program participation," said Joe B. Hefner, executive director of the local ASCS office.

Court clears way for U.S. to force return of Haitians

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has cleared the way for the U.S. government to forcibly return thousands of Haitian refugees to their homeland even before an appeals court decides the legality of the policy.

The high court Friday set aside an injunction by a federal judge in Miami that blocked the repatriation of the 9,000 Haitian refugees being held at the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

The State Department immediately will begin returning up to 5,500 of the refugees that U.S. immigration officials have determined to be "without plausible claim for asylum," the Miami Herald reported Saturday.

The move is aimed at deterring further attempts by Haitians to leave their homeland for the United States even as the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta reviews a lawsuit challenging the repatriation policy.

The Haitians have sought political asylum in the United States, saying they were fleeing terror in the aftermath of a military coup Sept. 30 that ousted Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected president.

While the United States has objected to the ouster it has rejected the refugees' claim for asylum by saying they are fleeing poverty, not political repression.

The high court's order stayed the Miami's judge's injunction pending a ruling by the appeals court.

Ira Kurzban, a Miami lawyer representing the Haitian Refugee Center that sued to stop the repatriation, said he was disappointed by the decision but was hopeful the appeals court might rule as early as Monday.

"We are very disappointed," he told the Herald. "But we don't think the case is over yet. We're waiting for the 11th Circuit Court decision."

The Justice Department sought the stay, arguing the Haitians challenging their forced return to their homeland were not entitled to the injunction because they were unlikely to win their lawsuit.

Council discusses possible solutions to motel's problem

Snyder City Council discussed possible solutions concerning a request for city sewer service at Willow Park Inn at a Friday evening work session.

The request was presented to council members in January because the wastewater treatment plant used by Willow Park does not meet Texas Water Commission standards. The council tabled the request at that time.

Bob Meyer, who took over as owner and manager of Willow Park Tuesday, met with the council Friday along with former owner Dennis Chisum.

Mayor Troy Williamson updated Meyer on city policies for providing utilities, stating that city services are not offered to residents or businesses outside the city limits, and to do so would require a change in city policy.

"The one exception to this was the prison," added Williamson. "That was a legitimate exception because it is a governmental entity."

Other concerns expressed by the mayor included the fact that Snyder has entered a bid for a second correctional facility with the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. The line that Willow Park would hook into would also be used if Snyder was awarded a second unit.

Williamson discussed other alternatives, including annexation into the city, discharging waste into Deep Creek and discharging waste to use in fertilizing nearby land.

Willow Park is currently discharging wastewater into an underground tank, and having the waste hauled from the motel to the city waste treatment facility by Fluid Transport Company. According to Chisum, this puts Meyer in compliance with TWC.

In discussing annexation, Williamson pointed out that the city of Rotan currently provides water service to Willow Park. Snyder and Rotan are under agreement that no one located inside the city of Snyder can receive water from Rotan.

The mayor added that Willow Park would have to pay to tie into the city's water service, but would save over $3,000 dollars annually on water costs.

Another concern for Willow Park is that annexation would effect seven landowners between the hotel and the city limits.

Council members suggested that Meyer and Chisum speak with the property owners and get an idea whether or not annexation of the area would be acceptable.

Chisum stated that annexation and tying in with the city was the most expensive alternative, but he felt it was the best way to go.

Senate oks measure to regulate cable TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate overwhelmingly approved a measure that would control rising cable television rates but the industry warns it isn't ready yet to abandon the fight against increased government regulation.

And cable television operators may find an ally in the Bush administration, which is promising a veto unless the measure is changed significantly as it advances to the House.

Senators, inundated by consumer complaints about cable television prices and service, voted 73-18 Friday to approve regulations that aim to control rising prices for cable service and increase competition.

The bill requires the Federal Communications Commission to regulate rates for basic cable service unless a competing multichannel television company is operating in the area.

It was sponsored by Sens. John Danforth, R-Mo., Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Al Gore, D-Tenn.

"It's unfortunate the Senate has passed such an extreme bill, but ... we shall live to fight another day," said James P. Mooney, president of the National Cable Television Association.

The Senate plan defines basic service as those channels sought by at least 30 percent of the community. This would prevent companies from offering only the local broadcast stations, and access channel and C-SPAN as basic services, as some do now.

The bill also limits the number of cable customers a single company can have nationwide and restricts an operator's involvement with programming companies.

Those programmers would be required to sell access to their signals to competing cable operators.

WIC program topic for county Monday

Scurry County commissioners will open bid proposals and authorize supervision of the Women, Infants and Children program in a 10 a.m. special session Monday.

The court is set to open bids for the purchase of gasoline, diesel and oil for use by the county at 11 a.m. According to County Judge Bob Doolittle, bids will be considered Monday, but the court may postpone taking action on the matter until its Feb. 10 meeting.

Upon approval, bids will be awarded for a one year period.

Commissioners will authorize Doolittle to sign as the local official responsible for supervising the WIC program. WIC is a special supplemental food program for women, infants and children.

Shirley Fritz serves as the director of the WIC program in Scurry County.

Approval of bills and minutes of the Jan. 27 meeting are the only other items facing the court.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The fellow who lives a double life can get in trouble twice as fast."

It probably has to do with attention span, or lack of it, but we've never really wanted to go back to college until we read about a course at Pennsylvania State University.

That school has got to be okay since it actually gives students credit for playing golf.

A new program, starting last semester, was a bachelor of science degree in golf management. The program is designed to turn amateurs into golf professionals.

It's part of the university's Leisure Studies department. The school was motivated by a shortage of trained professionals at the nation's 14,000 courses.

In addition to getting to play a lot of golf, the money for grads isn't bad either. Officials say annual salaries of pros can range from $40,000 to $200,000.

The school is said to be receiving some 50 inquiries a week from potential students. In addition to putting around, students must also attend classes on golf club repair, cart maintenance, turf management, public relations and personnel.

But before you give up your current paycheck and head for the links, there's one requirement that will eliminate many would-be pros. The school slices through the wave of applicants by requiring a handicap of eight or below.

Rumor has it that a local guy got one of those cellular telephones for his car. Despite being a Christmas gift from his wife, he has since removed the device from his car and asked for a refund.

He was asked what the problem with the car phone was all about.

He quicked replied, "Oh, nothing. I just got tired of running to the garage everytime it rang."

The earth rotates on its axis and follows an elliptical orbit around the sun. The rotation makes the sun appear to move across the sky from East to West. It determines day and night, and the complete rotation, in relation to the sun, is called the apparent or true solar day. This varies, but an average determines the mean solar day of 24 hours.

Army declares end of war

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Amid pomp and parade, the army Friday informed President Alfredo Cristiani and the nation of the official end of its 12-year campaign against leftist insurgency in El Salvador.

A few hours later, their longtime rebel foes flew home from Mexico to a jubilant, chanting crowd of perhaps 2,000 waving the flags of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN.

Earlier, standard-bearing squads of all armed forces units formed on the capital's 1st Army Brigade parade grounds for review and decoration by Cristiani and the high command.

The conflict between the leftist FMLN and a succession of U.S.-backed centrist and rightist administrations killed an estimated 75,000 people.

The FMLN was predominantly Marxist-Leninist in its inception and throughout most of the 1980s. Rebel leaders say they have revised and moderated the movement's doctrine in recent years and that its ideology now is more social-democratic than communist.

"I have the honor of informing the Salvadoran nation that today is the end of the military campaign against communist aggression and in defense of the State," said Gen. Gilberto Rubio, chief of the joint chiefs of staff.

"Mission accomplished!" he shouted, and saluted.

In a call to reconciliation, Gen. Rene Emilio Ponce, Minister of Defense, said: "It is now the responsibility of all Salvadorans not to curse the shadow the past has cast but to maintain the flame on the candle of peace. Let us bury forever sectarian strife and the vanity of seeking vengeance."

Cristiani, addressing the troops, expressed "in the name of the nation, from the deepest reaches of our hearts, our thanks, our infinite thanks."

At Comalapa airport later in the afternoon, rebel banners long hidden from public view flew from the flagpoles. Marchers carried banners welcoming the commanders as the "fathers of peace.'

Buses of backers waving rebel banners tooted through San Salvador's rush-hour traffic as dusk fell.

G.A. Parks Jr.

G.A. Parks Jr. doesn't say much, but his actions in community service speak loudly of his dedication to Snyder and Scurry County.

Parks retired from Chevron USA in 1987 and he traded a full-time job for full-time volunteer work, although the Scurry County native was already a veteran in civic affairs.

Parks began his work with Chevron following discharge from the U.S. Army in 1954, following the end of the Korean war. Parks began as a roustabout at the North Snyder Gas Plant and served in a variety of positions with SACROC. Upon his retirement in February, 1989, he was a production foreman.

Prior to retirement, Parks served seven years on the board of trustees of Snyder Independent School District. He was board president one year.

He was also active in youth leagues, coaching Little Dribblers, Farm League and Little League. A 1944 graduate of Fluvanna High School, he married Aline Whitby on April 13, 1952. A daughter, Paula, is an engineering assistant with Gruy Engineering in Houston and son, Whit, is employed by Sewell Ford in Odessa. Both children are graduates of Snyder High School.

A local history buff, Parks was a member of the Bicentennial Committee in 1976, and both he and his wife were members of the Scurry County Sesquicentennial Committee in 1986. Mr. and Mrs. Parks are also members of the Ranching Heritage Association at Texas Tech.

Parks is a past director of the Scurry County Museum and the Scurry County Museum Association. Parks continues to operate a cow-calf operation and hobbies include an antique bottle collection.

Currently, Parks is a member of the board of managers of Cogdell Memorial Hospital. Appointed in 1988, he is serving his third term as chairman.

He is also a member of the chamber's economic development committee and has been active in location of the Price Daniel unit in Snyder and involved in Cogdell's health-care arrangement with the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

A long-time member of the 37th St. Church of Christ, he is a Bible class teacher and serves as an elder. Parks has been involved weekly with the church's prison ministry at the Price Daniel unit since it was opened in 1989.

G.A. Parks Jr. is recipient of Snyder National Bank's certificate of appreciation for February. Parks, a native of Scurry County and Chevron retiree, was presented the certificate by Darryl Calley, vice president of Snyder National Bank

Cosmetology interviews due to start Monday

Persons interested in enrolling in the study of cosmetology at Western Texas College should be on campus Monday for pre-class interviews.

Instructors will be interviewing prospective students beginning at 10 a.m. The interviews will be in the Cosmetology Dept. Building.

A new round of cosmetology instruction will begin in March and those interviewing Monday will start at that time.

Those interested in being interviewed should pick up a cosmetology packet at WTC's Student Services offices located in the Learning Resource Center. Instructors ask that applicants complete the packets and set up a time to be interviewed at that time.

Anyone interested should contact Judy Border, cosmetology instructor, at 573-8511, ext. 267.

Cosmetology classes last for one year and are grouped into four quarters of instruction. Approximately 25 students are enrolled in each annual class.

The next four quarters of training will begin on Monday, March 2.

High cholesterol may trigger ministrokes

PHOENIX (AP) — Researchers believe they have discovered a new hazard of high cholesterol: spasms in blood vessels that trigger dangerous ministrokes. And they say lowering cholesterol may be urgent after such attacks.

Doctors have long known cholesterol plays a role in strokes, but besides clogging arteries, cholesterol also makes blood vessels more likely to squeeze suddenly shut, a new study suggests.

Researchers from the University of Iowa reported evidence Friday that cholesterol sets off a hazardous chain reaction in the blood stream. It appears to lead to ominous ministrokes called transient ischemic attacks, or TIAs, and perhaps to full-blown strokes.

The work, conducted by Drs. Donald Heistad, Sanjay Kaul and others, was presented at a stroke conference sponsored by the American Heart Association.

"If this is true, it's enormously important," said Dr. Edward Cooper of the University of Pennsylvania, president-elect of the heart association.

Until now, doctors have not viewed the lowering of cholesterol as especially urgent after ministrokes because cholesterol damage was thought to be a long, slow process.

"I was stunned by this, because it means we don't have any leeway," said Cooper. "We can't casually wait to start cholesterol lowering after the dust settles. We need to start doing it immediately."

Symptoms of TIAs can include temporary blindness, weakness or inability to talk.

The Iowa team studied blood cells, called platelets, taken from seven men and four women who had high cholesterol levels that averaged 277. They compared them with a normal group whose cholesterol averaged 154.

Platelets have several jobs, including making blood clots. They also produce chemicals that can make blood vessels both open up and squeeze shut. In healthy people, the platelets primarily make blood vessels relax so blood flow improves. In those with high cholesterol, the chemical balance changes so they tighten and restrict circulation.

The new research suggests a double-barrel hazard of high cholesterol — the slow buildup of deposits that damage blood vessels and the sudden interruption of blood flow.

"We suggest that this combination will cause spasms, which contribute to TIAs," or ministrokes, Heistad said.

The researchers believe lowering cholesterol may make the platelets normal again, reducing the threat of strokes.

WTC announces plans for spring SOS classes

Area students — including high school seniors about to graduate — will have the opportunity to take some 25 college credit classes beginning Feb. 10 as Western Texas College offers a Spring Opportunity Session (SOS).

A wide variety of courses will be available, ranging from required basics such as English, math and government; elective areas such as art, photography or music; and sports-interest classes such as scuba diving and golf.

During a typical SOS class, the students can gain a full three-hours of college credit. The classes will last some 12 weeks, with finals scheduled the first week in May.

Most, although not all, are evening classes and meet one session per week from 6:30 until 9:55 p.m. Some day classes are offered also.

A complete list of classes available is included in Sunday's issue of the Snyder Daily News.

Registration for the SOS classes will be Monday, Feb. 10, on campus. Classes scheduled that day will also meet their first session. The last day to register for a classes will be Feb. 14.

For persons living within the Western Texas College District, which includes all of Scurry County, the cost for classes will be $67 for a three-hour course. Two three-hour classes will cost $124 in tuition. Other expenses will include lab fees, if any, and textbooks.

An early admissions program will be provided for high school students who have completed their junior year of high school and have permission from their principal.

Placement tests will be offered the day of registration for those who do not have ACT or SAT scores available.

For more information, persons may contact individual instructors at WTC at 573-8511, ext. 273.

Light serves as intern

FORT WORTH — Four months as a fashion intern was an "eye opener" for Texas Christian University student Leslie Jann Light of Snyder.

Light, a senior fashion merchandising major, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Light. A 1987 graduate of Snyder High School, she interned with Neiman-Marcus in Fort Worth as assistant to the children's manager. She is a member of Phi Upsilon Omicron honor society and Chi Omega social sorority.

Since lack of experience is the major hindrance to being hired in the fashion field, the semester-long internship program may become the student's "door opener" as well.

Bush names Yeutter top domestic adviser

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Friday night named Republican Party Chairman Clayton Yeutter his domestic policy chief and said he wants political consultant Richard Bond to succeed Yeutter as head of the party.

Vice President Dan Quayle predicted that none of those now running will win the Democratic presidential nomination and that it will go instead to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo.

"I just have a hunch that Mario may be the man," Quayle told reporters earlier at the winter meeting of the Republican National Committee.

Bush announced Yeutter's appointment while addressing the RNC meeting Friday night.

"Obviously its a very challenging assignment because domestic policy will be such a major dimension of the political scene over the next eight months," Yeutter said in an interview.

Asked if his assignment would diminish the authority of Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Budget Director Richard Darman, Yeutter said, "You'll have to put your own interpretations on that."

He said he expected to be on the job in two or three weeks.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Yeutter's formal new title would be counsellor to the president for domestic policy and that he would have Cabinet status.

The RNC was expected to ratify Bush's choice of Bond as the new party chairman on Saturday.

Lottery dispute erupts

AUSTIN (AP) — A state-hired consultant who helped prepare the contract for selling the first Texas lottery tickets is related to an executive with the firm that has tentatively won the contract, it was disclosed Friday.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, author of legislation that set up the lottery, said the relationship was a conflict of interest and needed a closer look even if that meant delaying the start of the lottery.

"I guess my dream has become a nightmare. My dream was to run a clean lottery, a lottery free of suspicion and of the highest integrity," Wilson said.

"I would like to see the whole process stopped at this point and re-evaluated," he said.

But Texas Lottery Director Nora Linares defended the selection of Scientific Games of Alpharetta, Ga., to print the instant-winner, scratch-off lottery tickets that will be sold in July.

She said she will not delay negotiations with Scientific Games, and hopes to have the contract finished by the end of next week.

"They're the best," of the six companies that submitted bids for the contract that could be worth several million dollars, she said.

But she said she could not go into detail about why they are the best because the state is currently negotiating with them.

Lottery consultant John Pittman, who was hired by State Comptroller John Sharp last November as a consultant to help get the lottery started, is the son-in-law of Jim Culver, vice president for marketing of Scientific Games.

Pittman's consulting company is called Lottery Support Group. His wife, Cynthia, who is Culver's daughter, is the secretary-treasurer of Lottery Support Group. Pittman worked for Scientific Games for 11 years before leaving in 1988.

Democrats already criticize Bush's recession remedies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic presidential contenders criticized President Bush's recession remedies and touted their own in campaign debate Friday night. "They just don't get it," Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton said of the administration. "This country's in trouble."

Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin said Bush's economic policies were an extension of Reaganomics, policies he said benefit the wealthy while most Americans are suffering through "the worst of times."

Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey derided Bush's State of the Union address this week as "all hat and no cowboy" and noted the White House's budget envisions a whopping deficit of $400 billion. Bidding to break out of the doldrums as measured in the polls, Kerrey said he had taken difficult positions "by saying 'no' to friends."

Former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas and former California Gov. Jerry Brown joined the other three in the two-hour debate, carried live on the Public Broadcasting Service. It was the second network television debate of the campaign, and came little more than two weeks before New Hampshire's kick-off primary election.

Director Spike Lee likes to teach

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Filmmaker Spike Lee says teaching at Harvard is no big deal, but hundreds of students apparently thought otherwise and stood in line for a chance to hear him talk.

"To be honest, I'm not really fazed here at Harvard," the director told reporters later. "I think it's an honor just for me to teach young students in film."

Lee, whose films include "Mo' Better Blues," "Do The Right Thing" and "Jungle Fever," was invited by the African-American Studies Department to lecture on black film this semester.

Students waited in line for more than an hour Friday before packing the 1,200-seat Sanders Theater to listen to Lee, and Harvard officials said 600 people were turned away.

Financial Focus

One of the largest and most important expenses families face is putting a child through college. Some families benefit from assistance programs, student loans or part-time employment. Nevertheless, most still have to dig keep into their own pockets. The numbers are staggering, and the expense can be a strain on even the healthiest budget.

Based on a 6 percent annual rate of inflation applied to the average total expenses reported by the College Board for the 1990-91 school year, these costs totaled $4,970 for one year at a four-year public college and $13,544 for one year at a four-year private institution. For example, if your child were to enter a public college in five years, you would need $29,095 to pay for the four-year education. A private college wuld cost $79,290.

When it comes to saving for these expenses, time is your best ally. The more time you have to reach your goal, the smaller your current investments need be.

Another important consideration is the expected return on your investments. Depending on the rates of return, there is a wide difference in the amount of money required to reach specific goals. For example, over a five-year period, $21,742 invested at 6 percent would grow to $29,095. Increase that return to 12 percent, and your necessary deposit drops to $16,509, a sizable difference.

Remember, though, that an unsually high return generally means added risk. The return you expect should be reasonable based on the risk you are willing to assume.

A college education is regarded more as an investment in your child's future. Regardless, someone has to pay the bill. If you think a large part of that cost will be yours, now is the time to begin preparing--while there's still time.

Sherrill Cloud new Anthony's manager

Sherrill Cloud, 43, is the new manager at Anthony's. She comes to Snyder from Amarillo, where she managed a store for four years. Cloud replaces Howard Limmer, who managed the Snyder store for some 24 years.

"Coming to Snyder was a good opportunity for me to step up in the company," said Cloud, adding that she regrets seeing Limmer leave the company.

The new manager has been with Anthony's for a total of 18 years, working as assistant manager for seven years before being appointed head of the Amarillo store.

Cloud has three children and four grandchildren, who live in Amarillo.

According to Cloud, changes are planned for the Snyder store, including a remodeling, which should begin in late February or early March.

The store will be recarpeted and repainted to fit in with a new company look for Anthony's. The store will also be receiving a computerized checkout system sometime in spring, which will improve customer service.

Events set to observe NAACP month

During February, NAACP Month, several activities are being planned by the local organization and will begin with a candlelight ceremony at Mt. Olive Baptist Church at 5:15 p.m. Saturday.

On Feb. 8 at 7 p.m., a musical is planned at the church where several choirs will perform.

Concluding the month's activities, an annual banquet will be held at 7 p.m. Feb. 29 at Reta's Cake Shop. Guest speaker for the evening will be Renetta Howard of Lubbock, third vice president of NAACP. Her topic will be "People and Ideas That Enrich Our Lives," and "Silent Unity."

Wesley Wayne Miller is back behind bars

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — The paroled killer of a Fort Worth high school cheerleader remained behind bars Friday for associating with criminals, an official says.

Wesley Wayne Miller, 29, was held in the Wichita County Jail after his arrest Thursday, a jail spokeswoman said.

Dale Young, a spokesman for the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, said Miller could be in jail for two to three months while the board decides his future.

The board could send Miller back to prison for the violation, or they could commit him to a "parole violator house" for up to 90 days, Young said.

Miller would return to Wichita Falls when he leaves the house, the spokesman said. The board could also withdraw the warrant, freeing Miller to return to his home and daily activities, he said.

Miller was convicted in 1982 of stabbing 18-year-old Retha Stratton 38 times for declining his romantic advances.

"I kind of lost my mind," police said Miller told them.

Miller was a three-sport athlete and was voted "Best All Around" student at Castleberry High School in Fort Worth.

He was paroled last June 24 after serving 91/2 years of a 25-year prison sentence.

Miller had been denied parole three times before the state was forced to release him because he had accumulated 15 years of good behavior time, Young said.

Senior Center activities listed

Bingo will be the featured game in the Senior Citizens Center Monday morning, with play beginning at 10 a.m. A pool tournament is also planned on that day.

Senior citizens will be electing a new Valentine king and queen in voting from 10 a.m. to noon on Feb. 11-13. The new title holders will be crowned on Valentine's Day, Feb. 14. Selection of the Valentine king and queen is an annual event in the center and past title holders will be recognized.

Hoss Clayton and his band will be playing in the dining room at 11 a.m. Tuesday. The Local Yokels will perform at 11 a.m. Thursday. The Kitchen Band will go to Snyder Nursing Center for a program at 10 a.m. Wednesday morning. The Sunshine Choir will rehearse at 10 a.m. Friday, getting ready for a performance at the Valentine party. Friday's Sing Along starts at 11:30 a.m.

Senior citizens will meet at the Western Texas College swimming pool at 9:30 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. The daily exercise class in the center meets at 11 a.m. Blood pressure checks are from 9:45-11 a.m. each Friday.

Located at 2603 Avenuue M, the Senior Center is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday and Friday. Arrangements for transportation to the center and information about activities planned there can be obtained by calling the office at 573-4035.

After days of nauseating tests, astronauts will get some rest

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts, craving fresh foods after eight days in orbit, finally will get to rest Sunday after enduring more of the same nausea-inducing tests they performed in space.

The crew's post-flight schedule called for more rides on rotating chairs and sideways-lurching sleds today for payload commander Norman Thagard, mission specialist David Hilmers and payload specialists Ulf Merbold of Germany and Roberta Bondar of Canada.

The four astronauts suffered through a similar eight-hour testing schedule Friday, including special video games and exercises for back pain. They were to return to Houston tonight.

Shuttle commander Ronald Grabe, pilot Stephen Oswald and mission specialist William Readdy flew to Houston on Friday morning after undergoing tests.

All the astronauts face more tests next week at Houston's Johnson Space Center, but Sunday was scheduled as a rest day, said Angela Johnston, a NASA official who works with the crew.

Discovery landed at this Mojave Desert military base Thursday after an eight-day Spacelab mission with the International Microgravity Laboratory. The mission tested how space radiation and weightlessness will affect future long-term space travelers.

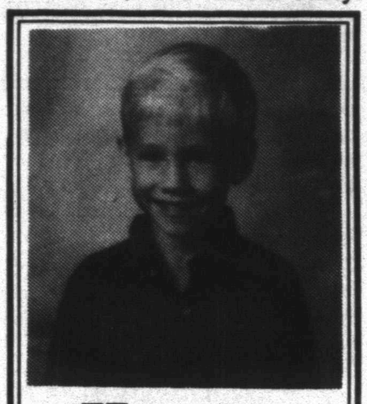

Johnston said the astronauts suffered some nausea during ground tests.

The experiments duplicate those conducted before and during the shuttle flight so scientists can learn how humans adapt to weightlessness and then readjust to normal gravity.

After returning to Earth, the astronauts also got to enjoy some treats the shuttle lacked, Johnston said.

"Cold beer," quipped Chris Fairey, who directs post-flight maintenance for Discovery.

"They really crave things they don't have up there — cold milk, fresh fruits and vegetables," Johnston said.

Snyder residents enlist in delayed AF program

ARLINGTON — Several Snyder residents have enlisted in the Air Force's Delayed Enlistment Program.

Kenneth L. Lyons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lyons and a senior at Snyder High School, is scheduled for enlistment on Aug. 27. Following basic training at Lackland AFB, he is scheduled to receive technical training in the general career field.

Charles Everett Norwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Norwood and a 1991 graduate of SHS, is scheduled for enlistment on May 27. Following basic training, he is scheduled to receive technical training in the munitions specialist career field.

Kimberly Daun Roquemore, daughter of Wanda Roquemore, will enlist on June 4. After graduating LAFB's training course, she is scheduled to receive technical training in the electronics career field.

John Bradley Pilgrim, a 1991 graduate of Snyder High School and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Pilgrim, will enlist on Feb. 21. After basic training, he is scheduled to receive technical training in the mechanical career field.

Christopher Ray Bilbrey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Bilbrey and a 1991 graduate of Snyder High School, is scheduled to receive technical training in the aircraft armament field following basic training.

"A DISTINCTIVE PLEA"

By Homer Anderson

It is obvious that the religious world is badly divided. Great leaders such as Martin Luther and John Calvin sought to correct erroneous teachings and practices. But the reformers started at different points and thus arrived at different conclusions. Division rather than unity resulted.

The churches of Christ, on the other hand, plead for the restoration of apostolic Christianity rather than a reformation of existing religious bodies. Since all followers of Christ can agree that the first century church was right, we should all be able to agree that we cannot be wrong if we succeed in reproducing that church today in every essential part. While many things have changed in the twentieth century, the teachings of Jesus and His apostles have not. Truth is absolute and unchangeable. God's word is truth (John 17:17), and can save today as surely as in the first century, if applied in the same way. "The truth will make you free" (John 8:32).

We invite you to come investigate the simple restoration plea.

TEXAS TRAILS

LONE STAR STATE HISTORY by DAN BROWN

©Dan Brown 1985

SLICK SOLUTION . . .
The Fort Worth and Denver Railroad ran through Memphis, Texas in the 1890's. For some unknown reason railroad officials refused to let their trains stop. This little problem didn't deter the merchants of Memphis. Someone noticed that the tracks ran on an incline through town. They greased the tracks. The passing trains lost traction on the slippery rails and came to a stop just long enough for the merchants to load their goods.

Tyson's accuser tells jury "I was fooled" in cross-examination

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The teen-age beauty contestant who accused Mike Tyson of rape said Friday she willingly walked into the boxer's hotel bedroom because she was misled by his pleasant manner and had no idea he wanted sex.

"When a man asks you to accompany him into his bedroom, wouldn't you take that as an invitation to engage in sexual activity?" Tyson attorney Vincent Fuller asked.

"No. He was being nice. I was fooled," the 18-year-old said. "Anybody can be fooled. I look back on it now and say, 'Yeah, it was stupid.' But that didn't leave any reason for him to do what he did."

Tyson, 25, is charged with rape, confinement and criminal deviate conduct. If convicted, the former world heavyweight champion faces up to 63 years in prison.

During three hours of cross-examination Friday, Fuller did not ask the woman about sex with Tyson, which the boxer maintains was consensual.

"You never met Mr. Tyson before July 18, but within minutes he's hugging you and asking you out?" Fuller asked. "You willingly drove to his hotel? You willingly went to his suite? You willingly sat on the bed?"

"Yes," the woman replied.

"Why didn't you sit on the couch?" the attorney asked.

"You couldn't see the TV from the couch," she said.

Both Tyson and his accuser yawned repeatedly during the three-hour cross-examination. She never looked at him; he glanced at her occasionally but mostly stared ahead impassively.

The two met during a rehearsal for the Miss Black America pageant on July 18. The woman has testified that she was in bed about 1:30 a.m. on July 19 when Tyson called her from his limousine and insisted she come out and talk with him while they drove around Indianapolis.

She denied hearing Tyson make sexual comments and lewd suggestions to other pageant contestants and said she believed he was a "nice person, a respectable person" because she saw him praying with the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

During questioning Thursday by prosecutor Greg Garrison, the woman said Tyson took her to his hotel room, pinned her on a bed with his forearm, stripped her, raped her and laughed while she cried in pain and begged him to stop.

"I said, 'Please, you're hurting me! Please, stop!' And he started laughing, like it was a game," she told the jury.

SHS netters thump C-City

Snyder trounced Colorado City in Thursday's season-opening tennis match, taking 15 of 17 individual matches at Snyder Junior High.

"It was a good opener," said SHS net coach Jerry Tucker. "I was real pleased with the play of our younger players.

"I know the team appreciates the sportsmanship displayed by all the players and spectators and the support shown the team."

The varsity A team will be off until the Feb. 14-15 Abilene Tournament. Snyder's B team will host Big Spring Tuesday at 4 p.m. and then travel to Colorado City for matches Feb. 11 with the SHS JV and freshman team.

Aikman having fun in offense

Pro bowl QB credits offensive coordinator Norv Turner

HONOLULU (AP) — After struggling his first two years in the NFL, things improved dramatically this season for Troy Aikman and his Dallas team. The Cowboys made it to the playoffs and he made it to the Pro Bowl.

"The first season was really tough, last year was even tough," Aikman said. "This year, for the first time, I felt like I was having fun playing in the offense. I really felt good about it.

"It's obviously a lot more fun when you're winning then when you're losing, but it's also a lot of fun when you believe in what you're doing."

Aikman missed five games with a broken index finger on his left hand, his non-throwing hand, during his rookie season of 1989. But he came back to show signs of great promise, including throwing for an NFL rookie record of 379 yards in one game.

He finished the season, however, with a mediocre 55.7 passing efficiency rating and was 0-11 in games he started as the Cowboys struggled to a 1-15 record.

Both Aikman and the team began to turn things around in 1990, when he started 15 games and finished with a 66.6 passing rating, including throwing for 2,579 yards, as the Cowboys improved to 7-9.

That season also was marred for Aikman by an injury, as he went out in December with an injured right shoulder. He underwent surgery in January to have the shoulder repaired and also to have bone chips removed from his right elbow.

This season, despite being sidelined for the final four regular-season games and the Cowboys' first playoff game by a knee injury, Aikman raised his passing efficiency rating to 86.7, throwing for 2,754 yards and completing 65.3 percent of his throws during the regular season.

The Cowboys, meanwhile, finished with a 12-6 record, including 1-1 in the playoffs.

Aikman credits the impact of Norv Turner, who replaced David Shula as the Cowboys' offensive coordinator, with the vast improvement in the offense this season. Turner, who favors a ball-control passing attack, earlier had helped the San Diego Chargers and the Los Angeles Rams develop their passing attacks.

"Getting Norv Turner in as offensive coordinator, getting us into an offense we all believed in, I think that's the reason I've had success, all of us, because of what he was able to do with our offense," said Aikman, who'll be playing for the NFC all-stars in Sunday's Pro Bowl.

"The year before, when we were 7-9, our defense played outstanding and I felt that the thing that was holding us back was our offensive play," Aikman said. "We just weren't putting enough points on the board, were ranked 28th in the league in offense.

"Then Norv came in and got us going offensively, and because of that we were able to win more ball games."

Aikman is very optimistic about his future and that of the Cowboys.

"I definitely feel I haven't peaked yet," he said. "Hopefully, I won't ever feel that way. I'm getting more and more disciplined as I go along.

"I guess my biggest complaint so far is that I've missed a lot of games because of injuries, but that happens. I want to be able to make it through a full season without getting injured."

And he said of the Cowboys: "We've got another big draft this year and I think we'll get stronger. Then, too, we're all so young. This is Emmitt Smith's second year, Michael Irvin's fourth, my third. We've got some guys in the offensive line who are second-and third-year players, so we really are young.

"We're only going to get better. We haven't really scratched the surface of our potential yet."

Not all of the 10 winningest veteran quarterbacks in the NFL were designated as starters as the 1991 season began. For example, Jim McMahon, who compiled most of his numbers as a starter with Chicago between 1982 and 1988, was to back up Randall Cunningham in Philadelphia. Also, Phil Simms of the New York Giants lost his starting job to his former backup, Jeff Hostetler.

In French Alps...

Winter Olympics are set to begin

by The Associated Press

It is not, to be sure, quite there yet. Fighting still rages in Yugoslavia, the shape and destiny of the former Soviet republics is still uncertain, and other countries continue to cope with the changes unleashed by the collapse of communism.

Sports federations still quibble and maintain different rules about professionalism — skiers can race for money, NBA multimillionaires can play this summer, yet, absurdly, Brian Boitano and Katarina Witt can't skate for gold again because they tour in their own ice shows.

But if fans want to see most of the world's best athletes compete, nearly unfettered by political baggage, this year's Olympics are the places to watch.

New atlases and road maps, plus a fortune in francs, are de rigueur at the most extravagant and far-flung Winter Games in history.

It will be tough enough figuring out whom the athletes represent — Is that skier from Croatia, Yugoslavia, Carrera or Rossignol? — and even tougher trying to get to the events.

These $740 million Games are strung out over 13 indoor and outdoor TV stage sets across 640 square miles in the French Alps because every bickering resort craved a piece of Olympic prestige and cash.

Ignoring the worldwide recession, the French are proceeding with pomp that would make Louis XIV proud, even if the locals have to eat bread for a decade to pay for the feast. Fears of a return of the "curse of Grenoble" — bills that took the French more than two decades to pay off — haunt these Games as the costs mount by the minute.

Freshly paved roads winding through the rugged mountains are prone to closure and traffic jams from snowstorms and avalanches. The only way to see all the sports is to buzz around with organizing committee co-president Jean-Claude Killy in his private helicopter or stay home and watch them on TV. A lot of fans, put off by the high prices and hassles of getting around, are choosing the latter, resulting in an embarrassingly high vacancy rate in hotels and an abundance of unsold tickets.

Not that the arenas and bleachers will be empty. More than half the seats at all the events will go to the 17,000 accredited athletes, officials, sponsors, advertisers and journalists, leaving the rest to tourists with the temerity to show up.

American fans shouldn't expect any miracles — certainly not another Miracle on Ice like the 1980 hockey triumph. The United States would need a total breakdown of both the former Soviet teams and the Germans even to come close to winning the medal race.

Four years ago, Americans seemed to be slipping all over the place. Dan Jansen, Debi Thomas, hockey players, skiers. The only golds went to Boitano and speed skater Bonnie Blair, who is back and favored to win again.

Boitano, still a spectacular skater, is likely to challenge the international figure skating federation's rules, either privately or in court, and return to competition in 1994 at the Games in Lillehammer, Norway. Until then, his absence will be deeply felt at the Olympics, where no other men's figure skater can match his blend of artistry and athleticism.

Panthers upset Tigers

LUBBOCK — Dunbar put on a three-point shooting exhibition Friday night that earned the Panthers their first District 2-4A victory in 1992, 61-60, at the expense of Snyder's Tigers.

"They haven't shot that way all year long," said Snyder coach Bud Birks after the upset. "It wasn't really a case of our defense not being there, they were just making their shots."

Dunbar canned a total of eight three-pointers on the night, including six by Marcus Davis who led all scorers with 22 points.

Snyder was led in the loss by senior Hayward Clay with 27 points. Fellow upperclassman Jeff Wortham put in 24.

The Tigers and the Panthers each finished the game with 25 field goals. Snyder had the scoring edge from the free-throw line, hitting nine of 16 to Dunbar's three of five.

The game was as close as the score. Snyder trailed by two, 14-12, at the first-quarter horn, then by three, 33-30 at halftime.

The Tigers trimmed the lead to just two with a 14-13 third and actually outscored Dunbar in the final period by a point.

The loss, the Tigers' third straight, deals a severe blow to Snyder's playoff hopes.

"That is putting it mildly," Birks said. "We had put ourselves in a hole by losing last week to Lamesa and Levelland.

"This (Friday's loss to Dunbar) makes it an almost impossible situation."

Friday's loss puts the Tigers at 1-4 in the 2-4A race, 15-11 overall. Dunbar, 6-16 in all games, also owns a 1-4 league slate.

In other loop games played Friday, Levelland fell two games behind Lamesa by losing to the Golden Tors, 59-55; and Estacado, which slipped into second place in the district, popped Frenship, 64-56.

Snyder will be back in action Tuesday when the Tigers host Estacado (14-13, 4-1) at Scurry County Coliseum.

SNYDER (33) — Duncan 5 1-2 11; Ball 3 3-3 10; Ragland 3 1-3 7; Braziel 1 2-5 4; TOTALS 12 7-13 32.

DUNBAR (39) — Lopez 1 0-1 2; Adams 1 3-5 5; Walker 2 1-4 5; Flores 1 0-0 3. L. Ward 5 4-9 14; Stewart 4 0-1 8; Phillips 1 0-0 2; TOTALS 15 8-22 39.

3-point goals: Snyder 1 (Ball); Dunbar 1 (Flores). Total fouls: Snyder 24, Dunbar 18. Fouled out: Ragland. Records: Snyder 2-24, 0-7; Dunbar 7-14, 3-4.

Dunbar comeback sinks Lady Tigers

LUBBOCK — A 17-2 third-quarter surge by the Dunbar Lady Panthers Friday erased an 18-15 halftime lead by Snyder and gave the Lady Tigers a 39-32 District 2-4A loss.

The Snyder girls outscored Dunbar in every quarter except the third, when the Lady Panthers came up with 17 points and SHS could answer with only two.

Snyder eased to a 7-6 lead after one quarter and stretched the narrow margin to three with an 11-9 second period.

The Lady Tigers came back and hit 12 in the fourth while holding Dunbar to only seven.

Melanie Duncan was Snyder's top producer on Friday, hitting five field goals and a free throw for 11 points. Deana Ball added 10, including one hoop from three-point range.

Dunbar's Ward was good for 14 for the Lady Panthers.

Snyder slides to 2-24 on the season. The Lady Tigers are still looking for their first district win in 1992 after seven tries.

Dunbar is now 7-14 and 3-4.

In other District 2-4A girls' games Friday, Levelland knocked off Lamesa for the second time this season, taking a 46-39 decision, and Frenship upset Estacado, 53-45.

Snyder will entertain Estacado at Scurry County Coliseum Tuesday as the 1991-92 cage season begins to wind down.

Chicago dumps Mavs, 107-92

DALLAS (AP) — The Chicago Bulls lost the first two games of their Texas trip, but they remedied that when they traveled to Dallas.

Rebounding from losses at San Antonio and Houston that followed a 13-game win streak, Chicago routed the Mavericks 107-92 Friday night.

The Bulls took full advantage of playing one of the weakest teams in the NBA while pushing their own league-best record to 38-7.

"Well there we are, back in the win column," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "It's important to get back on the right track."

The loss was the Mavericks' 15th defeat in their last 16 games.

Jordan led Chicago with 25 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists, just missing out on his second triple-double of the season.

"We hadn't been playing well in the first half and we wanted to get out of the blocks quicker," Jordan said.

The Bulls still have three stops left on this six-game road trip, starting with Sunday's nationally televised game against the Los Angeles Lakers.

"We want to be on tap and in tune for that one," Jackson said.

On each stop during the trip through Texas, the Bulls were greeted by full houses and standing ovations. The Reunion Arena crowd saved its loudest cheers for Jordan when he was introduced and for several highlight-reel plays.

"I'd rather be cheered than booed anytime," Jordan said. "We've been getting pretty good responses wherever we go. But the thing is, each team we play looks at it like a playoff game. We're taking everybody's best shot."

Scottie Pippen added 20 points and eight assists for Chicago.

Rolando Blackman led Dallas with 20 points, but he had only four points in the second half.

"They're a great basketball team," Mavericks coach Richie Adubato said. "They have a lot of weapons. Pippen is as close to Jordan as he can be now as far as a star."

Pippen said he wasn't surprised that the Bulls, who are the runaway leaders with the best record in the NBA, lost two in a row.

"Sooner or later you figure there's going to be a little slippage," Pippen said. "It's part of life. You don't figure you're going to win every game. Those games are over and now we've just got to move on."

Terry Davis had 16 points and 14 rebounds for Dallas, which shot 39 percent from the field.

Hawkins, Lanier elected to Hall

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Connie Hawkins and Bob Lanier were elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame along with seven others, including the first two women players to be honored. Hawkins, the New York playground legend, had his pro career delayed by allegations that he had been involved with gamblers.

Delta State's Lusia Harris and AAU star Nera White were the female inductees.

Velasco scores 25 for HHS...

Cardinals fall to Westbrook

WESTBROOK — Chris Velasco erupted for 25 points Friday night, but it wasn't enough as the league-leading Westbrook Wildcats hammered out a 78-63 District 28-A win.

In girls' action here, the Lady 'Cats dealt the Hermleigh girls a 54-32 loss.

The WHS boys scooted to a 24-11 first-quarter lead that grew to 40-28 at the half.

Hermleigh, now 3-16 overall and 1-6 in district games, put on a 24-16 run in the third period, but couldn't get any closer.

Velasco's 25 was tops for the Cardinals followed by Bill Breitweiser's 11 and 10 from Chris Lambaren.

Westbrook's Majors managed 27 points followed by 15 each from Martin and Koch.

The Wildcats are currently 16-7 and 6-1.

Hermleigh's Lady Cards fell behind early and never really got into the game.

Westbrook took a 21-8 advantage at the end of the first quarter. The lead grew to 33-15 at halftime and 44-19 by the end of three frames.

Michelle Payne's 16 was tops for Hermleigh. Amy Anderson added 10 points.

Matlock hit 16 to lead the 11-12, 4-3 Westbrook girls.

Hermleigh slides to 8-13 and 0-7.

Hermleigh's next appearance will be Tuesday when they host Trent.

Hornets grab 17-A cage wins over Ira

IRA — The Aspermont Hornets maintained a share of the District 17-A lead Friday night by handing Ira's Bulldogs a 51-33 loss and limiting IHS senior guard Kory Clark to only seven points in the process.

In the girls' game Friday, Aspermont nipped a determined Ira group, 48-44.

The Hornets held a 25-18 advantage at halftime in the boys' game before striking for a 15-7 margin in the third and putting the game away.

Mike Hughes scored 10 to lead the Bulldogs and Gardner managed 14 for AHS honors.

The 'Dogs are now 2-3 in 17-A games and 16-6 overall.

Mauricia Rosas and Amy Oppegard each poured in 17 points in the Lady Bulldogs' losing cause Friday.

Aspermont's girls exploded on an 18-5 run in the second stanza and took a 26-12 lead at intermission.

Ira's 32-22 surge in the second half left them four points shy at the final buzzer.

Thank You

We would like to thank each and everyone for your support, kindness and sympathy that you expressed during our time of grief. Thank you, also, for the prayers, flowers, food, and many cards.
God bless you.

Sincerely,
Marcie, Myra, and Manuel Avila

In Memory of Roselia A. Aguirre

For our recent loss of our beloved one, Roselia Aguirre. We appreciate everything everyone has done for the Aguirre family. Thank you for the flowers, food, company given to the Aguirre family, and also thank you for attending the funeral.

Thank You

The family of Lula Magness would like to express their sincere thanks to all who brought food, sent flowers or cards, telephoned, came by, or said a prayer for her and her family during her illness and death. Special thanks to Dr. Pierce for his never-ending concern and to the nurses of Home Health for their help. Special thanks to Bro. Brent Crosswhite, his wife, Kelli, and the members of the United Pentecostal Church, for all the love shown, prayers, and the food brought. Special thanks to Bro. Jason Rogers and all the members of Faith Baptist Church for the love shown, prayers, food brought, and for feeding the family after the funeral service.

May the Lord bless you all.
The children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren of Lula Magness

Thank You

Perhaps you sent a lovely card, or sat quietly in a chair.
Perhaps you sent a funeral spray, If so we saw it there.
Perhaps you spoke the kindest words, as any friends could say.
Perhaps you were not there at all, Just thought of us that day.
Whatever you did say to console our hearts,
We thank You so much whatever the part.
Special "Thanks" to all empoloyees at Snyder Oaks.

Guerrilla chief said to have left France

PARIS (AP) — Palestinian guerrilla leader George Habash left France Saturday for an undisclosed location, three days after arriving for medical treatment. His presence in the country sparked a domestic political controversy and an international outcry.

The departure came hours after France's Justice Ministry, without saying why, lifted a custody order on the guerrilla chief, who had been hospitalized in Paris since Wednesday.

Habash, unaided, boarded a small Algerian-registered jet at Orly airport after arriving by motorcade from Henry Dunant Hospital. The plane then took off for an undisclosed destination.

Various reports said that Habash was bound for Algiers, or Amman, Jordan, or Damascus, Syria.

Habash leads the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which gained notoriety for promoting the Palestinian cause through terrorist attacks in the 1970s — including the hijacking of an Air France airliner to Entebbe, Uganda.

The 65-year-old Habash was hospitalized in Paris after suffering a possible stroke at his home in Tunis.

Security was tight at the airport prior to Habash's departure, with police ringing the aircraft. A diversionary motorcade, complete with ambulance, also left the hospital half an hour before the one bearing Habash.

Palestine Liberation Organization officials in Paris said that the guerilla chieftain would be flown to Amman, Jordan. But the official Algerian news agency APS cited well-informed sources as saying that Habash was expected in Algiers sometime this afternoon. Antoine Comte, a lawyer for Habash, said the Palestinian leader would be flying to Amman or to Damascus, Syria.

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat decided that Habash should be transferred to the Jordanian capital, said Bougila Samy, the PLO's attache in Paris. No reason was disclosed.

Earlier, the PLO welcomed the French decision to allow Habash to leave.

"We express our relief for this French decision taken at the highest level to put an end to this prefabricated crisis," PLO spokesman Ahmed Abdel-Rahman said in Tunis.

Local man held on charges of aggravated sexual assault

Police arrested a 34-year-old Snyder man on charges of aggravated sexual assault Friday afternoon.

Manuel G. Garcia, of 3005 Ave. N, was placed under arrest at 5:23 p.m. and booked into Scurry County Jail. Bond was set at $15,000.

On Thursday, police received a report alleging sexual abuse to a nine-year-old female. On Friday, Garcia was identified as a suspect in the case and arrested.

Officers made three arrests Friday on misdemeanor charges.

At 1:13 p.m., a woman in the 2300 block of Avenue I notified police that she was having problems with her sons. Officers arrested a 16-year-old male and 21-year old male for disorderly conduct.

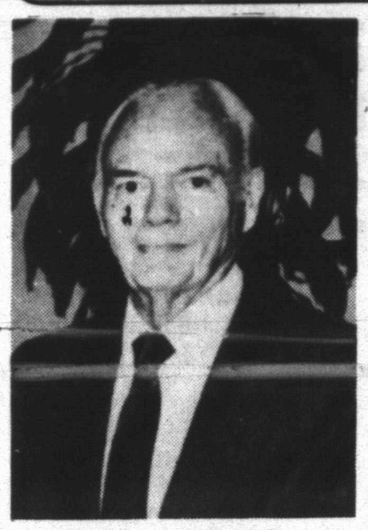

At 5:24 p.m., police arrested a 31-year-old female for driving while license suspended in the 1800 block of 30th Street.

Officers also worked two one-vehicle traffic accidents Friday. The first came at 3:41 p.m. in the 5200 block of College Avenue when a 1982 Ford driven by Dionisio Espinoza of Ira struck a sign and post owned by the Texas Highway Department. The second took place at 4:03 p.m. in the 3900 block of College Avenue as a 1982 Mercury driven by Elizabeth Mackey of P.O. Box 726 struck a light pole owned by TU Electric.

Officers have identified a 17-year-old male as a suspect in a criminal mischief case which was reported Thursday. On that date, Eddie Gutierrez informed police that someone had broken the back window on his 1983 Honda Accord. No arrest was made in the case, which will be forwarded to the county attorney. The window has been estimated in value at $503.21.

In one other report, a male came to the police department at 11:57 p.m. Friday concerning some problems he was having. An official with MHMR was dispatched to the department and the male was later transported to a relative's residence.

WILLIAM FULLER

1914-1992

FORT WORTH — A prominent Fort Worth businessman, with extensive ranching and banking connections in Scurry County, died Thursday in a Fort Worth Hospital.

Services for William Marshall Fuller, 77, are set for 2 p.m. Sunday in the First United Methodist Church. Burial will follow in Oakwood Cemetery. Dr. Barry Bailey will officiate.

Mr. Fuller's grandfather, W.A. Fuller, was a founder and the first president of Snyder National Bank. His father, M.A. Fuller, also served as bank president. Mr. Fuller had also served as a director of Snyder National Bank.

The Fuller family owned two ranches in Scurry County, and his grandfather was an early county rancher. The Fuller oilfield north of Snyder was developed on Fuller land.

Born on April, 12, 1914, in Fort Worth, he graduated from Culver Military Acadamy in Culver, Ind., and attended the University of Texas, Texas Christian University and Wharton School of Finance in Philadelphia.

Mr. Fuller managed the family ranching and banking activities as well as his own investment business, and he was vice president of the Fuller Foundation, a charitable organization founded in the 1950s. He was a director and executive committee member of Fort Worth National Bank and Texas American Bankshares for 20 years, and served on the board of General Telephone & Electronics Corp. for 11 years. He had currently been a director of POGO Producing Co., Houston and Power Corp. of Canada and was a member of the highly-prestigious board of the International Advisory Council. He was a trustee of Texas Christian University and a member of the Exchange Club. He was a Methodist.

He is survived by two daughters, Marcia Fuller French of Midland and Afalaide Fuller Biggs of Houston; one brother, Andrew P. Fuller of Palm Beach, Fla; seven grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

Filipa Hernandez

1922-1992

Services have been set for 2 p.m. Monday at Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home for Filipa Hernandez of Snyder. Burial will be in the Hillside Memorial Gardens. Jack Bryant of the Kingdom Hall of Jehovah Witness will officiate.

Mrs. Hernandez, 69, died Saturday morning at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene after a lengthy illness.

Born April 4, 1922, in LaCosta, she was married to Ernesto Hernandez on May 24, 1942, in San Antonio. He died on Aug. 3, 1982.

Survivors include five daughters, Margaret Molina, Dominga Sosa, Becky Jasso, all of Snyder, Leonora Hernandez and Lillie Hernandez, both of Abilene; and five sons, Steve, Joe, Phillip and Thomas, all of Snyder and Juan of Weatherford; one brother, Pete Guerrero of Von Army; one sister, Josie Alvarado of Martinez; 28 grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Campbell

1911-1992

SANTA ANNA — Services were conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Frist Baptist Church for Mrs. Margaret Campbell, 80, who died Thursday at her home. Burial followed in the Santa Anna Cemetery.

She was the step-grandmother of Valorie Boyce of Snyder.

Born in Itasca, she graduated from Santa Anna High School and attend Simmons College. She and her husband, Calvin Campbell, owned the Gulf distributorship. He survives.

A life-long resident of Santa Anna, she was a member of the First Baptist Church and was Sunday School secretary.

Other survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Linda Huston of Brownwood; a granddaughter, Dena Rasch of Gatesville; a step-grandson, Christian Huston of Gatesville; and two step great-grandchildren.

NEW OWNER — Bob Meyer, right, took over as owner of Willow Park Inn this past week. Also pictured is former Willow Park owner Dennis Chisum. (SDN Staff Photo)

Willow Park Inn is now under new management

The Willow Park Inn, located at Highways 84 and 180, was recently purchased and is now operating under new management.

Bob Meyer, 54, took over as owner and manager of the hotel, restaurant and convenience store Tuesday. Meyer is from Lubbock, where he operates Shadow Hills Golf Course.

Meyer is an Oregon native and has 17 years of hotel/motel management experience with several motels throughout the nation.

According to Meyer, Willow Park will operate with the same staff, but will undergo some necessary changes.

"We will be remodeling with new carpet, drapes and anything needed," said Meyer. "Whatever it takes to bring the facility into top condition."

Former Willow Park owner Dennis Chisum will be moving to Wilmington, N. C., where he will continue working as a dealer for Ceco Steel.

Chisum plans to leave Snyder around spring break.

"There is a lot of building action in that area," said Chisum, adding that he would like to work as a builder in addition to working with Ceco.

Chisum's wife, Blanche, moved to Wilmington in early January, where she began working as an interim home economics instructor at Hoggard High School.

According to Chisum, Blanche will begin work as a county extension home economics agent in June.

"We would like to stay in Snyder, but we had to take this opportunity," said Chisum, adding that he would someday like to bring his family back to Snyder when he retires.

Man who escaped from Dahmer tells horror tale

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A man who escaped from Jeffrey Dahmer's apartment testified at Dahmer's sanity trial that the confessed killer put his head on the man's chest, listened for a heartbeat and promised to eat his heart.

Tracy Edwards, who led police to the apartment last July, told jurors Friday that he planned his escape from Dahmer's home after Dahmer clamped a handcuff on his wrist and listened for his heartbeat.

"At one point, he said he was going to eat my heart," Edwards said. "For some reason, God told me not to let this guy handcuff me. He laid across me and put his head across my chest and was listening to my heart.

"He had a knife at my groin," Edwards testified. "I said, 'At least I'm going to die trying.' I hit him and got out of the apartment."

Edwards, a handcuff dangling from his left wrist, fled Dahmer on July 22 and flagged down police patrolling the neighborhood. He led them to the apartment, where they found body parts of 11 males — four severed heads, preserved genitalia and several torsos soaking in an acid-filled barrel.

Dahmer, 31, has pleaded guilty but insane to killing 15 young men and boys. If jurors find him sane he would be sentenced to a mandatory life sentence for each of the killings. If he is found insane he would be sent to a mental institution where he could petition every six months for release.

Dahmer has confessed to 17 murders since 1978. Charges haven't been filed in one Milwaukee County slaying because of lack of evidence. He is to face charges in a 1978 slaying in Ohio after his Milwaukee trial, which resumes on Monday.

Dahmer's attorney contends that loneliness and a craving for sex with dead bodies drove Dahmer to a killing spree he couldn't control. Prosecutors maintain Dahmer methodically planned each man's slaying and took pains not to get caught.

Edwards, 32, testified on Friday that he saw a severed human head in Dahmer's refrigerator and a hand Dahmer removed from a filing cabinet. "He made me look in the refrigerator," Edwards said.

He said he met Dahmer at a downtown Milwaukee mall and that Dahmer told him he was a professional photographer and offered him $100 to pose nude.

cussed the possibility of Willow Park tying into the city line temporarily with a given time period to develop a permanent solution, either through annexation or another alternative.

The agreement could be made with the understanding that the services would be cut off at the end of the set time even if a permanent solution has not been developed.

Williamson told Meyer that no action could be taken in the workshop session, but that the idea and other ideas could be discussed at Tuesday's business meeting.

Williamson also added that if an agreement can be reached, the most advantageous step would be to talk to the city attorney and begin developing a plan.

Councilman Jack Denman expressed concern of whether tapping into the line would be possible without causing problems. He suggested getting an engineer to look at the plans if an agreement is reached to verify that the job could be done safely.

City Manager John Gayle stated that representatives of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper, a professional engineering firm from Lubbock will be present at Tuesday's meeting.

Discussion of the request will continue in Tuesday's regular session, set for 6:30 p.m. at city hall.

Other items to be considered by the council Tuesday include a disannexation request by David Haywood, concerning the Evancrest Addition in north Snyder; consideration of appointments for the five-member Economic Development Corporation; a sewer rate study by Parkhill, Smith and Cooper; and ordering of a general election for May 2, to elect council members for districts 1, 2, 3 and 4.

The council will consider a resolution adopting the recently-approved ½-cent sales tax, of which ¾ will be used for economic development and ¼ will be used for ad valorem tax relief.

P ic, higher education under court gun

AUST — From first grade th duate school, students g ublic education in Texas are doing so in systems that have been found to violate the state constitution.

The Texas Supreme Court has three times scrapped funding schemes for elementary and secondary schools, with the last rejection coming Thursday.

The court, which has demanded that the state equalize funding among school districts, said the Legislature in its latest attempt to do so created an unconstitutional tax.

It gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993 to come up with another plan.

That's just one month after the deadline set by State District Judge Ben Euresti Jr. of Brownsville for the state to make changes in the higher education system, which he said denies Mexican Americans equal education opportunity.

In the lawsuit that prompted the ruling, the League of United Latin American Citizens said the state discriminated against Hispanics by systematically underfunding institutions in a 41-county strip stretching from Brownsville to El Paso.

The higher education case has just started its court journey, and some predict Euresti's ruling will not stand.

Mark Yudof, dean of the University of Texas law school, called the lawsuit "aberrational." He said that there is no constitutional requirement for "equal treatment by geographic areas."

State Attorney General Dan Morales plans to appeal Euresti's ruling, said spokesman Gray McBride.

2 exhibits about Spain slated here

Two exhibits created to commemorate Columbus' discovery of America will be featured in the Scurry County Museum from Feb. 2-24.

A formal opening for the display is planned from 1-4 p.m. on Sunday and the public is invited to attend. There is no charge for admission.

Twenty framed panels make up the exhibit titled "Fact, Fiction, and the New World." The other exhibit, "New Spain: The Frontiers of Faith," features photographic reproductions of rare documents, engravings, paintings and artifacts concerning the conquest and colonization of Mexico and its northern terrorities.

The Fact and Fiction exhibit focuses on the books that Columbus, the conquistadores and the missionaries read, the ideas that were derived from these books, and how these ideas influenced their actions and expectations of the New World. It also features 16th and 17th century works of European poetry and drams which make use of America as a symbol embodying a wealth of Renaissance ideals and frustrations. It concludes with the first books written by native-born Americans of varied racial and cultural backgrounds.

The oldest of the documents in the "New Spain" exhibit is a letter written in 1512 by Diego Colon, son of Christopher Columbus, in which he describes conditions among the Indians in the Caribbean. Other letters from King Phillip II of Spain and Bartolome de las Casas, at one time the Bishop of Chipas, reflect a strong concern for the legal rights and spiritual welfare of the Indians.

Both exhibits were organized by the Texas Humanities Resource Center in collaboration with the Gilcrease Museum of Tulsa, Okla, with financial support from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The Scurry County Museum is on the campus of Western Texas College, three miles south of the courthouse square. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1-4 p.m. on Sunday. Call 573-6107 for more information.

IN MUSEUM EXHIBIT — This interpretation of the Indians welcoming the arrival of Christianity, in the form of Columbus, was painted approximately a century after the Spanish discovery of the Americas. It is featured in a new exhibit opening Sunday in the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College. McDonald's in Moscow said accused of catering to rich

MOSCOW (AP) — As McDonald's celebrated its second anniversary in Moscow Friday, a leading newspaper accused the country's first Western fast-food establishment of catering to only a tiny elite that has money to burn.

Prices have jumped more than 1,400 percent since Moscow-McDonald's opened its doors, primarily due to rising costs of local food products, according to the management of the Canadian-Soviet owned restaurant. In the same period, average wages have risen about 300 percent.

As many as 60,000 customers a day were served in the gleaming chrome-and-steel restaurant's heyday, making it famous for lines so long that riot rails were installed. Now, the number now has dropped to about 30,000, said operations manager Glen Steeves.

"McDonald's has its two-year birthday today. Great! It has the same interior, the same service, the same happy smiles. And the prices are such that lunch is equivalent to a minimum (monthly) salary," the Moskovsky Komsomolets newspaper reported.

"They promised to create their own restaurants in Moscow to feed a lot of people cheaply, but McDonald's has quickly fallen into our own market pattern: taking care of only a few expensively," it said.

"We want McDonald's to be affordable to the man or woman on the street, not to the new breed of Russian millionaire," said George A. Cohon, CEO of McDonald's Restaurants of Canada, Ltd., and vice chairman of Moscow-McDonald's.

But he told The Associated Press McDonald's has had to contend with soaring prices for everything from flour to meat, which he said have shot up 50 times in the past two years.

Astro-graphs By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Feb. 1, 1992

Greater activity is indicated in the year ahead, as is making major changes in your life. Things you merely thought about doing previously could now become realities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Problem-solving could be your strong point today, provided you can do it in a venue free from outside distractions. Don't discuss matters with others until they're resolved. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In order to be successful today, you must believe that victory is a foregone conclusion. If you do, you should find it rather easy to fill in the blanks that make it so.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your success today will be predicated upon the intensity of your motivation. If there are specific objectives you intend to achieve, the probabilities are running in your favor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're likely to learn a lot more today from personal experience than you will garner from lectures or books. You'll find useful applications for what you learn in the real world.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Changes are in the offing today, but don't let them concern you. The odds against anything going awry are very nominal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you have something of consequence to work out with another, do it on a face-to-face basis free from outside influence. Negotiations today should work out favorably for both parties.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're in a rewarding cycle for the fulfillment of practical and ambitious objectives. Don't let indifference cause this propitious period to slip past you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try to tighten up and organize more effectively an endeavor in which you're involved. You're on the right track and, with a little more thought, most of the risk elements can be removed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Improvements are likely at this time where your business and financial interests are concerned. There are hopeful indications that you could get larger returns than you initially anticipate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Matters that require immediate discussion should be put on the table today. You're able to elicit enthusiasm for your concepts, thereby getting the nod of approval you need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Ambition and imagination, effectively coupled, provide you with a dynamic combination today. When these factors are operative, personal gain is likely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There is nothing wrong with exercising your initiative and assertiveness today for the sake of furthering your personal interests, provided you don't do anything to hurt others in the process.

Your Birthday

Feb. 2, 1992

Try to involve yourself in the year ahead in endeavors where you'll have a chance to use your own ideas. The products of your imagination have strong, profitable probabilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Concepts that work for you might not be tailored to the needs of another. Make allowances for personality variables when giving advice today. Aquarius, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Aquarius' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone who recently told you something in confidence will be very disappointed with you if you reveal to others today what was told to you in secret. Zip your lip.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Small talk is likely to be more appealing to you today than weighty conversations about complex problems. Try to pal around with friends who focus on the lighter side.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) What you can't accomplish with force or brawn today can be accomplished with your mind. Put your imagination to work to fulfill your ambitious objectives.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Treat the immediate with the respect it deserves, but also think about tomorrow. When making plans now, consider future developments.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It could prove unwise to leave bits and pieces of an important business matter unresolved today. Stick to your endeavor until all the details are concluded to your satisfaction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Regardless of the issue, there are always two sides, and both should be obvious to you today. This could put you in a favorable position to arbitrate a delicate matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Details that escape the attention of co-workers aren't apt to be overlooked by you today. Carefully review everyone's work as an insurance against possible mistakes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do something enjoyable today, but make sure it is mentally relaxing. Try to stay away from activities you tend to treat too seriously.

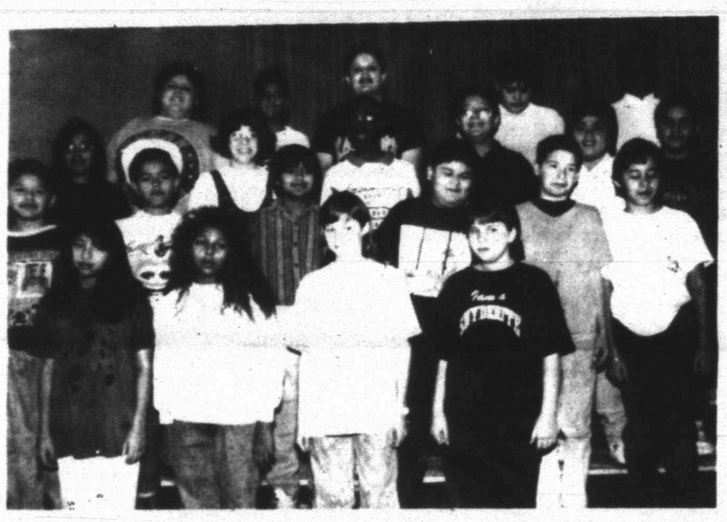

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be vocal today regarding domestic issues about which you feel strongly. If you don't make your voice heard now, you may not have an opportunity to do so later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) While you're in the mood, allot some time for clearing up your paperwork today. If it gets past you now and begins to accumulate, it could become an extremely unappealing task.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be satisfied to make a small profit today instead of holding out for an uncertain, larger one. Unreasonable expectations could cause you to make a poor choice.

Mannerly debate pierced with closing spar over alleged affair

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential candidates assailed President Bush's economic policy and touted their own remedies in a debate that ended angrily when a rival revived a woman's unsubstantiated claim of an affair with Bill Clinton.

Until then, the nationally-televised debate Friday night had the tone of a mannerly issues seminar, with flurries of disagreement, among the five candidates in the Feb. 18 New Hampshire presidential primary.

Indeed, Clinton welcomed the back-to-the-issues forum after starting the week with a televised denial of Gennifer Flower's unsubstantiated claim in a paid tabloid interview that she had a 12-year affair with him.

"I'm glad to be attacked by my opponents again," the Arkansas governor said. "It's kind of refreshing."

The two-hour debate on the Public Broadcasting System covered the economy, taxes, education, health insurance, breaking no new ground but dealing in detail with rival Democratic proposals.

Competitors bore down on Clinton, whose lead in New Hampshire public opinion polls has withstood the Flowers controversy. The state's primary is two weeks away.

After Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska touted his $240 billion plan for national health insurance, Clinton said that and every other Democratic plan offered would be better than Bush's proposals.

"You're trying to have it both ways," Kerrey shot back at Clinton. "Yes, you and I disagree on it, but at least tell the American people what you're for."

"I have said exactly what I'd do," Clinton responded. He said he favors private health insurance with government coverage for the uninsured, coupled with government cost controls.

Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa accused Clinton and former Sen. Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts of favoring warmed-over Reagan administration policies because both support variations of a capital gains tax cut.

"What I'm calling for is a new New Deal," Harkin said.

The Papal State, non-existant since 1870, was revived in 1929 as the Vatican State.

AARP news

The local chapter of AARP #2063 invites all national AARP members in Scurry County to join the local chapter. The group meets on the third Monday of each month at 1 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Center. Local chapter dues are $2 per year.

The national biannual AARP meeting will be June 1-6 in San Antonio. Those attending from this area will leave by June 1. The cost of the trip is $240 per person and includes a double occupancy room, bus tours around the city, Sea World, the Parks and Gardens and other points of interest. All members are encouraged to attend this meeting.

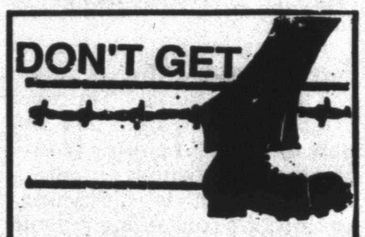

Any senior citizen needing help with income tax forms may call Mary Carnes at 573-6507. She will be at the Senior Center on certain days each week.

2 area students in Who's Who

SAN ANGELO — Two Scurry County students will be among the 53 students from Angelo State University whose names will appear in the 1991-92 list of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

Sheila Ann Sorrells of Snyder is a senior music major and Sylvia LaFon Williams is a senior education major.

A campus committee and editors of the annual directory selects the students on the basis of their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential for continued success.

Scurry County Folks By Shirley A. Gorman

Autumn Pollard, 13, won't ever be able to jump on a trampoline, but the teenager isn't complaining because for the first time in her life she doesn't have to wear a body cast and she can stand up straight.

Born with congenital scoliosis or "S curve in the back," she underwent a fusion procedure at 18 months and wore a series of special body braces and casts until she underwent specialized surgery in Dallas in December of 1991.

For Autumn, a seventh grader at Snyder Junior High School, the ordeal began in September when she and her mother, Suzanne Pollard, traveled to Dallas. There, doctors at Texas Scottish Rite Hospital For Children began to use traction, which preceded the shape-restoring operation.

During those long months, Jim Pollard commuted from Snyder to Dallas each weekend to be with his wife and daughter.

Mrs. Pollard said they had always known that Autumn would need to have two "pencil-like" rods attached to her spine once her bones had matured enough; but traction — in particular halo traction — was a new and scary concept.

"I asked a lot of questions and was assured by the doctors as to how the procedure would take place and what it would accomplish," she explained.

Halo traction is aptly named because Autumn had to have screws literally inserted in her head to which the metallic halo would be attached.

While in traction, Autumn walked the equivalent of a half-mile every day. She used a special walker and a device attached to her halo allowed her to move about and still be in traction.

Over the next several weeks, traction was increased five pounds at a time until half of Autumn's weight was achieved. Each time, pressure was increased gradually with special care being paid to her neck since she was not supposed to feel any pain.

Only once did the doctors have to ease off some of the pressure and wait before continuing to increase the amount. Autumn even slept in traction at night.

During this period Autumn was allowed to go home to Snyder so she and her parents could celebrate Christmas before returning to the hospital for the Dec. 26 surgery.

Autumn did not have to wear the halo traction device while in Snyder, but was in a wheelchair.

The rods, which one of Autumn's doctors helped design, were inserted. The Pollards' first view of the rods came after surgery when x-rays were taken before Autumn left the operating room. Prior to that, Mrs. Pollard said the doctors always answered all of their questions, but they were not allowed to see the rods before the operation.

During many long months of recovery, Autumn's spirits never lagged and she often comforted her mother by telling her everything would be all right. As she stoically took whatever the doctors put her through, the one thought which kept Autumn going was "I'm going to be straight."

Autumn's cheery and upbeat attitude was also aided by the hospital's many volunteers, who kept Autumn and other children so busy they did not have to brood about their conditions. Each day was filled with prominent visitors, demonstrations, projects, field trips and anything else that could keep them occupied.

It wasn't all fun and games though as Autumn also spent three hours a day doing homework assignments from her teachers in Snyder.

While it's true all these things helped Autumn through her long hospital stay, her greatest morale boosters were the cards, letters, posters and other gifts she received from her peers at the junior high, church members, friends and Scurry County folks. They deluged her with so much mail and posters that she could have papered her hospital room.

She also received a holiday basket from friends at church. She received some 115 cards in all; in fact, if she didn't get four to five cards a day, it was considered unusual.

Autumn became such a hit with the doctors and other hospital staff members that the nurses often let her talk to other children who were undergoing some of the same treatment because, they said, "she knows all about it."

Since Autumn shared a room with three other patients (hospital policy), she became friends with the other children and they offered

HAPPY FAMILY — Autumn Pollard and her parents, Jim and Suzanne Pollard, are very happy these days as Autumn's recovery from back treatment and surgery is going well and she hopes soon to be allowed to return to the classroom. She is now able to stand up straight for the first time in her life. Autumn's condition was discovered shortly after her birth. (SDN Staff Photo) each other mutual support.

They often stayed up late playing Yahtzee until the nurses would insist they go to sleep, Mrs. Pollard said.

After Autumn's first three weeks in the hospital, she was also allowed weekend passes so she and her family could plan daytime activities. Each night, Autumn returned to the hospital because she had to sleep in traction.

The hospital also had a special child-life activity room which allowed Autumn and the others to participate in a variety of activities.

Volunteers from Southern Methodist University painted T-shirts for Autumn and the other children. Elementary students demonstrated flips and a ballet routine. The A&M football team and coach visited Autumn while she was in ICU. Troy Aikman, Dallas Cowboys' quarterback, was another visitor, as were the Blue Angels and the Thunderbirds.

Specially equipped vans also took the children on various outings to the airport and wildlife park but Autumn didn't get to visit the latter.

Some group or other was always throwing a party for the children. Included among the volunteers were retired Masons, college students and many others.

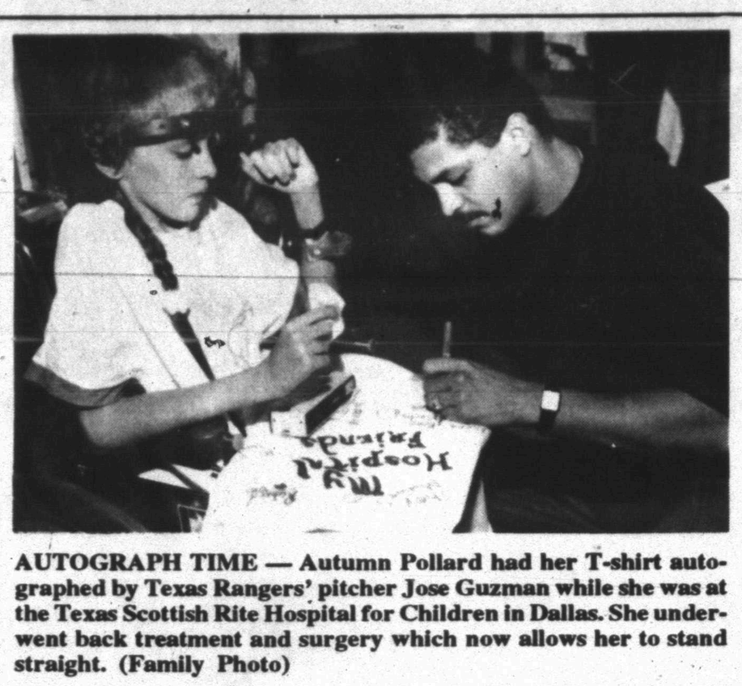

While in Dallas, Autumn received an unexpected surprise when she was named the sweetheart of Snyder Fire Dpartment.

Months of traction were tedious for Autumn, but the effort was worth it because her spine was stretched and straightened prior to surgery. She walked two days after the rods were inserted. She was delayed by a day because the doctor had forgotten to write her orders. Nine days later she was dismissed from the hospital.

Autumn is presently homebound which means she is doing her schoolwork at home. She expects to be allowed to go back to class following a checkup later this month. PE class is, of course, still out, but eventually that will change. The trampoline will remain off limits, but that doesn't bother Autumn, who doesn't particularly like sports. Extracurricular activities include the band, where she plays the flute.

But if Autumn were sports inclined, she would be able to participate eventually. Mrs. Pollard said they were told that boys who undergo this type of surgery can play football a year later.

Having the rods inserted and natural growth combined to add four inches to Autumn's height, something she is very proud of. Another present (in January) was a black poodle she received as a Christmas present. Her own dog had been killed accidently while she was in Dallas.

In Dallas, she had grown attached to her maternal uncle's poodle.

After doctors x-rayed Autumn's hands in April, they told her parents that the bones had matured enough for the surgery to be performed. The surgery won't work if the child's bones are not mature because the spine won't stay straight.

Additional tests included two MRIs which provide an indepth assessment of body tissue, and a cat-scan. Five pre-surgery trips to Dallas were needed before the big day arrived.

Mrs. Pollard described the family's ordeal "as a positive experience" even though the surgery (before, during and after) was a traumatic event for the three of them.

While at the hospital, she said they encountered many children — several from foreign countries — who also were having rods inserted, and other children with life-threatening conditions.

"It made us realize how lucky we are that Autumn's condition was never life-threatening," she said.

Throughout Autumn's life, the Pollards said they have accepted their daughter's condition and it never caused any problems they couldn't handle.

She has never really needed any special care and, in fact, Autumn has always been able to do just about anything she wanted.

Surprisingly enough, Mrs. Pollard said that while Autumn's condition isn't unusual in itself, is was unusual for it to show up while she was still a baby. A child is usually around four years old when the condition is first noticed.

Following the fusion procedure at 18 months, Autumn was fitted with a series of full body casts designed to help straighten her back.

Always petite, as a young child, Autumn weighed from 18 to 20 pounds and had to wear a plaster body cast from 18 months to around age three.

As a small child, she learned to hook her cast on the edge of the coffee table in the living room so she could swing.

Autumn always wore an undershirt under the cast and regular clothes over the cast. Her teachers were always notified but they never had any problems because "Autum knew her limitations." But, in essence, she was able to do just about anything the other students could do.

Due to heat generated by the casts, Autumn usually stayed indoors when it was hot. She learned to swim at age four because swimming is beneficial for back problems. She also took twirling lessons.

She never had any major problems wearing the casts except the Milwaukee Brace, which doctors wanted her to try but Autumn wasn't quite big enough to wear it. It was discarded due to its discomfort.

Born in Abilene, Autumn received much of her early treatment through the West Texas Rehabilitation Center. She was also under the care of a Lubbock physician, and while living in Laredo she saw a doctor in San Angelo.

Pollard is a safety technician at Burnett Safety Service and he also works for Snyder EMS and the fire department.

Mrs. Pollard teaches kindergarten enrichment class at Kids Kampus. They have lived in Snyder for four years. Prior to Autumn's birth, the Pollards had lived in Snyder also.

Old masters to this century show 'Works On Paper'

NEW YORK (AP) — Ninety-five exhibitors from this country and from as far away as Australia will show their wares at this year's international "Works on Paper" show and sale.

The show will feature prints, posters, watercolors, drawings, photographs, illustrated books and architectural renderings. Periods represented range from old masters to this century, including recent work of contemporary artists.

The event is organized by Sanford L. Smith and Associates, Ltd., who say this is the fourth annual presentation. It will take place April 3-5 at the 7th Regiment Armory.

Airport nuptials...

Fox, Rawls wed at DFW

Mr. and Mrs. Don Fox announce the marriage of their daughter, Jeana La Don, to Lonnie Dale Rawls, son of Mrs. Dennis Sellars and the late Wesley Rawls of Snyder.

At half past ten, the couple was united in marriage in a double ring ceremony followed by the lighting of the unity candle. The Rev. A.J. Fox, paternal grandfather of the bride, presided over the special event held in the DFW Airport, Terminal 3E.

The bride is the granddaughter of Otto Parrish and the late Bernice Parrish.

Janice Moore supplied music for the nuptials.

The wedding party included best man, John Rawls, brother of the groom; maid of honor, Paula Fox, the bride's mother; ring bearer, Nichole Ornelas; and candlelighter, Kim Hill of Midlothian, cousins of the bride.

Her satin gown, designed by her and made by her mother, featured princess sleeves with an in-set of hand sewn sequined and pearled motif placed in the center of the arm with pearls of dangling teardrops that gracefully finished the cuffs of satin and lace. The fan-shaped, scalloped neckline of sequins, pearls, beads and dangles were highlighted with a teardrop pearl necklace, purchased for her by her father in Hawaii in August.

The bodice was adorned with a handmade motif of fans of embroidered satin threads and crystal beads, mixed with pearls of different shapes and size, and then appliqued onto lace over satin. The gown back was graced by a teardrop of six strands of pearls that draped in a fan shape against the center of her back. The waist was enhanced with a large satin and lace bow, followed by a peplum of two drapes, one satin and one lace, falling into a chapel length train.

Her veil was an Italian style tiara lined with four strands of pearls which encircled the forehead. Teardrops of iredescent pearls hung against the skin and pearls sparsed the entire veil, giving it a glistening effect. The removable blusher was a lilly of the valley pattern.

The satin gloves the bride wore, gave Italian influence to the gown. She carried a linen handkerchief with large tatted areas on the corners, made by her great-grandmother, the late Ima Lee Hicks. Her mother carried the handkerchief in her wedding and loaned it to her daughter for something borrowed. Something blue was a hand-embroidered linen handkerchief attached to a garter especially designed and made by close friends.

She carried an 1826 floating Liberty head ½ -cent coin belonging to her grandfather Otto Parrish.

The bridal party dresses were made by the bride's aunt, Ann Gregory, of Colorado City. Mrs. Gregory also designed the coordinated boutonnieres and corsages.

The bridal bouquet, made by her mother, was cascading miniature gold roses and lilly of the valley complimenting large white roses. These were highlighted with iridescent powder, rays and touches of emerald green which were completed with a spray of iridescent spikes.

Following the ceremony, a party of 21 was served wedding cake made by Dr. and Mrs. Charles Tandy of Dallas. It was a wedding ring, Italian cream cake, garnished with fresh white orchids, miniature roses and snap dragons, and the base was surrounded by alyssum and greenery.

The bride and groom prepared for a 12:45 p.m. flight to Europe for a 12-day honeymoon with plans to renew their wedding vows in Italy, "Italian style".

When the couple returns, a reception/shower is set for 2 p.m. on Feb. 8 at Willow Park Inn. The event is planned for families of friends and relatives and will feature videos of the wedding and pictures of the bride and groom. Music will be provided by Rev. and Mrs. Janice Moore, pastor of the First Assembly of God. Rev. Moore will be performing in voice and will present a special song, by the bride, to the groom.

The traditional tossing of the bouquet will end the event.

Table arrangements of handmade bride and groom dolls, made by the Ministries of the First Assembly of God, will adorn the tables and a picture album made by the bride's grandmother, Minnie Fox of Weatherford, will be displayed.

Tavarez, Digby promise vows in Robert Lee Baptist Church

ROBERT LEE — Nikki Janae Tavarez became the bride of Joe David Digby in a 7:30 p.m. Dec. 27 ceremony at the Robert Lee Baptist Church. Bruce Deere, minister of Southside Church of Christ, officiated.

Parents of the bride are Mario and Sheryl Tavarez of Robert Lee and the groom's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Digby of Odessa. The bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Z. Evans and Ramon Tavarez, all of Snyder.

The altar was flanked by a pair of heart-shaped candelabra, entertwined with greenery, white lights and purple and fuchsia bows. A Christmas tree lighted with white lights and matching bows was in the background. The railing displayed bows, votive cups and roses, and the pews were decorated with large purple and fuchsia bows.

Candlelighters were Mandy Hess of Snyder, cousin of the bride, and Jason Tavarez, brother of the bride.

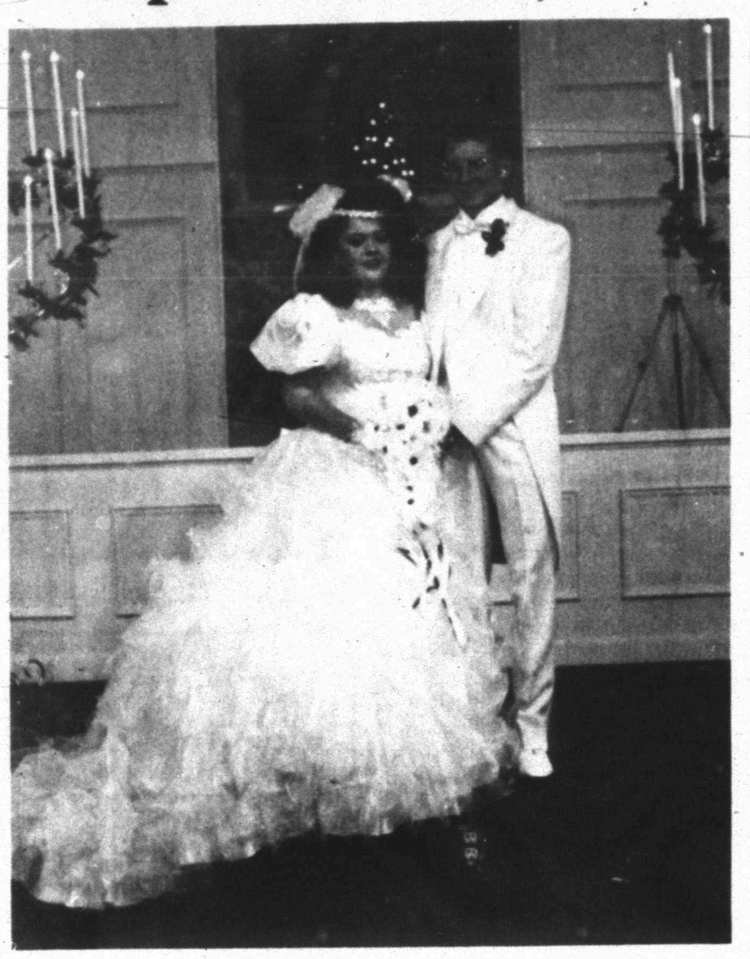

Musical selections included "Battle Hymn of Love," "Unchained Melody," "One Friend," "Theme From Ice Castles," and "Everything I Do." Christy Payne was soloist, accompanied by Myna Kay Copeland.

Following the vows, Mandy Hess and Melissa Orosco, both of Snyder, Jason Tavarez, Holly and Tiffany Copeland, Shelby Roe and Kayla and Marie Eades sang "The Vows Go Unbroken," to the bride and groom.

The bride's father presented her in marriage as she was attired in a gown featuring waves of sheer, wire-hemmed ruffles surrounding a skirt of white satin. Her front bodice, back and sleeves featured a delicate embroidery. Simulated pearls cascaded from the neckline, while strands of pearls draped the cutout sleeves and open back.

In keeping with tradition, the bride wore a diamond ring belonging to her mother for something old. Her dress was new and she carried new pennies in her shoe. Something borrowed were pearl earrings belonging to Christie Payne. Something blue was her garter, made for by her grandmother, Merle Evans.

A V-band headpiece of simulated pearls and flowers held a veil of nylon net poof accented with simulated pears. The bride carried a cascading bouquet, predominate with roses, accented with pearls and silver baby's breath. Tiny fuchsia and deeper purple flowers were interspersed and it was completed with matching ribbon streamers.

MR. AND MRS. JOE DIGBY

Maids-of-honor were Toni Evans of Snyder, cousin of the bride, and Stephanie Poehls. Bridesmaids were Danielle Glenn, Kim Hood, Stephanie Ynostrosa of San Angelo, and junior bridesmaid was Mandy Hess of Snyder, cousin of the bride.

Each attendant carried two long-stemmed roses, one fuchsia and one purple. Their dresses were alternating fuchsia and purple taffeta designed with v-necklines and backs featuring skirts of three ruffled tiers.

Flower girl was Carol Ann Tavarez of Snyder, cousin of the bride. Ringbearer was Tyler Ammon of DeSota.

The groom's grandfather was best man and groomsmen were Rick Digby of Tyler, father of the groom, Jason Wood of Odessa, cousin of the groom, Jody Tavarez, brother of the bride, Bo Digby of Odessa, uncle of the groom. Junior groomsman was Jason Tavarez.

Serving as ushers were Wesley Evans and Michael Hess, both of Snyder and cousins of the bride; Michael Hayes; and Larry Wadzeck of Odessa, uncle of the groom.

The groom wore an all-white tuxedo with tails. Male attendants wore classic black tuxedos, alternating fuchsia and purple ties and cummerbunds.

Dean Jamison registered guests.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. The bride's table, covered with a white cloth, held a silver punch bowl and a three-tiered heart shaped wedding cake with a fountain, made by Mary Beth Drennan. The cake top featured a white puffed heart with tiny wedding rings. Serving were Vickie Hess and Wenona Evans of Snyder, aunts of the bride.

An Austrin crystal centerpiece, a silver coffee urn and a red velvet cake was arranged on the groom's table. The cake was made by Mrs. J.C. Digby, grandmother of the groom. Serving were Allison Digby and Kelly Wadzeck of Odessa, cousins of the groom, and Josie Wood of Odessa, aunt of the groom.

A gift table was covered with a white cloth and was centered with pictures of the bride and groom and the bride's bouquet.

The couple's honeymoon trip was to Odessa. They will make their home in Del Rio where the groom is stationed with the U.S. Air Force. The bride will be a 1992 graduate of Robert Lee High School.

The groom is a 1990 graduate of Permain High School in Odessa and is currently in Security Police for the Air Force.

Eleven can be a key number

The Rule of 11 is in essence simple and useful. If the opening lead is fourth highest, every player may deduct from 11 the value of the spot-card led. The resultant figure gives the number of cards above the one led that are in the other three hands. So if the seven is led, there are four higher cards in the other three hands.

This can be especially useful for the leader's partner in assessing the layout of the suit, though occasionally — as with all defensive conventions — it will help the declarer. But in my experience, most players don't employ the Rule of 11 at all.

North's four-club rebid showed the club ace and a hand suitable for play in hearts.

West led the spade seven: two, jack, five. Back came a spade. Declarer drew trumps and started to run the clubs. When East showed up with four, declarer made a loser-on-loser play, discarding one of his diamond losers on dummy's last club. East had to lead either a diamond or a spade, permitting declarer to lose only one more diamond trick and to make his contract.

South played well to duck the first trick, but if East had applied the Rule of 11, he would have played the spade four at trick one, not the jack. He would have known that South could have only the spade ace and no other spade higher than the seven. If South ducks the trick, West can switch to the diamond 10 (or queen), defeating the contract.

South could have played better. He should have covered the spade seven with dummy's nine to force East to win trick one.

INCREDIBLE EDIBLES?

Start spreading the "grape" news! You won't have to stomach soggy jelly sandwiches much longer. Thanks to a new invention, those purple-stained snacks are getting a new "wrap."

Scientists have come up with a see-through wrap that goes inside a jelly sandwich — between the bread and the jelly. The thin, tasteless wrap keeps the jelly from soaking into the bread. What's more, the wrap can be eaten along with the sandwich!

But leak-free jelly sandwiches aren't in the bag yet. "The edible wrap is still in the experimental stage," says one of the scientists.

If scientists do wrap up the leaky food problem, just think of what this could mean for pizza crust. Soggy-proof pizza would be really jammin'!

WHY DO FLAMINGOS STAND ON ONE LEG?

Actually, flamingos usually stand on two legs. But sometimes, they're on only one leg.

Scientists don't know why they do this, but they do know that when the bird stands on one leg, their other leg bends in a way that leaves them perfectly balanced and comfortable. Water birds, such as storks and herons, also hang out on one leg.

Cold-weather water birds, like gulls and ducks, often stand on one leg when they are on ice floes. This helps them save body heat. (The upraised leg is tucked into their feathered bodies to keep warm. It's a lot like when you put your hands in your coat pockets.)

However, flamingos are tropical birds so, for them, this explanation doesn't have a leg to stand on!

A tornado is a violent rotating column of air forming a pendant, usually from a cumulonimbus cloud, and touching the ground. It usually starts as a funnel cloud and is accompanied by a loud roaring noise. On a local scale, it is the most destructive of all atmospheric phenomena.

Ford, staffers want documents released

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Ford and 13 staffers from the Warren Commission say there's nothing to cover up in John F. Kennedy's assassination and the CIA should disclose all its files on the matter.

They joined a growing chorus urging a complete airing of all government documents relating to the investigation of Kennedy's death, which has received renewed attention with the release of the movie "JFK."

The film suggests that elements of the government, particularly the Pentagon and the CIA, conspired to murder the president.

Records from two panels that investigated the assassination have not been released. Two percent of the Warren Commission files are sealed, while 400 cubic feet of records from the House Assassinations Committee are closed until the year 2009.

"I would like to deny to our critics that we are part and parcel of some kind of coverup," former Warren Commission lawyer Howard Willens said Thursday.

All 12 commission lawyers who are still living plus a commission staff member endorsed the request, which was publicized in news conferences in Los Angeles, Cleveland and Des Moines, Iowa, in addition to Washington.

Ford, the only surviving member of the Warren Commission that concluded gunman Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in killing the president, has made a similar request.

"Americans are entitled to know the truth," Ford wrote last week to House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, who headed the House Assassinations Committee in the late 1970s.

The House committee found that Kennedy probably was slain as a result of a conspiracy, basing its conclusion largely on acoustical evidence suggesting a fourth shot was fired at the president from a grassy knoll.

In his letter, Ford recommended the National Research Council should appoint a panel of scientists to review the acoustical evidence.

Filmmaker Oliver Stone stirred up the controversy with his movie released in December that suggests Kennedy was the victim of a government conspiracy.

Pentagon defends time taken to investigate friendly fire deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is defending its decision to wait nearly six months before notifying survivors of servicemen killed by friendly fire in the Persian Gulf War.

At the same time, the service offered its regrets for the drawn-out inquiry into suspected cases of friendly fire, which caused pain and anguish for 21 families.

"We regret the length of time it took to complete this process," Lt. Gen. William Reno, the deputy chief of staff for personnel, told the House Armed Services investigations subcommittee Thursday.

Thirty-five of the 148 American servicemen who died in the war were killed accidentally by their comrades' guns, the Defense Department reported in August. Of the 96 Army troops killed and 354 wounded, friendly fire was blamed for 21 deaths and 65 injuries, Reno said.

The majority of the U.S. casualties were hit by weapons fired from M-1 tanks and Bradley fighting vehicles, helicopters or airplanes.

U.S. forces were also held responsible for killing nine British troops and wounding 13 other British soldiers in friendly fire incidents, officials said at the time.

The House panel's chairman, Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., summed up the concerns of several families, including the parents of Army Cpl. Douglas Lance Fielder, a 22-year-old from Tennessee killed by friendly fire.

"Many people think the Army knew the scale of friendly fire deaths right from the start and tried to cover up the facts to save the service from embarrassment," Mavroules said.

The Army official said there was never any cover up or thought of embarrassing the Army. "We have done our very best to be totally open," he said.

In defense of the lengthy process, Reno said the brevity of the 100-hour ground war allowed for a full-scale investigation of all combat casualties.

In addition, the unique munitions fired by the M-1 left a radioactive residue that enabled the Army to determine whether damaged vehicles were hit by U.S. or Iraqi fire.

Ballistics and radiological teams sent to Saudi Arabia found that 58 vehicles had been hit by American munitions. The teams, which were trying to determine how the vehicles survived, discovered as well that there may have been more friendly fire cases.

"Given the expected timely resolution of all friendly fires, I did not want to piecemeal the information out to the families," Reno said.

Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., said the case was a scenario of mistakes.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1991 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: Someone once said, "A lie can travel halfway around the world before the truth can get its pants on."

How true. The "lie" in this case is crediting a quotation to the wrong person. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am finally writing to ask you to correct your Nov. 17, 1990, column that contained the definition of "Success" attributed to Ralph Waldo Emerson. It was very similar to one written in 1904 by my grandmother, Bessie Anderson Stanley.

I have seen other definitions of success on cards taken from Grandmother's work.

Hallmark Cards erroneously credited Robert Louis Stevenson as the author! (They later corrected their error.)

I would appreciate a correction from you, please. My family has enjoyed your column for years, and looks forward to hearing from you.

ARTHUR STANLEY HARVEY,
RICHMOND, KY.

DEAR MR. HARVEY: My apologies to your family. According to "Distilled Wisdom: An Encyclopedia of Wisdom in Condensed Form" by Alfred Armand Montapert, published by Prentice-Hall Inc., Bessie Anderson Stanley wrote the famous definition of success that was published in 1904 in Brown Book Magazine. And here it is:

"He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has enjoyed the trust of pure women, the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has always looked for the best in others and given them the best he had; whose life was an inspiration; whose memory a benediction."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married for 27 years when he decided he wanted out. Like all married couples, we had our ups and downs. After a lot of professional help and nine months of a roller-coaster life, I insisted that we go ahead with the divorce. It was hard for me because I still loved him.

For the first three months after the divorce, we had no contact. Then, on Father's Day, 1990, we started "dating." By Christmas, we knew we should be back together. I am happy to say that in March of 1991 we were remarried, which brings me to my question:

Should we start counting our anniversaries from the beginning of our second marriage, or should we celebrate our original anniversary date and keep going? Depending upon which way we count it, 1992 could mark our 29th anniversary.

SECOND-TIME SWEETHEARTS,
SNOHOMISH, WASH.

DEAR SWEETHEARTS: Make your next anniversary your 29th, and keep going. Consider your divorce a "learning experience." Obviously, you belong together.

DEAR ABBY: About two weeks ago, my high school sweetheart asked me to marry him. I gladly accepted. There is one problem, however.

I am 25 years old and last year I had my tubes tied because I wanted to be a successful veterinarian instead of a housewife and mom. I'm afraid to tell this to my fiance in case he might want to call off the wedding, but I'm afraid if I don't tell him, he will think I was being unfair to him. Should I wait and tell him later? I don't want to lose him.

A WANNABE WIFE

DEAR WANNABE: Tell him now. Also, speak to your doctor about reversing the procedure when — and if — you decide you want to have a family. Not all tubal ligations can be reversed. Your doctor will know whether yours can. Good luck.

To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column in the St. Petersburg Times that you are fascinated with the subject of the American presidents, so maybe you can answer a few questions.

I read somewhere that there was a president who was in office for approximately 24 hours. He had never been a vice president. I believe the acting vice president was out on a yacht (or somewhere) and couldn't be reached. Anyway, this happened on a weekend.

I would like to know the man's name — also, when and how it occurred. Also, who was the president he replaced, and why?

In all the listings of the U.S. presidents, I have never seen anything about this "24-hour" president. I am not even sure he would be listed as a bona fide president.

I have tried to get the answer to my question many times, but could not. I even asked at the Hall of Presidents in Disney World in Orlando, Fla., but nobody there knew anything about it.

I have enjoyed reading your column for many years and hope you can come up with an answer.

RALPH C. GEISLER,
ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

DEAR MR. GEISLER: Aha! I found the answer to your question in "The Complete Unabridged Super Trivia Encyclopedia" (no kidding). The author is Fred L. Worth, and the book is published in paperback by Warner Books.

The "24-hour" president was David Rice Atchison. And this is how it occurred:

When James K. Polk, our 11th president, ended his term in office on Sunday, noon, March 4, 1849, he announced that he was "worn out," which was the reason he had had no desire to run for a second term. (As it turned out, he was very wise; he died three months later.)

Polk's vice president, George M. Dallas, had resigned as president of the Senate on March 2, 1849, so on March 4, David Rice Atchison, the president of the Senate pro tempore, became the president of the United States for 24 hours, until March 5, when Zachary Taylor was sworn in as our 12th president.

James K. Polk was one of six presidents who fathered no children. The others were George Washington, James Madison, Andrew Jackson, James Buchanan, Warren Harding.

Buchanan never married. He was engaged to marry Anne Coleman, the daughter of a well-to-do, socially prominent Lancaster, Pa., family, but because of Buchanan's reputation as a carefree man-about-town, Anne's parents disapproved of the match. Anne reportedly died of a broken heart, though it was rumored that she had committed suicide. Buchanan was crushed and vowed that he would never marry.

Warren G. Harding was the sixth president to die in office, but he did a lot of living before he died. An extraordinarily handsome man, he married a beautiful, wealthy divorcee who was six years his senior. Her name was Florence, but he nicknamed her "Duchess."

See how much fun you can have when you start nosing around in the lives of the American presidents? Thanks for asking, Ralph.

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

One of the biggest problems in America today is apathy. No one wants to take the time to get involved. And no one wants to take a stand for fear it may put them in bad standing with someone they may know or like.

Please come to the meeting Sunday, Feb. 2, at 2 p.m. at Trinity United Methodist Church concerning the proposed reorganization plan for Snyder elementary schools. Be informed when you attend the meeting on Tuesday night at the high school.

Our kids are worth every bit of inconvenience this may cause us. Let's pull together and do what's best for Snyder and for Snyder Public Schools.

Shirley Newman
Snyder, Texas

To the Editor:

I am writing out of concern for the elementary school reorganization proposal. I am the mother of two children, one of whom currently attends West Elementary. I believe that this proposal is chaotic, to say the least, and I do not wish to see my children transported around the city on the premise that this idea is going to be educationally beneficial to them and financially better for this community. I believe that our children are being asked to carry a burden that none of us had to. They are already going to inherit an enormous national financial debt, and now we are expecting them to pay for their education!

Stability in a child's life is extremely important in their development. Earlier this week (Wednesday, Jan. 9), you printed a letter from a woman who stated that all four of her daughters attended Northeast Elementary. She doesn't realize how fortunate she is to be able to say that. If this proposal goes into effect, I'll have to say that both of my children attended five different elementary schools within the same city.

It is rumored that the school board has had this proposal in the works for four months. We have had two weeks to think and talk about it and a decision will be made in two more weeks which will affect all of us. I believe that an issue of such importance should be voted on by the people who will be funding this project — the taxpayers.

Please think of this — A majority of voters have just approved a tax increase which is supposed to help lure new business and families to this area. My husband and I relocated to Snyder because we thought that this would be a nice place to settle down and raise our children. Do you actually think that anyone is going to think much about moving to a town this size so that their young children can be bused to school each day? There has to be another solution to this problem.

Rebecca Boyd
Snyder, Texas

Dear Editor:

This goes out to every parent and taxpayer of all elementary children in the SISD. If you are concerned, worried, and uninformed over the issue of our children being bused from one school across town to another, changing buses everyday, with limited amount of time, then changing schools every year, not knowing the teachers or principals, with less parental involvement, I strongly urge you to attend the town meeting, Tuesday, Feb. 3, at 7 p.m. in the Junior High auditorium. This will happen, if we don't show our support, love, and deep concern for our children and their educations. This has been in the making for quite a while — we only have one week to get the results we want. We do not get to vote on this — our school board does.

I'm only one mother wanting the very best for my child with a lot of unanswered questions.

Please attend this meeting for the sake of our children.

Tina Roland
Snyder, Texas

Dear Editor:

I would encourage everyone to please realistically consider the new school reorganization plan. North Elementary was built in 1950. It is approximately the same age as East, Central and Snyder High School. The only major repair needed at that school is steam pipes. The building is in very good repair otherwise. New carpet was laid this month in the library and kindergarten. Mr. Moseley and the school board knew this and consented to it.

One of the big savings is $65,000 for the use of the portable building at North. We are using it now. That will not change. If that is considered a saving, then we must also add on the cost of abandoning the main building. What is the value of a building that size?

If the building is used for storage, it must be secured with a fence and boarding the windows. What will that cost? Aren't there cheaper storage buildings? What surplus do we have that would fill a building that size?

According to the charts, we will be using every available classroom and filling it to the maximum. Where do we put more children if Snyder has even a nominal growth? Where do we put more children if Snyder acquires new industry? No industry will come to a community that cannot educate their children. Will the school board come to us in two or three years and say we need a new building? The cost of a new building is significant and will not be an improvement over the existing building at North Elementary.

A short-term fix could be a disaster to our budget later.

To the Editor:

I want to commend Alcoholics Anonymous and all such organizations who help us overcome unclean habits. It is very difficult to overcome bad habits. These public-minded people are to be highly praised.

We all know of happenings where those addicted to alcohol will drink flavoring, hair tonic and the like when beer and the like are not available. How pitiful when we desire alcohol to such an extent.

The people whom I have seen on television and read after who have studied this situation say, "That beer and such like are the drugs most common, which lead to the use of illegal drugs."

Our nation's leaders say we must stop the drug problem. They tell us of the ways they are handling this situation. We see them drinking a beer with the boys, and being drunk and trying to have sex in public places. To be so brilliant it seems they are not able to see the source of the problem. Social drinking. Is this hypocrisy?

Think how we teach our children to be leaders, and how we teach them to respect our leaders. Leaders, are you truly worried about our young people? If you are a leader in church, chamber of commerce, Lions Club, Masons or any public service such as president, governor, congressman or judge, let's go forward. Do you recommend our children drink? Think of the great service you can perform for your children and our nation by starting at home to practice honesty. Stop drinking. Show the people what truly great leaders you are in your homes and in the highest offices of our America.

Righteousness exalteth a nation; sin is a reproach to any people.

May God bless each of you, and have mercy and bless our nation.

Yours truly,
Surry H. Gillum

To the Editor:

I am so stuffed I can hardly breathe. I just finished eating my words.

Let me explain.

As long as I have been in Snyder, I have refused to go to Cogdell Memorial Hospital. Because of my allergies and past medical history, I knew I would not receive the proper care.

The day after Christmas, things changed when I became very ill. Personnel from Snyder EMS came and transported me to Cogdell. I was not in any condition to protest. All of those who responded to the call were careful, concerned and most efficient in carrying out their duties.

While I was in the emergency room, I was most uncomfortable, but all who were there did their utmost to relieve my discomfort. Even though I was not fully alert, I was impressed.

Now for the real eye-opener. I was taken upstairs and put to bed. Dr. Cooper and Dr. Nussey were both superb in the days that followed. I would like to list all of the nurses by name so I could thank each one, but I can by no means remember all of their names. I am truly grateful to each one. I never had a nurse that was anything but kind, considerate and caring. For this I am grateful.

Little did I know I would have to enter Cogdell a second time a few days after I was dismissed. I was treated as a long-time friend.

I must not neglect to thank the respitory therapists for their wonderful help.

I am thankful that Snyder has such a good facility as Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

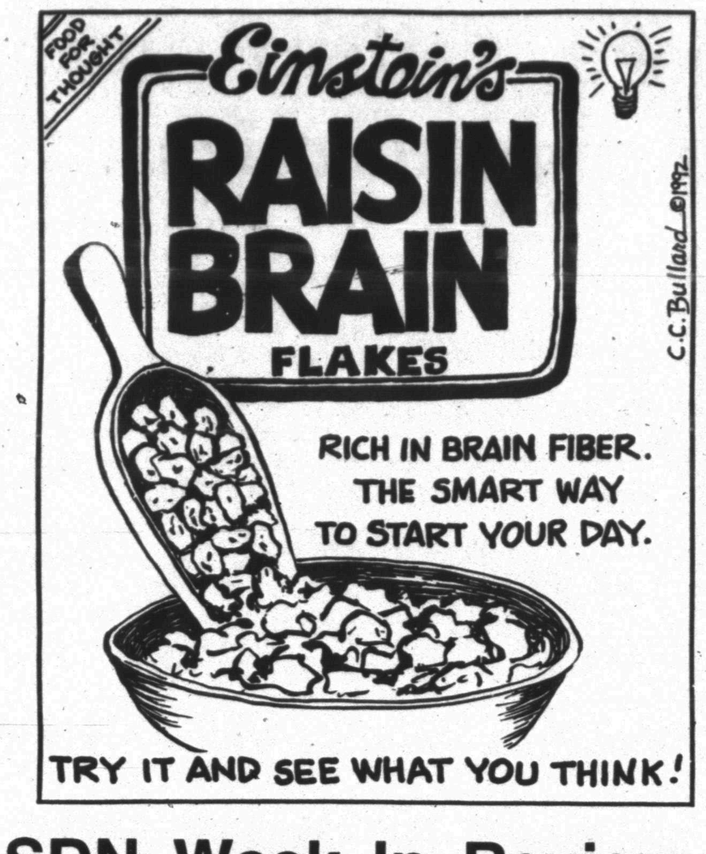

I am so glad I chose Snyder in which to live. So many friends were willing to do whatever needed to be done while I was in the hospital as well as after I came home.

My hat's off to all of you!

My deepest thanks and love go out to all of you.

Love ya!

Speculation and rumors were put aside when the University Interscholastic League announced its biennial realignment, leaving Snyder High School in District 2-4A.

Scurry County's emergency 911 system was put on-line Wednesday, according to Snyder Police Chief Lannie Lee.

FRIDAY
January 31

Snyder ISD Superintendent Dalton Moseley rescheduled a public hearing on the proposed elementary school reorganization plan in order to consider changes requested by the District Educational Improvement Council. The hearing has been set for 7 p.m. Tuesday in Worsham Auditorium.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

The day after I mailed off my latest manuscript, a suspense thriller called "Copycat," to a new agent in New York, I went to bed after the kids left for school and slept until 3:30.

The next day was a little better. I only slept until 1:30.

On the third day, I received a manuscript from a friend that she wanted me to critique for her. Usually, I no longer read manuscripts for people because it takes up too much of my time, but I'd made an exception in her case. she's an old friend and has been away for several years. When I pulled the script out of the envelope, I could see that it was single spaced.

"Single spaced!" I screamed. "How could she single space a manuscript? She took my class at WTC. She knows better! I can't believe she sent me a single spaced manuscript to read!"

Fortunately, there was no one around to witness my little tirade, which is good, because it went on most of the day. I was so angry I tossed the piece over on my desk and have not read it yet. (You have to understand; it's the Eleventh Commandment: "Thou shalt not single space, ever, period.")

The next day I slept until 11:30 and couldn't figure out why I wasn't feeling rested. A woman called from Midland and asked if I'd come to teach a writer's workshop and it was all I could do not to reach through the telephone wire and rip out her tonsils. Much to my relief, I had another booking that day.

On the fourth day I slept until 9:30 and got to thinking. I'd started "Copycat" two weeks before I'd finished my last novel, "Freefall." During the first 21 days of research, I'd read 20 books. For nine months I'd worked on "Copycat," (following about eight month's work on "Freefall") and at the end, was doing up to three chapters of fresh copy a day. There were five drafts of the manuscript and at the end, I once revised 21 chapters in a single day. That's a lot of work, when you think about it.

The fifth day I came down with a cold.

The sixth day I forgot to write my column, "Country Life." On the last possible day that I could turn it in to the SDN, I dreamed I was writing it, and woke up to realize the amazing truth that it was the first time I'd ever forgotten to write it in more than six years. Fortunately for Bill, my editor, I was able to churn something out.

The funny thing about professonal burn-out is that it creeps up on you unawares. According to Dr. Herbert J. Freudenberger, PhD, in his book, "Burn Out: How to Beat the High Cost of Success;" irritability, chronic fatigue, loss of sex drive, a certain disenchantment and cynicism, depression and forgetfulness of crucial things are all symptoms of burn-out.

The great feminist leader, Gloria Steinem, woke up one day after twenty grueling years of eighteen-hour work days and constant travel to realize that she had not yet even unpacked the boxes from moving into her apartment back in the sixties. "I was tired and angry and I just sort of cut off those feelings," she writes in her latest landmark book, "Revolution from Within: A Book of Self-Esteem."

Different people suffer burnout for different reasons; those in the helping professions, for example, become exhausted for different reasons than those in the corporate structure or those in the creative arts or those who run small businesses.

Both Dr. Freudenberger and Ms. Steinem write that the first thing you must do when facing burn-out is take a break. It's time to cash in on all those vacation days you haven't been taking — at the very least, take a long weekend. Go away. If, for example, you've been caring for an ailing parent or disabled child for years on end, arrange for someone to help out so that you can get away for a while.

Another way you can take a break is to change your routine. "Cut your job down to size," says Dr. Freudenberger, "Emphasize other areas of your life to give yourself a better rounded foundation. Feel entitled to a little pampering, because you are. A good many people depend on you. You are responsible and hardworking, and you deserve on occasional reward."

Steinem used her time off to examine her past and see how it was driving her present; to come to terms with it so that she could alter her own behavior and never get "So flat-out, burnt-out exhausted again." She writes, "We need to be long-distance runners to make a real social revolution. And you can't be a long-distance runner unless you have some inner strength."

Study the life of Christ, and you will see that he frequently pulled back by Himself into the mountains for prayer and meditation. Imagine having thousands of people following you wherever you went, trying to touch you and be near you and bringing you all their problems to solve! Talk about a potential for burn-out!

A recent issue of "Newsweek" says that the entire country is suffering from a sort of "compassion burn-out." We've had so many images of suffering people held before us in media news programs and talk shows and on the streets of our bigger cities that we have gotten almost numb to it. We feel as if even our greatest efforts will be nothing more than an insignificant drop in the bucket.

But there is a way to put all that in perspective. For myself, I'm going to take a few months off. I need to take charge of my life; get my household and my finances organized, and whip my body back into shape, while my subconscious turns over new book ideas. Not everyone has that luxury, but I figure that with five novels written in three years, I've earned the break. And that's the key: to give yourself credit for whatever break you are able to give yourself. Get together with friends again. Laugh and make merry. Do something silly. Spend a little money on just you. Take whatever time off you are able to arrange. Go away if you can. If nothing else, take a MENTAL break. It's all right. You have my permission.

When you are ready to face your responsibilities again, you'll be recharged, refreshed, and invigorated. You'll be able to believe that even if all your efforts produce only a drop in the collective bucket, it's YOUR drop, and combined with all those others, it WILL make a difference.

That's what life's all about, isn't it?

At the first onset of stroke symptoms call 911

PHOENIX (AP) — Doctors studying what people should do if they think they're having a stroke came up with some surprising advice: Don't call your doctor.

Instead, they say to call an ambulance at the first sign of a stroke. The distinction could mean the difference between life and death.

While health officials have long campaigned to get people to the hospital at the first sign of a heart attack, the urgency of treating strokes has gotten less attention — in part because strokes are more difficult to treat.

Strokes are the third leading cause of death in the United States after heart attacks and cancer, killing 145,000 people annually.

Many doctors believe that therapies now under study will be available soon. And even current approaches improve the chances of survival or recovery if a person is treated quickly.

The study, conducted at the University of Cincinnati, found that people who called 911, the emergency number in most places, got to the hospital within an average of about three hours. Those who phoned their doctors were not hospitalized until about 10 hours after the first symptoms.

"The worst thing is to call your doctor," commented Dr. Edward Cooper of the University of Pennsylvania, president-elect of the American Heart Association.

The results were outlined Thursday by Dr. Joseph Broderick at a stroke meeting sponsored by the heart association. They were based on a review of 1,243 patients in New York, Ohio and Virginia.

Broderick said people who call their doctor rather than an ambulance often have milder symptoms, so they wait longer before seeking help. But calling the doctor also significantly slows down the trip to the emergency room.

Typically, callers cannot get through to their doctors immediately and have to wait for them to call back.

"Even docs have a hard time getting hold of other physicians," Broderick said.

Experts believe that stroke victims must be treated within about three hours to prevent the loss of brain tissue.

The current standard treatments include breathing oxygen and, in some cases, raising low blood pressure.

Several promising new therapies are being tested. Among these are administering TPA, streptokinase and other medicines that break up blood clots, the cause of most strokes.

Also being tested are clot-dissolving snake venom and drugs such as calcium channel blockers that may protect threatened brain tissue.

Scientists glad to have experiments back

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Joyful scientists retrieved their experiments from Discovery and astronauts endured still more dizzying tests after a mission that paved the way for NASA's planned space station.

"We're just thrilled to death. We're walking around off the floor," said Alex McPherson, a University of California, Riverside, biochemist studying virus protein crystals grown during the flight.

The shuttle and seven astronauts landed at this Mojave Desert military base Thursday morning after an eight-day Spacelab mission that carried the $70 million International Microgravity Laboratory. They were greeted by 18,500 spectators.

After a day of medical tests, shuttle commander Ronald Grabe, pilot Stephen Oswald and mission specialist William Readdy were to fly home to Houston Friday.

The other four astronauts will stay in California until Saturday night, repeating many of the tests conducted in space, including reflex and eye movement exams, urine and blood tests, and nausea-inducing rides on lurching sleds and rotating chairs.

Dick Covey, acting chief of NASA's astronaut office, said the crew and shuttle returned in excellent condition.

The mission's purpose was to study how cosmic radiation and weightlessness will affect long-term space travelers, including those on NASA's planned $30 billion space station Freedom. The mission also tested methods of processing materials for new medicines and other products.

Spokesman Mark Hess said space station construction is set to begin in late 1995.

OFFICE HOURS

Due to a lack of activity during the noon hour and a need for our office staff to be able to attend noon functions and meetings, the Chamber will return to its original hours of operation. We will be open from 8:00-5:00 Monday through Thursday, and 8:00-4:00 on Fridays. We will be closing for the noon hour.

AG DAY

The Snyder Chamber, the Scurry County Producers Association, and the County Extension Service have planned the fourth annual Ag Day and Producers meeting for Thursday, February 6, in the coliseum. The event will begin at 8:00 a.m., and will conclude with the noon meal after the Producer's Business Meeting.

A variety of booths and exhibits of agricultural interest will be on display. Two CEU's for TDA license will be offered. Guest speakers include:

Dr. James Supak - an extension specialist in cotton, who will speak on "Cotton Variety Selection and Management Practices for 1992"
J.F. Cadenhead - an Extension Range Specialist, will address "Brush Control on Rangeland"
Jeff Goodwin - who will speak on contrasting viewpoints of the Animal Activist Movement, will be the luncheon speaker.

The Scurry County Extension Homemakers program will be held in Room B (by Northeast Entrance), and it will include tips on home decorating, cake decorating, fabric painting, and other items of interest to the homemaker or crafts-minded.

The luncheon will begin at noon, and will feature barbecue from Reta's Cake Shop. There will be a $3.00 charge for the meal only, which will be served buffet style to allow for "All you can eat."

SEMINARS - SUBJECTS OF INTEREST

The Caruth Small Business Development Center wants to serve you. They need your input on seminar subjects you would like to have presented in Snyder. Subjects cover several aspects of management, marketing, and finance. The Chamber has questionnaires for you to fill out so the SBDC can provide the type of training needed and preferred in the Snyder area. Also, remember the SBDC is in Snyder, at the Chamber, twice a month for free counseling. Call 573-3558 if you wish to set up an appointment, and be sure to stop by the office to fill out a form if you are interested in the seminars.

AJRA CONCESSIONS STANDS BIDS

Packets containing guidelines for bidding for the operation of the concessions stands at the 1992 AJRA National Finals will be available at the Chamber of Commerce after February 10th.

Happy Valentines Day!

REGULATIONS CONCERNING OPERATING A BUSINESS

We receive numerous calls at the Chamber from persons with questions about where to apply for a business license and other related matters. The Chamber serves as an advocate organization for area business, but has no authority in licensing, permitting, taxing, etc. Below are some guidelines on how different levels of government apply to operating a business:

Federal Government

1. Obtain Form SS4, Application for Federal Identification Number from the Internal Revenue Service, 2nd Floor, Post Office Building, North Pine and Third Street, Abilene, Texas 79604, Telephone 1-800-424-1040 (NOT REQUIRED UNLESS YOU HAVE EMPLOYEES.)
2. Obtain a copy of the Businessman's Tax Guide from the same address.
3. Ask IRS for instructions on how and when to file the necessary Federal forms, particularly 941's, W-4's, and 1040's.

State Government

1. Apply for Limited Sales Tax Permit from the Comptroller of Public Accounts, State of Texas, 1290 South Willis, Abilene, Texas 79605, telephone 695-4323.
2. Be prepared to post a bond for the estimated amount of sales tax liability.
3. Contact the Texas Employment Commission for information about unemployment compensation taxes. Inquire at 826 Hickory, Abilene, Texas 79601, telephone 672-4361.

Scurry County

1. Register an assumed name (business name) with the County Clerk, Scurry County Courthouse, Snyder, Texas, telephone (573-5332).
2. Any sale of food products will require that you contact Scurry County Health Department (573-3508). State Health Requirements may also exist.
3. The county cooperates with the State of Texas in certain business areas, such as auto dealers, alcoholic beverages, etc. Contact the County Tax Appraisal District, The Texas Highway Department or the Liquor Control Board, as appropriate.

City of Snyder

1. Requirements depend on the type of business; you should contact City Hall (573-4957). For zoning requirements, contact Mr. Chambers, of the City Engineering Department. For any city tax questions contact the Scurry County Appraisal District.

LAFF-A-DAY

DENNIS THE MENACE

Dr. Gott

By Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband suffers slight dizziness that follows rising and lying down. He's seen an ENT specialist, had a CT scan, EEG, MRI, echo, blood tests and has been to an allergist. His medication includes Antivert, nicotinic acid and methylprednisolone. Every test is negative, and we don't know where to turn.

DEAR READER: Your husband has had an extensive array of testing, all of which has failed to show a reason for his "slight dizziness." On the basis of this testing, I believe we can conclude that your husband has no serious illness. Therefore, I suggest that your next turn should be away from doctors.

My answer is not meant to demean your husband's symptoms. However, I think your brief description underscores an important lesson: Once testing has ruled out a serious cause for minor ailments, patients should simply learn to live with the symptoms.

Note that I am referring to minor ailments and appropriate testing. If your husband were in constant pain, I'd pull out all the stops and refer him to a diagnostic clinic at a teaching hospital. He is not in pain but suffers, according to your description, from slight dizziness. This is something he can safely disregard, unless it becomes more pronounced.

My approach is far from novel. Most of us experience some lightheadedness when we stand up too quickly. All of us experience inconsequential complaints as we age; you know what I mean — slight joint stiffness, some loss of stamina, a tendency to sleep less soundly, a persnickety alimentary tract, loss of hearing, and so forth. The list goes on. These symptoms, which we certainly didn't feel in our 20s and 30s, can be annoying. But, as a general rule, they're not serious. We ignore them and get on with living.

By my rough calculations, your husband spent in excess of $2,000 on testing and consultations, most of which was probably unnecessary. Consequently, I think he should learn to put up with his dizziness and spend his money on more enjoyable pursuits.

Also, he is taking high-powered cortisone (methylprednisolone) that could, over time, be dangerous. I'd ask his doctor to discontinue this drug unless there is a pressing reason to use it. Antivert is a good medicine for vertigo, and it's harmless when taken according to directions. Nicotinic acid (niacin) is a vitamin that probably plays little, if any, role in treating your husband's afflictions.

Like the tinnitus (ringing in the ears) commonly experienced by older adults, occasional dizziness is probably best ignored.

To provide additional information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Help I — Physical Illness." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

One of my most treasured possessions is a fully restored 1954 black Jaguar XK120 roadster. Now, before you turn the page because this sounds like another boring car story, stick with me; I'm going to tie this into medical practice.

The Jag is uniquely special in ways even a non car-buff can appreciate. It has gorgeous curves and the unmistakable lines of the breed; in a million years you couldn't confuse an XK120 with any modern car. It is also very utilitarian: a simple but reliable six-cylinder engine (with which any trained mechanic would feel comfortable), functional gauges that tell you what you need to know and a four-speed gearbox. Elementary. It rides like a truck. But I love to drive it.

Unlike the (unnamed) car I use for work, the Jag has no power windows, air conditioning, tinted glass, fuel-injection or computer. Most of this stuff on modern cars is unnecessary fluff. For example, the on-board computer in my work-car tells me much more than I want to know: miles per gallon, average speed driven since day one, whether the parking brake is on, the outdoor temperature and an array of other details I won't list. My work-car is better — or at least has more conveniences — than the Jag. But it looks like every other car, a mere clone. To get from point A to point B with style and pizazz, I prefer my antique auto.

Both cars are metaphors for the medical profession.

Let me illustrate by describing the following true situation. I have a lovely patient in her 70s who suffered heartburn, despite the use of antacids. After several weeks of discomfort, she agreed to have an upper GI series, a type of X-ray test for examining the esophagus, stomach and part of the small intestine.

The X-rays showed considerable irritation and spasm of the lower esophagus; no ulcer was identified. In the past, I'd have prescribed medicine for my patient, drugs such as Tagamet or Zantac to reduce stomach acid and aid healing.

However, the radiologist's report concluded that the prudent physician should order endoscopy JUST TO BE SURE that no early cancer was the cause of my patient's symptoms. Upper endoscopy means 1.) a specialist must pass a flexible fiberoptic tube into my patient's stomach to take a look at the irritated area and 2.) the patient would need light anesthesia because endoscopy, although a useful test, is not fun, not like waiting eagerly for your tax refund check.

At this point, my patient and I passed from everyday medicine into high-tech healing, from the 1954 car to the 1990 model. You see, I had no choice but to proceed, because of the radiologist's comment: He covered his behind, I'd have to cover mine.

Thus, my patient was readied for endoscopy. As part of this ritual, she was required to undergo blood tests. Unluckily for her, one of the routine tests was abnormal, seeming to indicate heart damage, maybe even a heart attack in progress.

Naturally, I immediately admitted her to the Intensive Care Unit for monitoring and more testing. Cardiograms were entirely normal; however, repeat blood analyses were equivocal. Therefore, I took the next step and ordered a thallium stress test, supposedly a sure-fire way to diagnose coronary heart disease.

The test was inconclusive. At this point, my patient's simple indigestion had mushroomed into an extravaganza of hospitalization, inconvenience, expensive testing — and still no endoscopy. I was stuck.

To resolve the issue, I referred her to a cardiologist at a teaching center elsewhere in the state. She was admitted to his hospital and had a repeat thallium stress test, which was — of course — completely normal. Finally, after almost two weeks of uncertainty and anguish, a double hospitalization, a brace of stress tests, and heaven knows what other tests, my patient underwent endoscopy. The findings: Esophageal irritation from too much stomach acid.

Like the computer in my business car, medical tests often provide too much information — or data that are faulty and inconclusive. Everybody in the health-care profession — and I mean everybody: doctors, nurses and hospitals — are petrified of making a mistake. So we fool ourselves into believing that high-tech testing will show us The Truth. Further, the more tests we perform, the more certain we can be about situations that are, by their very nature, uncertain. We are kidding ourselves and, sadly, we don't even realize it. In the medical profession, the tail is increasingly wagging the dog. No wonder many older doctors have difficulty abandoning the trusted principle: There are few alternatives that are superior to good medical judgment coupled with simple tests.

Please excuse me for bowing out of further discussion; I have a date to wax my Jaguar.

Youth with reattached arms worries about his future

ROBBINSDALE, Minn. (AP) — John Thompson spends his days much as any 18-year-old might — watching movies such as "Backdraft," listening to Guns N' Roses and fretting about his high school graduation.

But he does it in a hospital bed, swathed in bandages, under the shadow of the day that changed his life — the day his arms were ripped off in an accident on his family's farm in Hurdsfield, N.D.

The high school senior remains in fair condition at North Memorial Medical Center, recovering from the operation that reattached his arms and wondering what his future holds.

Thompson's doctors say he faces years of physical therapy. They're not sure whether he'll regain use of his arms below the elbows.

"All in all, he's been pretty good, but he does have times of depression," his sister, Kim Blotter, of Fargo, N.D., said Wednesday. "He wonders if he'll ever be able to do the things he was able to do. He knows it'll be awhile before he can do anything."

"I'm trying to figure out what I'll be able to do with my hands, how I'll finish high school, if I can drive again," Thompson said in the Feb. 3 issue of People magazine.
