Liability insurance offer withdrawn

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland County suffered a serious setback Monday in its attempt to obtain law enforcement liability insurance.

The Texas Association of Counties' Risk Management Pool — which awards liability coverage to county government — withdrew its offer to provide Midland County with a law enforcement policy because of the sheriff's department's involvement in high-risk sting operations.

Don Gray, a spokesman for the association, told commissioners Monday that the high-profile nature of the sheriff's stings on international weapons traffic is "beyond the scope of what other counties are involved in."

The withdrawal of TAC's offer extended only to law enforcement liability coverage and not policies covering public officials, which commissioners agreed to purchase Monday.

Most of the publicity surrounding the sheriff's department has centered around two volunteer deputies — Gary Howard and Ron Tucker — who have made worldwide headlines in their pursuit of bogus arms deals since joining the sheriff's staff in 1985.

Commissioner Guy McCrary said the county is in desparate need of law enforcement insurance, observing that "It appears that the TAC plan is probably the best provider of that coverage.

"So, we what need to do now — with respect to their withdrawal — is to either identify additional areas which must be excluded in the policy or have further discussions about what their concerns are in extending the coverage" he added.

However, Sheriff's Department Capt. Clayton McKinney, who was present at Monday's meeting, expressed dismay over the withdrawal of the offer, saying, "They (TAC) just singled Midland County out."

McKinney said, "They're telling us which laws we are going to enforce and which laws we are not going to enforce.

"There isn't anyway that a county could agree to do that. I think they're a little bit out of line," he added.

TAC didn't start offering liability insurance policies to county government until recently, said Commissioner Win Brown, who also serves as vice president of the association's Risk Management Pool.

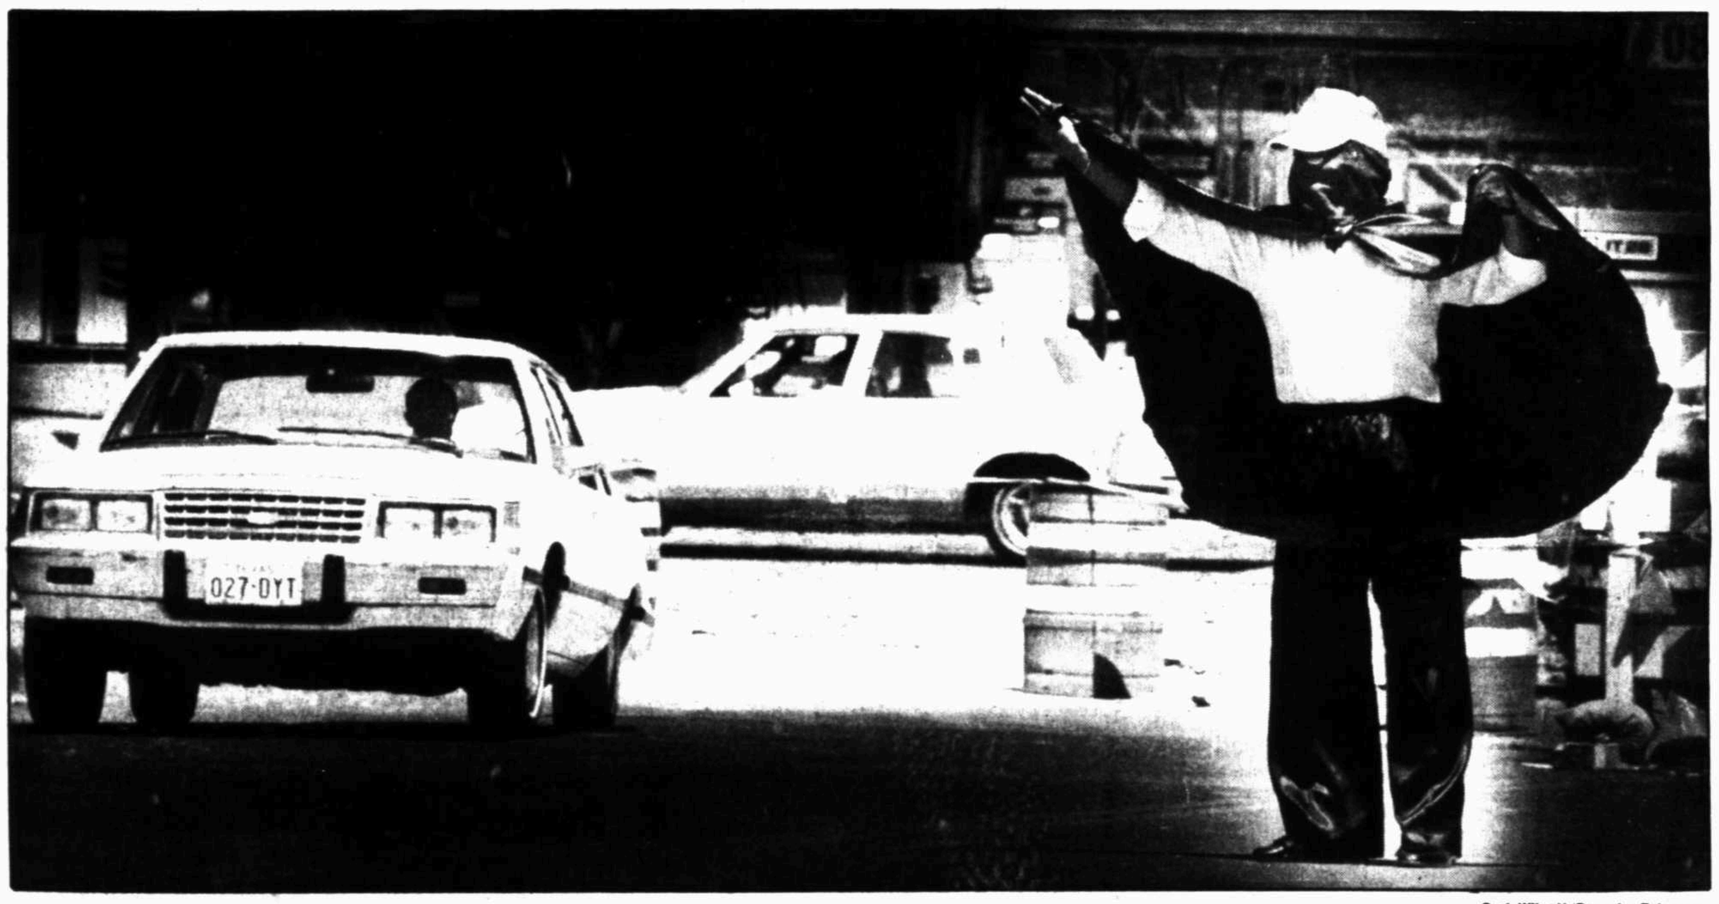

Brown voiced concern last week that the county's attempt to obtain law enforcement liability insurance was in jeopardy because of Howard and Tucker's volunteer deputy status and their high-profile pursuit of bogus arms deals.

The commissioner said Howard and Tucker's high-profile operations — if associated with the Midland sheriff's office — could lead to high-dollar civil lawsuits. The possibility would be particularly troublesome in federal court, where no monetary caps are placed upon jury awards, he said.

Brown had expected to call a closed-door session to discuss the deputies status Monday, but put his plans on hold because Sheriff Gary Painter — who was at a management conference — was unable to attend the meeting.

Howard, a former investigator for the U.S. Border Patrol, and Tucker, who served as a narcotics agent with the Texas Department of Public Safety, went to work for Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter when their Dallas-based security firm folded in 1984.

OPEC plans effort to cut production

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC is launching an effort to persuade rival oil producers to help push up prices because the cartel is convinced it can no longer control world oil markets by itself.

Oil ministers from five of the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meet tonight with representatives of Mexico, China, Egypt and five other non-OPEC oil producers to discuss possible production cuts.

The meeting will mark the widest participation of non-cartel oil exporters in direct talks with OPEC in history. But many industry analysts say they see little chance of a firm accord this week on joint output cuts.

The OPEC ministers gathered at the cartel's headquarters in central Vienna at midday today to lay the groundwork for the joint meeting set for tonight.

Rilwanu Lukman, the Nigerian oil minister and president of OPEC, offered no details of the meeting's agenda as he entered the building.

"We hope to have a good meeting, a useful meeting," he told reporters. Other officials declined to comment.

World oil prices have been falling as supplies exceed demand.

Although Iran and some other OPEC members have been pushing for big cuts in production as a means of driving up prices, Saudi Arabia has not indicated it will go along. It is the world's largest oil exporter.

Boys stop bus after driver collapses

CENTRAL ISLIP, N.Y. (AP) — A school bus went careening out of control after the driver suffered a fatal heart attack, but three junior high school boys brought it to a halt after seeing the driver topple from her seat.

"They are heroes," said Jack Cassidy, principal at Ralph Reed Junior High School in Central Islip, Long Island.

The full-size bus was carrying five youngsters to the school Monday morning, threading through traffic on busy Route 111 at 15 mph, authorities said. It narrowly missed a car and a utility pole when it veered left into oncoming traffic after the driver's heart attack.

"We heard something fall. I looked out the window and saw the bus heading for a car. I didn't know what happened," said Jack Florival, 14, one of the boys who took over when driver Mary Flammer, 48, of Holbrook, toppled from her seat.

Florival and two 15-year-olds, Sean Mohan and Nigel Boyer, ran forward from their seats in the rear.

"I grabbed the wheel," said Florival, "Sean and Nigel slammed on the brakes."

The bus mounted the curb and came to rest on the sidewalk in front of a house. They boys went to the house for help but got no response.

"We heard somebody inside but they wouldn't come to the door," said Florival. "Then another school bus driver stopped and he called police."

An ambulance took Flammer to a hospital where she was pronounced dead, said police spokesman John Haydan.

City's new phone numbers to be listed in May

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

City administrators are so sure a new municipal phone system will be on line in the next three months that they've already arranged listing of new numbers in directories set for May distribution.

While City Council consideration of funding for the new system won't come until May 23, "I think we've already made the decision to go ahead," City Manager Fred Poe said Monday.

The council first heard concrete proposals for the new system during study sessions last month.

"We're out to bid for proposals right now," said Poe. "We won't be changing anything until we get those bids."

The city manager said administrators have worked out a "rollover" plan whereby callers to the published numbers will tie in to the city's current — and only — direct line: 683-4281.

Multiple numbers for different departments will be one of the key features of the new system, Poe said.

The new lines will take pressure off the city switchboard operator, who currently has to let some calls go unanswered because of a somtimes unmanageable influx of callers.

According to Ray Kendall, a communications consultant working with the city, the switchboard currently handles more than 200 calls an hour at peak periods — between 10 a.m. and noon and between 4 and 5 p.m.

Kendall said about 60 percent of those calls go to one of seven departments: police, water and utility, municipal court, health, fire, building inspections and recreation.

While all departments will have their own dail-in capabilities, only those seven departments will be listed in directories distributed in May, Kendall said.

"When they decided to do the new phone system, it was four or five weeks for (directory) deadline," he explained. "We didn't have time to come up with all the new telephone numbers for all the departments, but we figured if we'd have 60 percent of the calls listed, that would be a big relief to the switchboard operator."

The new numbers also will mean department-wide changes to employee business cards and letterhead stationary, he observed.

Democrats critical of GOP school financing amendment

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Democratic leaders and a coalition of poor school districts Monday called brewing Republican plans to solve the school finance crisis with a constitutional amendment "garbage," "a step backwards" and "hypocrisy."

Also Monday, Democratic Comptroller Bob Bullock began briefing state leaders on a proposal of his own. Bullock told a meeting of the Equity Center, a coalition of 67 property-poor school districts, that his plan involves poor districts using existing bonds and "a very small part" of the Permanent School Fund to finance educational programs.

He met Monday with Mike Toomey, Gov. Bill Clements' assistant chief of staff, who said Bullock's plan also would guarantee each district the same amount of money from a given property tax rate. Those districts too poor to raise the money from local property taxes would make it up in state aid.

"It has some interesting ideas, and we're going to consider those ideas along with the other ideas that have been floating around," Toomey said.

Bullock, Republicans including Clements and the Equity Center have been drafting possible state responses to a 1987 district court decision that ruled the current system unconstitutional. The system relies on a combination of local property taxes and state aid. The "vast disparity" in property wealth among Texas' 1,063 school districts led the judge to rule that the system violates the state Constitution's equal protection clause.

Craig Foster, executive director of the Equity Center, warned his member superintendents to be wary of a proposed constitutional amendment drafted by Rep. John Culberson, R-Houston. Culberson's plan would give the Legislature complete control over school finance "without regard to any other provision" in the Constitution.

"This amendment would permit the Legislature to retreat" from the small improvements it has made over the years, said Foster, who called Culberson's proposal "garbage."

Submarine search could begin soon

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The blast that crippled the USS Bonefish may have been caused by a battery explosion, and three missing members of the submarine's crew may have died trying to save the lives of their comrades, the Navy's top officer said today.

The Bonefish remained tethered to a rescue ship as officials waited for toxic gases to clear before starting salvage efforts after the Sunday explosions and fire that injured 22 crewman.

Atlantic Fleet headquarters confirmed today that the first explosion occurred while the sub was at periscope depth. However, the spokesman refused to comment on speculation that the ship was recharging batteries at the time.

In Washington, Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost said a battery explosion was a likely cause, and said the three missing men might have died while saving the lives of their comrades.

"All three of those individuals ... were on watch in the ship's control room and were last seen there," said Trost, who is chief of naval operations and a submariner himself.

"So it may well be that they simply ensured that everyone got clear and they themselves didn't make it."

Relatives of the missing sailors, meanwhile, maintained vigils.

"We still have a little ray of hope," said Joyce Lindgren, mother of Petty Officer 3rd Class Marshall T. Lindgren of Pisgah Forest, N.C. "When he enrolled in the Navy I gave him to the Lord and I have to have trust in him now."

Weather

Clear tonight with the low in the upper 40s. Winds at 10-15 mph. Details on Page 2A.

APR 26 88

WEATHER SUMMARY

Clear skies could continue

Continued clear skies are expected tonight, according to The National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low should be in the upper 40s. Winds will blow from the northeast at 10-15 mph, and are expected to shift to the east after midnight.

Partly cloudy skies and slightly cooler temperatures are forecast for Wednesday with the high expected to reach only into the upper 70s. East-southeasterly winds will blow from 10-20 mph.

Monday's high of 83 degrees was 15 degrees cooler than the record high of 98 set for that date in 1943. The low of 47 degrees was 10 degrees warmer than the record low of 37 set for that date in 1946.

STATE

Pleasant weather is in store for all of Texas through Wednesday with forecasts calling for clear skies and mild temperatures.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 50s, ranging from near 40 in the Panhandle to the upper 60s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 70s and 80s, ranging from the mid 60s in the Panhandle to the mid 90s in Southwest Texas.

Clear skies prevailed around the state at dawn today. The only significant weather system in Texas was an area of low pressure extending across West Texas from near Childress southward to near Laredo. But the system was not producing any significant weather.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 50s and 60s, ranging from the 40s in the Panhandle and higher elevations of the Trans-Pecos to near 70 in extreme South Texas. Extremes ranged from 42 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to 70 at Laredo.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 49 at Amarillo, 53 at Wichita Falls, 55 at Fort Worth and Waco, 61 at Austin, 53 at San Antonio, 62 at Corpus Christi and Brownsville, 53 at San Angelo, 57 at Lubbock and 53 at both Midland and El Paso.

NATION

A spring snowstorm whitened parts of South Dakota, Nebraska and Minnesota today, as severe thunderstorms swept through sections of the South, unleashing at least two tornadoes in Georgia.

The heaviest snowfall was reported in the Black Hills of South Dakota. As of late Monday, 7-8 inches blanketed Deerfield.

Early this morning, Rapid City, S.D., was covered by 4 inches of snow. Brisk northerly winds produced a wind chill of between zero and 15 degrees above zero in western South Dakota.

In Wyoming, wind gusted to 60 mph at Cheyenne, and 3-6 inches of snow fell in the northeast part of the state. Three inches fell on Valentine, Neb.

A winter storm watch was in effect for southwest Minnesota today, where several inches of snow was expected.

Ahead of the snow, showers and thunderstorms extended from eastern and central Nebraska to western Kansas early today.

A severe thunderstorm struck Pleasanton, Neb., late Monday and produced golfball-size hail.

Severe thunderstorms also developed over Georgia and Alabama on Monday evening, producing high winds, twisters and large hail. A number of downed trees blocked streets in Columbus, Ga.

The Lowndes County, Ga., communities of Naylor and Bemiss caught the worst of the winds.

"I laid the baby on the floor and got over him and prayed for God to save him even if he didn't save me," said Ilia Morgan, 61.

Race case raises civil rights questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil rights groups are worried that a Supreme Court decision to reconsider a 12-year-old ruling on race discrimination could be the beginning of an effort to reverse basic legal advances for minorities.

Conservatives see it as signaling the possible end of an era where they believe legal principles were bent to favor minorities.

"The message is there's a new court now that Justice (Anthony M.) Kennedy is on board and previous rulings are up for grabs," said Ira Glasser, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union. "It is an ominous development."

By a 5-4 vote Monday, the justices took the unusual initiative of broadening the scope of a North Carolina racial-harassment case so that they could consider limiting the ability of minorities to sue private citizens for monetary damages.

Arthur Spitzer, the ACLU's legal director here, said the court's action will have "enormous psychological impact" by indicating "basic civil rights decisions now may be considered open to attack."

A conservative constitutional lawyer, hailing the action, said it comes from a court "no longer willing to say, as it has in the past, that any statutory interpretation that is a victory for minorities automatically wins even if you've got to bend legal principles."

The lawyer, Bruce Fein, visiting fellow in constitutional studies at the conservative think tank Heritage Foundation, said the action could lead the court to take another look at other cases which represent "really almost absurd efforts to rewrite intent and legislative history."

"This indicates to me," Fein said, "that the court is going to take a hard look at statutory civil rights and be willing to overturn decisions where they were based on really flawed reasoning, even if the results are politically unpopular."

Kennedy, who joined the court in February, provided a fifth vote Monday to re-examine the 1976 ruling that expanded the right of minorities to sue over alleged discrimination.

The other four are Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Antonin Scalia and Sandra Day O'Connor. Scalia, O'Connor and Kennedy were appointed to the court by President Reagan, a frequent critic of rulings he regards as too liberal.

Justice John Paul Stevens, in a sharply worded dissent, said minorities may feel betrayed by the court's willingness to consider discarding an important civil rights precedent.

He said the action is unwise activism and will "have a detrimental and enduring impact on the public's perception of the court as an impartial adjudicator."

He was joined by Justices William J. Brennan, Harry A. Blackmun and Thurgood Marshall.

Their views were echoed by Glasser, who said the five in the majority "have made careers of extolling the virtue of judicial restraint."

Glasser continued, "In this case they have reopened a major strand of the civil rights enforcement infrastructure when neither party in the case has asked to do so and when there is no ferment in the courts below."

The court majority, in an unsigned order, said, "It is surely no affront to settled jurisprudence to request argument on whether a particular precedent should be modified or overruled."

The North Carolina case, argued last Feb. 29, now will be held over until the court's next term beginning in October. A ruling is likely in 1989.

In the case, Brenda Patterson, a black woman, wants to use a post-Civil War law to force her employer, McClean Credit Union, to pay actual and punitive damages for alleged harassment.

Lower federal courts said the law, the Civil Rights Act of 1866, is designed only to ban racial discrimination in hiring, firing and promotion — not racial harassment.

Ms. Patterson still could charge racial harassment under a 1964 civil rights law. But the more recent law provides that those who win their cases in court may collect back pay, not potentially big awards as compensation for emotional and mental suffering.

Civil rights groups say the more limited 1964 law may not be a sufficient deterrent to harassment.

The court agreed to use Ms. Patterson's appeal to reconsider a 1976 ruling, called Runyon vs. McCrary, that held that racially segregated private schools violate the 1866 law. The statute was enacted to ensure that recently freed slaves would enjoy all the rights of citizenship.

The 1976 decision has given civil rights groups an important legal weapon to fight racial bias by permitting them to use the law as a basis for lawsuits against private individuals.

In other action, the court:

— Turned away the first "dial-a-porn" case ever to reach it, letting stand a ban on sexually explicit telephone message services in Arizona.

— Agreed to decide whether wardens of federal prisons should have sweeping power to say what publications inmates may read.

A sailor from the USS Bonefish is loaded on a Navy ambulance after being airlifted to Jacksonville, Fla.

FIRE

The 30-year-old submarine, one of the Navy's last diesel-electric subs, was participating in training exercises Sunday in the Atlantic about 160 miles off the coast of Florida when it was rocked by a series of explosions.

At least one blast occurred in the battery compartment and fire broke out in the forward battery compartment, said Lt. Cmdr. Aaron Long, spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk.

The crew brought the sub to the surface and its captain, Cmdr. Mike Wilson, ordered it abandoned because of the dense smoke and toxic fumes.

Of the 92 officer and crew board, 89 were taken aboard the frigate USS Carr and aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, which were involved in the exercises. The ships were unable to find the three crewmen, and officials were uncertain whether they were aboard the vessel or in the water.

The Bonefish was afloat today alongside the submarine rescue ship USS Petrel. Salvage workers were to board the sub once experts decided it was safe, but Navy officials were unsure when that would be, Long said.

Long refused to say what types of toxic gases might be present or what caused the explosions.

The Virginian-Pilot of Norfolk reported today that the first explosion occurred at periscope depth, leading to speculation that the ship was recharging its batteries via a generator drawing air through a snorkel raised with the periscope.

Fleet spokesman Lt. Fred Henney confirmed this morning that the first explosion did occur at periscope depth, less than about 70 feet below the surface, but would not comment further.

Trost said "battery explosion is the best information that we have" as to the cause.

The salvage ship USS Hoist from the Little Creek Amphibious Base in Norfolk was expected to join the Petrel at the scene today.

On Monday, injured sailors were taken by helicopter from the Kennedy to the Naval Hospital in Jacksonville, Fla. Twenty were held for observation, and two were in serious but stable condition in intensive care suffering from smoke inhalation.

Lt. Cmdr. John Griffin, a hospital spokesman, identified the two seriously injured men as Lt.j.g. Edmund B. Collins, 34, of Forest Park, Ill., and Petty Officer 1st Class Antone R. Silvia, 28, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The rest of the crew was taken Monday to the Mayport Naval Station in Florida, then flown back to Charleston, S.C., where the submarine is based.

Lee Causey and his wife, Alice, of Jacksonville went to Mayport to meet their 30-year son, Petty Officer 1st Class Avery L. Causey.

Evangelists released on bond

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Three Georgia ministers have been released on bond and ordered to appear in Virginia for trial on federal charges of transporting young boys across state lines for prostitution.

U.S. Magistrate William L. Slaughter on Monday ordered the release of Pentecostal ministers Tony Leyva, 41, of Columbus; Rias Edward Morris, 47, an organist in Leyva's Columbus church; and Freddie M. Herring, 49, of Douglasville, Ga., on $20,000 unsecured bonds each.

Painter deputized the men shortly after he took office in January 1985 because of their affiliation with several U.S. government agencies and their ability to gather intelligence information, he said.

"I feel a very strong bond with those men," he said in a story published by the Reporter-Telegram on April 14. "They've put themselves on the line for me, for this county and for the nation."

Painter said Howard and Tucker, who live in Austin, lend their expertise to Midland County "when called upon." However, County Treasurer Dee Thompson said neither deputy has received a county paycheck for their work.

The duo cemented their alliance to Painter last August by orchestrating an arms sting at Midland International Airport, in which a Portuguese national was taken into custody and later indicted with conspiracy to commit theft.

Victor Fonseca was lured to the hangar to inspect what he thought were radar parts for U.S.-built Hawk missiles. However, the crates contained nothing but gravel.

Fonseca was arrested in front of national television news cameras, but State District Judge Vann Culp threw out the indictment, ruling that the allegations were too vague and failed to specify the owner of the "stolen" missile parts.

The district attorney's office declined to continue prosecution of Fonseca, and he was freed last January.

Finally, the direct dail-in capabilities will reduce loads on police department operators, who answer city phones when the main switchboard is closed, Kendall said. "They answered a lot of calls, especially after 5 p.m. and before 8 o'clock in the morning," he said.

An additional feature of the system will "queue" callers seeking information on their water bills. When lines are busy, "there'll be a recording similar to what the airlines have," he said.

Logistics of the new system call for eight trunk lines to be added to the 36 now allotted for city use. The additions will ensure busy signals will be infrequent for callers, Kendall said.

Within the system, the city will install 350 direct dial stations, he said, observing that "Everybody in the city is going to be affected by it except the airport."

SCHOOL

Claiming that other possible solutions would require large tax increases or massive school district consolidations, Clements is working on an amendment that would ratify the current system. Such an amendment, like Culberson's, would need approval from two-thirds of the Legislature and a majority of the voters.

"A change in the Constitution would be a step backwards," Bullock told the Equity Center. "It would be nothing more than the state of Texas putting its stamp on inequities in our public school system."

Speaking to the same group, Treasurer Ann Richards pointed out that 60 percent of Texas' districts are classified as poor under the present system. "It is a hypocrisy to suggest that a system that allows the majority to go wanting is equitable and efficient," she said.

OPEC

"The Saudis seem to be very much against any oil production cuts," said Graham Andrews, an analyst in the London office of the investment firm Wood, Mackenzie and Co.

He said in a telephone interview that one reason for the Saudi reluctance may be to avoid allowing Iran to use increased revenues from higher oil prices to strengthen its stand in the war against Iraq. The Saudis indirectly support Irag in the war that began in September 1980. On Sunday, Iranian naval gunboats attacked a Saudi-owned tanker in the Persian Gulf.

OPEC decided earlier this month to invite eight non-cartel oil exporters to Vienna, saying a broader base of nations must bear the burden of production restraint if prices are to return to OPEC's declared target of $18 a barrel. Most OPEC oil is selling for at least $2 a barrel less than the target price.

The non-OPEC countries participating in the Vienna meeting are Mexico, China, Egypt, Oman, Angola, Malaysia, Colombia and Brunei. Their production totals about 8 million barrels a day, although their combined exports are believed to be less than half that.

Norway, which produces 1 million barrels daily, is not participating in the joint meeting but has sent a representative to meet individually with some of the oil ministers.

Although the U.S. government was not represented, Kent Hance, a member of the Texas Railroad Commission, was in Vienna to talk with OPEC officials. The commission regulates that state's oil production of 2 million barrels a day.

OPEC has a spotty record in its efforts to win support from rival producers.

In 1984 it began inviting representatives of Mexico, Egypt and other smaller producers to observe OPEC meetings. In March 1986 it held direct negotiations with Mexico and four other independent producers but no agreement was reached on production cuts.

Pennsylvania conducting primary today

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Michael Dukakis aimed today to add Pennsylvania to the string of primary victories propelling him toward the Democratic presidential nomination, while Vice President George Bush expected to lock up the Republican nomination.

Jesse Jackson counted on large turnouts in the state's two biggest cities to give him a shot at an upset victory over Dukakis in the non-binding popularity vote that was part of a long, complex primary ballot.

But Democratic front-runner Dukakis was virtually assured of capturing a solid majority of the 178 convention delegates at stake in the primary and add to his growing lead in the two-man race for the nomination.

"The turnout is light this morning," said Allegheny County Elections Director James Scanlon. But he added, "I think the weather will help a lot. It's going to be a beautiful day."

In northwestern Pennsylvania, Erie County Elections Supervisor Mary Ann Edler said polling places reported good turnout.

"The weather is sunshiny," she said. " It's beautiful. The turnout's been fantastic this morning."

Meanwhile, Jackson got high praise from former President Carter who appeared on the ABC show, "Good Morning America" and said the former civil rights activist would be "amazingly attractive" on the Democratic ticket.

The former president said Jackson's "attractiveness and the quality of his campaign has been amazing" and "it's much easier to say very honestly that Jackson would be amazingly attractive on the ticket compared to what everybody thought he would do before this campaign started."

Bush, campaigning today in Lima, Ohio, had critical words for the former president, saying that Democrats would return the country "to the malaise days of Carter."

During the Carter administration, Bush said, "there wasn't a malaise. There was a lack of leadership. I want to build on our outstanding record."

All the candidates wound up their Pennsylvania campaigning on Monday and Jackson and Bush scheduled appearances today in Ohio, the next big state on the primary schedule. Dukakis was back in the governor's office in Massachusetts.

With 1,081 delegates in the latest Associated Press tally, Bush was only 58 short of the 1,139 needed for a majority at the Republican National Convention in August. His only active opponent, former television evangelist Pat Robertson, has 31.

Pennsylvania elects 78 Republican delegates, giving the vice president a strong chance to get his majority when the results come in tonight.

Dukakis has put together a string of primary victories in Wisconsin, Connecticut and New York to knock out all opposition but Jackson and build the impression that his nomination is inevitable.

Dukakis was more than halfway toward a delegate majority, holding 1,075.15 national convention votes. Jackson has 836.1 while 602.75 are uncommitted. A tally of 2,081 or more is needed to win the nomination at the July convention in Atlanta.

Shamir praises court for Demjanjuk ruling

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today praised a court for sentencing John Demjanjuk to death for Nazi war crimes.

"All of us are proud that a Jewish tribunal in the Jewish state has judged and condemned one of the cruelest war criminals who murdered many of our Jewish brethren and relatives," Shamir said in a speech at a Jerusalem hotel.

The Polish-born Shamir lost relatives in the Holocaust.

Also today, an official at the prison where Demjanjuk was held said guards were ordered to watch the former Ohio autoworker to prevent him from committing suicide. Demjanjuk's son, John Jr. said the precautions were "crazy."

Demjanjuk, 68, was returned to his solitary confinement cell in the maximum-security Ayalon Prison near Tel Aviv Monday after receiving the death penalty for sending hundreds of thousands of Jews to their deaths in World War II as a brutal Nazi guard called "Ivan the Terrible."

Since returning to prison, he has been placed "under 24-hour guard, and we are asking his guards to be more careful, more alert," said Johnny Tester, spokesman for the Israel Prison Service. "We want to be prepared."

John Jr. told The Associated Press the prison's precautions had "no basis in fact. It's crazy. They're going to pop up with that kind of stupid propaganda to try to make it seem he's showed signs he's going to kill himself out of remorse or guilt."

"My father would never attempt something like that because he's innocent and he'll fight this to the last minute. I've visited my dad and I know what frame of mind he's in," John Jr. said.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk of Cleveland has insisted he is a victim of mistaken identity and plans to appeal his conviction to Israel's Supreme Court.

John Jr., 22, said the defense would not file an appeal for several weeks, until after the family returns home to map out an appeal strategy.

He also said the family would hire a new lawyer to help prepare the appeal in addition to the current defense team of John Gill of Cleveland, Paul Chumak of Toronto and Israeli attorney Yoram Sheftel.

According to Israeli law, a conviction with a death sentence must be appealed to the Supreme Court.

The last person to be executed in Israel was Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann, who was hanged in 1962.

A Holocaust survivor remains alone with his memories in a Jerusalem courtroom after an Israeli court sentenced retired Ohio autoworker John Demjanjuk to death for committing Nazi war crimes as the death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible."

Israeli court officials have said Demjanjuk would likely be hanged if his conviction is upheld on appeal.

Tester said there were no gallows in Israel and that "if the appeal is denied, we will have to build one."

Some Israelis saw the 14-month trial as a crucial opportunity to educate the younger generation and remind the world of the horrors of the Holocaust.

"The personal fate of John Demjanjuk isn't important or very interesting," Yosef Lapid, an Israeli commentator and Holocaust survivor, said on Israel radio. "The importance of the trial...was to remind us of the Holocaust. For most of humanity the Holocaust is cloudy history."

But comparing Demjanjuk's trial with proceedings against Eichmann 26 years ago, Lapid said: "The Eichmann trial was a national catharsis for Israelis, the Demjanjuk trial leaves us in depression."

"The banality (of Demjanjuk) is more frightening than any evil," Lapid said. "If this guy could be like that, then there are millions more like him."

Three Arabs, two Israelis die in clash

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops today ambushed a band of Arabs at the Lebanese border as the guerrillas launched a raid into Israel, the military said. Three Arabs and two Israeli soldiers were killed.

Two other soldiers were wounded, the army said. One was in serious condition with a gunshot wound to the chest, hospital authorities said.

The Israeli army said the clash occurred 200 yards inside Israel after troops on an early morning patrol encountered guerrillas trying to infiltrate from Lebanon.

However, a Lebanese police spokesman said the predawn clash occurred in Lebanese territory near the southern village of Kfar Shouba when Israeli troops opened fire at a seven-man guerrilla group.

The army said soldiers chased the guerrillas through rocky terrain and scrub brush and fought a brief battle in which the guerrillas threw hand grenades and fired a rocket.

The Lebanese police spokesman said the "fierce clash" raged for about three hours.

The Israelis "fired flares at the rate of 20 every five minutes as their helicopter gunships chased the guerrillas in the region," he said.

The guerrillas were "apparently ambushed before launching a cross-border raid into northern Israel," the spokesman said. He spoke on condition of anonymity in keeping with standing regulations.

Israeli radio said the soldiers fought the guerrillas at a distance of two yards but did not give the exact site of the clash.

The Lebanese police spokesman said the guerrillas were from two pro-Soviet groups, the Lebanese Communist Party and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine of George Habash.

Gen. Yossi Peled, head of northern command, identified the guerrillas as Palestinians. However, the Lebanese Communist Party is made up of Lebanese.

Kfar Shouba is a small village on the slopes of biblical Mount Hermon, about one mile from an area where the borders of Lebanon, Israel and Syria converge.

The Lebanese village is inside Israel's self-designated "security zone." The zone, intended to protect Israel from attacks across the border, was created by Israel in 1985 after it withdrew most of its forces from Lebanon. Israel had invaded Lebanon in 1982.

Peled said the guerrillas had targeted "civilians, children, Israeli settlements" in their raid.

The army did not say whether any guerrillas escaped. News of the incident was held up eight hours while the border was searched.

"It was difficult, bushy terrain, easy to hide in," said a military commander at the scene who was interviewed by Israeli radio but not identified in keeping with army regulations.

"We closed off the area and chased them for several hours. They hid in the bushes and were difficult to see," he said. "They fired first at our force and the soldiers fired back."

Today's incident was the 11th attempted infiltration and the deadliest along the Lebanese border since Nov. 25 when a guerrilla landed in northern Israel on a hang glider, entered a military base and killed six Israeli soldiers before being shot to death himself.

Israeli officials have linked past infiltration attempts to a nearly five-month long Arab uprising in the occupied territories in which 173 Palestinians and two Israelis have died.

The two dead soldiers were the first Israeli casualties involving Lebanon since Feb. 23, when two soldiers died when their tank ran over a mine in south Lebanon.

The most recent attempted infiltration was April 13, when soldiers shot and killed three Arab guerrillas on a hostage-taking mission.

In the occupied Gaza Strip, meanwhile, U.N. officials and news reports said Israeli steps to break the Palestinian uprising could temporarily block tens of thousands of Palestinians from reaching jobs in Israel.

Christine Dabagh, a spokeswoman for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency, said the army was preventing people from reaching jobs by taking their identity cards and returning them only after the Arabs underwent lengthy checks at three government offices.

Israeli television said the program was aimed at breaking a tax boycott that has been a tactic of the Palestinian uprising.

In New York, meanwhile, the U.N. Security Council condemned the assassination of the PLO's military commander. The United States did not use its veto, allowing the resolution to pass 14-0.

Khalil Wazir, the No. 2 man in the Palestine Liberation Organization, was gunned down April 16 at his home in Tunisia. Israeli sources and Tunisian officials have said Wazir was slain by Israeli commandos. The Israeli government has declined comment.

Israel withdraws credentials of U.S. journalists

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel today temporarily withdrew the press credentials of two foreign correspondents because they reported details of the assassination of a PLO leader without submitting the reports to military censors, the reporters said.

Glenn Frankel of the Washington Post and Martin Fletcher of NBC News were required to hand over their credentials today to the Government Press Office.

Fletcher, quoting Israeli sources, reported that Israel was responsible for the April 16 killing of Khalil Wazir, better known as Abu Jihad.

Frankel later reported details on the operation. He also quoted Israeli sources.

Israeli sources have confirmed that Israel carried out the assassination. The government has declined comment.

The correspondents said they were told by press office head Yoram Ettinger that their credentials, which journalists need to cover government officials, were revoked pending an investigation.

Israeli law requires journalists to submit reports relating to security matters to military censors. The government has given a broad definition to security matters and has left submitting the reports to the correspondents' discretion.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir expressed anger Monday over the correspondents' reports.

"They (the journalists) should be punished," he was quoted as saying on Israel radio.

"It's natural that there are conflicts between any government keeping what it considers to be secrets and a free press," Frankel told The Associated Press. "This is one of those conflicts."

Fletcher said that in his view he broke no censorship law "because we just continued to work the way we always work. We waited for them to call us and they didn't so we assumed all was OK. I assumed what I had was a government leak."

"The whole area of Israeli censorship as it involves foreign correspondents is a gray area," he said. "I think this is all a matter of crossed wires."

Fletcher, 40, has worked in Israel for the past five years after stints for NBC in Paris and Africa. He has worked for NBC for 11 years.

World Court condemns U.S. bid to close PLO mission

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The World Court today ruled against the United States' attempt to shut down the Palestine Liberation Organization's mission in New York.

The ruling implicitly condemned the U.S. move to close the PLO mission to the United Nations by supporting the U.N. position that the dispute must be submitted to independent arbitration.

The ruling was the court's second decision against the United States in two years.

In 1986, the U.N.'s judicial arm condemned as a violation of international law the Reagan administration's support for the rebels fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

The World Court, officially known as the International Court of Justice, has no enforcement powers and depends on voluntary adherence to its rulings.

The PLO office dispute emanates from American anti-terrorist legislation signed into law by President Reagan last December. The legislation aims at closing the PLO's 14-year-old observer mission to the United Nations in New York.

The law classifies the PLO as a "terrorist organization," and bars it from operating on U.S. territory. The PLO's information office in Washington, D.C., was closed down prior to the passage of the legislation.

The attempt to shut down the PLO Mission in New York has been condemned by all U.N. member nations except the United States and Israel, as well as by the U.N. administration. The U.S. State Department also opposed the law.

Briefs on the case have been filed by the United Nations and the U.S. government, as well as by Syria and East Germany. Although their contents are confidential, the East German and Syrian briefs are widely considered to support the PLO position.

Because only sovereign states and U.N. bodies are entitled to bring cases before the court, the PLO was unable to plead its case before the 15-judge panel.

At the request of the U.N. General Assembly, Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar filed the court case March 9.

The so-called Headquarters Agreement, a 1947 pact between the Truman Administration and the U.N., specifies that disputes are subject to arbitration.

Arafat, Assad talks go long way toward resolving feud

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — PLO chief Yasser Arafat concluded a three-day reconciliation visit to Syria today and said his talks with President Hafez Assad to end a five-year feud were constructive.

Arafat's 3½-hour meeting with Assad Monday night was aimed at reviving a hard-line alliance against Israel and U.S. Middle East peace efforts, and at ending the rift that has hampered efforts to forge Arab unity.

Sources said the Palestine Liberation Organization chairman left by plane for Libya after meeting for one hour today with Syrian Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam, one of Assad's closest advisers.

As he rode in his limousine to the airport, Arafat shouted to reporters pressing him for comment on the talks with Assad: "They were useful and will have positive results on the Palestinian and Arab levels."

Arafat was accompanied on the flight by Salah Khalaf, the No. 2 man in Fatah, the PLO's main guerrilla faction and Arafat's main power base.

An aide said Arafat "will be back within a month."

Also today, Egypt welcomed the Arafat-Assad meeting, saying it supports Palestinian-Syrian coordination to advance the rights of the Palestinian people. The announcement was in a statement to reporters read by Taha Farnawany, head of the Egyptian Foreign Ministry's Palestine department.

All Arab countries except Syria, Libya, Algeria and Lebanon resumed relations with Cairo last year

Go for glow in spring makeup

By LISA LEBOWITZ
Copley News Service

Dashes of color, subtle or bright, the scent of spring flowers ... beauty now captures the spirit of the season, bringing polish and shine to your overall look. Go for the glow!

Whether you're getting ready to bare all or simply wake winter-tired skin, the sure strategy for smoothness lies in exfoliation. The Buf-Puf Bodymate sponge by 3M helps slough away dry surface cells that have a dull appearance and are rough to the touch.

It has two cleansing surfaces, a white side for effective all-over use, and a blue side that provides extra aid for trouble zones, such as elbows, knees and feet. Exfoliation actually helps bring smooth, young cells to the surface and lets you deep-clean. For glowing results, follow up with a gentle moisturizer.

Caking, flaking, clumping ... mascara that sits too long in the tube goes stale and becomes hard to manage. The answer: Coty's Thick 'N Healthy Disposable Mascaras, in vivid spring colors.

The miniature mascaras come paired in interlocking color combos like black/plum, brown/plum and sapphire/emerald. Use one for a few weeks, then start fresh with another. The creamy formula contains Provitamin Panthenol to strengthen and condition lashes.

FOR GORGEOUS eyes in a jiffy, Clinique's Quick Eyes combines a shadow and pencil in one slim wand. The shadow end has a new twist: The shadow is stored in the cap and released onto the applicator when you twist for contouring, accenting and defining. Choose from six shades, all allergy-tested and fragrance free.

Also from Clinique, Touch Liner liquid eyeliners and Touch Bases for eyes. The latter can be used as shadows, highlighters or priming bases. They dry instantly and won't crease or fade for hours. Look for three beautiful new shades: buff lighting, violet lighting and earth lighting.

For upscale eye color at a very down-home price, Maybelline introduces six new Colour Wand eye shadows. These powder shadows look like a slender gold pen, but remove the cap and find velvety eye color and an applicator all in one.

The new colors, called Cameo Classics, come in blue velvet, pink cameo, lilac lace, amber, chinaberry and Wedgewood blue. All are supremely feminine, delicate matte shades, priced at $4.25. And the slender 4-inch wand easily fits in your pocket or purse.

Also from Maybelline, Moisture Whip lipsticks in Primavera Colors. Inspired by the springtime colors of Italy, there are Venetian Red, Portofino Pink, Capri Coral and other elegant shades.

The moisturizing formula contains vitamin E and aloe to nourish lips, and Moisture Whip lipsticks provide long-lasting color that stays true for hours while the other ingredients work to combat dryness and chapping.

Nails bloom with color with rich new hues from the Barielle Color Strength collection. Fuschia Silk and Champion Coral are two great choices now for color that lasts. Barielle nail enamels are formaldehyde-free, so they're gentle on nails. They contain liquid silk, which helps polish glide on flawlessly, and the strengthening formula protects against chipping, splitting and breaking.

Color Strength also contains collagen, vitamins and proteins that nourish nails.

EACH SEASON, as new fashions fill the runways, makeup appears that blends and complements. For spring, clothing creations overflow with flowers and flounces, delicate prints and feminine flourishes. It's no surprise that makeup goes pastel and pretty, with delicate perfumes not far behind.

Azzaro 9 perfume is a blend of nine precious flowers, accented with wood and spices. Created by Paris couturier Loris Azzaro, it's bottled in a faceted crystal-like container, and the outer packaging continues the feminine theme with delicate champagne and bronze impressionistic petals.

Azzaro 9 also is available in parfum, eau de toilette, moisturizing body lotion, bath and shower gel, dusting powder and soap.

Joyous and ethereal describe the Borghese spring line titled Amoroso, a word that means "lover" in Italian. The shades have built-in luminosity and are very pastel. Touches of iridescence catch light in playful new ways.

Look for Brow Gel Brilliante to groom and color eyebrows, alone or over pencil. Eye shadows are delicate and silky with new green, pink and peach shades.

For the adventurous, there also are emerald and rose mascaras. Pink and peach lip shades have the extra flash or iridescence, and at Borghese, nails go pale with lacquers that have pearl or seashell gleam in tones of lilac and peach.

Remember tie-dye? The '60s favorite is back with a newly refined palette.

Rit Dye offers subtle hues like evening blue, khaki green and peach to give tie-dye clothing new cachet. Use the colors on lycra, linen or washable silks for a colorful versatility that was unheard of 20 years ago.

Denim and cotton are still good choices. Tie-dye skinny leggings, a cropped top or an ever-popular denim jacket.

There also is the over-dye option that allows you to bring out colorful accents on your denims by turning only the white threads fuschia, cardinal red and kelly green.

Send a postcard for Rit Dye's free booklets, "The Exciting World of Tie-Dye Fashions," "Fashion It Rit" and "Colorful Decorating Ideas From Rit," to: Rit Dye Consumer Service, Department FIR-1, P.O. Box 21070, Indianapolis, Ind., 46221.

FDA orders softer sell in beauty product ads

By DEBORAH BLUMENTHAL
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Time has run out for the cosmetics industry. Fed up with a profusion of therapeutic sounding claims in labeling and promotion, the Food and Drug Administration has put cosmetics companies on notice, as of Saturday, to watch their language.

At issue is a basic principle of the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act: that any product purporting to affect the structure or function of the body must obtain government approval as a drug.

Banished for now are claims about repairing cell damage, promoting cell renewal and other biological jargon. This strips cosmetics companies of a powerful selling tool. Consumers who respond to high-tech pitches may find something lacking in products that promise merely to soften or smooth. The products, however, are likely to be unchanged, at least initially.

Failure to comply with the new directive on wording could result in the forced removal of product lines from the marketplace.

Many cosmetics companies are preparing marketing strategies behind closed doors. Estee Lauder and Avon said only that they were complying with the FDA. Revlon; Elizabeth Arden and Almay declined to comment. Calls to Chanel and Christian Dior were not returned. Spokesmen for Clarins U.S.A. and Sanofi, the parent company of La Prairie, said they were relabeling products.

"It's not that you can't say anything," said Dr. Arnold Urdang, vice president of scientific affairs for Sanofi. "It's just that what was being said was being objected to."

Carol Schuler, vice president of advertising and creative services for Clarins U.S.A., said: "There will be more copy talking about the appearance of beautiful skin, not how products help to promote it. We are not going to be able to explain things in quite as much detail."

Only a small segment of the $1.5 billion skin care market is affected: anti-aging products. These cosmetics account for less than $300 million in sales, according to Jack L. Salzman, a cosmetics industry analyst with Goldman Sachs in New York. What is distinctive about many products in this limited market is their high cost. An ounce of Dior's Capture, for example, costs $65.

But what captured the regulators' attention was not price but "outrageous" claims, according to Daniel L. Michaels, director of the office of compliance in the FDA's center for drugs and biologics.

Many dermatologists say they find the claims outrageous, too, on the ground that they are unsupportable. But the government's crackdown does not address product performance. Regardless of what the products do, they may not be presented as affecting skin structure and function unless they have been approved as drugs; getting approval is a rigorous process that the cosmetics companies are not expected to pursue. Cosmetics, defined as products that cleanse or superficially beautify, need no approval.

Critics say the changes are long overdue. In 1983, Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes Jr., then the FDA commissioner, said, "We are concerned about claims that are therapeutic in nature."

"I believe the time has come to make cosmetic labeling less drug-oriented, more truthful and at the same time more informative," he said.

But the agency was unsuccessful in getting the industry to police itself.

"The claims started to become more egregious, more drug sounding, and everybody started doing it because that's what you had to do to compete," said Harris O. Cutler, vice president, division counsel, for the personal care products division at Richardson-Vicks, the maker of Olay skin care products. What may have helped push the government to act, Cutler said, were two letters to the agency from lawyers representing cosmetics companies.

The letters complained about claims for Avon's Bioadvance Beauty Recovery System and the Glycel GSL Cellular product line marketed by Alfin Fragrances and promoted by Dr. Christiaan Barnard. The latter is now off the market, although a Swiss company, Advanced Beauty Care, has purchased the rights to the line.

So far, regulators say they are pleased by the preliminary reports of changes that some companies have said they are making.

Makeup: Bad habits ruin look

Associated Press

Makeup isn't magic and you have to work at it to put your best face forward.

Bad makeup habits can ruin good looks, according to an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, so don't get into a routine that fails to take advantage of your assets. Instead practice some of these tips for top makeup results.

Some women get into cosmetic trouble because they are pressed for time in the morning. If that is your problem, don't put all your makeup on at home. Just do the basics — powder, blush, lip gloss — and add the rest at the office.

Other women fall into such a rut they boast they could put their makeup on in the dark. Take time on a weekend to experiment with new colors, products and techniques.

Part of the art of makeup is applying it properly. Lips that are obviously lined and clumpy mascara attract the wrong kind of attention, so be careful to blend makeup carefully.

The same goes for lipstick. Applying lipstick without a mirror is taboo because without seeing what you are doing it is impossible to do it perfectly.

The tools of the makeup trade are important and must be kept in good condition and used properly.

Hair fashions are natural, feminine, sporting variety

Associated Press

The look in women's hair fashions this spring is natural and decidedly female, according to hairstylists.

"Hair will have a soft natural look; it won't be quite as full as in previous seasons," says Gordon Nelson, director of style training for Regis Hairstylist salons.

"We will also see a variety of exciting new styles. There won't be just one specific look that is this year's hot trend," he adds.

"The best new looks are close and shapely. Tops will be left long for lots of permed-in texture and movement. New perm wrap methods are essential to create unusual finishes with texturized volume," says Nelson.

Xenon, international creative director for the Helene Curtis professional division, says, "Women are finally learning that looking professional doesn't mean the same as looking masculine.

"The more subdued feminine fashion looks shown for spring allow hair to make an important, dramatic statement of its own," says Xenon, in introducing a collection of perm styles for this spring.

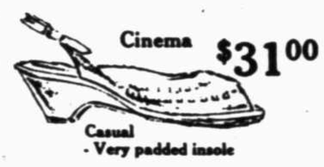

"Hairstyles today are highly sculpted, yet must remain soft and touchable. The only way to achieve this sculpted look without weighing hair down with sticky, brittle sprays and gels is through perming.

"Hair length is not really an issue this spring. The key to this season's most up-to-date looks is volume and softness. Curls are softer and looser; waves have more definition; all hairstyles move and shine.

"Most of my styles involve lifting the hair up and away from the face, emphasizing the individual woman's facial features. After all," he says, "what could be sexier or more feminine than a woman's face?"

Therapy helpful to acrophobics

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the eigth of a nine part series.

FEARS and PHOBIAS

By DENISE FORTINO
Associated Press

The thought of balancing on a narrow ledge hundreds of feet off the ground would be extremely scary to most people. But for those with acrophobia — an inordinate fear of heights — just being above the third floor in any building can inspire the very same terror.

Feeling overwhelmed or uneasy in high, unprotected places, such as the edge of a precipice or a sloping roof without any rail, makes perfect sense. Falling is a real possibility. It's when people react with the same intensity in the absence of an actual threat — say, while standing inside a thick, well-guarded window — that they are said to have a phobia.

Psychologists believe that everyone is born with an aversion to heights. In experiments, babies who are put on "visual cliffs," special platforms separated by glass with a steep incline on one side, will invariably crawl away from the "cliff." Glimpsed just once through the sturdy glass barrier, the height makes them very uncomfortable. "This natural or inborn aversion may have had some survival value for our ancestors living in the wild," observes Dr. Richard McNally, associate professor of psychology at the University of Health Sciences, Chicago Medical School. "It's the failure to unlearn this primitive, pre-programmed' fear for whatever reason that may lead to a phobia later on."

ACROPHOBIA IS considered a "simple" phobia because it is aimed at a fairly specific situation. However, the phobia itself can take a variety of forms. Some people feel their skin crawl if they take an elevator to the top floor of any building even a small one. Or they may panic only in glass-walled, outdoor elevators where they feel vulnerable and exposed. Others feel frightened when they look out a closed window or even while standing well inside a room, away from any view, on a very high floor.

"Once I had a job interview on the 32nd floor," one woman recalls. "I had to ask my boyfriend to accompany me since I couldn't manage the elevator ride alone. But even after we had safely 'arrived,' I still felt overwhelmed by the idea that I was in an office so high above the ground. I was very relieved when I didn't get the job!"

A grocer admits that just looking up at tall buildings from the sidewalk makes him nervous because he pictures himself running straight up to the roof and jumping off. Some people feel the very same sensation on lofty, panoramic bridges — that somehow they will smash their car right through the railing and plunge over the side.

"Paying careful attention to the nuances of a person's fear — the specific fantasies and thoughts that run through their mind — can be very important since these may give us clues to his or her underlying anxiety," explains Dr. Barry Lubetkin, Ph.D., clinical director of The Institute for Behavior Therapy in New York City.

FOR EXAMPLE, one woman was always fearful that a strong or sudden gust of wind might blow her off her terrace so she stayed inside her apartment even during windless summer days.

"It turned out that she had a problem with her self-image," Dr. Lubetkin says. "She did not see herself as a very solid, substantive person." Strengthening her self-esteem helped her overcome her phobia more quickly than it might have if this "clue" had been overlooked.

Acrophobia may occasionally develop as a result of an early childhood trauma, such as a fall from a high chair, either remembered vividly or forgotten and "stored" unconsciously. More commonly, a child may have observed how an anxious parent overreacted to heights and "modeled" his own behavior after the adult's — a form of learning by imitation. Often a phobia acquired this way does not emerge until many years later.

"Sometimes a major conflict or crisis, such as a marital breakup, the death of a loved one or a financial setback, can precipitate a dormant, early-learned fear," Dr. Lubetkin explains. He emphasizes that while insight can help speed up the course of therapy, just knowing where a phobia comes from or why it has developed is not enough to overcome the problem since people have already adapted their whole lives around it.

Thus, those who are phobic about heights quickly learn to get around any situation that might cause them to panic. The latter is typically marked by a racing heart, dizziness or vertigo, sweatiness, nausea and other disturbing symptoms, along with vivid, nightmarish thoughts of falling, jumping or other disasters. To head off such dreaded sensations, people resort to an elaborate pattern of avoidance that keeps them out of tall buildings, or away from bridges, mountains or whatever else brings on the same thoughts and feelings.

AS LONG as this strategy works, they can live with their phobia and keep it well-concealed. It's only with some outside change of circumstance, such as a new job on a high floor that they are forced to come out of hiding and try to get help.

According to Dr. McNally, the best way to overcome a deep-seated fear of heights is through behavior therapy that exposes you gradually to the source of your distress. Many programs take people through a series of increasingly challenging situations both in their minds and in real life, which eventually defuses their anxiety.

DEAR ABBY

Children's 'homework' should include values

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column piece on the top 10 problems of 1940 compared to those of today really struck a nerve. When I was in high school, our biggest problems were similar to those in Charles Osteen's letter — talking in the halls, chewing gum, etc. Today's teens have to cope with drug abuse, pregnancy, rape, robbery, etc.

There are seldom simple solutions to pervasive problems, but I have one I'd sure like to see tried. It is for parents to once again teach their children the time-tested values of respect for the law, their teachers, their elders, other people's rights and, most of all, for themselves as the future of this country. It is painfully obvious to me that many of today's youngsters are almost totally lacking in moral and ethical guidance; hence it is not surprising that they are in such deep trouble so often.

Right here in my own neighborhood we are daily faced with school children who run amok, sass their elders, trespass on private property, trash the streets — all with their parents' approval, even encouragement. One father even had the gall to tell me that his kids had a "right" to play in the street in front of my home and if I didn't like it, I could move! Perhaps it's time once again for your "Ten Nays for Good Neighbors." Can do? — R.L.A. (OLD COOT IN OXNARD)

DEAR R.L.A.: Can do. Here they are:

1. Thou shalt love thy neighbor, but not his wife, nor shalt thou covet thy neighbor's house, or his car, or any other thing he owneth.
2. Thou shalt keep thy dog, thy stereo and thy lawn mower quiet while thy neighbor sleepeth.
3. Thou shalt borrow from thy neighbor rarely, and when thou dost, return undamaged and without delay that which thou hast borrowed.
4. Thou shalt not allow thy pets or thy children to run amok, despoiling thy neighbor's lawn, flower beds and fence.
5. Thou shalt keepeth thy lawn green, thy fence painted and thy driveway uncluttered, even as ye shall also keepeth thy vehicles in thy garage where they belong.
6. Thou shalt watcheth always for criminals and fires in thy neighborhood and guardeth thy neighbor's home and property even as thine own.
7. Thou shalt not useth thy home for any unsightly or illegal activity.
8. Thou shalt always stand ready to help thy neighbor in his hour of true need even as he doth for thee.
9. Thou shalt not parketh thy camper, thy RV or thy van in the street where it blocketh thy neighbor's view and createth a safety hazard to all.
10. Thou shalt not hold wild parties or orgies that last until wee hours unless thou dost invite thy neighbor, too.

DEAR ABBY: As the tourist season approaches, may I offer a few travel tips to our American friends who plan to vacation in Canada?

1. All purchases in Canada (this includes hotel, food, souvenirs, etc.) are in Canadian funds! It can be very trying to hear (at least 10 times a day): "Is this in American money?" When in Italy, use lire; in Japan, use yen; in the States, use American; and in Canada, use Canadian.

2. If you cannot get to an exchange house or bank to change money to Canadian funds, most places will take your American money and convert it to Canadian for you upon purchase. Only a bank or some such institution can legally exchange your money without purchase. This goes for exchanging your Canadian money back to American before you go home. Please, do not get mad at the waitress, desk clerk or cashier if they cannot do it for you. You can still convert it back to American when you get back home, right?

3. Do not say, "Give me that in 'real' money. None of that 'funny money' (or Monopoly money), now!" It is true, our money is worth "less" than the American counterpart, but this is to your advantage.

A few final notes: Remember to buckle your seat belt in British Columbia. This is the law!

The speed limit is as follows: country, 50 mph; city, 30 mph.

Declare any weapons in your car or baggage at the border. Retrieve them later. Try to smuggle them in, and, if caught (a lot are), you will lose your weapons permanently and face a very stiff fine.

I know this is a long letter, Abby, but I hope that it will help some Americans to enjoy their trip to Canada a little bit more. Happy holidays, eh? — A.L.K., VICTORIA, B.C.

Poufs, bows fall from grace; 'Quiet chic' takes their place

By CATHERINE CROCKER

NEW YORK (AP) — Where are all the poufs, bows, ruffles and — above all — those sexy, short skirts that were the darlings of Seventh Avenue a few months ago?

In the stores, maybe, but not on the runways.

Fashion has many virtues, but consistency is not one of them. And that was never more apparent than this month when designers unveiled their fall and winter collections.

The short skirt has fallen from grace, and its triumphant successor is the trouser. Not dowdy, boring everyday pants, but creations that stir the hearts of even skirt lovers. Most exciting are the wide, flowing evening trousers, usually black, worn with elegantly beaded and brocaded jackets.

Oscar de la Renta triumphed when he matched a long-sleeved T-shirt striped with horizontal rows of sheer chiffon and velvet with flowing black cashmere pants. And Donna Karan won enthusiastic applause for a little beaded bronze jacket that simply sparkled over wide black trousers.

"Sportswear for evenings" is how Sidney Bachman, vice president and fashion director of Bergdorf Goodman, describes this latest dressy look. "I love the idea," she said.

But trousers are only part of the picture. Fashion has entered "a new, quiet era," says Women's Wear Daily, the prestigious trade magazine for the fashion industry, which has dubbed the fall and winter look "Quiet Chic."

"Everything was extreme and poufy and big and showy and dramatic" for spring and summer, said Elyse Kroll, president of E.N.K. Productions. Her company puts on exclusive trade shows that give up-and-coming designers a chance to show their wares to retailers.

"Now everything is more real, you know?" said Ms. Kroll. "And they almost had to do that. They had to come back from that costumey kind of look."

In terms of hemlines, that means most dresses and skirts barely graze the knee, although plenty of long, slender silhouettes dip to mid-calf. But don't look to skirt lengths — or trousers' width, for that matter — in planning your fall wardrobe.

The key to the new look is rich fabrics and strong shapes that don't need fussy extras.

Ralph Lauren, the master of understated elegant clothes, is right at home designing "Quiet Chic" clothes. His lean and straight gray cashmere pants were worn with a matching turtleneck and a thigh-length camel hair swing coat.

Once again, he proves the theory that less is more — more refined, more classic, more flattering. But simplicity also means modern and fun — and nobody does that better than Calvin Klein.

Klein used double-faced wool cloth that takes to well-defined shapes. And the silhouettes were decidedly architectural — long thin columns for evening gowns and short chemises, distant cousins to rectangles, for daytime wear.

The thoroughly modern Klein stamp came in high-voltage colors: chrome yellow, fuchsia, shocking purple and acid green matched with basic black.

De la Renta and Carolina Herrera also played with bright-and-black color combo. And Lauren and Ms. Karan, though they didn't go with neon shades, were successful using brilliant reds, bronzes and golds.

"I think fall is going to be one of the most versatile times we've had," said Ms. Kroll. "And I think in our economic climate that's a kind, generous thing for the designers to do."

AT WIT'S END

Americans seem to live from meal to meal

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I ran out in the driveway the other night waving a bag of cold spareribs and shouting to one of my grown kids, "Put this in a 350 degree oven for 20 minutes and eat a green salad with it."

He threw it in his glove compartment and sped away.

God forgive me, I have turned into my own mother. She fed me at birth and never stopped. She lived in fear that I would have 15 minutes of spare time and nothing to eat. I'm the same way. I fed my children when they got up in the morning, when they came home, when they watched television, and when they were bored and had nothing to do. I force-fed them when they were sick, fed them to keep them quiet in the car and fed them when I was hungry. I'm still feeding them. I can't let them leave the house when they visit without putting a leftover in their hands.

Why do we do this? Because the entire country is consumed with eating, that's why. I read a comment once on a group of Japanese who were visiting our country and they observed Americans were friendly, but fat. They said we had food on every street corner.

It's true. Not only is food on every street corner, but eating is all we do all day long. We eat in the car on the way to work. At the office the first thing we do is get another cup of coffee and a doughnut. We eat at sports events and at the movies. The first thing we do when we board an airplane is put our tray tables in position.

Feed a cold! Starve a fever! I never starved anything. Eating constantly is one of those lifelong habits that is hard to break. I blame it all on my grandmother who never let people leave her house without sending home a leftover with them. When she baked bread, you'd have thought she was feeding the 32nd Airborne Division.

My mother carried on the tradition. I went home with old bones for soup, leftover chicken for chicken salad, half a pie, cookies for lunches, and mystery packages that "your father wouldn't eat."

As I told my husband, "All this eating has to stop. Food is a false god. You are looking at a woman born again. I'm going on a diet and stop thinking about food."

"What are you doing?" he asked.

"Planning my diet menus for the next week."

MAKEUP

Match the tool to the job — a teeny brush is not for blush, for instance. And don't muddy colors by using the same applicator for everything.

Keep your tools clean. Dirt that accumulates on unwashed brushes, power puffs and sponges ends up on your face.

Wash tools often in warm, soapy water, rinse and air-dry, reshaping brush bristles with your fingers.

Throw out shedding or too-stiff brushes, sponges that won't come clean and old mascara.

How you apply and take off your makeup can be as important as what colors you choose.

Don't attack your skin when putting on or taking off makeup. Tugging, rubbing and pushing stretches your skin and creates wrinkles.

The ultrathin tissue around the eyes is especially delicate.

Let makeup remover soak in for a minute before removing, and makeup will come off more easily.

Refine your makeup look and be careful not to overdo it.

If you have trouble toning down your eye makeup, try using a bigger brush for eye shadow to achieve a subtler look. Soften pencil eyeliner by smuding with a cotton swab.

If your look is out-of-date with heavy eyeliner, garish cheek color or overplucked eyebrows, get advice and fresh inspiration from friends and newspaper and magazine articles.

To keep up with current cosmetic fashions, don't automatically reach for the same old eye shadow.

Use blush on eyelids instead — it gives a pretty, unexpected touch of color.

To make sure you are getting the look you want, use a large mirror so you can see your entire face when applying makeup. That way you can check for balance and final effect.

If there's a major change in your hair color or if you acquire a tan, don't forget to revise your makeup palette accordingly.

Work for repeal of windfall tax

After years of lobbying against the Windfall Profits Tax, the oil industry now faces the opportunity to get the tax repealed but to do so would mean one of those Washington tradeoffs: You give up something to get something.

The rider to repeal the Windfall Profits Tax is in the omnibus trade bill the Senate is expected to act on early this week. But President Reagan has said he will veto the bill if it arrives on his desk with a provision that would require all but the smallest employers to give a 60-day notice of plant closings and large-scale layoffs. That is a bitter pill to swallow to get the Windfall Profits Tax removed, but in this instance we believe it is justified.

Some of those familiar with the domestic oil industry speculate that if this opportunity to remove the windfall tax is lost, it could be years before another opportunity like it arises. That could be disastrous for the domestic industry, particularly when the price of oil begins rising again.

Of course getting the trade bill approved does not ensure that Reagan will sign it, since he has already voiced strong opposition to the 60-day notice of plant closings, but the president surely recognizes the importance to the oil industry and the nation's energy security of getting the Windfall Profits Tax removed.

Those in the Permian Basin and others supportive of the oil industry should telephone their U.S. Representatives, Senators and the White House to voice support for the trade bill, preferably with the 60-day plant closing notification requirement removed. But even if that requirement is necessary, removing the Windfall Profits Tax is even more important to this region, the oil industry and the security of the nation.

The oil industry is in hard times currently and with the price of oil low, the tax is not even currently being collected. But at some point in time the price of oil will start rising again and when it does, the Windfall Profits Tax would be like a lead weight around the necks of oil producers, holding back their incentive to drill.

We have the chance to get it removed now, possibly with the "cost" of accepting something we can't support otherwise. Removing the Windfall Profits Tax is vital to the future of this region and the entire nation. Let's do it while we still have the opportunity.

JACK ANDERSON

Bank official puts bounty on leakers

WASHINGTON — A senior official at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has a proposal that would tickle George Orwell — a $20,000 bounty on the head of any bank-board staffer who leaks information to the press.

Jack Anderson

The have-gun-will-travel approach is the brainchild of James E. Boland Jr., the bank board's No. 2 man who serves as chief deputy to agency Chairman M. Danny Wall.

Boland raised the suggestion during an executive meeting where only about seven top bank-board officials were present. His idea was to offer $20,000 to agency personnel who unmask co-workers guilty of slipping stories to the press.

Several bank-board officials greeted Boland's proposal with horror. One said the idea would hurt employee morale and be counterproductive.

News of the bounty idea was leaked to us. Boland declined to return our phone calls.

In an interview with our associate Michael Binstein, Chairman Wall said the plan was "DOA" or dead on arrival. He would not elaborate on his own feelings about the reward idea, but sources say that Wall has been deeply disturbed over leaks.

Since assuming the chairmanship last July, Wall has tried to "accentuate the positive" about the beleaguered thrift industry that the bank board regulates. But Wall has found it next to impossible to eliminate the negative when the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which insures the deposits, is facing losses expected to exceed $50 billion.

Since the thrift industry was deregulated in 1982, savings and loans have become like federally insured casinos. Loans for wild land speculation, risky stock market deals and even Arabian horse sperm banks have often been substituted for the traditional mainstay of thrift institutions — home mortgages.

The result is that the FSLIC is flat broke and will have to limp from one bailout to the next until the inevitable occurs — a massive taxpayer bailout.

While others have been screaming fire, Wall has failed to smell the smoke. Last August, Congress passed a bill adding $10.8 billion to the depositor insurance fund, through the sale of bonds. At the time, Wall released a statement saying Congress had given him what he needed to do the job.

He must have been looking through rose-colored glasses. The fact is, Wall already had seen a secret report that showed the bank board needed nearly $16 billion to bail out only the 183 most hopelessly doomed thrifts. And one out of every five of the nation's 3,200 thrifts is insolvent.

Our associate Binstein obtained a copy of the same secret report. That was one of the leaks that drove Boland to suggest a $20,000 bounty on leakers.

The bank board is understandably eager to eliminate the negative. Among the facts that board bureaucrats are trying to sweep under the rug is this one: A bailout of the 40 most troubled savings and loans in Texas would cost every man, woman and child in that state $424 each and would wipe out the existing cash reserves of the FSLIC twice over. On the average, each of the worst Texas thrifts would cost the FSLIC $173 million to bail out, according to the secret report.

DOMESTIC FOREIGN CARS — A growing number of "foreign" cars on the roads are actually being built in America. In the past 10 years, according to the General Accounting Office, foreign automakers have invested about $5 billion in plants in the United States to assemble automobiles and light trucks. The foreign brands with U.S. plants include Honda, Nissan, Toyota, Mazda and Subaru.

On the surface, that looks like a plus for people who want to buy American and still get the features of a foreign car. But the United Auto Workers union is afraid the trend of foreign investors will cost American autoworkers jobs in the long run. The foreign makers bring many of their own workers. They rely more heavily on foreign-made parts. And their methods are more efficient, meaning it takes fewer people and less time to assemble a car. Autoworkers fear that American-made foreign cars will only make foreign cars more popular and will push the Japanese closer toward total market domination.

THE LAST STRAW — The United States tolerated the antics of Panama's Gen. Manuel Noriega for years. But White House sources say Noreiga went too far when he started making secret overtures to Cuba. U.S. officials had been watching Noriega and were aware that he was deep into drug smuggling and had allowed Panamanian banks to launder drug profits. Still, the State Department didn't want to file criminal charges against a foreign head of state. In fact, if the United States brought charges against every Latin American general and minister who was part of the drug chain, there would be diplomatic chaos. But when the United States intercepted a message that revealed Noriega was cozying up to Fidel Castro, President Reagan decided it was time to get rid of the general.

MINI-EDITORIAL — What nice friends Ron and Nancy have. A group of California cronies pitched in $2.5 million and bought the first couple a retirement home in Bel Air. It's not a gift, exactly. The Reagans will pay rent, but they aren't saying how much. The Office of Government Ethics says the arrangement probably is legal, even if it was a gift, because it is just between friends. Presidents are allowed to accept presents from friends — a necktie, a bottle of cologne, a mansion. Besides, the house comes from anonymous friends. Ron and Nancy can sleep well knowing that they are loved, even if they don't know by whom. With friends like that, who needs special-interest groups?

Ghouls of Hanoi

An American team returned from Hanoi recently with 27 aluminum coffins containing remains believed to be those of Americans killed in the undeclared Vietnam War. This was the largest exchange to date, but there is little comfort for the families of the Missing In Action (MIA) in such paltry numbers or in the ghoulish policies of the Vietnam government that returned them.

The Pentagon tells us that 2,404 Americans, including 42 civilians, are missing and unaccounted for from that war, including 1,767 in Vietnam, 549 in Laos, 82 in Cambodia and six lost at sea off the coast of the Peoples Republic of China. Since 1974, the Vietnamese have returned the remains of 216, of which 152 have been identified.

Appeals for the return of all remains and a full accounting have pursued every possible avenue, with pitiful results. The remains are used as bargaining chips, at the convenience of the Hanoi government.

Last year, it became apparent that there was a stalemate. The U. S. government sent Gen. John Vessey, retired chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, with a team to Hanoi, where yet another negotiation took place.

As a result, social agencies in the United States were approached and persuaded to offer rehabilitation aid and services for Vietnamese persons disabled during the war. The Pentagon emphasizes that the aid was volunteered by non-government organizations. Once this assistance was established, Vietnam paid the fee by filling 27 coffins.

There is a growing impatience among the families of the MIA's over this kind of macabre bargaining. Dale Wofford, legislative liaison for the Michigan Prisoner of War Committee, believes that evidence that some prisoners survive has been suppressed. He seeks passage of a law that would force full disclosure of all the facts by both the State and Defense departments.

The two government departments argue that disclosure would compromise intelligence gathering, and probably would do the families more harm than good. This is a difficult message to deliver to those who still don't know the fate of their kin and who feel so neglected by their government.

It is strange, in present times, that a nation capable of defining so clearly the immorality of a Panamanian drug dealer like Gen. Manuel Noriega, speaks so gently and carefully of the ghouls of Hanoi.

Dukakis leaves Demo faithful still searching

PHILADELPHIA — Even after Gov. Michael Dukakis became the certain nominee with his clear victory in New York, Pennsylvania Democratic leaders were receiving telephone calls from the party faithful asking plaintively whether Mario Cuomo might yet enter the picture.

That is a peculiarly unrealistic note in this state. Even if he had not campaigned at all here, Dukakis was guaranteed a near sweep of delegates and a sure popular-vote victory in the two-man Pennsylvania primary today against the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Yet, there persists a sense of puzzled Democrats waiting for some vague event. Before voters here could even focus on the Democratic presidential race, it has ended with Mike Dukakis as the unexpected nominee.

The early favorite among Democratic politicians in this fourth-largest state was Delaware Sen. Joseph Biden, a native Pennsylvanian. After Biden fell, they looked toward two other next-door non-candidates: Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey — and Cuomo. When the governor of New York spoke in Philadelphia last fall, backers began organizing for him.

Not until three weeks ago were Dukakis' slender regiments here reinforced by his justly praised national organization. But after New York results made Dukakis the sole alternative to Jackson, Pennsylvania Democrats found themselves forced to choose based on events in other states.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Dukakis' most influential backer here is Philadelphia businessman Bill Batoff, a potent Democratic backstager. A supporter of Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale, Batoff steadfastly backed Gary Hart this time and did not sign up with Dukakis until Hart's second withdrawal. While throwing himself into fundraising for Dukakis, he still seems less than enthusiastic and a bit unsure about his new candidate.

Party stalwarts show few signs of excitement in accepting their new leader. "I think it is more a matter of feeling he has done the things necessary to get the nomination, and respecting him for it," Noris Weiss, the party's state executive director, told us.

Even after his New York triumph, Pennsylvania politicians have not rushed to Dukakis. Former State Democratic Chairman Ed Mezvinsky, in a close primary race for state attorney general, is officially neutral. In truth, however, his campaign is aligned with Jackson (with Mezvinsky aides wearing Jesse buttons).

That is because Mezvinsky depends on a big vote in Philadelphia, where he is backed by Jackson's top black supporters: Mayor Wilson Goode and Rep. William Gray. Jackson will carry the city as he did in 1984 while Dukakis sweeps the rest of the state. This certainty has robbed the Pennsylvania campaign of suspense and passion.

When Dukakis entered Pennsylvania two full days after his New York triumph, he sounded much like he did a year ago in Iowa. Against heavy evidence and all reason, he still looks to improved tax collection as an effective way to cut the budget deficit.

Obviously, he is not about to depart from his formula that he is the only alternative to Jackson — but he treats Jackson with utmost tenderness. He and Jackson, he says, are "a couple of candidates who respect each other, who believe in campaigning positively."

There is no Ed Koch here ripping away at Jackson, and not even a mildly critical Al Gore. But beneath the bland surface, Democrats such as Batoff consider Jackson unacceptable on the ticket. Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia is their overwhelming choice for vice president, even among politicians like Mezvinsky who are friendly toward Jackson.

Democrats here view Nunn as essential to give Dukakis conservative coloration in a state they privately predict will be won in November by George Bush. But what about national polls showing Dukakis ahead? "I'm afraid nobody here can quite believe that," a Philadelphia Democratic leader told us. Such is reaction to the unexpected nominee on the eve of sweeping Pennsylvania.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, April 26, the 117th day of 1988. There are 249 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 26, 1986, the worst nuclear accident in history occurred at the Chernobyl plant in the Soviet Union. An experiment involving the number-four reactor went awry, causing an explosion and fire that sent radioactivity into the atmosphere. At least 31 Soviets died as a direct result of the accident.

On this date:

In 1607, an expedition of English colonists, including Capt. John Smith, went ashore at Cape Henry, Va., to establish the first permanent English settlement in the New World.

In 1785, the American naturalist and artist John James Audubon was born in Haiti.

In 1865, John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Abraham Lincoln, was surrounded by federal troops near Bowling Green, Va., and killed.

In 1900, seismologist Charles Richter, who devised the earthquake-measuring scale that bears his name, was born in Hamilton, Ohio.

In 1937, planes from Nazi Germany raided the Basque town of Guernica during the Spanish Civil War.

In 1954, a nationwide test of the Salk anti-polio vaccine began.

In 1964, the African nations of Tanganyika and Zanzibar merged to form Tanzania.

In 1968, the United States exploded beneath the Nevada desert a one-megaton nuclear device called "Boxcar."

In 1980, Iran announced the American hostages had been taken from the U.S. embassy and would be scattered among different cities and towns to thwart any future attempts to rescue them.

Ten years ago: Former Budget Director Bert Lance and two Georgia banks, accused by the federal government of covering up questionable loans and overdrafts for Lance and his relatives, agreed to a consent order without admitting or denying the allegations.

Five years ago: A national commission released a scathing report on the state of American education, calling for sweeping measures to combat what it called "a rising tide of mediocrity" in schools. On Wall Street, the Dow Jones Industrial Average closed above 1,200 points for the first time.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. not acting with honor in Afghanistan

I accuse the United States government of selling out the Afghans fighting against communism and of lying to the American people to cover up the sellout.

Charley Reese

George Shultz, secretary of state, can easily refute my accusation. All he has to do is make public the letter he received from Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. If Shevardnadze agrees, as Shultz claims he does, that the U.S. can continue to aid rebels as long as Moscow supplies the Kabul government, I will gladly apologize.

Don't hold your breath, however. If that's what the Shevardnadze letter actually says, then Shultz would have released it. It is absurd for the U.S. government to keep secret from the American people the contents of a letter on which hinges the fate of an agreement.

You see, the accords signed in Geneva make no mention of U.S. aid to the Afghan rebels. On the contrary, they forbid Pakistan, which is the signatory of the main accord, from interfering in the internal affairs of Afghanistan now ruled by the Soviet puppet communist government.

It is through Pakistan which U.S. aid to the rebels flows. In the process of the negotiations, Pakistan asked for an interim government until all the Afghans could choose one themselves. The Soviets said no. The U.S. asked the Soviets not to supply military aid to the Kabul government. The Soviets publicly said no.

Now, according to Shultz, he has sent a letter to Moscow saying the U.S. will aid the rebels if Moscow supplies Kabul. Shevardnadze replied to that letter. Keeping the reply secret, Shultz says the U.S. and the Soviets have a tacit agreement that the U.S. will aid rebels if the Soviets aid Kabul.

I say that's a lie. I say the Soviets have not agreed, tacitly or otherwise, and that Shevardnadze made that clear in his letter which is why Shultz won't release it. I say the motive for the sellout was to insure some success at the Moscow summit.

Just look at the untenable position U.S. diplomacy has put Pakistan into. Under U.S. diplomatic pressure and Soviet terrorist pressure (bombings and assassinations), Pakistan has formally agreed not to interfere in the internal affairs of Afghanistan.

Now what do you think the Soviets are going to do if the U.S. really does try to send arms to the rebels through Pakistan? Do you think the Soviets will say to the world, "Oh, George and Eduard have a gentleman's agreement that it's okay if Pakistan violates the accords it just signed?"

Nope. The Soviets will land on Pakistan with both feet, charging it with cynically violating a solemn international agreement and there's the proof in black and white: Nothing Pakistan, Afghanistan, the U.S. and the Soviet Union signed in Geneva says one stinking word about U.S. aid to Afghan rebels.

I don't think President Reagan is president anymore. I think he takes naps, attends social functions, wanders around in a daze and occasionally reads something someone puts in front of him. Age has taken its toll on this remarkable man.

I think Shultz is in effect the acting president and has his own men running Defense and the National Security Council. The so-called Reagan Doctrine of supporting efforts to overthrow communist governments is being dismantled by sleight of hand. The defense buildup is being derailed. The top item on President Shultz's agenda is reaching an accommodation with the Soviet Union and opening up trade and business opportunities.

The Soviets, rather than deciding not to conquer Afghanistan, are shifting their war tactics and the U.S. is providing them with diplomatic cover so they may continue their war by other means without losing face.

I'm glad I don't know any Afghan fighters personally. As an American, I would be ashamed to look them in the eye. In this matter, we are not acting with honor.

Pennsylvania primary should lock in Bush nomination

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush has had a virtual lock on the Republican presidential nomination since late March, but today's Pennsylvania primary should make it a mathematical certainty.

The contest, in which Bush only faces token opposition from former television evangelist Pat Robertson, should raise his delegate total to more than the 1,139 needed for nomination at the GOP convention in August in New Orleans.

Savoring the situation on the eve of that vote, Bush told an airport rally in Scranton, Pa., on Monday: "We got a break in this primary process...I'm glad it's gone my way."

The vice president noted that due to his overwhelming lead in the race for the GOP nomination, the campaign spotlight has been mostly on the Democratic contenders. But he said he wasn't complaining.

"The news is being dominated by the Jackson-Dukakis fight. That's the way it should be,' said Bush. "I wouldn't trade places."

Bush predicted that the general election "is going to be hard fought; it's going to be close."

The vice president was campaigning today in Ohio and Indiana, both of which hold primaries a week from today. Bush was attending a rally in Lima, Ohio, addressing the Ohio Broadcasters Association in Cincinnati and holding an airport rally in Evansville, Ind.

Bush tells audiences he'll still campaign through to the end of the primary season and "can't wait" to debate the Democratic nominee, who he has predicted will be Michael Dukakis.

Even so, Bush remains vague on the terms for such events.

"I'm not going to let some outside group, even within my own party, set the agenda," he told reporters in Pittsburgh.

"I'll appoint somebody who knows about setting up debates" and who could work with Democrats in coming up with a process agreeable to both parties, he said.

On another subject, Bush said in Pittsburgh that he fully backs President Reagan's vow to veto trade legislation nearing a final congressional vote.

However, Bush said he hoped that some other way could be found to notify workers of impending plant closings.

The bill — which Dukakis has said he would sign if he were president — contains a provision requiring 60 days advance when plants are to be shut down.

"Maybe there's a compassionate way to give notice to a worker and his family. But it has nothing to do with the trade bill," Bush said. "I know it's an emotional issue but (the bill) interferes with our ability to compete."

Bush did acknowledge that there were still areas of Pennsylvania and elsewhere that had not shared fully in the economic recovery that is now in its sixth year. But he criticized Democrats, saying they "talk about despair and agony."

Bush has had a huge lead for the GOP nomination since his remarkable 17-state sweep in the March 8 Super Tuesday contests, a lead he solidified with the withdrawal from the race on March 29 of Sen. Bob Dole, his only remaining major rival.

Reagan administration declares U.S. doesn't want 'shooting war'

WASHINGTON (AP) — New declarations that the United States doesn't want a "serious shooting war" with Iran come amid signs that the Reagan administration is backing away from earlier proposals to broaden the U.S. role in the Persian Gulf.

The new suggestions by top administration officials come after a weeklong review of Persian Gulf policy triggered by the April 18 clash between the Navy and Iran, in which six Iranian ships were damaged or sunk.

Last week, U.S. officials had said the policy was under review, specifically the rules of engagement which permitted the Navy only to protect itself and 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers.

But on Monday, administration officials suggested that there may be no change in that policy. Secretary of State George Shultz stressed that no final decision had been made, but said "we will not get tied up in any serious shooting war with the Iranians."

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater reflected the new line, telling reporters that "everybody acknowledges that we need to move back to some more limited set of rules."

For the past 10 months, Navy ships have been escorting the 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers through the gulf, which is one of the venues for the long Iran-Iraq war. Kuwait is an ally of Iraq.

The United States has previously attacked Iranian forces and facilities in retaliation for Iranian mine-laying activities. Last week's clash was in revenge for an April 14 incident in which a Navy frigate hit a mine the United States claimed was laid by Iran.

Administration officials had suggested last week that the rules might be changed to let the Navy aid other merchant ships should those vessels come under attack.

"Right now the rules of engagement are essentially the same as they were last week, reflecting the emergency nature of the situation," Fitzwater said Monday. "But the question is, where do we move back to?...I can't discuss specifics."

Shultz, appearing on NBC's "Today" program from Belgium where he was meeting with other NATO officials, said "as far as our rules of engagement are concerned, what the right ones are for this stage of the game in the gulf is being considered in Washington, and there is a process of consultation going on, and I think it's premature to describe them in any particular way."

On April 18, Fitzwater said, Navy vessels were given wider latitude. "You'll recall at that point that our ships were engaging hostile forces in any number of areas. And we now want to move back to our conservative set of rules. And so that decision has to be made about where to move back to..."

One change may be the addition of up to six 110-foot Coast Guard boats to help patrol the shallow gulf waters.

That proposal was criticized on Capitol Hill, where senators noted that the Coast Guard is already cutting back its anti-drug patrols and some routine search and rescue missions because of budget cuts. But the Navy has offered to pay for the Coast Guard's Persian Gulf patrols.

"Ridiculous, harebrained, absolute utter nonsense," said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., a critic of administration anti-drug policies.

Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon, ranking Republican on the Senate Appropriations Committee, said, "I don't know what the rationale for that would be. We've put a lot of additional burdens on the Coast Guard in the last few years and I'd think they have a full plate."

The committee will meet later this week to consider shifting money to the Coast Guard to meet a $100 million budget shortfall.

The lightly armed "Island" class patrol boats would be pulled off anti-drug patrols in the Caribbean, Coast Guard officials said Monday. The boats would be replaced by new Coast Guard cutters now under construction.

Adm. Paul A. Yost, commandant of the Coast Guard, said "if the president, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, think those boats would be a help over there, I'm more than delighted to send them and my Coast Guard personnel are ready to go. Really raring and ready to go."

The Coast Guard is part of the Transportation Department, but the agency also falls under Defense Department jurisdiction for national security purposes.

The boats which would be used in the gulf operations have a maximum speed of more than 26 knots and carry a crew of 16. The vessels are armed with one 20mm machine gun in the front, and two 7.62mm machine guns elsewhere. Another 20mm machine gun can be added.

5-year-old AIDS victim tells classmates of his 'bad blood'

LAKEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — A 5-year-old boy has realized his dream of attending school before he dies of AIDS. He began his first day of preschool by telling his classmates about his fatal disease and his "bad blood."

The boy, whose breathing is aided by an oxygen tank, surprised his mother by volunteering the information as his seven classmates introduced themselves, his mother said Monday.

"He said 'This is my oxygen, and I have a disease. My bad blood could kill you,'" said the mother, Shiela, who took her son Jonathan on Monday to the special education class at Patterson Elementary School.

"He didn't wait for anything. And the kids responded really well," the mother said at a news conference outside her condominium in this Denver suburb.

"He broke the ice right off and from then on it was just normal kid stuff," said Shiela, a divorced mother of three other sons.

She has asked that her last name not be published because she fears retaliation against her family.

"They listened and they played with me," Jonathan said of the hour he spent in the classroom. Asked whether his first day was as much fun as he expected, he replied, "Yeah."

Shiela said her son's biggest dream has been to attend school before he dies.

"He used to talk about dying all the time and he said he wanted to die," she said as Jonathan watched ants inching along the sidewalk. "But he hasn't addressed it since he found out he would get to go to school. He hasn't mentioned it in the last couple of weeks."

As his mother talked with reporters, Jonathan showed off a Polaroid picture of himself at school. At one point, he walked away to play on the sidewalk, unhooking the tube that connected him with the oxygen tank.

Jonathan's hopes of going to school were blocked several times in the past year by one delay after another. Earlier this month, a tutor assigned by the school district to teach him at home demanded to be reassigned, threatening to file a lawsuit if forced to continue the tutoring. The request was granted.

School officials decided April 19 to allow Jonathan to attend class.

Supreme Court referees counsel law battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is refereeing a crucial constitutional battle over the federal law that lets independent counsels investigate alleged crimes by high-ranking federal officials.

The justices were hearing arguments today in a case with far-reaching implications. Their decision is expected to be announced by July.

The Reagan administration is urging the court to invalidate the independent counsel law. Defending the statute are Senate leaders and the Democratic leadership in the House.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, who joined the court in February, has disqualified himself from taking part in the case without explanation. His absence creates the possibility of a 4-4 tie.

A deadlock would have the effect of upholding a ruling by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here that struck down the special prosecutor law.

The appeals court ruled that the Watergate-era law creating independent counsels impermissibly gives presidential appointment powers to the federal courts.

The 2-1 appeals court ruling also said the independent counsel provisions of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 were an unconstitutional encroachment of the exclusive power of the president to enforce criminal laws.

Under the law, a special court appoints independent counsels or special prosecutors at the request of the attorney general to investigate alleged criminal wrongdoing.

The law was challenged in the investigation of former Justice Department official Theodore B. Olson.

Alexia Morrison is investigating allegations that Olson lied to Congress in 1983 during a dispute over the Environmental Protection Agency's cleanup program for toxic waste.

Also at stake could be the January conviction of former presidential aide Michael K. Deaver for lying to a grand jury and to a House subcommittee that investigated his lobbying activities.

Bennett criticized for federal education role

Bennett

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is marking five years of school reform with a White House ceremony, but critics say a new report from Education Secretary William J. Bennett ignores the federal role in improving schools.

The National Education Association was holding a protest across the street from the White House, in Lafayette Park, to draw attention to its claim that a paucity of federal money has undermined efforts to help schools.

Exactly five years ago the National Commission on Excellence in Education delivered a broadside called "A Nation At Risk," which decried "a rising tide of mediocrity" in U.S. schools.

That report made headlines and laid the groundwork for moves in virtually every state to raise graduation standards, boost teacher salaries and, in many instances, impose new accountability on educators.

Bennett's follow-up report, "American Education: Making It Work," was to be released as part of today's ceremony until it became public over the weekend. Several prominent educators said they agreed with Bennett's conclusion that there have been only modest improvements from reform efforts to date, if not with the entire report.

"I think it's an excellent report, a good summary of what progress has been made and also of what remains to be done," Bennett's predecessor, T.H. Bell, said in a telephone interview from Salt Lake City:

But Bell said he wished the report had given greater emphasis to "what the federal government should be doing," especially on the "horrendous problem" of 40 percent dropout rates for minority youths.

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, said, "If Secretary Bennett and the president really feel that the nation is still at risk, they ought to propose something that the federal government does to get us out of this mess other than just preaching at everyone else."

Mary Hatwood Futrell, the NEA president, said Bennett's report and the administration's education policies both deserve "a straight F."

"There is a glaring omission in the report," she said. "There's absolutely no reference in the report to the role or the responsibility of the federal government to help us provide quality education for the children in America."

Bennett's report said: "American education has made some undeniable progress in the last few years. The precipitous downward slide of previous decades has been arrested, and we have begun the long climb back to reasonable standards.

"We are doing better than we were in 1983. But we are certainly not doing well enough...We are still at risk."

Scott D. Thomson, executive director of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, said:

"He doesn't recognize that we've made these gains at the same time we've admitted over 2 million non-English speaking immigrant students to the school population...(and) in the face of growing numbers of poor families.

"He doesn't recognize the fact that we're fending off the drug pushers with one hand from the community and trying to teach them with the other."

Gordon Ambach, executive director of the Council of Chief State School Superintendents and former New York state superintendent, said Bennett's report was largely "a rehash of the secretary's positions."

"By the absence of any statement at all about the federal role, what the secretary in effect is saying is there isn't any federal role in the whole business," he said. "I would completely disagree with him on that."

Thomas Shannon, executive director of the National School Boards Association, said he was "amazed at the absolute silence on the part of Secretary Bennett as to the federal role in education...It is as if he is a professorial bystander on the scene. He assumes no responsibility for any of the conditions."

Anita and Bob Van Housen of Azalea, Ore. will be relying on their dog for protection if convicted rapist Lawrence Singleton goes through with joining the Bride of Christ church in Azalea. Shunned by every town in California, Singleton has said he might move here.

Oregon town residents dread arrival of convicted rapist

AZALEA, Ore. (AP) — Bob and Anita Van Housen were looking for someplace peaceful to spend their retirement when they moved to this rural southern Oregon community two years ago from Southern California.

Instead, they find themselves fighting to keep a California rapist who cut off the forearms of his victim from becoming their neighbor.

"Unless you've got a gun or a large dog, you're very vulnerable," said Mrs. Van Housen, president of the Cow Creek Homeowners Association, as she petted her Doberman. "We have a gun and a good watchdog."

The object of their fear is Lawrence Singleton.

The 60-year-old former merchant marine became a free man Monday after serving eight years in prison and one year of parole for raping and mutilating a 15-year-old girl he picked up hitchhiking in Berkeley, Calif., then leaving her for dead outside Modesto.

Though his whereabouts remain unknown since his release, Singleton has said he wants to visit relatives in Florida, then come to Azalea to live with members of a fundamentalist communal sect called the Bride of Christ.

Angry protests followed Singleton from town to town last year when California officials tried to place him on parole. He was finally put in a small trailer on the grounds of San Quentin prison to complete his parole.

Bride of Christ leader Pastor Thomas Clyde Smith Jr. offered Singleton a home in this tiny rural community of about 750 people, mostly millworkers, loggers, retirees and some ranchers.

Since then, Smith says he and his followers have received death threats and shots have been fired at their homes.

"I would like to see them hug each other," Smith said of Singleton and his victim, Mary Vincent, who has been reported living somewhere in southern Oregon. "It takes two people to heal a situation.

"I know in this environment where we live (Singleton) will have an opportunity to see love," Smith added. "Maybe he has never seen it. I know I didn't until I got saved."

Smith was convicted of sexually abusing one of his daughters in 1965, and has been a controversial figure in Azalea since he and his 60 followers moved here four years ago from Las Vegas, Nev.

Soviets worry U.S. backing away from arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet officials are giving up hopes of sharp cuts in strategic nuclear arsenals before President Reagan leaves office and fear he may be returning to Red-baiting as he prepares to make his exit.

"The problem is that the American position is moving not forward but backward," said Valentin Falin, chairman of the semi-official Novosti news agency.

"As far as I can see, we don't have enough time to prepare any formal treaty" before the Moscow summit May 29-June 2, Falin said in an interview on Monday.

Falin, a non-voting member of the policymaking Soviet Central Committee and former Soviet ambassador to West Germany, blamed the Reagan administration and the U.S. political process for what he called wasted time since the summit in Washington last December.

"Certainly we cannot accomplish in the following four weeks what we have failed to do in four months," said Falin. "Certainly, we cannot expect miracles."

Falin also criticized a U.S. intelligence report saying the Soviet economy has not improved despite economic reforms by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

He said the joint report by the Central Intelligence Agency and Pentagon analysts might have been done "to show the president that the Soviet Union is almost on its deathbed and it needs just another push, that he should not talk with the Soviet Union, but push it."

Falin contested the pessimistic U.S. intelligence report, and said that under Gorbachev industrial production rose more than 4 percent last year and agricultural production was up 9 percent, "higher than any rate in a decade."

The U.S. intelligence studies said the production of goods and services last year in the Soviet Union grew by only 0.5 percent, after a 4 percent jump in 1986.

"I would say that in his most recent speech, as well as his speeches in March and February, the president was preoccupied with rhetoric," said Falin.

Dukakis wins Utah caucuses, 18 delegates

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Michael Dukakis won the Utah presidential caucuses on Monday, overwhelming rival Jesse Jackson and capturing most of the state's 23 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

With 46 percent of the state's 75 legislative districts reporting, Dukakis had 4,104 votes for 71 percent to Jackson's 1,080 or 19 percent, while 538 voters, or 9 percent, were uncommitted.

Based on these returns, Dukakis would win 18 national convention delegates and Jackson would win five.

The combined votes for Democrats Paul Simon, Richard Gephardt and Albert Gore Jr. totaled 1 percent.

The percentage of votes determines how many of the state's 23 delegates each candidate receives. The delegates will not be elected until the state convention in June.

Complete statewide returns were not expected until early Tuesday from the balloting in separate caucus meetings held in nearly all of the state's 1,807 voting districts.

Although a victory here would reap only a handful of delegates, Dukakis aides said it would give the Massachusetts governor momentum heading into Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary.

While Democrats declared their presidential preference, Republicans were attending their own caucus meetings to vote their preference for vice president and to say whether they want a western states regional primary similar to the South's Super Tuesday contests on March 8.

Republicans had planned a nonbinding presidential preference vote, but scrapped the idea after Vice President George Bush virtually wrapped up the nomination.

Utah will send 28 delegates to the Democratic national convention, including five "super delegates" chosen as a result of present or past party office.

Three of the superdelegates — national committeewoman Norma Matheson, Rep. Wayne Owens and state party chairman Randy Horiuchi — have endorsed Dukakis. The other two are uncommitted.

Dukakis also has the endorsement of Matheson's husband, former Democratic Gov. Scott Matheson.

Homosexuality, genderless names debated at meeting

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Homosexuality in the church, genderless names for God and a potential shift to the right will be debated by United Methodists convening today for their quadrennial meeting.

Nearly 1,000 delegates — half laymen and half clergy — from around the world will consider more than 2,650 petitions during the convention, which ends May 6.

The United Methodist Church, the nation's second largest Protestant denomination, has nearly 10 million members in this country, Europe, Africa and the Philippines.

The Commission on the Status and Role of Women is supporting a proposal that would have church publications substitute the words "Creator" for "Father" and "Our Savior" for "His only Son."

Other groups are seeking those changes plus a change from "Holy Spirit" to "Sustainer" to move United Methodism away from Catholicism.

At the meeting, 290 of the 996 delegates will be women. More than half the American lay delegates will be women, who will make up 14 percent of the clergy delegates.

Iran-Contra case begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for Oliver L. North and his Iran-Contra co-defendants are on a collision course with the judge, as they argue for dismissal of the case on grounds that evidence was gathered illegally.

A pre-trial hearing Monday began on a sour note for the defense team, when U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell ruled lawyers for North and two other defendants violated his ground rules for the hearing, and would be barred from presenting any witnesses.

From that point the proceeding rolled downhill for the defense lawyers, as Gesell rebuffed their request to question the top prosecutors — and grand jury witnesses — about their exposure to testimony given to Congress under a grant of immunity.

Nor would Gesell permit the defense to immediately review instructions given by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh and his staff to grand jurors, when they were advised in their secret proceedings to avoid news accounts of the congressional hearings.

Robertson to pay costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for both Pat Robertson and the former congressman he sued for questioning his war record said they were pleased by an order that the former television evangelist pay $28,000 in court costs.

Rep. Paul N. "Pete" McCloskey was sued in 1986 after he claimed that Robertson had used the political influence of his late father, Sen. A. Willis Robertson, D-Va., to avoid combat duty during the Korean War.

Robertson dropped the lawsuit last month rather than go to trial on March 8, when he ran in Republican primaries on Super Tuesday. Robertson officially remains a contender for the Republican presidential nomination, although George Bush is expected to amass sufficient delegates to clinch the nomination in today's Pennsylvania primary.

U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green dismissed the lawsuit on the condition that Robertson pay McCloskey's court costs because the former congressman is the prevailing party.

McCloskey had sought $42,845 in court costs following the dismissal last month of Robertson's $35 million libel action. But the clerk of the U.S. District Court here rejected $14,845 of that amount.

House voices opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is delaying formal notice to Congress of a $460 million sale of military equipment to Saudi Arabia because of opposition that has already formed, a spokesman for one of the House opponents says.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said 186 House members had signed a letter he wrote urging Secretary of State George P. Shultz to withdraw the proposed sale. The letter was to be forwarded to Shultz today after additional signatures were gathered.

Schumer made the announcement Monday after learning the State Department planned to serve notice later that day of the proposed sale, said spokesman Jay Genachowski. Formal notification subsequently was postponed, he said.

State Department spokesman Dennis Harter said the administration had made no decision on when to formally notify Congress of the arms sales, but that officials were "doing some consultations" on the proposal, "particularly since there has been some evidence of congressional concern."

Teen-ager electrocuted

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A teen-ager walking barefoot along a busy street was electrocuted when she stepped on a steel plate that covered wiring for a light post, authorities said.

Sunday morning's accident that killed 17-year-old Veronika Beatriz Feria "was just a death waiting to happen," said Ott Cefkin, a Fort Lauderdale police spokesman.

The street and wiring had been moved to make way for the entrance of a new shopping center. It was badly rewired and set the grating alive with 480 volts, said police and a Florida Power and Light spokesman.

Had the victim been wearing shoes, she probably would have been insulated from the current, said FPL spokesman Don Ostberg.

Feria, who moved to Oakland Park from Peru, had been celebrating the 18th birthday of her best friend, Lina Torres, on Saturday.

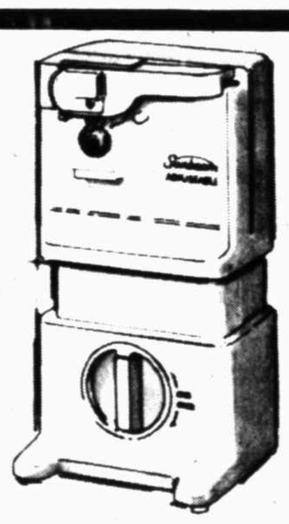

Ficus trees grow wild

MIAMI (AP) — The ficus tree, long considered sterile, now has a way to reproduce on its own, and scientists in South Florida are bracing for an explosion of the lush, iron-rooted titan of the tropics.

The ficus benjamina, or weeping fig, may be a finicky house plant, but it grows very large very fast in hospitable climates. Its dense crown snuff out plants below, and its notorious roots can muscle through pavement to strangle other large trees and choke pipes.

MISD wants 'in-house' asbestos team

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The school district's director of plant services wants four new employees hired who can remove dangerous asbestos products from buildings at costs lower than outside contractors charge, he said today.

Midland Independent School District trustees were expected to make the decision at their board meeting this afternoon.

The need for the "in-house" asbestos team stems from a recent federally mandated law charging school district's adherence to tougher asbestos-removal guidelines, said Wilson Heidelberg, MISD plant director.

Smaller firms hired locally by the district to "abate" or get rid of the asbestos in school buildings can't do enough jobs to cover the cost of insurance for doing one job, Heidelberg claimed.

Insurance costs to cover workers who rid buildings of asbestos, a natural mineral containing calcium and magnesium silicate, are high because asbestos has been linked to lung disease.

The district has been tackling the problem since 1979, Heidelberg said, when the federal government first administered asbestos regulations for schools.

In that year, 11 MISD buildings were found to have "friable" or crushable asbestos in their ceilings.

Those buildings are the MISD administration building, Lee and Midland high schools, Lee Freshman High School, San Jacinto Junior High School, and Emerson, Alamo, Carver, Henderson, Jones and Rusk elementaries, the plant director said.

In 1983, those 11 buildings had to be re-evaluated because federal guidelines were made more stringent.

Ridding the 11 district buildings of asbestos hazards was done via one of four methods, Heidelberg said.

If ceilings were not emitting asbestos fibers, nothing was done, but the areas were closely monitored.

If ceilings were found to have been emitting asbestos fibers, they were encapsulated with a sealant, enclosed with safer ceiling material such as Sheetrock or removed and replaced totally, the plant director said.

Often it can be just as hazardous to remove the asbestos because dangerous fibers — which can damage lung tissue if inhaled — are loosened and float freely through the air, he claimed.

Heidelberg maintained that asbestos levels were never within the federal government's "danger" zone, but that precautionary steps were taken nonetheless.

As ceilings were being taken care of, the district sued three manufacturers of the asbestos that had installed the material.

To date, two firms — W.R. Grace and U.S. Gypsum — have paid the district for abatement costs which have totaled $840,000, Heidelberg said.

The third firm, National Gypsum, is still in litigation with the district, he added.

The need for the four new employees stems from a third federal rehash of its asbestos guidelines — the 1987 Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act (AHERA), Heidelberg said.

Now included in government restrictions are "non-friable" asbestos fibers used in the binding materials of masonry, floor tiles and shingles.

All school districts must complete a survey to identify the asbestos in their buildings and submit a plan to Gov. Bill Clements office by October 1988.

Heidelberg foresees additional abatement chores for the district under the stricter AHERA guidelines, he said.

Costs for removal of any further friable and non-friable fibers can be done for one-third of the cost if MISD employees are used instead of outside contractors, he said.

Outside contractors can charge up to $6-$8 a square foot and he claims the district can do the tasks itself for about $2 a square foot.

Statistics from the Texas Research Institute in Austin estimate that in Texas alone, AHERA will affect about 29,000 school buildings in 1,061 school districts.

Nationwide, the Environmental Protection Agency has estimated it will cost $3 billion to reduce the danger of asbestos in the nation's schools.

Chinese artists can't attend arts festival

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Chinese artists Wen Shaoqing and Wang Kepei will not be the honorees at the fifth annual Celebration of the Arts opening reception Sunday. Neither will be leaving China.

"We were especially disappointed when the telex was received that Mr. Wen and Mr. Wang were not coming to the United States because the formalities in China had not been completed," said Jean Posey, executive director of the Midland Arts Assembly, the umbrella organization for the arts and sponsor of COA.

"Plans had been made for them to demonstrate their art in Midland schools, and we were looking forward to seeing Mr. Wang's special way with the Chinese method of using watercolor and certainly the art of paper cutting as demonstrated by Mr. Wen is something rarely seen in this country."

This means the first event on the Celebration calendar — "Chinese Artists Wine and Cheese Reception and Exhibition" — scheduled for Sunday at the Museum of the Southwest has been cancelled, Mrs. Posey said. The opening event now will be the final performance of Ballet Midland's spring repertory at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

Even the art is staying in China, Mrs. Posey said.

A showing of Chinese art was scheduled to hang at the Museum of the Southwest through May 12.

The Chinese artists were coming in conjunction with a cultural exchange agreement which had been signed between the two sister city organizations. That agreement calls for the exchange of visual and performing artists from both cities over the next three years.

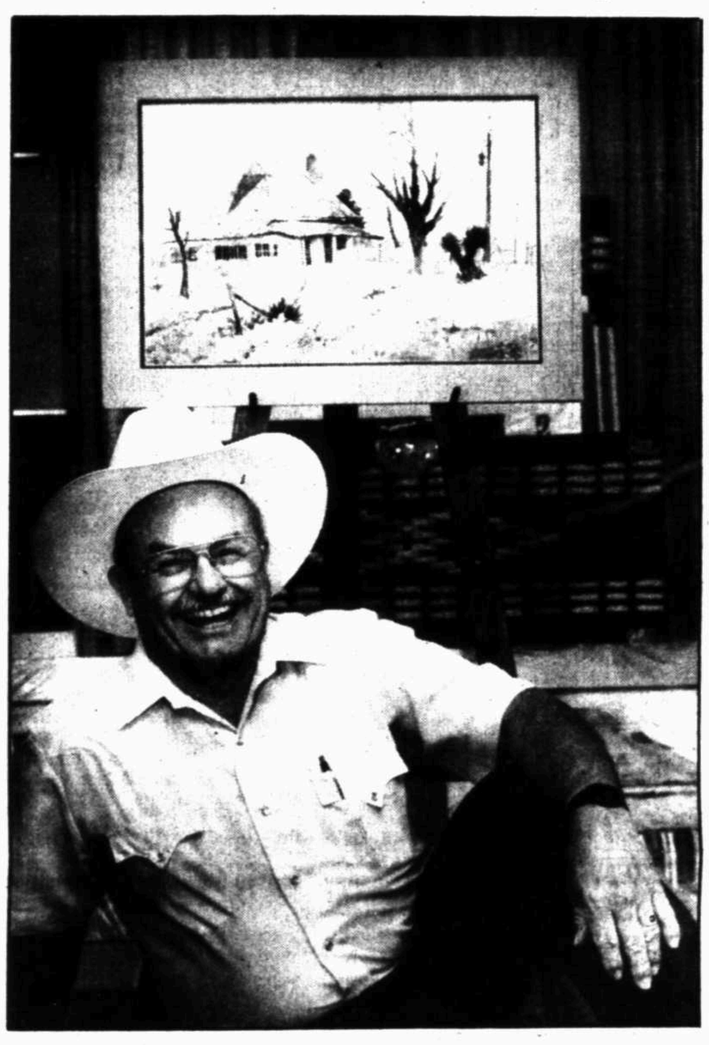

Dick Dunbar, former president of the Midland-Dongying Sister City Association, displayed his disappointment that the formalities could not be completed for the two artists to come.

"I look forward to such an exchange in the future," Dunbar said.

COA, which includes events sponsored by the Assembly as well as those being staged by member organizations in May, continues through May 22. Activities include art shows, dance presentations, symphony performances, a tasting extravaganza and theater productions.

COA's Festival Days, to which no admission is charged, will be held downtown May 14 and 15 at Midland Center, Centennial Plaza and the courthouse lawn. For more information on Celebration events, call the Assembly, 687-1149.

Artists' club paints area ranch

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Once a month a group of artists pack up their paints, brushes and easels and travels to a scenic site in the West Texas area to spend a day committing what they see to canvas and paper.

All of the artists are members of a group formed about four years ago known as Watercolor Horizons. As the name implies, the artists use only watercolors during their monthly sessions, though many of the 32 members of the group work in other mediums.

Some paint with oils, acrylics or charcoal, while others carve wood. But, to be members of Watercolor Horizons, all must work exclusively with watercolors. Members of the group include people from Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Andrews, Monahans, Pecos, with some from as far away as New Mexico.

This past Saturday, seven of the 32 members of the group traveled to a private ranch about six miles north of Midkiff. The seven artists produced 10 paintings, depicting a long-abandoned ranch home built around the turn of the century, out buildings and a windmill without blades (which one artist added for effect).

The daylong outing included a minor brush with a sleeping bobcat one artist inadvertently awakened and a dead skunk that prevented the artists from painting the old house from the best point of view.

When they returned to Odessa, members gathered at the Art of the West Gallery, the business and home of artist Marvin Stevenson and his wife, Jane, for a barbecue dinner and discussion of the day's events.

Following dinner, members gathered in Stevenson's gallery display area for a critique of work done by the seven artists.

Mrs. Mackay Jackson, Paintout chairman, displayed each of the watercolors and invited comments. Showing her own watercolor rendering of the old house, she said she might have painted smaller specific sections of the house, "but you know me," she said, "I also start things too big."

Stevenson questioned why she painted the shingled roof of the old house such a bright green. She said that was the way she saw it and allowed that "things look darker when you're wearing dark glasses."

Watercolor Horizon members have traveled to the Ghost Ranch, near Abique, N.M., north of Santa Fe, for a workshop with artist George Pate of Los Alamos. Other monthly paintouts have included trips to Fort Stockton to paint scenes at the old fort; Fort Davis, to paint around Indian Lodge; San Angelo, to paint St. Joseph's Catholic Church, the old fort and railroad depot; to Abilene to paint at Buffalo Gap; and to Pecos, to paint various scenes at the Judge Roy Bean West of the Pecos Museum. Members also have held a paintout at the White Pool House in Odessa to help raise funds for the historic structure.

When bad weather prevents outdoor excusions, the group holds its paintouts at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin.

The group will exhibit its works at the Art Institute from Aug. 22 through mid-September.

Current president of Watercolor Horizons is Kathryn Boone. Incoming president is Ken Rowland.

MC teachers attain pursuit of trivial win

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The teachers taught the students just how trivial some things are.

Like playing petty games.

Last weekend, 15 Midland College faculty members took on approximately an equal number of MC honor students in the Phi Theta Kappa coeducational scholarship fraternity in a Trivial Pursuit tournament.

The MC faculty members won in the game of dice and petty knowledge.

"One of the students said it shows that the faculty are full of it...trivia, that is," said MC student Steve O'Neal, whose team, the Battling Ubiquitous Mind Stormers (BUMS), wound up eating crow and with the consolation prize.

Initially, O'Neal had said the students would "mop up the floor" with the MC instructors. Later, however, he revised his comment. The students, he said, would be "mopping up the floor for them."

He was right the second time.

"We had a lot of fun," O'Neal said. "It was pretty rowdy, especially the Cerebral Rhetorical Aesthete Pontificators (CRAP) team." That team, which included Dr. Will Morris, was the runner-up team behind the winning Technically Trivial team headed up by Dr. Nancy Hart.

"In the first round, where students played teachers, the teachers won," Dr. Hart said. "Faculty ended up playing faculty."

The students-vs.-faculty and the faculty-vs.-faculty games were close.

"I think it was luck," Dr. Hart said of winning. "The games were really close. The championship game was decided by a tie-breaker. I think it was the luck of the roll," she said, "and the team with the fewest sports questions won."

On the Technically Trivial winning team were MC Instructors Bob Peetz, Dale Westfall, Mary Bohnenblust, Darla Becher and Hart.

Fire scene

A Midland firefighter surveys the damage to a home after a blaze broke out about 3 p.m. Monday. According to reports, the fire started in a bedroom of the home at 605 E. Cuthbert Ave. No injuries were reported, but the blaze caused heavy damage. The cause of the fire is under investigation, reports said.

Waco artist incorporates details of architecture into sculpture

By CARL HOOVER

WACO (AP) — Walls and windows, cornices and eaves, steps and doorways. To some, those are structural details belonging to architecture, but to Patricia Tillman it's art.

Ms. Tillman, a Waco art instructor who divides her time between classes at McLennan Community College and Baylor University, uses those architectural details — ones people see every day without thinking about them — in her wooden sculpture.

"I take the images from my environment," she said of her constructions, which range from pieces that can be hung on a wall to others that stand free on the floor.

Ms. Tillman, 34, was honored earlier this month when she was one of 12 Texas artists chosen to show works at the National Museum of Women in the Arts in Washington D.C.

Texas is the third state, preceded by Kansas and Colorado, to exhibit works of its artists at the NMWA's

State Gallery. With exhibition dates of Dec. 1, 1988, to Feb. 28, 1989 — a time that will see a new presidential administration take power — the show likely will be seen by hundreds of visitors to Washington.

"It's a real neat opportunity for me. I've never shown my work nationally before," she said.

The fact that the show was selected and supported by women is an extra encouragement, she said. "I'm glad so many Texas women are so willing to give their time and money to support Texas art," she said, noting that after a reception hosted by Texas first lady Rita Clements, several women sought her out to encourage their daughters in art.

The lack of visible professional women artists is starting to change, Ms. Tillman said, through such shows and a commitment by some university art schools to bring women onto their faculties.

While the Washington show will be her first national one, Ms. Tillman frequently exhibits her work at local and regional exhibitions.

While her sculpture, assembled at a home studio she shares with her husband and fellow artist, John Chatmas, is comprised of assemblages of architectural details, their interpretation varies from viewer to viewer, which suits Ms. Tillman.

"People see several things in my work," she noted. "And I like that."

Her "Two Niches," possibly her best-known sculpture, reminds viewers of everything from the duality of married life to confessional booths to, as her sister puts it, "stand-up coffins."

Accused kidnapper returned to Midland after evaluation

From Staff Reports

Accused kidnapper Kenneth Parker was returned to Midland late Monday after a seven-week medical and psychological evaluation at a Missouri federal facility, the U.S. Marshal confirmed today.

Parker, 41, was returned to Midland on a regularly scheduled transport, Midland U.S. Marshal Gail Boggs said. He was booked into the federal section of the city jail at 7:30 p.m., according to Midland police records.

Parker — on a motion granted by his court-appointed defense counsel Tom Morgan — was transferred March 3 to the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners. When his motion was granted, Morgan said it was a "routine" request in any major felony case.

Morgan and assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery could not be reached this morning for comment on the defendant's transfer.

Morgan has filed several motions in the case which have yet to be heard before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton, including a motion to move the trial from Midland to Houston.

Parker is accused of conspiring to kidnap two women in Nov. 1986, including 24-year-old June Gilkerson, who has never been located.

Candidates will meet in forums

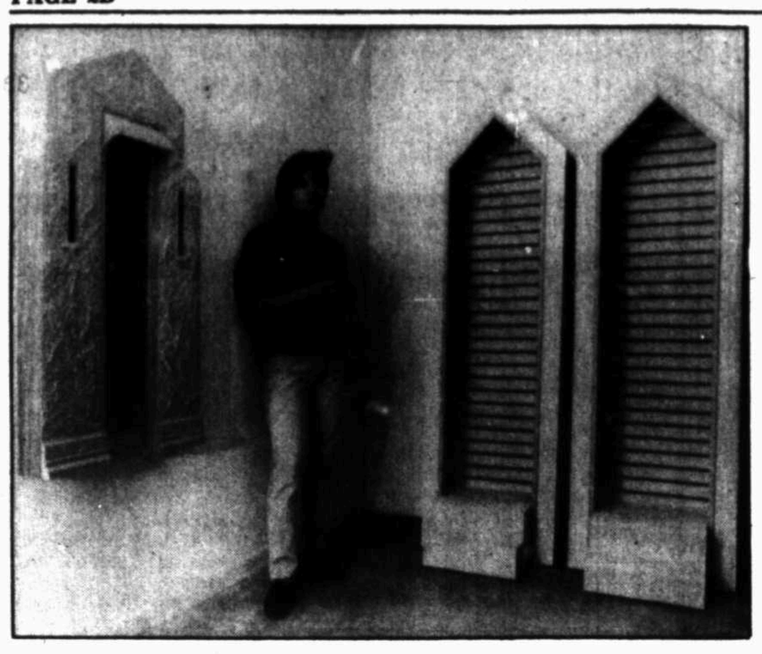

From Staff Reports

The Midland League of Women Voters will sponsor two forums for candidates seeking election to the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees.

The first forum will be at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Lecture Hall of Midland College's Health Science Center. It will feature candidates running for Places 1, 2, 3 and 4 on the board.

On Thursday night, candidates seeks Places 5, 6 and 7 will be featured. Thursday's session will also be at 7:30 p.m. at the MC Health Science Center Lecture Hall.

Both meetings are opened to the public.

"A lot of times I put two different forms or shapes together and what turns out has a life of its own," she said.

Ms. Tillman spends a good amount of her preliminary work drawing and designing, although the final product often is different from the original sketch.

The detailed planning is needed, she said for construction purposes. "You have to know dimensions, you have to know scale, you have to know proportions before you start," Ms. Tillman said.

She conceded, however, that after 11 years of creating formal art, some things come almost intuitively.

Ms. Tillman's current project is strictly practical: revamping her studio to allow metalworking. Once that is completed, she plans to shift from woodwork to creating outdoor art in metal.

"I thought about outdoor sculpture in cement. Well, that's kind of heavy to move around, so I changed to metal," she said. "I'm also considering combining stone with metal...I'm interested in working with surfaces, colors and textures."

Ex-substitute teacher indicted

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A former substitute teacher at Round Rock has been indicted by a Williamson County grand jury on three counts of sexual assault of a child and five counts of sexual indecency with a child.

When Round Rock investigators and Harris County officers arrested Donald Black, 52, at Katy near Houston, they found a 14-year-old boy hiding in a closet at Black's home, officers said.

Dan LeMay, a Round Rock police investigator, said statements by the boy led to the filing of two charges of sexual assault against Black in Harris County.

The arrest followed a one-year investigation by Round Rock officers, LeMay said.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Head of Trinity School accepts appointments

From Staff Reports

Margaret L. Simmons, Head of Trinity School, has accepted appointments from two professional organizations. She will serve three more years on the board of the Texas Association of Non-Public Schools and as a consulting member in 1988-89 for the Standards Committee of the Independent Schools Association of the Southwest.

She, along with Trinity's Director of Admission Margaret Farrell, attended the recent ISAS conference in Tulsa. At the TANS meeting in Fort Worth, Mrs. Simmons presented workshops on parent involvement.

In addition, Mrs. Simmons recently announced that two new scholarships will be offered to sophomore students who will be entering in September. These merit scholarships will be awarded on the basis of a competitive examination to be given at Trinity School on Saturday. The competition is open to any current ninth grade student in the area. One Trinity ninth grader and one ninth grade student from another school will be named winners of the scholarships in early May.

As well as scholarships offered on the basis of academic excellence, applications for financial aid are available by calling the school.

For further information, call the Director of Admission at 697-3281.

Event to honor authors

From Staff Reports

The 1988 University of Texas of the Permian Basin Faculty Author Reception will be held from 5-6:30 p.m. on Thursday in the university's Devonian Room.

The event will honor three recently published professors, Dr. David M. Eggleston, professor of Control Engineering, a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, who recently published Wind Turbine Engineering Design; Dr. R. Colbert Rhodes, professor of sociology and criminal justice, a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and UCLA, whose most recent book is entitled Introduction to Gerontology; and Dr. Frank N. Samponaro, professor of history, a graduate of Yale University and U.T. Austin, who has recently published Border Fury, a picture postcard chronology of the 1910-1917 Mexican Revolution.

The reception, hosted by the University Library Friends, will include refreshments. The public is invited to attend. Copies of the new books will be available for purchase and the authors will be present to autograph and discuss them. For more information, call 367-2336.

Langdon backs Nugent

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Six weeks after the end of a bitter campaign, the loser in the March 12 Democratic primary for Texas Railroad Commissioner has endorsed his opponent.

Midland businessman Jerry Langdon said Monday he is backing Democratic incumbent Chairman Jim Nugent because he has "moved forward with several significant initiatives that will improve the commission's effectiveness, fairness and efficiency." Langdon cited the creation of a special committee to study statewide natural gas rules and the hiring of an executive director.

"The end result of all these initiatives brought under Jim Nugent's leadership as chairman of the commission is a unified and more effective commission," he said.

Langdon, who criticized Nugent heavily during the primary campaign, lost on March 12 by 62 percent to 22 percent. Austinite John Thomas Henderson trailed the field with 16 percent of the vote. Nugent will face Republican Ed Emmett of Round Rock in the November general election.

Teachers' group meets

From Staff Reports

The 109th meeting of the Texas State Teachers Association House of Delegates met April 21-23 in Dallas.

Delegates attending from Midland included Patricia Stevens, president, Janie Johnson, Linda Harris, Josephine Barron, Michele Windle and Gilberto Garica, TSTA esecutive committee member.

Midland physician Viola Coleman was one of four recipients of the prestigious TSTA Human and Civil Rights award. Mary Milz, KTPX-TV news reporter was a recipient of the TSTA "School Bell" award for excellence in continuous coverage with regard to educational issues.

TSTA president Charles Beard told delegates that the average Texas teacher is a 43-year-old female, has been teaching more than 15 years and earns $26,262.

Beard said that of the 1,100 Texas school districts, 111 cut teacher pay this year and another 745 made no improvements in the local salary schedules, causing the state's national ranking in teacher pay to plummet from 21st in 1984 to 27th in 1988.

"Here we are just four years after the school reforms were implemented and our standing is not better today than it was in the pre-form days. This is a sad commentary on our commitment to education," Beard said.

Group endorses election

From Staff Reports

The Midland Retired Teachers Association has formally endorsed the upcoming Midland Independent School District bond election.

The Midland Retired Teachers Association is composed of retired educators, teachers, coaches and administrators.

Almost all of the group's members were professionals employed with Midland public schools.

On May 7, a bond question of $11.8 million will be submitted to Midland voters. The bond money would fund needed elementary facility expansion.

"With these bond funds, the district would meet state mandates on class size. Presently the district does not meet these regulations," said Printus Burkhart, the organization's president. "Most importantly, these funds would improve the education of young people."

Students to mark heart day

From Staff Reports

About 230 first-, second- and third-grade students in Midland will participate in festivities Thursday in celebration of the American Heart Association's Heart Explorers Day.

Students from Burnet Elementary will hold a pep rally Thursday at the school at 900 Raymond. The pep rally will include skits, cheers and songs that promote a heart-healthy lifestyle.

Students from Blackshear Magnet School at 501 S. Dixie will hold a parade that same day to celebrate.

These Midland activities will coincide with thousands of activities occurring statewide.

Heart Explorers is a tested, hands-on teaching tool designed to teach heart-healthy concepts to first-, second- and third-grade students.

The program helps students develop heart-healthy lifestyles to prevent cardiovascular disease later in their lives.

Gov. Bill Clements has proclaimed Thursday, April 28, as Heart Explorers Day in Texas.

Teacher Job Fair planned

From Staff Reports

A Teacher Job Fair for individuals interested in employment opportunities with area school districts will be held from 3:30 — 6 p.m. on Wednesday in the Student Lounge of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Representatives from the school districts will be available for consultations concerning fall employment. A complimentary meal will be served immediately following the Job Fair. For additional information, call Teresa Brockman at 367-2136.

Veterans can receive care

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — The Veterans Administration Medical Center now offers a Respite Care program for veterans, according to Conrad Alexander, medical center director.

This program was established to provide a period of rest for families and caregivers who have been caring for chronically ill, terminally ill or disabled veterans at home. To participate in this program, the veteran must have received treatment at the Big Spring VAMC within the last year, need only basic nursing care, be medically stable and have been cared for at home for at least 30 consecutive days.

For further information, contact Francis Montague, RN, at 915-263-7361, ext. 257, or John Webb, chief of social work service, at 263-7361.

DEATHS

Roy Reynolds

Services for Roy D. Reynolds of Colorado City will be Wednesday at 11 a.m. in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Robert Frazier of Valley View Baptist Church officiating.

Burial will follow in Resthaven Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Reynolds died at a Midland hospital early Sunday morning.

He was born May 18, 1926, in Tulsa, Okla., where he was reared. He entered the U.S. Navy in 1944 and served in the South Pacific. Following his discharge he returned to Tulsa. He married the former Peggy Ann Crain July 13, 1946. They moved to Midland in 1949 and he joined Muldrow Map Co.

In 1953 he and his brothers began the Reynolds Brothers Reproduction Co.

In 1977 he retired and later that year started another business, Reynolds and Sons Reproduction Co. In 1985, he retired and moved to Colorado City.

He was a member of Valley View Baptist Church and a member of the Acacia Masonic Lodge #1414.

Survivors include his wife, Peggy Reynolds, of Colorado City; three sons, Rickie Reynolds, of Chula Vista, Calif., Donnie Reynolds, of De Sota and Ronnie Reynolds, of Midland; two daughters, Debbie Hamilton and Annetta Childers, both of Midland; four brothers, Hollis Reynolds and Bill Reynolds, both of Tulsa and L.G. Reynolds and Gene Reynolds, both of Midland; two sisters, Leila Mason, of Keene and Essie Jones, of Tulsa and 15 grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to Allison Cancer Center.

Herman Cain

STANTON — Herman O. Cain, 66, of Stanton died Monday in a Midland hospital following a brief illness.

Graveside services will be at 3 p.m. Wednesday in Evergreen Cemetery with the Rev. Dennis Tofano, pastor of First Baptist Church of Stanton, officiating. Services are being directed by Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Cain was born June 27, 1921 in Vincient. He had lived in Stanton 29 years.

He was owner of Cain's Body Shop in Stanton.

She served in the U.S. Navy during World War II.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Did you know that helping others can help your health? It's true.

Recent research has shown that along with making you "feel good," being helpful may lower your cholesterol level, reduce hypertension and boost your immunity. Some researchers even say that doing regular volunteer work may increase life expectancy.

Scientists aren't sure exactly how it works, but helping others can produce the same sense of well being that comes from frequent, vigorous exercise or relaxation techniques.

Your risk of some diseases is dramatically reduced simply because you feel better about yourself when you are doing something with an altruistic spirit.

With this in mind we would like to suggest that you consider some of the following volunteer possibilities available in our community:

■ Individuals are needed to care for dogs and cats and help to unite them with their owners. Duties will also involve screening potential adopters. Some typing is required and a knowledge and understanding of dog and cat personalities would be helpful.

■ Groups and individuals are needed to help with Celebration of the Arts Children's Festival. People of all ages who have a willing attitude and who love to work with kids are needed. A knowledge of arts and crafts would be helpful but is not necessary.

■ As always, many agencies have a desperate need for "clerically talented" people. If you can type, file, answer the phone and do general office tasks you fit the bill and you are needed!

Remember: volunteering improves your health and makes you feel better.

For more information on how you or your agency can join the Volunteer Center, call 697-8781.

"They whooped (whipped) us," student O'Neal conceded. "We are all sporting illiterates."

O'Neal said the tournament, which was played in the Boy Scouts of America's Buffalo Trail Council Building, was exhausting.

"I think I burned out the last of my brain cells," he quipped. "I don't feel smarter. I feel kind of rum dumb." On the BUMS team were MC students Elaine Oliver, Jeff Cloyd, Billie Boyd, Viki Jensen and O'Neal.

O'Neal said prospects for subsequent matches are positive. "If you play a game and enjoy it and even though you lose, you want to play it again," he said.

"I think both sides were fairly illiterate when it comes to sports and soap operas...unless it's 'Star Trek,'" O'Neal said. A college administrator-instructor, Dr. Eileen Piwetz, refereed the tournament and interpreted rules.

Morris said his Pontificators faculty team lost in the tie-breaker "because I don't know anything about soap operas." He suggested that that could be taken as a compliment.

On the Pontificators team were Dr. Julia Flaherty, Dr. Pam Howell, Aline Collins, Dr. Charles Simmons, and Morris.

The tournament was "quite good — one of the best things we've ever done with the students," Morris said. "They could see the faculty in a different, relaxed, informal way. And we scream and yell, sweat under the arms, get nervous and say the wrong things, and wish we hadn't."

GISD board candidates to meet in forum

GNP grows 2.3 percent

Economy shrugs off stock crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, shrugging off the effects of the October stock market collapse, grew at a respectable 2.3 percent annual rate in the first three months of 1988, the government said today.

The Commerce Department, issuing its first look at overall economic performance this year, said the increase in the gross national product was propelled by a strong increase in consumer spending and the biggest surge in business investment in more than four years.

Economists said any lingering fears that the record 508-point drop in the stock market on Oct. 19 would topple the country into a recession should be buried by the new GNP report.

In further good news, the growth was accompanied by a slowdown in the rate of inflation, with a price measure tied to the GNP rising at an annual rate of 2.4 percent, down from a 2.7 percent increase in the fourth quarter. This slowdown should help allay fears that stronger consumer demand would push up prices and force the Federal Reserve Board to raise interest rates to cool off demand.

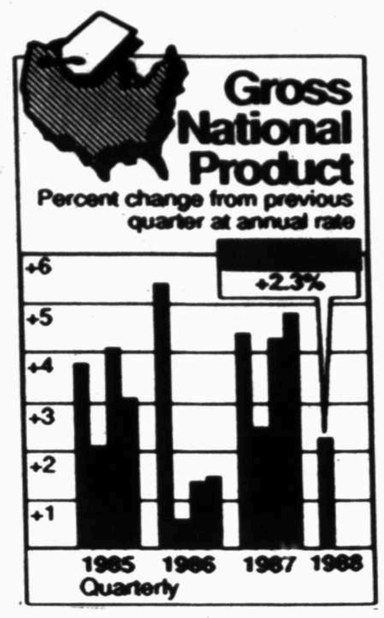

The GNP grew at a much faster 4.8 percent rate in the October-December quarter, but analysts said that growth masked some dangerous imbalances that were not present in the first quarter report.

Almost all of the fourth quarter increase in GNP wound up as unsold inventory sitting on shelves. At the same time, consumer spending was taking a rare nose dive, falling by 2.5 percent, the biggest drop in seven years. This combination has in the past been a harbinger of a recession.

This pattern was reversed in the first quarter with business inventories, which had risen by $39.4 billion in the fourth quarter, falling by $13.2 billion in the first quarter, indicating a success by businesses in reducing swollen inventories.

Much of the success in working down the inventory bulge occurred in auto showrooms, as dealers were aided by a new round of sales incentives.

Wageman: Thrift woes need patience

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Expected action on the so-called Southwest Plan to clean up the savings and loan industry may be further off than this week, according to one industry official.

Initial consolidations, which have been reported as forthcoming by the end of April, could be postponed by regulators' concerns with "doing it right," according to Tom Wageman, chairman of $4-billion Dallas-based Sunbelt Savings Association.

Desert Partners completes financing for USG offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Desert Partners L.P., a partnership headed by Midland oilmen Cyril Wagner Jr. and Jack E. Brown, announced Monday that it has finished arranging the necessary financing for its $1.6 billion cash tender offer for manufacturer USG Corp.'s stock.

Desert Partners said it has lined up financing commitments totaling $1.9 billion, including a $1.4 billion bank facility and $500 million in subordinated debt.

The partnership, led by Wagner and Brown, has offered $42 a share in cash for up to 39 million shares of USG's 45.7 million common shares it doesn't already own. In addition, Desert Partners would offer around $600 million in debt securities and warrants, or rights to purchase stock, also valued at $42 each, for the balance of the deal.

The cash and securities portions of the takeover bid have a total value of around $2.2 billion.

Chicago-based USG, a manufacturer of paper, plaster and wood products, including gypsum wallboard, has rejected Desert Partners' offer as inadequate.

Desert Partners holds about 9.9 percent of USG's common shares, acquired last fall for an average of $45 a share.

The partnership's $1.4 billion bank facility, arranged by Wells Fargo Bank and Chase Manhattan Bank, includes $170 million available only for the payment of interest and expenses.

First City converting subsidiaries

HOUSTON (AP) — First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc. is filing applications with bank regulatory authorities to convert 33 of its subsidiary banks across the state into branches of other First City banks, company officials said Monday.

As a result of the branching actions, expected to be completed this summer, Houston-based First City will have a single bank, composed of one or more branches, in each of 23 counties. First City will also have two banks in Tarrant County and one bank in South Dakota.

The state's fourth-largest bank holding company also announced that under a new policy, the boards of directors of member banks statewide will consist of First City officers, thus placing accountability directly within the company. Current outside directors of First City member banks will become advisory directors.

"First City's ability to compete successfully in today's banking environment will be directly proportional to our ability to centralize and consolidate. These steps will make for a significantly more efficient First City system," said A. Robert Abboud, who became First City's chairman and chief executive following a $1.6 billion federally assisted rescue plan completed last week.

The reorganization plan consisted of $970 million from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and $500 million in capital raised by private investors headed by Abboud. Another $108 million was acquired from a savings and loan to pay debt holders who surrendered their securities for less than face value.

First City, with 59 banks in Texas and one in South Dakota, grew quickly during the Texas oil boom, but was hit hard by energy and real estate losses when oil prices plummeted.

Perot: Business leaders to blame for U.S. decline

HONOLULU (AP) — Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot on Monday said the United States had declined as a leader in world affairs and that business leaders, not politicians, are to blame.

Since the U.S. economy depends on tax-paying workers, business leaders should work harder to create more jobs, Perot said.

Perot, a 57-year-old businessman and philanthropist who in 1978 financed the rescue of two employees held hostage in Iran, was keynote speaker at the Associated Press Annual Luncheon held here Monday.

The luncheon was held on the first day of the 102nd Annual Convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Perot said the country's decline began after World War II.

"We were complacent and arrogant" after the war, he said. "We gave it away at a time when we had an incredible edge.

"We've become a people who want to feel good now, at any cost, and let tomorrow take care of itself," he said. "We and not the elected officials are the dwarfs and the wimps."

U.S. auto sales rise 1.9 percent

By PHILIP E. ROSS
New York Times News Service

DETROIT — Mid-April sales of new American-made cars and light trucks rose 1.9 percent from the comparable period last year, the eight domestic manufacturers reported Monday.

Sales of domestic light trucks rose 3.2 percent, to average 13,814 a day, and those of domestic cars rose 1.2 percent, to 25,443 a day. Comparisons are based on daily rates because the April 11-20 period had nine selling days this year and eight last year.

Cars sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7.7 million units, beating the 7.2 million rate of a year earlier and outpacing the rate for 1987, which stood at 7.1 million. Annual rates were calculated from a formula devised by the Department of Commerce.

The Chrysler Corp.'s market share rose three percentage points, taking 17.7 percent of the domestic vehicle market.

The General Motors Corp. and the Ford Motor Co.'s market shares each fell 2.2 percentage points, taking 45.2 percent and 31.2 percent of the market, respectively.

Five major oil companies report higher profits

By JONATHAN P. HICKS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Five major oil companies Monday reported higher first-quarter profits, mostly because of increased earnings from chemical operations and improved margins in their oil refining and marketing businesses.

The Exxon Corp., the world's largest petroleum company, said its net income climbed 36 percent, while the Mobil Corp.'s earnings doubled. Meanwhile, earnings rose 80.4 percent at the Amoco Corp., 16.5 percent at the Occidental Petroleum Co. and tripled at the Unocal Corp.

In the quarter, crude oil prices ranged between $17.50 and $15.50 a barrel, averaging 8 percent below the prices in the quarter a year earlier. The decline helped bolster the companies' chemical operations, but industry executives emphasize that the direction of oil prices remains a major uncertainty.

"Oil companies are major chemical producers, and chemical earnings have benefited from somewhat lower costs for raw materials and higher selling prices," said Ron Londe, an analyst at A.G. Edwards & Sons. "Demand for chemicals has been such that these companies have been able to raise prices substantially."

Exxon reported net income of $1.46 billion, or $1.06 a share, up from $1.07 billion, or 75 cents a share, in the comparable 1987 quarter. Exxon's revenue increased 13 percent, to $22.01 billion from $19.4 billion.

Mobil said its earnings increased to $505 million, or $1.23 a share, compared with $252 million, or 62 cents a share, in the quarter a year earlier. Revenue increased 18 percent, to $13.82 billion from $11.68 billion.

Amoco's net income was $469 million, or $1.82 a share, compared with $260 million, or $1.02 a share, a year ago. Sales increased 11.5 percent, to $5.8 billion from $5.2 billion.

The company attributed the results to record profits from its chemical operations, as well as higher margins from its refined products.

Occidental posted net income of $113 million, or 52 cents a share, up from $97 million, or 50 cents a share, in the comparable period last year. Revenue increased 7.7 percent, to $4.48 billion from $4.16 billion.

The Los Angeles-based company said the recent quarter's results included gains of $53 million from the sale of a 25 percent interest in a subidiary that runs the company's oil and gas operations in Colombia.

The company's oil and gas earnings rose to $155 million from $45 million, reflecting the gain. The company said the results also reflected overall improvement in natural gas prices and sales, as well as the sale of certain oil and gas assets.

Unocal said its earnings increased to $178.4 million, or $1.53 a share, compared with $60.7 million, or 52 cents a share, in the 1987 period. Sales for the Los Angeles-based company increased 11.7 percent, to $2.3 billion from $2.06 billion.

Unocal said it would have posted an earnings decline in the quarter if not for an accounting change relating to its deferred taxes. The company said higher exploratory expenses, lower geomothermal earnings and lower crude oil prices pushed its operating income to down $44 million for the quarter, compared with $61 million in the period a year earlier.

Unocal reported a $322 million write-down of certain assets, including its remaining investment in the Parachute Creek shale oil project in Colorado and about half its investment in its molybdenum mine and processing facilities in New Mexico and Pennsylvania. The company also wrote down 40 percent of its investment in needle coke facilities at its Chicago refinery.

Unocal's stock lost 25 cents, to $37, on the New York Stock Exchange.

Oil prices steady as OPEC meets

Oil futures trading has gone into a holding pattern in advance of the OPEC meetings starting today in Vienna, Austria.

At Monday's session on the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, settled at $18.40 per barrel, up 10 cents from Friday. Today prices showed very little movement with WTI opening only two cents higher than Monday.

Among May contracts for refined products, wholesale unleaded gasoline closed at 52.05 cents per gallon, down 0.24 cent, while wholesale heating oil settled 0.61 cent higher, at 51.21 cents per gallon.

Officials of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and rival producers are meeting in Vienna to discuss ways of tightening world supplies to boost prices.

Representatives from non-cartel producers Mexico, Colombia, Egypt, Angola, Oman, Malaysia, Brunei and China were to meet today and Wednesday with OPEC's price monitoring committee, comprised of the oil ministers of Saudi Arabia, Indonesia, Venezuela, Nigeria and Algeria.

John Azarow, an analyst at the Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. securities firm, said the market drifted throughout Monday's session as traders waited to see "what, if anything, is going to happen."

Thursday all 13 cartel members are scheduled to convene.

Stocks move up in slow trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved ahead in quiet trading Monday amid expectations of further signs of a healthy economic outlook.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 22.21 points to 2,037.30.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 3 to 2 in New York Stock Exchange-listed trading, with 939 up, 603 down and 470 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 156.95 million shares, against 152.52 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index rose 1.18 to 148.21.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $19 billion, or 0.73 percent, in value.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 179.03 million shares.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 2.91 to 305.83, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 2.32 at 262.46.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 1.23 to 375.27. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 298.95, up .92.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Fasken pays $4.1 million for Dawson field

HOUSTON (SWN) — American National Petroleum Co. sold two producing properties for a cash consideration of $5.9 million. The Gin North Field in Dawson County was sold to Barbara Fasken of Midland, for $4.1 million cash and the Pownall Ranch Unit in Campbell County, Wyoming was sold to Terra Resources Inc. of Tulsa for $1.8 million cash.

The net proceeds of $4,915,000, after bank debt repayment of $985,000, will be used to fund the company's 1988 capital expenditure budget and for general corporate purposes.

San Angelo bank reports $6.9 million loss

Central Nantional Bankshares of San Angelo has reported a net loss of $6.9 million as a result of $10.7 million in loan losses. Bank officials, however, report that accounts are safe as a result of a higher than required capital reserves. The bank has 7.5 percent capital reserves as opposed to the minimum requirement of 5.5 percent.

Blockbuster, Major Video agree to merger

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — The Blockbuster Entertainment Corp. has agreed to acquire the Major Video Corp. in a stock transaction valued at about $56 million. The merger would combine the nation's top two video retailers.

Under the deal, Blockbuster, which operates 200 stores and is based in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will issue one share for every 2.25 shares of Major Video. The exact number of Blockbuster shares to be issued is unclear as Major Video's note- and option-holders may convert their holdings to stock before the deal is completed. Major Video, based in Las Vegas, Nev., was founded in 1985 by the former film distributor Henry E. Cartwright. It operates 127 stores in 17 states and Canada.

Rig fire cuts Brazil's production 11 percent

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Three ships were fighting a fire on Brazil's largest offshore oil rig, and the state oil company, Petrobas, said the blaze has caused an 11 percent drop in the nation's petroleum output.

Carlos Pinto, Petrobras spokesman, said the fire broke out Sunday when gas leaked from the Enchova platform in the Campos Basin, Brazil's richest oil-producing region, 120 miles east of Rio De Janeiro. The 250 workers on the oil rig were safely evacuated to a ship, he said.

Enchova and four connected fields were shut down, halting the production of 71,000 barrels of oil and 2 million cubic meters of gas per day, Pinto said.

Campos Basin fields produce 60 percent of the nation's oil output of 615,000 barrels a day and 40 percent of the 17 million cubic meters of gas. Brazil imports about 45 percent of the oil it uses.

High court will hear Exxon contract dispute

HOUSTON (AP) — A contract dispute between Exxon Co. USA and a Houston oil company will go before the U.S. Supreme Court, which agreed Monday to decide if Exxon waited too long to collect on a standby letter of credit.

The case will be used to decide a procedural point on the relationship of federal and state court rulings in cases based on state law, the justices said.

Exxon agreed to ship 558,000 barrels of oil to Houston Oil during July 1981, and Houston Oil & Refining Inc. agreed to ship an equal quantity of oil to Exxon from September through December of that year.

Houston Oil was issued a standby letter of credit by Banque de Paris et des Pays-Bas (Paribas) that said $19.3 million would be payable upon certification that Houston Oil failed to deliver the promised oil between September and December 1981.

Health groups seek to regulate cigarettes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three health groups are asking the government to begin regulating low-tar cigarettes on grounds that advertising claims for the products make them a drug subject to federal oversight.

If accepted by the Food and Drug Administration, agreed to by Congress and upheld in court, the arguments made by the three groups on Monday would place the FDA in the ironic position of regulating cigarettes low in tar and nicotine, but not other cigarettes.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Dawson yields Silurian discovery

From Staff Reports

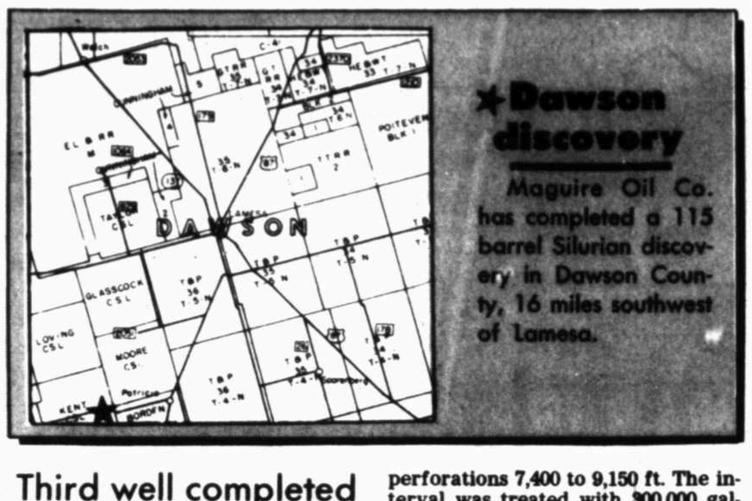

A prospect in Dawson County has yielded an Upper Silurian discovery, south of the Patricia field.

MAGUIRE OIL CO., Dallas, completed the No. 1 Carson Echols to pump 115 barrels of 40.3 gravity crude and 132 barrels of water from perforations 12,061 to 12,075 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of acid.

Permitted as a 12,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 12,500 ft. and plugged back to 12,075 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 12,493 ft.

The well topped the Lower Mississippian at 11,580 ft., Woodford at 11,930, and the Upper Silurian at 12,062 ft. on ground elevation of 2,921.5 ft. Pay was topped at 12,062 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and east lines of Labor 2, League 263, Kent CSL, 16 miles southwest of Lamesa.

Desperado field nets 277 barrel producer

New Atoka production has been added to the Desperado field of Midland County as JOHN L. COX, Midland, completes activity in the area.

On potential test, the No. 5 Willis flowed 277 barrels of 45 gravity crude, 598 Mcfd and no water on a 14/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,800 psi. The well flowed from perforations 10,679 to 10,885 ft., which had ben acidized with 11,000 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured with 35,000 gallons of gel and 41,500 lbs. sand. Gas-oil ratio is 2,160:1.

Total depth was 11,000 ft. and a 4 1/2 inch liner was hung from 9,064 to 11,000 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,683 ft., include the Redbeds at 300 ft., Upper Spraberry at 7,360, Lower Spraberry at 8,010, Strawn at 10,398, and the Atoka at 10,610 ft. Pay was topped at 10,610 ft.

Glitters or jitters? Investing paradoxes

By ART GARCIA
and CHRIS BARNETT
Copley News Service

All that glitters may not be gold. In fact, it may not be a good investment. Still, there has been allure through the centuries of precious metals. For most investors, the greatest attraction is gold.

Since first used as money more than 4,000 years ago, gold has been a reliable contra-cyclical investment during "hard times." Gold consistently outperforms inflation.

But the pertinent questions today are whether inflation, indeed, is on the economic horizon and whether gold prices are poised for a "third cycle" similar to those of 1970-74 and 1976-80, periods when gold prices soared — and should you go along for the historical gold roller coaster ride by adding the metal or gold shares to your investment portfolio.

While the price of gold and shares of publicly held gold mining companies move up and down in an almost untrackable pattern, the one constant about this super metal is its ability to spark controversy.

In most commodities, supply-and-demand dynamics determine the price of the product.

"With gold, the reverse seems to be true — price drives supply and demand," says Nicolas Toufexis, in the research department at Prudential-Bache, the big Wall Street investment firm.

So far into this year, the precious metals complex of stocks has been a "a disaster area," with many gold and silver mining shares having lost half or more of their value, notes James Dines, author of an investment advisory letter out of Belvedere, Calif.

But, adds Dines, "This area is getting oversold and there might be a short-term buy signal soon." He is weighing possibilities of flashing a buy signal shortly.

He also echoes the refrain about the confoundedness of investing in gold and other precious metals: "The certain knowledge that one of these years there is going to be a blood-curdling gold crisis that will send the precious metals complex up to now-unbelievably high levels."

For now, though, the consensus has turned negative on gold and gold stocks because of concerns about possible recession and deflation. Prudential-Bache, though, says that because the price of gold is unpredictable, any attempt to value gold stocks using the price of gold "is little more than speculation — or alchemy."

Instead, it uses volume-based cash flow analysis to assess the value of a gold stock relative to other gold stocks. Using that method, it has come up with four gold stocks it predicts will outperform the group and the broad market though the end of the year. The firm's favorites are Battle Mountain, Echo Bay, Freeport Gold and Newmont Gold, choices based on their projected volume gains and low controlled costs, "which should more than offset commodity price risk," Toufexis says.

Prudential-Bache's method of gold stock selection is of value to two investor groups — "those with a mandate to own gold and those seeking gold-sensitive issues as insurance," he says.

The method may also appeal to any investor who understands "and is willing to accept the unusual inherent risk in the group." Toufexis underscores gold's high volatility and says it's suitable "only for risk-oriented investors with longer time frames.

With the risk factors clearly identified then, should you own gold as part of your investment portfolio mix?

Depends if you buy into the view of some economists and other financial wizards that the great expansion of credit and money supply over the past four years, particularly in the United States, has set the stage for another inflationary cycle for gold, the first investment many people think about when inflation threatens.

These days, the price of gold is rising from a higher base level than in the previous cycle and some experts see that as meaning that it should peak at a much higher level. One forecast has gold cresting at around $1,600 an ounce in about three years, compared with a recent price in world markets of about $450-$460 an ounce.

Before others pick up on that prospect and trigger a new gold rush, say such gold bugs, now may be the time for you to do some gold prospecting of your own.

But don't make your move all at once. Invest small amounts of money over a period of time, they caution, a reminder of how explosive gold's price movement can be.

Yet, despite its sometimes wild swings, gold can actually reduce the volatility of the rest of your portfolio while at the same time increasing the yield.

In other words, say those bullish on the metal, gold decreases risk while increasing returns — and that's one of the soundest and safest of investing's golden rules.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

T-notes not redeemable before maturity date

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Can a $25,000 U.S. Treasury note, paying 7 3/8 percent interest and due to mature in June 1989, be redeemed before that? If it can, would the amount received be $25,000?

The note is in a trust fund set up by my mother who died two months ago. The bank handling the trust has consistently lost money for the trust. The Treasury note was purchased only because I insisted the bank start making safe investments.

The bank is preparing to terminate the trust and I will have the choice of taking the trust's assets either in cash or "in kind." I'd rather take the note than cash because, knowing that bank only too well, I wouldn't get the full proceeds in cash.

Doyle

A. U.S. Treasury bonds, notes and bills cannot be redeemed — by turning them in to the U.S. Treasury Department for cash — before maturity. This confuses folks who are more familiar with U.S. Savings Bonds, which can be redeemed before maturity.

While they cannot be be redeemed early, Treasury securities — bonds, notes and bills — are "marketable securities," meaning they are bought and sold in the open market. As I write this, "Treasury 7 3/8s of June '89," as they are called in the marketplace, are trading at about "100" — 100 percent of face value.

But this does not mean that $25,000 face value note would fetch $25,000 if sold. Market price quotations for Treasury securities are for amounts of $1 million and more. Smaller lots result in lower prices when sold and higher prices when purchased.

Considering your unhappiness with the bank, my firm recommendation is that you take the Treasury note and other assets in kind when the trust is terminated.

Q. Can the ownership of U.S. Treasury securities be transferred from one person to another?

A. Sure. Exactly how the change is accomplished depends on what form the Treasury security is in — book-entry, registered or bearer.

No certificates are printed for securities in book-entry form. Ownership is recorded on a Treasury Department-Federal Reserve computer system; owners receive statements of account. To change book-entry ownership from one "Treasury Direct" account to another, you must fill out Security Transfer Request Form PD 5178 and submit it to a Federal Reserve Bank or branch. Treasury bills have come only in book-entry form since 1979; new issues of Treasury notes and bonds that way since August 1986.

If it's a registered Treasury note or bond, the owner's name appears on the engraved certificate and on the Treasury's record books. To accomplish the transfer, the owner must sign the certificate on the back, have his or her signature guaranteed by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company and deliver the certificate to the Federal Reserve with instruction for transfer.

And, if it's a bearer note or bond with interest coupons attached, the owner's name does not appear on the certificate. Ownership can be transferred by handing the certificate to the new owner. No bearer Treasury notes or bonds have been issued since 1982.

Finally, if the security is held for you by a brokerage firm or bank, your broker or banker will handle the transfer.

Q. I opened a Treasury Direct account for the purchase of U.S. Treasury securities by obtaining a New Account Request Form PD 5182 from my district Federal Reserve Bank. When I buy Treasury securities by submitting a "tender" through the mail, must the check I send be certified? And should I send it by certified mail?

A. Certified or cashier checks must be used when buying Treasury bills, but personal checks are acceptable when purchasing Treasury notes and bonds.

For safety sake, send your tender and check by certified mail.

WAGEMAN

The former Midland banker compared the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's pending operation to an organ transplant, "it's a very complicated, very delicate situation," he said.

Wageman made his comments following a "before-hours breakfast" of the Midland Chamber of Commerce attended by more than 200 of the city's business and civic leaders.

"I have a large store of patience for the regulators," said the former chairman of First National Bank of Midland and RepublicBank First National Midland, who left the Tall City in 1986.

"Clearly, I believe this year we will see — in dollar terms — the majority of the state's problems taken care of this year," he said, but declined to speculate when or where the FHLBB and Federal Savings & Loan Deposit Insurance Corp. might begin their consolidation plans.

In banking circles, he said he sees the recently completed government-assisted bailout of First City Bancorporation as a very positive step for Texas and predicted that First RepublicBank Corp.'s current uncertainties will be resolved this year.

"When you're below zero, you're below zero. It's doesn't make much difference how far," Wageman said of the $11.6 billion estimated deficit in the FSLIC fund.

"Congress has made a promise that no insured depositor will lose a dime of their savings and they will back up that promise," said the Notre Dame graduate, who hold an MBA from the University of Chicago.

However, the industry has done about all it can in terms of paying insurance premiums which are already 2.3 times higher than banks pay for comparable insurance coverage, he said. If the fund's shortfall continues to grow with the higher insurance premiums and industry consolidations, a different recapitalization method will have to be devised.

Wageman characterized as "chatter" the fears buzzing around the industry concerning possible "dumping" of real estate once thrift consolidations begin.

"There isn't a hole big enough to dump the surplus real estate into," he said. Sunbelt currently owns 12,000 apartments, 1.4 million sq. ft. of office space, 1.2 million sq. ft. of retail space, about 500 houses and 8,000 acres of "raw, prime development land," Wageman said.

Sunbelt and other lenders will hold on to their real estate until they can sell it "reasonably," which will require the reemergence of two market forces — speculators and more people, said Wageman.

"Speculation is all right, as long as we're not financing it," he said, adding "more people living in apartments, pushing people out to buy houses means more people spending money in shopping centers, which means more people earning wages in offices. That's what we need."

But there will be no easy solutions for the thrift industry's current woes, Wageman admits. There were many factors that cause the situation and "the solution will have to be as interesting as the problem."

GNP

This helped boost consumer spending by $23.6 billion in the first quarter, a 3.8 percent annual rate of increase. The report said more than half of that growth came in auto sales.

Business investment for capital equipment shot up at an annual rate of 32.5 percent in the first quarter, the fastest advance since a 39.5 percent increase in the fourth quarter of 1983.

In other good news, the country's trade deficit, after removing the effects of inflation, narrowed by $3.6 billion in the first quarter, continuing the trend of improvement that began in mid-1986.

The administration, which is forecasting that GNP will grow 2.9 percent for the full year, is counting on further improvements in the trade deficit to supply almost half of GNP growth this year.

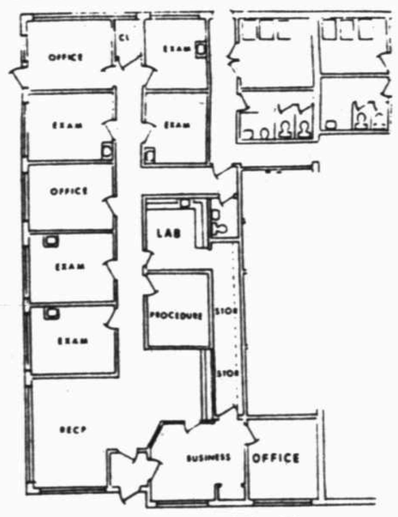

Much of the rest of the increase is expected to come from higher business capital spending as companies expand production facilities to meet a growing export demand.

Both of those trends were evident in today's GNP report, providing good news for the Reagan administration, which is counting on a seventh straight year of economic growth to boost chances for a Republican presidential win in November.

In another report, the government said that after-tax corporate profits rose an even faster 2.6 percent in the final three months of 1987. This was an upward revision from a month ago, when the government put the increase in business profits at 1.6 percent.

Two factors that held back GNP growth in the first quarter were a 9.4 percent drop in residential construction spending and a 22.3 percent drop in spending by the federal government, reflecting in large part a swing in farm subsidy payments.

Lunch At El Chico Could Have A Dramatic Effect On Your Secretary's Output.

The Cuellar Family has a simple suggestion for improving employee relations. Just bring your secretary to El Chico for lunch during Secretary's Week.

Both of you can choose from any of our authentic Mexican dishes. From steaming enchiladas to sizzling chicken and beef fajitas. All prepared by hand to the same exacting standards passed down by Mama Cuellar.

And just for joining us for lunch, your secretary will receive a special coupon book good for discounts on return visits.

So break up the nine to five routine at noon this week. And show your secretary a little appreciation at El Chico. The results will astound you.

17th team makes a crowd in exclusive NBA playoffs

By IRA BERKOW
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — How can the National Basketball Association be serious about calling this the playoffs when the 17th-, 18th-, 19th-, 20th-, 21st-, 22d- and 23d-best teams don't make it?

But that's what it's called, and the NBA now enters its second season of the season, with a sparse 16 of its 23 teams still active.

Locally, excitement has been fanned now that the Knicks tied for the 14th-best record in the league and earned a place in the playoffs, the first time they've been involved in post-season games in four years.

The Knicks finished the so-called regular season with 38 victories and 44 losses, for a .463 percentage in the Atlantic Divison. They were a distant 19 games behind the first-place Celtics — in basketball terms, it's the equivalent of about half-way round the world.

This is not the worst record of an NBA team in the playoffs this season. San Antonio was 31-51 and 23 games out of first place in the Midwest Division.

In fact, it's not the most woeful of records to qualify for the playoffs in sports this year. Toronto of the National Hockey League holds that distinction, finishing with 21 victories, 49 losses and 10 ties, and was the 16th of the 21 NHL teams to round out its bloated playoffs.

The National Football League, in its playoff system, is more creditable, with 10 of 28 teams participating. Last season, with the strike and the scabaroony games, the team with the worst record to make the playoffs, Minnesota, still won more games than it lost, with an 8-7 record.

The playoffs for major league baseball are nearly embarrassing in the paucity of entrants, with only four of 26 teams getting in. This is preposterous. Imagine all those other cities deprived of playoff games. The NBA and the NHL wouldn't think of doing such a mean thing.

In baseball last season, two teams had an identical won-lost percentage as the Knicks. The Rangers and Angels tied for last in the Eastern Division of the American League. Yet it was unimaginable to have seen those two teams in the playoffs.

The NBA, however, is set in its ways and rabid fans chirp when their team makes the playoff, regardless of the gluttony of the selection procedure.

It's also true that the Knicks' 88-86 victory on the road against Indiana Saturday night — a game they had to take to remain in sneakers for at least another week or so — was stimulating because of the pressure involved.

The records of the Knicks and Pacers were nearly identical and, by a quirk of scheduling, the game meant the playoffs for the winner and a long retreat from the weariness of the world for the loser.

Now it's the Knicks against the Celtics in the first round of the Eastern Conference playoffs, and fans in Gotham are hoping that this will be a series like the one in which Bradley hit that shot from the corner in the last second in Boston Garden, or the time they handcuffed Cowens, or had their hands full with the Celtics even though Havlicek was playing with one arm.

Meanwhile, the Celtics, though they came through the 1987-88 season with their second-poorest record of the Larry Bird years, still finished with 57-25, the second-best mark in the NBA, to the Lakers' 62-20.

The Knicks are a team presumably on the rise, with a remarkable young coach, Rick Pitino, while the Celtics are virtually elderly. But Bird, slimmed down in weight and trimmed in hair style to near matinee-idol proportions, had one of his most noteworthy seasons on the basketball court and in the barber shop.

As starting fives go, there may be none finer that Bird, Parish, McHale, Ainge and Dennis Johnson. Jim Paxson, the guard acquired during the season from Portland, has made a huge impact coming off the bench. But the major disappointment for the Celtics — and what may turn out to be the telling difference at playoffs' end for them — is that Bill Walton will not be available.

Walton, a beautiful but hobbled player, had been the indispensable sixth man when the Celtics won their last NBA title two seasons ago and who, valiantly and painfully, tried to do the same in the 1986-87 season. "But," he admitted, during the finals last season in which the Celtics lost to the Lakers, "I can't move."

Walton had been traveling with the Celtics for the past month or so and working out, and dreaming. He and the Celtics hoped he would make a comeback from his foot operation over the winter. And in March, the last time the Celtics played the Knicks at Madison Square Garden, he sat on the bench in civilian suit and sneakers. It seemed that, though his body and mind were telling him the lamentable truth, his feet were still itching to play.

GTCC to host state tourney

From Staff Reports

The Women's West Texas Golf Association will hold its annual tournament at Green Tree Country Club in August.

The tournament will attract 144 of Texas top amateurs. The WTGA board will visit GTCC April 26-27 to finalize tournament plans.

Sandra Palmer won the tournament at Midland Country Club in 1963, the last time the event was hosted by the Tall City.

Games' to show dramatic surplus

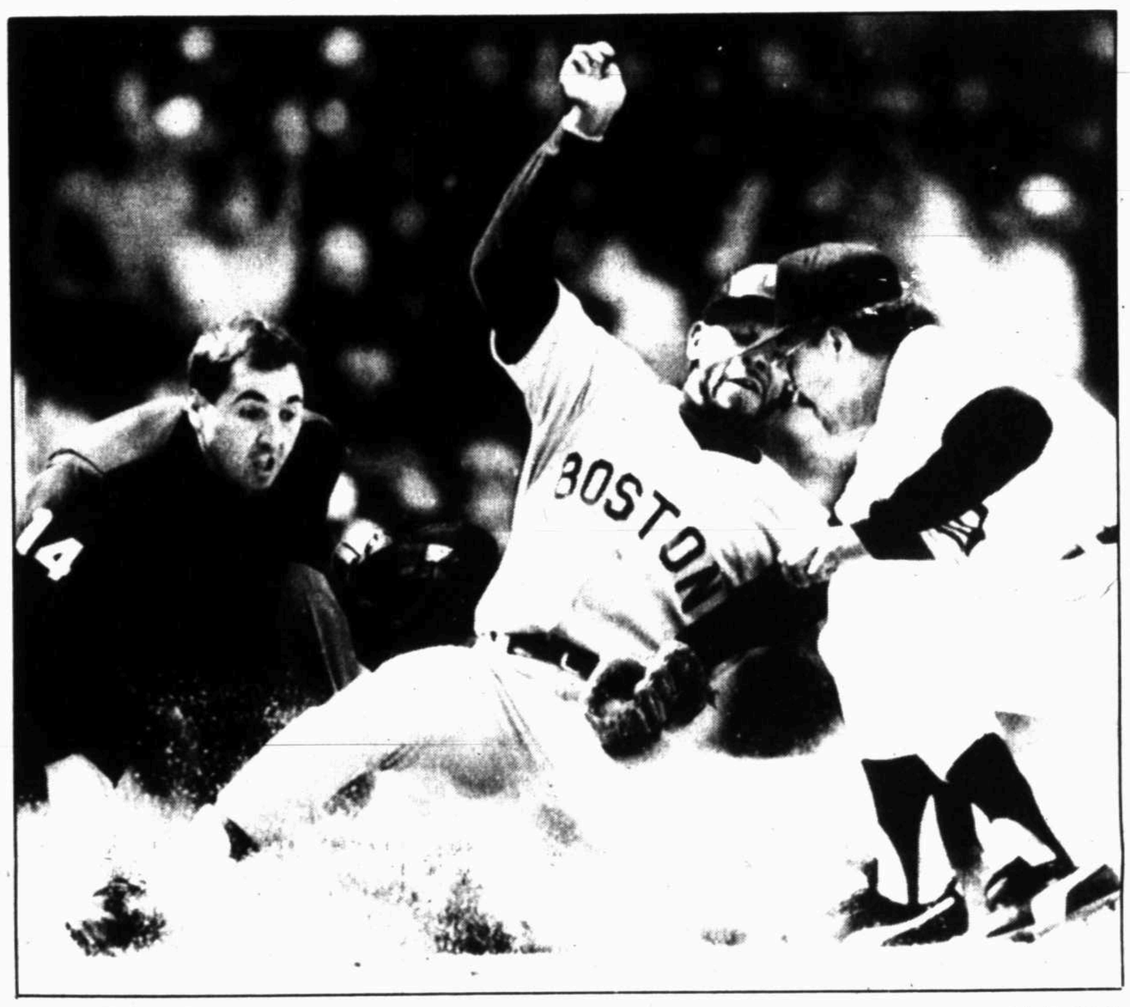

OTTAWA (AP) — The Calgary Winter Olympics could pump as much as $150 million into amateur sport in Canada, some 30 times more than the amount projected when the city began bidding for the 1988 Games.

Bill Pratt, president of Calgary's Olympic organizing committee, said the original prediction was about $5 million.

"By my calculation, that $5 million will be closer to $150 million," Pratt told a Canadian Olympic Association meeting on Sunday.

The surplus projection combines the organizing committee's income with that of the Olympic association and the Calgary Olympic Development Association.

Through various agreements, the development association has received about $69 million from the organizing committee and the federal government.

Twins, Cards 'repeat' victims

By MURRAY CHASS
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The St. Louis Cardinals have had two experiences with the repeater syndrome, so it comes as no surprise to them. The Minnesota Twins, on the other hand, are encountering it for the first time.

No pennant winner from 1978 through 1986 has repeated the following year, and both the Twins and the Cardinals, the winner and the loser of last year's World Series, are in last place in their respective divisions three weeks into the season.

Neither team, on the other hand, has suffered the ignominy and the devastation that has struck the Baltimore Orioles, who are still trying to gain their first victory of the season after 18 tries. They try again Tuesday night against the Twins in Minnesota.

AP Laserphoto

Orioles' Cal Ripken reflects Baltimore's 0-18 start while waiting turn to bat in dugout.

AS WEAK as the Orioles were supposed to be, their 0-18 record nevertheless is one of the major surprises of the young season. At the positive end of the surprise scale, the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Cleveland Indians lead the two Eastern Divisions.

Not enough time, of course, has elapsed to determine trends that could become season-long. The Orioles, for example, will win some games. The Indians, almost as certainly, do not figure to remain at or near the top of the American League East much longer. Despite their strong start, they cannot expect to compete on the level of the New York Yankees, who have started as strongly as they had been expected to.

NOR CAN the Pirates expect to stay with the New York Mets in the National League East. But because of their pitching staff they could remain legitimate long after the Indians have faded.

"The Pirates have carried over their play from the end of last season," Joe McIlvaine, the Mets' vice president of baseball operations, said Monday. "They're a young club, but they're beginning to believe in themselves. They're for real. This isn't a flash in the pan. They have some good young players."

Led by Bobby Bonilla, the third baseman, and Barry Bonds, the left fielder, the Pirates have won 13 of their first 17 games. That's an even better start (.765) than their 1987 finish (27 victories in their last 38 games, a .711 percentage).

As well as Bonds and Bonilla have produced, McIlvaine sees two relief pitchers acquired from San Francisco last August as the keys to the Pirates' continued progress.

"The key for them is Gott and Robinson," the Mets' executive said by telephone from Atlanta, speaking of Jim Gott and Jeff Robinson, the Pirates' late-inning relief tandem. "Before they got them last year, even if they stayed close, you could beat them in the eighth or ninth. Now they have a better bullpen."

BUT, MCILVAINE noted, the Pirates haven't played the Mets or the Montreal Expos, "the teams I consider the best in the division."

The Mets have been somewhat inconsistent, but Dwight Gooden (four victories in four starts) and Ron Darling (two shutouts in four starts) have re-established the first-class nature of the pitching staff and Gary Carter has re-established himself as an offensive threat.

The Expos, with a .500 record, have yet to show the type of play that made them the surprise team of 1987, but, McIlvaine said: "They'll get there. They have a solid club from top to bottom."

In the N.L. West, the Los Angeles Dodgers have benefited instantly from the major overhaul they undertook during the winter. The only element they didn't anticipate was the weather: They were rained out an unprecedented four consecutive days last week.

In the A.L. East, the Indians have started the way some people expected them to play last season, but their pitching, which they did not change during the winter, remains tenuous. The staff earned run average had been impressive because it was under 2.00, but it ballooned to 2.56 when the Twins scored 12 earned runs Sunday. Another such game would put the team era at 3.00.

The Yankees' pitching staff has started the season as expected, with questionable consistency. The strongest starter has been the youngest, Al Leiter, who takes a 3-0 record into the game against Kansas City Tuesday night.

Roger Clemens has a 4-0 record for the Boston Red Sox, who appear ready to spend the season challenging the Yankees.

"I see a much improved Boston club," Harry Dalton, the Brewers' general manager, said from Milwaukee. "Given the emergence of their young players, the availability of Clemens from opening day and the addition of Lee Smith, they're back in contention. Right now it's shaping up as one of those '50's Yankees-Red Sox battles."

Midland loses a heartbreaker

From Staff Reports

WICHITA, Kan.— Wichita's Pilots took a 2-1 lead in their Texas League series with Midland's Angels with a 2-1 victory here Monday night as shortstop Bill Wrona and outfielder Jeff Yurtin took matters into their own hands, producing both runs.

Midland jumped in front 1-0 in the second when Tom Alfredson doubled and Jesus Alfaro singled him home.

Todd Eggersten, 0-3, made it stand up until Wichita scored an unearned run in the sixth on Wrona's single and Yurtin followed with a single that scored the run when centerfielder Alfredson let the ball get through.

In the eighth, Wrona singled with one out and Yurtin doubled home the run.

Eggersten pitched six hit ball for 7 2/3 innings and wound up with the defeat. Jeff Childers leveled his record at 1-1 with eight innings of six-hit ball and Mike Miller came on to get his second save.

The teams play again tonight and Wednesday before the Angels return home for a 10-game homestand.

Mario Monico's bases-loaded single in the ninth inning powered El Paso to a 2-0 victory over San Antonio while Jackson defeated Shreveport, 8-1. The Tulsa Drillers were defeated 9-1 in an exhibition game with the Texas Rangers.

Monico's single broke up a scoreless tie and came an inning after the Missions blew a chance to score when they got two men on base, but couldn't score.

TED BATTLES

Draft day falls short of being in stands at kickoff

Battles

They said it would be just like the regular season, only better. This, they said, would possess the same kind of excitement as being in the stands for the season opening kickoff.

This demonstrated the heights to which the NFL Free Agent player draft had climbed. It was billed as a happening or, "move over NCAA Final Four."

But somehow there was something electric missing, like O.J. Simpson, Eric Dickerson, the scheming to land the rights to a Tony Dorsett, Vinny Testaverde, Marcus Allen, Jim Plunkett, ...Pat Sullivan, Terry Baker?

They were not only missing, but so was any reasonable facsimile there of.

If this was like being in the stands for the opening kickoff, it must have been the Super Bowl kickoff.

If this is the best the colleges can come up with, you've got to wonder how these athletes are spending their time in college these days.

IT'S QUITE possible that this year's crop may make it necessary to reevaluate Sunday's proceedings after next season. After all, the actual list isn't handy, but it's a good bet that Timmy Smith probably wasn't grabbed before No. 20 last year and, if he had been, he probably would have excited the same raves as this year's crop.

Sometimes this excitement business is overrated. Last year, the big question was whether Testaverde would wind up with Tampa or someone would trade an entire team just to get him.

So what happened, Tampa wound up with Testaverde, but he couldn't beat out a journeyman quarterback that had been cut loose by two or three other pro teams.

Still, the pros acted like a kid on Christmas morning by what was discovered in this year's grab bag.

THE COWBOYS seemed happy to get University of Miami wide receiver Michael Irvin, a much needed top-grade receiver.

Tom Landry even intimated that he didn't think Irvin's celebrated end zone theatrics in the wake of a touchdown were all that flamboyant, like, say, Butch Johnson's TD contortions were.

Tom's no dummy. He very well knows there will be no TD dances without the guy who put the ball on Irvin's finger tips last season at Miami. That's the guy the Cowboys really need.

Face it, Dallas doesn't have the throwing arm to exploit Irvin's talents. It's like having the arrow without the bow, a bullet with no gun.

Still, as long as the Cowboys are blissfully happy, they won't have to answer the critics until this fall.

THIS QUITE possibly was a good draft, one in which a lot of teams helped themselves, but with players at the less visible positions.

This year's crop just didn't possess the glamour-position player the caliber of Roger Staubach, Herschel Walker, Dan Marino, the kind who by his college exploits stimulated the imagination as to his professional capabilities.

The fun part of the draft comes next season when we find out who the real impact players were. Or better still, next fall when it comes time to analyze the draft picks of the Chicago...St. Louis...Phoenix Cardinals.

Becky Rasure lands Amistad 32-pounder

From Staff Reports

Becky Rasure of Midland probably is ready to turn to another sport, like the lady golfer who scored the hole-in-one on her first day out and asked, "Now that I've mastered golf, what else can I try?"

In only our second time out, Becky landed a 32-pound, 38 1/2 inch striper at Lake Amistad over the weekend. She was fishing with Gus Carey.

However, it wasn't quite as "easy" as a hole-in-one. The striper took the top water bait and dove to the bottom, wrapping the line around a tree.

Just when it looked like Becky would have to cut the line, the striper swam out and back to the surface and "all we had to do was net it."....

THE HIGH SKY BASS Clug will meet at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Southside Lions Club building, 101 E. New York. Awards presentations and reports on the annual invitational will top the agenda.

Waves were an estimated "five to six feet high" for the Mini-Classic held by the HSBC at Lake Spence recently. Claude Bass took first with 7.98 pojnds. Richard Kleinhans was next at 4.75. Other finshers were Milton Saltzman, 4.04; Alice Bass, 2.79; and Dow Scott, 2.59.

HSBC members are reminded they will need a Mexico Fishing license for the Lake Amistad (May 14-15) tournament, "if you plan to fish the Mexican side of the lake.

Tournament point leaders for the first four months of the season are Dean Armstrong, 599.44; Richard Kleinhans, 559.84; Claude Bass, 548.00; Terry Denton, 473.28; Charles Erck, 453.12; Melvin Dunn, 329.12.....

FOR THE second year in a row, Lake Fork fishing guide Dennis Canada has landed a largemouth bass big enough to qualify for the state's Share a Lone Star Lunker program. The fish he caught was the same one he had caught last spring, says the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The big bass weighed 14.92 pounds this year, down from 15.8 pounds last spring. Under the lunker program, anglers can lend bass over 13 pounds to the state for hatchery research. The fishermen are given replicas of their catch and are encouraged to return the fish to the lake alive.

Canada's catch was put back in Lake Fork after spending time at the Tyler Fish Hatchery. A transmitter was placed on it, but Canada was not using tracking gear when he recaught the fish.

The recent death of a 20-foot whale in the surf near Matagorda may have been caused by the animal's ingesting pieces of plastic sheeting, according to the TPWD.

The whale, tentatatively identified as a Minke whale, was found to have plastic sheeting in one of its three stomachs and in the passageway between the second and third stomach, the department said.

The TPWD fish records committee has certified four new state records.

They include a 32-pound, 6-ounce banded shrimp eel caught by Cy Bennett of Ingleside on March 24 out of Port Aransas; a 5-pound unicorn filefish caught by Eugene Foreman II of Groves on Sept. 25 off Sabine Pass; and a 31-pound almaco jack taken by Rusty Schwartz of Houston with a speargun on March 6 out of Freeport.

John Parker of Conroe caught a 2-pound 12.4-ounce goldfish Nov. 14 in Lake Conroe for another state record.

Ex-Bulldog sets NAIA records for being hit

From Staff Reports

ALPINE— Sul Ross State leftfielder Darrell Holmes was hit again, and again, and again to take sole possession of two NAIA records.

The Midland senior did it while playing with a broken finger, broken while diving back into first base a couple of weeks ago.

Holmes tied the NAIA season and career records for being hit by a pitch April 2 with 11 for the season and 22 for his career.

He broke it against Tarleton State in a weekend series in which he was hit three times.

If there were a toughness record, Holmes probably would hold that also. Despite his skills as a standing shooting duck target, he has left a game only once, when he was hit on his left knee.

"Darrell is the consumate leadoff hitter," says SRSU assistant Calvin King. "He gets on base more than anyone else on the team."

As a leadoff hitter, Holmes' philosophy is basic, "I try to get on base any way I can. You just have to stand in there."

Holmes has an on-base percentage of .568.

Chaps' Smith signs up with Kansas State

From Staff Reports

Seton Hall College failed to turn Billy Ray Smith's head on a recent visit and the Midland College sophomore Monday signed to attend Kansas State University on a basketball scholarship.

Smith played on this year's Region V finalist team and in 1987 was on the team that reached the national finals.

A two-year starter for the Chaps, Smith picked K-State because "the people up there are crazy about basketball and basketball is the main sport."

Smith will be facing old mates in Big Eight competition next year when he goes up against Skeeter Henry and Mookie Blaylock at Oklahoma and Lincoln Minor at Kansas. Henry signed with OU this year. Others from this year's team signing with Division I schools were Stewart Barnett, Wyoming, and Clifton Jones, Idaho.

The Chaps also announced the signing of two more recruits, Daniel Meyer, a 20-point a game scorer from Grand Prarie, and 6-7 Fred Campbell from North Carolina.

Edmonton expels Calgary

Associated Press

NHL

The Edmonton Oilers played like the defending Stanley Cup champions. The Calgary Flames hardly played at all.

"To lose four straight, there's not a lot to say except they played harder and more desperate than we did," Calgary veteran Lanny McDonald said Monday night following a 6-4 loss to the Oilers that swept the proud and potent Flames right out of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The shocking four-game sweep of the Flames in the Smythe Division final sent the Oilers into the Campbell Conference final against the winner of the Norris Division series between Detroit and St. Louis.

The Oilers thus became the first team in the playoffs to advance to the conference final. Meanwhile, Detroit beat St. Louis 3-1 to take a 3-1 lead in that best-of-7 series.

In action tonight, it's Boston at Montreal in the Adams Division final and New Jersey at Washington in the Patrick.

Smythe Division

The Oilers built a four-goal lead into the second period and then held off Calgary with the help of Glenn Anderson's clinching goal.

Edmonton had a comfortable 4-0 lead six minutes into the second period but Calgary cut that to 5-3 heading into the third. But Anderson's fifth playoff goal at 11:40 ended any realistic hopes Calgary had of taking the series back home.

Norris Division

Gerard Gallant scored two goals and goaltender Glen Hanlon stopped 27 shots to lead Detroit over St. Louis and to the brink of a series triumph.

Gallant scored in the first and third periods, giving him six goals for the playoffs, to help the Red Wings move within one game of clinching the Norris championship.

Adams Division

Montreal is on the verge of losing a playoff series to Boston — something the Canadiens haven't done since the 1943 season through 18 playoff meetings.

"We're not panicking," Montreal Coach Jean Perron said.

Patrick Division

With goaltender Pete Peeters and defenseman Garry Galley recovering from concussions in Game 4, the Capitals are further depleted as they face the Devils in Game 5 tonight at the Capital Centre. They had lost defenseman Rod Langway to injury earlier in the series.

Still, the Capitals are playing with restored confidence, thanks to their strong showing on Sunday night when they beat the Devils 4-1 with one of their finest defensive performances of the playoffs.

"I think it was the best we've played in the series," forward Mike Gartner said of Game 4. "It was the first really technically sound game we've played against the Devils."

Bosox' Hurst can pitch, too

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Those who think Boston's pitching rotation starts and ends with Roger Clemens should take a closer look at Bruce Hurst.

They will see Clemens-like numbers.

"He pitched very well," Red Sox Manager John McNamara said after Hurst beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-1 in the only major league game played Monday night. "He didn't walk anybody and he threw strikes."

Hurst, who allowed six hits and struck out eight as the Red Sox won their sixth straight game, rasied his record to 3-0. He has allowed just 22 hits in 31 innings and has struck out 28 batters.

Clemens raised his record to 4-0 by blanking the Brewers 4-0 on Sunday. He has struck out 49 batters in 43 innings this season while allowing just 27 hits.

"It's just that we're in a groove," Hurst said after throwing just 114 pitches. "I changed speeds, hit the spots, and got ahead of the hitters."

The Brewers finally scored a run off Hurst in the ninth inning to deny the left-hander his first shutout of the season. Greg Brock's double to center field scored Glenn Braggs with two out. Then Hurst ended the game by striking out rookie designated hitter Joey Meyer for the fourth time.

"I thought he pitched very well," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said of Hurst. "You don't strike out eight hitters and not have good stuff.

McNamara said the key to the Boston's streak is execution.

"We're getting the sacrifice flies when we need them and with runners in scoring position, we're executing," McNamara said.

McNamara saw rookie outfielder Brady Anderson execute all night. Anderson was 2-for-2 with two RBI and two runs scored.

Anderson, who had been hitless in 20 at-bats recently, collected his first game-winning RBI with a sacrifice fly in the third inning to give the Red Sox a 1-0 lead.

"Anderson's starting to come around," McNamara said. "He's getting his timing down and looks more comfortable at the plate."

Anderson, batting .200 at gametime, was happy to contribute.

"I just try and go up there and relax," he said. "It takes longer to realize that you're pressing at the plate than to realize that you aren't pressing anymore," Anderson said.

The Red Sox got a run in the fifth when Marty Barrett drove in Anderson with his second hit of the game. Barrett's single in the third had extended his hitting streak to six straight games.

Boston made it 3-0 when Ellis Burks extended his hitting streak to six games with a single that scored Anderson.

The Red Sox added two runs in the ninth when Mark Clear, the fourth Milwaukee pitcher, walked Anderson to force in a run. Clear also yielded Boston's fifth run when Barrett hit a sacrifice fly to center that scored Spike Owen.

Dan Plesac relieved Clear and struck out Jim Rice with the bases loaded to snap Rice's hitting streak at six games.

"We're not 100 percent offensively yet, but it's a lot of fun," Hurst said.

The Red Sox are now 4-0 on a nine-game road trip that continues tonight against the Chicago White Sox.

Elsewhere in the AL tonight, Baltimore, 0-18, will try for its first victory against Minnesota. Also, it will be Kansas City at New York, Seattle at Cleveland, California at Detroit, Oakland at Toronto and Milwaukee at Texas.

In the National League, it will be Cincinnati at Montreal, New York at Atlanta, Philadelphia at Houston, Chicago at Los Angeles, St. Louis at San Diego and Pittsburgh at San Francisco.

NBA attendance up 4.9 percent

NEW YORK (AP) — Attendance at NBA games rose 4.9 percent this season, setting a record for the fifth consecutive year, the league said Monday.

A total of 12,654,374 fans attended the 943 regular-season games, up from 12,065,351 a year ago. Average attendance increased from 12,795 to 13,419, highest in NBA history.

NBA attendance has risen 31.3 percent since 1983.

UNM OUT— Arizona State replaced New Mexico with Lamar on its 1988 football schedule. UNM had scheduled ASU and Air Force the same day because UNM officials misplaced the contracts signed almost 10 years ago agreeing to the game at ASU.

AL PICKS RAY — California's Johnny Ray, .593 average and 13 RBI, was named American League Player of the Week.

WIMBLEDON— The comparative weakness of the dollar means that prize money at this summer's Wimbledon has rocketed by almost a quarter in dollar terms. Although the amount in pounds sterling has risen by a modest 5.8 percent to 2,612,126 pounds, the dollar equivalent is up by 22.9 percent, because of the lower dollar rate last year.

The winner of the men's singles has risen by 155,000 pounds last year (then $220,000) to 165,000 pounds ($272,250 based on $1.65). The women's singles champion will get 148,500 pounds ($245,025 compared with last year's 139,500 pounds (then $198,000).

deWIT RETIRES— Canadian heavyweight champion Willie deWit is retiring from boxing to go into business in Los Angeles. DeWit compiled a 20-1-1 record with 14 knockouts since turning professional in December 1984, a few months after winning the silver medal at the 1984 Olympics. His last fight was a 10-round unanimous decision over Henry Tillman on March 29. Tillman beat deWit to win the gold medal at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

"What really got me thinking was the training for my last fight. I never really got untracked, and it wasn't any fun. Training was something I always looked forward to and enjoyed, but the fun's gone out of it."

MALONE TOPS— Karl Malone, Utah Jazz, who averaged 35.8 points and 16.3 rebounds as his team won all four of its games, was named NBA Player of the Week.

Cowboys happy with NFL draft

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tex Schramm looked like a man who had just hit a Las Vegas jackpot.

His Dallas Cowboys had been lucky enough to compensate for one of the worst pieces of bad luck in their history.

The broken leg suffered by wide receiver Mike Sherrard, their 1986 first-round pick, in training camp last summer caused Coach Tom Landry to junk some of his offensive plans.

Then Sherrard re-broke the leg again last month while jogging in California.

SUNDAY, the Cowboys sweated out Mike Irvin, a fast, tall, extremely competitive wide receiver for Miami, the nation's collegiate national champions. They got him as the 11th pick of the first round of the NFL draft and club president Schramm said, "We're delighted beyond words."

"We were lucky and I hope it signals a turnaround in our fortunes," said Schramm. "We got a player of the same quality as Sherrard and last year's pick, Danny Noonan. This should accelerate our return to the living."

The Cowboys have missed the NFL playoffs for two consecutive years.

Irvin has the size and speed to get away from bump-and-run coverage. He has what the experts call "separation speed," or the ability to put distance between himself and a defender while the ball is in the air. San Francisco wide receiver Jerry Rice is a good example of separation speed.

IRVIN IS 6-foot-2, and runs a legitimate 4.5 in the 40. Irvin also isn't shy about going over the middle.

Irvin will command double-coverage respect which should keep teams from ganging up on running back Herschel Walker by jamming the line of scrimmage.

"It should help our running game considerably," said Landry. "Irvin should be good enough to force the defense to pay attention and get off Herschel."

Irvin's main drawback, that of a hot dog image, could work in Dallas' favor. The Texas Stadium crowds were the lowest in the team's history last year during a 7-8 season.

"Mike is an exciting player," said Gil Brandt, director of player personnel. "He'll excite the fans and he will excite the other players and he will excite our organization."

Irvin said all the corre

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Others will be eager to help you reach your goals if you can convince them that your ideas have a practical application. Measure success in human as well as monetary terms. October will be a period of transition. A secret financial backer helps you out of a tight spot. Your love relatonships will be as rewarding as you want to make them.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: 18th President Ulysses S. Grant, singer Sheena Easton, actor Jack Klugman, Coretta Scott King, baseball greats Enos Slaughter and Rogers Hornsby.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Refuse to be rushed into making hasty decisions. You need to rethink your priorities. A realistic attitude helps you make a wise financial move. Review insurance and pension plans. Make overdue changes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take steps to protect your good credit rating. Pay outstanding bills on time. At work, concentrate on projects you can handle on your own. Mate can be a tower of strength.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Allow things to settle down before you take a stand. Modify your plans if costs are getting out of hand. Distant developments could prove lucrative. Romantic inclinations lead to a happy new relationship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Aim high! Making better use of your talents will help you get to the top. Postpone travel until business is on sounder footing. Your quick thinking turns a mistake into a plus.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be willing to take a backseat to others today. Stay in the background at work. A forgiving attitude helps you reach a better understanding with a parent. Guard against communication breakdowns with partner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A financial situation may not be as promising as you had hoped. Make peace with a partner and enjoy a workday as well as a sociable evening. Your image is important to your career.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Inside information helps you make an important deal. Check the financial details before making a final commitment. Take advantage of your membership in an influential group to make valuable new contacts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone else's accomplishments spur you to try harder. A long-distance message helps firm up your travel plans. Pay closer attention to partnership issues and legal matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New challenges at work make you do your best. Partner could have ideas that clash with yours. Try to be practical. You need loved ones' support if you are to succeed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A relationship problem surfaces. You feel caught in the middle. A break with loved one can be averted if you show affection. You are your own worst enemy when you give in to temptation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Look for ways to increase your efficiency while preserving your energy. Read the fine print in contracts. Someone may be trying to mislead you. Loosen up and have some fun this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your ability to predict trends gives you the edge over your competition. Do not get locked into a power struggle with a difficult associate. Go over records with a fine-tooth comb to catch mistakes.

The one truly international tournament is the Epson event, played on the same day, and approximately at the same time, throughout the world. The 1988 event will be held worldwide on June 3. The competition is the brainchild of the current president of the European Bridge Federation, Jose Damiani of France. A sometime partner of one of your authors, Damiani displayed the precision of a computer on this hand from the French Team Championship.

Both teams reached three no trump on similar auctions. Note South's cue-bid to set a game force—it promised nothing about control of the spade suit. At both tables West led a spade, and declarer held up the ace on the first two rounds. At both tables East shifted to the queen of hearts at trick three, and both declarers covered with the king.

One West grabbed the ace, and returned the suit. Had East held the nine of hearts instead of the eight, he would have defeated the contract. As it was, declarer now had nine tricks—five clubs, two hearts and one each in spades and diamonds.

At the other table, Damiani heeded the advice so often heralded in this column: "Before committing yourself to a line, take time to count the tricks." He saw that, even if declarer made a heart trick, he had only eight tricks—five clubs, two aces and the heart. So he allowed declarer to win the trick. South had no counter.

Declarer gave it his best shot by continuing with a heart. Damiani allowed that to run to East's jack, and the inevitable diamond return set up a trick in that suit before declarer had established his ninth trick in hearts.

Japanese Emperor Hirohito holds rare news conference to talk of health, WWII

Hirohito

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Hirohito held a rare news conference to talk of his health and his fabled past as the world's longest-reigning monarch.

The annual news conference, to be broadcast Friday on his 87th birthday, came as some Japanese already were preparing for the death of the emperor, who has been on the throne since Dec. 25, 1926.

Medical equipment has been moved from a hospital on palace grounds into Hirohito's living quarters so he can die at home, said sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

However, they said, there was no indication his health is failing.

At Monday's news conference for 30 Japanese reporters, Hirohito talked of World War II and its aftermath, said the sources. It has been 13 years since his last news conference with foreign reporters, when he denied planning the attack on Pearl Harbor but left many other questions unanswered.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Squinting in the bright California sun, the King and Queen of Sweden landed in Los Angeles for the last stop of their 17-day, 15-city American tour celebrating the 350th anniversary of Swedish immigration to America.

A beaming King Carl XVI Gustaf and Queen Silvia were welcomed Monday by dignitaries including Mayor Tom Bradley and California Secretary of State March Fong Eu, as the 55-member Swedish Army Band played the Swedish national anthem.

The couple have meetings planned with celebrities including Mickey Mouse. Their visit ends Wednesday.

Puttnam

LOS ANGELES (AP) — British producer David Puttnam, bidding farewell to Hollywood after a stormy two years, has offered a sobering view of America.

"There is a disillusionment wafting through the heady winds of the American dream as more and more people come to feel that they've had the experience but somehow, somewhere, missed out on the meaning of it," Puttnam said Saturday in a speech to the 34th annual Entertainment Law Symposium at the University of Southern California.

The movie-industry maverick rode into Hollywood on the reputation of his successful "Chariots of Fire," but his job as chairman of Columbia Pictures went up in smoke 14 months later.

During his tenure at Columbia, Puttnam had fallouts with many stars, agents and such filmmakers as influential producer Ray Stark. Puttnam argued that successful films can be made without highly paid actors and directors.

DETROIT (AP) — Cardinal John Dearden, the retired Roman Catholic archbishop of Detroit, has been hospitalized after doctors corrected fluid congestion in his lungs, officials said.

Dearden, 80, was resting comfortably Monday afternoon at Providence Hospital in Southfield and would be kept several days for observation, said Brenda Marshall, a spokeswoman for the archdiocese.

Doctors treated the congestion with medication and did not expect complications, Marshall said. But Dearden was listed in serious but stable condition because of his age and because he suffered a heart attack in 1977, she said.

Dearden cited health reasons and age for retiring in 1980 as spiritual leader of the 1.2-million-member archdiocese, a post he had held 21 years. He was succeeded by the Rev. Edmund Szoka.

Yeutter

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter joked that he probably was the subject of the first and last "Meet the Press" appearance from Nebraska.

Yeutter appeared on the NBC program Sunday via a satellite hookup from Lincoln to present the administration's opposition to the trade bill in Congress.

Midway through Yeutter's first answer, the satellite feed broke up and for the rest of the show the program's panelists could direct questions only to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the show's other guest and a key supporter of the legislation.

"It was frustrating, sitting there in that little studio in Lincoln, Nebraska, having to watch and listen to that biased explanation of the plant closing amendment," Yeutter said.

"That was probably the first time in history that they have ever done a 'Meet the Press' feed out of Nebraska and probably the last time in history they will do one," Yeutter joked Monday during an appearance before farm editors.

Garner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor James Garner is continuing his recovery from quintuple bypass heart surgery, eating his first solid food in a hospital room overflowing with cards and flowers, a spokesman said.

Garner's popularity with his fans, and now with the Cedars-Sinai staff, is unparalleled, said hospital spokesman Ron Wise, describing the bags of mail and gardens of flowers sent by well-wishers.

Asked if the spokesman for the beef industry's $30 million "Beef, Real Food for Real People" ad campaign was eating meat, Wise said, "I don't know what he's eating."

Garner, 60, earlier blamed his heart problem on 45 years of cigarette smoking.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Mayor Sonny Bono, who rose to fame singing "I've Got You Babe" with ex-wife Cher, now has his own sonny after his wife gave birth to a baby boy.

Bono's first son was born at 8:15 p.m. Monday and named Chesare Elan, said Bono's spokeswoman Marilyn Baker. Chesare is Italian for Caesar and Elan means spirit, Ms. Baker said.

Both mother, Mary Bono, and baby were fine, Ms. Baker said.

Bono, who stayed with his wife throughout the Caesarean section delivery, was "rocking the baby, showing it off to all the relatives and giving it its first bottle," Ms. Baker said.

The baby weighed 7 pounds, 13 ounces and had a full head of dark hair, Ms. Baker said. "He looks just like his daddy," she said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Swiss unmoved by Iranian's alleged link to hostage crisis

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Switzerland said today that it would not reconsider its decision to accept the new Iranian ambassador despite allegations from Washington that he played a key role in the 1979-1980 Tehran hostage crisis.

A Swiss Foreign Ministry statement made it clear that despite U.S. opposition the Swiss government would accept Sayid Mohammad Hussein Malaek as ambassador.

The four-sentence statement followed a meeting between U.S. Ambassador Faith Ryan Whittlesey and State Secretary Edouard Brunner at which both sides presented their views in the case.

"Thus, both sides consider the question as settled," it said.

"We agree that the question is settled but we remain disappointed," said Michael Korff, a U.S. Embassy spokesman.

Switzerland has been representing U.S. diplomatic interests in Iran since Washington severed ties with Iran following the November 1979 seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. Fifty-two Americans were held hostage by Iranian militants for 444 days.

The Neue Zurcher Zeitung newspaper said Monday that Brunner planned to reiterate at his meeting that Switzerland does not have sufficient evidence to reject Malaek, who presented his credentials March 22.

Italian grapefruits seized

ROME (AP) — Health authorities today ordered the seizure of all grapefruits in Italy after tests showed that several grapefruits in a Rome supermarket had been laced with poison.

Italian news media said the poisoned grapefruits apparently had been imported from Israel, although officials did not immediately say where they were grown.

Last week, an organization saying it was supporting the Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories claimed it had poisoned Israeli grapefruit for sale in Milan. Laboratory checks at the time found no trace of poison.

But authorities in the region of Lazio, which includes the city of Rome, said health officials later inspected grapefruits in one Rome supermarket after a newspaper received a threatening telephone call.

Of the 12 grapefruits on sale, six were found to have been injected with a bluish poison so powerful that it immediately killed laboratory mice, the Italian news agency ANSA said.

The caller said he was speaking in the name of the previously unheard of "Organization of Metropolitan Proletarians and Oppressed People."

The first seizure order was made today by health authorities in Lazio. It was quickly followed by a national health ministry order for the seizure of all grapefruits on sale or in warehouses around the country.

Malaysia gets boat people

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — From 1975 to this March, 226,091 Vietnamese boat people have landed in Malaysia, an official said today.

The influx of Vietnamese refugees began in 1975 after U.S. forces withdrew from South Vietnam and it fell to communist forces from North Vietnam.

Of the 226,091 refugees, 217,812 resettled in other countries, including 128,000 in the United States, said Eric E. Morris, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for Malaysia and Brunei.

In the first three months of this year, 2,921 boat people reached Malaysian shores, higher than the 1,702 for the same period last year, he said.

Morris told reporters the increase was due, in part, to Thailand's decision to forbid boats of refugees to land on its shores.

The boat people generally land on the east coasts of Malaysia and Thailand by cutting across the South China Sea.

Fahd to sign nuclear treaty

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — King Fahd of Saudi Arabia today decided to sign an international treaty limiting the spread of nuclear arms, apparently responding to Israeli fears that the kingdom might arm its missiles with nuclear warheads.

Information Minister Ali al-Shaer said the decision was made during a Cabinet meeting in the Saudi capital of Riyahd where other issues also were discussed, the official Saudi Press Agency reported.

It appeared the announcement was designed primarily to reassure the United States that Saudi Arabia will not try to put nuclear warheads on CSS-2 intermediate-range missiles the kingdom acquired from China.

Violence overshadows Korean election

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Riot police today battled protesters who waged violent rallies against alleged vote fraud as South Koreans picked a new parliament in an election the governing party was expected to win.

Opposition supporters accused the government of manipulating vote counting after a state-run television station reported Monday that a governing party candidate won election with 39 percent of the vote.

The MBC network said a local affiliate on Cheju Island accidentally broadcast an election rehearsal. The network said it fired the station manager and four other officials.

But the gaffe fueled protests on the island, where an estimated 1,000 students and other citizens fought with police. News reports said authorities were investigating whether the broadcast broke election laws.

The state-controlled KBS television network, meanwhile, reported after the polls closed that five governing party members and three opposition candidates were leading their races.

An opposition campaigner died after drenching himself in gasoline and igniting it during an argument with government supporters in the southern city of Woekwan, Korean press reports said. The man was identified as Lee Kwang-ho, 21, a member of the Reunification Democratic Party.

Korean newspapers also said two opposition campaigners were in critical condition after being stabbed by unknown assailants in Hwasoon, another southern city.

In Seoul, police fired tear gas to disperse 300 Yonsei University students who threw rocks and firebombs to protest alleged election manipulation in favor of the governing Democratic Justice Party of President Roh Tae-woo.

Earlier, police broke up a similar protest by 50 Yonsei students. No injuries were reported in either demonstration.

Korean officials begin counting ballots for parliamentary elections in Seoul today.

Hundreds of students dashed through alleys and side streets in Seoul's downtown Myongdong shopping area, shouting slogans against "election rigging" and chanting "Down with dictatorship."

Police pursued them, sometimes hurling tear gas grenades. Citizens rescued a student being dragged away by riot police.

Yonhap, the Korean news agency, said police arrested more than 120 students around Kwangju in southwestern South Korea.

In the southern city of Chonju, about 500 opposition supporters battled riot police in the streets for nearly two hours.

Voting began at 7 a.m. to choose a 299-member National Assembly.

The polls closed at 6 p.m. (4 a.m. CDT). Most returns were expected by early Wednesday.

Officials estimated 72.6 percent of the 26.2 million registered voters turned out, down from 84.6 percent in the 1985 legislative elections and 89.2 percent in the December presidential election.

Opposition leader Kim Young-sam of the Reunification Democratic Party, who ran for an assembly seat in the southern city of Pusan, accused the government of staging "unjust elections unprecedented in our history."

On Monday, the governing party expelled one candidate after 4,296 envelopes, each containing about $30 and leaflets for Democratic Justice candidate Kwon Joong-dong, were found by opposition members at a post office in Andong, south of Seoul.

At an Andong cathedral, riot police fired tear gas at 40 Roman Catholic farmers who demanded the candidate's arrest, Yonhop said.

Police reported 90 cases of election-related violence nationwide in the campaign, with more than 150 people detained and 77 of them formally charged.

A 90-second broadcast on Monday on southern Cheju Island by an affiliate of the MBC national television network said a governing party candidate won in a local district, giving vote totals.

The network later apologized for what it called a technical error by engineers during a rehearsal for scheduled live broadcast of the ballot count.

But protesters said the use of numbers in the broadcast proved the government planned to manipulate the computer vote count.

About 1,000 students in Cheju marched in the streets early today, protesting "an unforgivable government attempt at computer manipulation."

Students in Kwangju and Pusan also held rallies to denounce the broadcast and vowed to launch more anti-government protests.

Later, however, an official at the Central Election Management Committee said: "The voting is proceeding relatively smoothly."

Roh's rising popularity and a split within the opposition were expected to help the Democratic Justice Party win a majority in the National Assembly.

Public support for the opposition eroded after its leaders, Kim Dae-jung of the Party for Peace and Democracy and Kim Young-sam, both insisted on running in the December presidential election, splitting the opposition vote. Roh won the first direct presidential election in 16 years with 36 percent of the vote.

The opposition gained momentum in widespread anti-government protests in June.

U.S., Philippines discuss AIDS, presence of military bases

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — U.S. and Filipino negotiators today discussed AIDS and procedures for trying American troops in criminal cases.

The discussion occurred during talks on U.S. military bases which sources described as difficult and emotional. The Senate is debating a bill to ban nuclear weapons in the Philippines and to prohibit nuclear-capable military ships from making port calls. The measure is directed at U.S. military bases.

In another development, at least seven people were killed today on Mactan island during a gun battle between government troops and Scout Rangers who deserted their unit. Three of the dead were Scout Rangers and four were government soldiers, officials said.

Also today, officials said communist rebels were suspected in the killings of a police captain and an anti-communist vigilante in two separate attacks near the U.S.-run Clark Air Base.

After their discussion today, the U.S. and Filipino negotiators released a joint statement saying they had discussed "the criminal jurisdiction issue" and that the Philippine side presented its proposal on purchases of locally manufactured products "and socioeconomic issues."

Afghanistan celebrates 10th anniversary of revolution

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The government today celebrated the 10th anniversary of its socialist revolution with a Soviet-style parade of workers, soldiers and military hardware.

President Najib led dozens of Afghan officials and a little-known Soviet delegation atop a reviewing stand for the morning procession.

The parade followed a night of unusually heavy rifle fire and a rebel rocket blast in the eastern hills.

Monday, Najib proposed a withdrawal of government soldiers from the posts near the Pakistani border to create "a non-military line" between Afghanistan and Pakistan. Najib said Afghan troops would leave its positions if anti-government guerrillas and Pakistani troops do the same.

The proposal appeared to be little more than a face-saving admission of the difficulties the Afghan army is having against onslaughts by anti-communist insurgents, based in Pakistan and supplied with U.S. and Chinese weapons.

At the parade, Afghan government troops bearing Soviet-supplied rifles marched past the leadership and about 500 dignitaries under striped awnings erected to protect them from the strong sun.

Reflecting the Kremlin's recent attempts to cut a lower profile in Afghan government affairs, the senior Soviet in attendance was Vladimir Orlov of the Russian Republic's parliamentary body, and even Soviet journalists could not identify the two or three other Kremlin envoys who stood with Najib on the reviewing stand.

Six bodyguards with Uzi machine guns stood watch around Najib, Defense Minister Mohammed Rafi, Premier Sultan Ali Keshmandt and other Afghan officials. No disturbances took place during the two-hour parade.

An Afghan official confirmed today that a rocket fired by insurgents opposed to the Soviet-backed government had landed in the city but said he did not know details of damage or whether the blast had caused casualties.

"It was especially noisy last night, perhaps because they (the guerrillas) wanted to say something about the holiday," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The celebration was reminiscent of Moscow's May Day and Revolution Day parades, in which hundreds of thousands of Soviets trek past the leadership assembled at Red Square.

It was in April 1978 that Marxists inspired and armed by Soviet advisers staged a coup and killed President Mohammed Daoud. The revolution sparked a widespread insurgency, plunging the nation into a civil war and driving an estimated 5 million Afghans into neighboring Pakistan and Iran.

Quake shakes central region of Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A strong earthquake today shook the central region of the Adriatic Sea, the state news agency Tanjug said. The quake was felt along the entire Adriatic coast, but no damage or injuries were reported.

The temblor struck shortly after midnight and measured 5.4 on the Richter scale, according to the Yugoslav Federal Seismological Institute.

Tanjug said the epicenter of the quake was located near the island of Palagruza in the middle of the Adriatic Sea off the Hercegovina coast.

The Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake, as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph.

Panama's government says banks can resume suspended operations

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A government commission said Panama's banks can immediately resume some operations suspended nearly two months ago, but customers will not be allowed to withdraw much-needed cash.

The National Banking Commission said Monday that banks can resume offering a dozen services that were suspended following the imposition of U.S. economic sanctions aimed at ousting strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

In another development, The New York Times today quoted an unidentified official in Washington as saying the sweeping U.S. economic sanctions were a mistake and that they will be relaxed "within a week or so."

The official was quoted as saying the Treasury Department, charged with enforcing the sanctions, was considering a long list of exemptions to them.

In New York, meanwhile, Panama's newly appointed foreign minister on Monday said his top priorities are normalizing relations with the United States and persuading it to lift the economic sanctions. The minister, Jorge E. Ritter, made the comment in an interview at the United Nations in New York.

The National Banking Commission said the services banks can now resume include handling letters of credit, transferring funds within the country, collecting outstanding loans and currency and metals exchanges.

Although customers will not be allowed to withdraw cash, the panel called the resumption of services "an important and decisive step" toward normal banking operations.

The cash crisis has become so severe in Panama that many people have been forced to resort to bartering to obtain food for their families.

Panamanian banks were ordered shut March 4 because there was not enough cash to cover withdrawals. Some banks reopened on April 18, but only to accept deposits.

SonSilks: A special place for browsing, shopping in relaxing atmosphere

SonSilks is a quiet, quaint shopper's delight, away from the busy, congested bustle of heavy traffic.

Sonsilks is that special place where browsing and shopping are relaxing and enjoyable because everything there has been carefully selected to meet a standard of excellence. You'll find lovely treasures amid beautiful silk flowers and luscious greenery.

On a typical day, as you begin your search for that perfect gift, or a fresh touch for your decor, or something to give yourself a lift, you decide that today is going to be different and special. You drive to 2509 W. Ohio, where you park almost at the door of SonSilks, and go inside. You open the door into a breathtakingly different scene, a veritable gardenplace, full of surprises.

You'll walk into a treasure house of gifts, accessories and silk florals. The mingled aromas of fresh potpourri which greet you at the door accompany you throughout the store, wafting your memories back to leisurely days and times of contentment. Even the background music is different: relaxing but inspiring.

Your first surprise is a small, but important rack of designer separates, and tennis togs, and lavish sunburst silk scarves.

Be sure to see the appliqued denim skirts and dresses with flowers, peacocks, windmills, balls of cotton and chili peppers. Make a political statement with a denim skirt bearing the Democratic or Republican emblem.

You'll find limited edition Middleton dolls and one of a kind knives by Santa Fe Stoneworks.

Watchamacallits are adorable animals made on wood or ceramic bases, and delicately covered with rice paper, then sealed and signed by Dora White. You can also order one of these delightful decor items in your favorite fabric. See the apple doll ladies, laden with their deli confections or potpourri.

Gifts for Mother's Day, graduation, weddings or birthdays abound. Pick up a "Celebrate San Antonio" or "Southern Sideboards" cookbook. Choose from vibrant patio trays or windsocks. Try the shoe refreshers, drawer liners or guest soaps by Austin Morgan, or the all natural rock crystal deodorant, Le Crystal Naturele, by French Transit, Ltd.

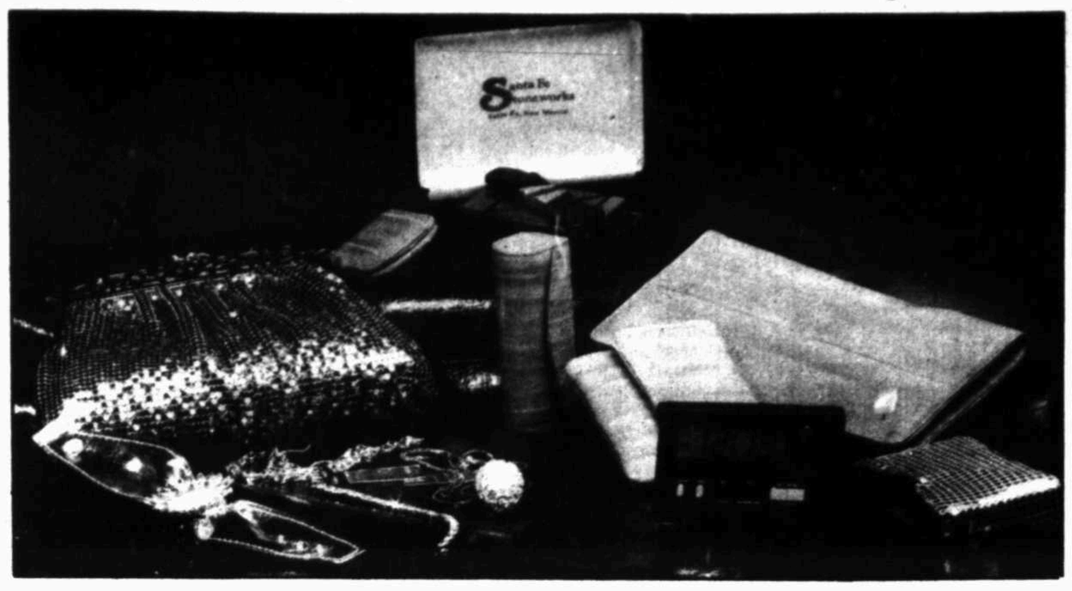

Take home something classic or trendy from Fitz and Floyd or from the nice selection of fashion accessories. Included are tennis bracelets, jeweled watches, Bohemian glass beads, wooden, horn and bone bracelets, necklaces and earrings and many other lovely pieces in pastels and brights.

Whiting and Davis is a new line for SonSilks, and right now there is a good selection, just in time for Mother's Day. Nothing is more lasting or beautiful than silver or gold mesh evening bags, key rings, pill boxes, travel alarms, calculators and cosmetic bags.

An appropriate alternative is letting SonSilks custom design a floral arrangement any mother would treasure for a lifetime.

MasterCard, Visa, and layaway are welcome and gift wrapping is free at SonSilks.

Bob and Ellen West, owners, invite you to visit SonSilks, 2509 W. Ohio, 686-2070. The shop is open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Get ready for Mother's and Father's Day at SonSilks, 2509 W. Ohio. Gift suggests include gold and silver mesh evening bags, jeweled watches, tennis bracelets, all types of silver and gold costume jewelry, mens and ladies gift sets in eel skin, tavel alarms and Santa Fe Stoneworks knives.

Permian Court Reporters, Inc. expands as city grows

Jerry and Loretta Lancaster have been in the court reporting business in the Midland-Odessa area since 1969, with Jerry being the official reporter for the 142nd District Court for 13 years.

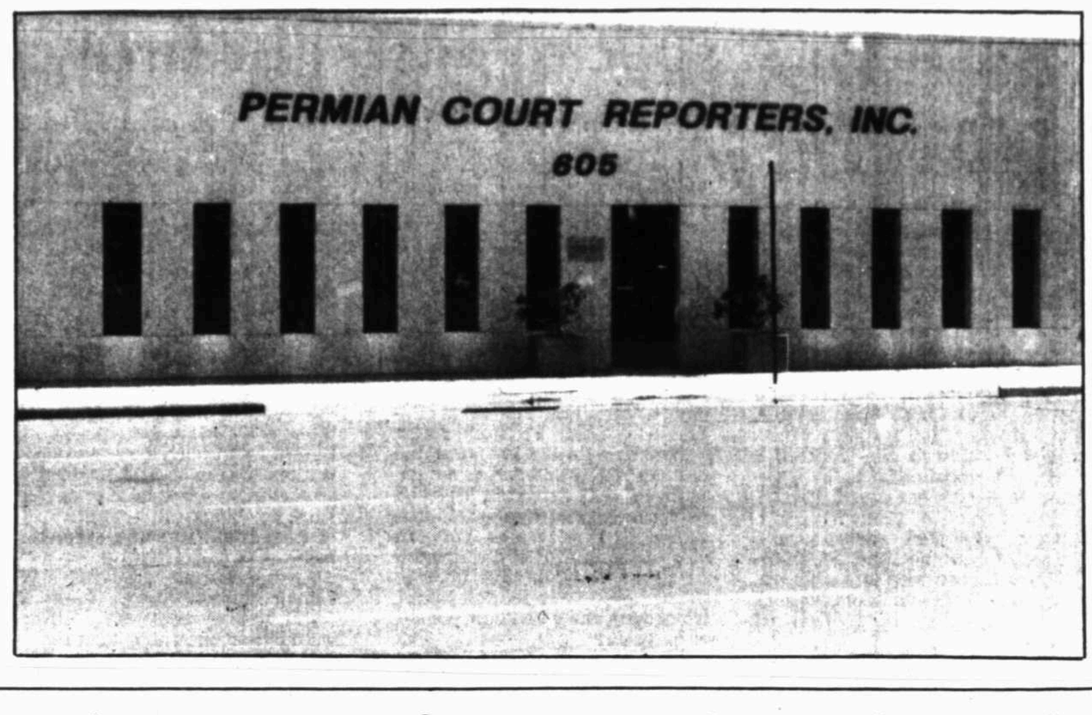

In 1974, they created the firm of Permian Court Reporters, employing one reporter and renting a small office across from the Courthouse. Jerry and Loretta allowed the firm to grow as rapidly as possible, never turning down work, and covering courts and depositions all over the Permian Basin from Pecos to Sonora.

Today the firm has 16 reporters, with offices in Midland, 605 W. Texas, 561-5300 and Odessa, 319 N. Grant, 563-5740. All of the reporters are actually self-employed, independent contractors, working on a commission basis with the firm. The work is assigned to the reporters according to who has the least backlog.

In addition to taking court, depositions and written interrogatories, Permian Court Reports, Inc., can issue and serve subpoenas, take depositions by videotape, duplicate videotapes, and do demonstrative evidence by videotape such as a day-in-the-life-of an injured person.

The Lancasters' enjoy the togetherness of working in a family business. They feel that as a family owned business they can provide an extra measure of personal service and attention to their customers.

Permian Court Reporters, located in both Midland and Odessa, has served the Permian Basin for 14 years. For more information in Midland call 561-5300 and in Odessa the number is 563-5740.

Texas State K-9 provides specialized training for your best friend

Lewis, manager of Texas State K-9, demonstrates a vehicle narcotics search with a dog trained specifically for this purpose. Texas State K-9, 685-4060, can give your dog obedience training or educate it in protection or handicap-support.

Whether you want your dog to be an obedient companion for you and your family or provide protection for those same loved ones, Texas State K-9 is the place for you.

Texas State K-9 is recognized as the premier academy in the state of Texas. With a broad spectrum of training capabilities (including support-handicap to the working police K-9) the expert trainers at Texas State K-9 have attained a reputation for excellence in their industry. With more than 30 years of combined experience, the professionals at Texas State K-9 are licensed by the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agency and approved by the Texas Board of Education. Training for handlers to receive their certification and registration as Master Trainers is also available.

"We do train family dogs in obedience and protection," said Carmen Taylor, director. With obedience training your family dog will be educated in responding to basic commands. "We ensure that any dog we train is a stable, well adjusted animal that is approachable by anyone, even small children," Taylor explained. "We do not train vicious dogs and our work is guaranteed."

The family dog can also be trained to protect you and your family through command protection. "The dog will alert the owner to any intrusion," said Jim Lewis, manager. "Then, on command, the animal will protect the owner. We also educate the owner in the proper handling of the dog."

Texas State K-9 is also available for problem correction. "Problems can be anything from jumping the fence, jumping up on people, continuous barking, to shyness or biting," Taylor explained. Problem correction can turn a nuisance into a welcome and active addition to your home.

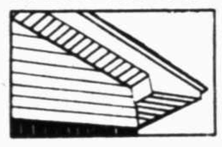

"Our trained dogs have proved to be an incredible drug deterrent," Taylor continued. "Just by his presence and periodic searches drugs have been reduced in schools and businesses." You can purchase a trained narcotics dog or contract the experts at Texas State K-9 to conduct the search for you. Demonstrations and references are available upon request.

Professionals are well-aquainted with the top-quality work at Texas State K-9. Police all over the world are presently using dogs trained for search and rescue, narcotics search, tracking, protection and crowd control, and bomb search.

Other training includes support-handicap, with the animal trained to open drawers, turn light switches on and off and other skills that individuals lacking manual dexterity may find difficult. Pulling a wheelchair and opening a refrigerator are just a few of the tasks a dog can help with.

Texas State K-9 also imports dogs and boarding facilities are available. For more information or for a demonstration call 685-4060. Texas State K-9, located on the Garden City Highway, is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 5p.m. and Saturday 8 a.m. to 12 p.m.

FRIENDSWOOD (AP) — Police Lt. Gary Edwards said he had no doubt the man in an FBI flier wanted for embezzling $1.1 million from an Iowa credit union was a man he had been investigating.

For the past three years, Edwards and others at the Friendswood Police Department have been researching Steven Hadley after he bought a home and two expensive sports cars with cash, but had no visible means of support.

Hadley, 40, was taken into custody Monday without incident by FBI agents and police.

Edwards recognized Hadley after seeing his picture in a recent FBI flier issued in connection with the television series "Unsolved Mysteries."

"Hadley admitted his identity following his arrest," said Nicholas V. O'Hara, FBI special agent in charge of the district office at Omaha, Neb.

Hadley was reported missing by his wife and family in July 1983 — the same time the $1.1 million disappeared from the John Deere Employees Credit Union in Waterloo, Iowa, where Hadley had worked.

Authorities believe Hadley took a July 21 flight to Chicago, but were not able to track his movements. He left behind a note to his family saying he took the money and fled because he "could no longer cope with home and work pressures."

In part of the letter included in federal court documents, Hadley wrote to his wife that, "This is a very difficult letter to write but I couldn't let you find out from someone else first. If I call you to read this letter, it means that I have successfully left the state with around $1 million from the credit union."

Hadley had worked at the credit union for 10 years and was described as a reliable and respected employee.

His wife, Kathryn, has since divorced him and retained custody of their three children — who were aged 11, 7 and 1 when their father disappeared.

Edwards said Hadley had been in Friendswood, south of Houston, since 1984 when he bought his house, a Ferrari and an Alfa Romeo in cash.

"We did a reverse investigation," Edwards said. "We researched how he came into a lot of money. When he bought his house and fancy cars in cash, people were suspicious."

"There was no doubt in my mind it was him when I saw the flier," he said. "I was shocked. I probably have 600 pages of reports on this guy from the last three years and he looks the same."

Firefighter afflicted with Hodgkin's disease allowed to keep job

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A month-long struggle between the San Antonio Fire Department and a firefighters union has ended with officials saying a cancer-afflicted firefighter can keep his job.

"I couldn't feel better right now," firefighter Byron Cabana, 33, told the San Antonio Light Monday.

Cabana said that knowing that his job would be waiting for him six months from now when his doctor says he can return to work was similar to having a "tremendous weight lifted" from his shoulders.

The central issue in his struggle to keep his job centered around whether the 14-year veteran was "temporarily" ill from a type of highly curable lymphatic cancer known as Hodgkin's disease or whether he was permanently ill and would not be returning to work.

Assistant Fire Chief James D. Miller said Cabana will stay on the payroll because of a letter he received Monday from Cabana's physician specifically stating the illness was temporary and that Cabana would return to work in six months.

Mike Rankin, grievance chairman of the San Antonio Professional Firefighters Association, contended that similar letters had been received previously, and that the real threat to Cabana's job arose from Fire Chief I.O. Martinez's refusal to accept Cabana's cancer as temporary and that the firefighter would be returning to the job.

Martinez would not comment on the issue.

Since it has been determined that he is "temporarily" ill, Cabana can use the joint Fire Department-San Antonio Professional Firefighters Association Work Bank to find volunteers to work his shifts after his sick leave and vacation time ran out.

This means that Cabana can continue to receive his full pay of about $25,000 a year and his job will be kept open for him.

Dr. Steven B. Kalter, a blood and cancer specialist, sent at least three letters, including one nearly a month ago giving the amount of therapy left and the date Cabana could return to work, Rankin said.

"He has approximately four more months of chemotherapy and then will need a couple more months to convalesce," Kalter wrote March 31. "Conceivably he could return to work in six months."

Rankin said that letter should have been enough.

"Doesn't that spell out to you that it is a temporary illness," Rankin said. "That's what it spelled out to us."

A major problem affecting those recovering from cancer is job discrimination, officials in the local and state chapters of the American Cancer Society say.

"There is some definite job discrimination against my young patients, particularly those with Hodgkin's disease and testicular cancer," Dr. J. Dean McCracken said.

INS to present 102-year-old with green card

QUEMADO (AP) — Immigration officials have a unique birthday gift for an elderly South Texas alien who once helped Mexican forces hunt outlaw Pancho Villa.

Officials from the Immigration and Naturalization Office will be in this border city 90 miles north of Laredo today to present Francisca Rivera de Chavez with legal residence in the United States.

Mrs. Chavez turns 103 on May 8, said John Armistad, spokesman for the INS' Dallas office.

"She's still very alert, but she can't get to a legalization office," Armitstad said. So the INS is bringing her green card to her.

In February, the INS restored legal status to Clara Escobedo Martinez, 98, whose green card was canceled by immigration officials in 1962. Since then, Mrs. Escobedo has been making television commercials for the INS to urge other aliens who qualify to apply for amnesty.

Under new immigration laws, aliens who have lived continuously in the United States since 1982 are eligible for amnesty and later citizenship.

Mrs. Chavez was born in Concepcion del Oro in Jalisco, Mexico. She is the widow of Maj. Rafael Chavez, who was a soldier in the Mexican forces during the Mexican Revolution. Mrs. Chavez provided information to her husband's troops on Pancho Villa's activities in the Piedras Negras area, Armistad said.

After her husband died in 1937, Mrs. Chavez moved to the United States to work in restaurants in Houston and Los Angeles, the INS said.

Usually, amnesty applicants must wait six years before receiving an application for citizenship, but INS officials speeded up the process for Mrs. Escobedo. Armistad said he expects the same will be done for Mrs. Chavez.

Mrs. Chavez is the mother of 12 children and also has 55 grandchildren, 112 great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren.

She currently lives with a daughter.

Missing seaman had been preparing for retirement

WILLIS (AP) — Petty Officer 1st Class Robert W. Bordelon Jr. was ready to return to the hometown he left 20 years ago for a Navy career and had even made arrangements for a local bank account.

Bordelon, 39, four months from retiring, is one of three men listed as missing following Sunday's underwater explosions and a toxic fire that injured 22 sailors aboard the USS Bonefish.

A woman answering the telephone at the Willis home of L.C. Roach, Bordelon's stepfather, said Monday evening that the Navy was keeping the family informed.

"We really don't want to talk about it," the woman said. "We're still hoping. It's probably false hope, but that's all we have."

Bordelon had contacted Alton Ellisor of the Willis Bank to set up a bank account for his return home, the Conroe Courier reported.

Bordelon was a 1968 graduate of Willis High School. He lived in Willis from the age of 8. His mother, Adele Bergers, lives in nearby Splendora.

The 30-year-old Bonefish, its remaining crew evacuated to shore bases, floated Monday alongside the submarine rescue ship USS Petrel about 160 miles off Florida, said Lt. Cmdr. Aaron Long, a spokesman at Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk, Va.

Long said preliminary indications pointed toward a series of explosions, including one in the battery compartment, but he said he was unable to say precisely where the other explosions occurred on the ship.

The explosion occurred Sunday afternoon in the boat's battery compartment while the Bonefish was submerged on a routine training mission, said Chief Petty Officer Terry D. Borton, a fleet spokesman.

The explosion triggered a fire that filled the 219-foot vessel with smoke and toxic fumes. The sub surfaced and Cmdr. Mike Wilson, the commander, ordered it evacuated.

The Petrel arrived on the scene Monday afternoon, but Navy officials said any decision to board the submarine was being delayed until today.

"The decision made was that no one goes aboard" until the Petrel's experts declare the ship free of dangerous fumes, Long said.

Also identified as missing are Lt. Ray Everts of Naoma, W.Va., and Petty Officer 3rd Class Marshall T. Lindgren of Pisgah Forest, N.C.

It was not known if the missing men were aboard the sub or in the water.

Army sergeant demoted after being convicted

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An Army instructor convicted of sexual misconduct with a female student during wild sex parties has been demoted to private and given a bad-conduct discharge.

The sentence was given Monday night to Sgt. 1st Class Gregory Brown, 34, an instructor at the Army's Academy of Health Sciences at Fort Sam Houston. The academy is the Army's top-rated medical training facility.

Brown was found guilty by a military panel of fraternizing with a woman student and committing sodomy and adultery with her.

School spokesman Ron Fellows said the 16-year Army veteran was sentenced by Military Judge Lt. Col. Steven Saynisch during the trial at a post courtroom.

The guilty verdict came after another male instructor and two female students described an orgy, a game of strip poker and other activities during an off-post apartment party Nov. 20.

Brown's case automatically will be appealed.

An investigation into allegations concerning the parties has resulted in the implication of 14 instructors and staff members of the school. Academy officials have asked Pentagon officials for more stringent requirements for instructors.

Staff Sgt. Elbert F. Gray, an instructor who pleaded guilty March 30 to participating in the parties, testified with two women students Monday against Brown as part of plea-bargain agreement.

Gray, who was assessed a bad-conduct discharge, also has agreed to testify against two other instructors at their trials.

Two female students, a 27-year-old and a 24-year-old, testified against Brown, but have not been charged in connection with the incidents.

FINDERS KEEPERS

in the

Reporter-Telegram

APRIL 10th-JUNE 10th

TWO WAYS TO PLAY!

IT'S SIMPLE! Complete the official Finders Keepers entry form that will appear each day in your newspaper or pick one up at our offices at 201 E. Illinois. Bring or mail the form to us. If mailing, address to: Finders Keepers, c/o Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702. Forty (40) names will be drawn from the current week's entries every Friday. The following week 8 names will appear randomly throughout the classified section Monday through Friday. Find your name in the classifieds and call us before noon the day following publication at 682-6222 to qualify! You'll receive a Finders Keepers T-Shirt and possibly win the $10,000 Grand Prize!

DOUBLE YOUR CHANCES! Pick up a free Finders Keepers bumper sticker at our offices, at the customer service booth at Midland Park Mall or at any Kent Kwik Convenience Store and all Kent Kwik Lube Center locations in Midland and Odessa. Our Finders Keepers spotters will be on the lookout in Midland, Odessa and surrounding cities. When your vehicle is spotted, the license tag number will appear in the classifieds. When you see your tag number, call us at 682-6222 by noon the day following publication to qualify! You'll receive a Finders Keepers T-Shirt and a chance at the Grand Prize!

BE A WINNER! Enter as often as you wish and read classified everyday! When you find your name or license tag number call us before noon the day after publication to qualify!

Remember - It's a new game each week! The more you enter the better your chances!

THE GRAND PRIZE $10,000 plus a trip for 2 on American Airlines will be awarded in a drawing of all eligible participants at Midland Park Mall on Saturday, June 18th at 4:00 p.m. The Grand Prize winner does not have to be present at the drawing to win.

CONTEST RULES

No purchase necessary. Copies of the Reporter-Telegram may be read at the Reporter-Telegram offices without charge or at your library. Organ donor cards launched in balloons

DALLAS (AP) — Americans approved for transplants and awaiting healthy organs could be helped by thousands of balloons floating across the nation's skies.

The helium balloons carrying organ donaor cards were launched Monday in 100 cities for the beginning of Organ Donor Week.

Steve Habgood, vice president of the coalition, said the balloon launch is a way to publicize the need for donors.

In downtown Dallas, The Coalition on Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness of the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex and the Eckerd Drug Co. launched more than 5,000 organ donor cards attached to helium balloons from the Bell Plaza.

At the same time, the American Council on Transplantation sponsored a launch from the base of the Washington Monument and in 100 other cities across the nation.

In Texas, posters explaining the donor program are being displayed in more than 1,600 Eckerd stores and Eckerd pharmacists will be distributing the donor cards to interested customers.

Two schools sign pact

EL PASO (AP) — The University of Texas-El Paso and Juarez Technologial Institute agreed Monday to exchange faculty and information.

It was the latest of about six similar pacts for UTEP, whose first such agreement was signed in 1980 with the Mexican Autonomous University-Chihuahua, said UTEP spokeswoman Marilyn McClure.

Under the agreement, signed by UTEP President Diana Natalicio and Juarez Tech Director Roberta Arana Moran, the schools will exchange faculty, teaching equipment and statistical, technical and educational information.

They also agreed to jointly pursue research on border problems and to establish scholarships for Mexican and U.S. students.

Exchanging faculty between UTEP and Juarez Tech "already has been done on a limited, informal basis," Ms. McClure said, explaining that teachers have crossed the border to moderate seminars and to lecture.

Agency dropped from suit

AUSTIN (AP) — Federal district Judge Barefoot Sanders eliminated the U.S. Justice Department Monday from a 14-year-old class action suit filed on behalf of Texas mental patients against the Mental Health and Mental Retardation department.

The Justice department requested to be dropped because issues in the suit that complains of inadequate and inhumane treatment at state hospitals have begun focusing on community services.

"We are not authorized (by federal law) to go, in essence, beyond the doors of the institution," said Andrew Barrick, senior trial attorney for special litigation in the Justice Department's civil rights division.

The Justice Department intervened in the case in 1978, four years after the suit was filed, as a friend of the court, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Barrick said the Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons Act, passed by Congress after the department entered the case, authorizes the federal government to seek only the "minimum corrective measures necessary" and only for people "residing or confined to an institution."

Barrick said the Justice Department is "satisfied that either there has been compliance or (state hospitals) are moving toward compliance" to improve conditions.

Thieves steal railings

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Thieves will steal anything. Just ask San Antonio police.

Officers say brazen thieves are stripping heavy aluminum railing guards from the tops of city bridges to be sold or used as scrap metal, officers say.

Two men were caught early Monday as they worked to remove railings from a bridge. One of the men tossed a crescent wrench from the bridge when police arrived, investigators said.

The men told police the metal has a variety of uses after it is melted, and one said he had converted a similar railing into a barbell weight set.

Jose Castillo, 20, and Christobal Ortega, 41, were being held in the Bexar County Jail today in lieu of $5,000 bond each.

City officials said there have been at least two similar cases this month.
