Lubbock storm

LUBBOCK — A severe storm knocked out power and windows at a junior high school Monday afternoon. No children were hurt. West of Del Rio, radar indicated a tornado 30 miles at 4:55 p.m. near the city of Comstock. It was moving east at 15 mph. The National Weather Service issued a tornado warning Monday evening for Val Verde County. Langtry reported 2½-inch hail and very heavy rain. In Hale County north of Lubbock, sheriff's dispatchers reported a tornado east of Petersburg. The tornado touched down, went up and touched down again moving toward Floydada, where hail knocked out car windshields.

Court bars prayer

NEW ORLEANS — A federal appeals court Monday upheld a Texas court's barring of basketball game prayers and other religious activities at public schools in Duncanville, Texas. The case arose from a complaint by a member of the Reed Junior High School girls' basketball team and her father, identified in court records as Jane and John Doe. The court record said she believed she was singled out and ridiculed by teachers and others for refusing to take part in the prayers.

Fat, cancer link

SAN DIEGO — Eating lots of saturated fat, long considered taboo for its link with heart disease, now appears to raise the risk of lung cancer in women, government researchers reported Monday. The research, conducted by the National Cancer Institute, found that nonsmoking women with diets high in saturated fat had about four times the usual risk of lung cancer.

Parody dispute

WASHINGTON — A disagreement over rap group 2 Live Crew's parody of the Roy Orbison hit "Oh, Pretty Woman" will be used by the Supreme Court to resolve an important copyright law dispute. The court said Monday it will decide whether copyright owners may bar others from borrowing a song's words and music for a mocking sendup. The rap group said its parody was a fair use of Orbison's 1964 song and did not require permission from the copyright owner.

Columnist improves

ATLANTA — Humor writer Lewis Grizzard remained in critical condition and heavily sedated Monday, but he continued to improve without mechanical help for his ailing heart. "The fact that his heart is functioning on its own is a very positive sign," said Dr. Randy Martin, Grizzard's cardiologist. "His other vital signs are continuing to improve."

'Unforgiven' reels in Oscar as year's top film

Pacino, Thompson win best actor, actress awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Clint Eastwood's brooding Western "Unforgiven" won the Oscar as best picture and brought him the directing prize Monday night. Al Pacino, another veteran who had never won before, took the top acting award as the embittered blind veteran in "Scent of a Woman."

Emma Thompson, the free-thinking intellectual who marries into money in "Howards End," was named best actress, while Marisa Tomei, Joe Pesci's feisty girlfriend in "My Cousin Vinny," was a surprise winner as supporting actress.

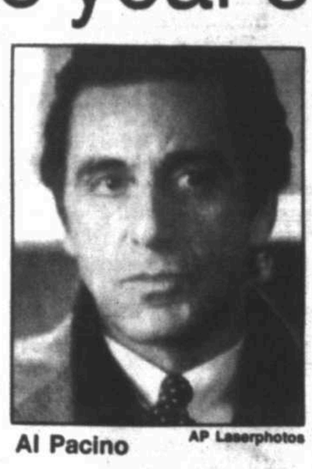

"Unforgiven" led a diverse field of winners with four Oscars. Gene Hackman took the supporting actor award for his portrayal of a sadistic sheriff and the movie also received the award for film editing.

"Pacino's throat was dry, and mine was really dry, to sit there all this time," said Eastwood in accepting his directing prize near the end of a long evening to a standing ovation. He had never even been nominated before.

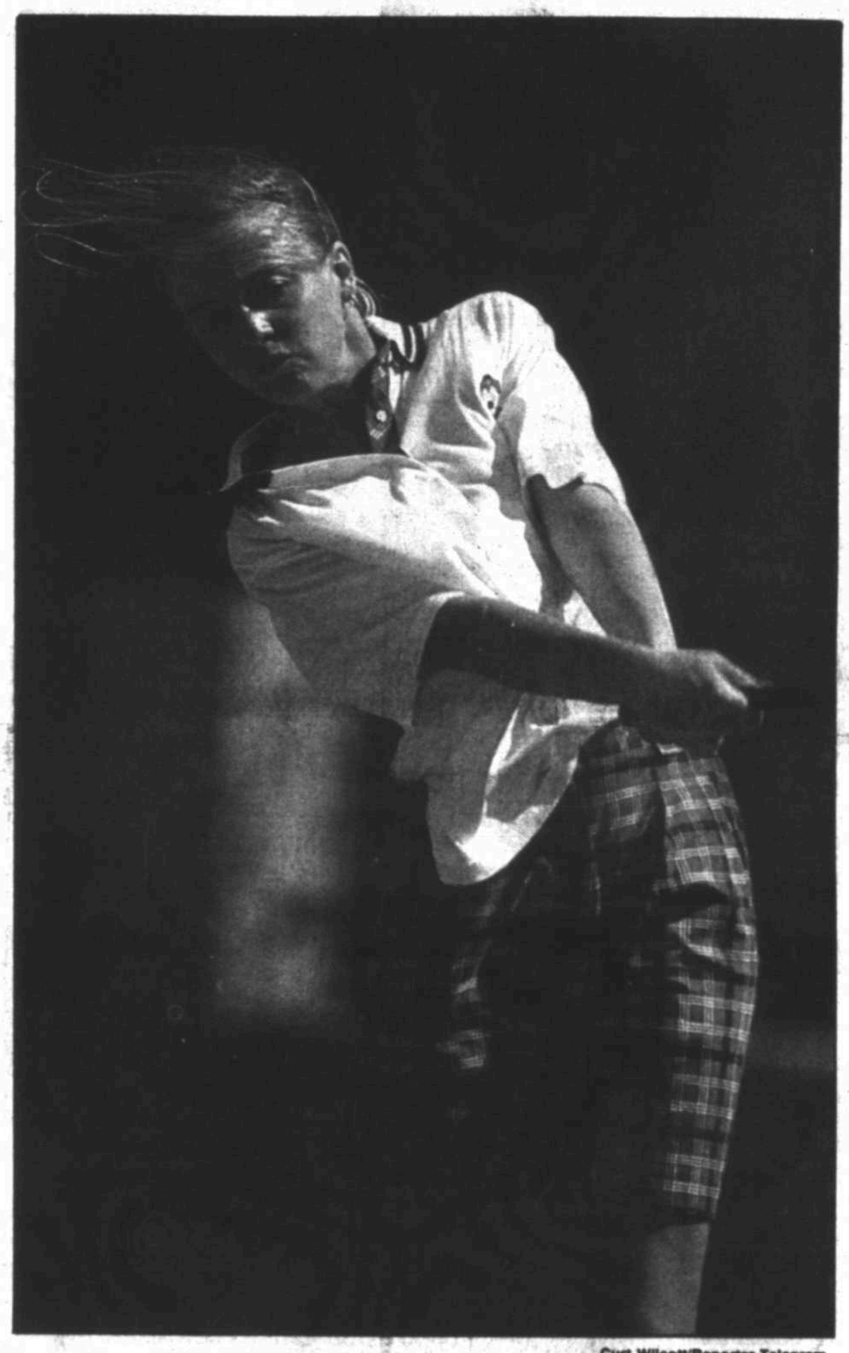

"I've been around for nearly 39 years; I've enjoyed it and I've been lucky. Everyone feels they are lucky when they can make a living in a profession they enjoy," Eastwood told the audience.

White House seeks to free abortion aid

■ Both sides of issue gird for a fight over huge health-care program now being drafted.

By Robin Toner
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Opening a new season of struggle over federal abortion policy, the Clinton administration plans to ask Congress to lift the nearly total ban on federal financing of abortions for poor women, White House officials say.

The move will come in President Clinton's detailed federal budget request, expected to be made public the week of April 4, said George Stephanopoulos, the chief White House spokesman.

How Congress will respond and how hard Clinton will push the issue are still unclear, say lawmakers and legislative analysts on Capitol Hill. Opponents of abortion say they believe they have a good chance of blocking the president.

For all the uncertainties, Clinton's decision to seek the repeal of the 16-year-old federal prohibition, which is known as the Hyde Amendment and applies to the Medicaid program for poor people, is a sign of the sea of change in abortion politics.

Both sides of the abortion issue predict that the next six months will test old positions, longstanding alliances and the power of the abortion-rights movement under a friendly administration.

Nunn: Forbidding queries of gay recruits might work

By Marcia Stepanek
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn suggested Monday that forbidding the Pentagon to ask military recruits if they're gay — a temporary policy agreed to in January by him, the Pentagon and President Clinton — might make a good permanent policy.

Nunn, a strong supporter of the military's ban on gays, made the suggestion in several network television shows just hours before convening his committee hearings on Clinton's plan to lift the ban on homosexuals in uniform.

MISD police confiscate gun on school campus

For the second Monday in a row, a student has carried a loaded gun onto a public school campus.

Midland Independent School District police confiscated a loaded .357 revolver from Coleman High School Monday. A school official said the 16-year-old student claimed he brought the gun to school "for protection."

The youth was arrested on campus and taken to Culver Youth Center.

Last week, a 14-year-old student brought a .38-caliber automatic to Lee Freshman High School. The student said the gun was loaded while he had it at school and on the bus. The

Pattern of city's traffic accidents shifts

■ Officials undertake measures to make dangerous intersections safer.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Traffic accidents in Midland rose slightly last year, with the pattern shifting from major thoroughfares to off-streets.

But all of the four local traffic fatalities, including two occurring on consecutive days last September, occurred at busy intersections.

Corrective measures — including placing oversized stop signs and painting "stop ahead" on the pavement — already have been taken at the most dangerous intersections.

The corner of Marienfeld Street and Michigan Avenue, with seven accidents in 1992, had the highest accident rate per number of vehicles entered.

Another measure undertaken that the city believes has made the Marienfeld/Michigan intersection more safe includes: trimming hedges and tree branches on the northwest corner to improve sight distance for southbound traffic.

The second most dangerous crossing, with 11 accidents, was Main Street and Scharbauer Drive. In the three years before 1992, that intersection only had eight wrecks.

Expect cloudy skies, 70s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, with a high in the mid-70s and west winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the lower 40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 49, Monday's high reached 87, compared to the record high for that date of 95 set in 1963. The record low was 17 set in 1987.

STATE

Clouds, hail and even tornadoes ushered splashed across the state Monday and similar, though less-severe conditions were expected today.

Much of West Texas braced for tornadoes Monday, while the northern South Plains were getting soaked by showers and thunderstorms. Otherwise, skies were mostly sunny from the South Plains southward.

Hail was reported in several parts of the regions, as were strong winds, a few funnel clouds and one tornado as the thunderstorms moved northeast across the South Plains.

The chance for rain will linger in the region, with clouds hanging around for several days.

Lows are expected to be in the 40s to mid-50s and highs will be from the 60s in the north to near 80 in the Big Bend.

A high pressure system in the eastern part of South Texas swept some moisture from the Gulf of Mexico into the region.

Other thunderstorms formed in the far west part of the area, with one pocket dumping golf ball-sized hail around 50 miles northwest of Del Rio.

Mostly cloudy conditions with a chance for showers and thunderstorms are forecast for today, along with lows into the 50s and highs possibly into the 80s.

NATION

Thunderstorms broke out Monday over the southern Plains with high wind and large hail, and rain spread across the Northeast with a threat of small stream flooding.

An intensifying low pressure system was centered over the Texas-New Mexico line, causing tornadoes and severe thunderstorms across parts of western Texas.

On the back side of the low pressure system, showers and thunderstorms were reported over parts of New Mexico.

Two to 4 inches of snow also was reported over west-central New Mexico and in northern New Mexico.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

AID: Clinton seeks repeal of financing ban

(From 1A)

the restrictions that states can impose on abortion.

Perhaps most important, both sides of the abortion issue are preparing for a fight over the huge health-care program now being drafted by the White House task force headed by Hillary Rodham Clinton. Among the proposals being considered by the task force is one that, over the long term, would dismantle the Medicaid program entirely and integrate the poor into the same network of doctors, hospitals and private insurance companies that would serve the more affluent.

Whether or not such a proposal is adopted, abortion-rights supporters say, reproductive-health and abortion services must be included in the basic benefits package expected to be guaranteed all Americans under the final plan.

"For too long, women's reproductive health has been left to the vagaries of politics," said Kate Michelman, president of the National Abortion Rights Action League, who met with top White House officials on the issue last week.

The primary goal in all these struggles, Ms. Michelman added, is "to have government return to a position of neutrality in the reproductive decisions of women."

Opponents of abortion are just as adamant about preventing abortion from becoming a routine medical service in the eyes of the law. Douglas Johnson, legislative director for the National Right to Life Committee, said of the abortion-rights forces, "They want to obliterate any distinction between abortion and contraception."

Clinton's decision to seek repeal of the Hyde Amendment is the fulfillment of a campaign promise that highlighted the gulf between him and President Bush on abortion. The amendment, named for its sponsor, Rep. Henry J. Hyde of Illinois, was approved by Congress in 1976 and endured, in one version or another, with the backing of Presidents Carter, Reagan and Bush. It applies to the Medicaid program, the basic health-care program for poor people, which is financed jointly by the federal government and the states.

At present, the Hyde Amendment prohibits the use of any federal money for abortions for poor women unless a woman's life is endangered from continued pregnancy. According to the abortion-rights league, eight states use their own money to provide abortions to poor women in additional circumstances, like cases of rape and incest or fetal deformity. Twelve other states pay for most or all abortions, the league says.

The Hyde Amendment has been the subject of repeated skirmishes over the years, with abortion-rights supporters in Congress trying several times to allow federal financing of abortions in cases of rape and incest. But Bush consistently vetoed such efforts; his staunch opposition to abortion meant that abortion-rights supporters needed a veto-proof majority of two-thirds in each house of Congress, exceedingly hard to get.

Stephanopoulos provided no details of Clinton's strategy on repealing the Hyde Amendment. The spokesman simply said, "The president called for the repeal of the Hyde Amendment during the campaign, and that will be his position." The amendment "will not be part of his budget submission," he said.

Stephanopoulos cast the decision as an effort to give states greater flexibility. "The Republicans have shown consistently in their platform that they weren't prepared to allow for abortions even in cases of rape and incest," he said. "This proposal simply tries to preserve the flexibility of the states to make the tough decisions they must make."

An administration official, speaking on condition that he not be identified, said the legal implications of lifting the Hyde Amendment were unclear. Specifically, he said, there is much disagreement over how this move will affect states that have banned the use of their money for abortions and therefore do not include them in their Medicaid programs.

The budget submission will "include language that says the administration will work with Congress to facilitate an approach that is consistent with both federal and state law," the official said.

But opponents of abortion asserted that repealing the Hyde Amendment would, sooner or later, force states to finance virtually all abortions for poor women. "I'd welcome the debate," said Johnson, of the National Right to Life Committee. "The American public is strongly against the federal funding of abortion on demand."

The political support for taxpayer financing of abortions is not, in fact, so great as the support for the constitutional right to choose abortion. The last time a New York Times/CBS News Poll asked about this issue, in July 1992, 52 percent said they opposed "using tax dollars to pay for abortions for women who cannot afford to pay for them," while 42 percent favored it.

In the same poll, 41 percent said abortion should be available to those who want it; another 39 percent said it should be available, but with stricter limits than now exist, and 18 percent said it should not be permitted at all.

That translates into a similar ambivalence in Congress. Hyde, a Republican, said in an interview last week, "There's an initial impulse to say the pro-abortion sentiment seems to be on a roll right now, but there are a lot of members who are, in their words, pro-choice but nonetheless oppose the use of taxpayer-funded abortions."

Johnson added that he believed his side had a "good chance to win" on the issue in Congress.

Stephanopoulos said it was too soon to assess the chances of a repeal.

Rep. Vic Fazio, a California Democrat who has long been active on abortion rights, said Congress would be "charting new territory" on the Hyde Amendment and other abortion issues. A friendly White House, and new members who are increasingly sympathetic to abortion rights, make past political calculations obsolete, Fazio and others say.

The most important test, Fazio said, could be over the inclusion of abortion services in the national health-care plan. Stephanopoulos, in an interview on Friday, refused to discuss what services might or might not be in the basic benefits plan.

TRAFFIC: Pattern of accidents in city shifts

(From 1A)

"It's hard to say what caused such an increase. But we know it happens a lot at lower volume intersections," said Gary Saunders, director of Traffic and Engineering. "We have already moved the stop bar closer to those intersections, which allows a better view of traffic. That seems to have really helped so far this year."

The Scharbauer Drive/Main Street intersection poses sight distance problems because of a railing on a bridge and fluctuating traffic problems generated from the Furr's Supermarket on the southwest corner.

"We are going to conduct studies at this intersection to determine if traffic signal warrants are met. We are also looking at the possibility of relocating the stop signs and stop bars for possible clearer vision," Saunders said. "Advance warning signs have already been installed."

Saunders said that traffic studies in the past have shown that improvements made since 1988 have "greatly reduced" the number of accidents at intersections that previously were considered dangerous.

Other lesser-used intersections that showed a marked increase in accidents in 1992 compared to 1991 include: Big Spring Street and Louisiana Avenue, eight last year from one the year before; Andrews Highway and Whitney Avenue, eight from zero and Andrews Highway and Texas Avenue, eight from four.

Intersections at Loop 250 and four streets; Garfield Street, Midkiff Road, Midland Drive and Andrews Highway all showed significant decreases in 1992.

"We did a lot to work on timing for the lights and safety measures out there. But mostly it's hard to say why they went down. It's a bit of luck," Saunders said.

However, the Loop 250 crossings at Garfield Street and Midkiff Road — along with the intersection of Midkiff Road and Wall Street — had the highest total number of accidents at 14.

Out of the 2,481 total accidents last year in Midland, 205 of the wrecks were alcohol-related. Ten percent (132) of the total number of injured persons (1,312) were hurt in alcohol-related accidents.

OSCARS: 'Unforgiven' takes four awards

(From 1A)

best picture. The others were the 1931 film "Cimarron" and 1990's "Dances With Wolves."

"You broke my streak," quipped Pacino, who had been nominated six times in past years without winning.

"Indulge me for a minute, because I'm not used to this," he said in the midst of a rambling speech. Pacino, one of the industry's most respected actors, also strode to the stage to a standing ovation.

"It's overwhelming to see so many faces who have entertained and thrilled me for all my life," said Miss Thompson, a British actress, in her acceptance speech.

"Howards End," a stately family saga that shared a leading nine nominations with "Unforgiven," also won awards for art direction and Ruth Prawer Jhabvala's screenplay adaptation of E.M. Forster's classic novel.

Another best picture nominee, "The Crying Game" won only the best original screenplay award for Neil Jordan's sexually provocative story about love and terrorism.

Hackman thanked Eastwood, "who made it all possible for me and everyone else in the film. It was a wonderful experience." It was his second Oscar; he won as best actor for the 1971 film "The French Connection."

In accepting her award, Miss Tomei said: "This is such a great honor to receive this in a year when we recognize and celebrate and honor women." The theme of the 65th Academy Awards, televised live by ABC to a worldwide audience estimated in advance at 1 billion, was "Oscar Salutes Women and the Movies."

Miss Tomei, virtually unknown until "My Cousin Vinny," beat some of the world's most acclaimed actresses, including Judy Davis, who had been favored to win for her role in Woody Allen's "Husbands and Wives."

"Aladdin" Disney's smash animated film, brought the Oscar for best original score to Alan Menken, while he and Tim Rice won the best song award for "A Whole New World." Menken and his late partner, Howard Ashman, had won Oscars two out of the previous three years for Disney's "The Little Mermaid" and "Beauty and the Beast."

"A River Runs Through It" picked up the Oscar for cinematography, while the award for best sound went to "The Last of the Mohicans."

"Bram Stoker's Dracula," directed by Francis Ford Coppola, picked up three awards, for costume design, makeup and sound effects editing. The prize for visual effects went to the black comedy "Death Becomes Her."

"Indochine," at $20 million the most expensive French film ever made, was honored as best foreign picture.

Billy Crystal, host of the show for the fourth time, made his usual hilarious entrance, this time riding on a giant-size Oscar statue pulled by Jack Palance. It was Palance who upstaged Crystal last year by performing one-handed pushups after he accepted his supporting actor award for "City Slickers," in which they starred together.

"The Crying Game" had attracted intense pre-Oscar discussion because of its graphic style and plot surprises. There had been special interest in whether its cross-dressing co-star Jaye Davidson, a loser in the supporting actor category, would wear a tux or gown for the occasion. Davidson chose an androgynous outfit of a long black frock coat over tight pants and boots, his hair in a bun.

Other movies competing for best film were "Scent of a Woman" and Rob Reiner's military courtroom drama, "A Few Good Men."

Among best actor nominees, only Denzel Washington, star of Spike Lee's epic-length "Malcolm X," had won before. Also nominated were Robert Downey Jr., who played film legend Charlie Chaplin in "Chaplin," and Stephen Rea, the disillusioned Irish Republican Army member in "The Crying Game."

Besides Miss Thompson, the woman most often cited as a contender for best actress had been Susan Sarandon, who played the devoted mother of an ailing child in "Lorenzo's Oil." Others nominated were Michelle Pfeiffer, a JFK-obsessed housewife in "Love Field"; Mary McDonnell, the paralyzed soap diva of "Passion Fish," and French star Catherine Deneuve, a plantation owner in "Indochine."

Show producer Gil Cates recruited many former Oscar winners as presenters, including Barbra Streisand, Anthony Hopkins, Anjelica Huston, Jack Nicholson, Jane Fonda, Liza Minnelli, Kathy Bates, Jodie Foster, Whoopi Goldberg and Geena Davis.

The ceremonies featured one of the few posthumous awards in Academy history. Audrey Hepburn, who died of cancer earlier this year, was honored with the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award for her efforts as UNICEF's ambassador to the world's children. Gregory Peck, co-star of her award-winning "Roman Holiday," was on hand to present the award to her son, Sean Ferrer.

Angela Lansbury was the presenter of the Hersholt Award to Elizabeth Taylor, cited for her crusading efforts in the AIDS crisis. The two actresses appeared together in "National Velvet."

GUN: Police arrest student

(From 1A)

gun was loaded while he had it at school and on the bus. The gun was loaded when MISD police contacted him at his home. A .45-caliber revolver also was confiscated from the youth. He and a second youth were taken to Culver Youth Center. Reports indicated the guns were stolen from a car.

Monday's incident was the eighth this year involving guns — not all loaded — brought to campus or in cars, according the MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr.

"The frequency of this type of incident has increased," he said, noting that all students found guilty of bringing guns to campuses have been expelled.

MISD's policy on guns is zero tolerance. "The school board expels students bringing guns to school for any reason," said MISD school board trustee Michael Dobey.

"We have added three additional security officers this year. Everyone is on alert to be sensitive to this issue," Baressi said.

The superintendent said parents should keep their guns "under lock and key," and not so readily available to students. And students should "be responsible to alert school officials as quickly as possible" if they know of a someone who has a gun on school grounds.

NUNN: Georgia Democrat suggests gay-military compromise

(From 1A)

The Georgia Democrat told CBS "This Morning" that prohibiting recruiters from asking enlistees their sexual orientation "is rather a good place to be . . . It may be a pretty good place to end up."

He added: "Right now . . . if people keep their private behavior private, if they don't declare and advertise their private behavior, then they are able to stay in the military service as long as they perform their duties. It seems to me that's an interim compromise, and it may be a pretty good place to end up."

But Nunn also repeated past statements that he would oppose any effort to let avowed gays serve — or serve only in certain assignments, a suggestion that Clinton said last week he would consider.

Though Nunn's willingness to keep the current compromise in place represented a shift in the senator's attitude on the issue, pro-gay groups immediately attacked the idea. They said the it does little to ease military discrimination against gays and does not stop officers from asking people already in the military if they're gay and ousting them if they admit to homosexual activity.

"Simply declining to ask people their sexual orientation when they enter the service will not deal with the issue because people can be asked after they enter the service and can be discriminated against at that point," said Tom Stoddard, director of the Campaign for Military Service, a national gay group formed to fight the ban.

"We need an end to discrimination and this compromise doesn't end discrimination," he said.

Paul D. Hardman, founder and commander of American Legion Post 448 in San Francisco, an all-gay post of the national veterans' organization, said that whenever gays are discovered by military officials, "they kick them out and they can't get unemployment insurance.

"The only difference between now and then is you no longer make liars out of recruits," Hardman said. "But you still have a climate of hatred."

A high-ranking, active-duty Army official, who requested anonymity, said the bar against asking recruits their sexual orientation does not represent a major change in the way the military treats gays.

"We're still asking people questions now about their sexual orientation," said the active-duty official, who opposes homosexuals in the service. "We now can't ask them that question on a recruitment form, but the current compromise doesn't stop us from asking people (already in the service) about their sexual orientation.

"The compromise we have now also is not much of a deterrent (to gays) because most gays lie anyway — not only to get into the military but to stay there. People, if they're willing to lie to come into the military are willing to lie to continue to stay in."

Because it's not much of a change, he added, "the military probably wouldn't have much of a problem with making the compromise permanent."

Nunn, in opening remarks, denied he is prejudiced against homosexuals .

YOUR HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, MARCH 30, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Originality will be your best tool for advancing your career. Money is more plentiful than in the recent past. A crowning achievement leads to wider public recognition of your efforts. Autumn brings new financial gains. Work harder to keep romance alive. Talking things over with a sympathetic and discreet friend could reveal fresh options. Welcome constructive advice.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: artist Vincent van Gogh, actors Warren Beatty and John Astin, rock star Eric Clapton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A letter or phone call will brighten your morning. You may have a new interest in fashion or interior decorating. Consult reference books at your local library.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put your creative talents on display so that others will benefit from them. Postpone major business negotiations until next week. Someone may question your integrity. Fight back!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The financial take from your endeavors may not be sufficient. Seek new outlets for your many talents. You will find life much more enjoyable with the right partner. Pursue a romantic interest.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Self-improvement projects are very appealing now. Combine business with pleasure without being too obvious about your purpose. A friend offers helpful suggestions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A loved one is especially helpful now. Teamwork will help advance special plans. A former romantic partner may re-enter the picture. Let this person know exactly where you stand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do some research and a secret fear will fly right out the window. Do not blame yourself or mate for family woes. Good news comes in a small package. Share your delight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Beware of someone who comes on too strong, promising to do great things for you. Returning a phone call could reduce a financial burden. Forget false pride. Be more patient with a parent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not neglect your regular duties while handling a special project or you will lose as much as you gain. Your reputation for meeting deadlines is an important part of your success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Imagination and change shape your life now. Maintain a positive attitude and you will find great rewards. Friendship could prove more satisfying than romance today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your presence will stop a quarrel. You may have judged someone too harshly. Do not be afraid to admit a mistake. Other people will respect you for speaking out. Carefully monitor expenses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Bury the hatchet with a family member. Diplomacy will help you bring estranged relatives to the bargaining table. Buckle your seat belt on the roller coaster of romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Very special things can occur in private today. Your treasure chest could be filled by those who possess the money to help you. Avoid signing unusual contracts or making big purchases.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are both scholars and leaders. Their greatest strength — the ability to dominate others — can also be a weakness. These Aries are not team players by nature and must be encouraged to utilize other people's good ideas. Let them know that it takes both wisdom and courage to make intelligent concessions. Lasting romance will depend on their willingness to sometimes subordinate their own needs to their mate's.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ♠	4 ♡	4 ♠
5 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

There is considerable difference of opinion about whether third-hand's play to the first lead of the suit should be attitude, suit preference or count. Include us in the attitude camp. This deal will help explain why.

Note North's decision to jump to four hearts. The problem with bidding only three hearts is that partner might construe the simple raise as a purely competitive effort, rather than an attempt to get to game and so pass many hands where four hearts would be a favorite. We don't fault South for the push to five hearts, even though four spades could be defeated three tricks, if the defenders stay away from hearts.

Cover the East and South hands and consider the problem from West's point of view. Suppose you use suit preference signals at trick one and East wants spades continued. If he plays a high spade, that indicates a diamond shift, not a spade continuation. Similarly, if you play count, a high spade would show an even number of cards and a low spade an odd number, but you sometimes can't be sure whether to continue the suit or switch.

Playing attitude, East would follow to trick one with the two, discouraging a spade continuation, but saying nothing about what shift is desired. Would you choose diamonds or clubs?

If declarer has a club loser, it's probably not going away, but a diamond loser could vanish on the clubs. Therefore, West should shift to a diamond and the contract goes down one in peace and quiet.

The death Thursday of Nancy Rea of Midland was a sad occasion for her family and many friends but it would be unworthy of her memory to say that with her death one of Midland's brightest lights went out.

In not only her living but in her dying, she was an inspiration. She touched many and she showed that death, while sad, can be met with grace and dignity. She did that by adhering to hope without embracing denial, by exhibiting not only courage in facing her own mortality but in showing compassion for the feelings of those who through personal contact were experiencing it with her.

A huge number of notes and letters arrived during the final year of Nancy Rea's life and we are not surprised that many were from people unknown to either her or her husband.

For them, just hearing about Nancy Rea was a light turned on, not one turned off.

While she was active in a broad range of civic, youth and cultural enterprises here, she was especially known for her longtime association with the United Way of Midland, its board of directors, its many committees and, in recent years, as volunteer coordinator and, thus, as a driving force behind the work of nine task forces established to focus on Midland's major human service needs through Midland Introspective. While hundreds of people served these groups, Nancy coordinated the meetings, efforts and achievements of all and has been given well-deserved credit for the project's smooth operation . . . so much so that a Nancy Vann Rea Midland Introspective Fund of the United Way has been set up.

That's another light that will continue to burn.

Several months ago this newspaper approached Nancy in hope that she could be a subject of our popular "Introducing" feature, which profiles those who have significant roles in making life better for others. She graciously declined. "Let's don't," she said. "I'm actually going out (of civic life); you should feature those who are coming in."

It was in character for one who not only gave much of her time and energy to volunteer work throughout her life but who had chosen helping people as the focus for her professional work as well.

One of the most unique things about Nancy's life was that she continued to serve and set an example for others as her death drew near. By her attitude, her humility, her concern for others "she showed me how a person should approach death" said one who knew her not closely but knew her well enough. And many others agreed.

For them, lights didn't go out when Nancy Rea died. It's possible that for some they actually went on.

We believe she would like that.

Interest of group destroys individual rights

Both Republicans and Democrats are decrying the number of illegitimate children in America these days.

My question is, What business is it of the national government whether a child is born in or out of wedlock? I checked the Constitution in my World Almanac. I couldn't find anywhere in it where it said the government shall make sure children are born only to legally married moms.

Reese

Whether you are for or against bastards, whether you think sexual union should occur only if sanctioned by priests or licensed by the government, I don't care. What I want you to take note of is the view of government reflected by public officials who are concerned — allegedly anyway — about children being born out of wedlock.

Keep your mind sharp, now. They didn't say they were concerned about the children — only that their birth was occurring as a result of an unlicensed union. There is a difference. As an aside, I don't know why they are surprised by the increase in bastards. The Aid for Families with Dependent Children only pays if no husband is present. Thus the government itself has created a financial incentive for single motherhood.

But the point of my pique is that all this talk about essentially private affairs of human beings indicates clearly a concept of government that assumes the authority to regulate every aspect of our lives.

That concept is the basic premise of Democrats, of Republicans, of liberals, and of so-called conservatives. It is the basic premise of most people who work in journalism. There is hardly any aspect of human behavior that people don't think it is a non-debatable right of the government to be concerned about.

I'm not using hyperbole when I tell you that this philosophy of unlimited government powers is identical to the philosophy espoused by Marx and Lenin and such men as Saddam Hussein. It makes you wonder why we had a Cold War in the first place. What's our gripe with Saddam? He thinks government should have unlimited powers. We think government should have unlimited powers. Where's the beef?

In my role as a living anachronism, let me remind you that the basic premise of the American Revolution was that unless we are injuring public safety or public health or interfering with the rights of our neighbors, government should stay the heck out of our lives.

An Englishman in the heyday of our Republic remarked that the most significant thing he observed during his stay of many months was that Americans never mentioned their government. They neither feared it nor revered it, he said. They never thought about it.

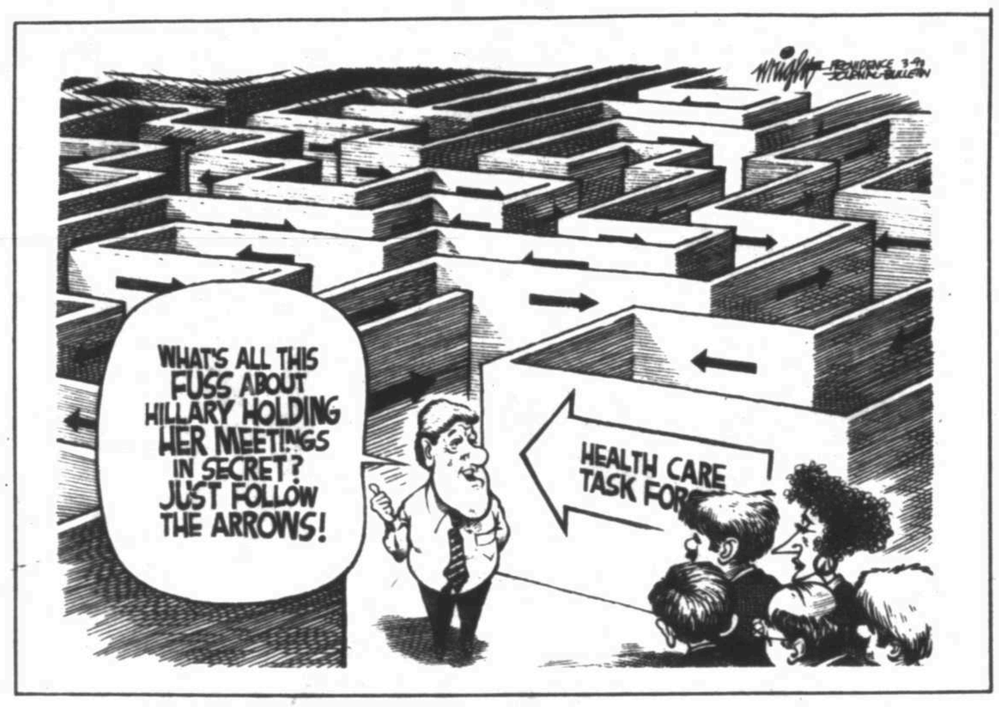

That is a description of a free society which no longer applies to the United States in 1993. It's really difficult today to have a conversation with anybody without the subject of the government coming up.

Pay attention to public discourse and you will hear words which indicate an assumption that it is the government's job to solve every problem.

The philosophical divide of modern civilization is whether the individual or the state shall be supreme, whether rights are individual or only group rights. The American Revolution opted for individual rights, but modern Americans seem to prefer the opposite concept, that rights of the individual are to be destroyed in the interest of the group.

Ask not what your country can do for you, ask rather what it can do to you and then beware of swapping your freedom for a phony promise of security or comfort.

Nation needs jobs, not taxes

President Clinton is off to a good start as far as attacking the deficit with the tax increases. However, where are the spending cuts and deregulation needed to help business so we can afford to pay the added taxes. We need jobs, not more taxes and government spending. Any governmental job training other than remedial reading and arithmetic will be a waste of taxpayer funds. Industry if they have the jobs will train their own workers. We need jobs because many of our social problems — crime, drugs, welfare, homelessness, etcetera — are compounded by current high unemployment.

However, many in Congress and much of the public believe that government can improve the economy with laws, regulations and government spending. Unfortunately, government spending as a whole is generally not very productive because it is often spent unwisely. Yes, we do need to spend money on our infrastructure but those funds should come from local taxes not the federal government. Local officials spend tax dollars where the need is greatest. Federal funds generally involve tremendous waste.

What is really needed is a reduction in regulation so our industry can be more competitive worldwide. Our industry has a tremendous amount of indirect expense due to excessive government regulation (quotas, EPA and OSHA). Much of this regulation is the type that I classify as, "Do gooder legislation." The intentions are good but excessive cost destroys much of the intended benefit. The recent Family Leave Legislation is a typical example of "Do gooder legislation." How many jobs will Family Leave Legislation generate? The cost of our government and the bureaucracy involved is also excessive. Clinton has good intentions on reducing the White House expenses. A 50 percent cut would be a start. With this example Congress should also cut their expenses. Fat chance of that.

When we get serious about reducing cost of government there are several things Congress can do. First, mandate a hiring freeze. Second, have all agencies review all the middle management positions with the goal of eliminating two or three levels. Third, review and drastically cut the enforcement powers of most of the government agencies. Fourth, review all special programs, with the goal of eliminating all make-work projects. What the country needs is less taxes and bureaucratic regulation. With the proper business climate our industry will be able to compete worldwide. With an expanding economy there would be more jobs and taxes to reduce the deficit.

NRA not to blame for standoff

I was amused by Brian Foley's letter (Letters, March 21) implying that the National Rifle Association was responsible for the standoff in Waco. Our Bill of Rights allows us certain freedoms and on occasion those freedoms are abused. I don't think we should convict the Branch Davidians without due process, but assuming they possessed and misused illegal firearms, why attack an organization representing many thousands of law-abiding gun owners? This is like blaming the American Medical Association for the practices of Dr. Kevorkian.

Inevitably, a very small percentage of those possessing firearms abuse their rights and the liberals in this country immediately move to pass legislation which would effectively confiscate our guns. Without lobby groups such as the NRA, our right to bear arms under the U.S. Constitution may very well have been taken from us long ago.

Maybe Foley would like to go hunting with me sometime to discuss this matter further . . .

Litter sends mixed messages

I drive down the roads of Midland and am absolutely appalled and saddened that more pride is not shown in our town. I am truly amazed by the lack of concern displayed as well as the selfishness and self-centered attitude of people that carelessly discard trash out their car window. Our town could be a beautiful town if only we Midlanders would do something about the current condition our town is in, then make a commitment to throw trash where it belongs, in an appropriate trash receptacle.

I also want to mention what a poor example we are setting for our children. My kindergartner has learned through McGruff not to litter. He's also learned a song about "if you see a piece of litter pick it up." It is very difficult explaining to him why people learn this; however, his elders, people who should know better, show such little concern and do not have to follow the "don't litter" rule. We, as adults, should be ashamed of ourselves for expecting our children to "do as I say, not as I do." These mixed messages are extremely confusing to our children.

There is an organization in Midland called Keep Midland Beautiful that has various programs for residents, church groups, clubs or organizations to become involved in such as "Adopt a Spot" or "Adopt a Highway." On April 3, Keep Midland Beautiful will be sponsoring a "Glad Bag-a-Thon" from 9-12 a.m. This will be a day for all citizens to help pitch in and truly keep Midland beautiful. This organization is in the phone book and would be more than happy to give information about helping you become involved in any of these worthwhile programs.

I want to challenge all Midlanders to take responsibility for your town, yourself, and those around you. Let's all get involved in a clean-up campaign. Let's demand the best from our city and its citizens. I challenge each and every Midland Citizen to take part in the "Glad Bag-a-Thon" on April 3.

Courts cannot provide legislature on morality

Justice Byron White, who is retiring from the Supreme Court, protested the pro-abortion ruling of Roe vs. Wade as "an exercise of raw judicial power," which it clearly was. Hurricane-like, Roe knocked flat a whole thicket of state laws that established varying degrees of protection for unborn life.

Murchison

Congress' pro-abortion faction now wants to get in on the act. It backs the Freedom of Choice Act, codifying the spacious permissions doled out by the high court. Frankly, the pro-abortion faction doesn't trust the Supreme Court, despite its refusal last year to overrule the Roe decision and the pending retirement of one justice — White — who had voted to overrule.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee the other day voted 12 to 5 to send FOCA, as the legislation is known in shorthand, to the floor for debate. Bill Clinton says he'll sign the bill if it passes. Will it?

Maybe. And yet there is a more profound question: Would FOCA, if it passed, settle the abortion question? Almost surely not. What we're seeing on the abortion front is an intensification of feelings. Both sides are dug in deeper, if possible, than ever before. Blame the court. Blame Congress.

An old libertarian saw has it that you can't legislate morality. You really can't. The reason is, morality precedes legislation: judicial or otherwise. If the legislation reflects the views of the broad public, nothing is going to change deeply. Where virtuous things are believed, virtuous things will be done. Usually. The exceptions may not justify the time and expense of enforcement.

But if the law goes against the consensus, what then? It gets ignored. Hence the absurdity of the ordinance passed by Norphelt, Ark., in 1925:

"Section 1. Hereafter it shall be unlawful for any man and woman, male or female, to be guilty of committing the act of sexual intercourse between themselves at any place within the corporate limits of said town." Section 2 carved out a useful exception for married couples, save in cases of "a grossly improper and lascivious nature." This, during the Roaring '20s!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, March 30, the 89th day of 1993. There are 276 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 30, 1981, President Ronald Reagan was seriously wounded in an attempt on his life outside a Washington hotel by John W. Hinckley Jr., who also shot and wounded White House press secretary James Brady, a Secret Service agent and a District of Columbia police officer.

On this date:

In 1822, Florida became a United States territory.

In 1842, Dr. Crawford W. Long of Jefferson, Ga., first used ether as an anesthetic during a minor operation.

In 1867, U.S. Secretary of State William H. Seward reached agreement with Russia to purchase the territory of Alaska for $7.2 million, a deal roundly ridiculed in the U.S. as "Seward's Folly."

In 1870, the 15th amendment to the Constitution, giving black men the right to vote, was declared in effect.

In 1870, Texas was readmitted to the Union.

In 1909, the Queensboro Bridge, linking the New York boroughs of Manhattan and Queens, opened.

In 1945, the Soviet Union invaded Austria during World War II.

In 1964, John Glenn withdrew from the Ohio race for U.S. Senate because of injuries suffered in a fall.

In 1973, Ellsworth Bunker resigned as U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, and was succeeded by Graham A. Martin.

In 1984, President Reagan formally ended the U.S. role in the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

In 1986, actor James Cagney died in Stanfordville, N.Y., at age 86.

Ten years ago: A jury in Santa Monica, Calif., decided that Groucho Marx's companion, Erin Fleming, had defrauded the late comedian, and awarded nearly half a million dollars to the executor of Marx's estate. (The amount was later reduced to $221,000.)

One year ago: "The Silence of the Lambs" won five top Oscars at the 64th annual Academy Awards: best picture, best actor (Anthony Hopkins), best actress (Jodie Foster), best director (Jonathan Demme) and best adapted screenplay (Ted Tally).

Thousands flee beseiged town, reach safety in Tuzla

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — More than 2,300 Muslim refugees took advantage of a cease-fire and a rare relief convoy Monday to flee the cold, hunger and encircling Serb forces at the eastern Bosnian enclave of Srebrenica.

The refugees — women, children and old men — were packed so tightly into the 19 U.N. trucks that they had to stand on their luggage. But they waved with relief as they reached safety in the Bosnian government-held city of Tuzla.

Some apparently died en route. Tales were common of people falling off the trucks — many of them open vehicles — as they traveled all day to reach Tuzla, 45 miles to the northwest.

"I have no one, I have no one," sobbed 70-year-old Harja Bosankic, lying on her side, safe, in the sports hall converted to a refugee center. She said one son was killed by Serbs. She did not know where her other five children were.

A teen-age granddaughter fell out of a truck as it left Srebrenica, Bosankic said. A sandwich left by aid workers lay untouched by her belongings.

Shafika Mehic cried uncontrollably, holding her feet and rocking. She said her month-old baby turned yellow and apparently died en route. Doctors rushed the child away upon arrival, and she had heard no further.

Relief workers were seen pulling a blanket over the face of an old man who died en route.

The cease-fire has been the most successful so far of the nearly yearlong Bosnian war. It went into effect at noon Sunday, and U.N. officials reported no major violations.

The agreement by the Bosnian Serbs for the cease-fire, a convoy into Srebrenica and the evacuation out of the town came as the international community turned up pressure recently for a settlement. The convoy of food and medicine was only the second into Srebrenica since Dec. 10.

The war broke out last April 6 over a vote for independence by Bosnia's Muslims and Croats. It has left at least 134,000 people dead and missing.

Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, was quiet Monday, and residents marked the cease-fire by thronging sunny city sidewalks after three days of snow. For a year, they have been wary of clear days for fear of snipers.

U.N. and local officials had made a list of 650 people in Srebrenica who most needed evacuation. But Lawrence Jolles of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees' office said hundreds more climbed aboard the trucks, and officials could not remove all of them.

He estimated only a couple hundred of the most needy actually were among the 2,346 people evacuated.

Those aboard the trucks said they waited five hours at the last Serb checkpoint as Bosnian Serbs looked for fighting-age men and weapons.

The local military chief in Tuzla, Hazim Sadic, blamed French Gen. Philippe Morillon, the U.N. commander for Bosnia, for the poor transportation. "We don't even transport animals that way," Sadic said in a statement.

Egyptian youth turn to radical mosques amid joblessness

ASSIUT, Egypt (AP) — Until he began attending Al-Rahma Mosque about a year ago, medical student Mohammed Abdullah spent most of his free time studying anatomy or playing pickup games of soccer.

Now he gets up before dawn each day to attend prayers at the mosque controlled by the radical al-Gamaa al-Islamiya, or the Islamic Group.

"At the government mosques they tell you that Egypt is rich, successful, there are no problems," said Abdullah, 22. "You feel here that they talk more about the problems of the people — no jobs, rising prices, corruption."

This blunt appraisal of grinding poverty has convinced thousands of Egyptian youths to follow the call by fundamentalist Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman to try to overthrow President Hosni Mubarak's secular government.

The blind Abdel-Rahman, the Islamic Group's spiritual leader, is suspected in Egypt of backing terrorism and is fighting extradition from the United States, where he has been living in self-exile since 1990.

Four of the five suspects detained so far in the Feb. 26 bombing of New York's World Trade Center, which killed six and wounded over 1,000, prayed at the preacher's storefront mosque in Jersey City, N.J.

In Egypt, the sheik's followers see no hope in their classrooms bursting with pupils using outdated textbooks, or from fetid alleys in crammed villages where most people don't have jobs.

The Islamic Group offers cheap medical care and food to the poor, but welfare is not its main draw.

Followers in this southern town — a stronghold of militant fundamentalism — and nearby villages say joining the group allows them to dream of a better future, and that violence appears the fastest way to achieve it.

The militants want to implement Islamic laws which they think will yield a more equitable distribution of wealth and greater respect for religion. They say the lack of real opposition parties makes violence their only option.

They want to pull Egypt out of what they see as a client relationship with the United States, which provides more than $2 billion annually in military aid to its most important Arab ally. They opposed Egypt's participation in the anti-Iraq coalition during the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

Militant-sponsored violence has already killed 54 people this year, including a police officer in a Cairo bombing on Saturday. They are also taking aim at the vital tourism industry, which earned $3 billion annually and attracted some 3 million people each year.

Three tourists have died in militant attacks since October, and the number of visitors is believed to have fallen by at least 50 percent since then. Tourism revenues are believed to be down by $1 billion.

"The loud voice and the enthusiasm is attractive to some youth because they think their aims will be reached quickly," said Mohammed Habib, a geology professor at Assiut University and a leader of the long-established Muslim Brotherhood, a more mainstream political group that also backs Islamic rule.

Estimates of the number of Islamic Group followers range up to 200,000, a fraction of Egypt's 58 million people. Both leaders and followers are usually in their 20s.

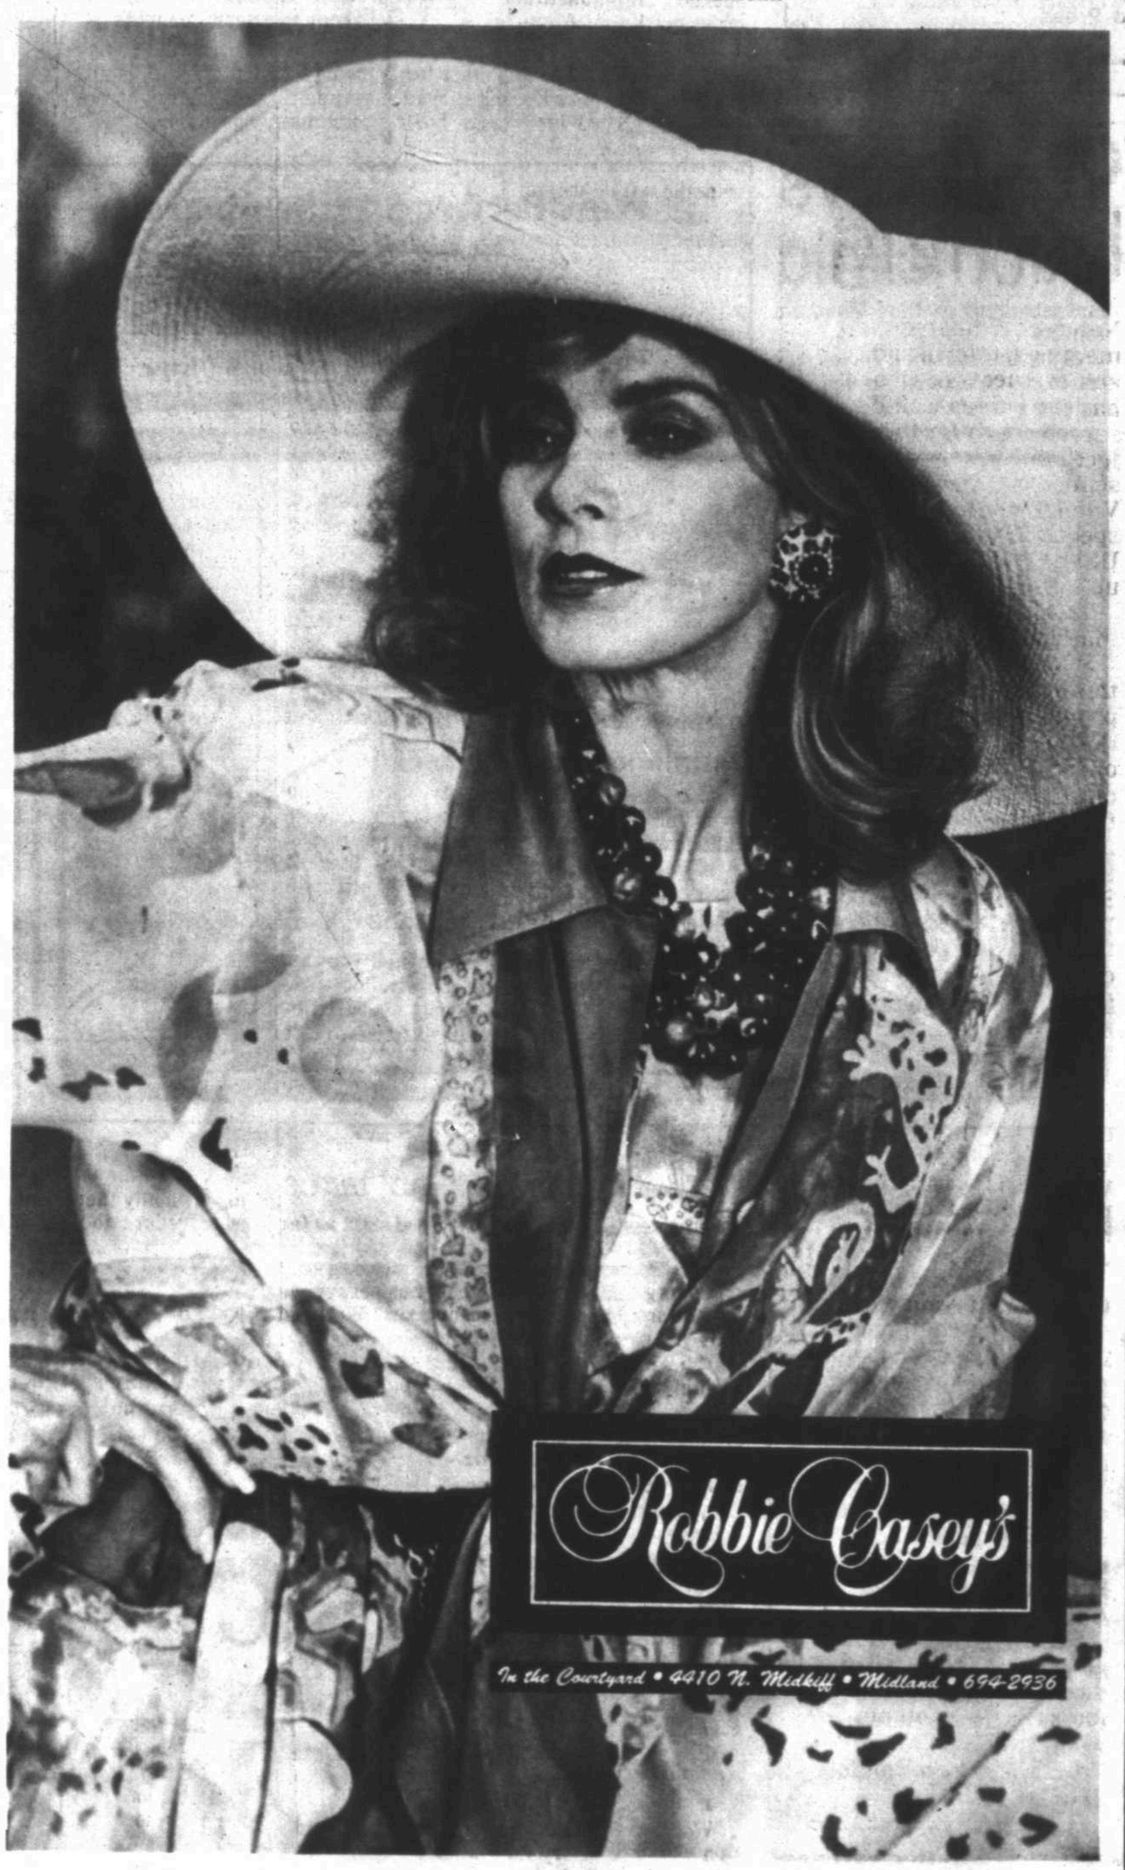

Many Egyptians say foreigners are taking the group much too seriously. Just as Assiut University used to be a center for leftists, they say Islam is the latest fad.

"It is not a mafia spreading into everything. Taken against the whole population, you can barely count them as one finger on your hand," said Dr. Sami Issa, a pharmacy owner.

But the government isn't taking them lightly. Many al-Gamaa followers are underground due to a 15-month crackdown on Islamic extremists that has left 153 people dead.

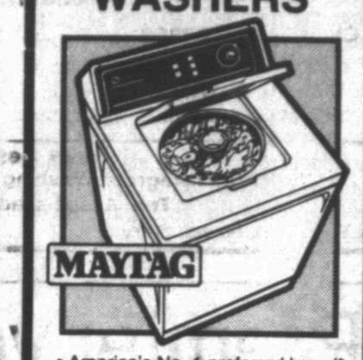

Al-Gamaa adherents claim the country's economic problems would be solved if the rich were forced to pay an Islamic tax each year that could be distributed to the poor. In a country where wealth and contacts are in the hands of a tiny elite, they despite the connections that are needed to get jobs.

One of their heroes is Omar Ibn Al-Khattab, the second Caliph, or ruler of the Islamic faith, after the death of Mohammed, founder of Islam. Islamic legend has it that he lived in a hovel and during a drought ate only oil.

Restaurateur debates Gore at public hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — For hours on end Monday, Vice President Al Gore parried questions over health-care policy with reform advocates and critics, including a Boston restaurateur who said it would be "un-American" to force employers to provide medical insurance.

Gore, filling in for Hillary Rodham Clinton at a marathon hearing on health reform, promised that the administration's developing plan would give all Americans "freedom from fear" about whether they will receive proper care.

But Stephen Elmont, chairman of the Food Group, Ltd., and vice president of the National Restaurant Association, said the fear for employers is the potential cost of universal coverage.

"If I give an inch, I am terribly, terribly concerned about the cost of that inch. That's why I'm so paranoid," said Elmont, who called the restaurant industry the country's biggest retail employer with 9 million workers, many of them part-time.

"We can't absorb those costs," said Elmont, who said most restaurants operate on slim margins and cannot afford health insurance at $3,000 to $5,000 per worker.

"The concept of mandates is un-American," he argued.

Gore inquired if the restaurant owner also regarded mandatory health inspections as un-American.

"No, that's protecting the consumer," replied the restaurateur.

"Some things when applied universally make sense. . . . " said the vice president. "You don't have to compete with some other restaurant that cuts corners."

It was one of the more intense exchanges inside a George Washington University basketball arena where the White House gave more than five dozen groups a chance to plead their case for — and occasionally against — health reform.

Meantime, White House officials would not comment Monday on a report in The New York Times that the Clinton administration is considering dismantling Medicaid to provide low-income people with the same networks of doctors, hospitals and private insurance companies that serve more affluent Americans.

"The health care task force has not yet announced its policies and, again, we're not going to comment on them until they do," White House Communications Director George Stephanopoulos said.

At the hearing, Gore, a half-dozen Cabinet members and other top White House officials questioned consumers, providers and business executives on what they really want in a revamped system, and what they are willing to pay for it.

Robert Rubin, a White House economic policy adviser, said, "There obviously has to be government revenue to deal with the health care issue." When Rubin asked what would be the least harmful tax for small business, Elmont suggested raising income tax rates.

Mrs. Clinton, still in Little Rock, Ark., at the bedside of her ailing father, missed the task force's first public session.

Gore said flatly that the package Clinton will send Congress on May 3 will emphasize preventive care, include "good mental health coverage," and foster home and community-based care.

Report: Arson destroys Montana abortion clinic

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — A women's clinic that has been the repeated target of anti-abortion protests was destroyed by arson Monday. No one was hurt.

The fire at the Blue Mountain Women's Clinic, reported at 3:50 a.m., had been set in two different places inside the building, and some type of incendiary fuel was used, said Fire Chief Chuck Gibson. He estimated damage at $250,000.

Missoula police had no suspects, and they asked the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for assistance in the investigation.

Clinic director Willa Craig said she was searching for another site to re-open the clinic.

U.S. Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., issued a statement calling the arson "reprehensible, cowardly, criminal conduct."

Bill Fetta, head of the Montana Right to Life Association, said in a statement the group "condemns violence as a means to effect social change."

In November 1991, more than 30 anti-abortion acitivists were arrested for trespassing and for violating a court order that barred demonstrations on Blue Mountain property.

Earlier this month, a doctor was shot to death outside an abortion clinic in Pensacola, Fla.

Tornado watch ushers in storm season

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

A six-hour tornado watch for the Midland area Monday ushered in the unpredictable, sometimes deadly time of the year known as tornado season.

Although Midland saw nothing but sunny skies during the watch, which extended from the Panhandle to San Angelo, rain, hail and 77-mph-winds ripped through Lubbock. A funnel cloud was also spotted during the storm.

The system moved through the South Plains later in the afternoon, said National Weather Service spokesman Ron Brown.

The watch was the first of the year for Texas, which generally experiences the tornado season during the months of April, May and June.

"We were a little early this year, but the end of this week is April, so I think we're probably into tornado season," Brown said. "You really can't predict these things — when they will start and stop or when they will occur. The best we can do is a 5-day period before the severe weather hits."

Lubbock's bad weather is a grim reminder of a deadly tornado system that hit the city in May 1970, killing 26 people and causing more than $135 million in property damage.

Texas recorded 189 tornadoes last year, a record year for the United States with 1,295 nationwide. Nearly half of those occurred during the months of June and July.

With West Texas recording 85 of the state's total number of tornadoes last year, residents should be prepared, especially since severe weather could form with little or no warning.

Texas Tech University's Institute for Disaster Research offers the following safety tips:

- Be aware of tornado season in your region.
- Monitor radio and television reports for advance warning of approaching storms. If you have little access to broadcast warnings, pay attention to any rapidly changing weather conditions that could signal a tornado, such as a progression from intense hail to deafening quiet.
- In a home, seek shelter in a closet or room protected by as many interior walls as possible.
- Do not waste time opening windows. It is a misconception that buildings will explode if the windows are left closed.
- Never remain in a car or in a mobile home. Often, vehicles are picked up and smashed by tornadoes and high winds.

Louis Littlejohn, a retired builder, still helps construct homes for Midlanders.

Midlander builds homes, families

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

The first house Louis S. Littlejohn built was for him and his wife a year after their marriage. Sixty years later, Littlejohn, 79, although retired as a builder, continues to help construct homes.

"Once a builder, always a builder. It's something that gets in your blood," he said.

And as long as there are romantic ties between men and women, children will be born and there will always be a need for more homes, he said but a bit more explicitly and with a laugh.

Most recently, Littlejohn was site supervisor for the first two homes built by Habitat for Humanity in Midland.

"It's something to help someone else. It's been fun. I've enjoyed it," he said at the job site recently.

Habitat for Humanity is an ecumenical Christian housing ministry aimed at eliminating sub-standard housing by making decent homes available to low-income families.

"He (Littlejohn) was really invaluable because most of the volunteers down there have other vocations," said Rev. Jon Stasney, president of the board of Habitat for Humanity.

When asked why Littlejohn was chosen to oversee the work, John Warne, chairman of the building committee, replied: "I guess two words: availability and experience."

Littlejohn, who will also oversee building the next few Habitat homes, constructed his first house — a bedroom and a kitchen — in three months in late 1933/early 1934, in

Residents convert to city water

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

■ After signing a petition three years ago, Cardinal Lane residents begin using city water lines.

Cardinal Lane residents ditched their unreliable water wells and septic systems this week and turned on their faucets to city water.

Two dozen disgruntled property owners — fed up with more than a decade of often-barren wells and water laden with salt and harmful materials — signed a petition three years ago, formed a public improvement district and asked the city for water lines.

Now, a few days after city officials turned on the water, many residents on the mile-long stretch of road — now dotted with eight bright yellow fire hydrants — already have received their first water bill.

"We're all very pleased with how this worked out. There are already a couple other groups proposing these utility districts," said District 1 council member James Devenport. "It's really a perfect set up with two groups working togeth-

Lack of program funding forces musician drought

■ Accomplished high school-aged musicians are tough to come by, university officials say.

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Forget being a great quarterback, some university officials are looking for a few good cello players.

It's easier to find a good football player than it is to find an accomplished strings musician, according to officials at the University of Texas in Austin.

"I defy you to find many schools in Texas that don't have mandated physical education and a football team," said Richard Lawn, UT-Austin music department chairman at UT. "Nationwide, there's a lack of orchestral preparation, and recruiting good orchestra players is a tough game."

According to information from the university, many school districts in Texas don't have high school orchestras.

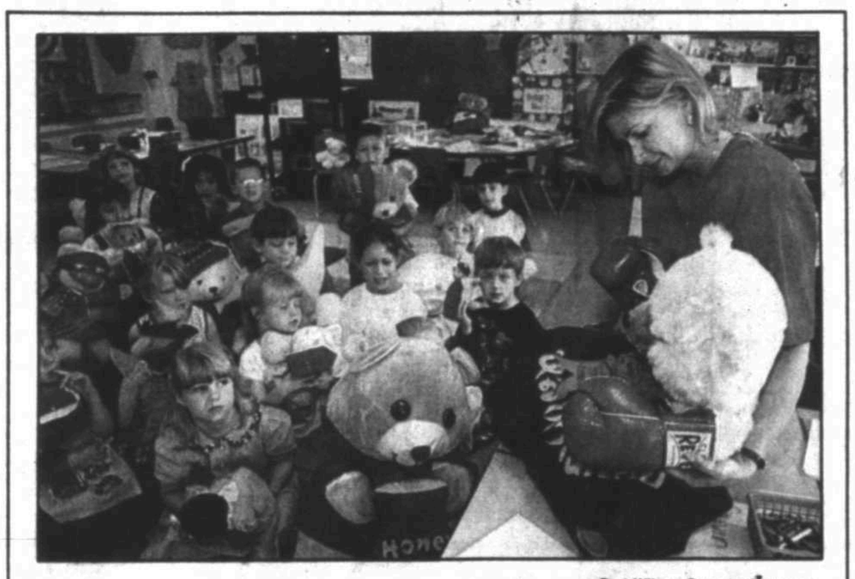

Unlike Midland and Ector County independent school districts, other districts have shut down arts programs due to budget cuts.

"When you look at how many Texas districts have orchestras, one of the things you find is that the arts are the first to go when there are budget cuts," Lawn said. "So, although we are a Texas university, we can't rely on a student body strictly from Texas, because the numbers just aren't there."

"I think we are fortunate to have a good strings program," said Grace Osadchuk, coordinator of fine arts for Midland Independent School District. "Lubbock, Amarillo, Odessa, Austin, San Antonio, and El Paso all have good strings programs."

Ms. Osadchuk said MISD's strings program, which begins in the fifth

Even colorful people have a shade of gray

More rambling thoughts from a semi-tangled brain ...

— If I could change one thing about Americans it would be that we learn to laugh at ourselves and quit getting in a snit every time someone says something we don't agree with.

— Along the same lines, I hate call-in talk shows because everyone thinks their particular issue is the most important matter facing mankind.

— Sometimes I wish the world would stop for 30 seconds and give everyone the opportunity to just giggle for no reason.

— It's nice to travel occasionally, but I'd sure hate to live out of suitcase. If for no other reason, it's hard to keep my clean underwear separated from my dirty ones.

— I'm getting worried because more and more I find myself wanting to go clothes shopping.

— I thought only sissies did that.

— Some people don't know how to behave when they get on an airplane. NOTE: It is not necessary to act like a 12-year-old who has never been away from home.

— And another thing. Call me old-fashioned, but I still prefer female flight attendants.

— I also like it when they are cute and wink at me.

— It is always a bit scary when you turn on the TV and the networks interrupt regular programming for "this special report from the White House." As you hold your breath in anticipation, the president of the United States stares into a camera and talks about "a grave and dangerous" situation in some remote corner of the world.

— Oh well, better there than here.

— Vice president Al Gore comes across as too wholesome for my taste.

— I hate it when people talk with a phony accent.

— I never know how to take it when someone says, "I think your gray hair looks real nice."

— What gray hair?

— There is something particularly sad about a tragic accident that claims the life of a child who now, through no fault of his own, will never have an opportunity to fulfill the wealth of potential all children possess.

— I feel that same sadness when I hear about a young person whose life has been destroyed by drugs. Some people say, "He got what he deserved," and maybe that's true, but still, it seems such a waste and that makes me feel sadness more than anger or hatred.

— It's been said a thousand times before, but I still get tickled when I see grown men in public wearing shorts, black socks and sandals.

— I know it sounds goody-goody, but I really believe there is a special place in heaven for people who quietly help the less-fortunate, whether they be AIDS victims, the homeless or single mothers who have nothing. These heroes don't judge others, they help them. And they do it without great fanfare.

— You know you're getting old when the thought of attending a rock concert sends chills up your spine.

— Sometimes people who come across as being arrogant and self-centered are really just shy and withdrawn.

— It always seems oddly amusing when a sitcom rerun from the past — usually dating back to the mid-60s — is aired and all the female characters are drooling over that "dreamy Rock Hudson."

— And, finally this from Bert Leston Taylor: "A bore is a man who, when you ask him how he is, tells you."

DEAR ABBY

Calendar lets students enter each new day laughing

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I know you don't like to devote too much space in your column to patting yourself on the back, so I'll keep this short.

I have two friends whom I'll call "Cory" and "Marion." For Marion's Jan. 3 birthday, Cory gave her a Dear Abby 1993 Desktop Calendar. You would not believe the hours of entertainment it has given them and the discussions it has sparked. Every day at midnight they look forward to reading the new day's advice. They call it "Abby with an attitude," because of your short and witty answers.

They use the calendar as a supplement to your daily column in the Minneapolis Star-Tribune. Marion saves every day's page to look back on. Cory says she does it because they will become collector's items!

Marion begrudgingly gave up one of her favorites for me to send to you. Abby, if you print it, I guarantee that you will make two college students very happy. — M. NICKOLOPOULOS, CARLETON COLLEGE, NORTHFIELD, MINN.

DEAR "M," CORY AND MARION: All right, you asked for it: From the 1993 Dear Abby Calendar – March 5 (Friday):

Dear Abby: Why are there more Democrats than Republicans? – CURIOUS

Dear Curious: Because most Republicans sleep in twin beds.

DEAR ABBY: "Bugged in St. Paul" is lucky to have a husband who is a good provider, even if his grammar is not so hot.

My first husband's grammar was impeccable — he was, however, the lousiest husband alive! He was unfaithful, and both physically and mentally abusive. I divorced him when I realized he would never change.

I then married a man whose grammar is also "not so hot," but he is the dearest, most caring man I have ever known. He provides for me well enough so that I could quit working at 57 and become a homemaker again.

So, if his grammar "don't matter" to him, it sure as heck "don't matter" to me, either. — HAPPY IN NEW SMYRNA BEACH, FLA.

DEAR HAPPY: I'm glad you're happy. However, many readers were not very happy with me for failing to take a firmer stand against poor grammar.

DEAR ABBY: You advised your readers to loosen up at Christmas time, and leave a little something for their faithful mail carriers. I agreed, and would like to share this little story with you.

My dear friend, "Mary," called just before Christmas to tell me she had left a little gift in my mailbox — two boxes, one containing a homemade fruitcake, and the other, a box of stuffed dates.

On my next trip to the mailbox, I found nothing but my regular mail. I was mystified as to what could have happened to Mary's gifts. I was sure that no one in this neighborhood would steal anything.

The next day, when I went to my mailbox to pick up my mail, I found a Christmas card with the following message: "Mrs. Gantert. Thanks for the nice presents. Very thoughtful of you, but one would have been plenty. Your postal carrier, Marvin." — NANCY GANTERT, PENN VALLEY, CALIF.

MUSIC: Universities look for students

grade, grew this year. "We are preparing for our annual recruiting of fourth grade students," she said, noting that there are 850 strings students in the district.

Lawn said orchestra members and their families have invested heavily in music lessons and instruments long before a student is college age.

"In addition, becoming a skilled musician is a terribly long maturation process. It's a very disciplined activity over a long period of time," he said. "... so in addition to cost, there's an investment of time and effort as well."

Ms. Osadchuk said that since many of the local strings students are academic achievers with high test scores, they are sought after by universities to enter academic programs.

"It's getting harder and harder to encourage music students to major in music," she said. "With academic programs vying for them as well, they are often enticed into science, math, or other programs."

Then there are not many jobs or chairs in professional orchestras available for students pursuing careers in music.

Nonetheless, some students do continue to perform after college, and many say the experience of performing for school events and competitions is invaluable.

"We hope our program will continue to be strong," Ms. Osadchuk said.

The UT-Austin music program has about 675 music majors, of which about 320 are undergraduate students and 355 are graduate students.

Most of the university's students come from Waco, Austin, Houston and San Antonio.

The number of Midland and Odessa students attending UT Austin's music program was not readily available Monday.

HOME: Littlejohn builds life around construction

(From 1B)

a now-defunct black community north of Paris.

"The first house I lived in me and my (late) wife built," he said. "I even made the board for the roof" from pin oak trees, he added.

"That's one of the things that got me started building," Littlejohn said.

At the time, Littlejohn was working on farms for a dollar per 10-hour day.

One day, his cousin, the only carpenter in the area, noticed Littlejohn's house-building expertise.

"He said how would you like to go to work for me and I'll pay you a dollar and a quarter a day and teach you the trade," he said.

Littlejohn accepted the offer.

"If you didn't do it right, he'd make you tear it down and do it over. I only tore down one thing," he said.

Littlejohn later continued his trade in Paris and then in Midland beginning in 1951.

After working as a carpenter, a contractor and for other contractors, Littlejohn retired in 1980.

Since then, the great-grandfather had "piddled around a little" until being asked to supervise the Habitat construction.

Littlejohn, described as humorous, a devout Christian, and sometimes hard-headed by acquaintances, talked about the houses recently built for Habitat.

He recalled when the area where the houses — on south Jackson Street — and the neighborhood were nothing but part of a large field.

"I always thought it was a good trade," Littlejohn said of his retirement pastime.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

■ Fatality

GIRVIN — A McCamey woman was dead and a Midland man was in stable condition after a two-vehicle accident Sunday morning.

According to a Department of Public Safety report, a 1991 Chevrolet pickup, driven by Phillip King, 43, of Midland, was eastbound on U.S. Highway 67 at 11:45 a.m. and a 1984 Mustang, driven by Kimberlee Tarango, 26, of McCamey, was westbound on the highway.

The pickup attempted to make a left onto FM 11 and collided with the Mustang, the DPS report stated.

Joan Lowe, 48, was a passenger in the pickup and was partially ejected from the pickup and then was trapped under the vehicle, the report stated. She was transported to McCamey Hospital and was pronounced dead at 1:38 p.m.

King was in stable condition at McCamey Hospital.

Ms. Tarango and three-year-old Nifa Tarango, a passenger in the Mustang, were in stable condition at Shannon Hospital in San Angelo.

Randy Wheeler, 11, of McCamey and another passenger in the Mustang, was treated and released from McCamey Hospital.

■ Theft

Two Midland teen-agers were still in custody after being charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle Sunday.

According to a police report, officers responded to a recovery of a stolen vehicle at 1404 E Watley at 5:30 p.m. Sunday. Surveillance was posted on the vehicle and when the suspects returned, a pursuit ensued. The vehicle was stopped and officers arrested a 16-year-old male. After further investigation, another 16-year-old male was arrested.

Both were charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and taken to Culver Youth Center.

■ Possession

A 26-year-old man was sentenced to 10 years in prison in state court Monday for possession of almost 27 pounds of marijuana valued at about $42,000, court officials said.

Joel Zubia was found guilty by a jury on Friday of possession of the drug and sentenced Monday by 318th District Judge Dean Rucker.

Zubia was arrested on July 6 of last year.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

By Sandra Wegner
County Librarian

Bring your taste buds and come to the Friends of the Library annual meeting April 18 at the downtown library, 301 W. Missouri.

The public is always welcome at this once-a-year business meeting which will include a program by Linda Anderson, Reporter-Telegram Lifestyle writer and columnist. Her "Consuming Interests" about new food products, is often a family taste testing report. Join us at 2 p.m. and be a taster as well as learn about what's going on at the library and how you can be a Friend!

The downtown Children's department has scheduled its spring story session for three to five-year olds. Beginning today, for five consecutive Tuesdays and repeated on Wednesdays, children may enjoy a variety of programs, from Easter Time to the Teddy Bear Picnic. Programs begin at 10 a.m. and are about 30 minutes. Registration is preferred but not required. Children must be three years old. If you have questions call 688-8991.

Your library materials were overdue but you paid the fine and your feel good about it, because you've made a donation to the library.

That's not exactly how it works. When people learn this, they are surprised.

Fines, even the money received for lost books, go back into the county accounts. This isn't unusual. The county funds the library to buy materials, pay staff and to operate.

While we are funded by the county for postage and supplies that pay for overdue notices and staff to type them, this comes out of our operating budget. Even if we got to keep the fine, it doesn't pay for staff time and postage.

So if you really want to do the library a favor, get your materials back on time. That will save us all money.

Learning to read is like turning on a light in the mind. How appropriate that Sylvania is willing to donate 10 cents for every proof of purchase of their bulbs to this library for books. This is a joint project between our library and Midland Need to Read. Midland Need to Read is a nonprofit organization, supported by private and United Way funds, whose purpose is to teach adults to read.

Children's books may be easy to read but the subject matter doesn't appeal to adults. The library will use the Sylvania contributions to buy special reading materials for new adult readers. Please bring your proof of purchase/UPC codes to either library, downtown, or Centennial Branch at Midland Park Mall.

The library has a special relationship with Midland Need to Read. Besides having the County Librarian on the MNTR Board, the library assists their work as much as possible.

Did you watch The Prize on Public Television? If you missed this popular series on our own home town and worldwide petroleum industry, you may check out the video series at the downtown library. Right now views are watching the Bill Moyers series, the Healing and the Mind, on PBS. You don't have to tape it, if you missed a night, the library already has the series. Many fine series originate on PBS that the library purchases.

Have you read MacLeans or USA Today (the magazine not the newspaper) lately? Among the over 380 periodicals to which this library subscribes, these are two of the most popular. MacLeans is a Canadian weekly news magazine. USA Today: The Magazine of The American Scene is not an education periodical even though it is published by a society of educators. These two publications are popular because they come up so often under a wide variety of topics on our computer magazine index. People tops the list of current magazines being read in the library.

WATER: Citizens hook up to city water supply

er on a common goal."

Cardinal Lane, located north of Loop 250 between Midkiff Road and Midland Drive, has been without city water since 1982, when officials annexed the neighborhood into the city.

"All that property on Cardinal Lane was outside the city limits, it was zoned AE (Agricultural Estate)," Devenport said. "It had no city water or sewer and had county roads."

Residents, complaining that the water from their wells was ruining their dishes and forcing them to replace faucets regularly, believed the city should provide water and sewer services.

"Once the period of name-calling got over, we sat down to solve the problem," Devenport said. "It ended up working out very well."

Devenport — along with Mayor J.D. Faircloth and former council member John Castro — began meeting with property owners who agreed to set up a Municipal Utility District.

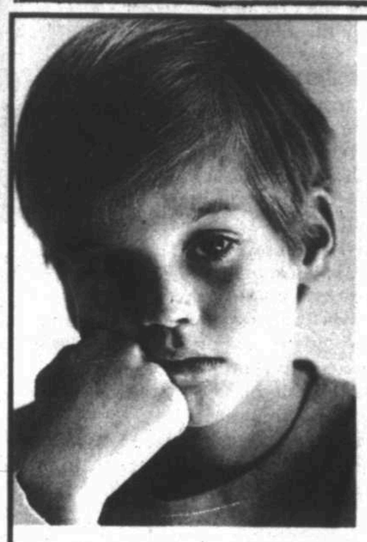

Residents are pleased with the outcome of negotiations.

"It took a couple years but we have water, and that will take away a lot of the anxiety," said Ken Nolen. "It should also boost property values."

Under the arrangement, the property owners will pay the $11 per foot cost of installing a water line with the total divided on a prorated share of the line.

The city is advancing $120,000 for the project to absorb the remainder of the bill. City officials expect to be reimbursed for that expense in the future.

Audio Acoustics audiologists Michelle Casey and Orland Purcell program an INFINITI miniature hearing aid.

Audio Acoustics offers a no-risk evaluation on INFINITI hearing aids

Computer programmable hearing aids have marked a dramatic improvement in the hearing aid industry in the last year. Until, recently, these high-tech instruments were only available in all-in-the-ear and behind-the-ear styles.

Today, a new computer programmable hearing aid, in the miniature canal size, is available at Audio Acoustics Hearing Centers. This is the smallest type of hearing aid on the market. It fits discreetly into the ear canal and is barely noticeable.

The new INFINITI hearing aid is a product of Siemens Corporation, a company widely respected in the medical community for their development of highly advanced medical equipment used in hospitals and doctor's offices across the country. The Siemens hearing aid division has been a leader in the field of hearing instruments for over 100 years.

The INFINITI hearing aid offers four times more flexibility than traditional mini-hearing aids. The highly trained, professional audiologists are able to use a computer programming function to do the following:

- Adjust the power setting to provide the listener with the optimum listening situation.
- Correct the sound quality to provide comfortable listening.
- Control feedback or whistling noises.
- Set the automatic gain control so the hearing aid will turn itself down if a sound that is too loud occurs.

Since the INFINITI hearing aid has digitally programmable capabilities for all four controls, adjustments can be made to enable people to hear in almost any setting. Many patients' complaints concerning gain, loudness, sound quality or feedback can easily be handled in the office, according to the programmable products specialist who designed the new instrument.

In the past, many conventional hearing aids had to be returned to the manufacturer for these type of adjustments -- a frustrating period at best, for the new patient.

By contrast, the new high-tech INFINITI mini-canal devices are adjusted using a specially designed computer. The INFINITI differs from previously available programmable aids because no cords, wires or remote controls are needed. This instrument is also available in the behind-the-ear style. It is the first digitally programmable hearing aid with the capability of helping people with varying degrees of hearing loss -- from mild to severe.

The cost? The INFINITI is quite reasonable when compared to other types of digitally programmable hearing aids.

There are two audiologists at Audio Acoustics Hearing Center. They both hold master's degrees in audiology, the study of hearing loss and rehabilitation, from universities in the United States.

For more information call Audio Acoustics at 689-4327. They are located at 2101 N. Midland Dr. #4 and are open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Cotton Patch plans hoppin good time

Bunnies arrive in all shapes and sizes for the Easter holidays

Here come Beatrice and Benny Bunny hopping down to Cotton Patch -- hippity, hoppity, Easter's on its way.

In addition to Beatrice and Benny Bunny, part of the unique Tattered Treasures doll collection, Cotton Patch Collectibles is filled with bunnies of all shapes and sizes to help set the mood for the Easter holidays.

Handpainted woodwork is a Cotton Patch specialty, and the wood ornaments have taken the formation of colored Easter eggs, carrots and rabbits. Choose from all-original designs in yard ornament and home interior pieces to add to your Easter collection both indoors and out.

One of the latest artist to add to the incredible collection of handpainted woodwork at Cotton Patch is Carolyn McBroom, formerly of Petal Patch. This artist, who is well-known for her "Mom & Me" creations, brings her extraordinary paintings alive with bright, eye-catching colors and lots of detail said Pat Bass, owner of Cotton Patch.

"Her ornaments take on a whimsical look," Pat said.

Just as every holiday becomes a special occasion at Cotton Patch, Easter is no exception. The rabbit fireplace screen brings the look of spring to your fireplace, while decorative wreaths add color to your walls or doorways. There's even a vacuum cleaner cover in the shape of a floppy-eared bunny!

As usual, handpainted T-shirts and jewelry take on the holiday theme. The T-shirts are original designs painted in a variety of Easter themes, and Pat said they have expanded the plus size selection for the ladies that have a hard time finding fun things to wear.

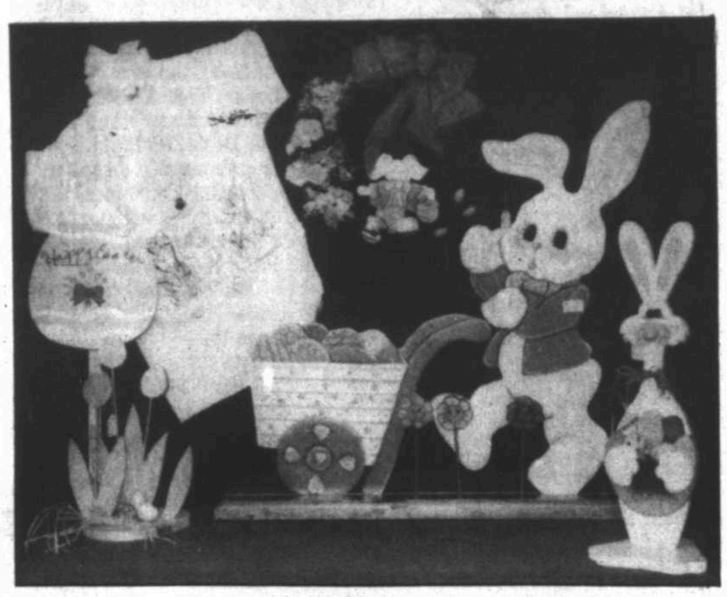

While the adults have fun with the Easter T-shirts, children can wear their own Easter designs in T-shirts and fun jewelry. Include a musical necklace that plays the tune of Easter Parade in, your favorite Easter bunny's basket.

While looking for something fun to wear, take a look at the latest collection of summertime fun for kids! Handpainted T-shirts prepare kids for all the summertime activities, , including summer camp, soccer and cheerleading. If you can't find the theme you're looking for, talk to Pat about special orders.

To accompany the fun T-shirts, Cotton Patch has expanded the line of ever-popular sports watches. The sports-minded will have fun choosing from the soccer, tennis, golf and bowling watch collection.

Add a little pizazz to those blue jeans with pocket pizazz, a silver chain in hearts and a western theme that loops through the beltloop and pocket of your favorite pair of jeans.

Gourmet food items add pizazz to your favorite menus. Planning a barbecue? The Sam Bass barbecue sauce spices up any menu. The gourmet microwave fudge by Bumper Crop is easy to make, and yummy too! Bumper Crop also makes 100-year-old recipe mustard and ranch dressing.

Cotton Patch Collectibles makes any holiday special by offering all original yard ornaments, home decorator items and fun T-shirts.

Grab a choc quito, a chocolate covered tortilla in southwestern shapes or Easter eggs, for a quick snack, or use it to stuff in someone's Easter basket.

Shopping for holiday theme items is always a delight at Cotton Patch. Your unique shopping experience can be wrapped up in wonderful Easter gift boxes available in an assortment of sizes.

However, don't forget that Cotton Patch also has a great selection of theme gifts available for teachers and secretaries. Colorful notepads, jewelry and totebags are a unique way of showing appreciation to your favorite teacher or secretary.

Pat would like to invite returning patrons and special friends for a fond farewell to Woo King, who is relocating after four years with Cotton Patch. Returning patrons and friends can enjoy refreshments today and Wednesday while taking advantage of some great bargains Woo is offering to clear out some of her merchandise.

Take advantage of Extra Card discounts every day. Cotton Patch Collectibles, located in The Courtyard, Loop 250 and Midkiff, offers 10% off on fun watches, jewelry and dazzling denims to Extra Card members. Stop in today, or call 689- 3432. Visa, Mastercard and Discover are accepted.

The Telephone Store has 'something for everybody'

They're flashy, funny, trendy, high-tech -- and they're even portable. With so many designs to choose from, shopping for a telephone today is a fun experience.

At The Telephone Store, customers can rely on dependable service along with the latest in telephone technology. In order to offer "something for everybody," The Telephone Store carries decorator phones, business phones and cellular phones.

"I try to keep up on the latest in telephone technology," said Robin Brooks, owner of The Telephone Store.

For the home, the latest trend in neon is available in a variety of telephone designs. Phones for fun include a train telephone that sounds like a train when it rings, a Gotham City phone from the Batman movie, a Guess Who phone with a voice changing device, and Ziggy, Garfield, Mickey Mouse and Snoopy character phones.

According to Cely Hernandez, The Telephone Store manager, the decorator telephones are available with many programmable features, including memory redial.

Starting with a three line system, up to 144 lines, The Telephone Store offers a full-line of business telephones. Whether choosing a phone with a fax machine or the new Panasonic digital system with 144 lines, customers are insured that every system is installed properly and that they will receive professional training.

"I personally oversee the installation and training for new business systems," said Brooks, who is a certified technician for the Panasonic phone systems.

The Telephone Store is also certified to install the Motorola and Panasonic cellular phone systems. Due to the increasing popularity of cellular phones, The Telephone Store has expanded the selection of cellular phones to include NEC, Panasonic, Mitsubishi and Motorola. With so many different brands and features to choose from, customers can select a phone suited to their needs.

The Telephone Store carries a wide selection of decorator, business and cellular telephones.

Besides offering the top names in cellular phones, The Telephone Store offers both nationwide and local cellular coverage. The advantage of being an independent agent, said Brooks, is that they are able to reach surrounding areas throughout Big Springs, Monahans, Ft. Stockton, Seminole, Lamesa, Andrews and areas in New Mexico.

Taking a personal interest in maintaining quality service for her customers, Brooks continues to attend training seminars to stay updated on the industry. The knowledgeable staff makes customers feel comfortable with the products they purchase -- should their telephone need repairs, The Telephone Store will do most repair work on the premises, rather than ship it off to the manufacturer.

"Service and quality are the number one priorities at The Telephone Store," Brooks said.

For service, or questions about telephones, call the experts at 689-9885. Located in The Courtyard at Loop 250 and Midkiff, The Telephone Store will fill any telephone order, including telephone accessories -- cords, adapters, battery packs and booster kits.

They even carry the new Friends Only, a system to eliminate unwanted calls, and Follow Me, the first call forwarding by remote control system.

'Dogs pull 'lucky' flip

■ Midland High continues its soccer playoff drive today with a 6 p.m. game against 22-1 El Paso Hanks at Dunagan Park.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

After waiting to learn of its fate all weekend, the Midland High Bulldog soccer team is resting well knowing that their regional semifinal soccer game against El Paso Hanks is just a short drive across town.

Hanks visits MHS today at 6 p.m. at Midland's Dunagan Park.

After the El Paso athletic director left town suddenly for personal reasons over the weekend, both teams were forced to sit and wait for a coin flip to decide when and where the game would be played. The decision was made early Monday morning.

No matter where the game is played, though, MHS knows it's up against one of the strongest teams in the state in Hanks, 22-1. The Knights beat El Paso High 4-1 last Friday while MHS blanked Burkburnett 3-0 in regional qualifying action.

MHS coach Tom Esikhati says it was containment — and not defense — that won last Friday's game for the Bulldogs.

"I don't think defense won the game for us," Esikhati said. "I think it was mainly our midfielders containing their attack. What I wanted them to do was settle on their defense and attack. We evened out their

Valvano in hospital

RALEIGH, N.C. — Jim Valvano, the former North Carolina State basketball coach suffering from cancer, has been admitted to Duke University Medical Center.

Valvano was in satisfactory condition Monday, said Stephanie Bass, a spokeswoman for the hospital's cancer center. He entered the hospital last week.

The hospital visit was not scheduled, said Curt Pires, a publicist for ESPN, where Valvano is a basketball commentator. Pires said Valvano was expected to return home early this week and he knew of no change in his condition.

Valvano has been treated at the hospital periodically since being diagnosed with cancer last year.

Crump resigns

DENTON — Texas Woman's University announced a search for a new basketball coach Monday after Kaycee Crump turned in her resignation.

Crump said she plans to coach at the high school level.

Athletic Director Judy Southard said a she hopes to hire a replacement by mid-May for Crump, whose seven-year coaching record at Texas Woman's was 73-105, including 5-19 this season, last in the Lone Star Conference.

Wright turns pro

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — Seton Hall center Luther Wright made his decision to turn pro without discussing it with P.J. Carlesimo, the Pirates coach said Monday night.

Carlesimo said he knew there was a possibility that Wright might seek admission to the NBA draft, but he didn't find out for sure until Saturday when Wright's attorney, Sal DiFazio, informed him in a telephone call.

"I wasn't shocked," Carlesimo said. "I was just disappointed with the timing, a call after the fact. I can't say I was shocked though."

Carlesimo refused to discuss much of what was said Sunday night at his meeting with DiFazio and Wright, one the most highly recruited players to play at Seton Hall.

MHS tests Bobcats in key tilt

Staff report

Midland High will try to keep its name among the possible District 4-5A baseball playoff contenders today, as the Bulldogs host San Angelo at 4 p.m. at Angels Stadium.

MHS and the Bobcats are both 2-2 in league play and tied for fourth place, two games out of the lead and one game behind third-place Odessa Permian. Elsewhere in 4-5A play today, Abilene Cooper plays at Permian while Odessa High travels to Abilene High. Second-place Midland Lee has its district open date, but will play a non-district doubleheader at Lubbock Coronado.

The Bulldogs are coming off an 11-1 pummeling of Odessa High Saturday in Odessa, a game that saw MHS pound out 13 hits, including three triples, while invoking the 10-run rule after five innings.

In today's game against San Angelo, MHS is expected to pitch junior righthander Joe Urquidez (3-2), who in his last outing defeated Permian in Odessa. The Bobcats will likely counter with senior lefty Alan Mow (4-3).

In the game against OHS, the 'Dogs saw their 4-5A team batting average rise from .308 to 352, while left fielder Chad Benson upped his league hitting mark to .714 after a 3-for-3 showing, giving him the batting lead among Bulldogs with more than five plate appearances.

Benson is followed in batting average by infielder Mike Melzer, who is at .545.

Houston narrows AD search to four

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston on Monday selected four finalists in its search for an athletic director to replace Rudy Davalos, who left for New Mexico in November.

A 30-member search committee met for about 1½ hours Monday morning as it narrowed the list from more than 60 to:

—William Carr III, president of Sports Resources Group Inc. in Charlotte, N.C., and former athletic director at Florida;

—G. Edwin Brooks, of Brill, Cinex & Stephenson Attorneys at Law in Houston;

—Robert "Bob" Brezina, superintendent of the Victoria Independent School District in Victoria, Texas; and

—Max Urick, director of athletics for Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa.

Lady Rebels widen lead

■ District 4-5A's golf girls fight Green Tree Country Club course and wind, but Midland Lee maintains control of the team lead.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Midland Lee widened its lead in the District 4-5A girls golf tournament Monday with a second round 354, the low team score of the day at a windy Green Tree Country Club.

Senior Paula King shot an 85 to pace the Lee girls, with Kim Fisher in at 86. King is currently fifth medalist in the tournament while Fisher is seventh. Lee's Kaimi Fuller (93) and Jennifer Dickson (90) are also in the Top 10 medalist hunt.

Permian's Kristin Kight scored an 82 Monday to place her in first place in the medalist hunt with a two-round total of 159, and the Abilene Cooper duo of sophomore April DeVries (84) and senior Marcie Edwards (80) are tied for second medalist honors at 160. Cooper's girls are in second, 11 shots behind Lee at 702.

Lee's Kim Fisher ...a putt that won't fall

"I think there's been a lot of emphasis on Paula (King), and not on the team," Lee head coach Phyllis Sutton said, "but what we're doing takes a whole team. We've been very consistent and we play well."

■ 4-5A Girls Golf Roundup

In fact, the Lee girls are on a roll. After setting a course record in San Angelo to open the season, the Lady Rebels won the Odessa Permian tournament, an Amarillo tournament, finished third at an Austin event — behind expected state finalists Seguin and Bastrop — and fell to the host team by four strokes at the Andrews tournament.

"I'm so excited for our team," Lee's King said. "I hope we can maintain our lead. If we can keep gaining strokes, we'll be OK."

As hot as the Lee girls have been, they're not yet ready to say the district title is theirs with two rounds left to play.

"Cooper's a good team," Lee's Fisher said. "We'll have to play well, but the next two rounds I hope will be beneficial."

Fisher said she had a couple of holes, "that kept me from doing what I know I can do."

As for King, she was again disappointed with her score, but placed

After 4,000 games, only Big Three remain

By Jim O'Connell
AP Basketball Writer

There have been almost 4,000 basketball games played this season by Division I teams. There's three to go and fans of the sport couldn't have asked for much more.

All four teams left in the NCAA tournament have been ranked No. 1 at some point this season. Three of the Final Four started in the 64-team field as a top seed, one more than has ever made it that far before.

Kansas-North Carolina and Kentucky-Michigan.

What a way to end a season. What a Final Four.

There'll be a week of:

—Kansas, the only non-No. 1 seed left, claiming no one respects it and everyone picks against it.

—North Carolina coach Dean Smith evading questions about reaching the Final Four more than any man but John Wooden, but having come home with the nets cut down just once.

■ NCAA Tournament

—Kentucky fans reminding everyone how easily the Wildcats marched through the regional one year after the most crushing defeat of all.

—Michigan explaining how the object is to win games by any margin and that the Wolverines really don't care if anyone likes them or not.

The first semifinal game Saturday night at the Superdome — Kansas vs. North Carolina — is a rematch of the first game of the 1991 Final Four, the one Smith wasn't around to see as he was ejected after being hit with his second technical foul. It made for an awkward postgame news conference considering Smith's Tar Heels had just been beaten by a Kansas team coached by his longtime assistant Roy Williams.

Tech coach Marsha Sharp ...hoping for the best

Tech wants fairy tale to end with title

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech's first trip to the women's Final Four may be a Cinderella story, but Lady Raiders coach Marsha Sharp said Monday there's only one way she wants the fairy tale to end — with a title.

"There are four great teams in Atlanta, but our players say we're not finished yet," Sharp said. "They were asking me everything in the world about Vanderbilt Sunday on the flight home (the West Regional). I think they want to do more than just be at the Final Four."

Tech (29-3) advanced to Saturday's game against No. 1 Vanderbilt in Atlanta by routing Colorado 79-54 and Southern California 87-67 last weekend.

As usual, the Lady Raiders were led by Sheryl Swoopes, the West Region's Most Valuable Player, and her supporting cast of Krista Kirkland and Noel Johnson, both of whom also were named to the all-region team.

"Last weekend was the most incredible experience that I've ever had in coaching," Sharp said. "They (the Lady Raiders) did such a great job and performed above expectations. I've said forever that they're overachievers. They were overachievers last weekend."

Tech's success this season opens a new chapter in the school's basketball history. The previous best performance by a Tech squad — men's or women's — came last season when the Lady Raiders advanced to the Sweet 16 before losing to eventual national champion Stanford.

Their rise also puts the Southwest Conference back in the national spotlight. An SWC team had not been in the Final Four since Texas in 1987.

Vanderbilt, Iowa and Ohio State, who will play in Saturday's second game, also are making first-ever Final Four appearances.

"I think the fact that no one has been there before really helps us," Sharp said. "If you have a lot of experience on this level it really helps you. You understand what is going to happen to you next. It will be a big factor, in that it is a new experience for everyone."

Tech, which has won 17 consecutive games, will face a Vanderbilt squad that features 6-10 post player Heidi Gillingham. But Sharp said her team cannot afford to spend too much time worrying about her.

"If you make the mistake of concentrating everything around her, you can find yourself in a bind real quick," she said. "They have some quality basketball players who do a lot of great things around her."

Gillingham, who averages 14.3 points and 7.2 rebounds per game, is one of four Vanderbilt players averaging doubles-figure scoring this season. The others are Julie Powell (12.7), Shelley Jarrard (11.6) and Misty Lamb (10.3).

Swoopes, who has scored 99 points in three NCAA tournament games, leads Tech with 27.4 points per game, followed by Krista Kirkland's 12.8 and Cynthia Clinger's 11.

Celtic streak still growing

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics' winning streak, now eight games, keeps growing. So does their list of heroes.

It was backup center Joe Kleine's turn Monday night as he grabbed a career-high 20 rebounds in place of the injured Robert Parish in Boston's 110-89 rout of the Sacramento Kings.

Dee Brown scored the winning basket with 2.1 seconds left in a win Sunday over Washington. Parish scored 20 against Dallas last Friday night. During the streak, Sherman Douglas has passed brilliantly, and Reggie Lewis and Kevin Gamble have shot accurately.

The NBA's hottest team opened a 32-12 lead late in the first quarter, survived a rally that closed the Kings to 37-28 midway through the second period and led by at least 12 points throughout the second half.

The Celtics (41-28) moved within 2½ games of Cleveland for the third playoff spot in the Eastern Conference and one game ahead of fifth-place New Jersey.

Sacramento's two top scorers, Mitch Richmond and Lionel Simmons, were sidelined, and the Kings suffered their sixth loss in seven games. They were led by Walt Williams with 22 points and Pete Chilcutt with 15.

Boston outrebounded Sacramento 64-47.

Bullets 114, Bucks 107

MILWAUKEE — Michael Adams scored 11 of his 24 points in Washington's 40-point third quarter, leading the Bullets over Milwaukee.

Rex Chapman also scored 24 points and Harvey Grant had 23 points, including nine in the third quarter, for the Bullets, who snapped a three-game losing streak and won for only the second time in seven games. Rookie Tom Gugliotta scored 18 points.

The Bucks, led by Brad Lohaus with 21 points, have lost nine of 12 games. Fred Roberts and Todd Day added 18 points apiece for Milwaukee.

Hawks 127, Blazers 118, OT

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins scored a season-high 48 points and Kevin Willis had 32 points and a season-high 25 rebounds, leading Atlanta to its fifth straight victory in overtime over Portland.

With the loss, Portland fell one game behind San Antonio in the race for the fourth playoff spot in the Western Conference.

Cliff Robinson scored a career-high 39 points on 18-for-25 shooting for the Trail Blazers, whose four-game winning streak ended. Robinson scored 15 points in the fourth quarter.

The Hawks, who have won nine consecutive home games, led by five with 53 seconds left in regulation, but Portland came back for a 108-106 lead with 12 seconds remaining. Stacey Augmon's two free throws with 6.0 seconds to go tied the score, and Terry Porter missed a jumper, forcing overtime.

Willis, listed as doubtful for the game because of a strained right calf, made the key play in overtime when he grabbed a missed free throw by Jon Koncak and converted a three-point play that gave Atlanta a seven-point lead.

The Hawks outscored the Blazers 12-2 in the final 1:19 of overtime.

Nuggets 114, Jazz 101

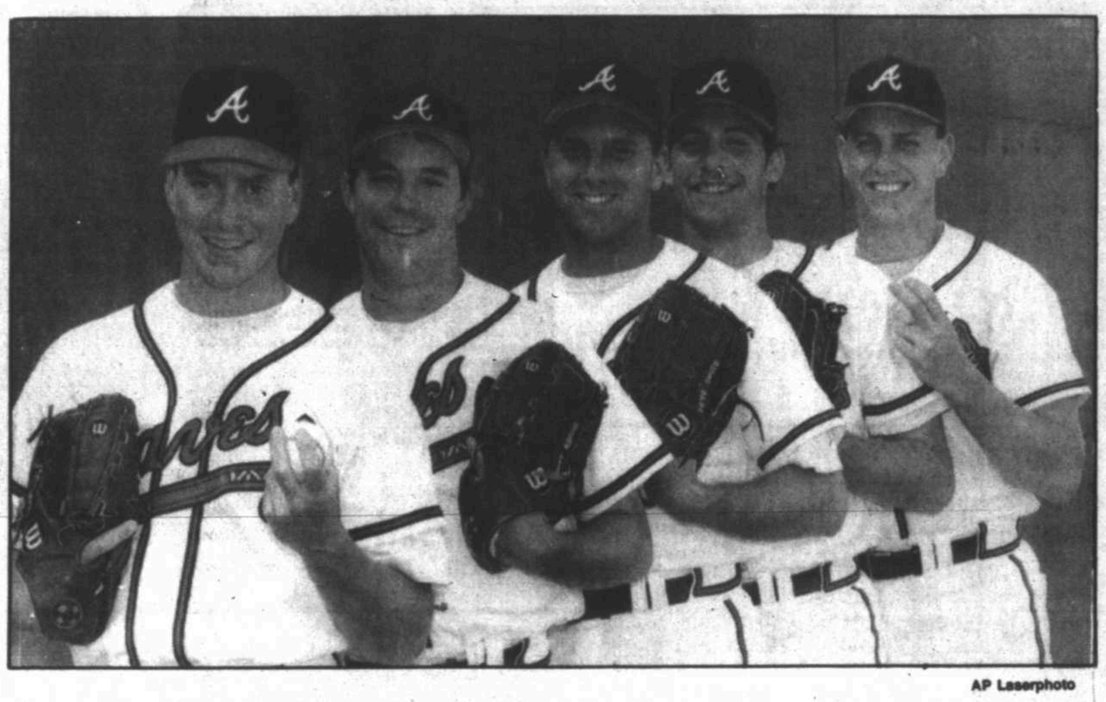

SALT LAKE CITY — Chris Jackson scored 23 points and Dikembe Mutombo had 19 points and 15 rebounds as Denver rode a huge third quarter to a rare road victory at Utah.

Reggie Williams added 20 points for the Nuggets, who won their third straight game, but for just the sixth time in 35 road games this season. It also was Denver's first victory in 14 games at Salt Lake City.

Karl Malone had 26 points and 14 rebounds and Jeff Malone scored 22 points for the Jazz, who saw their three-game winning streak end.

John Stockton had 21 points and 10 assists, but it wasn't enough to prevent Utah from dropping to 40-30 for the season. The Jazz last lost 30 or more games in their 51-31 1988-89 season.

It was the Nuggets' second straight win over Utah after losing their first three to the Jazz.

Pitching decision time

Associated Press

■ Spring Training Roundup

Decisions, decisions.

With only one week left before opening day, Bert Blyleven, Dave Otto and others made their final pitch Monday for a spot on the major league roster.

For Blyleven, it was a mixed bag. Pitching for Minnesota against Triple-A Rochester, he gave up eight hits and three runs in six innings.

Blyleven, who turns 42 on opening day, is competing against Mike Trombley, Pat Mahomes, Willie Banks and Jim Deshaies for three spots. Manager Tom Kelly said he'd like to finalize his starting rotation before the team breaks camp Friday.

"We haven't decided anything yet," pitching coach Dick Such said. "I know that keeps him hanging, but we're trying to make the right decisions for the club," Such added. "It's a tough business, especially at cutting time."

He has a career record of 287-250 and desperately wants to get the 13 wins he needs for 300.

"Every time I walk out there, it feels like my last chance," Blyleven said. "The only hard part is just not knowing what they're going to do. You go out there putting pressure on yourself. I hope they tell me in the next couple of days.

"Part of me is ready to retire. But part of me wants to give it a shot. If I didn't try it, I'd always have in the back of my mind, 'What if?'"

Otto, meanwhile, will be Pittsburgh's fifth starter. But, because he will not pitch until April 12 in San Diego, he will remain at the Pirates' extended spring training camp in Bradenton, Fla.

Otto pitched five scoreless innings Monday in a 4-2 victory over Boston. He is 3-0 with a 2.50 ERA this spring.

By not immediately activating Otto, a non-roster invitee, the Pirates free a roster spot for catcher Tom Prince, who is out of options. The Pirates hope to slip Prince through waivers after the season has started.

The Seattle Mariners will fill their fifth starter's spot with 21-year-old rookie Jim Converse. He shut out San Diego for four innings on two hits in a 2-0 victory.

Converse's next spring start will be Saturday in Vancouver against the Milwaukee Brewers. He will then go to extended spring training for additional work on April 7. After that, he will join Triple-A Calgary for a start on April 12 before joining the Mariners in Detroit for his first major-league start April 17.

Julio Valera, originally scheduled to be the No. 3 starter in California's rotation, will probably open the season in the bullpen, Angels manager Buck Rodgers said Monday.

Valera's progress this spring was set back by a sore right elbow, so now Rodgers doubts he'll be ready to take his regular turn.

"It would be wise if we thought about starting him in the pen," Rodgers said. "I'm leaning towards that."

Although Valera threw hard on the sidelines Monday without pain, his endurance still isn't up to the level of the other starters.

That means Scott Sanderson will probably fill the role of No. 3 starter, with the fourth spot still a competition between veteran John Farrell and rookie Russ Springer.

Because of several off-days in April, Rodgers won't need a fifth starter until the end of the first month. Assuming Valera is ready, he could then join the rotation.

But there are no questions in Atlanta where the starting rotation of Tom Glavine, Greg Maddux, Pete Smith, John Smoltz and Steve Avery is already being called by some as the best starting rotation in the history of baseball.

Hoyas run past UAB

Associated Press

■ NIT Roundup

NEW YORK — Georgetown recovered from its worst first half of the season Monday night and held Alabama-Birmingham scoreless over the last nine minutes to advance to the NIT final with a 45-41 victory.

The Hoyas (20-12) reached 20 wins for the 15th time in the last 16 seasons and on Wednesday night will play for the championship.

UAB (20-14) blew a 17-point second-half lead and had just five points over the last 14:40. It was quite a turnaround for the Blazers, who held Georgetown to just 14 points in the first half and used a 16-4 run bridging the first and second halves to open a 31-14 lead.

Georgetown then extended its press, trapping at midcourt and looking for the quick shot. The changes paid off as the Hoyas went on a 20-5 run capped by Eric Micoud's two free throws to tie the game 41-41.

Micoud's two foul shots put Georgetown ahead 43-41 with three minutes left. After a UAB miss and a Georgetown turnover, UAB got a fresh 45 seconds with 1:37 left when a jump ball was called. But Stanley Jackson missed an ill-advised 18-footer and Georgetown ran the clock down to 30 seconds.

Brown missed a running one-hander, however, and UAB's Willie Jackson was fouled underneath at the other end of the court. Jackson missed the front end of a 1-and-1, and Othella Harrington was fouled on the rebound.

Harrington sank both foul shots to give the Hoyas a four-point lead, and UAB managed to get off only one more shot in the final 22 seconds.

Minnesota 76, Providence 70

Voshon Lenard scored 17 of his 25 points in the second half and Minnesota rallied past Providence to reach its second NIT final.

The Gophers (21-10) overcame an 11-point deficit in the second half and used a late 9-0 run to pull away from the Friars (20-12).

Minnesota, an NIT runner-up in 1980, will play Georgetown for the title Wednesday night. The Hoyas beat Alabama-Birmingham 45-41 in the first semifinal.

After Providence's Michael Brown hit two free throws to tie it 67-67 with 3:40 remaining, Minnesota scored nine straight points — all on free throws — to lead 76-67. Rob Phelps finally broke the Friars' drought when he hit a meaningless 3-pointer with three seconds left.

The teams were tied 35-35 at halftime, but Providence got off to a fast start after intermission and took a 53-42 lead — the largest by either team in the game.

Yuma's Spring training outpost goes way of covered wagon

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — The last outpost in spring training is about to go the way of the covered wagon.

After holding their first 25 spring trainings in this remote city of 50,000 in the southwest corner of Arizona, the San Diego Padres are leaving for the Phoenix suburb of Peoria, where they will share a complex with the Seattle Mariners. The final game at Sun Desert Stadium in the Ray A. Kroc Baseball Complex is Wednesday against the Chicago Cubs.

It's the end of an era not only for Yuma, but for Padres fans, as well. Until the Florida Marlins came along, no other team held spring training so close to its fans. The California Angels used to play their home games in Palm Springs, but now have their whole spring operation at Tempe.

The Caballeros de Yuma, a chamber of commerce group that helps put on spring training, estimates that 70 percent of the fans at weekend games are from the San Diego area. Although most fans stick around for more than one day, it is possible to make the 2½-hour drive from San Diego, catch a game, then drive back in one day.

Phoenix, though, is about a seven-hour drive.

"Most of them aren't going to make the trip to Peoria," Padres star Tony Gwynn said.

Redskins re-sign Copeland, court others

WASHINGTON (AP) — There was good news on the free agency front Monday for the Washington Redskins, as the team re-signed strong safety Danny Copeland and played host to wide receiver Tim McGee and tight end Keith Byars, two free agents the club is interested in.

Terms of Copeland's deal were not disclosed, but the team had placed a priority on convincing him to return to the Redskins once it became clear that starting cornerback Martin Mayhew was on his way to a new team.

Copeland, a 6-foot-2, 213-pound hard-hitting defensive back, started all 13 games he played with the Redskins last season; he was out of action only when he missed three games with a sprained neck. He led the team with three fumble recoveries, including the game-winning end zone recovery of an Emmitt Smith turnover in the waning moments of a wild victory over Dallas.

The fourth-year player out of Eastern Kentucky was also fifth on the team in tackles with 105.

Signing Copeland — and defensive tackle Timmy Johnson, who agreed last week to return — helps the Redskins solidify a defense that was ranked seventh in the NFL last season.

4-5A: Rebels travel to Coronado

(From 1C)

Catcher Tim McLaughlin used a 3-for-4 outing against OHS to push his district average to .467. McLaughlin has driven in seven runs in 4-5A competition to lead the team in that category and is also the only Bulldog to homer this season with two.

Lee is coming off its first league loss in Saturday's 5-3 decision to Permian. That game also snapped a 12-game winning streak for the Rebels.

After today's games at Coronado, Lee will re-join league play Saturday when the Rebels close the first half of district play at Abilene Cooper.

Julian Urquidez remains the Rebs' most productive hitter in 4-5A games, hitting .733 with seven RBI and two homers. Since Alex Hale threw all but one out of Saturday's loss to Permian, Lee will likely throw Jason Baker (3-1), Kirk Ulrich (4-1) or Brian Cordova (1-0) against Coronado today, saving Urquidez (5-0) for Cooper Saturday.

MHS: Little work time attack and then we tried to counter-attack."

MHS' containment limited Burkburnett to just four shots on goal the entire game, a number the Bulldogs would do well to equal when they face Hanks.

In another Region I semifinal, San Angelo, which scored a mildly surprising 3-1 win over Abilene High, will play El Paso Coronado, which escaped with a 4-2 win over Canutillo Friday.

As for the Hanks Knights, MHS not only has little time to think about them, but also little on which to develop any sort of a game plan.

"I saw them play here last week (in an early round playoff game against Amarillo Tascosa)," Esikhati said, "but I don't have very much information on them at all. I can't assess their strengths and weaknesses because Tascosa is really weak.

Esikhati said "one day is not enough" to prepare for the game against Hanks.

"We really have only Monday to work on our problems," Esikhati said. "There's not very much time left for us to work on anything."

If there is one thing MHS needs to work on, Esikhati said, it is finishing offensive plays, one of the only problems the Bulldogs had against Burkburnett.

"It was poor," he said of his team's finishing. "We don't have time to work on it, but I think we're going to have to talk about it Monday before we play Tuesday. It was just one of those off days for us. We just didn't seem to hit the ball in the net."

The one offensive bright spot was junior striker Emmanuel Sanon, who scored two goals, although one actually came from a carom off of the post and a Burkburnett player.

"Emmanuel is improving very well," Esikhati said. "I think as we go on he's going to get better."

no blame on the wind.

"I started off good," King said, "but went down hill. Confidence wise, I started losing it, and then I just lost my concentration and that didn't help any."

Just five strokes out in the individual medalist hunt, King said she feels her shaken confidence is only temporary.

"I know I can come back, and I know I can shoot the scores I'm capbale of," King said. "It's just a matter of confidence, and gaining some strokes back."

Midland High, which is in sixth place with a 789, was led by Jennifer Reyes' 94. After two rounds, Reyes has compiled a 182.

Colts offer record to lineman

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indianapolis Colts signed center Kirk Lowdermilk to a $6 million, three-year deal Monday, then agreed to a $7.65 million, three-year deal with tackle Will Wolford.

Buffalo has seven days to match the Colts' offer to Wolford, a three-time Pro Bowl selection and considered by many around the league to be one of the best young left tackles in the game. The offer, which would be the highest contract for an offensive lineman by annual average, includes a $1.8 million signing bonus, yearly salaries of $1.7 million and $250,000 a year in reporting and workout money.

Lowdermilk, who has anchored Minnesota's offensive line the past five years, is signed outright and is expected to add instant stability to a line in desperate need. The Colts have yielded 152 sacks over the last three season, including 44 in 1992.

"It is like waking up and having number one draft choices already signed and experienced," general manager Jim Irsay said. "These guys are in their prime."

A third-round pick of Minnesota in 1985, the 6-foot-3, 280-pound Lowdermilk started 86 games in eight years with the Vikings, including 45 straight.

NCAA: Michigan tough

victory over top-ranked Indiana. That win gave Williams a 3-0 record against Bob Knight and he became the first coach outside the Big Ten to beat Knight twice in the same season.

The Jayhawks are riding an attitude of being overlooked into New Orleans. Listen to guard Rex Walters after the Indiana game:

"Last night I was watching ESPN and the man picked us to lose and he was wrong again. It feels good. It feels real good," he said. "We just try and prove them wrong. A lot of people have been picking against us and a lot of people have been wrong."

Few picked against North Carolina in the East and the Tar Heels had to go five extra minutes to beat Cincinnati and get Smith his ninth trip to the Final Four. His only national championship came in New Orleans when then-freshman Michael Jordan hit his famous jumper from the left side to beat Georgetown and Patrick Ewing.

"We won a tournament this weekend and we'll go down there and try to win another one," Smith said.

North Carolina's size and depth wore down Cincinnati, but Kansas has enough of both to make this a close game. Despite Walters' remarks, Kansas should beat the Tar Heels again.

Kentucky has won its four NCAA tournament games by an average of 31 points and the Wildcats have done it inside and outside. The 3-point barrage has forced teams to try and cover the post people one-on-one and coach Rick Pitino's system has taken advantage throughout.

Pitino coached Providence to the 1987 Final Four, which was played in New Orleans. His Kentucky team last season came within a miracle buzzer-beater by Duke's Christian Laettner of getting there. With only Jamal Mashburn back from last year's starting five, Pitino has done an impressive job in getting the Wildcats back to the Final Four for the first time since 1984.

"We were too young, too inexperienced," point guard Travis Ford said of preseason expectations. "It feels great because it was a team effort the whole season."

And Mashburn isn't getting caught up in how impressive the wins were.

"It doesn't matter about the margin of victory. You can win by two points. It doesn't matter as long as you get the W," he said.

Now the Wildcats get Michigan, the only team back from last year's Final Four.

The Wolverines were known as the Fab Five then when they lost to Duke by 20 in the title game. As sophomores they have had to listen to a season-long litany of complaints about underachieving, despite the fact they only lost four games — two to Indiana, one to Duke and one to Iowa

Michigan dominate team

By C.W. Nevius
N.Y. Times News Service

The Final Four teams won't play until Saturday, but we've already got the story of this season's NCAA championship in New Orleans.

It's Michigan. The Wolverines all the way. No doubt about it.

Not to win, of course. You'd have to be loopy to pick them to win. They could, naturally. It wouldn't be a stretch. Why shouldn't the most talented team win?

But what is more likely is that they will finally hand someone too large a lead before waking up. Or that they will get bored of overpowering everyone inside and start casting up 3-pointers from all over Bourbon Street.

Or they will go on a run of unbelievably creative passes, many of which will have the crowd roaring — and their teammates chasing the ball into the stands.

It doesn't matter. This is Michigan's tournament to win, lose and dominate. And they're going to dominate, no matter how the games come out.

What are the alternatives? North Carolina and Kansas are the same team, aren't they? A jillion head fakes, back picks aplenty and crisp two-handed chest passes concluding with the thumbs pointing outward.

Kansas is Indiana without the attitude. This Roy Williams is an interesting study. He looks a little like Johnny Carson's son and does his affable old Roy act to a turn, but like all little fellows in sport, he flashes a white-hot temper in a heartbeat.

The wheat people don't stray far from the playbook, you can bet on that.

But Kansas has pulled this on us before. An unlikely cast of characters, crew cut and chipper, winning games because there is no "I" in "team." But at some point, they always seem to get smoked by someone who just runs over them, too naive to realize they're being outfoxed.

And North Carolina ... well, it's Tom Landry's Dallas Cowboys in shorts, isn't it? Still the only man who consistently held Michael Jordan to fewer than 20 points a game, when the superstar was a Tar Heel, coach Dean Smith can't drop the reins.

It's a wonderful system. It must be, because everyone cribs from it constantly, but when do they play? Mostly when they reach the NBA.

Good coaches can draw on the blackboard until dawn, but the inspired ones have a touch of the flake. In Smith's case, it was just dandruff.

Which brings us to Kentucky, and we're all dying to see them really play. We haven't seen so many cupcake opponents since the Georgetown preseason.

It is possible that the Wildcats are just plain good. If so, you can bet that coach Rick Pitino will be letting us know. When he went to the Knicks, he was the subject of one of the most fawning biographies ever to appear on sports bookshelves — and that's a crowded category.

Pitino is on the fast track. Why bother with that dull rebuilding stuff after a suspension? Why not just put together a powerhouse right away?

Kentucky-Michigan will be the main event Saturday. Everyone will insist that they are captivated by the tight, strategic matchup between Dean and his former pupil Roy, but that's the basketball equivalent of enjoying a pitcher's duel.

Boitano wants another gold

DUBLIN, Calif. (AP) — More than than five years after winning a gold medal in figure skating, Brian Boitano on Monday made his bid to return to the Olympics.

He said he has asked the U.S. Figure Skating Association to reinstate his eligibility for the 1994 Winter Games at Lillehammer, Norway. Since turning pro after winning the 1988 gold medal at Calgary, he has traveled with his own ice show and competed professionally.

Boitano, who will be 30 years old when the Games begin, said he wanted to take advantage of the rule change that will permit him to compete.

"I've gotten to do everything I wanted as a professional," he said from the rink where he trains. "Before I'm not able to use my body anymore, I want to do everything I can. I know I still have the physical form to get back into (Olympic) skating."

His decision had been expected for more than a year, since Boitano was one of the chief proponents of a rule change to allow pro skaters to have their eligibility restored. Last year, the International Skating Union decided to allow skaters who had turned pro a one-time application to regain amateur status.

Boitano's application is expected to be approved by the U.S. skating authorities. They will then forward their recommendation to the international body.

"I think I'm an improved skater after six years of skating in shows," he said. "I've improved artistically and technically."

Gastineau given probated sentence

PHOENIX (AP) — After being sentenced to three years of probation and fined $1,400 for possession of drug paraphernalia, football player-turned-boxer Mark Gastineau says he wants to return to the ring.

"I'm going to get back (to New York), get with my trainer and get back on track," Gastineau, 36, said Monday after being sentenced in Maricopa County Superior Court.

He will be allowed to return to New York under the terms of his probation.

Gastineau, 36, a former New York Jets defensive end, was arrested in April 1991 after allegedly picking up a package of 200 amphetamine pills at Sky Harbor International Airport.

Judge Gregory Martin sentenced Gastineau after accepting a March 1 plea agreement under which Gastineau pleaded guilty to the reduced charge of possession of drug paraphernalia.

Increased spending offsets income

■ The basic trend is income and spending are rising moderately, but not rapidly, says Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Personal income grew by a lackluster 0.2 percent last month, forcing Americans to dip into savings to pay utility bills during the fifth coldest February on record, the government said Monday.

The weather also held back a rebound in new home sales.

Restrained by several special factors in addition to the weather, income rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $5.23 trillion, following a stronger 0.5 percent gain in January, the Commerce Department said.

Spending increased 0.6 percent in February to a seasonally adjusted $4.26 trillion, after a 0.3 percent advance in January. But about a third of the rise was attributed to extra spending on heat.

"There's a lot of distortions, but the basic trend is income and spending are rising moderately, but not rapidly, right now," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch.

In another report, the department said sales of new homes rose 4.6 percent in February to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 595,000 units. Sales had slumped 12.7 percent in January, the worst in a decade, and analysts had been looking for a 6 percent rebound in February.

Both reports point to continued economic expansion, but at a somewhat slower pace than during the fourth quarter of last year, when consumers went on a holiday shopping spree, economists said.

"The consumer did an awful lot in the fourth quarter, and it was too much to think it would continue in this quarter. A temporary hiatus was very much expected," said economist Robert G. Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

The gross domestic product, the sum of all goods and services produced within U.S. borders, advanced at a brisk 4.7 percent annual rate during the fourth quarter, the best showing in five years.

Both Dederick and Steinberg believe the growth rate slowed to about 3 percent in the first quarter.

"Compared to the recent past, that's not bad. Compared with a normal recovery, it's not much," Steinberg said.

Economists are warning that unless there is more robust job and income growth, consumer spending — which represents two-thirds of the overall economy — will fade.

Because spending grew faster than income in February, the savings rate — savings as a percentage of income — fell to 4.1 percent in February, the lowest since October 1990. It was 4.4 percent in January and December.

A number of special factors dampened income growth in February, compared to the month before. Among them, bonus payments to employees of brokerage firms and retirement incentives to postal workers were made in January, but not February.

But federal farm subsidies boosted income in February.

Excluding the special factors, income would have risen 0.5 percent in both February and January.

Prices slump

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished slightly lower as the futures market awaited word on whether OPEC members stuck to their new output agreement in March.

Weekly estimates have shown substantial cuts, but many traders are waiting for the more significant monthly figures due in early April.

May delivery of West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May settled at $20.29 per barrel, down 12 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in May settling at $2.027 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 5.2 cents.

T-bills mixed

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities were mixed in Monday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $11.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 2.96 percent, up from 2.94 percent last week. Another $11.2 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.04 percent, down from 3.05 percent last week.

The three-month bill rate was the highest since they sold for 3.00 percent on March 15. The six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 2.95 percent on Oct. 13.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate mortgages, fell to 3.30 percent last week, down from 3.36 percent the previous week.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar turned in a mixed performance Monday as news of political volatility brushed foreign exchange markets. But trading generally was light, with many large players refraining from moves in the waning days of Japan's fiscal year.

In New York, the dollar was quoted at 1.6260 German marks, down from 1.6335 late Friday.

In New York, the dollar closed at 116.85 yen, up from late Friday's 116.50 yen.

In New York, the dollar settled at 5.5170 French francs, down from late Friday's 5.5545.

In New York, the British pound fetched $1.4910, less than late Friday's $1.4875.

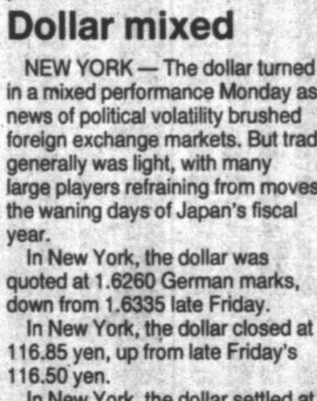

Other late rates in New York, compared with late Friday, included: 1.5050 Swiss francs, down from 1.5130; 1,606.00 Italian lira, up from 1,597; and 1.2476 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2444.

Market rises

NEW YORK — The stock market ended higher Monday, buoyed by rising bond prices and institutional buying ahead of the quarter's end.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 15.12 points to 3,455.10.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 11 to 8 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Debt limit to increase this week

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan barely had time to kick off his dancing shoes after his 1981 inauguration before asking Congress for authority to borrow $50 billion.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the new majority leader, found it ironic. After all, Reagan had swept into office on a pledge to scale back government. "But the point," Dole said, "is that ... we have the responsibility for seeing to it that the government pays its bills."

A strong majority of both parties in the House and Senate grudgingly agreed, and in February 1981 Congress raised the government's borrowing authority — the debt limit.

Now, two months in office, President Clinton must ask for enough credit to carry the government through Sept. 30. But this time it will take an extra $225 billion — and the $930 billion national debt that Reagan inherited will have grown to $4.37 trillion.

Congress apparently will agree this week to Clinton's request — the alternative would be a first-ever default by the government — but with little Republican support.

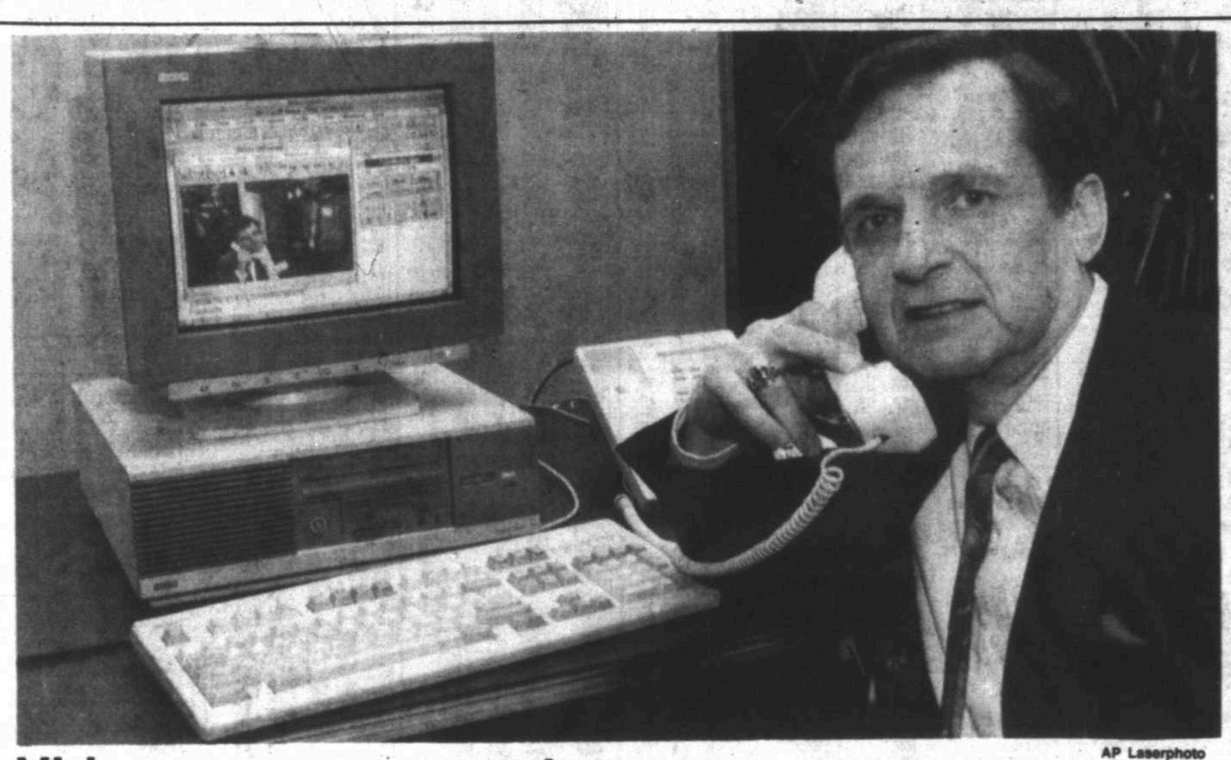

"If we give in this time, when will it end?" Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas, demanded in a House speech last week. "A higher debt ceiling can only lead to higher spending and higher taxes."

Rexene Corp. probe reveals no wrongdoing

DALLAS (AP) — Rexene Corp. said Monday that a special committee of its directors found no evidence to substantiate a former chairman's allegations of wrongdoing by other company executives.

The plastics company in early February revealed former chairman William Gilliam had leveled criticism against other executives. Some of the charges covered incidents that occurred a decade ago and persons no longer with the company.

Rexene hired lawyers from Weil, Gotshal & Manges to conduct an independent investigation.

Delta Air Lines plans layoff of 600 pilots

ATLANTA (AP) — Delta Air Lines announced plans Monday to lay off 600 pilots and retire 28 jets this year in another retrenchment for the nation's third-largest airline.

Delta executives expressed dissatisfaction with a concession offer from the Air Line Pilots Association and announced cuts they said would save the company $100 million a year. A union official complained that the company was "trivializing" the union's offer of cutbacks worth $65 million.

The layoffs, amounting to nearly 7 percent of Delta's pilots, are the airline's first of permanent employees in 36 years. The airline said it wouldn't lay off flight attendants or other employees connected with the retired jets.

Delta chairman and chief executive Ron Allen, referring to pay and benefit cuts accepted by other employees, said: "We believe that if ALPA had joined us, that some of this possibly could have been avoided."

Allen denied that the layoffs are in response to stalled talks with the pilots union. Delta said that although the union has agreed to a 5 percent pay cut, it attached too many conditions.

Allen denied that the layoffs are in response to stalled talks with the pilots union.

"ALPA has got to change its attitude," Allen said.

Pilots union leaders in Atlanta responded cautiously to the announcement, saying they would study the fleet reduction to determine if it justified the layoffs.

Gregg Holm, an ALPA official, said he was skeptical of Allen's claim that the announcement had nothing to do with the labor talks. "It seemed to me to be a media circus," Holm said.

He said the union's offer remains on the table.

"We're totally baffled by the company's trivializing of a $65 million offer," he said. "Sixty-five million to the pilots is not a small amount of change."

Delta has been losing money at a record pace for two years, including a loss of $126.3 million in the last three months of 1992. For all of 1992, Delta lost $564.8 million.

Along with other large airlines, Delta has been stung by a sluggish economy and discount fare wars. Its acquisition of Pan American World Airways assets also has been costly.

In recent months, Delta has embarked on other cost-cutting measures, including delaying jet orders, freezing hiring, reducing pay and benefits, and laying off temporary workers.

Kevin Murphy, an airline industry analyst at Morgan Stanley & Co. in New York, said $100 million in savings wouldn't be enough to bring sustained profitability to Delta, but "It's enough to marshal their financial resources."

The pilot layoffs are to begin in June and would continue through autumn.

Allen said Delta had to make a decision by the end of this month to notify Airbus and Boeing that it would terminate the leases on 12 long-range Airbus A310s and 16 older, shorter-range Boeing 727s.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Treasury securities cost minimum $1,000

By Bill Doyle

Q: From reading your column, I understand I can buy U.S. Treasury bills, notes and bonds through the Treasury Direct system without paying a commission or any other charge. Although I'm 75, I have never invested in anything other than certificates of deposit.

Doyle

I now have $20,000 to invest. Is this amount enough to launch a Treasury Direct transaction? If so, how do I go about it?

A: You have more than enough to set sail on an investment program in Treasury securities.

Treasury bills, which are issued with maturities of 13, 26 and 52 weeks, come in $10,000 minimum denominations. Treasury bonds, which have maturities of more than 10 years to as long as 30 years, are available in $1,000 minimums.

Two- and three-year Treasury notes require $5,000 minimum investments, but notes with four- to 10-year maturities can be purchased for as little as $1,000.

You "go about it" by opening your personal Treasury Direct account through the Federal Reserve Bank or branch serving your area of the country. Your local bank can provide the Fed bank's address. Write there and ask for information. In return, you will receive Treasury Direct literature and "tender" forms.

Fill out the tender for the bills, notes or bonds you want to buy. Send it back, along with a check for the face amount of your purchase. You will become the owner of the Treasury securities you want the next time a new issue of those securities is sold.

Q: My wife inherited some money and we decided to invest $40,000 in U.S. Treasury notes. We wrote to our district Federal Reserve Bank and received a packet of information.

Everything seems to make sense except the part about notes and bonds sometimes being sold below or above "par" — face value. I phoned the Fed bank and was told that if we purchase notes at more than par, we will receive a bill for the difference. But that could mean we would have to reduce the amount we intend to buy.

Why aren't these notes and bonds sold at face value?

A: Because every new issue of Treasury securities is sold at auction, and the Treasury Department does not know the exact price until the auction is complete.

Big buyers submit competitive tenders naming fixed prices they are willing to pay. The Treasury fills the competitive bids most advantageous to our federal government — the tenders naming the highest purchase prices and/or the lowest interest rates.

Most individual investors submit noncompetitive tenders, which do not specify prices. That's the sensible way to go. All noncompetitive tenders for purchases up to $1 million are filled at the average price of the competitive tenders.

Don't fret about the noncompetitive new issue price of a Treasury note being way higher than face value. The difference seldom is more than one-half of 1 percent. On $40,000, that's $200.

Look on the bright side. If that price is below face value, you will receive a U.S. Treasury check as a refund.

Q: When buying through Treasury Direct, can I pay by personal check?

A: You can, when you submit a tender to purchase Treasury notes or bonds. For Treasury bills, however, your check must be certified.

Other acceptable methods of payment for bills, notes and bonds are bank or teller's checks; an endorsed Treasury check, provided the Treasury Direct account is in exactly the same name as the check; and Treasury securities that mature on or before the issue date of the security you are purchasing.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.
